Haiti update

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Along the coastline, Haitians are building scores of flimsy wooden boats and fleeing hardship in droves despite President Bush's new orders to immediately turn them back.

The continued exodus had Red Cross and U.S. consular officials scrambling Friday to handle hundreds of boat people the U.S. Coast Guard intercepted on the high seas.

Even as it returned 734 boat people on Friday, the Coast Guard said it picked up 1,094 other off Haiti's coast in five small boats the previous day. They included 326 Haitians crammed into a 30-foot craft.

Denton, whose Austin-based telemarketing network has been the target of investigations for more than a year, on Thursday was charged with misapplying more than $67,000 in 1988 and 1989 while he was executive director of the statewide troopers' group.

New county museum exhibit to feature places of worship

"Profiles in Faith: A History of Scurry County Places of Worship" will open on Sunday, June 7, at Scurry County Museum.

About 20 local groups have responded to the museum's invitation to be included in the exhibit, said Shirley Leftwich, museum director. They have submitted histories and artifacts for the display, which will remain in place through June 30.

A reception from 1 to 4 p.m. will mark the formal opening of the exhibit. Refreshments will include desserts made from favorite recipes of some of the groups represented. There is no admission charge for the reception. The public is invited.

Included in the exhibit are two friendship quilts made by women of Snyder First Presbyterian Church, a small stained glass window from the First Methodist Church building once located at the corner of 27th Street and Avenue R, hand-held cardboard fans used before air conditioning was a common feature, scrapbooks, hymnals, a 1901 journal from Dunn Baptist Church, children's Sunday school cards, and anniversary plates.

A small brush arbor is being erected in the museum to show the younger generation where religious groups sometimes met in earlier years. A buggy from the museum collection will be displayed, carrying an early-day "family" to worship.

Two cookbooks recently received in the museum gift shop tie in with the exhibit. They are "Bishop's Bounty: Not by Bread Alone," and "Pastors' Wives Cookbook." Visitors to the gift shop can take advantage of special sale prices on numerous items there now.

"We appreciate the help of many people in putting this exhibit together," Leftwich said. "Places of worship have had an influence on the development of our area, and we welcome visitors to come and spend time learning more about this part of our heritage."

Information about the museum and special tours can be obtained by calling the museum office at 573-6107.

America 2000...

Educational plan topic for meeting

Dr. Sam P. Wilson, U.S. Department of Education's secretary for Region VI, will discuss America 2000 at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the TU Electric Reddy Room.

The public is invited.

American 2000 is a long-term strategy adopted by the president and governors in 1990 to close a skills and knowledge gap. The strategy anticipates major change in the nation's 110,000 public and private schools as well as new thoughts in American's attitudes about learning.

The American 2000 strategy has four parts that will be pursued simultaneously. They are:

—to radically improve today's schools by making all 110,000 better and more accountable for results;

—to invent new schools to meet the demands of a new century with a "New Generation of American Schools," bringing at least 535 of them into existence by 1996 and thousands by the decade's end;

—for those already out of school and in the workforce to keep learning to be able to live and work successfully in today's schools.

—and to look beyond the class-

New committee on agenda for commissioners

Scurry County commissioners will discuss selection of a loss control committee for the county and consider bids for contract mowing on county roads at a 10 a.m. meeting Monday.

The court is to discuss the possible selection of a 16-member committee to promote risk management and safety in the workplace.

According to County Judge Bob Doolittle, the county is eligible for reductions in workers' compensation from the Texas Association of Counties if such a committee exists in the county.

Commissioners will also consider bids received for contract mowing on county roads in each of the four precincts.

Bids are to be opened at 11 a.m.

Approval of minutes from the May 26 meeting is the only other item on the agenda.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The problem with shiftless people is getting 'em into high gear."

If the typical high school or college graduate was a regular reader of the Wall Street Journal, he or she would likely have their occupational sights set on the job of chief executive officer.

The financial newspaper recently completed its annual survey of CEO compensation. Folks in West Texas who haven't had a pay raise won't have much sympathy for the fact that average increases for the boss were only 3.9 percent in 1991, the lowest since 1982. Median pay for top executives was $1.3 million, but the real winners last year were guys with hefty stock options. Some 121 CEOs had a median gain of $690,720.

The year's highest-paid executive was with H.J. Heinz Co., with a total package of $74.8 million. Much of that was due to a $71.5 million stock option gain. Next was the head of U.S. Surgical Corp. who earned $22.6 million, including just over $20 million in options.

Just how does the boss earn his pay. According to the survey, a cent of every dollar goes for sitting and thinking. He's paid two cents for vision and three cents for having an early breakfast. Another three cents is earned on vacation using the cellular phones and fax back to the office.

Four cents is for making big decisions while five cents is for eating with strange people at a business lunch. Another five cents is earned for divesting of product lines, and another five cents for listening to other people.

Planning for company downsizing earns six cents and the CEO gets seven cents for smiling. Telephone use is worth 8 cents and the pay is 9 cents for appearances — clothing, auto, office. Ten cents is earned for travel and visiting field offices, and he's paid 12 cents to balance his expense account.

The balance of his earned dollar, 20 cents, is preparing for the arrival of the big boss, such as the chairman of the board.

Professor refuses Perot's request

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A journalism professor says he advised undeclared presidential candidate Ross Perot to hire an attorney-investigator to look into his background to prepare for media scrutiny.

James Wieghart, 58, a former Milwaukee Sentinel reporter who chairs the journalism department at Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant, said the Texas billionaire asked him to investigate his background.

But Wieghart said he declined.

Wieghart said he was asked by Perot's attorney, Tom Luce, to become involved in the unofficial campaign. Wieghart accepted an expense-paid trip to Dallas.

He said he discovered only during the meeting earlier this month that they wanted an investigation of Perot so they could anticipate other media examinations.

"I used to do that sort of thing 30 years ago," said Wieghart, a former staff director for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"I'm very good at it, but I don't want to do it now," he said. "Besides, if I did find anything, I didn't want to be in the position of having to obfuscate it or obscure it. For a journalist, it creates a conflict."

Wieghart said he advised Perot to hire an attorney-investigator who would be bound by legal ethics to keep confidential anything he found.

But Wieghart said he "didn't get the impressions there were any skeletons rattling around" and believed Perot sought a data base of his potentially controversial business dealings.

Support group meeting set

Anyone in the community who has a mentally ill family member is invited to attend the monthly meeting of the Family Support Group this Tuesday night at 7 p.m. at East Side Church of Christ, 201 31st. The meeting is sponsored by Scurry County Mental Health Department.

The topic of this month's meeting will be anxiety. Stan Paregien, director, will lead a discussion in what anxiety is, what causes it and what can be done about it.

"These meetings are for anyone in Scurry County who has a family member with a mental illness," Paregien said, "whether or not that family member receives services from our center. This is an opportunity for families who face similar problems to get together and share what works or doesn't work for them. The meetings are for family members, not for the one who is ill."

For more information, contact Paregien at 573-4947.

AG joins probe

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — An indicted West Texas medical examiner faces investigation by the Texas Attorney General in addition to a state district judge's court of inquiry.

Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware said Friday he asked for assistance in the case of Dr. Ralph Erdmann, a forensic pathologist indicted in February by a Hockley County grand jury.

Erdmann was accused of tampering with government records and theft by a public servant. Since then, additional allegations have been made about Erdmann's ethics and competency.

A spokesman said Attorney General Dan Morales had authorized Assistant Attorney General Shane Phelps to serve as attorney pro tem, similar to a special prosecutor, if he is appointed by a judge.

"Whether a judge will appoint the attorney general's office as attorney pro tem remains to be seen," Ware said.

Pharmacist's discovery may end obesity

WASHINGTON -- After solving the problem of his own obesity, a pharmacist, now director of National Dietary Research, may have discovered the solution for others with the same problem.

Dr. William Morris, pharmacist, inventor and author has discovered a natural food tablet, aptly named Food Source One, that replaces some of the calories normally obtained from food. Food Source One replaces high calorie fats with other natural food ingredients with little or no caloric value so you can lose weight without giving up all your favorite foods, as explained in NDR's Lifestyle Maintenance publication, available where Food Source One is sold. "The secret to meaningful weight loss is not in decreasing the amount of food you eat, but in controlling the fat," says Dr. Morris.

According to Dr. Morris, weight loss results while using Food Source One will depend on how many pounds a person needs to lose. However some overweight people are experiencing extra-ordinary results with Food Source One. A Metairie, Louisiana nurse lost 71 pounds. She stated "I never had to sacrifice the foods I dearly crave!" "Food Source One is very easy and anyone could do it." says a Niagara Falls, New York woman who lost 26 pounds and 15 inches. "The results are great'" she added.

Food Source One is available at pharmacies without a prescription.

Casebearer spray date noted

By MARK LOGAN
County Entomologist

It looks like the pecan nut casebearer has emerged and laid their eggs on pecan nutlets across Scurry County.

The predicted spray dates to control these nut feeders is from June 1-6. Some pecan growers may want to inspect their trees to narrow down the spray date.

Pecan producers are encouraged to inspect their trees and make one timely insecticide treatment for the casebearers. One well-timed treatment leaves the most natural enemies for other insect pests later in the season.

Some other insect pests that may be noticed on pecan trees at this time are spittle bugs and pecan phyloxera.

Spittle bugs form a white spittle mass which the insects crawl around inside. If you notice any damage or stress on the trees around the spittle masses or if 20-25 terminals out of 100 are infested, then an insecticide treatment is justified.

Pecan phyloxera are plant lice that feed on leaves of pecan trees. The leaves form a gall around the lice, which look like warts on the leaves at this time of the growing season.

These insects need to be treated early in the spring just before bud break. If you notice the phyloxera galls now, you might write yourself a note to help you remember to spray next year.

There are several good insecticides that can be used for control of the pecan nut casebearer. Effective insecticides available to the homeowner contain diazinon, carbaryl or malathion. There are also some good restricted-use insecticides available to commercial growers.

Review slated

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Turnpike Authority has hired a Louisiana consultant to help it unify the ways money is collected on the Dallas North Tollway.

The action, approved Thursday, is a step to deciding what to do after a contract expires next year for a Dallas company to electronically obtain tolls on the road, which stretches approximately 15 miles from downtown Dallas to its northern suburbs.

Amtech Corp. in 1989 installed a "tolltag" system on the road, allowing drivers to register passage through collection booths without having to exchange money. An electronic card on the windshield is scanned by a low-frequency radio transmitter as the vehicle passes through the booth.

About 50,000 drivers with tolltags pay $2 a month plus a nickel more than regular toll for each trip through a booth. Those without tolltags toss change into a collection basket or give bills to attendants and receive change.

Civil penalty might result in nuke case

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Potential violations of federal guidelines at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant could result in a penalty, regulators said Friday.

A Nuclear Regulatory Commission inspection team outlined preliminary findings of an inspection for personnel at the plant 90 miles southwest of Dallas.

