Gourmet Midland set to spice up community

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Neither falling oil prices or world events have discouraged numerous Midland food establishments from their plans to participate in the transformation of Midland Center into a sidewalk cafe Thursday for the city's second annual Gourmet Midland.

"Gourmet Midland is a celebration of the culinary arts in the form of a food fair," says Shawna Rust, manager of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Convention and Visitor's Bureau. "Last year was the first year for this event and bakeries, hotel restaurants, steak houses, dairy products distributors, speciality restaurants and private clubs participated to the delight of over 500 guests.

"This year, despite our local economic climate, we have encountered enthusiasm from our merchants. In fact, four food establishments contacted us about our food fair. Last year we had 13 booths, and this year we have 21."

One of numerous events being held Thursday through May 24 during the third annual Celebration of the Arts, Gourmet Midland is co-sponsored by Midland Arts Assembly and the Chamber's Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

"Midland has come a long way in the food industry," says Ms. Rust, a graduate of Washington State's culinary school. "We have a wide variety of chefs and other individuals in the area who contribute a great deal to our daily lives through the foods they prepare, yet culinary arts have been overlooked and under emphasized in the world of art. We hope this event will foster a new view of the culinary arts in our community."

Participating in this year's Gourmet Midland are, to date, two caterers, four hotels and 14 restaurants. They are Jumburrito, Farmer Brothers, Inc., Murray's, Luigi's, Plaza Club, Ramada Hotel, Holiday Inn Country Villa, Midland Hilton, Airport Executel, Gandy's, K.R. Pendragon, Chili's, Texas Refreshments, Cattlemen's, Sam's BBQ, El Chico, Entertainment Services, Fuddrucker's, Texas Tumbleweed and Pizza Hut.

"I think by looking at the participants, each person will find something to satisfy his or her palate," Ms. Rust says. In addition, the event has three sponsors — Clark's Wholesale Meats, Greentree Country Club and Curt Condray.

The idea for starting this type of annual event came from success stories in such Texas towns as Beaumont, Abilene, San Angelo, Lubbock and San Antonio, where similar culinary evenings have been well received.

'Smooth summit' ends with call for trade talks

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

THE ECONOMIC SUMMIT TOKYO MAY 4, 5, 6

■ Reagan gains ground; Related story — 2A

TOKYO — Leaders of the world's most powerful democracies ended a three-day "smooth summit" today, calling for a new round of trade talks, adopting a major revision in monetary policy and dodging the touchy subject of agricultural subsidies.

As the annual session closed, the dollar plunged to another post-World War II low against the yen, a disappointment to Japanese businessmen whose exports become less competitive against a falling dollar.

In the final communique of their 12th economic summit, the leaders of the seven industrial democracies patted themselves on the back for the recent decline in oil prices while recognizing the need for long-term stability in the market.

The leaders declared their three days of meetings a success.

"We have achieved our objectives — in short, mission accomplished," British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said. "It was a smooth summit," said U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker III, who spearheaded the currency and trade initiatives for President Reagan.

One of the most notable and unresolved disputes involved farm subsidies. The Reagan administration has been cutting subsidies at home and would like to see a commitment from European nations to do the same. The Europeans are cool to the proposal and the leaders agreed only to study the issue.

The "smooth summit" was marred somewhat by the audacity of Japanese saboteurs. Smoke bombs packed with firecrackers exploded in subway and train stations around Tokyo. The incident was interpreted as a harassing tactic by Japanese radicals intent on embarrassing the largest, most intensive scurity force ever assembled to protect a summit.

No one was injured, and no serious damage was reported, but rush-hour traffic and mass transit were snarled for a time in this city of 11 million as people returned to work at the end of a three-day holiday.

The issue of terrorism, which has dominated the summit, was underscored by a threat from Palestinian radical Abul Abbas, in a broadcast report, to target America for terrorist attacks.

"Let him try," President Reagan declared, responding to reporters' questions.

Nuclear accident 'underestimated

By ROXINNE ERVASTI

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities initially underestimated the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, a top Kremlin official said today, and failed to evacuate nearby residents for more than 36 hours. He said the accident likely was triggered by a chemical explosion.

The blast occurred at 1:23 a.m. on April 26 as the plant was going into a scheduled shutdown, said Deputy Prime Minister Boris N. Shcherbina, who is heading the government inquiry into the accident.

Shcherbina said the evacuation of Pripyat, a town of 25,000 near the plant, did not get under way until 2 p.m. April 27, more than 36 hours after the accident. The evacuation was completed two hours and 20 minutes later, he said. Earlier, Soviet officials said four communities — some 49,000 people — were evacuated.

About 100 people were initially contaminated with radiation, Shcherbina told a news conference in Moscow.

A total of 204 people were hospitalized for radiation poisoning, 18 of them in serious condition, said First Deputy Health Minister Yevgeny I. Vorobyev.

Echoing earlier Soviet statements, Vorobyev said two people were killed in the accident. One worker died after being burned over 80 percent of his body and another died after being hit by a falling object, the deputy health minister said.

Some municipal workers stayed in Pripyat after the accident to keep the city running, but when radiation levels increased, those workers also were evacuated, Shcherbina said.

He said the scope of the accident was underestimated at first, but that the government named an investigative commission "within hours."

Shcherbina said the panel had not reached a final conclusion on what had happened at Chernobyl.

"We need some time, some careful calculations. There is too high a price to be mistaken here," he said, adding, "the most probable cause was the reactor experienced a chemical explosion."

Many respond to town's plea

CONDON, Ore. (AP) — Folks from Japan to Virginia are filling the mailboxes at City Hall, the chamber of commerce and the local newspaper as they respond to this farm town's ads for "a few good residents."

The northern Oregon town made news last month when its chamber of commerce, worried about a population that has shrunk from nearly 1,000 to about 700, put ads in the Los Angeles Times and The Oregonian of Portland.

The Bright Side

Nearly 200 calls and letters had been received by Monday, said Max Stinchfield, editor of the Condon Times-Journal.

"It's been unbelieveable," said city administrator Bonnie Parker. "The phones have been crazy as well as the mail. It's pretty neat to see that people are interested in living here."

As time goes by, the responses are coming from farther away, Ms. Parker said. One arrived Monday from Korea.

The ads read: "Upbeat Eastern Oregon community is looking for a few good residents. Safety, inexpensive housing, good schools and services, recreation opportunities."

Some of the responses were as concise as the ad.

Replied Al Seidner of Desert Hot Springs, Calif.: "Have good income. Have car, and fishing rod. Can move."

Most letters have come from the Northwest and California. Others came from big cities like Chicago, Philadelphia and Houston, or small ones like Gillette, Wyo.; Manassas, Va.; and Merrimack, N.H.

"There are a lot of people in this world looking for a way to get out of the big cities," Ms. Parker said. "Most of the people who have contacted us are retired people living in smoggy, unsafe, congested communities, and they would like very much to get into a country setting."

They've asked lots of questions about Condon.

Clements, White jump right in

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — While Mark White took "a day off with his family" Monday, his Republican challenger said the November governor's race will be so tough he has no time for a holiday.

"I don't think there is time, nor is it appropriate, to be thinking in terms of a vacation," former Gov. Bill Clements said at a press conference at a private Austin air terminal Monday. "There's no rest."

Clements — who handily defeated two GOP challengers Saturday — and White — who turned away five Democratic opponents — will meet in a November replay of their bitter, expensive 1982 battle. Even with the expected help of both of his primary opponents, of President Reagan and Vice President George Bush, Clements predicted he will be the underdog against White.

"If we do everything exactly right, and if we turn out our vote and set an all-time record, we're going to barely win," he said. "Barely win by the skin of our teeth."

Janis Monger, White's assistant press secretary, said the governor spent Monday with his family in the West Texas town of Van Horn. Campaign manager Dwayne Holman said White will campaign non-stop through November.

"I bet you he shakes a few hands while he's out there," Holman said.

Clements has made plans to join forces with his two GOP opponents — Kent Hance and Tom Loeffler — but Holman said the White campaign has made no contacts yet with the Democratic challengers.

Clements said White should get about 1.8 million votes in the Nov. 1 general election, 200,000 more than he received in his 1982 upset victory. For Clements to win, he said he will need about 500,000 more votes than the 1.4 million he picked up in 1982.

"That's a tremendous hill to climb," he said. Clements said he expects to spend $5 million to $6 million by November — he spent nearly $13 million in 1982 — and has "no intention whatsoever" of using his own money to finance the campaign.

TESCO begins including refunds in bills

From Staff Reports

The first electric bills to include refunds to customers for revenues overcollected under a previous fixed charge for fuel used to generate electricity were mailed to customers Monday, according to a Texas Electric Service Company press release.

Bills with the refunds, shown as credits, will continue to be mailed on regular billing cycle dates during May.

The Public Utility Commission on April 9 approved Texas Utilities Electric Company's request to refund the revenues. Texas Electric Service Company is a division of TUEC.

TUEC will refund a total of $140.3 million, the amount overcollected through Jan. 31, 1986, to customers of its three operating divisions — Dallas Power & Light Company, Texas Electric Service Company and Texas Power & Light Company.

The average residential customer who is billed for 755 kilowatt-hours in May will receive a refund of $34, according to the press release.

New, lower fixed fuel charges requested by the company early this year were approved by the PUC in February and placed into effect in March. Customers are expected to see about five percent on their bills under the new charges, or a total of about $243 million annually, company officials said.

The savings have been made possible because the declining cost of natural gas has allowed the company to pursue lower prices for gas fuel, officials said. Gas is used to make slightly more than half the electricity used by customers.

The TEUC operating divisions served a combined total of two million customers, or about one-third of the Texas population.

Reagan fares well at economic summit

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

TOKYO — President Reagan is heading home from the seven-nation Tokyo economic summit with most of what he came for, and with a lot more than he took away from last year's summit in Bonn.

But then the world economic climate is far improved from a year ago, with the collapse in oil prices, lower interest rates and almost negligible inflation in most of the summit nations. "It was a smooth summit," asserted Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III.

Reagan's biggest trophy among non-economic issues was the statement singling out Libya for condemnation for acts of international terrorism.

He didn't get all he wanted on this — for instance, there was no mention of support for the April 14 U.S. air strike on Libya or for the a U.S. proposal for a boycott of Libyan oil.

It was France, after all, that prohibited U.S. warplanes from flying over on their way to Tripoli. And the United States itself tripped over U.S. oil companies remaining in Libya as it sought to persuade other nations to stop the flow of Libyan oil.

But administration officials said that the fact that the summit could agree on any statement mentioning Libya by name — and listing a set of proposed sanctions against terrorists and the nations which harbor them — was a major achievement.

Reagan also got the statement on the Chernobyl nuclear accident he wanted, although it was mild in its criticism of the Soviet Union for its delay of reporting by contrast to Reagan's own rhetoric. The statement generally called for beefed up safety and inspection procedures and expressed sympathy for victims of the accident while endorsing continued support for nuclear power.

A top item on the administration's economic agenda was winning support for a new round of international trade talks, a round administration officials have contended is crucial in banking protectionist fires in Congress.

And, in general terms, the administration got support for such a round — if not for beginning them in September as the administration had also sought.

The final joint communique issued on Tuesday said summit leaders were "fully committed" to preparatory talks for such a round and called for and "early launching" of the talks themselves.

Last year, France vetoed U.S. efforts calling for planning for a new round of the talks, under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the basic set of rules that govern trade throughout most of the non-communist world.

U.S. officials said that getting the summit partners to call for a new round of talks this time was a breakthrough — even though the failure to win a commitment for a September start for the talks seemed likely to generate some criticism among administration critics back on Capitol Hill.

In addition to spelling out what constitutes fair and unfair trading practices, the GATT oversees a court-like forum in Geneva that adjudicates complaints by one nation against another.

Currently, GATT rules apply mainly to manufactured products. The United States at the Tokyo summit prevailed upon its allies to expand GATT jurisdiction in the next round of trade talks to include banking and other services, foreign investments and so-called "intellectual property rights."

This category includes patents, trademarks and copyrights. U.S. officials said the summit agreement could lead to an international code against pirating of books, records and tapes, computer programs, movies, and a host of other items.

However, the administration failed to get its summit partners to go along with its propsal to also add agricultural products to the agenda for the next trade round.

France and the European Community generally oppose such inclusion — at a time of growing friction between Western Europe and the United States over agricultural subsidies which favor homegrown products.

Still, summit partners in their final statement noted that agricultural subsidies can "aggravate the risk of wider protectionist pressures." They vowed to work closely on resolving the problem, if not in the GATT talks then in some other forum.

Of the whole trade package, Baker said: "I don't know if it's enough to blunt the protectionist mood that up there (on Capitol Hill). But it's a lot more than we had before we came to the summit."

The Tokyo summit also repeated earlier summit denunciations of protectionism while saying that industrialized nations should take advantage of the breathing space offered by the drop in oil prices to build up their own economies — relatively uncontroversial positions favored by all summit members.

Perhaps the administration's biggest victory in the economic arena was the full support it won for its plan for a new monitoring system designed to prevent wild fluctuations in monetary exchange rates.

The plan, the first overhaul in the international monetary system in 13 years, is designed to prevent the kind of up-and-down movement of the dollar against other major currencies that has aggravated the U.S. trade deficit.

Reagan had given a high priority in his State of the Union address last February to a search for improvements in the exchange-rate system. A senior administration official, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity, said the monetary plan endorsed by summit leaders should fill this bill.

Under the plan, the seven summit nations would meet frequently to fine tune exchange rates, through buying and selling currencies when necessary. The group of nations will use economic indicators like inflation rates and trade figures to guide them.

Tom Raum is The Associated Press' chief economics writer based in Washington.

Currency plan has quick, strong effect on dollar

TOKYO (AP) — The value of the U.S. dollar in exchange for the yen plunged to another postwar low today as allied summit leaders adopted a plan designed to restrict broad swings in the world currency markets.

Japanese leaders — whose export-oriented economy has been hard hit by a more than 30 percent rise in the yen's value since last September — had no luck convincing the United States to stabilize the yen-dollar rate. A strong yen makes Japanese goods more expensive on foreign markets, and U.S. products more competitive.

The dollar fell to 165.45 yen at one point in morning trading at the Tokyo Foreign Exchange market, down from the opening of 165.75 and more than five yen lower than Friday's finish of 170.70 yen.

The dollar recovered slightly later to 166.00 yen.

The United States has pushed for a stronger yen as a means to reduce Japan's lopsided, $50 billion trade advantage. The overall U.S. trade deficit was about $150 billion.

One market source said traders attributed the plunge of the dollar to the view that the leaders at the summit might fail to agree on joint intervention in foreign exchange markets to stop the dollar's fall against the yen as well as European currencies.

Moreover, there have been fears that the summit currency plan might work against Japanese hopes for immediate relief for the yen if measures to stabilize the currency are pegged to reductions in trade surpluses.

In fact, the factors used would include trade balance as well as gross national product, interest rates, inflation, unemployment, current and fiscal accounts and foreign reserves.

Japan's economy has been hit hard by the rapid appreciation of the yen since the finance ministers of Japan, the United States, West Germany, France and Britain agreed in New York last September to work together to bring down the value of the dollar.

The dollar was then worth 242 yen.

SUMMIT

While summit leaders approved a tough anti-terrorist statement, branding Libya as a sponsor of terrorism, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone emphasized there was no mention of sanctions.

"There is no change in our (Japan's) Middle East policy," Nakasone told a news conference. "This (summit statement) is intended to defend us from terrorism and does not mean we would adopt economic and other sanctions."

Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi said the leaders agreed there would be consultations among allies before any new U.S. air strikes against Libya.

Mrs. Thatcher said the summit declaration will not stop terrorism but will tell Libya that the seven summit nations are prepared to take counter-actions "and there will be further action" as a deterrent.

"I believe the measures adopted will be a considerable deterrent to state-sponsored terrorism," she told reporters.

The final summit gathering was a state banquet given by Emperor Hirohito at the Imperial Palace. For many of the leaders, it was their first opportunity to meet his eldest son and eventual successor, Crown Prince Akihito.

Between summit sessions today, Reagan met with French President Francois Mitterrand, a Socialist, and Jacques Chirac, the new Gaullist French premier.

In an elliptical reference to France's refusal to permit U.S. warplanes to fly over French territory to attack Libya in the April 14 reprisal raids, Reagan was quoted as saying, "In every happy marriage there are disagreements."

Before coming to Tokyo, Reagan blasted the French refusal as unjustifiable, but Reagan spokesman Larry Speakes said today the presidents and premier agreed during the meeting to put the issue behind them.

The Reagan administration persuaded summit partners to back preliminary talks in September aimed at a new round of international trade talks — talks aimed at lowering barriers that restrict U.S. sales abroad.

Reagan came to the summit with hopes that trade talks could actually begin in September. "If you wanted to bet there would be a trade round in September, you wouldn't get very good odds," said Treasury Secretary Baker.

Condon, Ore., plagued by a shrinking population, is getting good response to its ads for 'a few good residents.'

They want to know how hot it gets in the summer, how cold in the winter, if there's a decent mobile home park, where the nearest veterinarian is — and whether a home can be bought for less than $10,000.

They've asked about rainfall, medical facilities, shopping, churches, recreation — even leash laws and bars. In response, they are sent a brochure and answers.

Some say they long to return to a rural community like the ones they grew up in.

"To put it simply, I'm homesick for the wide open spaces, small towns and most of all the West," lamented Joan Lohrenz of Hixon, Tenn., who read about Condon in the Chattanooga News-Free Press.

Alain Feyte, a 42-year-old native of France living in Tucson, Ariz., wrote that he could drive a truck or forklift — or could offer French pastries, having run a bakery until losing it recently.

"I would like this tranquil way of living if there was something for me to do," he said. "I could not find Condon on the map, which is OK!"

Others tried to market themselves, as if residency might be subject to a competition.

"I am very quiet," said a Lynnwood, Wash., man.

"They have been a complete sell-out in most of the Texas towns," Ms. Rust says.

Cost of admission remains the same as last year, $15 per-individual and $25 per-couple. Tickets have been limited to 1,500, the amount sold in other cities of a comparable size. They may be purchased at the chamber, Midland Arts Assembly, located on the fourth floor of the Paragon Building, and Luigi's. A limited number will be sold at the door.

In the other Texas cities, the dinners have been co-sponsored by the Texas Restaurant Association. Not so here.

"We chose not to in order to make it a part of the Celebration of the Arts," Ms. Rust says. "The TRA restricts people who are not members, and we wanted to allow any Midland establishment to participate, TRA member or not."

Proceeds from the 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. food festival go to the Midland Arts Assembly, Midland's umbrella organization for the arts. Not a formal event, dress for the evening is "casual party."

Opening ceremonies for the third annual Celebration of the Arts will be held from 12:30 to 4 p.m. Saturday at Midland Park Mall. All of Midland's cultural organizations have events scheduled for the two-week Celebration, and an events calendar may be picked up at the Assembly office. In addition, the Assembly has a free two-day arts, crafts and entertainment festival planned for Midland Center and Centennial Plaza May 17 and 18.

"We really are fortunate to have an organization for artists, to have a theater, to have ballet, to have opera, to have a symphony and chorale organization and to have museums," says Jean Posey, director of the Assembly. "All are top notch organizations."

The economic downturn Midland is suffering through has not had an adverse effect on this year's celebration.

"In fact, I've seen increased participation with double the enthusiasm," Mrs. Posey says. "I've lived in Midland since 1957, almost 30 years, and I've seen lots of ups and downs. When times are down, we have to get up, we have to keep going. We have to remember that we have a good quality of life in Midland, and we need to take time to enjoy it. The Celebration of the Arts allows us to do that."

NUCLEAR

Officials provided few details on the disaster and it was not clear from their remarks whether a fire was still burning in the reactor's graphite core or elsewhere.

The news conference lasted an hour and 10 minutes and officials spent about half the time with an opening statement in which they praised the Soviet system and citizenry and criticized Western reporting on the disaster.

Shcherbina said 150 workers at Chernobyl were monitoring the three plants that had been shut down as well as checking on conditions at the fourth reactor. He said about 4,000 tons of sand had been used to deal with the disaster, but did not elaborate.

Moscow Party chief Boris Yeltsin said in interviews in West Germany over the weekend that sacks of sand, lead and boron were being dropped from helicopters onto the crippled reactor to cut radioactivity emissions.

The reactor is some 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, a city of 2.4 million people.

Shcherbina said radiation in the Ukraine and the neighboring republics of Byelorussia and Moldavia did not exceed Soviet Health Ministry norms.

In a statement Monday, the government indicated for the first time that radioactivity had spread beyond an 18-mile evacuation zone. The government also indicated radiation threatened a river that feeds a major reservoir north of Kiev.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today that an explosion blew apart a building housing an atomic reactor, but did not discuss how much radioactivity was released in the accident or give current emission readings.

"An explosion destroyed structural elements of the building housing the reactor and a fire broke out," Pravda said. "That happened at night. After the explosion the engine room coating took fire. The firemen were fighting the blaze at a height of 30 meters (100 feet)."

"Their boots stuck in bitumen that melted because of high temperature, soot and smoke made it difficult to breathe, but the brave, bold men kept fighting the blaze courageously," it said.

It did not say whether firefighters were among the injured.

Pravda said the situation remained "complicated" because water and chemicals were useless in extinguishing the fire, but did not say whether the fire was still burning.

Western scientists have said reactor graphite cores, each about 20 feet long and weighing about 1,000 tons, are like pieces of charcoal that can smolder for a long time.

The reactor fire created a cloud of radioactivity that has been blown over much of Europe by shifting winds and has reached the western United States, Canada and Japan.

No dangerous radiation levels have been reported outside the Soviet Union, but precautionary measures remain in effect in some European countries.

The head of the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency, Hans Blix, met today with first deputy foreign minister Anatoly G. Kovalev to discuss the accident, the officials news agency Tass said.

Although White beat Clements in 1982 with tremendous help from teachers, Clements said Monday he expects as much as 65 percent of the teacher vote this year. "Everyone has an opportunity to rectify their mistakes of the past," he said of the frequent spats he had with teacher groups while he was in office.

"The teachers in this instance realize that I am the candidate that best understands their situation and will probably be of more help to them than Mark White," he said. "Mark White has violated his promises to the teachers, and they resent that."

White enountered irate teachers at campaign stops across the state this spring. Observers chalk up at least a portion of the nearly 500,000 votes cast against White Saturday to teachers upset with the TECAT test they took in March and with other education reforms.

The governor has predicted that one-on-one against Clements he will receive most of the teachers' support. "I'll be running against someone who has never failed to use every opportunity to either ignore or deflect the desires and goals of education," he said last month.

The 96,000-member Texas State Teachers Association — the largest of the state's four teacher groups — issued no endorsement for the primaries. TSTA President Charles Beard said Monday the group will listen to White and Clements and could issue an endorsement if one of the two promises teachers a greater say in running the education system.

"We've never said the door is closed to either one," Beard said.

