Area USDA closings could be a disadvantage

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

With the newest political theme being one of less government, Texas along with Tennessee, Virginia, and Georgia will soon lose several dozen United States Department of Agriculture field offices.

Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy announced Tuesday that

1,070 offices would be closed nationwide - a streamlining effort he says will cut the USDA's payroll by 11,000 people and save $3.6 billion during the next five years.

Locally, this will mean that USDA offices in Borden County (Gall) and Glasscock County (Garden City) will be closed.

Borden County's USDA Executive Director Nancy Condit said, "We don't have much information right now as far as a specific closing time will be. We do know that our name is on the list of offices to be closed."

She added, "Of course this will hurt the producers here, but we don't have any idea as to what extent right now."

According to the USDA, this reorganization plan will better serve farmers because there will be fewer locations and service centers for commodity programs, crop insurance, loans and some conservation programs will be put under one roof.

Acting Glasscock County USDA Executive Director John Kinnibrough said, "What I've heard is that some of the offices slated to be closed now will close in two to three months and some won't close for two to three years due to the lease situations they are in."

He added, "As far as I know the services will be the same, but this office will be closed and the services consolidated with Midland County."

Kinnibrough said the big disadvantage in that is the majority of the producers (farmers as well as ranchers) in Glasscock County deal with Big Spring on a commercial basis and now they may be facing the possibility of having to handle all of their business in Midland County.

He added producers could be facing a lot of travel with the proposed changes or they could end up having to move their entire operations.

According to Harold Bob Bennett, executive director of Texas' Farm Service Agency, all regions of Texas will be affected by the reorganization, leaving some producers to drive farther, but they should spend much less time in an FSA office.

Intricacy of giving

■ Mid-Tex inmates provide toy joy

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Intricate detail is usually said of a painter, a sculptor, or someone in a highly technical or specialized field.

But during this holiday season the intricate detail can be found on the toys made by inmates at the Mid-Tex Detention Center.

Last Friday representatives from six local agencies, including the Salvation Army, Northside Community Center, Westside Community Center, Westside Daycare Center, Rape Crisis-Victim Services, and the YMCA Daycare Program, stopped by the United Way Office to divide the more than 300 wooden toys to be distributed among the children served by these agencies.

According to United Way executive director Carroll Jennings, this is the third year the Mid-Tex Detention Center has had the program and the United Way only acts as a coordinating agent between the receiving agencies and the center.

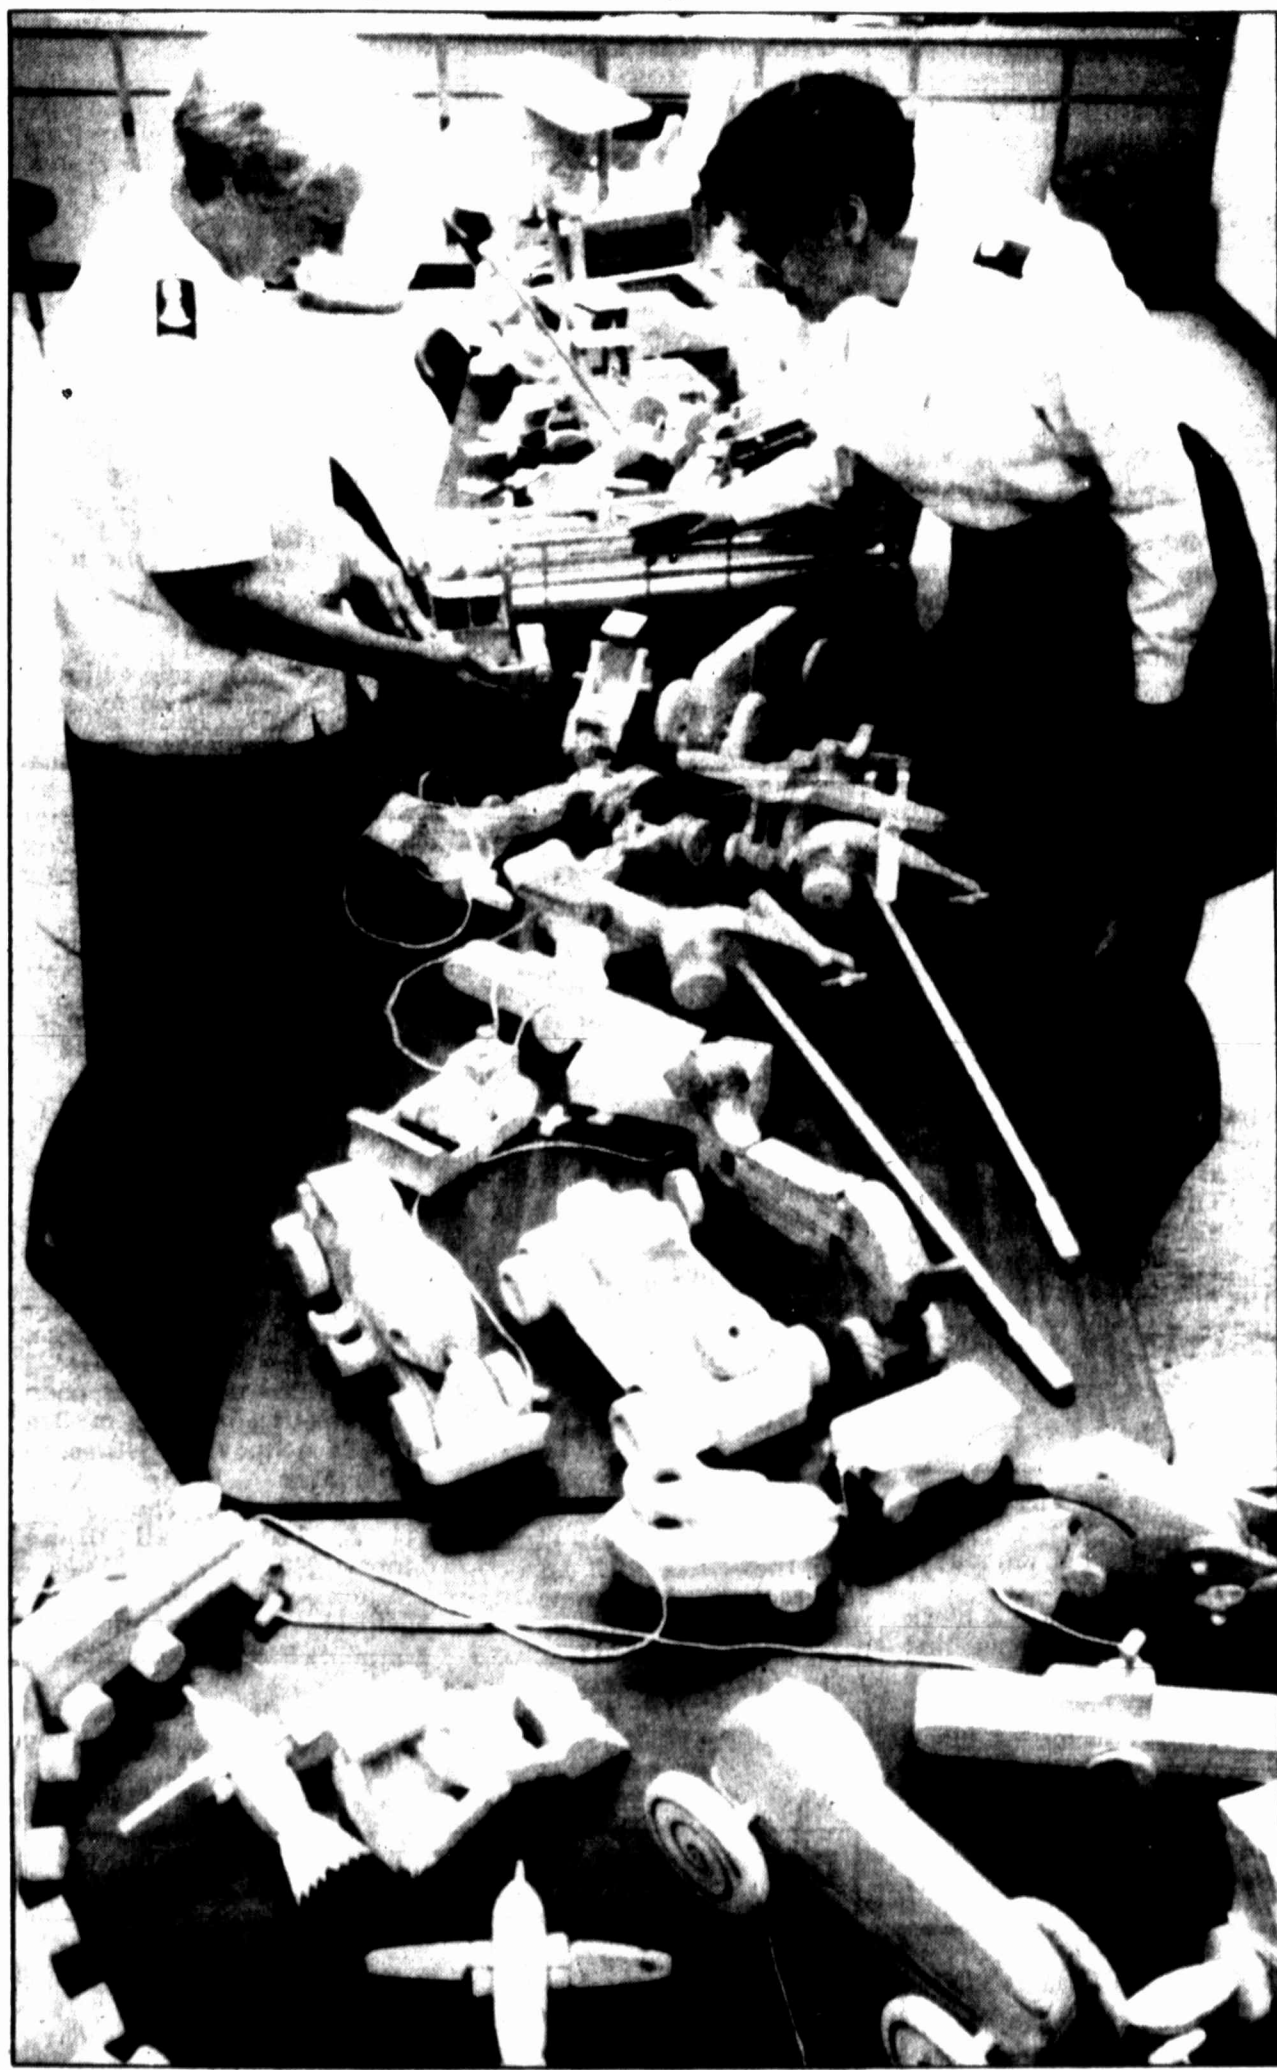

Jennings said, "These wooden toys show some very intricate work. It's amazing what they've (inmates) done."