Federal inspectors reviewed a May 12 incident, in which a cooling pool system used to store nuclear rods was out of service.

An NRC senior inspector found that the system for spent fuel had operated for about 17 to 20 hours without cooling water having been supplied to a heat exchanger.

The problems posed little danger to the public. The temperature of the spent fuel had only risen from 80 to 85 degrees during the episode, said Pat Gwynn, deputy director of the Division of Reactor Projects in NRC Region Four.

"This specific event was of very minor safety significance, but the observed performance of operators and supervisors and control of the interface between Operating Unit 1 and Construction Unit 2 was of concern to us," Gwynn said in Arlington.

He said it was an "apparent repeat" of problems the NRC observed at the plant in December. "That incident, which involved a residual heat removal system, resulted in escalated enforcement and the imposition of a civil penalty by the NRC," said Gwynn.

More cards and Lotto are on the way

AUSTIN (AP) — What's next for Texas Lottery players?

The game that began Friday, called "Lone Star Millions," includes 300 million instant-win tickets.

When those are sold, a second scratch-card game begins. Lottery Director Nora Linares says 200 million tickets are being delivered for that game.

Of those 500 million total tickets in the first two games, 1 million qualify for a series of 12, $1 million prize drawings. Those begin June 18 and run through Sept. 3, Ms. Linares said.

Each of those drawings — being held in 12 cities — will have seven participants selected at random from a pool of about 80,000 ticketholders. Second place will pay $50,000 and third $25,000. Two participants will win $15,000 and two $10,000.

Comptroller John Sharp, who oversees the lottery, has said he hopes to start computerized "lotto" games by mid-September.

In such games, players generally pay to pick three through six numbers daily or weekly in hopes of matching a set of numbers chosen at random by the lottery.

Lotto prizes in other states have reached multimillion-dollar levels.

Contributions to scholarship may continue

A new scholarship honoring Ira school teacher Betty Burrow has been created through the Western Texas College Scholarship Foundation.

Mrs. Burrow is retiring this year as the fifth grade teacher at Ira. She has completed 23 years there.

A fund raiser in her honor was held at the school from which "seed money" for the ongoing scholarship was received. The first awarding of the scholarship is expected at the end of next school year.

Any further contributions toward the fund may be made by contacting the financial aid office at WTC. The number is 573-8511, ext. 309.

Trial moved

DICKENS, Texas (AP) — Indicted Dickens County commissioner Vernon Wright will be tried June 22 in Aspermont in the hit-and-run death of a teen-ager.

Wright, 74, is charged with involuntary manslaughter and failure to stop and render aid in the Oct. 13, 1991, accident that killed 14-year-old Jesse Land of Spur.

Land was struck and killed by a vehicle as he was walking home from a dance. His body was found beside a road the next morning.

State district Judge Randy Hollums decided to move the trial to Stonewall County during a hearing Friday.

Missing man found in Houston

RACINE, Wis. (AP) — A former suburban Caledonia man who staged his suicide in 1981 has been found living under a different name in Houston, authorities said.

Caledonia police said they recently found and interviewed Nelson Udell, who was reported missing Jan. 28, 1981, after he did not show up for work.

Udell, living under the alias Patrick C. Nelson, told police he went to St. Louis for a month, then to Houston where he landed a job as a laborer at a boat storage operation.

In 1986, Racine County declared Udell legally dead. His wife, now Chris Udell-Solberg, remarried in 1987. The couple's two sons have moved out of state, said Sgt. Ric Storbeck.

Udell's whereabouts remained a mystery, but he unknowingly tipped his hand June 8, when he reported to Houston police that his car had been stolen.

Included in the report was Udell's social security number.

Ten months later, on April 20, Storbeck said he ran a routine check through the national crime information computer to see if Udell had turned up.

Udell's social security number matched the one given in the stolen car report.

SPEED RECORD ...
The Army Signal Corps at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio established an Aviation Section in 1910. The Section consisted of one officer, Lieutenant Benjamin D. Foulois, and eight men. Foulois was given the Army's only airplane and told to "teach yourself to fly." He did and set a world speed record. On March 4, 1911, he flew the 116 miles from Laredo to Eagle Pass in two hours and seven minutes.

Minnesota waives unhappy Walker

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — The Herschel Walker era is nothing more than a bad memory for the Minnesota Vikings.

Unable to win the Super Bowl — or even a playoff game — since giving Dallas five players and eight draft choices for Walker in October 1989, the Vikings cut the unhappy and unproductive running back Friday rather than re-sign him for his 1991 salary of $1.7 million.

All the Vikings have to show is third-string tight end Mike Jones and fifth-string receiver Jake Reed.

Meanwhile, the Cowboys have Emmitt Smith, Russell Maryland and Issiac Holt, along with lesser-knowns Kevin Smith, Darren Woodson, Clayton Holmes, James Brown, Tom Myslinski, Greg Briggs, Fallon Wacasey and Chris Hall.

Walker's own agent, Peter Johnson, once called it "one of the worst trades in NFL history."

Walker rushed for 148 yards in 18 carries his first game as a Viking, and for one week it looked like general manager Mike Lynn, who said: "If we don't win the Super Bowl while Herschel Walker is here, then we have not made a good trade" after making the trade might get his reward.

For the rest of the 1989 season, though, Walker averaged 15.4 carries for 60.8 yards. In Minnesota's one playoff game during his tenure, Walker rushed nine times for 29 yards.

Walker was the Heisman Trophy winner who rushed for 5,259 yards in three years at Georgia. He was the featured attraction in the USFL, rushing for more than 7,000 yards in three seasons for the New Jersey Generals and setting a single-season pro record of 2,411 yards in 1985.

Palmer, Rangers top Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Getting moved to the No. 2 spot in the Texas Rangers batting order was about the last thing expected by struggling Dean Palmer.

After driving in three runs in a 5-3 victory over Kansas City on Friday night, Palmer now is convinced it was a good move.

"The way I was swinging the bat, it didn't occur to me that I'd be a good two-hole hitter," said Palmer, who had been batting between sixth and eighth. "But it's really worked out. Sometimes it can help out a player just to have a little change like that. Maybe it can get you rolling."

Following Geno Petralli's two-out single in the ninth, Palmer drove a 1-0 breaking pitch from Jeff Montgomery (0-4) over the left-field fence, making Kevin Brown (8-3) the major leagues' first eight-game winner.

The Rangers stretched their winning streak to seven.

"It really wasn't a pitch I was looking for," said Palmer, who has eight homers but leads the league with 57 strikeouts. "He threw me a slider on the first pitch. I really wasn't expecting him to come back with it, but he did. He sort of left it over the plate."

Brown gave up nine hits the first four innings but just one after that. He struck out five, walked none and pitched his fourth complete game.

"He smelled the victory," Royals manager Hal McRae said. "He popped the ball better in the ninth than he did earlier in the game."

"The ninth inning was as effective as any inning he's ever pitched because he was right on the edge. He just found another gear," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said.

Kansas City had gone ahead 3-0 in the third. Gregg Jefferies singled, extending his hitting streak to a career-best 15, Wally Joyner singled and Kevin McReynolds singled for a 2-0 lead. McReynolds scored on Mike Macfarlane's single off Dickie Thon's glove at shortstop.

Texas closed to 3-2 in the fifth when Ivan Rodriguez and Thon singled, Palmer hit a sacrifice fly and Rafael Palmeiro hit an RBI single.

The Rangers tied the score in the seventh when Thon singled off Neal Heaton, was sacrificed to second, took third on a wild pitch and scored as Brian Downing slowed and forced a tag play between first and second on Palmer's grounder to second baseman Terry Shumpert.

Texas, which moved into first place in the AL West on Thursday night, now has won 11 of 12.

Phillies nip Astros in 12

HOUSTON (AP) — Lenny Dykstra's run-scoring double in the 12th inning gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

The Phillies have won eight of their last 12 road games. The Astros, meanwhile, lost for the first time in seven extra-inning games this season.

Ruben Amaro singled off reliever Al Osuna (3-3) with two outs and Dykstra followed with a double to center field.

Barry Jones (2-2) pitched two innings for the victory.

The Astros loaded the bases with no outs in the bottom of the 11th inning but were unable to score.

It's all in the family.

At least for Scurry County cousins Chris Haynes and Bobby Clinkinbeard, both very recent high school graduates.

Chris, while attending Ira High School, competed in football, basketball, golf and baseball, while cousin Bobby played football and baseball at Snyder High.

Haynes was an all-district end in football, earning one of only two loop slots to the Six-Man All-Star Game in Wichita Falls in July. He was also an all-district selection as a guard in basketball and an all-district pick as catcher, even though he played in the infield most of the year, on Ira's playoff baseball team, while finishing his academic career rated No. 5 in the IHS Class of '92.

Clinkinbeard was a District 2-4A Academic Athlete, a starting wide receiver and kicker for the Tigers' '91 playoff grid squad and was picked all-district two straight seasons as an outfielder in baseball, although he played the bulk of the '92 campaign at catcher.

At Ira's recent athletic awards banquet, Haynes took home the coveted Top Male Athlete plaque while Clinkinbeard hauled off the Tigers' baseball MVP and the Golden Bat Award at Snyder's All-Sports Celebration.

The similarities between the cousins doesn't stop with their athletic exploits, they also share like plans for the future.

The two have joined the U.S. Navy on the "buddy" plan, and will both study in the elite naval nuclear program at Orlando, Florida beginning in July.

I guess there they'll continue to be alike. they'll have the same clothes, the same haircut...

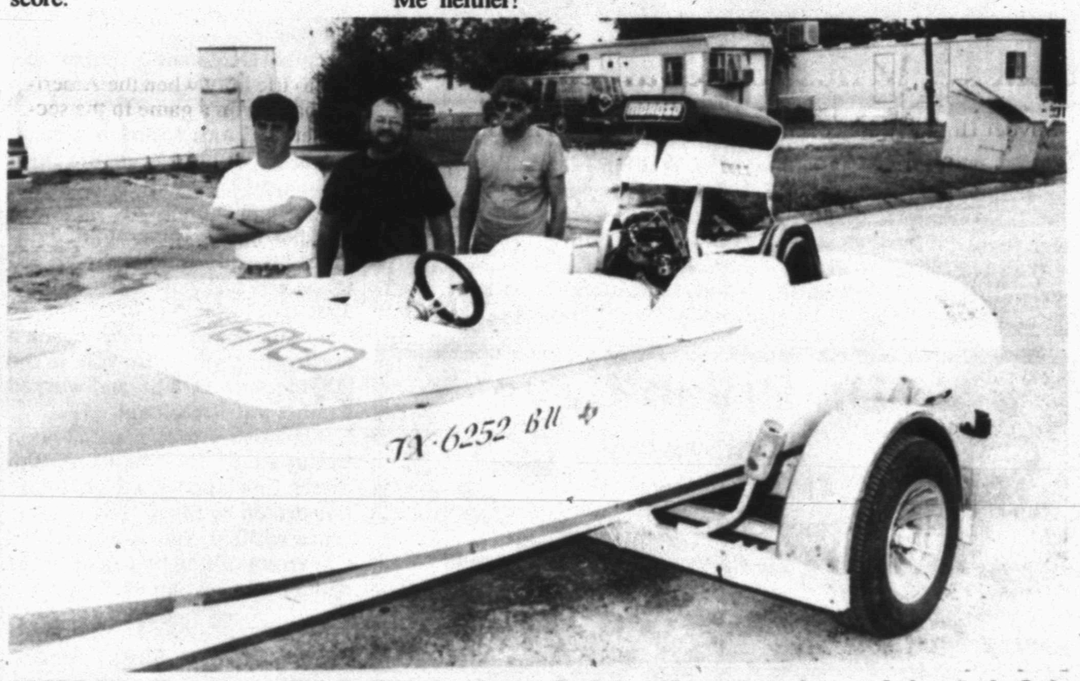
You didn't think John McEnroe was going to leave quietly did you?

