

On The BEAM

By J. W. King, Sr.

The publisher of The Mitchell County News has tried to stay abreast of the times and publish a paper that reflects the community as it is. During the past nineteen years we have improved the paper from time to time by adding a new feature, increasing its size or adding new type face.

The News was started as a six column, 13 em paper, a few years ago increased the size to seven columns, 12 ems, and now with this issue is coming out as an eight column, 12 em paper. By adding one column to each page the reading matter in your Mitchell County News has been increased by eight columns, or the equivalent of one full page.

For the past few years our volume of advertising has increased considerably and many times we have had to publish a paper that was too full of advertising for the amount of space available, consequently the news matter in the paper had to be cut down. By adding the eighth column we hope to improve the quality of the paper from the standpoint of the reader.

The added amount of paper we will use and the fact that newsprint has advanced in price along with metal and everything else used to publish a paper it will be necessary for us to advance the price of the subscription to $2.00 a year in this territory and $3.00 outside this territory. The advance in price will be effective October 1. We will accept new or renewal subscriptions at the old rate of $1.50 in this territory and $2.00 outside this territory until October 1. If your subscription will expire within the near future it will pay you to renew now and save the advance in price. If you are not a subscriber we would like to have you as one, and we feel confident you would feel more like a full fledged citizen of this community if you subscribed to the home town newspaper. You will get your money's worth many times over.

ARMORED FOX HOLE—An American soldier dashes out from behind a protective tank during an advance in South Korea. This U. S. medium tank affords support as well as a mobile fox hole for the G.I.s. First Time In Ten Years Or More The News Raises Subscription Price

The Mitchell County News is coming to you this week in a new dress—another column has been added to the width of the paper. This additional column will give subscribers to The News 64 columns of reading each week instead of the 56 in the former size.

The increase in size was made possible by the increased space used by advertisers. It has been the policy of the publisher to improve the paper from time to time as business justified. The larger size has been needed for some time but it was not until recently the change was possible.

The new size paper also calls for an increase in the price of subscription. Effective October 1, the subscription price will be $2.00 a year in Mitchell and adjoining counties; $3.00 a year elsewhere.

This is the first advance in price of subscription to The News in more than ten years. An advance in price has been justified for several years, but the paper has postponed it until now.

Before the new subscription price becomes effective the publisher is giving everyone an opportunity to renew or subscribe at the old price.

Unwanted Powers

UNLESS present plans are quickly changed the department of agriculture will have controls of both food and agriculture under the administration plans of handling rationing when and if such controls are deemed necessary to stop price rises and to give priorities and allocations in the war effort.

In other words, instead of an OPA, which handled such matters during World War II, the department of agriculture will do the job at least until administration leaders believe that an overall agency is necessary. The theory is that the department is the only old line agency familiar with both the food and food processing industries and with the farms and may be able to avoid some mistakes made by the OPA.

It is rather well known that there are many in the department who do not want this power or authority and some objectors point out that with the USDA in charge of the farm price legislation they would be charged with keeping the price up to the farmers and trying to hold it down to the consumers.

Another and more political reason for opposition is that at best rationing and price control is a thankless job, that a temporary agency such as OPA could be liquidated when the need is over and any ill-will would be forgotten. But the department of agriculture must remain at the same old stand and continue to do business.

Little Heard of Surpluses

Little is being heard about those surpluses these days, the dried milk and butter and cheese and potatoes and other commodities which were being stored up as result of the price support program. As a matter of fact, those very surpluses may come in right handy in the mobilization plans, if not to feed and help our own armies, then perhaps those of our allies.

With reports from the department of another lush harvest and demands for continued all-out food and fibre production indications are that our country has been looking ahead. For instance, the full significance of the 1951 wheat acreage allotment announced some weeks ago can now be appreciated. The allotment of 72.5 million acres is something like 10 million more than needed to supply our domestic and export wheat demand. So the 1951 allotment is not a peace-time allotment.

AFBF Wins Victory

The Farm Bureau Federation won a victory when the house agricultural committee voted to defer action on the Granger bill (HR 8676) which would have "divorced" the extension service in land grant colleges from the farm bureau in states where there is now a legal tie-up between the two agencies. The final vote on the measure was 17 to 8 indicating that seven Democrats joined with the 10 Republicans on the committee to defeat the measure. The bill had the support of some farm leaders.

Kline Agrees With Truman

Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who does not agree with President Truman often, is in agreement with him on the matter of all-out controls at this time. Mr. Truman has said that he is ready to use price, wage and rationing controls when necessary, but that the time has not come.

Kline said: "Although price controls and rationing might reasonably be a part of our war effort at a time when some 40 or 50 per cent of our entire output was diverted to defense, they are not appropriate to the present situation."

Kline believes that increased taxes, needed credit controls and stepped-up efforts at production will make it possible for us to control inflation at its source without resort to price and rationing controls at this time.

Agencies Borrow Funds

Although the appropriation bill was supposed to have been passed before the end of fiscal year 1950, that is before June 30, 1950, as this is written it is still the subject of haggling and debate in conference committee. In the meantime many federal agencies are paying employees out of "borrowed" funds.

The Council of State Chamber of Commerce charges that the senate appropriations committee pumped $132,401,000 additional tax dollars into the 1951 corps of engineers appropriation for non-war works projects. It was an irresponsible capitalization to selfish, short-sighted, local interests, contractors and pork barrel politicians," says the State Chamber Council in its report. This report will be studied in all its aspects by interested parties and used as political ammunition.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Korea Military Picture Improved; Senate Passes Mobilization Bill; Nation's Farmers in 'Fine Shape'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:

Picture Changes

As the Korean war went into the third month military observers were inclined to comment "the picture has changed." And from available information it seemed the Communists had lost the power to mount great offensives involving thousands of men.

North Koreans launched one attack in force, its objective the city of Taegu, temporary capital of the South Korean republic and supply terminal for U. N. forces. It failed. In some of the bloodiest fighting of the war, U. S. and South Korean troops smashed the offensive, held Taegu, and then proceeded to smash bulges all along their lines.

One of the most spectacular operations of the Korean battle was the concentrated air attack on an assembly area at Waegwan, involving 98 B-29's each loaded with 40 500-pound all purpose bombs. The load was dropped in a rectangle 7 1/2 miles long and 3 1/2 miles wide.

General MacArthur, commander of United Nations forces, in a report to the security council said: "The ground fighting continues to be of a most savage character." Our outnumbered forces face an enemy with "almost fanatical determination. The whole operation has assumed the character of a major campaign." He went on to ask for troops from other members of the United Nations.

