Rotan fire ruled arson

Investigation shifts to find perpetrator

By Wade Warren
Staff Writer

ROTAN — A fire that destroyed three downtown businesses and took the life of a Rotan man has been ruled as arson in a statement issued this morning by the state fire marshal's office and the Fisher County Sheriff's office.

In a news conference at 10 o'clock at the Fisher County Courthouse in Roby, District Attorney Frank Conard said results from the state fire marshal's office recieved Tuesday indicate the presence of an intermediate range petroleum product — such as lighter fluid or paint thinner — had been scattered throughout the interior of the H.L. Davis & Co. Department Store.

The store sat between the Casa Morales Restaurant and Hometown Cleaners along Sammy Baugh Boulevard in downtown Rotan. All three businesses were destroyed in the early morning fire on Oct. 17.

Louis Earl Eaton, 51, who joined in to help Rotan Volunteer Fire Department fight the blaze, was killed when the front wall of the Davis building fell on him. Volunteer firemen Charles Cleveland and Jeff Anderly received minor injuries from falling debris.

Sheriff Gene Pack said today that Eaton's death makes the arson charge a first degree felony.

In the hours after the blaze, Pack and members of the state fire marshal's office were closely examining the area around the front door of the Davis building.

Pack confirmed this morning that the fire started at the front of the store.

District Attorney Frank Conard said today that because a person died in the fighting of the fire, the charge will be upgraded to arson/murder, an offense punishable from five to 99 years to life.

"The investigation now shifts to find out who did this," said Conard.

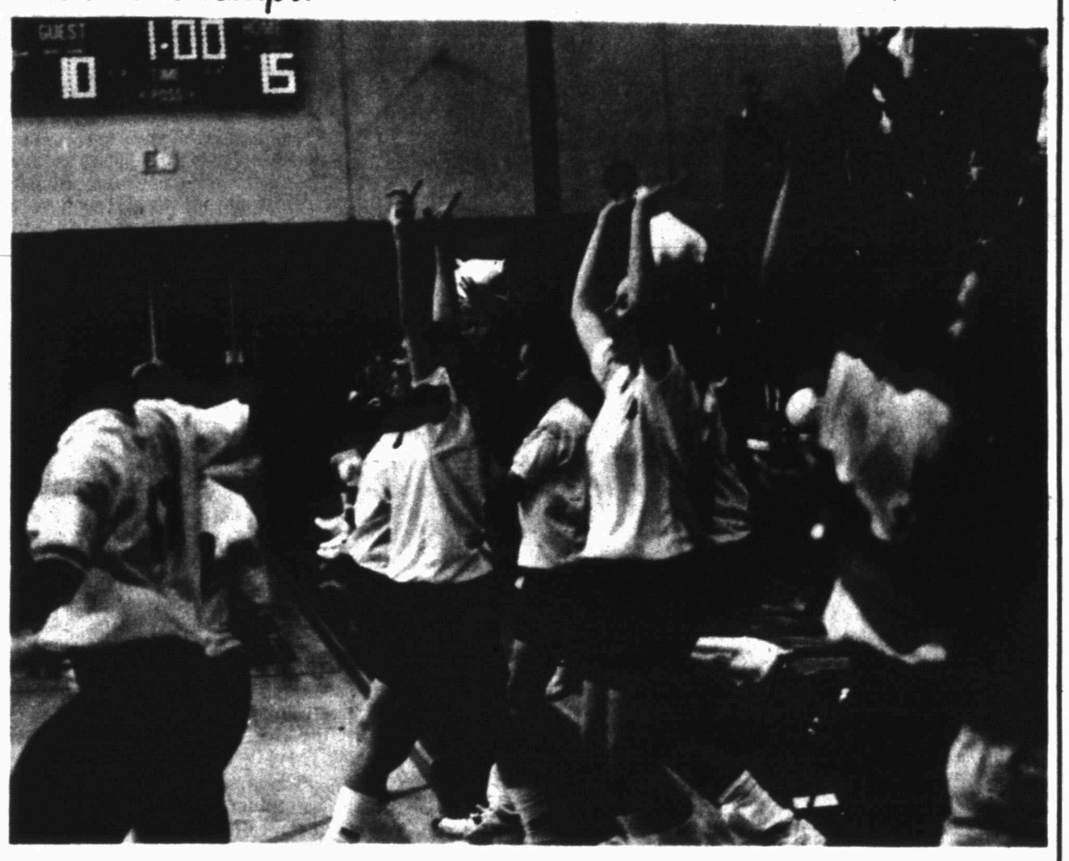

The district attorney said that all avenues are being covered in the investigation.

"When the arrest is made of the person or persons responsible for this, we'll seek an indictment," said Conard.

Wofford to seek Dist. 70 seat

Calling it a classic race between conservative and liberal, Hawley Republican Dale Wofford announced here Tuesday that he will seek to unseat David Counts as State Representative for District 70.

District 70 includes Borden, Fisher, Garza, Howard, Jones, Kent, King and Knox counties as well as Scurry. Wofford made his announcement as part of a tour that included stops in all nine counties.

Dale Wofford

Wofford said he is seeking the Republican nomination because his Democratic opponent is an eight-year incumbent who has voted against term limits and whose campaigns have been funded by trial lawyers and labor unions.

"David Counts voted for a corporate income tax and for one of the largest tax increases in the history of our state. I'll vote against any tax increase, period," said the 57-year-old Wofford, owner of Auto-Plex of Abilene.

Wofford said he is a strong supporter of term limits and he would serve only four terms in the Texas House if elected. "I believe in a citizen legislature just like our founders envisioned," Wofford said. "I don't want to become a professional politician like my opponent. I want to go to Austin, make some needed changes, then come back home and live and work under the laws that I helped pass."

Wofford, who was born and reared in Stamford, said, "In just the last few years I have watched in complete sadness as more and more of our freedoms and opportunities have been taken away from is, right here in Texas. The

HISD to get audit by 4-3 vote

Hermleigh ISD trustees, on a 4-3 vote Tuesday, directed the board president to find an auditor to conduct an audit of the district.

The decision came after the board learned that the Texas Education Agency had indicated it would not send an official to Hermleigh to review the situation.

"They (TEA) apparently said they didn't think the situation warranted it," said Superintendent Jerry Church. "And the Texas Association of School Boards has basically told them (the board) the same thing."

Some members of the board have been requesting an internal audit for more than a year. A motion to pursue an audit last school year failed by a 4-3 vote, but passed by the same margin Tuesday evening.

Voting for the audit were board president Milton Adams, Jimmy Hudgins, James Rinehart and Jay Roemisch. Against were John Williamson, Chip Roemisch and Sherene Digby.

Adams, who has been an advocate for an audit, has said in the past that "It is just common sense. In any business, you want to conduct an audit from time to time."

The audit would be in addition to the one conducted annually by an outside agency.

In the same 4-3 split, the board also approved a motion to retain Abilene attorney David Buhrmann as the district's legal counsel.

In other business, Supt. Church reported on the school's $1,000 award received through the Texas Successful Schools Awards Program; the board took no action on an employee grievance; and trustees were introduced to Carroll Tatom, a consultant with the Region XIV Education Service Center.

All board members were present.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Long friendships require a short memory."