At Big Mac's final French Open appearance of his career, McEnroe showed his hind-quarters when he began berating an official, his opponent and members of the crowd at Roland Garros, using overly colorful language too near an open TV microphone.

French Open officials fined the 39-year-old McEnroe $7,500 for "verbal abuse" saying that the usual fine was $5,000 but they were tagging Mac with the extra $2,500 penalty because he showed "a pattern of violations" in this area.

How would you like to have to come home at the end of a tough day at work and tell your wife you were docked $7,500 because you just had to cuss out your co-workers?

Me neither!



SPEED BOAT — Owner Charles Bethel and mechanics J.D. "Goober" Lloyd and Wendell Pinkerton, all of Snyder, stand proudly behind their propane powered drag boat, thought to be the only one of its kind. The boat, the object of an Austin TV feature, was shown at the recent Alternate Fuel Symposium at the state capitol. Bethel and his crew took second place in the Lake Class at the Ft. Worth Marina Creek Boat Drags, also, hitting a top speed of 75 mph. The local trio figures to run the rest of the Southern Drag Boat Association season including races in Waco July 4 and in Big Spring August 1-2. (SDN Staff Photo)

Bulls claim conference title

RICHFIELD Ohio (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers thought they had Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls right where they wanted them.

Instead, the Bulls and Jordan, with an assist from Scottie Pippen, are right where they want to be — in the NBA Finals with a chance to repeat as champions.

Jordan's three-point play with 37 seconds left broke a tie, and Pippen had 29 points, 12 rebounds, four steals and four blocked shots Friday night in Chicago's series-clinching 99-94 victory.

Refusing to let Jordan forget a punching incident four days earlier, the Richfield Coliseum crowd booed him every time he touched the ball. He missed 15 of 20 shots through three quarters, but he scored 16 of his 29 points in the fourth period on 5-for-7 shooting.

In the Finals, which start Wednesday night in Chicago, the Bulls face Portland, a 4-2 winner over Utah in the Western Conference finals.

Horace Grant scored 20 points for Chicago, which defeated the Cavaliers by 10 games for the regular-season Central Division title.

Larry Nance had 25 points and 16 rebounds for Cleveland, while Brad Daugherty, playing with a dislocated middle finger on his right hand, finished with 18 points and 13 rebounds.

Mark Price, who sprained his left ankle in Game 5, struggled from the field for most of the game, scoring 14 points on 5-for-18 shooting.

The Cavaliers scored the first 7 points of the fourth quarter for a 79-72 lead, but they couldn't hold on as Jordan finally got going.

His three-point play with 6:32 left closed Chicago to 83-81. Jordan's jumper at the 2:42 mark made it 90-89 before Pippen gave the Bulls a 1-point lead with another jumper.

After Jordan's two free throws put the Bulls ahead 93-90, Price tied it with a 3-pointer with 47 seconds left. Just 10 seconds later, Jordan was fouled driving for a basket, and when he converted the free throw, the Bulls were in control.

Pippen had two baskets, two free throws and a steal as the Bulls started the second half with an 8-2 spurt for a 53-47 lead.

Cleveland responded with a 17-6 run, with Price scoring 6 points and John Williams 5, to take a 64-59 advantage. Jordan, 3 of 14 from the field to that point, then scored all 7 of his third-quarter points in the last 3:48 as Chicago pulled into a 72-72 tie going into final 12 minutes.

The Cavaliers, trailing 30-23 early in the second quarter following consecutive jumpers by Jordan and Bill Cartwright, closed within a point six times before regaining the lead, 40-39, on a jumper by Nance with 3:15 left in the first half.

It was 45-45 at halftime although Jordan, who scored 37 points Wednesday night when Chicago took a 3-2 lead in the series, missed nine of 12 shots and scored 6 points.

Cleveland made eight of its first 11 shots, including three dunks and two layups.

Top seed Seles blitzes McNeil

PARIS (AP) — Monica Seles, still untested in pursuit of her third straight French Open title, raced through Lori McNeil 6-0, 6-1 in 45 minutes to advance to the round of 16.

The top-seeded Seles, who's lost just six games in three matches, won as easily on McNeil's serves as her own on Saturday, and the center-court crowd came to life only when the American finally won a game in the second set.

Seles skipped Wimbledon last year, but has won the past four Grand Slams she's entered, including the Australian Open in January. Due to the upset of ninth seed Anke Huber, the first seeded player she could meet is No. 5 Jennifer Capriati in the quarterfinals.

Third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini was to play France's Julie Halard Saturday. The No. 2 and No. 4 seeds, Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, won their third-round matches Friday in straight sets.

Stefan Edberg, the second seed, and No. 5 Michael Chang, who won rain-suspended second-round matches Friday, also were in action Saturday. Edberg was matched against Russian Andrei Cherkasov and Chang against Sweden's Nicklas Kulti, the first-round conqueror of John McEnroe.

Jim Courier, the defending champion and ranked No. 1 in the world, overpowered Argentina's Alberto Mancini, 6-4, 6-2, 6-0 on Friday to reach the round of 16 without losing a set. His fourth-round foe on Sunday will be Ukrainian Andrei Medvedev, at 17 the youngest player in the field, who has dropped only one set during his first three Grand Slam matches.

New Mexico residents travel to Texas for Lottery's opening

By The Associated Press

After 10 years of watching lottery proposals die in the New Mexico Legislature, state residents are looking for a little luck in neighboring Texas.

Texas on Friday became the 35th state with a lottery. Lotteries were banned by the Texas Constitution for 147 years, but voters overwhelmingly approved a lottery amendment in November.

Opening day attracted plenty of New Mexicans.

"Oh my, we've had so many people come in here, we haven't even gone to lunch yet," said Robert Jaquez, who manages La Feria market in Anthony, Texas, just across the border from New Mexico's Dona Ana County.

"I think we've had about 4,000 people and more than 35 percent of them seem to be from New Mexico. They want to know when there will be a lottery in New Mexico. I tell them I hope never, it would be bad for business," Jaquez said.

"We've had a couple of $50 winners from New Mexico," Jaquez said.

Co-ed aerobics classes slated

A co-ed aerobics class for both beginners and advanced students is scheduled this summer at Western Texas College. The class will meet Monday and Thursday from 6:30-8 p.m. with instructor Cathy Reed.

Individuals may register for the class on campus Monday, beginning in the admissions office located in the south wing of the Learning Resource Center.

The first workout will be Monday. The class is designed to condition the cardiovascular system and to strengthen and tone the upper and lower body.

Workouts will consist of an aerobic set, step-aerobics and floor work, followed by 30 minutes of circuit-weight training designed to tone and strengthen the body.

Individuals with questions should contact Mrs. Reed at 573-2516.

Fruit, vegetable delectables piquing tastebuds of Texans

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texans, dust off your palates because the salad days of summer are about to begin.

Starting in June, supermarket shelves will be stocked with fresh fruits and vegetables, replacing the tomatoes, peaches and other foods that have been missing much of their flavor since last summer.

"It's nice to have peaches in February, although they frequently smell, taste and have the texture of styrofoam," said Dr. Dick Edwards, marketing expert with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"This also can be said for any number of items that come to market during the winter."

Tomatoes will be on sale in June for about 39 cents per pound. Blueberries at 99 cents a pint will be available, he said. Watermelon will be marked down to 25 cents per pound.

The continuing parade of other fresh, domestically grown vegetables that started in May will feature sweet onions, artichokes, radishes and carrots.

Measles increase, as immunizations decrease

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A statewide increase in measles outbreaks in recent years indicates that immunization levels have dropped and could be a precursor of future problems, health officials say.

Any time immunization levels fall, there is a greater risk that "vaccine-preventable" diseases such as polio, diphtheria, and tetanus will surface, Oscar Garza, immunization program manager for the Texas Department of Health's Region 8, said Friday.

"We don't have any polio, we don't have any diphtheria, we don't have tetanus, but that doesn't mean we can't have them," Garza said. "The measles outbreak is probably telling us we better put our act together."

The problem in Texas, and nationwide, is that too many preschool-age children aren't being vaccinated. Garza estimated that only about 40 percent of children under age 2 in the state are properly immunized.

By contrast, 99 percent or more of the state's school age children have been vaccinated, said Wes Hodgson, epidemiology coordinator for the Health Department's immunization division.

"We need to stray from the concept that these are school shots," Hodgson said.

Garza noted that an outbreak of a highly contagious diseases such as measles, even in a preschool population, can easily spread into the community.

So far this year, South Texas has been hit with two large measles outbreaks. The most active outbreak, in Hidalgo County, has already accounted for 300 cases, 150 of which have been confirmed as measles, and one death.

"One too many, I might say," Garza said. "There's really no reason why anyone should die of measles nowadays."

Another outbreak in Corpus Christi and surrounding Nueces County prompted health officials to issues warnings urging potential visitors to get vaccinated before traveling to the area.

The outbreak has affected more than 270 people since January, but has since slowed to a trickle, said Annette Sultemeier, director of nursing for the Corpus Christi-Nueces County Public Health Department.

Health officials in both Hidalgo and Nueces counties have combatted the outbreaks with aggressive immunization efforts.

Hodgson noted, however, that there have been continuous outbreaks in Texas since 1988.

"It seems like every year we double the number of measles cases," added Garza.

Health officials are pushing for greater vaccination efforts statewide. Hodgson and Garza were among several health officials meeting in Harlingen on Friday to brainstorm a regional vaccination plan.

Princess Stephanie plans to marry

ROME (AP) — Princess Stephanie of Monaco was quoted as saying she's going to have a baby, and get married.

The princess was quoted in an interview scheduled to run in the next issue of Oggi, an Italian weekly magazine. The Italian news agency ANSA carried excerpts of the interview Friday.

Stephanie, 26, the youngest child of Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, the late American actress, was quoted as telling the magazine: "Yes, it's true, I'm going to have a baby at the end of November and the father is Daniel Ducruet."

