Still 'go' for local air show

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

A proposed air show to finance construction of a Vietnam Veterans Memorial will be produced despite a slow start in garnering funds for the show, and a show official said today spectacular, fatal accidents in Europe Sunday probably won't affect the turnout expected.

Announced at a July 31 press conference, the show is set for 10 a.m. Oct. 22 with flying events to begin at 2 p.m. Funds raised through sales of the tickets are dedicated to a Vietnam Veterans Memorial, according to airshow committee member Philip Welch.

Welch said today that while sponsorships — being sold to businesses — had suffered a slow start, about a fifth of the number needed for the show to draw an estimated 20,000 persons has been sold.

"We have had some pretty good luck the last week," Welch said. "We're about 20 percent of the way into the number of sponsorships we needed to sell."

"It's just a matter of getting the foot soldiers out talking to people," he said. "In Big Spring, you can get help. But you have to go out and talk to the people face to face."

He said he doubted that accidents at two airshows during the weekend — including a Sunday crash that killed more than 40 persons in Germany, injuring as many as 500 — would cut into the audience expected at the airshow.

Air show ban sought; 45 die

RAMSTEIN, West Germany — West Germany today suspended military air shows and called on NATO to abandon such stunt flying spectacles after three Italian fighter jets collided and one slammed into a crowd in a fireball, killing at least 45 people.

About 500 people were injured, including dozens who were critically burned by jet fuel, in the accident Sunday at Ramstein U.S. Air Base. Bodies were charred and clothes burned off victims in what appeared to be the world's worst air show tragedy involving spectators. Many of the dead were children.

Defense Minister Rupert Scholz quickly canceled a military air demonstration show scheduled for next month, and today announced that Bonn officials and their NATO allies were suspending any further military air shows in West Germany.

More than 300,000 people, most of them Americans and West Germans, were watching as the Italian air force team's 10 jets, flying about 180 feet off the ground, intersected over the field from three directions.

Two planes plunged to the ground and a third careened in flames into the crowd, setting off an inferno more than 100 feet high and 100 feet wide. Terrified spectators ran for their lives as the flames scorched scores of people and destroyed buses, trucks and cars.

"Some were missing skin on their arms," said DeeDee Arrington Doke, a reporter for the unofficial U.S. military newspaper Stars and Stripes. "A lot had black burns."

She said that after the crash "people started crying and screaming. The ones who were stopped were hugging each other and crying like they were saying 'What are we going to do?' The ones who were running were screaming."

AFN, the U.S. military radio network, today quoted American officials as saying at least 46 people were killed — including the pilots of the three Italian planes — and 500 injured at the base 60 miles southwest of Frankfurt.

Authorities issued no list of dead or injured and said identification of victims would be a lengthy process because many people were badly burned. The nationalities of the dead were not known.

"They've been working throughout the night to identify the bodies. Then the next of kin must be notified," said Ramstein spokesman Sgt. Eddie Lee. He said he did not know when a casualty list would be available.

Rudolf Tartert, head of the local West German government district that includes Ramstein, said 45 people were killed. There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy.

"Of those injured, 345 are seriously injured," Tartert said.

"There are many children among the dead and injured," said Kris Kumpf, a medical assistant who treated some victims. "And the worst part of it is, we're still trying to find some of the parents," she told reporters.

Bentsen: Quayle's too young

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen continues to cast doubts on the experience of Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, who in turn says he is saving his criticism for the top of the Democratic ticket.

"Frankly, he would not have been on my short list as I look over my Senate colleagues," Bentsen said Sunday when asked about Quayle on NBC's "Meet The Press." "He obviously was on the short list of the hard right."

"Now, I wouldn't say that he couldn't grow into the job; he probably could. But if a tragedy befell a president, you'd have to be able to move in immediately and take over and do what has to be done in facing whatever issues that confront you at that time."

Bentsen, in suggesting that Quayle could not step right up to presidency, was continuing a line of attack that was clear last week: Show that the 44-year-old Indiana senator lacked the depth and experience for the job that is only a heartbeat away for any vice president.

Quayle declined to criticize his 67-year-old colleague in the Senate, saying that his gripe is with Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis. In last week's seven-state campaign, Quayle's only mention of Bentsen was to praise his views on defense spending and other issues where he stands to the right of Dukakis.

"I've served with Sen. Bentsen for almost eight years. He is not the issue," Quayle said Sunday in an interview with The Associated Press. "The issue is Michael Dukakis. Michael Dukakis' view of America is a much different view than George Bush's. Michael Dukakis' approach to national defense, his approach to the economy, his approach to child care — all of those approaches are much different than George Bush's."

Quayle said doubts about his qualifications are nothing that a good debate wouldn't cure.

"The American people are just beginning to see Dan Quayle," he said. "I'm going to continue to talk about the issues. When we have the debate between Lloyd Bentsen and Dan Quayle, the American people will have a lot better picture of who will be the best qualified vice presidential candidate."

Newlyweds' surprise

They make citizens' arrest to regain stolen auto

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Moments after they were married, a couple spotted the groom's car stolen two days earlier, chased it in their rented limousine, forced the driver to pull over and held two men until police arrived.

Johanna and Michael Jones, on the way to their wedding reception, made the citizen's arrest while dressed in formal bridal attire.

"It was a good omen to have something returned on our wedding day," said Mrs. Jones, 30.

"We couldn't believe it," Mrs. Jones said in a telephone interview Saturday. "Our friend Bill who was driving the limo said, 'Nah, that's not your car.' But I said, 'Yes it is, it's got the dented fender.'"

"I still had my bouquet in hand and I jumped out in my wedding gown," Mrs. Jones said.

"We yelled to people who stopped to see what was going on to call the police," said Mrs. Jones, a technical writer for a computer company. Her 31-year-old husband is a bank programmer.

The two men in the car told the Joneses they had bought the vehicle from somebody else and were unaware it had been stolen, according to Susan Reed, a friend of the couple.

The two men were arrested without incident but only the driver, Roberto Mojica, 22, was booked for investigation of auto theft, said Officer Phil Schneider.

Mojica was in custody Sunday and scheduled for arraignment this week.

"I've been doing this for seven years and I've never seen anything like it," said Schneider, 27. "Their wedding photographer stopped and took a few snaps but it would have been funny if they could have gotten a photo of (Mrs. Jones) hitting the suspects over the head with her flowers."

The car, stolen Thursday while the couple was arranging their wedding ceremony, was released to the Joneses; a friend drove it on to the reception. The couple left for a Hawaiian honeymoon Sunday.

'Survivor' takes city hall reins

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Newly-appointed Big Spring City Manager Hal Boyd underwent the scrutiny of critics this summer and survived.

Big Spring — like most of West Texas — has experienced hard economic times, and in his capacity as interim city manager, Boyd has taken the brunt of complaints from the public.

A native of Lamesa, Boyd graduated from high school there and attended Texas Tech University for two years.

He worked in the restaurant business for 15 years and owned and operated a tile and abstract company from 1964-66.

Boyd, who turned 58 in June, later accepted the executive director's position of a Community Action program in Dawson County — currently West Texas Opportunities — before going to work for the Department of Labor in 1967.

Boyd said he had several job offers in 1973, but chose to accept a position as business manager at the former Malone-Hogan Clinic, now Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

"I supervised every department there except patient care and was in charge of over 300 employees," he said.

In 1980, he defeated three other candidates in capturing a city council post. He served from April 1980 until June 1981.

"I agreed to run for the position after being asked to by a number of influential people who objected to old guard politics," Boyd said. In July 1981 he was named manager of the airport and is proud of the things he has accomplished during his tenure.

"I don't see how the council can have a problem with that (administration of the airport). I've turned it into a money making operation," Boyd noted.

As airport manager, Boyd supervises day-to-day operations, maintenance and upkeep, leasing and rent collections.

The airport includes 2,000 acres of land, Boyd said.

He also serves as Emergency Management coordinator and is in charge of preparing an emergency plan of operations in the event of a natural disaster.

He is also co-chairman of the Aviation Safety Commission and reports directly to the Federal Aviation Administration.

Boyd believes he has the experience to handle the encompassing responsibilities of the city manager's job.

His 6-month stint as interim city manager when Mack Wofford resigned because of personal financial problems in March was his second baptism of fire in that capacity.

When former City Manager Don Davis resigned amid controversy in February 1986, Boyd filled in for a 5-month period.

"I was senior staff director at the time and Mr. Davis had already given me the authority to handle any kind of responsibility when he was away," he said.

Boyd learned how to handle a crisis when serving during that period.

"I'll never forget it. We had a water (wastewater treatment) plant breakdown, torrential rains in June and the Comanche Trail Dam break on the last day of August," he recalls.

He also learned how to bite the bullet.

"When an assistant city manager resigned to take a position in another state, I realized we

Tobacco major cause of death

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of people with AIDS could be double the number of cases confirmed worldwide, but tobacco reigns as the greatest killer, the new director-general of the World Health Organization, Dr. Hiroshi Nakajima, said.

He said the World Health Organization estimates tobacco use is responsible for 2.5 million deaths per year, but Nakajima did not underplay the serious spread of the disease AIDS.

Although 108,000 cases have been confirmed worldwide, he said the number of people suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome is likely double that.

Most international health experts such as Nakajima believe AIDS is far more prevalent in the developing countries than indicated in official reports. Those countries lack the resources to maintain an accurate count and underreport the extent of the disease in their communities.

Tanker strikes Houston bridge

HOUSTON (AP) — A Liberian tanker struck a highway bridge over the Houston Ship Channel when the ship's crew failed to lower a cargo boom, officials said.

The boom, which was left in a vertical position as the ship powered slowly up the channel, hit a support beam and pulled metal construction rods up through one lane of Houston's Loop 610 bridge, officials said.

State highway department spokeswoman Diana Roberts said engineers have estimated damage to the bridge at $35,000-$40,000.

The tanker Telamon also sustained damage in the Sunday afternoon accident, but was still seaworthy, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said.

"There were no reports of injuries, but one of the booms was severely damaged," said Petty Officer Donald Cain. "In fact, they were dragging it in the water as they were coming in."

Mexican president-elect promises end of caciques

COMITAN, Mexico (AP) — Bloody land disputes in southern Mexico in recent years may slow proposed reforms of President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Salinas, who will take office in December, said he will bring more democracy to Mexico and rid the country of rural land bosses, or caciques, — Indian for "chief."

