MISD officials snub request for settlement

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

It would appear that MISD wants its day in court. The Midland Independent School District sent a resounding "No," to the U.S. Department of Justice's proposal for a settlement discussion.

A letter dated Aug. 10, by Javier Guzman, trial attorney for the Justice Department, invited the school district to "discuss the possibility of resolving the outstanding issues in this case.

"As we have discussed with each of you, such a meeting may be an important opportunity for the parties to explore ways in which desegregation and equity issues can be addressed in an amicable manner that could potentially lead to unitary status without a full adversarial hearing."

'We've told them no, because we have done what we are supposed to under the Constitution and we've done what the court has asked.'
— Rick Strange, MISD counsel

"We've told them that at this point in time that we do not think that would be appropriate," said MISD counsel Rick Strange, of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson.

Strange apprised the board of the invitation in executive session at Tuesday's meeting and by consensus of the board was directed to deny the invitation.

According to Strange, the Justice Department wants the district to drop the motion to dismiss and agree to greater and prolonged supervision with additional reporting.

"We've told them no, because we have done what we are supposed to under the Constitution and we've done what the court has asked," Strange said.

The district feels it can prove its compliance in court and is awaiting a hearing date.

"I believe we are entitled to dismissal of this lawsuit without the necessity of adopting any new plans or without agreeing to any additional federal supervision," Strange said.

That decision, although purported to be the majority decision of the board, isn't supported wholeheartedly. Trustee James Fuller has been vocal in his criticism of the district's success at complying with the Constitution and the Agreed Judgment.

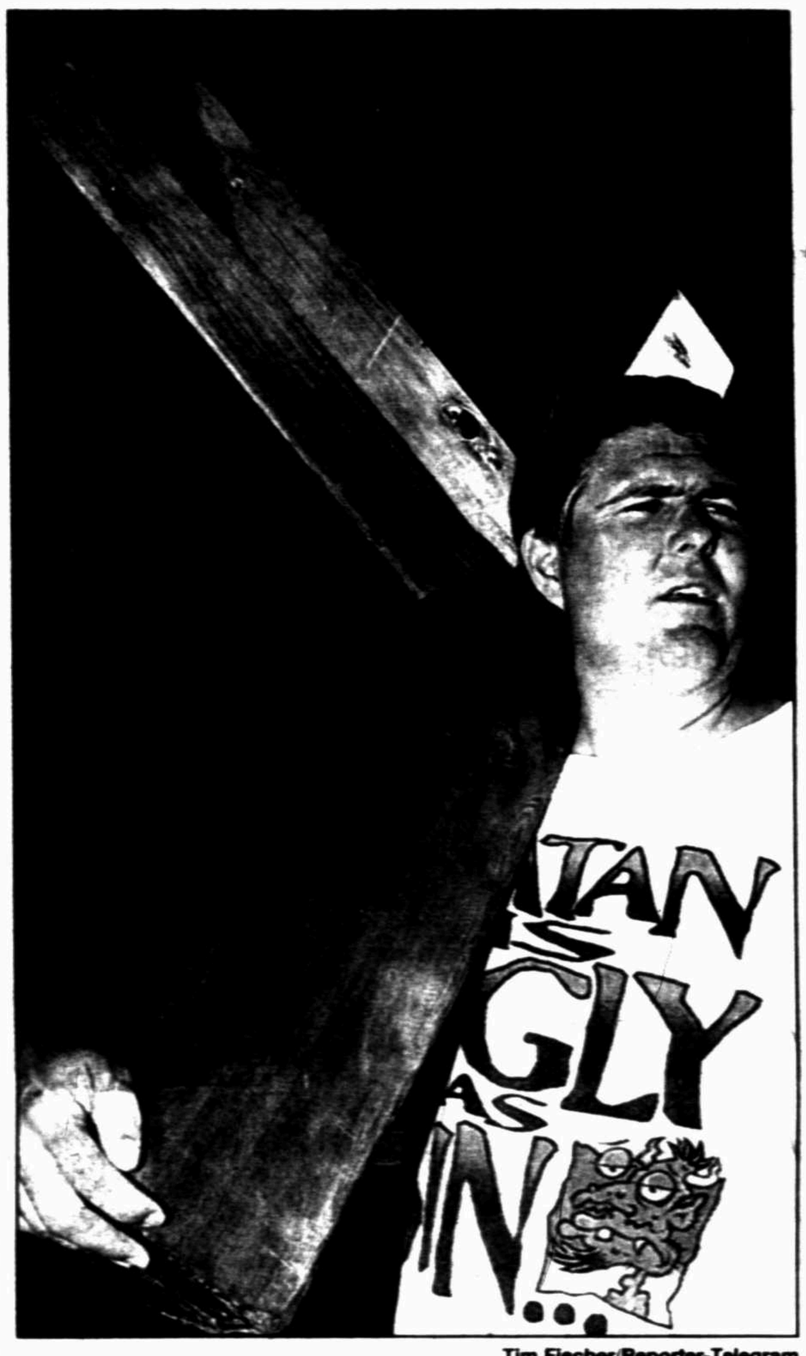

Trustee George Lara said, "That just shows the normal attitude of the district."

Strange added that the district doesn't want to agree to any settlement because it feels the judge could soon make a decision about the case.

"Tuesday afternoon we had a conference call with Judge (Edward C.) Prado's briefing attorney and I expect within the next couple of weeks, we will get some indication of how he expects to proceed procedurally," Strange said.

The judge could choose to take any one or more of several paths. He could have a hearing on some areas of the Agreed Judgment, bring the parties together for a status conference or make a decision about the dismissals without a hearing.

Bearing a message of love

Walter Masters, wearing a "Satan is ugly as sin" T-shirt, carries a cross around Midland Friday morning. The Baptist minister from San Angelo has been walking the streets of the city for four days spreading the Gospel.

Unique ministry rolls down streets of Tall City

By John Paul Pitts
Staff Writer

The message was simple and to the point. The technique was a little unique.

"This gives us an opportunity to share the love of Jesus," said Walter Masters, as he pulled a 12-foot cross, with wheels, down Illinois Avenue Friday morning.

Masters, a Baptist minister from San Angelo, said he began his trek at South Padre Island on July 1, and since that time he has made "cross-dragging appearances" in McAllen, Falfurrias, San Antonio, San Angelo, Abilene and Midland.

"We have been in Midland four days, pulling the cross up and down streets," said Masters, who attends a Christian Church in San Angelo. "It's our ministry."

He said he had heard that abortions were performed at Planned Parenthood in Midland and deliberately pulled his cross down the streets next to it.

He witnesses to four or five people every day.

"(Thursday), as I was walking down a street in Midland, a lady stopped me and asked me if I would pray for her. I like to think that God put me on that street, at that time, to meet her need."

On Friday morning a young man named James (who declined to give his full name) approached Masters and struck up a conversation. The two men spoke about the cross around James' neck and what it meant to him. He said he had gotten the cross in Bosnia.

Masters said a number of "cross-carriers" from all parts of the country are on the road, carrying crosses through town after town. He said

Local Republicans think Iowa caucus will boost Bush campaign

AP Photo

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Twenty years after his father won the straw poll held by the Iowa Republican Party, Texas Gov. George W. Bush's presidential campaign will face its first acid test on the road to the Republican presidential nomination.

Local Republicans are confident that the former Midlander will have a strong showing in today's Republican caucus, held on the campus of Iowa State University.

"I think it will be a big boost to his campaign," said Win Brown, a 24-year member of the Midland County Commissioners Court. "He's going in with full expectations of taking the poll. From polls and talking with friends up there, I believe he'll win. Remember, this is really a fund-raiser for the Republicans up there. This is a straw vote, but it's the first real push for campaigning that everyone recognizes."

Mayor Bobby Burns also is confident Bush will have a strong showing but cautioned that it may not be as strong as everyone expects.

"Expectations are so high, I don't see how anyone could live up to them constantly," Burns said. "I think he'll do well, but it's a very competitive field and very early in the election. The second- and third-place winners won't be out of the race."

Bob Perry, assistant professor of political science at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said that the importance given the caucus may be overblown. "Iowa is meaningless in terms of its electoral vote, but it's important to do well at the beginning because everyone loves a winner."

The caucus winnows out the field very quickly, he said, so that by the time the Texas and California primaries are held, "the race will be essentially decided. It mainly shows who can't win."

He predicts Bush will do well today, "but even if he has a less-than-sterling showing, he has the money to overcome that showing. He can spend more in New Hampshire."

Perry expects Sens. Orrin Hatch and John McCain — the only Republican candidate not participating — will leave the race after the Iowa caucus.

Brown predicts that Elizabeth Dole "will fold her tent very soon. I don't think Lamar Alexander will fold before the end of the year. Steve Forbes is hanging in there — he doesn't know when to quit. He's spending his own money and having fun talking to people, which is good."

Bush's campaign is employing new techniques, Brown said.

"With Little George — I call him 'Little George,' I've known him since he was in his 20s — we're seeing new techniques. He's out there full-force, like it was the last week of the election. He's pushing hard and he will until the nomination. They'll have the nomination and then he'll push right up to the election Nov. 7."

Bottling plant moving corporate office to Midland

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Big Spring's largest corporation, Western Container, is moving its corporate headquarters to Midland's Chevron center.

The office furniture has been tagged and the movers will be in on Monday.

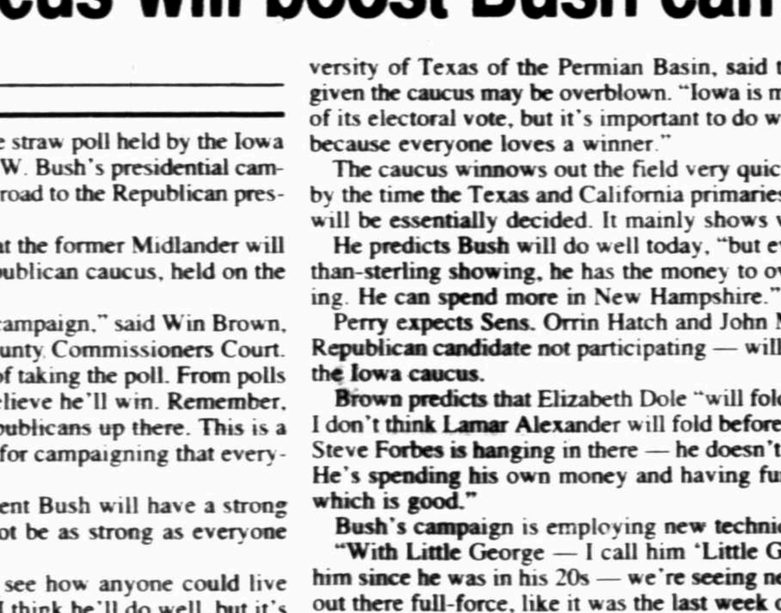

The new corporate offices will initially occupy about 11,000 square feet of floor space and will have expansion options.

President Bob Tremblay said the move will involve 30 corporate administrative personnel.

He said that quality of life and close proximity to Midland International Airport were two major reasons for the move.

"In order to visit our Big Spring offices, a corporate visitor presently has to rent a car and drive to Big Spring following a flight into Midland International. A two-day trip will be reduced to one

POLICE REPORTS

Ex-guard sentenced

U.S. District Court Judge Royal Furgeson of Midland on Friday sentenced a former Ector County Jail guard to one year and a day in federal prison on a conviction of accepting $500 in exchange for smuggling cocaine into an Odessa prison facility.

In addition, Furgeson ordered Juan Arzate, 36, of Monahans, to be placed under supervised release for three years following his prison term.

Arzate pleaded guilty June 3 to one count of attempting to possess cocaine for distribution. Six months earlier, on Jan. 6, Arzate had met with an undercover officer and agreed to smuggle what he believed to be an ounce of cocaine to a county prisoner, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Arzate admitted that he accepted a $500 payment in exchange for his smuggling effort.

The case was investigated by special agents of the FBI, the Ector County Sheriff's Office, and the Narcotics Division of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Assistant U.S. Attorneys Mark Roomberg and John Klaussen prosecuted the case.

Drug charges

An Odessa man and two Missourians were booked into the Midland County Detention Center Friday on federal charges of possession of more than 230 pounds of marijuana.

The drug had a street-sale value of $231,000, according to Lt. Harold Thomas of the Odessa Police Department's Office of Special Investigation.

The trio was arrested following an investigation, based on a tip, that a load of marijuana was to be picked up in Odessa by an "elderly" man from Missouri and then transported to Missouri, he said.

Arrested and jailed were Maurilo Gardea, 31, of Odessa, and Ruby Lou Anna Kime, 57, and Kenlen Michael Kime, 72, both of Missouri. They were being held in jail without bond pending their being turned over to the U.S. Marshal's Service.

Agents with the Odessa Police Department Special Investigation and Street Crimes Unit and U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration set up surveillance at an Odessa motel.

At 11:30 p.m. Thursday, they noted "the suspected" vehicle traveling northbound on Loop 338 toward U.S. Highway 385 North.

After stopping the vehicle, officers found 191 pounds of marijuana in the trunk of the vehicle and, after obtaining a "consent to search," they recovered an additional 40 pounds of marijuana at a residence at which the vehicle had been sighted during surveillance, Thomas said.

Crossing guard injured

ODESSA — An Odessa school-crossing guard was listed in fair condition at Medial Center Hospital Friday evening after being hit by a vehicle in a school zone Friday morning.

Ysidro Solis Reyes was hit at East 37th and Bowie streets as he was displaying the stop sign above his head, Odessa Police Department Traffic Unit Sgt. Bob Forbus said. He suffered head, hand and leg injuries.

No children were injured in the accident.

"The safety of the children is of paramount importance to everyone," Forbus said.

The driver of the vehicle was cited for disobeying a crossing guard.

Hatch says remarks about gays were misunderstood

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sen. Orrin Hatch says when he told fellow Republicans at their state convention two months ago that they should be proud of their party because "we don't have the gays and lesbians with us," he didn't intend the comment to sound prejudicial.

The Utah lawmaker was just pointing out that "gays and lesbians, by and large, are very intelligent, highly educated, high-earning people, who support mainly Democrats," he told The Salt Lake Tribune in a story for Friday editions.

Hatch said he resents any implication that he is intolerant.

"You can sum it up in one sentence: that Orrin Hatch is tolerant of all people and that he doesn't try to tell people how to live unless they ask him," said Hatch, who is a GOP presidential candidate.

Hatch has drawn fire from gay rights groups in the past for what they considered insensitive statements.

At the Utah Republican State Convention in June, Hatch offered a David Letterman-style list of why Utah Republicans should be proud of their party, including: "We don't have the gays and lesbians with us." In 1988, he called the Democratic Party "the party of homosexuals; they are the party of abortion."

While Hatch said he is tolerant of all people, he does believe that homosexuality is contrary to the Bible.

"It's a religious belief to me that homosexuality flies in the face of biblical teachings," he said, noting he can't determine "whether it's a genetic predisposition or whether it is a choice."

Hatch said that is different from the situation of blacks and other ethnic minorities.

"People of color can't do anything about their color," Hatch said. "But I do believe gay people have a choice to live within the legal rules or not."

Armed man robs Midland restaurant

From Staff Reports

A 5-foot-11 robber who put the barrel of a firearm to the head of an apparent Burger King worker late Thursday night and locked two employees in the stock room fled the northwest-Midland restaurant with an undetermined amount of cash, according to police reports.

The robber, who remained at large following the 11:09 p.m. heist at 4805 N. Midkiff Drive, forced the victim to unlock the business's safe.

The gunman left the restaurant on foot, police said.

No bad luck on this Friday the 13th: Market rallies sharply

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks soared Friday as a new government report suggested inflation remains in check, raising hopes that the Federal Reserve need not be aggressive in raising interest rates to cool off the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 184.26 points to close at 10,973.65, a gain of 1.7 percent. For the week, the blue-chip index gained 259.62 points.

Broader stock indicators were also sharply higher. The Standard & Poor's 500 rose 29.52 to 1,327.68, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 88.32 to 2,637.81.

Defying any fears of bad luck on Friday the 13th, stocks rose following a Labor Department report of a modest rise in the Producer Price Index, a measure of inflation pressure before it reaches the consumer.

Prices at the wholesale level rose a less-than-expected 0.2 percent in July, the Labor Department said. Yields on the new 30-year Treasury bonds auctioned Thursday fell to 6.10 percent from 6.19 percent before the figures were released.

"That was the trigger for the rally," said Ricky Harrington, technical analyst at Wachovia Securities in Charlotte, N.C.

Officials monitor condition of baby gorilla in Boston

N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — Officials at Zoo New England are anxiously watching the development of a baby gorilla, the first one ever born at its Franklin Park Zoo, after its mother recently started showing signs of illness.

Zoo personnel this week were quietly celebrating the arrival of the 4-pound baby and were pleased that the newborn gorilla and mother Kiki were progressing well following Sunday's dramatic birth.

Zoo officials had hoped to begin exhibiting the baby gorilla to the public this week but have delayed plans until they are sure it will survive. Until then, the zoo is keeping the baby gorilla under wraps and no photos or public viewing will be allowed.

Late Wednesday afternoon, Kiki and the four other adult gorillas at the park contracted a common gorilla illness — diarrhea. If the illness spreads, it could endanger the baby.

"It's caused by a protozoan that is very common in apes and when they get stressed it causes diarrhea," said Dr. Hayley Weston, chief veterinarian. Changes in the gorillas' routines, such as the addition of the baby to the troop, can be stressful and cause the ailment to flare up, she said. "We started medication, decreased the stress, we're cleaning up as soon as possible so that it won't spread and now we're just going to sit back and wait and see what happens."

All of the adult gorillas have been [illegible] on a 10-day course of medication. The [illegible] gorilla, whose sex is still unknown because workers have not yet had an opportunity to get close to it, shows no signs of illness and doctors are cautiously optimistic.

"It's the dehydration that we're worried about. Any newborn that gets diarrhea is" life-threatened "because its body mass is so small that it can get dehydrated," Weston said. "I don't think that we'll have to step in, but if the baby got sick enough and the mom couldn't keep her strong we step in . . . put fluids in her and get her back quickly to her mom."

By all accounts, the 17-year-old western lowland gorilla and her baby had been doing fine since Kiki gave birth without complications around 11 p.m. in a gorilla holding room.

Zoo officials, an outside veterinarian and an emergency response team of human doctors have been on standby for weeks in case she experienced problems in childbirth or required a caesarean section.

Not wanting to interrupt the bonding process, zoo workers have not approached the baby to determine the sex and haven't yet [illegible]cted a name.

Zoo officials were concerned that Kiki, who was "hand-raised" by humans as a baby, would not have mothering instincts and would reject the baby.

"When you have a hand-raised female you will often have the biggest difficulty," said Dan Beetem, the zoo's curator of mammals. "It could be that she could not know a way to love (the baby) or that she would not be able to find a breast to nurse."

But the normally 230-pound gorilla has apparently taken to motherhood splendidly, according to Weston, who said Kiki was "certainly a success story."

"Kiki's a really good mother, very nurturing, very gentle. She cradles it all the time. I don't think she's put it down yet," Weston said.

Springer won't run for Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television talk show host Jerry Springer has decided that he won't give up his world of drag queens, cheating lesbians and bisexual love triangles for a chance to become Senator Springer.

His office in Chicago issued a statement Friday popping that political trial balloon because of contractual obligations and his new talk-and-variety show about to debut in England.

Springer issued a statement that it was "impractical if not impossible for me to make a run for the Senate at this time."

Springer, who once was a Cincinnati politician, had been courted by some of his associates in Ohio to run for the U.S. Senate after several current members of Congress and former candidates decided not to run in 2000.

With Springer out of the mix, Democrats may find a more traditional candidate.

"I think Democrats ought to be relieved," said political analyst Stuart Rothenberg. "It would have been an embarrassment."

The freshman Republican who might have faced Springer in the next election, Sen. Mike DeWine, had no comment, according to a spokesman.

Ohio GOP Chairman Robert Bennett said for Democrats to even consider the idea of a Springer candidacy demonstrated: "Name recognition and deep pockets are their only criteria."

Ohio newspapers had huffed their outrage at the prospect of a Springer Senate race, and some Ohio Democrats who had been longing for a deep-pockets candidate said they couldn't accept Springer.

Moosup, Conn., gears up for one of nation's only V-J Day parades

MOOSUP, Conn. (AP) — Bill Poprosky and the boys at American Legion Post 91 are getting ready for the town's biggest annual event — one of the nation's only V-J Day parades. They're expecting at least 10,000 uniformed marchers Sunday afternoon.

