Bubble Shrinking At Nuclear Plant

Carter Suggests Precautions After Visit

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Engineers slowly shrank a potentially explosive gas bubble in the reactor of the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear plant Sunday, as President Carter visited the plant and then suggested that a precautionary evacution may be necessary within a few days.

Local officials in the area of the plant readied contingency plans for such an evacuation and said late Sunday that arrangements were nearly complete for relocating the elderly, invalids and persons in institutions such as hospitals and jails.

"We'd like to have things in shape," Carroll Township Commissioner Francis Hess said. The township is located east of the plant. He said 1,000 copies of a public notice advising people what to do if an evacuation is ordered were distributed Sunday.

Schools Closed, Offices Open

Gov. Dick Thornburgh said in a statement Sunday night that schools within five miles of the plant should remain closed today. He said state government offices will be open as usual, but with generous leaves granted for "absentees."

Although an estimated 50,000 persons have fled the Harrisburg area since

Wednesday's accident touched off the first of a continuing series of low-level radiation leaks, Carter said that even if an evacuation is ordered, "this will not indicate the danger is high.... It is purely a precautionary measure."

"Radiation is being monitored throughout this area and any trends towards increase in radiation will be reported to me," Carter said, after touring the plant control room. "At the present time, the reactor core is indeed stable. However, within the next few days, important decisions will be made on how to bring it to a cold and stable state. If it becomes necessary, Gov. Thornburgh will ask you to take appropriate action. If he does, I want the instructions carried out as calmly as they have been in the past few days."

Alternatives Considered

Harold Denton, operations chief of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and Carter's personal representative here, said: "From the data we've seen, I'm convinced the size of the bubble is being reduced.

"If we don't succeed in (further) reducing the bubble in the next few days, we would have to go to emergency core cooling systems to take it to a cold shutdown." The reactor core temperature remained steady Sunday at 278 degrees Fahrenheit; core melt-down would occur at 5,000 degrees.

The bubble was being slowly depleted by letting the gas dissolve in the constantly circulating coolant water and then allowing it to escape from the water outside the reactor.

"It's slow but it's safe," according to Bob Lengel, licensing engineer for Metropolitan Edison Co., the plant's operating company.

Scientists Voice Concerns

Carter, a former Navy nuclear engineer, said that if an evacuation because necessary "it will indicate a change is being made in the cooling system."

Scientists are concerned about the possibility of hydrogen and oxygen mixing, in flammable proportions, both in the bubble in the reactor and outside the reactor, but inside the containment building.

The president, who was accompanied by his wife, said he had come to the area to "assure the people of this region that everything possible has been done and will be done to cope with these problems."

Evacuation Estimate Given

Local civil defense officials said that rough estimates indicated that 50,000 of the 950,000-plus residents of the four-county area surrounding the plant had left their homes by Sunday morning.

"That's about right, plus I'd say it's increasing every couple of hours, based on the calls from residents we're getting here," according to Paul Leese, civil defense director for Lancaster County.

The Carters' helicopter circled the haze-shrouded plant, then landed at Harrisburg International Airport, after which the president and Mrs. Carter, accompanied by Thornburgh, headed for the plant.

During their brief visit to the control room, the Carters wore protective yellow plastic booties and carried a dosage meter to record exactly how much radiation they were exposed to. An official of Metropolitan Edison said radiation readings in the room were "almost zero." A White House spokesman said the Carters did not wear more protective clothing because the air in the control room was clean; the booties were only an "extra precaution" against the possibility of radioactive dust on the floor.

Dr. William Lukash, the president's physician, said he had been told in advance that Carter would be subjected to less than 1 millirem of radiation during the visit to the plant. (Exposure from a chest X-ray is 20 to 30 millirems.) Margaret Phelan, a Met Ed health physicist, checked the area for radiation with a geiger counter. As Carter entered the control building, the geiger counter registered .6 millirem per hour at a point 25 yards away. It went up to .7 millirem while Carter was inside.

State officials considered, then decided against, a general evacuation, although they urged pre-school children and pregnant women — two groups particularly vulnerable to radiation — to leave.

'God's' Regime Hailed In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini triumphantly proclaimed Iran an Islamic republic Sunday, announcing that the "yes" votes of millions of Iranians in a referendum had created the nation's first "government of God."

The 78-year-old Shiite Moslem leader, who led the struggle that toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's regime in mid-February, said his countrymen had voted "to establish a government of righteousness and to overthrow and bury the monarchy in the garbage can of history."

Khomeini's victory statement, read by an announcer over Tehran radio, contrasted with continued concern by the revolutionary authorities over unrest among the nation's large ethnic minority groups.

Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan, head of the Khomeini-appointed provisional government, warned rebellious Turkoman tribesmen in the northeastern city of Gonbad-e-Qabous on Sunday that if the bloody week-old fighting there did not cease he would send in government troops Tuesday morning to restore order.

The state radio reported Sunday that yet another cease-fire agreement had been shattered in that strife-torn city where Khomeini loyalists have been trying to quell the week-long rebellion.

A government spokesman warned, meanwhile, that new trouble was brewing in Arab-populated Khuzestan province.

Khomeini said the nationwide referendum Friday and Saturday gave "unanimous" approval to an Islamic republic. But this apparently was not meant literally, since early returns over the weekend indicated a small number of Iranians voted against establishing an Islamic republic, which has still not been fully defined.

State radio and television said Sunday preliminary results showed 18 million voted "yes." An estimated 18.7 million had been eligible to vote. Scattered early returns from provincial towns showed 99.7 percent of the voters in favor of an Islamic republic.

As the results were announced, some motorists in downtown Tehran flashed their headlights to show approval. But most citizens seemed to take the news as a foregone conclusion. A Tehran bazaar merchant told a reporter, "Of course I expected it because it was obvious. This is what the people had a revolution for."

The Moslem religious leader Khomeini had sought to oust the shah because, among other reasons, his Western-style modernization of Iran ran counter to traditional Islamic values.

At one voting booth in a middle-class section of Tehran, support for the republic ran at only about 70 percent, according to officials watching the balloting Saturday.

Teamsters Walk Out; Locked Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The trucking industry declared a nationwide lockout Sunday against 300,000 Teamsters after the union launched strikes against 75 companies in the wake of a collapse in marathon contract talks.

The executive committee of Trucking Management Inc., the industry's bargaining arm, said in a statement it "had no alternative but to instruct its member associations and authorizing carriers to shut down their operations in defense against the strike."

In its prepared statement, the industry referred to its action as a "defensive shutdown," but officials also termed the move a lockout.

Bernard Henderson, a union spokesman, said in response to the industry's action, "We had gone out of our way to make sure this would not be a strike that would affect national health or welfare. The escalation is not our choice or our doing. It was the industry's doing."

At the White House, Carter administration spokeswoman Linda Peek said, "We are having no comment today on the Teamsters situation."

TMI said 42 major carriers were targeted by the union strike. But union sources said 75 companies were struck.

"This will cause a major disruption in trucking transportation, not a limited or selective stoppage," the industry said in a prepared statement.

The employer group also said it learned Sunday that other companies not on the union's strike target list were "in fact the object of picketing or other strike activity."

Union President Frank Fitzsimmons, at odds for weeks with the Carter administration over its "voluntary" anti-inflation guidelines, said, "interference by high-level government bureaucrats played no small part" in his decision to order the walkouts.

Industry's decision to counter with a lockout presumably would make it easier for the Carter administration to obtain a back-to-work order under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Administration officials concede it would be more difficult to obtain such an order against selective strikes because their effect on the economy would be minimal, at least initially. Experts say it would be easier to obtain a back-to-work order against a wider work stoppage, however.

Government lawyers planned to meet later in the day to discuss what steps, if any, they would take.

The strikes and walkout followed a

APRIL FOOL SURPRISE — When Michelle Jackson, 17, and her overnight guest, Reesa Kelley, 16, awakened Saturday morning they had an early April Fool's Day surprise awaiting them. During the night three school friends had "papered" the Jackson van. "Papering" is the latest high school joke to pull on friends. The entire interior of a vehicle is stuffed completely full with newspapers. Seldom is something as big as a van attempted. It took four months of saving newspapers and about two hours to surprise the two Monterey High School juniors. (Staff photos by Jim Watkins)

Lake Ransom Canyon Fire Station Opens

By KIM PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LAKE RANSOM CANYON — Wearing grins of pleasure and casting glances of pride, residents of this small village about seven miles southeast of Lubbock on Sunday toured their recently completed "building of love" — the Lake Ransom Canyon Volunteer Fire Station.

The $60,000 facility sparkled for its guests. Chief Diane Whitaker explained that several men spent Saturday night laboriously polishing the two booster trucks housed in the station in anticipation of Sunday's dedication.

The station, which also boasts a meeting room for the department's volunteers, is a brick, modern-looking structure with lots of windows. It sits at the entrance of the 500-member community on a spot barren two years ago.

Then, dreams were all the burgeoning community had.

"We started from scratch and really didn't know that much about firefighting," Chief Diane Whitaker said of her department as it was a few years ago.

But Lake Ransom Canyon residents, along with other individuals and companies from surrounding communities, contributed time, labor, money and material to complete the structure, which was started about a year and a half ago.

"We're proud of our accomplishment," Chief Whitaker said. "And it shows that people can do anything they want to do if they want to do it."

Until February 1977, the community residents depended on units from Lubbock and Slaton to respond to fire calls. And according to Chief Whitaker, precious time was lost waiting for other firefighting units to arrive at the scene of a community fire.

So, "because we felt like it was silly to sit here and wait for some other department to get here," a department was formed, she said. The volunteers now total 27, half of whom are women.

"Although we couldn't completely handle every situation, there are some things we could be doing," Mrs. Whitaker said.

Chief Whitaker and her volunteers have responded to 21 fire calls since the department was organized two years ago. None of the calls have been serious enough to require the assistance of outside departments, she said.

All novices in firefighting, Chief Whitaker and her volunteers meet twice monthly for training early morning drills have And the group only lacks group six hours of training before it receives full certification by the state as a firefighting unit.

Arab Envoys Quit Cairo Protesting Peace Treaty

A-J News Services

ARAB ambassadors began an exodus from Cairo Sunday in protest of Egypt's treaty with Israel, but the government of President Anwar Sadat said it would not be deterred from peace by the Arab uproar.

Egypt called the Arab League economic embargo "illegal," and said it had formulated a secret plan to combat the sanctions passed at a meeting of Arab ministers in Baghdad.

Egypt also went ahead with plans to receive Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Cairo Monday in the first visit by an Israeli head of state to the Egyptian capital.

The Palestine Liberation Organization, a driving force in the campaign to punish anyone involved in the Egypt-Israeli peace pact, predicted days of "hellfire and brimstone" for American interests throughout the world.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet Sunday approved Begin's 28-hour visit to Cairo and the Interior Ministry officially took Egypt off the list of Arab countries with which Israel is at war, paving the way for tourism between the two nations.

Begin's visit and the political and economic punishment of Sadat leaves Egypt facing almost total isolation in the Arab world.

But Butros Ghali, state minister for foreign affairs, told a news conference in Cairo the Baghdad resolutions did not surprise Egypt. "We were expecting this and we have prepared a study regarding our new policy that takes into consideration such steps," Ghali said.

"I cannot tell you what our new policy is, but we have adopted this new policy, taking into consideration these (sanctions)."

Asked if Egypt would continue its peace efforts, Ghali responded, "Yes, without any doubt. Egypt's policy remains the same before and after Baghdad."

Bond Official's Visit Canceled

NEW YORK bond rating official Ben Phillips' visit to Lubbock today has been cancelled because of travel difficulties caused by a United Airlines strike.

Phillips, assistant vice president in charge of ratings for Moody's Investors Service Inc. in New York City, was to meet with City Council members to discuss tax limitations petitions that are being circulated by the Lubbock Property Owners Association.

His trip has not been rescheduled, according to Vaughn Hendrie, city public information officer.

'Stormy Waters' - Real Test Of Israel-Egypt Treaty Ahead

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel and Egypt have signed a peace treaty after 16 months of touch-and-go talks, but old unsolved problems still loom large — most importantly the future of the Palestinians and control of Jerusalem.

The treaty and its annexes lay out starting and finishing dates for negotiations on an array of remaining loose ends. If lasting solutions are found, the Mideast will change radically. If not, the treaty itself could be in danger.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan uses the phrase "stormy waters" to describe the period ahead. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says the "real test" of the peace process is upcoming.

Dayan takes some comfort in the fact that the United States, as the godfather and co-signer of the treaty, is in the same boat with Israel and Egypt.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin makes a state visit to Cairo Monday, but serious negotiations won't begin again until a few weeks from now, when the two sides sit down to discuss the toughest issue, the vague autonomy plan for Palestinians living under Israeli occupation in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

On another matter, Israel and Egypt are to form a joint commission to oversee Israel's three-year withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula. The cooperation of the U.N. Security Council is needed to keep U.N. peacekeepers between the Israeli and Egyptian forces as the Israelis withdraw in five phases over nine months from half the peninsula.

U.N. troops are stationed in Sinai as part of the 1975 Israel-Egypt disengagement accord, and their current mandate runs out in June. The 1975 accord could be considered void with the signing of the treaty, and Security Council approval is required for a new mandate.

The Soviet Union, hostile to the peace treaty, has a veto in the Security Council and could block a new mandate.

A Swedish U.N. officer confessed: "We really have no idea yet what we are supposed to do, where we are supposed to go. The withdrawal is very complicated."

Israel won assurances from the United States to help set up a multinational peacekeeping force if the Security Council does not cooperate.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, in his native Austria on a private visit Sunday, urged that the Mideast peace process again include the Soviet Union.

Noting Moscow's crucial role in the Security Council, Waldheim said the United States should try to persuade the Soviets to accept the current peace framework, and he said a Mideast peace conference should be convened that would involve all parties in the region, as well as the United States and the Soviet Union.

The all-party Geneva Mideast peace conference, at which the United States and the Soviet Union were co-chairmen, broke down in December 1973.

The Palestinians, their hearts set on an independent state, reject the autonomy plan, and it appears that no recognized Palestinian leaders will join the talks. Jordan, also invited, has refused. Israel, Egypt and the United States will have sole custody of the issue.

Still to be decided is where to hold the talks. Washington, where so much peace progress was made, seems out of the question because it is too far from Cairo and Jerusalem for the delegates to be in contact with their governments.

Who would lead the American delegation? Secretary of State Cyrus Vance could not spend a year on one issue.

The American delegate will stand between radically different ideas about Palestinian autonomy, where it applies and what it should lead to.

Sadat talks of Arab sovereignty over the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem and its Moslem holy places, all held by Israel since 1967.

Begin says autonomy means local self-rule for the people, not for the land. Jerusalem, counters Begin, is the eternal capital of the Jewish state, never to be divided again. Israel claims a biblical right to the West Bank.

"I know Begin will be raising hell, as he always does," Sadat said recently of the autonomy talks. "But, by God, I shall be raising hell for him also."

Israel and Egypt pledged to end the negotiations on autonomy in one year. Then, if Palestinians are willing to vote, elections would be held in the West Bank and Gaza for an administrative council.

With this election, according to the Camp David accords, a five-year transition period begins in the West Bank and Gaza. Talks on the "final status" of the areas, with 1.1 million Palestinians, are to start no later than the third year of the transition period.

Deregulation To Benefit Texas

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — If, as is often said, variety is the spice of life, irony must be one of the principal ingredients which flavors the stew of politics.

Consider for a moment the relationship between President Jimmy Carter and Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements has made it clear that he's less than favorably impressed by the President, including comments that he would use his position as governor to work for Carter's defeat.

Carter hasn't had all that much to say about Clements, but didn't go out of his way on his recent visit to Dallas to offer to visit with the city's politically prominent resident. (The governor's office says there was no call or even postcard from the Carter folks.)

So, given the fact that the two aren't just back-slapping buddies, it has to be one of the more peculiar quirks of politics that Carter is doing so much to help Clements these days.

That assistance, naturally enough, isn't intended as assistance for Bill Clements; it's just likely to work out that way.

For years now, member of the oil and gas industry, Railroad Commission and various public officials have been harping at federal officials — including the President to deregulate oil and gas prices.

Until recently, there wasn't must to show for all that criticizing, pleading, cajoling, denouncing, arguing, reasoning.

But then it was decided to deregulate natural gas prices — and then to move to deregulation of crude oil prices.

Texas stands to benefit substantially from deregulation, in terms of the increase in revenues coming to the State Treasury.

Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner notes deregulation of natural gas means an additional $100,000,000 in income to the state, adding, "crude oil deregulation will have a greater impact."

Crude oil, Poerner notes, is in short supply — everywhere — whereas natural gas is not.

And with the price increase by OPEC members, the world price for crude oil is up, meaning an increase in state revenues, since the state tax on crude oil is based on a percentage of the oil's price.

Additional revenues will make it easier not only to avoid new taxes, but to cut back taxes in other areas — which is another thing Clements has been talking about since he first announced for office.

Texas, thanks in good part to its oil and gas industry, has been able to come through recent tight economic periods in better shape that the majority of states.

Prospects of a strengthened Texas economy also are likely to be extremely welcome to the governor in planning state spending over the coming two years.

Fear of worsening economic conditions along with uncertainty about what legislation may be enacted in the way of "tax relief" has been one of the spurs goading Senate leadership, (and more reluctantly the House leadership) towards enacting a one-year appropriations bill.

Whatever happens, Clements will have the option of vetoing half of the appropriations bill (unless some heretofore unknown method of writing the measure is employed), as Preston Smith did when governor.

New Census Data Widens Wealth Gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lastest census figures show the gap between America's rich and poor widening at a rapid rate, Rep. Henry S. Reuss said Saturday.

And the Wisconsin Democrat said the figures appear to prove again the old adage that, at least in relation to each other, the rich keep getting richer and the poor poorer.

Reuss said recently released Census Bureau figures for 1977 showed that in that year, the share of total income received by the poorest two-fifths of American families fell from 17.2 to 16.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the upper two-fifths of American families gained a half percentage point in their share of the total income, from 65.2 to 65.7 percent, Reuss said.

"Income distribution is getting skewed away from the direction of equality toward greater inequality," the chairman of the House Banking Committee said.

Critics Fight To Dismantle Wage, Price Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Council on Wage and Price Stability, the federal agency created to fight inflation, is fighting for its life in Congress.

Some conservative senators are trying to abolish the council — with 39 employees, one of the smallest federal agencies — on grounds extending its life will lead to mandatory wage and price controls. They claim the council already has exceeded its power by trying to impose some controls.

But Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who is leading the battle to extend the council and enlarge its budget, is trying to convince colleagues the council is the best hope for avoiding those controls.

"A growing majority of American people favor mandatory price controls right now," Proxmire said last week. "The only way we can forestall that is to begin to turn inflation around. If we fail, we are going to come closer to mandatory wage and price controls every day."

The Senate will vote early in the week on a House-passed bill to extend for one year the council's life, now due to end next Sept. 30. The bill also would raise the council's $2.2-million budget for the current year to $7 million and earmark $8.5 million for next year.

The extra money would allow the council to expand its 39-member staff to 233.

The council was created by Congress in 1974 to monitor wages and prices as well as federal actions that contribute to inflation. The agency, headed by economist Alfred Kahn, now carries the burden of gauging compliance with President Carter's voluntary wage and price guidelines.

All Republicans on the Senate Banking Committee, which wrote the bill, voted against it. They contend Carter's mostly voluntary anti-inflation program is not working. The biggest bone of contention is an element that is not voluntary — Carter's plan to deny big government contracts to companies that don't moderate their price increases and wage contracts.

Since no law currently authorizes mandatory wage and price controls, several members of Congress have joined the AFL-CIO in a court suit challenging Carter's right to punish uncooperative companies.

"Congress ought not put its implicit imprimatur (blessing) on a program which has no lawful basis and is nothing more than a presidential grab for power constitutionally denied him," Banking Committee Republicans wrote in dissenting to the bill.

The General Accounting Office and the Library of Congress agree that a president has no authority to withhold contracts from uncooperative businesses. On the other hand, the Justice Department points to past efforts at forcing companies to hire minorities as evidence that the president does have such power.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., told colleagues the mere existence of the council and its "fictional controls system" is causing "apprehension that we are going to go to mandatory price controls."

A lot of businesses, he added, "are pricing their products now against a time when they might not be allowed to increase their prices." And that, Bellmon said, means more inflation.

In addition to giving the council a new lease on life, the bill carries a Senate Banking Committee amendment that adds another wrinkle to the fight to balance the federal budget.

The amendment would require the president each year to set goals for reducing the percentage of the nation's goods and services that are spent by the federal government.

The measure would require that the proportion, now 21.6 percent, be cut to 21 percent by 1981 and 20 percent by 1983. Congress could change those goals if the need arose.

'Nazi-Like' Laws Under Review By Committee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee is trying to eliminate alleged "Nazi-like" laws from a U.S. criminal code the Senate passed last year.

Aware of controversies generated by previous efforts to gather 200 years of piecemeal laws into one comprehensive criminal code, the Senate drafters had tried to avoid trouble by scrapping some stringent wiretap, espionage and death penalty provisions.

Their effort — billed as the most sweeping legal reform in American history — passed the Senate without much furor last year and died chiefly because the House never acted on it.

Now a House criminal justice subcommittee is starting the project again — faced with the claims of the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Social Justice, a Church of Scientology organization, that the latest Senate bill is also laden with repressive statutes.

The commission says comparison with Library of Congress research materials shows that bill had 19 provisions resembling statutes Adolf Hitler imposed on Nazi Germany.

One example, it says, is Section 1001, which makes it illegal to take a "substantial step" toward committing a crime. U.S. federal law has never had such an explicit provision.

According to the Library of Congress material, Nazi Germany, in 1935, outlawed "the commencement of execution" of a crime.

Hitler strengthened that law in 1939 by decreeing that an attempt to commit a major crime must be punished as severely as if the crime had been committed.

The Senate bill did the same thing except to say that "if the offense is a Class A felony the attempt is graded as a Class B felony."

"The Senate bill is wrong in some major things," says Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., a member of the criminal justice subcommittee.

"We should be very careful about creating new crimes," Drinan said in an interview. "We don't think every crime should have a second crime of attempt.

"Ten, 15 or 20 things came in during those conservative years," Drinan said. "These things crept in through Nixon and the Justice Department, and (former Attorney General) John Mitchell."

With the Senate watching and waiting, Drinan's subcommittee is patching together parts of the Senate bill and three other sources — a 1962 "model code," a 1971 code drafted by a federal commission and an earlier House draft.

Drinan said he hopes to complete the tentative draft by June, submit it to experts, then to the full Judiciary Committee in September and later to the full House.

The matter will then come before the Senate again.

Oil Shortages Worry Public, Poll Shows

By LOUIS HARRIS

By wide margins, Americans favor a whole series of standby mandatory measures for energy conservation. It is evident now that people are becoming very concerned about shortages of oil and other energy sources; they want assurances that the government is ready to move if the situation worsens.

Here are some of the measures Americans favor to conserve energy, according to the latest ABC News-Harris Survey of 1,500 adults nationwide:

•By 76-21 percent, better than a 3-to-1 majority favors standby legislation that "would make people use more car pools in getting to and from work." Talked about since 1973, there has not yet been a systematic plan put into effect to substantially increase car pooling.

•By 76-13 percent, a lopsided majority supports "increasing production of crude oil on government-owned lands," in case of energy shortages.

•By 78-12 percent, another big majority would favor standby legislation that would "make industry use more natural gas, which is increasing in supply, instead of oil." In recent months, the amount of natural gas available to this country has increased sharply, thus raising the prospect that many companies could convert to natural gas. One risk, of course, is that such conservations help the situation at first, but then might create so great a demand that natural gas would begin to become scarce again.

•By 73-24 percent, a majority also favors standby legislation that would "restrict the temperature in all office buildings to 65 degrees."

•By 60-31 percent, the public now favors standby legislation that would allow the Environmental Protection Agency to "relax some environmental controls to allow cars to use less lead-free gasoline."

•By 57-29 percent, a majority would also favor legislation to empower the president to "allow electric power plants to use more high-sulphur fuel oil and coal" in an energy emergency.

These results indicate that Americans are concerned over the possibility of another energy crisis, and that they are willing to endure some sacrifice and inconvenience, if necessary, in order to cope with the energy problem.

In one other area, a smaller plurality favors standby legislation:

•By a slim 49-48 percent, Americans now favor giving the president standby authority to "shut down all sales of gasoline on Sunday."

But on two other proposals, Americans take a negative view:

•By 56-40 percent, they now oppose giving President Carter the standby power to "shut down all sales of gasoline on certain evenings during the week." Apparently people feel they can cope with having no gasoline available on Sunday, but they do want it available during evening hours.

•By 69-26 percent, a sizable majority is opposed to emergency standby legislation that could result in going "to a coupon system of gasoline rationing where people would be limited to 10 gallons of gasoline a week." This result is significant because it shows high public skepticism about a plan that relies on coupons and that might be subject to black market practices.

Alfred Lord Tennyson, Edgar Allan Poe, and Abe Lincoln were all born in 1809.

Planning For A Better City

A PROPOSAL by a Planning and Zoning Commission subcommittee to establish an "outer limits" for Lubbock's growth for the next 15 or 20 years has a worthy intent.

Properly utilized and adhered to, the plan would provide for Lubbock's orderly expansion at least expense to taxpayers and with maximum benefits for developers.

Too often in the past, builders and developers have seen land-use zoning, subdivision and building regulations as obstacles to be overcome rather than as tools to work with.

Yet, a realistic master plan—flexible enough to provide for changing conditions and encourage initiative, yet rigid enough to offer guidance, protection and stability—can be a major asset to a growing city.

ESSENTIALLY, the plan envisioned by the P&Z panel would put the horse back before the cart by providing potential developers a blueprint for their own planning.

Instead of a massive annexation program to provide City services to any fringe area development that might spring up, the City would in effect say "these are the areas that will be favorably considered for annexation as Lubbock's population grows."

Basically encompassing acreage in a semicircle immediately south, west and north of current city limits, the "policy area" would show where the City would propose to extend water and sewer lines, garbage pickup, streets and other municipal services as the need is justified.

City Planning Director Jim Bertram said the proposed outer limits would provide for a doubling of Lubbock's population to 350,000 by about the year 2005.

At the same time, developers and potential buyers would be put on notice that areas outside the boundary would not be annexed and would not have City services.

ORDERLY GROWTH according to a master plan makes economic sense, especially to taxpayers who are asked to vote bond issues for the extension of municipal facilities and services into developing areas.

The capacity of existing trunk lines, and the feasibility of extending them, should be taken into consideration before an area is annexed. By making those studies and decisions first, the City can provide helpful guidance to developers in the preliminary stages of a potential investor's planning.

It should make Lubbock an even greater attraction for quality residential, industrial and commercial growth.

AN EDITORIAL:

Constraint For Restraint Law

BAD CASES make bad law, according to a legal profession truism—and seldom truer than in U.S. vs The Progressive magazine.

The Progressive, a publication of limited circulation but pronounced social consciousness, seeks to publish an article on the workings of a hydrogen bomb.

The government, asserting the article contains secret information of such enormous benefit as to "severly undercut the arms control and disarmament policies of the U.S.", says no way.

Last week, U.S. District Judge Robert Warren issued a preliminary injunction to halt publication of the article, pending appeal "all the way to the Supreme Court if necessary," according to The Progressive's lawyers.

WHAT WE HAVE here is a head-on between two basic interests of polity: national security and freedom of the press. What the government is asking is restraint prior to publication, a form of censorship volumes of decisions have held constitutionally unacceptable.

The case is not like the recent flurry of First Amendment confrontations, which for the most part have involved the question of access by government to unpublished materials gathered by newsmen.

Nor is it in the pattern of the Pentagon Papers case, although there the government sought to suppress publication on the grounds of national security. But the Pentagon Papers did not involve secret scientific details or even current military information.

The government has a formidable array of experts to back up its case that the article is sufficiently explicit to enable nations not now in the hydrogen club to develop a fusion technology.

The Progressive contends that if so, they could have gotten the information the way it did—through a thorough study of documents and materials available to the public.

THE MAGAZINE SAYS it had access to no classified information and would be revealing no secrets. It said its purpose in seeking publication is to enable the public to make informed decisions on arms control.

The real danger is not that the final decision will be against The Progressive but that it might serve to reinforce litigants seeking prior restraint on the basis of subjective value instead of true security interests.

The coming decision should be as precisely explicit and as specifically tailored as possible to the case at hand, and structured so that it cannot serve as a precedent to be applied in future cases which do not involve precisely the same points and raise precisely the same questions.

That might not make it very good law, but it certainly would make it the safest law under the existing circumstances.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

American 'Giveaways' Are Second To None

AFGHANISTAN, bordering the USSR, is now admittedly a Soviet stooge. At least $425 million of our suffering American taxpayers' foreign aid money has gone tinkling, clinking, clanking down the drain.

The Soviet believes in the domino theory, and much of Iran's turmoil was financed by the Soviet in Afghanistan. The Soviet armed stealthy, vicious guerrilla fighters in Afghanistan and then infiltrated them into Iran.

Afghanistan is a big, landlocked country about the size of Texas. It has a Stone Age economy; it has few roads and is loaded with deserts. Some mountains reach 10,000 feet.

Only about 20 million people live there and they are today completely under the Soviet yoke.

