

Program details presented

Answers gathered to questions about PIK

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer
He says he's all PIK-ed out. John Fuston of the local Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service said his office wasn't ready for the sign-up to begin Monday because "we didn't have all the answers" to farmers' questions about the Payment-in-Kind program.

"We didn't have, actually, some of the details we needed," Fuston said. For example, a common question which went unanswered Monday morning concerned grazing out wheat. By Monday afternoon — after hours on the phone with higher offices— Fuston learned wheat land in the PIK can be grazed out.

"Most farmers have been pretty positive about the program," Fuston reports. "They're coming in asking a lot of questions and I think this is good business for them."

So, imagine the questions non-farmers have.

Some have said the farmers are double dipping, getting grain already grown and selling it "again."

True, the grain is already grown. However, most of the grain which will be "paid" to farmers is from their own — in storage and unsold — grain in the three-year reserve program. And farmers with outstanding reserve must take their payment in that grain. The payment is actually a reduction of liability on the grain.

Gerald McCathern, publisher of Agriculture Watchdog, said the agreement is a breach of contract with the government. He said any farmer with grain in reserve signed a contract stating that no grain be removed from reserve until it can be sold above the current market price, or suffer a penalty. In effect, the farmer can be in the PIK and break the contract or not be in the PIK.

McCathern agrees, though, that the crop reduction is needed.

"I guess if you are drowning it wouldn't make much difference what was thrown to you to hang on to," he said. "That's the situation the farmers are in now. It (the PIK program) has some very, very good aspects, but it also has some weaknesses. We need to recognize the good and the bad in the program."

"This step, as I see, is not going to affect prices appreciably," he said. "When we sell the PIK grain we need to get a price for it, not give it away."

He called the program a step in the right direction, but said Congress needed to back it up with a program which would up prices.

McCathern's skepticism about the program lies in his belief that the administration has not actually formed the program to help farmers, but to cut the USDA budget by $5 million to $7 million. According to him, the government cancellation of the debt of grain is less than what it costs the government to store and pay interest in the long run.

He and Fuston agree that participation in PIK will be the key to making it work for farmers, however.

"We've got to do something to help ourselves," Fuston said. "We've got a tool here and if we don't use it we're going to shut old Hereford down."

There may be a little belt-tightening in the agribusiness area, McCathern said, but with the hope of loosening it next year.

"The guy that's doing a pretty good job of farming is going to have some black dollar bills," Fuston said. When he explains the program, Fuston grabs a pen and pad, plots out a paper farm and scribbles out the figures.

A farmer must be in the 1983 crop reduction program before he can be in PIK. In the regular program he can lay out up to 20 percent. In the PIK, he can lay out an additional 10 to 30 percent to receive the grain payments.

The laid out land must be kept in a conservation program to control wind and water erosion and weed infestation. The simple part is over. To figure what the PIK for a farm will be the reduced acreage is multiplied times the established yield of a farm and timed the percentage allowed — 95 percent for wheat (since it is a fall seeded crop) and 80 percent for milo, corn and cotton. A farmer wishing to take his entire base acreage (the normal amount planted) out of production, may bid to do so by specifying the per-

Sen. Sarpalius changes address

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius has officially moved his residence to Canyon from Hereford with the sale of his home here. Sarpalius, who has lived in Hereford for several years, made the move to Canyon to be near his work.

The senator had intended to remain in Hereford for the rest of the legislative session, but credits a boom in the real estate market in speeding up the decision to make the move.

"We're building a new house in Canyon," Sarpalius said, "so I decided to go ahead and put the one in Hereford on the market. Well, it sold a little quicker than we expected, so now we've got all our stuff in storage and I've moved my family down to Austin for the rest of the session."

The senator, now in his second term serving the 31st District, said he hopes the people understand that his move was based on the need to be near his work.

"I love Hereford, and am going to miss living there," he said. But, I work in Canyon and that's a 45-minute drive each way. It was getting to be a little rough commuting, so I just decided to move there and have a little more time to spend with my family."

Treatments for MS developed

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers hoping to reverse the crippling nerve destruction caused by multiple sclerosis reported today on two promising new treatments — a common anti-cancer drug and doses of pure oxygen.

Neither treatment can be considered a cure for the disease, but both reduce its disabling symptoms in some patients tested by doctors working separately in Boston and New York.

The Boston doctors found that the cancer drug, cyclophosphamide, stopped the disease's destruction in 80 percent of patients with rapidly worsening disease, and one-third of these people actually improved. The New York researchers found that 70 percent of MS victims improved after breathing pure oxygen in pressurized chambers.

Both studies were published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Each group cautioned against using the new therapies routinely for all victims of MS, but the Boston doctors said the cancer drug should be used now for those whose condition is a steadily worsening.

"People who are going downhill rapidly can be devastated, and it is this group whom we think it is appropriate to treat," said Dr. James R. Leirich of Massachusetts General Hospital.

Leirich said fewer than half the 250,000 multiple sclerosis victims in the United States have this progressive form of the disease, although no exact figures are available. There is no other treatment to slow the long-term damage of MS, which strikes young adults.

The study using the anti-cancer drug was directed by Dr. Stephen L. Hauser of Brigham and Women's Hospital with doctors from Massachusetts General Hospital, Children's Hospital Medical Center and Harvard Medical School. The oxygen study was done by Dr. Boguslav H. Fischer and colleagues from New York University Medical Center.

MS destroys the protective sheath of myelin that surrounds the nerves, disrupting the brain's messages transmitted along the nerves. Although the symptoms may vary in severity, they include muscle weakness, dizziness, tremors and blurred vision.

Its cause is unknown, but many believe it is a defect of the immune system that directs the body to attack its own tissue. The drug used by the Boston doctors retards this immune reaction.

Amerasians leave for United States

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Fifty Amerasian children and their relatives left Vietnam en route to the United States today. It was the biggest airlift ever of America's tragic children of war and came on the 10th anniversary of the signing of the Paris accords on ending the fighting.

"To use an old cliché, I can't believe it really happened. It's 10 million times better than I ever dreamed," said American journalist Paul Vogle after hugging his wife Kim Chi and their three children, separated when Communist forces swept into South Vietnam nearly eight years ago.

Initially, 51 Amerasian children and 51 relatives were scheduled to leave today, but some failed to show up at the airport. It was the fourth airlift of children of Vietnamese women and American men who served in wartime Vietnam. The flights began last Sept. 30, and to date 119 Amerasians have left.

For most of the Amerasians and their mothers the airlift means leaving close relatives behind, and facing the prospect of meeting husbands who have since remarried or not meeting their former husbands at all.

American volunteer agency officials aboard the aircraft predicted the plight of the Amerasians — estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000 by the Vietnamese — would increase as the number of men who wanted their families back shrank.

Vogle, 50, a correspondent for United Press International, was the only father to fly into Ho Chi Minh City, formerly called Saigon, for the reunion. The Air France commercial jet later returned to Thailand, where the group will stay for several days of processing before flying on to the United States.

It's just something he 'threw out'

Aides dismiss corporate tax remark

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surprised White House aides say they're "not seriously considering" President Reagan's suggestion that corporate income taxes be abolished, describing it as "just something he threw out."

Reagan, in a meeting with businessmen in Boston Wednesday, remarked off-the-cuff that the corporate tax is unfair to American business and "there really isn't any justification for it."

His aides seemed taken aback.

"We're not seriously considering it," said David R.

Gergen, the president's assistant for communications.