While we applaud the city's decision to develop a regional landfill, the headline in the Sweetwater newspaper likely will set off a round of comments between residents of the two rival communities.

The banner headline read: "Sweetwater begins hauling trash to Snyder."

Under the headline was the announcement that the councils of the two towns had entered into an agreement for Sweetwater to use Snyder's federally-approved landfill.

It's good business for Snyder, and the decision a couple of years ago to bite the bullet and bring Snyder's landfill into compliance appears to be a good one. While some smaller towns have been given a two-year reprieve, it's only a matter of time before state and federal agencies will force costly action.

The contract with Sweetwater will allow the necessary funds to seek a permit modification. When approved, it will increase the life of the Snyder facility from 11 to 40 years.

When growing up in Andrews, there was a natural rivarly with nearby Seminole. It was not uncommon to see restroom graffitti urging the user to flush, that Seminole needed water. When we later lived in Seminole, we saw similar comments that the pipeline ran both ways.

We're certain that the friendly rivarly between Snyder and Sweetwater, added the trash talk, will produce some interesting comments.

Trash is big business, and it could become a commodity on the stock exchange.

The CBOT Recycling Partnership, a venture involving the Chicago Board of Trade, last week started on-line trading of glass, plastic and paper.

Just imagine, futures trading based on household garbage.

Stacks of Stats: The story of America in numbers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Homes without cable TV are a definite minority. One in three Americans is still exercising after 75. Rock music sales are twice those of country and 10 times those of jazz.

Here is America in bare statistics, devoid of interpretation. Stacks of stats. From labor force to labor rooms. The kind of stuff important to public officials, business analysts, educators, librarians, research workers, students and the merely curious.

Thirty-four percent of Americans 26 and over have smoked marijuana at some time in their lives, but only 3 percent are current users. Eight percent of households have herb gardens. A family of four pays more state and local taxes in Newark, N.J., than in other big cities. Lotteries racked up more than $25 billion sales.

Such minutiae abound in the new Statistical Abstract of the United States published on Tuesday. It is a book of more than 1,000 pages, some with enough facts for a game of "Jeopardy!" or "Trivial Pursuit."

You learn that lottery ticket sales totaled $2.3 billion in 1980 but $28.5 billion last year. That of 187.7 million adults in the 1993-1994 period, 69 million had no cable television.

That in 1992, there were 6.4 million pregnancies, 4 million births and 1.5 million abortions. The rest were miscarriages. Seventeen percent of women of childbearing age used contraceptive pills; 10.5 percent relied on condoms. Thirty percent were surgically sterile.

Also in 1992, there were 400,000 injuries involving beds, mattresses and pillows; 44,000 involving cleaning agents and 24,000 involving cigarettes. But the most injuries of all by far, 1.8 million, had to do with stairs, ramps, landings and floors.

The book is a set of statistics in itself, bringing together the most recent figures from the last year or two or three. The government has put it out since 1878, drawing on both public and private sources. The 115th edition adds 76 new tables for a total of 1,512. They include estimates of undocumented immigrants, use of computers, bond ratings for states and cities, union membership by state and home ownership rates.

It drops some, too. No more does the abstract list household pet ownership, medical device implants by age, sex and race, or summary of operations of intercity bus lines.

One of the new tables gives statistics on mothers who smoked during pregnancy. Nearly 18 percent of white mothers smoked during pregnancy and 14 per cent of black mothers did. Mothers who never attended high school or were high school graduates were less likely to smoke during pregnancy than those who finished their educations at grades 9 through 11.

Oil therapy loosens ear wax

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: It seems that my ears plug up at least once a year, even after using home remedy solutions. I went to our HMO doctor and he said over-the-counter stuff is no good and told me to put two to three drops of cooking oil in my ears every other night and to return to his office after two weeks for ear lavage. Before I use the oil treatment, I'll await your advice.

DEAR READER: Ear wax can be difficult to remove, especially if it is hard and adheres to the ear canal.

Your HMO doctor was correct. A couple of drops of light oil — any oil will do — in the ear for a day or two (two weeks is, I believe, unnecessarily long) should soften the wax, dislodge it and make for easy removal.

Most doctors use an ear syringe with a jet of warm water for this purpose. After appropriate preparation with oil, this technique usually suffices.

However, more aggressive therapy may be required for really troublesome wax accumulations. In such instances, some physicians use a Water Pic; specialists often rely on a special vacuum device. In some cases, the wax may have to be manually picked out of the ear by an otolaryngologist, using an operating room microscope.

The oil treatment is safe and inexpensive. I encourage you to use it as a first step. Remember the prohibition against putting objects, such as hairpins and cotton swabs, in the ear, because they can perforate the eardrum or cause serious infection.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2015, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 29-year-old woman with a hot, burning sensation that occasionally shoots through my left breast. I have been to several doctors, who say it may be caused by a pinched nerve. Do you agree?

DEAR READER Breast pain may not come from the breasts at all. There are many causes of so-called "chest wall pain," ranging from a strained pectoralis muscle (beneath the breast) to nerve pain from disorders of the upper spine.

The important consideration is that your doctors should first rule out breast disorders, such as mastitis (infection) or tumors, with examination and, perhaps, a mammogram or an ultrasound. Once the breast has been judged to be normal, they can focus their attention on the other possible causes. For example, you probably need a chest X-ray and X-rays of your thoracic spine, as well as a cardiogram and upper GI series (X-rays of your stomach).

Once the doctors have identified the cause of your pain, they can suggest treatment, such as ibuprofen or stronger medication.

On the ballot

The following information is condensed from a special House Research Organization publication provided to better inform voters about the 14 amendments on the Nov. 5 ballot. It is the twelfth in a series.

Proposition 12

READS: "The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to exempt from ad valorem taxation personal property and mineral interests having a value insufficient to recover the administrative costs of collecting the taxes."

INFORMATION: The amendment is self-explanatory. It would exempt from property taxes any income-producing personal property and mineral interests with a taxable value insufficient to cover the cost of administering the tax.

SUPPORTERS SAY: The Proposition would eliminate the need for local taxing districts to spend more to collect taxes on low-yield personal property and mineral interests than the property produces in tax revenue, allowing them to avoid a net loss. Taxing units as well as taxpayers would benefit from the change. Low-value income-producing personal property may include such items as inventories, consigned goods at craft or antique malls, goods held at resale shops, business documents stored in mini-warehouses, business furnishings like computers, equipment and furniture and samples held by manufacturers. Low-yield mineral interests may include tiny shares of a royalty interest in a producing gas or oil well. A few counties with an extraordinarily large number of mineral leases might experience minor revenue losses from the exemption, but far more Texas counties would benefit.

OPPONENTS SAY: Proposition 12 is likely to cause a revenue loss for those counties with numerous mineral interest accounts that can be quickly and cheaply appraised. Because the administrative costs of appraising even small mineral interests are relatively small in these counties, they still have a net revenue gain from taxing these accounts that will be lost if Proposition 12 is approved.

Upton County appraisal district, for instance, says the proposed exemption would cost the Rankin ISD up to $46,000 in lost revenue a year.

Klein ad also provocative

NEW YORK (AP) — Just months after pulling a campaign featuring teens in provocative poses, Calvin Klein has released an underwear ad showing a well-muscled young man in briefs, his legs spread wide to show off his crotch.

Once again, critics want it pulled.