Although World War II ended more than 50 years ago, Japan's surrender is still cause for celebration in this tiny village near the Rhode Island border. No matter that Japan is now an important ally and trading partner of the United States.

"We're just doing our part to remember history and the sacrifices that were made," said Poprosky, a past president of the Moosup American Legion and the parade chairman for the past 11 years.

Hostilities between the United States and Japan ended Aug. 14, 1945, five days after the second of two atomic bombs was dropped on the island nation. The formal surrender was signed Sept. 2, 1945.

V-J Day generally comes and goes with little fanfare — although the small mining town of Arma, Kan., also traditionally has a celebration and parade to commemorate the day. Rhode Island recognizes the second Monday of August as a state holiday called Victory Day.

Poprosky, a Vietnam veteran who spends his weekends working behind the bar in the Post 91 clubhouse, said there's strong support for the parade in Moosup. The former textile mill town has hundreds of military veterans among its 4,704 residents, Poprosky said.

There are no Japanese people in Moosup, said town Clerk Helen Coombs.

"We have a few Vietnamese, but I don't know of anybody who's Japanese," she said.

In fact, census figures for 1990 showed that only about 3,800 of Connecticut's 3.3 million residents are of Japanese ancestry. Only 57 were listed in Windham County, where Moosup is located.

Ms. Coombs, who has marched in several parades, says the event can draw "as many as 25,000 visitors, including observers and marchers, if the weather is good."

Sunday's marchers will include members of the American Legion, AmVets, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Vets, and others.

IOWA: First caucus to be held in January

(From 1A)

The interesting question, is, who will fill the vice presidential slot, Brown said.

"One of my favorites is (Ohio Rep.) John Kasich. He's articulate, well-schooled, has a good background and is an eloquent spokesman," Brown said.

Iowa Republicans insist the caucus is an early indicator of how the race for the Republican nomination will end, but there have been some surprises over the years. Former President Bush won the caucus in 1979, but it wasn't until 1988 that he won the nomination and the presidency. Pat Robertson won the caucus in 1987. Texas Sen. Phil Gramm tied Sen. Bob Dole, the party's eventual nominee, in 1995.

The presidential campaign gets under way in earnest in late January or early February, when Iowa has the nation's first caucus — actually it is hundreds of small caucuses throughout the state — to select the first delegates to the convention. New Hampshire will follow with the nation's first primary.

Jeep accident

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

A newly licensed driver, Brittany Pyeatt, 16 "hit the gas pedal instead of the brake" Friday sending a Jeep Cherokee crashing into the plate-glass windows of the 7-Eleven at Wall and Garfield streets, said Midland Police Sgt. Ernest Wakefield. "She's OK," he said. A pedestrian, Angie Easterwood, 31, sustained minor injuries.

Suspect in killing near Carlsbad Caverns returns to Boston

N.Y. Times News Service

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Composed and businesslike, murder suspect Raffi Kodikian won temporary freedom Friday after a judge said he could return home to Boston until he stands trial on charges that he killed his best friend and buried the body in a crude grave in a canyon desert.

"I'm fine right now," Kodikian, 25, said after a 10-minute hearing in Eddy County Magistrate Court, where he was ordered to surrender his passport and be ready to return to New Mexico at a judge's command.

Kodikian, dressed in brown hiking boots, blue jeans, and a white T-shirt, said he wanted to offer his sympathies to the family of David Coughlin, the man Kodikian said he stabbed twice in the chest last weekend in a remote area of Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

"I would like to, but I can't," Kodikian said in a brief sidewalk interview after the hearing. His lawyer said his client is bound by a court order not to contact any possible witnesses in the case against him.

"We really can't say anything," said Kodikian's father, Howard, his voice choked with emotion. "Our condolences go out to them. We know they're hurting. We're just sorry about the whole situation. That's all."

Kodikian has told authorities that he and Coughlin, 26, of Millis, Mass., had gotten lost in the desert park and had run out of water. Desperate and dehydrated, Kodikian told them, his longtime friend begged him to end his misery.

Eddy County Magistrate Judge Monte L. Lyons presided over Friday's hearing. He noted Kodikian's clean record and the fact that the local prosecutors did not object to allowing Kodikian to return to Boston, and to his father's home in Doylestown, Pa. In exchange, Kodikian agreed to air-mail his passport back to the court.

Kodikian, who was released Tuesday on $50,000 bail, also waived his extradition rights if he violates the conditions of his release, which also include a ban on the use of drugs, alcohol, and firearms.

"You don't want to get into any problems," Lyons told Kodikian.

Kodikian told Lyons that he would like to contact two people — a former girlfriend who he said is "a mutual friend of mine and Dave," as well as Coughlin's roommate. "I was hoping to speak to him — not about the case," Kodikian told the judge.

But after Gary W. McCandless, the local sheriff's chief of detectives, told the judge that both friends are potential witnesses, the judge declined Kodikian's request. "I'll have to get back to you on that," Lyons told him.

Besides Kodikian and his father, Friday's unscheduled hearing was attended only by the judge, McCandless, Eddy County Sheriff M.A. "Chunky" Click, and a reporter.

Click said detectives from his department and FBI agents interviewed Kodikian again Friday morning. Kodikian told them about events leading up to Coughlin's death in the desert last weekend, which was discovered when a National Park Service ranger approached the Massachusetts men's campsite in Rattlesnake Canyon.

"I killed him," Kodikian allegedly told Ranger Lance Mattson, who discovered Coughlin's body under a blue cloth.

Click called Kodikian cooperative, well-mannered, and respectful. He said he is not considered likely to flee.

Authorities expect to decide next week whether Kodikian, now charged under an open count of murder, will face prosecution by state or federal authorities. A preliminary hearing scheduled for Thursday most likely will be waived, said Click.

Law enforcement sources said that while prosecutors have strong evidence against Kodikian, including his incriminating statements to the park ranger and a journal that officials have called tantamount to a signed confession, the case is far from open and shut.

They say Kodikian has two likely defenses: that the desert heat and sun diminished his capacity to tell right from wrong, or that he was near-delusional at the time of the stabbing. Both arguments, the sources said, could be compelling before juries.

Dehydration disorients, but doesn't hurt, experts say

N.Y. Times News Service

Severe dehydration like that reportedly suffered by two Massachusetts men, David Coughlin and Raffi Kodikian, last weekend in New Mexico, can cause alterations in mental functioning, including delirium, confusion, disorientation, seizures, difficulty concentrating and even hallucinations, scientists and physicians said Friday.

But it is unlikely to cause severe pain. Kodikian, 25, allegedly told authorities he killed his 26 year-old traveling companion because Coughlin begged for an end to his extreme pain from lack of water in the desert, according to the criminal complaint on file in court in Carlsbad, N.M.

People who are severely dehydrated "are very uncomfortable because they're so thirsty," said Dr. Ronenn Roubenoff, associate professor of medicine and nutrition at Tufts University. "But I wouldn't exactly call that pain. That is one of the things I don't buy about this story, the business of the pain." It is possible that dehydration could cause muscle cramps, especially in the legs, and this could be painful "but it would come and go. It wouldn't be constant agony," he said.

Scott Montain , a physiologist who studies fluid balance issues at the US Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick, agrees that pain is not a typical problem in dehydration.

"As you begin to get dehydrated, you get thirsty. Then you get vague discomforts. You don't feel good and you're not afraid to express it. Then you get changes in mood — you become more impatient, but more prominently, you feel tired, apathetic.

"Then, as dehydration progresses, you get changes in speech — it becomes more indistinct and slurred. You may stumble as you walk. You have dizziness," he says. These symptoms often occur when a person has lost about six percent of normal body mass through dehydration.

Delirium, trouble staying awake and difficulty swallowing usually occur when a person loses 10 percent of normal body mass, Montain said.

CORPORATE: Bottling plant will not move day in many cases, following the move of the corporate offices."

Tremblay said about half of the corporate staff already lives in Midland, and the move will make it much easier without the commute.

Western Container manufactures one-third of the plastic Coke bottles in the United States and its territory extends from Hattiesburg, Miss., to Los Angeles. The plant was started at the airpark in Big Spring in 1980 with an initial employee count of 35. Today there are 290 employees at the Big Spring bottle manufacturing plant.

There are four other Western Container plants: two in Southern California, one in Houston and one in Hattiesburg.

The original plant in Big Spring produced 3.5 million plastic bottles in 1980. This year Western Container will manufacture nearly 3.5 billion bottles.

The explosion in manufacturing started in 1992 when Coca Cola did extensive surveys and determined that the public was interested in the shape of bottles.

Western Container is poised for even greater expansion with the advent of "Dasani," Coca Cola's new brand of bottled water. A bottle filling plant in Abilene is potentially Western Container's largest water bottle user.

Tremblay said that the bottling plant will not be moved to Midland.

"We have a lot tied up in the Big Spring plant and we like the business environment of Big Spring. Why change something that has been successful for the past 20 years?"

Slaying of humorist and esteemed political activist stuns Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A motorcycle gunman shot and killed Colombia's most popular political satirist Friday, silencing an irreverent peace activist esteemed as much by garbage collectors as by political leaders.

Jaime Garzon, who juggled radio and television appearances with discreet efforts to free hostages held by leftist rebels, was killed as he drove to work just blocks from Radionet, the all-news network where he was a morning co-host.

The gunman got off a motorcycle driven by an accomplice and fired five shots into Garzon's head and chest as he waited at a red light, a witness told reporters.

Garzon's green Jeep Cherokee rolled over a curb and hit a post. A colleague found him slumped over the gear box.

The killing comes amid stepped-up rebel and paramilitary violence while a peace initiative begun a year ago by President Andres Pastrana appears to be faltering. Dozens of human rights activists and several journalists have fled the country this year amid rising threats and instability.

Colleagues said the satirist had told them, as recently as Thursday, of receiving death threats from right-wing paramilitary militias. In the past, Garzon also had told friends of getting threats from rebels.

"It could be he was murdered for his humanitarian efforts," said national police commander Gen. Rosso Jose Serrano.

Several radio stations received anonymous claims of responsibility by callers who said they represented paramilitary groups. However, a radio network, Caracol, received a communique signed by the paramilitary umbrella group, the United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia, denying responsibility for the crime.

Garzon's death shocked Colombians, often numbed by political violence, who loved his iconoclastic humor and impressions of leading perosonalities. Scores flocked to the scene to lay flowers, affix placards and bear witness to the passing of a man many considered a martyr for peace.

"They killed him for telling the truth," said Norma Gonzalez, a misty-eyed dental technician.

University students and activists marched in Bogota's streets and 200 of them converged on Radionet's offices, chanting "Jaime, friend, Colombia is with you."

The 39-year-old comic's caustic, scatological wit was grounded in political acumen and produced social criticism inspired, friends said, by a profound patriotism.

"Colombians' lost some of their laughter," government peace commissioner Victor G. Ricardo said in a speech, calling on the nation to bind together to demand an end to "this unfathomable war."

In a joint communique, the country's human rights groups denounced the slaying as a deliberate attempt to silence the voices of peace, force an end to dialogue with armed groups and force Colombia into total war.

The president, a longtime Garzon friend who had worked with him in broadcast news and politics, expressed outrage at the killing and said a reward would be offered for the killers.

"Jaime in large part identified with the sentiments of Colombians, the things in our subconscious that we couldn't say," said Pastrana, for whom Garzon had first worked in 1987 as an aide on his successful Bogota mayoral campaign.

Garzon became a household name with hugely popular political satire television shows — Zoociedad and Quac. Weekly from 1993-97, the shows poked fun at Colombia's biggest political corruption scandal — the entry of millions of dollars in drug money into the election campaign of former President Ernesto Samper.

Garzon, a magazine columnist and former small-town mayor, created personas for his scathing satires that were nearly always lower-class Colombians.

His latest was Heriberto de la Calle, a humble but perceptive shoeshine man whose conversations with the high and mighty were heard and watched by millions. Apart from his irreverent commentaries and asides, Garzon would drive Radionet anchors crazy with frequent interruptions.

Colleagues at Radionet cried on the air as they broke the news. Taps played in the background. Tributes arrived in hundreds of faxes and phone calls. Friends and fans placed mementos — a portrait, a shoeshine box — at the restaurant booth where Garzon regularly lunched.

"Here we're all very confused, in a lot of pain," said Radionet news director Aida Luz Herrera. "Feeling impotent."

In recent months, Garzon had worked closely with leftist rebels in facilitating the release of hostages and even organizing guerrilla news conferences in a southern rebel-controlled area.

On Friday, he had been scheduled to help negotiate the release of civilian hostages held by the National Liberation Army, Colombia's second-largest rebel group.

Unidentified friends of journalist Jaime Garzon console each other at the place where he was fatally shot by two gunmen on a motorcycle in Bogota, Colombia, early Friday. Garzon, a 40-year-old journalist, entertainer and political activist, was shot in the head several times as he neared the offices of Radionet in his green Jeep Cherokee, national police commander Gen. Rosso Jose Serrano said.

Two U.S. senators arrive for visit in Cuba

Daschle, D-S.D., and Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., were greeted by Cuban National Assembly leader Ricardo Alarcon upon landing in Havana.

The three compared Cuba's sweltering climate to the weather in Washington before heading into private talks at in a closed airport lounge. They made no comment to the press, and said nothing of the agenda for the three-day visit.

Ranit Schmelzer, spokeswoman for Daschle, said in Washington the two senators expected to meet with several government officials and other groups. She said she did not know if they would meet with Castro, who marked his 73rd birthday Friday.

Congress is in a one-month summer recess and a number of members are on foreign trips.

United Nations cracks down on lawlessness; Rugova to work with rivals

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Plagued by near-daily attacks on international peacekeepers, U.N. officials announced new regulations Friday allowing them to detain or remove anyone deemed disruptive of the peace in Kosovo.

The announcement came as ethnic Albanian leader Ibrahim Rugova pledged to cooperate with officials administering the province, as well as rebel leaders.

International officials said Friday that both Russian and German soldiers had come under fire in the past 24 hours.

A sniper bullet hit a Russian soldier in the shoulder Thursday while on guard duty near Gnjilane in southeastern Kosovo, NATO officials said. German peacekeepers also came under machine-gun fire that day, but there were no causalities, the German Defense Ministry said Friday.

The U.N. mission to Kosovo announced the new regulations in an attempt to curb such attacks, as well as rampant crime and ethnic violence between Kosovo's Albanians and the dwindling Serb population. The new regulations authorize peacekeepers and U.N. police to detain or remove anyone at any time, if such a move is deemed in the interest of maintaining order.

The regulations also would allow peacekeepers to expel people from the province in southern Serbia, the dominant Yugoslav republic, U.N. legal officials said.

More than 35,000 NATO troops are providing security in Kosovo, and a 3,100-member U.N. police force is being set up, along with a training school to establish a local police force.

U.S. Army Gen. Wesley Clark, the NATO supreme allied commander in Europe, condemned the violence, particularly attacks on Serbs, at a news conference Friday in Pristina, the provincial capital.

"The violence has to stop," he said, after separate meetings with Serb Orthodox Bishop Artemije, Rugova and Kosovo Liberation Army commander Adem Ceku.

"We know there are a lot of hard feelings among the people living here," Clark said. "We've got to take the heat out of this."

Since NATO entered Kosovo on June 12, most of the province's 200,000 Serbs have fled, prompted by a series of attacks by ethnic Albanians that mimic their own treatment at the hands of Serb forces during the previous year's crackdown.

The KLA has been blamed for many of the attacks, but its leader, Hasim Thaci, has repeatedly denied the group's involvement.

Rugova, a rival of Thaci, told reporters Friday his Democratic League of Kosovo party, known as the LDK, was prepared to work with Thaci. Last month, the LDK refused to take part in an interethnic transitional council, claiming its representation was not equal to Thaci and his supporters.

"I am the elected president of Kosovo," Rugova said. "And we will altogether closely cooperate, including Mr. Thaci and others, and as such we will all participate in international administrative bodies until new elections."

Ethnic Albanian Sherine Shala, right, and her mother, name not available, cry after identifying the body of Sherine's husband, Hafir Shala, in a mass grave in Suva Reka, some 75 kilometers (45 miles) southwest of Pristina, Yugoslavia, Friday.

But in an interview published Friday in France's three main newspapers, Rugova sounded less conciliatory.

"After NATO arrived in Kosovo, small groups of KLA came down from the mountains and went into towns and villages," he said. "It's normal that they put people in charge (but) ... an agreement must be reached because running the whole country cannot be left to the KLA."

Rugova was twice elected president in unofficial voting, but his popularity has eroded recently due to his self-imposed exile in Italy and Serb television footage showing him meeting with Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic during NATO's 78-day bombing campaign that began March 24.

Also Friday, more than 10,000 people marched peacefully through Pristina to urge the international community to step up pressure on Serbia to release thousands of ethnic Albanians held there for alleged terrorist offenses.

In the western Kosovo city of Istok, Spanish forensic experts began excavating a mass burial site of 97 graves marked by wooden planks with the initials "KPD," Serbian initials for "correctional facility."

Karl Koenig, a legal adviser for the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, said the bodies are believed to have been there since May 26 or 27, but said it was unknown who marked the graves.

NATO jets blasted the Dubrava prison at Istok several times from May 21-23. Serb authorities said at least 19 people, including prisoners, were killed and 10 were wounded during the attacks.

The experts are gathering evidence that may be used to prosecute Milosevic and others who have been indicted for war crimes committed in Kosovo.

Yeltsin expects no Duma opposition to his new prime minister

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin said Friday he expected no real opposition from the Communist-dominated lower house of parliament when it meets to approve his newest candidate for prime minister.

In a Kremlin meeting, Yeltsin formally instructed Alexander Kotenkov, his envoy to the State Duma, to submit Vladimir Putin's bid for the post at Monday's Duma session.

Yeltsin abruptly sacked former Premier Sergei Stepashin on Monday, and named Putin, a former KGB spy, as his successor — the fourth Cabinet reshuffle in 17 months.

If the Duma rejects Yeltsin's candidate three times, Russian law dictates that it be disbanded. Kotenkov, however, told reporters that Yeltsin would "never" disolve the Duma.

Speaking in a hoarse voice, Yeltsin said that if Putin is not approved in Monday's vote, there would be no tragedy. "He will pass on the second try," he said confidently.

Communists and other hard-liners recently have seemed reluctant to defy Yeltsin, presumably because they need their offices and other privileges during their campaigns for December's parliamentary elections.

Communist leader Gennady Zuyganov seemed conciliatory, saying he saw no "crucial differences" between Putin and Stepashin, who as a candidate also won overwhelming Duma approval.

The Communists on Monday plan to demand that Putin guarantee fair parliamentary elections and an increase in the nation's living standards, Zyuganov said.

At their Kremlin meeting, broadcast on television, Yeltsin and Kotenkov also discussed ways to speed up Duma approval of 64 presidential bills, 28 of which are high priority.

Among these is the START II nuclear arms reduction treaty, ratified by the U.S. Senate in 1996. Hard-liners have repeatedly rejected the treaty, saying its ratification would hurt Russia's security.

The Duma's Communist speaker, Gennady Seleznyov, said this week that ratification was unlikely, as lawmakers did not trust the United States.

Another issue for Yeltsin was the 2000 annual budget, to be submitted to the Duma on Aug. 25.

"The Duma should pass the budget before its powers expire," Kotenkov said.

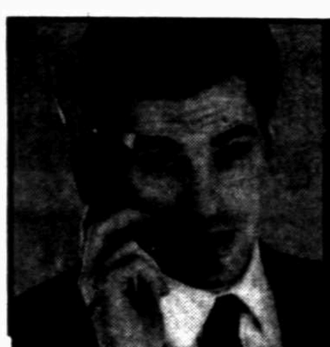

Kotenkov also said the government needed a bill on states of emergency to more effectively confront crises, such as the Islamic uprising in Dagestan, a southern region bordering breakaway Chechnya. The government is now trying to uproot the rebellion.

Russian media and politicians have expressed concern that Yeltsin may use a state of emergency to put off parliamentary and presidential elections, but the Kremlin has assured that elections will be held on schedule.

Crowd swells for commemoration of Virgin Mary apparition

LA VANG, Vietnam (AP) — Tens of thousands of Roman Catholics on Friday streamed to the biggest church event of the year in Vietnam, a communist nation where any religious gathering is a concern for the government.

