Reagan vows to continue Contra battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, suffering a major foreign policy setback when the House rejected his plan to send military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, vowed "to come back again and again" until the congressional battle is won.

Reagan called Thursday's vote "a dark day for freedom," and said, "This vote must be reversed" after the House defeated, 222-210, his hotly contested request for $100 million in lethal and non-lethal aid to the insurgents trying to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua.

The Senate will begin debate on the package next week, and the House will vote April 15 on alternative proposals. Reagan is expected to eventually win some aid for the rebels.

Reagan, continuing an intense lobbying campaign for his package, which calls for $30 million in non-lethal aid and $70 million in military assistance for the Contra rebels, was scheduled to deliver a speech today at the White House to advocates of rebel aid.

In addition, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan and former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane were made available for appearances on television.

The president, in a written statement, told Congress: "You have my solemn determination to come back again and again, until this battle is won, until freedom is given the chance it deserves in Nicaragua."

He said that as of today, "I will begin to press in the Senate—and then back again in the House—for the real and effective assistance for Nicaragua's freedom fighters which was denied them today, and which those brave men and women deserve."

Arguing that Americans "have begun to awaken to the danger emerging on their doorstep," Reagan said, "And one day, in the not too distant future, that awareness will come home to the House of Representatives."

"We are gaining ground; we are winning converts," Reagan said. "The next battle will bring us the victory this just and good cause rightly deserves."

Over the past three weeks, Reagan delivered numerous speeches and talked with more than 130 House and Senate members in a search of votes, according to a White House count.

Critics of his plan said White House strategy backfired when Reagan and White House communications director Patrick Buchanan questioned the patriotism of their opponents.

House Majority Whip Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Reagan's defeat "shows Congress resented attempts by the administration to question the patriotism (of aid opponents). That was scandalous. That was unfortunate and classically ineffective."

The president had suggested that a vote against aid for the Contras was tantamount to support for the Nicaraguan government. Buchanan said that with the vote, "The Democratic Party will reveal whether it stands with Ronald Reagan and the resistance—or Daniel Ortega and the communists."

Defending the tough talk, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "Our rhetoric, our statements are the president's words."

"It's the way the president feels," Speakes said. "We feel it's an important issue. We feel that this simply presents the issue the way it is. I don't consider this inflammatory rhetoric."

Sixteen Republicans joined 206 Democrats in opposing Reagan's proposal. Forty-six Democrats, many from southern states, and 164 Republicans voted for the aid.

Before the vote, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., decried the administration's lobbying tactics, likening them to "that dark era of fear"—the McCarthy era of the 1950s.

Wheeler, Miami plays going to area contest

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — An avant garde look at the death of a baby and a wacky look at small town Texas took top honors at the District 2-A One Act Play contests Thursday.

Wheeler High School's "Of Winners, Losers and Games" by O.B. Rozelle and Miami High School's "Greater Tuna" by Jason Williams, Joe Sears and Ed Howard will advance to the Area One-Act Play Contest on April 12 at White Deer.

Meanwhile, at the District One Act competition at Clarendon, McLean High School presented "Some of My Best Friends are Smiths," but because that contest is spread out over two nights, the winners will not be announced until tonight.

Vernon Regional Junior College theater instructor Kay Cook commended the Wheeler and Miami plays for their "marvelous energy."

Wheeler's entry brought to life the inner conflicts that goes on with a young couple coming to grips with the death of their baby. The conflicting emotions were personified with the characters Love, Hate, Patience, Compassion, Greed, War, Anger and Peace. Vincent Mendiola was named the contest's best actor for his portrayal of Loser, the half white-faced "father" of the four negative emotions.

Wheeler students making the All Star Cast were Monica Taylor for her portrayal of the selfish Greed and Tammy Baker for the disillusioned young mother. Chad Bentley and Angela Presley received honorable mention.

Cook commended crew members Marlo Hartman, Cory Cornett and Shane Guest for most of their work with music background.

Miami followed the serious play with a spoof of small-town Texas. With the exception of Gerry Anderson, who switched genders to play a hicky radio announcer, and Tracey Stauff, who played his her ditty co-host, the players had to do a variety of roles. Jennifer Signs received best actress honors for her dual role as a buxom sales pitchwoman and a gender-switched role as a young redneck.

All Star Cast members were Tracie Morris, who played two old farm wives, and Max Seymour, who filled in most of the male roles. Anderson, Christy Searl and Kristi Klaverweiden received honorable mention.

Briscoe and Booker High Schools also placed students on the All Star and honorable mention casts. Briscoe did an off beat version of "A Canterbury Tale From the Wife of Bath." Kristi Dawn Hefley and Billy Harden made the All Star Cast while Tina Watson and Leslie Meadows made honorable mention.

In Booker's "The Importance of Being Earnest," Perry Branch and Nicol Albright made All Star Cast while Lori Henderson received honorable mention.

On Tuesday, White Deer's Ron McIntosh was named best actor at the Class AA District One Act Play Contest while David Nicholas was named to the All Star Cast and Ladd Lafferty received honorable mention. The school's entry, "Death of a Salesman," did not advance, however, as top honors went to Quannah and Shamrock.

Parks board subcommittee to study Recreation Park

The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board will be establishing a subcommittee to study development at Recreation Park east of the city.

Speaking at the regular board meeting Thursday afternoon, Chairman Duane Harp said the subcommittee will provide more input into recommendations for developing the site, suggest ideas for facilities and devise long-range planning concepts.

The subcommittee will consist of one advisory board member and probably four to seven others, Harp said. Efforts will be made to obtain a cross-section of representatives from the Top of Texas Rodeo Association and other groups and interested citizens having interests in Recreation Park development.

Parks and Recreation Department Director Reed Kirkpatrick said the city would do the major planning and the actual development, but the subcommittee would give ideas and recommendations to the advisory board, city staff and the city commission.

Harp asked board members to suggest people to serve on the subcommittee. He said he hoped to have the subcommittee appointed by next month.

In other matters, Lee McDonald of the Soil Conservation Service appeared before the board to offer SCS services as a resource for advice and support services for parks development.

McDonald said the SCS does not want to get involved with the city on major engineering projects, but the agency and its staff would be willing to provide materials, studies and information which could be beneficial to the board in considering projects such as tree-planting and other vegetation projects, building windbreaks, soil analysis and ideas for engineering needs on such projects as rehabilitation of the lake at Recreation Park.

During the meeting, the board members took a brief tour of North Crest Park to view development plans at the site. Kirkpatrick said work had begun on preparing the ground for the installation of a multi-dimensional unit playground equipment, which will have a wide range of play opportunities for children in the surrounding residential area.

He said installation of a water sprinkler system in the park should begin soon. A park bench also will be placed in the park near the playground area.

In his report session, Kirkpatrick said the parks crew will be concentrating on the North Crest Park development now. Work has been completed on the Hobart Street Park ballfield facilities, and dirt has been hauled in to fill in low areas at the Lions Club Park ballfield, he reported.

Repairs on the Marcus Sanders Pool have been delayed because of scheduling problems, but that work should begin within a couple of weeks, he said.

Kirkpatrick reported on the organization of the Great Plains Parks and Recreation Society, which held its second meeting in Pampa this past Wednesday. The society is being formed to promote professionalism in the parks and recreation fields and to permit the sharing of ideas among the different cities, businesses and other members from parks-related fields, he said.

He said he hoped Pampa would set the pace for parks and recreation proficiency through getting the society organized. At Wednesday's meeting, Kirkpatrick was elected president of the society, and Pampa Recreation Coordinator Jackie Harper was chosen secretary of the organization.

Most members are from Texas Panhandle cities presently, but invitations for membership have been extended to cities in the South Plains, eastern New Mexico, western Oklahoma and parts of Kansas. Pampa will serve as the home base for the society.

Board member Mrs. Robert H. Sanford, whose term ends this month, indicated she would not be filling another term, leaving another vacancy on the board. Board member Gary Meador submitted his resignation last month; he has moved to Amarillo.

Reagan nixes meeting with Soviet's wife

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yelena Bonner, wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, met this week with a White House official, but President Reagan decided not to see her for fear of upsetting efforts to win freedom for others, according to a published report.

Albert Brashear, a White House spokesman, said he did not know of any meeting between Mrs. Bonner and National Security adviser John M. Poindexter, as reported in Friday's editions of The Washington Post.

But, he said the president would not have refused to meet the wife of Sakharov, a Nobel-prize winning physicist who has been in internal exile in the provincial city of Gorky since 1979.

"The president personally would not have rejected such a meeting request for fear of upsetting future prospects. His record is clear and he certainly stands firmly on the side of those whose rights have been suppressed," Brashear said Thursday night.

But, the Post quoted an unidentified White House official who said, "Reagan's attitude was that these are people I respect. But he doesn't want to do anything to lessen the chances of others being released. He's told a lot of people that he doesn't want to rock the boat."

The Post did not say what day Poindexter met Mrs. Bonner. It quoted an informed source who described the meeting as "cool and correct" and said Mrs. Bonner was not happy that she was unable to meet with the president.

Mrs. Bonner has been in the United States since December for treatment of eye and heart ailments.

In May 1976, Reagan sharply criticized then-President Gerald R. Ford for refusing to meet with writer Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, another prominent dissident.

Administration sources told the Post that they believe further releases may be forthcoming.

EGGS ON END — Students in Libby Glaeser's seventh grade science class at Pampa Middle School try not to breathe too heavily as they examine these eggs standing on end. On the first days of spring and autumn, the vernal equinox and autumnal equinox, eggs supposedly can be balanced on their ends because the sun, located directly over the equator, has an equal pull on all sides of the egg. But balancing an egg isn't easy. For some students it was simply EGGSaspering. (Staff photo by Terry Ford.)

Pampa gifted group advances to state Olympics of the Mind

Four teams of Pampa Middle School Gifted and Talented Students will advance to state finals after taking top honors at the Olympics of the Mind competition last week at West Texas State University.

The teams, which earned one first place and three second place awards at the Northwest Texas Regionals in Canyon last Saturday, will compete at the state finals April 12 at the University of Texas at El Paso.

The intent of the competition is to develop creative thinking in solving problems, to develop team spirit and to develop practical, workable solutions to problems, according to PMS teacher Marcella Diller.

The first place winning team developed and produced a gymnastic chalk box, which gymnasts use to chalk hands before competing on bars.

Team members were Mark Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brown; Allyn Schaub, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schaub; Jason Becker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Becker; Casey Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Campbell; Bryan Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Ellis; and John Fruge, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Fruge.

Members of the second team were Andy Utzman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Utzman; Kristin Becker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ade Becker; Connie Neal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Neal; Ryan Parnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Parnell; and Tracy Reeves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Reeves. Drew Ackfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Ackfield, was an alternate and did not compete.

Their subject was Great Art Lives. Choosing Edward Degas' work, the team recreated two of his pastels, drew two of their own and acted out a short drama illustrating his picture At the Milliners. All sets, costumes and props were made by the team.

Members of the third team were Heather Kludt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Kludt; Krystal Keyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keyes; Clay

Lyle, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Lyle; and Laura Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hamilton. They took a historical topic — Queen Isabella and Christopher Columbus — as it is portrayed in history books and developed a humorous playlet "how it really was."

The final team was Tory Peet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peet; Keenan Minatrea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Minatrea; Monica Hokit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Hokit; Jennifer Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Smith; and Jason Lemons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Lemons. This team had to build a bridge from balsa wood within the limits of six by 18 inches and 25 grams. The test was how much weight the bridge held.

The OM competition was founded nine years ago to develop thinking skills in elementary and secondary school students. The PMS team competed with Borger, Dalhart, Dimmitt, Lubbock and Dumas.

House votes to keep cigarette tax, divide billions in offshore oil money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has cleared the decks for its Easter recess by giving final congressional approval to a bill that makes permanent the 16-cent-a-pack federal cigarette tax and divides billions of dollars in offshore oil money between the U.S. Treasury and coastal states.

A bill left over from last year's budget struggle was adopted by the House, 230-154, Thursday night after Republicans blocked Democrats from offering another proposal to send back to the Senate, which passed its own version earlier in the week.

The vote ended a political volleyball game that had sent the bill traveling back and forth between the two chambers since last December.

President Reagan, who earlier had threatened to veto the House version, was expected to sign the bill.

The package, designed to cut $18 billion from federal deficits over the next three years, would make permanent the 16-cent-a-pack tax on cigarettes, worth $1.7 billion a year to the Treasury. The tax dropped to eight cents last Saturday because of the stalemate, but the bill would boost it back retroactively.

One of the hardest-fought provisions was a formula for sharing receipts from offshore oil and gas leases between the federal government and seven coastal states. About $6 billion has built up in an escrow fund because of the dispute dating back to the late 1970s, and nearly $2 billion will be distributed to the states if Reagan signs the bill.

The bill also includes a new tobacco price support program, sought by tobacco state lawmakers, which would allow the federal government to write off $1 billion in loans for the crop and give tobacco companies control over production quotas.