The details he refers to include dump trucks that dump, airplanes with working propellers, movable parts on several other toys.

The types of toys made by the inmates also include ducks, boats, cars, trains, dinosaurs and several others as well.

Shane Howard runs the carpentry shop at the Detention Center where the toys are made and said a lot of the ideas for the designs come out of plan books, but a good majority of the designs are the ideas of the inmates working on the toys.

After seeing the number of Please see TOYS, page 2A

Mrs. Major Roy Tolcher shows Cadet Dolores Camarillo some of the detailed work inside a wooden truck, one of the many wooden toys that were donated to the Salvation Army by the inmates at the Mid-Tex Detention Center. Six local agencies received the toys, which will be distributed to needy children for Christmas.

Controlled burns on as prisoners demolish condemned structures

Inmates from the 80 John Wallace Unit are currently tearing down and burning houses slated for demolition by the city. Fire officials want people to be aware of the smoke that will be seen in the air the next few days.

However, please do not hesitate to call the fire department because they want to respond whether it is a controlled burn or not. The houses to be demolished are: 209 Algeria, 409 N.W. Ninth, 500 N.W. Sixth, 704 N.W. Fifth, 1216 Lindbergh, 310 N.E. Sixth, 602 North San Antonio, 812 West Seventh, 315 Wright, 1511 West First, 1108 East 15th, 904 Lancaster, 2204 Nolan, 1308 Mesa, 1305 Lindbergh, 910 N.W. First, 206 N.E. Sixth, 900 N.W. Third and Second and Channing.

Turmoil brewing as GOP moves to abolish caucuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decision by House Republicans to abolish taxpayer-funded special-interest legislative caucuses such as the Congressional Hispanic Caucus is causing some turmoil.

"This is a backlash against the increasing power of blacks, Hispanics, Asians and women in Congress," charged Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., who chairs the Congressional Black Caucus.

Mfume and Congressional Hispanic Caucus Chairman Jose Serrano, D-N.Y., held a news conference Wednesday to denounce the Republican plan to abolish 28 legislative service organizations.

The GOP's decision to ax public funding for the caucuses — which are largely of liberal persuasion — was aimed mainly at the black and Hispanic caucuses, Serrano said.

The GOP retorted that "the place is under new management."

Texas Democratic members of the 18-member Hispanic caucus were more tempered in their comments.

"We are kind of disappointed because we have been very dependent on the (caucuses) to supply us with non-partisan information," said Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi.

Toys

toys being picked up at the United Way, you would think the Detention Center had several inmates working on the toys just before Christmas, but Howard said there are only two inmates who work on the toys.

He said, "We only have two inmates working on the toys. They work on them year round and have already begun working on toys for next Christmas."

According to Howard inmates apply for the positions to work on the toys and if there are no inmates interested or who have any carpentry or woodworking skills they can be trained to help make the toys.

Another fact, pointed out by Jennings and Howard, is the wood used to make the toys was not purchased.

Howard said it was obtained from Big Spring's compost facility along with some donations from area residents.

He said, "Basically, the toys were made from scraps of wood that we take in and prepare for making toys with."

Caucus

only three Republicans in the Hispanic caucus, suggested the caucuses can survive in different form as voluntary organizations.

"I think the usefulness of the different caucuses will continue if people are dedicated," the San Antonio lawmaker said. "It's not going to affect a single thing in terms of common issues."

A fellow San Antonio lawmaker, Democrat Frank Tejeda, agreed that the mission of the Hispanic caucus will live on if members persevere.

Dissolution of the caucus "does not mean that Hispanic members will not continue to work as diligently as they have in the past to introduce legislation or research the effects of proposed legislation on the Hispanic community," Tejeda said. "In fact, I am confident that we will work even harder."

Tejeda deplored the increased workload on congressional staff and loss of bipartisanship he predicts will result from the caucuses' dissolution. "I would have preferred the new majority's use of a scalpel and not a hatchet in streamlining these caucuses," he said.

Ortiz suggested that the Hispanic Caucus may turn to outside financing from corporations or others to survive. Currently, members contribute $5,000 to $6,000 a year from their congressional office funds.

Some Democrats have suggested that killing the caucuses won't provide any real taxpayer savings. The organizations are funded with money allocated from a member's office funds. In the absence of caucus funding, members are likely to use the money for their own office staffing and equipment needs.

The tiny three-member Congressional Border Caucus, established by El Paso Democratic Rep. Ron Coleman, also is on the chopping block.

"I want to make it clear that the border caucus is not one of the million-dollar LSOs that Speaker Gingrich refers to," Coleman said. "Our annual dues are only $100, we have no staff and we have never occupied office space."

Coleman pledged to fund the border caucus out of his own pocket if necessary.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Death sentence for fleeing if kill someone

HOUSTON (AP) — In the wake of two tragic accidents during police chases, Houston Mayor Bob Lanier wants suspects who inadvertently kill someone while fleeing officers to face the death penalty.

Vehicles racing from patrol cars have accidentally killed four people in Houston recently, sparking a controversy over the police department's chase policy.

Lanier made his suggestion this week as he laid out his administration's objectives for the upcoming session of the Texas Legislature, which starts Jan. 10.

"I think juries ought to be given the option (of assessing death)," Lanier said Tuesday.

In all so far this year, 10 citizens and one police officer have been killed in Houston during police chases. The most recent deadly accidents occurred late last month.

Five OC officials subpoenaed

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — An Ector County grand jury has subpoenaed at least five Odessa College officials to testify about the college's investment problems.

The subpoenas were issued only days after the state auditor's office released a report showing that the school violated state law, specifically the Texas Public Funds Investment Act, by failing to exercise proper oversight of investments made by former Vice President of Business Affairs Roger Coomer.

Coomer invested the school's entire $22 million portfolio in two types of high-risk mortgage-backed derivatives known as "inverse floaters" and "principal only strips," according to the report. Both instruments increase in value when interest rates fall and decrease when they rise, as they have since the first of the year. The report concluded that the portfolio lost about 50 percent of its value as a result of the investments.

Board of trustees members Bill Saunders, Joe Zant and Jim Gilliland have confirmed they were called to testify. Board President Bob Clark would not comment on whether he had received a subpoena, according to the Odessa American.

Teacher retirement changes proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — A critical state report says that while the $38 billion Teacher Retirement Fund is in good standing, the administration and investment practices of the Teacher Retirement System need improvement.

Court sets aside death sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 16 years after the slaying of an Austin police officer, the death sentence of the man convicted in his murder has been thrown out by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The reason? David Lee Powell — at his own request — was sentenced under the wrong version of the capital murder law. "We cannot allow trial courts and criminal defendants to mutually consent to usurp the powers of the legislature," Judge Lawrence Meyers wrote in Wednesday's majority opinion.

Powell could get a new punishment hearing in the May 1978 shooting death of Austin policeman Ralph Ablanedo, assuming the court decision stands, said Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

Prosecutors are exploring whether to ask the court to reconsider its 5-3 ruling, he said.

"This is kind of like winning a ballgame and then having the scorecard changed after the game," Earle said.

The death penalty or life in prison are the only sentences possible upon conviction for capital murder. Only Powell's sentence was thrown out by the court; his conviction was affirmed.

Construction of state jails running into water problems

EL PASO (AP) — Complying with El Paso's strict water conservation regulations would add millions to the cost of a state jail planned in the city, say corrections officials looking for ways to avoid the extra costs.

The state plans to ask El Paso's Public Service Board for an exemption to the rules, which would require the prison to include low-flush toilets and water-saving shower heads.

But El Paso officials say they must be careful that the regulations are evenly applied.

"The board would have to be very careful of how they treated public entities (versus) private entities. I don't think there should be any disparate treatment," said Public Service Board chairwoman Elsa Echaniz Cushing.

Prison officials said changing the state's standard waste water design to accommodate the rules would be costly, however. They estimated it would add millions to the project's $28 million price tag.

Convicted Killer Samuel Hawkins talks during an interview in Huntsville Prison Wednesday. Hawkins' execution was stayed Wednesday and the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals threw out the death sentence of David Lee Powell who was convicted of killing a police officer. The court also upheld the death sentence of Lorenzo Morris, convicted in the 1990 robbery murder of Jesse Fields.