To date the number accepted for action in Korea included Thailand 4,000, the Philippines 5,000, Turkey 4,500, and the United Kingdom 7,500. It will be several weeks before they can be brought to battle.

Military observers agreed that the picture had changed, but added that it will be "a long and hard winter in Korea."

FARMERS:

In Fine Shape

In a major speech at Carlisle, Indiana, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan asserted that the nation's farmers are in "fine shape" and took the opportunity to put in another plug for his farm plan.

Said the secretary: "Even allowing for increases in military food requirements we expect to have enough food so that civilians can continue consuming as much as in the past two years."

Farmers worried about possible economic controls of agriculture were reassured when the secretary said there are grounds for hope that such controls can be postponed for a considerable time or perhaps avoided entirely—"unless the emergency becomes much worse."

Talking up the Brannan plan, the secretary said we need a program which "solidly protects farm prices in case of a sudden slackening of demand" yet "puts an abundance of milk, eggs, and other perishables in the hands of consumers at attractive prices."

Brannan added that the present program of sliding-scale price supports fail to assure support on some of the most important commodities and offers no incentive for necessary production shifts.

WHEAT:

Highest Level

The agricultural department has fixed price supports for 1951 wheat at the same level as the 1950 crop — 90 per cent of parity.

The department said 72,800,000 acres of wheat may be planted. If yields are average, this acreage would produce 1,150,000,000 bushels. This year's crop is estimated at 996,000,000 bushels.

In fixing the wheat support at the highest possible level, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said: "In view of the world situation, it is imperative that our supply of bread grains be maintained in strong position. Ample supplies will be a major factor in assuring reasonable food prices to consumers and our ability to meet our international food obligations."

"We believe the wheat-production and price-support programs have been developed to protect the interests of both producers and consumers."

The price support announcement had been expected, since Brannan is required by law to announce support in advance of planting; winter wheat planting starts this month.

Only farmers who keep within acreage-allotment limits can get price supports.

CASUALTIES

Toll Is Heavy

The shattering realities of the Korean conflict reached into many American homes as the conflict went into its third month. More than 2,600 families in the cities and small towns and on the farms of the nation have been notified of servicemen killed, wounded or missing in action.

At the same time, a military spokesman said that Korean Communists had lost 50,000 killed.

Victories

U.S. troops won victories on nearly all fronts in Korea during the eighth week of the conflict. The big Communist push (1) on Taegu from the north was driven back; South Korean troops recaptured Pohang and Kigye (2); another bridgehead (3) across the Nakdong was beaten back; American forces flattened the bridgehead (4) in the Yongsan area.

HOME-FRONT:

Mobilization Bill

The senate, by a vote of 85 to 3, passed a home-front mobilization bill which would give President Truman power to invoke wage-price-rationing controls and other anti-inflation curbs at any time.

The bill then went to a senate-house conference for the ironing out of differences between the senate measure and the bill passed earlier by the house.

In one point the bill was a defeat for the administration since it directed the President to put wage and price controls into effect simultaneously and virtually across the board if he invoked them at all.

The President has maintained he sees no need of wage-price curbs or rationing at this time. Further, the administration requested authority to control commodity speculation, but neither the house or senate versions contain such authority.

Both bills contain an anti-board provision prohibiting the accumulation of excessive supplies of goods designed as scarce.

The administration suffered another setback in that its plea for retention of the provision which would let the President fix controls on selected commodities—meat, for example—in advance of any general controls program, was defeated.

AMERICA:

Angry People

Americans have never liked the evasive tactics and double-talk used by diplomats. That such a dislike still persists in the minds of average Americans was indicated by the increasing number of letters to national leaders and members of the United Nations demanding that Soviet delegate Jacob Malik be thrown out of the security council.

The letters asked why prolong the arguments in the security council? Why not expel the Soviet delegate, the people in the small towns of America wanted to know?

In answer to these questions Warren Austin, U.S. chief delegate to the United Nations, made the following statement:

"Our objective is peace. We do not find peace by throwing out the person with whom we must make peace."

"We must be firm in our principles. We must be strong. But we must also be patient."

"In the United Nations, we must keep trying to convince Mr. Malik and his government of their errors and of our peaceful intentions. Through the United Nations we can reach the peoples of the Soviet Union and of other countries."

"It is not the people, it is the 'ruling circles' that we encounter here. That creates a force of public opinion, backed by moral authority that opposes aggression—and even the Soviet dictatorship cannot ignore such a force."

"It is a strain for us to listen to the deceit that the Russian spokesman has poured out. But truth will prevail. Meanwhile, it is better for diplomats to get nervous indignation than for young men to get shot."

That, Americans agreed, was straight talk and to their liking.

Suspect No. 8

A stocky 33-year-old American electrical engineer, who fled to Mexico when the F.B.I. began nabbing suspects in the Klaus Fuchs spy ring, had been arrested and charged with passing defense secrets to Russia.

Identified as Morton Sobell, he was the eighth American rounded up and charged with passing defense secrets to Russia. F.B.I. officials said he is a radar expert.

PEACE:

There Is Still Hope

The belief that there is still hope for peace, perhaps for only a short time, but still respite from worldwide war, is growing in many quarters. The hope is not for permanent peace, but one of time, based on the belief in high diplomatic circles that the Russians are not ready for all-out war at the moment.

Diplomatic circles call it the "calculated risk" of war or peace. It is based on three major assumptions:

(1) Russia fears the effects of American atom bomb attacks.

(2) Russia does not possess an adequate stock pile of atomic bombs.

(3) Russia's industrial potential is still too weak in comparison with that of the western allies to risk a major conflict.

The first two of the assumptions are, of course, mere guess work. But there are statistics to back up the third.

For instance, America's steel production for 1950 is expected to exceed 71 million tons. Great Britain will produce around 16 million tons and the rest of western Europe approximately 24 million tons. Thus, the allies will produce a total of 111 million tons, compared with Russia's 22 million.

Russia also lags in the production of oil, another of the top essentials for war.

On these assumptions western Europe is planning a three-year rearming program. If the program is successful peace may be prolonged, but the world will be divided into two great armed camps.

RAILROADS:

Strikes Close Steel

The brotherhood of railroad trainmen and order of railway conductors went on strike against three terminal railroads, disrupting several of the country's steel arteries in the midst of the Korean war.

However, with the steel industry pressed to capacity to meet the needs of the stepped-up munitions program and the booming civilian economy, many sources predicted that President Truman would seize the lines.