More than 120 people have been killed in the Mexican state of Chiapas in the last six years because of the disputes.

"The problem is not only about land. We have to have justice with our peasants," Patrocinio Gonzalez Garrido, Salinas' choice for governor of Chiapas, told the Dallas Times Herald.

While the caciques' political clout diminished in most of Mexico, it has strengthened since 1979 in Chiapas.

Farmland has always been scarce in Mexico — only 15 percent is deemed arable. Since the Mexican Revolution, more than 260 million acres of expropriated or newly developed land has been distributed to 3.5 million peasants through land reform programs.

In the pine-covered mountains, vast jungles and fertile valleys of Chiapas, there are added racial and class tensions between the state's indigenous groups and the mestizo population, between independent peasant unions and the government, and among the various branches of government-sponsored, peasant labor groups.

But by far the most violent clashes have involved the landless peasants — most of them Indians — and the caciques.

Some peasant leaders, however, are skeptical that the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, will be able to do anything about the problem.

"We don't expect anything to change," said Luis Lopez, the state leader of CIOAC, an independent peasant organization linked to the Mexican Socialist Party. "That's just election talk."

CIOAC leaders, who claim a membership of 8,000 mostly landless peasants in Chiapas alone, argue that the problem is rooted in the continued existence of large landholdings, many owned by government-supported caciques, and by the acquiescence of the PRI-affiliated peasant groups.

But others, such as Jose Felix Frias, the state manager for the federal agrarian reform minister, say "there is simply no more land to be had."

Border Patrol plays big role in drug war

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Several months ago, two Border Patrol agents were lying in ambush on the muddy banks of the Rio Grande River when they saw two men wading through the water from Mexico.

The agents called on them to stop, the two pulled out weapons, a gunbattle ensued and one of the aliens was killed. The other fled, dropping 40 pounds of marijuana.

The incident, recounted by Texas Border Patrol agent George Gunnoe, underlines the closely intertwined tasks of interdicting drugs and illegal aliens.

"Smuggling aliens and drugs go hand-in-hand," said Hugh J. Brien, chief of the Border Patrol, which is the paramilitary enforcement arm of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Last year, the agency intercepted more than 60 percent of the drugs caught along the southwestern border: 209,281 pounds of marijuana, 12,813 pounds of cocaine and some 50 lbs. of heroin, according to figures supplied by the INS. The rest of the drugs was apprehended mostly by the Customs Service, according to Customs figures.

The Border Patrol also stopped some 1 million illegal aliens, down from the 1985 high of 1.8 million.

Ironically, the patrol is the only government unit taking part in an interagency anti-drug effort without earmarked funding. The INS is working to change that and hopes to get some $60 million if Congress passes a drug enforcement bill later this year.

Counting on those funds to augment its $210 million budget, the Border Patrol has begun a drive to recruit 1,000 additional agents to patrol the 2,000-mile U.S.-Mexico border against aliens and drugs.

Of the agency's 3,600 agents, 2,900 are on that border and the rest on the Canadian front.

"We're ideal for this job. We're on the border, we know the terrain, our agents are the best trackers around and they all speak Spanish," said Brien, a naturalized American of Irish origin.

Since 1986, when the patrol was included in an interagency campaign to interdict drugs, the number of its narcotics seizures has more than doubled to 2,751 in 1987. From last October through April, the patrol intercepted 2,236 drug shipments from Mexico.

The U.S.-Mexico border still accounts for about one-third of the cocaine entering the United States and 40 percent of the marijuana, according to the Drug Enforcement Agency.

The agents patrol on foot, horseback, light aircraft and all-terrain vehicles. They also use sensors and low-light television cameras to monitor the border, Brien said.

"We don't have Star Wars technology" like the Coast Guard's balloon-mounted radars, Brien said, but the Border Patrol has 25 assets the other agencies don't: Belgian Malinois dogs especially trained to sniff out drugs and people.

The Malinois, a docile version of the German Shepherd, have detected 244 drug shipments, some of them buried under loads of onions or rocks, Brien said.

Politicians pay tribute to former state governor

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Vice President George Bush's presence at a memorial service for former Texas governor and U.S. senator Price Daniel was an act of friendship and respect, Bush said.

The Republican nominee for president and his wife Barbara flew here from Houston on Sunday, arriving moments before the service for Daniel, 77, who died Thursday of a stroke at his ranch near Liberty.

Daniel's funeral and burial was Saturday at Liberty, and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, and his wife B.A. attended those services. Stopping to talk to reporters as he left the First Baptist Church, Bush said Daniel had served in the Senate with Bush's father, Prescott, "many years ago."

Daniel, a Democrat, was in the Senate in the 1950s, leaving before his first term ended to run for governor.

"I admired this man like all Texans, and we just wanted to fly over and pay our respects, not only from this generation of Bushes but from the previous one. He's a great Texan, a great American, and we have great respect for him," Bush said.

Daniel was said to have held more elected jobs in Texas than anyone else, including posts in the executive, legislative and judicial branches as state House member, attorney general and Supreme Court justice.

He retired in 1979 after eight years on the court, and several former and current members of the Texas court were in the audience.

Former Democratic governors Preston Smith, who appointed Daniel to the court, and Dolph Briscoe also attended the service, as did former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, Texas Gov. Bill Clements was in Taos, N.M., on vacation.

Polish government proposes talks with striking workers

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — Strike leaders said thousands of workers joined a stoppage at a huge southeastern steel mill today when management tried to reopen it two weeks into Poland's worst labor unrest since 1981.

Word of the broadened strike at the Stalowa Wola steel and heavy machinery plant came a day after Communist authorities said they might let Solidarity leader Lech Walesa take part in broad-based reconciliation talks.

Management had ordered the 18,000-worker plant closed Friday because of a strike that began a week ago, but allowed workers into the yard this morning. More than 5,000 joined the roughly 1,000 strikers, said Piotr Niemczyk of the Solidarity Information Center in Warsaw.

Phone calls to plant management were not answered.

On Sunday, Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski endorsed the idea proposed by authorities of a "round-table" discussion with strike leaders.

In a speech broadcast to the nation at the end of a two-day meeting of the communist party's policy-making Central Committee, he directed his most severe criticism at the party-appointed government of Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner.

Gen. Jaruzelski said that by failing to deal with economic and political tensions, the government had helped precipitate the strikes that began Aug. 16.

The general, who heads the communist party, refrained from directly blaming the Solidarity free trade union movement for the strike wave and hinted at a government shakeup in the near future.

Communist party spokesman Jerzy Majka said the government was prepared for reconciliation talks without any preconditions, but added that he had no information on when such talks could begin.

He called Walesa "one of the possible candidates" for participation in such talks, but added that no one could take part "as a representative of an illegal organization."

"It's up to the other side to make the first move," Majka added.

In addition to higher wages to offset inflation of nearly 60 percent, the strikers have demanded the legalization of Solidarity, which was banned after being crushed in a 1981 military crackdown.

Walesa last held a meeting with high-level communist authorities in early 1982 before he was released from internment.

In Gdansk, Walesa rejoined striking workers at the Lenin shipyard Sunday morning, injuring himself slightly as he hauled himself over the 7-foot fence after a police officer tried to stop him, aides said.

Solidarity estimated today that about 13,500 people were occupying 10 strikebound workplaces. About 20 enterprises were idled at the height of the strike wave.

The idea for round-table talks was proposed Friday by Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak, who said they would be to take up grievances of striking workers after the strikes, as long as they observed the nation's legal and constitutional order.

Two shootings are under investigation

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring Police are investigating the second shooting incident in two days after an 18-year-old man told investigators two men he knew fired at him late Sunday.

Rosando Rodriguez, 815 Creighton St., told police the men each fired one shot at him and fled about 11 p.m. in the 1100 block of North Scurry Street, according to police reports.

Rodriguez was not injured and there have been no arrests in connection with the incident, reports stated.

Police also continue to investigate the shooting of a 19-year-old man early Saturday at the Northcrest Apartments, although an arrest has not been made. Detective Sgt. Bill King said today.

Joe R. Trevino, 002 N. Main St., No. 8, was released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center Sunday, a nursing supervisor said.

Trevino was shot from behind in the face, back and shoulder about 4 a.m. at the apartment complex, King said.

It was the third shooting incident at the Northside apartment complex in the last six weeks.

Accident victim's condition improves

A 45-year-old Big Spring man injured in a motorcycle accident early Saturday has shown some improvement but remains in critical but stable condition at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said today.

Richard Covell, 2505 March Circle, was thrown from the back of a motorcycle driven by Terry Watson, 36, Gentry, Ark., after the vehicle struck a curb in the 2800 block of Avenue A about 2:10 a.m. Saturday, police said.

Both Covell and Watson were transported by ambulance to the hospital. Watson was treated and released for minor injuries.

Weston was cited by police for failure to control speed.

"I doubt very seriously that the accidents will be having an effect on us over here," he said. "I saw on television where they were showing film, they've had four accidents over there in the past few weeks. They were showing an Airbus that crashed at an airshow in Europe this morning."

"We are not going to be involved in that type of airshow activity," Welch said. "As far as the formation flying, we do not have any of that scheduled among our events."

"In the United States, most of the formation flight is done by a very limited number of people. It's in the hands of the (U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds demonstration team) T-Birds and the (U.S. Navy) Blue Angels."

"So it's mostly in the military," Welch said. "There are a very small number of formation people in the private end, but we don't have any of them on our schedule."

He said the group has made a commitment to put on the air show, despite restrictive funding.

"It's going to be real tight. We could draw as many as 20,000 people, but it's going to depend on our sponsorship. If we have the money to promote this like we need to, we can draw a crowd. But to do that we need to get outside of Big Spring and draw from a larger market."

With its primary emphasis on Midland and Odessa, the show's promotion is expected to be extended into the Lubbock and Abilene markets, Welch said. Television advertisement will be restricted to Midland and Odessa, he said, with mostly radio promo-

The U.S. military set up special telephones that Ramstein service members could use to call home in the states.

Hans-Juergen Vollmer, spokesman for the local government district, said he believed the accident was caused by pilot error. He did not elaborate.

Demonstrators opposed to air shows because of the risk of accidents rallied outside Ramstein as Sunday's show began. After the crash, some federal and local officials were prompted to demand an end to the orchestrated aerial stunts.