"There's no study, there's no plan. It's just something he threw out," said Larry Speakes, the deputy press secretary. "It was nothing that had ever been discussed at the White House."

Reagan told reporters he did not plan to submit legislation to abolish the tax, but added: "I said it was something to study and look at."

Speakes said none of the White House staff who accompanied Reagan to Boston heard him make the suggestion during a public meeting with the Massachusetts High Tech Council, a group of high technology businesses.

Reagan's comments came at the end of a four-hour trip that began with stops at a minority job training center, computer factory and an Irish pub, where he took one sip of beer.

Reagan wound up at the Millipore Corp., in Bedford, Mass., for a meeting with the High Tech Council. He dropped his surprise suggestion at the end of the long session in a crowded room with an inadequate sound system.

Seated at a table with about 15 businessmen, the president said:

"I realize that there will be a great stirring and I'll probably kick myself for having said this, but when are we all going to have the courage to point out that in our tax structure the corporate tax is very hard to justify its existence?"

Instead, he said, corporate profits should be distributed to stockholders in the form of dividends. The stockholders then would pay tax on the income.

Some business leaders have raised that suggestion in the past, contending the current system of levying a 46 percent tax on corporate profits and taxing dividends as well amounts to double taxation of corporations.

The Office of Management and Budget estimated last July that corporate income taxes would yield $58.3 billion in the current fiscal year, ending next Sept. 30, and will account for 9 percent of all federal tax revenues. The corporate share of federal tax receipts has been declining in recent years.

Mubarak unhappy over slow progress of talks

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will assure Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak that the United States is doing all it can — short of cutting off aid — to press Israel to withdraw its troops from Lebanon, U.S. officials say.

Mubarak, who arrived in Washington for a three-day visit late Wednesday, planned to confer today with Reagan and with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

Egyptian officials said Mubarak would express his unhappiness over the slow pace of negotiations to obtain a withdrawal of the 25,000 Israeli troops in Lebanon. Egypt is the only Arab nation with a peace treaty with Israel and the continuing Israeli presence in Lebanon, following the June 6 invasion, is an embarrassment to Cairo.

Mubarak not only wants an Israeli troop withdrawal from Lebanon, but also a halt to Israeli construction of settlements in the occupied West Bank. He is also seeking better terms on U.S. aid to his own country.

A well-placed State Department official said Wednesday that Mubarak probably would press the administration for "concrete" measures, such as curtailing the nearly $2.5 billion in annual U.S. military and economic aid to Israel, if Israel doesn't get moving soon on a troop withdrawal. Egypt receives about $2.2 billion in U.S. aid.

While an aid cutback was among options before Reagan, the official said Reagan was prepared to tell Mubarak it would be a mistake now. "We are going to try to keep him (Mubarak) persuaded that we are making a full effort," said the official, who like another State Department official spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

The official thought it was unlikely that Reagan would opt for an aid cutback, partly for political reasons and partly because it could backfire and worsen U.S.-Israeli relations.

Congress might veto such a move, the official said. But if there is a cutback, he said it probably would be in the form of a suspension of military aid while Israeli forces are in Lebanon.

Glenn says early Primaries important

AUSTIN (AP) — Presidential primaries at the opening of the 1984 political season may decide the Democratic nominee long before Texas and many other states have elections, says U.S. Sen. John Glenn.

"The primary system this time is very interesting," said Glenn, who is expected to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination. "I think about 50 percent of the delegates (to the Democratic national convention) will be selected in about the first three weeks of that campaign season."

Glenn, D-Ohio, who as one of the United States' original astronauts was the first American to orbit the earth, appeared in Austin Wednesday for a series of news conferences and speeches.

He said that under new party rules, in addition to the Iowa caucuses on Feb. 27 and the New Hampshire primary on March 6, about 10 states will have presidential primaries the first week of the election period, which starts March 13.

"There already are Florida, Alabama and Tennessee, Hawaii, Minnesota and Massachusetts. California is talking about moving into there and my home state

Gov. White prepared to present legislative priorities

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White unwraps his legislative priorities today in a speech to a joint session of the Texas House and Senate.

White, who made utility regulation reform a major topic in his campaign, is expected to suggest major changes at the Public Utility Commission, perhaps including the election of commissioners.

PUC members now are appointed by the governor. White said earlier this week that his staff was looking at ways to prevent wealthy utility companies from using campaign contributions to dominate PUC elections. The governor also is expected to take his PUC suggestions directly to Texans in a series of television ads.

White, who succeeded Gov. Bill Clements last week, will be making his first speech to Social security plan has 'room for improvement'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $168 billion Social Security rescue plan might still leave the system vulnerable to crisis in a few years, the executive director of the reform commission says.

Robert J. Myers says as a result, Congress may want to move faster than the commission recommended in changing the cost-of-living formula to help Social Security weather hard times.

Myers expressed his views on the package for the first time Wednesday in an interview with The Associated Press. He called the plan "a great forward step," but said there's still room for improvement.

A bill embodying all of the panel's bipartisan proposals was introduced in the Senate Wednesday by Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y. and John Heinz, R-Pa.

Dole introduced a separate amendment raising the normal age of retirement from 65 to 66 by the year 2015. A majority of the commission backed that move, but it was not part of the compromise.

Meanwhile, Democratic congressional leaders edged away from their earlier suggestions to link the proposed six-month delay in this year's cost-of-living increase for retirees to a similar postponement of an income tax cut for high-income earners.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said this tactic would be "an injustice to the golden agers and senior citizens," but added he will seek other ways to repeal this July's tax cut or to limit the tax break for the wealthy.

Safety Commission hearing debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The debate over the safety of portable kerosene heaters continued today with consumer groups and the industry squaring off at a hearing before the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

On the eve of the hearing, a manufacturer of kerosene heaters and the National Kerosene Heater Association contended that independent studies had shown that consumers are not endangered by emissions from the heaters.

"Emissions are low enough that they do not present a general health hazard," Bruce Pershke, chairman of the association's Air Quality Group, said Wednesday.

Dr. Harold Smith, Kero-Sun Inc.'s vice president for applied engineering, said the emissions "are so low as to be barely measurable and well within every health standard ever established."

At a briefing for reporters, the pair disputed a finding by Consumer Reports that kerosene heaters it tested produced "potentially hazardous levels" of nitrogen dioxide, sulfur dioxide and other toxic gases.

Smith said the studies commissioned by the industry found emission levels 16 to 45 times lower than those reported by Consumer Reports last October.

Consumers Union, which publishes the magazine, was sued by Kero-Sun over the article.

David C. Berliner, assistant director of Consumers Union, said he had not seen the industry studies but "we feel extremely confident in standing by our findings."

Smith said, however, that the heaters won't pose a health risk if they are used correctly and proper maintenance is followed.

Ninety-thousand teachers set to strike

MONTREAL (AP) — Quebec Premier Rene Levesque says the provincial government is preparing charges against striking public workers, as 90,000 teachers get set to join the day-old walkout.

Union officials say they hope to get at least 250,000 of Quebec's 325,000 public employees to join the strike by Feb. 2.

The strike was called to protest government-imposed, three-year contracts that trim the wages of about half of the public employees by 20 percent in the first three months of this year.

The walkout began Wednesday when 10,000 junior college teachers left their posts and manned picket lines.

Elementary and high school teachers were scheduled to join the walkout at 9 a.m. EST today.

The provincial government warned of "very severe sanctions" against unions that join the strike.