SINCE ANTIQUITY, invaders have favored Afghanistan, variously known as Arana or in ancient times Bactria and in the Middle Ages as Khorasan.

In the 18th century, foreign emperors ruled through local emirs and kings. But in 1973 a bloody military coup resulted in a republic.

Then in 1978 Soviet stooges staged another bloody coup. The Reds captured Kabul, the capital, and all of Afghanistan.

For 40 years the country had been the preserve of King Muhammad Zahir Shah. But strongman Lieut. Gen. Daoud Khan, his cousin, overthrew him while the king was luxuriating at a health spa in Italy.

Afghanistan is a poverty-striken place with no economic base whatever. But both King Zahir and cousin Daoud operated like octopuses secure under a rocky cliff, snapping up whatever they wished.

AND NEITHER had any more interest in the poor Afghanistan people than in a horse race in Ireland.

Year after year, our U.S. taxpayers' money passed into the hands of the rich people in Afghanistan. But precious little reached the poor. The Soviet finds that it is merely a case of "what I take belongs to me, what you give is your own fault."

As if the cruel inflation were not a problem in the U.S., we American taxpayers presently are supplying military or economic aid to 124 foreign countries. We have been give-away minded for many, many years.

This is what has cost us so much.

But the foreign aid record stands. Through our Washington government, we Americans find countless places to start our foreign aid and no place to stop.

America's aid abroad can acquire a momentum of its own. There are many ways in and no way out.

PRESIDENT CARTER informs Americans that the bill for our 1979 foreign aid is $3.2 billion. But President Carter hides the rest—which is colossal. His disclosed $3.2 billion, you find it is only part of the overspending picture.

According to a House Appropriations subcommittee, President Carter misleads people. The subcommittee finds the true amount at least $6.5 billion.

In his $3.2 billion, President Carter fails to include the "Food for Peace" deliveries, America's payments for the Inter-American Bank, the International Development Association and other international organizations, the Peace Corps, etc.

And additional billions are scattered in 14 other separate sections of the budget that President Carter did not include.

WE AMERICANS have given more and asked less than any nation in the history of the world. This is another reason we can be proud we are Americans.

A meat-ax attack on our foreign aid would be both foolhardy and dangerous. But only a solvent America can be a helping America.

With Afghanistan now in the Soviet orbit, this is the time for President Carter to revive his entire foreign aid program. But there is no more chance of that than a snowball has in you know where.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Camp David Sums It

EVANS

WASHINGTON—While the business community awaits imposition of mandatory wage and price controls, the hard fact is that President Carter and his top advisers did not even discuss the subject during their March 19 economic strategy conference at Camp David.

"It didn't come up, because there's nobody in the administration who is for controls," one cabinet member told us.

Actually, there are some officials who would welcome wage-price curbs, but they are at lower and middle levels of the administration.

Carter's senior economic advisers are unanimously opposed to them, mainly on grounds that they will not work for long.

That leaves the Carter anti-inflation program high and dry. All agree that voluntary restraint is failing. But there is no will to tighten up any more on the budget or the money supply.

So, at Camp David, amid much wailing by cabinet members about greedy corporations padding their profits, there were no new solutions.

A footnote: Three cabinet members formed a coalition at Camp David to urge a new departure in energy policy.

Sec. of State Cyrus Vance and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal joined Energy Secretary James Schlesinger in pressing for decontrol of oil prices.

ADDING TO increasing difficulties experienced by Rep. Jack Kemp in national politics, an effort to launch him as New York's favorite-son presidential candidate has been stillborn.

The favorite son idea was broached to Kemp by Nassau County chairman Joseph Margiotta, perhaps the most powerful figure in the party's post-Rockefeller era, and state chairman Bernard Kilbourn.

Kemp as favorite son would have served the purposes of both the state party leaders and of Kemp. For the New York Republicans, it would have kept their huge delegation united.

For Kemp, it would have given his longshot presidential prospects an immense boost.

Beyond that, it would have removed the possibility of a jarring New York Republican primary for the Senate between Sen. Jacob Javits and Kemp.

MARGIOTTA believes Javits will seek a fifth term, and he opposes a challenge from Kemp.

Although there was no deal offered Kemp of presidential favorite-son support if he keeps out of the Senate primary, that's the way it would have worked.

Kemp was agreeable, but some state party leaders were not—especially the Republican legislative leaders, state Sen. Warren Anderson and state Assemblyman James Emery.

Margiotta believes a favorite son must have unanimous support which Kemp clearly does not. "I don't think it'll get off the ground," Margiotta told us.

JOHN B. CONNALLY'S first major push for the Jewish vote will be made in New York City April 5 when, addressing a select audience invited by the American Jewish Committee, he proposes a long-term Saudi-Israeli entente.

Although members of the Jewish establishment have soured on President Carter, they have misgivings about most of his Republican challengers —especially Connally.

Consequently, the April 5 meeting will test whether Connally can overcome such suspicions.

Connally has been talking, somewhat vaguely, of closer U.S. military ties with Israel coinciding with efforts to bring oil-producing Saudi Arabia into that military hookup.

If he can clarify this concept for a well-informed Jewish audience, it would constitute a major political breakthrough in his bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

WHILE ANTI-Americanism rushed toward a dangerous peak and big American contractors in Iran vainly sought information about the State Department's evacuation policy, military and diplomatic personnel were being quietly moved out of Tehran to safety.

That reversed the normal procedure: it is government officials, with their dependents if necessary, who usually stay till the dangerous end; the non-government Americans usually get moved out first.

But the deteriorating situation in Tehran and other hot spots in revolutionary Iran reversed that process, infuriating non-government civilians.

But Uncle Sam was not forgetting his own. Under an emergency (but publicly unannounced) policy of "very liberal" leave, many embassy employes and their dependents were in effect subsidized for Christmas vacation trips out of the country—from which, of course, they never returned.

Admittedly, the State Department faced a difficult and even dangerous time in deciding when and how the exodus should take place. But the manner in which it finally happened left a lot of bad feeling.

ANDREW TULLY:

A Kahn Game...

WASHINGTON—Alfred Kahn, who is called Jimmy Carter's anti-inflation "adviser," says the administration mustn't panic merely because prices have risen 9.9 percent in the last year, aided and abetted by a 12.7 percent rise in the high cost of food.

Well, Carter and his little helpers should be panic-stricken. What would it take to break down their cool—a $20 loaf of bread?

We got here a President who anguishes day and night over the violation of human rights in Afghanistan but doesn't know what to do about a catastrophe that violates human rights of Americans to buy life's necessities without mortgaging their right arms.

All he can offer is eternal inflation—a scrawny hope that eventually prices will increase at a lower rate.

KAHN SOUNDS like a broken record. Although admitting that the 1.2 percent rise in the cost of living in February was "a bad performance," he keeps asking us to give the administration's voluntary wage-price program "another three or four months to show what it can do."

Kahn is talking about a corpse. The wage-price program is dead because it had no teeth. George Meany, boss of the AFL-CIO, has acknowledged its demise.

So, in effect, has Big Business; corporation earnings rose by 9.7 percent in the final three months of 1978, capping a 26.4 percent jump since 1977. It was the steepest rise in 29 years.

Carter & Co. don't realize there's a war on. No shooting, but as Germany's pre-World War II Weimar Republic showed, a country can be destroyed by inflation just as surely as by war.

FORGET CARTER'S peacemaking in the Middle East. An awful lot of Americans would have to think thrice if asked where Israel and Egypt are located, and many of them might decide on South America.

Check those polls on the citizenry's knowledge of foreign affairs. One of them said a majority of those queried thought South Africa was an Arab country.

Come November 1980, voters will not be all that impressed if Jimmy Carter has brought peace to the Middle East and persuaded the Russians to throw away a bunch of missiles.

When the latest inflation figures were announced, the country was treated to this baloney from Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability:

"HISTORY IS full of instances in which the government has overreacted. We want to avoid that." God save the dollar. The Carter administration leads the league in underreacting.

In all this, I suggest that women are our best —perhaps only—hope. Females have their faults but they possess meager tolerance for governmental hogwash.

They buy food, not excuses. They're always the first to discover the king has no clothes on. Up and at 'em, ladies. Remember what Madame DeFarge accomplished with a couple of knitting needles.

JAY HARRIS:

A Family Portrait

HOW DOES THE American family stack up against those in some other parts of the world?

Is the family unit, as we have so long known it, an endangered species in the U.S.? Has television, eating out, two-parent wage earners and a mobile society changed the nation's social structure?

Depending on what figures you read and what the experts, family relations people, psychiatrists, ministers and police say, the answers are yes, no and maybe...

In other words, the verdict on what is happening to The Family, as Americans have long envisioned the unit, is still out. Although there have been changes, there also are signs that things may be becoming somewhat more stable than in recent years.

PROBABLY THE most profound change which has affected the family in America, and to a certain extent abroad, has been the two-wage-earner syndrome.

Largely because of the need for an extra paycheck "to make ends meet," and because women feel fulfillment in a career situation, the number of households where both father and mother work has increased dramatically in the last two decades.

As a result, everything from teenage freedom and responsibility to parental permissiveness has undergone changes, much of it not good.

As the past year got underway, here is the way the U.S. Statistical Abstract said the American family shaped up...

One wage earner, with wife and children, 15.9 percent; two wage earners and children, 18.5 percent; husband and wife, no children, 30.5 percent; woman with children, 6.2 percent; man with children, 0.6 percent; unrelated persons living together, 2.5 percent; single person households, 20.6 percent; female or male headed households with relatives other than spouse or children, 5.3 percent.

THOSE COLD statistics may not say much as such. But, behind each one is a story of hope, frustration, success, broken homes, happiness, filled and unfilled dreams.

Yet, despite all the trauma of the past two decades, from the Sixties through the Seventies, the Census Bureau says the American family faces a rosier future.

A new Census Bureau study says marriage rates seem to be stabilizing. The study also holds out hopes for a decline in the divorce rate, which now affects one out of every three current marriages. And, the birth rate has dropped about as far as it can without the nation starting to lose population.

The study goes on to say that today's young family has an average of two children, which compares with their grandparents' four offspring. This, the report claims, should make it easier for parents to spend more time with one another as well as with their children.

Unfortunately, it isn't working out that way.

SOME OF THE conclusions presented by Dr. Paul C. Glick, the Census Bureau's senior demographer, will draw doubts from many.

Instead of events pointing toward families having "an easier time of it" in the future, the outlook—particularly with inflation taking its toll—is for further family pressures in our opinion.

Yet, Dr. Glick says "The judgment presented here is that most of the changes in family life over the next two decades will be small compared with those during the last two decades."

Dr. Glick claims that in the next decade or two, social pressure can be expected to diminish for working mothers and fathers to be employed full-time. This should also stabilize the marriage concept, he argues.

DESPITE THE changes in modern living, the Census Bureau offers some surprising statistics...

Today, 77 percent of American adults live in husband-wife households, 10 percent are in one-parent households; 7 percent are living alone; one percent are living in households of unmarried couples, and the rest in other arrangements or institutions.

Census figures show marriages reached a peak of 11 per 1,000 population in 1972, dropped to 10 in 1,000 in 1975 and hasn't changed much since.

In 1960, the divorce rate, per 1,000 population was only 2.2 percent. By 1970, it was 3.5 percent and 1976 had soared to 5.0. It edged up another .1 of a point in 1976.

There is some evidence that the divorce rate is levelling off. But the figures may be distored by those who choose to work out "living arrangements" and do not formalize it. When such couples split, then it is not recorded as a divorce.

THOSE ARE interesting statistics, but what does it say about The Family as people?

Are parents and children closer? Do they confide in one another as much as in previous years? Do teenagers respect their elders? Are people learning to communicate with one another? What role does religion—the orthodox, traditional, the cult—play in people's lives?

In many ways, the more "open" society, the breaking of certain barriers, has brought about a more enlightened society. It's also brought about other things. But, a more stable family unit?

We would have to say there are still grave doubts and problems with the American family. The soaring crime rate, drug problem, sexual promiscuity, adult and teenage drinking—all of this says something about people as people, rather than anonymous units and groups.

Is it any different abroad? In some areas, the family is more close knit than in the U.S. But in industrialized, affluent nations, the pattern is similar. One thing is certain: As the family goes, so goes the nation. There's no disputing that.

L.M. BOYD:

Q. "WHICH OF our states has the most river and stream mileage?"

A. You may not believe it. Nebraska.

Am told that 73 percent of San Francisco's citizenry is unmarried.

Consider two athletes, a man and a woman, who run a six-mile race in equal time. If they race over only one mile, the man invariably will win. If they race over 26 miles, the woman invariably will win. Such is the claim of those medicoes who deal with sports figures.

Anybody ever ask you to co-sign a finance company loan? If so, you, too, may find it noteworthy that 74.6 percent of those so asked eventually are also asked to pay off such loans. That's the report of the National Consumer Finance Association.

Towns Called Coldest

UST NERA, U.S.S.R (AP) — A new Cold War is heating up here.

The battle is between three small towns in Siberia's infamous Pole of Cold, none of which want the inglorious title as the world's coldest inhabited place.

Ust Nera Mayor Alexander S. Lyubimov claims his gold-mining camp is a solid No. 2, and even then, he'd gladly change places with the folks over in Verkhoyansk, who boast that they occupy third place.

For years now, the front-runner has been Oymyakon, a village of 600 just around the corner from Ust Nera. In January 1959, Oymyakon recorded the regional low of 95.8 degrees Fahrenheit below zero.

Ust Nera's record low is one degree warmer, but meteorologists argue it feels colder here because of winds. To make things more confusing, little Verkhoyansk logged last year's coldest temperature.

So what's a mayor to do?

"We would like to volunteer and give some of our cold to the people in Verkhoyansk, but they won't take it," complained Lyubimov.

A recent visit to Ust Nera by a group of U.S. correspondents came on a relatively warm day — a mere 40 degrees below zero.

"This is spring to us," sniffed a saleswoman, instructing that it's not polite to talk about the weather in Ust Nera.

How cold is it? Well ... feel every hair in your nose freeze rigid. Inhale too deeply and it catches you at the base of the throat. Hands, even those wrapped in the warmest gloves, go numb after 10 minutes. Feet follow after 15. And the face, the only totally exposed area, stings the second its warm flesh hits the air.

Locals are armed with such gear as "shapkas" — fur hats with covers for ears — fat felt boots or sealskin slip-ons which create a unique Siberian shuffle, and sheep skin coats supplied free to most outdoor workers.

Siberian children have a look all their own. Wrapped in layers of clothing, they could be mistaken for plump pillows.

The enemy in this Cold War is Siberia's unique "anti-cyclone" — a vast pressure system which last from September to May. And yearly the cold front shifts, making Ust Nera No.2 one year and No.3 the next.

It takes newcomers two or three years to adapt to Ust Nera's range of climate, considered to be one of the world's severest. Nine months of relentless winter are followed by scorching heat in summer, made worse by an overabundance of mosquitos.

"But it's very seldom that people cannot get adapted to life here," explained Ust Nera chief physician Maryenni Vladlen. "Most people find they like it here."

Ust Nera natives call the climate "invigorating." But when it dips under 49 below, the town is blanketed in an eerie, perpetual ice fog. The so-called "tuman" is created by body heat and exhaust fumes from every citizen, dog, reindeer and auto that moves around town.

It is well-known that "cabin fever" afflicts residents in the dead of winter when daylight lasts only five hours. A slight malaise, sleepiness and irritability is often the noticeable result.

People's bodies even change with the cold, experts say. They say northerners need more calories but fewer vitamins than southerners.

The typical Ust Nera diet is high in carbohydrates — lots of bread, fatty fishes and fresh meats. A favorite is "stroganina," thinly sliced morsels of frozen fish served up with a salt-and-pepper dip.

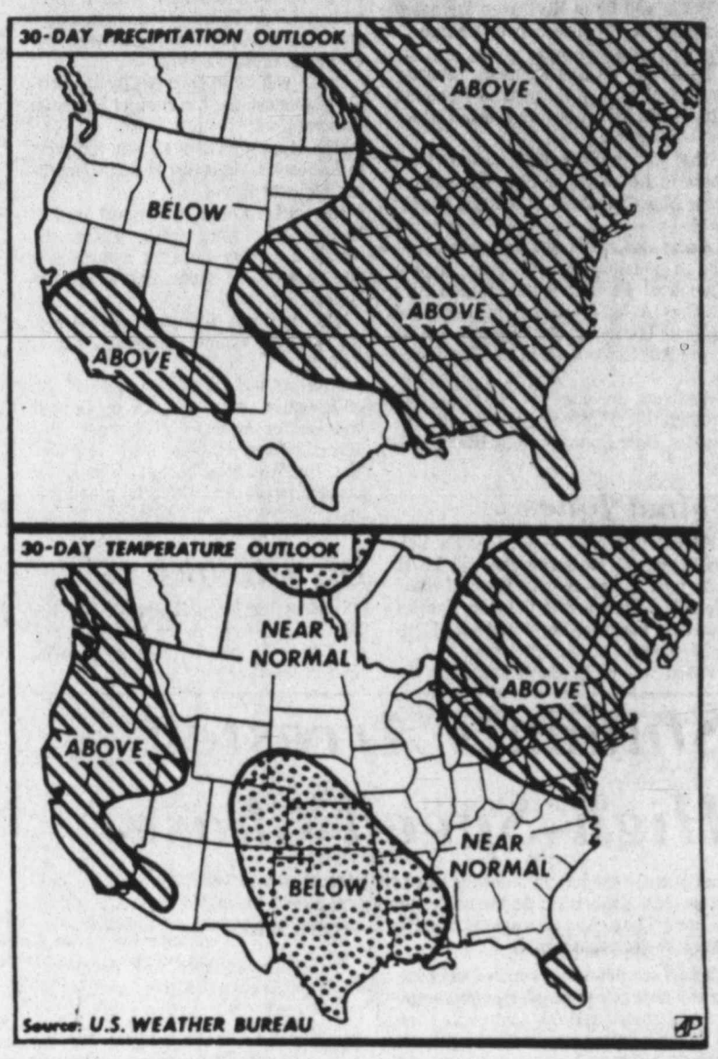
Most fruits and vegetables are flown in by cargo planes or trucked along a 1,000-kilometer dirt road called Ust Nera's "life-line."

In what may be a wave of the future in the North, Ust Nera has set up an extensive greenhouse network, which annually grows 30 tons of tomatoes, 34 tons of cucumbers, 6,000 tons of cabbage as well as filling most milk and egg needs. Last year, 45 working days were lost because of the cold. While man can usually adapt to frost, his machinery can't. Steel turns brittle and breaks like glass. Oil takes on the consistency of rubber.

Every would-be resident of the Pole of Cold is required to have a medical checkup, Vladlen said. Those with high blood pressure, heart trouble or chronic lung problems are told to stay away.

Just burying the dead in Ust Nera is a headache.

Permafrost makes the ground as hard as concrete, so Pole of Cold natives have devised their own system of putting the deceased to rest. At night light a fire where you are going to dig. Dig by day.



30-DAY WEATHER OUTLOOK — This is the way the nation's weather shapes up for the next 30 days in terms of precipitation and temperatures, according to the National Weather Service in Washington. (AP Laserphoto)

Mild, Cooler Weather Forecast For Plains

While dark thunderstorms spawned numerous tornadoes and rainshowers and dumped hail from the Hill Country to the East Texas border Sunday, no severe weather threatened the cloud-covered South Plains.

Clouds today will continue to blanket the Lubbock area, and temperatures will be mild. The high this afternoon will reach near 60, and tonight's low will dip to about 35 degrees.

Winds should be northerly, 10 to 15 mph.

At least three twisters spun out of stormy skies Sunday, striking near Longview, Tyler and Jefferson, uprooting trees, tearing down power lines and damaging homes. No injuries were reported, sheriff's deputies said, adding that damages still were being tallied Sunday evening.

The National Weather Service reported that the twister northwest of Jefferson overturned several trailers, uprooted trees and tore down power lines.

The rash of tornadoes was caused by a line of fierce thunderstorms that prompted flash flood watches for much of East Texas Sunday night. A string of flash flood warnings also was issued for Central Texas, as heavy downpours drenched already saturated ground.

According to NWS reports, the waterlogged ground makes conditions dangerous because of heavy rainfall rates and little storm movement. Residents were advised to stay away from running water and be prepared to move to higher ground.

Thunderstorms are expected to remain in the South Texas area today, with lower temperatures forecast for most of the state.

Elsewhere in the country, between 1,200 and 2,500 families remain homeless in northern Illinois due to flooding caused by runoff from a record snowstorm.

Flooding is expected to continue on the Illinois River for three more weeks, according to the Army Corps of Engineers office in Peoria, and more rain is expected through Tuesday.

Damp weather is expected to continue over the Pacific Coast, the Mississippi Delta and the Ohio Valley today, while sunshine and warm temperatures are forecast for Florida, the Southwest and California.

NO APPRECIATION

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — America suffers a "post-World War II, John Wayne image of itself," says singer-songwriter Buffy Sainte-Marie, a Cree Indian from Saskatchewan, Canada. "There doesn't seem to be an appreciation for the multi-cultural heritage. "If Americans could appreciate each other — taste of many cultures — this would be a delicious country. ... I am naive enough to believe that everyone can still have a chance at what they want," Ms. Sainte-Marie said at Women's Ethnic Cultural Week at Washington State University. "Our differences are beautiful. We shouldn't jump into the melting pot because then we turn into broth, and I don't intend to be broth," she said.

Two Tech Students Arrested Following High-Speed Chase

Two Texas Tech students Sunday morning were released from county jail, where they had been taken earlier following a high-speed chase by university and city police about 1:30 a.m. just east of the university.

Lubbock police arrested the 21-year-old driver of the pickup truck for driving while intoxicated, evading arrest and reckless conduct and issued him 18 traffic citations after the incident, which ended in an alley in the 1900-block of 16th Street.

A 20-year-old male passenger in the pickup was arrested for public intoxication.

The driver was released to the custody of his attorney and the passenger was out on bail.

Reports show that a Texas Tech police unit pursued the pickup following its collision with a sports car on the university campus. The pickup's occupants failed to stop at the accident scene.

As a Tech police car pursued the pickup at a high rate of speed, a Lubbock police unit joined the eastbound chase on Main Street. Reports show the pickup, with the police units in pursuit, ran a red light at Broadway and University Avenue.

Officers said the driver then made an illegal turn onto 14th Street from University Avenue and ran the stop sign at 14th Street and Avenue X.

Officers said the vehicle then headed west down an alley in the 2400-block of 15th Street; cut through a nearby service station, running over two gasoline pumps; went down 15th Street, a one-way street, the wrong way; and almost collided head-on with the Lubbock police unit.

The chase continued with the pickup heading east on 16th Street, bouncing off several curbs and running another stop sign and two red lights. Police said the driver was forced to stop in an alley in the 1900-block of 16th Street after the pickup's headlights failed.

Officers estimated $4,000 worth of damage to the two gas pumps that were run over during the incident.

Burglars took more than $3,000 worth of household goods from two residences in the 1900-block of Fourth Place sometime late Saturday or early Sunday.

Minerva Alcorta of 1906 Fourth Place said the thieves removed $2,270 worth of property from her home, including a portable color TV, stereo and kitchen utensils.

John Rios of 1910 Fourth Place said the burglars stole $1,075 worth of goods from his place, including a set of golf clubs, jewelry and clothing.

Ricky G. Rangel of 2108 28th St. said someone carted off $1,085 worth of stereo equipment from his home sometime between 5:30 and 11:15 p.m. Saturday. He told officers it was the second time in two weeks that his residence had been broken into.

Thomas Allen Jr. of 3825 53rd St. reported that thieves took $844 worth of tools and tapes from three vehicles that were parked at his home sometime between 8 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

Katherine Graves, who had been hospitalized since Tuesday, returned to her apartment at 1802 Sixth St. Sunday to find that someone had made off with $487 worth of household items.

Everett Mayhall of 2626 Ave. K, rear, told police a black female entered his house late Saturday and stole his $150 TV set.

Mayhall, who is disabled, said the woman told him she was going to take the TV, they began arguing and that the woman picked up the TV, telling him that if he tried to stop her she would hurt him.

Mayhall said he went to a neighbor's house to call police and that when he returned, the woman and the TV set were gone. He described the woman as between 26 and 35, tall and thin.

David Ball, 31, and Bill Whitley, 48, both of Pampa, were in critical condition Sunday at Dallas' Parkland Hospital with injuries suffered in a flash fire in a high-voltage electrical panel at the Celanese Chemical Co. in Pampa Friday. Don Lawrence, 32, and John P. Ball, 52, also of Pampa, were in serious condition Sunday at the Dallas hospital with injuries suffered in the fire. Walker Bird, 43, of Pampa, and Lilly Mayberry, 26, and Betty Saulsbury, 32, both of Borger, were listed in satisfactory condition Sunday at Highland General Hospital in Pampa with injuries suffered in the fire.

Baylor University Institute Head Dies

WACO (AP) — Sir Heinz Koeppler, a former assistant secretary of state in the English Foreign and Commonwealth Office, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack at a Waco hospital. He was 66.

Koeppler, who was knighted by Queen Elizabeth in 1977, was the head of Baylor University's Institute for the Study of the Interaction of Foreign and Domestic Affairs. He came to Baylor last fall.

He was the retired director of Wilton Park, a British Foreign Office sponsored center at Sussex, England, for the study of international relations.

Koeppler was born in Germany in 1912. He taught modern history at Oxford University and was a brigadier general in the British Army during World War II.

There will be a memorial service at Baylor, but the date and time has not yet been set. He will be buried in England.

AMENDMENT CRITICIZED

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers says a constitutional amendment mandating a balanced federal budget is "an idiotic thing." Charles Schultze told 300 Manhattan residents Saturday that an end to inflation depends not on instant cures, but on creating a "climate" of fiscal restraint. "We need to create that climate gradually, with some care and sophistication," Schultze said at a "20th Congressional District Community Conference" sponsored by Rep. Ted Weiss at Riverside Church. "It's silly to say we're going to kill it (inflation) overnight," he said.

Times of trial have this beauty . . . that they bring to light the concern and good will of friends.

Li'l Mam'selle Fashions Assure Entry Into 'A Beautiful Spring'

"We know you'll thrill at what you discover for Easter and for spring . . . at Li'l Mam'selle!"

"And we'd love to have you come in now and browse, for after all, the current selection is the most gorgeous presentation we believe we've ever been privileged to assemble at Li'l Mam'selle for the happy and active season related to Easter."

Long Dresses

There is an extremely nice selection at this time, including long dresses, casual and street apparel, the popular straight-leg jeans and tops to coordinate, and the prettiest ever in Easter dresses for the little girl.

Select with confidence that the fashion, quality and price is right at Li'l Mam'selle, whether the selection involves shorts and tops for girls and juniors, coordinates, blazers, jackets, vests, skirts, pants, etc., presented in colors and in summer whites.

Now in its eighth year, Li'l Mam'selle is located at 2147-A 50th St. (in Oakwood Center) and continues to specialize in up-to-the-minute fashion in quality lines, taken pride in stocking even the often hard-to-find sizes.

New lines are added to the already-extensive stock as need and fashion dictates.

Gift wrapping is available, and Li'l Mam'selle welcomes Visa and Master Charge purchases.

Setting The Mood

A trip to Li'l Mam'selle most certainly will put one in the Easter and vacation mood, as not only is the stock superb, but the dedicated and friendly staff has a genuine welcome awaiting.

They have chosen "the best of the new" in fashion, all in good taste, and they thoroughly enjoy seeing customers find just the item for which they have wished . . . at Li'l Mam'selle.

Ola Hamilton, longtime staffmember, is the very capable and friendly manager of the shop. Opal Jones, owner, is on the job, together with longtime staffmember Monta Beasley.

The stock continually has been expanded and upgraded under this ownership, management and staff.

And it is a friendly place in which to browse, visit and shop!

"Let us at this Oakwood Center store help you enter into a new season with apparel that pleases; the task has been made easy and economical at Li'l Mam'selle."

American Equipment & Trailer Firm Considers Needs Of Area's Industry

American Equipment & Trailer, Inc., 3707 Quirt Ave. in Lubbock, can well be proud of its policy and its record of serving industry (as well as serving the rancher, farmer, trucker, contractor and all).

In keeping with its alertness to area needs, American Equipment & Trailer stocks to meet today's (and tomorrow's) demands.

A very good example of this consideration is the line of Clement trailers stocked, with emphasis on the dump units that "dump with wheels on ground" for better stability. Truly, this is the aerospace trailer design.

Kept In Stock

See the 30 ft., 34 yd. units in stock right here in Lubbock, with other models available.

"If the need in your own industrial operation calls for a trailer with top stability, elimination of washboarding, cleaner dumping, strong arm top rail, wide-angle draft arms and decreased wind resistance, then let us introduce you to the 'Bonus Loader' dump trailers from Clement. Check with us, too, for the wide range of options to suit your hauling needs, such as the third axle, air-ride, air-lift unit, etc."

American Equipment & Trailer, Inc., is proud to include Clement among its quality products made available to area customers.

Galion Bodies

Galion body and hoist packages are another of the industrial lines for which American Equipment & Trailer is distributor.

