Colder weather means it's time for stock show

It's time to get the kerosene heaters out again as the Scurry County Junior Livestock Show and Sale gets underway Wednesday.

The weigh-in of hogs at 5 p.m. will kick off the annual show at the Scurry County Coliseum ag annex.

Steers will be weighed at 1 p.m. Thursday while lambs and goats will weigh-in at 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

The show continues through Saturday when the buyers' meal, awards presentation and auction will take place.

The actual show gets underway at 5 p.m. Thursday as Eddie Smallwood of O'Donnell will begin judging hogs.

On Friday, show action begins with the judging of lambs at 6 p.m. immediately followed by the goat judging. Steers will be judged 30 minutes after the goat show.

Steve Sturtz of Glasscock County will judge both the lambs and goats while Michael Schertz of Bridgeport will judge the steers.

A meal for buyers will be at 11:15 a.m. Saturday followed by the awards presentation at noon. The auction gets underway at 1 p.m.

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "You know you're past middle age when you finally get your head together, then your body falls apart."

Self-help books are abundant these days, including tips on travel. Here's some good stuff called "All there is to know about flying."

—Every takeoff is optional. Every landing is mandatory.

—If you push the stick forward, the houses get bigger. If you pull the stick back, they get smaller. That is, unless you keep pulling the stick all the way back, then they get bigger again.

—Flying isn't dangerous. Crashing is what's dangerous.

—It's always better to be down here wishing you were up there than up there wishing you were down here.

—The only time when you have too much fuel is when the plane is on fire.

—The propeller is just a big fan in front of the plane used to keep the pilot cool. When it stops, you can actually watch the pilot start to sweat.

—When in doubt, hold on to your altitude. No one has ever collided with the sky.

—A good landing is one from which you can walk away. A great landing is one after which they can again use the plane.

—Learn from the mistakes of others. You won't live long enough to make them all yourself.

—You know you've landed with the wheels up if it takes full power to taxi to the ramps.

—The probability of survival is inversely proportional to the angle of arrival. Large angle of arrival, small probability of survival, and vice versa.

—Never let an aircraft take you somewhere your brain didn't get to five minutes earlier.

—Stay out of clouds. The silver lining everyone keeps talking about might be another airplane going in the opposite direction. Reliable sources also report that mountains have been known to hide out in clouds.

—Always try to keep the number of landings you make equal to the number of takeoffs you've made.

—If all you can see out the window is ground going round and round, and all you hear is commotion coming from the passenger compartment, things are not as they should be.

—In the battle between objects made of aluminum going hundreds of miles per hours and the ground going zero miles per hour, the ground has yet to lose.

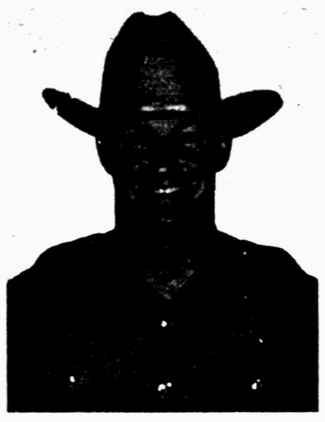

—Good judgment comes from experience. Unfortunately, the experience usually comes from bad judgment.

—There are three simple rules for making a smooth landing. Unfortunately, no one knows what they are.

DPS trooper arrests Carlsbad car thief

It seems Jose Antonio Meza's luck ran out when he hit Scurry County.

Four thousand miles and more than a month after he stole a vehicle in New Mexico, the 19-year-old man was arrested Monday morning on third degree felony theft charges.

DPS Trooper Bill Blackley

Department of Public Safety Trooper Bill Blackley stopped Meza around 8 a.m. Monday, some seven miles north of Snyder on Hwy. 208 because he didn't have a front license plate on the gold 2001 Ford F-250 pickup.

A check on the plates found that the vehicle had been reported stolen Jan. 4 from Carlsbad Motors.

Meza, whose address is listed as 3727 Andrews Hwy, Apt. 814 in Odessa, told authorities that he had stolen the vehicle the first week in December, according to Blackley.

"He had taken the vehicle on a test drive earlier that day and had a key made," Blackley said. "He went back and got it that night."

Blackley said the auto dealership only does inventory once a month, and officials there did not realize the vehicle was stolen until later.

The vehicle is valued at $32,785, making the theft a third degree felony.

Girl Scouts' cookie sale underway in community

The cookie sale is a fundraiser for Girl Scouts, but more importantly it teaches marketing and selling techniques, goal planning, customer service, money management and financial tracking — all summed up it means a lot of fun too.

Girl Scout cookie boxes have a whole new look and on the box reads "You'd be surprised that a Girl Scout Cookie can build strong values, minds, bodies, spirit, friendships, skills, leadership and community."

Returning are cookie favorites including Thin Mints, Animal Treasures, Peanut Butter Sandwich, Upside-downs, Caramel deLites, Shortbread, Peanut Butter Patties and Lemon Pastry Cremes.

After Girl Scouts was founded in 1912, they soon began to sell cookies in order to be self-reliant and to fund their own troop activities. During those days, the girls baked the original shortbread cookies at home and held neighborhood bake sales.

"Girls selling cookies are learning skills that help them succeed in life," said Peggy Vernon, chairman. "This activity helps girls develop self-confidence, self-respect and a strong sense of their community."