A rural area flanked by lush rice fields was the pilgrims' destination — the spot where a group of persecuted Catholics saw an apparition of the Virgin Mary 200 years ago. It was the only known apparition of Mary in Southeast Asia.

A tent city sprouted quickly Friday in an adjoining field, 25 minutes from the nearest town. Church officials estimate 200,000 people may visit the site by Sunday, when a yearlong celebration of the apparition's bicentennial wraps up.

About the same number were on hand last year, when the communist government largely left the pilgrims alone.

Vietnam's 76 million people are predominantly Buddhist, but the 8 million Catholics are the most in Southeast Asia outside the Philippines.

Faced with growing evidence of vice and corruption, Vietnam's government has recently appeared to be slightly more tolerant of religion.

"The government has not directly asked for our help, but I think they understand the influence the church can have in fighting drug abuse and other social ills," said Father Guise Duong Duc Toai, head of the local Catholic church.

Still, government policy is that any unapproved religion is superstition and must be wiped out. Patriotism comes first, which means controls over religious appointments and activities.

So a large gathering like this draws a lot of attention. The government sent two officials to accompany the seven foreign correspondents who were at the event.

This year's gathering appeared to be a bit better organized than last year, when both water and shade were at a premium as the area north of Hue suffered a brutal drought and a dengue fever outbreak.

Workers strung up room-sized plastic tarpaulins amid the pine trees. A temporary market offered food, drinks, rosary beads and plastic figurines of the Virgin Mary filled with holy water.

People waited patiently for priests, who were using lines of high-backed chairs as confessionals. Others went to the half-dozen statues of Mary to touch the hands or kiss the feet while praying for blessings.

As the temperature hit the upper 90s, groups peeled down to shorts for a dip in a nearby canal before attending a colorful but solemn procession of bishops.

Over the past month, up to 2,000 people per day have been making pilgrimages to La Vang in the buildup to this weekend, Toai said.

Visitors see the brick shell of a church that was destroyed in 1972, when surrounding Quang Tri province was a battle front. They also come upon a towering statue of the Virgin Mary and Christ child under three trees, representing the country's three major regions.

Catholic church officials see the government's relatively hands-off attitude toward the commemoration as a hopeful sign, especially as the Vatican tries to open diplomatic relations with Hanoi.

Still, some religious adherents — particularly unauthorized groups like the United Buddhist Church of Vietnam — continue to complain of harassment. Both the U.N. and the U.S. State Department have issued critical reports on religious freedom in Vietnam. For its part, the government denies it holds anyone for religious or political views.

Ignatz Bubis, champion of post-war German Jews, dies at age 72

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Ignatz Bubis, a Jew who survived the Nazis and returned to Germany to become a champion of the nation's Jews and its "Voice of the Conscience," died Friday. He was 72.

Bubis died after a short illness, the Central Council of Jews said in a statement.

Elected chairman and the head of Germany's growing Jewish population in 1992, Bubis often made headlines as an outspoken voice against intolerance, participating in demonstrations against radical rightist attacks and giving interviews to newspapers and TV talk shows.

As the public face of Germany's Jewish community, Bubis never backed down from his insistence that Germans must still actively remember the Holocaust and stood up to those who said the opposite.

"The Jewish world has lost a great champion of human rights who embodied the Jewish experience from the depths of the Holocaust to the renaissance of Jewish identity and peoplehood," said Elan Steinberg, executive director of the World Jewish Congress in New York.

In an interview with Stern magazine last month, Bubis said he felt he had accomplished "nearly nothing" in his seven years as the chairman of the Central Council of Jews in Germany.

"I wanted to do away with these divisions — here Germans, there Jews," he said.

Bubis was leader of a Jewish community that has been growing again since the fall of the Berlin Wall. Since 1989, Germany's Jewish community has grown from about 29,000 to 70,000 due to the migration of East European Jews.

Bubis was born in Wroclaw in what is now Poland on Jan. 17, 1927. His father was a civil servant. When he was 8, his family moved further east because of stepped-up Nazi activity near the border.

When he was 15, Bubis saw his father marched away by the Nazis. He never saw him again. A brother and a sister also died under the Nazis.

Bubis survived a ghetto set up by the Nazis for Jews, and a labor camp that was a munitions factory at Czestochowa, Poland. He was freed from the camp on Jan. 16, 1945, when the Soviet Red Army moved into Poland as the World War II Allies began closing in on Hitler's military. Bubis returned to Germany after the war.

As arguments increased in recent years over building a Holocaust memorial in Berlin, Bubis said he supported such a move, but preferred better upkeep of the actual sites of Nazi atrocities — the concentration camp memorials.

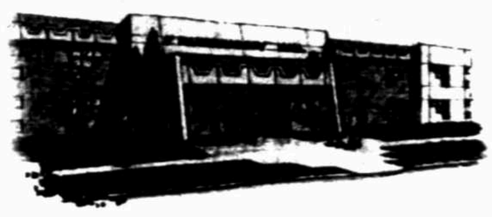

When parliament finally approved the Berlin memorial in June, Bubis said he was pleased because he never thought it would really happen after 11 years of on-again, off-again debate.

That same month, Bubis fell, broke his leg and was forced to use a wheelchair, although he strived to meet his many commitments.

Although Bubis is a German citizen, he told Stern that he wants to be buried in Israel because he fears his grave will be desecrated. The marble gravestone of Bubis' prececessor, Heinz Galinski, was destroyed by a bomb in December. Police suspect right-wing extremists, but no one has been charged.

Bubis is survived by his wife, Ida, and their daughter, Naomi Ann. Funeral plans were not immediately announced.

Gunman originally targeted three Jewish sites in Los Angeles, center founder says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The white supremacist who allegedly opened fire at a Jewish center had a map marking three other targets to kill Jews, but reportedly abandoned the attacks because of tight security, the founder of the Simon Wiesenthal Center said Friday.

Rabbi Marvin Hier said the Wiesenthal center, the University of Judaism and a third location were circled. He said law enforcement officials warned him but asked him to keep the information confidential.

"Early on, we were immediately informed and asked by the LAPD and the FBI not to reveal the fact that we had been a prime target for this attack," Hier said. He went public after a law enforcement official leaked the information to the media, he said.

U.S. Attorney Alejandro Mayorkas declined to comment.

Buford O. Furrow Jr., 37, the white supremacist suspected of killing a postal worker after wounding five people during Tuesday's attack at the North Valley Jewish Community Center, surrendered Wednesday in Las Vegas.

The Simon Wiesenthal Center, named after the famed Nazi hunter, researches the Holocaust and hate groups and operates the Museum of Tolerance. The University of Judaism is in the city's Bel Air section.

The third institution allegedly targeted by Furrow was the Skirball Cultural Center, a museum on Jewish culture, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday, citing an unidentified law enforcement source.

Furrow gave up on the three targets, then stumbled upon the North Valley center when he got off a freeway to get gas, the newspaper said.

He told investigators he had no intention of shooting small children and that they "got in the way" as he shot at a teen-age counselor and the center's receptionist, the newspaper said.

Meanwhile, only one shooting victim remained hospitalized Friday.

Five-year-old Benjamin Kadish was in critical condition at Childrens Hospital Los Angeles.

Joshua Stepakoff, 6, was released from the hospital Friday afternoon. The boy was wheeled out of the hospital wearing a black Los Angeles Police Department baseball cap and a knee-high cast on his left leg.

"Thanks to the wonderful staff at this hospital, Joshua is doing remarkably well," said his father, Alan Stepakoff. "My family and I want to express our sincere appreciation for the outpouring of support we have received from around the country."

Alan Stepakoff said his son is a "very strong little boy," but is not ready to talk about what happened.

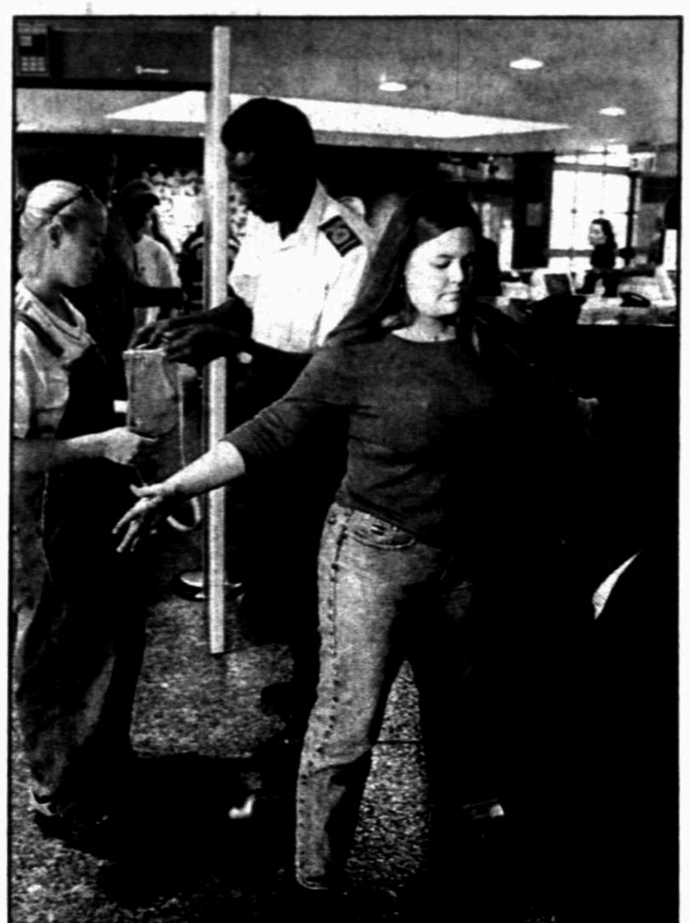

"I cannot understand someone who has that kind of hate," the boy's father said.

Both Joshua and his 8-year-old brother planned to return to the community center.

Los Angeles County prosecutors have charged Furrow with murder in the death of 39-year-old postal worker Joseph Santos Ileto and five counts of attempted murder in the attack at the center.

Federal prosecutors had already charged Furrow in the Ileto shooting on Wednesday.

Chief Magistrate Judge Carolyn Turchin refused bail for Furrow, who has had mental problems and ties to hate groups in the Northwest.

Evolution decision creates talk of abolishing Kansas board of education

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Gov. Bill Graves and some legislators are talking about abolishing the State Board of Education or stripping it of authority because of its vote to deemphasize the teaching of evolution.

"It's going to be an issue in the legislative session," Graves, a moderate Republican, said Friday of the board's 6-4 vote earlier this week. On Thursday, Graves said the decision was "so out of sync with reality" that it minimized the board's credibility.

Legislators say the controversy over evolution could create support for changes that have been sought for years by lawmakers in both parties.

"Probably, the right wing did us a favor," said Senate President Dick Bond, also a moderate Republican. "We ought to send them a thank-you note. Maybe we can get change now."

The board adopted new testing standards Wednesday that play down the scientific importance of evolution, particularly the theory that humans descended from apes and other lower species.

Local school districts will continue to decide what subjects are taught in their classrooms, but critics and supporters of the new standards think they could influence some districts' lesson plans.

The Kansas Constitution gives the 10-member board the power to set education policy without legislative approval. The board, whose members are elected from districts, is so independent that it sometimes is called the state's fourth branch of government.

Taking power from the board, abolishing it or replacing it with a board appointed by the governor would require an amendment to the Kansas Constitution and approval of voters. Only the Legislature can submit proposed amendments to a vote, and it convenes in January.

Discussions about the Board of Education's power are not new in Kansas. Legislators have grumbled for years about its independence and submitted proposed amendments to the voters in 1974, 1986 and 1990.

Each proposed amendment failed. Supporters of change argued the governor and Legislature should have more control over public schools, which account for half of the state's spending, but opponents prevailed by saying Kansans shouldn't give up their right to select board members.

Despite the governor's comments, even some critics of the board's actions weren't sure they would advocate a change.

"It would be too easy for me to be vindictive," said Harry McDonald, a science teacher at Blue Valley High School in the Kansas City suburbs. "I'm not sure a political patronage position is the best way, either."

Customers with bad credit sue auto dealer over car timer

DETROIT (AP) — Auto dealer Mel Farr thought he'd found a way to sell cars to people with bad credit and protect his profits at the same time — a high-tech dashboard gizmo that prevents cars from starting if the customer is delinquent on payments.

But now Farr, one of the nation's biggest car dealers, is facing a lawsuit from two 21-year-old women who contend the On-Time Device shut their cars down while they were driving.

Mandi Bergeron and Chavela Jones sued Farr on Thursday. Their lawyer contends the device is dangerous and relegates its users to second-class status.

"While I imagine that he believes he's doing the right thing, I think I am as equally concerned about those who are less fortunate and therefore most susceptible to this kind of abuse," attorney Kenneth Hylton Jr. said. "For him to cast this as a means of helping people move up and out of poverty is just absurd."

The lawsuit contends the leases on the two vehicles should be voided, and it seeks damages of more than $25,000.

Charlene Mitchell, a spokeswoman for Farr's company, said the device lets Farr lease or sell to customers who have credit problems and would likely be turned down for loans elsewhere. Ms. Mitchell said no customer with the device has fallen behind in payments.

"You've got consumers who are schemers, liars, people who've never paid anyone," she said. "It's a hard market to deal with. But most people are honest. It's the small percent that doesn't stay up-to-date that adds up to lot of dollars."

Ms. Mitchell also contended the device could not possibly have caused the cars to stall.

Farr, a former Detroit Lions running back, has 12 dealership franchises in Michigan and Ohio. With sales of $596.6 million last year, his company became the nation's largest black-owned business, according to Black Enterprise magazine.

The On-Time Device is made by a small California company called Payment Protection Systems, which says about 1,000 are in use around the country. Farr has put the device in about 200 vehicles.

It consists of a keypad and a tiny light.

Customers who come to a payment center once a week get a six-digit code when they pay their bills. If they punch the proper code into the keypad, the light turns green and the car can be started.

If more than a week passes without a new code, the light turns red, a buzzer sounds and the car won't start. An emergency code can be used to give the user a 24-hour reprieve.

The suit against Farr says the women were driving on the freeway when their engines stopping running. In both cases, they coasted to the shoulder and were eventually able to restart the cars — one used the emergency code. Still, Hylton contended the device is dangerous.

"If they malfunction in two cars, they're likely to malfunction in others," he said. "They are accidents waiting to happen."

Ms. Mitchell said Farr tested the device in his own Lincoln Navigator for two months before deciding to use it.

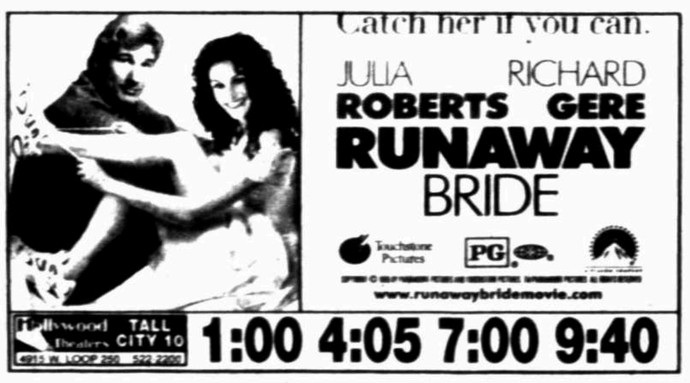

Farr, whose dealerships operate mostly in the suburbs, has said he wants to expand his sales in large cities. With the help of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Farr got backing from several Wall Street banks to fund his car financing unit, Triple M Financing.

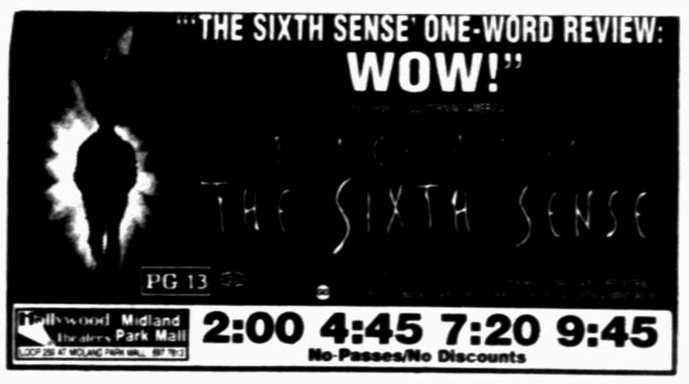

"Mr. Farr could just keep doing business in the suburbs and not have these headaches," Ms. Mitchell said, "but he feels this is a market he want to do business in."

Reward programs one way to get guns off the street

WASHINGTON (AP) — The plan was simple: District of Columbia residents would be paid $100 for each gun they turned in during a five-day period, no questions asked.

But the program was so successful that on the third day, some of those lined up to exchange their firearms this week had to be turned away because the program temporarily ran out of money.

Across the country, police and community groups running similar programs have attracted thousands of people ready to turn in guns for rewards. In some cases, the response has been so overwhelming that cash-strapped cities have cut back their efforts.

In other places, officials are making payments with gift certificates, sneakers or even sewing machines to make sure that people giving up their guns won't turn around and buy new ones.

The right incentives have persuaded some people to get rid of weapons they no longer need or feel comfortable keeping around the house.

D.J. Scott used to hide his .44 caliber gun in the basement. But Scott said reports of youths accidentally shooting guns made him wary of keeping the weapon in a house with five children.

"If they look around long enough, they'll find it," said Scott, toting a gun inside a paper bag at one of Washington's police stations Friday. The city's program, after temporarily running short of cash, continued the collection Friday, after already taking in more than 400 guns.

"For $100 for an old gun, I'll take it," said Amelia Harris of Cheverly, Md., who was turning in a tarnished gun that had belonged to her grandmother.

Even the thousands of weapons turned in through such programs over the past few years barely makes a dent in the number of firearms in circulation across America, estimated at 220 million to 250 million by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Those figures do not account for firearms destroyed or rendered unfit for use, souvenirs brought back from overseas battles, guns smuggled into or out of the country or guns manufactured illegally.

ATF does not keep track of how many guns are collected through the firearms swaps.

A key draw of buyback programs is the "no questions asked" policy that affords protection to those who turn in guns.

"If we start taking names, we would only get legally owned guns," said Lt. Edward Zunino of Kennett Square, Pa., where a gun buyback program in place since May has draw in 25 rifles and 30 handguns.

The monetary rewards, meanwhile, have lured an avalanche of participants. In Connecticut, a 1994 statewide gun swap drew so many weapons the program quickly wound up owing $400,000 more than it had to give away. The program that offered a sliding scale of paybacks up to $500 in store vouchers for working assault-style firearms had been expected to draw 1,000 weapons over the course of four weeks. Instead, it attracted 4,000 guns in just four days.

Budget constraints prevented the Salt Lake City police department from offering money, so they had collected only a handful of guns during a 10-day program that ended Friday. A city buyback program several years ago drew about 1,000 guns.

In June, Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes initiated a guns-for-cash program dubbed "Turn it in for a Benjamin," referring to Benjamin Franklin, whose portrait is on $100 bills. After collecting more than 650 guns, the program spread citywide.

But some groups have opted not to use cash, including Operation Hope, a nonprofit organization in New Orleans. It considered paying $50 to $100 per gun, but decided against it, concerned that criminals might use the money to buy more guns or purchase illegal drugs.

"We wanted to make sure that the money was funneled into things that were healthy or humanistic," said John Royes, the group's president. Instead, sewing machines or grocery store gift certificates worth $50 or more were given in exchange for guns.

Coordinating with police in Lexington, Ky., McDonald's started a "Guns for Buns" initiative, handing out restaurant gift certificates for guns and assault-style weapons.

"The trend has been toward purchasing gift items like movie tickets and sneakers," said Wendy Adler, director of law enforcement at the Washington-based Center to Prevent Handgun Violence.

Some police departments are asking police ballistics laboratories to determine if turned-in firearms might be linked to any criminal investigations, but are not using them as trial evidence.

While many cities destroy or melt down the collected weapons, New Orleans found a more one ingenious use. Local sculptors assembled the gun parts into works for an exhibition called "Guns in the Hands of Artists."

China asks: How will U.S. respond to attack on Taiwan?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chinese officials are sounding out U.S. specialists on how the Clinton administration might respond to military action against Taiwan following tentative Taiwanese moves toward independence.

The Clinton administration repeated a longstanding warning Friday that it would view with "grave concern" any effort to settle the conflict with Taiwan by other than peaceful means. U.S. officials said there was no evidence of war preparations by China.