"This is nothing more than pornography," said Donald Wildmon, head of the American Family Association. He said Tuesday that his organization would ask consumers to boycott Klein products.

In August, criticism from Wildmon and others forced Klein to cancel a jeans ad campaign that featured models, some as young as 15, in provocative poses and settings.

The U.S. Justice Department is investigating whether the ads broke child pornography laws. The department will decide within a few weeks whether to continue the investigation, spokesman John Russell said.

The new underwear ads appear on the back of November's Esquire and December's Playboy. The ad features the gel-haired, chest-rippled model Joel West, 20.

The designer, who did not return calls for comment Tuesday, has said his ads are meant to convey a strong image.

Friends say Powell will need thick hide if he elects to run

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colin Powell's friends — and his enemies — are warning him to brace for more criticism than he's ever had to confront if he runs for the Republican presidential nomination.

Rivals are looking for his vulnerabilities, and finding some even in his military record, his strong suit.

And, that aside, his inexperience in governmental matters, his wife's treatment for depression, and the suspicion that he may have a thin skin — all become grist for the mill.

"What they're going to do is build him up to a level that no human being could possibly meet. Then the minute he makes the decision to run, the game is going to become who can be the first to bring him down." Former Texas Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat, says she told Powell when they shared a platform recently.

Powell's military caution is legendary. He didn't want to go to war in the Persian Gulf, pressing instead for extended use of economic sanctions. And he is subject to criticism for acquiescing to ending the war before Iraq's Saddam Hussein was neutralized and the Republican Guard destroyed.

"The Gulf War was such a spectacular success and his early reservations turned out to be so far from what happened that his judgment can be questioned," said Mike Desch of Harvard, who is writing a book on civilian control of the military.

The former four-star general is also open to attack on his chief contribution to post-Cold War thinking — the "Powell Doctrine." It holds that American military force should not be committed to battle unless these conditions are met: a precise objective, public support, a will to throw everything at the enemy, an exit plan and the likelihood of low casualties.

Apply those rules rigidly, retired Lt. Gen. Bernard Trainor said last week, and "you will never use military force for anything."

Moreover, Trainor said, Powell's concept turns the tradition of civilian control on its head: "The Powell Doctrine, rigidly applied as it has been, more or less tells the president when and when not to use military force. I would submit that that is not in the interest of the republic."

Powell is also sure to come under scrutiny for events in Somalia, which occurred on his watch, for opposing the use of bombing in Bosnia — it violates the "Powell Doctrine" but helped get peace talks going — and for his signaled opposition to President Clinton's attempt to reverse the military's discrimination against gays. Some think it was unseemly for a top military leader to undercut his commander in chief.

Kids Caught in Middle When Divorced Parents Push and Pull

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1995 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I must disagree with your flip answer to "Ticked Off in Texas." It is clear that neither you nor any of your staff has ever been in the position of being a second wife where there are children from a prior marriage.

I agree, it is very important for the divorced parents to be able to discuss matters pertaining to their child (or children), but that is as far as it should go.

Buying items from the drug (or grocery) store for his former wife should not be his responsibility. As an adult, she should assume responsibility for her own shopping.

If this couple is such good friends, why did they get divorced in the first place? He has remarried, and his main responsibility is to his present wife. For you to mock the second wife for having the courage to express her feelings shows an unusual lack of understanding on your part.

ALSO TICKED OFF

DEAR ALSO: I stand by my reply. In no way did I mock the second wife for expressing her feelings.

Hostility between former spouses hurts everyone — especially the children. It is much better when former spouses can be friendly and interact with their children.

Doing occasional favors and maintaining a reasonably friendly relationship does not mean that the second wife is loved less. In fact, a husband who does not have to contend with his former wife's anger is freer to pursue the good life with wife No. 2.

DEAR ABBY: When someone dies and the family requests that in lieu of sending flowers a donation be made to a fund established by the family, is it not unreasonable to expect an acknowledgment or a thank-you note?

In this particular case, only contributions in excess of $100 were acknowledged. Since when does the amount of the gift dictate whether or not someone's kindness is to be acknowledged?

We, and many others, feel slighted and bitter over the appalling behavior of the family of the deceased. Nearly five months have passed since "Mr. X's" death, and hundreds of people who lovingly made their donations in his honor will never be thanked because the dollar amounts did not meet the family's criteria.

What do you think, Abby? We think the family could use a course in human decency and manners.

SLAPPED IN THE FACE

DEAR SLAPPED: The deceased's family should have thanked everyone who made a contribution in honor of their loved one. Their failure to do so is inexcusable.

"Give me your tired, your poor,

"Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,

"Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me.

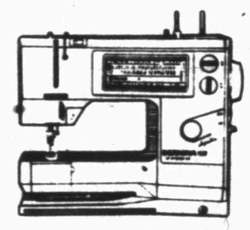

"I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

The author, Emma Lazarus, was born in 1849 in New York City. She was a poet and philanthropist who organized relief for persecuted Jews immigrating to the United States from Russia. She died in 1887 at the age of 38.

By the way, next time you are "stumped" by a homework assignment, go to your local library and ask a librarian for help. You'll be surprised by all that you can find there.

FCC ads seek to keep phones ringing with new area codes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A wave of new area codes hitting the country is short-circuiting business switchboards. But an ad campaign starting today aims to educate companies about how to navigate the changes.

Most residential telephone users should have no trouble dialing the new area codes because their calls are routed through local telephone networks equipped to handle them, the Federal Communications Commission said.

But private business switchboards, known in telecommunications lingo as PBXs, can't recognize the new codes unless they've been upgraded, making it impossible to dial calls to them.

That's because unlike existing area codes, the new ones don't have a zero or a one in the middle; Instead, they use two through nine.

"Don't get stuck in the middle," warn the ads, commissioned by the telephone industry and the FCC, and running today in USA Today and The Wall Street Journal.

The ads, paid for by the telephone industry, offer a telephone number — 281-792-9999 — for businesses and other PBX users to call at no cost to test whether their equipment can reach the new codes. Those whose PBX systems fail the test can get help by calling another toll-free number — 800-218-6436. That number was not yet in service Tuesday afternoon.

Kathleen Wallman, chief of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau, said PBX makers and telephone companies have done a good job getting the word out, but some companies are discarding information being sent to them.