Neither the Texas Classroom Teachers Association nor the Association of Texas Professional Educators issues endorsements, but representatives of both groups said Clements has a good chance to pick up teachers' support. "The teachers' problems with Mark White are not going away simply because he's the Democratic nominee," said ATPE Executive Director Mike Morrow.

The fourth group — the Texas Federation of Teachers — has stuck up for White against Clements' attacks but has not formally endorsed the governor. TFT President John Cole says that action may come at the group's June meeting.

Jordanians arrested

BERLIN (AP) — Police said today they have arrested two Jordanian-born men in connection with a March bombing in Berlin, and were trying to determine whether the men were involved in the fatal bombing of the La Belle discotheque.

The Reagan administration cited the La Belle bombing, in which an American soldier and a Turkish woman died, as a reason for the U.S. bombing of Libya on April 15. U.S. officials said Libya was behind the disco attack.

A police statement identified the two arrested men Farouk Salameh and Fayez Sahawneh, and said both were arrested Thursday. The statement said both are suspected of taking part in the March 29 bombing of the German-Arab Society building in West Berlin.

Investigators are "also checking to determine if the two men are connected with the April 5 La Belle discotheque bombing," the police statement said.

Another man, Ahmed Nawaf Mansur Hasi, was arrested in connection with the La Belle bombing on April 18 and has been in custody since then.

Lyme, N.H., residents know it's spring if they are knee-deep in mud

By TOM MOONEY

LYME, N.H. (AP) — For the last seven decades, Harold Wing has watched the spring sun melt the frost and turn the dirt roads in his town into stagnant rivers of chocolate pudding.

"I remember one year I was standing right here when I saw what I thought was a man walking down the road," Wing said last week, leaning against his pickup truck on the muddy edge of Franklin Hill Road.

"I drove up to him and he was up to his waist in mud. I said, 'Pretty muddy ain't it?' He said 'Not really, considering I'm riding horseback.' "

Mud makes for good humor this time of year in Lyme, a town with 70 miles of road, 58 of them dirt. It's New Hampshire's most unpaved community.

Each spring, as the sun sends out its warming rays, the dirt roads transform into basins of tire-sucking goop — thick as a McDonald's shake and slick as grease.

It grabs cars' tires and slips them into waiting trenches. Then you're trapped.

It's a lucrative time for towing companies; a busy season for Lyme's four-member road crew. And for a few weeks, until the sun dries up the whole mess, there's nothing to do but grin and bear it.

"It's so bad that from here to the paved road is a 20-minute drive and that's only about a mile and a half," said Curt Vinson outside his garage. "With my Blazer, I push (the mud) with the differential. It's that deep."

For the past five years, Larry Laitres has plowed his way through the spring mud of Lyme delivering United Parcel Service packages.

"If it looks too deep, forget it. You don't take a chance this time of year," he said. "Sure, you get stuck. When you do, you sit and wait for the wrecker from Lebanon.

"Yesterday an American Messenger truck got stuck behind the hardware store," he said, grinning. "Another car had taken up the pavement so she (the driver) thought she would go around.

"She sank up to about here," he said, pointing to the top of a rear wheel rim. "All four tires. They had to pop her out with a chain."

Postal Clerk Martha Smith said "If you live on these roads you drive a four-wheel drive. Those of us who don't live on them, know enough to keep off."

Road Agent Allie Pike says Lyme has had plenty of mud this year, though the worst has passed.

A few weeks ago, "We had two or three roads that were really bad, a couple of them were pretty near impassible," he said.

AP Laserphoto

During mud season, Pike is a busy man in this town of 1,741 people.

In the early morning when the roads are still frozen fudge brown, Pike scrapes off the rough spots with his grader. Later, when it's warmer, he and his four-man crew fill holes with gravel and repair washed-out sections.

Robert Lee says he knows the road crew can't be everywhere at once so he does a little road maintenance himself. Lee's 20-year-old daughter Becky says it's hardly work for her father.

"He's constantly taking his bulldozer out," she said. "He likes to play with the road."

The secret to mud driving is straddling the ruts, said Lee.

"If you meet a car coming the other way, you are a dead duck."

Couple get married on 58-foot high sand castle

TREASURE ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Judi Allard and Pete Hunt hope their wedding lasts longer than the place where the ceremony took place — a five-story castle built with 35,000 tons of sand.

The wedding Saturday on "The Lost City of Atlantis" drew dozens of uninvited guests, who watched from behind a fence and a moat surrounding the temporary structure billed the "World's Largest Sand Castle."

The crowd cheered, and several people called for a pose from the bride and groom as they stood atop the 58-foot-high sand castle, which measures 250 feet by 150 feet.

Ms. Allard, head housekeeper at a motel, and Hunt, a television repairman, had planned a June wedding. But Hunt said he talked to one of the sand castle promoters almost as a lark and asked if they could get married on it.

Scientists find geysers in Atlantic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hot undersea geysers, once thought limited to the Pacific Ocean, are now attracting scientists to the Atlantic, where researchers will dive more than two miles deep to study the recently discovered underwater vents.

The deep diving program this month and next will give scientists their first close look at the geysers — detected last summer by shipboard instruments. Their discovery dispelled the notion that the phenomena occurred only in the Pacific.

The studies will be conducted in dives in the research submarine Alvin, said Dr. Peter Rona, an oceanographer with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in Miami.

Scientists were surprised to find the vents, Rona said, but the find "opens up the possibility for these in more than half the world's oceans."

"It's not just that these things are spectacular. They concentrate critical mineral deposits on the sea floor, copper, zinc, and possibly silver and gold; as well as having a very important chemical impact on the composition of the oceans," Rona said in a telephone interview.

Rona said he, along with Dr. Geoffrey Thompson of Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute and Dr. John Edmond of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, plan several dives to view the vents and take samples of the chemical-laden water around the vents and to study the fish and other forms of life nearby.

The geysers are located about 1,800 miles east of Miami, along the Mid-Atlantic Ridge, a submerged mountain range where material is welling up from inside the earth to create new seafloor at the rate of about an inch a year.

"The bottom of the ocean does not contain water like a swimming pool does; it's fractured, full of cracks," Rona explained. "In most cases the sea water just soaks in. But in some cases, where submarine volcanic mountain ranges (exist) the water is heated, expands, becomes lighter and rises. The hot water dissolves metals and other chemicals from rocks and discharges them as geyers we call black smokers.

"It's very much like Old Faithful going off under 12,000 feet of water," he said.

When the hot, chemical-saturated water hits the cold seawater the dissolved chemicals crystallize, forming the so-called black smoke at the vents, he said. The minerals can create deposits at the site, or be carried away by currents.

In addition to the minerals, Rona explained, thousands of shrimp, clams and worms live near the vents, eating bacteria which in turn eat chemicals in the hot water.

The result, he said, is a food chain which exists without benefit of light — something once thought impossible.

Before the discovery of the vents in the Atlantic, scientists had thought the phenomena occurred only in the more rapidly growing seafloor in the Pacific. In that ocean, the floor is spreading as much as 10 inches a year, Rona said.

Since most of the world's oceans are like the Atlantic, not the Pacific, in terms of rate of spreading, the finding means vents are possible in most parts of the world.

These are "just the first, there must be other sites. There should be sites in the Iceland area, although they haven't been found yet, and in other areas. The fact that we found the first one gives us the clues to find others," said Rona.

Ship wreck yields knowledge of life 200 years ago

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A British man o' war that sank while tracking the Bounty mutineers nearly 200 years ago is yielding historical treasure: clay pipes and ivory syringes, a still-pungent bottle of cloves, a silver watch that still works.

Artifacts already raised make the wreck of HMS Pandora the most important maritime find in the southern hemisphere, says Peter Gesner, a marine archaeologist from the Queensland Museum.

"There's no other wreck like it," he said. "The hull appears to be virtually intact and the contents of the ship are well preserved. This is probably the best example we have to date.

"It's a storehouse of naval life. We can reconstruct the way European ships were outfitted for exploration of the South Pacific."

The Pandora was a 24-gun frigate whose first service was against the colonists in the American Revolution. It was found in 1977 resting under 110 feet of water in the soft silver sands off the Great Barrier Reef at Australia's northeastern tip.

Work is restricted to six weeks a year because of turbulent conditions, and scientists say retrieving all the artifacts could take another decade.

The British Admiralty ordered Capt. Edward Edwards in 1790 to take the Pandora to Tahiti and carry the Bounty mutineers home for punishment.

Crew members of the HMS Bounty, a naval vessel on a trading mission, mutinied in 1789 under the leadership of Fletcher Christian. Capt. William Bligh was set adrift in a small boat with 18 loyal crewmen, and they sailed 3,618 miles to Timor.

Edwards and his men caught 14 mutineers in Tahiti, but Christian and eight others escaped to Pitcairn Island, where they scuttled the Bounty and settled.

Capt. Edwards had the prisoners chained and held in a small wooden cell built on the foredeck that the crew named "Pandora's Box."

He spent four months searching the South Pacific for Christian and his companions, then headed home through the treacherous Torres Strait that separates Australia from Papua New Guinea.

HMS Pandora foundered 60 miles off Cape York Peninsula on Aug. 28, 1791, and sank at 6:30 a.m. the next day. Thirty-five men drowned, among them four prisoners, two of them still in irons.

The 99 survivors made their way in long boats more than 600 miles to a Dutch settlement at Timor, the same haven Bligh had reached.

Three of the mutineers were hanged in England. Accounts of the voyage by Edwards and the other survivors made the Pandora wreck the best-documented in the southern hemisphere.

Ben Crop, an Australian diver and film maker, and Steve Domm, a naturalist, found it in 1977.

The Torres Strait is a maritime graveyard, much of it still uncharted.

Gesner said the museum knows of more than 1,300 ships holed on the reefs before 1900.

Older wrecks have been found off Australia, but Gesner said: "What makes Pandora unique is that it didn't break apart, so it tells us about the organizational and social conditions of the time.

"From the artifacts already raised we can draw a good picture of what was needed for the voyage, such as personal possessions, ship's fittings and spares."

The Australian government, which is underwriting the recovery project, has spent 250,000 Australian dollars ($175,000 U.S.) on two expeditions. The next dive is planned for October, start of the southern summer.

Divers have brought up about 500 items ranging from cannon and anchors to ivory syringes and other surgical instruments, brushes and shoehorns.

The most stunning find is a silver pocket watch — frozen in time at 11:20 —that belonged to ship's surgeon George Hamilton, one of the survivors. It has been restored to near-perfect working order.

Other discoveries are cauldrons, cooking pots, clay pipes, dinner plates and wine glasses used by the ship's officers.

Pandora's Box, in which the mutineers were held, disintegrated long ago.

Biologists transplant caribou herd

LAKE EMMA, Alaska (AP) — The four cow caribou remained crouched in their wooden crates at the edge of a frozen mountain lake, unsure what to do next.

Ahead of them was an uncertain future on the Tustumena benchlands of the Kenai Peninsula. Behind them was their home in the Nelchina Basin, 250 miles to the northeast.

Tipping one crate slightly, biologists gave one cow some gentle nudges. She finally lunged out of the crate and lurched to her feet. After a few uncertain steps, her head and tail shot up and she took off.

The other three cows followed, one by one, quickly disappearing into the black spruce surrounding the lake.

The four caribou were part of the first load in a transplant operation aimed at restoring caribou to their traditional habitat on the Kenai Peninsula southwest of Anchorage.

Caribou were plentiful there 100 years ago, but wildfires altered their habitat and hunters decimated the herds at the turn of the century.

A transplant 20 years ago established one small herd near Kenai and another of about 400 in the mountains near Hope. Last year, 28 animals were released near Lake Emma, and this year's transplant is designed to bolster that fledgling herd.

Using a net trap instead of tranquilizer darts and avoiding last year's transportation snarls, this year's transplant by state and federal biologists went more smoothly.

"This will revolutionize big-game transplants in Alaska," said Ted Spraker, an Alaska Department of Fish & Game biologist, after watching the nets fall on small groups of caribou.

Traditionally, Alaska biologists have fired tranquilizer darts from helicopters to capture big-game animals for study or transplant. This year, they decided to experiment with a net technique successful in capturing deer and bighorn sheep in Colorado.

Starting at the beginning of March, biologists began putting hay at eight sites around Lake Louise, where much of the thriving Nelchina herd winters. The caribou took quickly to the strange food and began showing up regularly at most of the stations.

Almost two weeks later, Bob Schmidt of the Colorado Division of Wildlife stretched his 70-foot-square nets between poles at the most popular bait stations. Running around the nets' circumference and from the center poles were wires connected to small black boxes, stenciled "BOOM" and "GOTCHA," buried in the snow.

Schmidt hid in the nearby timber until a small band of caribou was lured under a net by the green alfalfa. Then he pressed a red button on his control unit, triggering blasting caps wired to the rope supporting the net. Before the caribou had time to react, the eight-inch mesh net had blanketed them.

"Whooeee," Schmidt said after one drop worked to perfection. "I think I'll give up on deer and sheep. Boy, are these caribou dumb."

Schmidt said deer and sheep are much more reluctant to walk under the net. Many of the caribou never even looked up.

A platoon of snowmobilers raced to the netted caribou from their waiting place on Lake Louise. Biologists and local volunteers swarmed over the bewildered animals, holding them down to keep them from injuring themselves as they fought to escape the net.

The caribou were hobbled, blindfolded, sedated, loaded on sleds and hauled to a staging area. The whole process took about 30 minutes. Last year, it often took that long to get a single animal from the field to a corral.

At the staging area, blood samples were taken to test for disease, and the caribou were given antibiotics and a shot to rid them of parasites. Then they were put into individual crates and loaded onto a truck.

After a 300-mile trip to the Kenai National Wildlife Refuge headquarters in Soldotna, nine crates at a time were lashed into a helicopter.

Mike Hedrick of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service said a total of 52 caribou were moved during a week. "We have 49 caribou that we can count as living," he said. "And we think that 48 are in good shape." One may have broken a leg.

The total was almost twice the number transplanted last year, with far fewer fatalities. This year, six caribou died during the transplant. One cow broke her neck as she struggled against the net before biologists could subdue her, and a calf died after apparently being kicked by adult caribou in a corral, said Greg Bos, an Alaska game official.

A real primary

Saturday's primary elections kicked off the political year in grand fashion. Of course, the final chapter hasn't yet been written in this story, and won't be for a number of months. But Saturday's polling affirmed once again that Texas definitely is a two-party state after a break with long-term tradition.

There was a time in the not-too-distant past when it was unheard of to have candidates in both parties' primaries in Texas. There were conservative, middle-of-the-road and liberal wings of the Democratic Party, and there was a sprinkling of Republicans in "that conservative party." But, overall, a one-party system dominated the state.

That has been changing over a period of years, though, and the new face of Texas politics was in evidence Saturday night as countless Republicans were swept into office along with countless Democrats, meaning, of course, that in November there will be an election to determine which candidates will gain the offices in question.

Between now and then, of course, there is a runoff election to determine some of the nominees in a number of races.

So last Saturday's elections, while an interesting and necessary event, were only the start of the full-fledged political process which, in Texas, was unseen to any significant degree for decades upon decades.

It seems a long way to travel to only achieve a nomination which, in effect, is the right to represent a political party in the actual election several months hence. But that's the way the process was structured in days gone by and it does appear to offer the best method for choosing government's leaders.

The system demands that politicians, poll workers, and the public in general give it their undivided attention to make it work properly. That's as it should be. It's time-consuming and arduous, but it's still self-government and that's much better than any other form of government yet devised by man.

Congratulations to all the winners and thanks to all those who ran valiantly but in vain. Without their interest the system could not function. Specific congratulations are due the people who took the time to vote Saturday. They keep the political process alive, well and representative of the people of Texas.

Don't hide terrorists

One man's terrorist is another man's freedom fighter. Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., said that. He was opposing an updated British-American extradition treaty, which would make it easier to send Irish terrorists back for trial after they have been arrested in the United States.

He's right, but the new treaty should be ratified, because there is no valid excuse for murder and hijacking on the basis that they are political acts against the British government.

We bombed Libya because of Libya's state-supported terrorism. The British government cooperated. And then Margaret Thatcher asked us to cooperate against Irish terrorism by ratifying the new treaty. She pointed out that Libya provides the Provisional IRA, the Irish terrorist group, with money and weapons. And the president of Sinn Fein, the political wing of the Irish terrorists, has condemned the U.S. raids on Tripoli and Bengazi as acts of international terrorism against Libyan sovereignty.

It would be contemptible if, while we are asking European nations to cooperate in fighting Libyan terrorists, we protect Irish terrorists and give them refuge from British courts. It would show little gratitude for Thatcher's courage in taking the heat from the political opposition in her country for the Libyan raids if our senators quail under the pressure of their own ethnic constituencies and refuse to approve the new extradition treaty.

The treaty does not have to be a model for extradition treaties with other foreign governments. So Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., does not have to worry that "freedom fighters" against left-wing regimes in Latin America and elsewhere will be arrested and extradited to face communist courts.

Britain is a civilized democracy, our loyal ally, our faithful friend, the source of our Anglo-Saxon legal system. The British have asked for our help on an issue of terrorism of primary importance to them. We must not harbor murderers and kidnappers who are refugees from the British system of justice.

Another View:

Look at 'peddling'

Michael K. Deaver, in asking for appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate charges against him, has anticipated the inevitable. Even before he spoke, there were indications that the Department of Justice was moving in that direction. This is, as Deaver himself acknowledged, "the only way to resolve the issue fairly."

How much it will resolve remains in doubt. The more fundamental issue cannot easily be legislated: The separating of public service and trust from its abuse and exploitation by those who rush from government jobs to peddle for personal profit whatever influence they may have accumulated while working as a servant of the people.

The law at question in the Deaver case treats only some superficial symptoms of the deeper problem. Under its provisions, former government workers are prohibited from lobbying for two years in areas for which they were responsible in their last year in office. The Senate Judiciary Committee was conducting hearings Tuesday to see if tighter rules are required.

The Deaver matter already has revealed an insensitivity on the parts of both Deaver and President Reagan regarding the distinction between public responsibility and the exploitation for personal profit of "connections." The president said on Friday that it was "ridiculous" to think of naming a special investigator, demonstrating once again his confidence in Deaver, the same confidence that already had encouraged him to permit his former deputy chief of staff to keep his White House pass and to receive the highly restricted private schedule of the president's daily activities. With obvious emotion, the president had described "Mike's" departure a year ago as an "amputation." That now seems at best an exaggeration.

Sleaze is best discouraged by the example of people of integrity and principle who demonstrate their commitment to the public interest as a responsibility, not a steppingstone to lucrative service to special interests.

There are some, if imperfect, legislative restrictions that can be imposed on influence peddling. Some progress has been made in restraining the machinations of military procurement officers moving into the ranks of defense industries with which they had dealt on behalf of the Pentagon. The law that Deaver is suspected of violating is a useful restraint and should be scrupulously applied, which is why the appointment of a special prosecutor is appropriate. But the difficulty of the task is evident in the enormous sums of money that special interest groups are prepared to pay anyone perceived to have influence, particularly influence at the center of power, the White House.

Iranians protest treatment of holy man

WASHINGTON — Civil unrest led by Shiite clergymen is sweeping Iran as a result of the Ayatollah Khomeini's vengeful decision to keep a rival holy man from leaving the country for cancer treatment. The mullah, 85-year-old Grand Ayatollah Said-Hazen Shariatmadari, died painfully in an Iranian hospital, and was then refused burial proper for one of his rank.

Jack Anderson

So far, Khomeini has responded to the riots and demonstrations with his usual ruthlessness, throwing hundreds of mullahs in jail. He is clearly worried by this latest challenge to his regime, remembering the important role the Moslem clergy played in the shah's downfall and Khomeini's own rise to power seven years ago.

In a country where executions of suspected opponents have become commonplace, why did the death and dishonoring of one man ignite unrest in cities across Iran? State Department sources explained to our associate Lucette Lagnado that Shariatmadari, unlike Khomeini, was a truly benevolent religious leader widely beloved by Iranians and especially the lower clergy. He even looked like a saint, one Iranian expert observed.

In fact, it was his devotion to his religion that made Shariatmadari the target of Khomeini's implacable wrath. The two were among only a half-dozen grand ayatollahs, and therefore of equal religious stature, but Shariatmadari criticized Khomeini for seizing temporal authority and setting up a supposedly "Islamic Republic." Shariatmadari believed that ayatollahs should not wield earthly power, and he viewed Khomeini as a cynical charlatan who used religion to further his personal ambitions.

Khomeini implicated Shariatmadari in a coup attempt several years ago and had the old man placed under house arrest. Then, several months ago, Shariatmadari was diagnosed as having either prostate or kidney cancer.

His doctors asked the regime for permission to take him to the West for treatment of his life-threatening disease. Though granting of such permission is usually routine, Khomeini rejected his rival's request.

In Shariatmadari's final, agonizing days, visitors were not allowed to pay their respects. And Khomeini's vendetta continued even after his rival died. His body was spirited out the back door of the hospital, sources told us, and the regime permitted none of the funereal ceremony befitting the death of an eminent spiritual leader.

"Here we have the government of an Islamic republic going after a holy man," said a disgusted State Department source, who described Khomeini's treatment of Shariatmadari as "ghastly."

U.S. Iranian experts are particularly interested in the turmoil that followed Shariatmadari's shameful treatment. Shiite mullahs have led riots in the streets of Qom, Tabriz and Moshad. Bazaars closed down in protest over the government's actions. State Department cable traffic reported major disturbances as recently as last week.

Another grand ayatollah named Golpayegani has taken Shariatmadari's place as an outspoken critic of Khomeini. Golpayegani sent a telegram to Khomeini protesting the lack of a proper funeral for Shariatmadari and his "burial in a hidden place." Golpayegani, whom Khomeini has also placed under house arrest, complained that the regime's actions "are against Islam and the Koran."

Footnote: Supporters of the late ayatollah "amount to millions of people," sources estimate, and discontent extends far beyond the Moslem clergy. In addition, royalist elements have become emboldened by the unrest, and are planning their own demonstrations against Khomeini.

BANKER'S HOLIDAY: Senate bumbling will allow the nation's bankers to continue enjoying the lucrative "float" on depositors' checks — using the money free for several days until they deign to let the customer write checks against the deposit. Legislation passed by the House would force banks to make the funds available within one business day in the case of government and small checks, and within seven days on out-of-state checks. But Senate Banking Committee Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, tacked the bill onto general banking legislation, probably dooming it to slow death. And apathetic Democrats have declined to put any heat on Garn.

UNHOLY ALLIANCE: As the number of initiated Mafia members continues to decline, mobsters are turning to other sources of muscle — specifically, motorcycle gangs. In one case described by federal agents, the Outlaw bikers' club was hired by the New Orleans Cosa Nostra to rub out an informant. And members of Hell's Angels in Cleveland reportedly engaged in killings and drug deals for the Licavoli crime family. The feds report that bikers are even trading in their denim jackets and hog cycles for business suits and fancy cars.