The measure also would make permanent the federal incentives for states to adopt the 21-year-old drinking age. As in the current law, which expires Sept. 30, 1988, states would be penalized 10 percent of their federal highway money for failing to adopt the federal minimum drinking age.

While the House was dealing with fiscal 1986, which began last Oct. 1, the president's spokesman was unleashing new volleys against the fiscal 1987 budget produced Wednesday by the Senate Budget Committee.

And Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said the spending plan may not be taken up by the full Senate until after the Easter recess. Dole has criticized the plan for raising taxes and cutting $25 billion from President Reagan's military spending request.

Panama rejects Marcos' request for refuge there

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama has rejected ousted Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos' request for refuge, a government official said.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Thursday night the decision came after a meeting between President Eric Arturo Delvalle and other ranking Panamanian officials.

He said an official announcement would be made today, but refused to elaborate further.

Marcos has been seeking permanent refuge since fleeing to Hawaii with his family aboard a U.S. military plane Feb. 26 after being toppled from power by a military and popular rebellion.

U.S. officials in Washington said they had contacted several nations after Marcos asked to leave his temporary home at Hickam Air Force Base near Honolulu and go to another country.

The U.S. sources said Marcos was unhappy there because the quarters were small and he feared he would be subpoenaed by federal grand juries or a House subcommittee that are investigating his financial dealings in the United States.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman refused to identify which countries have been contacted.

Hemphill assessor indicted

CANADIAN — A Hemphill County Grand Jury has returned an indictment charging former Tax Collector-Assessor Jo Ann Haliburton with theft.

The indictment, returned Monday, charges the former county official with acquiring and "exercising control" over U.S. currency ranging from $750 to $20,000 from Hemphill County, while still an officer there. Bond for Haliburton was set at $2,500. No appearance date has been set for 31st District Court.

District Attorney Guy Hardin could not be reached for comment on the case, which reportedly focuses on shortages found in the county tax office in an audit conducted after Haliburton left office in 1984.

An audit performed for the DA's office by Gary Minylen of Canadian revealed a shortage in funds of $3,350 according to Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober. A county audit performed in January 1985 by Peet, Marwick and Mitchell showed a shortage of $3,387. Earlier this month, Hemphill County Commissioners accepted a settlement of $3,387 from the Western Surety Bonding Company.

Gober said he isn't surprised by the Grand Jury's action.

"I feel anyone a public official is involved in something like this, an indictment should be returned," he said.

At Love Field

Airline pledges to use quieter jets

DALLAS (AP) — The president of Southwest Airlines has offered, for the first time, to put in writing a pledge to use quieter jets in order to reduce noise levels at Dallas' Love Field.

Officials have said Southwest accounts for 80 percent of noise problems at the airport, which sits in the middle of a heavily developed area.

At a Dallas Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday, Southwest President Herb Kelleher said the airline would be willing to sign a legally enforceable agreement to use quieter planes on 60 percent of its flights by the end of 1987.

Southwest previously had made only verbal agreements to try and meet voluntary city noise-reduction levels.

However, Kelleher said in return he wants the Dallas City Council to promise not to impose mandatory noise controls on Southwest's Love Field Operations.

If mandatory noise controls are imposed, the city must agree to reimburse the airline for its approximate $25 million investment because the airline would move out of Dallas, Kelleher said.

"We really don't feel that it's appropriate for Southwest Airlines to continue investing millions of dollars in the development of Love Field only to be told three or four years down the line, 'We're very sorry, but now you can't use it.'"

He said the city must promise to pay the airline for its $10 million maintenance hangar, its $2.5 million flight-simulation center and $10 million to $15 million for its planned new headquarters.

Kelleher said he would pledge

Philippine government names Marcos in suit

HOUSTON (AP) — A University of Texas law professor says a lawsuit by the Philippine government, seeking a total of $2.5 billion in damages from former President Ferdinand Marcos and others, will establish a pattern of Texas land ownership.

"Marcos' name is not on any of these (land purchase) documents, but we expect to show a pattern of ownership," said Michael Tigar, who with two Austin attorneys filed suit Thursday against Marcos, his wife, Imelda, and several other people and corporations.

"We will show in court how the cow ate the cabbage," Tigar said at an Austin news conference.

The suit alleges Marcos and others illegally obtained $500 million in Philippine government goods and used at least $50 million to acquire property in several Texas counties.

The Philippine republic alleges government money was used to buy property in Harris, Bexar, Nueces, Tarrant and Denton counties.

"If you look at the land records, you're going to find footprints," said Tigar. "If you look at the land records, certain connections can be drawn."

The suit asks for triple the amount of $500 million in alleged actual damages plus $1 billion in punitive damages. It also asks for a preliminary injunction that would halt business transactions of those named in the suit.

The suit also names Richard Gray Jr. and James Hudson Sr., two Dallas businessmen. A total of 10 people and 21 corporations are named as defendants. The businesses are in the Netherlands Antilles and registered to operate in Texas.

The suit was assigned to Chief U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton's court. No hearing date had been set Thursday on the request for an injunction.

Tigar said he and fellow UT Law School Professor Jay Westbrook, along with Pieter M. Schenkkan, another Austin lawyer, were asked by the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York to represent the Republic of the Philippines in the Texas cases.

Schenkkan said it could be six months before a hearing is held in Houston.

He said details of alleged involvement of the Texas defendants named will be revealed in court.

Schenkkan also said "we're sure we have not found it all in Texas and we don't know what percentage we have."

The Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story Thursday that Harris County records show that a Philippine Consulate official paid more than $1.29 million in 1981 for a 35-acre tract, and an unnamed source said the official acted as a trustee for two high-ranking members of the Marcos government.

Ariel Abadilla, then-Philippines' vice consul in Houston, is listed on deed records as trustee for unidentified purchasers of the land in the northwest part of Harris County, the newspaper reported.

A Houston-area Filipino investor who knew about the transaction said Abadilla presented himself as the trustee for two officials of the Philippine government in Manila, the newspaper said. The money reportedly came from a corporation in Hong Kong.

The Chronicle said Abadilla, now with the consulate in Seattle, on Wednesday denied any knowledge of Houston real estate transactions for the Marcos government.

The property changed ownership in a transaction made at a Houston office, but the seller was not identified.

White visits steel plant

LONE STAR, Texas (AP) — The way Lone Star Steel employee Robert Knox figures it, Gov. Mark White's visit to the beleaguered mill probably was political. But Knox says he was still glad White made the trip.

"I didn't vote for him last time, may not vote for him next time, but he's right in what he said today," Knox said during White's Thursday visit.

What White said was that Lone Star's problems are President Reagan's fault. The Northeast Texas mill, which makes steel pipe for oil field use, this week announced the layoffs of half its 4,000 workers.

"We're glad to see somebody, at least in our state, recognizes the dilemma we're in," Don Qualls, a vice president of a United Steelworkers Union local, said of White's visit.

Asked if the trip seemed politically motivated, Knox said, "I'm sure that got some consideration, but I believe he's sincere in his feelings about the jobs and the people involved here."

White said steelworkers collecting their final paychecks this week are the victims of a "foreign invasion" against which Reagan has mounted no defense. Lone Star Chairman William Howard Beasley III told White the jobs here were lost to "unchecked illegal foreign imports" and the declining price of oil.

White agreed, saying, "This mill has been the victim of a foreign invasion, a bombardment, that has impacted its employment, its profitability and its production. Through the failure of trade policies, we see the same result. I'm hopeful to see this administration change and start enforcing with vigor those frayed laws."

The governor's trip was billed as an effort to show his sympathy for the workers and his support for Lone Star's efforts to become what Beasley called an "even leaner and meaner company."

"Today my heart goes out to the 2,000 workers and their families who have lost the security of a paycheck," White said, adding that his office has put together a $324,000 program to help retrain Lone Star workers.

White blamed Reagan for failing to battle foreign steel "dumped" in the United States at below-cost prices and for resisting calls for an import fee on foreign oil.

"This administration has practically broken the bank building a military machine that will not have any fuel," White added.

"Look in the faces of these workers and their families and understand, please, Mr. President, we need help," he said.

Jack Golden of Houston, a district official for the steelworkers union, said, "My union is not opposed to foreign imports. All we ask for is a fair field to play on."

"It seems we've got a six-man football team going up against a team of 11," he said.

The governor took a driving and walking tour of the plant. It was, for the most part, a quiet day at the mill. Lone Star is still in business and White and Beasley said it will stay in business.

"Make no mistake about it," said Beasley, "we are not here today to bury this mill or this company. We are here to downsize our operation into an even leaner and meaner company."

The difference in daily operations is obvious.

"There used to be 6,000 people out there," said Judith Murrell, a company public relations official.

On Thursday, there were less than 1,000, she said.

Police officer, suspect die after routine traffic stop

DALLAS (AP) — A routine stop for a traffic violation ended in the shooting deaths of a Dallas police officer and one of the car's occupants, police said.

Dallas Police Cpl. Gary Blair, 30, died at Methodist Medical Center after being wounded in the leg and neck in a struggle about 5:30 p.m. Thursday in the Oak Cliff area, Assistant Police Chief L.R. Sweet said.

Police identified the other dead man as Andrew Pigg, 28, of Dallas. He died at Methodist Medical Center of gunshot wounds in the chest, Sweet said.

Blair, a five-year veteran of the force, was the father of a 7-year-old daughter, Sweet said.

Police questioned the car's other occupant Thursday night and expected to book him early Friday on capital murder charges, said police Capt. John Holt. He said police believe Pigg fired the shot that killed Blair, but said the other man would be charged with being a principal in the case.

Sweet said the incident began when Blair radioed the dispatcher that he was stopping a car with two occupants for a traffic violation. The cars pulled into the parking lot of the Parc Regency Apartments.

A few minutes later, Sweet said, Blair radioed the dispatcher on his walkie-talkie and said, "I need assistance immediately."

When officers arrived, Sweet said, they found Blair and Pigg, shot, on the parking lot pavement. The car was still there, but its second occupant was gone.

Holt said Blair carried two pistols, and preliminary investigations indicated that Blair was shot with his primary service revolver and Pigg was shot with the other weapon. Both guns were found at the scene, Sweet said.

Blair was a field training officer, but he was alone at the time. Police Chief Billy Prince said Blair was wearing a bullet-proof vest, but the bullets hit him above and below the protected area.

Holt said the second suspect called police and told them he planned to surrender. He drove to the police station at 10 p.m., and police immediately began questioning him, Holt said.

Prince described Blair as "a very fine, outstanding officer."

"We've lost not only a fine officer, but Dallas has lost a fine person," Prince said, holding back tears. "We are fortunate that we have young people who are willing to go into the streets and dark alleys of this city for the salary they get."

More personal thoughts

Spring cleaning and scattershooting:
As some of you have remembered, I've declared this Sunday, Palm Sunday, Walk Day.

It's a simple thing, really, and there are no laws forcing you to participate. As a small form of protest, I've asked is that people try to get through Sunday without driving their cars.

You see, I've become increasingly offended by the heavy-handed control Oil has on our lives. Especially here, our lives have become so dependent on Oil that it's a wonder our blood hasn't turned black. Of course I could be wrong, but I look at our current economy and don't think so. If Pampa wants to survive and prosper as a city, it's going to have to find something other than Oil to base its economy on. Oil burns and then it's gone. Some day, all of it will be.

My first column railing on the dominance of Oil angered some people. It caused J.N. McKean to publicly label me a glue sniffer and dope smoker, but in the same letter to the editor he underscored some of my points.

Mr. McKean says I shouldn't be biting the hand that feeds me, but the way I see it I feed myself. I do my work, which has nothing to do with Oil, and the Oil producer does his, which does. We both get paid for our labor, which to me is of the same value. Oil companies laugh at such thoughts, because they make a hell of a lot more money than newspapers.

That's because John Q. Public can survive without a newspaper, but can't without gas in his car. Without Oil companies, we couldn't even get our paper on your doorstep. Oil companies know this. They have power over Your Life, and they use it.

The Oil companies moan right now about how tough it is in their shoes. I agree that some of the little guys are hurting, but I'm not shedding any tears. The Big Guys will get along just fine and come out of it with fatter wallets and weasel grins. After all, the old adage says that in Texas, the Oil bidness takes care of itself.

If Oil is such a tough bidness with a bleak future, explain the recent actions of Amarillo's Diamond-Shamrock. Diamond-Shamrock decided to disband its chemical division in favor of becoming a full-fledged Oil Company. Does that sound like they're worried about the future of Oil?

I sure am. By now, most of you have probably seen at least one of the three Mad Max movies. The setting is post-apocalyptic Australia, and Oil is the most valuable substance on Earth. Most of the world population has been exterminated by a nuclear battle over control of the world Oil supply, along with most of the Oil. Roaming tribes of thugs are left to fight among themselves for what remains of the "precious juice."