Levesque told reporters his Cabinet had decided to prosecute illegal strikers under the provincial Labor Code.

Labor federations could be fined up to $8,300 for each day of an illegal strike under the code's provisions. Individual union members could be fined up to $83 a day and individual unions between $4,150 and $41,500.

Pair who abducted couple, in Mexico

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two armed men who abducted and robbed a Colorado couple vacationing in South Texas probably have fled across the border into Mexico, police say. Ronald and Velma Lohman of Denver managed to untie themselves and escape Wednesday after a 12-hour ordeal, said Brownsville Police Sgt. Eli Rios.

The Lohmans told authorities that two armed men stormed into their mobile home Tuesday night while the vehicle was parked near Corpus Christi on North Padre Island.

The men tied and blindfolded the couple, stole their credit cards, travelers checks and checkbooks and abandoned them in Brownsville, about 135 miles away, near the Mexican border, Rios said.

The Lohmans overheard the abductors talking about fleeing to Mexico, Rios said.

"I believe they went across," he said. "They were talking amongst themselves about going to Mexico. It's very doubtful they're still over here."

Rios said Lohman, 55, was beaten and pistol-whipped by the abductors and was hospitalized for minor injuries at Brownsville Medical Center. Mrs. Lohman, 53, also was hospitalized for minor injuries, he said.

The couple managed to free themselves and contact police about 4 a.m. Wednesday, Rios said.

The one boat plan

Interesting thing happened to President Reagan in Oklahoma.

He went there to address the Farm Bureau.

He learned that his audience had given enthusiastic support to a proposal by Oklahoma's Senator Boren.

Sen. David Boren has proposed a "one boat plan" for us all.

To drastically slash the federal budget, Senator Boren proposed freezing all government spending — now.

The response by the bipartisan audience was almost unanimous.

Within hours President Reagan proposed "a pay freeze for all government employees."

The impetus, if not the idea, for his recommendation came from an Oklahoma Democrat.

Now...

Government workers, understandably, will resent seeing other people get income increases while theirs are frozen.

That's why Senator Boren's larger concept — of a freeze on all government spending — seems more likely to win universal acceptance.

Maybe we need recessions once in a while for Americans to rediscover their own selflessness.

In union after union, industry after industry, even in public service jobs — workers are voluntarily accepting pay cuts for themselves to prevent layoffs of others.

Senator Boren's "one boat plan" would pinch everybody a little and nobody a lot.

He means from the President on down and including the Congress — and including so-called discretionary spending — all should agree to an immediate income freeze.

He projects these numbers: Freeze all scheduled increases in government workers' salaries, benefits and pensions and save $40 billion.

Postpone the income tax cut one year and save $24 billion.

Freeze congressional spending and save another $10 billion.

Cut back military spending (still allowing for a 4 percent increase) and save $15 billion.

Senator Boren believes that his "one boat plan" would tend to pull us all together, cooperating instead of bickering.

He believes it would make it easier to resolve the Social Security impasse and to freeze the medical reimbursement rate.

And it would slash our deficit in half for fiscal 1984.

The alternative is ominous: another trillion dollars of red ink within seven years would drown us.

Technique troubles coal area

WILKESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Its exterior walls are twisted, many of its floors have buckled and the well on the back porch has gone dry.

Lavern and Mary Jordan's 100-year-old farmhouse is the victim, its owners say, of a coal-mining process called longwalling.

Longwalling has divided residents of southeastern Ohio's coal country, pitting them against coal companies that for years brought jobs and sometimes prosperity to a part of the state where both have often been in short supply.

Caught in the middle is the United Mine Workers union, which says the dispute is threatening jobs in an industry already decimated by layoffs.

For the Jordans it has meant sleeping in a mobile home, a few yards from their farmhouse.

"We were afraid of fire," Mrs. Jordan said. "We were afraid of it pulling apart the electrical wires."

In longwalling, a huge shearing machine removes coal from the face of a wall as much as 500 feet wide in about 22 minutes. The machine then advances into the coal face and repeats the process.

Industry officials say it is one of the safest methods for mining coal because the machine provides its own ceiling, a canopy of steel, within the mine.

It also provides a more efficient means of removing coal. In traditional room-and-pillar mines, only about 55 percent of the coal in a vein can be mined. Longwalling allows for recovery rates of up to 90 percent, mining officials say.

But the Jordans and other residents are worried about another aspect of longwalling — rapid collapse of the earth above.

In traditional mining, pillars of coal are left behind after the mining is done, and they support the ceiling so that subsidence is so gradual it often goes unnoticed. In longwall mines, the ceiling behind the machine collapses almost immediately as the machine moves forward.

The effects above ground, according to some residents of Meigs County, are just as immediate — and costly.

Three years ago, Mark Spezza purchased a 57-acre farm with its own woods, a pond and a barn he could use for his business, pottery making.

Today, the brick foundation of Spezza's barn splits along a mortar joint, and a yard-wide concrete slab in the middle of the barn floor sinks into a three-foot crater. A six-inch crack runs the length of the floor. The building's walls, which Spezza says were once plumb, now bend.

"You know, I'm not even motivated to do things around here any more," Spezza said during a walk around his property. "I used to come down here and try to clean things up. But anymore, it just doesn't seem worth the trouble."

The Southern Ohio Coal Co., which has owned much of the coal beneath Meigs County land for a quarter-century, began mining beneath Spezza's property last year. Before operations began, the company shored up the barn with cables and braces.

Spezza says he noticed changes within days.

"I walked in the barn, and I noticed there was a crack in the floor about an inch wide ... and then I looked at the wall and there was a crack there about an inch wide," he said. "I went to sleep, and I got up in the morning and it was two inches wide."

Spill of deadly acid cleaned off road

ATLANTA, Texas (AP) — Officials have cleaned up about 1,000 gallons of poisonous sulfuric acid that spilled from an overturned tanker truck and forced the temporary closure of a stretch of Northeast Texas highway.

Crews worked hurriedly Wednesday to collect the acid before it could seep into water supplies.

The truck, fully loaded with 48,560 pounds of acid bound for the International Paper Co., overturned Wednesday morning, said Texarkana Department of Public Safety spokesman Gary Chandler.

DPS communications operator Bill Wilson said the last of the spill was collected at 4:45 p.m. — about 9½ hours after the accident.

"It's all cleaned up and neutralized and the road is open," Wilson said. "Everything is running smoothly."

The truck, owned by Matlack Inc. of Bossier City, La., overturned near the spotlight at the intersection of Farm Road 3129 and U.S. Highway 59, Chandler said.

Highway Department workers used a backhoe to cut a deep drainage ditch next to the wreck to catch the spilled acid and try to keep it from contaminating the water table.

"It's very, very toxic," Chandler said. "The fumes are poisonous, and if you get it on your skin, it's not too healthy for it."

The clean-up crew wore air packs to protect them from the toxic fumes.

"The main worry right now is to protect water supplies by either soaking it up with dirt or neutralizing it with other chemicals, so it won't seep into the water table," said DPS communications supervisor Vernon Young.

The driver, William

Oswalt, 55, of Bossier City received scratches and bruises in the accident but refused medical treatment, said Chandler.

The tank was bound for the paper company plant at the end of the farm road, he said.

More than five hours after the accident, the tank was still leaking slowly and the truck was still overturned on the road, which troopers had closed to other traffic.

Matlack Inc. spokeswoman Era Nell Cassel said the company ordinarily delivered a truckload of the acid a day to the paper company.