The unions singled out key terminals in Louisville, St. Paul and Chicago and Republic Steel's switching terminal at Cleveland for the first display of pressure. About 1,000 men walked out for five days. Approximately 30,000 workers, including steelworkers, were made idle.

Negotiations between management and union representatives, with presidential assistant John R. Steelman taking part, produced no progress in the first 24 hours.

Observers believed the government would take drastic action before the situation deteriorated and crippled the nation's vital steel production.

INTELLIGENCE:

Heads by Smith

Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former ambassador to Moscow, was named by President Truman as director of central intelligence. He will succeed Rear Adm. Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter around the end of September.

The agency's job is to gather and analyze reports from diplomatic, military and all other sources. Some members of congress were not surprised by Smith's appointment.

There had been demands in congress for a shake-up of the agency since the Korean war. Some legislators contended the United States was caught flat-footed by the invasion of South Korea by Communist troops.

General Smith, now 54, has had a long military career, which includes service as chief of staff to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower in World War II. Later he became ambassador to Moscow.

Johnson

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson (right), confers with Sen. Tom Connally, chairman of the foreign relations committee. Johnson has been under increased attack by foes of the administration and some Democrats for the way he handled his office during the year before the outbreak of fighting in Korea.

POLITICS:

Election Crossfire

The American political picture cleared somewhat with one definite trend in the spotlight: the voter faces a furious election year partisan crossfire. The issue will be U.S. foreign policy.

The bipartisanism in foreign policy as existed before the Korean war is a thing of the past. From now on voters will hear charges and counter-charges on U. S. foreign policy by congressional candidates.

GOOD CITIZEN

Principles of Good Citizenship Must Be Practiced in Own Home

This is the last of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The ninth promise of a good citizen: I will practice and teach the principles of good citizenship right in my own home.

Our country, when you come right down to it, is just a lot of families. In the family are cradled the cardinal virtues that enable good families to add up to a great nation—standards of conduct, respect for the rights and property of others, loyalty, health, tolerance, cooperation, self-reliance, good breeding and a sense of the fitness of things.

breeding and a sense of the fitness of things.

OTIS WIESE, editor of McCall's Magazine, said in an article, "The home, we all agree, is the foundation of the social structure. And women are the bed rock under that foundation. Any woman who achieves success as a mother has a more pervasive influence over the next generation than any cell of Communists. And her mother's mile certainly outweighs in social significance the manufacture of millions of can openers."

"The home, in effect, is the transmission belt of our culture, for it is there that the child learns its first lessons. It is the place where our social health is either insured or undermined insidiously . . ."

IN CONCLUDING this series of articles, one way to measure the results of our system is to add up our physical and cultural gains in everything from bathtubs to symphony orchestras. Although it has only 6 per cent of the world's population and less than 6 per cent of the world's land area, the United States has:

Seventy-two per cent of the world's motor vehicles, one for every four people. 286,000 miles of paved roads.

231,481 places of worship, representing 55 religions or denominations.

More than 61 per cent of the world's telephones, one for every 4 1/2 people.

208,285 public schools, 1,720 colleges and universities — schools for nearly everybody.

Forty-eight per cent of the world's radios, one for every 2 1/2 people.

Ninety-two per cent of the world's bathtubs, one for every six people. 6,511 public hospitals.

Eighty-five per cent of the world's commercial air traffic.

258,465 miles of railroad track, more than all Europe, including Russia in Asia.

Sixty-four major museums of art, science and history. Twenty-three symphony orchestras. 650 music societies.

31,015,000 homes wired for electricity.

12,578 newspapers and magazines. Nearly 2,900 radio stations.

Fifty million savings accounts; 200 million life insurance policies.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Uncle Charlie's Luck Is Bad, Bandit Crosses Him Up

By BILLY ROSE

Last Friday night on the way home from his weekly pinocchio session, my Uncle Charlie was held up a few blocks from his home on Allen Street and a wallet containing $13 was taken from him. This misadventure, strangely enough, has made my Aunt Frieda very happy, and with your leave and license, I'd like to tell you why . . .

To begin with, to hear my uncle tell it, Frieda is crazy like a fox about most things, but when it comes to fortune telling and allied superstitions she's crazy like a crazy. This, of course, in Charlie's own words, "drives him to destruction," particularly when my aunt shells out good money for such charms and amulets as lucky horse-tail hairs and pieces of string with seven magic knots.

"I can't understand," I once heard him tell her, "how a distinct twenty-century type like you could potkey around with such superstitions."

"Century, schmentury," Frieda answered. "What was good enough by my granddaddy is good enough by me."

"So why didn't you marry your granddaddy?"

"So when I look at you, that's who I'm thinking I married."

THE MATTER CAME to a crisis last Friday when Charlie arrived home from the shop and Frieda asked him for 10 dollars.

"Only last week I am giving you 10 dollars," he exploded. "What you making, a down payment on a Cadillac?"

"A catalogue I am not needing," Frieda sassed back. "Today I am forced to admit that the brass goes was in his wallet. If he lost, it was agreed Frieda would stop patronizing Gypsy establishments; if he made a killing, however, he was to have more faith in her theories."

In principle, the family must be the keystone, the microcosm, the atom—that-can't-be-split of our republic.

Democracy must be based on homes where the interests of man, woman and child receive equal consideration.

Whether in a crowded rooming house or on the farm, the answer must come from men and women of intelligence and good will who look on the successful maintenance of a family as one of the greatest acts of good citizenship.

Just as democracy starts in the home as an obligation, it ends there as a reward. To the degree that all the other duties of citizenship have been fulfilled, your home will be your castle, secure from the threat of confiscation, and those in it safe from detention camps and firing squads. . . .

OTIS WIESE, editor of McCall's Magazine, said in an article, "The home, we all agree, is the foundation of the social structure. And women are the bed rock under that foundation. THE FICTION CORNER

CHANGE SPECTACLES

By Richard H. Wilkinson

ON THE MORNING of Aug 4th,

Sandra Hunter glanced through her bedroom window and saw a strange spectacle. Between the great white house and the street was a wide expanse of lawn, and this lawn was at present occupied by a young man pushing a lawnmower.

3-Minute Fiction

Sandra didn't know what to make of it. She remembered that her mother and father were away for the weekend and that the servants were in the rear of the house.

By the time she had dressed and ventured outdoors, the young man had finished his mowing and was resting in the shade of the veranda.

"Will you kindly explain what this is all about?" said Sandra.

"I just mowed your lawn as it should be mowed."

"Should be mowed?" Sandra puckered up her brow. "What do you mean, 'should be mowed'? Who are you? And where is Rufus, our gardener?"

