Census could carve out prime political turf

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

With federal funds and congressional districts at stake in the ultimate outcome of the 2000 census, accurate numbers are of vital importance for all citizens.

In the realm of congressional districts, however, the upcoming census may hold particular appeal for Midlanders.

Because of the 1990 census, Midland was split into three congressional districts.

"That was the result of political gerrymandering to delete the voting power of Midland County," said state Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland.

After the last census, Democrats held a majority of the power positions in the state Legislature and a Democratic governor in Ann Richards. The Legislature is responsible for drawing congressional districts.

Midland, being a Republican party stronghold, fell victim to the Democratic power base and the spoils (Midland's representation) were divided among San Antonio and Lubbock.

Currently Midland is represented by Henry Bonilla and Lamar Smith — both of San Antonio — and Lubbock native Larry Combest. All three are Republicans and none are from Midland, leaving the Tall City with no one personally concerned about Midland's problems in Congress.

The true sufferers of such political warfare, however, are Midland voters. "I think it's very confusing for people," Craddick said. "They don't know which congressional district they're in and it dilutes the voting strength of the people of Midland."

The people of Midland need not be discouraged, though. The next census could put a bit of power back in their corner of the state.

The division of power in the state Legislature, at least for the time being, has shifted. The Republican Party now has majority control of the state Senate and a Republican governor. Democrats still control the Texas House.

Of course, that could all change with the 2000 elections. If the 1998 election — which put Republicans in every top state seat — are any indication, Texas voters might continue to lean Republican.

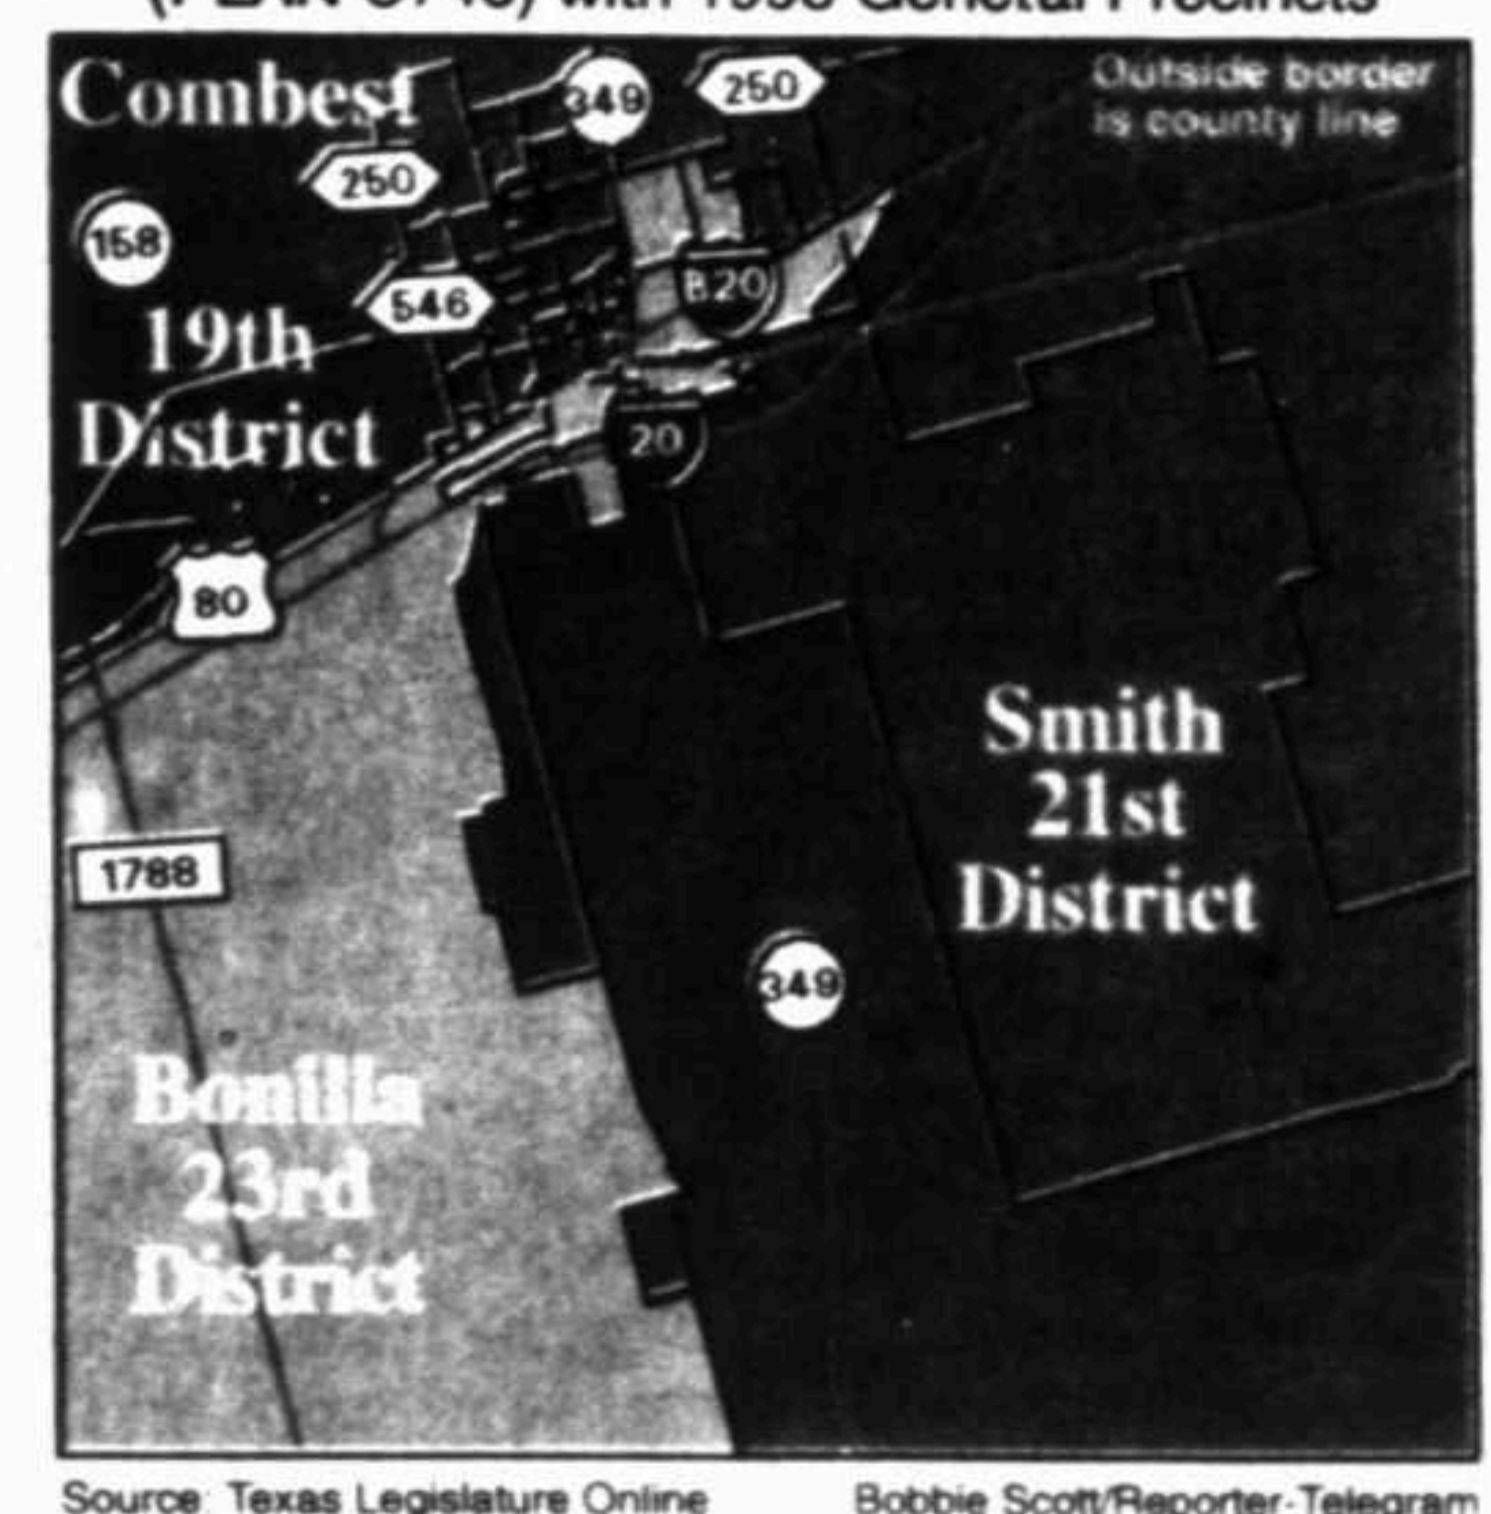

Such a coup would almost guarantee the Permian Basin its own district once again.

"Our goal is to end up in just one congressional district instead of three," Craddick said.

He added that Midland voters could do a lot to move things in that direction. Before the next session, the Legislature will hold community hearings

Stint at helm was turning point for CIA

Editor's Note: White House correspondent Trude B. Feldman met George Bush in 1964 and has been a Bush watcher ever since. This three-part series is based on interviews with him during his years in the White House as vice president and president and as recently as this month. (Ms. Feldman's two-part series on Barbara and George Bush's 45th wedding anniversary appeared in the Reporter-Telegram on Jan. 6, 1999.)

By Trude B. Feldman

One birthday gift that former President Bush considers especially significant is the 258-acre complex named after him in the Central Intelligence Agency's headquarters in Langley, Va., the first Washington, D.C.-area tribute to him.

Last October, President Clinton signed legislation authorizing the designation of the George Bush Center for Intelligence and, in a letter, read by CIA Director George Tenet at the recent dedication ceremony, Clinton noted that when Bush assumed his duties as director of the CIA (1976) the Vietnam War had just ended, the Watergate scandal was still an unhealed national wound, and government investigations had exposed abuses of power in connection with intelligence activities.

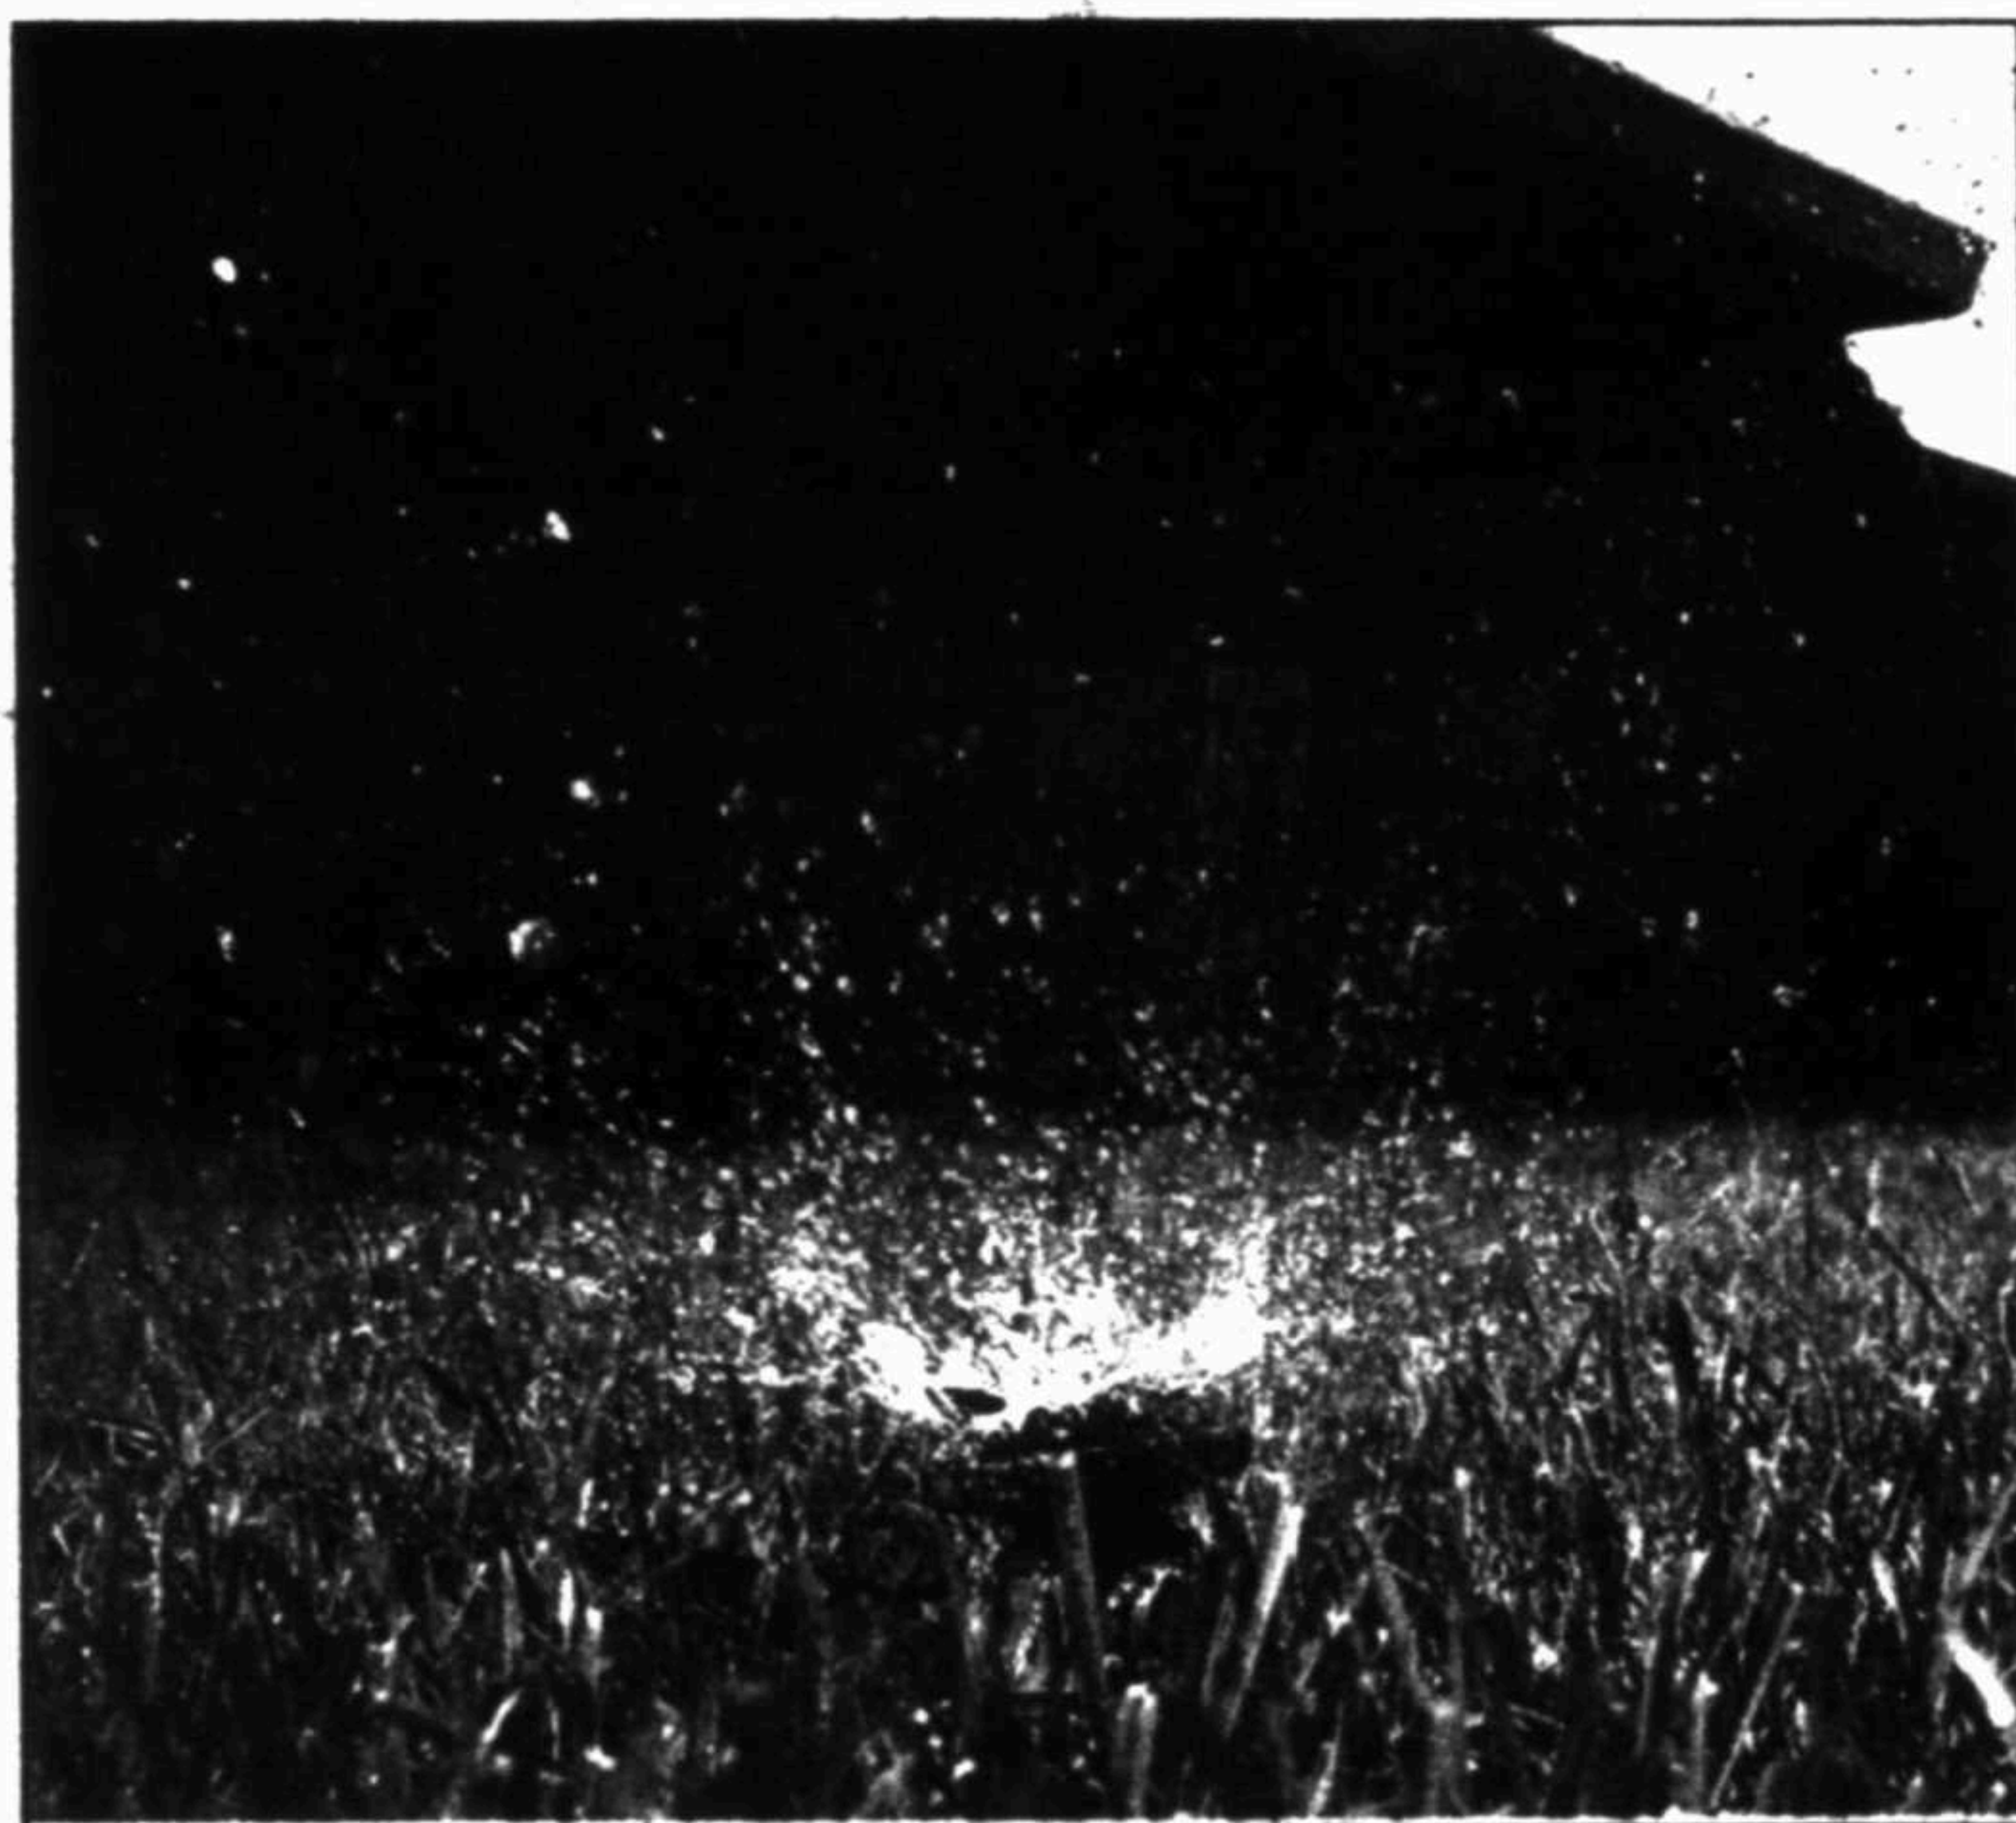

"Many Americans had lost faith in government and asked whether the CIA should continue to exist," Clinton said. "George Bush restored morale and discipline to the agency while publicly emphasizing the value of intelligence to the nation's security, and he also restored America's trust in the CIA and the rest of the intelligence community. 'I have been well-served by the talented and dedicated men and women who make up the intelligence community that George Bush did so much to preserve and strengthen.'"

While many Midlanders have had higher water bills, Ken Jones, utilities director for the city, said that water usage is down this year and that if rain continues, the bills could go down.

Jobless rate doubles since a year ago

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Local unemployment has doubled over the last year, according to figures from the Texas Workforce Commission.

Figures released Thursday by the commission put the Odessa-Midland metropolitan statistical area (MSA) unemployment rate for May at 9.2 percent, up from 8.7 percent in April and from 4.6 percent in May 1998.

For the city of Midland, the unemployment rate was 7.2 percent, up from 6.6 percent in April and from 3.8 percent last May.

"The job market in Odessa-Midland is still weak and that weakness is attributed to the decline in mining activity," said Bob Crawley, labor market analyst with the commission. "It will take a period of time for mining to stabilize and come back, so Odessa-Midland will be experiencing higher unemployment until then."

Utility bills rising with the mercury

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Take the kids to Disneyland or pay the water bill? Not much of a choice but one some families may have to make as rising mercury sends utility bills north for the summer. Dry conditions coupled with hot weather and rising property values make a perfect recipe for less money in Midlander's pockets.

Milton Patterson said he and his wife expect to cut back on amenities such as eating out and entertainment as a result of higher utility bills this summer.

"I'm retired and only draw a certain amount each month," Patterson said. "We just won't get to do as much."

Patterson waters his lawn about three times a week and it shows. His is one of the greenest on his block.

"I take a lot of pride in my yard; it's about all I can do anymore."

Being proud of his yard sometimes proves costly, though. The attention has already made a difference in what he pays for water. His last water bill was $63.

That's slightly higher than the average monthly bill for all Midlanders in 1998. According to Ken Jones, director of utilities for the city of Midland, the average water bill last year was $57.69.

Last year was higher than 1997's average of $49.28

Request-to-attend period lapses for local charter school

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

Recruiters with Advantage Schools Inc. say they do not anticipate a lottery process will be necessary to decide who will attend the Tall City's first open enrollment charter school this fall.

That means parents who turned in any of the 340 request-to-attend forms received as of this week need only formally register next week to secure a place for their children at the school.

Though Thursday was the last day for parents to send request-to-attend forms, recruiters said anyone who registers June 25 at the Midland Center or June 26 at the local Enron office will be considered enrolled, provided the cap of 540 students is not eclipsed.

MISD unveils new, more 'vital' logo

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

In a 1998 audit of the communications department, the conclusion must have seemed about as blunt and straightforward as the design it described: "The MISD logo has no vitality."

The old logo, in black-and-white, consisted of a simple bold lettering: "MISD," the "i" dotted by a graduation cap, the words "For every child" running in italics across the bottom.

The new logo, unveiled recently, is full color — red, white and blue — and incorporates the design of the Texas flag and the district's new slogan: "Educating the future!"

"I wanted something that was more colorful, that reflected the state of Texas, that we are an institution of the state of Texas," said Barney Welch, executive director of communications services for MISD.

Welch, who created the concept, then contracted with Admarc Advertising & Marketing Agency artist Darrell Dunton to finish the design. The price tag: $1,250.

ris of Mojave Valley, Arizona; her sister, Nova Roberts of Austin, Texas; her grandchildren, Bill Hays of Roswell, New Mexico, Kelley Hays of Amarillo, Texas, Bart Moore of Denton, Texas, and Kerri Beauchamp of Fort Worth, Texas; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents and her brother, Odie Morris.

She was beloved by all who knew her and will be sorely missed by family and friends.

Pallbearers will be Ray Blackwell, Charles Baker, Eldon Herndon, Gary Tate, Frances McDonald, and Lee Roy Hall.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702.

Nennie Hancock

Nennie Myrtle Hancock was born August 23, 1901, in Post, Texas, to Ellmore and Missouri Carr Nash and was reared in Springtown, Texas. She attended school in Springtown and attended North Texas State receiving a degree in elementary education. Mrs. Hancock had taught in Ragtown and in the Post area until 1930. She married Clarence Nugent Hancock in the Post area. She had owned and operated Hancock Second Hand Store in Midland, retiring in 1965. She had continued to live in Midland until the present. She was a member of Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church and served as secretary-treasurer for the church.

Mrs. Hancock died Thursday morning, June 17, 1999, at a local hospital.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Saturday, June 19, 1999, at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Terry Hancock officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. A visitation is scheduled for Friday, June 18, 1999, at 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. at Ellis Funeral Home.

She is survived by her husband; her brother, Vernon Nash of Springfield, Illinois; her sisters-in-law, Leta Davies and Jewel Hancock, both of Midland; her godchild, Shelly Marchell of Dallas, Texas; and numerous nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be David Howard, Ben Howard, Jim Walker, George Balderama, Ray Stringer, and DeWayne Stringer.

Samuel Hawley

Sam was a loving and devoted husband for 53 years, a dedicated father, and an adoring grandfather. He lived his life by actions, although his words were always full of wisdom and sage advice. He was a true and loyal Christian. After his faith, he always put "family" ahead of every other consideration. He lived life with tremendous courage, until his very last moment on earth.

Samuel O. "Sam" Hawley was born May 30, 1923, in Direct, Texas, to Samuel Isaacs and Grayce Gertrude Thompson Hawley. He lived in several communities around Red River and graduated from Farmersville High School. Mr. Hawley entered the U.S. Army at the age of 18 at the outbreak of World War II. He served in New Guinea, the Philippines, and Australia, being discharged in 1945. He served with the inspector general's office, and his rank advanced from private to master sergeant in one year. On February 16, 1946, he married Genevieve "Gene" Frances Douglas in Fort Worth at Missouri Avenue Baptist Church. Mr. Hawley began his career with Gulf Oil Company in 1959 in Fort Worth in the records department. He was transferred to Midland in 1960 and retired in 1983 as the unit supervisor of Central Storage Archives for Midland. While in Fort Worth, he was a member of St. Mark's United Methodist Church, where he served as chairman of the board and chairman of the finance committee. After moving to Midland in 1960, they joined St. Luke's United Methodist Church, where he was active in the Keystone Class and the Primetimers. He was a volunteer with AMOS, a member of the Chevron Retired Association, and a Master Mason.