Cookies are $3 per package with all proceeds benefiting local Girl Scouts. They began taking orders Monday and will continue through Jan. 28. Anyone not contacted by a Girl Scout may call 574-8004 or 573-6725.

Some prison guards conduct candlelight vigil

AUSTIN (AP) — Correctional officer Willie King has had feces thrown at him and has seen colleagues abused by the prisoners they are supposed to oversee.

He is one of some 23,000 prison guards in Texas whose starting pay of $18,000 a year is among the nation's lowest, despite working in the country's largest prison system.

King, who works at a state prison near Houston, was one of about three dozen correctional employees who began their legislative fight for pay raises and better working conditions at a Monday night candle light vigil.

"If somebody was throwing body waste at you, you'd get tired of it, too. Or stabbing you or hitting you. There's not much you can do. You have to remain a professional and that's kind of hard," King said, clutching a burning candle.

King feels ignored by state officials and politicians.

"We're out there every day in the trenches and I have yet to have anybody ask me, 'What should we do? What can I do?'"

From a union's perspective, legislators and Gov. Rick Perry can raise salaries and improve training.

"We don't come with our hats in our hands begging. We come asking for the Legislature and the governor to do the right thing," said Brian Olsen, executive director of the Texas chapter of the American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees.

"I would like to make one request to our new governor now: Please, please governor, don't treat us like stepchildren. We are officers who hold security over inmates in your prisons. We need respect now. We need professional respect. We are not second-class citizens," said Marian Terry, a correctional officer and vice president of the union.

Freshman Rep. Chuck Hopson, D-Jacksonville, said his very first bill will be one seeking pay increases for prison guards and other correctional workers.

"They need some help. They need some more money," said Hopson. He said specifics of the bill would be available next week, when he planned to file it.

Hopson and the employees have an uphill battle.

The 2002-2003 proposed state budget includes $42 million for prison guard pay raises promised last summer, but it does not include any new money for additional raises or staff.

And finding funding for additional raises will be tough. Only $300 million is estimated to be left from the $108.2 billion budget for all new spending.

Olsen said the guards had no specific dollar requests, but want the state "to pay them something decent to keep them. I mean it's a public safety issue. They're going to have to dig deep to take care of this or the public isn't going to be safe."

Monday's gathering represented only a fraction of the 23,622 Texas prison guards, but Olsen said the small group was made up of leaders who spoke for all correctional employees seeking better pay and working conditions.

Starting pay for a prison guard is about $18,000 in Texas, the 43rd lowest level in the country, according to the union.

A "reclassification" last year by then-Gov. George W. Bush boosted veteran officers' pay to slightly more than $28,000, compared with the national average of about $34,000.

Currently, 2,595 guard positions are open in Texas. Those figures don't include supervisory officers.

Guards have been seeking higher pay for years, but the battle has gained increased attention because the shortage is believed to have contributed to the Dec. 13 Connally Unit breakout. Seven convicts charged with killing an Irving police officer remain on the loose.

The escape, the guard shortage and pay raises will dominate the legislative session this week.

Today, the Senate Finance Committee will hear from TDCJ officials, who will give an overview of their budget requests.

Also today, the Senate Criminal Justice Committee will hold a public hearing to discuss last week's state report which detailed the escape.

Inauguration will boost Texas pride

By The Associated Press

It's a bed and breakfast, and a can of cheap beer. It inhales history, exhales myth and comes out swinging if it catches a whiff of derision. It's a birthright, an inheritance from generations of dusty bards and hard-bitten romantics with time to spin fact into legend.

With George W. Bush's presidential inauguration approaching fast, Texas pride is swelling. Not since the heady days of Lyndon B. and Lady Bird has the Lone Star State seen itself embodied so plainly and publicly as it has in its newest golden boy.

Bush is Midland oil and Dallas baseball and Houston brash, a hunter and a reader of Scripture rolled into a lanky frame, spiced with a swagger.

Americans have been staring at a snapshot of Texas pride for months. But what is it really, this stuff of puffed egos and tall tales?

It's a paycheck for Lois Smith, 69, who books reservations at Pride House, a Victorian bed and breakfast nestled in the woods near the Louisiana state line.

"My family is I-don't-know-how-many generations of Texas," Smith says. "You know, we have a reputation for being braggarts and being not very smart. But that's a misunderstanding. Actually, I think Texas pride is a very good thing."

Texas pride is a thick-skinned defense against a nation that loves to poke fun at the cowpokes. (There was the famous calling card of a storied statesman that read "Sam Houston: Texas," as if no other information could possibly be relevant.) It inspires loyalists like Smith to count generations of Texans — and discount anything that came before.

Plunk down $25 at the Bureau of Vital Statistics in Austin, and you can walk away with a Native Texas Birth Certificate — a personalized, gold-embossed Lone Star pedigree. Provided, of course, you were born inside state lines.

You can get drunk on Pride, but that's not as easy as it used to be. Though there may be a few cans floating around backroad ice houses, Pabst Brewing Co. is not currently brewing Texas Pride beer.

Texas pride is the fancy of schoolchildren, growing between the pages of history textbooks, hoisted home on the shoulders of every teen-ager in the state.

They learn the tale, all of them, of a fallen nation called Texas, a land battered but not bowed. Texans raised the Lone Star flag over the Republic in 1836. That nation died in infancy in 1845, when Texas became the 28th state — and some folks have been grieving ever since.