Scholz said in a statement today that officials will study ways for West Germany and its NATO allies to demonstrate their air forces' abilities to the public without endangering civilians.

"Until suggestions for effective measures are complete, there will not be any more air shows with military aircraft in West Germany, this with the agreement of the air forces of our NATO allies," Scholz announced.

He also said he was banning West German military aircraft from doing stunts like the one that led to Sunday's disaster.

"The events at Ramstein confirm in a really horrible way how dangerous such spectacles are even for civilian observers," said Walter Kolbow, a federal lawmaker for the opposition Social Democratic Party.

"These air shows must be stopped once and for all," said Friedel Laepfle, interior minister for Saarland state.

The Passau Neue Presse newspaper today suggested the disaster could sour West German attitudes toward NATO forces.

"Pictures like those resulting from the Ramstein tragedy will not strengthen the views of the citizens in important areas of defense preparations," the newspaper said.

Members of the Greens Party called for Scholz's resignation.

At least seven aircraft accidents have occurred involving NATO equipment this year in West Germany. One occurred at a Hanover air show on May 7, when a British military helicopter's rotor blades struck a loading ramp. Two British airmen were killed and 12 spectators injured.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said Sunday's disaster was the worst air show tragedy in terms of spectator deaths. Thirty people died when a jet crashed into a crowd in 1952 at Farnborough, England, the BBC said. Forty-six people, most of them U.S. Army paratroopers, died in a helicopter crash at a 1982 air show in Mannheim.

didn't really need him, so I eliminated a $24,000-a-year position. I also cut 30 to 35 city staffers in a streamlining move," he said.

Boyd feels that as city manager he is responsible to everyone in Big Spring.

"I am a direct link between the community and its citizens and the council. My job is to report to the council and the community, both individually and collectively," he observed.

Although he is aware the economic downturn has hurt Big Spring, Boyd firmly believes the city still has much to offer.

"We're still the crossroads of West Texas. We have good people and there are still opportunities. I want to help our local and regional businesses expand and grow," he said.

Boyd is realistic enough to know, however, that attracting new business is a difficult process.

"In my opinion, economic expansion and relocation is very slow and directly related to the economy. Businesses are only moving because they want you to give them something or are looking for a better deal," he said.

Acutely aware that the work of city employees has been roundly criticized recently, Boyd knows their image must be upgraded.

"I know there are problems, but I will be working to improve that. There are 27 square miles in the city of Big Spring and water, sewers and streets must be maintained and improved," he said.

Boyd and city department heads are concentrating on a "3 to 5 year plan" designed to improve aging equipment and upgrade police and fire department vehicles, he said.

"I'm looking forward to hitching up the belt and getting to work," he noted.

The city manager admits he is concerned with the council's decision not to raise ad valorem taxes and sanitation rates to increase revenues.

As an alternative, the council decided on Tuesday to spend the balance of the reserve funds to pay off bond indebtedness and gain access to approximately $201,000 in other funds.

"We can carry on austere for the next two or three years and I'm willing to do the best job I can with the tools the council has provided. I'm still worried about what would happen if a disaster or major incident occurred," Boyd said.

and West last week, and will leave again Wednesday for a swing through the Southeast that will take him through to Labor Day.

Former presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, interviewed on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said meanwhile that the Dukakis campaign can become too preoccupied with trying to win back conservative Democrats who have been voting for Ronald Reagan.

"I should think the Democrats' strength is not between the 45-yard lines with this obsession to recall the Reagan Democrats who are with Quayle under the Bush," he said.

He said that more could be accomplished by massive registration of new voters, and reaching out to the working and non-working poor.

Bush was traveling today from Houston to St. Louis, where he planned a tour of an aerospace plant, and then to Nashville for a rally and visit to the Reserve Officer Training program at Middle Tennessee State University.

He returns to Washington tonight for a series of day campaign trips to various states and may head west to California and Colorado on the weekend.

Bush's last day of his Texas trip was low-key compared with the usual hectic pace of campaigning. He went to an Episcopal church service in Houston, attended an Astros baseball game, and flew to Austin for the memorial service for former Gov. Price Daniel, a longtime friend.

Talking to reporters aboard Air Force Two, Chief of Staff Craig Fuller said Bush will continue to stress his pro-military views in the coming week and paint Democratic rival Michael Dukakis as weak on defense, a theme his campaign managers think is going over well.

Fuller said Bush would likely return to Texas by mid-September, and in the meantime send surrogates and family members to work the state.

Dukakis was touring several western Massachusetts communities today and Tuesday as part of his annual summer visit to the region. He also planned to use the area, which is rebounding economically, for two national economic speeches. He was returning to Boston Tuesday night and departing for a campaign swing through western states Wednesday.

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A 23-year-old man who barricaded himself inside a convenience store and held police at bay for 1½ hours Friday night escaped from Big Spring State Hospital for a short time Sunday, according to police reports.

Hospital officials reported Gabriel Armando Barraza-Herrera missing about 3 p.m.; he was captured by patrol officers a short time later, reports stated.

Barraza-Herrera entered the 7-Eleven store, 300 Owens St., about 10:40 p.m. Friday, threatened a woman clerk with a gun and allegedly shot out windows, drank beer and smoked cigarettes while threatening police.

He was subdued and arrested about 1½ hours after the incident began and charged with making terroristic threats, criminal mischief and theft under $20, police said.

The clerk escaped unharmed and no injuries were reported, according to police.

Barraza-Herrera, 622 Caylor St., was later transported to Big Spring State Hospital for emergency commitment, police said.

Police also reported investigating the following incidents:

• Bryan Neal Anderson, 24, Gale, was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and failure to maintain single lane. He was released on unspecified personal recognizance bonds.

911 budget tentatively approved

The 911 Emergency Telephone District Board tentatively approved a $47,000 budget Saturday for the 1988-89 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, Carl Dorton, administrator, said.

The budget was projected on the basis of 911 collection revenues over the past several months, Dorton said.

Board members met in a budget work session for 1½ hours at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark Saturday morning.

Before final approval is granted, the Big Spring, Coahoma and Fort Worth City Councils and the Howard County commissioners must give their approval, Dorton said.

Included in the budget are salaries, purchases of equipment and remodeling costs, Dorton said.

The 911 system is designed to allow citizens access to aid more quickly during an emergency. A caller needs only dial three digits during an emergency to gain immediate access to police, fire or ambulance services, eliminating separate 7-digit telephone numbers.

Dorton said the next 911 board meeting will be held sometime in September.

Leaders must end spread of the bomb

Basking in the glow of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces treaty, politicians of all stripes speak optimistically about prospects for reducing the risks of nuclear war. But they talk too little about one of the hottest nuclear topics of all: the scramble of many of the world's non-nuclear nations to build atomic weapons.

That furtive race threatens global stability and challenges U.S. political candidates, who should campaign for and after election to stifle the spread of the bomb.

Several decades back, the world's first five nuclear powers — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — agreed on the wisdom of closing the nuclear clubhouse to new members.

The upshot is the 1968 International Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty. It bars countries with nuclear arms from transferring them and prohibits nations without atomic weapons from obtaining them. The accord also requires international inspection of nuclear facilities.

But that treaty can be circumvented, and it is worthless against a cheater who shrugs off the world's scorn. Many nations are shrugging: Even as they proclaim peaceful intent, India and Pakistan appear locked in competition to buy nuclear technology abroad and build up nuclear arsenals.

A report issued last year by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace said that South Africa and Israel probably poses atomic devices. And ample evidence points to operation of an atomic black market, which could eventually funnel nuclear material into terrorist hands.

Such nuclear obstinacy should matter to Congress, which is bound by federal law to bar aid to any country that flouts non-proliferation principles. But lawmakers and White House officials are characteristically reluctant to force the issue with allies it considers indispensable.

And even if the United States spurned the nuclear outlaws, a host of other nations — from Argentina and China to Spain and Yugoslavia — would likely remain ready to supply their nuclear needs.

The treaty thus will remain feeble until the United States musters its non-proliferation resolve. It should do all it can to persuade recalcitrant countries to forswear the bomb. And it should join with other advanced nations in developing firmer rules to restrain nuclear trade and pressure transgressors to reform.

To fulfill those objectives, the country needs leaders who fear the spread of the bomb enough to make non-proliferation a top concern.

Election of judges might change things

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Forget about running for President if you plan to change the state of the country's. The last bastion of real hands-on democracy is at the local level — city and county — and everything beyond that is controlled by federal judges.

If you want to have an impact on the way the country is actually required to be run, make your career goal an appointment as a federal judge in the South.

Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta — that's where the real action is when you talk about changing things.

Sarah T. Hughes, William Wayne Justice. Barefoot Sanders. Those are the names behind the scenes — and in center stage, sometimes — and the minds that truly run this country.

The reason? Our Constitution, beloved as it is, leaves federal judges room to interpret it as they see fit — and according to their interpretation, any law in the land can be declared unconstitutional.

Even, in extreme cases, federal laws. The right to keep and bear arms has fallen under such heavy attack, the amendment guaranteeing it may be endangered next.

Federal judges can decree — have decreed — that states and counties must take up the slack in reduced federal programs. As an example, a federal judge has ruled that the Texas Department of Corrections must — not can or should, but must — add "administrative good time" to the sentences of convicted felons in 30-day blocks each time the prisons reach 95 percent capacity for five consecutive days, or 20 days in any 30.

That's to protect the rights of the convicted, and guarantee their release dates accelerate.

Never mind the rights of the law-abiding. We're not supposed to be protected from the criminal element by putting convicts in prison anymore. They're supposed to be rehabilitated — and treated with far more deference and care, in many cases, than non-lawbreakers.

The rights of the convicted, and the rights of the accused, were ignored for too many years. Then came the Miranda decision — and the pendulum began a swing that has carried it too far.

A recently re-broadcast television movie pointed out an incidence of the sublime indifference to the rights of ordinary citizens, or the rights of victims and their families. It was a fictionalized account of a New York Supreme Court ruling.

The court held that in the light of federal mandates for attorneys for the indigent and the right to have counsel present during questioning, evidence — including a confession — in a rape and murder case was not admissible, because the suspect's court-appointed attorney in another rape for which the suspect was out on bail was not present during questioning of the man.