'Inchon landing' last hope for Reagan term

WASHINGTON — Long-term political fallout will be at stake in the Senate Finance Committee this week when Chairman Bob Packwood, with Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole's powerful presence on his side, seeks one or two additional Republican votes needed to pass his streamlined tax-reform package.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Support has picked up quickly for the chairman's week-old package dropping the top marginal income tax rate to 27 percent and closing $50 billion worth of real estate and oil tax shelters. Nine of the 11 senators needed seemed onboard going into Monday's session, with a good chance for going over the top.

That vote can determine whether this year's tax bill will have the flavor of the House Democratic bill or carry a Republican label — a political distinction transcending this year's election. While Washington's relentless lobbyists have convinced much of Congress that people don't care about tax reform, the Finance Committee is voting on a bill offering fairness, simplification and — not least important — lower taxes for millions of ordinary Americans.

This is dramatic improvement from the choice less than two weeks ago between the flawed House-passed reform and an even worse Senate bill. What changed it was Bob Packwood's "Inchon landing" (as described by Rep. Jack Kemp in a local fund-raising speech for the chairman last week). Packwood leapfrogged Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's bill by proposing truly radical tax reform.

To cynical tax-watchers, that was a clever ruse by Packwood to kill reform but take the onus off his shoulders by offering up an unpassable proposal. In fact, during 16 months as chairman, Packwood has converted to the goal of lowered tax rates financed by closed shelters.

What's more, his proposal instantly pulled back waverers. Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, the leading Democratic tax reformer, had been ready to go political and accuse Republicans of killing reform but now is back home. Other Democrats in support include Sens. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, George Mitchell of Maine and maybe Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. More surprisingly, Wyoming's Sen. Malcolm Wallop, hitherto an anti-tax reformer but at heart a supply-side Republican conservative, embraced Packwood's new plan.

Most important was the quiet shift from neutrality to support by the majority leader, Packwood's predecessor as chairman and still a Finance Committee member. Dole's ambiguity was ended by the Inchon landing. Other Republicans on the committee are not eager to provide the decisive votes against reform.

Thanks to Oregon politics, the showdown is now. Packwood must leave Washington to face the challenge in the May 20 Republican primary from New Right candidate Joe Lutz, who accuses the chairman of selling out to special interests.

Finance members will be voting on radical tax reform, though a tad less radical than the new scheme unveiled by Packwood April 24. Home mortgage, state and local taxes and charitable contributions are fully deductible in the new version; President Reagan's $2,000 personal exemption is retained. To pay for this, Packwood's 25 percent rate inched up to 27. But the heavy revenue — $50 billion — comes from closing famous tax shelters, mostly in real estate, that generate huge paper losses.

The argument by business lobbyists that this is not real tax reform no longer washes. Republicans must choose. One one hand is a bill with rates of 27 percent for individuals and 33 percent for corporations, with a 15 percent rate for families with less than $40,000 income — about 80 percent of all taxpayers. On the other hand are special business interests traditionally generous to Republicans.

Actually, more difficult for Republican senators than an up-or-down vote on the Packwood plan will be a deluge of amendments to retain tax exclusions. A drive to keep special treatment for capital gains may stem from desired economic growth. But many amendments will attempt to kill the bill by unbalancing it. Sen. Russell B. Long, the committee's ranking Democrat and former chairman, is a master complicator and has taken dead aim at Packwood's creation.

Boycotting pornography a valid response

The decision by the Southland Corp. recently to stop selling Playboy, Penthouse, and other sex exploitation magazines in its 7-Eleven stores is a business decision and has nothing to do with censorship.

Charley Reese

Presumably, Southland decided it would be better business not to sell them than to sell them. If they were persuaded to reach that conclusion by the boycott organized by several Christian groups, the fact remains that no censorship is involved.

Only cultural know-nothings would pay any attention to the rantings of the publishers who are trying to turn it into a free speech issue. People who make a living pandering to lust by demeaning women have no credibility, more especially when they add misrepresentation to pandering.

All that has happened is that a business outlet has decided not to carry their products. Lots of business outlets still carry them and lots of others never have carried them. The First Amendment, which in fact was not intended and still ought not to protect pornography, does not require that anyone subsidize another's speech. They are free to publish. Others are free not to buy or sell them. That's all there is to that.

The government is not involved and only the government has the power to censor. Every bookstore and public and school library in the country operates on limited budgets and with limited shelfspace. That means they choose to buy and display some books and not others. Exercising judgment is not censorship.

As for the Christian boycott, well a boycott is a boycott and American citizens are free to boycott any product or business for any reason they choose. Liberals especially who are clamoring for disinvestment and boycotts to protest apartheid in South Africa should have no problem with the Rev. Jerry Falwell and other Christian leaders boycotting stores to protest the sale of soft-core pornography. Unless, of course, they think the Constitution applies only to people who agree with them.

Playboy and Penthouse, which make a pretense of sophistication, are no more culturally, intellectually, or morally defensible than Hustler — which takes a less pretentious approach to decadence and depravity. If you've never seen any of these publications, don't let anyone con you into thinking the issue is one of simple nudity. The women in these magazines are not photographed to reflect the beauty of the human body. They are posed in sexually explicit and undignified ways, as if they were pieces of animated meat on display for male customers.

Hugh Hefner, Playboy's founder, got away with imitating an intellectual by smoking a pipe and making a lot of money. You have to understand that the mugwumps in the silly sections of the media are impressed by anybody who is rich. Hefner's rambling, college-freshman exposition of hedonism was as close to philosophy as a gorilla's grunts are to human eloquence.

Perhaps with record numbers of divorces, suicides, illegitimate births, abortions, mental illnesses and venereal diseases, people will finally realize that the paradise promised by the modern hedonists is plain, old-fashioned hell.

Perhaps people will realize that, theology aside, the old Judaic-Christian moral code contains profoundly pragmatic wisdom. There are very sound non-religious reasons why sexual promiscuity is undesirable, why the nuclear family is beneficial, and why nobody should be encouraged to do their own thing and let it all hang out.

The human being, on the physical level, is no different than any other animal. It has a sexual drive entirely divorced from human sentiment and its instincts are purely aggressive. What distinguishes the human being from lower animals is the ability to override and control its animal impulses — if it chooses to. One task of all religions is to persude humans to do just that — to guide their actions for reasons other than satisfaction of their animal urgings.

As religion or philosophy succeeds or fails, civilization progresses away from savagery or regresses toward savagery. The hedonism of the '60s, personified by Playboy, was a regression. The savagery and slobbery you see is the result. If you doubt that, take a walk around any large American city at night.

Abductions, murders don't scare American in Beirut

Maxwell

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A 79-year-old American woman, who made Moslem west Beirut her home 33 years ago when the city was still "the Paris of the Middle East," says she is not scared by the recent kidnappings and murders of Westerners and doesn't plan to leave.

Genevieve Maxwell said she was born on Gull Island in Long Island Sound, New York, where her parents were stationed with the Coast Guard Artillery Corps, but that lawless west Beirut is now her home.

"Only when I can't cope will I pack and go, but as long as I can cope I'm staying," she said from the spacious terrace of her seaside penthouse. It overlooks the ruins of the former U.S. Embassy, where a bomb explosion on April 18, 1983 killed at least 49 people.

Mrs. Maxwell came to Beirut in 1953 to become the gossip columnist of Beirut's English language Daily Star, a job she held for 10 years. Now, she spends most of her time writing guidebooks to the Middle East.

Her husband, Charles T. Maxwell, died in an airplane crash in 1934. She has one son, Charles, an oil analyst, and three grandchildren living in the United States.

She has watched Lebanon decline, through a civil war now in its 12th year, from a prosperous, cosmopolitan cultural center to a jungle of feuding militias and vengeful terrorists.

"Everyone wants to know why I remain in west Beirut," said Mrs. Maxwell, "I've always made my home wherever I've hung my hat. It so happened that I've hung my hat in Beirut longer than any other place.

"I can never find another small enclave like this one," she added, pointing to the blue waters of the Mediterranean, visible from her apartment. "Where will I find that in New York or in Philadelphia?"

Mrs. Maxwell said she feels safe in her home in west Beirut's waterfront Ein Mreisseh neighborhood because the district is controlled by Druse militiamen, who have not been involved in the wave of kidnappings of foreigners in west Beirut over the past two years.

Twenty-six kidnapped foreigners have been freed and six were found dead. Five Americans, eight Frenchmen, two Britons, an Italian and a man with dual Irish-British citizenship remain missing. Most are believed by Shiite Moslem extremists.

Most recently, three Western hostages were found shot to death in apparent retaliation for the April 15 U.S. bombing of Libya. They were Peter Kilburn, an American librarian at the American University of Beirut, and two British teachers, Leigh Douglas and Philip Padfield.

The murders touched off a new exodus of Westerners from the city's Moslem sector. Fewer than 65 Westerners, including a handful of Americans, stayed on. The U.S. Embassy, now operating in a Christian sector of the city, has refused to say how many Americans remain in west Beirut.

Mrs. Maxwell said that after the killings she stopped going out at night. She said she can stay indoors for weeks if the need arises.

"I can have deliveries from my friendly grocers, butchers, fishermen, drug store," she said.

The kidnappings and killings of Westerners have not left her untouched. Mrs. Maxwell said she knew Kilburn, Douglas and Padfield.

"When Peter was found and I saw that terrible photograph of him I really broke down. It was so unnecessary," she said.

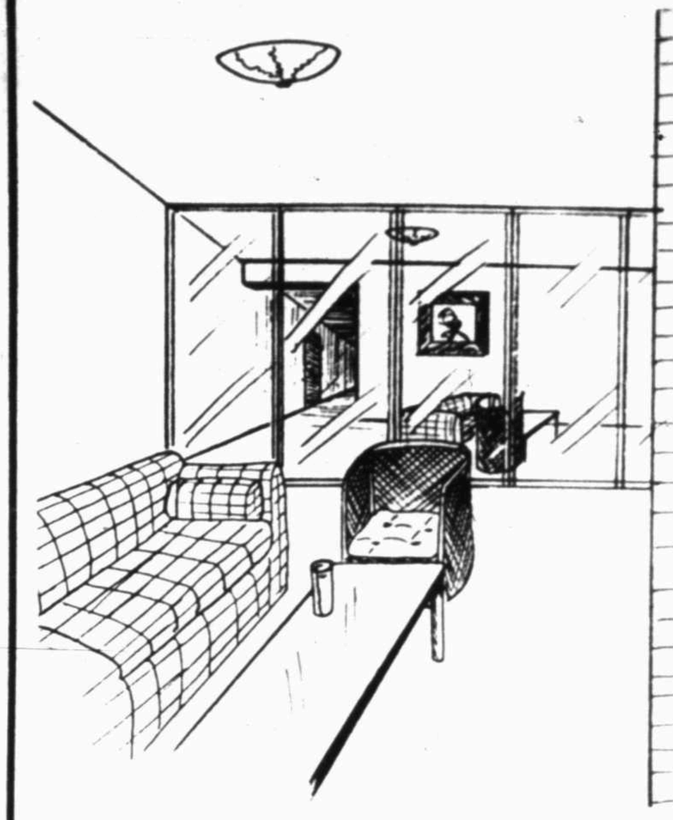

She spoke fondly of Terry A. Anderson, 38, chief Middle east correspondent of The Associated Press who was kidnappe 13 months ago blocks from Mrs. Maxwell's house. "He was so nice to me," she said.

Other missing Americans are the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital; Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the university, and William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem group that says it kidnapped the Americans, claimed Oct. 4 that it killed Buckley but never produced his body.

"Everyone wants to know why I remain in west Beirut. I've always made my home wherever I've hung my hat...I can never find another small enclave like this one. Where will I find that in New York or in Philadelphia?"

Officers don't like having to change posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The law of unintended consequences struck with full force at the U.S. Capitol last month.

At least that's the way a lot of Capitol police officers and House members saw it.

In the name of increased security, scores of officers on the House side of the Capitol recently were pulled out of locations some of them had guarded for years and dispatched to other posts to familiarize them with all areas of the Capitol and its grounds.

The unintended consequences: Suddenly many on the force were unfamiliar with their immediate locale and the faces of the people who come and go there routinely.

Since all of the officers posted near the House floor or along the routes leading to it were new to the locale, few of them recognized House members by sight.

House members missed familiar and friendly faces in the uniformed force. Police morale plunged. Many officers complained.

And a petition started circulating on the House floor to bring the regular officers back to their familiar haunts.

A group of officers wrote to their bosses, expressing recognition of the need to be ready to repel a possible terrorist attack but adding these thoughts:

"Since implementation of the squad concept, recognition of members of Congress, etc., has been all but lost, due primarily to the mixing and the frequent reassignment of all relief personnel in an attempt to train and familiarize personnel with all the different police posts manned by the House detail.

"While on the surface the concept sounds good, and may be reaching for an ideal, the practicality of reaching such an ideal remains highly questionable due to the almost total loss of the recognition factor that had previously been established," the letter said.

On an ordinary police force, this appeal might not have found an attentive audience.

But the letter was soon supported by a petition organized by Rep. Michael Strang, R-Colo., and signed by scores of House members, including Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois and GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi.

And within days the familiar old posts were once again manned by the familiar old officers.

And Strang arose on the House floor with a new message, a letter of thanks to James J. Carvino, chief of the Capitol Police.

"We are most pleased to welcome the return of your fine officers to their accustomed posts on and around Capitol Hill," it said. "We have missed them and the improvement in morale is a tribute to your leadership as well as a contribution in security."

The letter was signed by 115 members of the House.

Television came to the Senate on an experimental, in-house, not-for-public-consumption basis last week and Senate Majoity Leader Robert Dole of Kansas made it clear that senators had been briefed on television do's and don'ts.

"We have cautioned some of our colleagues not to chew gum or to do things of that kind while they are live on television, and to keep their heads up so that they can be properly focused by the cameras," Dole said.

"We will make a lot of mistakes," he added. "Nearly all of them unintentional."

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight partly cloudy. Low mid 60s and a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. Wind south 10 to 15 mph. Wednesday mostly sunny. Not so warm. High in lower 90s and isolated late afternoon thunderstorms with rain chance less than 20 percent. Wind south 10 to 15 mph increasing to 15 to 25 mph and gusty after noon with lake wind advisories required afternoon.

Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight partly cloudy. Low near 70. A 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and wind south 10 to 20 mph. Wednesday mostly sunny.

Warm days continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Summer-like weather will continue over the Permian Basin on Wednesday with an expected high in the lower 90s and a less than 20 percent chance of isolated late afternoon thundershowers. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for sunny skies for the greater part of the day.

There is a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms tonight. Under mostly cloudy skies, the low will be in the middle 60s with winds out of the south at 10-15 mph. Winds will continue out of the south on Wednesday at 10-15 mph but will increase to 15-25 mph and gusty in the afternoon.

Monday's high of 94 was seven degrees below the record high set in 1964. This morning's low was 27 degrees above the record low of 37 set for this date in 1935.

STATE

A low pressure system over West Texas was expected to trigger thunderstorms this evening, including some that may reach severe levels.

The low pressure system located over the northern Panhandle was accompanied by a low pressure trough that extended today into the High Plains.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s.

Widely scattered thunderstorms are forecast for northern and western portions of the state Wednesday and it will remain warm and humid over most of the state. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Early morning temperatures were in the 50s in the Panhandle and Davis Mountains, the 60s over the South Plains and in the 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 54 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 77 at McAllen.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 55 at Amarillo, 71 at Wichita Falls and Fort Worth, 72 at Waco, Austin and San Antonio, 75 at Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 70 at San Angelo, 69 at Lubbock, 68 at Midland and 71 at El Paso.

Highs Monday ranged from 75 at Greenville and Dallas to 94 at San Angelo, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Blustery winds combined with low temperatures today to push wind chills into the single digits in the Plains.

Winds across the northern Plains eased after gusts up to 80 mph damaged roofs and knocked down trees in the Dakotas and storms pounded Kansas Monday evening.

Angels kickoff '65 Roses'

From Staff Reports

The Midland Angels will kick off the "65 Roses" Sports Club to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation at a pregame party for club members and guests tonight at the Angels picnic grounds.

The Angels, management and fans joined forces to form the club which will be a part of a nationwide fund-raising effort to fight cystic fibrosis, the nation's No. 1 genetic killer of children and adolescents.

CF is an inherited disease which attacks the respiratory and digestive systems. Only half the children born with CF are expected to live to be 21.

Contributions made by the Angels 65 Roses Club go for research, education and treatment programs. Members receive tickets to selected home games when 65 Roses parties are planned. They meet players, management and media personalities before the game.

A membership is $65. In addition, club members pledge 1, 3, 5 dollars per home run hit by Angel players, up to 100 homers.

Inquiries should be addressed to Midland Angels, 65 Roses Sports Club, P.O. Box 2177, Midland or call 683-4251.

Moncrief inspires Milwaukee

Spud, Mavs, Rockets play tonight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If playing in pain is a badge of honor in professional sports, the Milwaukee Bucks' Sidney Moncrief has to be adorned with a chest-full of medals today.

The 6-foot-4½ all-star guard, limped up and down the court Monday night inspiring the Bucks to a 109-104 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

The triumph enabled Milwaukee to tie its best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series at two games apiece.

Milwaukee regained the home court advantage it lost when the Bucks split with the Sixers in the first two games of the series at Milwaukee.

The Bucks, Central Division champions, and the 76ers, runner-up in the Atlantic Division, meet in Game 5 at Milwaukee Wednesday night. The sixth game will be played in Philadelphia on Friday night.

IN TONIGHT'S playoff games, Atlanta is at Boston, Denver at Houston and Dallas at the Los Angeles Lakers. The Celtics lead 3-1, while the Nuggets-Rockets and Lakers-Mavericks series are tied 2-2.

Moncrief scored just 13 points and handed out four assists, but the confidence and inspiration he gave his teammates counted more.

If this had been anthing but a playoff game the Bucks had to win to keep from falling behind 3-1, Moncrief never would have played.

"Moncrief is hurting badly," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "I'm just happy to have him on one leg. Anything we get out of him is a plus.

"Every step he takes is painful. You wonder just how much he can endure. The answer is, I think, a lot."

Moncrief talked about the left heel injury he suffered in the Bucks' preliminary round three-game sweep of the New Jersey Nets.

"It's like walking on hot coals," Moncrief said. "But you've got to play with that.

"In the playoffs, you can't let up even when you're in pain."

Nelson said he changed his strategy for Game 4.

The Bucks played a small lineup that featured Moncrief, Paul Pressey and Ricky Pierce. Nelson played 7-footers Randy Breuer and Paul Mokeski, and 6-11½ Alan Lister less minutes.

"The big difference was the small lineup," Nelson said. "I thought it was time to take a gamble. They (the 76ers) are such a good rebounding team it was a good gamble.

"It gave us a different look, a different tempo that we needed because of their quickness."

Pressey didn't score in the first half, but he collected 17 in the second, including nine in the final period when the Bucks put the game away.

Pierce scored 19, including eight in the last quarter, and his three-point play with 2:32 left sent Milwaukee ahead 102-101.

After Maurice Cheeks tied it, converting a technical foul on an illegal defense call against the Bucks, Pressey was fouled by Charles Barkley. He made two, sending Milwaukee ahead 104-102. The Sixers never caught up.

It was a close game throughout with the score tied at 27 after a quarter and 60 at half time. The Bucks led 84-80 starting the fourth period.

Barkley did all he could to win it for the 76ers, scoring 37 points, grabbing 14 rebounds and dished out nine assists.

"We just have to make the plays that count," said Barkley, who was honored before the game with the NBA's Pivotal Player Award. The league presents the award to the player who had the greatest impact on his team during the regular season, according to a computerized study.

"They have control now. They deserved it," Barkley said. "We are right back where we started."

Philadelphia Coach Matt Guokas said his team made a lot of mental errors.

"They are a good team with that smaller lineup," he said of the Bucks.

In addition to Pressey and Pierce, the Bucks got a big lift with 19 points from Terry Cummings, who also had nine rebounds.

For the Sixers, Bob McAdoo scored 17 in 17 minutes, Julius Erving 15 and Maurice Cheeks 14.

NBA Playoffs

Hawks-Celtics

After winning 106-94 Sunday for its first victory over Boston in 10 meetings this season, Atlanta now faces a more formidable task — breaking the Celtics' 35-game home winning streak.

"The next step is to make sure we're not too happy with finally beating Boston," said Atlanta forward Dominique Wilkins, who scored 37 points in the Game 4 victory. "We have to go up there and give them another run for it."

The Celtics, who shot a season-low 34 percent from the field in their first playoff loss, expect a return to uniform by backup center Bill Walton while the Hawks hope former Midland College star Spud Webb can come back with another 21 points and 12 assists as he did in Game 4.

Mavericks-Lakers

Dallas is in position to continue of streak of 17 years without a team repeating as NBA champion.

The Mavericks evened the best-of-seven series against defending champion Los Angeles with a 120-118 victory on Sunday, their second straight triumph at Reunion Arena. But they realize they have to win at least once at the Los Angeles Forum to win the series.

"It's a three-game series, and they still have the homecourt advantage," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said. "We can puff out our chests all we want, but we still have to prove ourselves on the court."

Nuggets-Rockets

Denver, which hasn't won in Houston since April 11, 1984, must stop that losing streak in order to advance in the playoffs.

The Rockets won the first two games of the series, but the Nuggets tied the series in Denver with 116-115 and 114-111 victories.

"When you win two in a row, it's got to be in our favor," Denver swingman Bill Hanzlik said. "We know in crunch time now that we'll come through."

Surging Cleveland wins again, draws 27,118 fans

Associated Press

Pat Tabler and the Cleveland Indians gave the Kansas City Royals a lesson in new math, and it added up to another victory for baseball's most surprising team.

Tabler, doing what he does better than anybody else, bounced a bases-loaded single off the chest of Kansas City second baseman Frank White in the 10th inning Monday night that gave Cleveland a 5-4 triumph.

The Indians extended their winning streak to eight games and remained in first place in the American League East, 12 percentage points ahead of the New York Yankees.

Tabler, with a career mark of 24-for-38 with the bases loaded, got his chance after Royals reliever Dan Quisenberry intentionally walked Brook Jacoby with one out and runners on first and third.

"You've got to load up the bases to set up the double play," said Cleveland starter Don Schulze, who was long gone by the time the situation arose. "But with Tabler up there, the game's over. The guy's about 99 for 100 with the bases loaded."

The Indians were playing at home for the first time after a nine-game road trip, and the start of the game was delayed for 15 minutes because of traffic jam caused by late arrivals.

"This town's excited, and the fans were into every pitch," said Phil Niekro, who relieved in the 10th inning and got the victory.

A crowd of 27,118 saw the Indians tie the game 4-4 in the bottom of the ninth against Quisenberry, 0-1, when Brett Butler chopped a two-out single over the head of third baseman George Bret that drove in Otis Nixon from third base. Quisenberry had not allowed a run in nine appearances this season before facing the Indians.