If Powell now gets a life sentence, he would already be eligible for parole because of time served, officials said.

Powell twice has been convicted and sentenced to be executed in the murder of Ablanedo, which occurred after the officer stopped the car in which Powell was a passenger. Powell's first conviction was reversed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ablanedo's sister, Arlene Ablanedo, said after Wednesday's ruling, "This is very sad. It's not anger any more. It's very upsetting. I don't know if we can keep going through this."

Shortly before Powell's second trial in November 1991, the capital murder sentencing law was amended. The amendment deleted a requirement that the jury consider whether a defendant's conduct was committed deliberately and with the "reasonable expectation that the death of the deceased or another would result."

Shooting rampage brings bloodiest day in city's history

AMARILLO (AP) — An Amarillo man's shooting rampage made it one of the bloodiest days in the city's history, Potter County Sheriff Jimmy Don Boydston says.

Roy Fisher, 46, a maintenance man for ASARCO, went to his mother-in-law's house about 5 p.m. Wednesday and shot his wife and brother-in-law then drove to another residence, where he shot to death a co-worker as he hung Christmas lights, authorities said.

Within an hour of those shootings, Fisher was himself shot to death in a roadside shootout with officers.

Early Wednesday, in a separate incident, another Amarillo man was shot to death.

"It's been a long time since we've had a day like today. I was the initial director of the Special Crimes Unit, and I don't recall during the time I was there ever going through anything like that," Boydston said.

Amarillo Police Sgt. Gerald Bailey said he had never seen a bloodier day in his 26 years on the force. "Not in my career, I don't think," he said.

Gwen Fisher, 47, was reported in critical condition early today at Northwest Texas Hospital, where she underwent surgery for a gunshot wound to the chin.

Her brother, L.B. Scott, also 47, died at St. Anthony's Hospital from multiple gunshot wounds to the upper left chest.

Both Scott and his sister were shot with a high-caliber rifle, Justice of the Peace Jim Tipton said.

Robert C. Jenkins, 55, who worked with Fisher at ASARCO in Amarillo, was found dead at his residence, also from wounds inflicted by a rifle.

Authorities said the motive for Fisher's rampage was unclear.

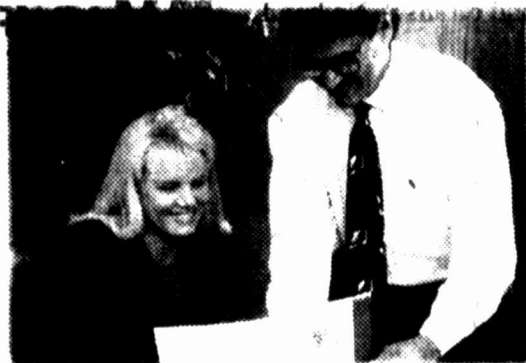

Shortly before 5 p.m. Wednesday, police dispatchers reported receiving several 911 calls about a shooting at the residence of Fisher's mother-in-law.

Several other people at the residence were uninjured, officers said. An alert was issued for Fisher, who witnesses said left the scene in a black Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck.

A short time later, dispatchers received numerous 911 calls concerning a shooting at another residence.

Jenkins' body was discovered in his garage. He had been shot while in the process of decorating his house with Christmas lights.

Quote of the Day

"You're not going to arrest violence on the streets by slapping handcuffs on the First Amendment."

Paul K. McMeesters, The Freedom Forum, 1993

Northside center needs you

It's the Christmas season, and just about every organization in town is asking for donations to help out needy people.

Helping others is an integral part of the Christmas spirit, a part that tugs on our heartstrings and opens our pocketbooks.

But, Christmas is also the time to be forgiving. And, Northside Community Center falls under both needs.

The center had a rough year last year, with the embezzlement scandal and almost losing their United Way funding.

However, the center's board has taken steps which will prevent another such incident, and including the excellent choice of hiring Max Webb to run the center.

Webb has brought to the center a needed sense of organization, straightforwardness and caring.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the Editorial Board of the Big Spring Herald unless otherwise indicated.

Because of this, the unpleasantness of last year should be forgiven and the Center given a second chance with your donation.

Yes, it is the season to be jolly, but unfortunately many folks in our community will be seeing a meager Christmas except for the generosity of your heart.

When deciding to give whatever you are able, remember the Northside Community Center. It has worked hard to overcome its problems and to continue to provide needed services to people still overcoming theirs.

Parents can't kick about this fad

It was a remarkable sight for these times.

Sitting in groups on the gymnasium floor were about 80 children ages 6 to 8.

Mike Royko
Columnist

As children that age are inclined to do, most were chattering, laughing, elbowing, gawking and generally creating a head-pounding racket.

Then a muscular man walked onto the floor and, in a voice that was firm but not loud, he said only one word.

"Quiet."

It was if he had plucked out their little tongues. They suddenly sat straight and looked at him like good bird dogs eager for a command.

This mass personality change caused excited murmuring among the parents, relatives and friends who were crowded into the gym's bleachers.

One mother said: "Unbelievable. I'd have to stuff a dishrag in his mouth to make him that quiet."

"It wouldn't work," her husband said. "I've tried it." Someone else said: "How does he do it?"

"Maybe he kicks them in the head if they don't shut up."

Just then, the muscular man turned and asked the spectators for silence. Their talking, he said, would disturb the children. Everybody shut up and the program began.

It was an exhibition and competition by students and teachers from a karate school. The man and all the kids were barefoot and wearing loose white pants and blouses, with belts of various colors showing what stage of skill they had reached.

The teacher's belt was black. Maybe that was why the kids clammed up.

Whatever the reason, it made a convert out of me.

I had been troubled by the growing popularity of karate and other martial arts training among the nation's youths, especially those in the suburbs.

It seemed almost un-American for all these kids to be leaping and twirling like a lot of little Japanese assassins. Our tradition has been to settle disputes with a punch in the chops, not a kick to the brow.

I'm told it's the result of their fondness for the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, which is something else that troubled me. My generation would never have embraced as heroes some ugly, green, pizza-eating, talking turtles who lived in sewers. We believed that anything living in a sewer should be hit with a brick.

And it would have been unthinkable for our heroes — John Wayne, Humphrey Bogart, the Wolfman, Dracula, the Frankenstein Monster, or even Sonny Tufts — to have twirled and kicked an enemy. Well, maybe Sonny Tufts. Nothing he did would have surprised us.

But an entire generation is growing up believing that the way to fight is to squint, spin and kick an adversary's brow, while screaming: "Eeeyaaach!" (I believe that in Japanese "Eeeyaaach!" means, "This will teach you not to gawk at my girlfriend's rump when she walks to the ladies' room, bub." Or something to that effect.)

This could make for some strange looking barroom fights in the future, with everyone whirling, leaping and kicking this way and that. The winners will be whoever is sober enough to stand on one foot, which has never been a measure of barroom brawmanship. And chances are, all these suburban-bred karate tots will be America's future barroom brawl losers, since a toe kick will never replace a well-aimed bottle as an edge.

There's also the problem of height. In Japan, most people are about the same size — short or shorter — except for their beer-bellied wrestlers. So it's usually an even match when the Japanese pummel their brows.

But our superior diet of burgers and fries has given us youths whose addled heads brush the top of a door frame. What will happen when some stubby lad squares off against someone the size of Will Perdue? He'll find himself squashed under a size 19 triple D, that's what.

However, these concerns faded as I watched the little kids go through their routines. When the instructor and the other black-belted coaches barked out commands, all those tikes leaped to attention and quickly ran to and from their assigned places. They even bowed. I haven't seen so fine an example of obedience since Fagin taught his lads a useful trade.

Maybe that is something our clueless school administrators should think about. Instead of paying teachers more for getting advanced degrees, they should urge them to get black belts in karate.

When the exhibition ended, one father was leading two of his children out of the building. One of them was yawning like he wanted to go to McDonald's. The other was demanding a visit to Chuck E Cheese.

"No," he said, "we're going to eat at Grandma's, and I don't want you spoiling your appetites."

They howled even louder. The father just shook his head, and his shoulders slumped.

Never mind the kids. There is a man who could use his own lessons in saying: "Eeeyaaach."

School finance story timely

Editor:

The school finance article on page 6-A of your Sunday edition is very timely, to say the least. Both Representative Counts and Senator Montford lauded their supporting of SB-7, claiming that the "courts have declared it legal," and "the best we could do."

Actually, this is the fourth time school funding has been before the Texas Supreme Court, and probably will not be its last.

In 1836, the Texas Declaration of Independence was adopted, and Texas became the 28th territory admitted to the Union, later seceding, but in 1876 rejoined the Union permanently, ratifying a third constitution. Before 1876, neither Mexico nor Texas acted upon the school funding situation, nor has it changed much since 1836. Except to snowball.

Seems everything is taught in school 'ceptin' readin', writin' n' arithmetic.

High school graduates now must take remedial class in the three basics to be eligible to enter college.

Since 1836 property owners' homes owners have footed school funding almost 100 percent. Today, the home owner pays 85 to 90 percent of school funding, (55 percent ad valorem, 30-35 percent sales).

If SB-7 is legal, why were, as of March 34, 39 law firms on record of Supreme Court Case Number: 94-0152, Docketed Feb. 15? Their decision is to be announced in late November or early December I have been told continually that money is not the solution to education.