Write from the heart

Never mind that he waived the right to have an attorney present, said he did not want an attorney and waived his right to remain silent — all legally and properly.

Despite such damaging evidence as possession of jewelry identified as stolen from the murdered girl, the suspect was freed immediately — and unconditionally. He could not be prosecuted.

Granted, the movie was slanted. Our Constitution is designed to protect us all equally — and if the police had picked up the wrong man, the shoe would have been on the other foot.

Bail is not meant as punishment. Constitutional rights are meant to protect the innocent. Both are outstanding concepts.

The concepts, however, have been changed via interpretation by federal judges — and all of us have suffered for it.

It's time we took a long, hard look at the practice of appointing federal judges for life.

Barefoot Sanders would be out of a job if the people of Texas had anything to say about it, and so would William Wayne Justice, if the opinions I've heard can be relied upon. Personally, I'd like to see both of them spend time among the indigent.

Maybe they'd mandate standards that would put an end to rat-ridden tenement houses crammed with dopers and prostitutes, and find a way to force the federal government to ensure high standards.

Maybe they'd rule that children are entitled to decent, clean housing and families have a right to live on the wages of one breadwinner, and threaten to cut enough excess from federal department budgets to ensure that concerned agencies did their jobs properly.

And maybe, just maybe, the world would be a little better for everybody.

Quotes

"It was horrible, horrible. It's going to take a long time to forget this." — Krista Banks, a waitress at the Ramstein, West Germany, U.S. Air Base, describing Sunday's air show disaster.

"I suppose if there was another category for most annoying show on television we'd win that, too." — Ed Zwick, co-executive producer of ABC's baby-boomer series "thirtysomething," after the show won four Emmys.

"It wanted to rear up and get us but we're going to get it first." — Pat Kaunert, U.S. Forest Service fire information officer, as firefighters set fires aimed at denying fuel to the largest fire in Yellowstone National Park.

History may have been changed with computers

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

For years now, I have been encouraged to produce my column on a computer.

"It's so much easier on a computer," people say. "You can move things around and edit and insert without any trouble."

I have resisted, however, and this is coming to you, as always, from my 1953 Royal manual.

There are a few problems with my typewriter. The "e" character falls off its arm occasionally, for instance. In fact, I once wrote an entire book with no "e's."

"What are these blank spaces?" asked my editor when I turned in the manuscript.

"Everywhere you see a blank space," I said, "put in an 'e.'"

My editor enjoyed that. It gave him something to do and it made him feel worthwhile.

What I really worry about when I think of writing something on a computer is, Where does all that writing go to when you push a button and it vanishes from the screen?

Is it kept in a batch of wires in the back of the computer? Does it go to some central location in a vault buried underneath a K-mart in Fort Wayne, Ind.?

And what else I've always wondered is, What guarantee do I have that when all my work disappears from that screen, it will come back when I summon it?

"Don't worry," say computer types, "it can't be lost."

Right.

The Titanic couldn't sink. Liston couldn't lose to Clay. Dewey was going to beat the stuffings out of Truman. And Star Wars will work.

Did you hear what happened to the keynote speaker for the Democratic convention?

Ann Richards, Texas' state treasurer, was working with speech writer John Sherman.

Mr. Sherman had completed a rough draft of the speech and had stored it in his computer.

But when he hit the print command on his magic box, only one page came out. The rest had disappeared into that black void out there.

Mr. Sherman even called in a technician, but he couldn't bring back the speech, either. So, Sherman had to write the blamed thing over again.

What if Margaret Mitchell had written "Gone With the Wind" on a computer and when she tried to call it back, it wouldn't come?

Do you think Margaret Mitchell would have written the whole thing over again?

Of course not. She would have taken a hammer to her computer and then gone into another line of work and we'd never have known about Rhett and Scarlett.

What about other great pieces of writing? The United States Constitution, for instance.

Ben Franklin calls Thomas Jefferson and says, "Tom, send me over a copy of the Constitution."

"Sorry, Ben," Jefferson would answer. "I stored it in my computer, but now I can't find it anymore."

They would have been scrambling around trying to put the Constitution back together again and might have missed important stuff like freedom of assembly and it might have been against the law even to have political conventions, which might not have been a bad idea, but let us leave that for another time.

I'm flat out of typing paper anyway.

Street violence kills 12, injures 11

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Weekend street violence that claimed 12 lives forced police to deploy extra officers in one area and caution against "unrealistic expectations" today at a second gang summit aimed at ending the warfare.

Nine of the deaths were gang-related, police said. Three other people were killed and one was critically wounded in three separate shootings late Sunday night, but police hadn't determined whether they were gang-related, too.

The deaths of four people in three shootings in the Harbor-Wilmington area south of downtown Los Angeles prompted police to send extra officers Sunday to back up the usual force and visit parents of reputed gang members, police said.

Klan preaches white power at rally

CHICAGO (AP) — Ku Klux Klan supporters waved Nazi flags and taunted hundreds of marchers commemorating a speech made by slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. during a tense afternoon that led to 14 arrests.

About 900 police officers, some on horses and others carrying clubs, filled Marquette Park on Sunday and separated the KKK rally from the multiracial group marching to mark the 25th anniversary of King's "I Have a Dream" speech.

Officers surrounded the marchers — about 300 blacks, whites and Hispanics — as they entered the park from a nearby church. Several hundred of the white supremacists tried to confront the marchers but were held back by police.

Consultant worried about prison

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A consultant linked to the Pentagon procurement investigation says he never asked about the sources of sensitive information he received from other consultants, and neither did the companies to which he passed it.

"Companies never ask you where you get the information," Thomas Muldoon said in an interview published Sunday in The Hartford Courant. "There was never any doubt what I was being paid for."

Muldoon has been named in court papers in connection with a federal investigation into whether consultants obtained confidential or classified information about Pentagon competitions and sold it to defense industry officials who wanted an edge in competing for multimillion-dollar contracts.

Muldoon, who worked for Hartford's United Technologies Corp. and several other defense contractors, described an informal and extensive network of consultants, government officials and defense contractors whose interests in passing information often meshed.

Seven hurt as grenade explodes

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — A racial confrontation between whites wielding baseball bats and rock- and bottle-throwing blacks culminated Sunday in the explosion of a grenade, which injured seven people, authorities said.

Four of the injured were juveniles, including a 12-year-old. None of the injuries appeared critical, but one 17-year-old boy was admitted to Manatee Memorial Hospital for treatment, authorities said.

Soviets destroy nuclear missiles

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has begun destroying its SS-20 missiles in line with the U.S.-Soviet pact to eliminate the superpowers' intermediate-range nuclear forces, according to Tass.

It said three of the multiple-warhead SS-20s were blown up Sunday as part of the compliance with steps outlined in the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces treaty. Under the accord, the two superpowers are to get rid of all of their nuclear weapons that have ranges of between 300 and 3,400 miles.

Tass said Sunday's demolition occurred at the same location where the SS-20s were tested — at the Kapustin Yar site 600 miles southeast of Moscow.

The official news agency said representatives of the 40-nation U.N. Conference on Disarmament observed the destruction of the missiles.

About 600 SS-20s are to be destroyed at Kapustin Yar in batches of three or more on the 15th and 30th of each month for the next three years, Tass said.

It said that on Thursday, two SS-20s were destroyed by launching in the Siberian area of Chita amid pine and fir trees.

One SS-20 was blown up July 22 at Kapustin Yar. American inspectors insisted that the missile be dismantled so they could check the dimensions of its stages, and it then was blown up because it was dangerous in the dismantled state, according to Tass.

Overall the treaty requires the United States to scrap 867 medium-range nuclear-capable missiles and the Soviet Union to destroy 1,752.

The first U.S. weapons destruction under the treaty is scheduled to begin Sept. 8.

Iran and Iraq resume peace talks

GENEVA (AP) — Iran and Iraq resumed peace talks today amid concern the negotiations might be near stalemate because Iraq has demanded full sovereignty over the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, its only outlet to the sea.

The talks resumed in their fifth day at a downgraded, technical level, because both countries' foreign ministers removed themselves after a snag Sunday night.

Late Sunday, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar met for six hours with the separate delegations and acknowledged that the talks had run into difficulties over the withdrawal of troops behind internationally recognized borders.

Three other crew members died and three were missing and presumed dead, the navy said. The missing men were believed to be inside water-filled compartments of the submarine, 100 feet below the surface.

On Saturday, rescuers used a diving bell to remove 21 sailors who had been trapped inside the vessel. Another 24 sailors were rescued Friday night.

Divers search for missing sailors

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Navy divers searched for three missing sailors today after rescuing 21 from the wreckage of a Peruvian navy submarine that sank to the ocean floor after being rammed by a Japanese tuna boat.

Officials said the captain of the Pacocha died while trying to save his men as the submarine sank Friday evening about three miles off the port of Callao, eight miles west of Lima.

Wildlife officers placed a 200-yard restriction zone around the 83-ton animal, fearing the activity would antagonize it.

"She has been very tolerant, gentle and caring but she ... could be feeling sensitive, particularly if she's about to calve," said a spokeswoman for the National Parks and Wildlife Service.

The whale was first sighted off the eastern coast a week ago. Officials said it was probably part of a herd migrating from Antarctica.

Botany Bay, named for its profusion of flora, was the first landing of famed British navigator Capt. James Cook, who was credited with discovering Australia in 1770.

Death toll climbs to nearly 1,000

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Search teams recovered the bodies of 35 more victims of the Aug. 21 earthquake in the mountainous region between Nepal and India, raising the disaster's death toll to nearly 1,000, officials said Sunday.

Nepal's Home Ministry said officials have confirmed the deaths of 708 people in Nepal from the Aug. 21 quake, 35 above its previous count. India has reported 277 Indians perished.

The Home Ministry also said 1,551 Nepalese were injured and 171 people in serious condition were flown by helicopters from the remote region to hospitals in Biratnagar.

EPA moves to fill void

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is moving to fill a congressional void with plans to ban new pollution sources in the nation's most populous area.

EPA officials, speaking on condition they not be identified by name, say Administrator Lee Thomas will impose the sanction this week on a major chunk of the smog-plagued Los Angeles metropolitan area.