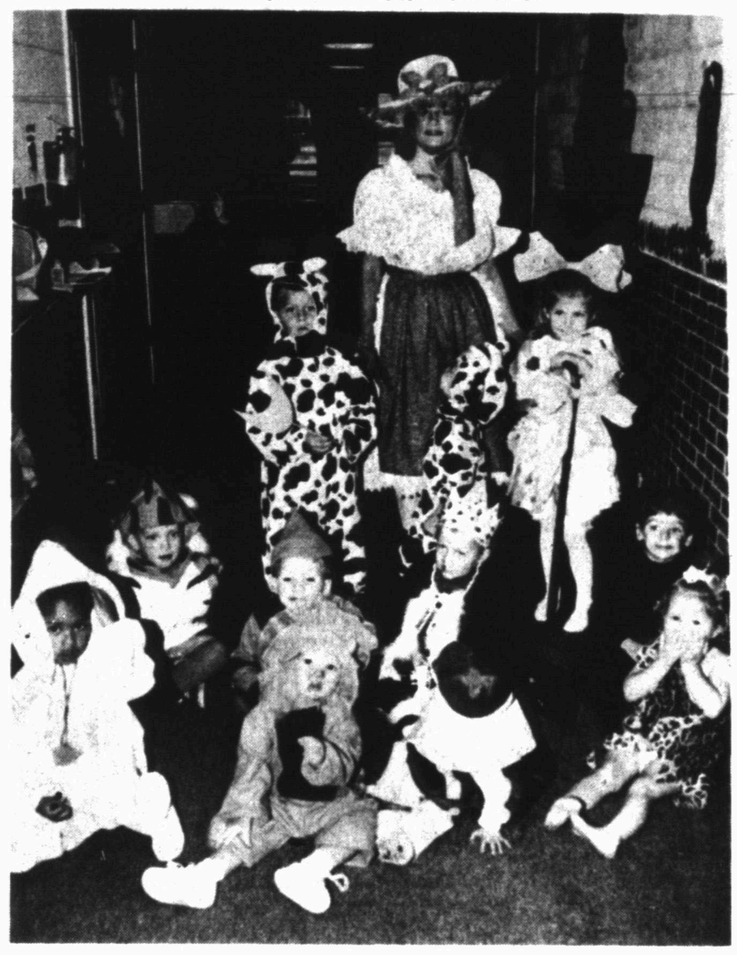

"Some companies think it is a marketing pitch," she said. "They don't realize the importance and urgency of upgrading the switch."

Companies that use PBXs can either upgrade their system with software that recognizes the new area codes or replace the system. Upgrade costs range from $850 to $17,500, according to the telephone industry.

But up to 50 percent of PBX systems have not been upgraded, said Elizabeth Brooks, spokeswoman for the United States Telephone Association. PBX systems are widely used by government offices, hospitals and schools as well as businesses, said the FCC, which does not regulate them.

Since the beginning of this year, 11 sections of the country, including Alabama, Colorado, Virginia and Washington state, have begun implementing new area codes.

From November through next year, nine areas — Chicago, Dallas, Miami, Missouri, northern Florida, Ohio, Oregon, South Carolina and Southern California — will add new codes. By next year, a total of 23 new codes — including one for toll-free 800 service — are slated to be in operation, affecting millions of people, the FCC said.

By Phillip Alder

W.R. Inge, who was the Dean of St. Paul's School in London, said, "Experience is a good teacher, but her fees are very high."

Well, at the rubber-bridge table, that is true. But in duplicate bridge, the cost is less. In theory, one learns the same lessons in both forms of the game. Yet most remember the expensive errors in rubber-bridge more readily than those made in duplicate, where the loss is measured only in matchpoints, not money.

East in today's deal learned early in his bridge career to signal encouragement with the highest card he could afford. There should be no half measures. He continued his good early work with the killing defense.

South's jump to four hearts suggests at least a five-card suit. As North might have raised with only three-card support (for example, with 1-3-4-5 shape), when South has only four hearts he will probably make a low-level investigatory rebid.

Under West's lead of the spade king, East carefully signaled with the nine as he wanted his partner to continue spades. West might not have realized that the four, though not East's lowest, was encouraging.

West continued with the spade ace and a third spade to East's queen. That was three tricks in for the defense — but where was number four coming from? Looking at the dummy, clearly not from the minors. If South didn't have the club king, the finesse was working. As the only chance was from hearts, East led his last spade. This worked beautifully, promoting West's heart queen as a guaranteed trick.

Lady Tigers take bi-district title

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

It wasn't easy, but the Snyder Lady Tigers took a three-game match and left Abilene as the Bi-District champions Tuesday with a 7-15, 15-8, 15-10 victory over the Lady Lions of Brownwood.

Cougar gym at Cooper High School saw a very vocal contention of Lady Tiger fans. Snyder's faithful outnumbered the Lady Lions fans, three to one. "Our fans were great," said a very excited Coach Patty Grimmett.

Snyder will now play Sherman at a date and time to be decided. Sherman defeated Fort Worth Castleberry, 15-0, 15-10.

The match came down to the third and final game. With the score tied at 9-9, Snyder's Lindsey Griffin served three straight points to go ahead, 12-9. The Lady Lions scored to make it 12-10, but then, Sharon Gulseth came in and served the final three points to move the Lady Tigers into the Area round of the state playoffs.

Like they have done several times this year, the Lady Tigers did not get down when they were behind. Grimmett said, "These girls do an excellent job of keeping their composure."

The first game saw Snyder take a 2-0 lead, but Brownwood came back and took the lead, 4-3, and never looked back to win the game, 15-7. "We had a shaky start," said Grimmett. "We definitely had first game jitters."

The second game was all Snyder. The Lady Tigers fell behind 1-0, but then took off and scored seven points to make it 7-1. With the score, 9-4, Snyder rolled off five points, leaving the score 14-4. Brownwood made a mini run and cut the count to 14-8 before Raechele Wemken served the game winner.