I'm not sure that the Mad Max vision of the future isn't right.

The use of Oil has allowed mankind to make what I guess are great advances, but it's time to let the dinosaur lay and move on. You can't tell me that we don't have the knowledge to make vehicles powered by another energy source.

You could make a solar car or an electric car, and if someone really wanted to, you could find a way to mass produce it and make it affordable for good ol' John Q. Which would destroy your Chryslers, GM's, Phillips and Exxons, but that would be for the better.

Any way, my protest against Oil's dominance in my life will simply be to walk to the places I want to go Sunday. I'd like for you, too. I refrained from harping on this thing because I can't force you to do anything, and I don't want to. But if you're a little fed up with being owned and manipulated by greedhead corporate-types, maybe we'll pass each other on the Sunday sidewalk.

One thing I can't help harping on is Reagan and Nicaragua. Get this. More people live in Pampa than make up the entire Contra rebel force. There are 20,000 Contra rebels, max, meaning that the $100 million Reagan wants for them adds up to $5,000 per man.

What could you do with $5,000 right now? The Contras would use the money to kill people. Enough said.

Having voiced my gripes on Oil, I feel compelled to offer an opinion on the big local issue, which is natural gas war between independents and majors.

The independents knew what they were doing from Day One, and they knew it wasn't right. They were stealing gas and they got caught. Now we're all having to endure the punishment.

Also, having campaigned against Contra aid, I feel I should give an alternative proposal instead of just griping. If we're worried about protecting our southern border from Communists, and if we have to give $100 million of Our Money to someone else, why not give it to Mexico for economic aid and help that neighbor get his house straight again. A strong, pro-U.S. Mexico would be all the buffer zone from Communists that we'll ever need.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Hard work isn't enough

Continental Illinois Bank, which has imposed enough on the American public, is this time taxing only our patience. The annoyance is a new advertising campaign, which is supposed to inspire awe with the revelation that at Continental, "We work hard. We have to."

One ad shows a forlorn pooch waiting vainly for his master to finally trudge home from the office. One consists of the word "work" printed a couple of hundred times, followed by the punchline: "A list of our 1986 objectives." Another features an empty pinstriped suit - which is how I recall most of the bankers I've dealt with - and informs us, "To a Continental banker, this is a sweatshirt."

The text of a typical ad expands on the point: "Nobody works harder than the people at the New Continental Illinois... So if you want a banker who works hard for you, come to the bank where working hard is a way of life."

Now, hard work may be a new phenomenon at Continental. It probably doesn't take a lot of long hours and elbow grease to buy loans, as the old Continental did, from a banker given to wearing Mickey Mouse ears and drinking beer out of a cowboy boot. Or to apply for a federal bailout when your loan portfolio goes bad, all your depositors head south and your business threatens to collapse.

But to the rest of us, work is pretty routine, not something that deserves the Congressional Medal of Honor. So Continental's self-congratulatory irritates. The news that its bankers now work hard is bound to elicit one of two responses: (1) "So what?" and (2) "It's about time." The more audacious claim, that "nobody works harder," is likely to evoke well-justified skepticism, if not derisive hoots.

The people at Continental seem to be enmeshed in an old economic fallacy known as the labor theory of value, which assumes the worth of a product is the sum of the work put into it. In fact, prices - which is to say values - are established by supply and demand. The market rewards those who provide goods and services that buyers want, not those who simply sale away without regard to consumer needs. The unemployment lines are full of people who worked hard at the wrong jobs.

A journalist, to use an especially poignant example, can work 20 hours a day for a month on an article that, if no one wants to publish it, is worth less than the paper it's printed on. On the other hand, the same journalist may be paid a handsome sum to spend 15 minutes on a TV show spouting uninformed nonsense.

The lesson for our bankers is not that hard work is unnecessary, merely that it's insufficient. I personally don't care if my banker falls out of bed at noon, spends the lunch hour being marinated in gin and plays golf all afternoon - as long as I get easy terms on loans, high rates on deposits, well-functioning cash machines and a roughly accurate monthly statement. If the banker across the street can't match those lures, it won't matter if he stays at his desk until 3 a.m.

Granted, Continental may not really want the business of a small-timer like me. It's really aiming at businesses. But business executives are even less likely than ordinary consumers to choose a bank because of the appealing image created by its advertisements. Their only question is: What can you do for me? Continental's ads don't tell them.

This campaign may be taken as a variation on Avis's old "We try harder" spiel. The difference is that the Avis line sounded like a resolute pledge to please every customer, while Continental's comes across as an irrelevant and unsubstantiated boast.

So these ads may drive away more customers than they attract. But hard work can be beneficial. If the people at Continental want to find out how, they should get to work on a new ad campaign.

Opinion

When in doubt, hold a hearing

As Pentagon officials hunker down to defend the defense budget from prospective congressional cuts, a good many others are spending their taxpayer-supported days answering congressional inquiries on subjects not directly related to either the budget process or national defense.

Indeed, complaints that Congress was more a hindrance than a help because of its endless requests for trivia and names caused some senior Pentagon officials to complain and the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wisc., to request a study of the issue.

Government Accounting Office factfinders swung into action and turned up some interesting statistics:

—Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has spent less time in front of congressional hearings than any other defense secretary in the last 20 years. Weinberger testified for 26 hours last year, compared to Donald Rumsfeld's 40 hours in 1976 and Robert McNamara's record of 102 hours in one year.

—Between 1975 and 1984, an average of 1,509 military officials spent an average of 1,642 hours per year in congressional testimony.

—Congress averages 108,772 written requests for information and 505,911 telephoned inquiries yearly.

—The number of Congressional committees and subcommittees that hear testimony by Pentagon witnesses has tripled in the last 20 years; the number of reports Congress requires of the Pentagon has gone from 36 in 1976 to 600 in 1986.

The GAO findings illustrate what many Capitol Hill watchers have long suspected: when it doubt, hold hearings. Indeed, it is just possible that the Pentagon bureaucracy could be a tad smaller were it not for endless congressional requests for facts and figures vaguely related to oversight duties.

Even Aspin, whose committee is one of the biggest information seekers, told The New York Times recently, "There are requests where Congress orders up a report, not to aid congressional deliberations, but as a substitute for deliberations."

So that's what our tax dollars go for... Another suspicion confirmed.

Its time has finally come

Whatever happened to the picture telephone; the device enabling you to see the person to whom you're talking?

In 1964 the first picturephone was demonstrated at the New York World's Fair and we made jokes about it:

"Who wants to be seen in curlers?"
"What if the phone rings while we're in the bathtub?"

Yet anybody who witnessed the demonstration 22 years ago was convinced that the picturephone was an idea whose time had come. It had not.

Now it has. Personal visual telecommunication is here now. One unit is presently available. Two young men in Peabody, Mass., promise an improved product by fall.

The TV picture to which you are accustomed requires the transmission and reception of 100 million "pieces of information" per second.

The picturephone requires squeezing all that "information" onto telephone lines designed to move only 56,000 "pieces of information."

Some high-tech whizzes have devised a coder-decoder which accomplishes that objective:

A talking picture on regular digital telephone lines.

The directors of this research project are Brian Hinman and Jeff Bernstein who grew up together in Wheaton, Md., with a common interest in ham radios.

As graduate students in electrical engineering and computer science at MIT they got the idea for PicTel - the picture telephone. PicTel went public in 1984.

Nineteen months later their company stock was worth more than $20 million.

Next fall the first of their picture telephones will be available for sale.

They'll be expensive at first - $70,000 - so the first will likely be bought only by corporations that can benefit most.

The several companies racing to refine data compression virtually guarantee that the price of a talking picture telephone will come down within a decade to the present cost of a personal computer.

And that picture quality will be at least as good as what you now see on TV.

"Videoconferencing," presently available, is costly, inconvenient and lacks privacy.

PicTel will provide a desk-top unit which promises clarity, precision and naturalness.

What took them so long?

That kind of quality requires data-compression comparable to reducing the entire volume of "War and Peace" to one-half of a single page.

Berry's World

"We've lived in the 'real world' long enough. LET'S TRY SOMETHING ELSE!"

Should Soviets be on U.S. television?

By William A. Rusher

ABC-TV walked into a hornet's nest when it invited Soviet propagandist Vladimir Posner to comment on President Reagan's address to the American people on national security.

The compulsion of all three networks to rebut Mr. Reagan instantly had already resulted in standing invitations to the Democrats to follow every Reagan address with a prerecorded "response." But ABC was unable to see why, if House Majority Leader Jim Wright was entitled to an instant rebuttal of Mr. Reagan's remarks, some articulate Soviet spokesman shouldn't be accorded a similar privilege.

It quickly found out why. As White House Communications Director Pat Buchanan explained in a letter to ABC News President Rooney Arledge:

"The debate over what America requires - to defend herself, her allies and friends from the awesome military power of the Soviet Union - is a debate for Americans to conduct. Soviet propagandists have no legitimate role in that discussion."

Surely that, at least, should be obvious.

But Buchanan went on to make a broader point which - quite rightly, in my opinion - calls into question the networks' growing habit of inviting smooth-sounding Soviet spokesmen to participate in all sorts of talk shows. As Buchanan put it, "How is the search for truth served by turning ABC's national audience over to an individual whose concept of truth is whatever statement will advance communism?"

There is a great deal of sloppy thinking going on in regard to this question. In the first place, "freedom of speech" - i.e., the right of the Soviet Union or of domestic communists to address the American public - is not at issue. Communist publications of all sorts are freely available, and important Soviet statements of policy are commonly carried in major U.S. newspapers and fully reported on American television.

Nor is anybody seriously concerned that many viewers will be fooled by slick Russians like Posner (though, when I am asked slyly whether I question "the intelligence of the American people," I am tempted to reply that, according to Abraham Lincoln, some of them can be fooled all of the time).

No doubt Posner does impress some viewers with his suave, unaccented and superficially plausible remarks, but certainly most people can smell a propagandist that phony a mile away in a high wind.

Actually, from the standpoint of the networks, and also that of the average viewer, the justification for having a Posner on a talk show is simply the mild kick one gets out of seeing and hearing a certified Bad Guy in the flesh. Many a TV producer, and many a viewer, would have loved an interview with Adolf Hitler for the same reason.

But what such almost pornographic considerations overlook is what the Soviets accomplish by smuggling one of their spokesmen into U.S. living rooms. They don't seriously expect that many of us will believe his explanations of Soviet actions or policies. But the mere sight of him sitting there, along with (say) David Brinkley, Sam Donaldson and George Will, amiably disagreeing with them, helps very much indeed to obscure a vital fact that must never be forgotten: that he serves a regime that repudiates the Judeo-Christian concept of objective truth altogether. In any civilized discussion, therefore, dedicated to a sincere mutual search for such truths, a disciplined communist simply has nothing to say.

This does not mean, of course, that the regime he represents should not be spoken to, or listened to, in appropriate circumstances - just as Nazi Germany, or the Ayatollah's Iran today, might have to be addressed or heard out in the interests of peace. But it does, or ought to, close on communists the door to the sort of discussions that routinely occur among men of good will. By their own choice, communists are excluded from that category.

Bits of history

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt created a storm of controversy with his proposal to appoint up to six additional Supreme Court justices. Critics charged he was trying to pack the nation's highest court.

In 1958, Gamal Abdel Nasser was formally nominated to become the first president of the new United Arab Republic.

Artificial protein developed in search for AIDS vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists taking an alternative route to developing a preventive vaccine against AIDS say they have synthesized a protein that makes laboratory animals generate antibodies to the disease-causing virus.

In a report published today in the journal Science, researchers say the synthetic version of a protein from the virus which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome causes animals to produce high levels of antibodies to the germ.

It is too soon to know if this antibody reaction will protect animals from infection by the virus, or if the synthetic protein will be the basis for a vaccine that ultimately could prevent the disease in humans, the researchers said Thursday.

However, if a prototype vaccine using the synthetic protein is successful for humans — which they say could take up to two years to determine — it may have advantages over vaccines made from actual viral proteins, on which most other research is focused.

Scientists at the Southwest Foundation for Biomedical Research in San Antonio and the Harvard School of Public Health in Boston say they chemically synthesized a critical part of the protein coat which covers the AIDS virus.

When this protein was injected into rabbits, the animals developed antibodies that reacted with the AIDS virus, known as HTLV-3 or LAV. These animal antibodies were tested against blood serum from five human AIDS patients and reacted with the AIDS sera much more strongly than with fluids from healthy people, the report said.

AIDS is a fatal disease that destroys much of the body's immune system, making it unable to resist infection and other disease. As of March 10, it had struck 18,070 people in the United States and claimed 9,591 lives. No one is known to have recovered from the disease.

Drs. Ronald C. Kennedy and Gordon R. Dreesman of the Southwest Foundation said in a telephone interview that later research indicates the antibodies react very well with many variations of the often-changing AIDS virus.