With one out in the 10th, Joe Carter reached base on shortstop Buddy Biancalana's error and scooted to third on Andre Thornton's single. That brought up Jacoby, and the Royals walked him to face Tabler.

Niekro, who started last Saturday, made his first relief appearance since 1984 and evened his record at 2-2.

"You get in a game like this, you go inning by inning, batter by batter," he said. "You don't worry about your next turn. You worry about this game, this inning, this out."

The Indians took an early 3-0 lead on Joe Carter's sacrifice fly in the third inning and Tony Bernazard's two-run homer in the fourth off Charlie Leibrandt.

Kansas City's Jim Sundberg had an RBI groundout in the seventh, and the Royals tied it in the eighth when reliever Ernie Camacho walked Steve Balboni with the bases loaded and Rudy Law hit a sacrifice fly.

Then, the Royals went ahead 4-3 in the top of the ninth when Sundberg doubled, took third on a sacrifice and scored on Willie Wilson's infield single.

But the Indians rallied in their half of the ninth to tie it, and won it in the 10th.

And even though Kansas City lost, Brett said he had enjoyed the game.

"It was fun playing here for a change," Brett said. "The Indians are for real."

Blue Jays 10, A's 6

Lloyd Moseby and Ernie Whitt hit two-run homers, sparking a 12-hit attack that led Toronto over Oakland.

The defending AL East champion Blue Jays won their second straight game, the first time they've won consecutive games since April 11.

Moseby, who had a two-run single during a five-run fourth inning, put Toronto ahead 8-6 in the sixth against Bill Krueger, 0-1, with his fourth home run of the season.

Mark Eichhorn pitched 4 2-3 innings of one-hit relief for the victory, striking out six and walking none. The only hit Eichhorn allowed was Mike Davis' second home run of the game and of the season.

Jose Canseco hit his eighth homer, a two-run shot that helped give the visiting A's a 4-0 lead in the second inning. Canseco has hit safely in 10 of his last 11 games.

Tigers 10, Rangers 3

Lance Parrish hit a pair of two-run homers and Dan Petry won his first game since April 14 as Detroit ripped Texas.

Parrish, batting only .163 entering the game, capped a six-run uprising in the fourth inning with a homer off rookie Jose Guzman, 1-5. Parrish hit his fifth homer of the season in the eighth off Dwayne Henry.

Petry, 2-2, gave up seven hits over eight innings.

Detroit broke open a 1-1 game in the fourth. Guzman got two quick outs before the game was delayed by rain for 25 minutes. When it resumed, Parrish and the Tigers exploded.

Pete Incaviglia hit a solo home run, his fourth, for the host Rangers.

Yankees 4, White Sox 1

Joe Niekro and Dave Righetti combined on a four-hitter and New York's Rickey Henderson broke a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning with a home run.

The Yankees played without Manager Lou Piniella, who was serving the first game of his two-game suspension imposed for bumping an umpire. Coach Joe Altobelli ran the team in Piniella's absence.

Niekro, 4-0, gave up four hits over 7 2-3 innings. Righetti finished up with hitless relief for his sixth save.

Henderson's homer into the upper deck in left field at Comiskey Park was his third of the season and came off Richard Dotson, 1-3.

Red Sox 3, Angels 0

Bruce Hurst scattered eight hits for the first shutout by a Boston pitcher this season.

Hurst, 2-2, struck out five and walked none. He allowed seven singles through the first five innings, and allowed a leadoff double in the ninth to Brian Downing, who had three of California's hits.

Brewers 3, Mariners 1

Milwaukee got only three hits off Mark Langston, but Paul Molitor had two of them — an RBI single in the fifth inning and his first home run of the season in the eighth.

Langston, 1-3, did not yield a hit until Molitor and Randy Ready got run-scoring singles in the fifth after a pair of walks.

Tim Leary, 3-2, gave up five hits in seven innings, including a home run in the seventh by Gorman Thomas, his sixth. Rookie reliever Dan Plesac held visiting Seattle hitless in the final two innings for his second save.

Woodson sinks Angels with homer

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Tracy Woodson hit a solo homer in the ninth inning to give the San Antonio Dodgers a 5-4 Texas League win over the Midland Angels before 1,771 fans in Angel Stadium Monday night, but that was only the tip of the iceberg.

"Our starting pitching is in disarray and our relief pitching is over extended," Midland Manager Joe Maddon said as he reached for a headache pill after the game.

Doug Banning, a three-game winner, was already on the Disabled List. Starter Don Timberlake came up with a finger blister and will miss a turn. Phil Venturino, Monday's starter against the Dodgers, left the game after the first two batters touched him for base hits to open the second.

"It's a sore shoulder. It has been bothering him for a while and he felt he was losing velocity off his fast ball," Maddon said. "We won't know the extent until an examination in the morning."

AND WOODSON hit his game-winning homer off Midland relief ace Dwayne Buice, who has been three-win, three-save insurance out of the bullpen for the Angels. But Monday everything San Antonio hit in the ninth was hard.

Woodson, a No. 3 draft pick out of North Carolina State in the 1984 draft, hit a Buice curve over the fence to the center field side of the scoreboard.

"I was just staying back trying to make contact," Woodson said. "Buice has been tough on me. He struck me out Sunday and he broke my bat over at our place."

Midland rallied to take a 3-2 lead in the fifth after being handcuffed by starter Andres Menes for four innings. Mark McLemore singled home one run and Glenn Walker doubled into the left field corner for two. At that point it looked like the tried and true script that Angels have used so often this year, come-from-behind and win in the late innings, was going to be successful again.

BUT SAN Antonio, getting well in Midland after six straight losses, tied it in the sixth and again in the seventh after Midland forged ahead 4-3 on Billie Merrifield's double, a single by David Heath and a run scoring force out by Mike Madril in the sixth.

San Antonio's offense, except for the Woodson homer, would have made the 1959 Go-Go Chicago White Sox proud. Four of their five runs scurried home on infield outs.

"Our relief pitching was the difference. Gary Legumina and Kevin Devine did the job," said San Antonio Manager Gary LaRocque. Legumina got the win and Devine retired the game's final two batters after Jeff Schaefer's lead off single in the ninth to get the save.

"Devine is just up from Vero Beach and this was his second appearance and first in a game-on-the-line situation," LaRocque said.

Canadiens nip Rangers

New York wins all but 4-3 OT score

Stanley Cup Playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Rangers outshot, outskated and generally outplayed the Montreal Canadiens. Outscoring them was something else, however.

"We had them on the ropes and they came back," Rangers goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck said after Monday night's 4-3 overtime loss to the Canadiens in the NHL's Stanley Cup playoffs. "I don't feel we lost that game — we were just out-lucked."

While the Rangers got most of the shots, holding a 47-29 advantage over Montreal, the Canadiens got the breaks, including a beauty at the end that left the Rangers virtually defenseless and finally down 3-0 in this best-of-seven Wales Conference final.

THE CANADIENS can wrap up the series in Game 4 Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden and go on to the Stanley Cup final against the winner of the Campbell Conference final between Calgary and St. Louis. That series is tied 1-1 with the Blues hosting the Flames in Game 3 tonight.

Only two other teams in NHL history have rebounded from a 3-0 deficit in the playoffs.

The big break for Montreal on Monday night came when New York defenseman James Patrick spilled over linesman Ray Scapinello at mid-ice in the overtime period. That cleared a 2-on-1 Canadien breakaway, as Mike McPhee stole the puck after Willie Huber fanned on it at mid-ice, sped down the sideboards and set up Claude Lemieux with the winning goal at the 9:41 mark.

"I don't want to blame him (Scapinello), but why did that play have to happen like that?" Patrick said. "It was a routine play; the puck just bounced and I got my skate tangled up with the linesman."

While Scapinello apologized to the Rangers for being in the wrong place at the wrong time, it was no satisfaction for New York Coach Ted Sator, who was angry enough to kick the wall next to the Ranger locker room after the game.

"It's one thing to lose," Sator said. "But not that way. I'd like to be beaten. It was an unfortunate circumstances for Montreal to be sprung like that. It wasn't a dangerous play until James ran over Scapinello. I wish I had an answer for what he was doing in the middle of the ice."

Sator also had to wonder what the Rangers had to do to beat Montreal, especially in the third period and the overtime period, when they outshot the Canadiens 25-5.

"The law of averages says if you keep shooting, it's going to go in," Sator said.

But the Rangers didn't figure on the kind of performance that the Canadiens got from rookie goaltender Patrick Roy.

"It was one of the best goaltending games I have ever opposed," said an admiring Vanbiesbrouck. "What can I say? I'm very depressed."

Roy called it one of his best efforts in the playoffs.

"I knew I would have to challenge the Rangers," Roy said. "We knew they needed this game and would try to get off a lot of shots. I figured on facing at least 35 shots in the game. However, I was really aggressive and confident and the defense played well in front of the net."

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead on Kelly Miller's goal at 3:15 of the first period, a 20-footer from the edge of the left faceoff circle. Montreal tied it at 6:00 when Stephane Richer, one of the NHL's top rookies this season, scored on a power play, a 20-footer from an almost impossible angle after coming from behind the net.

THE RANGERS made it 2-1 with a goal by Mike Ridley at 14:57 of the second period. The Canadiens tied it 2-2 at 5:06 of the third period on a breakaway by Mats Naslund, who took a nice pass from veteran defenseman Larry Robinson and beat Vanbiesbrouck on the glove side.

Bob Brooke gave New York a 3-2 lead at 12:54 of the third period, scoring from the lower left faceoff circle after taking a pass from behind the Montreal net from Wilf Paiement. But the Canadiens tied it on a power-play goal by Bobby Smith with just 2:04 remaining in regulation, putting a backhander past Vanbiesbrouck.

The stage was set for Lemieux's frantic game-winner then. McPhee saw the opportunity open up when Huber fanned on the puck.

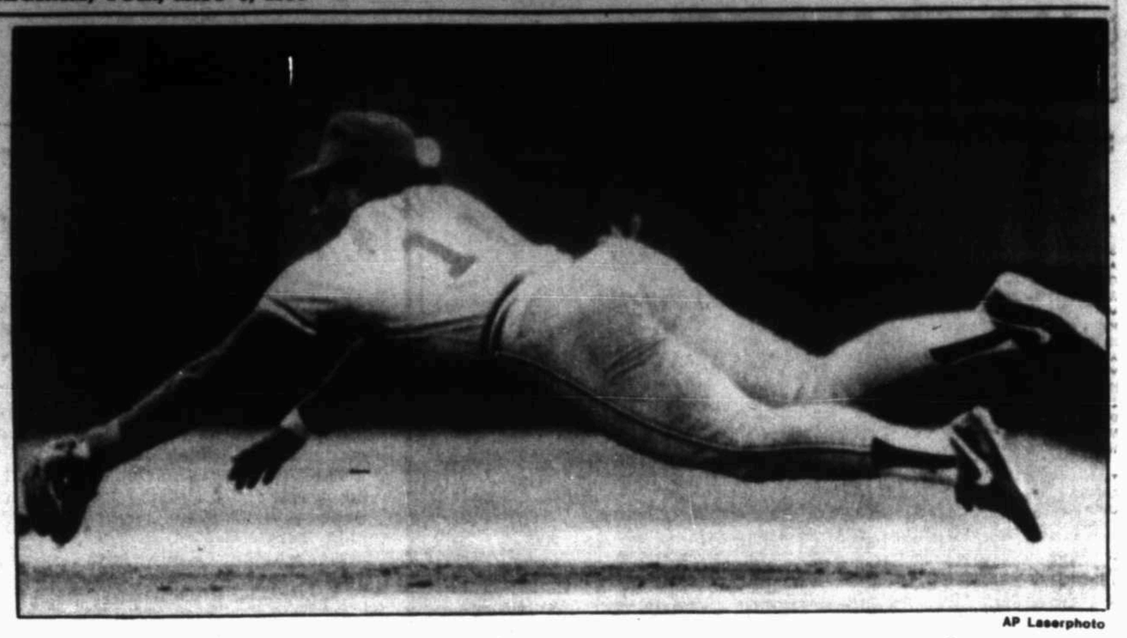

"I went around him, he grabbed me and hooked me," McPhee said of Huber. "But I managed to get away from him and bring the puck down ice. Lemieux was screaming for it in front of the net."

The puck sailed over Vanbiesbrouck's glove.

"I had a lot of space high, so I went there," Lemieux said. "I got a perfect pass."

The biggest reason that the Canadiens won, however, was Roy.

"The Rangers came up with a very good game," Naslund said. "Fortunately, Patrick Roy was hot tonight."

Reds' frustrations continue

NL Roundup

Associated Press

Pete Rose and the Cincinnati Reds thought they had a much needed victory in hand when the Atlanta Braves' bullpen stomped on their fingers.

Cincinnati had chances to prevent a nine-game losing streak Monday night, rallying in the ninth, 10th and 11th innings. But five Atlanta pitchers teamed up to extend the futility, forcing Cincinnati to strand five baserunners in the last three innings of a 4-3 loss.

Bob Horner hit a two-run homer in the 11th off Ted Power, 0-3, for the winning margin, and Paul Assenmacher got his first major-league victory with relief help from Gene Garber in the bottom of the inning.

"We were real close there," said Rose, the Reds player-manager who has suffered through 13 losses in the last 14 games and 11 in a row at home. "We had the right people up. They just didn't get the job done."

BRAVES MANAGER Chuck Tanner gave his bullpen credit for that.

"They all did a job," Tanner said. "They all got out of jams for us when it looked like they had the upper hand. They (the Reds) were in the driver's seat, and you've got to give our pitchers credit for working out of it."

The first eight innings saw left-handers Zane Smith of Atlanta and Tom Browning of Cincinnati trying to reverse their fortunes.

Browning, the rookie 20-game winner of last year still winless in six starts in 1986, got tripped up in the first inning. Browning served up a sacrifice fly to Horner and an RBI single to Andres Thomas, and now has allowed a combined 11 runs in the first inning of his last four starts.

"It's tough to swallow," Browning said. "I don't know how to explain it."

"He pitched great after the first inning," Rose said. "I think he's starting to get a mental complex about the first inning."

Smith was trying to break a career streak of seven appearances against Cincinnati without a decision. He took a seven-hitter and a 2-1 lead into the ninth, when Dave Concepcion led off with his second double of the game and took third on a wild pitch.

Jeff Dedmon came on to serve up a game-tying single to Tracy Jones, one of the rookie's three hits.

"They tell me it all evens out, sooner or later," Smith lamented.

Craig McMurtry got the last two outs to send it to extra innings. The Reds got the lead-off hitter on second with none out in the 10th, but Assenmacher, 1-0, pitched out of that trouble.

POWER QUICKLY put the Reds on track for their 11th consecutive home loss, the most in one season by a Cincinnati club this century. Dale Murphy hit his first pitch for a double, and Horner lined a 2-1 fastball for his fourth homer of the season.

"Murph was on second base, there were no outs, and he had just missed with a breaking ball," Horner said. "He couldn't afford to walk me. I was sitting on a fastball. That's what he threw me. It was a little up."

Two-out singles by Jones and Buddy Bell chased Assenmacher in the 11th, and Bo Diaz singled home a run off Garber. The right-hander got Ron Oester to ground out to end the game and earn his second save.

"I want to be in that situation," Garber said. "It makes the game a little more fun when you can pitch in game situations. I still feel I'm at my best in that situation."

Rose doesn't know what else to do to get the Reds out of their worst home slump of the century.

"We don't even get a bloop (hit)," Rose said. "That's the way it's going. When it rains, it pours, and it's been raining for a very long time."

Expos 6, Phillies 4

Neither Montreal catcher Mike Fitzgerald nor Philadelphia Manager John Felske was surprised when Expos Manager Buck Rodgers flashed the bunt sign in the eighth inning.

"I consider myself a pretty good bunter," Fitzgerald said after scoring Tim Wallach to break a 4-4 tie.

"I just finished telling them to be alive for the squeeze," Felske said, "But he put down a perfect bunt."

Kent Tekulve, 0-1, gave up a lead-off single to Wallach, who moved to third on a hit-and-run single by Vance Law.

Dave Rucker relieved Tekulve, and got pinch-hitter Jason Thompson on a popup. Then Fitzgerald, batting for winning pitcher Dan Schatzeder, laid down his bunt.

Schatzeder, 1-0, pitched one hitless inning of relief. Jeff Reardon got his third save to give Montreal its third straight victory.

Mitch Webster, who drove in two runs, homered for Montreal. Milt Thompson hit one for Philadelphia.

Aggies beat long odds

SWC Baseball

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The Texas Aggie baseball team went into last weekend's games with long odds and little hope of winning any part of the Southwest Conference title.

They came away with a share of the league crown with the Texas Longhorns. Aggie Coach Mark Johnson has seen it happen before, as an assistant coach at Arizona in 1976.

Johnson reminded his team last Tuesday that Arizona lost to Arizona State seven times that season before beating the Sun Devils in the NCAA College World Series championship game.

The Aggies earned a share of the title Sunday when Houston defeated the Longhorns 5-3, and 4-2 in a season-ending doubleheader and the Aggies won a pair from Texas Christian.

The final games left Texas and Texas A&M tied for the title with 16-5 records, breaking a string of seven consecutive outright titles by Texas.

The Aggies also shared in the SWC basketball championship and won the football title.

"It feels great," Johnson said. "We'd talked about it being a long shot and we said stranger things have happened.

"It would have been tragic if we hadn't taken care of business and Houston had beaten Texas."

Texas will play Baylor and the Aggies face Arkansas in the opening games of the SWC tournament May 16-17 in College Station. The winner gets an automatic invitation to the NCAA playoffs.

The Aggies, 39-21, were swept by the Longhorns in a weekend series April 25-26.

"But we never gave up," said senior Mike Scanlin, the Aggies' leading hitter. "We bounced back from an emotional sweep in Austin. We came in determined to sweep TCU and hope for the best."

Scanlin leads the Aggies with a .333 average and has a school record 18 home runs. Scanlin has stolen 21 bases in 24 attempts this season and has 41 career thefts and 41 career homers.

A&M's pitching staff has been solidified this season by a pair of pitchers who were at other schools last season.

Senior Dale Barry, 9-1, with a 2.23 earned run average, transferred to A&M last year when Texas-El Paso dropped baseball. Junior Pat Wernig, 6-2, 3.07, came to the Aggies after Oklahoma City University dropped the sport.

A&M's sweep of TCU alone would not have resulted in a Aggie title. It took a rare Houston doubleheader victory.

Texas had beaten the Cougars 11 straight games over the past four seasons.

"It would be nice if we could send Houston a card or something," Scanlin said.

USFL selects Iowa's Haight first

NEW YORK (AP) — Iowa tackle Mike Haight was selected by the Orlando Renegades today as the first player picked in the USFL open draft.

One week ago the New York Jets made the 6-foot-3, 275-pound Haight their No. 1 pick, the 22nd player taken overall in the NFL draft.

The USFL's open draft, coming two weeks after its territorial draft, involved 12 rounds — 92 players being selected by the eight teams. Some teams had fewer or more than 12 picks, the result of trades with now-defunct franchises.

In the April 22 territorial draft, the USFL divided up the negotiating rights of many of the top collegians, thus diluting the field available today.

Of the 27 players taken by NFL teams in the first round of its draft a week ago, 15 already had been taken in the USFL's territorial draft. That included Heisman Trophy-winning Auburn tailback Bo Jackson, picked by Birmingham.

Each USFL team had 10 minutes to make its first-round pick. In the second-through-fifth rounds, the time was cut to five minutes and in the sixth-through-12th rounds the limit was three minutes.

Haight's agent, Jack Mills, said he had spoken only briefly with the Jets and that Haight was very open to the idea of playing in the USFL.

After the Renegades picked Haight, the Arizona Wranglers used up four of their allotted 10 minutes and selected Oklahoma nose tackle Tony Casillas, the first-round selection of the Atlanta Falcons and No. 2 behind Jackson in the NFL draft.

The Jacksonville Bulls, picking third, took less than a minute to choose Youngstown State wide receiver Robert Thompson. The Philadelphia Eagles made him a sixth-round pick, the 142nd player taken in the NFL draft.

Tampa Bay was one of those teams missing choices because of trades with folded franchises. The Bandits, up fourth, were without a first-round pick, the result of a trade with the Denver Gold for defensive back Bret Clark.

Meanwhile, Bob Woolf and Leigh Steinberg, two high-powered lawyers and sports agents, say there's one major difference between the National Football League and the USFL when it comes to negotiating player contracts.

"With the USFL, no deferred money," the Boston-based Woolf said. "I've had to be more cautious. A lot more. I have to see the money right now."

"If I'm talking to the USFL," Steinberg, from Berkeley, Calif., said, "I'm talking about dollars in 1986. After that, who knows what's going to happen?"

Logical, considering that in 1984 the USFL player draft involved 18 teams. Last year, there were 14 teams. Today, eight teams took part. That computes out to something like 400 former USFL players now out of work.

Next Monday, the USFL will enter U.S. District Court for the start of the trial in its $1.32 billion antitrust suit against the NFL. "I think they're placing great stock in the lawsuit," Woolf said of the USFL owners.

For now, though, the USFL, approaching its fourth season and first as a fall-winter challanger to the entrenched NFL, is conducting its open draft of college players. In some respects, its importance has been diminished by the USFL's own practices — the territorial draft April 22 and the owners' decision last year to ignore most of the best players available.

A year ago, the only player of note the USFL pursued was one of Woolf's clients, Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie, the Boston College quarterback.

Funeral services set for baseball's Richards

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning for Paul Richards, who worked for both Texas major league baseball teams and who was remembered as one of the game's best judges of talent.

Richards collapsed and died Sunday after finishing a round of golf at the Waxahachie Country Club, where he had a house next to the No. 2 green. He was 77.

Funeral services will be Wednesday morning at Hillcrest Burial Park here.

"No matter how much baseball changes, it will still need the human element and Paul was one of the most innovative," said Roland Hemond, who was vice president of the Chicago White Sox when Richards returned to the club in 1976.

"It's too bad the kind of knowledge he had couldn't be stored in a capsule for use for all the present and future generations of baseball," Hemond said.

Richards began his professional baseball career in 1926, when he got $1,000 to sign with the Brooklyn Dodgers as an infielder. He became a catcher in 1930 with a Dodger farm club in Macon, Ga.

Although he played three games for the Dodgers in 1932 before spending two seasons with the New York Giants and a year with the Philadelphia Athletics, Richards drifted back into the minors and decided his future was not as a player.

"I didn't think I could hit well enough to get back in the majors as a player, and as I was very much interested in baseball and studied it as much as I could, I thought if I could become a manager, I might get to the big leagues again," he recalled.

Orioles Manager Earl Weaver said Richards "was a man you could learn the game from. He was a man who never gave up on a person. I tried to learn all I could from him. Not everything he did I believed in, but there's no doubt he had a big impact on me."

ANGELS—

"We kept taking the lead and losing it," said Maddon. "You have to give their pitchers credit."

As a result of injuries, Vance Lovelace will get a starting opportunity in tonight's 7 p.m. game and relief pitcher Rafael Pimentel will start in the series final Wednesday for Timberlake.