Mr. Hawley died Thursday morning, June 17, 1999, at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 11 a.m. on Saturday, June 19, 1999, at St. Luke's United Methodist Church with Reverend Richard Edwards officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. A visitation has been scheduled for Friday at Ellis Funeral Home from 6-8 p.m.

Survivors include his wife; his daughters, Gail, and her husband, Dr. Steve Hankinson, of Midland and Jill and her husband, George

Pallbearers are George Alther, Marvin Bigby, E.K. Browning, James Goode, Paul Hopson, Mike Smith, James Underwood, Forrest Underwood, and James Wilhoit. Honorary pallbearers are all members of the Keystone Class.

The family requests memorials be directed to St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 West Kansas, Midland, Texas 79701.

"My Dad Knows God"

The story was told by a father who overheard a backyard conversation shared by his small son and his neighborhood buddies. One of them remarked, "my dad knows the mayor of the town!" Another blurted out, "that is nothing - my dad knows the governor of our state!" Wondering what was coming next, he heard his son of four years say, "that's really nothing - you see, my dad knows God!"

In these times when "dropout fathers" leave too many kids and "career fathers" are strangers to them, there is a critical need for real fathers. 2 Chronicles 34:2 tells us about young Josiah who began to reign in Israel when he was eight years old, "and he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined neither to the right hand, nor to the left." It is clear that David, amid his mistakes, must have left a powerful example for good. On this special day for Fathers, would your son and mine, whether they are 4 or 44, say about us, "you see, my Dad knows God!" That's about the best Father's day present one could ever receive!

SENIOR GOLD

Several Midlanders brought home the gold — not to mention the silver — from the Senior Games, which were hosted May 5-7 in San Angelo. Participants came from all over the area and competed in categories defined by age.

Tom Frison and Pearlina Frison, who as partners bowled a 975 in two games, earned gold medals by winning first place in bowling in the 80-year-old category. They also won second place in the 80-year-olds domino tournament and received silver medals.

Maria Romano won a gold medal in dominoes in the 70-year-old category, with Norberto Martinez finishing up at second and earning a silver medal. Also playing were Ruby Lee and Jose Naverette.

Laura Bush, first lady of Texas and a former Midlander, is a real doll.

Just ask members of Midland's chapter of Colonial Dames XVII Century, who, for the past 40 years or so, have researched gowns worn by governors' wives and dressed porcelain dolls in small-model duplicates.

The most recent addition to this collection is the Laura Welch Bush doll.

Since 1990, the collection has been on display at the Haley Library and History Center in Midland. Before that it was on display in the Texas Room of Society Headquarters in Washington, D.C.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Midlanders Matt Hinkley and Jerrod Moore, in New York City in April to perform in a choir competition for Trinity High School, got a chance to meet Broadway legend Bernadette Peters — who recently received a Tony award as Best Actress in a Musical for her performance in "Annie Get Your Gun."

Both young Midlanders, who are members of the Pickwicks at Midland Community Theatre, hope to perform in professional musical theater some day, "so they were thrilled to get to meet her," according to Jana Hinkley, Matt's mother.

VIRTUAL REALITY WINS REAL TRIP

Michael Leyba, technology teacher-trainer for Midland Independent School District, won an all-expense paid trip to New York City after he entered a contest sponsored by Hewlett-Packard National Information Systems (IS) in commemoration of its Appreciation Day Program. About 8,000 essays were entered into the contest.

Leyba's award-winning entry, which was chosen from among 450, gave his essay answer to the question: "What work-related task would you like technology to accomplish that it cannot today?" (Basically, in several words or more, he hopes to see students learning "virtual reality lessons ... in the future.")

While on his trip to New York City this weekend, Leyba will attend a luncheon and technology forum and attend PC Expo '99 Convention and hear keynote speaker Marc Andreessen, co-founder of Netscape and chief technology officer for America Online.

Joseph Baressi, MISD superintendent, said this about Leyba: "Michael is a hard-working, dedicated employee who makes special efforts to enhance his skills and this is to the betterment of MISD and the school children we serve. We're all proud of him and look forward to hearing new ideas he brings back from his exciting trip."

OOPS...

In the June 11 Braggin' Rights item listing Midland students who had been accepted to the Texas Academy of Mathematics and Science, Midlander Brian Harrington's name was left off. The son of Pat and Don Harrington of Midland, he has just finished his sophomore year at Midland High School. He was the first Midland student to be accepted to the TAMS class of 2001.

BILLS: Summertime utility bills take a bite out of home budgets because of the drought.

The worst may be yet to come for Patterson. He estimates that during the hot summer months he spends about $95 to $100 on water usage and that doesn't even take into consideration what it will cost to cool his home.

Because he's retired, Patterson is home during the day. He said he spends about $115 a month on electricity during the summer.

"During the winter that's usually about $55."

But the retired Midlander isn't alone in his concerns about rising prices. Verna Mendoza, a mother of three, said her electricity bill has been as high as $300 during the summer and her water bill can soar to $100. Her summer water bill is often double what she pays any other time of the year.

"My husband waters the grass a lot."

So it appears do most Midlanders. According to Jones, local residents spent on average $80 for water last June, $87 in July, $90 in August and $73 in September.

That her neighbors are in the same boat as she is doesn't ease the reality for Ms. Mendoza, however. Her family was expecting to take a vacation this summer but the recent addition of a new baby and rising prices may delay those plans.

"I just don't know now. It's going to be tough."

Jones offered a salve to soothe that burn, pointing out that water usage is down this year and that if Midland continues to attract rain, those utility bills could go down.

"Total water usage for the city is down from last year and rainfall this year to date is up over last year to date," Jones said.

But more rain might just transfer local money from the water department to TXU Electric — formerly TU Electric.

JOBLESS: Rate doubles since May '98

(From 1A)

Crawley did say that the mining sector, which includes oil and gas, appeared to be stabilizing, with the Odessa-Midland area losing only 100 mining jobs from April to May. However, the area has lost 2,100 mining jobs from May 1998 to May 1999.

"I think the rate is reflective of the downturn in the oil industry, which has not recovered even though prices are back up," said Marvin Wynn, president and chief executive officer of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "We're not seeing the level of drilling activity we were seeing last year."

Doug Shipley, branch manager of the Midland office of Manpower, said that "since the beginning of the year, we've seen a downturn like other companies, but over the last month, business has actually increased. I think we're starting to see the loop start back up. There's not been a huge increase in job orders, but there's definitely an increase as opposed to earlier in the year."

The civilian labor force grew to 129,600 from 128,300 in April, with total employment rising to 117,700 from 117,200 the previous month. Total unemployment was also higher, with 11,900 Odessa-Midland residents unemployed, compared with 11,100 in April.

In Midland, the labor force grew to 54,443 from 53,859 in April and employment rose to 50,503 from 50,285 in April. The number of unemployed Midlanders rose to 3,940 from 3,574 in April.

Additional employment was recorded in the construction, trade, state government and service sectors, Crawley said.

Wynn said he noticed from last month's figures that the oil and gas downturn had begun to affect retail and service jobs "and I fear that's a trend. There's usually a lagging effect. First you see the loss of the primary jobs in the oil and gas industry, and retail and service jobs lag behind."

Shipley said his company's quarterly hiring survey found that for the third quarter, companies were still being conservative in their hiring plans. He added that he hopes the fourth quarter, typically a slow hiring quarter, will show some gains.

"If oil prices stay where they're at or rise a little, hiring may improve," he said. "Things are starting to look up, and we hope they continue that direction and hope other companies experience increases, too."

The chamber has been busy working with Midland College and the Midland Independent School District on establishing an Advanced Technology Center in the former Sears building on Cuthbert Avenue as a part of attracting new industry to the area.

"The key to the whole local economy is creating additional jobs," Wynn said. "With the center, we can train workers for industries looking to come here. The balance is between creating jobs and training workers for those jobs. The center won't do the job by itself, but it will be a tool, an incentive for companies to locate in this area."

CENSUS: Political power in the balance

across the state, "to get the view of different people and how they think the district needs to be changed."

"They will go out there ask what people think of their district now," Craddick said.

Based on those hearings and on estimated numbers, the Legislature will draw up proposed maps for redistricting in the next session — which starts in January 2001.

The estimates will come from the U.S. Census Bureau, which conducts community surveys every few years, according to local census office representative Charlene Wurtz.

"That way they have a guesstimate of what's going on."

An interesting side note is that the bureau's estimates show the state will gain two congressional seats as a result of the next census.

Once the final census numbers are received, two maps will be proposed; one by the Texas House and one by the Senate.

According to Craddick, if those maps don't agree, the two branches will meet in a joint committee and try to hammer out one plan before sending a bill to the governor.

"We could have an interesting situation now that we've never had before with Republicans controlling the Senate and the Democrats the House," Craddick said adding, "The control could change. This is a big major year for elections coming up because of redistricting."

BUSH: Stint as spy boss was turning point

(From 1A)

CIA directors Richard Helms, James Schlesinger, Robert Gates and William Webster. Tenet hailed Bush — the only director to have become president — as a war hero and said that every component of the agency "feels indebted to him in some way, because his belief in the fundamental importance of its work never faltered."

"He was a staunch defender of the need for human intelligence — for espionage — at a tough time when it really counted..."

Tenet also pointed out that each day, the men and women of the CIA provide the president and other decision-makers the critical intelligence they need to protect American lives and advance American interests around the globe.

"Thanks in great measure to George Bush's leadership, the U.S. no longer confronts the worldwide threat from a rival superpower that we did during the Cold War," he stated. "But, as the 21st century approaches, we must contend with a host of other dangerous challenges — challenges of unprecedented complexity and scope."

"The U.S. remains the indispensable country in this uncertain and chaotic world," Tenet said. "And time and again, the CIA has proven itself to be the indispensable intelligence organization, helping America build a more secure world for people everywhere."

Accepting a model of the sign bearing the name of the compound, Bush, in his remarks, observed, "My stay here had a major impact on me. The CIA became part of my heartbeat some 22 years ago, and it has never gone away. I hope it will be said that in my time here, and in the White House, I kept the trust and treated my office with respect."

He also told the assembled CIA employees: "Your mission is different now from what it was in my time. The Soviet Union is no more. Some people think, 'What do we need intelligence for?'"

"My answer is that plenty of enemies abound... unpredictable leaders willing to export instability or to commit crimes against humanity. Proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, terrorism, narcotic trafficking, people killing each other, fundamentalists killing one another in the name of God, and many more."

"To combat them, we need more intelligence, not less. We need more human intelligence and more protection for the methods we use to gather intelligence and more protection for our sources, particularly our human sources who risk their lives for their country."

Bush went on to say that even though he is now a "tranquil guy," he has "contempt and anger for those who betray the trust" by exposing the names of our (intelligence) sources.

"They are, in my view, the most insidious of traitors," he asserted. "George Tenet is exactly right when it comes to the mission of the CIA and the intelligence community: 'Give the president and the policy-makers the best possible intelligence product and stay out of the policy-making or policy-implementing — except as specifically decreed in the law.'"

Bush has always been hesitant to talk about himself — even as to how he made a difference as president. "I'm not good at talking about myself. You ask others," he tells me. "That is part of my make-up. Some people say it is lack of character, but I can't blow my own horn. My mother taught me not to brag and she is still watching me."

Respecting his penchant for modesty, I did ask others, including Clinton and former American presidents, for their reflections and comments on Bush's milestone.

Former President Ford said, "President Bush, at 75, has earned the highest compliments for his strong and effective military and diplomatic leadership in the Gulf War with Iraq."

Carter, who turns 75 in October, said, "From one septuagenarian to another, I, of course, wish George Bush a wonderful birthday and many more years of good health and much happiness. He is a man of integrity who served America with honor. We had a very good relationship while he was in the White House, and even though we did not agree on every issue, he treated me with respect and kindness."

"I always shared my invitations to foreign countries with him or with Secretary of State James Baker, and they were supportive of our work at the Carter Center (in Atlanta)."

Carter adds that he and his wife, Rosalynn, "thoroughly enjoyed" attending the opening of the Bush Presidential Library on Nov. 6, 1997.

Clinton recalls with gratitude his wide-ranging conversations with Bush four months ago as they flew on Air Force One to and from Jordan for King Hussein's funeral.

"George Bush embodies the spirit of public service," Clinton told me. "For me, he has also been a trusted adviser. While there are many who advise me, at times the greatest counsel comes from one who has shared the pressures and unique experience of serving in the Oval Office — one who knows exactly what you're up against and one who will tell you the truth."

"George has often done that, and while I have been the immediate beneficiary of his counsel, people here and abroad have ultimately benefited most of all."

Richard Fairbanks, president of the Center for Strategic & International Studies, advised Bush on policy during his 1980 presidential bid. Later as chief U.S. negotiator for the Mideast peace process, he worked closely with Bush when he was vice president. Fairbanks recalls that Bush was seen as a pragmatic problem-solver rather than a conceptualizer, "which is one of the reasons he encountered trouble with his famous statement that he was not comfortable with the 'vision thing.'"

Fairbanks, a member of the Council of American Ambassadors, adds that Bush is a natural leader with real intellectual depth, but he is also a private man, who is "not comfortable flaunting his thought processes in a public forum."

Edwin Meese — counselor to Reagan in 1981-85 and U.S. attorney general 1985-88 and who is now the Ronald Reagan Fellow in Public Policy at The Heritage Foundation — said that he "thoroughly appreciated the opportunity to work with George Bush as vice president because he was an invaluable asset to President Reagan and to all of us in the Cabinet."

In his 12 years as vice president and president, Bush witnessed a number of scandals, including Watergate, Iran-Contra and the savings and loan failures.

On his last day in the Oval Office as president, I asked him how he would advise the incoming president to prevent similar scandals.

MISD: Old district logo said to have 'lacked vitality' which Welch called a "bargain basement price" for a logo design.

Other costs will be involved in the transition to the new logo, such as the printing of new business cards, letterheads and "pride pins" that may be worn by employees. And a new $8,750 printing head for the school district's press has been ordered to accommodate two-color printing.

That money will come out of the current-year budget, Welch said, and will save money in the long run by allowing the district to do two-color printing in-house.

The decision to hire Welch was itself in part a response to the tepid reviews in the 1998 communications audit, part of an effort to revamp the department and deal with the public more effectively.

Now, after three months on the job, Welch feels the department is coming together.

"But, we have a lot of work to do. That's why we're building the staff — getting the people on board... (so the district can) be responsive and function effectively," Welch said.

Recently, a new community affairs specialist was hired, Mary Martha Arana, for a $36,000 annual salary. And in just the past few weeks, another new position has been created. Welch has brought a new secretary, Cindy Rodriguez, upstairs from her post as building receptionist. Welch said he did not know her exact salary but estimated it would be at least $19,000.

The department's current secretary, Janice Lambert, will now function to support three employees: Ms. Arana; a parent information specialist, Lorena Gonzales; and the Partners in Education supervisor, Pam Isom.

"Sometimes you have to spend money to make improvements," Welch said. "These things do cost money, but you (the district) look at the most economical way of doing that."

Welch added, "I see it working very well. We continue to build bridges in the community and also internally... We feel we're doing the best we can with the available resources."

the Gulf War.

"I also hope my legacy will include the Madrid peace conference (1992); our key role in NAFTA, the Brady Plan (plan for debt relief for Latin America), and the way we handled China after Tiananmen Square 10 years ago."

"On a personal level, I hope my legacy will be that George Bush did his best and served America with honor," he said.

If he could have one wish on this birthday, what would it be?

"I am not sentimental, but yes, there is a certain special quality to this milestone. For myself, I have no wishes for my birthday. I have everything a man could want. But, for the world, I wish for more peace; and for America, I wish for stronger families and better values."

And Bush's vision for the next century?

"I am optimistic about the 21st century," he told me. "With no superpower confrontation on the horizon, I believe the next century can be one of peace — though there will always be regional conflicts. But I, for one, am still hopeful."

And to share that hope, he likes to recount the time that his wife, Barbara, was planting a flowering bush. She was instructed to dig a deep bed, fill it with fertilizer and firmly plant the bush by covering it with water and soil.

"We were told that the plant would not bloom right away, but that it would, after a year or so and then for a long time to come," he mused. "Soon, we realized that she was planting that flowering bush for our kids and grandkids and great-grandkids."

"So despite the vicissitudes we face now, and will face in the future, I believe that that planting was not in vain. Sure, we have problems in the U.S. and overseas, and the world has the weapons to blow itself up. Yet my inner self tells me that our great-grandkids will be around to enjoy those flowers."

Inmate indicted on charge of threatening Combest

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A federal grand jury here has indicted a Midland County inmate for writing threatening letters to U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, District 19, and court workers.

Terry Dewayne Wilson, 40, is charged with one count of mailing threatening communications, according to court documents made available Thursday. He faces up to 20 years in prison.

In his May 19 letter, Wilson wrote:

"It is to my understanding that you are a known natural at doing the most acceptable, to begin, I will ask the proper fee of $1,000,000 in currency, to be put in a burgandy (sic) briefcase (sic) and kept in your possession (sic)."

"Prior to your arrival at the Midland County Detention Center, with the money, you will have in advance, posted my bond and have the 'blue warrant' lifted so that I may leave with you.

"I must inform you that I am currently being held for the charge of agg. assault (sic) on a public servant, therefore, I will not think twice about dealing with you as well!! I assure you that your life will become in intermediate (sic) danger if my demands are not met.

"If anyone else comes involved with this matter, you're family then becomes part of this and their lives become in danger as well as yours. These demands must be met by the first of June 1999 ... If they are not carried out, my group will be forced to proceed with the unthinkable to you Never forget my words..."

The letter was mailed to Combest's office in Lubbock, officials said. A similar letter was sent to the U.S. District Clerk's Office in Midland. He threatened the office with "something red, black and burning from a flammable mixture" if his demands were not met by 2:45 p.m. June 1, 1999, officials said.

Authorities said Wilson has been in jail since Feb. 9 on state charges of aggravated assault on a peace officer. His bond is set at $10,000. Wilson is also jailed for violating his parole on a 1987 forgery case, officials said.

Wilson gave a written confession to FBI agent Hans Martin and said, "At the time I wrote this letter, I intended to cause property damage to Mr. Combest's property. I did not plan to physically harm him."

He also admitted he didn't have a "group" that would help him carry out the requests and didn't even know where Combest or his family lives, officials said.

"At the time I wrote those letters, I thought it was only a ... Class B misdemeanor. I have no intentions of carrying (these acts) out," Wilson said.

Combent declined to comment on the matter. His staff said that to their knowledge, their office has only received one threat from Wilson.

Beth Scott, a spokeswoman for the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, said employees at county jails are not required to check outgoing mail from inmates. Letters to and from their attorneys, news media or elected officials is prohibited from being reviewed.

Combent represents 44 percent of Midland County and also the cities of Amarillo, Lubbock and Odessa.

Odessa police officer arrested on DWI charges

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An Odessa police officer remains on administrative leave with pay after he was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated June 11 in West Odessa.

Officer David B. Ellis, who has been with the Odessa Police Department for two years, was off duty when he was pulled over in West Odessa last Friday by a Department of Public Safety trooper, according to Les Moore, attorney for the Police Department.

Ellis

Moore said the Odessa Police Department does not adhere to the "professional courtesy" ideal and that if an officer breaks the law, action will be taken.

"This DWI investigation is being conducted by the Texas Department of Public Safety and has been forwarded to the Ector County Attorney's Office," Moore said. "To my knowledge he has not been cited on any other charges before this. The Odessa Police Department has a high standard for the hiring of its officers. We only hire the best of the best and we do hold them to a higher standard."

Ellis was released on a personal recognizance bond issued through Sheriff Reggie Yearwood soon after his arrest, according to Ector County Detention Center officials. Moore said Ellis did not drive himself home.

If Ellis is found guilty, Moore said proper actions will be taken.

"How do you get down to business when you can barely walk?"

The future of my store was on the line. And my knee was killing me. That's when my doctor said I needed surgery.

Knee surgery is hard enough without worrying about whether or not your business will survive while you're gone. So I breathed a sigh of relief when I found out I was going to Memorial Hospital for surgery and rehabilitation.

The experienced staff took good care of me. They had the equipment and know-how to put me back on my feet fast. And they even worked my rehab appointments around my busy schedule.

I had no business being in pain. But, thanks to Memorial Hospital, I'm back to my old routine — and business is booming.

ANCIENT CHURCH ANOINTS FIRST AMERICAN BISHOP

One of the world's oldest Christian Churches quietly anointed and consecrated its first American Bishop on June 10th. The Reverend Dr. Fred D. Cullens was anointed and consecrated as a Bishop in the Haile Selassie Coptic Orthodox Church and Bishop-at-Large for the world-wide church. His Holiness, Bishop Cullens was anointed by The Reverend King Haile Selassie, Patriarch of the Church and the Crowned King in exile of Ethiopia. The son of Emperor Haile Selassie, King Selassie is the 226th descendant from the throne of David. The Emperor was the Patriarch of the Ethiopia Coptic Orthodox Church, the oldest Christian Church with a direct lineage to the Throne of David.

Church to keep balls bouncing, teen-agers busy

By Matt Josefy

First Presbyterian Church will have basketballs bouncing to keep the summer doldrums from engulfing local teen-agers and adults.

The church, in cooperation with the city of Midland and Midland-Lee Youth Centers, will host the annual free youth summer basketball league for youth in seventh through 12th grades.

There are also teams for college students and adults. There is a $100 fee for each college and adult team.

Kids in the seventh through ninth grades will play between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m.; the other games will run through midnight.

"It is a very organized program," said Bryson Mitchell, who will be a senior at Midland

High School. "Some of the kids even got junior college scholarships because of it" last year when the program was known as Midnight Basketball.

"There's unlimited opportunities and it's great just to develop basketball skills," he said.

Last year he was on a team that went undefeated.

Heidi Lange played in the girls high school league. "It's a blast," she commented. "It's competitive, but it's also relaxing since it's during the summer. What's nice about it is that you get to play against a lot of different people and with some of your friends."

"You don't have to play for school to play in the league," she said.

Nick Whitley, who will be a senior at Trinity School, said he began attending the private school because representatives of Trinity saw him playing in the league.

He thinks "it's a lot of fun to play in it." Last year, he played in the college division, which "is real competitive, but most people are still pretty good sports." He said, "if you want to have some fun, come on up and play."

League play runs from Monday through July 31. Today is the last day to sign up.

"We just hope that youth will take advantage of this program that the city offers," said Billy Merritt, youth development coordinator for the city.

Barbara Phillip of the youth center says the program is "something positive to do (and) builds self-esteem and teaches the meaning of team work."

In addition she thinks it is "a deterrent for crime."

High school and college kids also benefit from the opportunity to referee or work in other venues, which can provide community service hours, she said.

For more information or to sign up, call Ms. Phillip at 689-1675.

Group plans Extreme Skate Days for summer Saturdays

By Matt Josefy

The wheels are rolling toward a new skate park for area in-line skaters and skateboarders, but until then, temporary skate parks are being organized.

Extreme Skate Days, sponsored by the Youth Ministries Association of Midland, is scheduled for 5 pm to 10 p.m. Saturdays throughout the summer.

Parking lots will be blocked off so supporters can bring ramps and rails. The event is free.

Tammy Wooten of the Citizens for Midland Skaters Committee said, "Since we can't get a skate park as quick and as fast as we want to, this is the next best thing."

She is motivated by the death of her son, William, who died October 1998 in a neighborhood skating accident.

"Skaters have nowhere to go," she said. "One day someone saw that we had a ramp out front and asked if they could use it. There are a lot more kids interested in skating than the community realizes, and they just want somewhere to skate."

The committee must raise $100,000 in order to receive a matching donation from the city to construct the skate center, possibly at Beal Park. They have collected $10,000 to date, she said.

Last week the scheduled event was rained out, but the week before there was a good turnout, according to Mrs. Wooten.

"We are willing to participate in this because it provides a safe atmosphere, and hopefully to give a positive example of Christian love to a group that doesn't always receive a lot of support," said Clay Hopkins, youth minister at Crestview Baptist, where Saturday's event will be.

Other events planned are:

■ June 26, First Baptist

Church, 2104 W. Louisiana Ave.;

■ July 10, First Methodist Church, Baird and Ohio streets;

■ July 17, First Baptist Church; and

■ July 24, First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

To offer assistance, equipment or a parking lot, call the Youth Ministry Office at First Baptist Church, 683-0606.

British uncover evidence of 10,000 killed in Kosovo

By Laura King
Associated Press

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Accounts of brutality in Kosovo emerged Thursday in different tones — the stunned, flat voice of a teen-age girl and the measured sentences of a British official — but they both told of irrational savagery mixed with careful planning.

Just six days into the international military presence in Kosovo, officials have discovered so many mass graves and killing sites and heard so many wrenching accounts of atrocities that they now estimate at least 10,000 people were killed in the Serb crackdown against Kosovo Albanians which began shortly before NATO began its 78-day air bombardment March 24.

The mounting evidence is likely to add to calls for the arrest of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, who has been indicted by the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague. But President Clinton said Thursday that peacekeepers will take a "wait and see" approach toward Milosevic's arrest.

Fears grew that the ethnic Albanian rebels of the Kosovo Liberation Army will seek violent revenge against the province's Serbs as the Yugoslav army continues its withdrawal under the international peace deal's terms. The plan called for the KLA to demilitarize, but rebels were openly bringing weapons in over the border from Albania on Thursday.

One of the most grisly reports of slaughter so far came Thursday from the village of Poklek, 20 miles west of the provincial capital Pristina. The killings were, by residents' accounts, methodical.

Elhame Muqolli, 14, told of how she and scores of friends and neighbors were herded into a room by Serb police, who threw in a hand grenade, raked the room with machine guns and then set it on fire to kill anyone who might have survived.

Muqolli (pronounced Moo-CHO-lee) and five others had managed to jump out a window, but 62 others died in the April 17 incident. Their blood dripped through the floor to stain the ceiling of the room below.

There were no fresh bloodstains on the walls of a basement room at a police station in Pristina, but the items piled there spoke of horror: an array of torture instruments including bats, chains, a pickaxe and a black hood. An ethnic Albanian resident of the neighborhood said he and many others had been beaten there. British peacekeeping soldiers also found sadistic pornography in the room.

What was most chilling, said British Foreign Office Minister Geoff Hoon, was that the station "seems to have been just an ordinary police headquarters. In other words, the barbaric acts carried out in this building were probably almost a matter of routine."

Amid the accounts of brutality and fear, there were stories of courage and compassion. In the western town of Decane (pronounced DAY-chah-nee), residents recounted how the local Serbian Orthodox monastery sheltered ethnic Albanians from a rampage by withdrawing soldiers.

Now that the soldiers have left, a few elderly Serbs fearful of Albanian reprisals hid in the monastery, but local ethnic Albanians who remember the monastery's kindness vowed to protect them.

But in Devic, a monastery tucked away in the hills of central Kosovo was ransacked and terrorized by KLA rebels who had surrounded the religious shrine since early 1998, the CNN television network reported.

Serb civilians frantically followed Serb soldiers retreating from the province, and tens of thousands of ethnic Albanians streamed back into their homeland from camps in Albania and Macedonia.

At least 10,000 ethnic Albanians — and probably many more — were killed by Serbs in a two-month slaughter across Kosovo while NATO bombs fell on Yugoslavia, according to Hoon, the British foreign office minister.

"Tragically, our estimates of the numbers of innocent men, women and children killed will almost certainly have to be revised upwards," he said.

NATO launched the bombing campaign after Milosevic's government refused to end Yugoslavia's crackdown on Kosovo's Albanians. Although the campaign eventually succeeded in forcing Milosevic to accept a peace plan, the peacekeeping force authorized by the plan is still troubled by the question of what Russia's role should be.

U.S. and Russian officials negotiated on the issue for a second straight day in Helsinki, Finland. A U.S. official said late Thursday the talks were still snagged on American objections to giving Moscow control over any part of the province.