The cause of the accident is under investigation.

cent of the farm yield that he will accept for diverting all of his acreage. The bid must be no more than the offer rate for the PIK. The number of whole base bids accepted will depend on the level of sign-up for the PIK, and other factors, but may not exceed the 50 percent of the total base in the county.

Haying and grazing will be permitted only on wheat planted prior to the PIK announcement.

The Commodity Credit Corporation will pay storage costs from the date of the PIK until redemption or delivery of the commodity up to five months. Payments will be made during the normal harvest time.

Cross compliance is not necessary in the PIK, farmers may participate in one crop and omit others.

Common questions about the PIK have been answered in releases from the USDA.

—A farm's 1984 acreage base will not be reduced due to underplanting in 1983 if a farm is in the program for a commodity.

—All bids for whole base diversion will be opened March 18 and be arranged from the lowest percentage of effective yield to the highest. Ties will be settled by bid admittance time.

—The farm operator is responsible for submitting a contract, however all producers must sign by March 18.

—A contract will not be accepted if it is known that a landlord or operator has not afforded tenants or sharecroppers to participate, including reducing the number or tenants or sharecroppers because of the program.

—Conservation use acreage can be grazed except during the six principal growing months. Mechanical harvesting will be prohibited, with exceptions to wheat planted prior to the PIK announcement.

—Producers will continue to earn FOR storage until the loan is liquidated or for a maximum of five months. An additional seven months storage payment, less any unearned storage beginning with the PIK availability date, will be made to producers with a farm stored FOR loan. Producers will be required to refund any unearned storage.

—If a producer must liquidate the loan on 75 percent of the quantity represented in an individual bin or warehouse receipt for PIK purposes, the balance, not to exceed 5,000 bushels, may be sold to CCC.

—A PIK recipient cannot be guaranteed availability at a specific warehouse, but may indicate a preferred warehouse delivery point during sign-up.

—Warehouses will receive letters of entitlement to indicate what producer has how much of a commodity coming. —Producers will pay loadout charges if withdrawing PIK from warehouse storage.

—FCIC insured winter wheat producers will be informed on how to revise acreage reports.

—Acreage designated for PIK that is in a summer fallow rotation must be land that would have been cropped in 1983.

what the administration now regards as Israeli foot-dragging in the troop withdrawal talks, the State Department made clear Wednesday it doesn't want Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to visit Washington until significant progress is made toward a troop withdrawal.

Mubarak's visit to Washington is his second to Washington since assuming his country's leadership after the Legislature. He could get quick action on some of his proposals by submitting them as "emergencies."

The governor said he would not submit a proposed budget until February.

At a Wednesday news conference, White steered clear of a stand on the future of Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Jack Pope, a Democrat appointed by Republican Clements after the election.

Senators, upset with Clements' lame-duck appointments, are threatening to block Pope's nomination unless the 69-year-old chief justice promises to retire before the May 1984 primary election. Pope's retirement would allow White to pick a chief justice.

But Pope says he won't accept the senators' plan.

White said Pope is a "fine man" and a "fine judge." The governor said he would meet with senators in an effort to avoid a deadlock.

"I would like, as I think everyone would, to see the matter resolved with the least possible disruption," said White.

"I intend to try and work with (senators) and help them with that problem to see if there's something that can be done to alleviate the impasse," he said.

The governor said it would be "unfair" to get involved with the Senate and Pope in a "three-way public argument about this."

Last week, Senators returned to White 59 of 102 appointments made by Clements after the election. The Pope nomination was not considered.

Also Wednesday, White said there are "some real significant and good reasons" to change the state system of motor vehicle registration fees.

He spoke favorably about a plan, supported by Speaker Gib Lewis, to increase motor vehicle registration fees by as much as $500 million. Lewis' plan would base the fee on a vehicle's value, rather than weight.

The registration fee for a $10,000 car weighing 4,000 pounds would jump from the current $25.25 to $156 a year, according to Gene Robbitts, executive director of the Texas Good Roads and Public Transportation Association.

White announced three staff appointments Wednesday:

—Rafael Quintanilla of Austin as director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

—Lupe Zamarripa of Austin as a special assistant.

The president said abolishing the corporate income tax would be "a net gain to the government all the way around if we would look at that instead of sticking with what is literally a myth about corporations and what the taxing policy should be."

After getting applause from the businessmen, the president joked: "I'll remember your applause when the press keeps questioning me for days now about that." Dee D'Arbeloff, president of Millipore, a health technology firm, told Reagan the issue was under serious study by members of the American Business Council.

On his trip, Reagan touched several political bases by visiting a predominantly black neighborhood and a blue-collar neighborhood.

Now You're Cookin'

BY LINDA CAUDLE
Family News Editor

Entertaining in her home and sharing her special culinary creations are two things that Lyndia Muse does best — because she enjoys doing them. "Large groups are fun," she smiles. "I say the more the better!"

Lyndia loves to cook, especially when it comes to trying new, out-of-the-ordinary foods. "And when I have friends over for dinner, I want them to feel like they can kick their shoes off and feel comfortable at my house," she adds. "I don't like to be formal."

Lyndia and her husband, George, and their son, Chad, reside at 128 Mimosa. George is a farmer and rancher. "His family has been here since 1892 — some of the first pioneers," says Lyndia, "and I am from Friona."

Both went to Texas Tech University in Lubbock, where he majored in agriculture economics and education and she majored in psychology and minored in home economics. "We're still Tech fans and go back for quite a few of the football games," says Lyndia. "We all enjoy that."

Chad, who is 10 years old, and his father enjoy skiing, says Lyndia, adding that she just likes to travel — anywhere.

Lyndia is a vice-president of Calliopean Study Club and is a room mother and volunteer P.E. teacher at St. Anthony's School, where Chad is in the fifth grade. She has also helped with Boy Scouts and says she's especially enjoyed decorating for the banquets. "We think it's a good program, and Chad loves it," she comments.

Because of her interest in bridge and other group games, Lyndia has many opportunities to serve as hostess and entertain friends. She and her husband are in two bridge clubs and also get together with a group to play Mah Jongg, a game of Chinese origin.

"I haven't decided yet whether I play bridge to be with people or get with people to play bridge," laughs Lyndia. "I really enjoy the game and I love being around people."

"It's a good way to get acquainted and meet new people too," she adds. "If someone new comes to town and plays bridge, you can get them involved."

"When I know I'll be entertaining," says Lyndia, "I start about a week ahead of time, preparing things that can be done ahead of time. It makes things less hectic and more enjoyable later."

Lyndia describes herself as the world's greatest improviser, saying that she hardly ever makes a dish, especially the entree, strictly by the recipe.

"I like to experiment, going by looks, smell, and taste," she comments "and I never know exactly what I'll come up with. Sometimes I just start from scratch and make up my own recipe."

One night each week Lyndia likes to prepare something different and unusual. "Many times I get recipe ideas from magazines like Cuisine, Bon Appetit, and Southern Living," she notes.

Lyndia shares several recipes which are equally nice for family meals or entertaining.

CANCER ANSWER LINE

American Cancer Society
M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute

Question: How soon after exposure to a carcinogen does a cancer appear?

ANSWERline: Most cancers develop slowly in humans, usually appearing five to 40 years after exposure to a cancer-causing agent. Cancers of the liver, lung, or bladder, for example, may not appear until 30 years after exposure to vinyl chloride, asbestos or benzidine. This long latent period is one reason why it is so difficult to identify the causes of human cancer.

Question: Is there any connection between cigarette smoking and stomach ulcers?