"We have no indication at this point whether antibodies produced by the synthetic peptide are protective," Dreesman said.

The researchers are testing the rabbit antibodies to see if they neutralize the virus and plan to test the synthetic protein on chimpanzees, the only other primate that can contract AIDS from the human disease virus, he said.

The ape tests, which should produce results before the end of the year, will involve inoculating the animals with the peptide and then injecting them with live virus, he said.

The AIDS virus is so infectious and unpredictable that scientists are not using the standard vaccine development approach of inoculating animals or humans with weakened or killed strains of the virus in order to spur immunity.

Instead, numerous research groups are working with all or pieces of the non-infectious viral coat because tests show that these proteins also stimulate immune responses. Candidate vaccines made from these proteins are being tested on animals.

Kennedy said that if a vaccine is developed from one of these natural proteins, scientists would have to use genetic engineering to produce organisms that could make the proteins in large quantities. Proteins produced this way often are accompanied by a lot of impurities and other substances that must be removed.

"Making a synthetic vaccine would probably be more economical and much easier to purify than a recombinant (genetically engineered) vaccine," he said.

Others who worked on the synthetic peptide report include Dr. Richard D. Henkel and Daniel Pauletti of the Southwest Foundation, and Drs. Jonathan E. Allan, Tun-Hou Lee and Myron Essex of Harvard.

Autumn Hills jury enters third day of deliberations

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jurors deliberating murder charges against a nursing home chain and four of its employees have asked to review several medical and state investigative records.

Deliberations were to enter their third day today in the state's case against Autumn Hills Convalescent Centers Inc. and the four employees.

They are charged with murder in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Elnora Breed, 87.

Mrs. Breed died 47 days after she entered an Autumn Hills nursing home in Texas City.

The state has charged Mrs.

Breed died of starvation and infection, both the result of nursing neglect.

The defense claims Mrs. Breed died of a recurring cancer.

The individual defendants include Autumn Hills president Robert Gay, 59; vice president Ron Pohlmeier, 43; nursing consultant Mattie Locke 44; and former Texas City administrator Virginia Wilson, 64.

Court officials said the panel Thursday asked for Mrs. Breed's medical records, state health department inspection reports on the nursing home, in-house financial reports on the corporation, Mrs. Locke's personal notes on her visits to the facility and a resignation letter from former nursing director Cassandra Canlas to Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Canlas is a defendant in the case but she was granted a separate trial.

"If they don't trust their gut feelings and try to get into all the minute details about who did what to whom and when, then they are going to get hung," said defense attorney Roy Minton.

Judge Don Morgan's instructions to the jury said if the panel finds Mrs. Breed died of natural causes, the defendants must be acquitted.

Poll shows

Small percentage believe teachers doing a poor job

HOUSTON (AP) — Poll results showing that only 4.9 percent of those asked to evaluate teachers believe educators are doing a poor job in the classroom may help boost ailing morale, a teachers' association president says.

And despite claims that teacher testing was needed to increase the public's confidence in educators' abilities, Texas State Teachers Association president Charles Beard said that of 1,000 state residents polled, more than half said they believed teachers were doing an excellent or good job.

The poll follows "a most devastating week for teachers — the week of March 10 when the TECAT test was given," Beard said Thursday, referring to the mandatory competency test taken by educators statewide.

But the poll's results may help increase teachers' morale, which is "probably at the lowest ebb it ever been," he said.

Beard and about 1200 of TSTA's 97,000 members are in Houston for the association's 107th annual convention, which continues through Saturday.

"It's been said by the governor of the state and Ross Perot and by others that teacher testing was absolutely necessary because the public had lost confidence in the teaching profession," Beard said. "They are dead wrong."

The poll, conducted Jan. 24-Feb. 6 by the Public Policy Resources Lab at Texas A&M University and Harte-Hanks Communications, asked 1,000 adults around the state to evaluate teachers in their local school district. The ratings were excellent, good, only fair and poor.

A total of 17 percent said their teachers were doing an excellent job, 44.1 percent said teachers were doing a good job and 23.7 said they were doing a fair job.

About 10 percent declined to give a rating or said they didn't know.

"There's not a politician in this state that this kind of polling results in their favor," Beard said.

"It proves that TECAT was enacted as a political excuse for raising taxes and not as a means to satisfy a disenchanted public."

"Most teachers in this state were competent (before taking TECAT), and they still are," he said.

Beard said he does not know if taking TECAT will help teachers get better pay raises from the state next year.

And although Gov. Mark White supported teacher competency tests, Beard said the governor hasn't "closed the door" yet on his chances of getting the association's endorsement in the gubernatorial election.

Beard said delegates planned to meet Thursday to discuss upcoming elections.

Demo gubernatorial debate urged again

AUSTIN (AP) — Andrew Briscoe says he thinks a statewide debate between Democratic candidates for governor can still be arranged, if Gov. Mark White would agree.

Briscoe challenged White again Thursday to a statewide television debate, "any time of the day or night."

White, who moved his weekly news conference from Austin to the Lone Star Steel plant in North Texas had no comment on debates.

"He cancelled his press conference in the Capitol knowing he would be confronted by me about a debate," said Briscoe, who has appeared at White's press briefings before.

White's campaign office in Austin said they had heard nothing from Briscoe about new debate dates.

In answer to an invitation from the Texas League of Women Voters, who are sponsoring a statewide TV debate of Republican gubernatorial candidates, White offered to appear on two certain dates in March and in April. The league said later it was unable to arrange a statewide program on dates that would fit into the schedules of White and the other five Democratic candidates.

"I don't believe a debate is off," Briscoe told a Capitol news conference. "There is a firm in Houston that has offered to do it on a statewide basis."

Briscoe offered White eight "alternative" dates in April.

"I'll debate at 6 a.m. or at midnight," Briscoe said.

LaRouche says Illinois voters have spoken

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lyndon LaRouche, denounced as part of the "kook fringe" of politics, is basking in the success of two of his followers and responding to his detractors by saying, "the voters of Illinois have spoken."

In a telephone interview, LaRouche said his followers won Democratic nominations for lieutenant governor and secretary of state because voters were "disgusted with the establishment."

Adlai E. Stevenson III, the Democratic nominee for Illinois governor, vowed Thursday he would not run on a ticket with LaRouche supporter Mark Fairchild, who defeated Stevenson's hand-picked choice.

"I will never run on a ticket with candidates who espouse the hate-filled policy of the U.S. Labor Party," Stevenson said.

"I think Adlai is responding to very great pressures," said LaRouche, "but the fact is the voters of Illinois have spoken in a significant way and as a realistic politician he cannot ignore what the voters have said."

Asked about Stevenson's description of his positions as "hate-filled," LaRouche replied, "That's crazy. The U.S. Labor Party doesn't exist and hasn't existed for years."

"He's reflecting not what he believes, he's reflecting what he may feel it is incumbent upon him to say," LaRouche said.

LaRouche, who got his start in politics as a leftist and member of the Socialist Worker's Party, shifted rapidly to the right in the 1970s. He ran for president on the U.S. Labor Party ticket in 1976. In 1980 and 1984, he entered Democratic presidential primaries, never getting more than 3 percent of the vote.

He said he already has registered with the Federal Election Commission as a candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

LaRouche said that while Democratic primary voters in Illinois supported Stevenson for governor, they wanted to "send a signal by dumping the two guys that are running with him."

LaRouche, who advocates massive increases in defense spending, also said people view President Reagan as "vacillating, wishy-washy on the question of national defense."

He added, "The man is a lame duck, the Democratic leadership is off-base; therefore, there is a vacuum."

Democratic Party Chairman

Paul G. Kirk Jr. issued a statement saying he was notifying party officials "in each state as we begin this important election year urging them to closely monitor the names and views of those who file for Democratic nominations at all levels of government."

"The Illinois results indicate we must take additional steps to educate voters about extremist candidates whose views, once known, would be rejected by legitimate Democrats."

Odds favor eventual Reagan Contra aid victory

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The odds are that before the battle is over, President Reagan will win congressional approval for sending help to Contra forces in Nicaragua, but the first skirmish went to the opponents of deepening U.S. involvement in the Central American civil war.

Thursday's House vote rejecting the $100 million aid package came after an extraordinary lobbying effort by the president, the sort of effort that usually produces a White House victory on a closely divided issue.

But this time it fell short.

The explanation seemed to lie in a widespread wariness on the part of politicians and their constituents of becoming involved in the Nicaraguan conflict.

The question the president hasn't been able to answer is, how much is enough? Can the Contras win their war without continued U.S. aid, including military assistance?

Contra aid was an issue on which the president had committed his power and prestige.

He had gone to the nation in a televised speech Sunday night to describe this as an issue directly involving "the security of the United States. This danger will not go away; it will grow worse, much worse, if we fail to take action now."

An AP News Analysis

Reagan appealed to Americans to contact members of Congress and urge them to support the aid package.

But the overwhelming pressure he hoped for didn't materialize. The vote against aid was 222-210 and the majority seemed more inclined to support the view of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass, who said the aid package "takes us further down the road to a situation where our troops will be involved."

The president was quick to label the vote "a dark day for freedom." He vowed to fight on "again and again until this battle is won."

His struggle to send military assistance to the rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government now moves to a more sympathetic forum, the Senate, where Republicans are in the majority.

The president seemed clearly prepared to shape the aid package in whatever way was necessary to win approval, to get the money and supplies flowing south to the rebels.

That flexibility puts the odds in his favor as he searches for the correct mix that will produce a majority in the Democratic-controlled House.

First lady unhurt after plane slides off runway

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nancy Reagan, described as "visibly shaken" when her plane slipped off the runway at an Atlanta airport, has returned safe and sound to the White House.

President Reagan told the first lady in a telephone call after the incident, "I'll be waiting for you."

Mrs. Reagan arrived at Andrews Air Force Base early Thursday evening aboard a small jet from the presidential fleet.

"We're fine," reported Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, who was seated near the first lady on the plane. No one was injured, Mrs. Crispin said.

Mrs. Reagan flew to Atlanta Thursday morning to attend a parents' anti-drug abuse conference. She had delivered a speech and was leaving town when the incident occurred.

Her plane, one of the larger planes in the presidential fleet, was taxiing on the runway and making a sharp turn when the right set of wheels slipped off the runway and became mired in the mud.

The press secretary said the crew inspected the aircraft.

'Swing' Texans split on Contra vote

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two Texans considered "swing" votes on President Reagan's request for $100 million in military aid for the Nicaraguan Contras split their decision.

The House voted 222-210 against the administration's request to send military aid to the rebels fighting the left-wing Sandinista government.

Ortiz' district includes Harlingen, which Reagan invoked in a speech a couple of weeks ago, when he said Nicaragua was a haven for communists "just two days' drive" from Harlingen, near the southernmost tip of Texas.

"It was a combination of a lot of soul-searching and listening to my constituents and listening to the debate and getting all the facts," Ortiz said. "At the end, I had to make an analysis and say, well, in my opinion, because of all the facts before me now, I think this is the right thing to do."

Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, the newest member of Congress since a special election last August, said he decided to vote "no" because of Reagan's offer Wednesday to compromise on limiting the military aid.

"This is curious now that by moving toward a position I could support he lost my vote, because had the choice been the president's package and no aid at all, I would have supported the president," Chapman said.

Instead, Chapman said, he will wait for another vote, promised by April 15, on legislation similar to the compromise Reagan offered as an executive order. Reagan's compromise would limit use of the money to "defensive" weapons, training and logistics for the first 90 days.

Here is how the Texas delegation voted:

Democrats — Andrews, no; Brooks, no; Bryant, no; Bustamante, no; Chapman, no; Coleman, no; de la Garza, no; Frost, no; Gonzalez, no; R. Hall, yes; Leath, yes; Leland, no; Ortiz, yes; Pickle, no; Stenholm, yes; Wilson, yes; Wright, no.

Republicans — Archer, yes; Arney, yes; Bartlett, yes; Barton, yes; Boulter, yes; Combest, yes; DeLay, yes; Fields, yes; Loeffler, yes; Sweeney, yes.

Marcos 'encyclopedia of corruption' made public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos' personal papers, described as "an encyclopedia of corruption," disclose $30 million in bank accounts in Switzerland, France and the Caribbean and his hand-written promise to his wife, Imelda, that she would inherit the Philippines government upon his death.

Meanwhile, it was proving an extremely difficult task for the U.S. government to find Marcos and his wife a permanent home-in-exile, as no country appeared to want them.

Panama, which appeared to be Washington's best hope, informed the State Department on Thursday that the deposed Philippines president and his wife wouldn't be welcome, it was learned. A government official in Panama confirmed that Panama had said it did not want Marcos.

U.S. officials said talks were going on with several other countries, while the Marcoses remained at their temporary haven in Hawaii.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who Thursday released copies of 2,000 pages of documents taken from Marcos in Hawaii, said they did not contain any overall measure of Marcos' extensive wealth, which has been estimated as high as $10 billion. But he said they catalogue an "encyclopedia of corruption" during Marcos' 20-year reign.