But it is sure necessary if inside heated swimming pools, plush seated gymnasiums, other sugar-coated activities are included as necessities.

Education is the most important single issue facing us today. Leadership of tomorrow without education places us in jeopardy similar to Rwanda or Haiti. Where are we failing? In the home? We can't depend upon teachers to teach the three R's, sex education, religion, right and wrong, racial equality, etc.

Equal education should be financed by equal funding. "From each according to his ability, to each according to his needs" was found wanting in the USSR, now Russia, but seems to be flourishing here in Texas and the United States.

The school boards and Superintendents can not reduce their budget, because that would lower their budget for next year, and spend, spend, spend and ad infinitum. It is time for tax evolution, or are we in for a revolution? It looks alarmingly closer to revolution. Is the last election an indicator?

Thanks for you time.

NATO pullout stepped up

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — With 356 peacekeepers still held hostage by Serbs and U.N. operations at a standstill, NATO has stepped up plans to get all U.N. peacekeepers out of Bosnia.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization gave its military experts until Friday to come up with detailed plans for withdrawal of the 24,000 peacekeepers in Bosnia.

Foreign Minister Alain Juppe of France told NATO on Wednesday that the situation for peacekeepers was becoming "untenable."

NATO officials said a force of 20,000 troops would be needed to protect the peacekeepers if they had to withdraw under fire.

"It's a highly risky operation and would require a reinforcement of ground troops to pull off," Juppe said in Paris.

Defense Secretary William Perry says more than 2,000 U.S. troops would be involved in any NATO evacuation of U.N. peacekeepers.

The United Nations was having trouble pulling out even a small fraction of its peacekeeping force — about 400 Bangladeshi peacekeepers in the northwest Bihar region.

There was confusion over whether the poorly armed Bangladeshis had actually started pulling out of the area.

On Wednesday, U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Jan-Dirk von Merveldt said "some" of the Bangladeshis tried to leave their base at Velika Kladusa but had been "blocked." He said he had no details on how many tried to leave or who prevented them.

Today, von Merveldt said no convoy was actually formed, but that peacekeepers had "started to leave" by trying to get clearance that the Serbs had not granted.

The Serbs alleged that the Bangladeshis planned to leave behind equipment and weaponry to government forces.

Croatian Serb authorities, quoted by Yugoslavia's Tanjug news agency, claimed U.N. officials had told them the Bangladeshis would withdraw "with only their personal belongings, and without their weapons."

"This is a clear sign that the Bangladeshi battalion has been 'arming' government troops in Bihar, the statement said.

Police trace teens suspected in killing of security guards

LAKE OZARK, Mo. (AP) — Two teens suspected of killing two security guards were captured today when law officers traced a phone call they made to a relative.

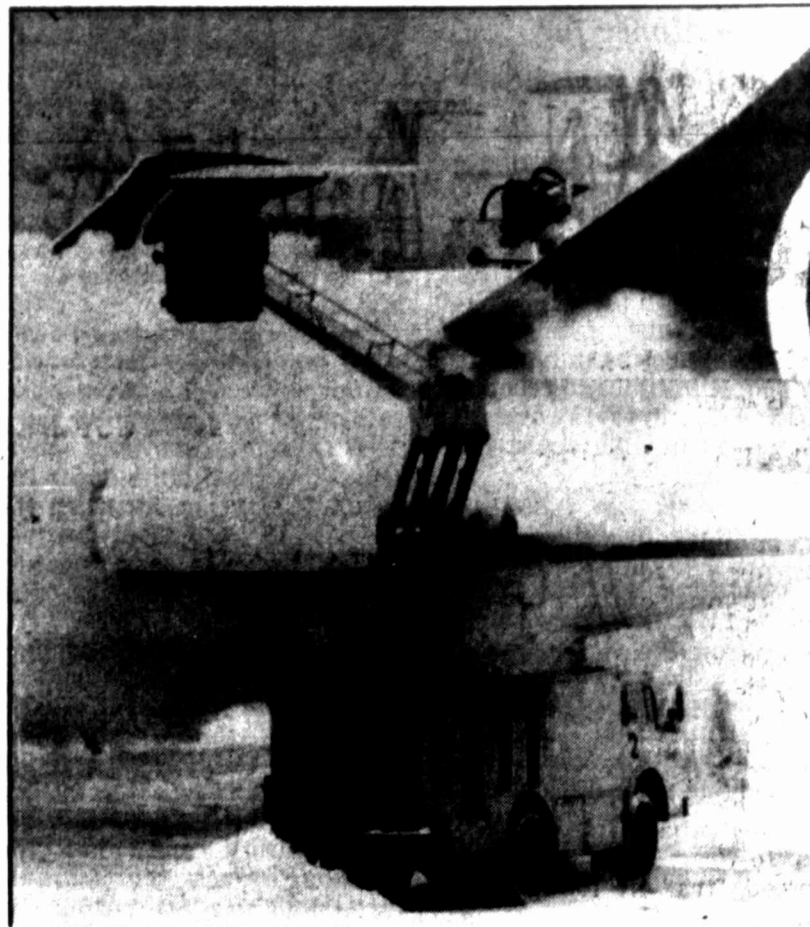

Christopher Creed, 17, and a 13-year-old whose name was withheld were arrested without incident by state troopers who surrounded a summer home near Lake of the Ozarks, Camden County Sheriff John Page said.

"We're very relieved, very relieved," Page said. "Within 24 hours, we got the bad guys and nobody else got hurt."

Soldiers, coffins returns from covert war

MOSCOW (AP) — Seven soldiers and three coffins came home Wednesday from Chechnya, pawns in Russia's clumsy covert war to oust the leader of the rebel republic.

The men from an elite tank division of the army were recruited by the Federal Counterintelligence Service, which has botched perhaps the most ambitious operation of its short life.

Some compare the debacle to the disastrous Bay of Pigs of invasion. It has left soldiers and spies at each others' throats — and hawks and doves alike criticizing President Boris Yeltsin.

"Chechnya is an inalienable part of Russia. But we are categorically against using the fire and the sword," said Yegor Gaidar, a longtime Yeltsin ally and head of one of parliament's largest blocs.

It still isn't clear whether Yeltsin knew what his secret agents were up to in the tiny, mostly Muslim republic of 1.2 million on Russia's volatile southern flank.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Postal service rethinking plans for WWII stamp

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bowing to White House concern, the Postal Service says it is rethinking plans for a stamp to commemorate the end of World War II with a picture of a mushroom-shaped cloud.

"We agree that the atomic bomb helped speed the end of the war. But again there could be more appropriate ways to depict that event," Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Wednesday.

She said Chief of Staff Leon Panetta has told Postmaster General Marvin Runyon about the White House's concerns. Although Runyon gets the final say on stamp issuances, he bowed to White House pressure last month and approved a "Madonna and Child" Christmas stamp for 1995.

"We are mindful of the sensitivities on this issue and are taking into consideration the views of the Department of State and the White House, as well as other groups and individuals," Postal Service spokesman Robin Wright said after being informed of Myers' comments.

White House rules out trip to Haiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has all but ruled out a trip to Haiti by President Clinton to meet with American troops during the holidays, as had been expected a few weeks ago.

"Nothing is scheduled, and I don't think you should look for any trip coming up in the next few weeks," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said Wednesday.

White House officials began talking about a trip to Haiti after troops there grumbled about feeling ignored by the president, who went out of his way on a Middle East tour to visit American forces in Kuwait and suggest that they'd be home by Christmas.

Oregon's assisted suicide law hits roadblock

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A federal judge has derailed Oregon's bid to become the first place in the nation to sanction doctor-assisted suicide for the terminally ill.

U.S. District Judge Michael Hogan issued a temporary restraining order Wednesday blocking the law, which was supposed to take effect today. Hogan plans to hear arguments Dec. 19 on whether the law is constitutional.

"There are terminally ill people who had their hopes raised, who believed that they had won the right to a gentle and peaceful death," said Barbara Coombs Lee, the chief sponsor of Measure 16. "This is an unwarranted government intrusion into personal, private choices of dying individuals."

Oregon voters narrowly approved the assisted-suicide measure on Nov. 8.

The law would allow patients to request life-ending medication if a doctor determines that they have less than six months to live. The patient must ask for the drugs three times — including once in writing — get a second doctor's opinion and wait 15 days.

The law is the first of its kind in the world. Doctor-assisted suicide is technically illegal in the Netherlands, but doctors are guaranteed immunity if they follow strict guidelines.

National Right to Life and other opponents began legal assaults against Measure 16 as soon as it passed.

"We're doing this so that people will not kill themselves," said James Bopp, a Terre Haute, Ind., lawyer and opponent of assisted suicide who requested the restraining order.

Lady Hawks get quick test of No. 3 rankingBy STEVE REAGAN
Sports writer

The Howard College Lady Hawks are once again highly ranked in the national junior college poll, but it won't take long for the team to find out the legitimacy of that ranking.

The first regular season poll, released Wednesday, ranks the Lady Hawks third behind top-ranked Westark (Ark.) and defending national champion Trinity Valley (Texas).

Such lofty rankings are fine, but they're certainly nothing new to the team, which was ranked first in 1992-93 and climbed as high as second last season. Even first-year head coach Terry Gray greeted the news with a reaction that was anything but enthusiastic.

"I think it's a bigger thing for the freshmen on the team, because they've never been through this before," Gray said. "The sophomores are treating it like it was expected ... They're pleased with the ranking, but they're not complacent about it. They want to go out and work harder and move up in the rankings."