The two sides did, however, reach an accord on how Russians will work under NATO command and on arrangements for sharing peacekeeping duties at the Pristina airport, where about 200 Russian troops have been holed up since their surprise arrival Saturday ahead of NATO peacekeepers, the official said.

Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said in the Finnish capital that the peacekeeping operation in Kosovo would not be disrupted if the talks break down.

"This is a mission we can carry out without Russian participation, but we would prefer to have Russian participation," Bacon told reporters during a break in the talks.

Clinton predicted a "successful conclusion" to the talks, but Russian President Boris Yeltsin insisted again that Moscow will continue to demand a separate sector for its Kosovo peacekeepers. Talks were to resume Friday.

Meanwhile, NATO forces, Albanian policemen and Kosovo rebels struggled at the Morini border crossing in Albania to control the thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees lining up Thursday in battered trucks and tractors to go home, while international aid agencies urged the refugees to wait a few more days.

At the same time, top NATO and U.N. officials appeared on state Serbian television to urge Serbs against fleeing Kosovo.

"I do ask the Serbian population to stay in their homes," said the alliance's Kosovo commander, Lt. Gen. Michael Jackson, in a broadcast from the embattled Serbian province. "We've had enough refugees. We don't want any more." Jackson said.

Scientists say Einstein's brain was anatomically distinct

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

LONDON — We always suspected something must have made Albert Einstein smarter than the rest of us.

Now, scientists have found that one part of his brain was indeed physically extraordinary.

In the only study ever conducted of the overall anatomy of Einstein's brain, scientists at McMaster University in Ontario, Canada, discovered that the part of the brain thought to be related to mathematical reasoning — the inferior parietal region — was 15 percent wider on both sides than normal.

Furthermore, they found that the groove that normally runs from the front of the brain to the back did not extend all the way in Einstein's case. That finding could have applications even to those with more pedestrian levels of intelligence.

"That kind of shape was not observed in any one of our brains and is not depicted in any atlas of the human brain," said Sandra Witelson, a neuroscientist who led the study, published in this week's issue of The Lancet, a British medical journal.

"But it shouldn't be seen as anatomy is destiny," she added. "We also know that environment has a very important role to play in learning and brain development. But what this is telling us is that environment isn't the only factor."

The findings may point to the importance of the inferior parietal region, Witelson said.

While the differences may be extraordinary between Einstein and everyone else, there may be more subtle, even microscopic, differences when the anatomies of the brains of people who don't fall into the genius category are compared with each other, she said.

The researchers compared the founder of the theory of relativity's brain with the preserved brains of 35 men and 56 women known to have normal intelligence when they died.

With the men's brains, they conducted two separate comparisons — first between Einstein's brain and all the men, and next between his brain and those of the eight men who were similar in age to Einstein when they died.

They found that, overall, Einstein's brain was the same weight and had the same measurements from front to back as all the other men, which Witelson said confirms the belief of many scientists that focusing on overall brain size as an indicator of intelligence is not the way to go.

Witelson theorized that the partial absence of the groove in Einstein's brain may be the key, because it might have allowed more neurons in this area to establish connections between each other and work together more easily.

She said it is likely that the groove, known as the sulcus, was always absent in that part of Einstein's brain, rather than shrinking away as a result of his intelligence, because, as one of the two or three landmarks in the human brain, it appears very early in life.

"We don't know if every brilliant physicist and mathematician will have this same anatomy," Witelson said. "It fits and it makes a compelling story, but it requires further proof."

John Gabrieli, an associate professor of psychology at Stanford University who was not connected with the study, said the finding relating to the groove and connections between the neurons in the brain may be the key.

"We don't have a clue, so anything that is suggested is interesting," he said. "There must have been something about his brain that made him so brilliant."

Brilliance of the kind Einstein possessed is so extreme, however, that although the findings may give a clue to the neurology of genius, whether they could apply to normal differences in intelligence is more doubtful, Gabrieli said.

Witelson said the next stage is to scan the brains of living mathematicians and look for minute differences.

Belgium, France announce partial lifting of ban on Coke products

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Belgium extended its ban on Coke but agreed Thursday to lift restrictions that were placed on some of the company's other beverages after dozens of people became ill consuming soft drinks.

France partially relaxed its ban on Coca-Cola sales Thursday, but Switzerland joined a move by other nations to block sales of Coca-Cola drinks produced in Belgium.

Coca-Cola Co., the world's biggest soft-drink company, had been hoping the ban would be lifted and European confidence in the brands would be restored.

With Coke's problems coming on top of a tainted-food scandal in Belgium, French President Jacques Chirac said Thursday he will propose creating an international council to monitor food safety.

The Belgian Health Ministry said Thursday it was allowing the resumption of sales of Coca-Cola's Nestea, Aquarius, Bonaqua, Kinley, Lift and Minute Maid brands. But the ban was extended on Coke, Fanta and Sprite pending further investigation into what caused the illnesses.

"It is not possible today to explain in a calming and satisfactory way the appearance of these symptoms of illness," said the statement from Health Minister Luc Van den Bossche. "Coca-Cola must withdraw all these products from the market and destroy them."

The Belgian government imposed its ban Monday after dozens of youngsters were hospitalized complaining of stomach pains and nausea after drinking Coca-Cola products. Belgian news media said Thursday some 200 people had been affected.

The health scare rapidly spread to other nations, with Luxembourg imposing a similar ban.

Chamber retreat could provide good roadmap

Midland Chamber of Commerce starts its annual Board Retreat today and continues on June 25. With a number of major issues facing the community, this will be an important, focused leadership conference to address Midland's future.

The first session, Chamber Chair-Elect L.D. "Buddy" Sipes Jr. says, will be devoted to preliminary reports from the nine task forces working on "Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond." The second session will involve prioritization of ideas from the task forces for the chamber's focus in 1999-2000.

The community of Midland stands at a crucial crossroads today. Hard-hit by the oil-price crunch and its staggering effects on the oil industry, the community must determine the best direction to move for the future. That will not be easy, but already a number of individuals have stepped forward to talk about proposals that can change the face of Midland for 2000 and beyond.

That's important because no community can grow, develop and prosper without having a roadmap. Determining which roadmap will be best for the community overall will be the job facing those attending the Chamber Board Retreat today and June 25th.

This is not the first challenge the community has faced. In fact, Midlanders have faced — and overcome — challenges numerous times before. It's never easy, but Midlanders do not shrink from a difficult challenge. They never have before and we are confident they will come through this time, too. If anything, a challenge toughens them for the fight.

That is one of the characteristics that makes living in Midland so great!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 18, the 169th day of 1999. There are 196 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights in History:

On June 18, 1983, astronaut Sally K. Ride became America's first woman in space as she and four colleagues blasted off aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

On this date:

In 1778, American forces entered Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, the United States declared war against Britain.

In 1873, suffragist Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 dollars for attempting to vote in the 1872 presidential election (the fine was never paid).

In 1928, aviator Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic, completing a flight from Newfoundland to Wales in about 21 hours.

In 1940, Charles de Gaulle, future president of France, broadcast to his nation from London, urging it to rally to him and fight Hitler's invading army.

In 1948, the United Nations Commission on Human Rights adopted its International Declaration of Human Rights.

In 1948, Columbia Records publicly unveiled its new long-playing phonograph record in New York.

In 1984, Alan Berg, a Denver radio talk show host, was shot to death outside his home. (Two white supremacists were later convicted of civil rights violations in the slaying.)

Rebuilding Kosovo spells economic opportunity

Who says war doesn't pay? As the Kosovo conflict was dragging on last month, President Clinton gave an economic rationale for why peace in the Balkans is in America's best interest:

"War is expensive, peace is cheaper, (and) prosperity is down right profitable," he told a group of veterans at the National Defense University on May 13.

But war can also be downright profitable — especially for the 150-some companies that gathered in Washington this week to learn how they could get their piece of the Kosovo peace. What NATO's bombs destroyed, American companies hope to rebuild at a tidy profit.

No sooner had Slobodan Milosevic's tanks started rolling out of the battered Kosovo province than American executives began focusing on how to rebuild the roads, bridges, homes and everything else laid to waste by 78 days of NATO aerial bombardment.

The task ahead is daunting. In some regions of Kosovo, 80 percent of the houses have been burned down. The basic infrastructure in most cities — utilities, roads, lines of communication — have been destroyed by the Serbs. Refugees live in camps that barely provide the basics for survival, and an estimated 1 million Kosovars are still hiding out in the woods and wilderness.

In Serbia — where American money will only be spent if Milosevic relinquishes power — the devastation is just as bad. Forty-five bridges, most of the nation's power plants and 60 percent of the oil reserves have been destroyed by NATO.

With the harsh Balkan winter just a few months away, time is of the essence. This is where the business community is happily stepping in.

One enterprising company, the Washington-based Center for Reconstruction and Development, makes a lucrative living off natural and man-made disasters. When Hurricane Mitch devastated Latin America last year, for example, the company helped several American firms claim their share of the $2 billion in American aid authorized by Congress.

This week, the center held a Balkan Reconstruction conference. For $500 — a drop in the contract bucket — attendees were given information about the "numerous business opportunities (that) exist for companies involved in roads and bridges, housing, potable water, power, telecommunications, agriculture, food, health and medicine."

Companies are lining up for the work.

Dennis Day of the 50,000-member Associated General Contractors of America, tells us his clients care less about the humanitarian aspect of rebuilding Kosovo and are far more interested in cold, hard cash. "The crux is this is a business opportunity; if it wasn't profitable, we wouldn't be in at all," Day says. He added that even though it's very expensive for American companies to take their crews and equipment overseas, there are still profits to be made for the right firm.

"The fact is, bridges need to be rebuilt today," Chris Helman of the Center for Defense Information told our associate Kathryn Wallace. "American businesses are going to want to get in on the ground floor (of the rebuilding business); most of the work will be done on spec, with the knowledge that funding will come later."

Where the aid will come from — and how much of it will come — will take months or years to answer. Although President Clinton has ruled out any help for Serbia while Milosevic remains in power, the United States has already pledged more than $1 billion in aid to Kosovo, Albania and Macedonia.

And that's just the beginning. More money will be needed to compensate European nations that bore the brunt of the refugee crisis, and to pay for the care and feeding of 75,000 ethnic Albanian refugees currently residing in the United States.

The European Union has offered a package worth $30 billion over five years to rebuild the entire Balkan region, a "mini-Marshall plan" of sorts, modeled after the American aid that rebuilt Europe after World War II. Bill Loiry, president of the Center for Reconstruction and Development, says the United Nations, the World Bank and other nations like Taiwan — a big supporter of neighboring Macedonia — will also be contributing to the reconstruction.

Despite the promises, Helman says that there's no way to predict what the entire eight-week war will cost when all the bills come due. Belgrade officials put the price tag at $150 billion and believe it will be decades before the country will fully recover.

That's bad news for Kosovo, but good news for companies that see war as a business opportunity.

Israeli propaganda about Palestinians is being upended

Dr. Benny Morris is an Israeli-born-and-educated historian and one of several who have upended Israeli propaganda about the Palestinians. What follows are direct quotations published in Israel and translated by Dr. Israel Shahak, a professor of chemistry and Holocaust survivor.

Rami Tal interviewed Morris for the newspaper Yediot Ahranot in December 1994.

Tal: "What attracted you to the eviction of Palestinian Arabs during the War of Liberation?"

Morris: "Till then everyone in Israel spoke about Arabs who had just run away in 1948, but there existed no real historical research on it. There were two conflicting propaganda versions, one Arab and another Jewish. As one who received his education in Israel I thought I knew that the Arabs had 'run away.' But I knew nothing else. The Jewish generations of 1948, however, knew the truth and deliberately misrepresented it. They knew there were plenty of mass deportations, massacres and rapes. ... The soldiers and the officials knew, but they suppressed what they knew and were deliberately disseminating lies."

Previously secret, but now published, protocols of Israeli government meetings revealed that David Ben-Gurion, prime minister and one of Israel's founders, actually used the word "cleanse" when referring to getting rid of Arabs.

In a published protocol, Ben-Gurion was arguing for a wider war. At the time he was speaking, the Galilee area is still in Arab hands. Here is the quotation as published in Israel:

"Regarding the Galilee, Mr. Moshe Sharett already told you that about 100,000 Arabs still now live in the pocket of Galilee. Let us assume that a war breaks out. Then we will be able to cleanse the entire area of Central Galilee, including all its refugees, in one stroke. In this context let me mention some mediators who offered to give us the Galilee without war. What they meant was the populated Galilee. They didn't offer us the empty Galilee, which we could have only by means of a war. Therefore if a war is extended to cover the whole of Palestine, our greatest gain will be the Galilee. It is because without any special military effort which might imperil other fronts, only by using the troops already assigned for the task, we could accomplish our aim of cleansing the Galilee."

At another meeting, of which a record has been found, Ben-Gurion said, "We have decided to cleanse Ramla."

In an article in the newspaper Ha'aretz, Danny Rabinovitz wrote, "What happened to the Palestinians in 1948 is Israel's original sin. ... Between the 1950s and 1976, the state systematically confiscated most of the land of its remaining Palestinian citizens."

Shahak said in his article: "In this context let me mention the pioneering work of Erskin Childers — Irish journalist. Childers was first to show that the Zionist claim that Arab propaganda had called on the Palestinians to run away from their homes was a gross lie. He inspected all broadcasts — the BBC recorded them and kept transcripts as did the American government — of the Arab radios of the time to find that no such call had ever been made."

Finally, this quote from the diary of Yitzhak Tabenkin, a charismatic leader of the kibbutz movement. In his diary, Tabenkin said, "the ideals of Hitler which I like: ethnic homogeneity, the possibility of exchange of ethnic minorities; the transfers of ethnic groups for the sake of an international order which for me are a particularly valuable feature."

No wonder some people prefer myth to truth.

GOP voters would do well not to pull plug on Bush competition

By the way, I really like my fellow Texan and ex-fellow Dallasite George W. Bush. Why post such a disclaimer on this essay's front end? To avoid misunderstandings.

Conversation about the Bush candidacy necessitates delicacy on the part of some who, unready to declare for Bush, would need half a New York minute to decide between the guy and Albert Gore Jr.

Somehow or the other, and without visibly raising a finger, Bush has become the consensus Republican candidate. Why? Because, through the fibers of his Clark Kent butt-down shirt we can see the big "S" for Superman? Because we know that, in Bush, a new Reagan awaits?

The matter is more prosaic than that. Republicans think Bush can retake the political center on which the Clintonites have been camping. They know that Bush's political ideas aren't yet well-defined, but that

Murchison

"compassionate conservatism" has the right ring to it. "Conservatism" for the Main Street business types, "compassion" for the soccer moms — friends, that's a "two-fer."

Further: Bush does well with an immense voter bloc, Hispanics, that hasn't been lost irretrievably to the Democrats.

However, polls notoriously don't settle matters. Republican voters and money men would do well not to pull the plug on Bush's competition (such as it is right now). Bush has never duked it out with Republicans before.

Though financially challenged, thanks to Bush, the guy's Republican competition is highly respectable, hence dangerous.

Sen. John McCain is about as meritoriously straightforward as candidates come anymore, even when he happens to be mistaken. (His tobacco settlement and campaign-finance proposals were both unacceptably tough.)

Dan Quayle, whose brains are 500 times as good as he ever got credit for from the media (which still isn't saying enough), is talking eloquently and forcefully about moral norms — a concern he long ago made his own. His 1992 "Murphy Brown" speech, addressing the illegitimacy crisis, today seems prophetic.

Forbes appears determined to out-idea every other candidate, offering detailed and positive (from a pro-freedom standpoint) recommendations on toughies like education, health care, and Social Security. His own brand of "compassionate conservatism" is impressive to behold. Nor, on moral values, has he conceded an inch to Quayle.

Mrs. Dole might make a good vice presidential nominee. She would certainly make a well-organized one!

As for Bush himself — well, I think we view a work in progress. While dealing with the Legislature, the guy didn't quite turn Texas inside out. He worked mostly like a plastic surgeon: a nip here, a few tucks there.

Maybe Americans don't want the world changed right now. Maybe they want things to stay as they are: just tidier, more fragrant than under the Clintons; a little more moral, perhaps, a little safer. Maybe you don't need a Quayle or a Forbes or a McCain for that job. A Bush might do. Even that point, though, must be tested on the campaign trail.

House votes to loosen restrictions on gun-show sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a victory for the National Rifle Association, the Republican-controlled House voted Thursday night to loosen restrictions on sales at gun shows.

The vote was 218-211, and came as lawmakers worked late into the night to craft legislation in response to a recent spate of high school shootings in Colorado and elsewhere.

Earlier, the House voted to permit the Ten Commandments to be posted in schools and other state and local facilities, a provision that supporters said would help promote morality across the country.

The gun proposal, said Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., would allow for "meaningful and reasonable background checks" for purchasers at gun shows, without necessary and time-consuming delays.

But Rep. Carolyn McCarthy, D-N.Y., whose husband was shot to death on a commuter railroad six years ago, said measure would "make it easier for criminals to buy guns at gun shows."

Current law requires federally licensed dealers to conduct background checks on customers at gun shows, but does not cover sales by private dealers at the same events.

The provision advanced by Democratic Rep. John Dingell of Michigan and backed by the NRA would cover fewer gun shows than current law, and give the government only 24 hours to complete the checks, rather than the three business days that is now the case. It also would extend the shortened checks to private sales.

The political overtones were inescapable, as a few Democrats said the risk of losing their seat in Congress was worth the vote. One, Rep. Jay Inslee, D-Wash., noted he had lost re-election in 1994 after voting to ban assault weapons, but said he was voting against the NRA this time, too.

The gun control debate unfolded immediately after the House, searching for ways to curb youth violence, cleared a companion measure permitting the Ten Commandments to be posted in schools and in other state and local facilities.

The vote was 287-139 on the legislation, which also includes a variety of get-tough provisions related to juvenile crime.

Critics said that measure was unconstitutional, but its sponsor, Rep. Robert Aderholt, R-Ala., countered that it would "promote morality and work toward an end of children killing children."

Earlier, in a second victory for the entertainment industry in as many days, the House rejected a proposal to require labeling of violent content in entertainment products such as video games.

For the second night in a row, lawmakers worked late into the evening fashioning their response to shootings at a Colorado high school and elsewhere. Repeatedly, lawmakers in both parties lamented cases of "children killing children."

Other provisions in the bill would toughen penalties for juvenile offenders, make it easier to try some juveniles as adults and require federal prosecutors to devote increased time and money to pursuing gun-related crimes.

In addition, the measure explicitly permits religious symbols to be included in the design of a memorial on any public school campus to commemorate anyone slain there. That provision was offered by Rep. Thomas Tancredo, a Colorado Republican who represents the area where this spring's shootings occurred.

CHARTER: Registration to begin soon for local school

(From 1A)

"The response from Midland has been overwhelming," said recruiter Claudia Alfaro. "There's no doubt in my mind that that school will be fully enrolled by the time school opens."

The cap on enrollment for the new charter school — a publicly funded, tuition-free institution that operates outside the authority and some of the rules governing the local school district — is further restrictive by grade level. Each of the grades kindergarten through fifth is to enroll no more than 90 students.

Kindergarten is the closest to being filled, with 75 requests-to-attend on file earlier this week. There were 60 apiece in first and fourth grade. In second grade, 54 forms had been received, while in third grade there were 48. Fifth grade had garnered the fewest responses, with 43.

Those spaces will be reserved, Ms. Alfaro said, until the end of registration on June 26, at which point all others who have registered will be informed if they were admitted.

"We will take the time to call everybody," Ms. Alfaro said.

Midland Advantage, by law, is considered a public school and will admit all who apply and for whom space is available.

The plan is for the school to grow by one grade each year until it becomes a full-fledged kindergarten through twelfth-grade school.

TARZAN

'I never thought of Tarzan as a dad, but now that you mention it...'

Tarzan. For many generations of Americans, the name alone evokes memories of a hero whose untamed life was a continuous exotic adventure lived in the lush jungle of the Dark Continent. The newest incarnation of the decades-old story, Disney's animated version, opens today at Hollywood Theatres Movies 10, and this week some West Texas dads reminisced about the lord of the jungle.

For Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, a boyhood fan of Edgar Rice Burroughs' lord of the jungle, the name stirs memories of times shared with his father.

"I've got good memories of my father and I sitting there watching 'Tarzan,'" Burns said. "I remember my dad smiling so much and laughing. Dad knew I got a kick out of watching Cheetah, and Dad would laugh when I laughed. There were only a few shows that I really remember watching on television with Dad. One was 'Star Trek' and the other was 'Tarzan.'"

This American icon has swung from the vines, rescued damsels in distress, especially one lovely American known most often simply as Jane, and restored harmony to his jungle home through movies and serials and cartoons since the second decade of the 20th century. U.S. District Court Senior Judge Lucius D. Bunton remembers finding the movies worthy of his time.

"I thought they were very entertaining," said Bunton. "I had to pay a dime to go see them, and I thought they were well worth the money. I was living in Marfa when those early 'Tarzan' movies came out, and they normally were on a Saturday, and the price of admission was a dime. It may have later gone up to a quarter when I got past 12 years old."

Burroughs wrote Tarzan from stories he told himself before he went to sleep

By Georgia Temple

Jobs failed and a business lost haunted Edgar Rice Burroughs when he was in his 30s. A husband and father of two children, he had no job and no money. "I had to pawn Mrs. Burroughs jewelry and my watch in order to buy food," Burroughs said of that time. "I loathed poverty, and I should have liked to have put my hands on the man who said that poverty is an honorable estate."

A decade later, Burroughs purchased the 540-acre San Fernando Valley estate of Harrison Gray Otis, then publisher of the Los Angeles Times. His life had turned around on an idea.

"Most of the stories I wrote, were the stories I told myself just before I went to sleep," Burroughs said.

In this instance, the story began with a question inspired by the mythological twins Romulus and Remus, founders of Rome, whom legend claims were left on the banks of the river Tiber as babies and reared by a she-wolf.

The question Burroughs asked himself one sleepless night: "How much would heredity influence character if the infant were transplanted to an entirely different environment and raised there?" spawned more than 20 novels whose hero became a household name to generations of Americans and fans around the world. The first tale, written in longhand on the backs of old letters and odd pieces of paper, introduced the memorable ape-man, Tarzan.

"Tarzan was an immediate sensation, convincing ERB that he had found his trade," wrote Gabe Escoe in his book "Tarzan of the Movies," noting that the story first appeared in October, 1912, in "All Story" magazine.

In an essay written in 1988, critic and editor Stefan R. Dziemianowicz said of the work, "Questions about strengths and weaknesses of human nature, and how quer just about anything. He always won.

"Swinging from tree to tree, I thought that was a real plus. I dreamed of that myself. We didn't have any trees, that was the real problem, and we didn't have any vines, either. It was kind of hard to swing, but it looked appealing. It certainly did."

Swinging from the vines also had its appeal for Marvin Wynn, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, who said, as a child, he "probably saw all the 'Tarzan' movies. The swinging in the jungles and his friendship with the apes and the animals, they were all appealing things to me."

The Dark Continent's distance and inaccessibility also had an appeal.

"Africa was mysterious and interesting," said Joseph Baressi, superintendent of Midland public schools. "I can recall, as a child, having a geography unit on the

Texas District Court Judge John Hyde

Congo, and I think that was part of what made Tarzan interesting to me."

David Daniel, president of Midland College, also said he was a childhood fan of Tarzan.

"First of all," Daniel said, "I think there's something inherent in the rugged male that would like to think he could make it in the jungle and swing on the trees and kill alligators. That sense of heroic adventure is, I think, appealing to most guys."

"And another factor was the danger that almost inevitably came to death, but somehow like the old serials of many years ago at the movies, it all worked out in the end for the hero, was the good guy defending Jane and the good animals against the evil hunters. And it was just exciting because he had kind of the special powers thing. He could call on his animal friends to come and rescue everybody."

The mention of Tarzan reminds Texas District Court Judge Dean Rucker of the time when he was about 10 and earning some summer money by working in his father's law office in the First National Bank, now Nations Bank.

"There used to be a little bookstore called the Book Stall downtown," Rucker said. "And I went over there and bought several paperback 'Tarzan' novels at a time and would read them."

Rucker, like others, was drawn to the stories through the "adventure" they depicted and the opportunity to imagine "what the African continent was like."

The humor in the films also provided a draw.

"When I was young, I used to think Cheetah was the greatest thing around," said Burns, who has seen more recent films such as "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes," but the absence of Cheetah made the films pale in comparison to the earlier versions that included the chimpanzee. "To me, that monkey was the star of the show."

Texas District Court Judge John and it always did for Tarzan."

New Zealander Tim Young, general manager of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc., also grew up watching Tarzan.

"He was a hero," said Young. "He

Hyde, who read Burroughs' novels, made the Saturday matinees when he was a boy and could list numerous actors who played Tarzans (there have been more than a dozen) in the history of the story's movie career. But the memory he recalled about Tarzan came not from his boyhood but from his early days of marriage and a summer trip he and his wife took to Silver Springs, Fla., where they rode in a glass-bottom boat.

"She had been there before and had taken the river cruise," Hyde said. "She mentioned there were lots of monkeys. I said, 'What do you mean monkeys? Monkeys do not live in Florida.'"

Hyde soon discovered she was right.

The guide said, "See these monkeys? The last Johnny Weissmuller 'Tarzan' movie they filmed here, they did not recapture the monkeys. They just let them go."

"And now, that whole river bank is populated with monkeys. So all those times we saw Johnny Weissmuller dive into the water we thought was some river in Africa, it was actually Silver Springs, Fla."

Weissmuller, the 1924 and 1928 Olympic swimming champion, stood out as Hyde's favorite Tarzan, a choice echoed by most of the dads interviewed.

The approach of Father's Day on Sunday and the opening of the new Tarzan movie today made the question of how the lord of the jungle translates into the lord of the manor irresistible. And who better to ask than Dads?

Daniel laughed. "I think the days of Dads being the ruling patriarch are over," he said. "And probably that's for the best. Things are much more egalitarian now in families. And I think, in that sense, we're a healthier society."

Young had never thought about Tarzan as a father. He also laughed at the idea, then said, "He's using his brains to protect everybody."

The concept of Tarzan as a father initially took Burns by surprise as well.

"I think of him as a hero, a guy lucky enough to live in the jungle and have fun," Burns paused as if remembering something. "I guess in some of those movies, there was Boy. I never thought of him as a dad, but evidently he was a good Dad to Boy. He was more of a hero to me along with his sidekick Cheetah."

Rucker also "had never thought of" Tarzan as a dad. "He's a protector. He is very protective of Jane and, of course, of his animal friends and the natives in the country." He paused, much as Burns had done, the added, "I'd put that out of my mind. There was Boy in these movies."

"I would say there's something akin to fathers in the Tarzan movies in that he always acted as the protector of folks who might not otherwise be able to take care of themselves. Don't put Jane in that group. She's very strong. She was defiant of her parents. She stayed in Africa, stayed with this ape-man. And I really doubt that anybody could consider Jane to be the weaker sex if you will."

The aficionado of the Tarzan books knows the movies veered from the story on numerous occasions including the way in which they portrayed Tarzan as a father.

In the second novel, "Return of Tarzan," published in 1915, Tarzan and Jane are married by her father, Professor Porter, an ordained minister, in the cabin where Tarzan was born. The couple had a son, Jack Clayton, who is kidnapped in "The Beasts of Tarzan" and is the central character in "The Son of Tarzan."

The final chapters of the book reveal, writes critic and editor Stefan

R. Dziemianowicz in a 1988 essay, "A touching treatment of an idea that predates Burroughs — and all writers for that matter: that the boy who grows up wanting to be anything but like his father eventually realizes his father is someone worthy of admiration."