"I'm Jerry Leonard. I bribed your gardener this morning to let me mow your lawn. You see, I have to drive by your house every morning on my way to work, and every morning I've noticed that Rufus cuts the lawn unevenly."

"Well of all things!"

"Besides, I've been wanting to meet you since last June."

"Meet me?"

"Yes. My mother and I moved into the old Saunders place last June and, the day after, I saw you and decided I had to meet you."

WELL, AS IT turned out, my uncle won ten dollars which, added to the three he started out with, gave him a take-home total of thirteen. Reluctant to face gloating Frieda, he took a roundabout way home.

A few doors from a drugstore on Rivington Street, a hoodlum stepped out of an alley and stuck him up.

"Could you return, please, the pocketbook?" said Charlie. "Is genuine alligator leather."

"Scram," said the hold-up man, "or I'll bust in your head."

WOMAN'S WORLD

Make School Clothing for Children Attractive, Practical

By Ertta Haley

BACK-TO-SCHOOL clothing for the kindergarten, first and second grade set need not be difficult if the mother does her own sewing. She may make a smart wardrobe for the young set at a much more reduced cost than one purchased already made, and, provided she sews carefully, the clothing will be sturdy.

Youngsters in the early grades are rough on clothes, whether they're boys or girls, and they are quite heedless about falling and consequently tearing clothing. It will have to be as sturdy and as practical as you can make it. However, it's never smart to sacrifice attractiveness, as the youngsters are very conscious of how they look in their various dresses, jumpers, skirts, coveralls and shirts.

When sewing for the younger set, mother must also look to the laundering possibilities of clothing she makes. In short, these clothes must be able to take their share of sudsing and hard washing, and still come out, color fast, properly fitting, clean and wearable.

Plaid shirts for the boys, and plaid dresses for the girls are excellent investments because the plaids now being shown have dark backgrounds which do not show dirt. In this way, they can get through several hours of the day looking as neat as possible.

Dark broadcloth or other dark cottons with touches of white at the collar and cuffs make adorable clothes for girls. These, too, are practical and attractive choices.

As in many seasons before, corduroy is an excellent choice for both boys and girls' clothing. Chosen in able in them, and he may trip on them.

Corduroy Skirt

A smart little one-piece cotton dress can see year 'round service with the addition of a circular overskirt of warm corduroy. Professional dressmaker touches such as shoulder gathering, gathered sleeve edging which make the dress versatile, are easily done on the gathering foot attachment of the sewing machine.

Clothing should be warm but not bulky, as these children are very active and need to be—carefully fitted. Stitch the seams carefully and you'll save a lot of mending as time goes on.

Avoid fussy and fragile trimmings on the girls' dresses even though they are pretty because they will not take hard wear. You can obtain good effects through full skirts, full gathering, wide belts that tie into beautiful bows, and sturdy laces and eyelets.

Color is important as it's refreshing to both the young and those who will look at it. Even though dark solid colors are chosen, they can be livened with white or bright colors, plaid trims and borders.

Gay Trimming Adds Clever Touches

Select appropriate materials . . .

the dark bright colors such as blue, rust, brown and green, it's colorful but dirt-shedding.

Wardrobe Requirements For Youngsters Are Easy

It's easy to meet wardrobe requirements for young fry because it's not necessary to have great variety. Unless you do the laundry several times a week, then you'll probably have to plan either a dress or several blouses for every week day for little girls.

Boys in the young age groups can get along with three or four pairs of pants, and a pair or two of overalls. It will be best, if you can manage to plan one shirt for each day, but some of these can be of the inexpensive T-shirt type.

Clothing that is made for school wear now should fit the little wearer. You can place an extra large hem in little girls' dresses, but don't make them too long for now, as the youngster will not like wearing the dress as her playmates will not always be very kind about her clothes.

Pants and overalls for the boys can be made with a slightly wider cuff that can be let down as he grows, but if the pants are too long at the start, he will feel uncomfortable.

and attractive styles for youngsters.

tern apply some flowers to the skirt and stitch these in woolen yarns of red, bright green and possibly yellow. They'll add lots of cheer to the skirt.

Take a tip from the teen-aged girls and add bright red, peasant trimmed suspenders to the navy skirt. You can make these from tape or red flannel or felt.

All-white blouses are very pretty, but they will be even prettier for the small miss if you add some bright rick-rack, bias tape or ornamental band trimming to sleeves and collar. This can be applied even if the blouse is ready-made, or can be used on an old blouse which needs a fresh new touch.

Dark broadcloth dresses are very pretty trimmed if you run a small plaid ruffle starting at the waist, going over the shoulder and to the waist at the back. Have one on each side. Attach the ruffle to a narrow piece of tape made from the same plaid cloth as in sewing.

Another good style in school dresses is this: Make a cotton print or plaid dress with a blouse-like top and petticoat-like circular skirt. This is worn in early fall while weather is still warm, and also in spring. For fall and winter, make an overskirt of corduroy to be worn over the dress.

Use Time-Saving Sewing Tricks

Mothers who have hemline troubles with their fast-growing children would do well to use a blind stitch attachment on the sewing machine. This is easily attached to the machine in place of the presser foot, and produces an invisible hemming that rivals hand stitching. It can be used on both light and heavy material.

To achieve trimming details such as zigzag stitches in a variety of lengths and widths, corded effects, applied designs and monograms, lace edges and inserts or an ornamental edge similar to picotting, it's smart to use a zigzag attachment. This attachment will jump over pins and heavy thicknesses of fabric easily.

A gathering foot makes short work of the many gathered effects required on small girls' clothing. This little device will gather the skirt fullness for stitching onto bodice, give smocked effects by gathering in fullness at the shoulder and across the chest.

Some of the manufacturers of children's dresses are using zippers in place of buttons. This is a good trick for mother to use, as it helps the youngster to dress herself more easily. Use them on both skirt and dress openings, sewing them on as you would on adult clothing.

How to Handle Corduroy When Cutting, Sewing

It's very important to fit and alter dress patterns before you cut them from corduroy. When you cut, lay the corduroy on a smooth, flat surface with the pile side up except where it's necessary to cut on a fold or double. In this event, the fabric may be folded lengthwise with the pile inside.

All pattern pieces should be placed on fabric in same direction so the pile runs upward. Make pattern markings with tailor's tacks.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Should Schools Abandon Rod?

IN THE CALIFORNIA college town at Berkeley, Calif., a movement was recently inaugurated to restore the old custom of whipping as a punishment for refractory children in schools. It appears now to be a lost cause, and Berkeley's mothers and fathers are drawing a long breath of relief mingled with indignation.