By any comparison, Galion passes the test! Excellent for over-the-highway aggregate hauling, ideal for construction and batching work and for hauling and spreading stone, sand, gravel and other aggregates, the entire Galion body and hoist unit is manufactured and warranted by Peabody Galion. Featured are flared box-type side braces to give better side support and greater strength without added weight, reinforced double-acting tailgate that hinges top or bottom for greatest flexibility, and a four-position valve that offers two lowering speeds to allow lowering of a heavy load gently, or an empty body quickly.

Koenig Popular

Another fine product stocked by American Equipment & Trailer is the famous Koenig Serv-All Service Body with features that command respect.

With Koenig, you get additional usable storage space with the new full-height vertical rear door, and the storage area also includes galvanized steel adjustable shelves and dividers. All in all, it is designed for utility and years and years of rugged service. The Serv-All is manufactured with an electrically welded one-unit steel body. All edges are either rolled or folded for strength and safety.

Protection against theft is featured, as you can lock all your tools and other stored materials with tamper-proof paddle handle latches that come with weather protected cylinder locks.

'Known' Lines

Included in the large line-up of equipment at American Equipment & Trailer are other well known brand names . . . such as Midwest farm bodies, Tulsa winches, RO cranes, Wilson livestock and grain trailers, Great Dane refrigerated trailers, Bendix-Westinghouse air brake equipment, Michigan fleet gasoline tanks, tank installation kits, Henderson bulk bodies and spreaders . . . and more.

And the firm can help one with any special requirement.

Region-Wide

American Equipment & Trailer not only has large facilities in Lubbock, but also at 610 N. Grand in Amarillo and at 1400 West Overland Trail in Abilene.

Durability, Beauty, Cost Seen Among Arcadia Man-Made Stone Advantages

"Most likely you have observed and admired the use of Arcadia Stone in homes, businesses, yards or institutions in your neighborhood or community, wherever you live within the area.

"We at Arcadia Stone Manufacturing Co., 1922 Ave. E, phone 744-6640, Lubbock, invite your visits, inquiries and inspection. We would consider it a privilege to give a free estimate in your own situation."

"Individuals and contractors alike, throughout the region, have voiced enthusiasm for Arcadia Stone. This is no surprise, for after all, can you imagine a lightweight and durable man-made stone at a fraction of the cost of some other materials, and available in seven decorator colors?"

Full details of the product and services are available at Arcadia Stone Manufacturing Co., home-owned and home-operated by Jim Haynes who has constructed beautiful homes throughout the area, together with construction of fireplaces utilizing Arcadia Stone.

Arcadia stone has been used for exceptional beauty and warmth in numerous area situations . . . commercial and residential. It can be used wherever stone or masonry veneer is desired. It can be used to veneer complete homes or to enhance the quality of one's present residence.

Enduring Investment

Arcadia Stone is an enduring investment, whether for attractive fireplaces, for beautiful wall and floor tiles, for stepping stones, even the very popular exterior use on metal buildings. (Or interior walls for offices, as another practical and functionally-beautiful usage.)

Arcadia Stone is ideal for other interior ornamental work such as walls, arches, columns and planters; it affords the attractive way to add a distinctive new look to the home's interior.

The Lubbock firm has its own installation crews, or one can purchase the stone for "do-it-yourself" projects.

Adds Special Accent

Adaptable for either inside or exterior use, Arcadia Stone is flexible; it can be used on any sound surface including metal, wood, block and even sheetrock. It can add architectural beauty to shopping centers, commercial and professional buildings.

Maybe it is an entryway, a bath or a kitchen . . . or exterior landscaping and fences . . . whatever the situation, Arcadia Stone is an attractive accent.

Providing trailers for area needs, with stock trailers, jackknife units and all, Hale is proud to introduce and to keep in stock units to meet the specific need of the buyer.

Two-Horse Units

See the two-horse trailer featuring walk-through door at the front, new A-frame tongue, the spaciousness of 6 ft. 6 in. headroom, and all deluxe features standard. Each unit is comfortable, safe and easy to pull, and each is equipped with a safety lighting package.

Jackknives

The 500 Series jackknives are another most popular offering, available in lengths from 16 ft. to 30 ft. Such features as cross gates, escape door, four-wheel electric brakes are standard, and options are available. (Hale's safe, secure and convenient jackknife hook-up was designed by Bill Hale and through the years has proven itself to be among the best. It eliminates the need for costly landing gear. Get full details; see it at Hale.)

In Lubbock since 1956, Hale maintains a distribution center, retail sales, assembly plant and service-parts headquarters at its facilities on the Idalou Highway just northeast of Lubbock (Rt. 7, Box 429, phone 806-765-8956.)

Stan Howle, Lubbock native and with Hale for nine years, is manager, understanding trailers and area needs and preferences.

Hale trailers include units built for horses and other livestock, utility trailers, jackknife units, flatbeds and dump beds.

A full representative stock is maintained here, and units are available at the firm or from its West Texas and New Mexico dealers.

Service Department

A full service department is maintained, with service on all trailers, whether they were purchased from the firm or elsewhere.

Brake and light sales and installation are available, as is repainting.

Check the following that are among the features standard on every Hale trailer, adding up to Hale value:

A quality vinyl acrylic finish is applied to every Hale trailer. Before the finishing coat is applied, each trailer is smoothed and thoroughly cleaned. Then a primer coat is applied followed by the vinyl acrylic finish. Color selection is from nine beautiful standard colors. Two-tone or special paint colors are available on request.

Lamps are sealed for protection from moisture, and wiring is enclosed in conduit.

The tongue of 3-inch heavy-wall pipe construction and features positive Locking Bulldog coupler and easy-to-operate Bulldog Jack.

The heavy duty all-welded primary frame features heavy 3-inch by 3-inch angle iron with secondary cross members of 2-inch by 2-inch angle iron.

Tongue and grooved flooring spans the width of the trailer for utmost in strength and safety.

Heavy seven-leaf springs are designed to give the carrying capacity demanded of a stock trailer.

"May we have the pleasure of your visit, inquiry and inspection?"

EASTER PREFERENCES ACCORDED FULL ATTENTION IN SELECTIVE STOCK

Easter, Mother's Day, Graduation Considered Fully At Christmas Shoppe

Some months ago it was announced that The Christmas Shoppe in Cactus Alley had expanded to specialize in gifts and decor items for each holiday season throughout the year.

Arrangement of a "Jan's Holiday Corner" on ground level of The Christmas Shoppe enabled grouping of these items, increasing the already-extensive and already-appreciated services of the unique shop.

Now, when planning Easter, when thinking ahead to Mother's Day and to Graduation, one should discover personally just what is included in the expanded Christmas Shoppe now open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Thursday, Fridays and Saturdays weekly.

Specifically For Easter

For Easter, choose from the quality selection of stuffed animals including bunnies, ducks, chicks (some of which are musical);

And so-pretty Easter baskets.

Porcelain eggs, too, and those gorgeous Anri wooden collectible eggs, cystal eggs, even fabric eggs to be personalized with embroidery (a week notice is necessary for the embroidery orders).

For Mother's Day, Too

Music boxes, designed and selected especially for Easter and Mother's Day, are stocked.

There are live plants, too, great as gifts or for enhancing the decor of one's own home.

Select from the many puppets ... string puppets from Mexico, and the famous United States lines such as Possum Trot, Princess Soft Toys, etc.

Fine wood carvings from Bethlehem include "The Last Supper" and a fine goblet with the Last Supper carved into it.

There are collectors thimbles that start at $1 up to $26, likely a most appreciated gift of remembrance for Easter.

For Graduation, the Christmas Shoppe has a good stock of telephone rest music boxes, termed the neatest ever by teenagers. (You'll like these, for a certainty.)

Jan and her staff are happy to announce that the shop has been able to secure the Hummel Figurines by Goebel; these will be arriving in September, but one is invited to call to get your name on the list for your next collectible (We also have the information you need to join t e Hummel Collectible Club.)

"Jan not only stocks in a discriminating and customer-considering manner at the unique shop at 2610 Salem Ave., but she is happy to personally shop for you in the world's markets for particular items of your choosing. She is glad to aid in securing unusual items, related or not to the stock of The Christmas Shoppe, on a special order basis. What a service!"

The entire staff, including Jan, Ellen Snyder, Candy Schaudies and Diane Snyder, is most adept in rendering the customer services one appreciates . . . in every season.

"Wouldn't now be a great time to utilize the advantages of The Christmas Shoppe, for Easter, for Mother's Day, for Graduation? Remember, the shop now occupies both upstairs and downstairs quarters at the east entry of Cactus Alley, just south off the Brownfield Highway at 2610 Salem Avenue in Lubbock."

W.M. Smith Electric Stocks Vertical Hollow Shaft Motors

W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road in Lubbock, again makes news!

Thoroughly in keeping with its history of providing the products and services in its field, to best accomodate area industry and enterprise, Smith Electric takes pride in its latest announcement:

Vertical hollow shaft motors from Leroy Somer are now available and stocked.

Not just another "standard" motor, its features include higher thrust capacity, drip-proof enclosure with ventilating openings designed to minimize entry of rain and particles so that this type of motor is suitable for outside applications in relatively dry climates or sheltered locations;

End brackets are rigid grey iron castings machined with precision; the stator is of welded construction and consists of electric steel laminations, heat treated to improve interlamination insulation and to reduce iron losses.

The stator winding is carried out with synthetic enamel coverd wire, with the stator wire fully insulated from the core and between phases to give a true Class F system.

Consider the other superior features, too, that include 1.15 service factor, robust welded steel frame, heavy construction (compare weights), cooler motor, large double-gasketed conduit box for easy and safe connections, permanently installed lifting lugs, and extremely quiet operation.

"All of these features give you greater hp output and longer motor life" is the observation and promise of Smith Electric and Leroy-Somer.

Select from sizes of 40 hp to 200 hp., with units kept in stock at W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road.

GE Starters

Attention also is directed to the full-voltage combination starters, with sizes 1 through 5 in stock, from General Electric and stocked by Smith.

Features of the panels in brief, include reliable motor protection, modification selection, choice of narrow or wide case construction, wide variety of applications (great for irrigation pumping and may be used for oil well pumping and other uses);

Tamper-proof handle, wiring diagram and heater selection table mounted inside door; extra space, neoprene gasket to seal out dust, sand, rain and snow; large mounting bracket, threaded conduit hub, interchangeable fuse clips, dependable contactor, pilot devices with special conveniences, and other features that the folks at Smith Electric would appreciate explaining for your own benefits and application.

Other Products, Lines

(See the Smith folks, too, for the entire Chicago Pneumatic Equipment Division compressor line, Campbell-Hausfeld compressors and accessories, Gardner-Denver and Kellogg-American units; and the SECO overhead traveling bridge cranes, and for crane and hoist components and parts bearing the respected trademarks of Dresser Industries, Detroit, Wright, Demag and David Round.

Smith rebuilds all makes of compressors, from the smallest to largest.

Sales and service for all makes of hoists is another key segment of the business.

Motors

W.M. Smith electric is distributor for three major lines of electric motors: General Electric, U.S., and Baldor, in all sizes.

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

A staff of qualified mechanics and trouble shooters is maintained at all times.

Wire-in and installation of irrigation motors is another area-appreciated service provided by the company.

Personal Interest

Pick-up and delivery is provided, and service men are on call day or night. Facilities in the shop enable prompt attention and repair in any emergency need.

H.J. Witcher is manager of the West Texas operations of the company, opening the Lubbock office back in 1952! Steve Witcher is sales manager; O.D. Faulkner is parts manager; and Jim Cadzow is foreman.

These men know their products and business, and they welcome the opportunity of assisting you in your own industrial or farming operations with one or more of the many services and products for which the firm has become well known throughout the region.

Remember, sales and rentals of motors and generators is a popular service offered, as is repair and installation of electric motors, controls, rectifiers, pumps, transformers, etc., machine and metalizing, dynamic balancing and other services.

MONTEREY FURNITURE PROMISES REVELATION IN VALUE

Monterey Furniture Offers Top Lines At 'Low Overhead' Price

For furniture with style and craftsmanship, for proven savings, for convenience and still other benefits....it is Monterey Furniture in Lubbock!

Located in the heart of southwest Lubbock (on south side of Monterey Center) Monterey Furniture actually is a warehouse showroom, passing on to its customers the multiple advantages enabled by such a concept and operation.

Only first-line merchandise is stocked, and all is uncrated and placed on the floor upon arrival; none is stored in a warehouse elsewhere in the city.

All furniture is in good condition, all is selected for its quality and fashion...for lasting value.

No "seconds" are involved.

"It is a low-overhead type of operation, with the consequent savings passed on to you, the customer," is the word from Hal Rowe, manager since back in 1972.

Savings Emphasized

Monterey Furniture affords delivery service, but points out that "you can save by picking the items up yourself." Such consideration is one of the many reasons Monterey Furniture has been heralded region-wide as a store catering to the customer who appreciates savings, integrity and selection.

Brands To Trust

"Name" lines are noted throughout the large stock...such as Basset, Riverside, Lane, Kroehler, Sealy, Morning Glory, and more.

Furniture is the only business of the store...there are no appliances stocked.

Of course, mirrors and accessories, pictures and numerous decor items are stocked.

Attention is called to the good bedding lines, even bed frames are stocked in the various sizes.

And rockers include the big ones that are so desired and practical.

Wide Selection

From an occasional chair to a houseful of furniture, one can trade with confidence at Monterey Furniture at its super location.(easy access and scads of parking right at the store front) in Monterey Center on 50th Street in Lubbock.

Many items available are open stock.

One is invited to browse and even compare quality, style and prices, "proving to yourself that Monterey Furniture affords most for the money" with furniture for casual or elegant living.

Financing plans are available, as is layaway.

Monterey Furniture is open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays, with extended hours to 9 p.m. on Thursdays.

"For a first-line selection in a warehouse showroom type of operation, Monterey Furniture can open a whole new world of value and convenience. May we have the opportunityof proving it..to you?"

Stormaster Shelters Explained Key Consideration For Family

It is the season of the year when protection during windstorms or tornadoes comes into focus as an item of prime importance.

Weather reports, sightings of stormy clouds, even building destruction within a short drive of most anywhere on the South Plains can underscore the importance of the above statement.

So, consider this:

"Have you given your family the consideration of a Stormaster Shelter? If not, we invite full inquiry."

"In Lubbock and area, the Stormaster underground shelter protection can be speedily and easily secured by consulting with the Stormaster specialists at 3406 62nd St., phone 792-5977, who season after season have served most admirably, and who have been proven time after time.

Stormaster shelters are built right; they serve a definite need in the unsettled spring weather conditions of the South Plains; and they are backed with the professional understanding and integrity of their builder, Homer Ries.

Ries, the only authorized Stormaster builder in the South Plains and Panhandle, prides in the Stormaster and in its construction. A graduate in engineering, he appreciates the needs of the area and the quality of Stormaster. Mrs. Ries is a native of Lubbock; he is a longtime resident and both are graduates of Texas Tech.

Stormaster is not new in underground protection; it has been in business for over two decades in the Oklahoma City and Dallas areas.

The Stormaster unit is not pre-fab.

It is built in a choice of two sizes, 6 ft. by 8 ft., and the more popular family-size 8 ft. by 10 ft., with construction taking about three days, depending on the weather, of course, and involves digging the hole, setting forms, pouring cement, finishing with paint, benches and electrical outlet.

All concrete work is a one-pour operation with six-sack cement reinforced with paving mesh — no cold joints. It is guaranteed not to leak or seep. It is painted inside and outside and comes complete with seats, vents, electric box and special Stormaster doors.

Safety Factor

(The doors are so constructed that children may enter unescorted.) The extra-strength plywood door covered with galvanized metal is attached to a heavy steel frame which is embedded in the concrete. This waterproof door was designed especially for this shelter.

Stormaster construction qualifies for Title I financing.

For full information check now with Homer or Mrs. Ries at Stormaster of Lubbock, 3406 62nd St., phone 792-5977. If there is no answer, please keep calling, day or night. Part-time office help is on the job as well as Mr. and Mrs. Ries.

Business & Industrial Review

FOR LEADERSHIP IN HEALTH FOODS — Dee Justice and mother, Connie Gregory, owners-operators of the Well Body Shop in southwest Lubbock, relate a host of new situations (Grand Opening, prizes, 'auction' of pictured juicer, tremendously expanded stock), inviting visits there to discover just how very much the customer is being considered at the unique store in Security Park.

Expanded Juice Bar, Added Products, New Features Told At Well Body Shop

"Are you one of those already acquainted with the benefits of the fantastically-stocked Well Body Shop, Inc., at B-12 in Security Park, 3602 Slide Road, phone 793-1015?

"Whether a new customer, one who has heard of us but who has not yet visited our unique store, or if you are one of our already-satisfied customers, there is exciting news at this time:

(1) Well Body Shop is cooperating with participating merchants in Security Park for a "Grand Opening" extravaganza beginning April 9, with a free trip to Acupulco, Mexico, as grand prize. One is invited to register at the Well Body Shop.

(2) In conjuction with the celebration, Well Body Shop is conducting a auction-type opportunity for bidding on a valuble Phoenix Juicer, with bids accepted during celebration and with highest one getting this juicer.

Enlarged Juice Bar

(3) The so-popular Juice Bar is being expanded as an "extra consideration," and with new menus now printed listing 25 drinks available there!

Actually, there is so much going for the Well Body Shop that enumeration is difficult: so why not come on out and see for yourself.

Arab Envoys Quit Cairo As Begin's Visit Nears

League members in Baghdad clamped a political and economic boycott on Egypt, six Arab ambassadors left or were preparing to leave the Egyptian capital.

Saudi Arabian Ambassador Abdel Rahman Abal Khail and Tunisian Ambassador Habib Nouira were the first to depart in accordance with the call for an immediate withdrawal of chief envoys from Cairo.

Jordanian Ambassador Zoukan Hindawi and Kuwaiti Ambassador Suleiman Majid Al-Shahin also planned Sunday departures. Bahrain's ambassador will leave within 48 hours, diplomatic sources in Cairo said, and the United Arab Emirates announced it was pulling out its chief envoy.

Although the Baghdad conference did not amount to a total break in diplomatic relations immediately, Jordan announced Sunday that it is calling its entire diplomatic delegation home and cutting all diplomatic ties with Egypt.

Iran, a Moslem but not an Arab nation, is also considering severing links with Egypt for sealing the first Arab treaty with Israel, diplomatic sources in Tehran said.

When Begin arrives Monday, Egyptian dislike of Begin and Arab outrage over the peace treaty will keep his welcome a mere shadow of the one President Anwar Sadat got in Jerusalem 16 months ago.

Begin says he is coming as a friend, "to open my heart to every man, woman and child in Egypt." Egyptian officials and people in the street, however, seem little inclined to return the sentiment.

The average Egyptian, primed by the anti-Begin line in the press, speaks harshly of the Israeli leader, labeling him a former terrorist, a devious bargainer and a tactless orator.

"Postponing the visit would be a gesture of good will to Egypt," one Egyptian attuned to Sadat's thinking said.

Begin and Sadat talked by telephone Sunday. Israeli Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor denied reports that the Egyptian president asked Begin to postpone the trip.

Begin hopes the visit will persuade Israeli opponents of the treaty that Egypt and Israel indeed are at peace after 30 years of hot and cold war.

But Egypt has to contend with Arab opposition to the treaty, dramatized by Saturday's Arab ministers' decision to cut economic and political ties with Egypt, and shows little sensitivity to Begin's domestic difficulties.

The Baghdad Arab League conference also endorsed an immediate halt to Arab aid to Egypt, which has totaled $17 billion since 1973 with Saudi Arabia contributing $2 billion annually.

Sheikh Sultan Bin Ahmed Al Mualla, finance minister of the oil-rich United Arab Emirates, said in the Emirates' capital of Abu Dhabi it would take "a change in the Egyptian regime" for Arab aid to be restored.

The aid cut, voted at Baghdad was retroactive to the treaty's signing March 26, and Kuwaiti Finance Minister Abdul Rahman told a Beirut newspaper, Al Rai Al Aam, that Kuwait had virtually halted all economic aid to Cairo since that date.

The conference also endorsed the transfer of Arab League headquarters from Cairo, headquarters for the last 34 years, to Tunis, Tunisia. Tunisian newspapers bannered the news Sunday.

Deputy Premier Fikry Makram Ebeid, reacting to the Arab League's efforts to isolate Egypt in the Arab world, told Egypt's Parliament Sunday the nation "is prepared for all eventualities."

Another government statement rejected the Baghdad conference as "unlawful and illegitimate" because it was held outside the framework of the Arab League and was organized in a "flagrant violation" of the League charter. Last week Egypt announced it was suspending its membership in the League.

The Israeli Cabinet formally approved the treaty with Egypt including the agreements made in Washington and sources said it would go into effect as soon as a copy of the treaty was exchanged with Egypt.

Cabinet Secretary Arye Naor said Prime Minister Begin spoke by telephone with aides in Cairo helping to prepare the official state visit there, slated to begin Monday and end Tuesday.

Naor denied reports Sadat requested a postponement of the visit. "The Egyptians are insisting the visit take place," Naor said.

In an interview in Beirut's English language newspaper Monday Morning, Hani Al Hassan, a senior aide to PLO chief Yassar Arafat, said "We don't want to hit Arab interests but what the Americans own. American interests are many and we know them well.

"The days ahead — and they will be days of hellfire and brimstone — will show what we mean."

Soviet Society Drowns In Drink

MOSCOW (AP) — This morning, 30 to 40 percent of the Soviet workforce will be too drunk or too hung-over to put in a good day's work.

No special occasion — just an ordinary Monday morning.

This estimate by Soviet factory managers, published in the official press, is one of a series of startling statistics issued recently as part of this country's seemingly endless campaign against alcoholism.

"It is our worst problem," one Soviet official told a reporter.

Drunkenness is blamed for crime, divorce, accidents, inefficiency, juvenile delinquency, economic stagnation — most of the troubles that are acknowledged and discussed publicly here.

But both the reasons for mass alcoholism and its cure remain elusive.

The late Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev called drunkenness "one of the harmful remnants of the past" and said he was confident that under communism it would soon wither away.

That's still the party line, as expressed not long ago by Latvian Interior Minister Yanis Brolish: "In our country there are, and can be, no socio-economic causes of alcoholism."

Whatever the causes, it may be that the Soviet Union leads the world in alcoholism.

A study by the Harvard University Russian Research Center put per-capita consumption at 6.33 quarts of pure alcohol a year, compared with 4.75 quarts in France and the United States. The Soviet rate was estimated to be rising 5 percent a year.

Possibly reflecting the rising rate, the Russians themselves stopped publishing statistics on annual alcohol consumption in 1963.

But Soviet statistics published in newspapers and on television blame alcohol for three-fourths of all violent crime, two-thirds of serious industrial, traffic and household accidents, one-third of all sexual dysfunctions and nearly half the country's divorces.

Seventy percent of drownings and 45 percent of all poisonings are blamed on drinking.

Statistics gathered in the West show that Soviet factory and office workers spend 10 to 15 percent of their income on drink.

Two Soviet sociologists writing in an economic journal bypassed ideology for some serious analysis of the problem.

"One prime cause is the need to release tension, the desire to shed the load of obligatory rules of conduct," wrote Stanislav Strumlin and M. Sonin.

In the same journal, writer Vasili Belov blamed drunkenness on "the primitive level of spiritual life in some people and their lack of any clear moral ideal, the psychological and material debasement of their jobs and the monotony of their daily life."

Attempts to lick the problem include a growing program of clubs similar to Alcoholics Anonymous in the West, providing such activities as communal gardening.

Some factories have set up special programs to cure drunkenness, backed by the threat of loss of benefits if the problem continues.

A persistent drinker at Moscow's Transmash factory, for example, can be reprimanded, transferred to a lower-paying job, lose his bonuses and even have his name removed from the waiting list for an apartment.

Courts are being urged to be tougher on drinkers. A widespread publicity campaign includes posters and newspaper articles, as well as a striking documentary television program featuring discussions with alcoholics about their problems.

Why doesn't the Soviet government, which controls all spheres of life, simply restrict liquor sales?

One answer is that the people simply wouldn't stand for it. Hard drinking is too much a part of the Russian way of life, with shotglasses of raw vodka punctuating every occasion including, as the newspaper Izvestia says, "birthdays, Saturdays, Sundays, paydays, the arrival of relatives, vacations, purchases, sales...."

Another answer was offered by dissident physicist Andrei D. Sakharov, who once wrote that although drunken workers may harm the economy, "on the other side, in this way, people are calmer and there are fewer demands and the money is pouring back into state pockets."

And it pours.

The tax on a half-liter bottle of vodka — about a half-quart — makes up for 80 percent of its price of about $6. Liquor taxes in 1972, the most recent year which figures are available, raised $25 billion for the government.

Mennonites' Ranch Slated For Auction

SEMINOLE (UPI) — A 6,400-acre ranch intended to provide a living for hundreds of Mennonite immigrants from Canada and Mexico is scheduled for auction Tuesday.

The settlers, who two years ago banked on the arrival of other Mennonites and the economic transfusion they would provide, were left with staggering principal and interest payments when the second wave of immigrants was barred from entering the U.S.

Weather problems and their failure to secure water rights on all the acreage in their sprawling ranch presaged foreclosure.

As of Feb. 15 — when they defaulted on a $225,037 land payment — the Mennonites effectively lost the land.

But the default actually affected only a small number of the settlers since most of the religious group — accustomed to self-reliance and the practice of a fundamentalist religion — had left the 10-section 70 Ranch southwest of Seminole months ago.

The remaining small group of Mennonites who hoped to stay out of the city and on the land glumly accepted foreclosure last week.

"I sure hate to see this happen," Peter Bergen, the small group's unofficial leader, said. "We worked long and hard for that land, but now there's just nothing we can do about it."

Although most of the Mennonites had left the ranch, about 650 of them still live in the area and plan to stay, provided legislation that would make them permanent residents is passed in the Congress this year.

Though their hopes to stay in America seemed in jeopardy some months ago, virtually all the family heads now have gained jobs that will ensure them and their dependents permanent resident status.

The Lamesa National Bank and Dennis Nix, a Lamesa farmer who sold the Mennonites the land, officially foreclosed on the land in February. Unsolicited, a couple of investors notified Bergen in February that they might provide funds to help the settlers make their overdue payments. The money failed to appear, however.

Seminole attorney John Shepherd, who has represented the Mennonites in the past, said the auction Tuesday is the legal way for Nix to reclaim his land.

"The deed of trust serves as a mortgage," he said, "and when a payment is missed, the note is accelerated. The bank can call in all the outstanding debt instead of just the one missed payment."

But that applies to a potential buyer, too, Shepherd said, and the payment must be made in cash Tuesday.

If the land can be sold above its original purchase price, the Mennonites will be paid the amount over the original cost, Shepherd said.

If there are no buyers Tuesday, a second auction could be scheduled in May.

Urgent Actions Mulled

breaking off of contract talks between the two sides late Saturday. The union's old contract expired at midnight Saturday. No further negotiations are expected for several days.

There were early reports of strikes in a dozen states in all sections of the country. The full extent of the walkouts was unlikely to be known until the regular work week began on Monday, however.

Gerald Kasier, president of the 12,000-member Local 100 in Cincinnati, said, "Not every terminal is striking, just selected ones. They (union officials in Washington) gave us what terminals they wanted us to strike," Kasier said.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, seeking to lessen the impact of a strike, said there was an "urgent and immediate need" for alternate sources of transportation. The commission said it would grant temporary permits to "all persons seeking to supply motor service."

A spokesman said the effect of the action would be to "let anyone carry anything anywhere if they are a qualified trucker."

Under normal circumstances, the trucking industry is heavily regulated by the ICC, which sets rates and gives companies permission to haul certain types of cargo on specified routes. Spokesman Douglas Baldwin said the commission approved its emergency action unanimously on Friday in the event a strike developed. "We didn't want to get blindsided," he said.

Negotiators for the union and industry agreed to remain in contact with federal mediators, although there was no word on when the talks would resume.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz, who had kept the two sides bargaining day and night for much of a week in a drive for final agreement, said the negotiators had come "awfully close" to reaching agreement.

Parkland Burn Unit Lists Fire Victims' Conditions

DALLAS (AP) — Four men from Pampa injured in a flash fire in a Panhandle chemical plant were in intensive care today in the Parkland Hospital burn unit, but only one of the victims remained in critical condition.

A hospital spokesman said Bill Whitley, 48, was in critical condition. Don Lawrence, 32, was taken off the critical list but was still in serious condition. The other victims, John P. Ball, 52, and Ball's son, David Ball, 31, remained in serious condition.

Three other victims remained hospitalized in Amarillo.

In Pampa, officials of the Celanese Chemical plant sought the cause of the fire in a high-voltage electrical panel that injured a total of 11 persons Friday. Workers were installing the panel, which controls the water-cooling system for chemical boilers in the plant, when a spark jumped from the panel.

"Fire is a misleading term. It was not a continuous fire. It was just a huge arc of great energy, and that's what burned them," according to Herb Reed of Dallas, manager of communications for the company.

Several of the victims had to be pulled from the panel, according to Department of Public Safety officer Jerry Oragaft, who said the four most seriously burned were "black from head to toe."

An Amarillo hospital spokesman later said the four were covered by an oil used on the panel switching mechanism, and that the lubricant made the burns appear more serious.

The four were taken first to Highland General Hospital in Pampa, transferred to Amarillo and then airlifted to Parkland Hospital here.

Plant spokesman Al Miller said, "It was either a workman's miscalculation or a water leak that caused the electrical failure."