"But so many qualities of being Texan we can expand and say these are American qualities," says Bruce Winders, curator at the Alamo. "The ironic thing when we talk about Texans in the Alamo, most of these people were from other states."

No matter, that. Texas pride has a tricky way of cherry-picking its native sons and daughters.

Bush has earned Texan status, though his birth in well-heeled Connecticut could hardly be more remote from the rough land where he rose to power.

And what about Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Texan everybody forgets? Eisenhower was born in Denison, but is claimed by Kansas — and nobody in Texas seems to mind.

Born in Massachusetts, the elder George Bush ranks as an adoptive Texan, complete with oil credentials, a retirement to Houston and a son who ran the show in the statehouse in Austin. Ultimately, though, he reached the White House after years in Washington jobs, and the down-home Texas stuff was never exactly his style.

But Johnson — that's another thing. He was the only Texan president who lodged himself into popular memory as such. He had everything he needed to fill out the cliche, to modernize Texan lore: founding family roots, a struggle out of poverty and a way of talking straight and twangy.

Ask The Preacher

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BELIEVE?

by Bill Looney

"The jailer called for lights, rushed in and fell trembling before Paul and Silas. He then brought them out and asked, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" They replied, "Believe on the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved ---you and your household" (Acts 16:29-31). The best answer to the question, What does it mean to believe?" is found in the action of the jailer who was told to believe in order to be saved. The word believe was used as a comprehensive word, a package word, containing at least three elements: trust, repentance and baptism. The fact that the jailer washed the stripes of the mistreated men of God shows his repentance. Further, the passage tells of his midnight baptism. Again, if one understands what the preachers meant by the simple command "believe," then he understands that they said it all in one word. Those who claim that believe means that you only have to "believe that there is one God. Good! Even the demons believe that --- and shudder" (James 2:19 NIV).

Cosmorama club held Monday meeting

Cosmorama Study Club met Monday at the Martha Ann Woman's Club for a Dessert Mystery Drama, by Dorothy Rosson.

She divided the 22 members into four groups and each group was given an imaginary situation which they presented with words and action. They presented the situation without costumes, props or practice.

The skits were entitled Stuck, Stopped, Soaked and Stressed. The groups presented some frustrating problems and how people reacted and solved the dilemmas.

During the business session led by president Fagin, $500 was donated to the Martha Ann Woman's Club.

Officers for next year were elected to include Carol Miller, president; Durelle Gorman, first vice president; Rosson, second vice president; Floyd, recording secretary; Millie Sentell, corresponding secretary; and Gilbert, treasurer.

Snow sculpting contest needs cold weather

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Unseasonably warm temperatures and rain are melting some sculptors' chances for success.

Organizers and would-be participants of the annual Illinois Snow Sculpting Competition, which begins Wednesday, are hoping for a cold snap.

Though more than 30 inches of snow fell in Rockford in December, above-freezing temperatures have them worried.

"It's got to cool off," said Gary Simon, a snow sculptor from Belvidere. "Really, the ideal temperature is 10 to 15 degrees. If it's 20 degrees and sunny, it will start to melt."

Last year, a lack of snow postponed the competition until a 6-inch snowstorm hit a week later.

Rockford Park District spokesman Vance Barrie said a record 20 state teams plan to compete this year, along with 13 high school teams and as many as three international teams.

Judging for the contest is to begin Saturday.

Trump swings back

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Donald Trump has swung back at a golfer who allegedly clubbed an exotic black swan to death.

The golfer, who was playing at the $40 million Trump International Golf Club two weeks ago as the guest of a member, has been banned from all of Trump's properties worldwide.

"I spoke with the member and relayed to him that his guest is not to set foot on any of my properties again," Trump said. "I don't care if it was self-defense or not. The actions seemed excessive."

Guest Cyril Wagner told investigators he killed the 50-pound bird in self-defense with one swing. One club member said the swan had exhibited aggressive behavior in the past.

Bad bidding, good play

By Phillip Alder

After my class in New Plymouth, eight players got together for a short team-of-four match. While drinking a glass of wine, I watched a few deals. This one contained some bad bidding, good play and better defense.

South, Dinnie Hall, the secretary of the club, opened with the Multi. It usually — as here — hides a weak two-bid in either major, but it might have contained a balanced 20-22 points or a strong two-bid in either minor. (This bid, which enjoys considerable popularity throughout the world, is permitted only in high-level events in the United States.) Two no-trump asked for definition. Over East's four hearts, South should have passed, which would have shown a weak two in spades. Then, North would have become the declarer in spades. Six spades by him can be made unless East leads a trump, or a diamond honor, or the club king. After South bid four spades, North should have passed, but he used Roman Key Card Blackwood. South's reply promised either two aces, or one ace and the trump king, but denied the trump queen.

After winning with the heart ace, Dinnie drew trumps, cashed the ace-king of diamonds, and ruffed a diamond — lucky! Back to dummy with a trump, Dinnie discarded her remaining heart on the diamond nine, ruffed the heart queen in hand, and played a club to dummy's ace. If East, Robert Findlay, had kept the king in his hand, he would have been endplayed. But he saw that coming, discarding the monarch. So, West, Graham Gilkison, won two club tricks to defeat the slam.

Snyder cagers visit Lake View tonight

All the Snyder Lady Tigers are hoping for is a second-half district performance similar to the first.

The Lady Tigers sit in sole possession of second place entering the second half of their league schedule, which tips off at 6 o'clock tonight at San Angelo Lake View.