"It's the United States government judgment that there aren't any extraordinary developments or signs that there is a mobilization on the PRC's part," said National Security Council spokesman David Leavy.

Of immediate concern to the administration are the military aircraft that China and Taiwan have been flying in the Taiwan Strait over the past week. U.S. officials have said an accident involving rival aircraft could have unpredictable consequences.

One analyst said any Chinese action against Taiwan would have ruinous effects on Chinese ties to the West, threatening China's highly profitable trade with the United States and killing indefinitely China's hopes of joining the World Trade Organization.

Douglas Paal, president of the Washington-based Asia Pacific Policy Center, said he had been visited separately by Chinese military, government and academic representatives. He described the meetings as "much more intense" than interviews that he regularly has with them.

He said China regards the current difficulties with Taiwan as being more serious than the situation in 1996 when Taiwanese President Lee Teng-hui engaged in a campaign to gain greater international recognition for Taiwan.

Paal said the Chinese asked how the administration might respond to various possible situations but avoided describing specific scenarios that might suggest what they were considering.

He said they talked about the possibility of capturing small, outlying Taiwanese islands, then appeared to back away from that option as too ambitious. They also raised the possibility of attacking ships.

Paal added that the Chinese seemed to be carrying out a cost-benefit analysis. "They're in the process of trying to make a decision, and they want to know what the outcome would be," he said.

James Mulvenon, a Chinese army expert at the Rand research organization, said he also was approached by Chinese emissaries.

"They walk in with the same message," Mulvenon told The Washington Post. "We're going to do something. We can't tell you what, but we're going to do something. The goal for China would be to cause maximum impact in Taiwan without bringing in the United States."

It was hard to say whether China was carrying out normal information gathering activities, seeking to intimidate Taiwan through saber-rattling or attempting to accomplish both goals at the same time.

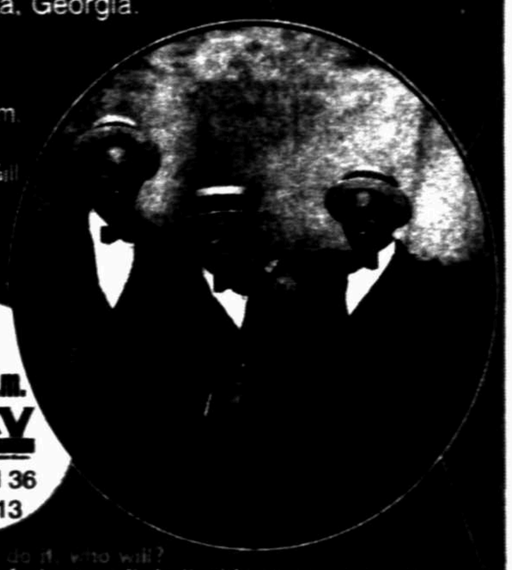

Both the New York Times and the Washington Post carried lengthy stories Friday on the Chinese activities.

Chinese Embassy spokesman Yu Shuning said he was unaware of any contacts by embassy officials with U.S. China experts on the Taiwan issue. He repeated China's policy that it seeks peaceful reunification with Taiwan but does not rule out the use of force. To do so, he said, would make peaceful reunification impossible.

William Triplett, a China-watcher and former chief Republican counsel on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Beijing-inspired stories about alleged Chinese war plans have been appearing in the East Asia press for the past month.

They began shortly after Lee first talked about dealing with China on a "state-to-state" basis — a seeming departure from the "one-China" policy China and Taiwan have been pursuing for decades, Triplett said. China regards Taiwan as a renegade province whose political separation from the mainland is temporary.

Clinton holds trump cards in upcoming budget showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another autumn, another budget showdown between President Clinton and the Republican Congress. And once again, Clinton seems to be in a commanding position.

Clinton can — and will — veto the GOP's tax cuts, the crown jewel of the party's legislative agenda, apparently without paying much of a price. The healthy economy has bred ambivalence toward tax reductions, and the consequence of a veto is a politically harmless continuation of current tax laws.

Meanwhile, Republicans will be pressured to cede Clinton at least some of the extra billions for education and other domestic programs that he and many from both parties want. Without at least a temporary agreement on spending, federal agencies would shut down when fiscal 2000 begins Oct. 1, a scenario Republicans are determined to avoid.

Clinton's leverage may be so great that a grand deal involving tax cuts, higher spending and Medicare changes, like creating a prescription drugs benefit, may hinge on one question: Does he think an agreement would enhance his impeachment-tarred legacy?

"Clinton has always wanted some policy achievement ... and he's got the cards," said Dan Palazzolo, a University of Richmond political scientist who has written about Washington's budget wars.

Even so, Clinton must decide whether a budget compromise would be legacy material. After the projected $1 trillion surplus is divided among tax cuts and a host of programs, it may not produce much for the history books.

"I don't see these as major policy accomplishments for the ages," said Mark Rozell, political science professor at Catholic University in Washington.

Before leaving for their August recess, Republicans sent Clinton a 10-year, $792 billion bill showering tax cuts on families, businesses and investors. Clinton will welcome lawmakers back to the capital next month by vetoing it.

Administration advisers said Friday that Clinton will ask Republicans to take the first step toward compromise by coming up with their own plan for Medicare prescription drug coverage and long-term stability for the program.

"That would provide the basis for the president, the Democrats and the Republicans to work together," said White House economic adviser Gene Sperling.

Congress will also try finishing the 13 annual spending bills financing federal agencies. Due to disputes over money, environmental provisions and other issues, some will probably fall short of congressional approval or be vetoed. By then, Republicans hope to have shored up their position.

They are spending August staging town-hall meetings aimed at pumping up tax cut enthusiasm. And by Oct. 1, they plan to pass legislation temporarily keeping agencies open at last year's spending levels — hoping to prevent Clinton from accusing them of slashing popular programs.

"We have restrained spending and tried to cut taxes," said House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, describing the GOP message at that point. "This is who we are. Now we can come together and try to find a solution" with Clinton.

The public has an interest in tax cuts, according to recent polls, but that interest diminishes when they are asked whether they would rather have a tax cut or funding for specific programs like Social Security, education or health care.

The soft support for tax cuts could be explained in an ABC News poll taken at the end of July that showed about half think tax cuts are most beneficial to the wealthy — three times the number who think middle-income people benefit the most.

For now, each side is divided over whether to compromise or take the budget issue to the election, and leaders are talking tough.

DeLay says Republicans will force Clinton "on his knees" by maneuvering him into demanding to spend Social Security surpluses, which both parties have declared off-limits.

Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers has told congressional Democrats that the White House prefers a deal, but would be content to simply win some spending fights, participants say.

"Much better that we pay down debt substantially this year and prove unable to establish a framework for the future than that we take commitments this year that mortgage the future in a major way. That's a place the president's not going to be willing to go," Summers told reporters Friday.

Further clouding GOP prospects is history. Clinton has won every major budget clash with his Republican rivals.

High-rise burglar known as Spiderman gets 30 more years for another burglary

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The burglar known as Spiderman, who was sentenced to 20 years in prison this week in Miami, received another 30 years Friday.

Derrick James, 34, was sentenced in Circuit Court for the burglary of a Hallandale condominium. The 30-year sentence will run consecutively to the Miami term.

"Twenty years here, 30 years there — the sentence doesn't reach the crime," the bearded, balding James, shackled and wearing a red prison jumpsuit, told the judge.

Police believe the former Army paratrooper stole $6 million in cash, jewelry and credit cards in more than 130 high-rise burglaries in South Florida. Police called him Spiderman because he used his agility and upper-body strength to climb quickly from one balcony to the next without ropes or hooks.

He was sentenced Monday in Miami to 20 years in prison for stealing $5,000 in cash and property from a seventh-floor bayside condominium.

James' attorney said she would appeal his convictions.

Experts muse about effect of deregulation on power outages

AUSTIN (AP) — Deregulation of the state's electric utilities should lead to construction of new power plants, reducing the kind of outages suffered this week at many large commercial customers, officials say.

For several years, utilities and independent power producers were uncertain whether their industry would be freed from regulation by the Public Utility Commission. That led them to delay major new projects.

The Legislature approved a long-awaited deregulation law this year. That, said PUC chairman Pat Wood, "is 90 percent of the fix for what we've seen over the last 10 days."

"We will have lots of competing plants and lots of power."

The deregulation bill takes effect Sept. 1, and competition will begin in 2002. Before the Legislature passed the bill, producers were reluctant to invest the $3 million to $4 million it takes to build a facility, Wood said.

"They are not going to invest all that money if they think things were still going to be controlled by the PUC," Wood said.

Now that lawmakers have deregulated the market — meaning that utilities will have to compete for customers — the power producers are ready to set roots, he said.

More than 30 power plants are in the planning stages. Some will begin operating later this year, while others aren't expected until 2001, according to the PUC.

The state's lack of excess capacity and the move toward deregulation appears to be attracting power developers to Texas.

"It just provides us access to new customers," said Katherine Potter, spokesman for California-based Calpine, which is planning a new generation plant near McAllen.

Some consumer advocates questioned whether deregulation will raise utility bills. As evidence, they pointed to the migration of independent power producers now headed for Texas.

"Why would they want to come here now, after deregulation?" said Janee Briesemeister, senior policy analyst for Consumers Union. "The only difference is that they must think they can make more money."

In the regulated market, an independent power producer contracting with a retail utility must get approval from the PUC, which ensures that the price charged to residential customers is fair, said Ms. Briesemeister.

"Now there is no PUC to say whether this is good for residential customers or not," she said.

But Stephanie Kroger, a spokeswoman for Texas Industrial Energy Consumers, which represents industrial companies that use lots of power, said market forces will keep prices in line.

"Where we ought to be concerned is if we didn't see (power producers) coming, then prices would be going up," said Ms. Kroger.

With the additional power capacity, the state shouldn't have to revisit problems such as those of this week, when large customers with special utility contracts were temporarily cut off during peak hours. Those customers — called "interruptibles" — get electricity at lower rates in exchange for taking the risk of temporarily losing their power.

By early afternoon Friday, there hadn't been any interruptions, according to the Electric Reliability Council of Texas.

With record-level power demand and the state's growing economy, Wood said, he wasn't surprised by the power interruptions some of the large customers encountered.

"It's inevitable that we have to have a transmission from the old world to new one," he said.

But it may also serve as inspiration for some independent producers, Wood said.

"With that kind of interruption this week, it is going to get these folks to work even faster," he said.

Rep. Steve Wolens, who guided the deregulation bill through the House, said he expected the power interruptions to become less common.

"One of the reasons for passing the bill was so that we would not have power outages," said Wolens, D-Dallas.

The legislation was designed so that the state would have enough capacity in place to deal with the growing economy and hot summers, he said, noting that energy experts had expected the strain on the electrical grids.

"I think I am more optimistic that I am anything else," Wolens said. "Texas will be ready."

Farmer diagnosed with hantavirus, deadly non-contageous disease

AMARILLO (AP) — A Castro County farmer has been treated successfully for hantavirus pulmonary syndrome, the first case of the deadly virus in Texas since October 1997.

The 51-year-old Panhandle man became sick in April, according to Texas Department of Health reports. He was diagnosed, treated and discharged at an Amarillo hospital in May.

Health department officials first learned of the case on July 8. Testing July 23 confirmed the hantavirus infection.

Hantavirus, a virus that originated in Asia and Europe, cannot be spread from person to person. The greatest risk of infection is through contact with infected rodents or their droppings, urine, saliva or nesting materials.

The syndrome begins with fever, muscle aches, nausea and vomiting and can lead to respiratory failure and shock.

Only 12 cases of the disease have been reported in Texas, historically. Of those, five died and seven survived.

Hotel reopens one week after explosion

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The hotel where a gas explosion injured dozens of people last week was reopened Friday.

More than 30 people suffered minor injuries in the Aug. 6 blast at the Embassy Suites Outdoor World just north of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

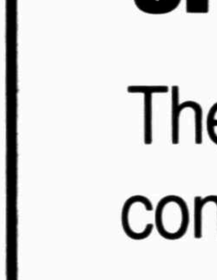

One man, Thomas E. Macer of New Boston, remained hospitalized in Dallas Friday with burns suffered in the explosion.

Macer was among contractors working on equipment in the pool area of the hotel. Authorities have blamed the explosion on gas lines that supplied the pool's heater.

Court-appointed doctors determine comatose Mother and fetus are dead

HOUSTON (AP) — Court-appointed doctors have determined that a comatose woman and her 17-week-old male fetus are both dead, effectively ending a bitter legal dispute over life-support, attorneys said Friday.

A neurologist determined late Thursday that 34-year-old Tammy Martin is brain-dead, and a neonatologist found no evidence of a fetal heartbeat, said Craig Smyser, attorney for Memorial Hermann Hospital Northwest.

The independent doctors were appointed by Harris County Probate Judge Rory Olsen to confirm the results of hospital tests performed Monday. Olsen has presided over the court case pitting Ms. Martin's boyfriend, Scott Law of Houston, against her relatives.

Law, 35, believes he is the father of the fetus and filed suit to keep Ms. Martin on life support after she slipped into a coma July 18. Ms. Martin's relatives argued that she was brain dead and that the fetus had little chance for survival because she abused cocaine and alcohol.

Smyser said the hospital hopes to bring a quick end to the saga.

"We're trying to get a court hearing now. We want to have a hearing this afternoon to allow the natural processes which are already starting to be allowed to finish and to allow the family to handle Tammy as they see fit," he said.

Ms. Martin's body will be kept on life-support until the judge rules that the hospital's machines can be turned off. Olsen's court coordinator said she was trying to set up a hearing.

Ms. Martin's brother, Lonnie Martin of Splendora, said his family is glad to have the doctors' official rulings.

"We do have a sense of relief, but there's also a very big sense of grief because now we're going through two deaths," Martin said. "This will bring some closure for my mother and for my 9-year-old niece, Tammy's daughter."

Law's attorney, Michael Stanley, said his client has been "devastated" since learning that the fetus might be dead on Monday.

"He needs to talk to the doctors and understand what's going on," Stanley said.

Hospital spokeswoman Patty Riddlebarger said the doctor examining Ms. Martin Thursday performed an apnea test, the definitive exam to detect brain activity. Doctors had previously refused to conduct the test for fear it might harm the fetus.

Lonnie Martin said that while the court case over life support may be winding down, the family still wants Law held responsible for Ms. Martin's death.

"It's not over yet. It's not over by any means," he said. "We intend to pull ourselves together and bury my sister and the fetus so they can go to heaven. Then we'll go from there," he said.

Harris County Sheriff's Lt. John Denholm said an investigation of the events leading up to Ms. Martin's injury has been referred to the district attorney's office for presentation to a grand jury. The sheriff's department routinely refers traffic fatalities to prosecutors.

Law told police Ms. Martin fell and hit her head the morning of July 18 while the two argued alongside his pickup truck. He said the pickup lurched into her when he shifted gears.

Denholm said tests on the truck confirmed the transmission problem Law described. Ms. Martin's blood-alcohol level was .38 — .08 is considered intoxicated — and she had cocaine in her system, he said.

Crops expected to be excellent this year

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers are expecting one of their best harvests in years, although they won't be getting the best prices for their crops.

"It's bumper yields and the lowest prices since 1986," said economist Carl Anderson, a cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton production is expected to increase by 47 percent from the 1998 drought-slashed harvest. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service says it expects 5.3 million bales out of cotton, the state's leading cash crop, based upon Aug. 1 field conditions.

Though not a record high, the state's cotton harvest would be up 3 percent from the 5.14 million 480-pound bales produced in 1997, the previous peak for the 1990s.

Grain prices also are at their lowest levels since the mid-1980s, and soybean prices are at their lowest since 1972, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said.

Although the income of farmers and farm suppliers will suffer, the Texas beef cattle industry, livestock feeders and the poultry industry are benefiting from the low feed-grain prices.

Corn farmers, for example, could reap record high average yields between 90 and 115 bushels per acre across North Central and Central Texas and along portions of the Gulf Coast.

The average expected cotton yield is expected at 509 pounds per acre, one of the highest rates ever, and record high yields are possible along the Gulf Coast.

The bright outlook comes despite Texans losing a surprisingly high 900,000 acres of planted cotton — about 800,000 of them in West Texas — to hailstorms, washouts, diseases and cool June weather, Anderson said.

In a typical year, Texas farmers lose about 300,000 to 500,000 cotton acres. A majority of those West Texas acres were replanted in alternative crops or cotton, according to extension estimates.

"It's going to run the gamut this year," said agronomist Randy Boman, extension cotton specialist in Lubbock. He cited anticipated results from Lamesa to north of Plainview, the state's major cotton-growing region.

Police: Girl gang allegedly pulled off armed robberies

HOUSTON (AP) — It may be the first time being grounded got in the way of committing armed robbery.

Police on Friday accused four teen-aged girls from the white-collar Houston suburb of Kingwood of a string of five armed robberies from May 30 to July 10.

Authorities charged Katie Marie Dunn, Malissa Chalerm Warzeka, both 17, and Michelle Renee Morneau, 18, with one count each of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. A 16-year-old female, whose identity was not released because of her age, was charged with two counts of aggravated robbery.

At least one of the suspects ran into an unusual obstacle that kept her from continuing to take part in the spree of banditry.

"The only reason she quit doing the robberies was because she was grounded," Billy Stephens of the Houston Police Department said

All four are middle-class suburban high school students or recent graduates, and one is even a member of her school's drill team. At night, police said, the girls became gun-wielding bandits with no remorse.

"That's not the typical profile of an aggravated robbery suspect," said Capt. Steve Smith.

The four began to plan the armed robberies when they found their purses were empty, Stephens said.

"They were sitting at a Sonic restaurant, and ran out of money and said 'Let's do a robbery,'" Stephens said. "One of them said 'I've got a gun' and another said 'I've got a mask.'"

Thus sprouted the gang of four, armed with a shotgun, a .22 rifle and semiautomatic pistol.

Two would enter the store armed with guns, with one acting as lookout and the other handling the cashier, Stephens said. A third was the getaway driver, he said.

And according to a victim of a July 1 robbery, they knew what to say when pointing a gun.

"The one that was in front me kept telling me I had two minutes to hand over the cash or she was going to shoot me," said Cynthia Woodard, a clerk at the Stop N Drive convenience store in Kingwood. "I was so nervous I threw the money over the bag they held out in front of me."

Ms. Woodard said she thought the robbers were pubescent boys whose voices were changing.

"I wonder if I would have been as scared if I had known they were women," she said. "I don't know if I would have handled it very differently when I had two guns in my face."

The teens went to great pains to hide their identities during the robberies, wearing hooded jackets, gloves and sunglasses to completely cover their skin, police said.

But stealth dropped by the wayside when the girls were out socializing, Stephens said.

"It was brought to our attention that they were going to parties, really bragging up a storm," Stephens said.

Police began taking the gang down with the arrest of Ms. Dunn, who was leaving a drug store when she was met by officers on Aug. 6.

Ms. Dunn is a Filly — a member of the Kingwood High School Drill Team, Stephens said. She quickly confessed to the robberies and implicated her confederates, he said.

Strangely, the youngest member of the group was the apparent leader of the pack, he said.

"I hate to call her the ringleader, but she seemed to be the instigator of the whole deal," Stephens said.

All four are free on bonds varying from $20,000 to $30,000 and are due to return to court on Sept. 2. Only one has any prior criminal record. Ms. Wazerka was arrested and charged with assault for hitting her sister, Jessica, on Aug. 2.

Additional charges against the four are expected. The Montgomery County Sheriff's Office is also investigating two of the robberies, which occurred in their jurisdiction. Charges are expected in those cases as well, police said.

Haas holds one shot lead at PGA

MEDINAH, Ill. — After 23 years on the PGA Tour, Jay Haas appreciates every opportunity to win his first major championship.

Tiger Woods expects it.

The ovation grew louder as Haas walked up to the 17th green at Medinah Country Club on his way to a one-stroke lead after two rounds in the PGA Championship. His 18-year-old son was at his side, carrying the bag before he goes off to college.

"I just looked at him and said, 'It's pretty neat, isn't it?' And he just had a big grin on his face," Haas said. "That makes it pretty special for me."

Haas can count on one hand the number of times he has contended in a major championship. A 5-under 67 on Friday gave him a one-stroke lead over Mike Weir, the first time he has held the 36-hole lead in a major since the 1995 Masters.