The plant employs 900 workers, including contractors and subcontractors. The electrical flash occurred in an area under expansion, about 300 to 400 feet from the plant's chemical-processing area.

At a hospital in Amarillo and listed in "serious but satisfactory" condition were Walker Bird, 43, of Pampa; Lilly Mayberry, 26, of Borger; and Betty Saulsbury, 32, of Borger. Treated and released at a Pampa hospital were George Burger, 55, of Pampa; Tim Dover of Pampa; Jana Rogers of Pampa; and Thelma Mayberry of Borger.

President Visits Reactor; Little Radiation Noted

Many residents decided to flee anyway.

"I'm the mayor of a ghost town," Mayor Kenneth Myers of Goldsboro said. Goldsboro is one mile from the Susquehanna River plant which has been spewing low-level radiation since an accident Wednesday. The town normally has a population of about 600.

Bubble Concerns Explained

The bubble, located in the top of the sealed reactor dome, contains hydrogen and small amounts of oxygen. Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials agree the oxygen content is increasing, but they differ on how fast and on how high a level must be reached before the situation becomes critical.

If the hydrogen and oxygen explode, the blast could blow off the head of the reactor vessel which could, in turn send radiation into the atmosphere.

One of the options under consideration by the NRC is allowing the bubble to expand so it could be removed through the cooling water system. But this creates the spectre of exposing the uranium-filled fuel rods which then might overheat, threatening a disastrous meltdown which would be even worse than an explosion.

Bubble Calculations Vary

A statement issued by the NRC in Washington on Sunday said that calculations by Metropolitan Edison Co., operator of the plant, on the size of the gas bubble "continue to vary."

The statement said there had been "no substantial change in the primary system temperature and pressure."

Dr. Norman Rasmussen, nuclear physicist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" that "if the hydrogen burns, there'll be no problem. If you get an explosion big enough to break something open, then you would release some radioactivity for sure. The amount of radioactivity is small compared to the worst accident ... because the fuel has not melted...."

At its worst, and under the worst weather conditions, a meltdown could contaminate thousands of square miles with radiation.

Debt Debate Plods While Funds Fade

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While Congress debates whether to balance the federal budget, the Treasury is running out of money. The day of reckoning is Monday.

Unless Congress resolves the dispute then, the Treasury says the U.S. government will be unable to meet its financial obligations Tuesday.

As one Treasury spokesman put it: "We'll be out of business."

The budget-balancing dispute has delayed enactment of a bill to raise the national debt ceiling from $798 billion to $830 billion and extend it through Sept. 30.

As a result, the ceiling reverted to its permanent level of $400 billion at midnight Saturday.

That means the government no longer has authority to borrow. With the federal government in deficit — it has been in the red for 18 of the last 20 years — the government lives by continual borrowing.

The effects of the congressional delay already are being felt:

— The Treasury announced it would halt sale of U.S. savings bonds Monday.

— The delay forced the Treasury last week to postpone five sales of securities totaling more than $10 billion. Officials estimated that when these sales finally are made, they will cost the taxpayers $34 million in higher interest rates. Another $6 billion sale scheduled for Monday was postponed.

— Also beginning Monday, cash coming into the Social Security, Civil Service and other trust funds cease to earn interest, a further loss to taxpayers.

The government has made various financial shifts to raise operating cash, but the big problem would come if Congress failed to reach agreement Monday.

As a Treasury statement put it: "Present cash projections confirm Secretary (Michael) Blumenthal's statement on March 12 that without an increase in the temporary debt ceiling, the Treasury will be unable to meet its obligations on Tuesday, April 3."

About $8 billion in Social Security checks due nearly 35 million Americans on Tuesday already are in the mail. The Treasury would not say what their status would be if Congress fails to act.

In the past, Congress has let the debt ceiling expire by as much as several days, and the government was able to juggle funds to avoid financial default.

The whole problem started because advocates of a balanced federal budget in both the Senate and House decided to use the debt ceiling bill as a vehicle for their cause.

Shooting Kills Plainview Man

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Plainview police Sunday night were continuing their investigation into the weekend shooting death of a city man by his juvenile son.

Capt. Riley Rogers of the Plainview Police Department said officers responding to a call at 12:03 a.m. Sunday arrived at a residence west of the city's downtown section to find the man shot once in the lower back.

Justice of the Peace Glenn Stone ruled the man dead at the scene.

Stone has ordered an autopsy.

According to police reports, the shooting incident capped a long-standing family disturbance.

Apparently, Capt. Rogers said, the man was having an altercation with his wife when the 15-year-old boy shot him with a hunting rifle.

Services for the victim are pending with Lemons Funeral Home.

Argentina Proposed For Shah's Exile

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi wants to settle in Argentina and friends of the former Iranian ruler have contacted government officials here to find out whether he would be welcome, the newspaper La Nacion said Sunday.

Argentine government sources would neither confirm nor deny the report.

The shah left Tehran Jan. 16, a few weeks before the takeover of the government by revolutionary followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The monarch and his wife, Empress Farah, spent six days in Egypt and then flew to Morocco as guests of King Hassan II.

They and two of their children flew last Friday to the Bahamas, where Bahamian government officials said the monarch intends to stay for about three weeks before moving elsewhere.

La Nacion said the Argentine military government of President Jorge R. Videla, before deciding whether the shah should be allowed to settle here, is consulting with other nations to test international reaction.

The newspaper, quoting unnamed diplomatic sources, said the former Iranian ambassador in Washington, Ardeshir Zahedi, had called on an unidentified Argentine to find out what reception the shah would get from the government.

Woman Campaigns For Legalized Prostitution

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Margo St. James, ex-hooker, licensed private investigator, sister of a gospel singer and hopeful grandmother, says she's willing to do anything — even run for president in 1980 — for the legalization of the world's oldest profession.

"I'm willing to be as theatrical as need be to do it. I have even been thinking about running for the presidency (in 1980) on the Republican ticket," said the founder of Call Off Your Old Tired Ethics (COYOTE), a San Francisco-based group dedicated to the legalization of prostitution.

"We want the presidential candidates to address this issue in 1980. If they are forced to look at this issue, they will look at abortion, child care and the other women's issues," Miss St. James added.

The outspoken group plans to call attention to their cause at the Democratic and Republican national conventions next year. "We're going to be quite disruptive," she promised.

Miss St. James claims many of society's ills — sexual assaults and theft and violence against hookers and their customers — would be lessened if prostitution is decriminalized. That's already been shown, she said, in many Western European countries. It would, she says, also eliminate the male pimps who feed off of prostitutes and allow the hookers to make a living.

And she adds that the feminist campaign to raise the status of women will suffer as long as a male-dominated society relegates prostitution to a demeaning, illegal level.

"Unless we legalize the sexual services prostitution provides to over half of the men in this country ... and recognize her as a worker, we (women) will all be disadvantaged. Even those in straight jobs," she said. "Prostitution laws are the means by which the double standard is enforced in this country."

Miss St. James, now 41, was a divorced, 25-year-old San Francisco cocktail waitress in 1962 when she was arrested and convicted for prostitution. She claims she was innocent at the time and attended law school for two years until she got the conviction overturned on appeal.

But the conviction, she said, turned her to prostitution for the next "two to three years."

"That official labeling as a prostitute is what pushed me over the edge. All my cocktail waitressing jobs went out the window and I became unemployable. So I started turning a few tricks," she said. "I really got bored with it and dropped out. I'm still unemployable, even though I won on appeal."

She became interested in prostitutes' rights in the late 1960s and formed COYOTE about five years ago. She also founded San Francisco's bizarre, infamous Hooker's Ball. COYOTE's chief fund-raising activity.

Miss St. James now makes her living — which she claims is never more than $6,000 per year — by championing her cause through speaking engagements and articles. She uses her investigator's license infrequently on rape cases. She was in San Antonio for the 10th National Conference on Women and the Law.

She owns no car, lives in her office and reports that she's happily heterosexual — "I have a 27-year-old lover. For 18 months now — that's a record."

She also admits she's ready for her married 24-year-old son to give her a grandchild. Two of her biggest supporters are her mother and her gospel-singing sister — "I see her as a crusader and she sees me as a crusader," she said.

Does she really think Americans will ever legalize prostitution?

"It will take just about as long as abortion did, about 10 years," she said. "We'll probably have to do it through the courts."

Her idea of legalized prostitution does not include government-regulated licensing of brothels.

"Any kind of licensing scheme is abusive. We don't want government regulating it any more than they would regulate any other cottage industry."

Many hookers, she said, engage in prostitution only occasionally for a few years. "Why should we license these people, brand them and force them into the life longer?" she asked.

"We don't want the (government-regulated) brothel system. It sets up a landlord system that is exploitive. Customers also don't want to go to one area or one huge hotel. Most of them are married and want to maintain their anonymity."

Cooperative brothels operated by prostitutes are one possibility, she said.

Miss St. James does agree there should be a legal age limit. "Twenty-one is the proper age limit for someone to be involved in sexual services industry," she said. "But the customer will be making the laws and that's never gonna go. They want the younger women, so it would probably be 18."

ADVOCATES LEGALIZED PROSTITUTION — Margo St. James, ex-prostitute and head of a group dedicated to the legalization of prostitution, said Saturday in San Antonio that she might run for president in order to advance her cause. (AP Laserphoto)

Clements Says Budget Writers 'Playing Games'

AUSTIN (AP) — House budget writers, accused by Gov. Bill Clements of "playing dangerous games," plan to finish their version of a $20 billion state appropriation bill this week.

The House Appropriations Committee expects to finish its "mark-up" sessions Wednesday.

It will formally vote on its bill April 9, committee staffers say, with the delay occasioned by the need to print the results of its deliberations before it can act.

The Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, is believed to be a couple of weeks away from approving its version of the general appropriation bill.

Bill Wells, assistant director of the Legislative Budget Board and clerk of the House committee, said the House bill will be less than the $20.7 billion recommended by the LBB.

But the difference won't be as great as the 2 percent sought by Speaker Bill Clayton or the $1 billion recommended by Clements, said Wells.

The House committee has done considerable paring and juggling with the spending recommendations made by other House committees, which reviewed requests made by state agencies.

For instance, the House Human Services Committee wanted to increase the budget for the Texas Department of Human Resources by $278 million over the LBB recommendation. The appropriations committee lopped out all but $17 million of the increase.

In another action, $1 million was cut from recommended spending for mental health and mental retardation by dropping a new institution for the Galveston-Houston area and adding 100 beds to existing ones.

Clements issued a bluntly worded statement Friday saying legislative committees were "playing dangerous games" in recommending spending increases that might eat up the state surplus and anticipated growth revenue.

He criticized what he called a tentative decision of the appropriations committee to grant statewide elected officials a $1,000-a-year raise on top of the 5.1 percent cost-of-living increase all state employees would get.

Clements said he wanted no raise at all, and "certainly, other officials, already in comfortable pay brackets, should not get percentage salary adjustments exceeding those of their employees."

But Wells said the extra $1,000 raise, recommended by the LBB, has not been settled.

"They haven't decided on anything. That is a very hot issue in here whether to do it or not," he said.

Clements also complained of committee plans to raise district judges' salaries over the next two years by 14.8 percent and said it was interesting that legislative retirement benefits are tied to judges' pay.

Wells said the 14.8 percent raise would "put us in the middle of the other states" in judicial pay.

Texan's Execution Set

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — John Louis Evans III met with his mother, his brother and his sister for five hours. It was probably their final family reunion.

Barring an eleventh-hour appeal, Evans, a 29-year-old Texas drifter, will be electrocuted Friday for killing a Mobile pawnshop owner during a holdup.

Evans, whose father died about five years ago, met with family members Saturday. They were accompanied by a priest, the Rev. Kevin Duignan, pastor of St. Robert's Church at Atmore, who said in a recent interview: "As far as I'm concerned, John is all right with his God. ... I love him as a son, as a son who needs a father's love."

Leaving Evans on death row, the family prayed at a church and planned to return to their home at Beaumont Sunday.

"We came here because we love him," said Mark Evans, the condemned man's 20-year-old brother. "We really wish to have no comment at all."

If no court intervenes, Evans will be the first person executed in this country since Gary Gilmore died before a Utah firing squad on Jan. 17, 1977. No one has been electrocuted in Alabama since 1965.

Evans said he wants to die instead of spending the rest of his life in prison. He says he has an "obsession with freedom. If I can't have it, I'd rather be dead."

Prison officials have set aside an area about one-half mile from the prison for use by any death penalty protesters.

Jerry Pogue of Mobile said the southern Alabama chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference would protest by marching and driving the approximately 40 miles from Mobile to the prison, where a prayer vigil was planned. Pogue said he was a legal researcher for the SCLC. But other SCLC officials in the state said they weren't aware of plans for a protest march.

THE VICTIM — Edward Assad Nasser, shown in this undated photo, was killed during a robbery in his Mobile, Ala., pawn shop Jan. 5, 1977. John Louis Evans III was convicted of the crime and is scheduled to die in the electric chair Friday. Evans says he is anxious to get it over with. (AP Laserphoto)

HEARTLINE: I have a complaint against a company which I think would come under the Food and Drug Administration. Can you tell me how to file my complaint? — K.F.

Consumers sometimes come across a food, drug, device, cosmetic or hazardous substance that they have reason to believe is mislabeled, unsanitary or otherwise harmful.

When you report a legitimate grievance to the Food and Drug Administration, you are performing a public service. The information you provide can and often does lead to detection and correction of a violation of the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act or the Hazardous Substance Act. The FDA cannot take action solely on the basis of your complaint, but it will investigate your complaint promptly and act in accordance with the requirements of the law if a violation is established.

Here are some guidelines to follow in reporting suspected violations of the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

You may refer your complaint in writing or by phone to the nearest field office or resident-inspection station. FDA has 17 district offices and 95 resident-inspection stations throughout the country. In most major cities, you can find the addresses of the nearest FDA office in the telephone directory under. Government, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Food and Drug Administration. You may wish to write directly to the Food and Drug Administration, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20852

Report your problem by the following method:

1. Report your grievance promptly, giving your address, telephone number and directions to residence or place of business.

2. State clearly what appears to be wrong.

3. Describe the label of the product and give any code marks that appear on the container. (In the case of canned food, these are usually embossed into or stamped on the lid of the can.)

4. Give the name and address of the store where the article was bought and the date of purchase.

5. If any injury is involved, see a doctor at once.

6. Save whatever remains of the suspect product or the empty container for your doctor's reference or possible examination by FDA.

7. Hold any unopened container of the product bought at the same time.

8. Also report the suspect product to the manufacturer, packer or distributor shown on the label of the product and to the store where you bought it.

HEARTLINE: I am 62 1/2 years old and have been drawing Social Security disability since 1975. Now I am to be re-examined and I'd like to know if they find me capable to do gainful work, can I change to my regular Social Security retirement or do I have to go back to work and earn more quarters? — W.K.

One of the requirements for both Social Security disability and retirement is you must be fully insured under Social Security. Since you have been drawing disability, you are fully insured. And, since you are age 62, you are eligible for retirement. So, yes, if you are found to be no longer disabled by Social Security, you can apply for retirement benefits and do not have to go to work.

Tech Team Plans Park At Junction

Texas soon may have a new state park and a group of Texas Tech University students will help with its planning during a two-week course at the TTU Center in Junction this summer.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has agreed to permit a team of Texas Tech students to develop plans for a park site four miles south of Junction. Students ultimately will develop a master plan of data maps and documents to be presented to the commission, which may use all or portions of it in making a presentation to the Texas Legislature for approval.

According to project instructor Lawrence B. Zuercher of the park administration and landscape architecture faculty, the class is unique in the that it calls for an interdisciplinary design team from architecture, landscape architecture, wildlife management, park administration, journalism, civil engineering, archology, history and geology areas.

Pope Plans Visit To Shrine Of Black Madonna

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (AP) — One of the main stops on Pope John Paul II's tour of his Polish homeland in June will be the shrine of the Black Madonna. The icon of a dark-skinned Virgin Mary and the child Jesus, according to belief, turned back a Swedish invasion in the 17th century and to this day miraculously cures the ill.

One recent cure attributed to the Madonna has reinforced the shrine's tradition as a Polish religious and nationalistic symbol.

It has been cherished by Poles since the late 14th century but its fame as a symbol of Polish national spirit dates back to December 1655.

According to legend, the forces of King Karl X Gustav of Sweden had been besieging the Jasna Gora Monastery in this southern Poland city for four weeks and the monks were running out of provisions.

The legend continues: Rather than surrender, the monks led by Prior Augustin Kordecki carried the icon around the walls of the monastery in a procession. A Swedish archer shot an arrow which pierced the painting under the Madonna's right eye. With that, the archer fell dead and his comrades turned and fled. King Jan Kazimierz then declared the Virgin Mary to be the queen of Poland.

Over the centuries, about 100 miraculous cures have been attributed to the icon, which many Poles believe was painted by St. Luke. However, art historians attribute the work to an anonymous 14th century Italian of the Siena school.

The most recent cure attributed to the icon was last January. According to affidavits at the monastery, a 29-year-old woman was cured of multiple sclerosis, a crippling disease.

"I had a dream,, and I saw the Blessed Virgin Mary, who told me to go to her shrine at Jasna Gora," Janina Lach says in one affidavit. "I felt I had to go and I traveled there on Jan. 27, 1979.

"During the Mass on Sunday, Jan. 28, I saw a strong light emanating from the Black Madonna painting. I got up, letting my crutches fall. I do not remember much more, but after Mass I walked out without any help."

A nun, Sister Raphaela Marek who had helped Mrs. Lach walk on crutches into the church, said in her affidavit: "She was radiant. During the Gospel, when everybody stands up, she did likewise, letting her crutches fall. She stood and then knelt by herself, without any help.

"On her way to church I had to support her all the time. She could barely hobble on her two crutches.

"After the Mass she just walked out. I ran to help her, but she waved me away."

The last previous miracle attributed to the painting was in 1951, when a paralyzed man was said to have regained the use of his arms and legs, but this could not be publicized in that rigid Stalinist period, the monks said.

They added that they had no desire to publicize Mrs. Lach's cure, but decided to make the affidavits by her and witnesses available for scrutiny by the public.

The monks said Mrs. Lach, a divorced mother of two children, had been suffering from muscular sclerosis for five years and had been receiving a state pension as a total invalid.

After the Mass on Jan. 28, Mrs. Lach went to the sacristy and the officiating priest called Father Melchior, a monk assigned to document miracles.

"I saw the lady," Father Melchior said in an interview with The Associated Press. "She said she had been miraculously healed and wanted to leave her crutches in church as a remembrance. But I persuaded her to take one at least in case she should feel weak or faint on her way out.

"The next day she brought the other crutch to church and said she doesn't need them any more."

Mrs. Lach went back to her home in Lodz, and three days later Father Melchior was sent by the prior to see how she was doing.

"She was romping about the house in perfect health," Father Melchior said. "She even lifted up her children one by one, to show how strong she is.

"We called three doctors who came and pronounced her cured. However, since she was getting an invalid's pension from the state, she will have to undergo a full examination.

"The medical board then determines whether or not she is still eligible for the pension."

He quoted Mrs. Lach as saying she would happily give up her pension and go to work to support her children, Eva, 7, and Adam, 5. She also gets alimony from her ex-husband.

The Jasna Gora Monastery, on a hill above the city, was built in 1382 by the Pauline Fathers, an order founded in 1215 in Italy. The order also has a monastery in Doylestown, Pa.

Millions visit the shrine every year and throngs are expected when the first Polish pope comes here on his visit home June 2-10.

PLO Official Rejects Recognition Of Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A top Palestine Liberation Organization official Sunday rejected President Carter's offer to work with the PLO if it accepts a U.N. resolution calling for recognition of Israel.

Hani al-Hassan, political adviser to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, also reiterated Arafat's threat to attack American interests in the Mideast and Europe.

"The days ahead — and they will be days of hellfire and brimstone, very difficult days — will show what we mean," he told Beirut's English-language weekly magazine Monday Morning.

Al-Hassan said the PLO will "never accept 242," referring to U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which calls for recognition of Israel by its Arab neighbors in exchange for Israeli return of occupied Arab land.

President Carter has said the United States, which has long refused official dealings with the PLO, would work with the Palestinian movement if it accepts Resolution 242 and thereby recognizes Israel's right to exist.

Most Arab governments have accepted the resolution as a basis for a Mideast peace, but the PLO charter calls for the abolition of the Jewish state and its replacement by a secular state.

"Carter must now realize that he must recognize the PLO unconditionally, because we will never recognize Resolution 242," al-Hassan said.

Al-Hassan, who also heads the PLO office in Tehran, asserted that the guerrillas would punish Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Israel and the United States for the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

"Attacking American interests does not mean blowing up an oil well in Kuwait or Saudi Arabia," he said. "We don't want to hit Arab property, but what the Americans own."

He indicated that the guerrillas will attack American interests in Europe, saying that "in 1971, for instance, a computer plant was hit in Hamburg. That was part of America's interests."

"Carter has challenged us, and I believe that he and (Israeli Prime Minister Menachem) Begin will find out that the Palestinian revolution has reached a stage where it is capable of facing the United States of America."

Al-Hassan claimed Carter was trying to persuade the PLO to start a dialogue with the United States without Soviet involvement. That, he insisted, is "something the Americans will never be able to do."

"The Americans are trying to lure the Palestinians away from their allies, to facilitate anti-Palestinian action at a later stage," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In 1969, while he was in the service, my son started a mutual fund plan of $25 a month for 15 years. In 1969, the value of the fund's shares was $14.18. Today, it is $14.43. Your column has cited mutual funds for "growth." Isn't this particular fund showing a poor record of growth for a 10-year period?

My son is now 30. What would be the hazard if he were to drop this fund and enter a different one?

A. Yes, it's a mighty poor record of growth. The fund you named in your letter has been one of the poorer performers of all mutual funds. Although some have done worse, most have done better — some much better.

It's clear that your son signed up for a "contractual plan" calling for payments over the 15-year period. Contractual plans have big "front-end loads" — commission charges. In the typical contractual plan, 50 percent of the first year's payments go to pay commissions and, after that, the commission bite drops to about 4 percent.

This column has consistently warned about the heavy cost of putting money into contractual plans. It has also cautioned that there is no guarantee of growth in mutual funds. The noun "growth" has always been modified here by adjectives such as "potential" or "hopeful."

All this, of course, is water over the dam as far as your son is concerned. Considering that fund's miserable performance, he wouldn't take on any "hazard" by stopping his investments in that fund, redeeming the shares he now owns and putting his money to work elsewhere — as long as he doesn't pick another contractual plan.

Tell him to look at the "no-load" mutual funds, whose shares can be purchased without any commission. The salesperson who put him into that contractual plan 10 years ago walked off with the bulk of the front-end load your son paid. No-load funds don't have salesmen. No salesmen, no commission. It's as simple as that.

• • •

Q. How can a person judge a mutual fund's growth potential, before investing money?

A. You can't — for sure. You can look at a particular fund's record of past performance and compare it to other funds. That will tell you where the fund has been — but not where it's going. The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission sees to it that each fund's prospectus prints the "hedge clause" that past performance is no guarantee of future results.

Just the same, past performance — what some of my horse-playing friends would call a "track record" — is the most important thing the average investor looks at before picking a mutual fund.

You can also look at the fund's "management" — the people who run the fund and provide investment advice as to what stocks it should buy and sell. But stock-picking is far from an exact science. So, don't be overwhelmed by management names.

• • •

Q. I read in the paper that the federal government was going to pass a law doing away with the interest "penalty" a person has to pay for cashing a long-term savings certificate before it reaches maturity. Has this been passed?

A. No. If you cash a savings certificate issued by a bank and insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. or one issued by a savings and loan association and insured by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. before that certificate reaches maturity, you suffer an interest penalty.

Both FDIC and FSLIC regulations stipulate that the penalty is the loss of three months' interest and the reduction of interest for the balance of the time the certificate was held to the regular savings account rate paid at the particular bank or savings and loan association.

Lately, there has been some agitation in Congress to change this. But, remembering that our law-givers often move at the moral equivalent of a snail's pace, don't hold your breath.

Impact Statement Due On Coal Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has announced that a final environmental impact statement has been filed for proposed strip mining by Spring Creek Coal Co. on federal land in Big Horn County, Mont.

Under Spring Creek's modified proposal, the company would mine 184 million tons of coal from 1,400 acres over 25 years instead of the 243 million tons from 1,850 acres proposed in the original plan. The company scaled back its plan after state officials objected to he original.

Minorities Threaten Iran's Islamic Revolution

EDITOR'S NOTE — Iran's Islamic revolution has sparked mini-revolutions within itself. Five minority groups demand autonomy, and the future of the new Islamic republic may depend on how it resolves the issue. Here is a report on the Turkomans, Turks, Kurds, Arabs and Baluchis, whose ethnic ties reach into five neighboring nations.

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Five ethnic minorities, seeking to retain their cultural identities, pose a major threat to Iran's Islamic revolution.

About a third of Iran's 36 million people belong to these groups, which inhabit strategically located and fertile areas crucial to the economy.

The minorities — Arabs, Baluchis, Kurds, Turks and Turkomans — have their own customs and languages. Four are Sunni Moslems in a land dominated by the Shiite sect. The Turks in Iran are largely Shiite.

Repressed for years, their common goal is autonomy, the freedom to teach their own languages in addition to Persian in public schools, and the right to select their own local governments. They also want the government in Tehran to invest most of the income derived from their respective provinces back into their depressed areas.

Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's provisional government, faced with armed rebellion, has granted a measure of autonomy to two of the most vociferous minorities — the Kurds and Turkomans. Concessions are expected to be made to other minorities.

Under the now-ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the minorities were kept in line by a strong military presence. Minority leaders were either jailed or exiled. Movements were put down by force. The central government also kept them powerless by draining off their economies, keeping these autonomy-minded provinces underdeveloped.

But once the monarchy collapsed and the army disbanded under the weight of a Islamic uprising Feb. 12, the minorities took action.

First to move were the 4 million Kurds who live in northwestern Iran, near the borders of Turkey and Iraq. A minor incident sparked four days of fighting against government forces in the provincial capital of Sanandaj. Two hundred persons were killed and hundreds wounded.

A cease-fire was arranged after a Kurd was appointed the province's governor-general for the first time and the city was permitted to pick its own officials. Other demands are under study.

The Kurds, recognizable by their baggy trousers, multicolored waistbands and tassled turbans, inhabit fertile valleys and plains. They have aspired to self-rule for centuries. An additional 8 million Kurds live nearby in Iraq and Turkey. Some also live in Soviet Armenia.

Sheik Ezzedin Hosseni, Sunni religious and political leader of the Kurds, said he seeks an autonomous state for his people within a greater Iran. But he says he fears the Kurds will be deprived of their full rights despite assurances from government officials and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, architect of the Islamic uprising.

The 500,000 Arabs who live in oil-rich Khuzestan province in the south also demand rights to keep their identity alive.

Demonstrations have flared in Ahwaz, center of the oil-producing region, creating serious concern in Tehran. Oil is Iran's major source of income, and without it the nation would be in economic difficulty.

The Arabs, whose province borders on southern Iraq and extends down to the Persian Gulf, have been in Iran for centuries. Many maintain close ties with Iraq.

Political unrest among the 8 million Turks in Azerbaijan province rose to the surface recently in demonstrations for autonomy.

The province, which borders on Turkey and the Soviet Union, provides much of the country's agricultural produce and contains fledgling industries. A movement for autonomy has been dormant for years.

With the demands for self-rule, the government, fearing the situation could get out of control, pledged to give the Turks some measure of autonomy, but at the same time warned them to stay calm until their problems could be solved.

The same pledges were made to the Baluchis of Baluchistan, bordering Afghanistan and Pakistan to the east.

The Baluchis, who number almost a million, live in primitive conditions. Their villages and towns know no frontiers and many spill over into bordering states. The area lacks public schools and many Baluchis are illiterate.

As the government's problems mounted, fighting erupted in Gonbad-e Kabous, in Iran's northeastern Gorgan province, which is dominated by a half-million Turkomans.

The fighting began when government forces fired on a rally of Turkomans demanding self-rule and airing a recent dispute over land rights in the province, which borders the Soviet Union.

The Turkomans, who breed the sturdy, fast Turkoman horse, have complained that most of their rich agricultural lands belong to retired military officers and former civil officials. Attempts by several Turkoman tribes to seize the estates ended in bloody clashes with police.

The government appealed to the Turkomans, too, to calm down while their problems are reviewed.

Tehran's religious leader, Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani, who has been called upon to settle several of the government-minority confrontations, has emerged as a champion of minority rights. He has alleged, however, that "foreign elements and enemies of the Islamic revolution" have stirred up the minorities. But there has been no visible evidence to substantiate this.

POLICE SUIT SETTLED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge has approved a $1.2 million settlement of discrimination suits against the San Francisco Police Department, in which the department promises that half or more of new police recruits in the next 10 years will come from minority groups and 20 percent will be women, and that promotion policies will also reflect more concern for minorities and women. U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham approved the settlement Friday. It designates $400,000 for those who can show discrimination and $500,000 for testing and training programs. The rest will pay fees of plaintiffs' attorneys.

British Forces Leave Malta

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Thousands of residents of this Mediterranean island nation, many with tears in their eyes, gave a rousing farewell Sunday to the Royal Navy warship London as it steamed out of Grand Harbor, ending 179 years of British military presence in Malta.