But that isn't the whole story, even to those of us who can remember the frightened helpless tears of small boys ordered to report to the principal's office, and the swollen hands and tear-swollen eyes of gentle little girls who had felt Teacher's merciless rod. Naturally, we regard that cold impersonal beating of our loved youngsters as a relic of barbarism, an admission of the failure of school discipline and control. But it isn't the whole story.

The story includes children who simply cannot be reached by any other means than that of bullying, of breaking of the spirit, of physical pain and shame. There are many such children.

Unmanageable Child

They are children who have had no home training at all. They do not know the words duty, obedience, attention, respect, manners. They are sent to school to be gotten out of the way; nobody at home ever suggests that they try to make the teacher's task easier, that they do their home work conscientiously, that they learn to concentrate. They don't know what school is. They don't know that civilization has painfully developed schools, and that every hour in a school is paid for by taxpayers and that American spends millions upon millions every year to give every one of her little sons and daughters training in educational essentials, athletic development, capability to accept the right calling in life, when it offers itself.

Every teacher of the grade school classes knows the unmanageable child. Sometimes it is a girl, more often a boy. The boy is a smarty show-off. He isn't afraid of anyone; he doesn't have to obey anyone. He laughs joyfully if he is dragged bodily into school. His idleness, his sneers, affect all the other children. He knows how to punish the teacher, and he punishes her through weary lesson hours, exhausting her energies and delighting in increasing signs of her helplessness.

A certain 13-year-old boy, put back into a class of 10-year-olds, was such a boy. He bullied smaller boys, answered the teacher with veiled insolence, and one day thrust out his foot as she walked down the aisle. The teacher, a gentle, 50-year-old woman, fell heavily, and the boy's grinning denial that he had done it filled the smaller boys with admiration.

Berlin Bids For Tourists

Advertises Romance, Danger and Thrills

BERLIN, Germany — Blocked by the Russians and saved by the airlift only a little more than a year ago, Berlin now is vigorously competing for world tourist trade as the "international city behind the iron curtain—today's most exciting European capital."

To push this campaign, Allied occupied west Berlin has produced one of the most alluring brochures in the history of tourism. It has the romance of Algiers' Casbah and Pepe Le Moko backed right off the map.

It offers what no other city can advertise—the dangerous thrill of being behind Joe Stalin's iron curtain, with safety. In fact, one of the chief advertised attractions is having your picture taken at the Red army memorial with a Tommy-gun bearing Russian sentinel and the challenge: "If you're lucky, he might smile."

What's more, west Berlin presents itself as "the only place where you can meet your business friends or relatives from the Russian controlled zone without hindrance and hear them recount their experiences under Russian dictatorship."

The west Berlin brochure cover shows a blond beauty garbed in the flag of the west German federal republic and the four occupying powers, including the Soviet hammer and sickle.

The caption is: "Don't Miss Berlin."

Offered inside are the attractions of this quartered city. Tourists are reminded that they are allowed to enter the Russian sector—if they want to leave the safer lures of Allied west Berlin—and "there you will notice the vast contrast between life in the western sectors and that of parts under eastern dictatorship."

Quitter Makes Good

Lesson for September 10, 1950

UNLESS THAT boarding house in Antioch was different from other boarding houses, you could hardly have a private quarrel in it. There would be some inquisitive people who would notice when voices were raised, and who could not resist the temptation to listen.

One of the quarrelers was none other than the famous Apostle Paul, and the other was his best friend Barnabas. At least, Paul and Barnabas had been good friends up to that day.

After that day's argument we do not know that they ever saw each other again. Paul never mentioned the incident, but the story got around, and Luke put it into his book of Acts.

Dr. Foreman

Young Man Seeks Position

THE ARGUMENT was all about a young man named John Mark. Young people do not always realize that they are discussed by their elders, or how much those discussions affect their lives. A young man applies for a job (which he would rather call a "position") and he either gets the job or he does not. But he never sees the files. He never hears the conversations about himself. He never knows just what remark got him the job—or cost him the job, as the case may be. So John Mark may never have known just what Paul and Barnabas said about him.

The facts were plain. John Mark was a native of Jerusalem, son of a woman at least well-off enough to have a large house of her own. He was some relative of Barnabas, perhaps a nephew. (Tradition says he was the young man in embarrassing circumstances described in Mark 14:51-52.) When Paul and Barnabas set off on their first missionary journey together, this John Mark went with them as a general assistant.

All went well at first. But when the party landed on the hot steamy shore of Pamphylia, and when the missionary expedition was about to take off over the high lonesome ranges through bandit country, John Mark left the party and took the first boat back to home and mother.

Two Bosses
WE HAVE no idea why he went. Maybe he had good reasons, maybe not. Anyway, we do know that he quit. And that was all Paul wanted to know. A new missionary party was being made up, and Barnabas wanted to take his young relative along again. But Paul could not see it.

Why take a man who had already fallen down on one job? Why take an assistant that could not be depended upon? The argument between Mark's two bosses boiled down to this: Paul judged their assistant on past performance. It was all he had to go by. Barnabas judged Mark by his love for him and his belief in him. The quarrel was sharp, and the two old friends could not agree. Finally the incredible happened: Paul and Barnabas parted company, and each went his separate way from that time forward.

What happened to Barnabas we do not know. But we do know that Barnabas was "right about John Mark. Years later we read in more than one letter from Paul that Mark was a real help to him. We find that another great leader, Simon Peter, called Mark his "son." These leaders of the Christian church, though they might differ on some things, agreed about Mark, that he was a man to rely on.

What This Goes to Show
ALL THIS GOES to show several things. For one, it is clear that even an Apostle may be wrong. No man can be an infallible judge of another man. And another thing: You can't judge a man on his record alone. There may be more in the man than the record shows.

On the other hand, people do judge others by their records. The dubious young man does not always have a relative who will give him the benefit of the doubt.

If your record is bad, you must realize that there are numbers of people, even good people, who will judge you by that alone.

Writer Needs Local Color, Goes to Jail to Get It

PASADENA, Calif.—A writer, Mrs. Eloise Andrae, needed some local color for some radio crime stories she was writing. She needed to get in jail, so—

She took out a temporary driver's license under the name of Susan Ann Little and used it to cash a check for $25. Nothing happened.

Next she charged a $3.95 slip to a friend who didn't have an account. Still no policeman.

Then she went back to the store and pulled the same stunt for $15.47.

Detectives hauled her away to a cell with lots of local color and booked her on suspicion of forgery.