"We will use Pimentel as a spot starter for a while," Maddon said.

HALO HOOPS— Woodson and Midland catcher Doug Davis were roommates at NC State. "We had a good team that year, 32-8," says the Dodger third baseman. Last year he played at Vero Beach and hit .256. "Those parks over there are tough on hitters. They are all major league parks, 360 down the lines and dead air," Woodson says. "I like this park as well as any I've played on since turning pro."...Merrifield came up with a couple of sparkling stops at third on Woodson in the third and Mike Devereaux in the ninth, but the night's field gem was turned in by McLemore. He made a lunging one handed catch into the hole to snare Chris Gwynn's liner between first and second....

Scott Brayton wants more than one-lap Indy 500 record.

Brayton would like Indy pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Scott Brayton, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway one-lap record holder, has been living with contrasting emotions for a year.

The 27-year-old driver, who had never started higher than 26th in three previous Indianapolis 500-mile races, was the first qualifier last year and broke the track record on each of his first three laps.

Then, after his third lap at 214.199 mph, the transmission on his Buick V6-powered race car went sour, and so did his chance for a pole-position start in the race.

"Last year was very successful. It was the first time I set a record at Indianapolis, but at the same time, it was a double kind of feeling," says Brayton, whose slower fourth lap allowed Pancho Carter to eventually grab the pole. "I was very high at one point and at a real low after that."

Brayton's four-lap average was 212.354 mph, which was a record until Carter later qualified at 212.583. Brayton started from the middle of the front row and lasted only 19 laps before turbocharger problems gave him a 30th place standing. Carter didn't even last that long, however, finishing 33rd — dead last — when his oil pump went out after six laps.

"If 'ifs' were accomplishments, we'd all be record holders and we'd all sit on the pole," Brayton said Monday as his crew worked on his new March-Buick race car in his Gasoline Alley garage.

"This year, we're coming back with the Buick V6. I just felt it's a great product. I believe it's the best-built American V6. I felt I needed to give it another year of development."

CARTER, WHO also used a Buick engine last year, has switched to the more popular Cosworth this season. One big reason for Brayton's loyalty to the Buick is his association with Brayton Engineering, run by his father, Lee, a former Indy-car driver who has been developing the Buick for Indy competition.

"If I wasn't involved in the every-day development of the Buick, I might not feel as strongly as I do," Brayton said. "But I know it can be done."

Brayton won't even guess what speed will be necessary to win the pole position during qualifications on Saturday. But he says it probably will be a record, and he expects to be among the contenders for the top starting spot.

"It takes a combination of things," he said of qualifying for the pole. "You need a good draw (for the order of qualifying), a very competitive car, a team that peaks with the driver at the right time and good conditions on the track."

Starting today's practice, 23 drivers had topped 200 mph, and Brayton said the trend of greater competition among a lot more drivers in recent years is easily explained.

"There's more money, more talented mechanics, engineers, engine builders, as well as drivers," he said. "You're obviously going to build stronger teams. Racing has evolved from the '70s, when just a few guys had the money and the equipment. Now a lot of them get a competitive product.

"It used to be if you didn't have money for a new car, you bought an old one which wasn't really competitive any more. They've really done a better job equalizing the sport."

Gusting winds kept speeds down for most of Monday's practice, but Carter and defending champion Danny Sullivan joined the growing list of drivers to top 200 mph and Rick Mears improved his best lap to more than 211.

Only late in the practice session did the speeds begin to climb, and Mears, who earlier had a lap at 207, went back onto the track and turned a quick circuit at 211.118. His best on Sunday was 210.329.

The top speed after three days of practice for the May 25 race remained 211.764, recorded Sunday by Mario Andretti. Andretti's best effort Monday was 207.612 mph.

ARCO Games set Saturday

From Staff Reports

The ARCO Jesse Owens Games will be held be held Saturday at Memorial Stadium and are being sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Dept. and ARCO Oil and Gas Company.

Boys and girls born between 1972 and 1979 and residents of the Permian Basin are eligible for the meet. There are no entry fees and all competitors receive a T-shirt.

Deadline is 5 p.m. Saturday at the Parks and Recreation, 300 Baldwin St., Midland. No entries will be accepted the day of the meet.

The ARCO Jesse Owens games began nationwide in 1964 and Midland's is one of 600 events held nationally. More than one million athletes participate.

The Games are based on Jesse Owens' belief that organized recreational competition is an effective tool for developing and building character in children and for promoting ideals of friendship and sportsmanship.

The goal for this year's participants will be the Southwest Regional in Dallas June 25 and then the nationals in Los Angeles in August. The championship trips to Dallas and possibly Los Angeles are all expenses paid for the 42 Midland meet winners.

Criticism sends Berry into pro cage ranks

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite all the accolades Walter Berry received this season, he said it was the criticism, not the praise, that influenced his decision to enter the pro ranks.

"This year was a great one for me, and still I was criticized that I was not top-notch material," said the 6-foot-8 forward from St. John's, who was selected Player of the Year by The Associated Press. "If my stock would go down a great deal next year, if I had a poor season, they would forget about everything and then where would I be? So this is why I feel I have to go now."

Berry, who said only two weeks ago that he would return to the Redmen for his senior year, became eligible for the NBA's June 17 draft by submitting his name in a letter postmarked last Saturday.

The league said it required a letter postmarked by midnight Saturday requesting eligibility, and not a public announcement.

"All I know in my heart is that I want to play (in the NBA)," Berry said of his change of mind. "No matter where I get picked I've got to live with it. Right now, all I want to do is get on a team."

But some NBA officials question whether Berry, who averaged 23 points, 11.1 rebounds and set a school record with 76 blocked shots this season, is prepared for the pros.

"He's not ready to play out our level yet," NBA superscout Marty Blake said last month. "He'd better stay in school, work on his outside shot, handling the ball, shooting the jumper. Walter is an inside player right now. He can't do that in pro ball."

On Monday, Blake, interviewed by telephone from his Atlanta office, declined to discuss Berry specifically or any of the other undergraduates until the NBA formally announces their eligibility later this week.

But when asked to rank the best forwards, Blake mentioned Len Bias of Maryland, Chuck Person of Auburn, Kenny Walker of Kentucky and Brad Sellers of Ohio State. He said he wouldn't include Berry, regardless of whether he was formally eligible.

In deciding to turn pro early, Berry joined center William Bedford of Memphis State, center-forward Chris Washburn of North Carolina State, guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington of Syracuse, forward John Williams of Louisiana State and forward Michael Graham, who last played for the 1984 Georgetown University championship team.

Ali wants boxing title one more time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former heavweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali wants to win the title back one more time.

Ali, the only man to win the heavyweight championship three times, also wants to prove that the government conspired to deny him conscientious objector status during the Vietnam War which led to the World Boxing Association stripping him of the title in 1967. He was not permitted to fight for three years.

Ali, now 44, filed suit in U.S. District Court in 1984 claiming his 1967 conviction for draft evasion violated his constitutional rights and demanding that the WBA restore his title for the years 1967 to 1971.

The former champ and his lawyers were in court on Monday requesting that they be given a chance to prove that unidentified high-ranking Justice Department officials "conspired" to deny his conscientious objector status exempting him from the draft during the Vietnam War. He later was convicted of draft evasion, but the Supreme Court overturned the verdict in 1971.

Ali's attorneys want the court to order "discovery," permitting them to study government-held documents and interview former officials to prove their point.

The government countered that U.S. District Court Judge John Garrett Penn should dismiss Ali's complaint because all of his claims are barred by the statute of limitations, the time beyond which an action can not be brought.

There is a six-year statute of limits on most of Ali's claims against the government agencies and officials and a three-year limit against the WBA.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Edith Marshall said it would "plainly be unnecessary, burdensom and wasteful of the parties' time and resources to proceed with discovery in this case."

Judge Penn took the case under advisement.

Ali's attorney, former Justice Department official Jerris Leonard, argued that the government "conspiracy" began in 1966 when "government officials concealed the fact that Ali was entitled to conscientious objector statutes. Unfortunately, years passed before lawyers discovered there was a basis for the suit."

Asked by reporters — and by Judge Penn and Marshall — why Ali hadn't filed suit earlier, Leonard replied:

"That's a question we always ask when the law changes, but who would have thought 20 years ago that government officials would have conspired to deprive this man of his constitutional rights."

In court, Leonard told Penn that the claim to the existance of the conspiracy is based, among other things, on the fact that "Muahammad Ali was one of the best recognized figures in America.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A cooperative attitude helps you put over a complex business or financial deal. A new romantic interest could lead to some awkward moments. Be discreet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An unconventional approach could provide the answers you seek. Travel advances your career or business aims. New connections lead to greater financial or romantic success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A recent misunderstanding can be smoothed over. Show your willingness to listen to other people's opinions. Optimism is often contagious. Emphasize the positive when dealing with a difficult individual.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial pressures subside when you change spending habits. Seek family members' cooperation in keeping expenses down. You are becoming more and more aware of partner's real needs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You do some of your best work when under pressure. Profits rise. An older person comes to you with a special request. Fulfill it if doing so will not strain your resources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An unusual opportunity or choice presents itself. Be innovative when looking for ways to reduce entertainment costs. Refuse to commit yourself to people or projects that bore you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A trial balloon you sent aloft returns to earth bearing great financial news! Success depends on your ability to pick the right projects and associates. Trust your instincts. Larger profits can be made.

The bidding:

1 ♠	1 ♡	Dble	4 ♡
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♡

You can't afford to ignore spot cards. Possession of intermediate cards can determine how you tackle a suit. This hand is an excellent example.

In the partnership style, North's double of one heart was "negative," i.e., for takeout in the unbid suits and not for penalties. East's raise to four hearts was well-judged and made life difficult for South. He eventually decided to gamble on the fact that his partner held a useful ace, and contracted for the small slam in clubs.

West led the ace of hearts and continued the suit. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps in two rounds and now was faced with the problem of how to tackle the spade suit. There was nothing in the bidding to indicate which defender was likely to hold the queen. The fact that East had shown out in clubs made it a bit more likely that he held length in spades, but that alone was not conclusive. Which way would you take the spade finesse and why?

The key factor in declarer's decision was that he possessed the eight of spades. That card meant he could protect against the possiblity that East started with four spades headed by the Q-9. Declarer led a spade to the ace and returned the ten of spades. East covered and South won the king. When West failed to follow, it was a simple matter for declarer to get back to dummy with a trump to lead another spade and take the marked finesse for the nine.

Note that if West had started with four spades to the Q-9, there is no way that declarer could have brought in the suit without loss.

Elizabeth Taylor honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor "will always survive the shifting passages of time," actor Roddy McDowell said in a packed Avery Fisher Hall as the Film Society of Lincoln Center gave her a lifetime achievement award.

"In an era that seems in the main to devour its heroes...it is wondrous and remarkable to note the fact that Elizabeth Taylor's stardom has spanned four decades," McDowell, one of her earliest co-stars, said Monday night.

Miss Taylor, 54, waved to a crowd packed with friends and fans, and viewed with the audience clips from 50 of her films, among them "There's One Born Every Minute" (1942), "Lassie Come Home" (1943), and "National Velvet" (1944).

Margaret O'Brien and Jane Powell, two other early co-stars, reminisced from the stage about years together as child actresses attending school on a movie studio lot.

Miss Powell, a Taylor co-star in "A Date With Judy" (1948), brought down the house by telling the audience, "Elizabeth was a bridesmaid at my first wedding, and I was a bridesmaid at her first wedding. I'm so glad we stopped this bridesmaid stuff. It could get to be a full-time job."

Miss Taylor has been married seven times.

Winners of the award, which has been given since 1972, include Charlie Chaplin; directors Alfred Hitchcock, John Huston, Billy Wilder and Federico Fellini; Bob Hope; and actress Claudette Colbert.

Shore

WINCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Dinah Shore says she'll never forget the support hometown folks gave her budding singing career when she was growing up here.

Miss Shore returned home last weekend as guest of honor as part of the state's Homecoming '86 project, a yearlong celebration of Tennessee's heritage proclaimed by Gov. Lamar Alexander.

She said she remembers sitting on the counter of her father's store in town and being asked by customers to sing.

"Like the old Western song, I don't remember a discouraging word," she said. "I don't know that there was a time when I was growing up that they didn't encourage me. From day one, they felt I had the potential and they believed I had it. I might have had all kinds of self-doubts, but I never heard a discouraging word from them."

Because of the support, she named her production company "Winchester."

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The shortage of dignified roles for blacks in Hollywood films has kept such distinguished actors as Sidney Poitier off the screen, singer-actor Harry Belafonte said in an interview with a Cuban magazine.

"Poitier wants to act, but there are no roles suited to his dignified personality," Belafonte was quoted as saying by the magazine Culture and Revolution. Portions of the interview were carried Monday by the Cuban government news agency Prensa Latina, monitored in Mexico City.

Black actors have sought alternatives in theater and with independent film companies only to find the same limitations they encounter in Hollywood, Belafonte said.

"I think we're all beginning to understand that it's necessary to find real alternatives," he said. "Up to now it's a matter of robbing Peter to pay Paul. So the alternatives don't work."

Belafonte, who has expanded his career into production, said he was planning a TV mini-series about Nelson Mandela, a leader of the African National Congress jailed in South Africa since 1964 on conspiracy and sabotage charges, and his wife, Winnie, a lawyer and prominent figure in the anti-apartheid movement in South Africa.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Avital Shcharansky won't be accompanying her husband, freed Soviet human rights activist Anatoly, on his first trip to the United States because she is pregnant, a friend of the couple says.

"Her doctor advised her to remain here to preserve her pregnancy," Alexander Lunts, who emigrated to Israel from the Soviet Union in 1976, said Monday.

Shcharansky, 38, was reunited with his 34-year-old wife in February after a 12-year separation during which he was imprisoned nine years in Soviet prison or labor camps for his human rights activities.

Lunts said Shcharansky will leave Wednesday for a two-week trip during which he will meet President Reagan and members of Congress and will address a New York rally for Soviet Jewry.

Harris

NEW YORK (AP) — Former school headmistress Jean Harris, imprisoned for the slaying of Scarsdale Diet developer Dr. Herman Tarnower, says she's sorry she didn't plead innocent by reason of extreme emotional disturbance.

Mrs. Harris told the Independent Network News she blamed her lawyers for advising her to plead innocent.

"I was told by my lawyers that to plead extreme emotional disturbance I must say I murdered Hy," she said. "I didn't murder Hy and nothing in the world would induce me to say it. I've since been told that wasn't true at all. I didn't have to say I'd murdered someone."

She also said her emotional disturbance was caused by a 10-year addiction to amphetamines prescribed by Tarnower.

INN said it interviewed Mrs. Harris at the Bedford Hills Correctional Facility in Westchester County on Thursday.

Mrs. Harris, 63, insisted as she did during her 1981 trial that Tarnower died struggling over the gun she was trying to use to kill herself.

Daniels

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Frank Arthur Daniels, chairman of the board of the company that publishes Raleigh's two daily newspapers, died Monday of congestive heart failure. He was 81.

Daniels began working in the pressroom for the The News and Observer Publishing Co. in 1927. He became treasurer of The News and Observer in 1935, general manager in 1942, president in 1956, publisher in 1966 and board chairman in 1970. The News and Observer, a morning newspaper, purchased The Raleigh Times, an afternoon paper, in 1955. Daniels served on The Associated Press board of directors from 1964 to 1968. His son, Frank Daniels Jr., is president of the publishing company and a member of the AP board of directors.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell to a new post-World War II low against the Japanese yen today, but rose against other currencies. Gold prices were mixed.

The dollar closed at 165.20 yen as the Tokyo economic summit of seven industrialized democracies ended with a statement pledging new efforts to stabilize currency markets, but without specific measures to restrain the yen.

The dollar, however, rose against the yen in later trading in Europe on Tuesday and was quoted at 167.25 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

—2.2095 West German marks, up from 2.1852

—1.8432 Swiss francs, up from 1.8272

—7.0375 French francs, up from 6.9625

—2.4772 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4575

—1,505.50 Italian lire, up from 1,499.60

—1.3772 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3767.

In London, where markets were closed for a holiday on Monday, the British pound was quoted at $1.535. That was cheaper than its $1.5435 close in Frankfurt on Monday, but nearly 1 cent more expensive than late Friday's $1.5257 in London.

Gold opened on the London bullion market at a bid price of $342.25 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $342.50. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $341.55.

In Zurich, the bid price was $341.75, down from $343 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.20 to close at a bid $341.64.

In New York on Monday, gold fell 40 cents to close at $342.60.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.15 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $5.14.

Reagan ends exemptions for oil companies still in Libya

U.S. Steel prepared to abandon Libyan assets

New York Times News Service

TOKYO — The Reagan administration has decided that by June 30 it will end the special exemptions allowing American oil companies to continue operating in Libya, senior State Department officials said Monday.

The administration made the decision last week, they said, so it could argue more credibly at the Tokyo summit meeting for America's allies to impose economic sanctions of their own against Libya. The decision, a senior official said, contributed to the anti-terrorist statement issued here Monday.

Despite Washington's antagonism to Libya, the ending of the temporary exemptions could provide a financial windfall for Tripoli. With an absence of other bidders, Libya may be able to buy the American assets at steep discounts.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who has advocated the toughest possible course against Libya, Monday hinted at the end of the temporary exemptions when he told reporters that American oil companies "will be out of Libya before long." He added, "They will be out, one way or another, and it won't be very long."

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker 3d also said at an evening news conference that "at some point I think the United States has to be able to make the case to its allies, if we're asking them to take action, that there are no longer United States companies operating in Libya with the consent of the United States government."

Earlier in the day, Baker said in a television interview that if the oil companies did not sell their assets in Libya by "a certain date, then we'll probably just have to pull the string and say: 'Well, you've had all the time we can give you. You really got to leave.'"

Following the airport attacks at Rome and Vienna last December, President Reagan announced a trade embargo against Libya, including the severing of all American commerce with that country. The embargo was to take effect Feb. 1, but at that time the administration accepted the oil companies' argument that a pullout would give the Libyans a windfall.

So the rules let any American companies stay in Libya temporarily if they would have to forfeit large sums to the Libyans by leaving abruptly.

But the companies were told they had to liquidate their assets in Libya as soon as possible and in the meantime to put earnings from the oilfields in Libya into special escrow accounts. The oil companies had hoped to be able to sell their assets, such as oil-exploring equipment, to European concerns. But the Reagan administration, seeking to persuade the Europeans and Japanese to halt their own oil trade with Libya, forbade that approach. In effect, this limited the companies to selling their assets only to the Libyans.

The main companies that were given licenses to keep operating were Amerada Hess, Du Pont's Conoco, W.R. Grace, U.S. Steel's Marathon and Occidental Petroleum. They ship about 500,000 barrels of Libyan crude oil to their European refineries daily.

David Roderick, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of U.S. Steel, has announced that Marathon is prepared to abandon $68 million of investments in Libya if the oil company can't find a buyer by President Reagan's June 30 deadline.

However, he said he hoped the U.S. government would reimburse Marathon for its Libyan investments, which he told stockholders was about $68 million, mostly in oil reserves.

Experts voice concern over new policies

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Banking and regulatory experts are voicing growing concern over new policies and proposed actions by federal agencies to grant energy companies and their banks lenient accounting and regulatory treatment in dealing with large losses from falling energy prices.

The experts fear that such liberal treatment — which they consider typical of government regulatory action when political pressures get too great — could engender more accommodation down the road, put off tough actions that should be taken now and encourage bankers and energy executives to take excessive risks in an attempt to regain profitability.

"It's the slippery slope all over again," said Joseph A. Grundfest, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. "Once you start rubberizing one area of accounting or regulation, you have to rubberize other areas as well. Unless you contain this kind of action, history tells us it gets out of hand very easily."

A senior banking regulator, who asked not to be identified, said: "It places us in a very awkward position in dealing with other institutions. After giving leniency to one bank, it'll be hard to pressure another bank that gets into trouble to do more. And even if we do, it might not withstand a legal challenge."

The government's rationale for more lenient accounting and regulatory treatment is that the fall in oil prices is only temporary, that a recovery is likely by the end of the year and that the current requirements could touch off mandatory loan defaults, insolvencies and disciplinary actions by bank regulators, such as management removals.

"We need continued discipline in accounting," said Richard C. Adkerson, a managing director at Arthur Andersen & Co.'s Houston office and a supporter of the proposed changes.

Last month, the government's three banking agencies — the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the Federal Reserve Board and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency — notified their examiners to let energy banks, as well as institutions with large agricultural loans, record fewer losses on certain bad loans and to let the banks' net worth fall below the minimum level in an effort to prevent another year of a record number of bank failures.

On Tuesday, the SEC plans to vote on a proposal that would suspend indefinitely an accounting requirement that energy companies take write-downs on a quarterly basis if the current value of their reserves falls below the assets recorded on the balance sheets. The hope is that after falling by 50 percent or more in recent months, the price of oil will recover, making any write-downs unnecessary.

In an accounting procedure used by about half of the nation's energy companies, the costs of exploration and drilling of both successful and dry wells are carried on their books as assets, unless and until the market value of their underlying reserve falls below that figure — which has now happened to many companies.

L. Decker Dawson

Midland man nominated for SEG president

TULSA — L. Decker Dawson, president of Dawson Geophysical Co., Midland, has been nominated for the office of president of the Tulsa-based Society of Exploration Geophysicists.

The term is for SEG's 1986-87 fiscal year. Also nominated for the position is Robert J. Graebner, senior vice president and manager of technology development, Geophysical Service, Inc., Dallas.

SEG is the world's largest association of exploration geophysicists, with nearly 18,000 members in approximately 100 countries.

Dawson has been an SEG member since 1948 and served the society as a member of the professional affairs and public relations committees and was SEG secretary-treasurer during 1984-95.

He is a past president and honorary life member of the Permian Basin Geophysical Society and currently serves as a director of the International Association of Geophysical Contractors and is past chairman of the board and honorary life member of that organization.

Dawson earned his bachelor's degree in civil engineering at Oklahoma State University and began his career with Magnolia Petroleum Co. After serving in the U.S. Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Naval Reserve during World War II, he was employed by Republic Exploration Co. until 1952 when he founded his present company.

He is an active member of the European Association of Exploration Geophysicists, associate member of American Association of Petroleum Geologists and a member of the Geology Foundation advisory council at the University of Texas at Austin.

Car sales off 5.9 percent while light truck sales rise 9.2 percent

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of new American-made automobiles slipped 5.9 percent in the last 10 days of April from the comparable period last year, while light-truck sales rose 9.2 percent, the seven major manufacturers reported on Monday.

For the period, auto makers sold an average of 33,165 cars a day in eight selling days, compared with 35,228 a day sold in eight days last year.

Imported-car sales, which are reported only at the end of each month, rose 26.1 percent in April and gained a 25.9 percent share of the automobile industry. Light-truck sales by importers rose 15.8 percent in the month.