The ban on construction of new pollution sources, the minimum penalty for failing to meet federal air-quality standards, would take effect at midnight Tuesday with the expiration of a stopgap law that has prevented EPA action against cities and areas with dirty air.

Emmy Awards

Baby boomer shows win best series

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — ABC's baby boomer shows, the 1980s ensemble drama "thirtysomething," and the 1960s nostalgia comedy, "The Wonder Years," won as best series Sunday night at the 40th annual Emmy Awards.

Tyne Daly won her fourth Emmy as lead actress in the police drama "Cagney & Lacey" and Michael J. Fox of "Family Ties" won his third as lead actor in a comedy series.

Richard Kiley was picked as best lead actor in a drama for the canceled but acclaimed series "A Year in the Life," and he chastised NBC for the "corporate myopia that killed a fine show."

John Larroquette won his fourth straight Emmy as best supporting actor in the comedy "Night Court."

Beatrice Arthur joined her two "Golden Girls" co-stars, previous winners Rue McClanahan and Betty White, in picking up the Emmy for best actress in a comedy series. Estelle Getty, who plays the feisty matriarch on the NBC series, won as best supporting actress.

The award for best supporting actress in a drama went to Patricia Wettig, the struggling young mother with a rocky marriage on "thirtysomething." The new serio-comic series about people in their 30s struggling through the 1980s won four Emmys.

"The Wonder Years," another new show last season, is a grown man's recollection of coming of age in the 1960s.

Larry Drake picked up an award for best supporting actor in a drama series for his sensitive portrayal of a mentally retarded office boy on "L.A. Law."

His award and an editing Emmy were the only honors won by "L.A. Law," which led all shows with 19 nominations and was last year's big winner.

No one series or network dominated the awards, dominated in recent years by NBC. ABC won 21, CBS won 20, and NBC won 19. The Public Broadcasting Service won seven and Home Box Office, in the first year cable networks were eligible, won three. Syndicated shows also won three.

The most Emmys — five — were won by a special "Julie Andrews ... The Sound of Christmas."

CBS' "Irving Berlin's 100th Birthday Celebration" won the award for best variety special, beating out NBC's David Letterman, Fox's Tracey Ullman and the Smothers Brothers on CBS.

"The Murder of Mary Phagan," NBC's fact-based story of a businessman wrongly convicted and lynched for the murder of a 13-year-old girl won as best miniseries.

Best lead performances in a miniseries or special went to Jason Robards in NBC's remake of "Inherit the Wind," and Jessica Tandy for "Foxfire: Hallmark Hall of Fame" on CBS. She played a backwoods widow coming to terms with the death of her husband, played by Miss Tandy's real-life husband, Hume Cronyn.

British actress Jane Seymour's portrayal of Maria Callas on ABC's "Onassis: The Richest Man in the World," won her an Emmy for best supporting actress in a miniseries or special. John Shea won the supporting actor award in that category for his role in ABC's "Baby M," as William Stern the natural father in the New Jersey surrogate mother court case.

Writing awards went to "thirtysomething," CBS' "Frank's Place," and "Jackie Mason on Broadway" on HBO.

Directing Emmys went to NBC's now-canceled drama "St. Elsewhere," ABC's comedy "Hooperman," the CBS miniseries "The Attic: The Hiding of Anne Frank," General Foods Golden Showcase, and the public TV special "Celebrating Gershwin: Great Performances."

Robin Williams won an Emmy for "ABC Presents a Royal Gala."

"Now I am officially overwhelmed!" said Larroquette, who picked up his fourth-straight award for his portrayal of a skirt-chasing assistant prosecutor on the NBC comedy spoof of the legal system. He jokingly thanked the Emmy voters for their "magnanimous generosity and their keen eye for talent."

"I didn't expect this to happen this time," said the newlywed Fox, who won three years in a row for playing the up-and-coming yuppie Alex Keaton on "Family Ties." "I can't be any happier than to say, 'I thank my wife, Tracy.'"

Ms. Daly, whose co-star Sharon

Gless won in the category last year, was not present to pick up her statuette for her portrayal of Detective Mary Beth Lacey in the series that almost was canceled in its first season in 1982 and won't be returning next season.

Sunday night's show on Fox Broadcasting reunited oldtime co-stars Mary Tyler Moore and Dick Van Dyke, and William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy of "Star Trek," as presenters of the Television Academy of Arts and Sciences Awards.

Other presenters during the ceremony at the 3,000-seat Pasadena Civic Auditorium included Fox, Danny DeVito, Tracey Ullmann, Ms. Gless, Penny Marshall, Garry Shandling and Alf. There was no single host this year.

Executive producer Lorne Michaels, the creator of "Saturday Night Live," was brought in by the academy in hopes of enlivening the Emmy show, which most critics considered a four-hour yawn last year.

"This show won't take itself too seriously," Michaels said.

To that end, it featured a "designated acceptor" for absent winners — actor Tony Danza. He was kept busy throughout the night as others winners were not present, and after a half-dozen walks to the stage, he cracked: "Now I'm mad; where are these people?"

To add to the merriment, Michaels enlisted "Saturday Night's" Nora Dunn and Jan Hooks as the "Sweeney Sisters." They gave mockish versions of television theme songs and trooped the stellar audience squealing at the celebrities.

Last year the Emmy telecast received its lowest rating on record. That was the first time the Emmys had not been presented on ABC, CBS or NBC. Fox outbid the big three networks and entered into a three-year contract.

For the first time this year, programs broadcast on cable were eligible, as long as they were available to 50 percent of the nation's population. Five cable networks managed to collect 21 nominations among them.

The Emmy telecast, which normally is scheduled for late September, was earlier this year to avoid competing with the Olympic Games, said academy spokesman Murray Weissman.

Meeting men on street corners

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a very nice man I met on a street corner. You probably won't believe this, but I was lost and this nice-looking, well-dressed man approached me and asked if he could help me. I told him my plight and he walked me to where I was going, and that's how we got acquainted.

When people ask how we met, I'm embarrassed to say I just met him on a street corner. It just doesn't sound right.

Abby, what if you meet a person in a restaurant? Would you call that a "pickup"? How about getting acquainted in a library? (That has a little higher-class ring to it.)

Dear Abby

Meeting someone in a bar sounds rather cheap, but some nice people go to bars alone and don't mind if someone strikes up a conversation with them.

I avoid eye contact with people I pass in a park, especially if they're walking slowly, or like they're just killing time.

I think you get the idea. What's OK and what isn't?

FRIENDLY, BUT CONFUSED

DEAR FRIENDLY: It's OK to be friendly, but never should a woman or man get into an automobile with a stranger, regardless of how "nice" he appears to be. It's OK to strike up a conversation with a stranger on a train or plane, in a library, a store, a bar or restaurant, but it's NOT OK to go anywhere (to his place or hers) that is so private that you can't say goodbye in case you've misjudged the stranger.

U.S. Open may be kid's time to shine

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

JERICHO, N.Y. — Timing, we have been told, is everything in life. This may be the case in tennis, too.

Certainly, Andre Agassi, 18 years old and poised before an invitingly vacant throne at the top of American men's tennis, would not argue.

And so, with the axiom etched firmly in his psyche, Agassi arrives at the pantheon of his sport in his country this week at the U.S. Open, prepared to declare this time as his time. He is the heir apparent.

Agassi has been at the Open twice before, each time exiting in the first round, beaten by Henri Leconte and Jeremy Bates. Expect him to stick around significantly longer this time.

This tournament once belonged to the likes of Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe, a couple of Yankee Doodle Dandies. And they will be on hand again, of course, warm reminders of another era. They were then. Agassi is now.

If you believe in momentum, he could not be in a better condition. He has won seven tournaments this year, his last four in a row. He carries a 22-match winning streak into the Open after dispatching Yannick Noah, 6-3, 6-6, 6-4 in the finals of the Hamlet Challenge Cup Sunday. That was after he beat Boris Becker in the semis.

These are a pair of tennis heavyweights that Agassi defeated on the eve of the Open. Noah eliminated Ivan Lendl, No. 1 in the world, in the semis the day before, in just 59 minutes. Becker, a two-time Wimbledon champion, has been sixth or better in the world for the last three years.

The last time they played before Hamlet, Becker defeated Agassi at Indian Wells, Calif. Afterwards, he put his arm around the American teen-ager's shoulder and said, "I hope you don't get any better."

There's bad news, Boris. He has.

Agassi squeezed his way into this fast company in a hurry. He was ranked No. 25 in the world at the beginning of the year and goes into the Open ranked No. 4. And his position was punctuated by his performance at the Hamlet, a cozy little tournament held a week before the Open about 20 miles from Flushing Meadows.

Bock's score

This event is played on Deco-Turf II, the same surface as the Open, which is, of course, no coincidence. On it, Agassi, his mane of hair flowing majestically behind him, flourished.

He won the first set against Noah, 6-3, then lost the second 0-6, broken three times and looking like somebody who ought to be in a country club junior tournament instead of this prep for the Open.

It was almost as if he was playing possum, though, because in the third set, Agassi was back, trading shot for shot with Noah.

Agassi explained his second set shutout, saying, "He got the early break and I didn't get my second wind. He serves so big. I started thinking about the third set."

This seemed sensible and, if timing indeed is everything, what better time to break your opponent than when the score is 4-4 in the deciding set? Agassi obliged and suddenly, he was serving for the match. And just like that, it was over.

Noah was not terribly distressed. He is a fun-loving player and he had fun with Agassi, talking, mugging, even leap-frogging the net after one point to personally deliver the ball to his opponent.

"Lots of times, guys forget it's a game," Noah said. "They're tense and nervous. That's not fun. It's fine to try hard and compete but it's not fun to scream and complain on every point."

The message was clear. This American does not follow the tantrum tradition others did. For now, at least, Agassi does not participate in the sideshow silliness that so often interfered with matches of his predecessors.

That's not to say that he plays boring tennis. The long hair, the quick grin, the between-the-leg shots (an old Noah trick) make him a crowd favorite.

Rangers' sale in Gaylord's hands

By TIM LOTT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Signs hanging in Arlington Stadium sum up what some baseball fans think about Eddie Giles trying to sell the Texas Rangers to men who may move them away.

"Help! Mr. Gaylord — Eddie's Gone Mad," said one hanging from a railroad car as the train left the Texas Stadium on Friday.