ANSWERline: Death rates from peptic ulcers among cigarette smokers are 2.9 times the death rates for non-smokers. Cigarette smoking has an adverse effect on the healing of ulcers.

Question: Is there something specific in cigarette smoke that may cause lung cancer?

ANSWERline: A number of chemical agents have been found in cigarette smoke that are capable of causing cancer. There are a number of others (known as co-carcinogens) which assist the action of cancer-causing chemicals. Skin cancer has been produced experimentally in animals with chemicals found in cigarette smoke.

Question: Besides causing cancer, what does cigarette smoke do to the lungs?

ANSWERline: Irritating particles in the smoke interfere with the cleansing action of the lungs. Usually particles inhaled with the air one breathes fall onto the mucous lining of the bronchial tubes. This lining acts like an escalator, constantly carrying particles upward by the whipping action of small hair-like structures called cilia which move at a rate of 1,000 times a minute. Cigarette smoke slows down the cilia, and eventually destroys them.

Question: What is breast reconstruction?

ANSWERline: Breast reconstruction is a surgical operation or series of operations designed to correct, in part at least, the effects of mastectomy. The nature of the reconstruction depends on the individual patient's wishes in relation to her physical condition.

When he thinks of her as "skinny" rather than "slender," the honeymoon is over. So says one marriage counselor.

3-5A boys

What a race!

BY LES GILES
Sports Editor

If the District 3-5A boys' basketball race isn't the most hotly contested in the state, it certainly ranks right up there with the best of them.

With just over three weeks left in the regular season, six of the nine teams (and perhaps a seventh with the sudden resurgence by Monterey) still have a solid shot at reaching the playoffs.

This year, just as in football, the first and second place teams advance to post-season play.

If the season had ended Tuesday, Plainview would be on top, but a five-way tie for second place would exist — between Amarillo High, Palo Duro, Tascosa, Lubbock and Caprock.

Plainview has a two-game lead in the loss column at this point, but with the way things have gone anything is possible the rest of the way. The Bulldogs might go unbeaten from here on out, or they might lose every game. It's been that kind of season so far.

It's been a district season accentuated by streaks. Amarillo High got off to a fast start, winning six of its first seven loop encounters. The Sandies, however, have lost their last three.

Palo Duro won its first four district games, but has since won only two of six.

Tascosa lost its first two games, but has come back to win four of the next six.

Caprock won its loop opener, lost the next four, but has come back strong to win five in a row.

Hereford coach Bobby Decker, whose team has lost all 10 district games to date, had some interesting observations.

Knowing full well his club is out of the picture, Decker still maintains an objective view.

Some of the questions I asked him the other day, and his answers follow:

HAVE YOU EVER SEEN A DISTRICT RACE SO TIGHTLY-BUNCHED? — "No, I've coached for quite some time, and I've never seen this many teams, this late in the district season still with a chance to get in the playoffs. It's a real dog fight."

HOW DO YOU ACCOUNT FOR THE BALANCE IN THIS DISTRICT? — "That's kind of hard to answer. But, I think the two districts (3 and 4) were generally pretty competitive, and the teams were pretty even, except for Pampa, which did dominate District 3 for the last few years. So, with Pampa out of the district, the rest of the teams are generally pretty even. No team seems to have that decided a home-court edge and I don't think any team is afraid of any other. I get the feeling every team thinks it can beat everyone else each time they play. Also, in this big a district it's pretty hard for a team to play consistently every night. You tend to be up and down, and that explains why so many teams are still in contention. And, finally, I think there is a pretty strong rivalry between the Amarillo and Lubbock schools—perhaps more so than you'd think — not to mention the intra-city rivalries that exist within the two towns."

I asked Decker to make a comment about each of the teams involved in the playoff picture at this point, and here's what he had to say:

PLAINVIEW — "Gil Wright is a dominating force for them, but they have four other players that play well together. They do a good job staying close during a game. It's hard to get them down by much. Hallman (Kenneth) is a team leader, and they have pretty good quickness."

CAPROCK — "Height ... good size inside. When I think about them I think about how we couldn't stop their inside game. Dunavin (guard Colin) is the key to their team, I think. He makes things happen. And, I'm impressed with Lambert (forward Robbie). He seems to keep them in a lot of games."

AMARILLO HIGH — "Good outside shooting, and good defense. They don't have great physical talent, but they are pretty sound in what they do."

TASCOSA — "A great deal of raw talent. Dawn (James) is an exceptional player. However, they don't play that consistently from night to night. Based on talent, they should be leading the district."

PALO DURO — "Freeman (William) and Butler (Doug). They are basically a two-man team. I'm impressed with their overall quickness, but like Tascosa they don't seem to play consistently from game to game."

LUBBOCK — "The best shooting team in the district. They have impressive quickness, too. If they shot well each game, they could easily beat any team on any night."

WHO'S THE BEST PLAYER IN THE DISTRICT, IN YOUR OPINION? — "It would be between Dawn (of Tascosa) and Wright (Plainview). Wright seems to be a better shooter from the field, but Dawn can handle the ball better, and seems capable of doing more things."

YOUR GUESS AS TO WHO WILL WIN IT? — "Boy, that's a tough one. Like I said, Tascosa has some great talent, but seems to lack the consistency. For a while, I thought it would be Amarillo High, but they have been in a slump the past couple of weeks. Overall, Plainview has probably been the most consistent team. They haven't had that losing streak, yet. In a way, I'll be surprised if it doesn't end in a tie. I'd say if Plainview beats Amarillo High Friday (in Plainview) they're in the driver's seat as far as finishing first."

Women's sports interest tough

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Trying to get some people interested in women's sports is like trying to feed a reluctant child spinach: it's tough, and sometimes impossible.

Many sports fans are interested only in how their favorite major league teams performed last night — and not how a woman set a world record in a marathon.

"It is our challenge to find stories that make my 15-year-old daughter read the sports section — to find the things women will relate to and read about," said Los Angeles Times Sports Editor Bill Dwyre.

"The media should cover women's sports like it does everything else," he said. "I think recognition is occurring, and I hope this sort of progress continues." San Francisco Examiner reporter Stephanie Salter said there was an "obvious neglect" of women's sports by the press, but she didn't think the media could "cram it down the throats of the readers."

Amy Rennert, editor of Women's Sports magazine, agreed, saying, "I'm not sure the fans are there yet. We're seeing new records set all the time. And still that doesn't transfer to readers' interest."

Joan Blount, special contributing writer to Sports Illustrated magazine, said she prefers writing about women athletes who haven't been given the same opportunities as men, because "their achievements seem to me that much greater."

"Bear" transcends events

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP
Special Correspondent

There are men who transcend events, and one of them certainly was Paul "Bear" Bryant.

One can count on the fingers of one hand the personalities who can walk into a crowded room and suddenly create a tremendous hush, a turning of heads and whispers sounding like a gentle breeze.

One of them was the "Bear," a great molder of men and teams who died in Tuscaloosa, Ala., Wednesday, his mission accomplished.

His was a special aura of greatness. To a degree, the same could be said of Joe DiMaggio and Muhammad Ali, among sports figures, few below presidential and general status among others.

It's an extraordinary magnetism, a quality that elevates them above us ordinary mortals. People, even the great, the rich and the famous, have looked upon them as special golden threads sewn into the nation's tapestry.

The death of Bear Bryant strikes particularly deep to me because we were of the same era — our respective careers crossing more than 40 years ago and then branching out in divergent directions.