The Snyder boys, who also hold the second spot in the district standings, will square off with the Chiefs at 7:30.

The Lady Tigers (16-5, 5-2) rolled over Lake View, 43-24, in their first meeting. Snyder is coming off a 61-42 win over Estacado, while the Maidens (8-15, 0-7) have yet to win in league competition.

The Snyder boys are coming off their first district setback of the season, and their first district road loss in three years when they visit the Chiefs (10-13, 2-3).

The Tigers (14-7, 4-1) could be without the services of senior point guard Jamaal Wofford for the second straight game. Wofford was to have undergone a bone scan this morning to examine his injured hip. His status tonight hinged on the results.

Both contests will be played at San Angelo Central High School's Babe Didrickson Gymnasium. Following tonight's action, Snyder returns home Friday to host Levelland.

In tonight's Class A district action, Hermleigh travels to Trent, and Ira visits Grady. Girls' games tip off at 6:30, followed by the boys at 8 o'clock.

Williams in good condition

BOSTON (AP) — Ted Williams, baseball's last .400 hitter, came out of major surgery to repair a failing heart valve in good condition, according to his son. John Henry Williams met with the surgical team at New York Presbyterian Hospital after a six-hour operation on his father.

102 players file for arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — In an annual rite that infuriates many owners, 102 players filed for salary arbitration. New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter is expected to get the largest contract among those who filed. Oakland's newly acquired outfielder, Johnny Damon, also will get a large raise.

Seven players each filed from Cincinnati and Florida, the most from any team. Players and teams exchange proposed figures Thursday, with hearings scheduled for the first three weeks of February.

Carruth trial nearing end

Carruth, 26, could get the death penalty if convicted of murdering Cherica Adams, who was eight months pregnant with his child when she was shot on Nov. 16, 1999. She died a month later but the boy, Carruth's second child, survived and lives with Adams' mother.

Lady Vols lose Catchings

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee forward Tamika Catchings, last season's player of the year in women's college basketball, tore a knee ligament and will miss the rest of the season. Catchings, a 6-foot-1 senior, tore the anterior cruciate ligament during the second-ranked Vols' 66-59 win over No. 21 Mississippi State.

Against league's top defense...

Giants will tone down offense

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New York Giants already realize the Super Bowl is going to be different from the NFC championship.

Less than a day after their 41-0 win over the Minnesota Vikings, the Giants seemed poised to put their pass-happy offense on hiatus and go back to a risk-free, conservative offense for the Baltimore Ravens.

No sense risking mistakes against the best defense in recent NFL history.

"Heck, a field goal can win it," defensive end Michael Strahan said Monday. "This is that type of game. Baltimore is that type of defense. Heck, they score a touchdown and it's tough. Yesterday, you saw after Shannon Sharpe caught the touchdown, the game was over. That defense is unbelievable."

The Ravens allowed 165 points, a record low for a 16-game regular season, and 16 in three postseason games.

"It's certainly not going to be the kind of game we had yesterday," said quarterback Kerry Collins, who completed 28 of 39 passes for 381 yards and five touchdowns against the Vikings. "They will be the best defense we've faced all year."

From what he has seen of the Ravens, Giants coach Jim Fassel doesn't think Baltimore's defense has a weakness.

"Every game will take on a different philosophy for us for how we are going to end up with a win," Fassel said. "We always know which side of the ball is up against the tough act.

"That defense is a dominant defense. You are going to see two outstanding defenses."

Fassel said the Giants would look at as many tapes of the Ravens as possible, but he noted that much of what they will do will depend on where they match up well against Baltimore.

What was successful for the New York Jets against the Ravens might not be successful for the Giants.

What the Giants can hope for is that Collins has another great game.

"It was one of those days where everything went right," said Collins, whose performance broke almost every Giants postseason passing record.

It was such a good game, Collins said only made two bad throws.

One was a third-down pass that was intercepted deep in Vikings' territory.

"It was my best punt of the season," Collins quipped.

The other came on a pass to Joe Jurevicius. A Vikings defender was called for two penalties on the play, including pass interference.

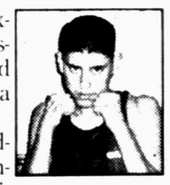

While the play gave the Giants a first down deep in Minnesota territory, Collins said he failed to see Ike Hilliard wide open.

Collins got philosophical when asked why he had his best day in his biggest game.

"It was real bad for me at times," said Collins, who has fought alcohol abuse and other off-the-field problems in recent years. "I think things come full circle. Through all the days, I kept thinking because it got so bad, it's going to be that good someday. So yesterday maybe was that day."

The Giants are hoping that Collins will have another one of those days against the best defense in football.

Local boxer earns spot at nationals

Vasquez

Snyder boxer Johnny Vasquez Jr. earned a shot at a national title.

Vasquez advanced by winning a unanimous decision over El Paso's Jose Chavez to gain a berth in the USA Boxing Senior Nationals in March in Colorado Springs, Colo.

From the looks of him, it appears to be a wise career decision.

Van Gundy came out on the losing end of a collision Monday between his head and Marcus Camby's after Camby threw a sucker punch at Danny Ferry late in the fourth quarter of New York's 104-82 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

It was Van Gundy's first time in the middle of a dustup since he grabbed hold of Alonzo Mourning's leg during a fight between Mourning and Larry Johnson during the 1998 playoffs.