On that day, Giles announced an agreement in principle to sell the American League team to Tampa, Fla., businessman Frank L. Morsani and the New York and New Jersey-based Mack family for between $80 million and $85 million.

"Mr. Gaylord" is Edward L. Gaylord, whose Gaylord Broadcasting Co. owns a third of the team.

"We're giving it a good, hard look," Gaylord told The Associated Press Sunday. "We've got plenty of time."

Because of a contract he has with Chiles, Gaylord has until Sept. 23 to decide whether to exercise his right to match any offer to buy the team.

Gaylord said, "... money's not the obstacle."

"It's out of our hands now," Morsani said. "Anything Mr. Gaylord does now has to be done independently on behalf of Gaylord

Dorsett Questions rise after mediocre preseason

DENVER (AP) — Tony Dorsett's mediocre preseason is raising questions about whether he is capable — at age 34 — of filling the Denver Broncos' hole at running back.

Dorsett failed to get a handle on the Broncos' complex offense, and he averaged barely 2 yards per carry in four preseason games, half his career average that netted him more than 12,000 yards for the Dallas Cowboys, fourth-highest in NFL history.

Dorsett said he had "come a long way" in learning the offense.

"Not being sure of what I'm supposed to do takes away from me as a runner," he said. "I've been so accustomed to when you make a mistake, you forget about it. The next play is the most important play."

"But when you're learning a new system you don't forget about it. You find yourself saying, 'I don't want to make another mental error.' What it does is it takes away some of your aggressiveness and your ability to run with the authority you're accustomed to."

Some critics say the former Cowboys star, traded to Denver three months ago, was distracted by an avalanche of national print and television media interviews.

"I never thought I'd come in here and get all the media attention I have," he said. "I'm still trying to get myself acclimated to the whole scenario."

Throughout the preseason, Broncos fans waited for Dorsett to break a long run. His longest was an 11-yarder against the Rams. He finished the exhibition season last Thursday with 39 yards against the Colts on 14 carries.

However, Dorsett ran behind the Broncos second-string line much of the time, behind blockers as unfamiliar with the Denver offense as he was.

After the Colts game, Coach Dan Reeves replied to a question about Dorsett's lackluster performance by saying, "A lot of times, that's not just the running back, that's an obvious reference to the line."

Reeves has kept the preseason game plans basic so he won't tip off regular-season opponents to new plays, sending runners mostly off tackle.

Dorsett also has averaged a half-a-yard more per play on artificial turf during his career, while all four tuneups were played on grass.

And the great running back admits maybe his calendar has been too crowded.

Phillies provide answer for Dodger slump

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia provided plenty of brotherly love to the Los Angeles Dodgers this season.

The Dodgers entered the weekend series with the Phillies having lost three straight games and their lead being threatened in the National League West.

On Sunday, John Tudor allowed four hits in seven innings as the Dodgers defeated the Phillies 5-0 for a sweep of the three-game series. It was the Dodgers' 11th straight victory over the Phillies this year, the only loss coming in Los Angeles.

NL

The Dodgers' sweep of all six games in Philadelphia represented the first time a visitor has done that since Veterans Stadium opened in 1971.

Los Angeles left Philadelphia with a 5½-game lead over second-place Houston and 6½ over San Francisco.

On Saturday, Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 4-2 for Tom Lasorda's 1,000th victory as Dodgers manager.

"My brothers and family were here, so it was really nice," Lasorda said.

HOUSTON — Houston Astros' first baseman Glenn Davis (27) looks to the umpire for the call as Pittsburgh Pirate Andy Van Slyke was doubled off first during the Astros-Pirates game Sunday.

Lasorda said, "I would like to have done it in Los Angeles, but if not, this would have been my second choice."

Lasorda's choice on the mound

Sunday was Tudor and the left-hander continued his mastery over the Phillies.

Tudor, 8-6, struck out five and walked one in improving his record against the Phillies this season to 4-0 with a 0.68 earned run average. He's 12-4 lifetime against them.

"I don't understand it," Tudor said of his success against Philadelphia. "I can't understand why they don't score more runs. I know they're not playing well and I guess slumps are contagious, but I really don't like to face them."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 4, Houston 3; San Francisco 7, New York 4; St. Louis 5, Cincinnati 3; Atlanta 4, Chicago 2; and San Diego 5, Montreal 3.

The loss was the Phillies' fifth straight and the 13th in 14 games. Franklin Stubbs' three-run double in the first inning gave the Dodgers a 3-0 lead.

"They got three runs on one base hit and against a pitcher like Tudor, right away you're in trouble," Phillies manager Lee Elia said. "His fastball isn't that overpowering, but he changes speeds and hits corners. He really knows how to pitch."

And, he knows how to beat the Phillies. Pirates 4, Astros 3.

Pittsburgh rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to beat Houston at the Astrodome.

Reid wins Series playoff in first hole over Watson

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The themes from Mike Reid and Tom Watson were adversity and defeat.

But, since this was the World Series of Golf, the talk eventually got around to birdies and bogeys. "It is not the birdies you make to win, it's the bogeys you make to lose," Reid said.

That's the way it turned out. Watson made a bogey and he lost.

Reid made a par and he won on the first playoff hole Sunday of the rain-delayed tournament.

Watson — the five-time British Open champion, once the greatest player in the game and a recent inductee into the World Golf Hall of Fame — went head to head with Reid, a shy, soft-spoken man whose major claim to fame was that he'd won $1 million without winning a tournament.

It's David and Goliath. It's one of the great players of all time against that skinny little guy who sweated out 11 years on the PGA Tour before he finally crept in there and won a golf tournament in Tucson last season.

The little guy won.

Watson let him off the hook on the first playoff hole, pushing a 30-inch second putt for a three-putt bogey, while Reid got it down in two for the routine par.

The birdie didn't win. But the bogey lost.

"It's disappointing," said Watson, winner of only one title in the last four years.

"It's disappointing," said Watson, a five-time British Open champion who was seeking his 33rd American tour title.

"It's disappointing in that I didn't make it happen when I had a chance to make it happen," he said.

"My putter let me down a little bit," Watson repeated, then let some of the disappointment and frustration creep through as he added:

"But that's been the norm for Tom Watson here lately. And he doesn't like it any better than anybody else.

AKRON, Ohio — Tom Watson reacts after missing a par putt on the first playoff hole Sunday at the World Series of Golf.

"But in defeat you have to take positives. I played well. I hit the ball well. For the most part I putted well. I have to take that and build on it," he said.

Reid spoke of adversity and positive thinking. "You have to look at the challenges as opportunities," he said.

"I'm not supposed to win on this golf course. It's too long. It's raining. They're saying it's raining and the golf course is playing long and Mike Reid is a short hitter."

"And I'm saying it's more opportunities. A challenge is an opportunity and they're talking about adversities and I'm saying 'Give me more adversities.'"

He got them. Rain. Long course. Great players in contention. He beat them all. He won with a routine par when the great player missed a short par putt on the first playoff hole.

"I can't believe it," Reid said.

Yankee loss leaves skipper scratching head

By The Associated Press

Lou Piniella is starting to question the pride of the Yankees.

"I feel as bad as anyone, and if the players don't feel the same way, they don't have any pride," the Yankees manager said Sunday after California beat New York 13-2, sweeping a three-game series by a combined 32-8.

The Yankees led Friday's opener 6-0 in the third inning and then gave up 32 consecutive runs over the next 26 innings.

AL

New York has lost four straight and eight of 10. The Yankees, 6-13 since Aug. 9, have allowed 10 or more hits in 14 of their last 19 games and 184 runs in 26 games this month, a 7.08 average.

Detroit lost to Milwaukee 12-10

Sunday, so New York remained 5½ games out of first.

"This whole series was embarrassing. It really was," said Don Mattingly, whose name began to be mentioned in trade rumors over the weekend. "We're only 5½ games out, but it's hard to feel like we're in a pennant race. It's hard to stay positive. You can't avoid it once in a while, but this has happened too often. We've gotten blown out too many times."

There's nothing to say to the team, according to Piniella.

"I've said no more meetings," Piniella said. "We've already had more meetings than the Kremlin."

Tommy John allowed nine runs and 12 hits in 4½ innings.

"I know I was embarrassed,"

John said. "I don't like to look bad. There's nothing I could do. I should've either thrown the ball better, so they wouldn't hit it, or thrown it worse, so they wouldn't hit it harder for some simpler plays."

In other games, Milwaukee beat Detroit 12-10, Baltimore beat Oakland 2-1 in 11 innings, Kansas City beat Minnesota 12-3, Boston beat Seattle 7-2, Cleveland beat Chicago 5-4 in 11 innings and Toronto beat Texas 6-5 in 11 innings.

Tony Armas had four of California's 19 hits, which equalled the team's high for the season, set June 17 against Kansas City. Chili Davis hit a three-run homer in the seventh.

Chuck Finley, 8-12, pitched 5½ scoreless innings, allowing six hits.

Brewers 12, Tigers 10. Paul Molitor's two-run, seventh-inning homer snapped a 10-10 tie after Milwaukee bounced back from deficits of 5-0 in the third and 9-4 in the sixth.

But that was just a sidelight compared to what Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn did with his lineup card.

Robin Yount was forced to leave the game in the third after Detroit manager Sparky Anderson alerted umpires that Yount was listed as batting both third and fifth in Milwaukee's lineup. Designated hitter Mike Young was supposed to bat fifth.

"I goofed," Trebelhorn said. "I stupidly wrote out the fifth spot with Yount's name instead of

Martinez edges Broadrick for city title

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
For the Herald

Felix Martinez dethroned four-time champion Ronnie Broadrick to capture Championship Flight honors at the 48th Annual City Golf Championship at Comanche Trail Park Golf Course this weekend.

Felix Martinez fired an even-par 71 Sunday for a two-day total of 141. As it was, his efforts were barely enough to hold back defending champ Broadrick.

After seemingly taking himself out of contention with a five-over par 76 Saturday, Broadrick roared back with a five-under 67 Sunday to close within two strokes of the new champion.

Jerry Dudley took first place in the Men's First Flight with a 78 Sunday to go with a first-round 76 for a two day total 154.

Second Flight honors were taken by Paul Woodall with a 163 two-day-total. The Third Flight champion was Sammy Farmer with a 173.

In the Junior Division, Forsan's Brian Stone shot a two-day total 153 to lead the pack by 19 strokes and claim the Junior City Championship.