The 1920 serial, "Son of Tarzan," presented the screen marriage in a chapel. This was one of the few times Tarzan was married on screen. Other marriage scenes occur in "The Golden Lion," 1927, and "Tarzan the Mighty," 1928. A different view of Tarzan as a father is presented in the films starring Weissmuller, the long reigning ape-man. In "Tarzan Finds a Son," released sixty years ago on June 16, 1939, Tarzan and Jane, played by Maureen O'Sullivan, find a child, whom they name Boy (Johnny Sheffield). The threesome becomes the most famous screen Tarzan family.

Just as the boundaries between fact and fiction sometimes become difficult to separate, the differences in screen and written fiction may blur. On Dec. 21, 1961, a headline in the Los Angeles Mirror activated the legends of Tarzan fans. The headline — "Tarzan" banned in Downey School; Ape Man and Jane Never Married — rekindled interest in the Tarzan legend.

"The stampede was on for fathers to rediscover and their sons to discover the adventures of the mighty ape-man," wrote Robert W. Fenton in his unauthorized biography of Burroughs, "The Big Swingers," published in 1967.

Hyde immediately called to mind the famous Tarzan screen family.

"I remember Tarzan was a Dad because he and Jane had Boy, and Tarzan was a good Dad," Hyde said. "He taught Boy all the dangers of the jungle and how to survive. Tarzan was an excellent Dad, at least my Tarzan was."

STORIES: Author dreamed of animated Tarzan

they set man apart from other creatures are what lie at the heart of 'Tarzan of the Apes.'"

By the time of his death in 1950, Burroughs had written more than 65 novels. Most fall into the science-fiction category, but his tales of Tarzan remain his best-known adventures.

Since 1918 and the silent film, "Tarzan of the Apes" starring Elmo Lincoln, 40 or so Tarzan movies featuring more than a dozen different actors in the title role and a television series starring Ron Ely have carried fans into the wilds of the Dark Continent and the domain of the lord of the jungle.

"I loved them; they were exotic and filled with adventure and humor," said Rob Hunt, conductor and artistic director of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc., recalling that he watched the movies on television when he was 4 or 5 years old. "And who wouldn't be drawn to the cute animals when they are young?"

Hunt's question is one Disney has made much of its money answering by creating movies with animals in starring roles or as the characters around a central human protagonist. And with its release today of "Tarzan of the Apes" the company has animated the lord of the jungle for another generation of movie goers.

"I'm sure we'll see it," said Hunt. "Disney has certainly shown us they can animate just about anything and make it convincing and engaging. And we will probably buy the video later. We tend to get everything that Disney issues. Kids always love it."

Rob Hunt, conductor and artistic director of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc.

Even the author dreamed of an animated Tarzan of the quality produced by Disney. His desire came from his disappointment in all of the screen stars not because they didn't do their best, but because a human could not recreate all the actions of his fictional Tarzan.

Despite his inability to create an animated version of his noble savage, Burroughs did profit from all other aspects of his creation. The Burroughs who felt a failure as a bread winner, a father and a husband when he was in his 30s, left a legacy to his children which demonstrated his true business savvy.

"Whenever, wherever Tarzan was mentioned, ERB received a cut," wrote Escoe. "He had had the foresight, 'way back in 1913, to register 'Tarzan' as a trademark which, over the years, he licensed out to several hundred different manufacturers."

Burroughs also was the first American author to incorporate himself.

"Deciding that book publishers demanded too great a percentage of the gross returns of his books, he organized Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc., in Tarzana, of course," Escoe wrote. "He proceeded to publish and market his own literary wares, and also to consolidate his real estate activities. He always serialized his new novels in magazines before committing them to hardcover, to realize maximum payoff."

He formed a radio division of Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc., and contracted with United Feature Syndicate to distribute a comic strip internationally. He also returned to an old vocation, which had failed previously, that of providing business counsel.

One of his 1935 brochures stated: "We have an organization that is preparing to assist in working out merchandising campaigns for sponsors; and, as owners of the Tarzan copyright and a wide range of Tarzan trademarks, we are in a position to make use of the Tarzan name in many lines."

The dreamer of Tarzan continued dictating his stories four hours a day, rode horseback, played tennis regularly, learned to fly and bought his own plane. With the advent of World War II, he volunteered his services to the Army as a war correspondent.

Of his life, Burroughs said in 1941: "When I was young, I used to dream of living an adventurous life, and it may be that these youthful dreams more or less shape up one's later life."

Legendary ape man swings from theaters into cyberspace

NEW YORK (AP) — Me Tarzan. You game?

The question is appropriate as two new PC games arrive based on the Disney summer animated feature "Tarzan," featuring the legendary ape man and his beloved Jane.

Swinging from the big screen to the computer screen, Tarzan goes from two dimensions to three in the noble savage's bid to become king of the nation's software aisle jungles.

"Disney's Tarzan Action Game" (Disney Interactive, CD-ROM for Windows, $29.99) puts a rousing new spin on traditional side-scrolling arcade-style games, adding fresh player perspectives in a realistic 3-D rain forest environment.

Examples include players trying to outrun an elephant stampede in action seen from a rolling, head-on camera angle. Looking over Tarzan's shoulder, they have to fight off slithering pythons. Seen from various angles, they hitch a ride on a stork.

There is swimming, running, jumping, tree climbing and combat with a crude spear. Naturally, players must also swing through the trees on vines. And adding a new mode of locomotion to treetop travel, the new Tarzan has mastered tree-surfing, sliding barefoot over mossy, serpentine branches high in the jungle canopy.

The game, like the movie, showcase a new-look Tarzan, a realistic animated version of the ape man that's a far cry from the usual Disney cartoons. Besides his appearance, Tarzan's movements have a heightened sense of ape-like realism, giving the game an edgy, modern feel.

To make the game appeal to all ages and genders, along with primate and pachyderm species, gamers can assume various roles: Little Tarzan, grown-up Tarzan, Jane, ape buddy Terk or Tantor the elephant.

Linking the game action to the movie are 21 full-motion video clips, some played as rewarding interludes following the completion of 14 regular levels. There are also 13 bonus levels for accomplished players.

The action game is a nonstop, adrenaline-pumped roller-coaster ride designed for adults and children 8 years old and up. For younger children, ages 4-8, there's "Disney's Activity Center, Tarzan" (also $29.99).

Black Gold Review

A gusher: good to excellent Dry well: Fair to poor

"Election," a comedy starring Matthew Broderick, Reese Witherspoon and Molly Hagen.

DAVID: The most difficult type of comedy filmmakers can attempt is satire. The difficulty lies in the fact that satires ask us to do more than laugh. By making a strong comparison between the ridiculous situation they present and real life, they ask us to think about our values. This process can often be as frightening as it is humorous. As a result, satires often fail because most people don't find them laugh-out-loud funny, which is what they expect out of a comedy. Such is the case with "Election," an attempt to make us laugh at and think about the types and ways we elect people to office by comparing an outrageous election for high school student government with real life national politics.

TIM: "Election" tells the story of a teacher (Broderick) and the students who run for student council president. Tracy Flick (Witherspoon) has been raised to be class president, and has to only start her campaign in order to win the election. Set in Omaha, Nebraska, it's an interesting look inside high school life and politics. Viewers in the Permian Basin might recognize some of the election tactics used in this film when our high schools hold cheerleader tryouts.

DAVID: After most comedies, even satires, one can remember a funny line, a particular situation or a sight gag that caused laughter. I only remember one funny line, but the explicitness of its language as well as its sexual gist makes it impossible for me to repeat here. Nor can I exactly tell you what is so funny about the pitiful lack of moral and ethical values exhibited by most of the characters in this film. Yet, it was, somehow, funny, just not laugh-out-loud funny.

TIM: I agree that satire is very difficult for filmmakers to attempt. However, I think I found this movie to be more humorous than you did. Matthew Broderick made a bold career choice, playing a schoolteacher whose life is going nowhere. In the end, he takes his frustrations out on Witherspoon. After last year's "Pleasantville," I have been pleasantly surprised with the quality of Ms. Witherspoon's performances. She's an up-and-coming actress.

DAVID: I agree that the acting, especially by Ms. Witherspoon, is good, and some of the humor is funny, but one has to have a sensibility that is not offended by explicit language and graphic sexuality in order to enjoy this movie. I suspect that for most people in this area, "Election" is not worth the effort of going to Odessa to see. Therefore, I give it a Dry Well.

TIM: Despite the fact that this movie is not a home run — it's not even a double — I'll give it a conditional Gusher for a slightly humorous look into high school life.

"Election," which opens today at Midland Park Mall Cinemas, scores a dry well and a conditional gusher.

THE MOVIE GUYS'

Black Gold Review

A gusher:
good to excellent

Dry well: Fair to poor

By David R. Allen, MC drama and film instructor, and Tim Jensen, MCT executive director

DAVID: "Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me," is the second film written and starring Mike Myers to make us laugh at the adventures of a slightly off-center Bond-like spy. With the help of returning director M. Jay Roach and new co-star Heather Graham, Myers takes us through time and space as Austin chases after his nemesis, Dr. Evil.

TIM: I have been looking forward to this summer movie. I enjoyed the original "Austin Powers: Man of International Mystery" when I saw it in the theater, but liked it even more upon repeat viewings on video.

DAVID: As always, I question the need for a sequel. So often they are only shadows of the originals. In this case, however, Myers comes very close to matching the hilarity of the original. Although some jokes are beginning to wear thin, his send-up of the macho infantilism of the Bond films is still sharp and funny.

TIM: That's the challenge with any sequel — do you repeat the successful elements of the first movie, or move on to new territory? This sequel makes an interesting choice by immediately eliminating some plot line entanglements from the first movie and returning Austin to the 1960s. This provides some new sources of jokes and allows the characters to move in slightly new directions.

DAVID: I agree. There are a few new things in this movie, which are very good. Rob Lowe does a wickedly accurate impression of Robert Wagner as the young version of Wagner's character, Number 2. I only wish there had been an opportunity to see Wagner and Lowe together on screen. Myers creates a new character, the incredibly fat, born-out-ofwedlock Scotsman, Fat Bastard. Finally, there is an extremely funny segment near the end of the movie in which characters try to describe the shape of Dr. Evil's space vehicle. This segment includes some well-placed and well-timed cameos by famous people named Willie and Woody.

TIM: These sequences are some of the funniest moments in these movies. If you enjoyed last summer's "There's Something About Mary," you'll love the gas jokes, the creative mix-up of coffee and the many references to things that are unique about men in this movie. In addition to Rob Lowe's great work, Tim Robbins is a wonderful 1960's president who mixes proper Kennedy breeding with uncontrolled laughter at the antics of Dr. Evil. Unfortunately, Heather Graham doesn't have much to work with in this movie — she looks great in the 1960's costumes, but that's about it for her character.

DAVID: While I laughed hard at most of the jokes in this movie, I must warn you that much of it is very crude, and I am not referring to Texas Tea. "Austin Powers" is once again loaded down with sophomoric humor that shouldn't be funny, but when done as well as it is here, always makes me laugh. This movie will not suit everyone's tastes, but that doesn't stop me from giving it a Gusher.

TIM: This movie definitely wins a Gusher for providing constant laughter.

"Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me," showing at Hollywood Theaters Tall City 10, rates two gushers.

Austin Powers hopes to find his mojo with audiences in high-stakes sequel

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Early test audiences didn't quite understand it, and the opening weekend box office was nothing to write home to mum about.

But people started to get the swing of "Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery." The modestly budgeted film made a respectable $54 million at the box office, then became a phenomenon on video.

Now, this quirky creation of Mike Myers, who was inspired by bittersweet memories of his comedy-loving, Liverpool-born father, has a sequel coming out this weekend, one that poses the first serious challenge to the "Star Wars" juggernaut.

"Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me" is accompanied by an aggressive, if somewhat unusual, promotional campaign: a major soundtrack with an original song by Madonna, toys, watches, T-shirts and a parade of magazine covers, from Rolling Stone with Myers in Austin persona, to the pet publication Cats, fronted with the hairless wonder Mr. Bigglesworth, the feline friend of Austin's nemesis, Dr. Evil (also played by Myers, in heavy makeup).

"It's just now the question of whether the audience likes it enough," said director Jay Roach, who also directed the first Austin Powers movie. "We're not presuming it will. We love all the hype, but we have to live up to it."

Myers says he is still stunned by how well the character has caught on. He said he never grows tired of people launching into bad Powers imitations of, "Oh, behave!" and "Yeah, baby!"

"Austin" gets its comic sensibilities from British TV shows like Benny Hill and "Monty Python." Myers' father adored these shows. And Myers adored his father.

Chris Myers was born in England but moved the family to Canada. He sold Encyclopedia Britannica and insurance. He used to let Myers and his two brothers stay up late on school nights to watch television.

"My dad loved comedy so much," said Myers. "One of my strongest memories is hearing my father laugh through the walls."

Years passed and Mike Myers became famous, first on "Saturday Night Live," then with the hit movie "Wayne's World." But as his career took off, his father's health declined, from Alzheimer's. Chris Myers died in 1991, and never saw his son make it big in movies.

"It was very weird. My heart was broken," said Myers.

He took 18 months off from show business to read, play guitar and visit his aunts and uncles in Liverpool. It was during this time that the "Austin Powers" character was born.

"I was driving home and I heard 'The Look of Love' (from 1967) on the radio, and you know how smell is a very potent sense memory. I think that songs do it, too," he said.

AROUND TOWN

"A Star-Spangled Salute," the Independence Day celebration in downtown Midland, is scheduled for July 3-4.

The event will begin on July 3 with the 37th annual Children's Sidewalk Parade, sponsored by the Col. Theunis Dey chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Registration will be 9 a.m., with the parade scheduled for 10 a.m.

Also on July 3, "Sirens and Suspenders," displays by the Midland Fire Department, will be shown from 9 a.m.-noon; Pickwick Players will perform at 11 a.m.; and at 2 p.m. such events as Lawn Chair Brigade, Picnic in the Park, Confederate Air Force flyover; tours of downtown Midland and the Brown-Dorsey Home; and Family Time in the Park will be presented.

That evening, Summer in the City will present Midnight Stampede from 6-8:30 p.m., and the Pulsations from 9-11 p.m.

On July 4, festivities will begin with Family Time in the Park 1-6 p.m. Registration for the Fourth of July parade will be 5 p.m., with the parade itself scheduled for 6 p.m.

That evening, performances will be from Pickwick Players from 7-7:20 p.m.; First United Methodist Church Choir, 7:30-8 p.m.; Tall City Line Dancers, 8:15-8:30 p.m.; West Texas Harmony Sweet Adeline chapter, 8:45-9:15 p.m.; and Lawn Chair Brigade, 9:20-9:25 p.m. Midland-Odessa Symphony, with the pyrotechnic and laser light finale, will perform at 9:30 p.m.

For more information call 683-1111.

MIDLAND COUNTY Public Libraries — both the main library at 301 W. Missouri and the branch library at Midland Park Mall — have begun the 1999 Summer Reading/Read-to-Me Club. Children from birth through age 14 are invited to participate.

Special free programs next week include "Dance with Joy" with Miss Joy and Bingham Dance Studio at 10:30 a.m. June 22 for children from age 3 through kindergarten and 2:30 p.m. June 22 for students in first through seventh grades.

A one-hour movie for all ages will be presented 2:30 p.m. June 23.

On June 24, "Stories, Crafts and Activities" with Cindy Marshall will be presented at 10:30 a.m. for first-through seventh-graders, and at 2:30 p.m. for 3-year-olds through kindergartners.

For more information on these programs call the main library at 688-8991 or the branch library at 697-8113.

MIDLAND CHRISTIAN Women's Club will have a "Mother-Daughter Pamper Yourself" luncheon 11 a.m.-1 p.m. July 6 at Green Tree Country Club. Bath and Body Works will demonstrate relaxing therapy. Leighann Askew will provide music; her mother, Jennifer, will speak on being "Completely Restored." Cost of the luncheon will be $11 per person. Free nursery will be provided; mothers are asked to bring sack lunches for their children.

Midland Christian Women's Club is non-denominational and has no membership or dues. Mothers and daughters are encouraged to attend. For luncheon and nursery reservations call 570-8945 or 682-5851.

VAN, Serving the Visually Impaired, will meet for a special program 10 a.m. June 23 at the VAN House, 2908 W. Ohio. Persons attending may bring sack lunches if they wish; coffee and refreshments will be provided.

Support group for men learning about living with visual impairment will meet 10 a.m. June 22 at the VAN House.

For information about either event call 694-2648.

FAMILY MATTERS

'Mid-life crisis' part of personal growth

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I both have good jobs that we love. The problem we're having is somehow being good parents as well as succeeding at our careers.

Both of us are very career oriented and have been most successful. We have a beautiful home and a house at the lake, and take marvelous vacations.

We also have two children (our son is 9 and our daughter, 6) who we love and adore. They both seem happy and well-adjusted. Both are in a private school and doing well. We are fortunate to have a full-time nanny who we all like and who loves our children too.

The problem that I'm having with all of this is that I'm suddenly feeling exhausted and guilty. This has never happened to me before.

I've always had to put up with my mother and father's indirect disapproval over my not staying at home with the children like my mother did. But I once told my father that I've been successful at my work just like he has been and just like he taught me. He hasn't said anything to me since then. I can handle them. My problem is me!

Is it normal to start feeling like you are having a "mid-life crisis" at 37? I don't seem to have the energy that I once had and sometimes not even the interest. I'm coming home from work earlier now (5:30 p.m. instead of 6 p.m. or 7 p.m.), and even though I feel guilty about that, I'm still exhausted.

Could I be depressed? My husband has noticed the change in me too. Our sex life is non-existent (although it wasn't that great before).

What can I do to get my old self back? STRANGE DAYS

DEAR STRANGE: You seem to be suffering from a big dose of reality. People usually reach a point in their lives when they begin to ask (whether they know they are asking it or not): "What's it all about?" Sometimes this question and its accompanying search for the answer takes the form of a mid-life crisis, but it is really an existential spiritual crisis about "Who am I?" and "Why am I here?"

This is a time to develop a more conscious awareness that there is more to life than what we are experiencing — in short, this can be a blessed event.

Begin to think more about what you really want and expect from life. As a general rule — and contrary to what advertising tries to tell us — we cannot have it all.

There is always a price to pay — physically, emotionally or spiritually.

Maybe a part of you does not want your "old self" back.

Take a pragmatic approach to this problem — your future will be affected in a major way. Your situation cannot be adequately addressed with stress management or some simple lifestyle adjustment. Take a hard look at what you really expect and want from life.

Dr. Stephen Covey suggests utilizing The Seven Habits of Highly Effective Families as a way to set life's compass straight. He offers the following steps or habits:

■ Habit 1: Be proactive. Become an agent of change in your family.

■ Habit 2: Begin with the end in mind. Develop a family mission statement.

■ Habit 3: Put first things first. Make family a priority.

■ Habit 4: Think "win-win." Move from "me" to "we."

■ Habit 5: Seek first to understand, then to be understood. Solve family problems through empathic communication.

■ Habit 6: Synergize. Build family unity through celebrating differences.

■ Habit 7: Sharpen the saw. Renew the family spirit through traditions.

This is a wonderful opportunity for you to respond to your discomfort before it becomes too serious. Take the time to respond to your pain and seriously consider what God might have in mind for you and your family.

Change — a different journey — is most often preceded by pain. As Ernest Kurtz observes: "The modern mind — so enthralled by technique, so oriented to efficient production and 'bottom-line' results, so obsessed with the comfort and predictability — approaches the concept of pilgrimage with wariness and puzzlement. Why backtrack and sidestep when you can march straight ahead?"

You have the answer — it does not get you where you really want and need to go.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON "DEMOCRATIC PARENTING" ARE PRESENTED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Be involved and instructive.
- Listen but be firm.
- Be a "process helper."

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

DEAR ABBY

New fashionable status of bald men is creating lots of buzz

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You missed the mark on your advice to the bald boaster's wife. Her husband doesn't need a video to show him that he's bald. He knows it, and would probably regard a video showed in his face as another disparaging insult that we bald guys are used to.

Van Buren

Abby, his wife should be supportive, positive and encouraging. From the tone of her letter, it appears her approach has been the opposite. I can almost hear her saying, "Your hair looks terrible that way." A more positive approach might help him feel more comfortable about trying a more realistic solution to his baldness. Perhaps she should say, "Honey, I think you'd look very sexy in a buzz cut."

I had a "comb-over" years ago. It got to the point that it was inconvenient to style, difficult to keep in place and ineffective to the point of looking ridiculous. I was aware that it didn't produce the effect I wanted, but I mistakenly thought it was better than nothing.

Finally, after I read a poll in which women named the sexiest man on television, I accepted the fact that there's nothing wrong with being bald. Do you know who they chose? Patrick Stewart, the totally bald captain who starred in "Star Trek, The Next Generation"! (He's also a much-admired Shakespearean actor.) The compassion, poise, strength and charm he conveyed were more meaningful to female viewers than his lack of hair. If a man possesses those qualities, his hair (or lack thereof) will seem trivial to those who matter to him. — NO HAIR, NOOO PROBLEM, CARY, ILL.

DEAR NO HAIR, NOOO PROBLEM: Off the top of my head, I can think of three other much-admired bald actors: Robert Duvall, Louis Gossett Jr. and Hector Elizondo. If I put on my thinking cap, I'm sure I could come up with others.

Currently, bald is "in," and many men shave their heads to acquire what nature gives to a lucky few. Luxurious locks are NOT a requirement for love, happiness and success, so guys, if you're uncomfortable with options such as transplants or styling, forget bad "fixes." Embrace the slogan "Bald is beautiful!" — and flaunt it.

DEAR ABBY: When it comes to hair, as with most things, there's a distinct double standard between men and women.

Women feel it's their place to be critical of men who try to make the most of what hair they have by combing it over their bald or thinning pate. This despite the fact that women spend millions annually on wigs, falls, rats, wiglets and various sorts of hair extenders. Shame on them.

What if a man were to tell his wife, "Dear, why don't you throw away all those bleaches, dyes, lotions and curlers? I'd still love you if you let your hair go thin and stringy and gray."

Why should women persist in living in a state of denial?

As you say, facing the problem head on and dealing with it is a better solution.

Yeah. RIGHT! — COMBS OVER IN EVERETT, WASH.

DEAR COMBS OVER: At the risk of appearing contentious, I'm for anything that WORKS. The problem with most comb-overs is they are obvious.

A male reader put it very well: "It took me a long time to realize that what women find attractive are men who are relaxed and comfortable about who they are. Once I realized that, I cut my hair short and my wife thinks it's wonderful."

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Glaucoma not affliction of elderly only

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't think that glaucoma is something that might creep up on you as you get older, warns the Glaucoma Foundation. It can creep up on you at any age. Even newborns can be affected. Nor are you necessarily safe if you have 20/20 vision and don't have diabetes.

"These are the myths about glaucoma, the leading cause of preventable blindness," says Dr. Robert Ritch, medical director of the foundation. "The sad fact is that too many people are in danger of losing vision because they think they're not at risk. Tragically, 90 percent of the 120,000 Americans who are blind as the result of glaucoma did not have to lose their sight."

The organization estimates that there are 4 million people in the United States who have glaucoma — and half of them don't even know it.

People of African descent are especially at risk; one in 13 has the disease — occurring four to six times more often than among Caucasians. It also is more likely to show up early in life and more frequently causes blindness.

Glaucoma is tricky because it doesn't offer any warning symptoms. It is really a group of diseases which can produce increased fluid pressure inside the eye, over time damaging the optic nerve, with loss of vision. Usually side vision goes first.

But with regular exams, your eye doctor can detect early signs of the disease and put you on a treatment regimen that can keep you from losing your sight.

The foundation advises getting tested every four years if you are under 45, but every two years if you are under 45 and of African descent or have any of the other risk factors: a family history of glaucoma, nearsightedness, diabetes, a previous eye injury, or regular use of cortisone or steroid products.

Falls affect elderly, but are preventable

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Like it or not, we Earthlings, with a few astronomical exceptions, have to live with gravity and are therefore liable to drop if not restrained.

This leads to the great problem of aging — falling or, even worse, the fear of falling. The effects of the former are in good part remediable, thanks to modern medical skills, but the latter all too often result in timorous avoidance of the physical activity so necessary for maintenance of both physical and mental health.

The annual incidence of falls is 33 percent in people aged 60 and older, progressing to 50 percent in people over 80, along with an increasing chance of injury. Putting it another way, it has been noted that a primary care physician sees, each day, one or two patients who have recently fallen.

The rapid increase in the rate of falls world-wide was recently demonstrated by a study involving the entire country of Finland. In 1970, the rate numbered 5,600, progressively rising yearly until today, when it totals 36,000. Despite in-depth research, the underlying causes remain unexplained.

These numbers do not reflect the majority of slips and falls that occur without serious injury, luckily for nursing homes where about half the residents "hit the deck" at least once a year.

The factors responsible for falling are about as numerous as the stars in the sky (which also seem to fall on occasion). They can be divided into two main categories:

(1) Intrinsic — falls related to the host; incorporates the various changes in aging plus disease and the effects of medication. Intrinsic problems involve impaired vision, balance, hearing, reaction time and "senile gait." Also involved are medical disorders such as neurologic, cardiovascular, gastrointestinal, metabolic, musculoskeletal and psychological impairment. Balance and judgment can be further impacted by the side effects of required medication.

(2) Extrinsic — reflects environmental conditions. Extrinsic factors — which create nearly half of all falls — include such items as poor lighting, slick floors, uneven surfaces, the first and last steps of stairways, getting out of bed and wearing high, spiked heels.

Treatment consists of a complete examination by a primary care physician to discover and correct all contributing medical factors, and then an assessment of all potential home and external risk factors.

One of the best preventative measures, is simply walking (not shuffling), which aids bodily functions in general and helps solidify bony structures. Nearly 50 percent of hip fractures occur before hitting the ground, because of the thinning of the bone.

Remember that if you become over-protective and don't use it, you will lose it. Once again let us remind you of the slogan at Manor Park: "One on their feet is worth 10 in their seat."

Go for it and, in the theatric idiom, "break a leg!"

Debate over scratch tickets brings chuckle

By Trudy Tynan

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Having risked their lives for their country, veterans living at the Holyoke Soldiers Home doubt it would be a big problem to risk a few dollars on scratch-off lottery tickets.

"Life is a gamble," said Geno Majewski, 71, a World War II combat veteran, chuckling at the debate in the state Legislature whether to allow the sale of lottery tickets in the state-run home.

Selling tickets at the home would be a convenience for its 284 residents, Majewski said as he watched television in the spacious canteen.

"Many of the fellows like to buy scratch tickets," he said. "It gives them a little thrill."

Opponents of the bill, including the Massachusetts Council on Compulsive Gambling, worry the aged veterans on fixed incomes are all too vulnerable to the lure of gambling.

"It doesn't sound like a good idea to me," said Gov. Paul Cellucci. "I'll listen to the proposal, but I don't think you want to have lots of tickets sold in a home or residence."

The Legislature got involved because it is against state law for state employees to sell lottery tickets, and the home's canteen staff are on the state payroll.

The state Senate approved the bill, which would allow state employees at the home to sell the tickets, and sent it to the House where gambling foes have said they will try to block it.

"They don't like cigarettes, either," chorused a group of veterans smoking on a sunny outside patio. The only place inside the home where smoking is allowed is a glassed-in area in one corner of the canteen.

In fact, one reason the home's management wants to sell lottery tickets is the sharp drop in revenue the canteen suffered after it stopped selling cigarettes, according to Paul Morin, the home's executive director.

Still, he said, in the same way the Soldiers' Home canteen doesn't sell ice cream to diabetics, scratch tickets wouldn't be sold to compulsive gamblers.

Some residents are opposed to the measure.