Ducruet, a 27-year-old bodyguard for the royal family, told the magazine the couple met and fell in love four years ago.

"We'll certainly get married, but we're in no hurry," he said.

Monaco principality spokeswoman Jacqueline Berti said the rumors about Stephanie's pregnancy are "absolutely unfounded."

"She has been seen with him in the streets of Monaco, and they're not hiding," Berti said. "But as for the rest, they're just rumors."

Financial Focus

The Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) is one of the most common and frequently quoted indicators of the stock market's direction.

The DJIA, more often called "the Dow," first appeared on May 26, 1896. It was formulated by Charles H. Dow, co-founder of Dow Jones and Co. and first editor of the Wall Street Journal. It consisted of 11 companies whose stock traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Their size and number of outstanding shares represented a large enough base to meaningfully reflect the direction of the market as a whole.

Today, the Dow is an average of prices of 30 stocks traded on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow stocks are still selected by the editors of The Wall Street Journal. The average is calculated using a divisor that is adjusted regularly to reflect stock splits and dividends. By adjusting the divisor, the index remains comparable from one day to the next.

Critics of the Dow say that the popular stock market indicator is too small a sample of stocks to accurately reflect the overall movement of the market. Additionally, the Dow is price-weighted, which means that the higher-priced stocks make more of an impacy on the average than the low-priced stocks. A 10 percent change in a $100 stock ($10) causes a greater change than does the same variance in a $30 stock ($3). With the same percentage movement for both stocks, 10 percent, the $100 stock moves the entire Dow average 5 percent, while the $30 stock moves it only 1.8 percent.

Proponents of the Dow say it is a proven, long-range market barometer. They point to the amazingly similar movement of the Dow's 30 stocks compared to the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index.

As economic confitions change and corporations jockey for importance, the editors of The Wall Street Journal replace old Dow companies with new companies that are more representative of the nation's and the market's direction. In 1991, for example, Navistar, Primerica and USX were replaced by Disney, J.P. Morgan and Caterpillar.

Sometimes companies lose their place on the Dow only to regain importance later. For example, National Steel replaced Coca-Cola in 1935. In 1959, Aluminum Company of America raeplaced National Steel. Then in 1987, Coca-Cola made a comeback and bumped Owens-Illinois. International Business machines is another giant that lost its place in 1939 and retured in 1979.

The list goes on, with the companies always being selected on the basis of financial soundness and a proven track record. They must also have a large number of shares in the hands of individuals rather than institutional holdings.

The Dow was the first market brometer and is still the bellwether of the professionals. That's why when you ask, "How's the market doing?" you will probably get a Dow report.

Pop trio aren't daddy's girls

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — The members of the pop music trio Wilson Phillips aren't daddy's girls, they say in an interview with USA Weekend.

Sisters Wendy and Carnie Wilson say they're estranged from their father, the Beach Boys' Brian Wilson, and Chynna Phillips doesn't have much to say about her dad, John Phillips of the Mamas and the Papas.

Wendy Wilson said her father once came to a Wilson Phillips concert in Los Angeles, but didn't speak to her or her sister.

Ferraro's comback underway

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is back.

The former congresswoman faded from the public stage after her unsuccessful run for vice president in 1984. She made a soft-drink commercial and appeared destined to become a footnote in the political history books.

But her bid this year for a U.S. Senate seat from New York is picking up steam. On Thursday, the state Democratic convention designated her as its favorite in the September primary for the nomination to challenge Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

"It's an amazing story. You talk about the comeback kid," New York Democratic chairman John Marino said Friday.

Ferraro, the only woman ever to be a major party candidate for vice president, had crisscrossed the state for months, trying to turn name recognition into voter support. She found herself running for the Senate in a year that is turning out to be one of the best ever for women in politics.

Unknown women have upset veteran male politicians to win Senate nominations in Illinois and Pennsylvania, and female candidates are running strongly in polls taken before next week's California Senate primaries.

"It's really great for morale. I got phone calls all night," Ferraro said Friday after her convention win.

Her fight isn't over. While backing her, the convention also voted to set up a four-way primary for the right to challenge the scandal-plagued two-term Republican incumbent.

Ferraro will face state Attorney General Robert Abrams, New York City Comptroller Elizabeth Holtzman and civil rights protest leader Al Sharpton.

The title "convention designee" has been a political kiss of death for other Democrats. No non-incumbent Senate candidate has won the primary after being named the party designee since the current system was installed in 1968.

SIN

By Homer Anderson

Adam and Eve, the first man and woman, lived in the Garden of Eden in close communion with God. Our world today is so saturated with sin that it is hard for us to imagine what a glorious place Eden must have been. Without any sin, Adam and Eve were able to know God in a way that will not be duplicated for us this side of heaven.

Only sin, which is transgression of God's will (I John 3:4), can separate man from God (Isaiah 59:1-2). Adam and Eve chose to place sin between themselves and God, just as so many men and women choose to do in our day. God punished sin severely in the case of Adam and Eve (Genesis 3:15-17) and continues to do so now.

Man's history after leaving the Garden of Eden became steadily darker until "the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and that every intent of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually" (Gen. 6:5). God was grieved to His heart and said, "I will blot out man whom I have created from the face of the land..." (Gen. 6:6-7). "But Noah found favor in the eyes of the Lord" (Gen. 6:8). Noah's goodness alone did not save him. His strict obedience to God's instructions (I Peter 3:20-21) was, ultimately, Noah's salvation.

Mudslinging enters final days of Senate primary campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Days before the election, California's Senate races have turned to mudslinging. One television ad compares Democratic candidate Dianne Feinstein to Leona Helmsley, New York's imprisoned "hotel queen."

Another shows U.S. Rep. Barbara Boxer's picture bouncing around the TV screen to call attention to 143 bad checks written on her House bank account.

On the Republican side, Bruce Herschensohn and Tom Campbell call each other liars in commercials and in faxes sent by the dozens to reporters. Herschensohn's latest faxes feature a drawing of a chicken, meaning Campbell is "chickening out" of debates.

One opening was created by the retirement of Sen. Alan Cranston, Democrat. The other is for the two years remaining in Republican Pete Wilson's seat, vacated when he was elected governor.

The candidates in Tuesday's primary are campaigning mainly by TV commmercial, shunning rallies and baby-kissing in favor of fund-raisers to afford air time.

With a dozen major candidates in the contests for the two Senate seats, scores of House races and presidential campaigns in full swing, it's a challenge for candidates to cut through the TV clutter.

The answer for many is the attack ad.

The meanest come from Gray Davis, the state controller, who is challenging Feinstein for the Democratic nomination to Wilson's former seat.

In the polls, Davis was trailing badly behind Feinstein, a former San Francisco mayor.

Davis has an ad running side-by-side photos of Helmsley and Feinstein. They suggest a parallel between Helmsley, convicted of tax evasion, and Feinstein, the subject of a state lawsuit accusing her of improperly reporting $8 million in campaign donations from her failed 1990 gubernatorial bid.

"Helmsley blames her servants for the felony," the narrator says. "Feinstein blames her staff for the lawsuit. Helmsley's in jail. Feinstein wants to be a senator."

WTC offers office systems classes

Western Texas College's Office Systems Technology Department will be offering four classes this summer with registration for all four scheduled Monday on campus.

Three of the classes will be taught by Joann Snider, BUS 130 (keyboarding, typing I, BUS 137 (automated accounting); and WP 137 (micro-computer applications).

Students will learn the Bedford Accounting Program, which instructor Snider describes as a "popular, eveyday accounting program."

The class has two sections offered and will meet for six weeks. Class times are Monday through Thursday from 9:45-11:25 a.m. and from 1:15-2:55 p.m.

The WP 237 class will include mastery of Word Perfect and the Lotus 1-2-3 software programs. Students must have completed WP 137 or a similar beginning computer class before enrolling. The class will meet from 3-4:40 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

The WP 137 class taught by Mrs. Wesson will meet on a four-week time schedule each Tuesday and Thursday from June 2-July 2.

The class will emphasize the word processing software program Word Perfect. Also, class members will receive instruction in graphics, computer concepts and terminology.

Law office search part of probe

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A search by federal agents of an attorney's office was part of a yearlong investigation into allegations of corruption and influence peddling among some El Paso judges, newspapers reported Friday.

The search targeted financial records of criminal defense attorney Gary Hill.

The El Paso Times quoted an unnamed Justice Department official as saying investigators wanted to know whether Hill structured his cash transactions to avoid filing mandatory government forms, and if such transactions might have involved public officials.

"We're hoping (Hill's records) will be very significant in indicating if there's public corruption ... But we have no way of knowing that yet," the official told the Times.

The El Paso Herald-Post quoted a source it did not identify saying the investigation involved "an inordinate number of drug cases" in which Hill was the attorney being dismissed in court.

FBI spokesman Al Cruz would not confirm the investigation involved possible judicial corruption when called by The Associated Press Thursday. He was not in his office early Friday. Ron Ederer, U.S. Attorney for the Western District, also was not in his San Antonio office.

More than two dozen agents used a search warrant to comb through records Thursday in the law office of Hill & Ramos. The firm's partners are Gary Hill and Robert Ramos.

Additional search warrants and subpoenas will be executed and indictments are expected to follow, the El Paso Times reported.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

It was the toughest six months of his life. But it was also the best.

When it was over, 18-year-old Bill Vestal knew he wasn't the same person he had been last September when he embarked on a journey to Brazil.

He learned to be both resourceful and independent while living in a country much less advanced and affluent than his own and one in which he could not even speak the language at first.

"It opened my eyes to the problems that exist in the world," said Bill, whose stay in Brazil was arranged through the Rotary International Youth Exchange Program.

Bill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Vestal of Snyder.

One of the hardest things for him to get used to was the Third World conditions. All the houses were compact and walled in by solid blocks. Lots of people were crowded into small quarters. There wasn't any room for yards.

Clothes had to be washed by hand. The people were very poor and everything looked dirty. Cholera was a serious problem.

Other difficulties facing Bill were learning Portuguese, adjusting to living with two different families and fending for himself while his host families went about their daily routine.

Both families lived in Campo Grande, a city of 800,000 people. He stayed three months with each. The first family had three sons, ages 18, 16, and 12. The father was a plastic surgeon.

Bill said he liked having three brothers because he only has an older sister who is in college.

The second family had three girls, ages 18, 15, 14. The father was a lung and heart doctor and the mother wrote for a newspaper.

Each family spoke some English, which helped. After the first three months, Bill had learned enough Portuguese to get by.

He went to school for the first two months he was in Brazil, then school was let out for their summer vacation which is winter in the U.S.

He attended classes from 7 a.m. to noon five days a week. Classes were taught in Portuguese. Teachers, not students, changed classes.

"They have a more relaxed atmosphere to learning," Bill said. "You could either do it or not."

Sports were not allowed and no lunch was provided.