"You just don't get that many opportunities, period," Haas said. "There's just a handful of guys who threaten every major."

One of those guys is Woods, in the hunt for a major for the third straight time.

"The key is to keep giving yourself chances," Woods said. "And I've done that this year."

He finished third in the U.S. Open. He tied for seventh, four strokes out of the playoff, in the British Open. Already a four-time winner this year, he is playing like his 0-for-10 streak since winning the Masters is about to end.

"Tiger Woods emasculated the golf course," Watson said.

Medinah rejuvenated 54-year-old Hale Irwin and frustrated 19-year-old Sergio Garcia. Above all, it rewarded Haas.

Despite a bogey on the 18th, his first in 24 holes, he finished before the rain and was at 9-under 135. One stroke behind was Weir, the left-handed Canadian who had a share of the lead until making bogeys on two of the last three holes for a 68.

"That's what I've worked for my entire career, to be in position

BIG 12 PREVIEW: TEXAS TECH

Counting on Offense

With Reagor gone, Tech hopes offense can take up slack

By Chris Newton
Associated press Writer

LUBBOCK — When Ricky Williams couldn't find a hole and Rob Peters couldn't find a receiver in the fourth quarter last season, it was often defensive lineman Montae Reagor who bailed out Texas Tech.

Reagor, the Red Raiders' all-time sack leader, led a fumble-forcing, swarming defense that ranked eighth nationally in total defense. Minus Reagor, now with the Denver Broncos, and four other defensive starters, the Tech offense will have to carry its own weight in 1999.

"There were at least a few games the defense won for us and they put us in position to win every game," coach Spike Dykes said. "This year we'll have to give ourselves more room in the fourth quarter."

There are reasons for cautious optimism, chief among them an experienced quarterback and one of the nation's best running backs.

Peters returns at quarterback after sitting out half of 1998 with a sprained shoulder and missing spring workouts because of thumb surgery.

Peters, who threw for 1 269 yards and nine touchdowns last year, said the Raiders have spiced up their offense.

"We're looking to speed things up a little and have better transition between our running game and our passing game," he said. "We're running at some different angles and looking at more short-yardage plays. I feel great and can't wait to get out there for our first game."

Peters' first — and best — option will be handing off to Williams, who carried 306 times for 1,582 yards and 13 touchdowns as a sophomore. The 5-foot-9 back bulked up from 175 to 190 pounds during the off-season.

"I know that I'm going to have to run a lot more this season," Williams said. "I'm ready to handle the extra load."

Williams again will have a beefy line opening holes for him. Tech's offensive line remains the nation's biggest, with eight players over 300 pounds. All-Big 12 guard Curtis Lowery (6-5, 327 pounds) anchors the left side next to 357-pound tackle Jonathan Gray.

As for the passing game, Tech hopes receiv-

Texas Tech running back Ricky Williams rushed for 1,582 yards last season, making him the second-leading rusher among Big 12 backs named Ricky Williams. But with the Longhorn star in the NFL, the Red Raiders' Williams has the opportunity to make a name for himself.

Tech RB looks to be 'The Ricky' in '99

By Chris Newton
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — It could be argued that Texas Tech's star back runs in one of the biggest shadows in college football history.

He was the nation's fourth-best rusher last year with an average of 143 yards a game, usually plenty to distinguish a running back — unless he happens to play in the same conference with a Heisman Trophy winner who is the most prolific Division I running back ever.

And, worse yet, who happens to have the same name.

"I was probably asked about Texas' Ricky Williams at least once per interview," Tech's Ricky Williams said. "And I know that some people still think I'm the guy with the dreadlocks."

He acknowledges the questions and comparisons have rankled him.

"I want to make the other Ricky have to share his name with me," he said. "It would be nice for him to be mistaken for me someday."

Now that his nemesis is in the NFL, there should be no more confusion. The Other Ricky Williams is poised to become the top back in Texas, and possibly the nation. He's even on track to challenge the rushing record Williams set last year.

Entering his junior season, Tech's Williams has 2,476 yards, 214 yards ahead of the Longhorns star at the same point in his career but a long, long way from the record 6,279 career yards. The Red Raider must average 173 yards per game over his final two regular seasons to get there.

Talk of records doesn't seem to interest the star.

"I'll let other people have high expectations about my career, but my expectation is to play my very best game every game," he said. "The rest should fall into place."

Tech coach Spike Dykes said this is a key year for his back.

"The jury is still out on our Ricky Williams," Dykes said. "If you look at the legendary backs that have come out of Texas, his start is comparable to many of theirs and even more impressive than some. But it is just a start.

"He is a junior and these are the years when his legacy will be made or broken."

More than fame and Williams' Heisman hopes are on the line. Texas Tech's success this season depends on his ability to emerge in his own right.

"He will have to step up and play big if we're going to get off the

Graf quits tennis with 22 Grand Slam titles

By Roy Kammerer
Associated Press Writer

HEIDELBERG, Germany — When the fun stopped, Steffi Graf did what so many superstars have done in recent months. She said goodbye.

After 22 Grand Slam singles titles, 107 tournament wins on the WTA Tour and a record 377 weeks as the No. 1 player in the world, Graf retired Friday from the sport she dominated for nearly two decades.

Graf

One of just five players to sweep the Grand Slam in a single year, she said she had "nothing left to accomplish."

"I'm not having fun anymore," Graf, fighting back tears, said at a news conference near her hometown of Bruehl.

Her announcement, foreshadowed by statements that she would not return to play Wimbledon or the French Open anymore, was the latest retirement this year by one of sports' dominant players. Graf followed the path taken by Michael Jordan, Wayne Gretzky, John Elway, Barry Sanders and Boris Becker, another German whose rise to the top of men's tennis in the mid-1980s paralleled her own leap to stardom.

She had fought through numerous injuries in recent years and throughout her 17-year career, a tenure that also was plagued by off-court distractions.

It wasn't that the 30-year-old found it hard to keep up with today's generation of teen-age stars: Graf proved she still was a contender by beating Martina Hingis in this year's French Open and reaching the final at Wimbledon.

"It was almost too easy to catch up to the top players again," Graf said. "I have nothing left to prove."

But the wins have been fewer and farther between in recent years.

After winning three Grand Slam tournaments in 1996, Graf won only one tournament in 1997 and four more in 1998. The French Open was her only title this year and her first Grand Slam in three years.

Graf said the decision to quit came two weeks ago as she was flying to a tournament in San Diego, where a thigh injury later caused her to pull out of her first-round match against American Amy

Cowboys' RB situation will remain strong

Associated Press

WICHITA FALLS — With the Dallas Cowboys lines making hard contact for the first time Friday, Emmitt Smith owned the field, bouncing off defenders and cutting up the middle.

By appearances, Smith still has what it takes to be the Cowboys' backfield workhorse while backup Chris Warren works as a jack-of-all-trades. And Smith looks happier than he was at this time last year.

"It felt good today," Smith said as he signed caps and cards for youngsters chanting his name Friday. "We're having fun out there and we're doing things right."

"We're getting into the grind of things and I like that. It's hard to show what you can do when people aren't out there hitting. Now we can show where we're at."

Smith faced questions last year about whether he was competing with Warren for the starting job even though coach Chan Gailey said almost daily that Smith was his man.

He seems to have put the questions behind him by gaining 1,332 yards last season.

Smith smiled at predictions that he and Warren could combine for more than 2,000 yards rushing

Rockets owner: Barkley ready to re-sign

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Charles Barkley will return to the Houston Rockets and is almost ready to sign a deal, the team's owner said Friday.

Les Alexander told Houston radio station KTRH-AM and television station KRIV that the sides are close to a signing a one-year contract.

"People in our organization have spoken to Charles, and Charles is definitely coming back," Alexander said, adding that negotiations have taken place over the last 10 days.

Kenny Thomas, the Rockets' top draft pick who has said he wanted to be tutored by Barkley at the power forward position, signed a contract with the Rockets on Friday. Terms were not disclosed.

Barkley initially said he was leaning toward retirement after the Los Angeles Lakers ousted the aging Rockets in the first round of the playoffs last season.

Later, he said the Lakers, Seattle Supersonics and Utah Jazz were interested in his services. He reversed his stance last week, saying he hoped to have a deal with the Rockets done by mid-August.

Barkley, a 14-year veteran, has spent the last three seasons in Houston. His agent, Glenn Guthrie, did not immediately return a call from the AP.

Alexander also said he was hopeful Scottie Pippen would remain with the team as well, but would not rule out a trade, which the forward reportedly has requested.

"I wasn't especially pleased," Alexander said of the trade demand. "He's the first person since I've owned the team who has really asked not to play in Houston."

White Sox pull off sweep of Rangers

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Ray Durham drove in three runs in the second game of a doubleheader Friday night to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 7-4 victory and a sweep of the Texas Rangers.

In the opener, Kip Wells (2-0) won his second big league start to give the White Sox a 4-2 victory and was then optioned back to the minors after the game.

Durham hit a two-run homer and a RBI single off Ryan Glenn (2-4) in the second game for the White Sox, who had lost a season-high seven straight before the sweep.

Texas has lost six of its last nine games and saw its lead over Oakland in the AL West slip to 5 1/2 games.

In the second game, James Baldwin (6-11) gave up two runs and 10 hits in 6 1-3 innings for his second win in his last eight starts.

After Magglio Ordonez's RBI groundout in the first gave Chicago the lead, Brook Fordyce hit a run-scoring double and scored on Durham's single in the second to make it 3-0. Chris Singleton added an RBI double in the third.

Durham hit his 13th homer in the fourth to make it 6-0 and Caruso added a run-scoring groundout in the sixth.

Glynn gave up six runs and nine hits in five-plus innings.

Rusty Greer hit solo homers in both games and had a two-run single in the seventh of the nightcap for the Rangers. Greer has 11 homers.

Lee Stevens added a solo homer in the ninth for Texas.

■ AL Roundup

In the opener, Wells (2-0), Chicago's No. 1 pick in the 1998 amateur draft, gave up one run, three hits and three walks in five innings. He struck out six and overcame a 56-minute rain delay in the top of the third.

The 22-year-old right-hander won his major-league debut Aug. 2 against Detroit, allowing two runs — one earned — in 5 1-3 innings.

He was sent back to Double-A Birmingham following that start and recalled before Friday's doubleheader. Immediately after the first game, Wells was again optioned to Birmingham.

"I know it's part of the game," Wells said. "I didn't expect to walk in here and take over. They've got five guys in the rotation. Six won't do it."

Bob Howry pitched the ninth for his 19th save in 23 chances.

A's 9, Blue Jays 8

TORONTO — Matt Stairs hit two homers, including a tiebreaking grand slam in the fifth inning, as the Oakland A's beat the Toronto Blue Jays in the opener of a three-game series between AL wild-card contenders.

The A's, who moved to within 1 1/2 games of the Blue Jays, are in the midst of an important seven-game road trip with two more games against Toronto and four in Boston.

Kevin Appier (12-9), acquired from Kansas City at the trading deadline, won his third straight start with his new team. Roy Halladay (8-5) took the loss after starting in place of David Wells, who is day-to-day with a sore back.

Red Sox 11, Mariners 6

BOSTON — Troy O'Leary had a tiebreaking bases-loaded triple and Brian Daubach drove in a career-high five runs with a homer and two doubles to lift Boston over Seattle.

Darren Lewis scored a career-high five runs for the Red Sox, who won for the seventh time in nine games to move a half-game ahead of Toronto in the wild-card race.

Indians 6, Orioles 3

CLEVELAND — Manny Ramirez hit his second two-run homer one batter after Roberto Alomar singled in the go-ahead run in the eighth inning as the Cleveland Indians returned home to get their fourth straight win.

Baltimore reliever Jesse Orosco pitched in his 1,071st game, tying Dennis Eckersley for the major league record. Orosco entered the game tied with Hoyt Wilhelm for second.

But Orosco's eighth-inning appearance didn't come until Ramirez had capped a three-run eighth with his 32nd homer, giving him 120 RBIs. He hit a two-run homer in the sixth off Scott Erickson (8-10) to put Cleveland ahead 3-1.

Royals 2, Devil Rays 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Joe Randa hit a bases-loaded single over a drawn-in infield to lift the Kansas City Royals over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

The Royals loaded the bases against Esteban Yan (3-3) on consecutive singles by Carlos Beltran and Mike Sweeney and an intentional walk to Jermaine Dye.

El Paso's Kermode makes RockHounds' bats go 'Kerplunk'

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland RockHounds' upcoming home series with the Wichita Wranglers has been called the most important in at least eight years.

Hopefully, Midland will not be facing any pitchers like El Paso's Al Kermode.

It was Kermode, who shut out the RockHounds 7-0 Friday night in a masterful performance at Cohen Stadium.

Kermode allowed six hits and struck out eight in the complete-game shutout. More importantly and most impressively, Kermode walked one to raise his total to three walks over the last 52 innings. Kermode improved to 4-2.

The loss was an unusual one for Midland. It was the fifth time in 119 games that the RockHounds have been shutout this season. It was also a loss they could ill-afford. While Kermode was doing his thing, the Wichita Wranglers handed the San Antonio Missions another defeat, 8-1.

The Wranglers (31-19) now lead the RockHounds (27-24) by 4 1/2 games. Sunday, the two teams will take the field at Christensen Stadium for the first of five games. The second half title in the Texas League West may hang in the balance.

Friday, El Paso got on the board quickly en route to its second straight win over Midland. Ryan Owens knocked a two-run, two-out hit off Julian Leyva (2-2). Wichita scored three runs in the first. The Wranglers added four more.

SMELL WHAT ROCKY IS COOKING?: RockHound pitcher Chris Enochs was sent down to the Single-A California League. His spot on the roster will be taken by Barry Zito, Oakland's No. 1 draft pick in the draft in June. Zito, who played his college ball at the University of Southern California (USC), is expected to make his first appearance in a RockHound uniform Monday versus the Wranglers. Zito had a 3-0 record in eight starts with Visalia. He struck out 62 in 40 1/3 innings... Four 'Hounds kept hitting streaks alive. Tim Garland (12), Willie Morales (11), Adam Piatt (10) and Mark Bellhorn (7)... Both teams have won two games in this series... Tonight's starting pitchers are El Paso's Martin Sanchez (3-2, 3.89) and Midland's Kevin Gregg (4-6, 4.04)...

Pirates benefit from Astros' errors

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston committed two errors in the 13th inning, allowing Brian Giles to score the winning run as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Astros 6-5 Friday night.

The Astros' fourth straight loss dropped Houston three percentage points behind Cincinnati in the NL Central.

Giles led off the 13th with a walk off Trever Miller (1-2). After Brian Williams relieved, third baseman Bill Spiers mishandled a grounder by Kevin Young, putting runners on first and second.

John Wehner then bunted toward third and Spiers' throw bounced off the glove of second baseman Craig Biggio. Giles scored the go-ahead run and the error was charged to Biggio. It was the fourth error of the game for Houston.

Joe Oliver followed with a sacrifice fly to make it 6-4.

Carl Everett hit two homers for the Astros, a three-run shot in the sixth inning and a solo homer in the 13th. Everett has a career-high 16 homers.

Brad Clontz (1-3) pitched a scoreless 12th for the victory. Mike Williams pitched the 13th for his 18th save. He allowed Everett's homer and walked two before getting Randy Knorr to ground out to end the game.

Houston starter Mike Hampton was seeking to become the first 17 game winner in the major leagues this season. He went allowed four runs and six hits in seven innings.

Hampton left trailing 4-3, but the Astros tied the game on an RBI infield single by Craig Biggio in the seventh inning.

Pittsburgh starter Francisco Cordova was looking for his fifth victory in his last six decisions. He allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the first when Giles hit his 25th home run of the season. It is the first home run this season by a left-handed hitter against Hampton.

Young hit his 17th home run of the season to lead off the Pirates' fourth, making it the first time since July 21, 1998 that Hampton has given up more than one homer in a game. Hampton had given up only seven home runs this season entering the game.

The Pirates increased their lead to 3-0 in the sixth on an RBI double by Wehner.

Cardinals 7, Cubs 1

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire hit his 45th and 46th home runs, moving three ahead of Sammy Sosa for the major league lead, and Kent Bottenfield earned his 16th win in the St. Louis Cardinals' win over the Chicago Cubs.

The game matched the top two home run hitters in the majors for the first time since the Cardinals visited Wrigley Field on May 28-30. Sosa, whose 66 homers last season were four behind McGwire's record-setting 70, went 0-for-2 with two walks and two strikeouts.

McGwire's multihomer game was his sixth of the season and 59th of his career. He went 3-for-4 and had five RBIs, giving him an NL-leading 107. McGwire has 503 career homers, one behind Eddie Murray for 15th place.

Bottenfield (16-5), who tied Houston's Mike Hampton for the NL lead in victories, allowed the Cubs one run and five hits in 6 2-3 innings. J.D. Drew and Fernando Tatis also hit solo home runs for the Cardinals off Chicago starter Kyle Farnsworth (2-6).

Reds 5, Phillies 4

CINCINNATI — Mike Cameron, Dmitri Young and Sean Casey hit consecutive one-out singles in the bottom of the ninth, leading Cincinnati over Philadelphia.

The Reds twice came from behind to win for the 14th time in their last 19 games and improve their home record to 29-29. Although they've got the best road record in the majors at 38-17, the Reds have not been above .500 at home this season.

Expos 14, Rockies 13, 10 innings, 1st game

Expos 8, Rockies 6, 2nd game

DENVER — Rondell White homered on the game's first pitch, and Vladimir Guerrero added a two-run shot as the Montreal Expos beat Colorado to complete a doubleheader sweep of the Rockies.

The Expos won the afternoon game when James Mouton scored on an error by Colorado first baseman Todd Helton with two outs in the 10th inning.

TECH: Raiders need better offense er Derek Dorris can replace the departed Donnie Hart, who caught 48 passes for 871 yards. Dorris, a junior, was second on the team with 28 catches for 395 yards.

(From 1B)

On defense, Tech will look to junior tackle Kris Kocurek to lead an experienced squad that had eight seniors listed as starters after spring drills. Kocurek was third on the team in total tackles last year with 87.

Dykes has made it clear he hopes the team won't rely on the defense as much as last season.

"We don't want as many close games if we can avoid it," Dykes said.

Nail-biters were the norm in 1998. Four games were won by key defensive stands and forced fumbles.

Against Oklahoma State, Tech led 17-10 but was sputtering as the Cowboys drove toward a game-tying touchdown with 2:53 left. Reagor forced a fumble, and linebacker Dorian Pitts ran it back for a 53-yard score. Tech held on for a 24-17 victory.

Texas Tech, 7-5 overall and 4-4 in the Big 12 last year, will start 1999 on Sept. 6 at Arizona State. The two biggest games of the season are likely to be against Texas A&M Oct. 2 in Lubbock and against Texas Nov. 13 in Austin. Tech closes the regular season Nov. 20 at home against Oklahoma.

If the Red Raiders secure another bowl bid, Dykes hopes to avoid what has become an annual postseason collapse.

In the Independence Bowl last season, 10-point underdog Mississippi managed 355 yards of offense in a 35-18 victory. The loss dropped Tech's record in bowl games to 5-17-1.

"If we get there we have to win," Dykes said. "Bowl games are opportunities ... the victory is not in just getting there. Sometimes you can play like you're just happy to be there and our goal this year is to walk away in victory."

WILLIAMS: Tech counts on star back ground," Dykes said.

(From 1B)

But, as quarterback Rob Peters said, "The great ones all have a supporting cast."

"We have to do our part to make Ricky successful," Peters said. "The offensive line has to come through."

Williams has spent the off-season working to live up to the expectations.

He put on 15 pounds — he is now listed at 5-9 and 190 — and took on a weightlifting and back-to-basics training regimen that included running hills while lashed to a car tire.

"I've really tried to work on my power," he said. "This year, I want to be able to run in such a way that even when the other team knows what is going to happen they are unable to stop me."

DALLAS: Smith, Warren look good

(From 1B)

this season. That total would make them one of the top running back duos in NFL history.

"People can make predictions, but the truth is, we've still got to go out there and do what we're going to do," Smith said.

Running backs coach Clarence Shelmon said Smith and Warren have the chance to become one of the great duos.

"Emmitt is just so smart and right now his vision is really good," Shelmon said. "He's really seeing things out there. Warren is here to give him a break and try to take advantage of one-on-one matchups. He has that speed and athleticism which will really allow him to break open some plays on third down."