"I played great; I had two birdies on (hole numbers) two and six and shot a two-under-par on the first nine. I'm in great shape going into the final nine as long as I can stay away from any bogies," Stone said before his final round.

The Junior First Flight featured a playoff between Kent Minchew and Charlie Garcia, with Minchew besting Garcia on the first hole to take home first place with a 207.

Jeff Horn took home the PeeWee Flight title with a two-day 99. PeeWee golfers played nine holes each day.

Comanche Trail Golf Pro Al Patterson was pleased with the level of competition at this year's tournament.

"A total of 96 participants played in this year's tournament and, to me, that's a great success," Patterson said. "I would like to extend my appreciation to Max Coffee for the preflighting of all golfers, and Chloe and John Stone for the tremendous work they did in helping with the event — Mrs. Stone for the scorekeeping and Mr. Stone for being the starter of the tournament."

"I'm looking forward for a bigger entry next year," said Patterson.

The NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The Tampa group has said they won't begin construction until a franchise has been secured.

"Anything that anyone might say right now would be speculative," said Morsani, 57, who owns eight car dealerships and is chairman of the Tampa Aviation Authority.

But American League President

Bobby Brown said owners in the league would veto any attempt to move the Rangers because of the attractiveness of the Dallas-Fort Worth market.

Two years ago, AL owners unanimously rejected Gaylord's buyout attempt. But both Chiles and Gaylord said they received indications the vote would be reversed this time.

"It's up to the owners," Gaylord said, adding he thought his chances were a little better now.

His first bid was turned down in 1986 because owners feared that Gaylord's Dallas-Fort Worth television station, which broadcasts many Rangers games, would develop into a superstation.

A sale would have to be approved by 10 of 14 AL owners, a majority of National League owners and Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

"Things are quite different than two years ago," Chiles said. "All indications are that Mr. Gaylord will be accepted by the American League."

Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn, co-owners of the Chicago White Sox, said they would give fresh consideration to the matter.

Young's. I checked it and didn't see it and I now have one of my embarrassing moments in baseball."

Trebelhorn thought Yount should be allowed to remain in the game and was ejected for arguing Yount's removal.

"That's the strangest one I've had in 17 years in this business," home plate umpire Mike Reilly said.

Milwaukee scored six runs in the sixth to go ahead 10-9 on Molitor's sacrifice fly, run-scoring singles by Jim Adduci and Rob Deer and Joey Meyer's three-run double off Mike Henneman, 7-4.

Gary Pettis tied the score 10-10 with an RBI single in the seventh before Molitor's 10th homer.

Odell Jones, 5-0, the second Milwaukee pitcher, allowed one run and two hits in 1 1/2 innings. Chris Bosio pitched two hitless innings for his first save.

Orioles 2, Athletics 1

Joe Orsulak tripled and scored on Pete Stanicek's two-out, 11th-inning single off Gene Nelson, 7-6.

as four Baltimore pitchers combined on a four-hitter. Orsulak had singled and scored the tying run off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth.

Mark Williamson, 4-5, pitched a hitless 10th and Tom Niedenfuer pitched a one-hit 11th for his 14th save. Jose Bautista allowed two hits in seven innings and Don Asse allowed one hit in the eighth and ninth. Oakland remained eight games ahead of the second-place Twins.

Royals 12, Twins 3

Pat Tabler's two-run triple keyed a five-run sixth inning and George Brett and Bo Jackson hit three-run homers in the seventh as Kansas City completed a three-game sweep.

Jackson's last five hits have been home runs as have nine of his last 19 since July 29.

Allan Anderson, 12-8, who had won six straight since July 19, allowed six hits and five runs in 4 1/2 innings. Jeff Montgomery, 7-2, threw 2 1/2 innings before Steve Farr finished.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 2

Bruce Hurst pitched a five-hitter for his seventh consecutive victory since July 6 and Mike Greenwell hit a three-run double in a five-run sixth-inning, rallying Boston to within a game of first-place Detroit.

Hurst, 16-4, struck out 11, equalling his season high, and walked one in his fifth complete game. He struck out Steve Balboni in the first for his 1,000th career strikeout. Mike Moore, 7-14, gave up five runs and five hits and struck out six.

Indians 5, White Sox 4

Ron Kittle homered off Barry Jones leading off the 11th inning as Cleveland won for the fourth time in five games.

Kittle hit his 17th home run of the season and his third as a pinch-hitter. Jones, 0-1, had relieved to start the 10th.

Doug Jones, 2-3, who is not related to Barry, gave up three hits and one run in four innings.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 5
Craig McMurtry misplayed a bunt, then walked three consecutive batters in the 11th inning to force in the go-ahead run.

McMurtry's error allowed Nelson Liriano to reach first before McMurtry, 2-2, walked Tony Fernandez, Lloyd Moseby and Manny Lee.

Giants' Taylor suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence Taylor, the New York Giants' All-Pro linebacker, has been suspended for 30 days by the National Football League for violating the league's substance abuse policy, the NFL announced today.

The suspension will cause Taylor to miss the first four games of the season, starting with Monday night's game against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins. Taylor will be eligible to return for the fifth game, against the Redskins at Washington.

Ironically, Washington defensive end Dexter Manley returned to camp today after serving a 30-day suspension for substance abuse.

"Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants has been notified that he has been placed on that club's non-football illness list for a period of 30 days, effective today," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said.

"The action was taken after Taylor violated provisions of the NFL's substance abuse policy. He has been instructed to remain out of the Giants' training facility until Sept. 28."

Browne would say only that substances showed up during a recent drug test. Other league sources said it was during the team's routine training camp test.

Taylor, who voluntarily submitted himself to treatment for drug abuse in the winter of 1986, returned to have his finest season, becoming only the second defensive player in NFL history to be named league MVP as the Giants won the Super Bowl. He has been named to the Pro Bowl in each of his seven seasons.

Taylor became the ninth player suspended this season for violation of the NFL's substance abuse policy.

Seven, including Manley, served their 30 days during training camp because, like Taylor, it was their second violation. The eighth, Tony Collins of Indianapolis, was suspended for the season for a third violation.

The difference, according to league officials, is that teams were given their preseason tests at different times.

Doug Drabek, 13-6, pitched seven innings, allowing two runs and six hits. Jim Gott pitched two innings for his 27th save.

Trailing 2-1 against starter Danny Darwin, pinch-hitter John Cangelosi led off with a walk and Gary Redus, hitting for Drabek, was hit by a pitch, bringing on reliever Juan Agosto.

One out later, pinch-hitter Jose Lind singled in Cangelosi and Andy Van Slyke singled in Redus. The Pirates scored the third run of the inning on reliever Larry Andersen's throwing error, allowing Lind to score.

Glenn Davis, Billy Hatcher and Kevin Bass homered for the Astros.

Giants 7, Mets 4
San Francisco scored four runs in the ninth inning off reliever Roger McDowell to beat New York at Shea Stadium.

The Giants stopped their four-game losing streak and won the season series against the Mets, 8-4.

The Giants loaded the bases with one out in the ninth and McDowell hit Joel Youngblood with a pitch to force in a run. Kirk Manwaring followed with a three-run single. Cardinals 5, Reds 3

Tony Pena hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning off Tom Browning as St. Louis beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Bob Forsch, 9-4, allowed six hits in six-plus innings for his third consecutive victory. Forsch is 5-1 in his last six starts, allowing just 10 earned runs. Ken Dayley pitched 2 1/2 innings of one-hit ball and Todd Worrell got the last out for his 26th save.

Braves 4, Cubs 2

Rookie John Smoltz allowed four hits in eight innings and doubled to key the winning rally as Atlanta beat visiting Chicago.

With the Cubs leading 2-1, Smoltz led off the fifth with a double, and two outs later, scored on Gerald Perry's single. The Braves then loaded the bases and Paul Runge walked to force in the go-ahead run.

Padres 5, Expos 3

Tim Lincecum went 4-for-4 and pinch-hitter Keith Moreland's sacrifice fly snapped a ninth-inning tie, lifting San Diego past Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

State defense manufacturers are takeover targets

DALLAS (AP) — Four of Texas' largest defense manufacturers are among a growing number of U.S. defense companies finding themselves helpless against takeover hungry defense contractors.

The level of takeover activity also has raised national security questions among some U.S. defense executives, who fear too much of America's defense technology base may fall into the hands of foreign ownership, although the Pentagon reviews each foreign takeover.

"It's interesting there have been foreigners picking up companies in areas that are relatively sensitive," said Byron K. Callan, defense electronics analyst with Prudential Bache Capital Securities in New York.

"It could emerge as a broader national issue. And it's interesting to see the Defense Department allow some of these."

More than a dozen U.S. defense electronics companies have been acquired by other companies since August 1987, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

The latest Texas company to fall into a takeover tug-of-war was Garland-based Varo Inc., which manufactures night-vision systems, power systems, missile launchers, laser-targeting devices and advanced military microcircuits.

Varo last week agreed to be acquired by Imo Delaval Inc., a Lawrenceville, N.J., instruments and controls manufacturer, for $113 million. An unfriendly suitor, United Scientific Holdings PLC of London, however, has said it was prepared to offer at least $117 million.

James F. Gero, chairman and chief executive officer of Varo, said he believes foreign companies are drawn to the U.S. defense market by several factors.

"Although our defense market is being adversely affected today, it's still the largest defense market in the world at $300 billion," Gero said. "Congress is becoming more protectionistic. Countries realize if they're going to invest in America, they better do it now because it's going to get worse."

Most of the buyers have been manufacturers of aircraft, tanks and other big-ticket military items that expect more Pentagon contracts despite tightening pursestrings. As defense spending slows down, the military is increasingly upgrading existing equipment with electronics.

Besides Varo's pending buyout,

Texas companies taken over in the past year include Electrospace Systems Inc. of Richardson, by automaker Chrysler Corp.; Tracor Inc. of Austin, by Westmark Systems Inc., a defense holding company led by Ret. Adm. Bobby Inman; and Rediffusion Simulation Inc. of Arlington and its British parent, by Hughes. Tracor, acting as the flagship for Westmark's defense holdings, in May acquired two small defense electronics companies.