Since both families were relatively poor, they weren't able to do much traveling, Bill said. But he did get the chance to visit Sao Paulo with his second family.

He also took two trips with Rotary exchange students. One involved 130 students who visited northeastern Brazil. They spent a month traveling the coast and visiting the beaches along the way.

Another trip for the students included Pantanal, similar in features to the Florida Everglades.

Both trips were arranged through the Rotary exchange program.

While living with the families, Bill learned how to occupy his time when they were gone. He didn't have any transportation so he exercised, read books and wrote.

When he did get to go out, he found shopping to be quite an experience since the rate of inflation was 30 percent. The price was never marked on anything because prices changed daily. They always had to ask and the clerk would look it up. When he left, Bill said the rate of exchange was $2,000 in their money to equal $1 in American money.

The staple of his diet were beans and rice, served every day. In general, the food was plain, neither hot nor spicy. He also found that the Brazilians don't have as much variety in food as he is used to. Since he's a "good eater" he didn't have any problems adjusting.

Bill liked both families and found them to be quite friendly. The people there were also "very relaxed and laid back. Time had no meaning for them," he said.

Bill arrived just as their winter was ending. Summer temperatures ranged from 85-90 degrees usually, but the humidity was very high.

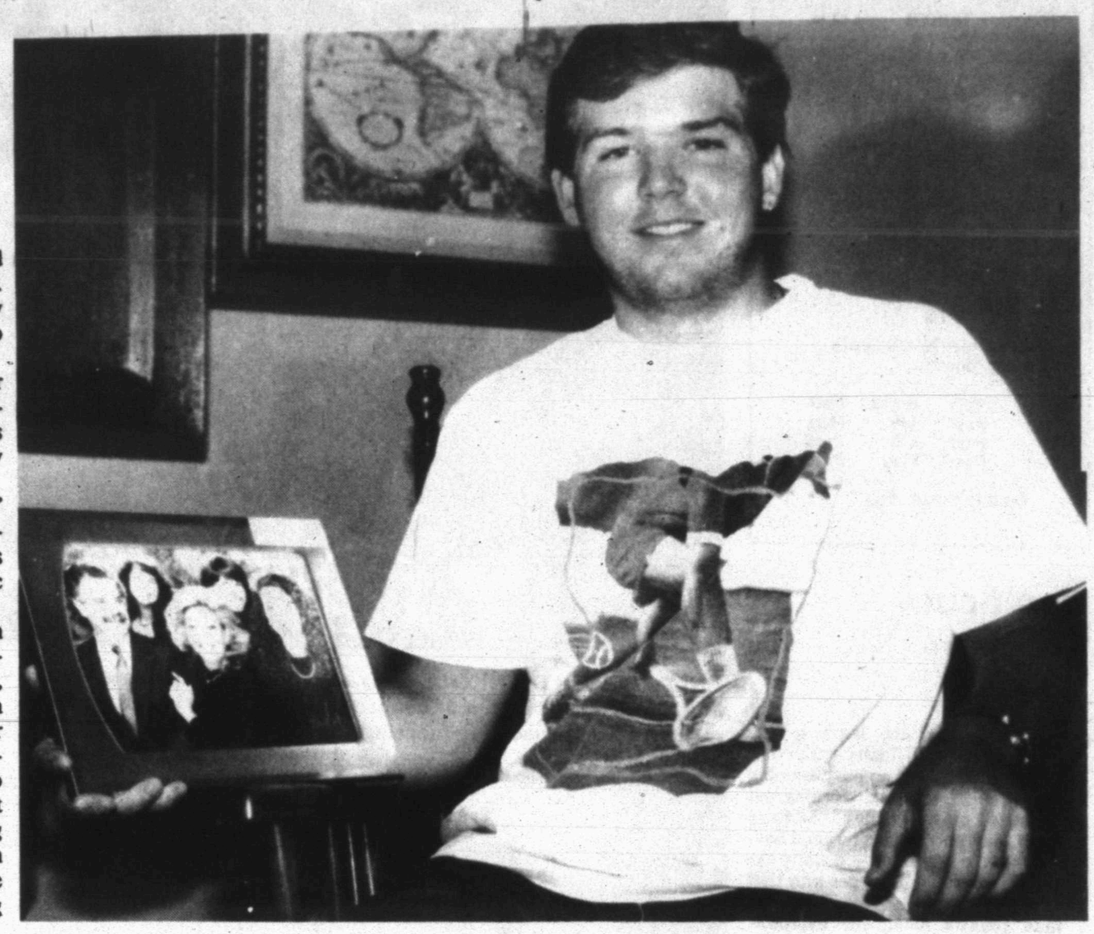
In spite of Brazil's "rough life," Bill said he might "want to vacation there some day." But he hopes they can solve their economic problems first.

Bill had never been a foreign exchange student before. He decided to apply for several reasons, including the fact that his dad is a Rotarian. He had also met other foreign exchange students, including some from Brazil. And two years ago, he and Marcus Best spent a month in Germany visiting someone who had been a foreign exchange student in Snyder. He was also ready to do something different.

Bill finished high school requirements early by taking correspondence courses through Texas Tech University in Lubbock. At Snyder High School, he was active in tennis, basketball, choir and UIL.

He is considering studying general business, possibly emphasizing international, and will attend either Tech or Texas A&M.

He is currently working for Reef Chemical. He and his family moved to Snyder in 1976.



BACK FROM BRAZIL — Bill Vestal recently returned from six months in Brazil where he lived with two different families (three months each) as part of the Rotary International Youth Exchange Program. He is holding a picture of the second family he stayed with which had three girls. The first family had three sons. (SDN Staff Photo)

Don't cut the wires

By Phillip Alder

Declarers who are learning the game often have difficulty with communication. They are so busy keeping track of their tricks and working out their line of play that they take their eyes off their entries. It's no good having winners in one hand — usually the dummy — if you cannot get into that hand to cash them.

Take today's hand, for example. How would you play in six hearts? West leads the diamond queen. Would it make a difference if West had led the spade two, East playing either the nine on dummy's six or the queen on dummy's jack?

South had been having a losing day and saw a chance to break even, so he bid aggressively with his jump to six hearts.

Against a spade lead, you need to find the clubs breaking 3-3. The basic plan is to cash the heart ace and king, play off dummy's top clubs, ruff a club high, draw trumps ending in the dummy, and discard your spade losers on dummy's club winners. If the clubs break 3-3, you will make seven. If they break 4-2, you will go one down.

Against a diamond lead, though, you have greater flexibility. You should play to make the contract whether the clubs break 3-3 or 4-2. The right play is to cash one top heart and then to duck a club completely.

Win whatever comes back, play a club to the king, ruff a club high and draw two more rounds of trumps ending in the dummy. Finally, cash dummy's club ace and the last club, discarding your spade losers.

You trade a club trick for the increased likelihood of making your contract.

Nathan Hale was hanged in New York by the British for being a spy on Sept. 22, 1776. Under Gen. George Washington's direct orders, Hale had disguised himself as a Dutch schoolmaster and made his way into New York, only to be captured by the British. His last words before dying have become immortal: "I only regret I have but one life to lose for my country."

Polly's Pointers

by Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I've heard you can microwave milk to make it keep longer. How long and at what power level? — MARIE

DEAR MARIE — The storage life of refrigerated milk can be extended by approximately 10 days by heating the milk in the microwave to a temperature of 160 degrees. This temperature kills many of the micro-organisms that cause milk to spoil. To do this, place the milk in its carton in the microwave and heat on HIGH until it reaches 160 degrees. A temperature probe or a microwave-safe thermometer is useful for determining the temperature, or you can remove the milk and test it with an instant-read thermometer. One cup of milk takes about 1½ to 2 minutes, depending on your microwave oven's power capacity. After heating to the correct temperature, chill the milk immediately by returning it to the refrigerator.

If your milk carton doesn't fit in your microwave, you may heat the milk in another microwave-safe container. However, do not return the milk to the original carton for storage, since the walls of the carton (which has not been heated) may retain bacteria that will hasten the spoiling of the milk, unless the carton has been thoroughly washed to remove all traces of untreated milk. — POLLY

RECIPE OF THE WEEK — Try this luscious but low-cal stand-in for expensive Boursin cheese as a spread for crackers at your next summer gathering. It uses yogurt cheese (drained yogurt) as a tangy base for a variety of herbs.

Blend together 1 cup yogurt cheese with 2 small cloves minced garlic, 1 tablespoon minced onion, ½ teaspoon dried basil, ½ teaspoon dried oregano, ¼ teaspoon dried tarragon and ⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper. Refrigerate two to three hours before serving to allow flavors to blend. Serve as a spread for crackers or as a dip for vegetables and chips.

My newsletter, "Cooking with Yogurt," features directions for making your own yogurt, yogurt cheese and a variety of delicious main dishes, salads, breads and even desserts with delicious, creamy yogurt.

DEAR POLLY — I'm looking for microwave candy recipes. Do you have any good ones? — JULIA

DEAR JULIA — Here are two to get you started. The first recipe is for almond crunch. For this one, you may want to invest in a microwave-safe candy thermometer, available in many houseware departments. The second recipe is for a dark chocolate fudge, which needs no thermometer and is a really quick and easy way to stir up a batch of fudge when you just have to have something chocolate!

• Almond Crunch: In a 3-quart microwave-safe casserole, combine 1 cup sugar with 3 tablespoons warm water and stir well. Add ½ cup unsalted butter. Microwave on HIGH for 3 to 4 minutes or until the mixture almost reaches the hard-crack stage (290 degrees). When the bubbling stops, stir in ½ cup chopped, roasted almonds. Pour into a lightly-buttered, foil-lined 8-inch-square pan. Let cool, then break into pieces. This recipe is from "Mastering Microwave Cooking," Cone and Snyder, Simon and Schuster, 1986.

• Microwave Dark Chocolate Fudge: In a 1-quart glass microwave-safe measure with a handle, combine 3 cups semisweet chocolate chips with a 14-ounce can of sweetened condensed milk and a dash of salt. Microwave on HIGH 3 minutes or until the chocolate chips melt, stirring after 1½ minutes. Stir in 1½ teaspoons vanilla extract and, if you like your fudge with nuts, ½ to 1 cup chopped nuts. Spread the mixture evenly into a waxed-paper-lined 8-inch square pan. Chill 2 hours or until firm. Turn the fudge out of the pan onto a cutting board and peel off the paper. Cut into squares. Store loosely-covered at room temperature. This recipes is from Borden, makers of Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk.

Happy microwaving! — POLLY

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

Readers Send Abby an Earful About Man Who Got an Eyeful

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the contractor who was working on the roof of a house, gazing at the nude housewife through the skylight, and was injured when he fell through the skylight:

I can't believe you said to the housewife, "Fortunately, you are insured." Abby, if the contractor was up there on a job, he should get his medical treatment through his workers' compensation, his bonding company should pay for the damage to the skylight, and he should throw in a few bucks for the entertainment.