The preseason junior college poll had the Lady Hawks ranked eighth, so in a sense, the team has already exceeded expectations. Still, Gray refuses to make a big deal out of the ranking.

"I felt that if we worked at it, we could at least maintain (the preseason ranking)," he said. "Our record has a lot to do with it. Of course, anybody in December who's played a number of games and hasn't been beaten is going to be in the top

The Lady Hawks will get a quick test of their newfound status this weekend when they participate in Tyler Junior College's Battle of the Roses.

Howard opens play tonight at 8 vs. host Tyler Junior College, then plays second-ranked Trinity Valley at 6 p.m. Friday before closing play at the classic Saturday afternoon against Panola.

Gray said all three games are important to Howard but conceded that the matchup with Trinity Valley will be a good barometer for his team's progress.

"I think it's going to be a good test for us," he said. "It'll be a different situation for us. For the first time this season, we won't be the favored team."

He added, however, that the Lady Hawks can't overlook Panola or Tyler.

"The people who vote and think about rankings and seedings would look for us to lose to Trinity Valley, but Tyler will be tough ... and Panola is playing very well, too," he said. "So I think this, along with our conference tournament, is the best competition we've faced in the first semester."

DOGGIN' THE STEER

Monk poised to break NFL record

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — If you want to know about a receiver, ask his quarterback. In the case of Art Monk of the New York Jets, poised to break one of the NFL's most prestigious records, that would be Boomer Esiason.

Sooner or later on Saturday against Detroit, Esiason will throw a pass to Monk. He knows it will be caught because Monk has dropped just one all year, in the season's first game. And with that catch, Monk will have caught a pass in 178 consecutive games, breaking the record he now shares with Steve Largent.

"The significance of the record is very apparent," Esiason said. "Fifteen years, 178 games in a row attest to his professionalism, his durability and what he represents. His precision in routes is special. What separates him is the way he catches the ball. His hands haven't lost anything. If he's lost a step or two, he makes up for it with experience."

In his first season with the Jets after 14 years with Washington, Monk has caught 41 passes, matching last year's total, for 535 yards and three touchdowns. More importantly, Monk, who turned 37 Monday, has been making vital catches, and Esiason knows it.

"It's a significant amount of catches in a big part of games," the quarterback said. "They are critical, crucial catches, made at a time when you need them. What he really wants is to win."

That, more than anything else, surfaced as Monk talked about prospects for breaking the record he now shares with Largent.

"Whatever ball I catch, I want it to be part of the normal game plan, something that would happen, record or not," he said after practice Wednesday. "Just a natural play, like any other play call. That would make it more enjoyable."

Even more enjoyable for Monk would be if he still were playing for Washington. The Redskins were retooling, though, and let Monk leave as a free agent after last season.

"I'm disappointed that this is not coming as a Redskin,"

Monk said. "I was there so long. I grew up there as a player. Their fans were always there for me. They stood up for me. I'm disappointed I can't do this in front of them and for them."

The Jets are the next best thing. Both Monk and his wife are native New Yorkers. He played his college ball at Syracuse, and this was an opportunity to come home. It has worked out well for all concerned.

Monk's streak began in the fifth game of the 1983 season with three catches for 59 yards against the Los Angeles Raiders. That was a tough time for him. He had broken a foot in the final game of the 1982 season — the last time he was shut out — and was forced to miss the Super Bowl.

Nittany Lions crowd
All-American listing

NEW YORK (AP) — Penn State's offense was so good this season, it seemed like everyone was All-American.

It became official for three Nittany Lions on Wednesday, when quarterback Kerry Collins, tailback Ki-Jana Carter and offensive lineman Jeff Hartings made The Associated Press I-A All-America college football team.

They were key ingredients in an explosive offense that averaged a national-best 520 yards and 48 points, and helped the undefeated Nittany Lions gain their first Rose Bowl berth in 72 years.

Collins had a passing efficiency rating of 172.9, fourth best in Division I-A history. He threw for a school-record 2,679 yards, completed 67 percent of his attempts and passed for 21 touchdowns and only seven interceptions.

Carter averaged an amazing 7.8 yards per carry, gained 1,539 yards and was the nation's second-leading scorer with 23 touchdowns. Contributing to his success was a powerful offensive line anchored by Hartings.

Completing the AP backfield is Colorado tailback Rashaan Salaam, who led the nation in rushing, scoring and all-purpose yards. Salaam, the Heisman Trophy favorite, became the fourth I-A player to gain 2,000 yards in a season, rushing for 2,055 and 24 touchdowns.

The wide receivers are Jack Jackson of Florida and Frank Sanders of Auburn. Jackson set a Southeastern Conference record with 15 TD catches and led the SEC career mark with 29.

Sanders broke a school record with 58 receptions, including a game-winning TD in the final minute against then-No. 1 Florida.

Tight end Pete Mitchell of Boston College had 55 catches for 617 yards, and set school records for most receptions and receiving yards in a career.

The all-purpose player is Central Michigan's Brian Pruitt, who rushed for 1,890 yards, scored 22 touchdowns and averaged 19 yards on kick-off returns.

Hartings is joined on the offensive line by Zach Wiegert of Nebraska. Tony Boselli of Southern Cal, Corey Stringer of Ohio State and Cory Raymer of Wisconsin.

Wiegert manhandled opponents and helped Nebraska lead the nation in rushing. Boselli was one of the major reasons Southern Cal averaged almost 400 yards in total offense, and Stringer paved the way for an Ohio State offense that twice gained over 500 yards. Raymer, a four-year starter, opened holes for the second-best rushing attack in the Big Ten.

Brian Leaver of Bowling Green, who made 21 of 24 field goal attempts and 42 of 43 extra points, is the placekicker. Leaver and Pruitt both play in the Mid-American Conference, which has had only two other first-team AP All-Americans — Toledo defensive tackle Mel Long in 1971 and Bowling Green punter Chris Shale in 1990.

Strawberry indicted

NEW YORK (AP) — Darryl Strawberry's lawyer said the San Francisco Giants outfielder would be indicted today on federal tax charges alleging he failed to report more than $300,000 in memorabilia income, according to the Daily News.

The newspaper said in today's editions that Strawberry could face up to 24 months in prison if found guilty of not paying taxes on money he earned from signing autographs at baseball card and memorabilia shows.

Strawberry's Los Angeles-based lawyer, Marty Gelfand, said that after today's indictment, the former New York Mets slugger will be arraigned on Dec. 14 at White Plains, N.Y.

"It (the arraignment) will be very brief because he's not guilty," Gelfand said.

Last week it was Coahoma

Big Spring and Gail.

Let's all sing the O L d
Milwaukee
theme:
"I t doesn't get any better than this."
Don't

quit your day
jobs out there.
District play is what a lot of fans wait for, but let's hope anticipation for rivalry games hasn't led fans to miss the most enjoyable part of the high school basketball season:

Holiday tournaments.
Where can you see Big Spring play Coahoma on the varsity level? Holiday tournaments - the Big Spring Lady Steers beat the Coahoma Bulldogettes Saturday in the championship game of the Coahoma Invitational. Last season, one of the year's most memorable games was Big Spring's overtime win over Forsan in the Coahoma tournament's semifinals.

Where can you see (or try to
see) eight games in one day, four in one gym and four in another? Holiday tournaments - Coahoma and Stanton both used a two-gym setup over the weekend, with Stanton housing a whopping 16 teams. Borden County does the same starting today at the Coyote Christmas Classic in Gail.

Where can you see 12 games in three days for one ridiculously low price? Holiday tournaments - at the Big Spring Rotary tournament starting today, you can buy a 12-game tournament pass for $5.

Three bucks if you're a student.
You can't beat it. That's 42 cents per game for adults, and a measly quarter per game for students in Big Spring. That's 16 teams, eight games a day and some of the best food you'll find in Gail. We could tell you about the fun in Coahoma and Hootown ... no, Stanton, but telling you what you missed would be cruel.

The tournaments couldn't come at the better time, either.
The Howard College teams are on their typical December odysseys across Texas and beyond - they won't be home until 1995.

It's real simple, sports fans. If you're in or around Big Spring, check out the Steers and their opponents in the eight-team boys' Rotary Tournament. Last season, Amarillo Palo Duro won the title and impressed more than a few fans with their style of play. Who knows which team will leave a lasting impression this weekend.

Besides, the Greater Big Spring Rotary Club has brought this tournament here.
It could become a strong annual event highlighting the December sports scene in Big Spring, but not without support from Big Spring's basketball fans.

If you're looking for girls' hoops, or your favorite team is playing in Gail, take the drive to the Coyote Christmas Classic.

Either way, you'll be glad you did.

FISHING

Fishing was spotty at Lake O.H. Ivie last week, but some results were noteworthy.

Example: Butch and Bobbie
Gayle, together with N.C.
Clanahan of Plains caught a string of bass aggregating 72 lbs. 6 oz. in four hours of fishing. The catch, averaging 6.6
lbs., ranged from 3 lbs., 2-oz. to 9 lbs., 1 oz. All were released.

A few fishermen used cranks in 5-15 ft. of water along shorelines. Best results, however, came with plastic worms in 20-30 ft. of water along points in mouths of rivers, creeks and draws.

There were a few small-mouth bass mixed in, but most of these were caught along points and rocky areas in 15-25
ft. of water.

Occasional strings of nice-sized crappie showed up. These were caught mostly around brushy areas of river and creek channels in 15-20 ft. of water.