A Royal Air Force plane piloted by the last British air commander in Malta, Commodore A.D. Hall, flew over in a salute to the Maltese.

Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff had negotiated the British pullout — it came officially at midnight Saturday — in an effort to transform this archipelago of 117 square miles and 320,000 people into a non-aligned "island of peace."

The onlookers, waving Maltese and British flags and including many British tourists, crowded the bastions surrounding the historic harbor as the missile destroyer London, carrying the last commander of British forces here, Rear Adm. O.N.A. Cecil, sailed out into the Mediterranean.

As it passed close by St. Elmo Fort, Maltese forces gave the vessel a 21-gun salute.

House of Commons leader Michael Foot, representing Britain at the ceremony, expressed the hope for continued good relations between Malta and Britain. He said he hoped Malta's ties with the Arab world would help Britain maintain friendly relations with those nations as well.

The only foreign head of state attending the ceremony was Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

Malta, which lies 50 miles south of Sicily and 200 miles north of Libya, has only an 800-member military, 10 helicopters, eight patrol boats and not a single military plane.

Mintoff asked Libya, Algeria, France and Italy to guarantee Malta's security once the British left, but so far only the two North African nations have agreed.

Venezuela, Key U.S. Supplier, Raises Oil Prices 18 Percent

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuela, a key U.S. oil supplier, increased the price of its crude oil exports an average of 18 percent Sunday and said it may soon charge a premium for "security of supply."

The increase includes the nine percent authorized last week by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries plus a surcharge of $1.20 a barrel for light and medium crudes and 70 cents for heavy crudes.

At a press conference Saturday, Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said the increases mean Venezuela's most valuable crudes will range in price from $15.39 a barrel for its cheapest medium crude to $17.22 for its lightest crude. He did not provide a list of prices for the country's less valuable heavy crudes.

Saudi Arabian light crude, which serves as OPEC's benchmark, is now selling for $14.54 a barrel as a result of the latest price hike by the 13-member cartel.

That decision, reached in Geneva last Tuesday, also allowed OPEC members to impose an unrestricted surcharge. When the OPEC dicision was announced, Libya, Algeria and Venezuela immediately said they would add surcharges.

The OPEC increases, which took effect Sunday, are expected to raise American retail gasoline prices by about two cents a gallon and increase the American bill for foreign oil by at least $4 billion above last year's total of $43 billion. Surcharges, such as those being imposed by Venezuela, could push the bill much higher, analysts say.

U.S. gasoline prices rise about one cent per gallon for each five percent increase in the price of crude oil.

"The day is not far off when Venezuelan crudes will carry a security premium in the U.S. market vis-a-vis crudes from other producing regions," the energy minister said.

He said such a premium is justified because of market conditions and the demonstrated reliability of Venezuela as a source of oil.

Venezuelan officials frequently point out that during the 1973 Arab oil embargo, Venezuela increased oil exports to the United States.

Calderon Berti reaffirmed the government's intention to reduce oil production to an average of 2.2 million barrels a day, once Iran increases its exports. He said the Iranian delegate to the OPEC meeting said Iran expected to stabilize production at about 3.5 million barrels a day but did not say when that point would be reached. Before the revolution Iran produced about 6 million barrels daily.

Venezuela is currently producing 2,337,000 barrels a day — equivalent to 97 percent of the state industry's potential output.

Calderon said that the increase in prices announced for April 1, including the surcharge, would bring Venezuela additional income of at least $1.6 billion this year.

He called the OPEC price increase "moderate" and easy for the world's industrial nations to absorb.

Pemex, the Mexican state oil monopoly, announced Sunday in Mexico City that it has not yet decided on a new price schedule for its oil exports because of world economic uncertainty. Mexico is not an OPEC member. It currently charges an average of $14.10 a barrel, with prices set in negotiations with the various customers.

Peking's Poster Wall Attracts Large Crowd

PEKING (AP) — Larger crowds than usual thronged around "Democracy Wall" Sunday despite a municipal government ban on wall posters critical of Communist Party leadership.

Many offending posters had been removed since the decree was published Saturday, but a variety of new ones, some of them political, were posted on the wall. Crowds six-deep lined the wall, reading the posters silently.

Wall-readers sampled at random said that despite the decree the relatively recent relaxation of restrictions on speech and expression is not dead here.

"It marks somewhat of a retreat," said one girl in pigtails. "But we can still speak out."

Reaction to the crackdown on posters, magazines, photos and demonstrations "likely to upset public order" was mixed.

"Some like it. Others do not," said a soldier. "That's the Chinese way."

China's official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency claimed the public was expressing approval of the ban.

The agency said one newspaper wrote that young people were sharp thinkers but often were immature, and it called for measures "to guide their vigor and enthusiasm on the correct path."

The Peking Municipal People's Political Consultative Conference, billed as a forum for views of non-members of the Communist Party, also backed the ban, Xinhua said. It said one speaker at a conference meeting said, "We firmly support socialist democracy but we oppose individualist ultra-democracy."

There was speculation in diplomatic quarters that the ban was an effort to control the crowds expected to pour into Peking's central Tien An Men Square Tuesday to mark the traditional mourning period for the dead.

During a similar period in 1976 hundreds of thousands of Chinese jammed the square to mourn Premier Chou En-lai, who had died three months earlier.

Carrying slogans attacking the leadership of Chairman Mao Tse-tung and his wife, Jiang Jing (Chiang Ching), they shouted their support for Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping). Alarmed at Deng's popularity, the Jiang Jing-led radicals brought about his downfall from office.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1093 ♡J98 ◇AQJ954
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have several choices—you can rebid your diamonds, raise hearts or introduce your spade suit. Our choice would be to bid one spade. We believe that a good four-card major should always be shown at the one-level, if possible. While this bid is, technically, not forcing, the odds are that partner will bid again. And if he does not, you probably have missed nothing.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ98753 ♡A ◇QJ102
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—Despite the fact that the hand could be a misfit, chances for slam are excellent. Your spade suit is virtually self-sustaining, and as little as one diamond honor in partner's hand might make twelve tricks a laydown. The way to flash the slam signal to partner is to jump shift to two spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK765 ♡KQ7 ◇AQ4 ♠J3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—You have a find hand, but partner has announced a hand that is strong only in terms of distribution. In high cards he cannot have much—certainly not two aces. While it is tempting to make one try for slam in the hope that partner has the right hand, you have no safety at the five level. Therefore, pass and settle for what appears to be a sure vulnerable game.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J2 ♡A54 ◇Q1096 ♠K1053
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A.—Resist the impulse to bid two no trump. You have a hand that rates to take at least four tricks on defense against a diamond contract, and partner has opened the bidding. The opponents are in deep trouble, and you must not allow them to escape unpunished. Double.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K642 ♡Q743 ◇Q765 ♠8
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—When partner opens the bidding with one club and we have only enough for one response, it is usually our desire to introduce a four-card major if we hold one. Here, however, we are perfectly placed if we respond one diamond. That gives partner the opportunity to show a major at the one level, but also leaves him free to raise diamonds if he holds a minor two-suiter.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ7 ♡65 ◇K92 ♠AQ982
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You have 14 high-card points and a balanced hand. You gain nothing with this type of holding by temporizing with a bid of two clubs. Your most descriptive response, showing your distribution and stoppers in the unbid suits, is a jump to two no trump.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ97653 ♡107 ◇KJ ♠82
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Thus far, you have promised partner no more than a rebiddable spade suit and about 7 points. In actual fact you have a strong playing hand, which is improved by the fact that you hold two key honors even though you might be off two fast club tricks, and our recommendation is to simply bid what you think you can make—six spades. The drawback to a cue-bid of five diamonds is that it will tip off the opponents to your club weakness. They might not lead a club on a less revealing auction.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1083 ♡94 ◇AJ105 ♠J5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	5 ♡	Dble.	Pass
Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

A.—It is clear that your side has the preponderance of high cards, and that you have all three side suits, well under control. Obviously, the opponents are relying on distributional holdings to produce most of their tricks. To prevent declarer from scoring more tricks on a crossruff than is his right, lead a trump—and another as soon as you regain the lead.

I've seen several of these silent partners that are being sold for protection for women living alone.

Save your money. For a few bucks more you can get a full-sized model that you can prop up at the breakfast table, watch TV with, or use to fill in at a dinner party. They're called husbands.

Granted, they're not as believable as the inflatable models, but they come in a variety of sizes, stay pressurized, and are self-cleaning.

I don't mean to imply that the inflatable-men manufacturers aren't on the right track. Frankly, there is still a need for a male presence. I have found that in making a major purchase like a car or furniture, salesmen will not pay any attention to you unless a man is along. (This in spite of the fact that my husband releases the hood every time he thinks he is releasing the emergency brake.)

Single people going out to dinner will be assured of getting a table away from the wall with a male figure along. And you don't have to listen to his whining about how dancing is a fad like the hula hoop and mood rings and will eventually go out of style.

They'd be wonderful to play bridge with or sit on the beach with (they wouldn't burn), and on a vacation they would fold to envelope size in your luggage right next to your plastic raincoat.

You could toss 'em into a playpen and give the children a feeling of warmth and security that they have a Daddy who plays with them, use them for throw pillows for lonely wives who can curl up with them on a winter evening by the fire (not too close to the fire), and send one to his mother on Mother's Day to show her you care.

A friend of mine, being practical, decided to buy an inflatable plastic torso and put it on the passenger side of the car so it would look like a licensed driver while her teenager was learning how to drive.

At the end of an hour, the poor inflatable was reduced to a flat piece of rubber with a slow leak.

Maybe they're more realistic than we think.

A spokesman said fuel costs will be 55 percent higher this year than in 1978 and will account for 25 percent of the line's operating budget.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: With all the 18-wheelers on the road, I wonder if I am the only trucker's wife who is going crazy. My home has turned into a layover situation. My husband comes in and plops in the recliner, sometimes doesn't move until it's time to take another run out. Other times he'll visit friends so he can talk about trucking. He gets furious if I ask him to do anything around the house. "I do my job!" he yells, "You do yours!"

Meanwhile, I'm working part-time and trying my darnedest to finish college. Plus I take full responsibility for our two children — sitting up nights when they're sick, leaving work to keep doctor appointments, doing the housework, the laundry, etc., and handling all the finances.

He wonders why I'm not thrilled when he brags about making it to Texas and back in 33 hours! Or why I don't think it's hilarious that he was propositioned at a rest area by a hooker. Or why I can't watch a three-hour western on TV with him, not to mention doing his laundry, shopping, packing, and smiling sweetly when he leaves for another week of driving.

I know you'll get a million replies from truckers about how hard they work, how tiring and boring and lonely it is out there on the road. But if it's so bad, why rush to leave again Why don't they get a job that lets them stay home?

I don't know how other wives handle it, but I'm about to become — Unglued In Tenn.

Dear Tenn.: Granted, a trucker's life isn't easy — but the problem isn't the job, it's the man. He probably wouldn't behave differently if he were a postman or a ribbon clerk.

You need joint counseling so you can both air your beefs. If he won't go — go alone. Better one person in a marriage with some insight than nobody. I recommend your clergyman or the Family Service Association.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I admire you for your guts at printing outspoken letters. Do you have the guts to print this?

We just received notice that we cannot keep two cats in our apartment and if we don't get rid of one within 10 days, the lawyers will be on us.

Have you ever heard of a parent being told to get rid of a child? Our cats are like our children. We can't afford a family at this time so we give our love to the cats. They are a lot cleaner and less destructive than most kids I've seen. They don't dig up the lawn, break windows or run sticks along the sides of cars, but I've seen several kids do these things — or worse. Shouldn't we have the right to prove our animals are well behaved? I'll bet half the parents around here can't prove the kids are!

Someone needs to investigate this sort of injustice and change the rules. — Just Plain Mad

Dear J.P.M.: What does your lease say? Look at it. If i states "no animals" or "one pet to a family," you are in violation.

Try to reason with the landlord in any event. Invite him in for coffee and let him see how clean and well-behaved your felines are. He may change his mind.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: My daughter, who is two months pregnant, is taking Aldomet for high blood pressure, also potassium supplements with it. I am concerned about her taking this. She reports feeling very tired. I would appreciate your thoughts. Mrs. H.R.

Let me repeat something I have said here on other occasions. Generally speaking, the effect of medicine is the same for the fetus as for the mother taking it. For this reason any medicine is to be used cautiously during pregnancy.

There are times when medicine is essential for the health of the mother. High blood pressure is an example of an overriding need. Also, there is a risk to the fetus from high blood pressure. Doctors watch the mother's pressure closely. A rise in 10 points in the lower or 20 in the upper reading is considered abnormal, requiring action. In a normal pregnancy pressure declines until the last month when a rise is expected.

We don't know why some women have abnormal rises in pregnancy. It is more common in women in their first pregnancy or in those who have had kidney or previous blood pressure problems.

Where possible, conservative treatment is tried — salt restriction, rest and perhaps sedatives. If these measures fail diuretics (water pills) may be tried. Aldomet (methyldopa) is a drug that acts on the nervous system to lower pressure in the arteries. It, too, may be necessary. There are others, which ar used in combination, always weighing the risks against present danger.

Since your daughter complains about fatigue she should mention that to her doctor. It may be a mild effect of the medicine or anemia.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please explain what bronchoscopy is and what it involves. Is surgery connected with it and what are the dangers, pains, effects, etc? — D.R. .

I think you are unduly anxious about your bronchoscopy. The doctor uses a thin tube-like instrument which has a small reflecting light in it. With this he can view the bronchial tubes inside your chest for signs of abnormalities — scars, growths or foreign objects.

You will be asked to lie down on your back on a table. Your head will be slightly below the body as you bend it backwards. This allows the doctor to insert the tube into the windpipe. Local anesthetic and some medicines to calm you might be used to ease any discomfort. There is no surgery, no pain and no after effects.

I'm not trying to tout it as the pleasantest experience you'll ever have, but with modern techniques discomfort is minimized. You'll be up and out of the examining room in short order with little but an unpleasant memory. The instrument is called a bronchoscope.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am a 22-year-old female. I am on the birth control pill and smoke a pack of cigarettes a day. I have heard reports about women who do this. I would like your opinion of the reports. I also have heart palpitations. My doctor says I should quit smoking. — B.C.

I agree with him. You can believe reports from studies done among thousands of women doing what you are doing — smoking and using the Pill. The figures indicate that the combination (smoking and the Pill) results in three times more heart attacks than for women who avoid one or the other. The rate is ten times higher than for women who neither smoke nor use the Pill.

Stop smoking or, if practical, switch to another birth control method.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Settle an argument. With the high price of beef and other meat, I say Americans will be eating much less of it and that there should be some improvement in the heart disease problem. What do you think? — H.A.

If dietary fats have the effect some believe it doss, then your proposition might hold up. You're certainly right on one point. There will undoubtedly be a lot fewer meat-eaters around but whether the non-meat-eaters will be around longer is a question only time will answer. Meat is the source of cholesterol, which is associated with hardening of the arteries. In countries where diets have less animal fat there is a lower incidence of coronary artery disease.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "What is the largest number of finesses a declarer might refuse to take?"

Oswald: "You can probaly work up a hand where declarer will refuse four, but three is the largest really logical number. Here is an example."

Alan: "South realizes that the three of clubs lead is probably a singleton so he hops up with dummy's ace. Then he leads the jack of trumps from dummy and rises with his ace. He can't afford that finesse because that opening club lead just might have been fourth best, so South wants to pull trumps as quickly as possible."

Oswald: "He leads a small trump. West rises with the king and leads the three of diamonds, after East discards on that second trump. South refuses that finesse also. Then he pulls West's last trump and goes about the business of conceding tricks to East's two kings."

Alan: "South has made sure of his game in spite of all finesses being wrong.

Incidentally, if all had been right he could have taken them all and made a grand slam."

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Which is the most economical in terms of using less water when bathing? A shower or a tub bath?

We have three teen-agers in our home who shower — you guessed the rest — Mrs. Ada Harris

According to Tim Burr of the U.S. Government's Consumer Information Center, it depends. He wrote, "Showers use from five to 15 gallons of water per minute. Baths use from 30 to 50 gallons.

"If you have a shower with a flow control device to cut the amount of water the shower uses, or if you just turn the water on a little, you can take up to a six-minute shower and still save water.

"But, if you have the shower on as hard as it will go and stand under it for half an hour, you will indeed use a great deal more water than a tub bath."

Now, the only question is how to convince those teen-agers who insist on a shower to get out after only a few minutes.

"And on that score," wrote Mr. Burr, "The U.S. Government has no advice whatsoever." (Think he might also have teen-agers at his house?)

If you would be interested in knowing how you can save water around your home, a booklet, "Water Conservation Checklist for the Home," is available for 70 cents from: Consumer Information Center, Dept. 81-G, Pueblo, Colorado, 81009.

Thanks for listening. — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

I don't like being a negative person so I try to read as little of the negative, the critical, the complaining side of life as possible.

When I read an item which seems like good news to me in a newspaper or magazine, I use my red pen and initial it G.N. I also underline positive thoughts from time to time as I am reading disposable materials.

It is surprising how much more aware a person can become of the bright side of life in these little ways, and I find myself thinking positively much more often. — Reader

Jury Finds Passman Innocent

MONROE, La. (AP) — Former congressman Otto Passman was found innocent Sunday on all counts of accepting illegal gratuities from South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park and charges of tax evasion and conspiracy.

When the jury verdict was announced, Passman jumped up and hugged his attorney, Camille Gravel of Alexandria, La.

"It's perfectly obvious that I am extremely pleased," the ailing 78-year-old former congressman said. He had been described by his attorney as "an unknowing victim of an evil Korean conspiracy."

Passman stood on the courthouse steps flanked by Gravel, Gov. Edwin Edwards and the governor's brother, Marion Edwards.

"It's great to be a citizen of the greatest nation on earth," he said. "I was prepared for either verdict. I am absolutely innocent. I'm proud to be an American."

U.S. District Judge Earl Vernon turned the case over to the jury of nine men and three women at 4:28 CST. They returned with a verdict about 90 minutes later.

Passman's acquittal came one year and a day after his indictment. He was accused of taking as much as $213,000 in illegal gratuities from Park and failing to pay federal income taxes on much of the money. If convicted, he would have faced up to 19 years in prison and $40,000 fine. Passman did not testify at his trial, which began March 5.

"I've never had a better day in my life. I don't harbor any malice," Passman said when he was asked if he was bitter.

Passman said he had no immediate plans for the future. "I'll be 79 in June. I have a few years left, I hope. I'm getting old and lame. I plan to do something constructive."

Asked about his personal view of Tongsun Park, who had testified as the government's key witness, he said, "I think it's unfair to get into personalities."

In his closing arguments, Gravel said Passman was duped by Park, who reportedly made $9 million in commissions on U.S. rice sales to South Korea.

"I'm going to make a bold statement," Gravel said. "The evidence and the exhibits do not show guilt.

"They show that Congressman Passman was an unknowing victim of an evil Korean conspiracy. The prosecution case, contrary to what Mr. Silverstein has told you, is a house of straw built on a foundation of dummy rice laced with gravy for Tongsun Park and his Korean friends."

But prosecutor Morris Silverstein said Passman, once the chairman of a powerful House foreign aid subcommittee, took money to help a free-spending alien get richer.

"All the pieces of the jigsaw puzzle have come together to form a picture on the puzzle box," Silverstein argued.

"It shows that one of the most powerful men in the United States Congress violated a sacred bond by accepting money for services rendered to a citizen of a foreign nation while he was already being paid a salary by you, the people. His motive: greed.

"Remember that Mr. Passman was not entitled to accept these funds from Park," Silverstein said. "He was being paid by the people of the United States."

Silverstein cautioned jurors to beware of defense attempts to indict Park, rather than Passman, of wrongdoing.

"This is no April Fool's coincidence. Use your common sense," he argued. "It is not your responsibility to decide whether Tongsun Park is guilty. He's not on trial."

Nuclear Fiasco Might Affect Texas Decision

AUSTIN (AP) — Concern radiating from a crippled nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., may have fallout in Austin next weekend when voters decide if they want to hold onto 16 percent interest in the largest nuclear project planned for Texas.

Austin voters are being asked to spend $215.85 million in addition to the $160 million already approved for the plant under construction at a site about 70 miles southwest of Houston.

Promoters of the project say the nuclear crisis in Pennsylvania, where a reactor has been leaking radiation since Wednesday, could not have come at a worse time as far as the Saturday election is concerned.

"If they (anti-nuclear forces) had gone out there and put a wrench to that valve they would have picked that day to do it," said John Rogers, who is running the pro-nuclear campaign.

"It would take a political genius to pull this one out. I've never been involved in a situation where we don't have any control, where the oposition has the lead story on CBS, NBC and ABC television ..." he said.

The decision of Austin voters could be a weather vane pointing to the future of a nuclear industry engulfed in the controversy brewing in Harrisburg. The $2.07 billion, 2,500-megawatt South Texas Nuclear Project originally was scheduled to begin producing power in 1980, but the completion date has been pushed back until sometime in 1982.

Anti-nuclear groups in the Texas capital are sponsoring 30-second radio spots that make pointed references to the Harrisburg situation.

Before the Harrisburg incident both sides confidently predicted easy victories. But now, the pro-nuclear Committee For Economic Energy is almost conceding defeat.

Austin voted against joining the project in 1971. The vote in favor of it succeeded by 207 votes in 1973 at the height of the Arab oil embargo. In 1976 Austin voters overwhelmingly turned down pulling out of the project and then turned down a proposition to sell half its interest in a January referendum.

Agency Given H-Bomb Plans

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A Melbourne newspaper has handed over to Australian intelligence officials an article said to be a copy of a report on building a hydrogen bomb that was banned in the United States last week.

Officials of the Australian Security Intelligence Organization, reportedly acting at the request of U.S. Embassy officials, went to the offices of the Sunday Observer on Friday and took possession of the article.

An anti-nuclear campaigner, Dr. Helen Caldicott, told a news conference here two weeks ago she had brought a copy of the banned U.S. article into Australia, but she did not say how she had obtained it.

It was not known whether the Observer had obtained its report from Dr. Caldicott.

American free-lance writer Howard Morland compiled the original article. It was to have been published in the monthly magazine The Progressive, a 40,000-circulation news and opinion journal based in Madison, Wis.

But U.S. District Judge Robert Warren of Wisconsin last Monday ordered the magazine not to print the article and to account to the court for every copy.

The Justice Department contended the Morland article could not be published because it contained classified secrets.

An Australian nuclear physicist, Sir Phillip Baxter, has said the Observer article, a 40-page report complete with diagrams, does contain correct instructions on building an H-bomb.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Carry through with decisions you made recently without any deviations whatever. You are inclined to look on the gloomy side of things but if you do, you lose out where it means a great deal to you. Avoid arguments and stick to main issues.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Carry through with any promises you have made, but be careful in driving here and there. Don't be boastful about a talent you may have or you could lose out where it counts the most.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You find a private matter is delayed, so get busy on other constructive matters and don't fret about it. A good adviser is not up to par now, so avoid seeing for a few days.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try not to argue with associates over small matters or you lose out in important affairs. There are delays in getting what you want, but don't lose your temper.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Postpone that talk with a big wig for better results later on. Take care you do not spoil your credit by hasty thinking; acting.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take any suggestions from friends with a grain of salt since they are not really good for you now. Stay with persons who can be trusted.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good time to question higher-ups about anything, since they are in a strange mood. Show loyalty to an associate who is irate and needs your support.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Stick to the proven today although someone is pressuring you to make radical changes that could be bad for you. An associate is acting strangely, but pay no attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Scheduling your work well will help you plow through all your obligations nicely. Be objective in handling whatever is of annoying nature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to help allies who are having financial problems. Do whatever brings civic credits and acclaim, even if means working harder than usual. Show ability.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle home affairs well, although they may seem to irk you now. Keep busy today so that your load will be lighter the rest of the week.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 22 to Feb. 19) Plan time for assistance to those who are in trouble who mean a good deal to you. Be satisfied with inexpensive pleasures. Make some improvements around your home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Analayze your fundamental affairs and organize them more effectively. Plan to add to bank balance instead of drawing money out unnecessarily for foolish expenses.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will have to be taught to be controlled in order to meet the exigencies of life successfully, since this is a very sensitive nature. Much fast thinking here and the judgment is good.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Veteran Skydiving Instructor Rates Sport Safer Than Skiing

LUMBERTON, N.J. (AP) — Should you take a notion to hurl yourself out of an airplane, John Baker is the person to seek.

He will not try to talk you out of it, or advise you to rest until the feeling goes away. He will encourage you.

John Baker, who appears in all respects to be a man with both feet on the ground, has hurled himself out of airplanes 2,470 times and has counseled no telling how many others to go and do likewise.

"About 80 percent who try it quit after the first jump," he said, "About 95 percent after the second jump.

"Making a parachute jump was just something they always wanted to do, did it, and that's that. Last year we had 1,460 beginners. Only 23 progressed out of student status, which generally takes about 30 jumps.

"Those are the ones who get hooked, who take up skydiving as a sport. It's a dynamic sport, and a safe one. Of all those beginners last year, we had only four broken bones. I'll bet ski resort operators wish they could say that."

John Baker is a 40-year-old former Air Force sergeant with a greying beard, blue eyes, and a manner of speech that clips along at about 120 miles per hour, the speed of a falling sky diver.

He took his first jump in 1961 "just to see what it was like." Now he operates Ripcord Paracenter Inc., hardly a resort, though members of the skydiving fraternity are drawn to it like the mirgrating birds to the pine barrens nearby.

It consists of a building in the shape of an open parachute painted bright blue — a highly visible landmark from above — on the edge of 125 cleared acres, the drop zone.

Although it is open year-round, the skydiving season begins in earnest, appropriately, on April 1.

Every weekend through October, especially bright, windless weekends, the sky is in bloom with veteran divers doing precision freefall maneuvers and with Baker's students taking their first plunge.

"We start them at 10 a.m. and have them making a jump before dusk," he said. "We begin with principles. We teach them what to expect, show them pictures, explain emergency procedures. Then we jump out of wooden airplane mock-ups so they will learn how to exit." Baker continued, choosing what seemed an unfortuate verb.

"Next," he said, pointing to a 5-foot platform beside a gravel pit, "We make them jump off here until they're plumb silly, teaching them how to land and fall."

Why gravel?

"Landing in gravel is softer than landing in grass. It is the difference between shoving your hand into a bowl of black-eyed peas or a bowl of dirt."

In the center of the drop zone is a 25-foot circle of pea-sized gravel. Few students hit it the first time. In the center of the gravel is a plastic disk the size of a coffee can lid. Indeed, it is a coffee can lid.

Veteran sky divers compete to see how many times in a row they can touch down on the disk with their right toe. The record, Baker said, is 151. His own record is 13.

It is impossible not to notice that John Baker's right toe, as well as half his right leg below the knee, is wooden.

"Motorcycle accident," he said. "Motorcycles are risky."

Irving Berlin received 33 cents for the first song he wrote.

East Coast Incident Leads To Nuclear Protests

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

Emotional fallout from the incident at Three Mile Island spread across the country Sunday with opponents of nuclear energy rallying from Plymouth Rock to the Golden Gate.

"Stop the merchant of atomic death," read a typical banner that greeted President Carter Sunday at Washington's First Baptist Church before he left to personally inspect the Pennsylvania nuclear plant site near Harrisburg, where 50,000 persons already have fled the area.

Wary residents near atomic generating plants in other states were wondering if the same thing could happen to them. Radiation levels were being checked in several states. Lawsuits were being prepared. Debates raged about the future of America's atomic energy program.

And four women filed into a tiny fieldstone church in almost deserted Goldsboro, Pa., just half a mile from the Three Mile Island plant that went haywire last Wednesday, to hear words of comfort from their pastor.

"As we gather here this morning, it's with fear and trepidation in our hearts," said the Rev. Richard Deardorff, whose congregation normally numbers 35 to 40. "For we do not know what is happening."

California's Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. asked the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Sunday for a "precautionary and temporary" closing of the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant, near Sacramento, which he said is a near duplicate of the Three Mile Island plant.

Brown said he believed the Rancho Seco plant should be closed "until the NRC can assure us that the plant is safe and does not suffer from a serious generic defect" shared with Three Mile Island. Rancho Seco is operated by the Sacramento Metropolitan Utility District.

Anti-nuclear groups demonstrated in several states, but in Harrisburg, Pa., just 10 miles from the Three Mile Island plant, one group on Sunday called off a rally on the steps of the state capitol.

"We thought we would be acting more responsibly by not calling people to Harrisburg at this time," said William Vastine, head of the group called Three Mile Island Alert.

But in Reading, Pa., about 100 members of the Philadelphia-based group called Mobilization for Survival demonstrated at the offices of Metropolitan Edison Co. — which operates the Harrisburg plant — shouting slogans such as "Three Mile Island is closer than you think."

The Boston Clamshell Alliance staged a rally on the Boston Common and the Massachusetts Bay Coalition held vigils at Plymouth Rock and at a nuclear power plant in Plymouth.

About 250 demonstrated on the steps of the statehouse in Providence, R.I., where Irwin Becker, director of the Coalition for Consumer Justice, said:

"People are angry. People are mad. They're also frightened."

Another 200 demonstrators called the "Solar Rollers" bicycled to the Vermont Yankee nuclear plant in Vernon, Vt., where they conducted skits and sang songs promoting solar energy.