What happened to Barnabas we do not know. But we do know that Barnabas was "right about John Mark. Years later we read in more than one letter from Paul that Mark was a real help to him. We find that another great leader, Simon Peter, called Mark his "son." These leaders of the Christian church, though they might differ on some things, agreed about Mark, that he was a man to rely on.

What This Goes to Show
ALL THIS GOES to show several things. For one, it is clear that even an Apostle may be wrong. No man can be an infallible judge of another man. And another thing: You can't judge a man on his record alone. There may be more in the man than the record shows.

On the other hand, people do judge others by their records. The dubious young man does not always have a relative who will give him the benefit of the doubt.

If your record is bad, you must realize that there are numbers of people, even good people, who will judge you by that alone.

Slick Ad

One chilly day, a midwestern concern advertised that it would give away coal shovels to the first 150 persons who showed up at its office. It did, too, and that evening 150 persons were shoveling coal in their basements with brand-new shovels, each of which had this message engraved on it: "If you had installed one of our oil heaters, you would now be sitting comfortably in the living room."

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chew-Gum Laxative—REMOVES WASTE... NOT GOOD FOOD

When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as millions do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon... right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy... you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢.

FEEN-A-MINT FAMOUS CHEW-GUM LAXATIVE

Personal To Women With Nagging Backache

As we get older, strain and stress, over-exertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

JUST OFF THE LINE

She Needed the Seat
Two rather overdressed girls boarded a crowded bus, and one made a bet with the other that she could force the dignified old gentleman in the rear seat to give her his place. She pushed through the crowd and said to him:

"How do you do, Mr. Brown? Fancy meeting you on a bus! I'm so glad to see you—you're almost a stranger. My goodness, but I'm tired."

The old gentleman glanced up at the young woman he had never seen before. He rose and said in a voice audible to every passenger on the bus:

"Do sit down, then, Mary. I don't often see you out on washdays—no wonder you're tired. And, by the way, skip delivering our laundry next week. My wife is seeing the judge Monday about getting your husband a parole."

Two Master Golfers Should Meet

By GRANTLAND RICE

IF THERE IS A NATURAL in the golf world today it would be a meeting of Ben Hogan of the U.S.A. and Bobby Locke of South Africa.

Hogan is U. S. open champion. Locke is British open champion. Hogan has won the last two opens he played in, 1948 and 1950. Locke has won the last two British Hogan has been acknowledged as the one to beat in most of the leading tournaments he has entered, before and after his accident. Locke has not only ruled South Africa and Great Britain but he has also left a wider trail of devastation through the United States than any foreigner that ever played—including Harry Vardon and Ted Ray.

It was Bobby Locke who lured Sammy Snead to South Africa a few years ago and gave Virginia Sammy a steady wallop over this faraway terrain.

Both Hogan and Locke are great golfers. Their styles are wide apart but each is a master of fundamentals. Both are consistently straight off the tee, but I like Hogan's iron play better. Locke has a shade around the greens where he can turn out near miracles on certain occasions.

Hogan, Snead and Mangrum have dominated play in the United States this season and the game over here can stand another face—the same being Bobby Locke's. Hogan, with his motion-picture work ahead, has a busy schedule. But the call to contest usually finds Ben more than eager to return to action.

Locke has now made his peace with the American P.G.A. and he can find far richer hunting over here than England offers at the moment.

We have had similar duels in the past—Hagen vs. Jones—Hagen vs. Sarazen, Barnes and Hagen, to mention only a few.

The Sarazen-Hagen clash was the most spectacular. These two had the better right at that time to be called the two top men. Both Hogan and Locke are fine competitors, as well as being consistently fine golfers. It would be a new boost for general golfing interest to bring them together in a series of matches. In this connection it might also be mentioned that Lloyd Mangrum lately has been setting a dizzy pace.

Red Sox and 1950
Just about mid-July last year the Red Sox were 12 or 13 games off the pace. They were that far back of the Yankees. They are not quite that bad this season, but with Ted Williams injured they face a terrific job if they hope to better their position. So far under two different managers they have been an ineffective lot.

Only their hitting has kept to the high road. They passed the Fourth of July with a team batting average of .305. This was by all odds the highest mark in both leagues. It is high enough to win two pennants, with only fair pitching. Here's the main trouble with the Red Sox—if you care to listen. There are three departments of baseball—at least main departments. These are pitching, hitting and fielding.

The Red Sox are the supreme hitters of the game. They have second-class fielding. For example, their infield is a powerhouse at bat. It isn't any too hot defensively. In fact, it is second division. I've heard too many opponents speak about the number of easy hits that slip through the Red Sox infield.

This infield has power—offensive power—but no defensive speed. It can't cover ground to choke off opposing rallies. Once again I get this information from other ball teams.

They have his charged against them that a Rizzuto would kill off—or another faster-moving infielder would knock down.

The trouble is that too many people look only at batting averages—at home runs and runs driven in—where the Red Sox excel. They overlook pitching. They overlook defense. They overlook spirit.

They all say they'd rather play for Tom Yawkey. Who wouldn't? The Red Sox have taken four years to discover that power alone doesn't rule baseball.

Pork Chops Take to Creole Sauce
(See Recipes Below)

Hearty Meat Dishes

FALL'S THE SEASON with the crisp, cool mornings, splashes of red and yellow on the tree tops, the back to school parade, football games and, of course, bigger and better appetites!

It's time to start thinking of those bigger and heartier meals, those which are built around stick-to-the-ribs quality like meats.

Our recipes in the column today borrow seasoning tricks from abroad as well as from regional cooks. No matter what kinds of foods please the family, these are bound to be a success because they're so extra good.

HERE'S AN American version of a famous Italian dish that's very popular among folks in this country because it's nicely seasoned. The list of ingredients is rather long, but the dish is not difficult to prepare. Serve with crisp French bread and a tossed green salad, and you'll have a meal to repeat often because it's truly special.

Veal Scallopini

(Serves 6)

1½ pounds veal steak, cut ½ inch thick
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ cup salad oil
¼ cup lemon juice
1 clove garlic
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon sugar
¼ cup flour
¼ cup shortening
1 medium onion, sliced thin
1 green pepper, cut in strips
1 can (10 ounce) chicken bouillon
¼ pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon butter
6 pimiento olives, sliced

Cut veal into serving pieces. Make sauce by combining salt, paprika, oil, lemon juice, garlic, mustard, nutmeg and sugar. Beat thoroughly. Lay veal flat in baking pan and pour sauce over it. Turn meat to coat with sauce. Let stand for 15 minutes. Remove garlic. Lift veal from sauce and dip into flour. Brown in heated shortening in skillet. Add onion and green pepper. Combine bouillon and remainder of sauce and pour over veal. Cover and cook slowly until veal is tender, about 40 minutes. Clean and slice mushrooms. Brown lightly in butter. Add mushrooms and olives to veal, basting meat as you add them. Cook for five minutes longer. Serve veal with sauce.