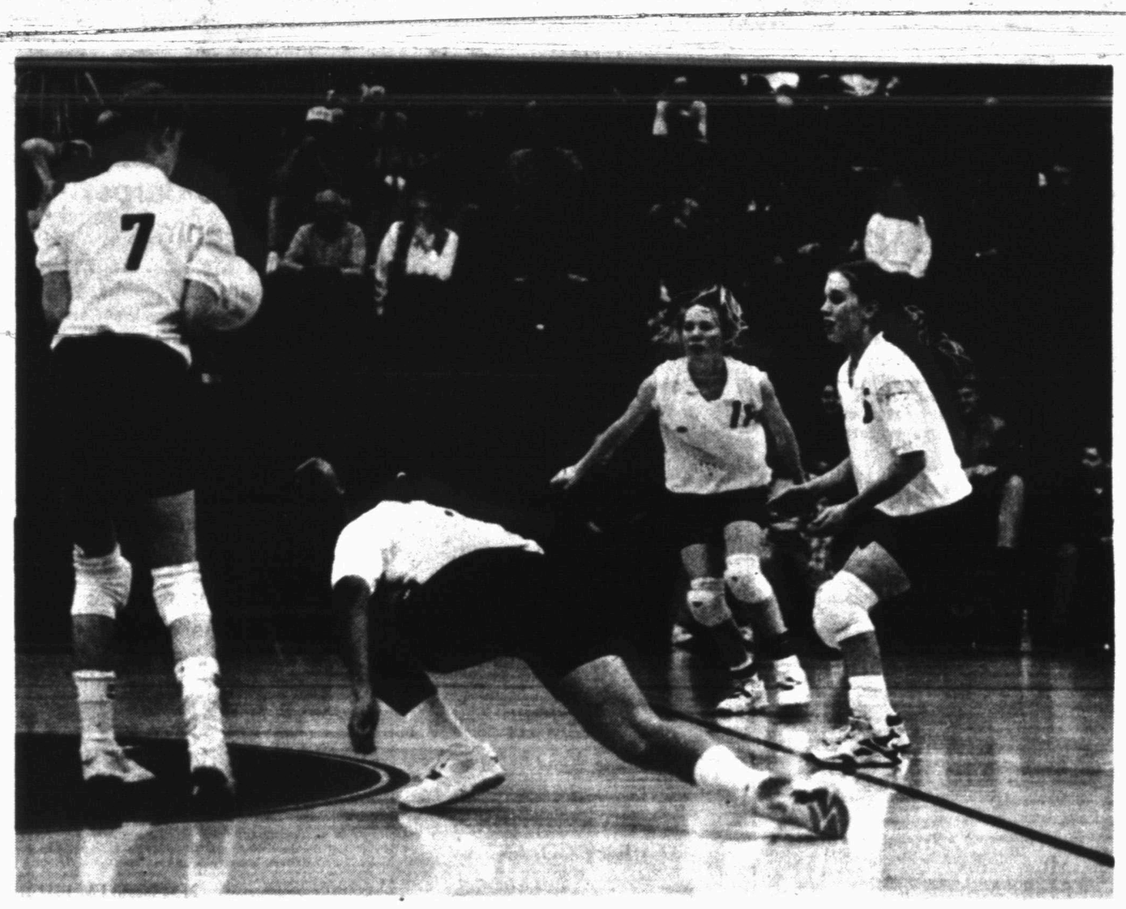

"Brownwood was an excellent team," Grimmett added. When you get into the second round of the playoffs, there are no bad teams left.

Sterling Cave led the Lady Tigers in service points with 10. Sharon Gulseth added seven, Kelly Clay six, Raechele Wemken and Tiffany Garza four, Lindsey Griffin and Shawn Purcell each had two.

Cave served two aces while Griffin, Garza and Clay each had one. In the kills department, Griffing, Garza and Clay had six, Edwina Brooks contributed five.

District 5-4A runner-up Lamesa was defeated by Cleburne, 15-8, 15-8 in a match played at Abilene Christian University Tuesday. In other matches from region 1-4A, El Paso Parkland took three games in defeating Monahans, 10-15, 15-8, 15-11.

Andrews knocked off Canutillo, 17-15, 15-4, and Denison took two games in beating Arlington Heights, 15-10, 15-5.

GET IT—Snyder High School Lady Tigers brought home the bi-district championship from Abilene Tuesday after defeating Brownwood, 7-15, 15-8, 15-10. Snyder will play Sherman at a time and place to be determined. Kelly Clay (14) goes after the volleyball while Lindsey Griffin (7), Raechele Wemken (18) and Sterling Cave (5) react. Clay offensive player of the week

From Local & Wire Reports

Former Snyder Tiger and current Texas A&M tight end Hayward Clay has been named Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week by The Associated Press.

Clay caught three passes for 36 yards and two touchdowns in the most productive day by an A&M tight end. "They were overplaying our wide receivers so it left me open over the middle," said Clay. "Corey Pullig was right on target, too."

Clay, the son of Roann and Hayward Clay of Snyder, is an agricultural economics major. While at Snyder High School, he was a three-time all-district and an all-state selection as a senior, catching 13 passes. He also averaged more than 20 points a game in basketball.

A 6-4, 256-pound senior, Clay has lettered three years for the Aggies. So far this year, he has caught 15 passes for 199 yards and scored three touchdowns.

In the offseason conditioning program, Clay posted the top overall mark among tight ends, sixth among all players. He lifted

319-pounds in the power clean, 480-pounds in squat and bench pressed 370-pounds.

As a junior at A&M, he caught four passes for 37 yards; as a sophomore, he grabbed five catches for 85 yards; and as a true freshman, he had one reception for 15 yards.

Baylor's Adrian Robinson was named the AP Defensive Player of the Week.

WTC golf team fifth at Midland

WTC Westerner golf team finished fifth Monday at the Midland College Invitational, firing a team total 588 in the one day, 36-hole event. They carded a 292 in the morning round and 296 in the afternoon.

Morten Vildhoj continued his excellent play in the medalist hunt. He tied for third with a 140 (69-71) on a course he had never seen before, according to Coach Milton Ham.

In addition to the team competion, an individual tournament was held for players not in the team competion. Bryan Hawkins from WTC won the individual honors with a 145 (72-73).

The final tournament of the fall will be Sunday and Monday at New Mexico Junior College Invitational in Hobbs, N.M. at the Ocotillo Park course.

Deion Sanders joins Pespi team

Sanders announced during a national television appearance that he has signed a multiyear contract to endorse Pepsi, the nation's No. 2-selling soft drink. The company confirmed the deal Wednesday.

Under the contract, Sanders will be featured in Pepsi advertising and promotions.

Terms of the contract, which Sanders announced during a Tuesday night appearance on "The Late Show With David Letterman," were not disclosed.

"Truly, Pepsi and I have merged," he said.

Rick Rock, vice president of media and entertainment marketing for Pepsi, called Sanders a "hugely popular, charismatic" athlete.

"He's on his way up, with a long way to go. We thought the time was right to jump on board and do something with Deion," Rock said.

The deal came after Sanders' Sunday debut with the Cowboys against the Atlanta Falcons. Sanders is in the first year of a $35 million, seven-year contract with the Cowboys.

Jones joined forces with Pepsi with a controversial $40 million, 10-year deal that makes the cola the official soft drink of Texas Stadium. The National Football League, which has an exclusive agreement with Coca-Cola, responded by suing Jones for $300 million in damages for that deal and others.

Sanders is the latest Cowboy to take a side in the war between Coke, the nation's top-selling soft drink, and Pepsi. Quarterback Troy Aikman and running back Emmitt Smith have deals with Coke.

Coke leads the U.S. market with a 42 percent share of the soft-drink market, compared to Pepsi's 32.3 percent.

Ira Bulldogs cancel season

Injuries, not grades, have caused Ira to cancel its two remaining football games against Loraine and Borden County.

Ira Superintendent Rick Howard said two injuries early this week had left the Bulldogs with only six players. "It's not worth taking a chance to play with only six players."

The Bulldogs had to forfeit three of their games earlier this year due to grade problems.

Guerra's poem is published

Kathy "Loca" Guerra of Snyder has just had original poetry published in "Tomorrow Never Knows," a treasury of today's poetry compiled by The National Library of Poetry.

The poem is entitled "That Extra Mile." The main subject of the poem is going that extra mile for someone you love.

The National Library of Poetry seeks to discover and encourage poets like Guerra, by sponsoring contests that are open to the public and by publishing poems in widely distributed hardback volumes.

Guerra has been writing for a little over a year and her favorite subjects and ideas are friendship, love, everything and anything real.

Poets interested in publication may send one original poem, any subject or style, 20 lines or less, to The National Library of Poetry, 11419-10 Cronridge Drive, P.O. Box 704-1376 Owings Mills, Maryland 21117. Include your name and address with your poem.

All poems received are also entered in The National Library of Poetry's North American Open Poetry Contest, which awards over $24,000 in prizes annually.

John Wayne and Kathy Helms of Round Rock announce the birth of their eight-pound, nine-ounce daughter, Kate Elizabeth, on Oct. 9 in Austin.

C-City church sets Lord's Acre

COLORADO CITY — The Lord's Acre Day held annually by the First United Methodist Church of Colorado City will be this Saturday, starting at 10 a.m. at the Mitchell County Ag Barn. There will be all sorts of booths and live entertainment all day plus door prizes will be given away every 30 minutes.

Some of the booths opening at 10 a.m. will include The Country Christmas Store, Serendipity Crafts, The Sweet Shop, The Golden Needle, Cannery Row, Pie-by-the-Slice, Meals-in-a-Minute, Children's Games, Baseball Cards, Snacks, The White Elephant, and the Kraft Korner.