Lawrence Keyes, spokesman for the Vermont plant, said he didn't object to demonstrations, as long as they're peaceful.

"It's not all bad to have a heightened awareness of the risks and benefits of nuclear power as well as other energy systems," he said.

"Hell no, we won't glow," was the chant of demonstrators Saturday at two nuclear plants under construction at both ends of Indiana. In San Francisco, protesters played dead outside a utility office.

Many officials were changing their minds about nuclear power.

Long a strong advocate of nuclear power in Rhode Island, U.S. Rep. Edward P. Beard, D-R.I., on Sunday withdrew his support of an atomic plant in Charlestown, R.I.

"I wouldn't want that nightmare in my state," he said, referring to the danger in Harrisburg. "It's obvious they just don't have the technology to avoid such a thing."

Beard said even supporters of nuclear power now think the Charleston project now will be shelved.

Missouri Gov. Joseph Teasdale said he will ask the state Public Service Commission today to make sure the $2.6 billion nuclear plant now under construction in Callaway County near Fulton, Mo., is sale.

"I don't think Missouri is any different from Pennsylvania," Teasdale said. "This is a dramatic reason why we have to take another look at what has happened in Callaway County before we even consider a new one in Missouri."

With members of the Coalition for Consumer Justice demonstrating for the second stright day, Rhode Island Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy said the Harrisburg incident raises "all kinds of question" about nuclear power.

In New York, the state Environmental Protection Department and health officials continued to test milk and air samples but found no increase in radioactivity.

Officials in Maryland and Delaware said that so far radiation levels in their states have remained stable, thanks partly to winds that shifted to other directions. Delaware lies 70 miles from Harrisburg, while Three Mile Island is just 35 miles from the Maryland state line.

But Gae B. Ray, services supervisor from the Maryland Civil Defense and Disaster Preparedness Agency, said they have formulated an evacuation plan.

"If the time comes for an evacuation, we have been alerted that shelter and possible medical attention would be needed," she said.

Carter Work On Earlier Repair Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's personal inspection of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant Sunday was his second trip to a crippled reactor. His first was more than 26 years ago as a U.S. Navy officer assigned to dismantle a damaged Canadian reactor.

In 1952, however, his trip was to the core of the reactor, wearing heavy protective clothes into an area so radioactive that he was allowed to remain only 90 seconds.

At the time, Carter was a Navy officer assigned to Adm. Hyman G. Rickover's nuclear submarine program.

By night, Carter took graduate courses in reactor technology and nuclear physics at Union University in Schenectady, N.Y. By day, he helped workers construct the prototype power plant for the Sea Wolf, one of the first atomic submarines.

A power surge through an experimental reactor at Chalk River, Ontario, created what is believed to be the world's first nuclear reactor accident.

The overload melted some of the reactor's fuel rods and released a cloud of radioactivity into the atmosphere before water could be poured in to cool the core. There were no reported injuries.

Carter was among the nuclear experts asked to help disassemble the damaged reactor core.

The president described the incident in his book, "Why Not the Best?"

"The radiation intensity meant that each person could spend only about 90 seconds at the hot core location," he wrote. Faced with the stringent time limit, Carter and the other members of his three-man team practiced on a reactor mock-up that had been built at the scene.

"Finally, outfitted with white protective clothes, we descended into the reactor and worked frantically for our allotted time. We had absorbed a year's maximum allowance of radiation in 1 minute and 29 seconds."

The president said that for several months after the incident, he and those on his team had to save their feces and urine for radiation screening. But there were no lasting effects, he said, "just a lot of doubtful jokes among ourselves about death versus sterility."

Jody Powell, the president's press secretary, said his experience helped him better understand and evaluate the situation at the Pennsylvania reactor.

Women Pray For Crisis' End

GOLDSBORO, Pa. (AP) — Four women who live in this tiny Susquehanna River town filed into a fieldstone church Sunday morning and called on God for the strength to endure the nuclear crisis on neighboring Three Mile Island.

The Rev. Richard Deardorff, pastor of the Goldsboro Church of God, tugged on the bell rope to call his tiny flock to worship in a town where most of the 600 residents have fled. The four women came to a Sunday service that normally would have been attended by 35 to 40 people.

"I lift up my eyes to the hills. May help come from the Lord who made heaven and earth," he said. "As we gather here this morning, it's with fear and trepidation in our hearts. For we do not understand what is happening."

Pigeons cooed in the belfry of the old church, located at the end of a street of clapboard houses that deadends at the river, a half-mile from the island in the Susquehanna River, where sits the crippled nuclear reactor.

Last Wednesday something went wrong in the cooling system at the plant. It started overheating and was shut down. Potentially dangerous radiation has been leaking ever since.

"God said, 'Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let him have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the air and over the cattle, and over all the earth,'" said Deardorff, quoting Genesis. "And it was so, and God saw everything he made, and it was very good."

And the pastor added: "I think God has been very kind to let us go as far as we have with his world. But I think now he is saying, 'Be careful.'"

The four women, ranging in age from 48 to 76, sat alone in the oak pews, capturing every word. Then he gave them a chance to speak.

"Heavenly Father, thank you for letting us come in these doors — how nice it is to know you have your everlasting arm around us," said Evelyn Weirich, 55.

"Maybe you are trying to tell the people of Goldsboro something. Maybe it's not too late for them to come to the foot of the cross and ask forgiveness.

"You know more than the technicians on Three Mile Island. It's all in your hand, oh Lord."

Next to her, Cora Shuler, 76, wept.

Deardorff offered a prayer for the engineers, the technicians and the employees on the island "as they work to bring this nuclear reactor to a complete halt."

Then he led his little congregation in singing a hymn, "His Name Is Wonderful." There was only the sound of their voices, for the church organist already had left town.

"I hope you have a feeling of strength today," said the pastor. "For we know not what tomorrow brings."

FBI Investigating N-Sabotage Rumors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is checking out "around a half dozen rumors" of attempted or threatened sabotage at the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania but has confirmed none of them, a spokesman said Sunday.

FBI duty officer Otis Cox commented after the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said in a statement that "NRC representatives at the facility were informed at 10:45 p.m. on March 31 that there would be an attempt to sabotage the facility during the night."

The NRC statement said the FBI and Pennsylvania State Police had been informed.

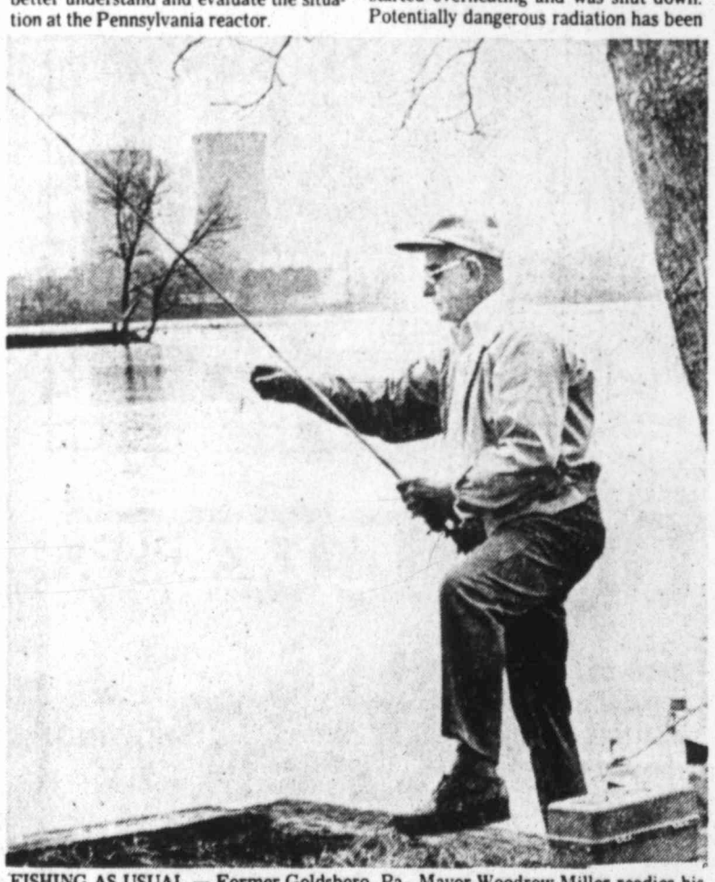
Cox said the FBI's Philadelphia office has been checking out "around a half dozen rumors" of attempted or threatened sabotage at the plant, where an accident Wednesday caused radiation leaks.

"We have no active investigation of any violation," Cox added in a telephone interview. "All the rumors have been checked out and so far there is nothing positive."

Cox said the rumors originated with calls from private citizens to the NRC and the NRC has turned over the names of the callers to the FBI to be questioned.

ELEPHANTS INJURE EIGHT

DECATUR, Ill (AP) — Eight persons were injured at a circus when three elephants stampeded after being provoked by a teen-ager who swatted them with a broomstick, Decatur police said. The female pygmy elephants, each about 5½ feet tall and weighing 3,200 pounds, roamed Millikin University and nearby residential and commercial districts for about an hour before being captured Saturday. The elephants were performing at the college fieldhouse.



FISHING AS USUAL — Former Goldsboro, Pa., Mayor Woodrow Miller readies his tackle for a day of fishing in the Susquehana River Sunday just as he has done for the past 63 years. Across the river less than a half mile from Miller are the cooling towers of the Three Mile Island Nuclear Plant where a spokesman said small amounts of radiation continue to leak into the air. Donna Dorsett Shines In Squire's New Comedy

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

I would strongly advise theater enthusiasts to rush out to the Country Squire Dinner Theater and catch the current production of Alan Ayckbourne's "Absurd Person Singular," if only to witness a bravura performance by one of the most talented thespians ever to work on the stage in this area: Donna D. Dorsett. An actress who has stayed away too long since thrilling audiences with her energetic performance as Evie in "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off" a couple of summers back, Miss Dorsett's portrayal of Eva in the Squire's current production is much funnier than the play as a whole, and manages to keep us interested even when the Ayckbourne scenes begin to lag.

As for the entire production, well, it is flawed to the point of being only partially effective. Still, it's nice to see something different than the light and frothy comedies usually served as dinner theater meals. Dealing with the morality (or lack of it) of the upper class, "Absurd Person Singular" can be extremely funny at times. The entire second act is a gem sparkling with both acting and direction.

But there is also an underlying layer of bitchiness in Ayckbourne's work. The final act is comedy too reminiscent of Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" — frightening, eerie and cruel.

Had the blackout been extended at the end of the play (instead of merely hinted at as a lead-in to final bows), the effect could have been much more overpowering. Patrons would have walked out with a "Catch-22" feeling of first laughing and then questioning the sanity of their laughter. But that element is only hinted at in the Squire's production, and never really shines through. Instead, the play is treated as mere comedy and this unfortunate lack of proper emphasis harms both cohesion and transition.

The play, which goes to great depths to prove the simple axiom that the four-letter word upsetting most families is cash, revolves around three couples who meet for drinks and chit-chat each Christmas Eve. Not because they like each other, but because they need each other. Each wants to use the other. The poor sucker up to the rich in hopes of being tossed a Christmas bone. The first act introduces us to churchmouse types Sidney and Jane (Mark Walters and Michelle Whitfield), attempting to act posh with their influential guests and feeling rather awkward about the whole thing.

With each successive year, though, we see Sidney and Jane grow in stature, their personalities deteriorating to fit their newfound elite presence until, at last, they become the puppeteers and the needy dance on their strings.

Sidney and Jane are the only characters playwright Ayckbourne has allowed to become really three-dimensional, and both Walters and Miss Whitfield are excellent at following through with character transition. Diane Hosey seems a bit too emphatic as the boozy, catty wife of Jim Slauter, who is perfect and totally believable as the banker who recognizes both his good fortune and his lack of it. William Carter, the saving grace as Mercutio in last fall's "Romeo and Juliet," uses the same lecherous grins and tones here. But he is most effective in the third act, when he must quietly gag on swallowed pride.

But again, Donna Dorsett is the star glowing so brightly as to almost blind us to the talents of her co-stars. She can be humorously foreboding with her hint of madness in the first act, and brutally honest in her portrait of the loveless wife — all business — in the play's final moments. She has that wonderful skill which is realizing she is ALWAYS on stage, even when the emphasis is on another character. She not only acts. She reacts. It's called stage presence and, no matter how much it is drilled by theater instructors, it's a rare quality.

But the second act is what we're leading up to, since it is the most solid overall and also a tour de force for Miss Dorsett. Shocked and disheartened by her husband's infidelity and plans to leave her, the actress is contemplating suicide as we meet her. Dressed in a nightgown and pink fuzzy slippers, she scrawls her farewell note and then attempts to dispose of herself in assorted methods ranging from overdosing on aspirins to hanging herself to drinking toxic liquids to, well, holding her breath. Shocking? Saddening?

Hardly.

No, instead it's a hilarious sequence made all the more enjoyable because her Christmas Eve guests, ignorant of what's going on, accidentally thwart her every attempt. The entire act demands great timing, and the co-direction from George Sorensen and Richard Weaver has the cast of six working together brilliantly.

But all eyes remain on Miss Dorsett. Until she begins singing at the end, she has not one speck of dialogue in the entire act. And yet, solely through eye contact and expressions and movement, she not only makes us feel her desperation and anxiety and frustration — she also damn near leaves us on the floor in stitches. It's one of those extended theatrical moments the viewer hopes will never end.

One only hopes Miss Dorsett will be allowed to tackle a few stronger roles before taking her talent elsewhere. Her performances have been pleasures: solid proof that she belongs on the stage and steadfastly promising she'll move on to bigger audiences in bigger markets before long. "Absurd Person Singular," a flawed play with an excellent overall cast, is just another one of her conquests.

"Absurd Person Singular" will be staged at the Country Squire Dinner Theater nightly through Saturday. Call the theater box office for ticket prices and reservations.

SCARLET WOMAN ON THE SCAFFOLD — Branded an adulteress by the people of Boston, Hester Prynne (Meg Foster) stands on the scaffold, condemned forever to wear the scarlet letter "A" on her breast. Her story, told by Nathaniel Hawthorne in the classic American novel "The Scarlet Letter," has been adapted as a four-part television series produced by WGBH in Boston for PBS. (AP Laserphoto)

'Scarlet Letter' Shown As TV Miniseries

BOSTON (AP) — "The Scarlet Letter," Nathaniel Hawthorne's masterpiece of guilt, adultery and hypocrisy in Puritan America, is coming to television in a lavish four-part miniseries on PBS.

The program, which will air on consecutive nights beginning April 2, is the first attempt of American television to try what the British do so well — put a classic novel on film.

The result is an entertaining, vividly detailed picture of life in the wilderness village of Boston in the 1600s. And it is an engaging and generally accurate retelling of Hawthorne's story of scandal.

Like the English remakes of the classics that the Public Broadcasting Service runs on its weekly "Masterpiece Theater" program, the acting in this series is subtle and restrained.

Meg Foster plays an aloof, powerful Hester Prynne, the young woman who is forced to wear a scarlet "A" for life because she bore an illigitimate daughter.

John Heard is suitably wishywashy and pained as Arthur Dimmesdale, the guilt-ridden minister who is the secret father of Hester's child.

And Kevin Conway is downright creepy in the role of the gnomish Roger Chillingworth, the husband who torments Dimmesdale to the brink of insanity.

"This is a love story, an American 'Romeo and Juliet'," said Rick Hauser, the program's producer-director.

The action takes place in a scruffy, fly-blown recreation of 17th Century Boston, a town of shabby, dark houses and straw-strewn streets. The crudity of the hamlet is vividly portrayed early in the series by a woman who chases a pig out of a house with her broom.

The common folk, brightly dressed but as slovenly as their town, gawk openly at the scarlet woman who broke the laws of their outpost of civilization.

In a hut overlooking the Atlantic on the edge of town, the ostracized Hester raises her child, Pearl, who is impishly played by Jessica Ruth Olin.

"I hope we've provided a framework for rethinking about the Puritan past," Hauser said. "It's much more colorful and vibrant and closer to the Elizabethans than any of us really know. We mistake Puritanism for Victorianism, and that's not right."

The lengthy opening chapter of the novel, in which Hawthorne describes the Salem customhouse, is reduced to a brief scene. As thunder rumbles in the background, a man playing the author discovers the faded scarlet letter and a tattered manuscript.

Though a few scenes have been embellished, most of the program meticulously follows the plot of the novel.

"When we tried to rewrite Hawthorne, we fell flatter than a fritter," said Hauser.

About 70 percent of the dialogue is lifted directly from the book, and the rest has a nicely archaic ring to it.

The climactic scene in which Dimmesdale tears off his shirt to reveal his own real or imagined scarlet letter — it's never really clear in the book whether he has one — remains vague in the TV version. The sequence is shot from the minister's back, and the viewer sees only the shock on the faces of the witnesses.

The program cost $2.5 million and took four years to research and put together. It was produced by WGBH, the PBS outlet in Boston that also imports "Masterpiece Theater."

It was shot last summer in a village built inside the walls of Fort Adams, a Revolutionary War post in Newport, R.I. The producers built 20 colonial buildings around the old fort's parade ground.

Cheap Air Fares Draw Crowds

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — The sign above a roped-off area at a Baltimore-Washington International Airport terminal says "Peanut Gallery — Do Not Feed the Nuts."

Inside the area, some 200 people camped out Sunday on lawn chairs and sleeping bags, waiting for a chance at Texas International Airlines' promotional offer of "peanut fares," which go on sale at 10 a.m. today.

For 99 cents, the first 99 people in line will receive a round-trip flight to Los Angeles or Las Vegas. The first 69 people in line for a round trip to Dallas-Fort Worth in Texas will pay only 69 cents.

"It's been quite an experience. It's a lesson in human nature," said Cliff Hathcock of Suitland, who with his parents, Garfield and Dora Hathcock, had been at the airport since Friday morning.

"There have been some heated discussions," added Steve Schwarz of Severna Park.

Schwarz and the Hathcocks are among the lucky ones who will be guaranteed tickets. People who began lining up as early as Wednesday have organized a numbering system to keep track of who arrived first.

Each person in the line has a number, and a roll call has been taken every 12 hours. Between roll calls, persons could leave the area to eat and shower.

"The real rush is in the morning, trying to get into the bathroom," said one woman.

During the day, people have occupied themselves by playing guitars, board games and cards, and watching themselves on the evening television news programs.

"What's really fun is sitting here and watching all the people stare at you," said one woman.

The waiting would-be passengers predicted that tempers would flare today when tickets went on sale. A sign above the Dallas-Fort Worth line gives an ominous warning to would-be line-crashers:

Popular Author Pens Mysteries Dutch Style

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — His books are published in several languages, but Janwillem van de Wetering, a former Dutch policeman who writes mysteries about Dutch policemen, says Americans are his biggest fans.

He returned the compliment by moving to the United States to live.

"I really like America better than any other country I've ever lived in," says the 48-year-old writer, who makes his home on the coast of Maine, although he keeps an apartment in Amsterdam.

Janwillem van de Wetering may not be a household name — at first glance it appears to defy even pronunciation — but only four years after his first thriller appeared he has earned a solid niche among mystery fans and critics. His seventh mystery, "The Maine Massacre," the first set in this country, was published last month.

The central figures in van de Wetering's mysteries — he also has written two books about Zen Buddhism and two children's books — are a wise Amsterdam police commissaris (commissioner) and his two assistants, the stolid Adj. Grijpstra and the romantic Sgt. de Gier. They are gentle, quirky, human men, more interesting than the criminals they pursue.

In "The Maine Massacre," the aging, arthritic commissaris — he has no surname — travels to the fictional town of Jameson, Maine, in winter to help his sister settle her affairs after her husband's death. De Gier, concerned about his boss' health, follows, and the two begin to investigate a series of "accidental" deaths. The plot matters less than character and atmosphere. In one offbeat scene, for example, de Gier plays his flute to get himself out of a jam.

"The plot to me is not so much whodunit, but all the human relationships around it," says van de Wetering.

He, his wife, Juanita, and their daughter moved to Maine in 1975. Van de Wetering agreed to be interviewed in Bangor, but politely insisted that the location of his home in Maine not be disclosed.

Van de Wetering, who looks younger than his age, is tall and lean, with curly brown hair and large brown eyes — which happens to be how he describes de Gier. But their creator clearly enjoys the commissaris the most of all his characters.

The commissaris, modeled partly on a real Amsterdam chief of detectives, "outwits de Gier all the time." He is "just about as good a man as I can envision. That's what I'd like to be like. . .. Good for me doesn't mean morally good," but "detached, free from the whole thing, understanding."

Van de Wetering speaks nearly flawless English and is fluent, in varying degrees, in French, German, Spanish and Japanese, befitting a man who has lived all over the world. He spent more than a year in a Japanese monastery, where he acquired his interest in Zen and which he wrote about in his first book.

When that and a second book about Zen did reasonably well, his U.S. publisher suggested he write something else to keep his market. Van de Wetering had spent several years as a part-time policeman in Amsterdam, and thought he could do better than some mystery writers.

"I saw some police shows on TV and thought, 'How terrible.' I knew what it was like to be a policeman ... the stuff you see on TV — nonsense, it doesn't happen that way."

Van de Wetering writes his books first in English, then rewrites them in Dutch. In the Dutch versions, he adds detail — "for the Americans it might be irritating if I gave them too much of that sly, Dutch, nasty humor" — and sometimes even changes the plot.

Van de Wetering says he isn't sure how long he can keep up the series. "It's more of an effort every time," he said. "You have to not repeat yourself." But he is not tired of the characters.

"I write about the commissaris, I get cheered up."

Unfinished Cookbook High On Actress' List

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Lynley has just one unfulfilled fantasy at the moment.

"I've played out a lot of my fantasies, and the really bizzare ones I've kept in check for my old age," Miss Lynley said in an interview.

Her current, unfulfilled fantasy: an unfinished cookbook.

"I was going to do it in the Virgin Islands, but it was too windy and all my recipes were blowing away," she said, having just returned from a vacation.

Carol Lynley has appeared in 29 films, many of which can be seen on late night television, and on countless television series, including "The Love Boat," "Hawaii Five-O" and "Fantasy Island."

She can be seen in such films as "Blue Denim," "Return to Peyton Place," "Harlow," and the upcoming science fiction thriller, "The Shape of Things to Come," in which she plays the queen of an alien planet.

Miss Lynley was born in New York, started acting when she was 10 and appeared in her first film, "A Light in the Forest," when she was 14.

"I'm 36 years old. That's God's honest truth. I never lie. I'd love to lie. I have been working for 26 years and people think you're even older," she said.

Fifteen years ago, she did a Playboy magazine layout which was not published, she said, until the recent 25th anniversary edition in a feature on "Cinema and Sex," along with such screen sirens as Catherine Deneuve and Brigitte Bardot.

"By today's standards it's rather sweet, very tame and, I think, absolutely adorable," she said of the layout. She also said she doesn't consider herself a sex object, but that "people have a tendency to relate to me because I am sexual."

"I think everyone who is in the arts, who understands what he is doing has a sexuality. As for sex object, I don't understand the meaning of the word."

She is fluent in Spanish and French. She has two apartments, one in New York and one in Beverly Hills, and logs "more hours in the air than in both of her beds," in the words of her publicity copy. She also has a 15-year-old daughter from a marriage that lasted 10 months.

WORLDS LARGEST DIAMOND

PARAMUS, N.J. (AP) — Seven master cutters worked on seven tons of "ice" over the weekend and the result was what appeared to be the world's largest diamond. The finished product, 8 feet high and 8 feet wide, was said to have a weight of more than 7,811,200 carats if it were a genuine diamond. One of the masters, Franz Eichenauer, has set Guinness world records twice before when he used 10,560 eggs to prepare the largest omelette and when he carved a replica of the Mayflower from ice.

DEATH TOLL RISES

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — The death toll from a coal mine explosion March 18 rose to 10 Sunday when two more miners died from burns at a hospital here. Three men were killed instantly in the methane gas blast at Golborne Colliery near Wigan, and eight others were critically burned.

Patricia Hearst Marries Officer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A radiant Patricia Campbell Hearst, kidnap victim turned robber and now a bride, married her former bodyguard Sunday in a traditional service on an island in San Francisco Bay.

Miss Hearst, carrying a lily of the valley bouquet and wearing a white satin and silk organza gown, was wed to San Francisco policeman Bernard Shaw with the traditional words "I do" in a redwood paneled chapel.

She smiled broadly at more than 100 reporters who gathered for the occasion although they were barred from the ceremony on Treasure Island naval base in San Francisco Bay.

Her mother, Catherine Hearst, said after the 35-minute ceremony, "It was wonderful. I've waited five years for it."

Miss Hearst wore a Saks Fifth Avenue gown with a lace-trimmed train. Around her neck was a strand of large pearls bearing a silver and diamond pendant. Her auburn hair, pulled back from her face, hung in loose curls on her back beneath a net veil.

Arriving for the ceremony in a shiny black limousine, she entered the church on the arm of her millionaire father, Randolph A. Hearst.

Shaw, who wooed Miss Hearst while moonlighting as her bodyguard, wore satin striped trousers.

About 300 guests, many carrying or wearing expensive furs, arrived at the island for the brief Episcopalian ceremony.

Among the guests were Sen. S.I. Hayakawa and his wife; Bing Crosby's widow, Kathryn; and Janey Jimenez, a federal marshal who became Miss Hearst's friend.

"I've never seen Patty so happy. Isn't it about time," Miss Jimenez said.

Look Magazine contracted to pay the couple an undisclosed amount of money for exclusive rights to cover the ceremony and reception, as well as wedding preparations over the past few weeks. Published reports said the magazine paid $50,000, but Look editors have termed that figure "quite inaccurate," without disclosing a correct one.

Miss Hearst, 25, was making her first public appearance since her release Feb. 1 from a federal women's prison about 40 miles from here, thanks to a presidential commutation of her seven-year sentence.

Shaw, 33, divorced and father of two children, met Miss Hearst late in 1976, when he was her bodyguard and she was free on bail appealing her conviction of joining her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers in a San Francisco bank robbery. The robbery was two months after the SLA kidnapped her in February 1974, and 17 months before she was arrested.

Members of the Hearst family, which made millions publishing newspapers, were among the guests. Miss Hearst's parents, Randolph and Catherine, have recently divorced.

Also attending was John Hamilton, Grand Sachem "Rolling Cloud" of two East Coast Indian tribes. He united the couple in an ancient blood rite at a hotel Saturday.

A reception was to be held in the Casa de la Vista, which provides a magnificent view of the San Francisco skyline, the bay and the Golden Gate Bridge.

The couple have not spoken openly about their plans. He apparently plans to continue working as a police officer, for which he earns $20,000 a year. Miss Hearst has said she wants to be a volunteer for a women's rape counseling group, and perhaps train dogs.

Scores Seek Clemency For Condemned Bhutto

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — The fate of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto is in the hands of the army general who ousted Bhutto in a coup 21 months ago.

The general, President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, has before him scores of appeals to spare Bhutto from the gallows, but the execution could be carried out within 48 hours.

Pleas for mercy have been received from scores of world leaders and petitions for clemency were filed by Pakistani political leaders, lawyers and one of Bhutto's relatives, a 60-year-old stepsister.

The stepsister, Imtiaz Sherbano Bhutto, defied Bhutto's directions to friends and family members not to seek clemency for him. He said such action would be the same as acknowledging his guilt in the case "and I am innocent."

Bhutto, 51, and four co-defendants were convicted of conspiring to kill a political opponent in 1974 and were sentenced to hang. The alleged target of the ambush escaped unharmed but his father was shot and killed.

Bhutto's stepsister was quoted by other relatives as saying, "I don't care what the rest of the family says, I helped raise him and feel like a mother to him. It had to be done."

She had traveled from Sind, Bhutto's home province, to Rawalpindi, where the ex-prime minister occupies a tiny death cell in the central jail.

Her petition was submitted just before the Saturday-midnigh deadline ended a seven-day period for the filing of petitions after the Supreme Court formally closed legal proceedings by deciding against a review.

Zia can take his time weighing the appeals or act at once. If he denies clemency, Bhutto could be hanged after a 48-hour notice is given to his family.

The mother of one of the four men condemned in the case with Bhutto filed a petition for all four, saying they followed Bhutto's orders under duress and had no motive for the slaying of the father of Ahmed Reza Kasuri. They were members of the federal security force.

Bhutto began a hunger strike last week after his cot, shaving equipment, books and other personal items were removed from his 7-by-10-foot cell following the final court ruling. But a cousin, Mumtaz Ali Bhutto, said the prisoner has resumed eating.

He said he spoke with Bhutto Sunday about the clemency petitions and "he looked disturbed. He was not happy. I could see from his expression. I told him there was no point being upset because it was done."

Kidnapped Japanese Released

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Japanese industrialist Takakazu Suzuki, who was released early Sunday by leftist guerrillas after 114 days captivity, has left El Salvador. The fate of two British bankers held by the same kidnappers is unknown.

Suzuki, 34, left this Central American nation in a convoy of Japanese Embassy vehicles for Guatemala where he was reunited with his family. A communique from his kidnappers, members of the Armed Forces for National Resistance, said he was freed after his family and the Japanese government met their ransom demands.

The guerrillas reportedly had demanded $4 million along with the release of alleged political prisoners and the broadcast of anti-government statements.

The Republic of Ireland was founded.

Uncertainty Clouds Solomon's Departure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The photograph of Jimmy Carter was being taken down as Jay Solomon discussed what he would do after ending his two-year stint as head of the scandal-plagued General Services Administration.