"I'm getting there," Van Gundy said. "Last time I got their guy, this time I got my guy. Next time I'll stay the heck out of the way."

Van Gundy needed 12-15 stitches to close the cut over his right eye.

"I'm sure he (Camby) would like to take it back," San Antonio coach Gregg Popovich said. "He's an intelligent guy."

Longhorns extend home streak

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' home winning streak stayed alive on the shoulders of the most unlikely of players.

Struggling through another poor shooting night, Texas (13-3) relied on the defensive heroics of seldom-used point guard Fredie Williams to defeat No. 15 Connecticut 60-56 Monday night.

Williams' two steals in the final minute led to four points that put the Longhorns ahead and extended their homecourt winning streak to 23.

"If felt great getting back out on the court," said Williams, who started the first three games of the season, but has been relegated mostly to mop-up duty lately. "I just try to practice hard every day and play good defense."

LEGAL NOTICE

IN THE JUVENILE COURT OF HALL COUNTY STATE OF GEORGIA

IN THE MATTER OF:
GEORGE GARCIA
DOB: 10/28/97
SEX: MALE

A CHILD UNDER THE AGE OF EIGHTEEN

CASE NUMBER: 000865

NOTICE OF PUBLICATION

TO: JOE ANGEL GUERRO, PUTATIVE FATHER OF THE GEORGE GARCIA, JR.

By order for service by publication dated the 21st day of December, 2000, you are hereby notified that on the 6 day of June, 2000, the Hall County Department of Family and Children Services filed a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights as to the Father and on June 29, 2000 it filed a First Amendment to the Petition for Termination of Parental Rights as to the Father against you as to George Garcia, Jr. You are required to file with Clerk of Juvenile Court, and to serve upon Petitioner's attorney, John R. Coleman, Jr., an answer in writing within sixty (60) days of the date of the Order of Publication.

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96, Joe Angel Guerro is hereby advised that he will lose all rights to George Garcia, Jr., and will not be entitled to object to the termination of his rights to the child unless, within thirty (30) days of receipt of this notice, he files:

(1) A petition to legitimate the child pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22; and
(2) Notice of the filing of the petition to legitimate with the Juvenile Court of Hall County.

Respondent Joe Angel Guerro will lose all rights to George Garcia, Jr. and the Court shall enter an order terminating all of his rights to George Garcia, Jr. and he will not be entitled to thereafter object to the termination of his rights to the child if within thirty (30) days from your receipt of this, Petition for Termination of Parental Rights and First Amendment to the Petition for Termination of Parental Rights, he:

(1) Does not file a petition to legitimate and give notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. §19-7-22;
(2) Files a legitimation petition that is subsequently dismissed for failure to prosecute;
(3) Files a legitimation Petition and the action is subsequently concluded without a court order declaring a finding that he is the legal father of the child.

Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-93, the effect of a termination order terminating the parental rights of a parent under this article is without limit as to duration and terminates all the rights and obligations with respect to the child and all rights and obligations of the child to the parent arising from the parental relationship, including rights of inheritance.

The parent is not thereafter entitled to notice of the proceedings for the adoption of the child by another, nor does the parent have any right to object to the adoption or to otherwise participate in the proceedings.

Therefore, let Joe Angel Guerro show cause before me on the 22nd day of February, 2001 at 9:00 o'clock a.m. in the Hall County Courthouse in Gainesville, Georgia to appear and answer the allegations of said petitions. This hearing is for the purpose of terminating parental rights.

In the event that Joe Angel Guerro is unable to employ counsel, a right that he is entitled to, and if indigent as that term is defined under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6, let Joe Angel Guerro immediately contact the Hall County Courthouse and request the appointment of counsel to represent him in these proceedings.

WITNESS, the Honorable Cliff L. Jolliff, Judge of said Court, this the 22nd day of December, 2000.

Election 2001 will bring more TV ads, signs and debates

By ROBERT TANNER
Associated Press Writer

If you haven't caught your breath from last year's never-ending presidential race, too late: Here comes Election 2001 with a flood of campaign signs, debates and TV ads.

Two states and hundreds of cities — including Los Angeles, New York, Boston and Detroit — elect their leaders this year, putting urban issues squarely in the spotlight and giving the political world a tryout for the midterm elections a year later.

"We're talking about governors and mayors who deal with real issues, unlike in Washington and Congress where they talk but don't get anything done," said Ron Faucheux, editor of Campaigns & Elections. "They're often times good testing grounds for strategic moves for both parties."

Governors' seats are up for election in New Jersey and Virginia, where candidates already are talking of tax cuts and the next steps in welfare reform.

Both will see wide-open races, as term limits end Virginia GOP Gov. Jim Gilmore's service after one four-year term, and New Jersey Gov. Christie Whitman's after two terms. Whitman, a Republican, has been nominated by President-elect Bush to lead the Environmental Protection Agency.

In Virginia, Attorney General Mark Earley and Lt. Gov. John Hager are the candidates for the GOP nomination. Telecommunications millionaire Mark Warner, who lost a race for Senate two years ago, is the Democratic candidate.

In New Jersey, Senate President (and soon-to-be acting governor) Donald DiFrancesco began running ads the morning after November's election, talking about cutting property taxes. Possible opponents for the GOP nomination: Jersey City Mayor Bret Schundler or Rep. Bob Franks.