Oil prices edge to $15

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices finished higher Friday in sporadic trading, bouncing back from a steep slide the day before.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for October delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, edged up 3 cents a barrel to close at $15.34. Most other contract months were unchanged.

The October crude contract fell 37 cents a barrel in Thursday's trading.

Prices of refined oil products traded on the exchange also rose. Contracts for September delivery of wholesale unleaded gasoline rose 0.35 cent to finish at 46.79 cents a gallon. Wholesale heating oil for September advanced 0.22 cent to 42.67 cents a gallon.

On Thursday, oil futures tumbled sharply on reports that oil production by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had surged anew.

The oil futures market has been inactive in recent weeks without news on supply and demand to guide it. Analysts said Thursday's reports on OPEC provided the first sign of direction in some time, with prices likely to weaken further as the increased oil outflow reaches consuming nations.

Friday's recovery didn't signal a change in market sentiment, analysts said, but was mainly due to buying late in the session by traders who wanted to balance their positions before the weekend.

Hance: Oil could fall low as $12

ABILENE (AP) — Oil prices could fall as low as $12 per barrel in the wake of the Iran-Iraq ceasefire, according to Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance.

That's because members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries "will sell all the oil they can" before a new quota is imposed at OPEC's next meeting in November, he said.

As a result, Hance expects the short-term price of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark crude in the U.S., to drop within the next few weeks.

But the Republican commissioner said he expects a return to stability and a possible price of $18 by Jan. 1.

Oil closed Friday at $15.35 for a barrel of West Texas Intermediate on the futures market.

Hance spoke at a news conference at a luncheon of the West Texas Council of the Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Appointed a year ago to the commission, Hance faces Democratic challenger Clint Hackney in the November general election.

OPEC is producing about 20 million barrels per day, about two million over its quota, he said.

Hance said it is important for Texas to try and have input on OPEC meetings and that an import fee on foreign oil would help the troubled oilpatch.

His business? On the cutting edge

WEATHERFORD (AP) — There's sun-blinded pasture near Jack Crain's barn-size workshop — Holstein calves nose their way along a fence line, weeds surround a rusty John Deere tractor and chalky road dust boils behind a passing pickup.

It's country out here. The semi-dry kind. Country with a roll to it and a reminder that this is where the true West begins.

This isn't Hollywood. This isn't glitz. And this isn't the jungle location for an Arnold Schwarzenegger movie or the high-rise where Bruce Willis battles bad guys with thick Teutonic accents.

This is where Jack Crain, Hollywood's hottest custom knife maker, turns dull bars of steel into gleaming, razor works of art. From Bowie knives that are the stuff of Lone Star legend to the wicked-looking survival knives Schwarzenegger carried in movies such as "Commando" and "Predator," Crain's work touches the highly-esoteric world of knife collecting and the highly-visible world of movie-making.

"I live in Weatherford, Texas — that's as close to the real world as you can get," said Crain, 41, a former cabinet maker for fast-food chains.

He may live close to country, but the soft-spoken, bearish knifemaker is on a hot streak that is rooted in the world of images and the unreal.

Crain's knives can be seen in three top-grossing action films — the two Schwarzenegger movies and Willis' "Die Hard." They are also featured in two works that are scheduled for release — a movie called "Roadhouse" with Houston's Patrick Swayze and Sam Elliott and a TV film of H.G. Wells' classic "War of the Worlds."

And Crain may make the knives for Schwarzenegger's next action epic, "Sgt. Rock," a movie based on the World War II comic book character.

There may be better knife makers. There may be better knives. But when it comes to combining craftsmanship with salesmanship, Crain is one of the

"Lots of folks make real good knives," said Bruce Voyles, publisher of Blade magazine, a custom knife publication in Knoxville, Tenn. "But it's rare to find a guy who can make good knives and can market them. Jack is one of the few who combine good work with the personality it takes to sell it."

Crain's movie successes are the result of two decades of careful craftsmanship, hustle that is friendly but persistent and a reputation for quality and quickness that appeals to Hollywood producers and prop masters.

"He's the best — I'll tell you," said Tommy Tomlinson, the prop master on "Die Hard" and the "Sgt. Rock" project. "We can call him on a Monday and he can give us something on a Tuesday. His designs, his artistic ability and his willingness to give us something that fits the story line are what count."

Lawmaker asks NCNB operation ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker said Thursday he is asking Attorney General Jim Mattox to review whether NCNB is operating former banks of First RepublicBank in violation of the Texas Constitution.

Rep. L.P. "Pete" Patterson, D-Brookston, said in a letter to Mattox, "On the basis of what little public information is available regarding the sale and subsequent actions of the bank . . . it would appear that NCNB may be acting in a manner which is inconsistent with constitutionally permissible standards."

A section of the state constitution prohibits out-of-state corporations from exercising banking or discounting privileges in Texas, Patterson said.

In a 1987 opinion, Mattox concluded that legislation enabling out-of-state bank holding companies to own banks in Texas did not violate that section of the constitution. The opinion was based on the distinction between bank ownership and bank operation, Patterson noted.

"As long as the foreign holding company or bank respects the corporate entity and operation of the acquired bank then the takeover is constitutional," he said in the letter. "If, on the other hand, the acquiring bank took over management or operation of a bank in this state, the reverse would be true."

North Carolina National Bank, based in Charlotte, N.C., in July acquired the former banks of First RepublicBank from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. NCNB agreed to invest up to $240 million for the 130 Texas banking locations of First RepublicBank, which was declared insolvent.

The company had no immediate comment, said Martha Larsh, spokeswoman for NCNB Texas National Bank. FDIC spokesman Steve Katsanos did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

At a news conference, Patterson distributed an NCNB advertisement containing the sentences, "NCNB is the largest banking company in the South, serving more than 2 million customers from 700 branches. And, with NCNB Texas National, we now manage over $50 billion in assets, which ranks us among the top 10 banking companies in the U.S."

Patterson noted the word "manage."

However, the ad also says, "Your new bank will be operated by Texans — for Texans."

Because Patterson is not a committee chairman, he cannot ask the attorney general directly for a legal opinion. However, he said, "I think if the attorney general acts responsibly, then he will honor my request in reviewing what is happening."

In the letter, Patterson asked Mattox to look at what the appropriate legal remedy would be to "protect depositors and creditors of the bank" if it is determined that NCNB actions are not allowed under the state constitution.

If Mattox finds NCNB to be acting properly, Patterson asked under what circumstances its actions would be impermissible. Patterson asked Mattox to respond before Sept. 30.

Elna Christopher, spokeswoman for Mattox, said Patterson's request will be considered.

Hundreds laid off by Sea World

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The dismissal of 750 workers in six Harcourt Brace Jovanovich parks around the country is part of "belt-tightening" measures by the Orlando-based parent company of Sea World and other facilities, executives said.

The layoffs announced Tuesday affect about 10 percent of the park system's 7,500 full-time employees, said Robert Evanson, a senior vice president and chairman of HBJ's parks operation.

A total of 215 employees were fired at Sea World of Texas in San Antonio. Another 1,500 temporary and seasonal workers will leave their jobs by Sept. 6, bringing the total number of fulltime and temporary workers to about 1,500 at the park, officials said.

"Employee cuts are a routine part of any corporate belt-tightening. We will be a more efficient company," said Dan LeBlanc, a spokesman at San Diego Sea World, which will lose about 150 employees.

Sea World spokesman Bob McCullough said the move does not mean the $140 million, 250-acre Texas park, which opened in April, is in financial trouble.

"Our attendance has been better than we had imagined, but not until we got into operating the park did we know how many employees it would take to operate it. Now we know," McCullough said.

Attendance at the park, located on the city's western edge has already topped 2 million.

McCullough said the full-time staffers will now number about 870 and part-time workers and seasonal employees will push the workforce to about 1,500 with the same annual payroll of about $25 million.

The workforce could increase to 3,000 again during the peak summer season next year, McCullough said.

"We have contributed a tremendous amount to San Antonio and Texas and we will continue to do that in the years ahead, but this was a necessary correction to make sure we could meet our goals as a business," he said.

HBJ reported $62.9 million in second-quarter losses on revenues of $446.6 million. The company repelled an unwelcome takeover bid last year by adopting a $3 billion recapitalization plan and plunging into debt before selling off several units.

A total of 334 workers received layoff notices at company facilities in Central Florida, including 113 at Sea World, 161 at Boardwalk and Baseball near Haines City and 60 at Cypress Gardens in Winter Haven. An additional nine park support workers will be laid off from corporate headquarters.

HBJ operates another Sea World in Cleveland, but there was no word on cuts there.

Company-wide, the fired workers ranged in experience from several months to more than 15 years.

Departments involving care of the park's animals and direct services to park visitors were largely spared.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

TUESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Taking an indirect approach whenever possible will bring the best results. Money supply will be up. Make sure savings increase accordingly! Making hasty decisions regarding health or romance will bring regrets. Check on investment opportunities. School becomes more interesting when children get their heads into the game. Emphasize the joy of reading a good book as opposed to watching TV. Teach by example.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Elizabeth Ashley, NAACP pioneer Roy Wilkins, Louisiana Gov. Huey Long, fashion designer Geoffrey Beene, skills are finally recognized in a meaningful way. Travel holds more appeal now. Have passport ready.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get a chance to clear up a financial misunderstanding. Keep things simple at work and you will accomplish everything you hoped for and more. Good nutrition helps you feel and look fit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There will be a lot going on today. Do not let these interesting events alter your course of action. Those in executive positions have especially good luck now. The job outlook improves substantially.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This is no time to challenge authority or traditional values. Be zealous, though, in pursuing your career goals. Additional education could improve your chances for landing a better-paying position. Investigate night school.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bide your time until new financial trends become evident. Be decisive about a job or marriage proposal. Working outdoors is more satisfying than being tied to a desk. Try to do both.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This can be a banner day for you. There is a certain electricity in the air. Travel will give you a better grasp of an important matter. An unusual newcomer begins to influence you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Trusting in someone who has counseled you well in the past is the key to continued success. A picture is worth a thousand words in raising funds for a health-oriented charity. Be flexible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not wait! Pick up the phone and say yes. Actions taken today will have a positive effect on what you hope to accomplish in days to come. Observe all traffic rules.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will soon be freed from responsibilities that could endanger your health. Put your thoughts on paper and your goals will become clearer. Good health is linked to doing what you are told.