Mrs. Housewife owes that guy absolutely nothing.

RETIRED CONTRACTING OFFICER

DEAR RETIRED: You are absolutely right — the housewife owes the guy absolutely nothing — but I owe my readers an apology for that thoughtless answer. And, lest you think you are the only reader to complain, read on:

DEAR ABBY: If this fellow fell through the skylight because he was doing something he shouldn't be doing, why should the people who own the house be responsible?

You said, "Fortunately, you are insured." Abby, please remember that when an insurance company pays, the rates go up for all of us. This is just the kind of incident that raises our rates needlessly.

This man's medical expenses should be covered by his own medical insurance. The house owners and their insurance company shouldn't owe a thing!

JAY PASACHOFF, WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: You really pushed my button. A workman came to repair a chimney, and while ogling a nude housewife, he leaned on the skylight to get a better look and crashed to the floor below.

Abby, you told the housewife, "Fortunately, you are insured. The injured man has every right to be compensated for his injuries." Well, this Peeping Tom does not have a moral right, and perhaps not even a legal right to be compensated for his injuries if he is guilty of voyeurism. Where is the justice in the offender being compensated for something he had no right to do?

Criminals have sued victims before when they were injured while committing a crime. Regardless of what the legal experts say, I see no justice in such cases.

You said the man can't be blamed for looking — implying he had no choice. That defense has been used many times: If it isn't the "Twinkies" defense, it's blaming "society," or having been born in a family without caring parents or a decent home.

I think it's high time people started to take responsibility for their own actions.

HUGH KILPATRICK, GLENDALE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I was under the impression that voyeurism is a crime, but the preoccupation with sex and nudity is just another symptom of our sick society.

From having enjoyed vacationing at nude beaches, I am convinced that if everyone in the country were nude for an hour, after 10 minutes people would wonder what the big deal was.

What bothered me most about your answer, Abby, was your giving the nod and wink to the "boys will be boys" attitude that is prevalent in American culture.

DEBORAH CUPPER, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't give another person permission to break the law and escape punishment.

I recall reading about a taxi driver who saw a man running from a place he had just robbed. The police were chasing him, so this taxi driver joined the chase and followed the thief into an alley — then with his car, he pinned him against a building so the police could nail him.

Well, the thief had both his legs broken, so he sued the taxi driver for an outrageous amount of money — and collected.

AL IN TUSCALOOSA, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I are twins. We are both engaged to wonderful, loving men. Several months ago, we decided to have a "double wedding" in June.

Our great-grandmother kept the wedding dress that she wore in her wedding. Since then, every woman in the family has worn it in her wedding. My twin and I would love to keep this family tradition alive, but we can't decide who should wear it.

We are all wondering what to do, and have decided that whatever you say goes. Please give this matter a lot of thought, and print it soon.

PONDERING IN PA.

DEAR PONDERING: One twin could wear your great-grandmother's gown for the wedding ceremony, and the other twin could wear it for the reception. Flip a coin to decide who goes first — and good luck.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I married a man (I'll call him Bill) whose first marriage ended in divorce after 10 years of marriage. Bill and his wife had no children.

Bill and I have been married for four years, and recently I had a baby girl. Shortly after her birth, Bill's first wife started calling our home. On one occasion, she asked Bill if he would go with her to have a dog they had bought together put to sleep. When Bill said "no," she became angry and hung up on him.

Part of me feels sorry for her, since she is now 40 years old with no children and no one to share her life with. But another part of me tells me that all ties between her and my husband should be severed.

Our problem: We both have asked her to stop calling this house, yet she continues to call. How can we get these irritating calls to cease?

BEWILDERED IN OHIO

DEAR BEWILDERED: Have you thought of getting an unlisted telephone number? If you haven't — you should.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good person. He doesn't beat on me, or run around as far as I know. But we just don't get along anymore. We have little spats about everything. He says he still loves me — and I love him — but we are terrible to each other!

We have two children, and it is affecting them, too. I've even considered leaving him before we really get to hate each other, but he would never let me take the kids, and I don't want to lose them. Please help me.

END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: You and your husband need to find out what went wrong in your marriage. Please get into counseling — both of you. You need to verbalize your feelings openly and honestly with a clergyperson, or a licensed marriage counselor. Don't wait.

Satellite rescuers say they never felt in danger in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The astronauts who captured an errant satellite on the third spacewalk of their mission said today they never felt in danger even when the spacecraft was spinning just inches from their faces.

"I felt very comfortable the whole time," said Pierre Thuot, one of three Endeavour crewmen who grabbed the satellite with their gloved hands two weeks ago.

Thuot, the lead rescuer, said he knew he could fend the satellite off if necessary. He found the satellite surprisingly sensitive to touch — it wobbled away each time he tried to snare it with a bar during the first two spacewalks.

At a news conference two weeks after their return to Earth, Thuot said that the expert flying of shuttle commander Daniel Brandenstein also put his mind at ease. Thuot was propped on the end of the Endeavour crane during the first two spacewalks, sandwiched between the shuttle and satellite.

"I had no concerns, that if it ever got near us, he'd just put a few pulses in and back it (shuttle) away," Thuot said.

Brandenstein said his main concern was making sure the satellite, once tumbling, would not crash into the ship or the spacewalkers.

Thuot, Richard Hieb and Thomas Akers, in the world's first three-man spacewalk, captured the Intelsat-6 communications satellite on May 13. NASA opted for the risky, last-ditch approach after Thuot failed repeatedly to attach a 15-foot bar to the bottom of the satellite.

The satellite was lowered onto a rocket motor in the cargo bay that was fired, sending the craft into high orbit. The satellite had been stuck at a woefully low altitude for more than two years because of a rocket malfunction.

The satellite antennas and solar drum were deployed successfully last weekend, and engineers for the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization, or Intelsat, began six weeks of testing.

The Endeavour astronauts said their ground training was comprehensive but still did not prepare them for working in weightlessness.

"It was something that I'm not sure we could really train for very well, particularly with hindsight," Thuot said.

An explosion of biting flies in Tanzania's Ngorongoro Crater 30 years ago temporarily reduced the lion population from at least 70 to about 10, notes National Geographic.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm beside myself trying to do what is right. My cholesterol level was 489 about two years ago. Questran and Lopid were taken to no avail. Mevacor brought it down to 285 for a year, so the doctor doubled my dose of Mevacor and Questran. My last results reveal a level of 400. Can stress be doing this? I've resorted to vitamin C and niacin and a weight-watcher's diet, but I'm very discouraged.

DEAR READER: You seem to have a serious problem with excess cholesterol. You probably inherited this tendency. Unfortunately, you have not responded satisfactorily to the standard treatment for this disorder: diet and medication.

Medical authorities recommend serum cholesterol levels of 200 milligrams per deciliter or lower, depending on age. Yours is clearly too high. This places you at risk for heart disease and stroke.

Fortunately, there are many drugs to lower cholesterol. Some of these are brand new. Ask your doctor about this. If she is uncertain how to proceed or has run out of options, request a referral to a metabolic laboratory in a teaching hospital. The nature of your elevated cholesterol needs to be identified and categorized. Then metabolic specialists can prescribe appropriate therapy.

To give you further information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Cholesterol." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss leukemia.

DEAR READER: Leukemia is cancer of the blood or, more specifically, malignancy of the blood-forming organs.

Leukemias are classified as acute or chronic (highly malignant cells or more mature forms), and are divided into categories, depending on which blood cells are affected (lymphocytes or myelocytes).

Most leukemias cause fatigue, swollen glands, anemia, bleeding tendencies, headache and irritability; fever and body aches are often present.

The diagnosis is confirmed by an abnormal blood count and a bone marrow examination showing the typical malignant cells. The leukemia is thereby classified, using these and other tests.

Leukemia is universally treated with chemotherapy. Sometimes radiation is also used. The prognosis depends on the cell type and the stage of the disease. Some leukemias, notably the childhood varieties, have very favorable outcomes. Other types, especially in older debilitated patients, have a more grim prognosis. Many leukemias, if not treated, will kill in weeks.

Perhaps in no other field of medicine have there been more remarkable advances than in the treatment of leukemia. Therefore, while the diagnosis is serious, much can be done to treat — even to cure — leukemic conditions that were, 10 or 20 years ago, hopeless. Patients with leukemia should, in my opinion, be treated by hematologists or oncologists.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In a recent column, you commented on a possible relation between aluminum and Alzheimer's disease. As Director of Communications for the Aluminum Association, I pulled together all of the information available to us. A careful review of the information makes it very clear that there is no evidence suggesting aluminum as a causative factor in Alzheimer's. In fact, the overwhelming body of medical evidence concludes it is NOT a causative factor in Alzheimer's. We are concerned that public speculation over what is — or is not — a cause of Alzheimer's simply confuses people and can lead to incorrect and unproductive actions.

DEAR READER: While I appreciate your position, you may not be totally objective in your views because you are employed by a special-interest group whose responsibility is to encourage the sale of aluminum products. Perhaps you are unaware of a recent medical article that indicts aluminum as a risk factor in Alzheimer's (McLachlan, D.R., Kruck, T.P., Lukiw, W.J., "Would decreased aluminum ingestion reduce the incidence of Alzheimer's disease?" Canadian Medical Association Journal, Oct. 1, 1991).

In this excellent review article, the authors cite studies showing that: 1.) prolonged exposure to trace amounts of aluminum seem to cause cognitive defects (problems in rational thought), 2.) aluminum concentrates in at least four sites in brain tissue of Alzheimer's patients, 3.) there is an association between Alzheimer's disease and aluminum exposure in drinking water and anti-perspirants, and 4.) Alzheimer's disease can be treated with a metal bonding agent (desferrioxamine).

Also, the authors list 70 unfavorable effects of aluminum on living tissue, potentially causing a wide variety of unhealthful consequences. Moreover, the Canadian doctors review aluminum's toxic effects on the brain, especially disruption of a protein known as tau. Evidence suggests that the characteristic brain lesions of Alzheimer's ("neurofibrillary tangles") are composed of abnormal polymers of tau, induced by aluminum deposits.

Although aluminum is a common mineral, it has no recognized biological function. It is absorbed into the body through the skin, lungs and intestinal tract. (Interestingly, the more fluoride in the diet, the less aluminum is absorbed.) Once in the body, aluminum is transported in the blood and deposited in the brain. "Dialysis dementia" is a recognized complication of the artificial kidney: Excess aluminum in the bloodstream (from dialysis) causes confusion and disorientation.

Considerable concern has been expressed about the amount of aluminum in immunization vaccines for diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus and hepatitis. Aluminum is also present in allergenic extracts used to desensitize allergic persons. The effects of this aluminum are unknown, although much of the world's population has been injected with one or more of these products.

Aluminum is present in many infant formulas.