City elections, however, may attract the most attention, with some of the nation's biggest urban centers choosing mayors.

Education, sprawl and business growth are sure to be big issues, from Atlanta to St. Louis to Seattle. Much will hinge on the economy, political observers say.

"The old saw is that when the economy catches a cold, cities get pneumonia. Right now, they're in fat times," said Todd Swanstrom, a public policy professor at the State University of New York at Albany. "If the economy goes into a recession ... mayors will find themselves facing a very difficult situation quickly."

Cities with booming economies, like Atlanta and Seattle, are struggling with lack of affordable housing, traffic congestion and gentrification that drive out longtime neighborhoods. Others face decades-long battles to bring in business and add jobs, like St. Louis and Detroit.

Despite the economic gains of recent years and the revival of some downtowns, nearly all cities wrestle with a shrinking middle class and tenacious poverty, said Ed Hudgins, an economist who looks at urban issues for the conservative Cato Institute.

New York will see its first open mayor's race in 28 years. GOP Mayor Rudy Giuliani is barred by law from a third term, and speculation is rife over who the candidates might be, with one brief flurry of reports encouraging President Clinton. His staff quickly shot down the idea.

In Los Angeles, a half-dozen candidates are emerging in hopes of following GOP Mayor Richard Riordan, also barred from a third term.

In both cities, Republican mayors won and thrived despite populations that are heavily Democratic.

Ralston Purina accepts Nestle's offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralston Purina Co. reportedly has accepted a $10.1 billion takeover offer from Nestle SA, the Swiss food giant whose products include the Friskies and Alpo pet food brands.

The boards of both companies approved the deal Monday and an announcement is expected today, The Wall Street Journal reported on its Web site Monday, citing people familiar with the situation.

Ralston Purina refused to comment when contacted by The Associated Press. Officials at Nestle did not immediately return calls.

Combined, the companies would have 35 percent to 40 percent of the nation's pet-food market, the Journal reported. Nestle is a leader in "wet" pet food, while Ralston Purina is the market leader in dry brands.

Based on measured sales, Ralston has more than one-fourth of the $4.3 billion dog food market and one-third of the $2.6 billion cat food market. Nestle has about 12 percent of each niche.

President-elect's life rooted in West Texas

MIDLAND (AP) — George W. Bush attended Andover and Yale, but his early years were spent in Midland, in the heart of the Texas oil patch, where he rode his bicycle, cheered at Friday night football games and first met some of the friends who remain his closest advisers.

With pumpjacks dotting the landscape and tumbleweeds rolling across the plains, Midland had a "frontier feeling; it was hot and dry and dusty," the former Texas governor recalls in his autobiography, "George W. Bush: A Charge to Keep."

Midway between Fort Worth and El Paso, Midland now has about 100,000 residents. Its economy has diversified some since the oil bust of the mid-1980s, but it is still the administrative center for the petroleum-producing region known as the Permian Basin, where about 20 percent of America's oil and gas reserves are located.

Midland's known as the place where toddler Jessica McClure was saved after falling into an abandoned water well in 1987 and for Midland Lee High School, which won its third straight state football championship in December.

"It was an idyllic place to grow up, a real Ozzie-and-Harriet sort of town, and there's a great sense of nostalgia among our group of friends for that time," Charlie Younger, an orthopedic surgeon and close friend, told Texas Monthly magazine. "... George and I were hashing something out, and he turned to me and said, 'If I died today, I'd like to be buried in Midland.'"

The future Mrs. George W. Bush also grew up in Midland, but Laura Welch and Bush did not cross paths until he returned in the 1970s.

In 1950, the Bushes moved into a new housing development known by locals as "Easter Egg Row" — all the houses were identical, except for their differing pastel colors. The Bushes lived in the light blue house in the predominantly white neighborhood of young professionals.

And in school, Bush was outgoing, maybe even a cutup.

"He was just a good little all-around boy with a mischievous look in his eye," said Austine Crosby, his third-grade teacher, now in her 80s.

There was the day after Elvis Presley performed at Odessa's Coliseum when Bush took center stage in his fourth-grade classroom at Sam Houston Elementary School. Using a ball point pen, he colored a beard and long sideburns onto his face and began dazzling his classmates.

The spectacle impressed everyone but Bush's teacher, who yanked him to the office, telling Principal John Bizilo that young George W. needed to be paddled.

"I sent him down to the restroom to wash it off, but it wouldn't come off," Bizilo said. "Then I swatted him three times on the seat of the pants, and I didn't have any trouble with him after that."

Even back then, Bizilo said, Bush was a leader of sorts.

"Old George was a class clown," he said. "He was a pretty active boy. He wasn't mean or vicious, but he was the leader of his clan."

By 1952, Bush's father George had founded his own oil development company and the family had moved into a new home near Midland High School.

The family left Midland in 1959, when the elder Bush's interest in offshore drilling took him to Houston.

But George W. returned in the mid-1970s after graduating from Harvard Business School, inspired, he said, "by the energy and entrepreneurship of the oil patch."

By then, Midland was growing so fast that the city council was approving more planning and zoning changes than Dallas, and its Rolls Royce dealership was the second most successful in the country.

"There was a lot of money flowing because of the revenue produced by the oil and gas industry," former Mayor Thane Akins said. "There was almost a euphoric attitude that, 'Hey, this never is going to end.'"