The millionaire Chattanooga, Tenn., developer who came to Washington with dreams of beautifying federal buildings was leaving after helping launch a major investigation of corruption at the government's giant housekeeping agency.

He said he will return to his former real estate development firm and do some lecturing. And he added: "I would take an active part in the re-election of Jimmy Carter if I'm asked by the president."

But as he officially left his GSA post at the end of the week, there remained a cloud of uncertainty about the reasons for his leaving and about the president's handling of Solomon's departure.

Although Solomon claimed "the leaving was my process," it is widely believed that he was pushed out of his job by the White House.

Those suspicions go back to last January when the GSA chief learned from a reporter that the White House was looking for his replacement. Solomon said he had no plans to leave.

At the time, administration officials were complaining privately about Solomon's openness with the press and what they saw as failure to share credit with the president for cleaning up the GSA.

Solomon then met with the president and, after first appearing to dig in his heels about staying, issued a statement saying he would be leaving in the spring.

GSA officials, who asked not to be named, say Solomon was indeed forced out, but they concede that the reasons why remain unclear.

Some suspected Solomon was leaving because he had stepped on too many important toes or — more darkly — that the White House wanted more control over the widening investigation.

Sitting on a white sofa in his spacious GSA office last week, Solomon said he wanted out because he perceived the situation to be "very volatile, dangerous" as to "where the investigations were going to go, who it was going to hit."

"There's a lot more to happen here," he said. "Whether it happens or not I can't tell you because that's not up to me to control any more. But if I stayed here it would happen...and I didn't want to stay a part of that."

Solomon refused, however, to speculate as to who might be implicated by the investigation or predict, as GSA's former special counsel Vincent Alto did, that a cover-up was likely.

"I have great confidence in the attorney general and the Justice Department and the FBI that they will do what's right and they will let things come forth," Solomon said. "It's hard for me to conceive that they would cover up corruption, fraud, mismanagement that they know about. I don't care who it is.

"It's hard for me to conceive, knowing the president of the United States as an individual, that if it's there that he would not support cleaning it out."

However, despite those statements, Solomon is clearly concerned about the direction and pace of the GSA corruption probes being conducted by internal investigators and the Justice Department.

Alto, who helped start the investigation, left last October and Irwin Borowski, who Solomon pegged to take the newly created job of inspector general, was rejected by the White House earlier this year.

"That period from the time Vince (Alto) left to the time to date has really had no one running that (internal) investigation," Solomon said. "I don't see a light coming out of the Department of Justice (either). I don't know what they're doing. I would have thought there would have been more cases come out."

"It (the scandal) involves a lot of people and if (the investigation) moves at this rate, we'll never get to the number that we should get to who should be punished."

Former Air Base Property Set For Sale

BIG SPRING — More than 400 dwellings vacated when Webb Air Force Base was closed more than a year ago apparently will be offered for sale on an individual basis by the new owners of the property.

James Duncan of San Angelo sold 115 acres and approximately 420 dwellings in Big Spring Industrial Park to a corporation identified as Sweetwater Enterprises by deed dated March 22.

Sweetwater Enterprises is a joint venture of Capehart Homes, Sweetwater Savings Ass'n, Kenneth Walker and the firm of Musgrave & Musgrave, Inc.

The dwellings, now empty, will be offered for sale by the new owners, who borrowed $4.1 million from The Bank of Dallas to finance the purchase of the homes and land, which were purchased by Duncan for $3.7 million a year ago.

Petersburg, Ralls Students Place First

PETERSBURG (Special) — High school dramatists from Ralls and Petersburg High Schools will represent University Interscholastic League District 4A in Plainview Friday.

The two schools took honors in competition at Petersburg High School Thursday, winning the right to appear in area competition.

Ralls High School students performed "Dark of the Moon," and Petersburg students performed "Antic Spring," in the competition.

The alternate school selected was Crosbyton High SchSchool, whose students performed "Lovers in Midsummer."

Selected best actor was Pat Six, Petersburg High School, while Julie Hutchins of Crosbyton was selected best actress.

The All-Star cast selected by the judges also included Debra Fowler of Crosbyton, Glen Kersey of Shallowater, Simona Field and Zoe Hodge of Spur, Shelby Norris and Emily Burrows of Ralls, Rene McMillan of Lorenzo and Janet Gales of Petersburg.

Students receiving Honorable Mention recognition include Martha Cypert of Lorenzo, Bernadette Browning, Todd Cypert and Kenneth Bounds of Ralls, Melody Galbraith and Tommy Attebury of New Deal, Scott Ross of Petersburg and Terry Don Gilbreath of Crosbyton.

If Elected, He Will Serve

COAHOMA (Special) — Though he is not running for a fourth term, Coahoma Mayor Joe Swinney said Friday he would serve if re-elected.

"If the people in Coahoma wanted me badly enough to elect me on a write-in vote, I would serve," the mayor said.

Swinney made the statement after hearing rumors that his name is being penciled in on absentee ballots for the April 7 city elections.

Swinney, who operates a fence company here, emphasized that he is not a candidate for the position, nor is he campaigning for a job he has held for three terms.

Swinney also said he was distressed by stories being circulated that he was "against" the Coahoma Police Department when, in fact, he said he played a leading role in getting the department started.

E.A. Richters, now a member of Coahoma's city council, and Ross Roberts are avowed candidates for mayor.

City Left Without Staff

FORSAN (Special) — This Howard County community was without city employees Friday.

W.E. "Wally" Heideman, water superintendent, was fired Thursday night and Susan Gaston, city secretary and tax-assessor, resigned in protest.

The two made up the entire city hall work force.

Mayor J.J. Barron said the firing and resignation followed an emergency meeting of the Forsan City Council Thursday.

"The meeting was called to try to get some personnel differences worked out," Barron said.

Though invited, neither Heideman nor Gaston attended the meeting.

When asked why Heideman was fired, Barron replied:

"For reasons of personal conduct and I'd rather not comment beyond that," the mayor said.

Barron said the council would decide soon "whether a move will be made to replace the two employees."

Watson Takes Whopping Win

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Tom Watson got his wish in a run-away, 5-stroke victory Sunday in the Heritage Golf Classic.

"I hope," he'd said a day earlier, "it's a boring telecast. I hope nobody gets close enough to make it exciting."

Nobody did.

Nobody really expected to.

"Obviously, when we teed off we were playing for second place," said Ed Sneed, the eventual runner-up. "Tom was playing so well, you didn't expect him to shoot a high enough score for even a 66 to catch him."

No one did.

No one even got close.

"It's not easy to play with a big lead," Watson said. "But nobody put any pressure on me. The only pressure I felt was the pressure I put on myself."

He started with an 8-stroke lead and, with a closing round of par-71, won by a bulging margin. About the only excitement was generated in his quest for a tournament scoring record. And he got that, too.

"It's always exciting to win," Watson said. "It's doubly exciting to to win on a golf course you love, and I love this golf course. And it's triply exciting to win with a record."

Watson claimed the 12th American title of his career, and first of the year, with a 270 total, 14 shots under the listed par on the Harbour Town Golf Links and one better than the record 271 set by Jack Nicklaus in 1975.

Watson's triumph really wasn't challenged. He started the sunny, breezy final round with an all-but-insurmountable 8-shot lead and held a commanding advantage all the way.

Only the size of his winning margin, the chase for Nicklaus' 72-hole scoring record and the race for second place provided any excitement for the big gallery — including Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry — that swarmed through the forests of pines, magnolia and moss-dripping oaks.

Ed Sneed quickly took the second-place situation in hand and eventually claimed it with a closing 5-under-par 66 and a 275 total.

That left only the record in doubt. It was something Watson wanted badly — a record that would help ease the haunting memory of his last round collapse in this tournament two years ago — and he secured it with a clinching birdie on the 16th hole.

It also pushed Watson, the 1977-78 Player of the Year and heir apparent to Nicklaus' long-time role of premier player in the game, atop the money-winning list again. The $54,000 he collected from the total purse of $300,000 set his total for the year at $145,965. He led the money-winning standings for the past two seasons and last year set a single season record of $362,429.

A key stretch for Sneed was the 10th through 12th holes, perhaps the toughest on the course.

He missed the green on all, but saved par on all. Mike Morley, who was contending for second at that time, bogeyed two of them and Sneed had the edge he needed for the $32,400 second prize.

Morley, with a closing 70, and Tom Kite, with 71, tied for third at 279, 9 shots back of the run-away winner who had led since his first round 65.

Bill Rogers and Ray Floyd were next at 280. Rogers matched par 71 and Floyd shot 70.

Lanny Wadkins, who beat Watson last week in the Tournament Players Championship and was in second place through the first three rounds this time, faded badly. He closed with a 75 and at 282 was 12 strokes behind.

Defending champion Hubert Green also shot 75 for 284. Lee Trevino was 75-286 and Arnold Palmer had his best tournament of the year at 75-289.

Watson, a runnerup three times this year, got his game in order last week and, exhibiting the authoritative play that has lifted him to the top rank of golf stardom, quickly pulled away here with opening rounds of 65-65.

Only Wadkins really challenged, and Watson's dramatic eagle-2 on the 16th hole of Friday's play seemed to take the wind from his sails. Wadkins dropped back with a 74 Saturday and set the stage for Watson's easy triumph.

"It came at the right time, too," said Watson, who now becomes a prime favorite for the Masters in Augusta, Ga., week after next. Watson will skip next week's Greensboro Open to concentrate on preparations for a match to the green jacket he won in the Masters in 1977.

"I feel better about my game right now than I have all year," he said.

Chaps Split With DBC

Southpaw Robert Goins stymied Lubbock Christian College after the first inning Sunday, allowing Dallas Baptist to post a 6-3 victory and salvage the final game of their four game Texas Athletic Conference series with the Chaparrals.

LCC won the opener 8-3 as fresman Chris Cook notched his third victory of the season. The second-game setback, however, knocked LCC from a share of the loop lead as Texas Wesleyan whipped Midwestern State 3-1 and 5-0 in Fort Worth Sunday.

That makes next weekend's TWC-LCC matchup extremely important as LCC will enter with a 6-2 record, a game behind the 7-1 Rams.

The Chaps, now 23-3, broke in front in both games, scoring twice in the first inning of each tilt. In the opener Richard Bowles walked, stole second, went to third on Bobby Doe's bunt single and scored on Steve Brigante's infield grounder. Later in the frame Kenny Toney drew a bases-loaded walk to make it 2-0.

Doe singled in 2 more runs in the fourth, Toney singled in a run in the fifth and Bowles plated 2 more with a fifth inning single. Leslie accounted for the final run in the sixth with a single after Brigante had singled and stolen his 21st base of the season.

Cook allowed only 5 hits, but gave up three walks and hit a batter--but was in trouble in only two frames, the fourth and the seventh when DBC scored all of it's runs.

Goins, now 3-3, was touched for Brady Brashear's one-out double, Brigante's RBI single and Leslie's RBI triple in the

Baseball Coaches Favor MHS,Coronado

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The last time Monterey lost a baseball game this season, the local taverns were selling green beer in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

Its been a month since the Plainsmen have tasted defeat, and as the 4-AAAA season begins this week, Monterey will carry a nine-game winning streak into the start of loop play.

Monterey concluded the nondistrict action at 11-3. Right behind were Lubbock High (10-4) and Coronado (10-5).

However, since the district season doesn't start until Tuesday, the coaches of the helped pass some of the time Sunday by talking about the upcoming 4-AAAA race.

Plainview coach Ed Moore: "I really don't know anything about the district. This is just my first season here and it's a rebuilding year for us. The key for us will be how our pitching. Since I haven't seen any of the other teams play, I really can't say who the team to beat will be."

Lubbock High coach Bart Hernandez: "The teams to beat will be Monterey and Coronado. Monterey doesn't have the individual stars they had last year, but I feel that their tradition and those kids just used to winning might be enough to get them through. We'll see what were made of this week as we play both Monterey and Coronado. I think its going to be a three-team race among the Lubbock high schools."

Hereford coach David Ashby: "In my opinion, I just feel that Coronado and Monterey are going to decide the district race. Coronado has everybody back, but Monterey has the tradition. Monterey has Bobby Moegle and his kids always play for him. For us to have a shot at this thing it's going to take a couple of sore arms by Coronado and Monterey. We're going to show up, but we don't have an abundance of talent."

Monterey coach Bobby Moegle: "I would have to say that Coronado is the team to beat. We just have two kids returning, while they (Coronado) have both pitchers and six starters back. They also have speed and offensive power. We've improved, but they have the experience on their side. They just have all the credentials Coronado coach John Dudley: "I would have to pick Monterey simply because they've won it (the district title) so much. I think our chances are good. Of course, the thing we've been telling our kids is that we have the opportunity to win it. But we haven't yet. Monterey has more momentum than us right know.

"We started off well, but then got into a lull. Now, I think we're coming out of it. I think it's going to be a three team race. You can't count out Lubbock High. They're the only ones who have been able to beat Monterey. The way the district race is divided in half, any team in the district can get hot and knock anybody off."

Of course, to put things in perspective, in 20 years as head coach at Monterey, Moegle has guided the Plainsmen to 17 district titles.

For you baseball trivia buffs, the last time Monterey didn't take home the loop crown was when you could still buy a can or pouch of your favorite chaw for around 40-cents. That was 1976.

Sputtering Spurs Gain Breathing Room

BOSTON (AP) — Staggering in the final lap, the San Antonio Spurs clutched a little more margin today in first place in the central division of the National Basketball Association and hoped they've turned the worst corner.

James Silas' 20-foot jump shot with four seconds remaining lifted the Spurs to a 112-110 comeback victory over the Boston Celtics Sunday. Combined with a 114-105 loss by second-place Houston to Cleveland, the Spurs added a full-game to a narrow half game lead.

The victory was the second in seven games for the faltering Spurs. But San Antonio's league-leading scorer, George Gervin, couldn't care less how it came.

"It's been a rough 10 days for us," he said. "It really didn't matter how poor we may have looked today. It's just the win may change things around."

Gervin contributed the game-high of 34 points to the victory, raising his season's scoring total to 2,253 in 76 games.

Silas' basket was the all-important score, however.

"Is surprised," he said. "Chris Ford gave me the shot I wanted. I was looking for the medium-range jumper, and that's what I got."

Ford agreed.

"I knew what he was going to do," said the Celtics guard. "Run the clock down and go over me. Despite the fact that (Bob) McAdoo was trying to help out, that's just what he did."

Silas finished with 25 points.

Gervin's 10 points in the fourth quarter allowed the Spurs to catch the Celtics in the final minutes.

Leading 58-53 at halftime, the Celtics opened the third quarter by outscoring the Spurs 21-8 to move into a 79-61 lead midway through the period. The Boston surge was paced by Bob McAdoo, who connected on three outside shots, part of his total of 28.

The Celtics have now lost eight in a row to the Spurs, a string giving Gervin no problems.

"I hope things continue to get worse for them," he said. "They killed us when we first came into the league. Now it's our turn."

ATLANTA 109-NEW JERSEY 98

ATLANTA (AP) — Dan Roundfield got eight points in one stretch as Atlanta outscored the New Jersey Nets 20-4 through most of the fourth period Sunday night and then survived a late Nets' surge to secure a 109-98 National Basketball Association victory.

With 3:26 to go and Atlanta leading 104-83, the Hawks' streak ended, and the Nets came charging back and outscored Atlanta 15-5. New Jersey had the lead several times but never by more than three points.

Atlanta led 57-53 at the half and 84-79 when the final stanza started. Then Armond Hill canned a field goal and a free throw to start the fourth period, and the Hawks were on their way to their 14th consecutive home-court victory.

It broke a three-game losing string for Atlanta and gave the Nets their 11th consecutive road loss.

Roundfield led all scorers with 31 points. Hill had 19, and John Drew got 17. Bernard King and John Williamson paced the Nets with 16 apiece.

SAN DIEGO 126, NEW YORK 116

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Lloyd Free scored 28 points and Nick Weatherspoon added 24 Sunday as the San Diego Clippers snapped a four-game losing streak with a 126-116 National Basketball Association victory over the New York Knicks.

San Diego, which still has hopes of making the playoffs, has won 19 of its last 22 games at home. The defeat was New York's 13th consecutive road loss and 33rd of the year against just eight wins away from home.

The Knicks, who trailed 58-52 at the half, rallied to take a 65-64 lead on a short jumper by Joe Meriweather with 8:32 left in the third period.

After Weatherspoon's jumper gave the Clippers the lead again, Toby Knight made a stuff shot and the Knicks regained the advantage at 67-66.

But Brian Taylor made a three-point play with 5:42 to go in the quarter as San Diego took a 69-67 lead and never again trailed. The Clippers built the advantage to 89-75 by the start of the fourth quarter.

Ray Williams led the Knicks with 22 points, while Earl Monroe and Mike Richardson each added 14.

PORTLAND 109, MILWAUKEE 107

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Maurice Lucas poured in 14 of his 30 points in the last 4:02, including one of two free throws with 14 seconds left, to give the Portland Trail Blazers a 109-107 National Basketball Association victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Lucas' free throw with 14 seconds left was the final point. The Blazers insured their eighth victory in their last nine games when Milwaukee's Kent Benson threw a pass out of bounds with eight seconds to play.

Junior Bridgeman scored 35 points for the Bucks, who led 100-92 with 4:23 to play, after a pair of baskets by Benson.

The Blazers rallied to tie 100-100 on 3-point plays by Lucas and Tom Owens and two free throws by Lucas with just over three minutes left.

Benson sank one of two free throws to put the Bucks ahead 107-106 with 36 seconds left, but Lucas sank a short bank jump shot from the baseline nine seconds later to put Portland ahead to stay.

Brian Winters missed a fifteen foot jump shot on Milwaukee's next possession, and Bridgeman fouled Lucas with 11 seconds to play. Lucas sank one of two free throws for the final point.

PHOENIX 116, DETROIT 105

PHOENIX (AP) — Alvan Adams' 23 points — including 15 in a 38-point Phoenix third quarter — paced the Suns to a 116-105 victory over the Detroit Pistons in National Basketball Association play Sunday afternoon.

Adams also contributed 12 rebounds as the Suns won their sixth in a row and 11th of their last 14 games. They now are 48-30, third best in the NBA.

Detroit, playing without Bob Lanier, who had an injured toe, and Steve Sheppard, who had a hand injury, now stands at 29-49.

The teams were tied 29-29 at the end of the first quarter, with Phoenix connecting on 48 percent from the floor and Detroit 59 percent. Detroit outscored the Suns in the second quarter to take a 52-49 halftime lead. During the first half, Detroit guard Kevin Porter had 14 assists. M.L. Carr, John Long and Porter each had 10 points for the Pistons. Walter Davis paced Phoenix with 10 points.

Paul Westphal, with 22 points including 14 in the second half, was second to Adams in the scoring column for Phoenix. Long, with 24, and Carr, with 18, paced detroit.

SEATTLE 102, GOLDEN STATE 97

SEATTLE (AP) — Dennis Johnson scored 24 points and teammate Gus Williams added 21 Sunday as the Seattle SuperSonics defeated the Golden State Warriors 102-97 in a game pitting the National Basketball Association's top two defensive teams.

Robert Parish paced the Warriors with 21 points and 20 rebonds.

The turning point for Seattle came in the fourth quarter when the Sonics defense held the Warriors to just six freethrows over a five-minute span. Seattle, meanwhile, reeled off 14 points.

In the final quarter, the Sonics sank 10 of 20 from the field compared with Golden State's five of 19. During one stretch, Seattle scored on seven straight possessions.

The Warriors finally cooled off Seattle but never got closer than four points after falling behind in the last period by eight, 97-89.

The Warriors took a three-point lead into the fourth quarter thanks to the hot shooting of Tom Abernathy. He sank all six of his shots in the third quarter as Golden State outscored Seattle by five in the quarter, 32-27.

top of the first, but rebounded from that point and only six other Chaps reached base after that.

Kevin Smith, who was 4-for-4 in the nightcap, hit his second home run of the year leading off the second and then drilled a bases loaded double to kayo Chap starter Noel Delgado (2-2) with two outs in the third, giving DBC a 4-2 advantage.

The Chaps struck back, however, as Bowles doubled to open LCC's third and. After getting two outs, Leslie singled for a run and Toney followed with a single, but Doe lined to center ending the threat.

Stan Baker's sacrifice fly got DBC a run in the fourth and the Indians, now 17-16, 1-7, got an insurance run in the fifth when Chuck Stafford drove in Smith on a bunt single.

The Chaps threatened in the seventh as pinch-hitter Scott Wolf walked to lead off. Then, with two outs, Brashear doubled to deep center, but Steve Cargil, running for Wolf, stumbled rounding third and held there. Brigante then lined to left, where Smith made a diving catch to end the game.

LCC faces a busy non-conference schedule this week, hosting Panhandle State (7-6) at 1 p.m. today and traveling to Abilene Tuesday for a 1 p.m. twinbill with Hardin-Simmons.

Gary Swann (2-2) and Dan Sanders (0-1) will get the starting nods today for the Chaps, who saw their home winning streak ended at 10 by DBC in Sunday's finale.

Parents Claim Duke Coaches Held Back Offer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The parents of a high school football player in Clinton say Duke athletic officials reneged on a football scholarship offer to their son and that they are considering legal action against the school.

Robert L. Stanley Jr. said that Duke offered his son, Kelly, a scholarship last fall, the Durham Morning Herald reported Sunday.

Stanley said that assistant coaches John Guy and Sam Story told him and his wife that Kelly, a fullback at Clinton High, qualified academically and arranged for the signing to take place in the office of his high school coach, Bobby Robinson.

Robinson said Guy and Story told him that Kelly's admission would be contigent on scoring above 700 on his college boards. Kelly scored 820, he said.

Stanley said his son was then required to have an admissions interview at Duke, and the interviewer appeared hesitant when Kelly said he had made two D's during the term.

"After that, Duke kept us in suspense for two weeks. The coaches kept saying the holdup was in the admissions office. That was the first we heard of any doubt," Stanley said.

"Kelly lost his chance to get a college education. I'm not financially able to pay his way. Duke wanted him, they changed their minds and then used the academics as an excuse," said Stanley, a sheet-metal mechanic.

Shirley "Red" Wilson, Duke head coach, said Stanley was turned down by the admissions office but said his assistants might have erred in making scholarship offers prematurely.

"We can't sign any kid until he's admitted, which is different from most schools," Wilson said. "We don't run the university. The admissions people decide who gets into school, not us."

Stanley and Robinson said Wilson is trying to get Kelly into Elon, where Wilson coached before going to Duke late last year.

"I told Red Wilson he was playing with my boy's life, promising him a scholarship. . .I want every high school player to be aware of people from Duke."

Evert Wins Pre-Wedding Match

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, in her final competitive match before her wedding, fought back for a 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Dianne Fromholtz Sunday in the championship match of a $200,000 women's tennis event at Rancho La Costa.

Miss Evert, who will marry British tennis pro John Lloyd on April 17, was soundly beaten in the first set and trailed 3-1 in the second before turning the match around.

It was love-30 in the fifth game of the second set, Miss Evert serving, when the long-time queen of women's tennis won five of the ensuing six points for a much-needed victory that started her comeback.

The 24-year-old Miss Evert won nine consecutive games before Miss Fromholtz held service in the fifth game of the final set. But it was only a brief delay for Miss Evert, who held service easily in the sixth game and broke service at love to complete the two-hour match.

The victory was worth $100,000 to Miss Evert, who only last week had failed to survive the preliminary rounds of the championships of the winter tour. Fromholtz, a 22-year-old southpaw from Australia, earned $50,000.

Miss Evert opened the match with a service break, but Miss Fromholtz broke back and broke again in the fourth game to take a 3-1 lead.

Between Miss Evert's service break in the opening game of the match and her break in the sixth game of the second set, Miss Fromholtz allowed only six points in six games serving. But Miss Evert broke in five of the final six games served by the Australian.

The victory raised Miss Evert's lifetime record against Miss Fromholtz to 10-3, but all three of Miss Fromholtz' victories have come during the past five months, the latest occurring at last week's championship tournament.

Miss Evert earned her berth in the finals with a 6-1, 7-5 triumph over Tracy Austin Saturday. MissFromholtz followed that with a surprising 7-5, 6-1 win over Martina Navratilova.

"It flashed in my mind that I gave so much effort yesterday," said Miss Evert. "I didn't push Dianne at all early today, I was just going through the motions.

"Early in the second set, I got a little annoyed with myself, I thought I was gutless. I hit the ball a lot harder after that."

Miss Evert said she adjusted her playing style midway through the second set.

"You just can't trade groundstrokes with her and win," said Evert. "I tried to mix it up, I lobbed more than I had. I think that was the difference in the match.

"Everyone thinks I'm so unemotional out there. I was going crazy on a few points," added Miss Everet. "From the middle of the second set through the third set my concentration was much better, like it was yesterday.

"When I concentrate, I'm hard to beat. When everything's on the line, in one match, I always seem to produce my best tennis."

Miss Fromholtz admitted she tired a bit and said she expected Evert would do the same.

"I got anxious, I felt like I was pretty close to winning the second set," she said. "I think Chris changed her game, she started to attack a little more and it threw my timing off. I was becoming more anxious, Chris was pressing more and it made me press more.

"I knew in my heart something was going to happen in the second set. I wondered if I could keep this up. And it turned around.

"Chris was just very determined. I was too, but it wasn't enough."

Navratilova pulled a muscle in Saturday's match and worked out early Sunday in order to determine the extent of the injury. After practicing, the 22-year-old, who has earned $271,500 this year, decided to withdraw from her third-place match with Austin.

Kerry Reid, of Australia, winner of this week's $35,000 Women's Tennis Association-La Costa Classic, was named as a substitute to face Austin in an exhibition.

The 16-year-old Austin automatically finishes third and earns $30,000. Fourth place was worth $20,000, of which Navratilova collects $15,000 and Reid $5,000.

STILL THE ONE — Chris Everet proved again on Sunday that she's still the No. 1 women's tennis player in the world by defeating Diane Fromholz in the Women's Tennis Championship at La Costa, Calif. Earlier Miss Everey defeated young challenger Tracy Austin. (AP Laserphoto)

Helmet Safety Questioned

CHICAGO (AP) — Safer helmets have reduced the number of deaths from organized football but are responsible for a marked increase in the number of broken necks causing complete paralysis, a national study has found.

The researchers say a helmet developed in recent years effectively protects the head of the player but "by doing so has allowed it to be used as a battering ram in tackling and blocking techniques, thus placing the cervical spine at risk of injury."

Even so, they say, the sport remains relatively safe in view of the number of participants.

The report, by Dr. Joseph S. Torg and colleagues at the University of Pennsylvania Sports Medicine Center, appears in the April 6 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The center, in Philadelphia, maintains the National Football Head and Neck Injury Registry.

Since 1971, the registry has documented 1,129 injuries, mostly among high school and college players. These injuries involved hospitalization for more than three days, surgery, permanent paralysis or death.

The injuries, Torg reported, included 550 fracture-dislocations of the cervical spine, of which 176 resulted in permanent and complete paralysis.

Torg points out that 75 years ago, "protection was afforded by nothing more than a full head of hair."

The current helmet-face mask protective systems involve a "bird cage" attached to a hard shell with internal suspension systems which, he says, "provide an extraordinary degree of protection to the head and face.

"As a result, coaches have developed playing techniques that use the head and helmet as a battering ram in blocking, tackling and butting," techniques recently outlawed by high school and college sports organizations, Torg said.

In the five years from 1959 through 1963, some 820,000 youths participated annually in organized football and 86 deaths resulted. By comparison, between 1971 and 1975, some 1,275,000 players participated and 77 deaths occurred.

Torg said in most injuries that resulted in compelete paralysis in the later period, the player was, "of his own volition, executing a maneuver where the head was used as a battering ram."

Thus, he said, the injury resulted from a deliberate act "rather than an accidental, untoward event."

Torg said that as a result of the study, he and his colleagues "firmly believe that the increase in verified cervical spine injuries and permanent paralysis is due to the implementation of playing techniques that use the top or crown of the helmet as the primary point of contact in a high-impact situation."

Bengal Brooks Happy

CINCINNATI (AP) — When the 1978 season ended, Cincinnati Bengals wide receiver Billy Brooks was a beaten man, unhappy with his contract and angry at the front office.

Now, however, the resentment and anger has disappeared for Brooks, Cincinnati's no. 1 draft pick out of Oklahoma in 1976, because of a meeting with Mike Brown, Bengals assistant general manager, where his five-year pact was renegotiated, giving him a raise from his old contract estimated at paying him no more than $65,000 in his fifth season.

"I am rejuvenated," said Brooks, following a two-day workout at Spinney Field. He says the reason is a change in attitude by management, personified by Brown, toward the team.

"They (the front office) really are trying to make an effort with the players," said Brooks. "I think they realize now that if you don't have happy players, you have a problem."

Brooks believes Brown has matured as an executive, gaining an understanding of the psychology of the team.

"I think Mike realizes the players need him as more than just a management figure but as a friend," he said. "He realizes he's as much a part of the team as the players are. Why, the only thing he doesn't do is break the huddle."

Brooks' turnabout is drastic, considering just three months ago he was saying "there is a cancer on this team that has to be cut out."

Now, he believes the surgery has been performed and the patient is healthy.