The seasonally adjusted annual selling rate for domestic cars was set at 8.1 million units for the April 21-30 period as well as for the entire month, down from 8.2 million for late April in 1985 and 8.7 million for all of April 1985. The annual rate for imports jumped to 3.1 million, from 2.4 million last year.

Most of the domestic companies had low-interest rate incentives in effect all month, but without the sharp impact of those that stimulated sales last fall. Although the rates were lowered toward the end of the month to record low levels, little effect on sales was obvious, possibly as a result of the overall decline in interest rates. Also, the low rates, reaching 5.8 percent at the Chrysler Corp., are offered on limited models and for shorter terms than the five-year loan that has become popular recently.

Ann C. Knight, an auto analyst with Paine Webber, said: "These sales are a very clear indication of how price sensitive car buyers are. Over all, this is just exactly where you would expect to be given the selective incentive rates."

Philip Fricke of Goldman, Sachs & Co., said: "The fact that sales are down in the last 10 days is not significant given the fact that the selling rate at this time last year was very strong, among the strongest 10-day periods for all of 1985." He also said that the incentive campaigns were "reaching the point of diminishing returns," with each new program having less effect. "That's not to say they have no impact," he added.

The Ford Motor Co. was alone among the Big Three to report a rise in sales. Ford, which had slow car sales in the period last year, reported car sales of 70,761, up 7.9 percent on a daily selling rate basis. Light-truck sales jumped to 46,629, an 18.3 percent increase from a year ago.

Louis E. Lataif, vice president of sales operations for Ford, said: "Industry sales have followed an irregular pattern but the overall trend is in line with our forecasts."

The General Motors Corp. said that car sales of 168,201 were off 8.3 percent from last year but that its light-truck sales were up 5.7 percent to 55,038 units.

The Chrysler Corp. reported selling 44,895 new cars, down 9 percent from 1985, and 20,743 domestically produced light trucks, 0.3 percent more than last year.

The American Motors Corp. said its dealers delivered 2,002 new cars, a 67.1 percent drop from last year. Jeep sales by the company improved 15.4 percent, to 7,544. Separately, AMC said on Monday that it was instituting a new incentive program designed to enable dealers to match the customer incentives being offered by the Big Three.

Sales by Volkswagen of America were off 3.3 percent in the last 10 days of April, to 3,178, and the American Honda Motor Co. also reported declining sales of 8,325, off 1.6 percent, on a daily selling rate basis, from last year.

The Nissan Motor Corp. sold 1,125 new cars, up 43.7 percent from last year, when it was just beginning to retail autos built at its Tennessee plant. Domestically produced truck sales by Nissan dipped 6.1 percent, to 3,428.

For all of April, GM sold 41.3 percent of all car and light trucks sold in the United States, including domestically produced and imported. Ford's share of the market was 21.2 percent, Chrysler's 12 percent, Toyota sold 5.3 percent, Nissan 4.4 percent, Honda 4.2 percent, American Motors and Volkswagen 1.5 percent each. Mazda had a share of 1.8 percent and Subaru made up 1.2 percent of the market.

Petroleum Museum seeks entries for Focus on Oil '86

The Petroleum Museum is calling for entries to "Focus on Oil '86". This is the eighth year for the photo competition and exhibition based on petroleum-related subjects. Any U.S. resident may enter prints in Amateur Color or Professional Color classes. Both amateurs and professionals may enter the Black and White class.

Cash purchase awards will be offered to the top three of each category — $175 for first place; $125 for second place; and $50 for third place. The Best-of-Show will receive $250.

Fifty photographs will be selected by judges for the museum's summer exhibition. The prints must portray any aspect of oil and gas exploration, drilling, production, transportation, or refining, but may not include end-product use. Matted or mounted, not framed, prints and a $5 entry fee per print must be received at the museum no later than May 15.

Halliburton first quarter income falls 80 percent from 1985 levels

DALLAS (SWN) — Halliburton Co. reported that its earnings for the first three months of 1986 were severely impacted by declining exploration and development activities of the petroleum industry. Net income was down 80 percent from $56.4 million to $11.2 million, and earnings per share were 11 cents compared with 52 cents a year ago.

Consolidated revenues for the first quarter were $1.0 billion, down 14 percent from the $1.2 billion reported in 1985. Operating income declined 77 percent, from $88.7 million to $20.7 million.

"Although first quarter results were better than most of our competitors, they were not good by Halliburton Company standards," said Thomas H. Cruikshank, president and chief executive officer. Cruikshank noted that the substantial decline in crude oil and natural gas prices throughout much of the first quarter "has wreaked havoc on most segments of the petroleum industry."

Contributing to Halliburton's lower results was an abnormally high effective income tax rate, resulting, in part, from income tax benefits not being available in certain foreign countries where losses were recorded. Interest expense exceeded interest income by $4.4 million. This excess arose primarily from lower interest income, a result of the prepayment of the South Texas Nuclear Project (STNP) litigation settlement in December 1985.

Oil field services and products revenues for the first quarter were $600.1 million, 19 percent below the $738.1 million reported in 1985, with the major drop occurring in domestic operations. Operating income declined 65 percent, from $94.1 million to $32.7 million.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Hunt Oil tests 381 barrel discovery

From Staff Reports

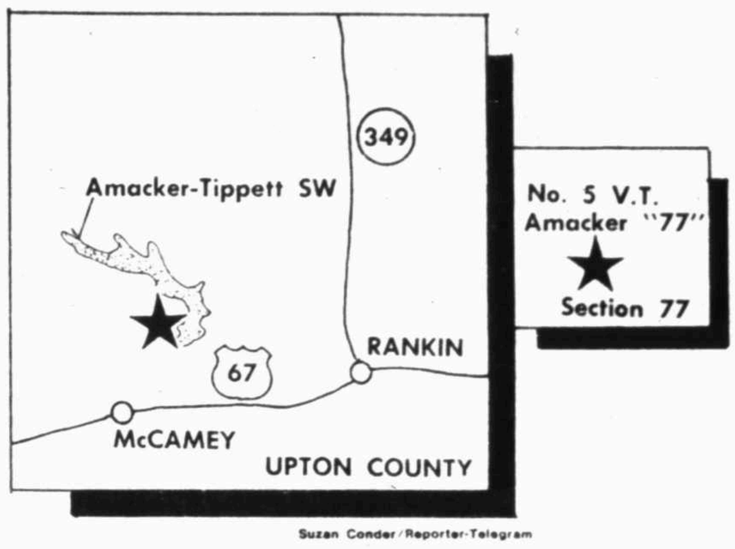

HUNT OIL CO. completed a strong 9100 producer to the Amacker-Tippett Southwest field of Upton County, the fourth producer in the field and a 3/8-mile east extension.

On potential test, the No. 5 V.T. Amacker "77" pumped 381 barrels of 44.5 gravity crude and four barrels of water from perforations 9,117 to 9,127 ft. The interval was acidized with 7,700 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 940:1.

The well was permitted as a 10,200 ft. wildcat and was drilled to a total depth of 10,400 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set. It was plugged back to 10,100 ft.

Formatioan tops, on ground elevation of 2,754 ft., include the San Andres at 4,352 ft., Clearfork at 6,195, Dean at 8,140, Cisco at 9,500, and the Strawn at 10,222 ft.

Location is 1,000 ft. from south and 2,020 ft. from east lines of Section 77, Block Y, GC&SF survey, 13.5 miles northwest of Rankin.

Loving County gains 254 barrel discovery

Loving County gained a Cherry Canyon discovery located northwest of the Hubbard field.

POGO PRODUCING CO. completed the No. 1 Morley to flow 254.4 barrels of 36.4 gravity crude, 270 Mcfd and 63.6 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 520 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 5,146 to 5,158 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 10,000 gallons of gel and 18,000 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 1,061:1.

Scheduled as a 6,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 6,000 ft. and plugged back to 5,205 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,255 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,708 ft., include the Rustler at 347 ft., Delaware Lime at 4,053, Bell Canyon at 5,080, Olds at 4,100, and the Cherry Canyon at 5,055 ft. Pay was topped at 5,146 ft.

Location is 3,343 ft. from northeast and 660 ft. from southeast lines of Section 88, Block 33, H&TC survey, four miles northwest of Mentone.

Fusselman discovery flows 149 barrels oil

CHAPMAN EXPLORATION, INC. completed a Fusselman discovery in Howard County to extend the Elbow Southeast field north and slightly west with completion of the No. 2 Denton, a stepout to the firm's Strawn discovery, No. 1 Glass.

On potential test, the well flowed 149 barrels of 46 gravity crude, 50 Mcfd and 105 barrels of water on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 300 psi. Production is from perforations 10,022 to 10,030 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 268:1.

Drilled as a 10,300 ft. wildcat, the well reached a total depth of 10,043 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and was plugged back to 10,041 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 9,274 ft., Devonian at 9,866, and the Fusselman at 10,020 ft. on ground elevation of 2,627 ft. Pay was topped at 10,022 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from east and 2,580 ft. from north lines of Section 46, Block 33, T-1-S, T&P survey, seven miles south of Big Spring.

Caraway Operating tests 132 barrel find

A San Angelo firm has completed a Strawn discovery in Tom Green County, north of the Walling field.

CARAWAY OPERATING CO. potentialed the No. 1 WCSL to flow 132.6 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 12 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke, natural production. Gas-oil ratio is 873:1.

Scheduled as an 8,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 5,061 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 5,045 ft.

The well topped the Palo Pinto at 4,550 ft., Harkey Lime at 4,685 and the Strawn Lime at 5,010 ft. on ground elevation of 1,890 ft.

Location is 1,667 ft. from north and 2,867 ft. from east lines of sEction 105, Washington CSL survey, five miles south of San Angelo.

Ector wildcat tested to flow 84 barrels oil

Ector County gained a Wichita Albany discovery as WESTLAND OIL DEVELOPMENT CORP. completed the No. 1 R.B. Cowden Estate "2".

On potential test, the well flowed 84 barrels of 36.7 gravity crude, 143 Mcfd and no water on a 16/64 choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 160 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 7,104 to 7,292 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 10 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,702:1.

Westland permitted the well as a 9,000 ft. wildcat, and drilled it to 8,685 ft. The well was plugged back to 7,303 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,404 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,246 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 3,980, Clearfork at 5,500, Wichita Albany at 6,500, Wolfcamp at 7,350, Simpson at 7,905, and the Ellenburger at 8,634 ft. Pay was topped at 6,500 ft.

Location is 853 ft. from east and 1,980 ft. from south lines of Section 2, Block 45, T-1-N, T&P survey, 9 miles northwest of Goldsmith.

Tom Green explorer flows 82 barrels crude

A location two miles west of the Slack field of Tom Green County has yielded a Wolfcamp discovery for NEWPORT PETROLEUM, INC., Dallas.

Newport potentialed the No. 1 Slack to flow 82 barrels of 42 gravity crude and five barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke from perforations 3,396 to 3,404 ft., natural production. Gas-oil ratio is 48,78:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 5,700 ft. and was plugged back to 3,524 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,575 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp formation at 3,396 ft. on ground elevation of 1,946 ft.

Location is 2,300 ft. from north and 2,600 ft. from west lines of Section 8, H.M. Wells survey, five miles west of San Angelo.

Strawn formation nets 23 barrel discovery

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC., Midland, completed a modest Strawn discovery in Midland County, located in the county's Spraberry Trend area.

Mobil completed the No. 28 E.T. O'Daniel et al to pump 23 barrels of 41.7 gravity crude and 143 Mcfd from perforations 10,309 to 10,419 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,600 gallons of 7.5 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 6,217:1.

Scheduled as an 11,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 11,000 ft. and plugged back to 10,679 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,068 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,642 ft., include the Spraberry at 7,062 ft., Dean at 8,414, Wolfcamp at 8,590, and the Strawn at 10,233 ft. Pay was topped at 10,309 ft.

Location is 1,881 ft. from south and 4,639 ft. from east lines of Section 4, Block 37, T-2-S, T&P survey, 14 miles southeast of Midland.

Energy Ventures sells Hockley County properties

HOUSTON (SWN) — Energy Ventures, Inc. announced it had completed sale of its interests in oil and gas properties located in Hockley County, Texas, effective Jan. 1, 1986, to a private investor group for $11 million.

The sale was approved by a majority of the stockholders of Energy Ventures, Inc. Pursuant to Securities and Exchange Commission regulations an Information Statement describing the transaction was sent to stockholders on April 7, 1986. Energy Ventures will now consider various alternatives regarding the application of proceeds from the sale.

Energy Ventures, Inc. is primarily engaged in oil and gas exploration and production activities through joint ventures and partnerships.

Fitzpatrick to acquire four Dresser divisions

DALLAS (SWN) — Dresser Industries, Inc. and N.C. Fitzpatrick Acquisition Corp. announced that they have executed an agreement for the sale of the assets of Harbison-Walker Refractories Division, Bay State Abrasives Division, General Abrasive Division and Datametrics Operations by Dresser to the N.C. Fitzpatrick Acquisition Corp.

The transaction is expected to be closed on or about June 2. The sale price was not disclosed.

Sun to resume West Cameron production

DALLAS (SWN) — With the completion of repair work on the wells damaged by a blowout and fire last December, production is ready to resume on Sun Exploration & Production Co.'s West Cameron 648 platform in the Gulf of Mexico.

Additional repairs are still required for replacement of damaged portions of two decks, including the living quarters. A crew of 25 to 30 persons is currently housed in temporary quarters on the platform. Well A-1 blew out Dec. 4, 1985 during workover operations. A fire that ignited four days later, destroying the workover rig and drilling quarters, was extinguished Dec. 31. The blowout was capped Jan. 22 and Well A-1 subsequently plugged and abandoned. Sun will not release information on the cost of repairing the West Cameron 648 platform.

The platform, which began operations in 1983, had gross producing capacity of 95 million cubic feet per day (MMcfd), but was producing only about 64 MMcfd at the time of the blowout because of curtailments in gas sales to pipelines. Upon completion of all repairs, the gross producing capacity is

Non-economic events influence economic policies

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — At the very time that non-communist industrial nations are praising their economic policies and foresight at a meeting in Tokyo, non-economic events are showing how tenuous and fragile those policies are.

The non-economic events include terrorism, which cuts spending on foreign travel; natural disasters, such as earthquakes and droughts that can wreck economies; and man-made disasters, such as acid rain and nuclear fallout.

It is the latter that now draws the attention of the world, not only because of its immediate impact on lives, but for the possible lasting damage done to food production, the air and water, and industrial production.

The economic impact could affect every one of the world's nations to one degree or another. Not all the impact is likely to be negative — although that certainly would be so in the Soviet Union. Some might be positive.

American farmers, for example, might benefit if Soviet food production falls, a possibility immediately reflected in rising prices on U.S. commodity markets.

Earlier, drought affected parts of Ethiopia. An enormously destructive earthquake hit Mexico City, destroying buildings and cutting travel income. Acid rain has ruined forests in the United States and Canada.

Even before the latest man-made disaster in the Soviet Union, terrorism had caused wholesale cancellations of foreign travel and forced major corporations to devise additional security systems, and even consider closing offices.

All such factors can influence the direction and growth rate of economies, causing the best-laid plans to be far off the mark. All this before still another man-made factor is considered: politics.

Political policies in South Africa, Libya, France and certain other countries have caused American corporations to curtail operations or consider doing so. Tourism and travel also have been impacted.

In the United States, anger over what several industries consider to be unfair foreign competition has revived efforts by protectionists, that is, those who would erect barriers to imports.

Political considerations have also affected U.S.-Soviet agricultural trade, with the latter publicly proclaiming its intent to import U.S. grain only if other supplies cannot fill the bill. Partly for this reason America's grain belt is hurting.

But economic planning is not just a game that national leaders play, as in the 12th annual economic summit meeting of industrial nations now under way in Tokyo. It is a multibillion dollar industry also, one that tries to foretell what might happen in banking, securities, commodities and the like.

Much of this attempt to peer into the economic future is an undertaking, understandably, of economists. But economic knowledge, as events show, is only one dimension of the task, and probably not the most important one.

Ironically, this inability to see ahead, given the idiosyncracies of man and nature, has been a spur to the private forecasting industry. There are enough variables, that is, for each forecaster to claim a particular insight.

But nobody, it appears — not even the great leaders meeting in Tokyo — can put all the variables together in one perfectly neat package. Even before the Chernobyl disaster, failures of the Soviet economy and elsewhere proved that.

John Cunniff is business analyst for the Associated Press.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Tax-free mutual funds for those in high tax bracket

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My mother has approximately $50,000 and her banker thinks she should put some of it into certificates of deposits, at about 9 percent interest. I feel she would be better off with high-yield or tax-free mutual funds or Ginnie Maes. What is your opinion?

A. Your mother might or might not do better following your suggestions. However, unless she's in a relatively high income tax bracket, she shouldn't even think about tax-free investments. The other two could work out well, but they do carry some risk.

Doyle

If that $50,000 is all your mother has, my opinion is that she should stay with the safety federally insured banks provide. Her banker is giving the conservative type of advice that is suitable for people who can't afford to take on any risks.

Now that interest rates have come down, she'll have to put money in CDs with maturities of 30 months or longer to get 9 percent. If she can lock her money away, CDs are a wise choice.

• • •

Q. You have referred to brokerage firms handling "deposit brokerage," through which they sell high-interest certificates of deposit issued by banks and savings and loan associations all over the country.

However, the brokerage firms I have visited offer CDs only from local banks — all of which pay relatively low interest. Can you identify a deposit brokerage in my area?

A. No, no, never! Under no circumstances does this column ever identify specific brokerage firms, banks or other places to put your money.

Virtually all major securities brokerage firms conduct deposit brokerage business. On their computers, they keep track of which federally insured banks and S&Ls are paying the highest interest on CDs with various maturities and sell those CDs. The brokerage firms collect fees from the banks and S&Ls. Customers get the high interest.

I suspect you haven't searched enough. Keep calling on brokerage firms. You'll find one or more handling deposit brokerage.

Survey: Cancer patients often face discrimination

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Cancer patients are going back to work following treatment, but often not without some discrimination, reports a recent survey by the American Cancer Society.

Results from a mail-out questionnaire sent to 15,000 Texans with cancer by the ACS Texas Division's Employability/Insurability Task Force, revealed that while many patients are employed at the time of their treatment, many have difficulty finding a job afterward.

"Nearly 90 percent of the Texas cancer patients who responded to the informal ACS survey and who were employed at the time of their diagnosis returned to full-time work after being treated for the disease," said Tim Elsner, public information director. "Moreover, more than 60 percent reported their employers made special arrangements to make it easier for the patients to return to work."

Elsner added some of the accommodations included reduced hours and time off for medical appointments.

The survey reported a different story, however, for many patients who looked for a job after undergoing treatment.

"Almost half said they had had problems finding work because of potential employers' attitudes towards them and their disease," said Elsner.

In addition, 21 percent of all respondents reported difficulties in obtaining medical insurance and almost 20 percent felt they had had other insurance problems since their cancer was diagnosed.

"These results indicate we still have a job to do in providing employers and the insurance industry with facts about cancer," said Robert Kerr, M.D., president of the ACS, Texas division.

"The fact is, almost half of the people diagnosed with cancer today are going to survive," said Kerr. "And there's no reason why they shouldn't return to work if they want to and lead full and productive lives."

A Midland ACS spokesman, who asked not to be named, said she had received quite a few phone calls from people who had faced discrimination.

"We've had a lot of calls from people who can't get insurance. I really haven't heard of too many people who have had problems getting a job though," she said.

Alan Schroeder, director of social services for Midland Memorial Hospital, said he has talked with cancer patients who have run into some problems.

"I've had some cases where that's come up before — it does occur," he said. "But I really can't say how prevalent it is. Put yourself in the place of the employer. Cancer patients are still considered by many to be a highly unstable, high-risk group."

Schroeder added that the problems cancer patients faced when having difficulty obtaining insurance coverage "are really no different from anyone else with an injury or disability."

"It's that way with many people who have had a long illness or hospital stay who find their insurance has been cancelled when they return to work," he said.

The ACS publishes a pamphlet which the local office gives to those people who are having some difficuly, said the ACS spokesman, entitled, "Cancer: your job, insurance and the law."

The pamphlet cites three commons myths about cancer patients which often keep them from being productive: "They will not be able to do their fair share of work;" "Their turnover and absentee rates will be higher" and "They will eventually die from their cancer."

"Many types of cancer are now curable," said the report. "Those cured of cancer will die of old age or other causes. Many people living with cancer will enjoy full and productive years even if not cured. Cancer is now felt to be the most curable of the chronic diseases."

The pamphlet also advises cancer patients to be aware of Section 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which addresses employment of the handicapped (cancer is listed as a disability) and non-discrimination in public institutions such as schools, colleges and hospitals.

Elsner said his department is currently working on publishing a "consumers' guide" for cancer patients returning to the work force.

"We are also hoping to provide a list of companies in Texas that will provide insurance for cancer patients," he said. The list should be out next fall.

The guide will help consumers select insurance and will outline insurance options available to cancer patients and offer healthy consumers tips on what to look for when selecting a health insurance policy.

The informal survey, the first statewide patient survey undertaken by the ACS, asked patients to identify insurance and job problems they had experienced. Responses were received from 2,116 respondents.

"Although the response rate is too low for the results to be considered applicable to the majority of our Texas cancer patients, the survey has helped us pinpoint concerns our task force can address," said another ACS spokesman.

Of the patients responding to the survey, 47.2 percent were employed full-time when they were diagnosed. Retirees represented 24 percent of the sample; 15.6 percent were unemployed and 9.2 were part-time employees.

Almost 50 percent of the respondents (49.6 percent), said they returned to work after treatment. Of those who were employed at the time of their diagnosis, only 9.4 percent did not return to work. The overwhelming majority — 87.6 percent — of those returning to employment, returned to full-time jobs.

Slightly less than 12 percent of those surveyed reported looking for work after their treatment. Of the 11.6 percent who had sought employment after their cancer diagnosis, 47.2 percent felt some employers did not want to hire them because they were an "insurance risk"; 46.8 percent felt some employers did not want to hire them because they saw them as physically unable to do the job and 48.8 percent felt some employers "lost interest" in hiring them when informed of their cancer history.

Patients with a longer history of cancer reported more difficulties in obtaining medical insurance. Of the 21 percent who reported problems, only 12.9 percent of those diagnosed in the last year reported difficulties. Of those diagnosed five to 10 years ago, 32.7 reported problems and 32.3 percent of those diagnosed more than 10 years ago reported some difficulties in obtaining medical insurance.

When responding to questions about other insurance problems, 13.9 percent thought they had been denied full company health insurance benefits because of their cancer; 5.7 percent felt they had problems when they or their spouse changed jobs and sought coverage by another insurance company and 18.1 percent reported a large number of outstanding medical bills not covered by insurance.

ACS Round-UP to be May 24

From Staff Reports

The American Cancer Society is gearing up for the annual "Round-Up," an annual fund-raising dinner, announced a spokesman.