FROM NEW ENGLAND comes a full-of-flavor pot roast. Try it for a hearty meal with fluffy mashed potatoes, cole slaw and with sour cream dressing and fruit cobbler.

Yankee Pot Roast

(Serves 8)

3-4 pound pot roast of beef
2 tablespoons lard or meat drippings
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
½ cup sliced onions
2 tablespoons water
1 minced, garlic clove
8 peppercorns
¼ cup vinegar

In a heavy covered kettle, melt lard. Add roast and brown slowly on all sides, allowing about 30 minutes for the process. When browned, add salt, pepper, onions and water. Simmer three to four hours slowly on low heat until meat is tender. About 45 minutes before meat is tender, add garlic, peppercorns and vinegar. When meat is tender, remove it to hot platter and make gravy from drippings.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU

*Ragout de Veau
Parsleyed Potatoes
Buttered Green Beans
Grapefruit-Orange-Lettuce Salad
Rolls Butter Beverage
Sugar Cookies
*Recipe Given

FROM DOWN SOUTH comes the recipe for these pork chops which are served with rice and creole sauce. The menu can be rounded out with mixed green salad with French dressing to which a little curry is added, crusty rolls and an apricot whip with custard sauce.

Pork Chops a la Dixie

(Serves 6)

6 loin or rib chops, cut 1-inch thick
Salt and pepper
In hot frying pan, brown chops slowly and thoroughly. Season chops with salt and pepper. Add creole sauce and cover; cook slowly until tender, about one hour. Serve with fluffy rice and sauce. Creole Sauce: Heat together 2 cups tomato juice, 1½ tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 1½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, dash of tabasco sauce, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and ¼ cup chopped green pepper.

RAGOUT is the French word for stew, and here is the glorified version inspired by that country.

*Ragout de Veau

(Serves 6)

2 slices bacon
1 large onion, sliced
3 green onions, chopped
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
2 pounds boneless veal, cut in 1½ inch cubes
2 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon oregano
½ cup water
1 cup sour cream
Parsley and chives, chopped

Cut bacon into one-inch pieces. Cook and stir in heavy skillet until lightly cooked but not brown. Add onions and butter. Cook and stir until onions are cooked but not brown. Dip veal in flour mixed with salt, pepper and oregano. Add to skillet and brown. Add water; cover and simmer for an hour, being careful not to burn. When veal is fork tender, push to one side. Stir sour cream into drippings. Stir all ingredients together, cover and heat for 15 minutes to blend flavors.

Several sprigs of parsley, snipped with scissors and added to the cream sauce for creamed chicken in a casserole will add lots of color and fine flavor to it.

For those cubed or minute steaks which you broil or pan-broil, add a sauce made of equal parts of melted butter and chili sauce. No cooking needed.

In addition to just plain bananas and orange sections with a spoon for ambrosia desserts, add some canned fruit cocktail and you'll multiply flavor and fun.

THE SECURITY COUNCIL WAY

CAPTAIN.—Forward, march!

G.I.—Is that before this company in the form of an order or a resolution?

Captain.—It is an order!

G.I.—If I may say so at this time, it seems slightly irregular in that it was not on the agenda as presented in the crap game last night.

Sergeant.—You heard the command, bud. Forward march!

Second G.I.—May I ask for clarification? The word "forward" is all-embracing. It could mean many miles forward or merely a few yards.

Captain.—I must object to this as obstructive and as a delaying tactic employed for propaganda purposes. However, if the honorable dogface insists, I do not mind saying that I use the word "forward" in the unlimited sense.

Third G.I.—My delegation wishes to know more about the implications of the verb "march." Webster says it means to walk. There have been instances in Korea where some of us have been asked to march and after accepting this interpretation have found we also were expected to take it on the double.

Captain.—I submit that this company knows very well that the word "march" is employed by established precedent. I can go away back to the case of Ulysses S. Grant in the Battle of the Wilderness. May I remind all you gentlemen that the situation is getting hazardous. Several enemy shells have just passed quite close to us here.

First G.I.—The matter of enemy shells is not before us at this time. We are discussing the item entitled "command of forward march" and nothing else can be given priority under our charter.

Sergeant (As some enemy bullets whiz past).—Hit the dirt, ya bums!

Second G.I.—I rise to a point of order. The remark of the sergeant is a typical case of an attempt to dictate to this group.

Third G.I. (as more shells come close).—I move we seek cover.

Captain.—Do you put that as a motion?

Third.—Yes sir.

Second G.I.—I suggest it be put before this body in the form of two motions. Motion Number one: That we take cover in the immediate area. Motion two: That we be allowed to take cover anywhere in the country without restrictions of any kind.

Captain.—I desire again to remind this company that unless we attack we are in a position of great hazard.

First G.I.—I submit that no position in war can be considered hazardous without a two-thirds vote.

Captain.—Very well, let us proceed to a vote.

Second G.I.—I must insist that the captain and first sergeant be excluded from voting as their right to a seat here is questioned.

Third G.I.—The hour is getting late. It is now almost six o'clock and we have been here since three fifteen. We are all obviously very tired. What day is it now?

Captain.—It is now Friday.

Third G.I.—I suggest we adjourn until next Tuesday.

Captain (wearily).—Are there any objections?

Sergeant.—Certainly. I object.

Captain.—On what grounds?

Sergeant.—This whole debate is illegal. NUTTIN' THAT'S BEEN SAID HAS YET BEEN INTERPRETED IN FRENCH!

(Mr. Malik produced newspaper pictures of Foster Dulles in Korea and charged him with starting the war.)—News Item.

Who's the aggressor? Through and through? Foster Dulles... I thought you knew!

Who's the invader? The answer's flat: Mr. Dulles! And Homburg hat!

This is an age of speed. We know a fellow who buys Quick magazine and puts on roller skates to read it while going DOWN an electric escalator.

Lifeguards went on strike at a New Jersey summer resort the other day. The report they wanted time and a half for rest-uses on Saturdays and Sundays is denied.

New York's population has gone up only a few hundred thousand in 10 years, the figures show. Nonetheless, there are at all times in the metropolis a million or more people living so exclusively on hamburgers, hot dogs and iced drinks that they don't resemble people.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Give Children Proper Place

By Lawrence Gould

Should your children "come before" your husband?