But Warren's duties won't stop there. Coaches have expanded his duties to include time at fullback and wideout.

"He's also going to be doing a variety of things," Shelmon said.

Warren, known for not being very talkative at camp, dodged interviews, but Shelmon said the career rushing leader for the Seattle Seahawks has shown he can handle the different assignments.

"He has a lot to concentrate on and a lot to internalize mentally," Shelmon said. "But so far he's shown he can handle handle all of it."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 14, 1999:

Communication is the key to moving others' opinions. Keep talking; don't allow confusion or misunderstandings to intimidate you. It is important to let others express their ideas, even if they don't always make sense to you. You often read more into what others are saying. Be realistic. Recognize a tendency to put partners on pedestals. If you are single, your charm lures admirers. Love relationships are intense; you could fall into control games. Keep talking. If attached, there's a lot of heat between the two of you. Learn to manifest this energy positively. LIBRA loves to chat with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Dig; question; sort through misunderstandings. Another clearly doesn't hear you. Explain what you need to do. Remain open to others' input. Your sense of humor helps a friend see how silly all the confusion is. Tonight: Take off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You need a low-key weekend with few obligations and a lot of relaxation. Unwinding from work and personal responsibilities could take a lot. Be less demanding of yourself. Family gives you heavy feedback. Tonight: Be nurturing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Love heats up, even if you aren't sure where it is going. As passion builds, you become more sure of yourself and your feelings. Keep communication open, even though another might need to be vague. Humor carries you far. Swap jokes with a friend. Tonight: Naughty and nice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Home is where the heart is. Invite a loved one over or share your weekend with friends. A spontaneous party makes you and others happy. Build on established ground. Don't overspend. In the long run, you'll enjoy yourself far more if you keep your budget under control. Tonight: Barbecue.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Make calls; reach out for others. Conversations are active as others reveal more of themselves. Let your sense of humor come out. Don't worry as much. Talk about feelings — don't put them on the back burner. Tonight: One of those intellectual nights.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Spending can go out of whack for anyone. Be aware of how much you withhold your inner feelings. You could often act your frustrations out by spending. Refuse to let a family member intimidate you. Tonight: Dinner out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Beam in what you want. Don't stand on ceremony. A friend has ideas and wants to share. Confusion surrounds choices. This is one time you can't sit out. Use your magnetism. Tonight: Whatever puts a grin on your face!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Take time away from problems. Don't let yourself feel pushed by others. Spending needs to slow down some. A parent or respected authority figure appreciates your time and attention. Try to get in touch with these needs. Tonight: You deserve a night off.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Join friends; don't spend time alone. Your gregarious side emerges. Confusion surrounds plans; don't be surprised if, when meeting a friend, he is in one place while you're elsewhere. Tonight: Make the party rounds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Pressure to meet obligations could put a sour note into your day. Be sure about what is expected. Use special care with your funds. A partner gives you support; there is much more sharing between the two of you. Tonight: Leader of the gang.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ You're confused, as are others. Anchor in. Make sure others understand where you are coming from. Plans need to be confirmed, especially if you opt to leave town. Popularity soars; nevertheless, you're thinking escape. Tonight: Go for something different.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Make time for that special loved one. Closeness happens as you straighten out confusion. Don't make assumptions. Confirm what you think and what you are hearing. Others need to know exactly what is going on with you. Tonight: Let romance happen.

Duchovny suing 'X-Files' producer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — "The X-Files" star David Duchovny is suing the show's producer, 20th Century Fox Film Corp., claiming Fox gave its own stations sweetheart deals on "X-Files" reruns.

David Duchovny is suing 'X-Files' producer 20th Century Fox.

The suit, filed Thursday in Superior Court, claims Fox breached Duchovny's contract and paid "X-Files" creator Chris Carter more than $34 million and promised him a new series to keep him quiet about the deal.

The suit did not specify damages.

Fox sold the series to its own broadcast network, Fox Broadcasting Co., and its own cable network, FX Cable Network. Syndication rights were sold to its own group of stations, Fox Television Stations. The lawsuit contends that Fox should have sold the series to the highest bidder.

Fox said in a news release that it would not comment. A message left at Carter's office Friday was not immediately returned.

NEW YORK — Simon & Schuster's editor in chief, Michael Korda, was recovering in a hospital Friday, a day after collapsing in Central Park during an evening jog.

Korda, 65, was in good condition in a coronary care unit.

Korda has spent 40 years working with a superstar stable of authors, including Jackie Collins and Mary Higgins Clark.

His own books include "Queenie," a best-selling biography about his aunt, the late actress Merle Oberon, and "Power!" which was about getting ahead in the business world.

LONDON — Thieves broke into the London home of Hollywood director Ridley Scott, punched his 94-year-old mother and took the Rolex watch from her wrist, a newspaper reported Friday.

Her screams alerted a nurse and Scott's ex-wife. As they fled upstairs to call police, one of the intruders chased them and warned: "Don't make a noise or I'll kill you," the Evening Standard reported.

The women handed over rings and a necklace. When they managed to trigger an alarm, the robbers ran.

Scott, director of "Blade Runner," "Thelma and Louise" and "Alien," was thought to have been away when the Aug. 4 attack occurred. He and his brother Tony Scott, director of "Top Gun," own Britain's Shepperton Studios.

LOS ANGELES — A man jailed on charges of forging actor Burt Reynolds' signature on a $20,000 check won't get much sympathy from Los Angeles police.

William Patrick Bentley, 39, was arrested Thursday as he walked into a downtown courtroom.

The reason for his appearance: charges of stealing $30,000 from a fund for Los Angeles police officers' widows and orphans. Bentley had been hired to promote the Los Angeles Police Memorial Foundation's annual golf tournament.

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent — The Caribbean nation of St. Vincent and the Grenadines is giving Mike Wallace its seal of approval.

St. Vincent is issuing a 70 cent (25 cent U.S.) postage stamp featuring the 81-year-old "60 Minutes" journalist as part of the United Nations' "Year of the Elder" program.

Others being honored with commemorative stamps: retired Gen. Colin Powell, bluesman B.B. King, actor Jack Palance, writer Elie Wiesel and architect I.M. Pei.

"We are focusing on older persons who have made contributions in their respective fields," Cheryl Hinds, manager of the St. Vincent Philatelic Services, said Friday.

GRAF: Player 'not having fun anymore

(From 1B)

Frazier.

It turned out to be her last official appearance on tour.

"The weeks following Wimbledon weren't easy for me," Graf said. "I was pulled back and forth, but when I made my decision I didn't think about it one minute afterward."

She also said her decision had nothing to do with injuries.

"Right now, I'm perfectly fit," Graf said.

Graf turned pro in 1982 at the age of 13, and even as a pigtailed teen-ager presented a stern and determined figure on the court — a contrast to her modest, almost shy demeanor off-court.

She won her first tournament in April 1986, beating Chris Evert in Hilton Head. Graf beat Evert again 11 months later in Key Biscayne, becoming the youngest player to pass $1 million in earnings.

Graf won her first Grand Slam title in June 1987, beating Martina Navratilova at the French Open, and in August of that year earned the No. 1 world ranking for the first time.

Nicknamed "Fraulein Forehand" for her devastating trademark shot, Graf won more than $20 million during her career. In 1988, she won all four majors — the Australian, French and U.S. opens, and Wimbledon — and completed a "Golden Slam" with the women's singles title at the Seoul Olympics.

Graf, Margaret Court and Maureen Connolly are the only women to complete the slam. Rod Laver twice swept all four majors and Don Budge did it once.

Graf won Wimbledon seven times, the French Open six times, the U.S. Open five times and the Australian Open four times.

Her growing popularity was accompanied by personal setbacks, including her father spending 15 months in jail in 1997 and 1998 for tax evasion on her tennis winnings.

In the early '90s, Graf met her match in the young Monica Seles. But Seles was stabbed by a deranged Graf fan during a tournament in 1993 in Hamburg, interrupting her career for two years.

Graf's injuries — over 50 in all — peaked in June 1997. She underwent knee surgery, and her career appeared to be over.

Despite the 8 1/2-month layoff, Graf fought through several other injuries to reach the top again — winning this year's French Open in a dramatic, emotional final against Hingis.

Graf said she plans a farewell tour of exhibition matches later this year, and will concentrate on her marketing company and developing young German talent.

But the first thing Graf plans to do is travel — without a tennis racket.

"On the plane coming back from San Diego, I just started poring through these magazines and thinking of all the places I could go," Graf said, laughing.

Tinning's eagle puts her two shots up at British

Associated Press

WOBURN, England — Convinced that three years of bad luck on the golf course are behind her, Iben Tinning chipped in from 40 yards at the last hole Friday and took a two-stroke lead at the Women's British Open.

The eagle 3 for a 69 put Tinning, of Denmark, at 9-under for a two-stroke lead over Sweden's Maria Hjorth.

With Laura Davies struggling to make the cut and the leading American challengers at least two shots off the lead, the Danish upstart stunned the gallery at 18 with her amazing finish.

She got within a short pitch of the green with a huge 5-wood second shot. Taking a sand wedge, she pitched the ball just short of the flag and watched it bounce twice before rolling into the hole.

"All through the round I was waiting for something to happen," she said. "At 18, I was hoping for a birdie but I didn't expect an eagle."

Tinning is receiving guidance from a coach who specializes in confidence-building. After three years without a tournament win, she believes one may be just around the corner.

Booth falls behind again

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Kellee Booth's dream of winning the U.S. Women's Amateur before turning pro will go unfulfilled.

Booth, the nation's top-ranked amateur, lost 4 and 2 to fellow Californian Dorothy Delasin in the semifinals. In Friday's other match, Jimin Kang of Edmonds, Wash., defeated Lorena Ochoa of Mexico 3 and 2.

Not all Ryder remarks are charitable

By Jimmy Burch
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

MEDINAH, Ill. — Officially, the word from the Ryder Cup rebels on the U.S. team is that they would be happy with a chance to direct charitable donations generated by the event and no longer are pushing to be paid for their services.

David Duval, Tiger Woods, Mark O'Meara and Phil Mickelson — the four players singled out Tuesday for selfish attitudes by U.S. captain Ben Crenshaw — all reiterated yesterday that they would be satisfied with a say in directing donations from the Sept. 24-26 event, which is expected to generate a $23 million profit.

Fellow players, however, question if that truly is the case.

"That's bull," said Paul Azinger, a three-time Ryder Cup participant. "It wasn't about charity at first. That's just spin control."

Players present in a Tuesday meeting with Ryder Cup officials said Davis Love III expressed exasperation with the play-for-pay quartet when he told them: "Let's be honest, this isn't about charity. It's about putting money in your pocket."

Indeed, players would receive a tax break from such donations. But Duval seemed mystified that people would question the sincerity of his charitable intentions.

"I really don't know how that works. I'm not at all looking for a tax break," Duval said. "That's ridiculous."

Not in the estimation of Brad Faxon, who suggested the U.S. team would be better off with lesser players willing to represent their country for free.

"This talk about the money going for charity is a crock," Faxon said. "I know a lot of guys ... who would pay to play on that team. I think we would be better off having them than the guys who are complaining about how much they're not getting." Second-guessing semantics After helping stir up the Ryder Cup controversy by terming the event "an exhibition" and scoffing at its $5,000 travel stipend, David Duval said he regrets making those remarks.

"I shouldn't have joked about the stipend," Duval said. "And calling it an 'exhibition' might have been a poor choice of words."

Yet that is exactly the term Tiger Woods continues to use in reference to the event, much to the chagrin of its organizers and Ben Crenshaw. Why?

"Is there a winner's check?," Woods asked.

No.

"Then it's an exhibition," he said.

Initially, Duval drew the ire of Crenshaw when he joked about the Ryder Cup's paltry travel stipend by saying he "just might take that money and retire." Kendall's record day Skip Kendall broke the Medinah Country Club course record in yesterday's second round, bagging seven birdies in his first 10 holes en route to a 7-under 65. Kendall, who opened with a 74, collected eight birdies and one bogey in eclipsing the previous mark of 66, held by five others, including first-round leader Sergio Garcia.

"I only missed one fairway all day, and I birdied that hole," Kendall said. "It was one of those rounds you dream about, especially in a major." Many happy returns After withdrawing from the tournament Thursday morning, Steve Elkington gave his golf bag to a young spectator and headed to a Chicago hospital to visit his caddie, Joe "Gypsy" Grillo, who was hospitalized with chest pains.

PGA: Weir trails Haas by only one stroke

(From 1B)

like this," Haas said.

Woods wasted no time getting there once again.

He hit wedge to 18 inches on the first hole, 7-iron to 3 feet on the second hole, then knocked in a 15-foot putt for his third straight birdie. It all added up to a 5-under 67, just two strokes back at 137.

"Guys were going kind of low," Woods said. "You could see Jay Haas playing really well at the time. I saw him at 8-under. That made it a ball game. I knew I needed to keep pace and not let him get too far away."

Lee Westwood was among the 46 players who broke par on another soggy day at Medinah. Skip Kendall set the course record with a 7-under 65 and was at 139, along with Stewart Cink and two other players born 35 years apart.

Jay Haas Jr. is only one year younger than 19-year-old Sergio Garcia, who missed six birdie putts inside 12 feet and wound up with a 1-over 73. His father must feel like a kid compared to Irwin, the senior tour star who had a 69.

"I've played with Hale a long time, and he can still kick my butt," Haas said.

Still, Haas' biggest concern is likely to be Woods.

In control of every facet of his game, Woods made five birdies over the first seven holes and threatened to zoom into the lead. His last birdie was on No. 12, but he also avoided bogey — nothing to be ashamed of considering that rain fell hard, steady and sometimes sideways over the final six holes.

"I'm very pleased with the way I played under these conditions — windy, rain, gusty, swirling. It wasn't easy," Woods said. "Somehow, I was able to make par after par after par."

The only Ryder Cup news Friday was on the leaderboard — and it was enough to make the Americans stop squabbling over the revenue.

Westwood, who was at 6-under 138, and Garcia were among five likely European Ryder Cup players in the top 16 on Friday. Miguel Angel Jimenez was at 140, and Colin Montgomerie and Jesper Parnevik were at 2-under 142.

Also at 142 was Nick Faldo, the most experienced Ryder Cup player ever who could be emerging from his prolonged slump at just the right time.

Some U.S. Ryder Cup hopes fizzled in the rain. Among those missing the cut were Lee Janzen, Tim Herron and John Huston, almost certainly eliminating them from consideration. Greg Norman and Ernie Els were also weekend casualties.

David Duval, No. 1 in the world ranking, missed two short birdie opportunities but still wound up with a 71. He was at 141, along with Jim Furyk and another blast from the past — 49-year-old Lanny Wadkins.

One day after Garcia stole the show in the final major of the 20th century, the old folks took a stand.

Irwin recaptured his magic at Medinah, where he won the 1990 U.S. Open, with a 3-under 69 that put him only four strokes off the lead.

"I knew he was a great player, but I didn't know he was that good," Garcia said.

Haas hasn't won on the PGA Tour since 1993, and has finished better than 10th only once this year. His son hits it farther than he does, which doesn't seem to be a good equation on the longest major championship course at sea level.

But Haas was deadly with his irons, making five of his six birdie putts from inside 15 feet. The exception was a 30-footer on No. 15 that had about 6 feet of break.

"That's the kind of thing you do when you're playing well and scoring well," Haas said.

Haas was last in this position four years ago at Augusta National, and he promptly had a 40 on the front nine Saturday.

"I remember being very nervous," he said.

He also remembers coming back in 32 and shooting a 70 on Sunday, three strokes shy of Ben Crenshaw. Haas concedes the clock is ticking on his chances of winning a major, although that won't be on his mind this weekend.

"I've played a long time without a major win," he said. "We all want to win tournaments, especially majors. I'm disappointed that hasn't happened, but I'm not devastated. I don't think I'll be a failure because of that."

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE ...

Fran Hillin, left, and Merrilyn Richardson are representatives of the Religious Science church, known in Midland as Discovery of Life.

A RELIGIOUS SCIENTIST

Editor's Note: In our recurring series, "What it Means to Be ...," Religion Editor Jimmy Patterson talked with Fran Hillin and Merrilyn Richardson, two members of Midland's Religious Science church, known as the Discovery of Life Church.

Q: How would you summarize your faith to someone unfamiliar with it?

FH: It's a correlation of the laws of science, the opinions of philosophy and the revelations of religions applied to human beings and the aspirations of man. We are a teaching, healing church.

Q: Is Religious Science a sort of synthesis of Eastern and Western philosophies?

FH: It is. Ernest Holmes, the founder of the faith, studied every denomination in our country and all of the Eastern philosophies, and he took the best of all of them because actually, they all believe in the same God.

MR: He sort of resisted the idea at first, but came to terms that it might be good to fit it all into one denomination. But it's over the top, it's still growing.

Q: Is Jesus regarded as the Savior in Religious Science?

FH: We believe Jesus is the son of God and that each of us is the son and daughter of God. That Jesus came to be the example, not the exception.

Q: So yours is considered a Christian religion, yet Jesus is not regarded as the Savior?

MR: He's the Savior in that he shows the way that we are to follow.

FH: I was a Protestant for years and years and the people who make up our church came from other religions where they believe there has to be more. I believe there has to be more and I've been a searcher all my life. I've traveled the world over and spent 10 years in the '70s going through the Bible and unlearning a lot of mistaken concepts I had picked up from various places.

Q: What sort of mistaken concepts?

FH: I am now divorced. I was told growing up there were not many divorces when I was younger. That was one of the things. I went through and studied the Bible and got the concepts instead of having the concepts I was taught by my parents or the church, although the denomination I attended is, I find, as liberal as you can get in the Protestant church.

Q: A friend of mine grew up Baptist, married and became a Jew. You were brought up Protestant and were taught that Jesus is the Savior. How does a person suddenly stop believing that?

FH: It just didn't add up. Some way, it just didn't make sense. I believe there was more to everything and started reading a book of comparative religions in the early

Study says people who attend church regularly likely to live longer, healthier

By Gary D. Robertson
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH — Seniors who attend church or synagogue regularly might possess the secret of longevity.

In another report linking good health with religion, Duke University researchers say seniors with regular church or synagogue attendance are not only healthier but also more likely to live longer than the non-religious.

The researchers, studying nearly 4,000 North Carolinians over 64 years old, found that the death rate of the faithful was 28 percent less than those who didn't attend services regularly.

Studies in recent years focusing on the spiritual dimension of health have yet to show that religious attendance or spirituality cause physical wholeness. But a mounting body of evidence associates the religious with better mental health, lower blood pressure and other health improvements.

The next step, says the study's lead author, Dr. Harold Koenig, is to identify the behavioral and biological mechanisms linking religion to disease prevention and good health.

"These studies do not show that if they are going to church for health reasons, their health will improve," Koenig said. "But if people go to church for religious reasons, they have better health and survive longer."

The findings released in the July-August medical sciences edition of the Journal of Gerontology examined 3,968 adults in five North Carolina counties from 1986-92.

Researchers interviewed participants each year about church attendance, their health, social support and alcohol and tobacco use. The subjects, mostly Christians and Jews, were categorized according to whether they attended religious meetings once weekly.

By 1992, 1,177 participants had died.

Analyses showed 46 percent fewer of the church attendees died during the period than nonchurchgoers. But the rate dropped to 28 percent when the differing ages, health and social factors and smoking and alcohol use within the sample were taken into account.

The respective mortality risks are comparable to those experienced by smokers versus nonsmokers, Koenig said. The risk decline was 35 percent in women and 17 percent in men, according to the study.

The report, funded by the National Institutes of Mental Health, is not the first to tie religious practice to a lower risk of dying. A California study of 5,300 people over 28 years generated similar findings, but the survey sample ranged from 21 to 65 years of age. And the sample's mortality was 15 percent, compared with about 30 percent for the Duke study.

Lycos won't renew Jews for Jesus ad

By Sara Neufield
N.Y. Times News Service

In a case pitting free expression against user protest in the new world of on-line advertising, Lycos Inc., a major Internet search engine, will not renew an advertisement placed by Jews for Jesus, after a flood of complaints from the Jewish community.

Jews for Jesus paid $1,700 for a banner to appear at the top of computer screens of the first 40,000 people who type in the word "Jewish" as a search term, said Jews for Jesus spokeswoman Susan Perlman.

The group, which began in the early 1970s, has about 70,000 followers nationwide who, it says, practice Judaism while believing that Jesus is the Messiah. The banner that Lycos has run advertises a book by the group's executive director promoting that ideology.