"Anybody who wants to play the lottery can go downtown and get a ticket or have a friend pick a number," said Edgar Hebert, as he waited for the bus outside the home. "I don't think they should sell them in the canteen."

State Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees, a sponsor of the bill, said it would only be fair, because veterans at the state's other Soldiers Home in Chelsea are able to buy lottery tickets from a canteen operated by blind people who are not state employees.

COMMUNITY CONNECTIONS

Everybody's goal: Live long, healthy, happy life

By Alexandria L. Rose

When my father-in-law turned 50, one of his employees gave him an expensive framed poster for his birthday. Its message? "Consider the alternative."

I didn't see the humor at that time, but years later I reached that golden age and those words popped into my head.

Although I believe in a beautiful blessed afterlife, really I do, I do not want to give up this life for many years to come.

Apparently I am not alone. Recently the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) released the results of a survey that showed the typical American hopes to live to the ripe old age of 91. Good genes and healthy habits make that hope entirely possible. In fact, 100 is not an unheard-of goal.

"Stealing Time-The New Science of Aging," was aired earlier this month, and there were some amazing facts brought out. One fact was that we as humans are not programmed to die. We all should be living as long as possible, and when we do die, die as young-acting as possible.

Four major things help to keep us young: good genes, healthy eating habits (one study is showing only 1700 calories per day), physical activity program and mental stimulation.

And never forget to place as much humor in your life as possible.

So let's see how many of us can continue the good life on this Earth by practicing the above ideas. Best of luck to all of us as we switch our habits and keep on going.

Alexandria L. "Alex" Rose is district coordinator for the American Association of Retired Persons.

Ruling could allow thousands of juveniles to appeal convictions

By Larry O'Dell
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — A Virginia Supreme Court ruling last week that both parents must be notified when a juvenile is arrested could enable thousands to challenge their convictions and has already spared the life — at least temporarily — of a death row inmate who committed murder at 17.

The execution of Douglas Christopher Thomas was halted on Wednesday, just hours before he was to die by injection and five days after the high court ruling. Back in 1990, only Thomas' mother was told of his arrest in the shooting deaths of his girlfriend's parents.

Thomas became the first condemned man in Virginia to take advantage of the Supreme Court ruling. As many as three other men on death row for crimes committed before they were 18 are expected to raise similar challenges.

The reprieve doesn't mean Thomas will necessarily get a new trial. The Supreme Court is expected to consider the case during its September session.

In its ruling last Friday, the high court ordered a new trial for Jeramie Baker, who was convicted at 17 of trying to rob a convenience store and stabbing a clerk. Only his mother was notified of his arrest, despite a 1991 state law that requires summonses go "to the parents" of the juvenile.

The Supreme Court said the use of the plural "parents" means both the mother and father.

More than half of all juveniles sentenced in criminal cases in Virginia come from single-parent homes or families headed by someone other than their biological parents. And for years, it was common practice for Virginia prosecutors to notify only one parent.

As a result, prosecutors said the ruling means thousands of convictions over the past eight years could be open to challenge.

David Botkins, a spokesman for state Attorney General Mark L. Earley, said every claim of improper notification will have to be raised individually "and we will be prepared to argue those as necessary."

"Virginia should not be greatly concerned about a mass exodus of juvenile offenders from detention facilities," Botkins said. Any jailed youth seeking release would have to go back to court, go through another trial and risk getting a stiffer sentence when retried, he said.

Three other men are on death row in Virginia for murders committed before they were 18:

■ Chauncey Jackson. He had just turned 16 when he killed a man in 1994 as the man sat in a car. "I understand his biological father was not notified," said Rob Lee, director of the Virginia Capital Representation Resource Center, which represents death row inmates. Lee said he will raise the issue in court by July 1.

■ Shermaine Johnson. He was sentenced to die for the 1994 stabbing death and rape of a woman when he was 16. His lawyer did not immediately return calls.

■ Steven Roach. He received a death sentence for the 1993 shotgun slaying of a woman when he was 17. His lawyer, Steven M. Schneebaum, said he recalled that only Roach's father attended a 1994 hearing on whether to transfer the case from juvenile to adult court. Prosecutor Daniel Bouton said he could not remember who was notified in the case.

Study: Internet users in North America climb to 92 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people over 16 in the United States and Canada using the Internet has climbed to 92 million, with almost as many women as men online, according to a new survey released Thursday.

The study by Nielsen Media Research and CommerceNet also shows dramatic increases in the number of women who made at least a single purchase using the Internet, rising 80 percent over nine months ago.

"Certainly the types of products you can purchase online are so much more diverse than in years past, said Jerome Samson, one of the study's coordinators.

"The only thing you could purchase online were hardware, software, things that mainly appealed to a male audience."

The most popular items for women to buy on the Web were books, CDs and videos with 9.6 million purchases of those items taken together. But in a twist, the number of women buying computers over the Internet climbed fastest at 160 percent to 1.3 million during the past nine months.

Men also bought mostly books, CDs and videos but also bought far more computers — 4.1 million — than women.

Among both men and women, online purchases of software remained flat.

Canadian executed in Texas

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Convicted killer Joseph Stanley Faulder became the first Canadian in almost a half-century to be executed in the United States Thursday evening.

Faulder, 61, was pronounced dead at 6:18 p.m., six minutes after the flow of lethal drugs began. He coughed twice, let out two gasps and then stopped moving.

Faulder nodded to his lawyer, Sandra Babcock, as she walked into the death chamber. Ms. Babcock stood right against the glass and asked Faulder, "You O.K.?" He didn't respond.

When the warden asked Faulder whether he had any last words, Faulder shook his head and said, "No statements."

Faulder didn't deny killing 75-year-old Inez Phillips during a burglary of her East Texas home in 1975. But attorneys for the former auto mechanic from Jasper, Alberta, argued his conviction was tainted because he never was told after his arrest that he could seek legal assistance from Canadian authorities as allowed under international law.

The Canadian government filed documents in Faulder's appeals protesting his treatment and won the backing of U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright in calling for a reprieve. The federal courts, however, rejected Faulder's appeals and state officials, including Gov. George W. Bush, refused other requests that could have blocked the execution, the 14th this year in Texas.

The Supreme Court late Thursday afternoon denied another request for a reprieve, clearing the way for the execution. Faulder's attorneys, asking the punishment be stopped, cited a 200-year-old law that allows foreign citizens to sue American officials if they have been harmed by breaches of treaties.

"There is no new evidence that questions the jury's verdict that he is guilty of this crime," Bush said, refusing to issue a one-time 30-day reprieve.

In December, the high court halted Faulder's scheduled execution about 30 minutes before he could have received lethal injection. In January, the justices rejected his appeal, lifted their reprieve and state officials set the new execution date for Thursday.

It was his 10th execution date. "I'm at peace with my maker," Faulder told prison officials Thursday as he was moved from death row to a holding cell adjacent to the death chamber. "I'm ready to go."

He refused repeated requests in recent months for interviews with reporters.

Faulder is the oldest of the 178 inmates executed in Texas since the state resumed carrying out capital punishment in 1982. The total is the highest in the United States.

Faulder's case attracted much media attention in Canada, a country that outlawed capital punishment in 1976. In Canada, convicted murderers can be sentenced to life in prison with no chance for parole until at least 25 years are served. The last execution of a Canadian in the United States was in the early 1950s.

Faulder was being held in Colorado in 1977 on unrelated charges when he was charged with the murder two years earlier of Mrs. Phillips at her home in Gladewater, about 115 miles east of Dallas.

His attorneys contended Canadian authorities should have been told of his murder arrest and detention under terms of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations. Also under that treaty, Texas authorities should have informed Faulder of his right to contact the Canadian government for help, his attorneys said.

When arrested, Faulder was carrying a Colorado driver's license and had applied for a Texas license. It wasn't until 15 years later that his family, who believed he was long dead, and the Canadian government discovered he was alive.

Trial testimony revealed how Faulder and his girlfriend, Lynda McCann, barged into Mrs. Phillips' house July 8, 1975.

Faulder ordered Mrs. Phillips to surrender the combination to a floor safe. While Faulder worked on the safe, Ms. McCann, carrying Faulder's gun, and Mrs. Phillips struggled over the weapon and it discharged.

Faulder became enraged over the gunfire and also that he found the safe empty. He ordered Ms. McCann from the room. A maid found Mrs. Phillips' body the next morning. A 6 1/2-inch butcher knife was embedded in her chest. Her arms were tied and tape covered her mouth. Ms. McCann later testified against Faulder.

Spurs stay on record playoff run

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs have a chance to do something that the greatest teams in NBA history — even Bill Russell's Boston Celtics and Michael Jordan's Chicago Bulls — never accomplished: 12 consecutive postseason victories.

And on the day between Games 1 and 2 of the NBA Finals, they couldn't have cared less.

"That playoff winning streak record is not important whatsoever," Spurs center David Robinson said Thursday. "Nobody in our locker room has talked about it or even cared about it."

The Spurs were more concerned about maintaining their mental edge and staying hungry for Game 2 Friday night against the New York Knicks.

Their Game 1 victory was a product of the same winning formula they've used all year: plenty of production from Tim Duncan; support on offense and defense from Robinson; timely shooting by one of their outside specialists, in this case Jaren Jackson.

Despite an 11-game winning streak, the Spurs have run into trouble in Game 2s during each of their playoff series. In the first round, they lost to Minnesota. In the second round, they needed two late missed free throws by Kobe Bryant to beat the Los Angeles Lakers. In the third round, they trailed Portland by 18 before winning on Sean Elliott's incredible tippy-toe 3-pointer.

"It's not just this team, it's any team," said Steve Kerr, a veteran of three NBA Finals with the Bulls. "You see a team win Game 1 in the finals and there's a natural tendency to let down a little bit. The other team is angry and comes out and plays a lot better, and all of a sudden it's 1-1."

"We've had some trouble in Game 2s, so it'll be important for us to come out strong early."

In Game 1, it was the Knicks who came out strong, only to falter in the second quarter when they got into foul trouble. New York was still within striking distance, trailing by six early in the fourth quarter, but Jackson's two big 3-pointers deflated the Knicks.

Cowboys reach deal with Deion

By Mike Finger
Associated Press Writer

IRVING — Despite salary-cap problems and Deion Sanders' nagging toe injury, Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has agreed on a contract extension for the All-Pro cornerback.

Sanders

Jones initially announced Thursday that it was a three-year deal. But Jones later said he misspoke about the time frame, according to Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple.

"The tentative agreement has been reached, although the contract has not been signed and the length of the agreement will not be released," Jones later said.

Jones wouldn't say how much the extension is worth, but he conceded that the decision is a calculated risk.

"We really don't know if he's going to play at the level we'd like for him to," Jones said at Valley Ranch, where players were concluding a three-day mini-camp.

"But when I look at what our alternatives are and when I look at what he can bring to the table for our team this year, it's worth the risk."

Jones said the deal, which still must pass muster with the NFL, was nearly complete and he expected it to be signed Friday.

The extension is expected to be a high-end contract for an NFL cornerback, a four-year, $22.8 million deal that Dale Carter signed recently with

Rebels named No. 1 in Texas by magazine

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Midland Lee is No. 1 in the state according to the 1999 edition of Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine.

Lee, the defending Class 5A Division II (small schools) state champion, is ranked No. 1 in the pre-season Top 25 Class 5A poll. The Rebels are followed by Duncanville, the defending Class 5A Division II (big schools) state champion, at No. 2.

Austin Westlake, Converse Judson and Aldine Eisenhower round out the top five. Odessa Permian is the only other District 4-5A team listed in the poll at No. 11.

The Rebels are coming off a banner year in which they went 15-1. The Rebels have nine offensive starters and one defensive starter returning from that squad. The Rebels have some rebuilding to do on defense but the return of such standouts as junior running back Cedric Benson, senior fullback Clint McNutt and senior quarterback Jon Rogers

Corkery leaves Howard College

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — The Western Junior College Athletic Conference is losing yet another head basketball coach.

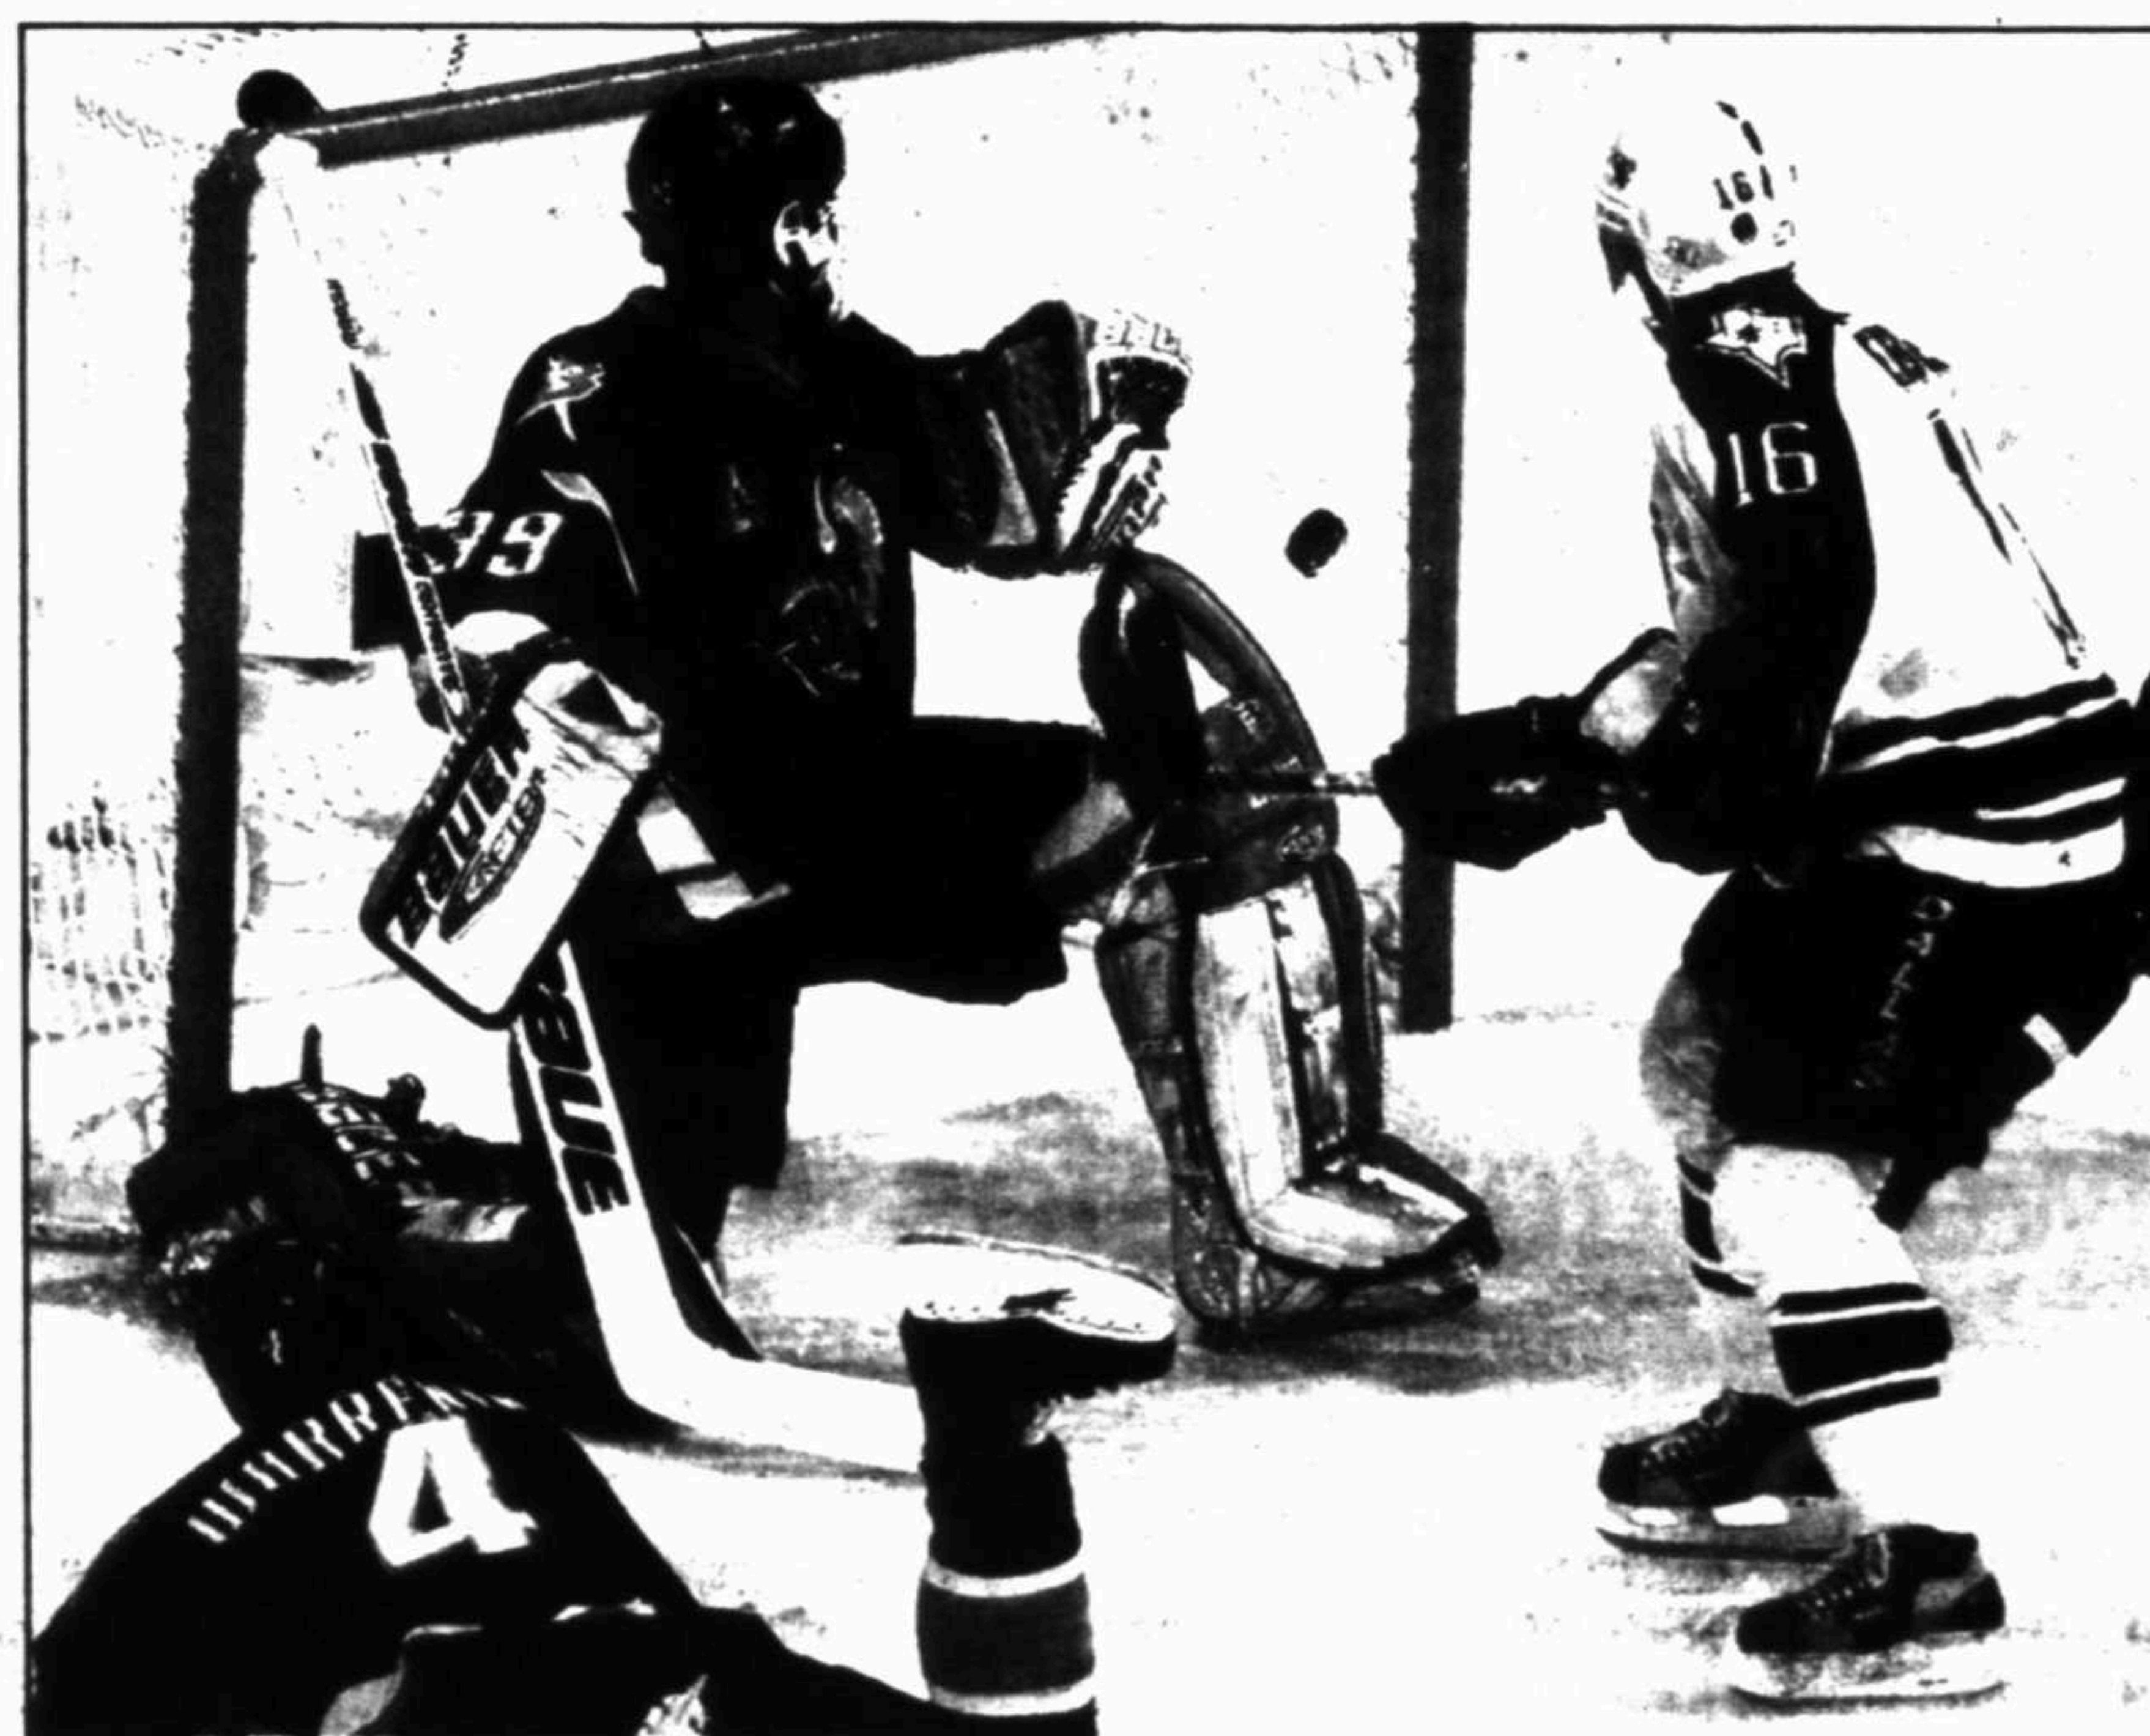

Howard College's Matt Corkery is leaving his position as head coach of the Lady Hawks for an assistant coaching position at Stephen F. Austin University under former Lady Hawks coach Royce Chadwick. Corkery, 28, leaves one successful program and heads to another in Nacogdoches as the Ladyjacks are one of the five teams (the others are Tennessee, Louisiana Tech, Virginia and Stanford) to have advanced to the Sweet 16 in the NCAA tournament throughout the 1990's.

In his three years at Howard, Corkery guided the Lady Hawks to a 90-12 record with two co-WJAC championships, a Region V title and a third place finish in the NJCAA National Tournament in 1998.

STANLEY CUP FINALS

One Win from Glory

Buffalo Sabres goaltender Dominik Hasek watches helplessly as a shot by Dallas' Darryl Sydor flies into the net. It was the first goal in the Stars' 2-0 win in Game 5 of the Stanley Cup Finals Thursday in Dallas.

Loss sends Sabres back home to Buffalo facing must-win game

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — If the Buffalo Sabres are going to win the Stanley Cup, they're going to have to do it the hard way.

A 2-0 loss to the Dallas Stars Thursday night put the Sabres on the brink of elimination for the first time this postseason. Buffalo trails 3-2 in the best-of-7 series.

Only three of 15 teams which have lost Game 5 of a tied finals have rebounded to win the championship, none since the 1971 Montreal Canadiens.

For the Sabres to do it, the seventh-seeded team from the East must win two straight, beginning with Game 6 Saturday night in Buffalo. The Sabres are 8-1 at Marine Midland Arena in the playoffs.

Buffalo had chances early as Dallas committed many of the same mistakes it made in the Sabres' 2-1 victory in Game 4. But the Sabres rarely challenged Stars goaltender Ed Belfour — and when they did, he was sharp.

Jay McKee and Geoff Sanderson each got good looks as they were flying across open ice, but Belfour saw the shots all the way and caught both.

One shot deflected just wide of the post, and Belfour went behind the net to make a save when the puck came off the boards. Shortly thereafter, he let a rebound squirt into the zone but he dove on it before any Sabres arrived.

Buffalo goalie Dominik Hasek kept his team within a goal for more than 55 minutes until getting faked out of position on a 2-on-1 and allowing a goal by Pat Verbeek. It gave Dallas a two-goal lead for only the second time this series, the only other being the final 26 seconds of Game 3.

The Sabres trailed 1-0 early in the second period on a power-play goal by the Stars. Buffalo had overcome a similar deficit in Game 1 when Dallas tried playing keep-away to protect its lead. The Stars didn't make that mistake this time and the Sabres weren't able to slow their aggressiveness.

Buffalo had just two power plays in the game, one in each of the first two periods. The Sabres didn't get off a shot on the second.

This is only the third time Buffalo has trailed a series in the playoffs. The Sabres were down 1-0 to Boston in the second round and were in a 2-1 hole against the Stars.

Stars claim series lead with 2-0 win

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Fittingly, in a series so close that one goal can prove decisive, one-half inch of open net put the Dallas Stars one victory away from winning the Stanley Cup.

Darryl Sydor scored a power-play goal in the second period and the Stars, the oldest team in the playoffs, held off the Buffalo Sabres 2-0 in yet another tightly played game Thursday night for a 3-2 series lead.

"We're one win from the Stanley Cup, and I don't think anybody feels old," the Stars' Mike Keane said.

With the Stars' Ed Belfour matching Dominik Hasek save for save in the closest Stanley Cup finals in years, the Stars can hoist their first cup by winning Game 6 Saturday in Buffalo. If not, Game 7 will be Tuesday in Dallas.

The Sabres, who lack the Stars' big names and big scorers, have scored only eight goals in five games and now face big odds, too. No team has rallied from a 3-2 deficit to win the Stanley Cup since Montreal in 1971.

"This is so intense, the only confidence we have is we're up 3-2," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "There's no dominant player, no dominant area, it is absolutely a shift-by-shift battle. There's just no read on the series."

Said Sabres coach Lindy Ruff: "Our players believe they will be back here for Game 7."

This is the lowest-scoring series since 1947, when Toronto and Montreal also had only 19 goals through five games. Game 5 was only the second in the series decided by two goals: Dallas won Game 2 at home 4-2.