Answer: Only as far and as long as they are helplessly dependent on you. Baby's supper comes first, for example, because Dad can raid the pantry—or "eat out," if necessary. But to give your children the first place in your affections is not only unfair to your husband; it's bad for the children. For one thing, you'll come between them and the father whom they need as much as they do a mother if they are to be well-balanced. For another, you will warp them by unconsciously demanding from them what only someone of your own age can give.

Is cleanliness a virtue?

Answer: The late G. K. Chesterton maintained that it should be classed as a luxury, citing the fact that in the Middle Ages living in filth was regarded as a form of self-denial. When cleanliness is not an obsession (as it is for some neurotics) it should probably be thought of as one of the distinctively adult forms of pleasure. Children prefer to be dirty, partly because they are and resent being interfered with—and some childish-minded adults feel the same way. Liking to be clean is an "acquired taste."

Can an older brother lead a younger astray?

Answer: Yes, but only if the younger brother has been neglected by his parents, and especially his father. For a normal boy develops by identifying himself with the older male whom he loves and admires most, or who seems to him most enviable, and if a good father plays this role in his life, no one else will greatly influence him. But a boy whose father shows no interest in him or affection for him may adopt an older brother as "hero" and model, and if the brother is lawless or delinquent, imitate him to win his approval.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Treatment of Hereditary Headache

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHILE HEADACHE is considered the commonest symptom known to mankind, there are many varieties and, of course, many causes.

Cephalalgia is another name for headache, just as neuralgia is an ache in the nerves. It is known that headaches, sometimes a particular type of headache, seems to run in some families. This is called hereditary cephalalgia.

In Postgraduate Medicine, Dr. Cecil M. Charles, St. Louis, Mo., states that individuals giving a family history of paroxysmal (coming suddenly, very severe for a time, and leaving suddenly) headache and having such headaches themselves, may be grouped together under the term hereditary cephalalgia, without attempting to sort them out into different varieties or subdivisions.

He made a study of 35 patients who have regularly occurring severe headaches and who give positive family histories of paroxysmal cephalalgia. Many of these have had electroencephalographic tracings made (tracings of brain movements, just as heart movements are traced by the electrocardiograph).

For years the specific drug used for migraine (one-sided headache) has been ergotamine tartrate (Ergon). In the treatment of these 35 patients ergotamine tartrate alone or in combination with caffeine (cafeergon), was used. As with migraine, ergotamine tartrate was by far the most effective drug in treating these hereditary headaches, excellent results being obtained in 80 per cent of the patients and good results in the remaining 20 per cent. Some of the other preparations gave good results and were used where ergon caused various side effects or symptoms.

Because of the electroencephalographic findings (brain movements) in many patients with hereditary cephalalgia, which findings are present in epilepsy or convulsions, the drug Mesantoin to counteract convulsions was given to several of these patients with excellent results. Further tests will be made.

HEALTH NOTES

The individual with the long, wide body is likely to be a good feeder, eat big meals and have a small intestine some feet longer than one of normal width and length.

Suggestion for keeping the liver in good working condition are not eating too much starch and fat food and taking bending exercises.

Despite the fact that corisone and Acth will not be available for a long time yet, aromatic results are stimulating manufacturers to put them on the market as soon as possible.

The patient with high blood pressure should limit his intake of fluids to three or four cups of fruit juice each day.

If you have some cold cuts and would rather have hot cuts, wrap the slices of meat in two soaking wet dish towels, put them in a pan and put the pan in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. The meat, which needs no cooking, will be warmed by steam without destroying the flavor.

You can use bay leaves to flavor a roast or soup without having to fish the leaves out later, if you crush them up in a metal tea ball and drop the ball into the pot while the roast or soup is cooking. Pull it out by its chain when it's done, and the flavor will be where you want it.

To remove the odor from your hands after peeling onions, rub your hands with raw celery or parsley before trying to wash them. Or, wet the hands with clear water and rub them thoroughly with salt.

Ordinary, prosaic fruit cup can be livened up considerably by serving it with a scoop of fruit-flavored sherbet on top.

To avoid yellow stains on your hands when peeling carrots, peel them under water.

Students Leave For Colleges, Universities

We fear our town is going to be a rather lonesome and deserted place when our boys and girls leave for school and so many boys leaving for service for Uncle Sam.

Most of the students will be leaving this week end and first of next week for colleges and universities.

Returning to Lubbock to enter Texas Tech for their junior year will be Louise Baumann and Tommie Palmer. Dorothy Duke, Jo Yarbrough and Don Mathis will begin their sophomore year there and Deryl Bennett and Donald Gene Black will enter as freshmen. Royal James is there working on his Master degree.

Bobbie Johnson returned to McMurry to begin his junior year. Ralston Bruce and Arvus Crockett (if Arvus is not called for army service) go back as sophomores. Patsy Beatty and Gordon Mahon enter as freshmen.

M. D. Cheek, Jr. is a junior in Hardin Simmons university. Willard Pratt goes back to HS as a sophomore, and Shirley Taylor, Fay Narrell and Dale Baird begin their freshmen year there.

Lora Nell Jean goes back to College Station for her second year.

Merlin Bruce goes back to Austin to begin his senior work at Texas University.

Talmadge Linam, Jack and Shepherd Compton will return to Sul Ross College at Alpine.

Lewis (Bo) Briens is a senior at a Houston law school.

Vonelle Faulkenberry goes back to Bryan where she is a student at McKinzie-Baldwin business college. Garland Faulkenberry returns to College Station for his senior year.

Among those from Loraine who are teaching away are: Mrs. Jack Allbright and Dorothy Jean Hallmark in Odessa school; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bill Scribner in Rankin, he is coach and she is commercial teacher; Truman Nix is coach at Rule; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brown are at Silvertown again this year where he is coach; Russell Coffee is assistant coach at Llano.

Mrs. Emma Land is in Roscoe and Miss Ollie Mae Martin in the Westbrook school for her second year; Mrs. Doris Martin is teaching music and voice in Mrs. Willie Mae Thompson's Progressive Art School in Midland; Mrs. L. G. Baker is teaching in Mertzon schools; Melvin King is back at Spur as high school band director; J. W. King, Jr. begins his fourth year as band director at Big Spring; Roy Baird is back in Big Spring as assistant coach for the third year; Mrs. David Hunt, the former Gloria Martin, is teaching in the Dallas schools again this year; Mrs. Vernon Spence is teaching at Cooper and Mr. Spence is teaching in Texas Tech and also attending school there.