A new and different booth this year is The Men's Marketplace. This booth will feature fishing and hunting gear, tools and all sorts of odds and ends.

At 3 p.m. the booths will close and there will be a live auction. Several quilts, bookcases, coat racks, decorative shelves, a hand-crafted clock and other larger items will be auctioned off. At this time the Thursday quilters will have the drawing for the counted cross-stitch quilt.

Hamburgers and snacks will be sold throughout the day. The steak dinner with all the trimmings will be served from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Entry to the booths and auction is free. The dinner is $6 for adults and $3 for children under 12 years of age.

Everyone in the community is invited.

Tobacco industry views said favored in 'Weekly Reader'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — School children who read the Weekly Reader between 1989 and 1994 were treated to an unhealthy dose of tobacco industry views on smoking in articles that were often illustrated with Joe Camel, re-

At the time the articles appeared, the Weekly Reader was owned by the largest shareholder in RJR Nabisco, Joe Camel's creator.

Joe Camel, a promotional cartoon character for Camel cigarettes, has been widely criticized for appealing to children.

Scholastic News, a competing newsletter, was much more likely to include health warnings and to give health advocates the last word, said the authors of a study presented Monday at the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association.

In October 1994, health advocates attacked the Weekly Reader over an article for youngsters that discussed smokers' rights and the harm to the industry from smoking restrictions. The article said nothing about smoking as a cause of lung cancer and heart disease.

Following that uproar, researchers at the University of California, San Francisco analyzed 34 articles from the Weekly Reader dealing with smoking. For comparison, they analyzed 28 from another school newsletter, Scholastic News, which is published by a family-owned company.

In the Weekly Reader, distributed to school children nationwide, 68 percent of the articles included tobacco industry views and only 38 percent carried a clear message against smoking. In Scholastic News, only 32 percent of articles included industry views and 79 percent carried anti-smoking warnings.

"Weekly Reader needs to change its editorial policy," said the principal researcher, Edith Balbach of the University of California, San Francisco. "They're certainly not helping kids not to smoke."

The Weekly Reader is owned by K-III Communications, a unit of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts, which was the largest shareholder of RJR Nabisco until March, when it sold its interest in RJR.

Sandra Maccarone, Weekly Reader's editor in chief, was traveling and could not be reached for comment and no one else at the company could comment on the study, Maccarone's office said.

Balbach expressed particular concern over an article for sixth-graders on whether Joe Camel is encouraging kids to smoke. Research has shown that Joe Camel is as familiar to children as Mickey Mouse, and that Camel cigarettes have increased in popularity among teen-agers since the campaign began.

The article appeared in an issue in which Joe Camel was on the cover handing out "Camel cash" promotional coupons. Inside, the article featured a reproduction of a Joe Camel billboard.

Next to the billboard was a reproduction of an RJR Tobacco poster advising children not to smoke.

Sluggish nervous system, thuggish behavior linked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some youngsters may be just a few steady heartbeats away from a life of crime, according to a study that links lower physical arousal traits with future lawlessness.

The study of juvenile delinquents found that if it takes more to make them sweat or speed their heartbeat, they are more inclined to a life of crime than juvenile delinquents with normal arousal rates.

"We think if you have low levels of arousal, you're seeking out levels of stimulation to bring levels to normal. Some kids join a gang, burgle a house," said University of Southern California psychologist Adrian Raine.

The study, which appears in the November issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry, focused on the autonomic nervous system, which controls functions such as heartbeat and perspiration.

Raine and two other researchers followed 51 English boys, beginning in 1978 at age 15. Two-thirds were juvenile delinquents, considered antisocial by their teachers while lacking criminal records. The remaining third were not considered delinquent.

Follow-up surveys showed that by age 29, 17 of the delinquents had criminal records and 17 delinquents had straightened out. The 17 non-delinquents had remained on the straight and narrow path.

Raine found that delinquents who turned to crime had heartbeats that were slower by an average of nine beats a minute than the delinquents who straightened out and the non-delinquents.

Your Birthday

Thursday, Nov. 2, 1995

In the year ahead, you may find additional ways to earn extra money. The cumulative gain from these alternative sources could surpass the money you receive from the usual channels.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Maintain a professional demeanor in your business dealings today, especially if you're participating in a transaction involving a large amount of money. Knowing where to look for romance will help you to find your true love. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Expecting too much from your social contacts will be unwise today. Much of what will be discussed may never be realized.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you're not careful today, associates might try to dump their responsibilities on you. You should be helpful, but do your part without being a chump.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Self-discipline may not be your strongest attribute today. Strive for the middle of the road and avoid all forms of excess.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may unwittingly be the focus of everyone's attention today. Guard your emotions and make a good impression.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will not be successful today if you treat associates in an arrogant or condescending manner. Try to be gracious at all times.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you insist on being nosy today, you might find yourself involved in a development that is loaded with hidden complications.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are chairing a social event today, avoid seating people who do not get along well at the same table. You will be asking for trouble.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Procrastination might result in a lost opportunity today if you incorrectly assume that a project can be developed at a later date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It would be unwise to take financial gambles today. Even though you may be in a position to live with your losses, don't let wild expectations govern your actions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, you may take a position that is diametrically opposed to your mate's view of the situation. Inflexibility will result in a no-win situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your ideas may lack their usual crispness today. Trying to be realistic and avoiding wishful thinking will speed your success.

The Emu Report

By Shirley Pate, Pate Emu Farm

It is my personal belief that we, who have been raising emu for several years, are failing to educate the beginner as we were. Certainly it is important for everyone to be giving the best information possible. It is for this purpose that I will be using articles that are timeless by a very capable person, Pat Jodoin, over the next few weeks.

Egg gathering: Most of our hens lay right in the same place, and eventually establish a laying pattern of every three days. Al goes out every evening carrying a pail with a laundry marker and role of Johnson's waterproof tape inside. Some emu farmers wear plastic gloves (to prevent disturbing the protective egg cuticle), but that is definitely not Al's style, so far, clean hands have served us well. When we pick up each egg we put a 1x½" strip of tape on the top of the egg and write down the hen's number on the tape, then we move on to check the next pen, etc.

Recording & marking: We bring the eggs in and then finish marking the tape on each egg; in addition to hen number, we now add egg number from that hen as well as date (50th day) to move the egg to the hatcher.

Remember, never mark the egg itself with Magic Marker, etc., that might penetrate the shell. Use a light colored wax pencil if writing directly on the egg. We like to use the tape and permanent marker because it's easy to get off later, and you don't have to scrub the mark off an infertile egg to use it.

We then record on our permanent records, hen number, egg number, date, time collected, location in pen, outside temperature, date to incubate, egg condition and date to hatcher. This year we are going to weigh our eggs, so we'll also record egg weight. Believe me, if record-keeping weren't so valuable, I sure wouldn't do as much of it.

Egg washing: As a general rule, we do not wash our eggs. If one is extremely dirty, (as in literally covered with mud) we do wash using the following method: wash the egg under very warm running water and then dip it in a solution of 1 tablespoon of Tektrol or other disinfectant and very warm water. The water being used should always be at least two degrees warmer than the egg being dipped. We leave the egg in the solution for 1 minute, then pat the egg dry with paper towels (never and thoroughly dry the egg before rub).