Most important, increased amounts of aluminum in drinking water are believed to be associated with Alzheimer's disease. Aluminum is also present in toothpaste and dental amalgam. Aluminum in antacids may not be significantly absorbed into the body, and thus do not constitute a health risk.

The authors recommend listing of aluminum on all packages of substances for human contact and ingestion; the aluminum level in municipal water supplies should be closely regulated; the public should be alerted to the potential hazards of this mineral.

Many concerned citizens have stopped cooking with aluminum utensils or foil. Some ceased using antiperspirants.

The danger of aluminum appears to be real and, as yet, incompletely understood.

I think you've got your work cut out for you. Did you ever think of changing jobs to, say, the stainless steel institute?

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I tell you, there's nothin' sweeter'n a country rain. Because, the thing is, you can waller around all day long and not feel guilty. Everybody knows you cain't get nothin' done in the rain. And if you're cowboy-bent instead of farmer-bent, you can never have too much rain. It's all welcome, and you can just see that grass growing before the sun even comes out.

The best kind of country rain is that kind that's not destructive. No hail or tornadoes, just a smooth, long, restful, endless stream of moisture coming down from the heavens to help keep the cattle fat.

Best thing I love to do in one of these rains is spend the day in bed. I like to read, pausing every now and then to savor the gentle rooftop thrumming. Or just listen, sometimes, and think. Maybe nap a little and not watch the clock at all. And if we have the unbelievable good fortune of this rain occurring on say, Memorial Day, when my husband gets to stay home from work but the kids have to go to school, well, I like to persuade him to join me. (Trust me; it's not hard at all.)

Sunday, I discovered another truly lovely way to spend a rainy day. I'd started a new book, Robert R. McCammon's "Boy's Life." Now, I could tell in the first few pages that this was going to be a very special book, a book that needed sharing. The narrator, 40 now and looking back on his small-town, Southern upbringing, began by saying, "I wanted to set my memories down on paper, where I can hold them. You know, I do believe in magic...See, this is my opinion: we all started out knowing magic. We are born able to sing to birds and read the clouds and see our destiny in grains of sand. But then we get the magic educated right out of our souls. We get it churched out, spanked out, washed out, and combed out..."

And from there, the storyteller spins a tale of magic and wonder, of mystery and danger, of town eccentrics and town haters, of love in families and bonds between friends, and of an innocence that faded from our national consciousness sometime in the turbulent, violent sixties. Everything that happens is seen from the point of view of the narrator in his twelfth summer, when the whole world is a golden globe to be held in our hands.

I had to seek out a kindred soul for this story. My fourteen-year-old son, the logical candidate, was celebrating the rain in his own fashion, by donning his dad's huge rain poncho and aged boonie cap, and setting out for explorations and adventures in a familiar landscape made new by waterfalls and mists.

But my daughter, just entering her twelfth summer, was eager to join me on my journey. She cuddled up next to me in my big warm waterbed, and for the first time since she was little, I opened a book and read aloud to her.

And boy, did we both get hooked.

We laughed and wondered and looked forward to each new chapter. Even after the rains quit, she'd come to me and ask if, instead of watching TV, we might read some more. Occasionally I'll stop and comment, as in the chapter, "Death of a Bike." In an aside to the reader, the narrator asked, "Don't you ever wish — even for just a fleeting moment — that you could have your first bike again? You remember what it looked like. You remember. Did you name it Trigger, or Buttermilk, or Flicka, or Lightning? Who took that bike away and where did it go? Don't you ever ever wonder? (I had to tell her that my bike was blue, was named Black Beauty, and was never ever a bike anyway, but a beautiful black horse that could run like the wind.)

When we finish savoring "Boy's Life," my daughter would like me to read her another book. I told her Ray Bradbury's "Dandelion Wine" might be just the ticket for summer. And I knew, even as we discussed it, that we were creating our own magic.

"These memories of who I was and where I lived are important to me," writes McCammon, "They make up a large part of who I'm going to be when my journey winds down. I need the memory of magic if I am ever going to conjure magic again."

Sometimes I think, as the ceiling fan whirls the air above my bed, that I see just a flicker of angel dust floating in the breeze, just the barest twinkle of glitter and fire. And together, my daughter and I and our books — we set the doves free.

U.S. requests simpler directions on birth control pills

•"WASHINGTON — To reduce the number of unintentional pregnancies, the federal government is asking that the directions for taking birth control pills be simplified and standardized. About 250,000 of the 10.7 million women who take oral contraceptives in the United States become pregnant each year, mostly because they fail to take their daily dose or use backup precautions when initiating treatment, according to the National Academy of Sciences. New instructions will be written at a sixth-grade reading level, rather than the second-year college level used by some companies."

Amazing, isn't it? You'd think it would be simple enough to tell someone to stick one pill a day in their mouth and swallow it.

But we have to be exact and proper, something like, "Ingest a solitary tablet, orally, during each 24-hour period."

Easily misunderstood. Does solitary mean by itself? No water? And who has 24 hour periods anyway? Besides, some people aren't sure where their "oral" is.

In case you haven't noticed, the English language is changing at a rapid pace. We interface now. There is a lot of networking going on.

We, here, at the newspaper are guilty of using terms such as budget "reductions." Cuts is what they are.

But this column isn't really about ridiculous words or instructions. It's more about society. Did you see the article about the newest job market in Japan? It's a rent-a-family service.

Busy Japanese turn to rent-a-families for love

No kidding. If you are too busy or lazy to visit your relatives, you just hire a professional actor to do it for you. The going rate is $1,150 for three hours.

According to the article, the stand-ins are usually rented by or for couples in their 60s and 70s who typically just want to hold a baby or offer advice to a younger couple. In a few cases, the story says, young couples have rented parents.

"Our purpose is to fill a hole in the heart," said Satsuki Oiwa, president of the Japan Efficiency Headquarters. "After all, (elderly clients) are lonely people who need communication. We are helping them experience their dreams."

You have to wonder if their dreams really include someone pretending to be a son or daughter. These are pretty shallow dreams from very depressed people, I think.

More importantly, it's a pretty sorry example of how some people show their respect, or lack of it, for family members.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The Snyder Palette Club will not have their annual art show during the July 4th celebration this year.

For the past two years the Chamber of Commerce has paid the rent and cleanup fee on the Towle Park Barn, but decided not to pay this expense of $85.00 for us this year.

The art show was started in 1961 as a community service. People who would not otherwise have access to art shows have viewed a wide variety of works free of charge. Our entry fees barely cover the cost of ribbons and the judges fee.

We feel we cannot raise the entry fee nor would we charge an admission fee. We promote art with our labor on the July 4th and the Scurry County Fair shows, and by giving a scholarship to an area art student at WTC each semester.

If the public misses the show, we hope they will let the chamber of commerce know.

Our Language

By Jeffrey McQuain

A small stream or brook is a RUNNEL. Don't dig yourself into a hole trying to spell this noun: RUNNEL ends like TUNNEL.

OUR LANGUAGE AD-VICE: A new form of physical therapy led to the winner of this week's Ad-Vice Award. The therapy begins with "a well-cushioned bed, upon which the client lays." The hyphen after WELL is allowed, because the compound adjective WELL-CUSHIONED comes before the noun BED that is being described. Upon that bed, however, no client "lays," unless the client is a hen that produces an egg; the proper verb is LIE, not LAY. Use "a well-cushioned bed, upon which the client lies," unless you want your English to lay an egg.

Stephen King sues because film is not like his story

NEW YORK (AP) — Horror writer Stephen King is suing the producers and distributors of "The Lawnmower Man," saying the film had virtually nothing to do with his short story of the same name.

Aside from the title and one brief scene, the film "bore no meaningful resemblance" to the story he published in the 1970s, King said in court papers.

King's story tells of a homeowner who is killed by the man he hires to cut his lawn. The movie centers on a dimwitted gardener whose intelligence level was raised through computer experiments.

The lawsuit seeks all profits "attributable to the use of Stephen King's name" in the movie, which has grossed more than $30 million.

King also wants the court to block the use of his name in connection with the movie and a planned comic book, and to force Allied Vision Ltd., a British company which bought the movie rights and produced the film, to publish a correction to its advertising.

Allied's Los Angeles lawyer, Roger Sherman, wasn't available for comment, his secretary said.

State, county officials reach agreement

HOUSTON (AP) — State and county negotiators have agreed on a $65 million plan to reduce crowding in the Harris County jail system.

The agreement, reached Thursday, is to cost $31 million in initial construction expenses and an additional $34 million a year to operate. Negotiators said they will let a federal judge decide who should pay for the plan.

The measure includes the establishment in Houston of two 500-bed "intermediate sanction facilities," where minor offenders would be given drug abuse treatment and counseling and educational assistance before being released on probation.

It also calls for beefed up county probation services, an increase in the number of prisoners transferred by the state from Harris to other counties and the allocation to Harris County of 500 beds in private prisons the state recently agreed to purchase.

Don Lee, legislative coordinator for Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay, told the Houston Chronicle the plan would reduce the number of jail prisoners by 1,700 before the end of this year and by 3,268 within the next two years.

The proposal was drafted to meet today's deadline set by U.S. District Judge James DeAnda for new jail population projections and a plan for relieving crowding.

There are more than 11,500 inmates, including county and state prisoners, in Harris County's four jails.

A Bright Spot in our hometown...

L. D. "Buck" Logan

Youth baseball fans come and go. After their own kids finish the program, their interests often move on with their kids.

L.V. "Buck" Logan's interest in youth and youth baseball has stuck like a glove — for some 42 years. The name of Buck Logan is synonymous with Little League Baseball in Snyder.

He has been coach of the Little League Cardinals for 42 years, starting with the team the first year Little League was established here in 1950.

Logan has played such a vital part in the program and has had such an influence on the lives of so many Snyder youths, that the league named the Little League park in his honor in 1982.

Logan Field is a popular summer spot in Snyder. Despite a quadruple heart bypass ealier this year, Buck Logan is still a regular fixture each evening at Logan Field.

The first year he coached the Cardinals, David Thompson was a member of the team. David is one of the Cardinals' coaches this year and David's son, Trevor, is a member of the 1992 team.

Buck Logan, 84, has made a remarkable comeback since his surgery. He came home in less than a week, and vowed to be ready for the start of Little League season.