"They provide further evidence that the Marcoses did not distinguish between the public treasury and their private property," Solarz told a news conference. He contended the Marcos government "existed for the sole purpose of plundering the wealth of the country" and brought it to the verge of bankruptcy.

There was mention of complicated real estate transactions, possible kickbacks in business dealings and bank accounts around the world containing millions of dollars. One document, hand-written on presidential stationery but unsigned, referred to $30 million in interest proceeds alone in 1974 and 1975 in several foreign banks.

It said there was $15 million from the Banque de Paris; $10 million from the Swiss Credit Bank; $2 million from Swiss Banking; and $2 million from Grand Cayman, an island in the Caribbean.

There also was mention of certificates of deposit and bankers' acceptances worth about $4 million, two-thirds of which was purchased during the period from Jan. 23 of this year to less than a week before the Marcoses fled the Philippines on Feb. 25.

While it had been widely rumored for years that Marcos planned to turn the government over to his wife in the event of his death, one of the documents, which was hand-written on presidential stationery — apparently by Marcos himself — provided the first confirmation.

Dated Jan. 17, 1975, and bearing Marcos' signature, the document said "the commission succeeding me in the exercise of powers and duties as President in the event of my death or permanent incapacity shall be composed of the following: Chairman, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos ..."

Titled "Presidential Decree No. 731," it also listed by title six Cabinet officers who would serve as members of the commission under his wife, but only Mrs. Marcos was listed by name. Marcos had been in ill health for some years.

Young Soviet girl begins two week tour of United States

CHICAGO (AP) — An 11-year-old Soviet girl whose U.S. tour recalls the international journey for peace of Samantha Smith began her visit by telling the adults and children who greeted her, "I hope we will be friends."

Katya Lycheva set foot on American soil for the first time Thursday night at O'Hare International Airport and was met by Star Rowe, 10, of San Francisco, who gave her 10 white roses and said in well-rehearsed Russian: "Welcome to our country. We will work together for peace."

The fifth-grader was accompanied by her mother, an interpreter, the general secretary of the Soviet Peace Committee, and Patricia Montandon, the executive director of the U.S.-based Children as the Peacemakers Foundation, the sponsor of Katya's trip.

"We're building a bridge instead of a wall," Ms. Montandon said as she introduced the entourage.

Katya, who had just completed the 18-hour journey from her home in Moscow, was beginning a two-week trip that will include visits to New York, Washington, Houston and Los Angeles.

In reply to Star's welcome, she said in English: "Thank you very much. I'm very glad to see you. I hope we will be friends."

She said she hoped to tell American children as much as she could about her homeland, which Samantha visited in 1983.

Her Chicago visit was to include breakfast today at a hotel, lunch with sixth-graders and a chat with Mayor Harold Washington.

Also planned were a trip to the Statue of Liberty; a day at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif.; a Texas-style barbecue; and a meal at a McDonald's restaurant.

Katya attends Special English School No. 4 in Moscow, where children start studying English in the second grade.

Before her departure from Moscow, she said she hoped her "journey would contribute even just a little bit toward the cause of peace."

Her departure Thursday evening was carried on Soviet television, spliced with the footage from Samantha's visit to Moscow three years ago.

Cures All

To a child a band-aid is the quickest cure, and will heal and protect any wound. This is a wonderful trust . . . how wonderful it would be if we would place the same trust in the Lord. "Ye that fear the Lord, trust in the Lord: he is their help and their shield." Confidence and faith grows greater with practice. Attend church regularly, study God's word and . . . "they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek thee."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Easter services

Palo Duro Canyon

Plans are being made to hold the annual Easter Sunrise Service in the amphitheater of the Palo Duro Canyon State Park again this year.

Under the sponsorship of the churches of Canyon, the service will begin at 7 a.m. on Sunday, March 30. The gates to the park will open at 6:15 a.m. Admission to the park is free for those persons who plan to attend only the Sunrise Service.

Rev. Thad Smotherman, who was recently installed as pastor-developer for the Community Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Lubbock, will be the guest speaker for the event.

Smotherman moved to Lubbock from a 25-month ministry with the First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Crescent, Okla., where there were 117 additions in that period in the community of 1,651. His congregation in Crescent gave 22.3 percent of its resources for outreach ministries beyond the local church.

Before publicly announcing his call to be an evangelist, he spent 12 years in television in California, both in production and the business side.

Rev. Smotherman and his wife Carol have a daughter, Hillary. The service will conclude by 8 a.m. to give persons time to get home for their local church services.

It is suggested that attendees wear warm clothing since it probably will be cool in the early morning.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Paul Land at the First Christian Church in Canyon at 655-3512.

Jehovah's Witnesses

The Pampa congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses will observe its annual memorial of the death of Christ in special services at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Kingdom Hall, 1701 Coffee.

Presiding will be Andy Wilson. The observance corresponds with Nisan 14 on the Bible's lunar calendar, according to Elmer Reed, local minister.

"Keep doing this in remembrance of me." Those words of our Lord Jesus Christ, found at Luke 22:19, were spoken at the time when Jesus instituted the memorial of his death," Reed said. "It is Jesus' death that opened to humankind the prospect of attaining everlasting life in paradise conditions."

"So his death, continued 1,953 years ago (according to Witness calculations), is something we must remember," he added.

More than 7 million worldwide will assemble with Jehovah's Witnesses at this annual event, which is the only celebration observed by the denomination.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — An interfaith delegation, back from a visit to Yugoslavia, says both leaders of the Marxist government and of religion now recognize that the other will not wither away — and seek to adjust to that fact.

A delegation of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation said "there appears to be a growing appreciation by the government of religion's role as a potentially unifying force in a multi-ethnic, multi-religious nation."

The foundation's president, Rabbi Arthur Schneier, speaking for the delegation, also said it found "a renewed interest in religion, a strengthening sense of religious identity and an apparent ease and freedom with which religion is practiced."

The foundation, composed of Roman Catholic, Jewish, Moslem, Eastern Orthodox and Protestant leaders, seeks to foster religious freedom and understanding in areas where religion encounters difficulties.

MIKE AND TONYA STEVENS

Evangelist services set

Evangelist Mike Stevens and his wife Tonya of Shreveport, La., will conduct services Sunday through Wednesday at Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, Bond and South Sumner.

Services will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday and daily at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, March 23-26.

Stevens is a graduate of West Texas State University who accepted Christ during his senior year in high school. He initiated a prayer meeting, "Morning Watch," at his high school. While at college, Stevens continued his drive to reach others.

According to Rev. Gene Allen, pastor, Stevens experienced a wonderful campus manifestation of God's love in a revival which found students from every walk of life accepting a relationship with Christ.

Stevens' evangelism has taken him across America and into foreign nations. He has preached in Taiwan, Brazil, Canada and Europe. He has appeared on the world-renowned 700 Club and the Trinity Broadcasting Network of Florida.

His preaching is complimented by his singing. He has opened for such artists as Phil Driscoll, Paul Clark and 1984 Grammy Award winner Russ Taff.

As a "street preacher," he has preached on the streets of New Orleans, New York, Amsterdam and London.

Stevens' ministry is a unique combination of preaching from behind the pulpit and preaching "on the streets," Rev. Allen noted. He also communicates well with youth and challenges young people in high school and junior high assemblies.

Jesus said, "The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few." Stevens believes these words of Christ, Allen said, and he devotes his entire life to fulfilling Christ's commission to reach the lost and bring in what he believes to be the last great harvest of lives into the Kingdom of God. Stevens "ministers within the true, spirit-anointed calling of evangelism," Allen said. "His message concentrates on reaching the lost through compassion, love and the exaltation of the name of Jesus."

His wife Tonya, who has been traveling and ministering alongside her husband since 1983, has a ministry in her own right. She works through individual counseling and ministry to women and also speaks to women's meetings such as the Women Aglow.

As an intercessor for Stevens' ministry, she shares valuable insight on intercessory prayer and "the godly woman's place in a man's world," Allen noted.

Lefors Baptists to see film

God's Prison Gang, a film featuring Al Capone's getaway driver, the last member of Bonnie and Clyde's gang and two other notorious criminals who have become Christians, will be shown at the Lefors First Baptist Church at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The film, shot behind the walls of New York's Attica prison, is hosted by Art Linkletter. It tells the story of how the work of International Prison Ministry is accomplishing what more guards, higher prison walls and greater financial expenditures have failed to do—keep released inmates from returning to lives of crime. Rev. Conn Davis, pastor, said.

Telling their stories in the 44-minute film are George Meyer, Capone's favorite driver; Floyd Hamilton (Public Enemy No. 1), the last of the Bonnie and Clyde gang; Jerry Graham, the "robber king" of California; and Ted Jefferson, convicted of crimes from drugs and robbery to murder.

Also featured is "Chaplain Ray," whose Dallas-based International Prison Ministry has changed the lives of thousands of inmates over the past 18 years.

Pastor Davis said he hopes all citizens concerned about the problem of rising crime will attend the free screening of the film.

Pampans to attend soul winning workshop

A group of 18 members of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ will leave next week via van and bus for the Tulsa Soul Winning Workshop.

The 11th annual workshop will be held March 27-29 at Tulsa,

Oklahoma. The theme of this year's workshop is "The King Is Coming."

Attendance at this workshop will have church members from throughout the entire United States.

Alexander to head services at Community Center Church

Rev. Jimmy Alexander of Tulsa, Okla., will lead services daily at 7 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Community Christian Center Church, 801 E. Campbell.

Alexander is the founder of Alexander Evangelistic Association, Inc., with offices in Alamosa, Colo., and Tulsa.

He was born and raised on a farm in southern Colorado near the town of Hooper. At age 16 he and his family moved to Alamosa, where he accepted Christ in 1969.

After attending college, he entered the life insurance business, in which he was very successful for 10 years. He was a founding charter member of the San Luis Valley Life Underwriters Assn. While in the insurance business, he received many top awards for his outstanding production and public service.

He entered the ministry in 1973 and spent much time in lay evangelism. He entered the full-time ministry in 1979, attended Rhema Bible Training Center at Broken Arrow, Okla., and was ordained by Buddy Harrison of Faith Christian Fellowship International Church in Tulsa.

Alexander currently has an affiliated ministry with Grace Fellowship at Tulsa, with Bob

REV. JIMMY ALEXANDER

Yandian, pastor.

Previous to entering the ministry, he was president of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship at Alamosa. He now is a speaker at many Full Gospel meetings throughout America.

At present he and his wife Vickie conduct evangelism through Unity Crusades which they sponsor across the nation. They are also involved in offering marriage seminars for husband, wife and family relationships.

REV. ALBERT AND MARY MAGGARD

Church to honor pastor

The First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, will conduct special services and activities Sunday honoring Pastor and Mrs. Albert Maggard. The day will mark the completion of 20 years of service for the Maggards in pastoring at the local church.

Guest speaker for the morning worship service at 11 a.m. will be Rev. Mrs. Louva Kersey. At noon, lunch will be served by the ladies of the church at the Flame Room.

The evening service, beginning at 6 p.m., will be an all-musical service featuring the great old campmeeting, convention and revival songs. Singing will be led by Alvoy Kersey.

Albert and Mary Maggard, with their children Adrian and Susan, came to Pampa for their first service on March 22, 1966.

Rev. Maggard had begun his preaching career at the age of 12. While not in school, he spent his time traveling across the United States as an evangelist. After completing his studies at Southwestern Bible College in Oklahoma City (where his wife also studied), he served pastorates in Denver, Colo., and Guymon, Okla., before being elected as pastor by the Pampa congregation.

Some of the most notable changes since the Maggards have been in Pampa have been the extensive remodeling programs and the acquisition of more property to allow for future growth and expansion of the church.

A high point was reached by the congregation two years ago when they were able to dedicate their property completely debt free.

Mrs. Maggard, a very talented musician, has been active in the church, serving as organist or pianist and teaching Sunday School classes.

Both Adrian and Susan went through the Pampa school system, starting with first grade at Horace Mann Elementary School through graduation from Pampa High School.

Pastor Maggard stated one of the joys of such a long pastorate is that the children could complete their education without interruption in such a fine school system.

The pastor added he and his family would like to thank the community and express their appreciation.

"Pampa is our home," he said. "We love the town, the people, the many friends we've made, and, of course, our wonderful congregation. We're happy for the privilege which has been ours to share in the life of this fine community."

The congregation extends an invitation to all friends of the Maggards to share in the anniversary celebration.

Singles, college Sunday School offered

The First United Methodist Church is offering a Sunday School class for young singles and college students.

The class will be held Sundays on March 23, March 30 and April 16 at 9:15 a.m. in the library of the church's education building. The class will meet on a permanent weekly basis beginning in May.

Gary Haynes will be the teacher, and study material has been selected for use in class study.

Persons interested in the class may call the church office at 669-7411 for more information.