"When you're running happy, it changes your entire concept," said Brooks, who once estimated that 85 percent of the players wanted to leave the Bengals, resulting in their 4-12 record last year.

"If the players aren't happy ... it shows up in quarterback sacks, dropped balls," he said.

When happy, there are few wide receivers who can match Brooks. In 1977 he caught 39 passes, tops on the team, and averaged 19.8 a catch, among the league leaders.

Last year, though, he slipped to just 30 receptions in a season that included 16 games, two more than in the previous season.

"A football team has got to be a family," Brooks said. "You have to be close to your teammates and close to management. And, management has to be close to you."

'Bag Of Bones' Can Spell Doom To Hitters

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Kent Tekulve looks like an X-ray picture. One glance at the gangling 6-foot-4 Pittsburgh Pirates' reliever convinces you that if he has any muscles they must be stashed behind his ears.

His teammates delight in needling the razor-thin Tekulve, but it's only because of the great respect they have for him.

Tekulve, 31, may look like a bag of bones ambling to the mound to face a tough hitter with the game hanging in the balance, but he's sudden death to the opposition.

It was Tekulve, the Pirates' No. 1 short reliever, who kept his team in a division title race it appeared well out of as late as Aug. 12. He pitched in 91 games, 57 percent of the club's 161 outings last season. He won 8, lost 7, but more importantly saved 31, second in the league to San Diego's Rollie Fingers.

Tekulve takes the joshing about his physical stature with the same stoic approach he faces the opposition.

"It doesn't bother me," said Tekulve during a lull in spring training activities. "... maybe all these guys who are kidding me, who are so big, their careers are going to end a couple of years before mine because their bodies are going to give out on them. This body may never give out. There are no muscles to tear."

Tekulve explained that his style of pitching has evolved around his unusual physique.

"I've been effective doing what I do," he said. "I'm durable doing what I do, with my size and everything."

Aren't the pressures great — appearing in 91 games, coolly throwing that sinker that turns many a ground ball into a doubleplay and puts down a budding rally?

"The mental part is easy."

Rangers Win Game, But Lose Pitchers

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Johnny Grubb smacked a two-run homer to support five innings of shutout pitching by rookie Danny Darwin here today as the Texas Rangers claimed a 6-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Although Darwin yielded only three hits and the Rangers beat Kansas city for the second time within 24 hours, Texas received a double setback concerning their top two starting pitchers.

Left-hander Jon Matlack, scheduled to start in Thursday's American League opener in Detroit, will be idle for the next four or five days and will miss that assignment.

Ferguson Jenkins, the second man in the Ranger pitching rotation, was examined for a sore achilles tendon and told to rest for two or three days.

Warming up prior to Sunday's game, Matlack felt discomfort behind his pitching elbow and retired from the mound before throwing to a batter. An examination by an orthopedic specialist revealed "bone chips or loose bodies," according to trainer Bill Ziegler.

Matlack will receive medication and ice treatment on his arm until it is determined he is ready to pitch again.

Jenkins was scheduled to pitch in the second game of the Detroit series on Saturday, but that start also has been postponed.

Manager Pat Corrales announced Texas now would open with Steve Comer and Doyle Alexander against the Tigers. He was undecided about his starter for Sunday's series wrapup.

Grubb homered against Marty Pattin, who yielded three runs in five innings. Reliever Al Hrabosky was roughed up for three more runs in the eighth inning, the feature a two-run single by Bump Wills.

The Royals averted a shutout in the ninth inning when Willie Wilson homered off Sparky Lyle.

Yankees On Winning Track

Chris Chambliss singled home the winning run in the 10th inning, giving the World Champion New York Yankees a 4-3 exhibition baseball victory over the Detroit Tigers Sunday.

With the score tied at 3, Cliff Johnson led off the 10th with a single, moved to second on a sacrifice by Lou Piniella and scored on Chambliss' base hit off losing pitcher Jack Morris.

Yankee rookie sensation Paul Mirabella, touched for two unearned runs in the seventh, reduced his spring earned run average to 1.80. Dick Tidrow was the winner in relief.

Elsewhere, the Boston Red Sox beat the St. Louis Cardinals 9-6 with the help of a five-run fifth inning highlighted by George Scott's two-run single.

Joe Wallis cracked five hits and teammate Mitchell Page hit a decisive eighth-inning double that gave the Oakland A's a 9-8 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

Rookie Eric Wilkens earned his first Cactus League victory, allowing two runs and five hits in six innings, as the Cleveland Indians whipped the Seattle Mariners 7-3.

Greg Pryor's solo homer triggered a four-run eighth inning that carried the Chicago White Sox past the Toronto Blue Jays 10-7.

A two-run homer in the fourth inning by Barry Bonnell powered the Atlanta Braves to a 3-2 decision over the Minnesota Twins. Dave Cash's 10th-inning single drove in the winning run as the Montreal Expos edged the Houston Astros 3-2.

Dave Parker and Phil Garner each hit two-run homers to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates past the Cincinnati Reds 7-5. Steve Henderson and Lee Mazzilli hit homers as the New York Mets defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1.

Lee May pounded two homers and a double to pace the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-3 victory over the University of Miami. Chris Knapp scattered four hits over seven innings and Willie Mays Aikens hit a two-run homer as Rod Carew's replacement to lead the California Angels to a 7-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

San Diego right-hander Eric Rasmussen tossed six scoreless innings and Barry Evans and Kurt Bevacqua homered as the Padres beat the Seibu Lions of Japan 5-1 in a 7½-inning game.

San Francisco Giants hurler John Montefusco, in his best performance of the spring, gave up only two hits, struck out four and walked none as he led the Giants to a 5-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Mariners Take Realistic Attitude

By TONY BAKER

SEATTLE (AP) — April is here, which means it's time for baseball and another preseason chat with Mr. Optimism — Lou Gorman of the Seattle Mariners.

At this time last year, Gorman, the Mariners general manager, couldn't say enough good things about Seattle's young second-year team.

So sky-high were Gorman and manager Darrell Johnson over the team's potential, the pair announced out loud how disappointed they would be if the club didn't win at least 75 games.

They pointed to improved depth in the outfield, more offense and a stronger, healthier pitching staff as reasons why the team should have little difficulty expanding on its expansion season record of 64-98.

By the time October arrived, however, disappointment ran deep in Marinerville. Gorman was disappointed, Johnson was disappointed, the players were disappointed and the 877,440 fans who bought tickets to watch Seattle play in the Kingdome were disappointed.

The Mariners did not win 75 games, or even 65. They won 56 and lost 104, which mired them deep in the American League West Division cellar, possessors of the worst record in major league baseball in 1978.

Okay, it's a new season and, in some ways, a new Lou Gorman.

When quizzed about this year's Mariner team, the stored-up superlatives, the "He's gonna surprise some people" and the "He should hit with some power in the Kingdome," no longer spill from between Gorman's lips like so much hype. Rather, his speech is even, tempered by the pain a 56-104 season can inflict.

"Basically," Gorman said of Seattle's hopes in 1979, "we look to move up a notch, at least, and improve on last year's record. Potentially, we could be better.

"Last year we had some injuries," Gorman said. "Three or four guys had down years (namely Ruppert Jones, Dan Meyer and Lee Stanton). We lost 54 one-or two-run ball games. That's caused by not making the key play, not getting the right base hit, not making the right pitch — a lot of things go into it.

"Basically, I think we're an improved club. I just hope when the season's over, it'll be reflected in the standings."

Matador '9' Finishes Fifth

SNYDER (Special)—Bernard Connor and Hector Limon were chosen to the All-Tournament team as the Snyder baseball tournament concluded early Sunday morning.

Estacado finished in fifth place after falling to Levelland 8-1. The Matadors wound up with a 1-2 slate during the three-day competition.

Estacado coach Vince Buffamonte was pleased with the Matadors performance despite the below .500 record. Estacado only committed four errors and had only eight batters go down on strikes in the three games.

The tournament left the Matadors overall record at 6-8.

Estacado will now conclude its nondistrict season by competing in the Lubbock High junior varsity tournament next week.

Woolsey Tops Fem Bowlers

Jan Woolsey turned in a 1682 total in scratch all-events to lead the Lubbock Women's Bowling Association's annual tournament which reached its midway point Sunday.

The scratch all-events qualifies its winner for the annual Bluebonnet Queens tournament, an annual meet.

Highest game posted over the weekend was a 247 by Dot Gordon, and Pat Parham had the highest handicap series, 686, bowling in Class C.

The highest team game was 3057 by Anthony Welding.

A total of 78 bowlers turned in 200-plus games.

Macy, Hamilton Win Racquet Meet

The team of Macy and Hamilton defeated Molitoris and Earsley Sunday afternoon at the Lubbock Racquet Club to claim the Men's Championship crown and highlight the April Fools Doubles Tournament.

Othe division winners in the men's ranks were Johnson-Earl in Division A, Blume-Clemenson in Division B and Trammell-Standley in the C Division.

In the women's division, Henson-Riggs took the A honors, Lowe-Lynch won the B class and Covey and Lowe captured first in division C.

Baylor Sweeps Aggie Doublebill

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Home runs by Gene de los Santos and Matt Schaper carried Baylor past Texas A&M and gave the Bears a sweep of a Southwest Conference baseball doubleheader here Sunday 7-3 and 5-3.

Santos' three-run smash sparked a four-run seventh inning for the Bears, and handed Aggie pitcher Mark Thurmond, a senior, his first regular season loss in his career at Texas A&M. The Aggie hurler had won 28 straight games.

Jon Perlman went the distance for Baylor to collect the win.

Schaper's two-run homer in the fourth broke open a close game that was called after five innings because of darkness.

Andy Beene, 5-1, got the win for Baylor, which is now 22-9 on the season and 8-5 in conference play, and Mike Roberts was credited with a save.

Mark Ross took the loss for the Aggies, who dropped to 17-9 for the season and 5-3 in league play.

Young Frazier Makes Own Name, Leads Penn Victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Marvis Frazier, the 18-year-old son of former world heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, isn't allowing the national Golden Gloves championship he captured Saturday to rush him into a pro career.

Levelland slugger Robin Blake saw his dream of a national title come to an end Saturday night when he was outpointed by Ben Rodriguez of Omaha, Neb in the semi-finals of the 125 lb. division.

Still, Blake helped the Texas team to a fourth place finish in the national tournament.

"I think I've got a lot to learn before I become a pro," said Frazier after he outpointed a taller, older, heavier and more experienced Phillip Brown for the heavyweight title in the final bout of the 51st National Golden Gloves.

"I learn something every time I get into the ring. Sure, I know you can make a lot of money boxing as a heavyweight. But, I know enough about the sport to realize I'd be making a mistake to turn pro now."

Frazier started the tournament, relatively unknown as a boxer, but well known because of his father. He left as one of the promising stars for the 1980 Olympics.

Only one of last year's champions, Richard Sandoval, Pomona, Calif., repeated. Sandoval, 18, overpowered Alexander Pelen, 17, Waianae, Hawaii, and the referee stopped the one-sided fight in the second round.

Three deputy sheriffs from Nashville, Tenn., representing the Knoxville team, went home with titles. Jerome Coffee, 21, defeated Dario Medrano, 23, Lansing, Mich., in the 112 pound final with the ref halting action in the first round; Johnny Bumphus, 18, outpointed Efrain Nieves, 21, Milwaukee, for the 132 pound title; and Mike McCallum, 22, a 1977 Gloves champion who reached the Olympic quarter-finals in 1976 as a member of the Jamaican team, outpointed Donald Bowers.

Bowers, 19, Jackson, Tenn., had earned the 156 pound title last year but decided to drop down to 147 this year.

Jackie Beard, a 17-year-old from Jackson, also had his bid for a second consecutive Gloves title end with a loss in the finals. He was outpointed by Kenneth Baysmore, 17, Washington, D.C., at 119 pounds.

Other champions crowned Saturday night before a near-capacity crowd of 8,000 at the Indiana Convention Center were Roland Cooley, 18, Philadelphia, 125; Lemuel Steeples, 22, St. Louis; James Shuler, 19, Philadelphia; Antonio Ayala, 16, San Antonio, Texas; and Lee Roy Murphy, 20, Chicago.

"I'm proud of my father and his accomplishments, but I don't fight like he did. He was a slugger and I'm a boxer. I've got to be myself. I'm a different person," said Frazier, who was two inches shorter, 18 pounds lighter and six years younger than his 6-foot-3, 210 pound, opponent.

The Olympics, however, are a year away and Frazier is now thinking about making the United States team in the Pan-American Games and earning the national Amateur Athletic Association title next month.

"My toughest fight, so far, was against James Smith in our local competition," said Frazier, who took command of Brown midway in the second round with a hard right to the body.

"It slowed him and took all the air out of him," said Frazier.

McEnroe Wins WCT

MILAN, Italy (AP) — John McEnroe of the United States defeated Australia's John Alexander 6-4, 6-3 Sunday to win a World Championship Tennis tournament.

The 20-year-old left-handed ace from Douglaston, N.Y., third-seeded in the tournament, picked up $35,000 with the victory. He beat countryman Vitas Gerulaitis in the semifinals Saturday night.

McEnroe scored his second WCT success in eight days in one hour and 28 minutes. He had won the WCT tournament of New Orleans last weekend.

The American scored repeatedly with backhand passing shots and showed a powerful and nearly faultless serve. The 28-year-old Australian was fast to the net behind his serve but his attacks were neutralized by McEnroe's passing shots.

Alexander, a resident of Atlanta, Ga., had eliminated top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden in the quarter-finals of the tournament in the Milan indoor sports palace.

Playing in his first WCT final of the season, he pocketed a second prize of $17,500.

With Sunday's win, McEnroe climbed to the lead in the WCT standings with 390 points five tournaments, ahead of fellow American Jimmy Connors with 360 points. Connors did not compete here.

McEnroe broke Alexander's serve once in the first set, in the fifth game.

He broke twice in the second set, in the fifth and ninth games.

Tech Fem Netters Idled By Rain

AUSTIN (Special)— The Texas Tech women's tennis team was idle for most of the day Saturday as they, like everybody else at the University of Texas Invitational, was forced to stand by and watch the rain fall.

In the only two matches the Raiders were able to squeeze in Karen Schuchard and Sandra Carillo, of Tech, defeated Slougth and Schmidt of Nebraska 6-3, 6-3 and another Tech doubles team Cathy Mellina and Terri Moore defeated Cuellar—Jackson of WT 9-7.

The University of Florida is leading the event.

Veteran Carner Takes LPGA Win In Playoff

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Veteran Joanne Carner, with her second victory in three weeks, sank a two-foot par putt on the second extra hole to defeat Japan's Chako Higuchi after a five-way playoff in the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament Sunday.

Mrs Carner, equaling her 1978 victory total, moved past Nancy Lopez in money winnings with $61,300.

Mrs Carner, who turns 40 next week, fired a final day 71 in the nationally televised tournament. She birdied No. 14 and finished with four consecutive pars. The victory paid her $22,500. The other four won $9,675 each.

Miss Higuchi, who shot a 73, saw her 6-foot par putt slide past the final playoff hole.

Mrs Lopez, who was bidding for her third consecutive victory, started the day with a two-stroke lead but bogeyed four of the last eight holes to finish in a tie with Mrs Carner, Miss Higuchi, Jan Stephenson and Donna Caponi Young. The quintet finished at 2-over-par 286 on the par-71, 6,134-yard Mesa Verde Country Club course.

Mrs Lopez, Miss Stephenson and Mrs Young dropped out on the first overtime hole with bogeys.

Jo Ann Washam made golfing history by making a hole in one on the par-3, 168 seventh hole, her second hole in one of the tournament.

Rookie Beth Daniel, two strokes back when the final round began, pulled into a tie with Mrs Lopez by birdying the first two holes, but blew up down the stretch, struggling to eight bogeys while shooting a 6-over-par 77.

Mrs Carner, four strokes behind most of the week, said she "never dreamed" she had a chance when she entered the clubhouse two over par. "But I knew there were many critical putts to be made."

She added: "The golf course beat everybody." Only six players broke par in the final round.

Miss Washam and Miss Rankin finished two strokes behind the leaders at 288, with Kathy McMullen alone at 287 on a finishing round of 68, the only sub-par round among the top nine.

Mrs Lopez, who had ten straight pars before running into bogey trouble on 11 and 13, said afterwards, "I was lucky to get as far as I did. I'm still struggling."

The tournament, which offered the second-highest purse on the tour, was sponsored by Kemper Insurance.

Golden Act Takes Long Road To Derby

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Armed with a well-worn road map, Loren Rettele is on his way to the Kentucky Derby.

The map leads from the Bay Area of San Francisco to New Orleans to Hot Springs to Louisville.

That's the route Rettele took with Esops Foibles last year. He's on the same path again this year with Golden Act.

Esops Foibles ran in the California Derby at Golden Gate and then won the Louisiana Derby and Arkansas Derby before running fifth in the Kentucky Derby, beaten by about nine lengths by Affirmed.

Golden Act was second in the California Derby and won the Louisiana Derby March 18. He's now at Oaklawn Park, preparing for the $150,000 added Arkansas Derby April 14.

"It seems logical that we'd have to be the favorite in the race," Rettele said. "I wouldn't try to go out of town unless I thought I could win."

He said he knew that Golden Act had some ability "right from the start.

"His first start was a stake race at Del Mar," Rettele said. "He finished third. He acted like a colt who had a lot of potential. When he finally came around, he kept getting better."

Golden Act started seven times last year and won twice, including a $100,000 race at Bay Meadows. He never finished worse than third.

Earnhardt Earns Hard SE Grand National Win

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Rookie Dale Earnhardt took the lead with two pivotal pit stops with 15 miles to go, then roared away from the pack to take the first victory of his career, beating Bobby Allison by 2.7 seconds in Sunday's $110,000 Southeastern 500 Grand National stock car race.

The win, the first on the circuit by a rookie since 1974, will be worth nearly $200,000 over the course of two seasons for Earnhardt and the Rod Osterlund team.

First-place money for the 28-year-old Kannapolis, N.C. driver came to $19,800. It also put him on the lucrative Winner's Circle Awards program for the remainder of this season, worth about $75,000, and makes him eligible for the program again next season, worth another $100,000.

Allison overtook Darrell Waltrip for second just three laps from the finish. Waltrip had been leading the race until the final round of pit stops, which came with 27 laps left in the 500-lap chase on the sixth caution period of the day.

Richard Petty rallied to finish fourth after losing two laps early in the race. Benny Parsons was fifth.

The most serious crash of several during the race involved pole position starter Buddy Baker and eight-time Bristol International Raceway winner Cale Yarborough on the 211th lap. The crash knocked both cars out of the race, although Yarborough did return briefly much later.

Earnhardt showed in the top five most of the day, and led three different times for a total of 163 laps, including the final 26.

Earnhardt's crew, headed by J.C. Elder, got the rookie back out ahead of Waltrip. Waltrip kept the pressure on until about 10 laps remained, when Allison charged up and Waltrip started to slow a bit.

Earnhardt had two close calls in the race. Early in the event, he skidded past his pits on a puddle of water and had to make another stop. Then when he was chasing Waltrip late in the race, he came out of turn two too wide and smacked the wall.

Tanzanian Jets Bomb Uganda's Entebbe Airport

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzanian jets bombed Uganda's Entebbe airport Sunday, causing severe damage to the main runway Libya has used to ferry troops and arms to support Ugandan President Idi Amin, diplomats reported.

The attack was the first Tanzanian air strike into Uganda during the five-month war, the diplomats in Nairobi said. The raid appeared to be in retaliation for Thursday's bombing by a Libyan bomber of Mwanza, a Tanzanian port on the southern shore of Lake Victoria.

Diplomats said Tanzania's Soviet-made MiG-21 jets left bomb craters in the main runway and may have put the airport temporarily out of service.

Tanzanian artillery rounds launched earlier in the week had damaged another runway at the airport, located 21 miles south of the Ugandan capital of Kampala, the diplomats said.

Witnesses reported that the Tanzanian invaders had fought artillery duels southwest of Kampala with Libyan troops defending the capital.

Anti-Amin rebels claimed it was "only a matter of time" before a final assault is launched against the Ugandan capital.

Kampala residents reached by telephone said the Libyans, who have borne the brunt of Kampala's defense since the virtual collapse of Ugandan units, began trading artillery fire with the Tanzanians in the early afternoon. Explosions were heard for more than an hour, they said.

Diplomats in Kampala said the Libyans apparently had pushed the Tanzanians and their Ugandan-rebel allies back to a front about 12 miles southwest of Kampala, out of artillery range of the city.

The invaders had shelled the capital for three days last week, setting off an exodus of thousands of the city's residents, including foreigners. Many casualites were reported in the bombardment.

The diplomatic sources, who asked not to be identified, said Amin was still reported to be in Kampala, despite rumors that the Ugandan president had fled northward. But his whereabouts could not be confirmed.

Reliable sources in Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, said the Tanzanian troops were dug in at Mpigi, a village 20 miles southwest of Kampala. It was unclear whether this meant only vanguard units were as close as 12 miles to Kampala.

The Uganda National Liberation Front, an anti-Amin group preparing to establish a provisional government if he is ousted, denied the invasion force had been driven back at all and said a new attack against Kampala was planned.

A UNLF statement issued in Dar es Salaam said the Tanzanians had "not lost an inch of ground," were still occupying positions overlooking Kampala and the airport in Entebbe, 21 miles south of the capital, and that "it is only a matter of time before we begin our assault on both."

In a dispatch from Kampala, the official Yugoslav newspaper Politika reported Libya had flown at least 600 more troops into Uganda despite persistent Tanzanian shelling of the Entebbe Airport area. Politika said the Libyan force had been estimated at 2,000 men before the reinforcements arrived.

Western military observers say the Libyans appear able to count on only limited help from the remnants of Amin's army. The invasion force has been estimated at 7,000 Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles, although some sources have put the figure as high as 20,000 men.

The fighting began in October when a Ugandan invasion force seized 710 square miles of territory in northwest Tanzania. Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, an old foe of Amin's, ordered an offensive that drove the Ugandans out and then moved north with the declared goal of toppling the Ugandan leader.

Diplomatic sources both in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam said Tanzanian Prime Minister Edward Sokoine traveled to Kenya Saturday in an unsuccessful effort to persuade President Daniel Arap Moi to cut off shipments bound for Uganda Ugandan exile leaders insist the shipments include weapons, but Kenyan officials deny it.

The Nairobi Times reported Sunday that two Libyan planes had flown out of Nairobi Saturday after spending two days there and that a third still remained at the airport. Libya has no scheduled air service to Nairobi and Kenyan officials did not disclose the purpose of the flights.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has long been an ally of fellow Moslem Amin.

Tanzania Getting Little Help In Fight Against Uganda

By SERGE SCHMEMANN

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — If he succeeds in toppling Idi Amin, Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere can expect few accolades from other African states.

In fact, there is no evidence that either impoverished Tanzania or the ill-armed Ugandan exiles fighting beside Tanzanian troops have received even a word of encouragement, much less money or guns, in their drive to topple Uganda's President Amin.

Amin, by contrast, has received arms and men from his fellow Moslem, Col. Moammar Khadafy, whose troops have become the backbone of Amin's defenses with the reported disintegration of the Ugandan army. The Ugandan strongman has received money from the Arab world, and Kenya has kept its supply lines open to the seacoast.

Over the years, the Organization of African Unity has refused to denounce Amin, despite reports his government has slain tens of thousands of Ugandans during his eight-year rule, and it has also refused to call him the aggressor in the current conflict.

The reason most African nations do not go to Tanzania's aid in its fight with Amin, and at the same time do not speak out against massive Libyan intervention, lies in the very heart of African political ideology, formed by the demise of colonialism.

This continent is chronically unstable because of irrational national boundaries drawn up by colonial powers, and it is strewn with warring tribes, factions and ideologies. Consequently, the principles of territorial integrity and national sovereignty have acquired a supreme importance.

National sovereignty and the struggle against white-minority rule in southern Africa are the ties that bind the members of the Organization of African Unity together.

Only a handful of Africa's young nations are not threatened themselves by secession, rebellion or war caused by ideological, tribal or religious animosities. For most African nations, the only hope for serious economic and political development requires some semblance of national unity and stability.

To achieve that end, the OAU has determined, for better or worse, that the national boundaries laid down by the departing colonialists must become the starting point for the future.

Thus, when Cubans came to bolster the shaky government of President Agostinho Neto in Angola, and the Soviets helped Ethiopia drive out Somalis from the disputed Ogaden region, and the French helped Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko defeat rebels trying to seize control of Shaba province, other African nations largely remained silent.

Many an African leader has privately deplored foreign intervention and called for African solutions to African problems. But the official line is that a nation's leader, whatever his merits, is within his rights to protect his sovereignty, even if he needs to call in outside help.

Analysis

Nyerere maintains that in the current war Amin is the aggressor and he the aggrieved. He said he sent his troops across the border only after Uganda invaded Tanzania last October and that he invaded only to protect his nation against future aggression.

But at the same time, Nyerere has made little effort to conceal his personal dislike for Amin, branding him "a murderer, a liar and a savage." The man Amin ousted from power in 1971, former Ugandan President Milton Obote, is a close friend of Nyerere's and was given refuge by the Tanzanian leader after his downfall.

Although many educated Africans consider Amin an embarrassment, they say his theatrical attacks on the European powers — dubbing himself "Conqueror of the British Empire," for example — have made him one of the best known and most popular leaders among ordinary Africans.

Amin was roundly applauded by passersby at an OAU conference last year, and one African minister said, "There is a mystique of bigness and arrogance about him that fascinates the average African. If you elected king of all Africa, Amin would win."

Judge Sirica Talks About Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Judge John Sirica said Sunday Richard Nixon should have been indicted for the Watergate cover-up and sent to prison if convicted.

Sirica, the U.S. district judge who presided over the original Watergate burglary case and then the cover-up trial of top Nixon aides, left little doubt he is convinced Nixon would have been found guilty if tried.

He said he first thought former President Gerald Ford was right in pardoning Nixon because "maybe the country had had enough of Watergate and the president had been punished enough and all that business."

"But as the (cover-up) case dragged on and it went through the appellate procedure, when I had more time to reflect on what happened and so forth, I would have rather seen Mr. Nixon face an indictment with the presumption of innocence," he said.

Sirica, whose book on Watergate "To Set The Record Straight" will be published later this month, made his comments on CBS' "60 Minutes" television program.

The 75-year-old jurist, who retired as chief judge but still hears a limited number of cases, was asked what sentence he would have imposed if Nixon were convicted in his court.

"I would have sent him to jail, but I don't know what sentence I would have imposed," he said.

He said the country could have taken the trauma of Nixon in prison because the American people would have seen that even a president isn't above the law. "And I think that a lot of people think that he was above the law," he said. "That he really got away with something that other people couldn't get away with."

Sirica said he wishes he hadn't prohibited radio and television stations from broadcasting the White House tapes that led to Nixon's resignation.

"Yes, I wish, frankly, that I had gone the other way now and let the public hear those tapes," he said.

After hearing the tapes, he said, the American people wouldn't "have any doubt in their mind whatsoever about his participation in this matter."

But Sirica, an active Republican before being appointed to the bench, said at first "frankly, if not secretly, at least openly and to myself, I was hoping he wouldn't be involved in this situation."

The judge said he doesn't want history to say politicians drove Nixon out of office. "He resigned, number one, because he was going to be impeached, and he knew it; or he was going to be indicted," he said.

Sirica said he had decided to fine Nixon between $25,000 and $50,000 a day if the president had refused to hand over the Watergate tapes.

"I knew he loved money," he said. "I've heard this and read about it and I said, 'If I hit him in his pocketbook heavy enough, he'll come around fast.'"

Work Force Expected To Grow By 1.5 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A survey of 6,000 firms indicates more than 1.5 million U.S. workers will join the ranks of the employed from April through June, Manpower, Inc. reported Sunday.

Mitchell Fromstein, president of Manpower, which finds jobs for skilled and unskilled workers, said the survey of 10 economic sectors in 200 cities shows that "employment should continue to increase at a pace approaching that of last year and the year before."

"In each of these years," he said, "more than 1.5 million workers were added to the U.S. work force in the second quarter. It appears that we will see the same magnitude of work force increase in the second quarter of 1979."

Leading the expansion is the durable goods manufacturing sector — a keystone economic area where, Fromstein said, current hiring intentions "are the strongest ever registered in the history of the survey."

The survey said 37 percent of the manufacturers polled said they plan to add workers while 56 percent expect no changes and only 5 percent anticipate work force reductions.

In the economy as a whole, 31 percent of employers surveyed said they plan to increase employment in the second quarter, 60 percent expect no changes, 6 percent anticipate reductions and 3 percent are unsure of their plans.

"Second quarter findings show a dramatic change from those registered at the beginning of 1979, when only 24 percent of those polled had plans to increase employment, 59 percent expected no changes, but 14 percent anticipated reductions," the survey said.

Three percent were unsure in the first quarter.

Only 6 percent of employers in the construction, mining and non-durable goods manufacturing trades said they expected reductions in the work force.

In the construction trades, 52 percent plan additional hiring, 39 percent expect to maintain current levels and 3 percent were unsure.

Increases were expected by 40 percent of the mining industry employers, no changes by 51 percent and 3 percent unsure.

"Education employers project the least favorable report for new hiring in the history of the survey," the report said, with only 11 percent planning increases, 76 percent expecting no change and 10 percent planning reductions.