"The Round-Up party is being held May 24 this year and will include entertainers Gary Morris and Janie Fricke," said chairman Beverly Johnson.

Morris is known for his hit duets with Crystal Gayle including "Making Up for Lost Time." Ms. Fricke is currently on the top country charts with the hit, "I'm Easy to Please."

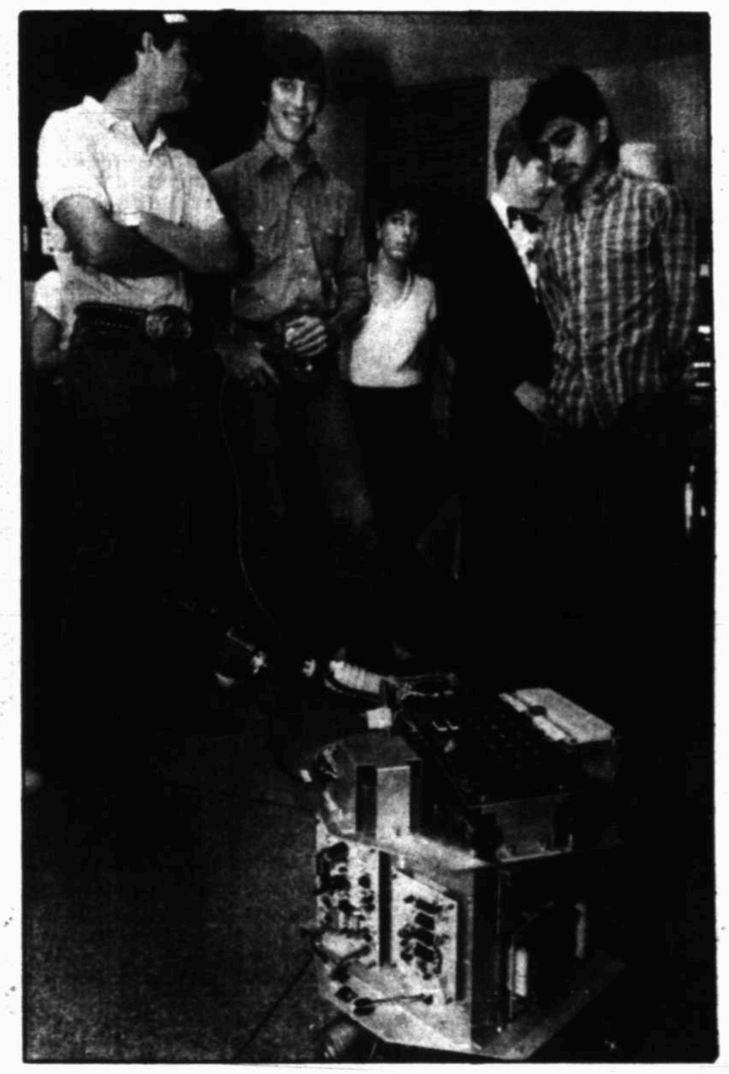

According to Ms. Johnson, the event, which is expected to draw "over 1,000 people", will be held at Saddle Club Ranch Estates on a site donated by Magnatex Corporation.

The evening, which costs $100 per couple, includes a prime rib dinner and performances by Morris and Ms. Fricke.

The Round-Up will be held from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. For more information call 683-6374.

Showcase shows off MISD achievement

Students display artwork, wood work, metal work

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Jimmy Chandler, center, controls HERO 1, a miniature robot designed by the Midland High School advanced electronics class. The demonstration was one of several featured Monday night during the Midland High Showcase '86.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Celebrating 60 years of student achievement might not be easy for some, but at Midland High School, it comes naturally.

Anyone attending the Midland High School Showcase '86 Monday night saw for themselves how individual initiative, coupled with talent and capable instruction, can produce outstanding work.

Industrial arts exhibits in wood, metal and plastic could easily grace the showrooms of retail outlets and command the going price. There were hutches, chests of drawers, night stands, end tables and tables and other fine cabinet work, including a bar with built-in wine rack, that would be a show piece in any home. There also were cedar chests and a miniature go-cart.

Metal work displayed included tables, chairs, charcoal broiler-smokers, rivets, and an outdoor swing.

Artwork displays covered a wide range of subjects, including character studies and modernistic themes done in charcoal, sculpture, watercolor, oil and paper mache. The degree of talent demonstrated by the young artists ranged from very good to near-professional.

Equally impressive were the renderings of those students involved in architectural and technical design and drafting. Scale models of homes and electrical wiring were displayed as well as blue prints. Technical drafting displays showed highly detailed cutaway perspectives of automobiles, airplanes and rockets among others.

Other displays and demonstrations featured computer math, word processors, cosmetology, biology, photojournalism, home and consumer economics and other educational specialties.

Patio activities kicked off with choreographic dance students dancing their way through an energetic routine, followed by performances by the choir, band, orchestra, drama, speech and debate teams.

In other activities, incoming freshman students and their parents were treated to sophomore orientation and invited to participate in three 20-minute sessions including panel discussions of academic programs, computer math demonstrations and conferences with school counselors.

The purpose of the Midland High Showcase '86 was to show Midlanders how well MHS is working. The school amply demonstrated Monday night that there are a lot of students who have taken advantage of the educational opportunities available to them, acquiring worthwhile skills and producing some very outstanding work in the course of the learning process.

The event, co-sponsored by the MHS Parent-Teacher Association, is privately funded by parents, alumni and community members. Proceeds will go to benefit the school's visual improvement project, Centennial Courtyard, located between the large gymnasium and northwest corner of the main building. Persons interested in contributing to the completion of the project should call Ann Williams at 682-5083 or Dr. Patty Smith at 682-7367.

Police protection, traffic complaints voiced by Odessans

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — City council and administrative staff members outnumbered citizens attending the first of four scheduled town hall-type meetings held at Ector Junior High School Monday night. The second town hall meeting, beginning at 7 p.m. today, will be held at Floyd Guinn Auditorium on the city's westside.

The fewer than a dozen people attending the meeting in the Ector Junior High auditorium were asked to fill out questionnaires, rating various city services such as police, fire, ambulance, roads, parks and recreation, garbage collection and litter control, water and sewer service.

Citizens are also being asked to rate the quality of life in Odessa as a place to live, the safety of neighborhoods, the city's image and appearance, the parks system and recreational facilities, library and museum facilities, and as a place to visit.

Those filling out questionnaires were also asked to express an opinion whether property taxes, sales taxes or user fees would be the fairest way to finance government services.

Continuing as a top complaint on the lists of southsiders is traffic on West Clements Street, between South Grant Avenue and South Crane Avenue, especially on the weekends when traffic is jammed by drivers slowly "cruising" the southside street while drinking, according to those complaining, or parking on vacant store parking lots and littering the areas with beer cans, bottles and other trash.

Joe "Eddie" Hernandez, who won the Democratic Party nomination Saturday to run for Precinct 4 County Commissioner in November, questioned if Odessa police are making a serious enough effort to enforce ordinances that prohibit drinking in city parks, as well as curfews. Hernandez and newly elected District 1 Councilman Jaime Rodriguez both said they plan to push for stricter enforcement of these ordinances, as well as greater emphasis on trash collection and littered areas on the southside.

Don Carter, attending his first town hall meeting as mayor, said resolving the two primary concerns voiced, traffic and police protection, will be a challenge. "We're faced (with the need for) more police protection all over town and a dwindling tax base," said the mayor.

Saying that the southside deserves police protection just like the northeast and west parts of the city, Carter said how equal protection can be assured is a situation we're going to have to address.

After the meeting, Carter said he's met with Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and UTPB President Duane Leach and plans to meet later this week with Permian Basin Bid Center Director Dave Thayer. "We've got some good things going between the two cities," the Odessa mayor said, "and we truly are better together. I believe Carroll (Thomas) really believes this and I believe it and we're dedicated to it," Carter said. "A great deal of effort has been expended during the short time we've been in office to really solidify the two cities," Carter said.

Midlander charged with failure to render aid to boy in accident

From Staff Reports

A 23-year-old Midland man whom police say was the driver in a hit-and-run traffic accident which resulted in the death of an 11-year-old boy was charged Monday with failing to stop and render aid.

Jose Daniel Robles, 2439 Whitmire, was being held in city jail in lieu of a $50,000 bond this morning after the felony complaint was filed Monday, according to reports from Midland police.

Carl Melvin Baker of rural Midland died Sunday of injuries he suffered Saturday afternoon after he entered the path of Robles' 1976 Plymouth, which was traveling west on the south service road of Interstate 20, reports said.

Robles, who was arrested Sunday, did not stop after his car collided with the boy, according to police.

The accident was not Robles' fault, reports said; the charge against him resulted from his alleged failure to stop and try to help the boy.

In other reports, a fire which may have been deliberately set damaged a trailer house in rural Midland on Sunday, according to the Midland Fire Department.

The trailer house on County Road 1130 North about a mile north of Highway 80 was reported on fire about 8:28 p.m. Sunday. The fire began in a mattress and spread to a bedroom wall, reports said. It caused moderate to heavy damage to the bedroom and smoke damage throughout the house, reports said.

The house is owned by James D. Kreel, Route 10, Box 10641, reports said. No injuries were reported.

Two accordions worth a total of $2,900 were among several items reported stolen Monday by John D. Rendon, 2111 N. Jackson.

Also taken in the burglary were 24 videocassette recordings with a combined value of about $383; a $350 television; a $345 videocassette recorder; two microphones with a total value of $300; and a $295 lawnmower, according to reports from Midland police.

A 1979 Buick Regal belonging to Pamela Gay Duley, 4415 Northcrest, was reported vandalized Monday. According to police, the car sustained $500 in damage to the windshield and $500 to its tires.

A 1978 Datsun owned by Michael LaRue was also reported vandalized Monday near 4415 Northcrest. According to reports, LaRue's car sustained $2,100 in damage to the paint job and $300 to the tires.

Odessa police officer arrested for DWI

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 36-year-old police lieutenant, arrested by Big Spring police Saturday on a charge of driving while intoxicated, has been suspended pending disposition of the case.

Reports indicate Walter Tony Suttle, returning to Odessa from Colorado City on a motorcycle, was stopped in Big Spring Saturday afternoon and was arrested as he left a service station.

Suttle reportedly refused to take a breathalyzer test and was released on $1,000 bond.

Odessa Police Chief Alan Stewart said he ordered Suttle, a 16-year veteran of the department, placed on administrative suspension with pay, pending resolution of the matter.

Town of Seymour shuts down for 'Gone Fishin' Day'

By MIKE COCHRAN

SEYMOUR (AP) — America is alive and well and guzzling beer, tossing horseshoes, racing boats and fishing for bass and carp on a choppy, windswept lake in West Texas.

Just ask Daryl Zeller of Abilene, a computer company representative.

At midmorning Monday, Zeller, wearing a suit and tie and a profoundly quizzical look, stood at the locked door of a darkened Seymour bank and wondered aloud:

"Where is everybody?"

At that moment, the town square, the heartbeat of this city of 4,000, was deserted and silent.

"Gone fishin'," replied a stranger.

"I don't believe this; there's no one here," said Zeller.

"Believe it," said the stranger.

"I guess we ought to join 'em," laughed Zeller.

"Going to," said the stranger.

Zeller scuttled his plans to visit his two banking clients in Seymour and headed off toward Wichita Falls, saying: "I think it's really pretty neat that they do something like this."

Before leaving town, the stranger stuck a quarter in a pay phone and it was gobbled up without a sound.

On Gone Fishin' Day in Seymour, even the telephones don't work.

Seymour traces its fish day celebration back 60 years, when Lake Kemp was opened north of town on land owned and totally surrounded by the Waggoner Ranch, a 535,000-acre spread that covers parts of four counties, enormous even by Texas standards.

That first fishing season began on May 1, and for years the folks in Seymour headed to the lake each year on that date.

"The merchants finally decided that if everybody was going to go fishing they'd just shut down and go too," Mayor Charles Sessions told a stranger to the Lake Kemp festivities.

He said it was the merchants who also decreed that the holiday be celebrated on the first Monday in May.

"Enough people got together and decided they'd just shut down the town," added Jimmy Vita, an auto parts dealer who was directing the lakeside activities Monday.

The activities included bass and carp fishing, raft and boat races, a horseshoe pitching contest, a fish fry and some really serious beer drinking.

"We're cooking 360 pounds of fish filets and 50 pounds of red beans," said Vita, who is hardly a novice at this gone fishing business.

"I've probably been out here 35 years, since I was old enough to walk," he smiled. "It's kinda unique. Not many towns have their own holiday."

Marilyn McClung, manager of the sponsoring Seymour Chamber of Commerce, described the affair fondly as a cross between a dream and a nightmare, the latter because it takes so much planning and cooperation.

"It takes everyone in town to put on fish day," she said, "and people come from Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene, Wichita Falls and everywhere else within a 200-mile radius."

Some great sage, probably W.C. Fields, once said that anything worth doing was worth doing to excess, and the good folks of Seymour were quick to adopt that philosophy.

Gone Fishin' Day now begins on Saturday with arts and craft shows, selection of big and little Miss Lake Kemps and a nighttime street dance, with music provided this year by a group called Country Gold from nearby Munday.

The festivities move to the lake on Sunday for the start of fishing, boating, skiing and volleyball contests.

On Monday, everybody closes shop and most head to Kemp for the finale.

One who didn't was Neva Elliott, a postal employe, who was stopped on an empty street and asked why it was she hadn't gone fishin'.

"The mail must go through," she replied grandly, then added: "I guess I might as well be working. It's a little too windy to be fishing and I can't throw horseshoes."

At the Baylor Drug Store, owner Paul Hoge was busy laying carpet and insisting he wasn't really open: "I don't think anybody's open. We're here only because of this remodeling."

The one car on the square was parked outside the Farmers Home Administration office where Rayleen Pittcock, an employe for 32 years, explained that the sorehead federal government did not recognize Gone Fishin' Day as a legal holiday.

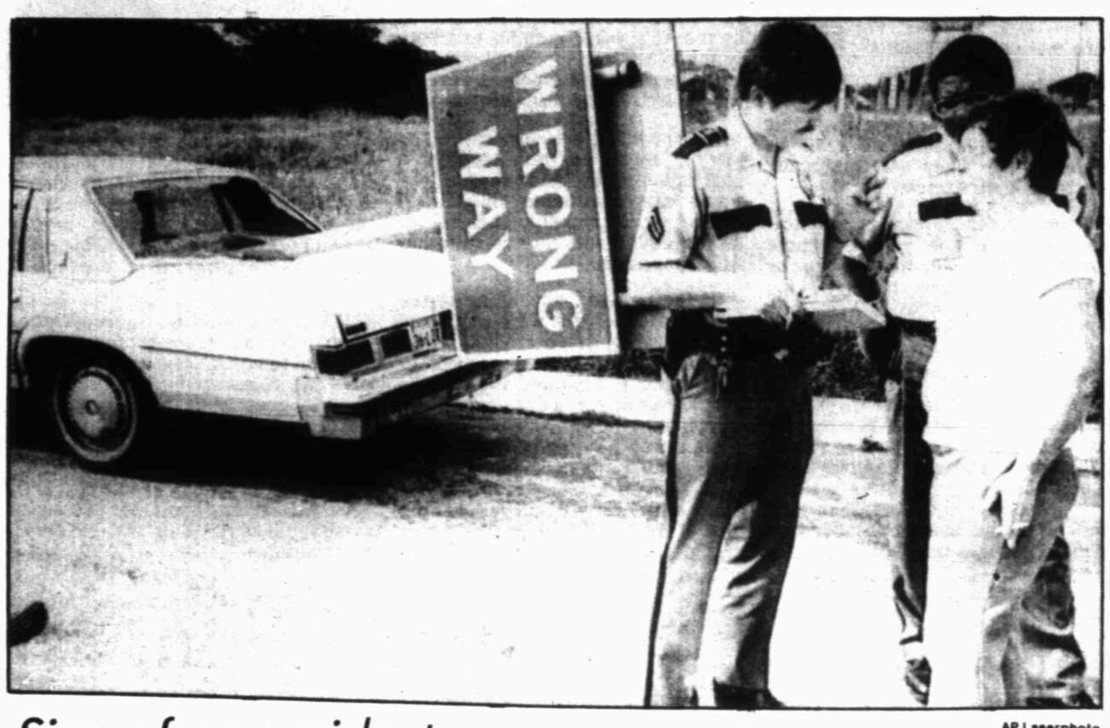

But did she personally endorse it?

"Of course. Wholeheartedly. By all means."

At the Golden Fried Chicken, Manager Benny Cumba and three young assistants were on the job, frying up gobs of catfish as well as the house speciality.

"We always stay open to feed them," said Cumba. "They don't ever catch much fish, and tonight they'll be hungry and ready to stop and eat."

Hey. It's the idea that counts.

Allison center awarded certificate

From Staff Reports

The Commission on Cancer of the American College of Surgeons has awarded a three-year Certificate of Approval to Midland Memorial Hospital's Allison Cancer Center.

The Approvals program was established by the American College of Surgeons in 1956 to encourage excellence in cancer therapy. The program encourages discussion of cancer treatment among surgeons, medical oncologists, oncological radiation therapists, pathologists and other medical disciplines involving the diagnosis and treatment of cancer, thereby assisting the attending physician in optimal treatment planning for his patient.

The Allison Center has also met certain criteria for a well-functioning tumor registry. These criteria include monthly tumor board meetings, tumor registration and statistical analysis of data bases as well as long-term studies. The Allison Cancer Center also files annual reports on cancer registration data and provides life-time follow-up of the Center's cancer patients.

The Allison Cancer Center offers radiation therapy as well as chemotherapy and is equipped with state-of-the-art equipment. The Center received its first certification in 1981 and was most recently surveyed in 1985. The current approval which was awarded the end of April certifies the Allison Center through 1988.

Man charged with helping his mother commit suicide

AMARILLO (AP) — An Amarillo man has been charged with aiding the suicide of his 75-year-old mother in what could the Panhandle's first incidence of a "mercy killing," authorities said.

Charles Emmet McIntosh, 58, was arraigned Monday before State District Judge Don Emerson on a third-degree felony charge of aiding suicide. Bond was set at $5,000. He remained in custody Monday night at Potter County Corrections Center.

McIntosh is accused of providing his mother, Elva McIntosh, with sleeping pills and failing to seek medical assistance for her. She died early Monday.

The filing of the aiding suicide charge is believed to be a first for the area, District Attorney Danny Hill said. He said the law came into effect in 1974.

McIntosh met police at the front door of his residence as they arrived in response to a report of a dead body, officers said. They said McIntosh led them to a bedroom where they found Mrs. McIntosh.

Paramedics were unable to revive the woman, police said.

Handwritten and typewritten notes were found at the residence, but authorities had not confirmed late Monday who had written them, officers said.

CHARGED

Police have identified two people suspected of being involved in the two incidents, according to reports.

Kim A. Clement, 3417 N. Midland, reported $500 in damage to the windshield and windows of her car, and about $115 in damage to its lights, in an apparently unrelated act of vandalism which occurred sometime between Sunday and Monday.

Joey's Restaurant, 2215 N. Midland, reported the loss of about $650 in currency in a burglary which occurred sometime between Sunday and Monday, reports said.

The J.C. Penney's store at the Midland Park Mall, 4511 N. Midkiff, reported the Monday theft of more than $750 worth of ladies' clothing. Police have the names of two suspects in the case, according to reports.

Parishioner charged with killing associate minister

HOUSTON (AP) — A young associate minister about to receive his first pastorship was gunned down in his office at a downtown church and a church parishioner has been charged in the clergyman's death, police said.

A gunman walked into the fifth floor office of Eric Anderson, 32, associated pastor at the church, Monday afternoon and shot him once in the chest with a pistol.

The gunman fled the building.

Authorities later arrested Neal Wayne Higginbotham, 29, at his home where he lived with his mother. The arrest came without incident after the suspect talked on a telephone with next door neighbor Tracy Villarreal.

"He said 'I'm scared' and I said talk to me about it, tell me what's the matter," Ms. Villarreal said. "He said he had shot someone. I said 'where's the gun Neal' and he said 'it's right here beside me.'"

Ms. Villarreal said she talked with the suspect until police arrived. Authorities said Higginbotham's only comment when he was arrested was "O my God."

The victim was rushed to Hermann Hospital but was pronounced dead shortly after arrival. Police held Higginbotham without bond.

Anderson was scheduled to move to Huntsville, 75 miles north of Houston, this summer to accept his first pastorship.

Hispanics targeted in campaign to increase citizenship

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A national Hispanic organization has targeted Texas Hispanics for a campaign to beef up citizenship among non-citizen legal residents.

The National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials announced Monday a new citizenship hotline would be available in Texas.

A similar hotline has been opened up in Los Angeles, Miami and Chicago.

The Texas hotline will focus on San Antonio, the Rio Grande Valley, Houston, El Paso and Dallas-Fort Worth, officials said.

There are almost 300,000 Hispanic non-citizen legal residents in Texas out of the state's 1.6 million Hispanic adults, officials said.

"Decisions of the future for Texas and the entire country require full participation and representation of Hispanics," said state Rep. Al Luna, chairman of the Hispanic Caucus of the Texas Legislature.

"Our strongest voice in government is our vote," he said.

Harry Pachon, executive director of NALEO, said for too long, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has "put more emphasis on the 'I' than the 'N.'"

The hotline will be manned by bilingual personnel in Washington, he said. The number is 1-800-44-NALEO.

"People calling (the hotline) will receive basic information on citizenship and get referred to community organizations where they can take classes," he said.

However, Pachon said of the 2,000 calls received from hotlines in Los Angeles and Florida, 99 percent are from legal residents.

"The Mexican national, unlike nationals of other countries, has historically taken longer than others to seek citizenship," said Leonel Castillo, former INS commissioner.

Castillo said some studies show Mexican nationals wait an average of 30 years beyond their eligibility to seek citizenship.

"Decisions of the future for Texas and the entire country require full participation and representation of Hispanics. Our strongest voice in government is our vote."

— Rep. Al Luna
Hispanic Caucus chairman

In the meantime, these residents, who are in the United States legally, are paying taxes and serving in the military. But they are not voting or enjoying other benefits of citizenship, said Castillo at a news conference.

"The Southwest has become a melting pot and this project will help make a better stew," Castillo said.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros said many Hispanics fail to seek citizenship through some oversight or lack of information.

His own grandparents, he said, lived many years in the United States without obtaining citizenship.

"Perhaps because they thought they might return to Mexico or because of loyalty to the mother country," he said, adding that they were politically active here.

Margarita Huantes, executive director of the San Antonio Literacy Council, said she has taught citizenship classes for years.

Mrs. Huantes said she was an undocumented alien at one time "because I didn't know I was."

"Life for non-citizens in San Antonio and elsewhere is going to become difficult — perhaps as difficult as the undocumented alien," she said.

Students' letters back air strikes on Libya

BORGER (AP) — President Reagan had the support of most Americans when the United States bombed Libya, and Becky Fish's fourth-grade class at Gateway Elementary School is no exception.