All young persons and college-age students are invited to attend the class.

Religion Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 200 national religious leaders have accused the Reagan administration of exaggerations and falsehoods to bolster its case for aid to "contras" trying to topple the Nicaraguan government.

The Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders say the administration covered up "credible reports" that the contras have systematically committed human rights atrocities against innocent civilians.

The statement was read on the steps of the capitol, with religious activists carrying crosses, each with the name of a civilian said to have been killed by "contras" since June, 1985.

"In the name of God, stop the lies; stop the killing," the statement said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Bible Society says that 100,000 Chinese Bibles and more than 60,000 New Testaments have been printed in China on paper supplied by the United Bible Societies.

The paper was supplied to the Amity Foundation, a non-government, non-church social service organization initiated by Chinese Christians, with the foundation arranging with them to print the Bibles in Nanjing.

Han Wenzao, general secretary of the foundation, reports that "almost all of the complete Bibles have now been sold out."

Life has always been a challenge for special students

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON
The Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — He wore glasses, a peach fuzz beard, and a puzzled expression.

At the moment, he was silent, searching his mind for the name of the picture placed before him. It looked familiar. The class had been studying escalators for a long time now. "Inchallator," he said at last.

"Restorator," another student said.

It was review day in the class at Lufkin Workshop and Opportunity Center taught by Stacey Holcomb. The students, age 16 to 21, were going to the words "trash," "escalator," "restaurant," and "don't walk."

Before long, their routine classwork will be brightened by the excitement that comes with the Texas Special Olympics. On April 12, Lufkin will host for the first time the area track and field events. About 1,000 athletes from 18 counties will be in town to participate.

Some of the local athletes are Lufkin State School residents, others attend Hackney School and others work and study at the Lufkin Workshop and Opportunity Center. These Olympics participants meet challenges not just for the special events, but all year long as they learn to cope with various disabilities.

For some of the athletes, the majority of the year is spent in trying to master rudimentary skills needed for everyday life, such as the studies undertaken by Mrs. Holcomb's class at the workshop.

Mrs. Holcomb said she knew from the beginning of college that she wanted to be a special education teacher. She earned both a bachelor's and a master's degree in special education from Stephen F. Austin State University. She says she has never regretted her decision.

"It is really enjoyable when you can help someone succeed and do something," she said.

Her students make the days bright, she said. "They are eager to learn. They enjoy learning. We use a lot of visual aids, films and guest speakers. They are really pleasant to be around."

The special students are often affectionate and almost always kind, she said. "You can look your worst and somebody will always say, 'You look nice,' or that they like something about you."

"Whenever there is progress, it makes you feel good. Most of the time you don't see a whole lot of progress. One little boy has been working for a whole year to learn to write his first and last names. Now he is learning to write his last name. It is a really uplifting experience to know that you might have helped him in just a little way."

There is nothing exotic about Mrs. Holcomb's curriculum. It is grounded in practicality, in the nuts-and-bolts knowledge and skills needed for everyday living.

"If you were going to buy a hamburger, about how much money would you take with you?" Mrs. Holcomb asked one student. He pondered a moment and said, "Twenty dollars." Smoothly, she said, "You're going to eat a lot."

A boy in a flannel shirt interjected, "I wouldn't take that much."

While students at one end of the table were busy cutting out pictures with blunt-end scissors, students at the other end participated in the review.

Mrs. Holcomb read sentences aloud and asked them to fill in the blanks. "This morning, Mother asked me to take out the ..."

"Trash," one student supplied. Mrs. Holcomb tried another sentence. "The sign told us not to cross the road. It said, ..."

"Don't walk," another student answered.

A large pegboard bore colorful signs such as "Dip," "For Rent," "Wrong Way," "Elevator," and "Gas."

"We do a lot of repetition. We are working on traffic signs right now, for example. You have to go over and over it to get them to grasp the concept. Then you have to constantly reinforce it," Mrs. Holcomb said.

Money management is a frequent topic. The students are taught to look at a paycheck and check it for accuracy in hours and amount. Some have difficulty in recognizing their coins, while others are able to count their money out for a purchase, Mrs. Holcomb said. A common problem for the students is understanding the money they receive in change.

Many areas of study have to be tailored to the individual because the students are at so many different levels. This is especially true in math, she said. "We teach them their numbers. Some are on one to 10; others are up to the thousands."

Much emphasis is also placed on the community and on interaction with others. Students learn how policemen and firemen can help them, how to check out a book at the library, and how to recognize store signs. A unit on family living covers how to go about making a date and how to attend a movie.

The students also are instructed in personal hygiene, good grooming habits, planning meals and basic household care.

"We try to encourage behavior that would be appropriate out in public," Mrs. Holcomb said.

The students seem to be learning the appropriate behavior well. A stranger walking into the workshop was greeted with several offers of assistance. The students were friendly, eager to get a chair for a visitor and quick with a "thank you" when a dropped paper was retrieved.

Mrs. Holcomb said that Lufkin residents return the friendliness when her students venture into the community. "Usually the public is really accomodating. We've had really good response from the public."

The students have taken field trips to shopping malls and they visited the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train on its stop in Lufkin.

"We went to the laundromat one year and I showed them how to put the quarters in," she said.

Mrs. Holcomb has been driving a van for nine years. She will pick up students at their homes in the morning and take some to Hackney School and some to the workshop. She makes a trip back to Hackney at lunch and brings some students to the workshop for the afternoon. Then she takes a group home in the evening.

She also shepherds groups as they go out on contract assignments. Some groups clean the city parks, others staple fishing tackle onto cardboard holders, others clean respirators for Lufkin Industries, and others perform a variety of services.

"Usually in the mornings, I will have certain contracts that I have to go out on. I have always liked it. A new job might come in that you've never done before," Mrs. Holcomb said.

She checks the students' work. "We have to make sure that before it goes out there are not any mistakes or errors. Their accuracy rate is really good. They don't mind doing repetitious things. They like repetition."

Throughout all the areas of her involvement with the special students, Mrs. Holcomb carries a torch of hope. When frustration occasionally threatens to set in, she tells herself, "There's got to be a key somehow to unlock the door, and maybe I just haven't tried the right key. There's got to be some way. There's always hope."

Regulators bring in extra examiners to monitor savings associations

DALLAS (AP) — Federal regulators, faced with increasing loan problems at troubled southwest savings associations, temporarily brought in 250 extra examiners to untangle complicated books of some thrifts and catch up on overdue exams.

Federal and state officials said Wednesday the additional examiners were brought to the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, part of the federal system that regulates the nation's savings and loan industry, at the beginning of the year.

The Dallas bank regulates 489 thrifts in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico and Texas, which have combined assets of $120.1 billion.

"The current economic environment is certainly a factor," bank spokeswoman Becky Speece said. "The loan portfolios of the savings institutions have become more complex and many have become potentially more risky."

Regulators are concerned about mounting real estate loan problems at Southwest thrifts, about 270 of which are in Texas, because of impact that collapsing associations could have on the ailing federal deposit insurance fund.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. already is facing liquidity problems from failures in recent years.

Officials brought the extra examiners, who more than doubled the 201-member staff at the bank, from other regional banks throughout the country.

Speece said the examiners, along with additional staff on contract from three Big Eight accounting firms, are attempting to sift through about 200 exams by the end of the June.

"I heard they were bringing an army," said Frank W. Anderson, a banking analyst with Weber, Hall, Sale & Associates Inc. of Dallas. "There are a lot of asset-quality problems in the Texas thrifts. There is no question it is like a minefield for some of those thrifts."

A report by the Dallas bank states problem loans are increasing at thrifts in the five-state region, including Texas.

Non-performing mortgage loans during the third quarter, the most recent figures available, grew to $3.98 billion, or 3.31 percent of total assets. That is up from non-performing mortgages of $1.8 billion, or 1.8 percent of total assets, at the end of the 1984 third quarter.

Anderson and other analysts said such problems are centered among a minority of thrifts. But their troubles have slowed the exams of healthier associations, some of which are enjoying record profits because of lower interest rates.

Regulators and industry officials have argued that the regional examination departments are understaffed.

The Dallas bank, since last summer, increased its examination staff from 134 to 201 at yearend. Speece said the bank, by midyear, plans to have about 240 people on its permanent staff.

Tax exemption for veterans expanded

By BILL FEATHER
Associated Press Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)—Alvin D. Hooper will be unable to enjoy the fruits of the victory he won in his challenge of New Mexico's veterans tax exemption law, but thousands of other veterans will benefit from Hooper's tenacious fight for equality.

Hooper's legal battle went all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled in June 1985 that a residency requirement in the veterans tax exemption law was unconstitutional.

The requirement had eliminated from the program those veterans who moved to New Mexico after specified dates.

The 1986 Legislature, responding to the Supreme Court ruling, amended the law to remove the residency requirement. That means as many as 30,000 veterans who previously were unable to qualify for the exemption in the state now can claim the benefit.

But Hooper will not be one of them. He recently was transferred by his employer, AT&T, from Albuquerque to Washington, D.C.

"I'm in the process of probably moving out of the state," Hooper said when contacted at his new office in Washington.

Although he will not benefit personally from his lengthy legal battle, Hooper said he was pleased other veterans will be able to receive some recognition for their military service during wartime periods.

"I guess I did all that work for the public good," he said.

State law allows those who served on active duty during a period of armed conflict to claim a $2,000 exemption on the value of real property. As an alternative, qualified veterans can receive a one-third deduction in the cost of their annual motor vehicle registration fee.

The original law required that a veteran be a New Mexico resident prior to a certain date to qualify for the exemption.

It specified a World War II veteran must have been a resident prior to Jan. 1, 1947; a Korean War veteran must have lived in the state before Feb. 1, 1955, and a Vietnam War veteran must have been a resident prior to May 8, 1976.

The U.S. Supreme Court found the residency requirements unconstitutional in a decision handed down on June 24, 1985.

The 1986 amendments eliminated the deadline.

"Rather than fight it, we changed the law to conform to the Supreme Court ruling," said Richard Rocco, director of the Veterans Service Commission.

The law now provides that a veteran who is a New Mexico resident can qualify for a tax exemption if he served in the military during specified periods of armed conflict.

The dates of armed conflict in the state law are those established by federal law: Dec. 7, 1941, through Dec. 31, 1946 for World War II; June 27, 1950, through Jan. 31, 1955, for the Korean War and Aug. 5, 1964, through May 7, 1974 for the Vietnam War.

Hooper, a lieutenant in the U.S. Army Reserve, went on active duty on Oct. 6, 1963, in North Carolina and served until Sept. 10, 1965, during the Vietnam conflict.

He moved to New Mexico in August 1981 and in January 1983 applied to the state Veterans Service Commission for a veterans exemption certificate. His application was rejected because the law required that he be a resident prior to May 8, 1976.

Hooper then asked the Bernalillo County assessor to allow the veterans exemption on his property tax liability, notwithstanding the commission's disapproval of his application. The assessor denied the request and Hooper appealed to the Bernalillo County Valuation Protest Board. The board also found he did not qualify because of the residency restriction.

Hooper appealed to the state Court of Appeals, which upheld the assessor and the Valuation Protest Board on March 22, 1984.

He then appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which eventually agreed with his position.

Allowing more veterans to take advantage of the exemption will cost local governments money because the property tax is a major source of revenue for county and municipal governments and a lesser source for New Mexico school districts.

Jim O'Neill, deputy in the state Taxation and Revenue Department, said the current tax savings to veterans claiming the property tax exemption amounts to an estimated $1.75 million a year. The department estimates expanding the exemption will cost local governments an additional $2 million in property tax revenue, O'Neill said.

But Rocco said his agency believes "the fiscal impact will be a lot less, probably about one-fourth that amount."

The 1986 changes were passed on an emergency basis and became effective March 5, the day Gov. Toney Anaya signed the bill.

Rocco said that since then, his office has been receiving from 30 to 35 applications a day from veterans who previously were excluded from the exemption.

He said about 162,000 veterans live in New Mexico, including 130,000 who served in the military during periods of armed conflict and therefore qualify for the exemption.

About 100,000 veterans qualified under the old law, and as of mid-1985 about 72,000 actually were claiming the exemption, Rocco said.

Rocco said the 1986 amendments set a deadline of April 30 for veterans to qualify for the program and claim the tax exemption for the 1986 tax year. A veteran may claim the exemption certificate issued by the Veterans Service Commission to his local county assessor.

Tinker will leave NBC soon

NEW YORK (AP)—Like a hit television program that has lots of life left when it voluntarily leaves the air, Chairman Grant Tinker plans to leave NBC soon—while the network is still on top.

Tinker expects General Electric Co.'s acquisition of NBC's parent, RCA Corp., to be finalized in August, and he added in a Wednesday interview, "Very soon thereafter I will tell what part of the world that cares that I'm ready to go."