Most baited with minnows and jigs.

A few walleyes were caught by bass and crappie fishermen.
With water cooling to 59.2
degrees surface and 58.50 bottom, indications were that walley results would pick up. Few channel and yellow catfish were caught, and these on trotlines with live bait.

Black bass fishing was booming at Lake E.V. Spence with water 60 degrees, but the big news were a 2-1/2 lb. blue catfish caught by Scott and Glenn Bishop, Odessa, baiting a trot-line with bass minnows, also a 9-1/4 lb. striped bass. Other results out of Paint Creek Marina include Gene Wheel-san, Angulo, an 8-3/4 lb. black bass with Pop-R-Lure and a 4-1/2 lb. bass on Rattletrap;

Virginia Simmons, Big Lake, 4-lb., 2-oz. bass with Pop R Lure Shannon Kendall, San Angelo,
8-3/4 lb. bass on a spinner lure;
Jay Newman, Greg Holder and Paul Renard, San Angelo, limited on strippers with a gross of 29 lbs.; Allen Wilson, Odessa, 11-
lb. 1-oz. striper while trolling;
Tim Brooker, Odessa, four bass ranging from 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 lbs.

Fishing out of Wildcat
Marina were Rick Watkins,
Robert Lee, with an 8-lb.
striper; Tommy Brown, Odessa,
a 15-1/2 lb. striper; Richard Larned, Odessa, a 9-1/2 lb.
striper.

There was little activity at Lake J.B. Thomas, but occasionally there were good catches of crappie. Low lake levels are making launching difficult from the boat ramp.

Let scholarships pick up college costs

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

It is never too early for high school students to begin preparing for college and trying to find ways to foot the bill.

Several scholarships and savings bonds are being offered by companies and organizations such as the Asthma Athlete Scholarship and the Duracell/National Science Teachers Association Scholarship Competition.

The asthma scholarship program is for high school scholar-athletes who have excelled despite being challenged by asthma.

The 1995 program is sponsored by the Schering/Key Corporation of New Jersey and this year's theme is "The Will to Win." The deadline for applications is March 31, 1995, and scholarships will be awarded in June at a special awards dinner in New York City.

A total of 10 scholarships will be awarded, comprised of five $1,000 scholarships and four $5,000 awards, plus a top prize of $10,000. Applications may be obtained by calling 1-410-778-2252.

The competition is designed not only to recognize and reward achievements of athletes but serves as a demonstration to young people that asthma need not be a limitation to leading a healthy and productive life.

"We are looking for well-rounded individuals. In addition to their athletic accomplishments, winners throughout the years have also excelled academically and have participated extensively in school and community activities," said Dr. Raymond Slavin, head of the program's judging panel.

The Duracell/NSTA competition offers ninth through 12th grade students the creative challenge of inventing a battery-powered device. The device can be made at home or as part of a science or industrial arts class project.

One hundred students receive U.S. Savings Bonds for their battery-powered ideas and everyone who enters receives a free gift. The competition grants a first place winner with a $20,000 savings bond; five second place $10,000 bonds; 10 third place $1,000 bonds; 25 fourth place bonds of $200 each and savings bonds of $100 each for 59 fifth place winners.

The top six winners, with their parents and science teachers, are guests of Duracell at the 43rd Annual Convention of the NSTA in Philadelphia. The top awards will be presented at a luncheon on March 23, where the winners will demonstrate their inventions for scientists and educators.

To enter the competition, a student must design and build a battery-powered device that is educational, useful and/or entertaining. It must run on any one or a combination of Duracell batteries such as AAA, AA, D, C, 9-volt or lantern size. Entrants must also submit a written description, wiring diagram and photo of their device by 5 p.m. Jan. 13, 1995.

Entries are judged on creativity, practicality, energy efficiency and on the clarity of the written descriptions. Teachers of the top 100 finalists receive gifts and sponsoring teachers of the top six winners receive an IBM SP1 computer system.

Entry forms and rules are available from science and other teachers and from: Duracell/NSTA Scholarship Competition; 1840 Wilson Blvd.; Arlington, VA 22201-3000; (703) 243-7100.

Get 'extreme' with winter video game

BRITT and BRIAN WARNER
Thomson News Service

GAME: Tommy Moe's Winter Extreme
COMPANY: Electro Brain
SYSTEM: Super Nintendo (SNES)

DIFFICULTY: Hard
PLOT SUMMARY: It's the biggest skiing event of all time, and your country is depending on you to make it proud.

Standing at the beginning of the track you can feel the sweat trickling down your face. Your heart feels like a freight train ready to burst out of your chest, and your palms are as cold as ice. You can't help feeling that maybe you shouldn't be here, but there's no way you can turn back now.

This is it, the final moment; the only way you can find out if you're the best skier in the world. Do you think you can handle it?

STRUCTURE: In Winter Extreme, you become Tommy Moe, the U.S. Winter Olympic gold medalist. Now you too can experience the thrill, speed and all-out adrenaline rush of downhill skiing, slalom and snow boarding.

There are five interconnecting mountaintop courses set up for this competition. Each course has separate branches, so you can choose which way you want to go. Once you learn each course you will figure out which paths are the easiest and best to take.

As you progress through the courses, they become more difficult with even harder obstacles. You can run into anything from ice to trees, moguls (mounds of packed snow that send you flying into the air), or even big puddles of water.

If you avoid all the obstacles and stay on the track, you can reach speeds of 70 to 80 mph!

For added realism, Electro Brain has incorporated the new Mode-7 scrolling into Winter Extreme. This feature redraws the screen seven times per second to provide completely fluid motion to the entire game (This feature was first seen in Star Fox for the SNES).

BRIAN'S COMMENTS: The more I play Tommy Moe's Winter Extreme, the more I like it. It's a good game if you're into sports games, but on the overall scale it's just average.

The graphics really flow together nicely and are very realistic. I can almost feel myself losing my stomach on each hill.

But other than the graphics, this is just a mediocre game.

BRITT'S COMMENTS: I enjoyed playing Winter Extreme. It's fast and exciting and keeps you on your toes for the entire game.

The graphics are a really good point. I was surprised at how much the scrolling helps the game, but it really does. It makes it more realistic and a lot more interesting.

When playing Winter Extreme for a long time, I kind of get tired of doing the same thing over and over, but that all changes once I get to a new course. The new obstacles and courses make it exciting all over again.

How to drive parents nuts during holidays

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Chances are, if you're a kid, you're already well on your way to driving your parents nuts at Christmas. But if seeing your folks frazzled is your idea of a neat holiday treat, here's some tips to speed the process:

•Step up the begging. There are only 2 1/2 weeks left 'til the holiday. Certainly you've been nagging your parents for weeks about having to have a complete set of Mighty Morphin Power Rangers stuff, but now's the time to make it sound like a life-or-death situation.

•Listen carefully for hints about what your mom and dad might buy you. Do they ever see a commercial for some item or another on television, and then say, "Gee, that looks like fun," or, "I bet that's something you'd really like," and then watch your face for signs of agreement?

That's your cue to roll your eyes and say, "Yeah, right. Kid stuff. I bet even the kindergartners wouldn't touch that." Watch the hopeful expression slide right off their faces.

•When a commercial for something really expensive and useless comes on television, scream, point and demand it for Christmas.

"I want that! That's what I want! If I don't get that, I'll never talk to you again! All the kids are getting that for Christmas!" are good, manipulative phrases, especially when shouted at maximum decibel level.

•Start complaining now about what your grandparents will get you for Christmas. Last year it was a sweater, the year before it was an album by some band nobody listens to any more, right?

So you just know it's going to be something really lousy this year. Gripe, moan, and make your parents think you'll sulk when Grandma and Grandpa give you your present.

Then, for an extra treat, thank them sweetly and pleasantly when you get your gift, and promptly write an extra thank-you note. Mom and Dad won't know how to react.

•Use brothers and sisters as a bargaining tool. Loudly remind your parents that if Johnny's getting the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers this year that you wanted last year and didn't get, then by gosh you'd better be getting exactly what you want this year, and plenty of it.

The trouble with all this, however, is that at some level Mom and Dad will be expecting it. So perhaps the best way to drive your parents nuts is to do the unexpected:

•Behave yourself. Be nice to your brothers and sisters. Do the dishes. Clean your room. Act enthusiastic about every gift you get, even the green wool socks from Grandma. Don't tease the dog. Say nice things about other people. Help without being asked.

That's a sure-fire way to leave Mom and Dad scratching their heads for the next few weeks. And it's probably a better Christmas gift for them than another bottle of perfume or striped tie.

Employers to hire more '95 college grads

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Attention, college seniors: You have the best shot in years at landing a job right out of school.

Hiring is projected to go up 5.9 percent over last year, according to a survey released today by the Collegiate Employment Research Institute at Michigan State University.

"New graduates should get better replies from employers than they have been receiving for the last three or four years," said Patrick Scheetz, the institute's director. The increase represents a "modest recovery from a very severe erosion of the job market," he said.

New college grads can expect to take home annual paychecks ranging from $20,821 for telecommunications jobs to $40,689 for chemical engineers, according to the survey of 545 businesses, industries and government agencies.

Hiring of new graduates had declined more than 30 percent in the four years prior to last year's uptake of 1.1 percent, Scheetz said.