It's something I've written before — as one often does when growing long on the tooth.

I was a struggling sports writer in Nashville when Red Sanders, the Vanderbilt head football coach, summoned a young assistant from Alabama to be what now would be called a defensive coordinator but then was simply a line coach.

His name: Paul Bryant, a rangy, handsome man who had played the opposite end of the great Don Hutson on the Alabama team that beat Stanford 29-13 in the 1935 Rose Bowl.

He looked like a Hollywood matinee idol — over six feet, lean and ramrod straight with bluish green eyes that some might say were like icy steel yet more resembled the waters of a placid lake.

His wife, Mary Harmon, was his college sweetheart, a campus queen. They were an immediate hit in the city from whose outlying environs "Old Hickory," Andrew Jackson came and which even then was the capital of country music.

But the "Bear" was not long for this place — those piercing eyes looked toward other horizons ... Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and the last 25 years his alma mater, Alabama, where he was to fashion the greatest record in all football.

It was little more than a year ago that the Bear had scaled the winning pinnacle reached before only by Amos Alonzo Stagg and then last month he announced his retirement, choosing to spend his final years removed from the constant pressures of his chosen profession.

There is a touch of irony in this. It's as if, with no distant star to drive him, the old bear wrestler from Fordyce, Ark., just sighed and passed the pigskin to other hands.

As the years passed, and victory piled upon victory, Paul Bryant became a national legend as millions watched him perform his magic on TV — the familiar hound's tooth hat pulled over his eyes, his shoulders slightly stooped, his strong face creased by the sun and advancing age.

Trevino finds new lease on life

PHOENIX (AP) — Lee Trevino may have found a new lease on his golfing life.

"I'd heard it before, but I didn't know it until now. But it's true. It's a lot easier to play when you've got a job," Trevino said before teeing off today in the first round of the $350,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

It's also easier to play with the absence of pain.

And Trevino now has (1) a job and (2) no pain.

A recently signed contract with NBC as a golf commentator took care of the job and an operation on his back last year took care of the pain.

The result is that he's again playing with the flair and form that made him one of the most popular performers the game has produced. For the first time in a year, he's a legitimate title threat.

"I'm playing pretty good, maybe good enough to win."

Last season was the poorest of Trevino's career. Bothered by chronic back pain through most of the season, he failed to win for the first time since 1968. He won only $34,000. He missed the cut more often than he made it. He admitted, late in the year, he had considered retirement.

Among the other leading contenders were Hale Irwin, Johnny Miller, David Graham, Tom Kite and Keith Fergus, who last week won the Bob Hope Desert Classic in a playoff against Rex Caldwell.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Fun City not very much fun

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Two of the nation's Top Ten college basketball teams visited New York and learned that it's not always Fun City.

Fifth-ranked Memphis State and No. 8 Louisville had to fight for their lives before coming away with hard-earned victories over Iona and Rutgers Wednesday night in a Madison Square Garden doubleheader.

First, Memphis State held off Iona 94-88 behind Keith Lee's 28 points, including a pair of free throws with three seconds left when Iona called a timeout although it had none remaining and was hit with a bench technical.

Then, Louisville froze the ball for more than seven minutes late in the game and nosed out Rutgers 54-49 for its eighth consecutive triumph.

In other games involving The Associated Press Top Twenty, second-ranked Indiana outlasted Northwestern 78-73, No. 6 Virginia trounced George Washington 59-44, ninth-ranked Houston clobbered Rice 76-40, No. 12 Arkansas nipped Texas Tech 62-59, No. 13 Missouri defeated Kansas 76-63 and No. 15 Georgetown crushed Seton Hall 71-48.

Top Ten
Memphis State, 15-1, took advantage of foul problems by Iona's top two scorers — Steve Burtt had 31 points and Gary Springer added 15 — to move from a 61-59 lead to 70-61. Lee and Bobby Parks, who finished with 21 points, each scored four for the Tigers during that span.

Memphis State's first 15 opponents had averaged only 61.4 points a game and Coach Dana Kirk called Iona "the first team we've had this year we couldn't contain offensively."

In the nightcap, Louisville Coach Denny Crum said he thought it was obvious why he ordered the Cardinals to freeze the ball with a 51-49 lead and more than eight minutes left.

"We shot 37 percent in the first half, and I doubt it was that good in the second half,"

he said. "When you play against a zone, you don't get any easy shots. We were shooting to begin with, but they obviously didn't want to come out and play us."

Rutgers' Tom Young said his players didn't challenge Louisville's stall "because we were tired. I wanted to rest our players and then come out and foul with two minutes to go. Who figures they're going to stall against us for five minutes?"

The slowdown finally was interrupted with 31 seconds left when Scooter McCray was fouled and made two free throws. Sophomore Milt Wagner led the Cardinals with 22 points, including two baskets that gave them a 51-47 lead.

In Chicago, Ted Kitchel scored 29 points after being held scoreless for the first nine minutes and led 15-1 Indiana over Northwestern in a Big Ten game. The Hoosiers trailed through most of the first half, but finally went ahead to stay early in the second half on a three-point shot by Kitchel and a basket by Jim Thomas. Randy Wittman added 25 points for Indiana, while Art Aaron topped Northwestern with 21, including a trio of three-pointers.

At Charlottesville, Va., Virginia's Ralph Sampson scored 16 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked four shots and the Cavaliers, 16-2, pulled away from George Washington in the final seven minutes. Reserve Jim Miller added 11 points, all in the second half.

Houston's Abdul Akeem Olajuwon scored 20 points, pulled down eight rebounds and rejected four shots to lead the Cougars, 16-2, over Rice in Southwest Conference action.

Second Ten
In another SWC game at Lubbock, Texas, 16-1 Arkansas used clutch free throws down the stretch to fend off Texas Tech. Darrell Walker had 18 points for the Razorbacks, who converted 16 of 24 free throws in the second half.

At Lawrence, Kan., Steve Stipanovich scored 25 points and Jon Sundvold poured in 18 of his 22 in the second half as Missouri eased past Kansas in a Big Eight game. The Tigers are 15-3 overall, 3-0 in league play.

At Landover, Md., Patrick Ewing had 22 points, 11 rebounds and four blocked shots as Georgetown, 14-4, pummeled Seton Hall. The Hoyas scored the first eight points of the second half as part of a 22-2 blitz that broke open a close contest.

Sutton pleased with Arkansas win

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

His team barely survived an upset bid by Texas Tech, but Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton says he's pleased, nonetheless, with the 12th-ranked Razorbacks.

A 62-59 victory Wednesday raises his squad's record to 16-1 for the season and 6-1 in Southwest Conference action. That's good for only second place in the league, since the lone loss was at the hands of ninth-ranked Houston, which drubbed Rice 76-40 Wednesday to run its mark to 16-2 and 7-0.

In the only other SWC game Wednesday, Baylor pounded Texas 76-43 for its second victory in six conference matches. Texas fell to 1-5.

"It's never easy to win here," Sutton said of Arkansas' victory in Lubbock. The Razorbacks lost only one of four key road games they had in the first half of the conference race, he added.

Players remember the "Bear"

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The fear and respect that his former players held for Paul "Bear" Bryant didn't stop when their college eligibility ran out, former Texas A&M athletic director Marvin Tate recalls.

Last year, Tate and others who played under Bryant at A&M between 1954 and 1958 went to Washington, D.C., for a dinner to honor Bryant as the winningest coach in college football history.