"I'm not hiding it," he said. "For those people who have a little difficulty dealing with it, I'm trying not only to get them into the idea but I'm trying to persuade everybody that they'll never miss me when I'm gone."

Tinker said in a later telephone call to The Associated Press that he did not mean to suggest he would leave NBC as soon as the merger is completed. He stressed that he does not want to leave without an orderly transfer of power, but after the merger is final, he said, "Then it will be time for Tinker to think about Tinker."

Tinker, 60, intends to return to the production part of the business. He was president of the highly regarded MTM Enterprises before joining NBC as chairman in July 1981. His five-year contract ends this summer.

Under Tinker's patient guidance, NBC created a group of Emmy Award-winning programs, including "The Cosby Show," "Cheers" and "St. Elsewhere," that appealed to the young, urban viewers that advertisers coveted.

Dear Abby

Humane society's inflexibility causes couple's kids to yowl

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: On Valentine's Day, my husband and I took our two daughters (5 and 2) for a follow-up appointment at the pediatrician's, and left the office feeling glum. Our 5-year-old had been pleading for a kitten for several months, so we decided to take the advice in your St. Valentine's Day column and adopt a pet. We went to our Humane Society to get a kitten. We learned that the kitten we selected would cost $45, which included initial shots and spaying/neutering at six months of age. We'd just written our last check at the doctor's office, so my husband and I counted our monies and came up with $43.78 cash.

Abby, they let us walk out with two crying girls. We could have given that kitten a perfect home, but being short $1.22 stood in our way.

Is that crazy or am I crazy?
FEELING BAD IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR FEELING: You are not crazy, and I cannot imagine the people at the Humane Society being so insensitive and petty. You failed to indicate in which Birmingham you live. There's one in Alabama, Canada, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Michigan and New Jersey. Please write again and let me know. I'll send the $1.22, and if you don't get your kitten, fur will fly.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Nameless, Please," who was tempted to meet the girl whose voice he'd heard daily on the telephone, brought back some happy memories.

In the spring of 1918, I was working on the switchboard at the local power company. Every day I took the morning report from a young engineer with a very pleasant voice. One day he appeared in person—wanting to find out if I was as sweet as my voice! After we visited a while, he invited me to go out dancing. I was a little hesitant to accept before knowing him better, so he told me I could bring my older sister and he would bring his friend along for her.

I knew at once that this was the man I had been waiting for. That first date led to our marriage four months later. We were happily married for 60 years—until his death.

I thank my lucky stars that he was curious enough to want to meet the girl behind the voice on the telephone.

MRS. J.

P.S. Dear Abby: I typed this letter for my grandmother who just celebrated her 94th birthday. She reads your column every day.

MRS. J.'S GRANDDAUGHTER

DEAR MRS. J. (and her granddaughter): Thanks for a lovely day-brightener.

***

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column signed "Honest" in reference to thigh-reduction surgery (suction lipectomy). I would like to know more about this type of surgery. I need to do something about my thighs. I have dieted and exercised. Both have helped some, but my thighs are disproportionately large. I am so self-conscious about them that I will not wear slacks or a bathing suit.

What kind of doctor does this kind of surgery?

THUNDER THIGHS

DEAR THUNDER THIGHS: A plastic surgeon. But you would be wise to get some recommendations from the county medical association or the American Medical Association to be sure the plastic surgeon is board-certified.

Contacts linked to eye infections

NEW YORK (AP) — Eye experts, regulators and manufacturers have gotten worried over recent reports of vision-threatening infections called corneal ulcers in people who wear extended-wear contact lenses.

In Wisconsin, a 15-year-old boy and his parents are suing a lens manufacturer and seller for $5.3 million after a corneal ulcer robbed part of the boy's vision. Wisconsin state regulators have ordered optometrists to dispense written warnings about the lenses, and they're thinking about a ban on selling them.

In Minneapolis, the University of Minnesota Hospitals recently stopped prescribing extended-wear for people with healthy eyes after treating a spate of ulcers.

The new worries involve use of extended-wear lenses, which can be worn continuously up to 30 days rather than removed nightly.

The main problem, experts say, is that lenses can promote ulcers of the cornea — the eye's clear outer layer — if the lenses are dispensed or used improperly.

"Most of us feel there really is nothing inherently bad with the lenses, it's just the misuse of the lenses," said Dr. Oliver Dabezies Jr., executive vice president of the Contact Lens Association of Ophthalmologists.

The federal Food and Drug Administration, which began approving the lenses for use by the general population in 1981, is reviewing scientific data to find more about the problem. Manufacturers have prepared new lens-care material for patients.

Nobody knows just how common corneal ulcers are among the nation's estimated 3 million to 4 million extended-wear users.

Although treatment stops most infections before they affect vision, some experts believe hundreds to a thousand people may have lost some eyesight.

"I don't think we're talking about an epidemic," said Dr. James Aquavella, director of the cornea research laboratory at the University of Rochester in New York. But, he said, lens wearers should "recognize a legitimate risk."

A recent Associated Press survey of 42 eye specialists in 32 cities found they treated about 300 ulcer infections in the preceding year. But comprehensive figures are lacking.

Corneal ulcers occur when the protective outer layer of the cornea is breached and germs infect the cornea tissue within. The infection can scar the usually transparent cornea, blocking vision. One bacterium, called Pseudomonas, needs only a day or two to leave a devastating scar that can require a cornea transplant.

The lenses make the cornea more susceptible to infection by reducing its oxygen supply for long periods. Dirty lenses can harbor bacteria. The lenses trap a stagnant pool of tears that makes "a wonderful place for bacteria to grow," said Dr. Michael Lemp, chairman of Georgetown University's Center for Sight.

Unchecked infections can also enter the eyeball and cause loss of the eye.

Contact lenses aren't the only cause of corneal ulcers, and nobody has yet proved that lens wearers run more risk than the general population, says Orrin Stine, chairman of the Contact Lens Institute, which represents major lens manufacturers.

The infections are "very, very rare" with daily wear hard lenses, slightly more common with daily wear soft lenses, and more frequent, but still uncommon, with extended-wear soft lenses, said Dr. Perry Binder, chief of ophthalmic surgery and research at Sharp Cabrillo Hospital in San Diego.

Some extended-wear lenses are especially prescribed for use after cataract surgery. But most users have normal eyes and wear lenses for convenience.

In the AP survey, three-quarters of the 42 specialists said they had seen at least one such case in 1985. Some who handle referrals had far more.

Dr. Michael Shapiro, cornea specialist at the University of Wisconsin, reported at least 50 such cases. The Estelle Doherty Eye Foundation in Los Angeles has been seeing one or two ulcers a month in extended-wear users, said Dr. David Schanzlin, cornea specialist.

Doctors in the survey said few ulcer patients suffered permanent vision damage.

Nationally, perhaps 1,000 people have lost some vision to the ulcers in the past two years, estimated noted Australian researcher Dr. Brien Holden.

Aquavella suspects a few thousand lens-related ulcers have probably occurred since 1981, with a few hundred resulting in some vision loss. Maybe a hundred suffered legal blindness in the infected eye, he said.

Nobody knows how big the risk of corneal ulcers is, Aquavella said.

Holden's work in Sweden found some vision loss in three of every 10,000 extended-wear users studied, but some experts question whether that figure is valid for American conditions. Infection rates of 4 percent or more have been found for patients fitted after cataract surgery, but they are at higher risk than most wearers.

In non-cataract wearers, lens manufacturer Barnes-Hind Inc. found no ulcer infections in a study of one of its lenses.

GENA ON GENEALOGY

By GENA WALLS

Never change a date or assume it should be a different one. Drastic mistakes have been made by researchers misinterpreting dates. This occurred particularly with Quaker records since the group rejected the names of the months and the days of the weeks because of their pagan origins. By leaving the date as found in the original record, you aid in establishing the people as Quakers making later identification easier.

Are you familiar with the terms old style and new style when referring to dates? A date written as 12 Feb 1715-6 refers to these terms. The old style is the date using the Julian Calendar that was used as early as 45 B.C. The calendar derived its name from Julius Caesar who decreed that there should be three years of 365 days and then one year of 366 days beginning the custom we refer to as leap year.

New style refers to the Gregorian Calendar that was done in 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII. It is the system we use today. This calendar immediately eliminated 10 days from the year 1582 and in the countries adopting the system the day after Sept. 4, 1582, became Sept. 15, 1582. The Gregorian Calendar Leap Year rule drops a day from every centesimal year whose number cannot be divided by 400. The month of February 2000 will have 25 days following the above rule.

The American colonies made the switch in 1752. At the same time, the first of the year was changed from March 25 back to the preceding Jan. 1. Often, dates prior to 1752 will have the initials O.S. or N.S. to show which calendar was used. If the date is written with a slash — 1715-6 — the number before the slash refers to the Julian Calendar and the number after the slash would be the Gregorian Calendar number.

Museum announces annual art show

Because of limited exhibition space, final selection of works will be conducted by an impartial jury of art professionals from outside the county. To nominate an artist, call the Square House Museum at 537-3118.

Sports Forum and Agin 'Um WARREN HASSE

DON GASSAWAY IS A busy Tulsa attorney, plying his trade not only in the Okie state, but in various corners of the globe. So, for relaxation, he officiates football games, college on Saturday, USFL games whenever.

One night recently he relaxed at an NCAA basketball tournament. The game underway had about ten minutes left, but the final result was already determined. Then there was another half-hour before the next game got underway. So, he left his reserved seat and came over to visit with an old friend.

"Well, is the USFL going to survive," I asked.

"No doubt about it. They've got a solid six. Baltimore is a little weak, and Arizona, although it looks strong, is sort of dangling out there by itself on the edge," he replied positively.

"Even without a television contract?"

"The current owners can go two years without television revenue if they have to," responded Gassaway. For 16 years I have known him, and for 16 years have found his information very reliable. "They have a television contract with ESPN, worth about a million dollars a team next year. They'll televise Thursday and Sunday nights, with the other two games scheduled for Sunday afternoons. It's not big bucks, but that might be ahead. Right now, television is playing the NFL against the USFL. (Dennis) Swanson took over ABC Sports because (Roone) Arledge spent so much money for broadcast rights that they couldn't get their money back in advertising sales."

But that has been the story for quite some time, made more obvious by recent pronouncements by the major networks that they were not picking up options on television contracts with the Gator Bowl, Peach Bowl and Citrus Bowl, formerly the Tangerine. And the Sun Bowl is in jeopardy, while Sugar Bowl officials are going to have to pacify ABC on a kickoff time following the third consecutive whumping in the ratings by the colorful Orange Bowl. Without the undergirding of network television dollars, you can look for many of the smaller bowls to collapse. Before they do they will drain all local revenue sources on the basis of community pride. And television will be handled on a station-by-station syndication basis, which has become less and less attractive to most markets, Amarillo a prime example this past December. The Peach Bowl has utilized hometown pride by enticing WTBS, housed in Atlanta, to take over that game. And a phone call Wednesday night gave assurance the Gator Bowl would have some sort of television arrangement, "but what type is unknown at this time." Those telecasts become important locally at the last moment, when someone's alma mater gets invited.

The surviving bowls, willing to adjust their game date and kickoff time to the total satisfaction of network television, might find a half-million network rights-fee dollars available, a far cry from the multi-millions bid in the past. The grandfather bowls...Rose, Orange, Cotton, and with compromise, the Sugar, will survive. But it will be tough on the rest.

This will not particularly make more dollars available to the USFL, which has another peculiar problem. It started as a spring football league, expanded from 12 to 18 in 1984, cut back to 14 by attrition in 1985, and now stands at eight, "six of them solid," to repeat Gassaway's insight. But by switching to a fall season, going head-to-head with the NFL, the USFL owners must finance their operations until fall, with no income. "They can do it," assures Gassaway.

Those USFL owner-survivors are also hoping, and some even relying on, that a lawsuit against the NFL will be settled in their favor, giving them an influx of millions of dollars. There would be many, many appeals before that became fact, and owners awaiting that day would be like leaving the porch light on for Jimmy Hoffa.

Merger is the best way out for the USFL, a matter the NFL says will never happen. It would provide instant access to television revenue, playoff dollars, name identification. However, Gassaway analyzes it differently, saying "they don't care if they merge or not." He is convinced the current USFL owners are solid, in thinking and finances.

The USFL plans to start the fall season with two four-team divisions. Arizona, Jacksonville, Orlando and Tampa Bay make up the Independence Division; Baltimore, Birmingham, Memphis and New Jersey the Liberty Division. One truly has to question if it is USFuL.

I get the feeling that friend Gassaway, like the eight owners, is whistling through the graveyard.

NCAA roundup

Three SEC teams still alive

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Last year it was known as the "Big East Invitational" with Villanova, Georgetown and St. John's in the Final Four. This season the Southeastern Conference is the league that's showing off in the NCAA basketball tournament.