Washing the egg destroys the protective cuticle of the egg and makes it more susceptible to invasion of bacteria. If the egg is dirty with mud spots, we either leave the egg alone, or sand off some of the dirt with steel wool (that is mainly for looks though, because if the egg was contaminated, it got that way the minute it left the hen's warm body and was placed on the cooler ground). Some breeders keep a small incubator specifically for washed eggs, so as not to expose them to the unwashed eggs in the incubator.

Setting the egg: We rarely incubate the egg the same evening collected — only if the egg is still very warm from the hen's body.

Instead, we store the egg between 50 to 69 degrees, which prohibits embryonic development. We tested setting the eggs for 12, 23, 35, 48 and 72 hours last year, and got the best results with 24-hour setting (don't ask me why). We usually let the egg get to room temperature before incubating, which means the egg may be stored at 60 degrees for 20 hours, or so before incubation.

Incubation: We put the eggs in incubators that have been washed with soap and water, rinsed, then disinfected with Tektrol or other disinfectant. The eggs are laid on their sides and placed to rotate side-to-side.

Our incubators are in a thermostatically controlled room (kept usually between 70-75 degrees), and well ventilated. Good results have been obtained hatching emus at temperatures of 96.5 to 97.5 degrees with a wet bulb temperature kept between 70-80 degrees. In addition to checking the thermostat of the incubator twice a day, we also use a digital probe thermometer daily to make sure that nothing is amiss. I open the incubator every day to smell for a rotten egg (thank goodness, I've only found 3 in 3 years), and this checking also lets fresh air into the incubator. We also keep a generator handy in case of power failure.

SWCD windbreak tree sales begin

By Mark Sides
NRCS Range Conservationist

It's time to be thinking about colder weather, and the high West Texas winds that go along with it.

The Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District is beginning sales of seedlings for their 1995 annual windbreak tree program.

A good windbreak goes a long ways toward lowering utility bills, and making life easier on both people and animals. But don't be fooled by the name, these trees do more than block the wind. Properly sited and spaced, they work well as sound barriers and/or privacy screens. Wildlife benefit from food and cover provided by windbreaks. Studies have shown that by softening rainfall, blocking high winds, and holding soil in place windbreak plantings reduce erosion by as much as 25%.

Evergreen and hardwood varieties are offered again this year, along with four wildlife packets. Evergreen species include: Afghanistan Pine, Austrian Pine, Arizona Cypress, Eastern Red Cedar, and Pinyon Pine. Evergreens seedlings are shipped in tarpaper tubes, and are priced at $1.85 each.

Hardwood tree species are: Catalpa, Desert Willow, Green Ash, Honeylocust, Shumard Oak (Red Oak), Hackberry, O'Sage Orange (Boise d' Arc), and Fruiting Mulberry. A new addition this year is Chinquapin Oak. Hardwood shrubs offered are: Nanking Cherry, Russian Olive and Sand Cherry. The hardwoods are bare root seedlings, and are 85 cents each.

Wildlife packets contain a total of 100 bare root hardwood seedlings (25 each of 4 varieties) individually tailored for quail and pheasant, deer, turkey, or squirrel. Wildlife packets are $55 each.

Order forms can be obtained at the Upper Colorado SWCD office in Snyder or the USDA FSA office in Gail. All tree orders need to be paid for at the time of order, and checks can be made out to Upper Colorado SWCD. Cutoff date for all orders is Jan. 31, 1996. Please be sure to put a phone number on your order form so that we can contact you when the trees arrive. Delivery should be on or about March 1. The Upper Colorado SWCD office is located at 5309 Big Spring Hwy., in the USDA Office Complex.

Future articles dealing with tips on planting and care, site recommendations and descriptions of the trees will be forthcoming.

COLLEGE STATION — Americans who have non-insulin dependent diabetes do not have to give up the taste of soul food completely. Adjustments can be made to keep diets ethnically appropriate and healthful, according to a registered dietitian and professor with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The method of cooking and ingredients can be modified to maintain flavor," said Dr. May Kinney Bielamowicz, a member of the cultural diversity committee of the American Diabetes Association-Texas Affiliate. "But persons with diabetes should first check with their doctor or dietitian before they begin altering recipes."

"People of all different backgrounds enjoy the taste of soul food," Bielamowicz said. "However, traditional soul food has a tendency to be high in fat, cholesterol and sodium."

Soul food favors fried foods, added fat and frequent consumption of high-fat products, which may lead to obesity and, therefore, hypertension, heart disease and diabetes, Bielamowica said. Therefore, the amount and type of fat must be modified to decrease caloric intake and reduce obesity and its associated health risks.

This can be done partly by using skin-free smoked turkey necks, liquid smoke, margarine and fat-free broths instead of fatback, ham hocks or bacon grease to season vegetables, she said.

Meat consumption should not exceed six ounces a day, Bielamowicz said. Also, those who have diabetes and those who are at risk should avoid eating high-fat meats like chicken wings, bologna, sausage and fried meats.

Those with diabetes should avoid eating smoked, dried or salt-cured meat products, she said. Also, cut down on the use of salt and salty seasonings such as meat tenderizer.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are better alternatives to canned items, she said. The popular consumption of beans and peas, rice, sweet and white potatoes and corn can be incorporated into meals.

Recipes can be modified for a more healthful meal with a soul food taste, she said. For example, a breakfast of grits, fried eggs, sausage patties, buttermilk biscuits with a tablespoon of butter and coffee with sugar can be modified by substituting wheat toast with only a teaspoon of margarine, egg substitute, a sugar substitute with coffee and leaner homemade sausage patties.

Ratite Association holds meeting

The Rolling Plains Ratite Association met on Saturday, Oct. 21, at Rudy's Restaurant. This group meets monthly to discuss and promote the ratite industry in this area. Dave Haywood, president, presided.

Various topics of interest were discussed. These included a report on an Expo held recently in Odessa, new research being done with emu oil, a water filtration system for incubators, and publication of a directory of local ratite breeders.

The next meeting will be held at Rudy's on Nov. 11 at 7 p.m. Anyone interested in the ratite industry is invited to attend.

Groups share grants

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirty-nine community-based groups in Los Angeles are sharing $500,000 in grants from the Agriculture Department.

The organizations perform tasks ranging from developing community and school gardens to neighborhood beautification, habitat restoration and educational workshops and facilities.

The grants are part of the department's Urban Resources Partnership, which aims to reward communities through funding as well as technical assistance for natural resource project that improve their environment. Eight cities participate in the partnership.

Quebec's separatist premier resigns

MONTREAL (AP) — Quebec's separatist government begins the search for a new leader today after the dramatic resignation of Premier Jacques Parizeau, who appalled even supporters by blaming immigrants for an achingly close loss in the independence referendum.

Parizeau, a key player in the French-Canadian separatist movement for two decades, expressed hope that his departure would help, not hinder, the crusade for independence of Canada's largest province.

Lucien Bouchard, head of the Bloc Quebecois separatist party in Parliament, distanced himself from Parizeau's remarks, in which he blamed Monday's defeat on "money and the ethnic vote."

"His declaration does not reflect what sovereigntists feel," said Bouchard, who was the separatists' most passionate orator during the referendum campaign.