"All of us were over 40, but no one dared to have a drink because we were going to see the coach," Tate recalled Wednesday.

Earlier in the day, Bryant died of a massive heart attack while undergoing x-ray tests in an Alabama hospital. Tate, who was A&M's athletic director until Jackie Sherrill's arrival a year ago, was a senior on the Aggie squad when Bryant made his college head coaching debut in the fall of 1954.

"There is absolutely no way you can measure the influence he has had on so many people," said Tate, now a real estate agent in College Station.

Charlie Krueger, as a freshman during Bryant's first season at A&M, had a chance to look at things from a different perspective.

"I was absolutely scared to death of him my entire freshman year," said Krueger, who went on to become a two-time all-America under Bryant's tutelage and an all-pro defensive tackle for the San Francisco 49ers.

Krueger and Heisman Trophy winner John David Crow said they consider themselves fortunate that they played at Texas A&M the same four years that Bryant was there as head coach.

After a 1-9 start, the Aggies improved to 7-2-1 in 1955, when an end by the name of Gene Stallings made all-Southwest Conference, and to 9-0-1 in 1956 and to 8-3 in 1957. Bryant had three all-America players in 1957 — Krueger, guard Dennis Goehring and fullback Jack Pardee — and two more in 1958 in Krueger and Crow.

Bryant won many games during halftime in the locker room, Krueger said.

"Knute Rockne was a high school debater compared to Bear Bryant. I never knew Knute Rockne, but I know his record is not as good as Coach Bryant's," Krueger said.

Crow took the news off Bryant's death harder than others. He was broken up at the news.

"This hurts me and my family. The one thing I am thankful for is that Coach Bryant knew that I loved him before he died, because I told him so. Anyone who ever played for him was touched by him," said Crow.

Stallings, now the defensive secondary coach for the Dallas Cowboys, said he didn't appreciate Bryant as much when he played for him as he did in later years. Stallings was coach at Texas A&M when the Aggies defeated Alabama, and Bryant, on Jan. 1, 1968, the last time A&M went to the Cotton Bowl.

"We lost a great man and a great friend. It was a privilege to have been one of the fortunate few to have known him intimately. He lived his life to the very end, coaching. He was a special man because he was special to all those with whom he associated," Stallings said.

Sherrill, one of 16 active college or pro coaches who played under Bryant, said he found himself fashioning himself after Bryant.

"I don't know of any man who touched as many lives in a positive way as he has. He has done that for so many people that it's hard to explain my true feelings," Sherrill said.

"Subconsciously, I think I was trying to follow what he did. I studied every meeting, every talk, his mannerisms and how he handled different situations. I put it in my mind and stored it," he added.

"I'm no different than a lot of guys that played for him. I called him at different times in my career, whether it involved taking a job, a discipline problem, or other phases of the game. He had forgotten more than a lot of us will ever learn," Sherrill said.

Texas coach Fred Akers said, "I'm just shocked and saddened to hear such a great one of our profession has passed away. I'm grateful for all the things he did for me. And this country is so much better off for his being who he was and what he was."

Jones Ramsey, sports information director at the University of Texas, held the same job at A&M while Bryant was there.

"He obviously was the greatest coach that ever lived. Working for him for four years was the greatest experience of my life," Ramsey said.

"He taught people so much about life. As much as he was wrapped up in football and winning, he had the ability to teach his players how to live life, how to pay your bills and take care of your responsibilities," Ramsey added.

Carner leads strong field

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, the leading money winner in women's golf with more than $1.3 million and the 1982 Player of the Year, leads a strong field into the $150,000 Mazda Classic of Deer Creek as the LPGA starts its 1983 schedule.

This year's women's golf schedule, which gets under way today, includes 37 tournaments and more than $7 million in prize money.

The other two millionaires of women's golf, Kathy Whitworth and Donna Caponi, join the opening event with Carner, who became the newest member of the LPGA Hall of Fame when she scored her 35th tournament victory last year.

The tournament field includes defender Hollis Stacy, who defeated Carner in a five-hole playoff last year before Carner went on to win five tournaments.

Also competing are seven other players with an opportunity to crack the million-dollar mark this year.

With their career earnings, they are Jane Blalock, $976,068; Nancy Lopez, $951,673; Pat Bradley, $946,134; Amy Alcott, $904,993; Sally Little, $866,641; Sandra Haynie, $847,657; and Beth Daniel, $758,640.

Carner, who earned $310,399 last year, planned to start with a new set of irons and expectations of a successful season.

"I look forward to a good year. A good year for a pro is three victories. Anything above that is a great year."

"I've put my old irons in the closet," she said. "I've got new ones with a little different shaft that makes me hit the ball slightly higher in flight. It will take a little adjustment. I'll be using them in tournament play for the first time. It will be hunt and guess to get to the hole."

The Newspaper BIBLE

Come to Christ, who is the living Foundation of Rock upon which God builds; though men have spurned Him. He is very precious to God who has chosen Him above all others.

And now you have become living building-stones for God's use in building His house. What's more, you are His holy priests; so come to Him (you are acceptable to Him because of Jesus Christ) and offer to God those things that please Him. As the Scriptures express it, "See, I am sending Christ to be the carefully chosen, precious Cornerstone of My Church, and I will never disappoint those who trust in Him.

Yes, He is very precious to you who believe; and to those who reject Him, well--"The same Stone that was rejected by the builders has become the Cornerstone, the most honored and important part of the building." And the Scriptures also say, "He is the Stone that some will stumble over, and the Rock that will make them fall." They will stumble because they will not listen to God's Word, nor obey it, and so this punishment must follow--that they will fall.

But you are not like that, for you have been chosen by God Himself--you are priests of the King, you are holy and pure, you are God's very own--all this so that you may show to others how God called you out of the darkness into His wonderful light. (1 Peter 2:4-9)

Inmates cheered announcement

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Henry Porter is pleased a Supreme Court move probably will delay executions — including his scheduled for Feb. 10 — but he's not convinced the action will save his life.

"I'm not exactly hopeful because I know I'm going to be executed sooner or later," said Porter, who was convicted of murdering a Fort Worth police officer in 1975.

Porter said he believes his execution will be put off for three or four months as a result of the Supreme Court's decision Monday to stay the execution of Thomas Andy Barefoot. The court will use the case to determine how to handle emergency appeals in death penalty cases.

Death Row inmates broke into applause and cheering in one area when the stay was announced on radio and television Monday, while in other sections inmates were reported to have spread the word quickly but quietly.

"It was like a giant sigh down there, and people were yelling and they were happy. It was like cheering — they were clapping," said Billy Hughes of Fairhope, Ala.

Hughes, who was convicted of shooting a Texas Department of Public Safety officer who stopped him along the highway near Sealy, said he was so moved he had to sit down.

"Everything seemed to drain out of me," he said. "I got weak in the knees because it was just such a relief to know that the man was not going to be murdered."

The Supreme Court action probably also will keep other inmates from being executed for a while. Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said he expects no executions in the country until the court announces a ruling, and that is not expected until July.

Assistant Attorney General Doug Becker has said that until that announcement, the state will not oppose requests for stays of execution for Porter and the other two Texas inmates with execution dates.

James David Autry's execution was set for Feb. 21 and Leon R. King's for March 13.

Barefoot's stay Monday came less than 12 hours before the time of his scheduled execution.

Barefoot, who was convicted of killing a Harker Heights police officer, refused to talk to reporters Wednesday, but Hughes said

Barefoot told him after returning to Death Row that he had thought he would die.