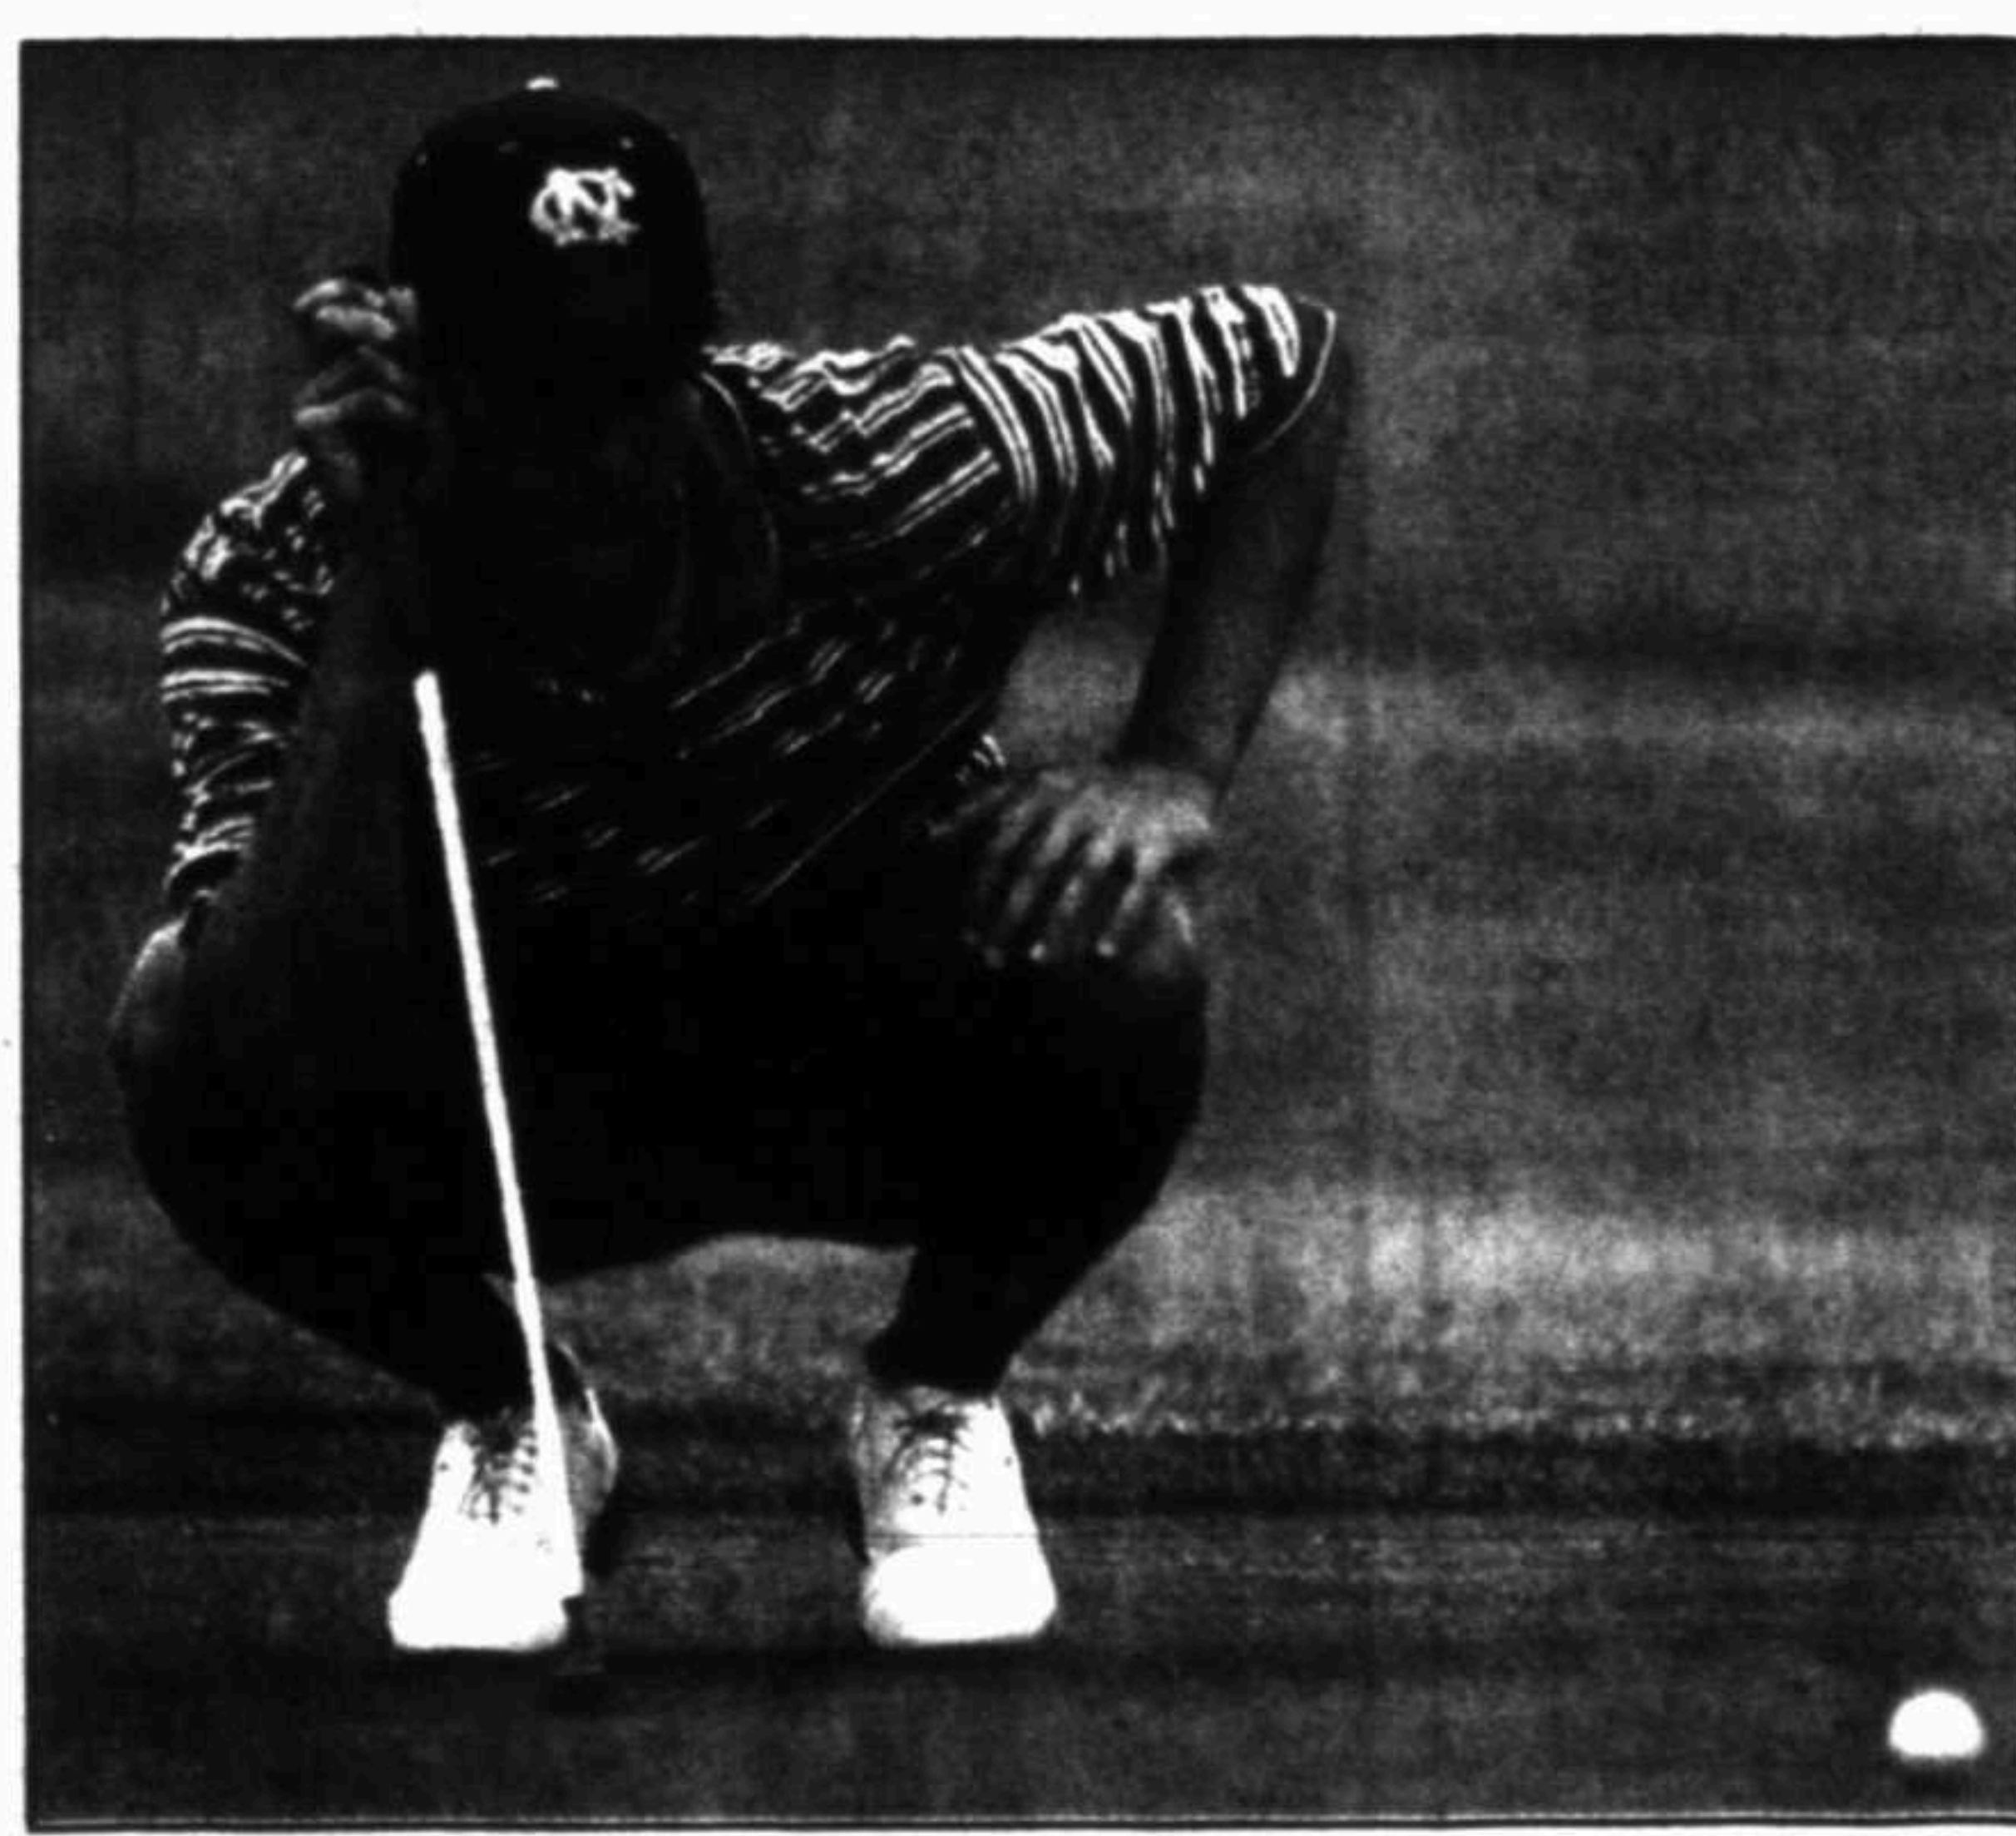

"The games are so tight," Ruff said. "The team that scores first gets the upper hand."

The emotionally charged game ended with the coaches screaming at each other after the Stars killed off a late Buffalo power play.

"I was angry because he was angry at me. We were both emotional. He was yelling at me, I was yelling back," Ruff said.

Belfour, whose goals-against average in the series (1.60) is better than the better-known Hasek's

Green Tree lets only 3 golfers break par

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The first day winner of the Men's West Texas Amateur Championship golf tournament at Green Tree Country Club Thursday may have been the GTCC course itself.

Only three golfers broke par in the 54-player field in the championship flight. Play in lower flights begins today, and the tournament runs through Sunday.

Midland's Tim Phillips, playing out of Hogan Park, had a sound 68, three-under par, to take the first day lead. Brutal pin placements and slick, fresh greens greeted the field, but Green Tree pro Chris Carpenter was still surprised that scores were generally high. "The greens are quick, but I thought there would be much lower scores than we had today," Carpenter said. "I think scores will be much lower today. The pin placements should be easier than today since we have the rest of the field starting play (on Friday)."

Phillips said, "I hit 13 or 14 fairways and chipped well. I was able to get up and down most of the day."

"They had the pins in some cute little places, but I figured that four or five under (par) would be leading. Still, I figured that someone would manage the course a little better than what I did."

Texas overcomes sizzling Clemens

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Texas Rangers used a triple play, four infield hits and Juan Gonzalez's solo homer off a dominating Roger Clemens to beat the New York Yankees 4-2 Thursday night.

On a night when Clemens had 13 strikeouts — including 10 in the first four innings — the Rangers managed nine hits and three runs in seven innings off the Rocket to win their second straight at Yankee Stadium.

Texas had lost seven straight in the Bronx and 21 of 29 overall to the Yankees before winning 3-0 behind Rick Helling on Wednesday night.

Clemens (6-2), who had his best stuff since the Yankees acquired him this spring, lost for the second time in three starts after not losing a decision for more than a year.

Aaron Sele (7-5) wasn't as dominating, but he proved more effective than his former Boston teammate. Sele allowed two runs, six hits and five walks in seven innings to win for the fourth time in five starts. John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 23rd save in 25 chances.

Through four innings, Clemens looked like he might equal — or even surpass — his record of 20 strikeouts in a game. He struck out the side in the first, second and fourth.

The strikeouts dried up after that. He set down one batter in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh innings, while also allowing a run in each inning. Royce Clayton doubled and scored on Mark McLemore's fifth-inning single to tie the game at 1.

Gonzalez, who struck out three times against Clemens, tattooed an eye-level fastball into the left-field seats in the sixth for his 19th homer. His fifth career homer off Clemens tied it at 2.

The Rangers took the lead

when Gregg Zaun reached on an infield single, advanced to third on a bunt and a groundout and scored on a 20-foot roller up the third-base line by Roberto Kelly.

Mark McLemore added an eight-inning sacrifice fly off Ramiro Mendoza.

The Yankees, who entered the game with a 15-inning scoreless streak against the Rangers, ran themselves out of a rally in the second inning.

With Tino Martinez on second and Paul O'Neill on first, Sele ran a full count on Chili Davis. Yankees manager Joe Torre sent the runners, and Davis hit a liner to second baseman McLemore, who threw to shortstop Clayton for the second out.

Clayton threw to first baseman Palmeiro to complete the Rangers' first play since Aug. 8, 1977, against Oakland and just the second since moving to Texas.

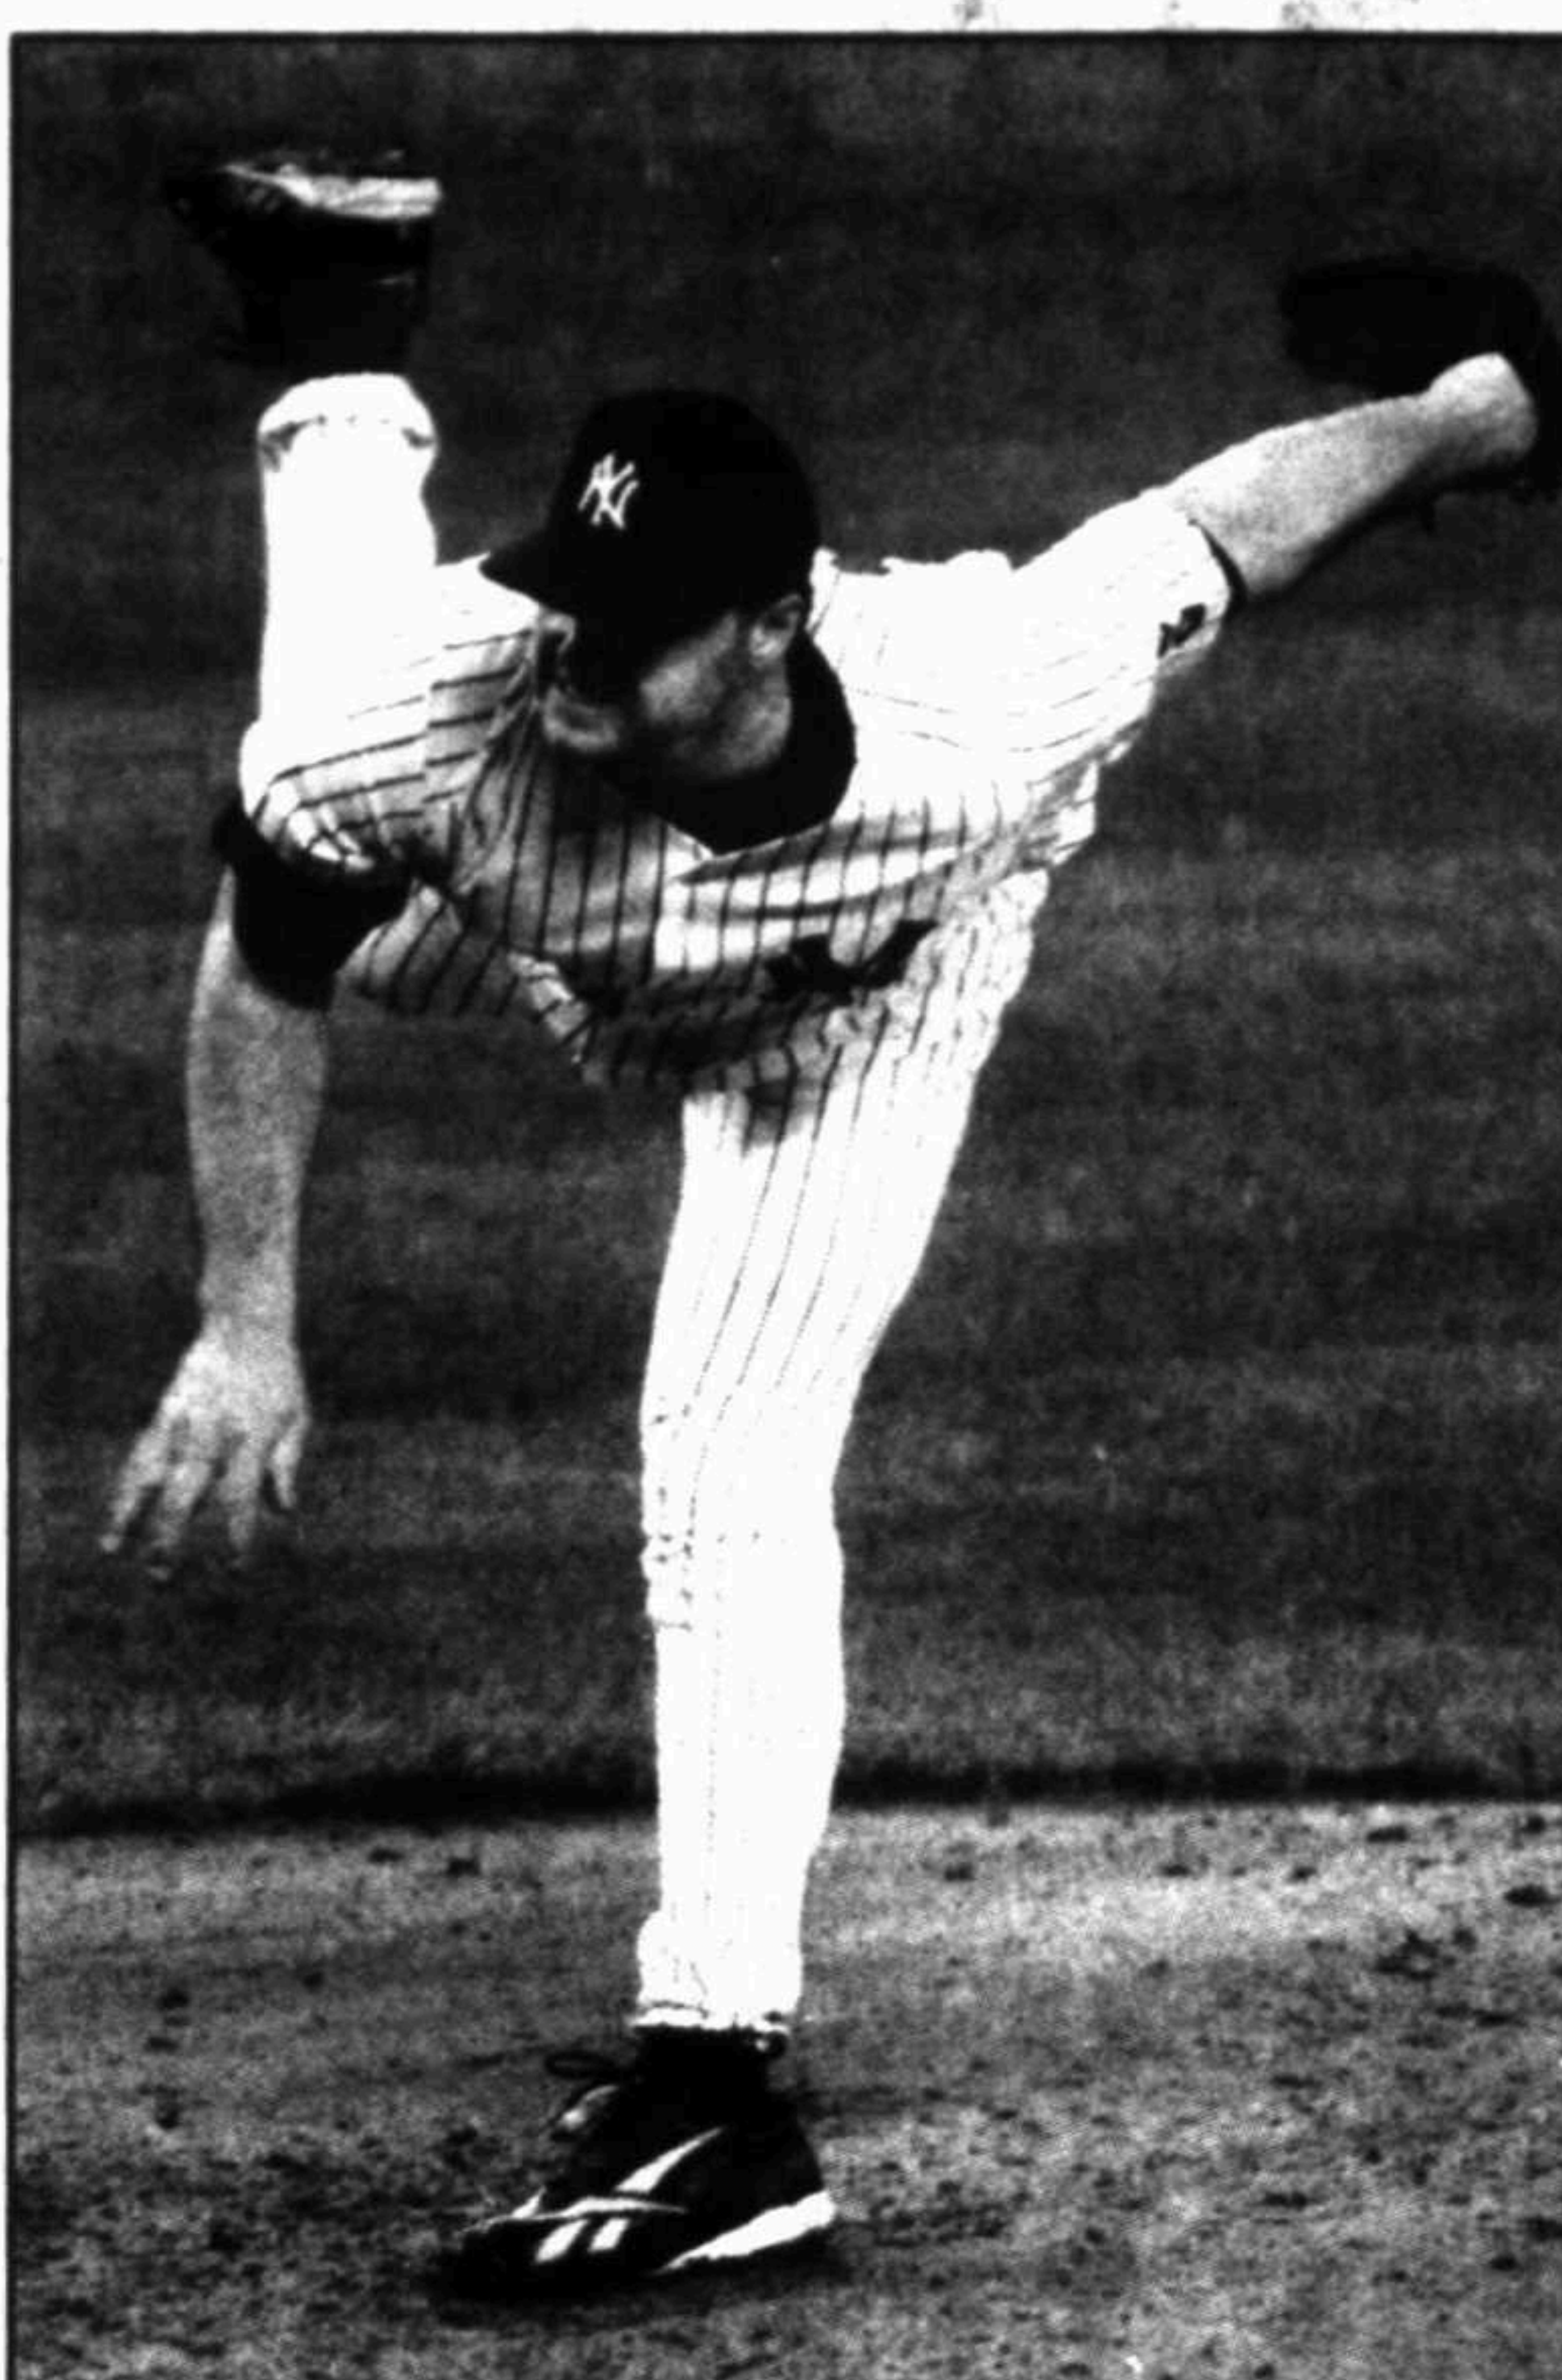

The Yankees finally scored in the third, when Sele walked Bernie Williams with the bases loaded. They took the lead again in the fifth on an RBI single by Tino Martinez.

After O'Neill singled with one out in the eighth, Davis lined to pitcher Mike Munoz, starting an inning-ending double play.

White Sox 9, Orioles 3
CHICAGO — Paul Konerko hit his first career grand slam, Magglio Ordonez and Chris Singleton homered and Baltimore committed five errors as its seven-game losing streak ended.

Albert Belle was 2-for-5, hitting a game-ending popout with the bases loaded in his first trip back to Comerica Park since leaving to sign a $65 million, five-year contract with the Orioles.

Indians 10, Athletics 6
CLEVELAND — Pinch-hitter Jim Thome double to break a 5-1 tie in a five-run seventh, and Roberto Alomar had four RBIs.

New York's Roger Clemens struck out 13 Texas Rangers but still lost, 4-2, Thursday night in Yankee Stadium.

Thome, who got his first career RBI as a pinch hitter, had been hitting just .190 (20-for-105) since May 1.

Twins 8, Red Sox 7
BOSTON — Jacques Jones' two-run double broke a 5-all tie in the fourth as Minnesota Twins averted a four-game sweep. Boston has lost eight of 12.

LaTroy Hawkins (3-7), who has an 8.1 ERA, won despite allowing five runs and eight hits in 5 1/3 innings.

Blue Jays 3, Angels 0
TORONTO — Tony Fernan-

dez homered to raise his major league-leading average to .405 and Kelvin Escobar (6-4) allowed six hits in seven scoreless innings as Toronto completed a three-game sweep.

Anaheim, which had been expected to contend in the AL West, has lost nine of 11 and dropped seven games below .500 (29-36) for the first time this season.