Bouchard, who lost a leg to a near-fatal flesh-eating disease last year, refused to say if he wanted Parizeau's job. His future, and that of his party, were on the agenda of a party leadership meeting today.

Parizeau, 65, was elected premier last year after promising to hold a referendum on secession. His side lost Monday, but only narrowly — 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent — just 53,000 votes out of 4.6 million cast.

Fifteen years ago, Quebec's first secession referendum lost much more handily, 60-40.

Instead of savoring the separatists' strong showing this time, Parizeau shocked even his colleagues with a vitriolic speech Monday night, blaming immigrants for the narrow defeat.

Prime Minister Jean Chretien and other politicians, as well as numerous minority leaders and anti-racism groups, denounced Parizeau's remarks.

At an emotional news conference Tuesday, Parizeau said he would step down as premier before Christmas. He denied he was resigning because of the previous night's diatribe, but it was clear that his even closest allies had repudiated him.

Parizeau said he used terms "that could have been much better chosen."

Balkan leaders talk 'very tough lines'

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — All three Balkan presidents are talking "very tough" at the outset of tense negotiations to end four years of bloodshed in Bosnia, but they are still insisting they want peace, the U.S. mediator said today.

Richard C. Holbrooke, in an interview with The Associated Press, also said "friction" within the Bosnia delegation was "a major concern."

Upon his arrival at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base where the talks are being held, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the conference "may well be the last best chance for peace in Bosnia-Herzegovina."

"I hope that someday Dayton, Ohio, will be remembered as the site ... where the killing was finally brought to a halt and we started building a better future for all the people of the former Yugoslavia," said Christopher who was meeting separately with each of the Balkan presidents before the formal opening of the negotiations.

Holbrooke said all three Balkan presidents "have come here saying they want peace."

The U.S. mediator also met with presidents Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, Alija Izetbegovic of Bosnia and Franjo Tudjman of Croatia in advance of the formal opening.

He said Tudjman will break away from the negotiations at Wright-Patterson to return to Zagreb, leaving senior officials to continue the discussions.

Holbrooke, who shuttled to the Balkans four times during 10 weeks to lay the groundwork for the conference, said that after the ceremony "a curtain of silence" would descend, shielding the negotiations from the public and the news media.

Chuckling, he said, "the AP interview is my final one."

The three Balkan leaders arrived separately Tuesday night at the air base.

"I'm an optimist. I believe the talks will succeed," declared Milosevic, the principal power broker in the region and the first to arrive.

On the eve of the talks, President Clinton warned the warring parties that their negotiations may be "the last chance we have for a very long time" to end the war.

"So much is riding on the success in Dayton, and the whole world is watching," Clinton said Tuesday at the White House.

The three presidents already have agreed on a constitutional blueprint — hammered out during a series of shuttle missions to the Balkans by Holbrooke — that would create two entities within a united Bosnian state.

Yeltsin meets with top aide

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin met with his top aide for about an hour today in the first working visit since the president was hospitalized for heart trouble last week, a news agency reported.

Yeltsin had seen only doctors, family and bodyguards since he was rushed to the hospital Thursday with acute ischemia, a condition that restricts the flow of blood to the heart.

Despite assurances from Kremlin spokesmen and Yeltsin's wife that he is feeling well and is firmly in command of the country, there has been skepticism in the press about the state of the president's health and its possible political consequences.

Doctors have said Yeltsin should remain in the hospital for another month.

The president and top aide Viktor Ilyushin discussed foreign and domestic affairs, and "the mechanism of contacts" between the president and his staff, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

The president also signed laws today raising minimum pensions and wages, and sent a bill on foreign military cooperation to parliament, Kremlin spokesmen said. His economic adviser said Yeltsin also was working on housing issues.

Yeltsin's bodyguard and confidant, Gen. Alexander Korzhakov, told ITAR-Tass on Tuesday that the president was chafing at doctors' strict orders and would begin receiving visitors in defiance of them.

Newspapers have questioned Kremlin assurances.

The Izvestia newspaper, in an article with a headline reading "Acute Information Deficiency," said lack of candor about the president's health "could be the most serious symptom of Russian democracy's disease. And at the same time the best cover for palace intrigues with far-reaching consequences."

Parliamentary elections are six weeks away, and presidential elections are scheduled for June.

The newspaper Kommersant speculated that Yeltsin's heart trouble may be much more serious than the Kremlin is letting on. It fretted that a long convalescence could create a power vacuum.

"How and by whom would the decision be made on transferring power from the disabled president to the prime minister, if the need arose?" it asked. "The whole Russian political system now depends on the president."

The public, however, appears less worried.

A survey by the VTSIOM polling agency for the Moskovsky Komsomolets newspaper showed 59 percent of 1,000 people polled said Yeltsin's illness did not concern them.

Of the 35 percent who said they were worried, nearly half said the main reason was that "any human ailment worries me."

Study: drug slows heart disease progress in women

DALLAS (AP) — A cholesterol-lowering drug could delay a form of heart disease in women at the same rate it slows the disease in men, according to a new study.

Connecticut researchers studied the effects cholesterol-lowering drugs have on women. Even though heart diseases are among the leading causes of death for women in the U.S., studies of cholesterol-lowering drugs have rarely included them, the researchers said. Poor cholesterol levels have been cited as factors in heart diseases.

The results of the study were released today in Circulation, the Dallas-based American Heart Association's scientific journal. Researchers showed that the drug lovastatin slowed the hardening of the heart's arteries in 18 of 25 treated women.

Researchers for 16 weeks gave lovastatin to 25 women suffering from coronary arteriosclerosis, and gave a neutral treatment to 29 women in a control group. They tested the diameter of coronary arteries after two years, reasoning that the hardening got worse if the arteries' diameter had shrunk by 0.4 millimeters or more.

The tests found lovastatin:

—reduced total cholesterol by 24 percent in the treated women;

—reduced "bad" cholesterol by 32 percent; and

—prevented additional hardening in 24 of the women.

Women in the control group had no more than a 3 percent drop in total cholesterol and in "bad" cholesterol and additional disease sites developed in 13 women in the control group.

Lovastatin produced similar results in a study of 245 men who were about five years younger than the women studied and were less likely to suffer from hypertension or diabetes, two contributing factors in heart diseases.

Dr. Margo Denke of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas said the study is important.

"Just as many women as men get heart disease. From a therapeutic standpoint, the cholesterol-lowering hypotheses (has) only studied men," she said. "This study shows that cholesterol-lowering therapy should be equally effective in women as in men."

Meanwhile, new analysis of four previous studies found another cholesterol-lowering drug helped reduce heart attacks.

loss of those freedoms doesn't mean a whole lot in the scheme of things for Dale Wofford. I've lived a good life. Texas has been good to me. But it has very serious implications for our children and grandchildren. We have to work together to change that."

Wofford is married to the former Judy Parker. They have three sons, Mark, Scott and Greg. He has worked in the automobile sales industry since the early 1960s. He held the title of sales manager at Charles Long Ford in Anson for 22 years, and later served as the new car sales manager at Rocket Oldsmobile in Abilene. In July, he established his own auto dealership, Auto-Plex of Abilene, Inc. He and his son also own and operate a registered Brangus cattle operation in Jones County.

Wofford also served on the Hawley ISD board from 1978 to 1984.