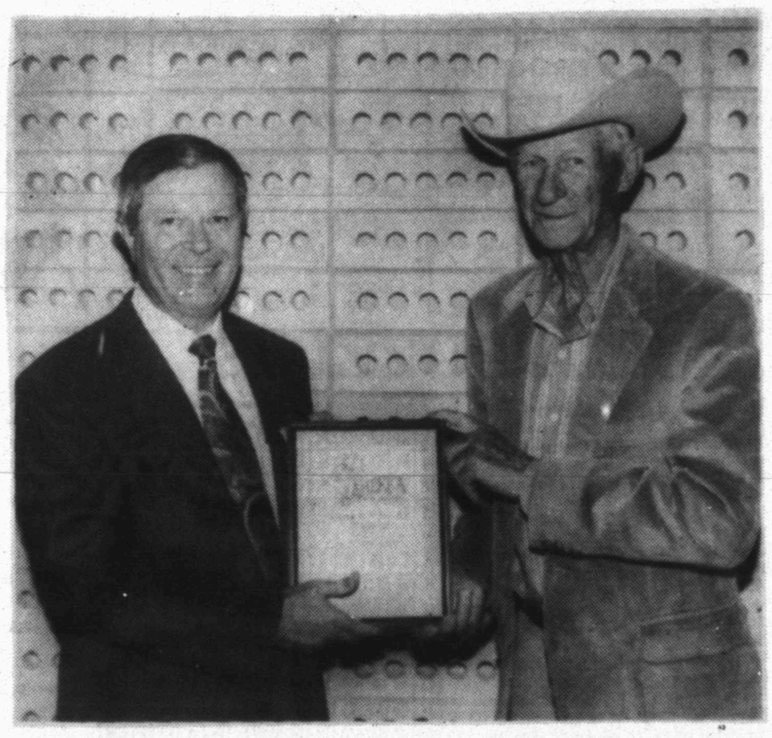
A friend and fellow Little League coach, George Page, said Logan Field was named in Buck's honor because of his dedication to the program, the players and the fans.

Last year, when the 8 and 9 year-old-field was being built, Buck Logan spent many hours working to prepare the field for the season.

A native of Scurry County, Buck Logan was born Aug. 27, 1910 to Andy and Nettie Logan. He married Mavis Webb of Snyder on Dec. 27, 1937. He has two sisters, Mrs. Babe Miller of Snyder and Mrs. Sis Smith of Abilene.

Buck and Mavis have two children, Jane Spikes of Dallas and Kay Willis of Snyder, and they have three grandchildren, Kristi Spikes of Hollywood, Calif., Drew Price of Snyder and Kell Spikes of Dallas.

A stock farmer east of Snyder, Buck Logan raises Charlois and Limosine cattle. He was the first rancher in this area to raise purebred Charlois cattle.



Buck Logan, one of the founders of the Snyder Little League program, is Snyder National Bank's recipient of the community service award for the month of June. Logan, 84, has coached the Cardinals for 42 years.

Super collider foes launch another attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the super collider say opponents have dusted off old, discredited arguments in their latest attempt to slay the giant atom smasher.

Fifty-two House members signed a letter this week urging the chairman of a House appropriations subcommittee to ax federal funding for the $8.25 billion project.

"Put simply, the costs of the SSC are too high and the benefits to Americans are too uncertain for the SSC to be a responsible recipient of America's limited research dollars," the lawmakers wrote Rep. Tom Bevill, chairman of the energy and water development subcommittee.

Rep. Joe Barton, in whose district the collider is being built, said Thursday that the opponents are "the same old people making the same old arguments."

Fifty-one of the 52 lawmakers voted against the collider in the last two years — "so it's not like it's new converts to the cause," the Ennis Republican said.

Collider construction is "on time and under budget" — and will continue to remain so if the project is funded at adequate levels, he said.

That's what is in doubt.

The Bush administration is seeking $650 million for the project next year. But even ardent supporters are saying they won't get anywhere near that amount.

"There is no way in hell, I am afraid, that we are going to get $600 million," said Randi Thompson, who leads collider lobbying efforts on Capitol Hill.

Word is Bevill's subcommittee, which is trying to hold '93 spending near this year's levels, may not fund much more than $430 million next year, Ms. Thompson said.

But Ms. Thompson said she expects the Senate to appropriate a larger amount — and the House to accept the higher figure.

Barton declined to discuss the amount he expects from Bevill's subcommittee, but said, "It is a difficult budgetary year and domestic discretionary spending is real tight."

Reduced funding would mean construction slowdowns, longer periods to develop and build the collider magnets — and ultimately higher costs, Ms. Thompson and Barton said.

"If they don't play their part, we can't play our part," she said.

Bevill was not available Thursday for comment. But his press secretary, Olivia Barton, said the Alabama Democrat has sent all 52 lawmakers a reply saying he will weigh their concerns.

Bevill's panel is due to debate the Energy Department's '93 funding in the coming days, but cannot do so until told how much money the subcommittee has to allocate.

The anti-collider coalition — spanning Democrats, Republicans and the House's lone independent — reiterates the standard arguments made against the project being built south of Dallas.

Among them:

—The super collider is draining too much funding from the nation's limited basic research budget and is taking needed resources from existing laboratories.

—American jobs are being lost to foreign sources as the collider's contractors farm contracts to Russia, Korea and China and offer jobs to foreign physicists.

—The super collider, due to be completed in late 1999, may go hundreds of millions of dollars over budget.

—In an era of ever-growing federal deficits, the nation cannot afford to build the world's largest scientific experiment.

Barton said opponents are being unfair in first insisting that the Energy Department obtain foreign participation and then knocking the collider's overseers for sending work overseas.

Guard colonel plans court fight over discharge

SEATTLE (AP) — A National Guard colonel who won the Bronze Star in Vietnam and is highly esteemed by her colleagues has become the latest casualty of Pentagon rules that bar homosexuals from the military.

Col. Margarethe ''Greta'' Cammermeyer was told Thursday she will be honorably discharged June 11 from the Guard and Army Reserve because she admitted in an interview for a security clearance that she is a lesbian.

Guard officials said they'd like to keep Cammermeyer, 50, the Guard's chief nurse. ''We value her skills and talent and professionalism,'' said Lt. Col. Joe Jimenez, a Guard spokesman.

Cammermeyer is one of the highest-ranking soldiers ever removed from the service because of homosexuality, according to Lt. Col. Doug Hart, a Pentagon spokesman.

Cammermeyer said she'll fight the discharge in court.

''This regulation is wrong,'' said Cammermeyer. ''I may not be able to serve my country in uniform, but maybe I can serve by standing up and being counted.''

Maj. Gen. Greg Barlow, commander of the Washington Guard, had recommended Cammermeyer remain in the Guard. He called her a ''good soldier'' and said he respected her integrity for refusing to lie about her sexual orientation.

Gov. Booth Gardner and members of the state's congressional delegation have written to Defense Secretary Richard Cheney to protest the dismissal.

Cammermeyer, who holds a doctorate in nursing, has served 26 years as an Army regular and reservist. She was married for 16 years and has four sons.

Her discharge will not affect her civilian job as a clinical nurse specialist in neurosciences at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center at American Lake, south of Tacoma.

Cammermeyer said she was asked for the first time about her sexual orientation in 1989, during a security clearance investigation. She told the truth.

House gives Senate bill Bush plans to veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate will take up a bill to lift the government's ban on using aborted fetuses in transplantation research, but President Bush already seems to have survived yet another challenge to his veto power.

The president hasn't vetoed the bill yet. So far, all he's done is nod his head when asked if that was what he planned to do.

After an intense lobbying effort on both sides, the House passed the bill Thursday on 260-148 vote, without the two-thirds' majority it needed to show that it could later override the president's veto.

Nevertheless, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., a chief sponsor of the bill, said an override vote would be held when the bill comes back from the White House.

''Obviously, it's going to be difficult to override a veto,'' Waxman said.

Proponents say fetal tissue research could lead to new treatments for Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease, diabetes and spinal cord injuries. The administration contends lifting the ban would result in more abortions.

''This is a clear-cut victory,'' said Rep. Christopher Smith, R-N.J., an outspoken abortion opponent.

Bush has vetoed 28 bills since becoming president, and Congress has sustained him every time. The president, leaving the White House on a political trip to Arizona and California, nodded yes when asked if he would veto the bill.

The House debate was an emotional stew, combining elements of the abortion argument with pleas to support promising research.

''We all have known a spouse, a staffer, a parent, a neighbor, a child, a colleague with some terrible, tragic disease that has snuffed out their life long before their time,'' said Rep. Fred Upton, R-Mich.

MEMBERS OF THE MONTH

As a new feature of our newsletter, we would like to highlight both individual and business Chamber members each month. For June, we have chosen the following very active and community minded members:

Dr. Robert Hargrove was in dentistry in Snyder for 42 years. He originally opened his business in February, 1950, and has been a Chamber member for many years. He is now retiring due to health reasons and increasingly stringent OSHA regulations. He has donated his dental equipment to Colonial Hill Baptist Church to be used in a mission clinic. He and his wife, Bobbie, have been married 46 years and have 4 children and 5 grandchildren. They are charter members of Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Dr. Hargrove has been very active in the Jaycees, has served on the Snyder School board, and has been a WTC board member for 21 years (an original board member). He and Bobbie now plan to play golf and travel.

Bill & Evelyn Davies have been the owner/managers of the Diamond M Ranch. A Chamber member for over 10 years, Bill has been a very active member of the Goldcoats and served as a director on the Chamber board. He has served on the Area Foundation and the Golden Terrace boards, and he and Evelyn are both members of the West Texas Museum Board. Evelyn, formerly Evelyn McLaughlin, has served on the Noah Project Advisory Committee locally, as well as the Noah Board of Directors in Abilene. She has also been a member of the McMurry College Board, and is a past president of the Altrurian Daughters. The Davies have made plans to move to Lubbock, and we will certainly miss them though we wish them the best.

SNYDER - ONE OF THE "TOP DESTINATIONS OF THE SOUTH"

The Chamber has an excellent opportunity to promote Snyder by having it included in the Texas version of a series of books entitled "Top Destinations of the South." This series, each version featuring a different southern state, is written by Caleb Pirtle III, former travel editor for Southern Living Magazine and author of more than twenty books. The books are published by Leisure Time Publishing.

This book about Texas will be coffee-table quality, will offer four color photography, and will be 224 pages in length. We believe it can be used to advertise Snyder in a positive manner. It is available for purchase, and it should prove to be a book anyone will be proud to display in their home or office. It would also make an excellent gift.

A pre-publication price of only $27.95 (for the Texas publication) is now being offered. This price includes postage and handling. We have order forms at the Chamber office, and we will be collecting checks and processing local orders for Leisure Time Publishing. Orders and checks must be in by June 30, and delivery will be later this summer.

AJRA caps have been ordered and we should have some available the first week in June!

AJRA Rodeo

There has been some confusion about the AJRA National Finals Rodeo. We ARE hosting the rodeo this year: our contract included the 1992 event. Much has already been accomplished and many sponsorships have been secured, however there are still some attractive sponsorships in various price ranges available. Please call or come by the Chamber to see what we have to offer that would best suit your needs. Let's make this a rodeo to remember!

July 4th Celebration

Plans are well underway for the annual July 4th Celebration and Fireworks Display. there are still spaces available in the park for food and activity booths, and we are offering spaces with no electricity at a reduced price. Come by the Chamber to reserve a spot for your organization. We feel we will have a large crowd this year since the Fourth falls on a Saturday, soa we have ordered more fireworks to make the display bigger and better than ever!