Mariners 4, Tigers 3
DETROIT — David Segui hit a two-run triple in the ninth as the Seattle rallied from a 2-1 deficit.

Rookie Freddy Garcia (8-3) allowed two runs and six hits in eight innings and struck out seven. Jose Mesa got two outs for his 14th save.

'Hounds nail down fourth straight win

Staff Report

EL PASO — Not even a downpour could cool off the Midland RockHounds Thursday night.

Despite a rain delay in the top of the third inning, the 'Hounds' bats didn't suffer, as they won their fourth straight game in El Paso with a 12-5 rout of the El Paso Diablos.

With the victory, the 'Hounds' guaranteed themselves of finishing the first half of the Texas League season with a winning record. At 35-32, the RockHounds finish the first half of their schedule tonight at 8 p.m. CDT in El Paso before returning home to Christensen Stadium to host the Diablos in a six-game series to open the second half of the Texas League schedule.

Before the rains came down, the 'Hounds' had jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the second off El Paso starter Andy Penny. Midland scored five runs in the second, with Justin Bowles and Cody McKay driving in runs on singles to start the rally. Eric Stuckenschneider had a two-run double to left field and scored on a single by Adam Piatt to make it 6-0.

With two outs in the top of the third, it rained at Cohen Stadium, causing a stoppage of play which lasted over a half-hour. Things only got worse for the Diablos when play resumed, as McKay hit a solo home run in the fourth and T.R. Marcinczyk did the same in the following inning to make it 8-0.

The 'Hounds' put icing on the cake with three runs in the sixth to make it 11-0 but it may have come with a price. Piatt, leading the league in homers and RBIs, was hit on the left hand by a pitch from Jeff Andrews. His status for tonight's game is unknown.

Andy Kimball (5-3) came on in relief of Eric DuBose after the rain delay and pitched 3 1/3 innings for the victory. Juan Perez pitched the final 3 2/3 innings in his first appearance for the RockHounds to pick up the save.

NHL: Stars need 1 win

(2.00), stopped 23 shots in his third shutout of these playoffs.

So far, the Dominator is being outdone by a goaltender who previously had a reputation for failing in the clutch. Belfour didn't win a game in his last finals for Chicago in 1992.

"He's played in the shadow of a lot of goaltenders and I think he's taking advantage of this to do something," Sydor said.

Hasek, considered hockey's best goaltender, made 19 saves but also gave up a third-period goal to Pat Verbeek. But Hasek said Sydor's goal decided it.

With Dallas on the power play, Mike Modano threaded a pass from the right circle across the slot to Sydor in the lower left circle. Hasek chose not to come out of the net and cut off the angle, allowing Sydor to lift the puck over the goaltender's left shoulder and under the crossbar at 2:23 of the second.

"He put it in the corner, the one place I couldn't get it," Hasek said. "It was half an inch away, I just couldn't get it."

Sydor didn't have any power-play goals in the playoffs, but his nine during the regular season were second only to Brett Hull's 15 among the Stars.

Modano assisted on both goals and also debuted a black-and-blue line with Hull and Benoit Hogue. Modano has played with a serious wrist injury since Game 3, while Hogue has two torn knee ligaments and Hull missed Game 4 with a strained groin. Hogue played for the first time in the finals.

Modano was fitted with a different cast on his left wrist, and it gave him more mobility.

A key call also proved decisive — not one by the referees, but rather a phone call between Modano and Hitchcock on Thursday night.

"I am able to say some things candidly to him that maybe I can't say to other players," said Hitchcock, who didn't reveal details. "He took it to heart and went about his business today."

Said Modano: "He wanted to talk to me earlier in the day at the rink, but I wasn't in a very approachable mood."

Modano had warned the Stars earlier in the day, after the teams split 2-1 decisions in Buffalo, that Dallas had to be prepared to win 1-0.

Braves' Millwood dominates Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Kevin Millwood took a perfect game into the seventh inning before Craig Biggio singled, and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 8-5 Thursday night.

Millwood (7-4) took a no-hitter into the seventh inning for the second time in three starts — on June 6, Boston's John Valentin broke up the bid with a leadoff single in the seventh at Fenway Park.

Millwood struck out seven of his first nine batters. In all, he allowed two hits — the other was a single to Bill Spiers — in seven innings with a season-high 11 strikeouts and one walk.

He gave up an RBI groundout to Carl Everett and threw a run-scoring wild pitch. Millwood also drove in a pair of runs, going 1-for-2 at the plate. Javy Lopez was 4-for-5 for the Braves.

Mets 4, Cardinals 3
ST. LOUIS — Al Leiter won his third straight start and Robin Ventura went 3-for-4 with a home run as the New York Mets beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Mike Piazza singled and scored twice to extend his hitting streak to 20 games, the current high in the majors. The Mets have won nine of 11 following an eight-game losing streak, and Piazza is 31-for-83 (.369) during the hot streak.

New York manager Bobby Valentine served the final game of his two-game suspension for returning to the dugout following an ejection last week. Bench coach Bruce Benedict managed the team in his absence. Leiter (5-5) gave up three hits and a run in seven innings while striking out a season-high nine.

NL Roundup allowed four runs in 21 innings over the last three games, starting with a June 6 win over the Yankees that stopped the Mets' skid.

Reds 2, Brewers 0
CINCINNATI — Pete Harnisch threw a night's worth of pitches in five innings but held Milwaukee to three hits as Cincinnati beat the Brewers.

Ken Griffey Sr. managed the Reds while Jack McKeon was out of town to be with his wife, who had breast cancer surgery. McKeon is expected back Friday.

Harnisch (6-6) threw 106 pitches, including 70 strikes, but stranded seven runners. He struck out six and walked four. Scott Williamson finished with one-hit relief in a career-high four innings for his seventh save in eight chances.

Phillies 7, Padres 5
SAN DIEGO — Paul Byrd won his 10th game and Bobby Abreu led a 12-hit attack by going 3-for-5 with two RBIs as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres.

Abreu fell a home run short of hitting for the cycle. The Phillies did get homers from Mike Lieberthal and Doug Glanville, both off Woody Williams.

Tony Gwynn had his first two-hit game since May 4 at Philadelphia and is 20 hits short of 3,000. Gwynn had been 9-for-46

(.196) in his last 15 games. This was his fifth game back since missing 19 games with a strained left calf.

Byrd (10-3) improved to 5-0 in six road starts and beat the Padres for the second time this year. He allowed three runs and nine hits in 5 2/3 innings in winning his fourth straight start.

Giants 3, Cubs 2
SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds, struggling since coming off the disabled list last week, broke out of his slump with a game-winning RBI single in the ninth inning.

Bonds, who had struck out in each of his previous three at-bats, singled off Dan Serafini (1-1) with runners on first and second and one out in the ninth. Robb Nen (3-1) pitched one inning for the win.

With one out in the ninth, Marvin Benard singled and Bill Mueller walked. Bonds singled on the first pitch from Serafini, who graduated from the same high school as Bonds — Junipero Serra High School in San Mateo, Calif., about 15 miles south of the Giants' ballpark at Candlestick Point.

Pirates 8, Dodgers 3
LOS ANGELES — Chan Ho Park, pitching for the first time in 12 days following a seven-game suspension, gave up two homers to Brent Brown as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Brown had three RBIs and Brian Giles keyed a five-run seventh inning with a two-run double, helping the Pirates beat the Dodgers for the eighth time in their last nine meetings.

COACH: Corkery goes to S.F. Austin

a good foundation for future Lady Hawks coaches.

"It's not just me that makes the program successful because it's the people here at Howard College and the players that make up the program," Corkery said. "It may sound cliché but it's a team effort. I never took a shot, I never made a basket in the three years here. I hope I have laid a foundation because it was done for me before I came here. Throughout the 90's, Howard College has averaged 27.28 wins a year."

As far as the recruits coming into the program, Corkery said some know and some don't know that he's leaving. Corkery believes that everything will stay status quo and Howard College won't lose any players.

Howard's head men's basketball coach and athletic director Tommy Collins said he hates to see Corkery go but also sees it as a good opportunity for the young coach.

"He's done a great job at Howard College," said Collins about Corkery. "He brought youth and enthusiasm and he disciplined his players very well. We hate to lose him. We'll look for somebody to continue the winning ways we've had at Howard College. It's been one of the most outstanding programs in the country and we'll continue to do so."

Howard College officials said they will be conducting a national search for a new head women's basketball coach.

Corkery becomes the third WJAC coach from the area to leave in the past two months. Earlier this month, Pat Rafferty resigned as head men's basketball coach at Midland College to take an assistant job at the University of Louisville. Back in May, Stephie Thomas Clark, who is married to Odessa Jackalopes coach Joe Clark, resigned her position as head women's basketball coach at Odessa College to spend more time at home with her baby, which is expected this summer. In both instances, assistant coaches were elevated to the head coaching position.

Coach Chan Gailey said his hopes are high.

"We're very excited about the possibility of having Deion on the field," Gailey said. "Hopefully, this contract will get worked out completely and we'll get him signed. His attitude on the field has been very positive, and it looks like it's a win-win situation."

Jones and Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, negotiated a seven-year, $35 million contract that brought Sanders from San Francisco to Dallas in 1995. The pact included a then-record $12.9 million signing bonus as well as 10 incentive clauses that would, if reached, allow Sanders to void his contract's final two years.

Sanders underwent toe surgery April 28. The team trainer said last month that recovery was expected to take another 3-4 months, lasting at least into the exhibition season. Dallas starts the season Sept. 12 at Washington.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, June 18, 1999:
Be sensitive to yourself as well as to others. At times you might feel like you are on a merry-go-round, spinning in circles! Home and personal needs require more attention and care. Others aren't always giving, as they see issues only from their sides. However, this could also describe you! The key to success and to feeling good is not to fight different forces, but to rise above them. Refuse to walk into power struggles, honor who you are, keep communication flowing. If you are single, establishing a relationship could entail getting past feeling stuck by others' demands. If attached, your relationship is challenged to grow past the banal to a more spiritual plane. You can do it! VIRGO anchors you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Roll up your sleeves and get the job done. You are personality plus; others respond to your energy. The ease with which you cruise through errands, calls and work is impressive. You are motivated! Tonight: Don't listen to gossip!
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Your resourcefulness finds solutions. Enthusiasm helps you breeze through your day. There may be no stopping you! Intuition helps you land when a difficult associate throws a tantrum. Listen and think. Be careful with a flirtation; it may not lead where you think! Tonight: Celebrate the weekend.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Another remains difficult and controlling. Your instincts may tell you to retreat and to not deal with this person. Don't be intimidated. Realize another's role in your life. Perhaps you have a control issue that needs to be handled. Only you know for sure! Aim for security first. Tonight: Chill out at home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Communication is active. A boss makes what seems like endless demands. The good news is that you will receive your just rewards. Understand that your energy levels are not endless. Stay in contact with a co-worker who can be contentious. Tonight: Hang out at a favorite spot!
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ An early-morning insight could increase your earnings, if that is what you want. Emphasize both material and emotional assets. Another clearly rebels. Could he be overwhelmed by your charisma, high energy and ability to risk? Refuse to get locked into a power struggle. Tonight: Treat yourself well.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A partner shares an idea. It might not be time to "go public," but evaluate what you expect and want. One-to-one relating brings increased financial gain. Be willing to pull back with a difficult family member. Recognize what you can and cannot control. Tonight: It is your call.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Use the early part of the day to achieve interpersonal objectives. State your limits; if necessary, take some time off. We all need a break, you included. Communication runs amok. You and another simply don't speak the same language. Tonight: Vanish!
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Listen to a friend who has many good ideas. High energy levels have you zipping through work, beaming. You might be more conscious than others about image, networking and getting more of what you want out of life. Still, use caution with finances. Tonight: Where your friends are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could cause yourself unnecessary problems. Avoid conflict with bosses and authority figures. Be aware of tendencies to be bossy or overly demanding. Let go of a need to control others. You'll be delighted by the end result. Tonight: A must appearance.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You have more energy than others are aware of. Push a project to the finish line. Listen to your inner voice. Events could be perceived as tougher than they actually are. Get out of your own way! Remove the obstacles between you and success. Tonight: Go for some escape!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Others clearly are in control. You could either get into a struggle of wills, or you could let them have their way. What's your call? An important relationship forces you to change plans. A friend shows his true colors. Step back and take a hard look. Tonight: Fulfill another's request!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ How well do you handle pressure? You'll find out today! Everyone wants a piece of you. Halt unconscious reactions. A boss pushes you way beyond your limits. Friends make demands and could be disappointed. Knowing who you are helps you make the right choice. Tonight: Out.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

If you consider only the mathematics, every simple finesse has an equal chance of success. But if you take the entire hand into consideration, that is anything but the case.

Despite the double fit, North's bidding was a little aggressive. With only two prime cards, it might have been wiser to take a slower approach. However, there was not that much difference between the chances for three no-trump and six clubs — the par contract is five clubs.

West led the 10 of diamonds, covered by the queen and king and won with the ace. There are finesses available in both black suits. Which should declarer take, and why?

Obviously, declarer cannot afford to take a losing finesse — the defenders will cash a diamond for the setting trick. That means the club finesse is futile. Even if it wins, declarer will still need the spade finesse to avoid having to lose a spade and a diamond trick. But what if the spade finesse wins?

At trick two declarer crossed to the 10 of hearts and led the jack of spades. When that held, declarer repeated the finesse, then discarded dummy's diamond loser on the ace of spades. Declarer could now afford to play the ace of clubs and another to assure the slam against any distributional quirk. Six clubs bid and

Lopez not saying goodbye to movies

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Despite topping the charts, Jennifer Lopez says she hasn't abandoned the silver screen for the music business.

"I'll continue doing both, and I want to do both better," Ms. Lopez said. "I really have a desire to keep striving and doing more."

Ms. Lopez's single "If You Had My Love" is No. 1 on Billboard's Hot 100 list.

During a visit Wednesday to her family's native Puerto Rico, Ms. Lopez said she will begin work on a thriller, "The Cell," in July and plans to star in a romantic comedy, "The Wedding Planner," next year.

Her movie credits include "Selena," "Money Train" and "Out of Sight."

ASCOT, England — It may be the sport of kings, but it's Queen Elizabeth II who's in the winner's circle.

The 73-year-old monarch's horse Blueprint bested a field of 18 in the Duke of Edinburgh stakes at the annual Royal Ascot meet Wednesday.

The horse, a 4-1 favorite ridden by American Gary Stevens, won comfortably by 1 1/2 lengths to net its royal owner $27,659.

The queen beamed as she walked from the royal stand to the winner's enclosure.

Blueprint was the queen's first winner at Royal Ascot since 1995, when Phantom Gold won the Ribblesdale Stakes.

LOS ANGELES — Hall of Fame football player and actor Jim Brown has been arrested on suspicion of threatening his wife.

Brown was taken into custody Tuesday evening after police got a call from his wife. He was freed on $50,000 bail.

On Wednesday, Brown, 63, and his wife, Monique, 25, said outside their Hollywood Hills home that they are still together and are working out their differences.

"I did call 911. I kind of overreacted," Mrs. Brown said. "In those situations, you get emotional and you're not thinking straight. I was in no harm. There was no threat towards me. And that's it."

NEW YORK — Award-winning documentary filmmaker Ken Burns is getting a decade of financial security for upcoming projects.

General Motors Corp. has told Burns it will underwrite a portion of every documentary project he takes on in the next 10 years, and pay for the extensive educational projects that accompany the films.

Burns said the dollar value can't be specified yet because he doesn't know what projects might be involved. But he said the pledge to pay 35 percent of his production costs will provide security for his Florentine Films company and scores of associates who work on his films as free-lancers.

"Having a long-term commitment allows you to do some real long-term planning," Burns told The New York Times.

GM has been the sole corporate underwriter for Burns' earlier public television projects, including "The Civil War" and "Baseball" and the documentary running this fall about suffragists, "Not For Ourselves Alone: The Story of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony."

Burns is working on a 20-hour series for 2000 called "Jazz." Future projects include a film about Mark Twain and possibly documentaries on the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and the National Parks system.

PARIS — The publisher of Jacques-Yves Cousteau's biography claims he has a 1941 letter that reveals an anti-Semitic side to the undersea explorer.

Portions of the letter were reproduced in the daily France-Soir on Thursday, when Cousteau was to be saluted posthumously by his successor at the prestigious Academie Francaise. Cousteau died two years ago at 87.

The letter was provided to the newspaper by Bernard Violet, who says it is addressed to Cousteau's best friend at the time.

It was written shortly after Cousteau was transferred to Marseille to work with French naval intelligence against the Nazi occupation.

In it, Cousteau complained of having trouble finding proper housing for his family. He said "there will not be a decent apartment until all those ignoble kikes burdening us are kicked out."

Asked if Cousteau might not simply be making a joke, Violet told the newspaper no.

"The only attenuating circumstance, if I dare say that, is the ordinary anti-Semitism that France was bathed in during the 1930s and that his family — from Bordeaux's petite bourgeoisie — shared," he said.

Mickelson hears no beeps — just birdies — on 1st day

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

PINEHURST, N.C. — The cheers followed Phil Mickelson around Pinehurst No. 2 until he walked off the 18th green with a share of the lead in the first round of the U.S. Open.

Even better was what he didn't hear.

No beeps, no baby.

Stashed away in a side pocket of his golf bag is a pager that links Mickelson to an expectant wife in Arizona and word that their first child is on the way. That event, he said, is far more important to him than the pursuit of his first major championship.

Amy Mickelson has a special code to punch in should she go into labor. Her husband has a private plane waiting should the beeper go off.

"I wouldn't miss it for the world," he said.

That pledge was put to test on Thursday when Mickelson took advantage of damp, vulnerable Pinehurst for a 3-under 67, putting him in a four-way tie with David Duval, Billy Mayfair and Paul Goydos.

Three more days like this and Mickelson might finally get his first major championship.

Unless...

"It's not worth the tournament," he insisted. "As important as the U.S. Open is to me and every other player in the field, this is the birth of my first child."

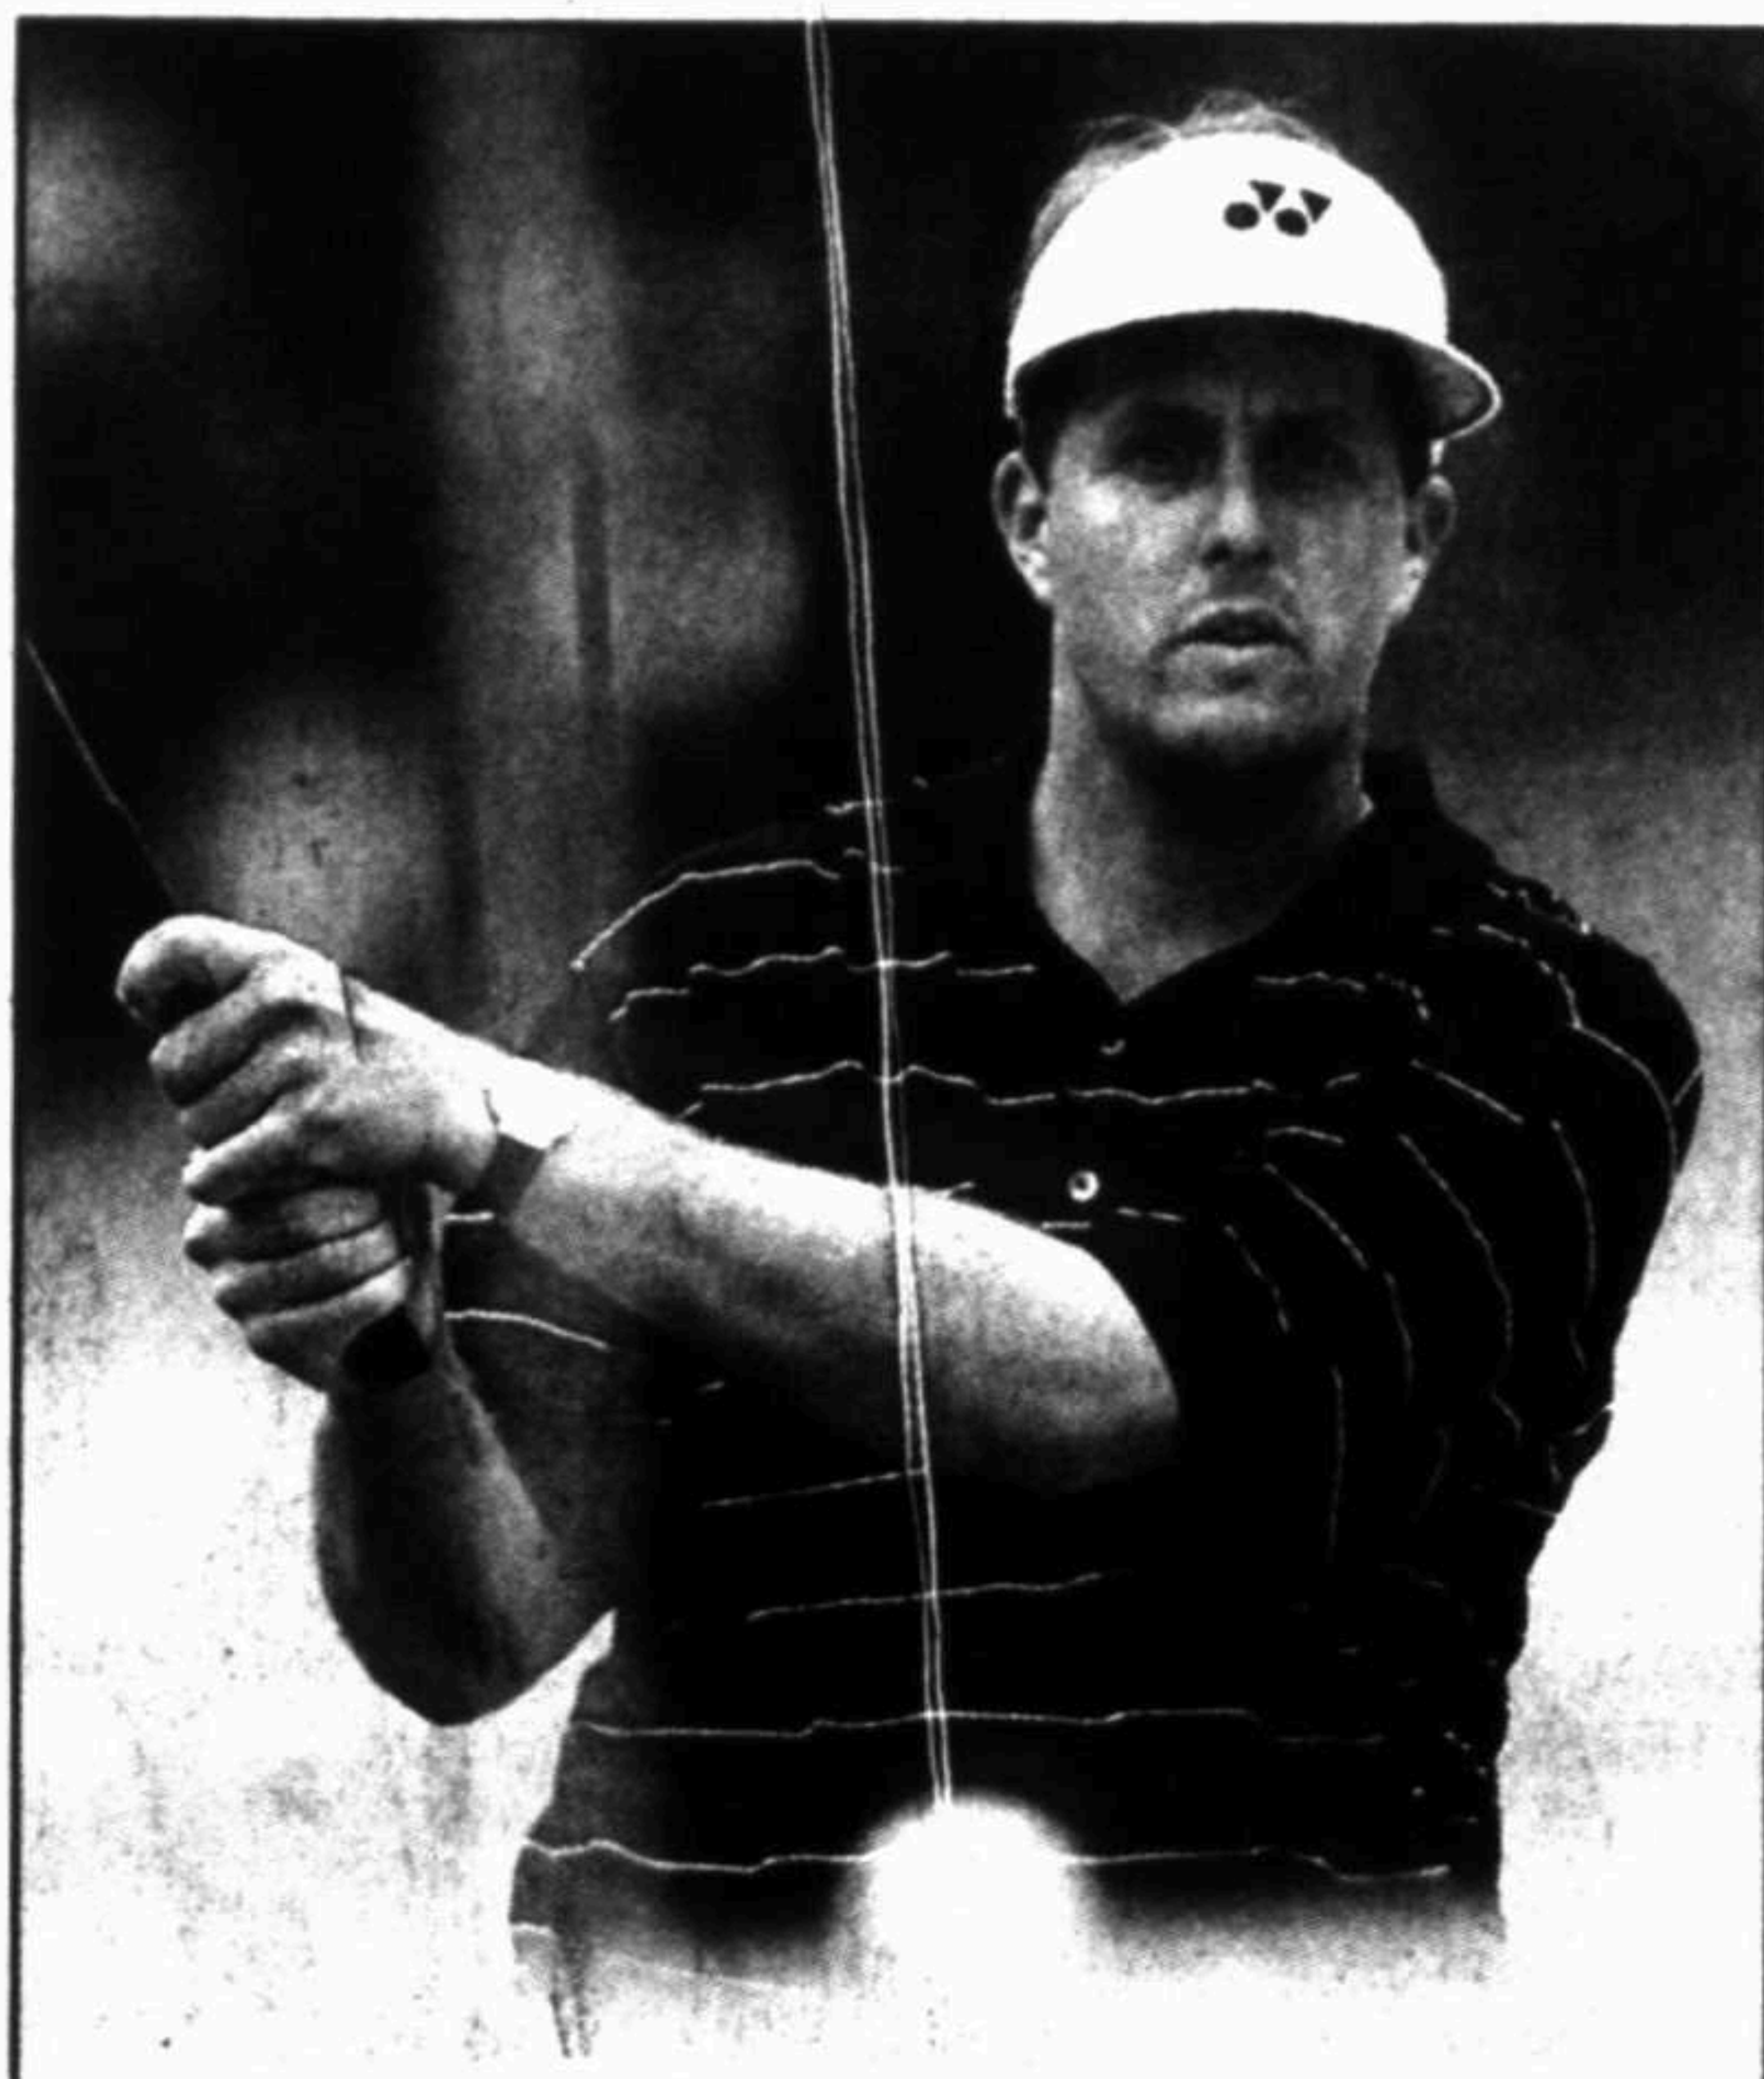

Of course, there's a lot of golf left before Sunday afternoon, and Pinehurst No. 2 will only get harder, faster and firmer now that the rain has cleared out. And if Mickelson takes his mind off his family, some names right behind him can lead to a few sleepless nights.