"He said he thought he was dead," Hughes said. "He thought he definitely was going to die ... He knew they meant business."

Inmate Jimmy Vanderbilt

Quadriplegic given maximum sentence

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — A quadriplegic who requires around-the-clock care has been sentenced to the maximum 10 years in prison in the death of an elderly woman killed in a head-on collision that occurred when he was drunk.

Donald Ray Boggs, 31, of Tioga was convicted of involuntary manslaughter Tuesday for the September 1981 traffic death of 70-year-old Lois Irene Walker, who died when Boggs' car went out of control and skidded into the path of her vehicle.

"It was the punishment due," one juror said before leaving the courthouse.

Boggs, slightly injured in the wreck, underwent a blood-alcohol test at Wilson N. Jones Hospital that showed him to be more than 2 1/2 times over the limit of legal intoxication.

Six months ago, Boggs suffered a spinal injury while diving at Lake Dallas. That injury paralyzed his arms and legs.

Sheriff Jack Driscoll said Boggs originally was taken to the Grayson County jail, which has no facilities for quadriplegics.

State District Judge William Ralph Elliott ordered Boggs released about 45 minutes after he was taken from the courtroom to jail. He remains free on $2,500 bond and was placed in the custody of his parents.

Boggs requires 24-hour attention and daily help with exercises, which he receives from his father.

Driscoll said his jailers are not qualified to handle quadriplegics and that the county would have to hire a "medically-certified" person to stay with Boggs.

A local therapist said it would cost the state $80 per day to hire full-time attendants for Boggs in jail and rent or lease additional medical equipment.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Rick Hartley said very few quadriplegics are in the state's penitentiaries, but that the Huntsville prison has adequate facilities for paralyzed inmates.

They had done that in honor of Charlie Brooks Jr. on Dec. 6, just before his execution.

Hughes said inmates were a little more relaxed about their fate after the Barefoot stay, but added they would never return to the attitudes they held before the Brooks execution.

"It was like they expected the cavalry of the Marines or somebody to land at the last minute with a stay and the person would be saved. Since Brooks was murdered, everyone has come from that half-asleep state ... to a full alert," Hughes said.

Inmate Clarence Brandley, 31, convicted of a rape and strangulation in Conroe, said he believes most Death Row inmates are adopting a wait-and-see position.

"I feel like they are encouraged, but we don't know how the Supreme Court is going to rule and what kind of guidelines and what effect it will have on your case," Brandley said.

The court is using the Barefoot case to decide whether federal appeals courts should rule on an inmate's formal appeal before allowing the execution to take place.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had decided it should issue stays only if it found the federal appeal had a good chance to succeed. That's the position it took in the Barefoot and Brooks cases, deciding each time against a stay.

The result was that Brooks died without the appeals court ever ruling on the formal appeal.

Vanderbilt, 30, convicted of killing a state legislator's daughter, predicted the Supreme Court will back the appeals court's position.

"If they say it is improper, they kind of catch the 5th Circuit with its pants down. I don't look for them to do that to the 5th Circuit," Vanderbilt said.

"The ruling's going to be detrimental from the point of view of the Death Row inmate, or I expect it to be," he said.

"If you tell me I can appeal my case after you kill me, it doesn't do me much good to appeal it, does it? Which is what they did with Charlie Brooks, and I anticipate the Supreme Court will say that's permissible."

Cheese ball tips

DEAR POLLY — I and my friends make cheese balls using cream cheese, but we find that today's cream cheese is so moist that the cheese balls won't hold their shape properly. Do you have any suggestions? — BUNNY

DEAR BUNNY — If there is any liquid in the recipe, you could begin by decreasing that. You might also try substituting pot cheese, farmer cheese or dry-curd cottage cheese, ounce for ounce, for the cream cheese, then thinning the mixture with sour cream until it is of the desired consistency. While this won't give the exact same flavor and consistency as cream cheese, it should produce a tasty and interesting cheese ball. You might also try Neufchatel cheese. This low-fat cream cheese taste-alike is sometimes a bit dryer and stiffer than commercial cream cheese. The bonus with Neufchatel is that it is also lower in calories — a real advantage to most of us in these post-holiday dieting days! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — If you have difficulty with a clogged shower head, fill a small plastic bag with vinegar and tie it onto the shower head. Allow the head to soak in this manner for 24 hours. The vinegar will dissolve all the minerals clogging up the holes. — SYLVIA

DEAR POLLY — Some music books do not stay open on the piano while one is playing. I clip a spring-type clothespin to the top or side of the music book to hold it open. Two can be used if necessary. — MRS. L.D.

DEAR POLLY — This is my mother-in-law's foolproof method for cooking pasta. Bring salted water to boiling. Add pasta and bring back to boiling. Turn off the heat. Cover and let stand for 10 minutes. Stir once to keep from sticking. Perfect pasta everytime — never overcooked. — W.F.

DEAR POLLY — I keep a small notebook and pen in my purse to copy recipes from waiting room magazines. If you forget to carry these items, ask the receptionist for a pen and write on a deposit slip from your checkbook. — KAY

In 1880, Thomas Edison received a patent for his electric incandescent light.

In 1944, Leningrad was completely liberated from the Nazis during World War II.

Super Bowl hype

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

Hype One. Hype Two. Hype Three....

There's a television show originating from Pasadena, Calif., on NBC Sunday.

It starts at 4 p.m. EST, continues until about 10 p.m. and stars Dick Enberg, Merlin Olsen and Len Berman with a supporting cast of 130.

Not to mention Ted Danson and the cast of "Hill Street Blues." Plus dancing girls, card stunts, helicopters, a Goodyear blimp, and 20 — count them — cameras and six tape machines (six cameras and two tape machines suffice for the average regular-season game).

ROSE BOWL, PASADENA, CALIFORNIA, JANUARY 30, 1983

Oh yes, and the Washington Redskins and the Miami Dolphins.

Live, from Pasadena, it's Super Bowl XVII, of which Cecil B. DeMille would be proud. It's as much show biz as football — more than 100 million people will watch, a goodly number of whom don't know a Riggins from a Duhe. So NBC has to hook 'em with pizzazz.

"Media hype has taken it from a game to a media event," says Ted Nathanson, who will oversee the entire show. Larry Cirillo, who will produce the game coverage, calls it "an extravaganza." Whatever it is, it's lucrative — sponsors will pay $200,000 plus per minute for the pregame show and nearly half a million per minute for the game itself.

There will be two hours of pregame, hosted by Len Berman with Mike Adamle and Pete Axthelm. Ahmad Rashad and John Brodie will analyze the Redskins; Len Dawson and Bob Griese the Dolphins, and, no kidding, Adamle and Jim Turner will analyze the special teams.

Then there are the unabashed plugs.

Danson who plays a bar-owning, ex-baseball pitcher in a show called "Cheers" (on NBC of course), makes his prediction from his fictional bar. The "Hill Street Blues," cast, including ex-NFL running back Ed Marinaro, will also be called upon to give us the benefit of their football knowledge.

Finally, the game. Having discovered at the World Series that four men in the booth are too many, it's just Enberg and Olsen.

As Cirillo said this week:

WHO AM I?

Experts say I made the forward pass a routine play in pro football. Before my 16 NFL seasons, I was a tail-back at Texas Christian. Much later I became the first head coach of the New York Titans-Jets.

coach of the Houston Oilers (1973-82) he also was head of the Washington Redskins (1971-72) and the Dallas Cowboys (1970-71).