No less than three SEC teams were still alive in the Final Eight following Thursday night's results which featured third-ranked Kentucky's 68-63 victory over SEC colleague Alabama and LSU's 70-64 upset of No. 6 Georgia Tech in the Southeast Regionals, and Auburn's 70-63 shocker over No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas in the West.

Louisville, the nation's seventh-ranked basketball team, beat No. 8 North Carolina 94-79 in the other West semifinal in Houston.

"I wish they'd placed us in different regions," said Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton, who had called the Southeast Regional in Atlanta the "SEC Invitational."

"If we were in four different regions, there would be a chance we could play the SEC tournament in Dallas," said Sutton.

The NCAA playoffs continue tonight with semifinals in the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J., and the Midwest at Kansas City.

Top-ranked Duke plays DePaul and Navy takes on surprising Cleveland State in the East Regionals at New Jersey's Meadowlands. Also tonight, in the Midwest Regional semifinals at the Kemper Arena in Kansas City, North Carolina State plays Iowa State and Kansas faces Michigan State.

Kenny Walker scored 22 points and James Blackmon hit two key baskets in a second-half burst as Kentucky continued its mastery of Alabama. It was the 14th straight victory for the Wildcats and their fourth this season over Alabama in advancing to Saturday's regional finals against LSU.

Alabama fought back from a 12-0 spurt in the first half to close to within 38-36 on a driving basket by Terry Coner with 14:43 left in the game. Kentucky then went on a 10-3 burst to build a 48-39 lead and the Crimson Tide was never able to get closer than seven points until the final 30 seconds of play.

"The big key was offensive rebounding," Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said. "Every time it looked like we might come back they got a big putback."

Don Redden scored 27 points and Derrick Taylor added 23 as LSU upset Georgia Tech to create an all-Southeastern Conference final in the Southeast Regional.

LSU's defense forced two turnovers which helped overcome a 56-52 Yellow Jackets lead. Combined with sharpshooting efforts from Taylor and Redden, the Tigers earned a fourth meeting with Kentucky.

Tom Hammonds was forced into a turnover which resulted in a Redden jumper which put the Tigers ahead to stay at 60-58 with 3:30 left.

"Hammonds just made a mistake. He wasn't really looking," Taylor said. "And I got it from him."

Auburn's Chuck Person scored 17 of his 25 points in the second half and rallied the unranked Tigers over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Person, who hit only 4 of 11 shots from the field in the first half, scored Auburn's first three baskets of the second half and led a charge that gave the Tigers, who trailed by as many as 14 points in the first half, their first lead of the second half, 50-49, with 7:57 left in the game.

Auburn, advancing to its farthest point in NCAA play, took the lead for good at 56-55 with 3:55 to play on a side jumper by Person. Nevada-Las Vegas' Anthony Jones, who scored 16 points, missed three free throws over the final 2:44 as the Runnin' Rebels couldn't mount a last-minute charge. "I was a little timid in the first half because my shot wasn't falling, but my teammates kept encouraging me to shoot it and I did," Person said. "We wore them down in the second half and that's where our conditioning came in. We're a very hungry team and we want to be the first Auburn team to get to the Final Four."

Billy Thompson scored 24 points and Herbert Crook contributed some deadly free-throw shooting to lift Louisville over North Carolina. It was Louisville's first victory since 1929 over North Carolina, third-place finisher in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season.

Louisville outscored North Carolina 16-4 to start the second half to take a 59-47 lead but the Tar Heels rallied behind Joe Wolf to tie the score 71-71.

Thompson scored two baskets and Crook, who had 20 points, got hot at the free-throw line, making six straight to help the Cardinals pull away at the end.

"We're cresting now," said Louisville's Milt Wagner. "Our guys realize you have to be ready to play teams like North Carolina."

Pampa track teams compete at Canyon

Both the Pampa boys' and girls' track teams compete in the Canyon meet Saturday and Coach Gary Cornelsen is hoping his charges continue to improve.

"Our girls have set some standards, and what they want to do now is to keep improving on them."

Cornelsen said. "We've already got people who are among the top four or five in their event in the state."

The Lady Harvesters won every regular-season meet last season and finished fifth in the state. And the dominance continues. The Pampa girls have won the Amarillo Invitational, the Hereford meet and the Borger triangular in their three outings this year.

"We've running better now than we did in mid-season last year," said Cornelsen. "We've had some girls move away, but some of the younger girls have fallen in and done a good job for us."

Cornelsen feels his relay teams are the backbone of the Lady Harvesters.

"We haven't had anybody come close to our relay teams yet," Cornelsen said.

The 440-relay team consists of Courtney Brown, Yolanda Brown, Sandee Stokes and Tanya Lady. The 880-relay team is made up of Schivon Parker, Courtney Brown, Sandee Stokes and Laquita Brown.

"We need some improvements in the high jump, 800 and 400," Cornelsen said. "We've got some people who haven't performed as well as they need to."

The Pampa boys have been a pleasant surprise for Cornelsen. The Harvesters opened the season by winning the Amarillo Invitational, then finished runner-up in the Panhandle Relays and the Dalhart meet.

"The boys have performed well even though they haven't improved on their times," Cornelsen said. "We've got some kids who can get out of district and on into regionals if they can get their times down."

Several Harvesters are listed on the Amarillo Daily News Track Honor Roll, which was released Thursday.

Gary Jernigan is in a two-way tie for fourth place in the 100 with an 11.1 clocking and is fourth in the 200 at 22.5.

Brandon Bard is listed fifth in the 800 with a time of 2:04.7. Willie Jacobs is eighth in the 1600 (4:54.2) and Mark Williams is in a three-way tie for sixth in the 300 hurdles (41.0). Billy Butler is listed ninth in the long jump with a leap of 20-7½.

The 1600-relay team of Mark Williams, Brandon Bard, Dennis Dailey and Robbie Ellison is fourth with a time of 3:29.8. The 400-relay team of Williams, Dailey, Ellison and Jernigan is fifth at 44.6.

Tomorrow's meet at Canyon begins at 9 a.m. with the preliminaries. The finals start at 2 p.m.

Langford resigns

Pampa native Robert Langford resigned Thursday night as Perryton's head football coach and athletic director, according to school officials.

Langford had served as the Rangers' head coach for the past eight years and built a 47-26-2 record at the school.

Shuler killed in crash

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — James Shuler, who started boxing at Joe Frazier's north Philadelphia gym and dreamed of bringing a middleweight boxing title to his hometown, died on its streets when his motorcyle crashed into a tractor-trailer.

Shuler, 26, who suffered his first professional loss 10 days earlier in a first-round knockout by Thomas Hearns, was riding a Kawasaki motorcycle on Thursday north on a city street when it skidded into the cab of the truck at an intersection, police said.

The cause of the 5 p.m. accident is under investigation, according to Police Cpl. Lawrence DeJarnette.

"Champ! Yo, champ!" said some of the crowd of 100 onlookers who gathered as rescue personnel tried to free him from the wreckage, according to The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Hereford beats Harvesters in Borger baseball tourney

BORGER — Hereford defeated Pampa, 14-7, Thursday in first-round action of the Borger round-robin tournament.

Hereford's Revis limited the Harvesters to just four hits.

"I thought Brent Cryer did a good job of pitching for us, but we just couldn't get the hits," said Pampa Coach Bill Butler.

John Thomas had a triple and three RBI for the Harvesters while Troy Owens knocked in two runs on a bases-loaded error.

Curtis Cotten had a two-run homer for the Whitefaces. Cryer struck out seven batters and walked one for the Harvesters, who play Borger at 6:30 p.m. tonight.

"We made some errors errors in a couple of innings that hurt us," said Butler.

Pampa plays Dumas at 2 p.m. Saturday to close out the tournament.

In other games Thursday, Borger junior varsity defeated Lefors varsity, 8-7, and Borger won over Dumas, 13-2.

For Lefors it was its third loss of the season. The Pirates lost to Dumas JV, 14-9, and beat Briscoe, 19-4, earlier this season.

In other games today, Borger JV meets Dumas JV at 1:30 and Dumas plays Hereford at 4.

In other games Saturday, Dumas JV meets Lefors varsity at 10:30, and Borger goes against Hereford at 4:30.

Volleyball tournament results

The opening round of the Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club Volleyball Tournament was held last night at McNeely Fieldhouse. All the matches played were in the women's division.

Texas Sulphur defeated First National Bank of Stinnett, 10-3, 15-2, then lost to Wy-Vel, 7-5, 7-5, in the final match of the evening.

Heritage Ford defeated G & S Inc., 13-6, 15-2.

The tournament continues tonight with six matches scheduled, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

WORDS TO GROW BY—
A recent U.S. Forest Service study shows that homes landscaped with trees and shrubs are valued significantly higher than those without attractive yards and gardens. The report indicates values from 10% to 50% higher. A small investment in top-quality nursery stock can pay big dividends and it doesn't take much time for trees and shrubs to start improving your property.

Southern schools: a report card on reform

Schools for the gifted in the South

EDITOR'S NOTE — A converted hospital in Durham, N.C., now houses 400 teen-agers at the nation's first public boarding school for budding scientists — the North Carolina School of Science and Math. The fifth story in a six-part series, "Southern Schools: A Report Card on Reform," reports on schools for the gifted flourishing across the South.

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Erik Mattheis knew he was in the right place when he walked through the dormitory at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics and heard the strains of "the same kind of obscure music I listen to."

Find a better cameo, hire him

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca, no stranger to television, is making a cameo appearance as a police officer on a "Miami Vice" episode to be broadcast in May.

Iacocca, in Miami today on a 10-city tour to promote Chrysler's 1987 subcompact cars, was inpeople at my old school I had much in common with," said the 18-year-old senior from Ashboro, N.C. "Everything was pretty much boring and unchallenging."

Mattheis and 400 classmates are finding plenty of challenges in the nation's first public boarding school for teen-agers gifted in science and math. Almost half the faculty have doctorates, and offerings include organic chemistry, astrophysics and genetics, Russian and Chinese.

The two-year, tuition-free school opened its doors in 1980 and for the past two years has boasted more National Merit semifinalists than any other school in the country.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt said, "We expect some of these kids to be Nobel Prize winners in the future."

vited to appear on the NBC show by Michael Talbott, who plays Detective Switek, said Chrysler spokesman John Guiniven.

"This wasn't arranged through the company. It grew out of a personal contact between the two men," Guiniven said.

The South has always had its share of outstanding public schools, from Benjamin Franklin High School in New Orleans to a multitude of schools in such university towns or technology centers as Chapel Hill, N.C., Huntsville, Ala., and Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Few enjoyed the reputation of such public elites as New York's Stuyvesant High School and Bronx High School of Science or the Boston Latin School. Now Southern states are trying to create such traditions — in a hurry.

Louisiana opened a boarding school in 1983 on the campus of Northwestern State University in Natchitoches.

Kentucky's education superintendent hopes to create a similar state school. Florida's Legislature has a group studying ways to create model secondary schools across the state. Virginia, Tennessee and other states run summer programs for gifted high school students on college campuses.

In the 1985-86 budget for North Carolina's elite institution operating in a converted hospital and nursing school, is $4.4 million, about $11,000 per student. That's four times what the state spends on the average student, although officials say some of the money is spent training teachers for other North Carolina schools.

Recently, some parents have complained that in the name of geographic and racial diversity, some students are admitted with less solid academic credentials.

A Durham couple, Phyllis and Thomas Heiderscheid, appealed in vain the rejection last spring of their son, Jon, a straight-A student at Jordan High School, who scored 1,350 out of 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Two of three chosen from his school and the alternate were black; all four rejected were white.

The boarding school, the parents complained in a letter, "is not a sociological toy."

The son is still upset. "There's nothing that can compare to Science and Math because you live at the school there. I don't think it's fair to judge anyone by the color of their skin," he said.

For all the competition to enter the school, Eilber and his staff try to minimize competition inside it. There is no honor roll and no class rank. Courses are graded, however.

Some students stand out even without rankings, such as Linda Green, 15, who has exhausted the school's math offerings.

So far, Eilber said, 75 percent of the graduates become math or science majors in college.

Some are converted to the humanities by such teachers as Jon Miller, who brings a thespian's flair to his English literature classes.

The school has no gym, but students compete in several interscholastic sports. The basketball team, which practices at an elementary school, was 3-17 last year, but resident adviser and coach Ogden Spruill boasted, "No one on my team has more than two C's."

To combat students' tendency to sign up for too many courses — "They're like kids in a candy shop," said one teacher — the school launched an independent study project for 25 seniors called Project XL. They arrange study groups to tackle calculus, physics, astrophysics, linguistics and other topics.

Eilber said the school's main advantage was "the resource of time. We don't turn off the library lights at 3:15 p.m."

Some teachers approach their prodigies with a light touch. A visitor to Ross Baker's biology class found a popcorn party in progress, her way of rewarding her students for getting a large number of hornworms to pupate.

"I don't have any brighter kids here than I had at Chapel Hill High," she said afterward. "It's just that I have more of them here."