Bush founded Arbusto, an exploration company that put together private partnerships for drilling ventures. By 1982, Arbusto was on hard times. Bush renamed it Bush Exploration Co. and took it public. That company merged with another, then again with Harken Energy of Irving.

Many of Bush's closest, enduring friendships formed in Midland. Oilman Don Evans, his campaign chairman, is now in line to become commerce secretary. Joe O'Neill, a Texas businessman who, with his wife, introduced Bush to Laura over a hamburger dinner, became a key fund-raiser.

Bush ran his first campaign from Midland, a losing effort for a U.S. House seat in 1978. His opponent, Democrat Kent Hance, was a state senator from Lubbock, the district's biggest city.

Atlantis launch delayed until February

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis' launch has been delayed until next month to allow for additional booster inspections.

NASA made the decision Monday night just hours before the countdown was to begin for a Friday liftoff. The five astronauts had yet to fly to Cape Canaveral from Houston.

NASA wants more time to inspect electrical cables that connect the shuttle with its two solid-fuel rocket boosters. The work cannot be performed at the launch pad; as a result, Atlantis must be returned to its hangar, most likely on Friday.

During the last shuttle launch on Nov. 30, an explosive device failed to work during Endeavour's climb to orbit because of a bad electrical connector. A backup charge separated the left booster two minutes into the flight as planned.

If the backup charge had not worked, the results could have been catastrophic.

Although the cables on Atlantis' boosters were X-rayed before the shuttle was transported to the launch pad two weeks ago, they were not shaken as part of the testing, said NASA spokesman George Diller. The shaking is meant to mimic the vibrations of launch.

Over the weekend, NASA tested thousands of cables throughout the shuttle fleet and four failed, Diller said. That prompted renewed worries about the cables on Atlantis, he said.

"They've still got concerns about these solid rocket booster cables, which are 'criticality-one' flight hardware, meaning that the safety of the flight cannot be assured," said Diller, using NASA's label for the most critical components.

"We're just kind of in a position of feeling like we need more information, and the only way we can get that is to do some further testing on these cables," he said.

The laboratory module aboard Atlantis is so expensive — $1.4 billion — that NASA could not afford to build a backup version. If the lab is damaged or destroyed, that would set back space station construction for years.

Actor hopes movie will get people to think of their faith

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — Kirk Cameron hopes his new film about an apocalypse will prompt moviegoers to do some hard thinking.

"There's a possibility this stuff is going to happen, so I hope the movie will make people take a look at how authentic their own faith is and consider the truths of the Bible," the 30-year-old actor said.

The film, "Left Behind," is based on the best-selling Christian novel by Jerry B. Jenkins and Tim LaHaye and depicts a vision of the end of time drawn from the Bible.

Treating neuropathy

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband, age 46, was diagnosed with diabetes five years ago. He has been reasonably resourceful in controlling his blood sugar levels with diet alone. However, for the past few months, he has been suffering from constant pain in his arms, legs and feet. A neurologist diagnosed "neuropathy" and wants to cut the nerves to his legs, an option that doesn't appeal to us. Also, my husband is impotent, which is causing major problems in our marriage. What do you think?

DEAR READER: One of the major complications of diabetes is neuropathy, the malfunction of various nerves in the body. This can lead to weakness, pain, numbness and tingling of arms and legs. Neuropathy is believed due to poor arterial blood supply to nerves, resulting from the premature arteriosclerotic blockages that are common in diabetes. Constipation and erectile dysfunction are additional consequences of this metabolic abnormality.

The development of neuropathy in a middle-aged diabetic who is well controlled would be unusual. Also, I wonder if your husband's blood sugars have truly been reduced by diet alone. In short, I am concerned that his diabetes may have been present for years and even now is under-treated. If this is the case, he may need more aggressive management, which could include pills or — conceivably — insulin injections.

To sort out this complex situation, I recommend that he be examined by a diabetes specialist. It is possible that more meticulous attention to your spouse's metabolic state could lead to a diminution of his symptoms.

However, even if the neuropathy does not improve, stricter glucose control would enable your husband to avoid the other common consequences of his diabetes: stroke, heart disease, kidney disorders, vascular blockages, blindness and others.

In addition, certain medications may relieve many of his symptoms. For example, anti-depressants and anti-seizure drugs can often lessen the pain of diabetic neuropathy; aspirin or anti-coagulant medication frequently prevents heart attacks and strokes caused by blood clots; Viagra may reverse his erectile dysfunction.

Although an operation to sever the nerves (sympathectomy) may be necessary in advanced cases marked by intractable pain, I believe that this treatment should be a last recourse, to be used only after other less drastic medical therapies have failed. Despite the seemingly advanced stage of your husband's diabetes, I believe that he has several, non-surgical options.

One last comment: If you have a solid marriage, it needn't be threatened by your husband's illness. For one thing, you can still cuddle and enjoy physical closeness. For another, if he or she is sensitive to your needs, he can sexually pleasure you in a number of ways, which I probably shouldn't describe in a family newspaper. Finally, the Viagra should work by helping your husband to achieve and maintain an erection.

Thus, I believe there are several options to help solve your husband's problems. Working closely with his doctors, you both may be greatly benefited.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Reports "Diabetes Mellitus" and "Impotence." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title(s).

Best education may be what you learn after your degree

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Supports the Value of Education." I started college right after high school, but gave it up to marry and have children. In my neighborhood in the 1960s, few women went to college at all.