Tiger Woods dazzled the gallery with two birdies on the last two holes for a 68. He was joined there by Payne Stewart and a suddenly surprising contender, John Daly.

"Most U.S. Opens are packed after the first round," Woods said. "It's the second or third round that separates the guys who are hitting it well or managing their games and their emotions."

That may be a tough chore over the next 54 holes. With soft greens that could be attacked, the best anyone could muster was a 67.

More Sports/12C

Phil Mickelson watches his ball roll close to the hole on No. 7 at the Pinehurst Resort & Country Club's No. 2 course in Pinehurst, N.C. during Thursday's first round of the U.S. Open.

"This is as tame as we'll play the golf course all week," Stewart said. "If you really didn't take advantage of the golf course today, you really have your work cut out for you."

Justin Leonard, Hal Sutton and Vijay Singh were at 69 and among 23 players who broke par in the first round. Davis Love III was at 70.

Those who have some catching up to do include Ernie Els and Colin Montgomerie (72), Greg Norman and Tom Lehman (73) and defending champion Lee Janzen (74).

Duval, who burned his right thumb and forefinger making coffee six days ago, apparently is a quick healer. He breezed through Pinehurst with Hogan-like precision on his way to a bogey-free round, the first time he has broken par in the first round of a U.S. Open.

"I was not able to practice quite like I would have liked, but there are times when that's good," Duval said. "When I did finally hit balls on Tuesday, everything was where I wanted it to be."

After one round, everything is in place for what could shape up to be a thrilling next three days, perhaps even the long-awaited duel between Woods and Duval.

A winner in his last two starts, Woods recovered from consecutive bogeys with two big par saves and two thrilling birdies — a 7-iron that almost went in the hole on the par-3 17th, and an 18-foot birdie putt on the 18th. Like Duval, it was the first time Woods has been near the lead after the first round of a U.S. Open.

"I didn't play my best, but I hung in there and made a lot of saves," Woods said. "In order to win a U.S. Open, you have to do that."

GOLF: Phillips holds one-shot advantage

(From 1C)

Phillips turned in his scorecard and headed to the house to watch some of the U.S. Open on TV. He didn't even check the WT leaderboard before he left and didn't know he was in the lead until he was called at home.

"I guess 68 was pretty good," Phillips said. "I know one thing, I'll take three more of them right now and be very pleased."

Phillips owns a one-stroke lead over Fort Worth's Craig McAlpine, who played his high school golf at Fort Worth Country Day.

"I'm not in college right now, but I'm thinking about it for next year," McAlpine said. "I'm just playing full-time golf right now."

"The key for me today was that I was able to keep the ball in play for the most part and I played the par 3's well with two birdies."

Doug Noah, the current GTCC club champion, was the only other golfer to break par with a 1-under 70 in a round that he described as steady, but unspectacular.

"The golf course is in great shape. I three-putted a green late in the round and that was a disappointment for me," Noah said. "I was really surprised by the scores. I thought they would be a lot better. Just three people in this field under par has to be a surprise."

Four players stand at even-par 71 and all have local ties. Bobby Welborn, Jeff Moses and Mac McGee all play out of GTCC while Austin Burk recently graduated from Odessa Permian, where he was the District 4-5A medalist this past spring.

Burk is also the only lefty in the field. He admitted that it can sometimes be a problem being left-handed in golf.

"You have to order most of your equipment and then you have to learn to like it when you get it," Burk said. "I guess I just never learned to stand on the right side of the ball."

Magee, who had three birdies, was close to coming up with a much bigger round.

"I hit a lot of balls close, but just didn't make anything happen with the putter," Magee said.

John Castillo, who played in Magee's threesome, added, "If Mac hits some putts, he would have killed the course."

Moses was 1-under after nine, but a double bogey hit him on No. 10 and he never was able to get the strokes back after lipping the cup on four straight putts on the back side.

Defending WT champion Michael Pruitt misfired with a 77 Thursday and is nine strokes off the pace. Pruitt won the title last year at Hillcrest Country Club in Lubbock, his home course.

"I'm just really not into this right now," said Pruitt, who now toils for the University of North Texas golf team. "I really didn't want to be here and almost didn't enter, but I'm here and have to make the best of it."

Pruitt owns a significant mark in the Texas high school ranks. He won four state medalist titles while playing for Class 2A Idalou. UNT this past season gained regional status with the freshman Pruitt on the team.

Brian Williams, who played at McLennan Community College this school year, had a 72. He has played in several tournaments against Midland College.

Thursday's results from the Men's West Texas Amateur Championship golf tournament being held through Sunday at Green Tree Country Club. Note: Only championship flight players played on Thursday. The rest of the field begins today.

Oil rebounds

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices bounced back on the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday, a day after taking a dive on concerns about abundant supplies.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in July rose 25 cents to $18.19 per barrel.

The gains reversed a tumble the day before, which came on the heels of a report from the American Petroleum Institute showing that oil supplies rose sharply last week. But oil prices rebounded Thursday as traders bought back what they saw to be oversold contracts.

Unleaded gasoline rose 0.80 cent to 53.16 cents per gallon, while July home heating oil rose 1.07 cents to 45.38 cents a gallon.

Natural gas fell 4.2 cents to $2.285 per 1,000 cubic feet. In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for delivery in August rose 29 cents to $16.76 per barrel.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell against most major currencies Thursday as Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's comments suggesting an interest rate increase may be coming were in line with market expectations.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0339, up from $1.0305 late Wednesday. The dollar fell to 119.25 Japanese yen from 120.43 yen.

Greenspan testified before Congress and suggested that the central bank was still considering raising interest rates despite few signs of inflation. Just a day earlier, the government reported that the consumer price index held steady in May after a 0.7 percent rise in April. But Greenspan said the Fed may take "pre-emptive" action to protect the economy from overheating.

Stocks rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks pushed higher Thursday after Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan indicated that only a modest interest rate hike may be needed to keep inflation well-tamed.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 56.68 at 10,841.63, building on a nearly 190-point climb Wednesday when consumer prices showed little sign of inflation.

Broader stock indexes also advanced. Shrugging off early disappointing news from Compaq Computer, the technology-dominated Nasdaq composite index gained 26.32 to 2,544.15. On Wednesday, the index rose 103.16 — its largest one-day point gain.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 9.49 Thursday to 1,339.90.

In his most direct recent comments on interest rates, Greenspan told Congress that while inflation remains in check, the Fed should consider taking pre-emptive action to avert any threat to continued economic growth.

To the markets' relief, the Fed chairman said a modest increase now could eliminate the need for more severe moves at a later date. The Fed's Open Market Committee, which sets the central bank's interest rate policy, meets June 29-30.

The Fed has warned recently it might raise interest rates to guard against a surge in inflation. The annual rate of inflation felt by consumers so far this year is 2.6 percent, compared to a 1.6 percent rise for all of 1998.

Senate ponders energy loans

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The U.S. Senate is considering a $1.5 billion package that would guarantee loans to steel and energy companies.

The program, originally for steel companies hurt by low prices, was part of an emergency spending bill to pay for Kosovo operations but was withdrawn during negotiations with the House. During negotiations, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., insisted that small oil and gas firms receive a similar loan program.

Under the legislation, a $500 million fund would be established and oil and gas producers and service companies could borrow up to $10 million each from the fund. Steel companies could borrow between $25 million and $250 million from a $1 billion fund.

Local oilmen support the plan, but Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, thinks more work needs to be done on the legislation before he can support it, a spokesman said.

Larry Neal, press secretary for Gramm, said that the senator's main concerns are that the legislation would require $270 million in taxpayer dollars to back the loans and he opposes taking those funds from the Social Security Trust Fund. He is also concerned about portions of the bill that concern the steel industry, believing those measures are an effort by the White House to establish industrial policy for the steel industry.

Thursday afternoon the Senate adopted three Gramm-sponsored amendments that improved the measure for energy companies. First, the "emergency" designation was removed, reducing the chances that taxpayer funds would come from Social Security.

Second, the minimum loan amount was eliminated, making smaller corporations and partnerships eligible for government-backed loans. The minimum loan amount had been set at $250,000.

Third, the requirement that a business be incorporated was eliminated.

"Many companies in the oil industry are partnerships, family-owned or sole proprietorships that haven't had the need to incorporate," Neal noted. "There are no small steel companies and they're all incorporated, so the net effect is these changes will benefit oil and gas producers."

He said Gramm hopes the legislation will continue to be improved to the point he can support it.

"I think it's a good plan," said Morris Burns, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Smaller producers, he said, would especially benefit because the low oil prices have robbed them of the collateral they need to get bank loans.

Independent producer Jim Henry, president of Henry Petroleum, said that "the oil industry has had so much money taken out of it in the last 18 months with prices being so low, we have no money left. The industry doesn't have the excess dollars to invest in drilling and working over wells."

The 50 percent drop in drilling and service rig utilization was because of the lack of capital to fund activities and the outlook for energy prices didn't justify the projects. Now, the price outlook is better but there's no capital, he said.

"If we can get government-backed loans, we can be active," he said, calling the plan a step in the right direction.

Prisoners John Sigler, right, and Joe Callahan, center, make yo-yos for Flambeau Products Corp. Wednesday at the Wabash Valley Correctional Facility in Carlisle, Ind. McCracklin embosses the Duncan Imperial logo on the green yo-yos while Callahan and Sigler tap the two halves together before a hydraulic press finishes the job. The assembly line is a joint venture between Flambeau, the maker of Duncan yo-yos, and the Indiana Department of Correction's prison industry program, known as PEN Products.

Senate GOP renews push to let workers comp time

By Libby Quaid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans on Thursday renewed a drive to let workers choose time off instead of overtime pay, saying their comp-time legislation should be part of the coming debate over raising the minimum wage.

The measure would make it easier for employees to pick compensatory time off — 1 1/2 hours for every hour of overtime work — rather than the decades-long time-and-a-half overtime pay standard.

President Clinton vetoed the bill in 1996 because of concerns that employers could discriminate against workers who choose overtime pay instead of time off. Senate Democrats filibustered the measure in the last Congress.

Working parents, especially mothers, need the flexible working hours to help balance the demands of their jobs with the needs of their families, said Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo. "No matter where you are, unless you're in the government, which already has some of these programs, you find people suffering from this trauma," said Ashcroft, the bill's chief sponsor.

"Flexible job schedules could allow a working mother to leave work early on Friday for a child's doctor's appointment, and then make up the missed time the next week without suffering a loss of pay," he said.

Ashcroft said he has made changes to make the measure more palatable to Democrats. The bill sets up an 80-hour, two-week schedule, but unlike past proposals, it sets a 50-hour limit for any given workweek. Unused time off would be converted to cash at the end of each year.

Ashcroft and Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., one of more than 30 co-sponsors, said the approaching debate over boosting the minimum wage is an ideal setting for another attempt to pass comp-time legislation.

Democrats, including Missouri Rep. William Clay and Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, are pushing to phase in over two years a $1 increase in the minimum wage to $6.15 an hour.

"Frankly, I suspect that if there is a minimum wage proposal that is made, it would be appropriate to think about things like this in conjunction with it," said Ashcroft.

The last wage increase, 90 cents an hour, was implemented in two stages, in 1996 and 1997. Republicans are facing potentially unstoppable demands for another increase this year. House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, conceded in April that Congress may act this year to raise the minimum wage.

Microsoft ups campaign to solicit consumers' trial opinions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Microsoft Corp. has discreetly added a message to the Internet site visited by millions of people who use its Windows software urging them to write to Congress about the government's antitrust case.

The move suggests an intensified public relations campaign by Microsoft as trial testimony nears an end and pressure grows to resume settlement negotiations with government lawyers. It comes days after Microsoft's billionaire chairman, Bill Gates, testified before a sympathetic Senate panel and met privately with key lawmakers.

The affected Microsoft Web site draws millions of visitors each month to update their copies of Windows, the operating system software that runs most of the world's personal computers.

When Microsoft's lawyer showed the site to the trial judge during a courtroom demonstration last week, the message was not there.

This week, however, Microsoft added the note urging visitors to its "Windows Update" site to "click here" for details about how its legal fight with the Justice Department and 19 states might affect them and how to write about the lawsuit to their elected officials.

"I suspect ... they didn't want the judge to see this," said Justice Department lawyer David Boies.

Microsoft said Thursday it added the message to Windows Update in what it described as a routine change. It said it wasn't trying to prevent U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson from seeing it on the page during last week's demonstration.

"I don't think it had anything to do with that," spokesman Jim Cullinan said.

"... I don't think there's anything conspicuous about this. This was being updated in the normal part of business."

The message already had been included for at least six months on other Web pages within Microsoft's vast network, but fewer people than expected had subscribed to the company's occasional newsletter about the trial.

"We're trying to get the word out that this is available," Cullinan said.

Government lawyers said the new message on the site was inappropriate.

"It's another of the many ways in which they use their market power to advance their own causes," said Stephen Houck of the New York attorney general's office, the lawyer for the states. "They're using a position they've obtained as a result of what we believe to be illegal acts to propagate a political message, and we find that troubling."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Don't choose investments based on what's been hot recently

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am a state employee who will be able to retire in less than two years with a good retirement plan. Our state also allows us to access a deferred compensation plan, 401(k) and 457 plans with several choices of mutual funds. I plan to work more than 30 years and will probably retire in three to five years. Until a few weeks ago, I had all funds going into the Vanguard Institutional Index Fund. I changed and am now putting 50 percent of my funds into Vanguard and 50 percent in American Century Ultra simply because it looked as though American Century Ultra was doing better than the Vanguard fund. Do you think this was wise?

Tyson

decisions, not after! For someone so close to retiring, you're taking big risks shifting half of your retirement account into a fund you know little about except that it recently had high performance numbers.

Just as you shouldn't drive your car by looking in the rearview mirror, you shouldn't be choosing investments based upon what has recently been hot. Often, yesterday's stars turn into tomorrow's losers. In an analysis which I performed using data from Morningstar, I found that a whopping 80 percent of the No. 1 top-performing stock and bond funds in each of the past 15 years subsequently performed worse over the next three to 10 years than the average fund in their peer group.

The American Century Ultra fund is an aggressive stock fund. When the market is going its way, it can rack up great performance. However, this fund has sometimes gotten clobbered when the tide turns.

While I don't make predictions, I can tell you the high-flying growth stocks Ultra buys, such as those in the technology sector, appear to have had their day in the sun. As I have written about numerous times in this column in recent months, brand-name companies selling at lofty PEs were selling at unreasonable levels and were due for a fall.

Being so close to retiring, I don't think you should put all of your retirement money into stocks. You should have at least 20 percent to as much as 40 percent in bonds. As for the money that you put into stock funds, I would choose several good funds, including those that invest overseas.

Q: Out of the blue, my home mortgage company sent me an offer to reduce my mortgage interest rate to 7 percent. It has been 10 percent for 20 years. I have tried to get a new mortgage from time to time with other companies, but they were not interested because it was for less than $50,000. I currently have a balance of $20,000. I called my current mortgage lender, and it said this offer was being made because of a customer-retention program. It seemed pretty plain and straightforward, so I signed up for it.

However, I still have a feeling that I'm violating the rule: If it seems too good to be true, it probably is. What say you?

A: Given the recent level of mortgage rates, I think the deal that your current lender offered you was fair and not "too good to be true."

Whenever you're in the market for a mortgage, you need to shop around. If you had persisted in prior years, you should have been able to find lenders willing to make a loan of the size you desired. Likewise, when you got a new mortgage proposal recently, to know whether it was a good, mediocre or bad deal you should have shopped around.

Flu forces Williams out of Wimbledon

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Serena Williams has the flu and will miss Wimbledon. And sister Venus is also fighting the bug.

Serena's sudden withdrawal Thursday ended the possibility of a fourth-round showdown between the sisters and left Wimbledon — which begins Monday — without one of its marquee players.

"She has a terrible case of the flu," her father, Richard Williams, told the WTA Tour. "I took her to the doctor this morning and he told her it was best to rest and take it easy."

"Serena wanted to go to Wimbledon and give it a try ... but the doctor said again it was better if she rested."

The 17-year-old player, seeded No. 10, was replaced by Russia's Anna Kournikova, who was the highest ranked player without a spot in the top 16. Kournikova will take Williams' place in the draw as the 17th-seeded player.

A year ago it was Kournikova — another teen-age tennis starlet — who withdrew on the eve of the tournament with a sprained thumb.

Richard Williams described No. 6-seeded Venus — who turned 19 on Thursday — as feeling "a little sluggish" but optimistic of being at full strength for the two-week grass-court classic.

WTA Tour officials were startled by the withdrawal after getting a statement from Wimbledon on Thursday, saying only that Williams was ill and would not play.

Reached later by the WTA Tour, Williams said both daughters had been fighting the flu but Serena's case was worse.

"She's been sick for the last two or three days, but last night she had a bad fever and the doctor believes it will go on for at least a week," he said. "Venus is a little sluggish because they hang out a lot together, but we're hoping she'll be all right."

Tennis Roundup

He said he didn't expect Serena to travel to England.

The Williams sisters also pulled out of doubles, where they were seeded No. 4. The sisters always play doubles together and Venus has been outspoken about not breaking up the partnership.

Kournikova reaches semifinals

EASTBOURNE, England — Anna Kournikova stayed on course for her return next week to Wimbledon, beating France's Nathalie Dechy in the quarterfinals Thursday at Eastbourne.

Kournikova, who won 6-3, 7-6 (7-5), will face third-seeded Nathalie Tauziat, runner-up at Wimbledon a year ago. She lost the first seven games, then came back to beat Russia's Elena Likhovtseva 0-6, 6-2, 6-1.

A year ago in the quarterfinals here, Kournikova beat Steffi Graf, but strained her right thumb, which kept her from playing at Wimbledon.

There were no problems Thursday as the 18-year-old Russian chased her first WTA Tour title.

Krajicek wins, Van Roost upset

DEN BOSCH, Netherlands — Dutchman Richard Krajicek, the 1997 champion, advanced to the quarterfinals of the Heineken Trophy Thursday, beating Italy's Vincenzo Santopadre 6-3, 7-6 (7-1).

Krajicek will face fifth-seeded Tommy Haas of Germany Friday. Haas beat Daniel Vacek of the Czech Republic 7-6 (8-6), 6-1.

Defending champion Patrick Rafter of Australia also will face Dane Kenneth Carlsen Friday.

No. 1 Rusedski beats No. 7 Hewitt

NOTTINGHAM, England — Top-seeded Greg Rusedski of Britain reached the semifinals of the Nottingham Open Thursday, beating 18-year-old Australian Lleyton Hewitt 6-4, 7-5.

Mayfield still chasing 2nd NASCAR victory

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Jeremy Mayfield hadn't finished celebrating the first win of his career when the rain fell in torrents.

Was this an omen? Perhaps not.

But a year after the abbreviated ceremony in the winner's circle at Pocono International Raceway, he is still looking for victory No. 2.

"You never forget your first win, but we were hoping it would be one of a blur of Victory Lane memories by now," Mayfield said. "It's time to win again."

He'll try to do that Sunday, when he defends his title in the Pocono 500. If anything, he is more anxious now than he was as a winless driver on the Winston Cup circuit.

"I had a lot of people tell me the first win was the hardest, but I wonder about that," Mayfield said on the eve of qualifying for the race. "Right now, the second win is the hardest."

Mayfield is confident, not only because he's back at the scene of his only triumph in six years on the circuit. He figures he's ready to break out, and finds this portion of the schedule to his liking.

After some difficult times — which resulted in the departure of crew chief Paul Andrews and his replacement by Peter Sospenzo — the Penske-Krueff Ford team is showing signs of renewed vigor.

After winning a year ago, Mayfield was leading in the points race before fading to finish eighth. This season, after climbing two positions in three races under Sospenzo, he is 11th.

"The top-10s are starting to come consistently again," said Mayfield, who finished among the elite in a non-points race. The Winston, then followed with similar efforts in the Coca-Cola 600 and the MBNA 400 before a late pit stop cost him a top-10 spot last Sunday in the Kmart 400. "We're on some good tracks for me and for this team like Pocono, Dover, Michigan and Daytona."

The 2 1/2-mile Pocono triangle suited Mayfield well last year, when he led this race for 122 of 200 laps.

So, Mayfield is hungry for victory. But Mark Martin and Jeff Gordon — who combined to win 20 of 33 races last season — also are anxious.

"We should be strong at Pocono," said Martin's crew chief, Jimmy Fennig.

Although Pocono is one of only four tracks on which Martin has not won, he has 16 top-10 finishes in 24 starts. After seven victories last year, Martin has only one in 1999.

"We may be fourth in the points now, but hope to move up before long," Fennig said.

Gordon has farther to go than Martin if he wants to reach the top of the standings. Despite three victories, Gordon is sixth — 349 points behind leader Dale Jarrett — because of accidents and mechanical failures.

But Pocono has been good to Gordon, a two-time winner of the event who also took the second of the two annual races on the mountaintop last year. He led 164 laps in the Pennsylvania 500.

"We've got to worry about running good and winning races," said Gordon, who figures that's the only way to transform what now seems like an insurmountable deficit into a legitimate run at a record-tying third straight championship.

FOOTBALL: Subia, Mojo's Williams make Super Team has Texas Football believing Lee has the explosiveness on offense to warrant the top spot. The only returnee on defense is senior defensive back Kody Matthews.

Lee's 6-foot-3, 320-pound senior offensive lineman Steve Subia also made Texas Football's second team Super Team. Subia is listed as one of the top offensive line prospects in the state.

Highlighting the Super Team was Permian senior wide receiver Roy Williams, who was tabbed as the offensive player of the year. At 6-4, 205 pounds, Williams should be the year's most coveted college recruit in West Texas.

Also on the Super Team list was Abilene High's senior running back Arturo "Sneazy" Beltran, who garnered second team honors.

Some other Texas Football predictions: Big Spring was picked to win District 5-4A followed by Snyder and Andrews. The Steers have eight offensive and six defensive starters returning from a 4-7 playoff team.

The Lamesa Golden Tornados, with seven starters returning on each side of the ball, are favored in District 3-3A followed by Seminole and Colorado City.

Over in District 4-3A, perennial playoff team Monahans Lobos are the favorites as they return six starters on each side of the football. Crane was picked second, while Greenwood was tabbed third in the district.

Despite losing a truckload of starters on both sides of the ball, the Stanton Buffaloes were picked as the District 3-2A favorites followed by Seagraves and Post — all of whom made the playoffs in 1998. The Buffs are also ranked at No. 18 in the preseason top 25 Class 2A poll. Omaha Peewee, the defending Division I state champion is No. 1. Seagraves is at No. 20, while Post is at No. 21.

Texas Football picked Wink as the favorite in District 7A followed by Rankin and Fort Davis.

In the private school ranks, Midland Christian is favored in TAPPS (Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools) District 3, while Trinity, a state finalist in 1998, returns loaded as the TCAL (Texas Christian Athletic League) West favorite.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to provide you quality & effective classified advertising!

GENERAL INFORMATION:

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to revise, redact, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or audio-text formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself - consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome your suggestions or comments. Please call: Brandi Alexander, Telephone Sales Supervisor, 682-6813.

HOUSEHOLD ITEMS:

Do you have furniture, appliances, or other unwanted household items? If so, don't let these items take up precious storage space. We've got 3 economical ways for you to turn clutter into cash!

1 Super Seller I
We'll advertise your household item (priced under $350) for...
7 DAYS $10⁵⁰
15 WORDS

2 Super Seller II
We'll advertise your household item (priced under $150) for...
7 DAYS $5⁵⁰
15 WORDS

Write an ad with 15 words to describe your household furniture or appliance and call today!

3 Free Bee - That's right, we'll advertise your household item (priced under $50) for 4 days absolutely FREE!
4 DAYS FREE
15 WORDS

(Mon. - Thurs.) Submit your 15 word ad in writing (please fax it, mail it, or bring it in).

All of our specials are for private, non-commercial individuals only and some specials require pre-payment, some do not. One item per ad please. One FREE BEE per family per week. Call 682-6222 for complete details.

AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE:

1 Sure Sell - 20 WORDS $29⁹⁵
Advertise anything on wheels, until it sells. That's right, everyday, as long as it takes!
Think of 20 words to describe your vehicle (including the price) and call us today!

2 Real Wheel Deal - 20 WORDS $25⁵⁰
Advertise anything on wheels, with a photo, for 14 days. You'll get 24 words to describe your vehicle. You can bring a photo to us or we'll take one for you! Call us today for details.

3 Sell It In 10 - 4 LINES $20⁵⁰
Advertise anything on wheels for 10 days. In the unlikely event that it doesn't sell, we'll run it for 10 more days FREE! If it still doesn't sell, we'll run it 10 more days FREE if you drop the price 10%. You'll get 4 lines to describe your vehicle (that's about 18 words, including the price). If you would like more information in your ad, each additional line is only $5.

All of our specials are for private, non-commercial individuals only and some specials require pre-payment, some do not. One item per ad please. Call 682-6222 for complete details.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222,
Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. - 6 p.m.

A Friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

- 1. Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.
- 2. Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.
- 3. Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.
- 4. Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item such as "Solve" or "Guitar" rather than "Kammore" or "Gibson". "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

HAPPY ADS: Happy Birthday! Congratulations! Welcome Home! Graduation Day!

Surprise your child, parent, or special friend with a Happy Ad!

For only $42.00, we'll help you design something special. Include a photo from the past or present at no additional charge!

Ads containing art or photos need to be in our office two working days before the ad is to be published and we ask that you pay in advance.

New Arrivals - Announce the birth of your precious newborn for only $18.00! We'll help you create a keepsake and publish it on any day you choose. You'll get 3" inches of space to announce Baby's name, birthdate, and more.

In Memory Of - Publish a special memorial, to mark the passing of a loved one, for family & friends to keep. Include a poem, prayer, and/or the names of all who care.

Card Of Thanks - ads are also available. Take this opportunity to thank everyone who brought food, sent flowers, or was there for you when you needed them most. We'll help you design a respectful, thoughtful ad. Call for details!