Make your own play dough

By LAURA CHRISTMAN
Scripps Howard News Service

A homemade dough for playing can be created by combining 3 cups of water, 6 tablespoons cream of tartar and 6 tablespoons oil in saucepan on medium heat and cooking until boiling. Reduce to low heat, add 3 cups of flour and 1-1/2 cups salt and cook until dough starts to pull away from sides. Knead well. Store in an airtight container or plastic bag (colored dough, add food coloring.)

"You're making something that can be used for a long time and will appeal to kids of a lot of different ages," Mrs. McBride says.

Another good thing to make is a flannel board, she says. Cut flannel pieces into shapes and animals and make up stories that can be told on a flannel-covered board or even a sofa or cushion.

Simple, homemade hand puppets are a hit with the 3- to 6-year-old crowd.

A box of dress up clothes, including hats, boots, belts and purses, will also get lots of use.

Ten-year-old Chelsea Hernandez records video for her own television show, "Kids' Ideas," which airs on Austin CableVision's public access channels.

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten-year-old Chelsea Hernandez had a better idea for Sunday afternoon television than professional football — her own show.

"Sundays are boring," says the fifth-grade host of "Kids' Ideas," which airs at 3:30 p.m. weekly on one of Austin CableVision's public access channels.

"Kids don't have anything to do. Cleaning the house is boring, and kids get tired of seeing repeats of the same cartoons," Chelsea said. "Since I have my show on Sundays, it's more exciting. Kids can turn on my show and write down the tips and ideas."

Her program features Austin children sharing their ideas and demonstrating cooking, crafts, sports, dancing and fashion.

Chelsea says her show also helps reduce juvenile crime because it gives children alternatives to mischief. "You don't need to do all that bad stuff. There are good things you can do," she said.

One cooking segment features instructions on heating pigs-in-a-blanket, and the instructions feature plenty of safety tips for

She co-produces the program with her parents, Carlos and Barbara Hernandez. Hernandez said his daughter always has disliked violence and has looked for ways to bring children together.

"She's pretty bright and pretty mature for her age," he said.

Mrs. Hernandez said, "Kids' Ideas" evolved from her own cable access show on crafts, called "Great Ideas."

"She wrote up her ideas and took over. Now she gets loads of mail and calls. The parents encourage us, and the kids say they want to be on the program," Mrs. Hernandez said.

Adults might be behind the camera, but the guests are mostly children.

"Kids don't listen to adults. Things go in one ear and out the other," Chelsea said.

Her 6-year-old sister, Andria, even has a role in the program. Andria is possibly TV's youngest associate producer and contributes ideas such as a feature on how to have fun with leftover Halloween costumes.

Jillian Hees, 11, a schoolmate of Chelsea's, said she believes "Kids' Ideas" belongs on a television network.

"It's real good," Jillian said. "It gives kids a chance to be on TV and show their talents."

"I give them instructions so they don't catch on fire or anything," Chelsea said.

Few Of Japan's Kids Happy To Get More Saturdays Off

TOKYO (AP) — A bit more leeway in Japan's notoriously strict school system would seem to be a blessing, but few are cheering the plan to give children more days off.

Teachers, students, and parents are objecting to a plan to cancel classes two Saturdays per month. Students now are off one Saturday per month.

"It's hard enough to digest the current curriculum in a six-day week — a five-day week is ridiculous," Mitsuo Arai, headmaster of a Tokyo high school.

Japanese children attend school about 240 days a year, compared with an average 180 in the United States.

The Education Ministry decided to reduce the number of days, but not the hours kids have to spend in class. The time lost on Saturdays will have to be made up, possibly cutting into time for activities, sports and free time.

Several mothers interviewed on television shows voiced concerns about the extra burden of watching the kids.

"If the children are in school, I have more freedom in organizing my schedule and doing errands. But if they're off, I have to spend all the time taking care of them," one mother said.

An Education Ministry survey in March showed 47 percent of parents were opposed to the change, mostly because "the kids would only play more."

But that's the whole point, says the Education Ministry. In recent years the Education Ministry has tried to respond to accusations that Japan's schools produce regimented thinkers, but not the creative individualists a modern Japan needs.

Use information from the story to answer the following questions:

1. How is the Japanese government planning to change the public school schedule?
2. In Japan, about how many days per week do children go to school?
3. Compared with American students, about how many more days a year do Japanese children attend school?

Answer Key: (wording may vary)

1. The Japanese government is planning to change the school schedule by giving children days off.
2. Children go to school about 6 days a week.
3. Japanese children attend school about 60 more days a year than American children.

In-Line Skating

In-line skating is the fastest growing sport in the country. Santa will probably be delivering many pairs of skates this Christmas.

As most of our readers know, in-line skates have wheels in a single line on a skating boot.

Skate with care

In-line skates are not toys. They are a type of transportation, just as bikes are. If you are not careful, the sport can be dangerous. Most of the skating injuries in 1993 were broken bones, especially wrists.

Gear up

It's important always to wear your protective gear:

- helmet
- elbow pads
- wrist guards
- knee pads

Look at this picture. Are the instructor and his student wearing all the right gear?

Take lessons

You will want to take lessons from licensed instructors. Many skate shops offer free lessons. Below are some of the things your lessons might include:

How to stop (this is most challenging)

- Bend knees.
- Scissor skates (move feet back and forth).
- Move left foot back.
- Move right foot forward (that's the one with the brake).

Stance and balance

- Bend knees.
- Feel some pressure on the balls of your feet.
- Put hands in front.
- Look straight ahead (avoid looking down at your skates).

How to fall

Go for the plastic (land on the protective pads you are wearing).

Skate alertly

- Control your speed.
- Watch for road hazards.
- Avoid water, oil and sand.
- Avoid heavy traffic.
- Never wear anything that limits hearing or vision.
- Don't skate at night.

Skate legally

- Obey all traffic regulations. When on skates, you have the same obligations as any wheeled vehicle.
- Yield the right of way to pedestrians.

Skate courteously

- Skate on the right, pass on the left.
- Let people know you are coming by saying in a loud tone:

Meet Barney

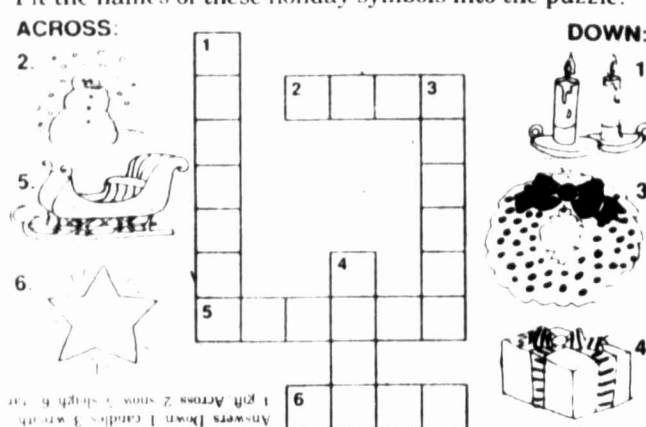

"I love you, you love me," is the beginning of a song almost everyone knows. It's Barney's song. Barney is the popular purple, 6-foot-4-inch dinosaur.

Barney was created by Sheryl Leach, a former schoolteacher in Texas, for her little son six years ago. She made and sold Barney videos.

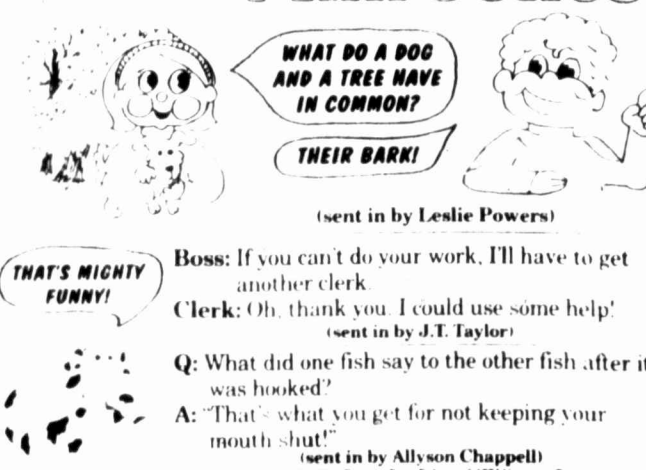

They soon became big hits. A little girl in Connecticut fell in love with the videos. Her father worked in television and decided Barney was a good idea for a TV show. The first Barney show aired in 1992. The show also includes Barney's friend Baby Bop, her big brother BJ, and a group of children.

The Mini Page Teacher's Guide

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school. For use with issue: In-Line Skating

Main idea: This issue is about in-line skating. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty. Ask the children to do the following:

1. Draw a picture of yourself in-line skating. Be sure to include the protective gear.
2. Discuss the following: Have you ever been in-line skating? If so, what was the most difficult part? What tips would you give people who would like to try the sport? What are some good places in your area to skate? Why is it important to wear protective gear and take lessons?
3. Pretend you have on in-line skates. Practice the tips from this issue on how to stop, fall, etc.
4. Look through the sports section of your newspaper to see how many different sports you see pictured. In which sports are the players wearing protective gear?
5. Look through the ads of your newspaper for in-line skate products.
6. Make a graph of the age groups involved in in-line skating.

Skating History

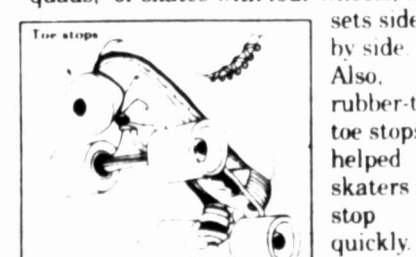

In-line

In-line skating is more than 200 years old. The first in-line skates were used in Holland in the early 1700s. People wanted to enjoy the sport of ice skating when there was no ice. They attached wooden spools to strips of wood fastened to the bottom of their boots.