The contract for the advertisement is scheduled to expire within a few days.

"Controversial advertising is bad for business," said Jeffrey Snider, general counsel for Lycos. He said the decision not to renew had nothing to do with the content of the advertisement, but emphasized that the company does not want Jews to boycott Lycos.

Perlman said Tuesday she had not been informed of Lycos's decision, and argued that the Internet, by its nature, is a forum to express a variety of viewpoints and therefore is inherently controversial.

"They may as well find another planet to operate from if they don't want controversy," she said. "We're saddened that they have succumbed to pressure."

Jews for Jesus, which typically has spread its message through fliers and leaflets, placed the advertisement through a sales representative in Lycos's San Francisco office, Snider said. To reach a targeted audience, customers pay Lycos to link their ads with search terms.

Perlman said Jews for Jesus chose to have its name attached to the search term "Jewish" under the assumption that many Jews would see it.

They were right.

Although the ad started running July 6, executives at Lycos's national headquarters in Waltham, Mass. said they were not aware of it until they received several angry e-mail messages from Jews beginning on July 29. The company would not discuss the content of the messages or say how many it received.

"These people are not Jews and are ignorant about Judiasm," said one message, written by a woman who identified herself as Patricia Heil. "They have

The Good Book: Ephesians

(Pt. 48 of 66)

Overview:

Paul's letter to the church at Ephesus is filled with poetic and exalted images about the Lord, Jesus Christ. Christ is the one through whom we have obtained the "inheritance of God." God has put all things under the feet of Jesus Christ and has made him "the head over all things for the church, which is his body, the fullness of him who fills all in all." In Christ we see the "plan of the mystery hidden for ages in God. . ." Through Christ we receive the gifts of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, we are one in Christ. Since God has given us so much through Jesus Christ we, Paul exhorts us to live in love, as Christ loved us.

Theme Passage

2:8-10: "For by grace you have been saved through faith, and this is not your own doing; it is the gift of God — not the result of works, so that no one may boast. For we are what he has made us, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand to be our way of life."

VINCENT KITUKU

Courage, faith go hand in hand

Webster's dictionary defines courage as, "That quality of mind which enables a person to encounter danger and difficulties with firmness, or without fear..."

Kituku

One student who died at the Columbine school shooting portrayed this quality beyond my imagination. According to media reports, she was asked whether she believed in Christ Jesus and responded, "Yes." She was then fatally shot. She became an instant source of inspiration for thousands.

Her courage put her in a different league from the rest of us. This is a time when we all want to look alike. It is tough to be courageous and stand alone for what we believe in or practice. Peer pressure is making most of our youth wear the same outfits, modesty or otherwise. We may do things we wouldn't normally do just to please our friends. We may mask what is within us so as to be accepted in certain social settings.

On March 9, 1985, while in college, I accepted Christ Jesus as my personal savior. The following day, at breakfast, a friend of mine told me that my behavior had changed notably. He even pointed that I had been seen with Christian students. He asked whether I had become a Christian. I wasn't forthright in my response until three hours later when I told others of my new life.

Why was I not forthright? I lacked courage and yet there was no gun pointing at me.

The absence of courage is the perfect environment for fear. We lack the courage to tell a boss that Sunday is a day of worship. We fear rejection-loss of a job. We lack the courage to pray in a restaurant. We fear someone watching us may think we are weird. People opt to live in abusive relationships rather than speak their concerns, fearing it may tamper with their abuser's feeling, thus prompting further retribution.

Courage and faith go hand-in-hand and both have benefits. We need courage to go ahead with worthwhile projects or goals irrespective of what others say. The Bible presents numerous situations where people lacked courage. It also shows the benefits reaped by those who had the courage to stand by their faith. Of the twelve spies sent to spy on the promised land, only Joshua and Caleb had the faith and courage to believe they could overcome the "giants" they saw. The rest thought they had no chance of standing against the inhabitants of the promised land. None of the fearful stepped their feet on the promised land.

Peter lacked courage, too. Three times he denied Jesus, prompting him to repent bitterly later. The other disciples had already disappeared.

It is one thing to have a vision. It takes courage to act on our vision. Revolutions that have made life better for oppressed people are started by courageous ordinary folks.

The Columbine student acted positively on her vision, making heaven her home. She is a hero and source of inspiration. Her courage reminded me that I didn't have to wait for three hours to say, "Yes, Jesus has changed my life."

African Methodist Episcopal Church conference convening through Sunday

By Johnnye Montgomery

The 82nd annual session of the Northwest Texas Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church began Tuesday with a rousing Methodist hymn that could be heard almost a block away from the Greater St. Luke AME Church where it is convening through Sunday.

The Rt. Rev. John R. Bryant, who will preside and preach at the closing worship service on Sunday, comes from a ministerial family.

"My father was a preacher, my wife is a preacher, my sister is a preacher, by brother was a preacher, and my son is a preacher. We're like the second House of the Levites."

The conference, which has drawn more than 300 people from as far west as El Paso and from all over Texas, is addressing a range of issues such as family unity, community solidarity, and education.

He said there was an emphasis on "education issues, trying to motivate our young people to not be satisfied with a high school education. They have to go on to a higher education. We also will be dealing with getting our people involved with voter registration and voting as we move toward next year's election. We want our people not simply to be reactionary, but to take an active role in charting out what their neighborhoods and the schools and their health care issues will focus on."

Bryant said the conference is "emphasizing Christian manhood — trying to encourage our men as strong husbands and fathers and church and community supporters.

"But all those things will occur at a tier under the spiritual aspect. If we as a people would find a personal relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ, that will take care of so many issues that we'll be addressing."

He said the emphasis of the conference will be focused on the unity of Christians all over the world and across all barriers.

The conference has included the annual Women's Missionary Society meeting, a men's night service, Young People's Division workshops and an ordination of new clergy, scheduled for today.

Bryant said the AME Church dates back to 1787, when it was begun by Philadelphian Richard Allen in response to the exclusion of African Americans from the mainline Methodist Church during those days.

The Northwest Texas Conference is one of seven in Texas that comprise the 10th Episcopal District presided over by Bryant.

A native of Baltimore, Bryant was elected to the bishopric in 1988, and was assigned to West Africa for two years, then came to Texas. He is vice president of the North American Section of the World Methodist Council, and the chairman of Paul Quinn College in Dallas, supported by the AME.

JEWISH: Lycos won't renew ad

(From 1C)

involved you in false advertising."

The flashing advertisement, about 1 inch high and 3 inches wide, shows the Jews for Jesus logo, with the Star of David replacing the "o" in the word "for."

It reads: "The end of the world is no time to finally realize Jesus is the Messiah. (It's all in the book.) Click for free copy!"

When users click on the advertisement, a Web page appears from the Jews for Jesus site, with an order form for the book. The page also included a reference to Lycos.

Because of that, Lycos executives pulled the ad on July 30, arguing that it gave the appearance that the company endorsed Jews for Jesus, Snider said. Within days, the reference was removed from the page and the ad reappeared a week later.

Though Lycos is legally obliged to carry out the contract, the company does not have to renew it, Snider said.

Diane Kolb, associate director of the Anti-Defamation League's Boston office, said her group, which fights anti-Semitism, is a strong proponent of the First Amendment. But, she said, "Jews can't be for Jesus."

She said her group urged Lycos to discontinue the ad because she believes the message is misleading — and blasphemous.

"It's very seductive material for a lot of Jews," Kolb said.

"If I'm a Jew struggling with my identity living in this Christian society, I could believe in Jesus, then I could have Christmas and I wouldn't have to be different from everyone else.

"That's kind of cozy, but it's offering people an option that isn't available, and that's what we have a problem with."

Last month, talk show host Joan Rivers, who is Jewish, lashed out at the group on the air after they advertised the book "Future Hope" during her show.

But Steven Hassan, an authority on cults and brainwashing, said that though he does not like the message of Jews for Jesus, he has found no evidence that the group is dangerous.

"They're essentially Baptists who are putting up money to recruit Jews, saying you can be a Jew and a Christian simultaneously," said Hassan, who runs the Resource Center for Freedom of Mind, in Cambridge, Mass.

Still, Perlman insisted that Jews can legitimately believe in Jesus, calling her group "a small minority of a minority." She said that Jews should be free to decide for themselves what they want to read and analyze.

"It's a shame that there are people who want to block our message and prevent people from thinking for themselves," Perlman said. "The Web is supposed to be a marketplace for all kinds of ideas, and people can click on them or pass them by."

Gay-Scouts ruling raises murky religious matters

By Richard Ostling
Associated Press

NEW YORK — What constitutes religion? And who decides? Those are among the intriguing questions raised by the long-running struggle between gay activists and the Boy Scouts of America, in which some of the nation's biggest church bodies are participants.

On Aug. 4, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled that the scouts violated state anti-discrimination law by excluding avowed homosexuals from leadership positions. The case involved an assistant scoutmaster ousted because he was co-leader of a gay and lesbian group at Rutgers University.

The justices ruled that the government's interest in ending discrimination outweighs the scouts' constitutional claim of freedom of association, that a private group is free to decide whom to include and exclude from membership. The decision produced predictable hallelujahs from gay-rights supporters and lamentations among cultural conservatives.

Along the way, the court plunged into some murky religious matters, including many churches' traditional opposition to same-sex behavior and their right to use scouts in youth work.

In 1991, New Jersey amended its Law Against Discrimination to forbid exclusion based on sexual orientation. The law covers any "place of public accommodation," from stores and restaurants to hospitals and schools. Other states have similar statutes.

The law exempts "distinctly private" groups and the educational facilities of "a bona fide religious or sectarian institution."

The justices decided the BSA does not qualify as "private" because it's too big and does public recruiting.

More troubling for some churches was the court's holding that the BSA is not religious enough to be exempt. The scouts, according to the ruling, do not "endorse any specific set of moral beliefs," which the scouts dispute, or "espouse any one religion," which they acknowledge. The ruling noted that the organization boasts of "close association" with "virtually all religious bodies" in America.

The U.S. Supreme Court may eventually need to settle these issues. Only last year, California's Supreme Court defined the BSA as a private club that can legally bar not only homosexual leaders but atheists, whom the scouts said violated their religious principles.

In the New Jersey case, religions were arrayed on both sides. The justices cited a brief against the BSA, filed by the Episcopal Church's diocese of Newark, and Unitarian Universalists, Quakers, Reform Jews and Reconstructionist Jews.

These groups said the anti-gay policy was disingenuous because the scouts welcome as troop sponsors some churches with liberal views on homosexuality. For instance, "many openly lesbian and gay persons have been ordained as priests in the Episcopal Church." (True, though the Episcopalians' stated policy against same-sex behavior went unmentioned).

A radically different view is held by the scouting liaison offices within the Mormon, Roman Catholic and United Methodist churches. These are the BSA's top three religious backers, sponsoring 51,700 troops and other units with nearly 1.2 million scouts. They filed a legal brief in the case along with a fourth large denomination, the Lutheran Church — Missouri Synod.

These churches contended that though the BSA is non-sectarian and interfaith, it is also dedicated to "inculcating religious and moral beliefs, such as duty to God" under the Boy Scout oath. The scouts hand out awards for boys' religious activity. Many churches consider scouting as part of their youth ministries. In Mormonism, it is a virtual department of the church.

Whatever scouting's status, religious rights aren't what they used to be. At one time, U.S. Supreme Court doctrine held that the government needed a "compelling" reason before it could impose any substantial burden on the First Amendment guarantee of free exercise of religion. The Supreme Court tossed out its strict standard in 1990. Congress re-imposed it in 1993, but the Supreme Court invalidated that law four years later.

Now, an unusually broad alliance of 80 denominations and religious organizations is making another bid to revive the strict standard, through the Religious Liberty Protection Act, which passed the House last month and is awaiting Senate action.

SCIENCE: Christian scientists consider themselves 'new thought'

(From 1C)

'60s. We wanted to know why there were 42 protestant denominations. We wanted everyone in Monahans to come and explain their Protestant philosophy, and I later learned that what they were really explaining was their church dogma, To separate man-made dogma was what I was always after. I knew there must be more. Ernest Holmes said he didn't discover anything, he took the essence of all religions and philosophies and science to come to this belief.

Q: What is a common misconception about your faith?

FH: That we are Scientology or New Age. We are not New Age, we are New Thought.

MR: It is not a cult. People may think that since Ernest Holmes founded the religion, we worship him, but we don't.

Q: How many people attend the Religious Science Church (Discovery of Life) in Midland?

FH: It's small, but we've had up to 110 at one time.

Q: You place a lot of importance on self-realization, correct?

FH: At our church, we don't save your soul, you save your own. There's a lot of things that are self-realization. We don't lay trips of sin on people. Sin is a Greek word for missing the mark in archery, but the way you hear it at church on Sunday is frightening. You don't hear it in our church because we've all missed the mark. We just don't go with a lot of that stuff. This is the most freeing religion you could ever imagine.

Q: Of the three essences that Religious Science draws from, philosophy, science and religion, is one given more importance than the others?

FH: It's really equal, because when you speak your word, the universe is scientific and spiritual. It has a lot to do with cause and effect. If I say all day long that I'm tired, then I'm tired. I'll get tired. The universe is alive and well and functioning. If I say I'm happy and everything is wonderful in my world, then everything is wonderful in my world. It's really that simple. It's just cause and effect.

Q: Are you evolutionists or creationists?

FH: I see creation happening every day. I really don't see the difference in evolution and creation. It's kind of the same thing only from a different point of view. Creation is happening all the time and it happens in cycles.

MR: You create your own experience all the time.

Q: How much do you adhere to the Bible's teaching?

MR: There's truth in the Bible and it came through man. The Gospels, each one was written about the same things that happen but each had a little different translation.

Q: What is the essence of Religious Science, or Science of Mind healing?

FH: Let me just read you this summary ... "What the world needs is spiritual conviction followed by spiritual experience. I would rather see a student of the science prove its principle than have him repeat all the words of wisdom that have ever been uttered. It is far easier to preach the truth than it is to practice it. But the practice of truth is personal to each and in the long run no one can live our life for us. To each is given what he needs and the gifts of heaven come alike to all. How we shall use these gifts is all that matters. To hold one's thought steadfastly on the constructive to that which endures, and to the truth, may not be easy in a rapidly changing world, but to one who makes the attempt, much is guaranteed. The essence of spiritual mind healing and of all true religious philosophy is an inner realization of the presence of perfection within and roundabout. It is the hope of heaven, the voice of God proclaiming, 'I am that which thou art. Thou art that which I am.'" (From "The Science of Mind," by Ernest Holmes).

Q: What is your personal assessment of Christ's teachings?

FH: They are the way. They are the truth and the light. He is definitely a master.

Q: Is Jesus often referred to in a Religious Science Worship Service?

FH: Yes, we use the Bible just like others do.

Q: Where does a Religious Scientist go when he or she dies?

MR: Into whatever they've prepared.

FH: Into the allness. And they keep right on going to school. Within. Jesus said the Kingdom of Heaven is within.

Q: As someone who came into the church after being raised in a Protestant church, were these concepts easy to grasp?

FH: It was very hard for me to undo, but I spent 10 years undoing mistaken concepts. We hear mistaken concepts everywhere. From the pulpit, everywhere. Concepts that give you guilt and shame. We don't do that. No guilt and shame.

Q: One of the points in the church's We Believe statement is 'There is not a sinner, only someone who acts out of ignorance of the church.'

FH: That's right.

Q: So, a person who commits murder, he is not classified as a sinner?

FH: (Murder) is a big mistake he would make against truth, himself and God. The other day when that shooting was going on in Atlanta, I felt so sorry for that man who was doing the shooting, because he was in hell personified. You experience it all inside.

Q: What is the church's stance on reincarnation?

MR: Religious Science doesn't accept reincarnation, but I do personally.

FH: I definitely do. It is the only thing that makes sense and frees you up.

MR: You get another chance to correct your mistakes from your previous life.

Q: What are your beliefs on prayer?

FH: We call prayer treatment. We have a scientific method of prayer. We also meditate. Prayer is talking to God. Meditation is listening to God.

Q: Do you take positions on issues such as abortion and homosexuality?

FH: We don't take positions on anything like that. Those are considered political issues.

'Jesus video' to be distributed in Big Spring

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Howard County residents may find something unexpected on their doorsteps between Aug. 21 and Aug. 31: a videotape.

More than 50 area churches will be joining together to distribute what is being called the "Jesus Video."

This effort is uniting local churches, said the Rev. Everett Bender.

"We have more than 50 churches working together on this project, and that is just unprecedented in the Spring City," said Bender, who along with church volunteers began the distribution of these tapes to the various churches in the city. "We are all very excited about this project, and excited to see this many local churches working together."

Bender said the tapes will be distributed by members of the participating churches between Aug. 21 and 31, as each group prepares to go door to door with the campaign.

"This won't be one of those things where people are going to come to your door and take up a lot of your time. We will simply be handing out the videos, offering them as free gifts from the churches of Howard County," he said.

Bender said the idea, as well as many of the videos that will be distributed, came from a similar campaign that took place in Midland.

"We were talking to some of the churches in Midland about their video campaign, and they said they got a really good response. They also told us they had about 4,000 videos left over, and asked us if we could do something with them here in Big Spring.

"We started looking at the idea of doing the same thing here, and figured we would need about 10,000 videos all together to cover Howard County. They told us no problem, and sent us another 6,000 tapes."

Bender said people aren't being pressured, but he hopes residents will approach the message with an open mind.

"We really look at this as a way of sending out a good message. We have so much strife and suffering in the world right now, we look at this as a way of showing folks things don't have to be that way."

High Sky prayer

Children and youth who live at High Sky need to rebuild trust so they do not feel alone and frightened. Besides healing from trauma and adversity, we want the children to learn they have value and something to contribute to others. They need guardian angels to pray for their healing, for their development and for their future.

Those willing to make a commitment to pray for one High Sky child or youth can contact High Sky. Once the commitment is made, the person who will pray will receive brief information about one of the residents along with any special prayer needs.

Paster describe their calls

By Carmel Snyder
Associated Press

AMARILLO — A "call" to the ministry doesn't necessarily come in a blinding flash of light like Saul of Tarsus' conversion on the road to Damascus.

Sometimes the call comes after long and careful deliberation. Sometimes it comes to a person very early in life. Sometimes it is felt later in life. And sometimes it comes after a person is already far along in another career.

For Felipe Serrano, it came early. Serrano entered the seminary in Guadalajara, Mexico, when he was just 15. Now 26, he still looks like a teen-ager, but his demeanor is one of someone much older.

"Everyone should know that we are called by God to holiness, but we all respond to it in a different way," he said. "It might work for you to be single, or married with a family or to enter the priesthood. You have to understand and try to discern and discover what is best for you."

Serrano, now a seminary student in the United States, plans to enter the priesthood. The decision was not made quickly or easily.

At 19, angry with the tight restrictions on personal freedom at the seminary, Serrano left.

He returned home to care for his mother.

"I still found myself working with the parish," Serrano said. "My vocation never died."

He returned to his studies, this time in Sante Fe, N.M. and later in San Antonio.

"It's where I find meaning in my life," he said.

Serrano is spending his summer working at Saint Lawrence Cathedral in Amarillo. He must study four more years before he enters the priesthood.

For others, the call comes long after they've chosen another career path.

In a checkered, short-sleeved shirt, it's easy to imagine Landrum Medlock behind the wheel of a tractor.

Although he had worked for years outdoors, "I kept getting people telling me that I ought to be in ministry," Medlock said. "Everyone seemed to know before me that I had been called."

Medlock, like his father, was a farmer.

After graduating from Texas Tech with a degree in animal husbandry, he and his wife, Benita, settled in Texas.

The family later decided to move to Wyoming. It was there Medlock first stepped into the ministry. After his church's pastor left, members asked Medlock to become interim minister while they searched for a pastor.

Medlock returned to farming but continued to serve in the church. He wrestled with the decision for almost two years.

"God didn't call me on the telephone," Medlock said. "It wasn't that easy. But finally, I was uncomfortable doing anything else."

Medlock talked with his wife and asked her if she felt called to become a minister's wife.

"If your wife isn't called, then don't go into the ministry," Medlock said. "It takes both working together."

Medlock and his wife recently moved to the Amarillo area as leaders of the Pleasant Valley United Methodist Church in River Road.

"This is more than an occupation," Medlock said. "For those who see this as an occupation, it might be more difficult or even impossible."