After raising my family, I went back to college and graduated when I was 40. I now have a wonderful career, more satisfying than I ever dreamed. Completing my education was one of the greatest personal accomplishments of my life.

Both my boss and her boss do not have degrees. They are two of the smartest people I know and have a great deal of common sense in business. Nonetheless, my education has made me feel more confident and complete. It did not make me any better than anyone else. We are a team at work and complement each other.

Not all knowledge comes from books, and a degree is a degree — not a license for a pompous attitude. — BILLIE IN CINCINNATI

DEAR BILLIE: I am all for education, and no one has ever written to me to say he or she was sorry to have earned a college degree.

Success can be measured in many ways. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding that letter on the value of education, "Supports" missed one extremely important fact. A degree, in and of itself, is not a "guarantee" a person will succeed.

Education is learning. In order to get ahead in this world, what has been learned must be put to productive use. This is true whether you're applying the study and persistence skills you used to make it through college, or whether you're applying that which you have learned.

"Supports" obtained a college degree, but apparently chooses to rely upon having the degree, as opposed to relying upon being able to apply the education. — DENNIS B., VICTORVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR DENNIS: You're not the only person who had the same reaction to the writer's attitude, which came across as intellectual snobbery. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Supports the Value of Education" wrote that "Several ... upper-level managers ... frequently comment that education is 'overrated.'"

That caused me to recall the words of Rabbi Benzion C. Kaganoff: "Education which is simply intellectual taxidermy — the scooping out of the mind and the stuffing in of facts — that kind of education is worthless. The human mind is not a deep-freeze for storage; the human mind is a forge for production." — ARTHUR H. PRINCE, PH.D., MEMPHIS, TENN.

DEAR ARTHUR: This is the first I've heard of the learned Rabbi Kaganoff — but I think he was on to something.

DEAR ABBY: I am legally separated and have been living with my girlfriend since last February. I want to ask her to marry me. Is it OK to be engaged before my divorce is final? — IN LOVE AGAIN

DEAR IN LOVE: No. I urge you to wait until the divorce is final to pop the question. Doing so before you are free would make you and your girlfriend the hottest gossip topic in town. Bide your time until you are single.

Quake death toll passes 600

SANTA TECLA, El Salvador (AP) — As the death toll in El Salvador's devastating earthquake topped 600 and continued to climb, authorities made a final push to find trapped survivors Tuesday and shifted their attention to coping with the growing number of corpses.

Workers were burying unidentified bodies in common graves at the municipal cemetery in this devastated town, and the government said 3,000 coffins requested from Colombia would arrive soon. The chances of anyone else emerging from the rubble alive appeared slim.

Finger-pointing began: In Santa Tecla, where a mountainside buried a whole neighborhood, environmental activists and authorities said deforestation contributed to the disaster.

Residents of the buried neighborhood, Las Colinas, had pleaded with Congress and the Supreme Court to block the construction of mansions on the hillside above them, saying the lack of ground cover left those below vulnerable to landslides. Their pleas were ignored, and construction continued.

Saturday's 7.6-magnitude quake loosened that hillside, sending dirt raining on the homes below and bringing down some of the mansions. Angry residents argued Monday that the development had caused hundreds of deaths.

"What good does money do us if we are subjecting our children to something like this?" Santa Tecla Mayor Oscar Ortiz asked.

Ecologist Ricardo Navarro accused members of Congress and government officials of negligence for failing to stop the deforestation.

Ashcroft faces tough Senate questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush's choice for attorney general, John Ashcroft, spoke out against racial profiling as he prepared to face questioning about his civil rights record at a Senate confirmation hearing.

The Senate Judiciary Committee was to consider the former Missouri senator's nomination as the nation's top law enforcement officer Tuesday at hearings that could be the most contentious confirmation proceedings since Bush's father successfully nominated Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court a decade ago.

Ashcroft, a conservative Republican, faces an avalanche of criticism from liberal organizations over civil rights, abortion and other issues, but most Democratic senators have refrained from saying how they would vote on their colleague of the last six years.

Bush has said Ashcroft's hearing doesn't have to be ugly "if the senators will tone down their rhetoric." Other supporters have joined Bush in insisting that Ashcroft would enforce the law regardless of his personal views.

Led by abortion rights advocates, women's groups said Tuesday they would work together to defeat the nominations of Ashcroft and of Tommy Thompson to be secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services because both men oppose abortion rights.

Ashcroft's hearing kicks off a busy week of Senate confirmation hearings for a number of Cabinet nominees, including Gale Norton, a former Colorado attorney general Bush has chosen to be interior secretary. She is opposed by environmentalists.

Woman reports threats

• Terroristic threats

A woman contacted police at 11 a.m. Monday to report that a man was calling her on the phone and making threats to her. An offense report for terroristic threats was filed.

• Dog bite

A report for dog bite was taken at 2:20 p.m. Monday in reference to a 31-year-old female being bitten. The animal was taken to the shelter and placed under observation.

• Phone stolen

• Threatens suicide

At 4:52 p.m. Monday, officers took a report in reference to a 10-year-old female threatening to commit suicide. An MHMR worker spoke with the child, who was later released to her mother.

• Accidents

A two-vehicle mishap occurred at 12:31 p.m. Monday in the 1700 block of 25th Street. Involved were a 1991 Chevrolet flatbed owned by Jack's Roadboring and a 1989 Oldsmobile Regency.