Quad skating

Later, in 1863, an American, James Leonard Plimpton, invented the first roller skates, with the wheels side by side.

In the 1970s, new urethane wheels replaced the old metal wheels on "quads," or skates with four wheels, two sets side by side.

Skateboarding

Skateboarding was invented by surfers on the West Coast in the early 1960s.

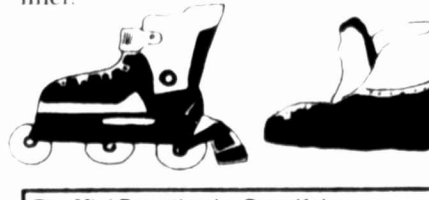

Today, in-line skaters are using the same type half-pipe that skateboarders used in the past.

Today's in-line skates

In 1980, two hockey-playing brothers, Scott and Brennan Olson, saw an old in-line skate in a sporting goods store in Minnesota. They thought this design would make an ideal off-season hockey training tool.

They began making in-line skates in the basement of their parents' home. People began to notice these hockey players zooming down the Minnesota roads in the summer.

Some skiers added poles when they took up in-line skating. The sport really took off when makers started using soft, lightweight urethane wheels. In-line skates are mounted on three, four or five wheels. Ski-type boots have plastic frames. Each boot has a liner.

The Mini Page thanks Greg Keim, president, American In-Line Skating Inc., and IISA certified instructor; Henry Zuver, executive director, International In-Line Skating Association; and Jack Murphy, president, Power Rollers Inc., Arlington, Va., and examiner for IISA.

Roller hockey

Roller hockey was a demonstration sport in the 1992 Summer Olympic Games. Roller hockey is a popular sport in many parts of the world. In some countries the players are pros and the games are on TV. Roller hockey is becoming a popular sport in the United States. Kids as young as 7 start playing in competition.

Roller hockey is played in or out-of-doors. A game takes about an hour.

Roller hockey is not a contact sport like ice hockey is. Rough play is illegal. The object is to use a stick to hit a rubber ball or puck into a net. Each team has five players and a goalie. The courts vary in size. Some are as small as a basketball court.

Next week The Mini Page celebrates the winter season with a story about Christmas trees.

YOU CAN
Keratin
All proteins are very complicated molecules. They're big and strong, and our bodies use them like building blocks. Proteins are a part of just about everything in our bodies. The weird thing about protein is we can't get the parts to make it without plants. Proteins are made out of amino acids, and no animal can make amino acids for itself. These ingredients must come from eating a plant or eating another animal that has eaten a plant.

Dear Jax,
What are fingernails made of?
Brandon Gromes
Murray, Utah

Dear Brandon,
This is going to sound weird, OK? Nails are made out of the same thing as steering wheels — sort of. In the 1930s Henry Ford started making plastic steering wheels out of the protein in soy beans. In a way, your body does the very same thing.

Nails are made from the protein keratin — and the building blocks for it have to come from plants. By the way, nails are made out of the same stuff as horse hooves, bird talons and feathers, bull horns, bear claws and hair.

Your nails grow a lot like hair. They grow from a nail root that is under the end of your nails. This is the only part of your nails that is alive. The part that shows is dead. That's why it doesn't hurt to cut them. But when you get a hangnail, you're accidentally opened up the edge of the living nail root. And, YOW — it hurts!

The next time you trim your nails, examine the clippings closely. If you have a microscope at school, you can see the protein fibers. Try to pull a clipping apart. The proteins are so strong you'll probably have to twist and tear it in two.

HOROSCOPE

FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 9, 1994
ARIES (March 21-April 19): New information comes your way. Communications could be intense and could leave you shaking your head. Focus on creativity and problem solving. You find solutions as long as you detach yourself and can avoid rigid patterns. Tonight: Take off for the weekend. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Reevaluate what you want. Obstacles that appear when relating to another are significant; they could involve money as well as relationship decisions. One-to-one relating will be enhanced by your ability to focus. Tonight: Hang out with friends. ****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take the lead, and worry less about what's going on. Be clear about your choices. Today, a lot goes on that is important. Partners are upbeat and full of good news. Be aware of what you want. Listen carefully to another's feedback. Tonight: Out and about. *****

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Detach and gain information. You have much more energy than you have had in a long time. Be more positive about what's going on. Listen carefully to another's insight. Focus on efficiency, work and getting things done. Tonight: Dine out after holiday shopping. *****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get in close, and know what you want. One-to-one relating is highlighted but greatly aided by your high level of charm. A love affair poses a challenge. Opportunities to gain and grow surround you. You'll make a difference and feel better. Tonight: Detach. *****

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Partners are testy, but you have spirit and the wherewithal to rise above. Be aware of how desirable you are. Do not push another away. Listen to your instincts, and follow through. A family member may provide flack when you least expect it. Tonight: Say yes to going out. *****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on work and getting the job done. Communications are much more upbeat than they have been and permit you to grow in new ways. Touch base with another, and know what you are asking. Tonight: You might have to stay late at work. *****

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): More choices surround you than you realize. Family members create situations you need to think about. Creativity is high, and you are aware of a money offer. You think about a change at home. Creative opportunities are intense. Tonight: Let creativity flow. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You notice a change in attitude. You feel better. Be careful: You are initiating a year-long trend. You might be more high-strung today than you realize. Listen to your intuition about a family member. Pressure is high, and choices need to be made. Tonight: Withdraw. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Important discussions surround you. You feel better. Instincts about your day-to-day life are accurate. Communications can overwhelm you, and you might need to pace yourself. Realize your limits and what it takes to be comfortable. Tonight: Out for fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Zero in on financial matter. Focus will be on successfully getting more of what you want. Be aware of where you are going, and make decisions accordingly. Creativity and understanding are high. You are entering a new luck cycle. Tonight: Watch spending. ****

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are personality-plus today. Another is on your side. Listen to what this person offers, and be aware of bottom lines. Work responsibilities are increased. A loved one shares his feelings for you in a new way. Tonight: Go for what you want. *****

IF DEC. 9, 1994 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Good luck follows you this year. You'll feel the difference in the next few weeks. There is a tendency to make situations on the home front more difficult than they need to be. If you are clear and go directly to the bottom line, you'll do well. If you're single: You draw people; being aware of your choices will help you make good decisions. If attached: This is an unusually romantic year with a partner who is more drawn to you than ever; trust in your desirability. A fellow SAGITTARIUS is important to you.

THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

Poem makes woman feel whole again

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing one of your columns that helped me enormously in 1986. It might help other women if you reran it. I enjoy your column. — GLORIA L. JAMES-BURG, N.J.
DEAR GLORIA: At the risk of rankling those who dislike reruns, here it is:

DEAR ABBY: In recent years, we hear of more and more women who, through cancer surgery, have lost one or both breasts.

Some women are devastated. Some married women fear that their husbands will think they are ugly — and may leave them. Some unmarried women fear that no man will want to marry them.

I'd like to share something my mom received from my dad after she had a mastectomy. Maybe some husband can use it to reassure his wife, or some wife will realize that real love is not diminished with the loss of a body part. — KAY HUNT

WOULD YOU LOVE ME LESS?

If I lost a toe, would you love me less?

If I lost a foot, would you love me less?

If I lost a leg, would you love me less?

If I lost a finger, would you love me less?

If I lost an arm, would you love me less?

If I lost an ear, an eye, an appendix, a gall bladder, my hair, etc.

To you, would I still be me? Of course! And you are still you to me.

And how I thank God for just you!

Pieces and parts
Might have to depart
But you and me,
Will always be we.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 34-year-old married man who would never dream of cheating on my wife; however, lately I have become hooked on computer "chat lines" where one can communicate with people from all over the country.

I have been in contact with a young woman in Miami (computer only — no telephone, no mail). In recent weeks, our conversations have become very sexually explicit. (This is known as "computer sex.")

Abby, in your opinion, am I being unfaithful to my wife — or just indulging in some harmless fun? Please bear in mind that there is no way to verify that the person you are chatting with on one of these lines is who she says she is (name, age, gender, etc.) You may be chatting with a 95-year-old grandfather. — CURIOUS IN SEATTLE

DEAR CURIOUS: "Computer sex," as you describe it, is not harmless — particularly if your curiosity causes you to decide to meet your computer sex partner. Then it could become hazardous to your health, your marriage — and possibly to your computer if your wife catches you!

WORTH REMEMBERING: "A good conversationalist is not one who remembers what was said, but says what someone wants to remember." — John Mason Brown

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064-0447. (Postage is included.)

'Blackthorne's Quest' makes great game

Kyle Blackthorne, son of a great king, was sent to Earth to protect him from the predations of Sarlac, an evil warlord with designs on the throne.

But young Blackthorne gets into just as much trouble here, and is forced to flee for his life after being arrested by the military for crimes allegedly committed as a mercenary.

During his escape, he is summoned home to help his people free themselves from slavery and the evil power of Sarlac and the Darkstone.

You begin your quest armed with a shotgun, and you'll need it to waste Sarlac's army of grotesque goblins and ghouls. As you progress through the game's four levels, you'll collect a more comprehensive arsenal, some needed to accomplish specific tasks.

If you enjoy thinking while you're playing, and revel in intricate graphics and solid gameplay, Blackthorne should be on your shopping list.