Few people today see burning bushes or hear God's voice from above. It's difficult to know if "the call" is real.

Medlock said people should consider their decisions carefully before moving into the ministry.

"You don't need to jump and go do it," he said. "If the call is real, it will get stronger and clearer. It won't fade away."

Medlock said those people who are called rarely feel any peace in life until they accept God's call.

"It only makes sense to me that God also calls people to be doctors or schoolteachers or into other occupations," Medlock said. "For myself, I would feel like I was not fulfilling my purpose. There's a lot of good things to do through other occupations. But this is where I'm supposed to be."

After making the decision to go into the ministry, Medlock and his wife sold their home in Wyoming and moved back to Texas.

Medlock found many other people who came from other occupations in the seminary.

"God seems to call you no matter who you are and where you think you should be," he said.

For Patricia Masterman, a veteran of the newspaper business and a tough courts reporter, entering the ministry seemed like a logical step.

Now an ordained deacon at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Masterman said she has found her calling.

"We have to find a harmony between what we do at church and we do in the world," Masterman said.

In the Episcopal church, every baptized member is a minister by virtue of their baptismal promises, Masterman said.

"Fortunately, the Episcopal church also has what some people might call a slow path to ordination," she said. "There are interviews and evaluations along the way that also give a person the chance to evaluate their own calling."

Masterman said her calling was more like the road to Emmaus than Damascus. In the New Testament account, two disciples are walking along a road to Emmaus when the risen Christ joins them.

It is not until they have been seated at the supper table that they recognize Jesus.

"For me, it was a slow gentle sort of urging that wouldn't go away," Masterman said.

She spent two years trying to decide if she was really getting the call to ministry.

"After years of being a religious hobbyist, I decided I should get serious and offer myself to the process," she said. "At first it was a tough decision. I decided it might be sort of a relief if the church said no."

Masterman said people should spend a lot of time soul-searching, praying and talking to others about their decision.

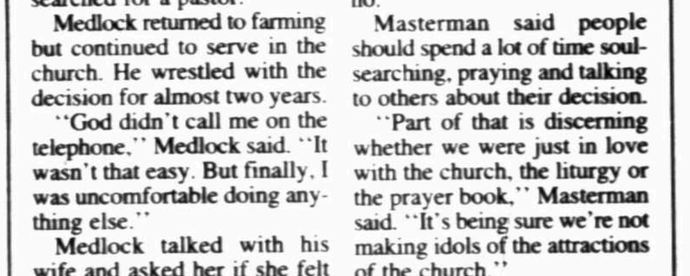

"Part of that is discerning whether we were just in love with the church, the liturgy or the prayer book," Masterman said. "It's being sure we're not making idols of the attractions of the church."

Masterman, Medlock and Serrano all said their time away from the ministry helped them in their ministries. It has solidified their commitment and helped them learn to understand people, they said.

Every person, every member of a church is a minister in some way, Masterman said.

"A real minister is one who cares for people and every day leads by example and kindness," Masterman said. "I sort of begin again each day because I fail on a regular basis.

"But I try again."

First Christian Church welcomes new youth minister

By Tommy Patterson
Staff Writer

First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) has na[illegible] Rev. Keith Lewis, formerly of Round Rock, as [illegible] Director of Youth and Children's Ministries. He took over the directorship on Aug. 1.

Prior to coming to Midland, Lewis served as Youth Minister at First Christian Church in San Marcos since 199[illegible]. He is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, a veteran U.S. Marine who served in Operation Desert Storm, and a licensed minister of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

"This church is one that has no limitations," Lewis said of First Christian. "The sky is basically the limit. I'm looking forward to building a first-rate program that reaches out to the city and to any youth interested in a program that is fun, faith-based and involved in the community.

"We have a great work-staff here. Both (Senior Minister) Tommy Potter and (Associate Minister) Gary Groves have great reputations in the Disciples of Christ church."

In this newly-created full-time position, Lewis will be responsible for all ministries to children and youth, infant through high school age. He will work to enhance the existing Sunday School, Children's Church, LOGOS and Youth Ministries programs and activities, and to develop new and creative dimensions of ministries to these age groups.

While serving in Operation Desert Storm, Lewis helped worked on logistical bases.

"Part of that was at the helm of a Force Service Support Group," he said. "We built the logistical bases at different points along the way to help supply the ground troops. We were part of the Marine Expeditionary Force and the general in charge of us then, Gen. Charles Krulak, is now the Commandant of the Marine Corps. He was in charge of our bases while we were building."

Jayhawks plan to improve in third season under Allen

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Maybe four concussions would convince Zac Wegner to quit football. He's up to three, and still playing.

"As far as the concussions are concerned, there was talk that I wasn't going to make it back after what happened in the Kansas State game," said Kansas' oft-unconscious quarterback. "It was tough on me emotionally for three or four months. After taking many tests in Chicago and in Lawrence, I've been cleared. That's all in the past.

"Once I got the OK from the doctors, it's a full go."

How much improvement the Jayhawks make from last year's rather deceptive 4-7 record may hinge a great deal on how healthy their quarterback can stay. Although he's No. 10 on the all-time passing charts, Wegner comes into his senior season bedeviled by any number of misfortunes.

He suffered his first concussion last year in an off-season incident. Then, in back-to-back games against Colorado and Kansas State, he suffered two more.

It was widely assumed his football days were done.

"It takes a lot of courage to come back from a situation like that," said Terry Allen, who is beginning his third year as head coach. "He's suffered three concussions in a year. It's not like a knee injury that you can rehab. A concussion is multiplied each time."

Another possibility is junior college transfer Dylan Smith, provided he cleared academic hurdles.

Kansas defensive end Jeff Redhage (69) sits among the construction at Kansas Memorial Stadium in Lawrence, Kan., and watches a test of the stadium's new video screen.

At least the quarterbacks will have a more experienced backfield to work with. Junior running back David Winbush, who finished with just under 1,000 rushing yards last season, is back. The Jayhawks are also hoping to make fuller use of Mitch Bowles, who showed promise as a runner.

Altogether, Allen has 48 returning lettermen to make up for the loss of nine starters, including the entire linebacker corps. The Jayhawks believe Dariss Lomax, a powerful, talented inside linebacker who redshirted last year, has star potential.

"We won't be a better football team until we become better against the rush," said Allen. "The thing we're excited about is we will start with four new linebackers on the inside and outside. The return of Dariss Lomax and four new players will make us better."

The Jayhawks' schedule is tough. Their Big 12 opponents will include 1998 bowl teams Kansas State, Missouri, Nebraska and Texas A&M. But first they open on Aug. 28 at Notre Dame in the Eddie Robinson Classic.

"You hear about Notre Dame all the time," said Winbush. "There's definitely a motivation to work harder in off-season workouts knowing that we are opening against Notre Dame. What a way to start the season."

It's not as though the Jayhawks were not competitive last season. They came close to beating Texas A&M and had second-half leads against Oklahoma State, Baylor and Iowa State. But each time they wilted in the second half. Colorado was their only Big 12 victory.

"I think we can be a bowl-eligible team," Allen said. "We play 12 games so we have to win seven. But I think we can do it."

Fans will have a new $3.1 million Jumbotron video board to see replays on, part of a two-year, $25 million renovation project which also includes a new press box and 36 luxury suites that are scheduled to be ready by the home opener on Sept. 11 against Cal-State Northridge.

"This is going into our third year and I'm very excited about this team," said Allen. "We're playing with young players who are getting more experience, and from a facilities and student-athlete standpoint, we are very proud of where we are at Kansas. This is obviously a critical year for us. We need to put some wins on the board."

Williams makes NFL debut with 44 yards

MIAMI (AP) — Ricky Williams rushed for 44 yards before a minor shin bruise sidelined him late in the first quarter of his NFL debut, and the New Orleans Saints beat the Miami Dolphins 26-14 Friday night in the exhibition opener for both teams.

Dolphins rookie Cecil "the Diesel" Collins also looked impressive, although he ran against second- and third-team defenders. Collins came off the bench to carry 17 times for 93 yards, including a 9-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter.

The Saints built a 20-0 lead in the second quarter, stopping the Dolphins without a first down on Dan Marino's three series. Fred Weary recovered a fumble at the goal line on a Miami kickoff return for a touchdown, and Troy Davis scored on a 5-yard run.

Doug Brien kicked field goals of 43, 47, 25 and 47 yards for New Orleans.

Williams was stuffed for no gain and a 6-yard loss on his first two carries before showing why the Saints traded their entire draft to acquire him. Last year's Heisman Trophy winner darted 20 yards on a delay, ran wide for 12 yards and had two 8-yard runs.

"When I first got out there, I was really nervous and didn't know what to expect," he said. "On each carry, I felt more and more comfortable."

Williams carried nine times and took a jarring hit from linebacker Derrick Rodgers on a pass reception for a 6-yard loss. When defensive end Jason Taylor fell on Williams' leg on a dive play, the rookie limped off the field and sat out the rest of the game.

"I'm fine," Williams said. "People piled on me and they just fell on my leg. It's OK."

His debut came against a Miami defense that allowed the fewest points in the NFL last year.

"They seemed like they were trying to push everything outside to see if I could get the corner, and we got that," Williams said.

Sanders won't play offense this season

Associated Press

WICHITA FALLS — Don't expect to see Deion Sanders blazing up the field as a receiver this year.

Coach Chan Gailey stopped just short of ruling it out because of Sanders' injuries.

"The odds of him moving back into offense are very low," Gailey said Friday at a news conference. "He would have to be completely healthy and everything would have to be going great at corner and going great at returning before we would even think about it."

Sanders is still recovering from surgery on his left big toe.

THE SOUP THAT EATS LIKE A MEAL: It took 252 cans of Campbell's Chunky Soup to tip a giant scale with Dale Hellestrae on the other end.

Hellestrae represented the team at a charity event called the "Chunky Lineman Weigh-In." The veteran long-snapper for the Cowboys also got to estimate the weights of three other linemen — in cans of course.

The combined estimate — 1,119 — was donated by Campbell's to the Salvation Army of Irving and the Wichita Falls Faith Mission.

Hellestrae guessed 312 cans for Erik Williams. When asked about Larry Allen, Hellestrae joked, "Is that counting both love handles?"

SIDELINED: Coach Chan Gailey admitted to concern about the number of Cowboys out of action due to injuries this preseason.

But the coach says he worries about some players more than others.

"With a guy like Rocket (Raghib Ismail), we worry more because he has not been on our offense very long," Gailey said. "Charlie Williams has been around for a few years, so you don't worry as much ... certain guys know what to do and will just need to get back in there."

Out of commission are:

Kansas State faces rebuilding task

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Jonathan Beasley insists he's undaunted at the prospect of replacing the only Kansas State quarterback to beat Nebraska in 29 years.

David Allen merely shrugs at the prospect of replacing Kansas State's career rushing leader. Aaron Lockett, when reminded that he's one of only two returning Wildcats who caught a pass last season, just grins.

Maybe it's the natural confidence of youth. Or the fact they lost their last two games in one of the great crash-and-burn endings to any season and figure things can only get better.

But the Wildcats seem genuinely upbeat heading into a season without Michael Bishop, Eric Hickson and Darnell McDonald.

"I have faith in the youngsters we have," said Bill Snyder, who will also be without place-kicker Martin Gramatica, the first Wildcat picked in the NFL draft.

The Wildcats are coming off an 11-2 season in which they had the national championship game squarely in their sights but squandered it in a double-overtime loss to Texas A&M in the Big 12 title game. Still depressed three weeks later, they lost to unranked Purdue in the Alamo Bowl and saw what had been the finest season in 103 years of Kansas State football turn into one of the most bitterly disappointing.

This year, as they take their first steps toward trying to regain all that momentum, their biggest void is at quarterback. In two years as a starter, Bishop walked off the field a loser only three times. His powerful arm and legs led Kansas State to its finest two years ever, getting the Wildcats to the edge of the national championship game in the Fiesta Bowl. The Heisman Trophy runner-up lifted Kansas State to a new level.

Beasley, who lettered as a backup in 1996 and '97 and redshirted last season, can throw about as well as Bishop but is not as quick on his feet.

He'll be competing with junior Adam Helm.

"They both have some experience in our system. They've had the opportunity to play and compete for several years," said Snyder. "This will be Adam's fifth year and Jon's fourth year. Jonathan's being a backup quarterback for two of those three years, and redshirting the other has given him an opportunity to get a lot of reps on the practice field. What they don't have is an ample amount of playing time under stressful conditions."

Talented newcomer Eli Roberson could also have an impact.

"Whenever a great quarterback leaves this program, it seems like we've had somebody step in and do the job," said Beasley. "No matter who gets to be No. 1, they're always going to have comparisons with Mike. We'll just have to deal with it and go from there."

The Wildcats took a big blow when running back Frank Murphy broke a bone in his foot during conditioning exercises on July 28. He could be out as long as eight weeks.

But the No. 1 running back spot was probably going to go to David Allen, the nation's most dazzling punt returner of 1998. Allen returned punts for touchdowns in three consecutive games and tied an NCAA record with four TD returns. He broke his own Big 12 record with 730 yards in punt returns.

"I'm really excited about this year, because now at tailback I get more of an opportunity to play and see what I can do there," said Allen, who had only 31 carries at running back last year.

McDonald is a big loss. But Lockett was No. 2 on the team with 44 catches for 928 yards.

"I'm just working hard and staying focused," said Lockett, a sophomore. "We have enough people here from last year to know what it takes to get there."

Ex-BYU QB McMahon enshrined

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Jim McMahon feels honored to be elected to the College Football Hall of Fame, even if he doesn't really like watching the game.

"I'm not a big fan (of football)," McMahon said. "When I was a little kid I used to watch a lot, but since I started playing I hate watching games. I'd rather play, and if I can't play I'd rather do something else."

His fellow enshrinees included Tom Osborne, Bo Jackson and Don Coryell.

Wallace negotiates crumbling turns at Glen, captures pole

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Rusty Wallace arrived at Watkins Glen International on Friday with no idea how to deal with the new concrete laid where asphalt had been crumbling in the turns. He left with a track record.

Wallace won the pole for Sunday's Frontier at the Glen with a lap at 121.234 mph. His Ford negotiated the 2.45-mile layout in 1 minute, 12.752 seconds.

The lap broke Dale Earnhardt's 3-year-old mark of 120.773 mph at the track near the Finger Lakes.

"It came off the truck handling great," Wallace said. "We really didn't have to do too much to it, just some adjustments to shocks and springs."

Wallace was not among the drivers who tested three weeks ago, after the turns were fixed. Winston Cup points leader Dale Jarrett did test, and advised Wallace on the best way around the serpentine course.

Wallace, one of just three four-time road course winners in NASCAR history, didn't get much practice time because of rain. It delayed qualifying for 3 1/2 hours, leaving many of the drivers apprehensive about how to handle the new corners.

"I was a little spooked by the concrete," Wallace said. "But this reminds me of the concrete at Dover and Bristol, and I love to race at both of those places."

It was the second pole this season and 24th of Wallace's career. He is seeking his third victory at Watkins Glen and milestone 50th overall.

"I'd love to win another race here," said Wallace, whose last victory at the track was 10 years ago — in his Winston Cup championship season.

A stunning second was Boris Said, a road-racing specialist, who got his Ford around in 120.915.

"I was just trying to make the field," Said explained. "That's a lot of pressure when you have to run just one lap."

It was the fourth try to qualify this season for Said, a former driver in the NASCAR Craftsman Truck series. He failed to make the field at California Speedway and the road course at Sears Point, and last week fell short in a bid to qualify for the Brickyard 400.

"In road racing, you get a half an hour to make up for a mistake," he said. "But out here with these Winston Cup guys, one bad corner and you're out."

Jeff Gordon, seeking his third straight victory in the race and fifth in a row overall on a road course, qualified third in a Chevrolet. He proved the validity of Said's statement with a fast but flawed lap at 120.632.

"I'm always happy on a road course to bring the car back in one piece," Gordon said. "It was a really smooth lap, but I messed up in the last corner."

Rookie points leader Tony Stewart, driving at the Glen for the first time, qualified fourth in a Pontiac at 120.242. Fifth at 120.234 was the Ford of Mark Martin, who won the race from 1993-95 and also is a four-time road course winner.

Jerry Nadeau, road racer Ron Fellows, Bill Elliott, Jarrett and Terry Labonte rounded out the top 10. Jarrett hit a woodchuck during his qualifying run, but it had little effect on his time.

"If I had been a little quicker, we wouldn't have been there at the same time," Jarrett said.

Cars in the first two rows have won all but five of 16 Watkins Glen races. Getting there Friday was no easy matter, considering the changing weather.

It rained in the morning, forcing the teams through an initial practice on treaded tires. Then the track dried, and out came the slicks. Then it rained again.

Crashing during the pre-qualifying practice were Bobby Labonte and Kenny Irwin, who went to backup cars. Jeremy Mayfield spun out during his qualifying run, but did not make contact.

Franchitti claims provisional pole for CART's Miller Lite 200

By Tim Puet
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ohio — Now that he's taken the lead in the CART driver standings, Dario Franchitti isn't about to let his foot off the gas.

Franchitti on Friday led first-day qualifying for Sunday's Miller Lite 200 at the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course and broke the track record he set last year with relative ease.

His fast lap of 124.394 mph was nearly a half-second faster than anyone else as he shattered his 1998 mark of 123.766. This is the 10th straight year the CART qualifying mark at Mid-Ohio has been broken and it's likely to go higher Saturday, weather permitting, since second-day qualifying speeds usually are faster

Franchitti, driving for Team Kool Green, won last week's Grand Prix of Detroit. He hasn't won a pole position this year, but a victory Sunday would be his third in the past four races.

Local favorite Bryan Herta qualified second at 123.493 and Paul Tracy was third at 123.336 on the 2.25-mile, 13-turn road course in the hills of north central Ohio.

Franchitti, who leads second-place Juan Montoya by five points in the driver standings, said the record speed in his Reynard-Honda surprised him because he didn't feel he was going that fast.

"I was just trying to get a reasonable lap in," the Scotsman said. "It wasn't a hot lap. It wasn't on the limit, so I was surprised to be so quick. The track doesn't feel as good today as it did during testing" because of intermittent rain during the qualifying session.

Herta drives a Reynard-Ford Cosworth for Team Rahal, one of two CART teams based in suburban Columbus, about an hour from Mid-Ohio, and said the "home track" advantage helped in testing.

"Having the track so close by doesn't usually make a big difference, but it did this year because we tested a lot here and we needed to," he said.

"In our qualifying session, it was awfully slick out there, particularly early in the session when the rain came. Everybody tried to bang one (fast lap) in right away, then the sun came back out. I think the track will get better on Saturday and the times will be faster."

Herta never has qualified worse than third in five appearances at Mid-Ohio, but hasn't qualified better than third this year. His only CART victory in six seasons came last year at Laguna Seca.

Tracy moved his PacWest Reynard-Honda into third on the provisional qualifying grid after Mark Blundell's car, which had the third-fastest speed, failed a technical inspection because the skid plate on his car was too low. He wasn't credited with a qualifying time.

"We didn't have a pretty good test when we were here in July, so we weren't expecting to be going this well. It was a pretty good session," Tracy said.

Injury halts Victory Gallop's career

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Victory Gallop, who had a stirring victory over Behrens in the Whitney Handicap just 12 days ago, has been retired from racing because of an injury to his left leg, trainer Elliott Walden announced Friday.

The 4-year-old son of Cryptoclearance tore a ligament in his left leg, an injury Walden suspects happened in the $600,000 Grade I Whitney at Saratoga. His next scheduled start was to be the $1 million Pacific Classic at Del Mar on Aug. 29.

Walden said Victory Gallop, who finished his career with nine wins in 17 starts and earnings of $3,605,885, will be retired and stand at stud at Prestonwood Farm in Versailles, Ky.

Walden said a horse of lesser quality might have been given six months to rehabilitate the injured area. Even then, Walden said, the success rate of such treatment is usually minimal.

Although he is not certain, Walden suspects the suspensory injury occurred nearing the finish line in the Whitney, which Victory Gallop won by a nose.

"The way Behrens came back to him at the wire was a possible indication that something was wrong," Walden said. "It certainly didn't happen while he was just galloping in the morning."

Despite his obvious disappointment, Walden said, "He was at the top of the heap. It's nice to know that he went out on a winning note. He has nothing to prove having won Grade Is at 3 and 4.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.