The students wrote letters to Reagan as part of a current events project, and most supported the air raid on Libya.

Ms. Fish, a social studies teacher at the school, said the use of Borger News-Herald clippings as part of her current events program prompted the children to write letters to the president.

Mike Ramsey wrote: "I am only in the fourth grade, but I am deeply concerned in the affairs between the United States and Libya."

Janna Poston wrote: "I have watched the TV and have seen all that has been going on with us and Libya. I think that what we have done is right. Even though I don't like war, something should be done to stop Libyan terrorists."

Trey Gillman asked Reagan if he plans to attack Libya again, and if so, where. He concluded his letter with "I might be president some day. Is it hard to be one?"

Ex-editor: Review tells the story of state's centennial

TEMPLE (AP) — As the state of Texas prepared to kick off a mammoth celebration of its 100th birthday, the editor of a Central Texas newspaper was contacted about becoming editor of the Texas Centennial Review, a statewide newsletter of Centennial activities.

Ayres Compton relinquished his position as "head of a distressed newspaper in Gatesville" for one which he knew would last only seven months, until the Central Exposition in Dallas got under way in June 1936.

Compton, a retired public relations executive who has lived in Temple about 10 years, said the review is a chronicle of events which towns across the state planned for the Centennial. "The Centennial at Dallas was the hub, certainly," he said. "But there were things happening all over the state of Texas, and it was our job to make sure that people all over the nation heard about it."

He said recent criticism by planners of the Sesquicentennial "made me kind of squirmish."

"These people said, 'Unlike the Centennial, which was a one-horse show in Dallas, we want to make the Sesquicentennial a statewide affair.' Well, there were some 250 celebrations that went on during the Centennial," in places like Cuero and Ballinger, Clarendon and Palestine, all to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Texas' Independence, he said. In fact, the final issue of the weekly review listed 258 Centennial events in cities throughout the state.

Compton said the Texas Legislature appropriated funds to finance the Centennial celebration in Dallas, and a little was set aside for the newsletter. "We wanted to get as many cities as possible to list their activities in the review," he said.

"All the stories came from the local chambers of commerce and other organizations, and that's where we got all the pictures. We got a list of newspapers in the state from the Texas Press Association, and we started sending the newsletter out."

He estimated about 4,000 to 5,000 copies were sent all over the nation. However, the central celebration in Dallas was taboo — the newsletter staff was instructed by the Legislature to leave the Dallas party alone.

"They said, 'It's your job to publicize the state and make sure every one in America knows it is our Centennial year,'" Compton said. "'But let Dallas alone — they have their own publicity staff. And when they get ready to open the Centennial (at Dallas), you close your doors.'"

"There were celebrations like this all over the state. (Frances Ravellette of Killeen was crowned Miss Central Texas and reigned at all Centennial celebrations in Bell County.) I didn't go to very many of them..."

— Ayres Compton

He said members of the Centennial publicity committee were paid by the state with "warrants, which meant we couldn't cash them for 30 days. That tells you a little bit about the economy of the state during that time, the Great Depression.

"The banks could cash them for you, but at a discount of 2 percent — you had to give up 2 percent of your pay to get the money early," Compton said.

The copies of the review — which Compton has had bound into a hardback cover — are a potpourri of Centennial stories and photos.

Frances Ravellette of Killeen is featured in issue No. 19. Miss Ravellette, then a senior at Mary Hardin-Baylor College in Belton, was crowned Miss Central Texas and reigned at all Centennial celebrations in Bell County.

"There were celebrations like this all over the state," Compton said. "I didn't go to very many of them, just the ones that really caught my interest, like one celebrating Washington-on-the-Brazos in Brenham."

And the city of Fort Worth, he said, took umbrage at all the attention being focused on Dallas as the hub of Centennial activities. "Amon Carter, the publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, put together a Fort Worth celebration," he said. "They got Billy Rose (composer and creator of Casa Manana) and Sally Rand, who I guess was the 'first stripper of Texas.'"

STATE IN BRIEF

Waco's Hilton hotel may be closed down

WACO (AP) — Unless last-minute negotiations succeed, Waco is losing its third Hilton hotel today.

The Waco Hilton, considered a key to the revitalization of downtown, was set for public auction this morning on the McLennan County Courthouse steps.

"I believe it will be worked out," City Manager David Smith said Monday. "We're not anticipating foreclosure or bankruptcy."

The 200-room, 11-story hotel was posted for foreclosure in April by 13 Waco financial institutions.

The development company, California-based Brazos Commons Ltd., had until 10 a.m. Tuesday to reach an agreement with the Waco Hotel Limited Partnership, unless the lenders postponed foreclosure at the last moment.

Two other Hilton hotels have preceded the Waco Hilton. The first Hilton was built by Conrad Hilton in 1928. The second Hilton was a franchise built by the Amicable Life Insurance Co. in the early 1970s.

Four die in two-car wreck

HAMILTON (AP) — Four died in a two-car accident 10½ miles south of Hamilton on U.S. Highway 281, officials say.

There were no survivors in the head-on crash late Sunday night, Department of Public Safety Trooper Randy Mills said Monday.

A southbound Ford driven by Alfred Duran, 59, of Lawton, Okla., and a northbound car driven by 64-year-old Kitty Olive Young of Dallas collided after Young's car crossed the center stripe, Mills said.

Also killed were two passengers in Duran's vehicle, May Youngman, 66, and Joseph Whitehat, age not available, both of Lawton, Mills said.

They were declared dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace L.A. Mancuso.

Mills said none of the four was wearing a seatbelt although three would have survived if they had.

Court denies inmate stay

AUSTIN (AP) — Johnny Paul Penry moved a step closer to execution by injection after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals voted to deny him a stay of execution.

The appeals court voted 7-2 Monday to deny to the stay.

Penry, who turned 30 Monday, is scheduled to die early Wednesday by lethal injection for the Oct. 25, 1979, rape-murder of Pamela Carpenter, 22, in her home in Livingston. She was beaten and stabbed in the chest with her own pair of scissors.

The victim provided a description of Penry to authorities before dying in a hospital emergency room.

Baby accidentally run over

EL PASO (AP) — A 23-month-old boy died when a 4-year-old boy put a parked van in gear and accidentally ran over the younger child, police said.

The toddler, Andrew Paselk, was playing in his parents' driveway when the 4-year-old boy, who was playing inside the van, accidentally put it in gear and backed over Andrew, police reported Monday.

The boy died about three hours later while undergoing surgery at Vista Hills Medical Center.

Sulfuric acid spills from derailed train

TULIA (AP) — An employee of the Texas Water Resources Commission says railway workers averted a dangerous situation by quickly damming sulfuric acid spilled from four derailed tanker cars.

The cars derailed early Monday near the Panhandle town of Tulia when a freight train of the strike-bound Santa Fe Railway Co. hit an empty tank car, a company spokesman said.

James Hart, dispatcher for the Tulia police department, said cleanup crews managed to dike up the acid that had run into a creek bed and that no evacuation was necessary.

Mike Gates, a spokesman for the Texas Water Resources Commission, said, "Had the winds been blowing from a different direction or had there been more moisture, we could have wound up with a totally different situation."

Gates said Santa Fe officials were "right on top of the spill" and immediately erected earthen dikes to contain the spilled acid.

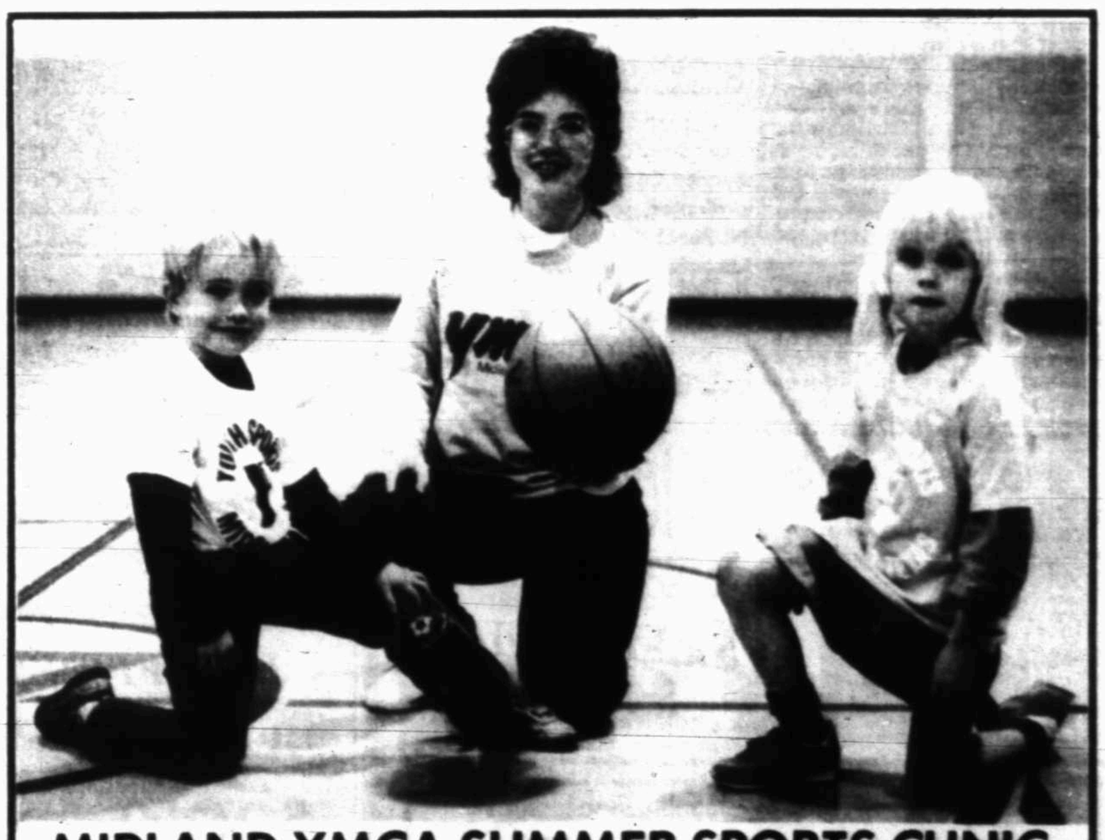

The train's crew members suffered bumps and bruises in the 12:15 a.m. collision about 60 miles southwest of Amarillo, said Robert Gehrt, director of public relations for Santa Fe Railway in Chicago.

FBI officials in Dallas say Santa Fe officials there have told officials it was an accident, although Gerht initially had said vandals might have moved the empty car in front of the train.

P.I.P. Instant Printing offers wide variety of services

Customer representative Melinda Malcolm and manager Rayburn Davis at P.I.P. Instant Printing, 409 Andrews Highway, are ready to assist you with fast, quality print work. Call 687-1377 for a free quote on your next printing job.

P.I.P. Instant Printing, located at 409 Andrews Highway in Midland, is out to change the image of quick printers. " So many people think that a quick printer only does Xerox copies. This is not at all what a quick printer is," says owner Jack Hampton.

"New customers are often surprised at the wide range of services we offer," Hampton says.

"Many people think a quick printer can handle just the smaller, simpler jobs, the kind you could do on the office copier," Hampton says.

P.I.P. can certainly make top quality Xerox copies in next to no time, but that is only the beginning of the wide variety of services they offer.

"With a modern Itek plate maker and an AB Dick offset press, our staff can handle anything from 25 copies of a one-page resume to 20,000 copies of a two-sided flyer," Hampton adds.

P.I.P. prints envelopes, post cards, business cards, letterheads, invitations, tickets, invoices, NCR (carbonless) forms, booklets, reports, church bulletins, newsletters and more.

In addition, P.I.P. offers bindery services. Folding, collating, drilling, cutting, stapling and padding can all be handled by P.I.P.'s experts.

The people at P.I.P. are problem solvers as well. If you need to put together a flyer for a campaign or a booklet for your organization, they'll help you plan it.

Whatever you need done at P.I.P. Instant Printing, you can be assured of quality work.

Moreover, P.I.P. is committed to delivering quality printing work on a timely basis. P.I.P. meets your deadline, usually providing same day or next day service. Jobs requiring typesetting, paste-up or art work take a little longer than camera-ready copy, but P.I.P. always promises fast service.

And, every time you have photo copying or printing done at P.I.P. in the next few months, you'll be helping in the fight against birth defects. P.I.P. is donating ten cents of each job brought in between March 15 and June 15 to the March of dimes National Telethon Against Birth Defects.

You can count on Rayburn Davis, manager of Midland's P.I.P. Instant Printing, and customer representative Melinda Malcolm to give you the friendly service you deserve. They'll be glad to give you a free estimate on your next printing job. Just call them at 687-1377 or go by 409 Andrews Highway. P.I.P. is open 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Churches enjoy a ten percent discount at P.I.P. Instant Printing.

Upjohn HealthCare Services celebrates national Nurses' Day

The UpjohnHealthCare Services office joins the nation in saluting the nurses of the Permian Basin on National Nurses' Day. May 6 has been designated by Congress as National Nurses' Day. This gives individuals an opportunity to say "thank you" to the nurses in their lives and to recognize the tremendous changes that the nursing profession has undergone.

For all the public debate about the quality of health care in this country, Upjohn believes it is indisputable that the level of care received by Americans is the best in the world. Nurses and nursing have played a key role in this success.

Today's nurses share the compassion and dedication that are Florence Nightingale's legacy, but they are better educated, have wider responsibilities and are more important members of the health care team than when their role was limited to "doctor's helper."

Registered nurses make up the nation's largest group of health professionals. They touch the lives of virtually every consumer through health care and health education, yet, the public remains largely uninformed of the qualifications and contributions of registered nurses.

All of the nation's 1.9 million registered nurses hold a minimum of an associates degree in nursing or a diploma from a three-year hospital-based program. Completion of these programs does not satisfy the requirements for practice as a registered nurse. Every registered nurse must pass an examination administered by the state in which he or she wishes to practice.

In addition to these qualifications, increasing numbers of registered nurses pursue advanced degrees in nursing or related sciences. More than 100,000 RNs hold master's degrees; more that 5,000 hold doctorates. More than 30,000 RNs are certified by the American Nurses' Association as proficient in specific areas of nursing practice and nursing administration.

A majority of nurses are employed by hospitals, but there are also nurses working in schools, industrial plants, offices and health care service companies throughout the community. In the future, people can expect more and more nurses to provide counsel and health care services in the patient's home.

The people at Upjohn are concerned with keeping people out of the hospital through health education, blood pressure clinics and quality home nursing care. But, if hospitalization is required, we can provide private nurses in the hospital. We supply supplimental staffing for hospitals, nursing homes and doctor's offices for vacation relief of their regular staff or help in an extra busy time of the year.

Upjohn HealthCare Services provides quality nursing for their clients, this would not be possible without their field nursing staff. "So, please accept our heart felt thanks for today, 'Nurses' Day,' and for every day throughout the year," said Upjohn officials.

The staff of Upjohn HealthCare Services, Mary Clack, R.N., Service Director; Mitchie Patrick, Office Manager; Bob Bain, R.N., Service Coordinator; and Nelta Spinks, L.V.N., Night/Weekend Coordinator, salute the nurses of the Permian Basin in recognition of National Nurses' Day.

Call Fran Nobles at 682-7333 to find out how the Stop Smoking Clinic helps you stop without withdrawal or gaining weight. Right now she is offering tremendous discounts.

Stop Smoking Clinic now offering big discounts

Because of the current poor economy in the Permian Basin, Fran Nobles of the Stop Smoking Clinic has announced tremendous discounts on her five-day program, which is guaranteed. Smokeless tobacco users, as well as smokers, can benefit from this program.

Though the discounts are designed to help those who have felt the impact of the low oil prices, Fran says the discount is the least of the savings a smoker can expect from quitting now.

The trend to nonsmoker's discounts on life insurance has extended to other forms of insurance. Nonsmokers often can expect to pay less for disability insurance, automobile accident policies and homeowners' policies.

Even so, the greatest price a smoker has to pay is in terms of health. "The expense of cigarettes saved is minimal compared to what you gain in health," Fran says.

Smoking is a primary cause of drug interactions. Effect of medication taken by a patient may be increased, decreased or canceled by smoking. Diagnostic tests may give seriously inaccurate results in smokers.

About 75 to 80 percent of all lung cancer cases are found among cigarette smokers, who represent less than one-third of the adult population.

Cigarette smoking has been implicated in cancers of parts of the body other than the lungs, including the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, bladder, kidney and pancreas.

Smoking can also aggravate allergies.

In addition, smokers face a growing trend toward limiting smoking in many places.

Stop Smoking Clinic has a solution.

"If your goal is still to stop smoking, it's okay to ask for help," says Fran. The Stop Smoking Clinic has a special dual focus program which will help you reach your goal of quitting smoking, dipping or tobacco chewing.

Smokers are both physically and psychologically addicted to tobacco. Though the physical addiction can be broken in a matter of days, many smokers forget about dealing with the psychological dependency. That's why some people report that they gain weight, stutter or become very nervous after quitting.

The Stop Smoking Clinic's program is different in that it deals with the psychological needs of clients along with the individuals' physical needs. The program centers around a guaranteed, aversion-type therapy which does not use drugs or hypnosis.

Because the habit is established by association of pleasure or reward, the habit must be broken in the subconscious. The Stop Smoking Clinic deals with this association. This prevents the severe trauma or shock which can be caused by quitting "cold turkey."

In addition, people that go through this program report that they are able to quit without gaining weight.

The program is guaranteed if it is followed for five days, so there is nothing to lose. Though each client goes through an individualized program, Fran encourages people sign up as a family or office group.

Statistics show that 85 percent of all smokers want to quit. If you find yourself in that category, call the Stop Smoking Clinic at 682-7333 and get the help you need.

IF YOU HAVE ANYTHING TO SELL YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO ADVERTISE. CALL 682-5311

Pages and Prints has a selection as varied as Mom's interests

Patteann Daniel, owner of Pages and Prints in Plaza Center, explains that she has a wide selection of gifts for moms, brides and graduates.

Once again Mother's Day is just around the corner and you are sitting, scratching your head, trying to figure out what will be the perfect gift. "Mom is in no way an ordinary mother. She has very special interests and her own way of doing things," you think. She has a special way of building confidence in you, of saying she loves you, of showing she cares. You feel deeply for her, but sometimes it's just hard to express your appreciation, especially on Mother's Day. Pages and Prints Book Store in the Plaza Shopping Center can help.

Just like Mom, Pages and Prints is anything but ordinary. As you browse through the multi-room book store you will find a variety of books and gifts as varied as Mom's interests.

"The Main Room" has an extensive stock of books of general interest. Classic literature, fiction, gardening, biblical scholarship, travel books and coffee table books are just a sampling of the wide selection. Antique chairs, a library table, a pie safe and other antiques, that Mom would love, grace this room. Unusual frames, bud vases, desk sets and pewter miniatures are also neatly displayed among the books.

From this room Patteann Daniel, owner of Pages and Prints, suggests Flowers for Mother, a new book by a favorite author, Leroy Brownlow.

When Mom does her shopping at Pages and Prints, she probably finds herself side-tracked in "The Children's Corner." That's Mom, always thinking of her kids and grandchildren. If she recently brought a Bluebonnet Award book, a Wuzzle or a Questron wand and book home for a little tyke, this is probably where she discovered it.

Perhaps, Mom was so busy thinking of others that she missed some of Pages and Prints most-liked rooms - the "Business Room," the "Women's Corner" and the kitchen. This is your opportunity to discover those special nooks and take a sample home to Mom.

The "Business Room" has books for people changing careers or improving business skills. It has books for moms who are women executives.

"The Women's Corner" is designed for full-time moms and for those who carefully balance homemaking with a career. Dr. James Dobson and Dr. T. Berry Brazelton are two of the favorite authors whose books are displayed in this corner.

Featured in the kitchen are Martha Stewart's lovely books Entertaining, Hors d'Oeuvres and Quick Cooking. The New Microwave Guide and Cookbook from General Electric and Creative Mexican Cooking are great for moms, brides and graduates. The popular, dishwasher-safe Share-a-Hug line and specialty Bluebonnet Trail items are also found in the kitchen. The Lord Peter Wimsey Cookbook, which is designed for use with the popular Murder Mystery game, is displayed in this room.

Just down the hall is a corner full of cards, including hand-painted note paper. Across from the greeting cards you'll discover the beautiful Paper White line. A two-piece dress; a long, slender-style dress; and blouses of an ecru color are the newest items in this corner.

Throughout Pages and Prints Bookstore, Patteann is showing Margaret Marcum and Norma Webb original art. "Remembering the Alamo," a limited edition of 250 by J.U. Salvant, is displayed in the "Texana Room." H.D. Bugbee prints are also available there.

Patteann does many special orders. She has a catalog of the best selling large print books. In addition to books, she can order cassettes and records.

If you wait until Saturday afternoon to do your shopping at Pages and Prints Bookstore in Plaza Center, you will get to enjoy listening to Tangents of Jazz while you browse. However, you'll wonder why you didn't go to the enjoyably quaint store earlier.

Noontime/funtime at Pages and Prints

There is always something going on at Pages and Prints in the Plaza Center. Luncheons, book reviews and writing classes are just a few of the activities Midlanders enjoy at this quaint bookstore.

Twice a month, owner Patteann Daniel hosts special interest luncheons. Even the downtown working women of Midland can enjoy these events, because guest speakers begin their presentations at 12:10 p.m. and conclude by 12:45 p.m. Those attending are enjoying a delicious box lunch, prepared by Foods Fantastic for $5.25. Prepaid reservations are a must as seating is limited to 24.

At the May 15 luncheon Jheri Fleet will speak on "Writing: A Hobby or a Second Income." "Wine News and New Wines" will be Sam Day's topic on June 5. Laura Huffines will be the speaker June 19 and her new book Connecting will be the subject.

In July two local ladies, Paula Beshears and Darlynna Rush, will pose as siblings and review The Sidetracked Sisters Happiness File.

On Tuesday evenings during July and August Pages and Prints will be the setting for a writing class - Writing to Sell Fiction. On Wednesday evenings this summer a Writing Fiction class will be offered at Pages and Prints in Plaza Center.

Advanced Electrolysis puts and end to embarrassing, unwanted hair

Do you find yourself covering your face with you hand or constantly looking down to cover up unwanted hair? Do you miss the fun at the pool, because your bikini line is not like you want it?

Registered Electrologist Jodi McGee says you're not alone. 85 percent of women have a hair problem and many men encounter the same problem. Whether the excessive hair growth is caused by hereditary factors, hormonal changes or medication the result is the same - unwanted hair.

It may seem like a small matter to other people, but Jodi points out that people who actually experience a hair problem often allow that struggle to change their personality. There is no question about it that a person's self image affects their love for other and their entire life.

That's why Jodi, owner of Advanced Electrolysis, has chosen a career as a certified electrologist. Jodi graduated from Kru Institute in Atlanta, Georgia (Electrolysis school). She is a member of International Guild of Professional Electrologists and the Association of Texas Electrologists.

As an electrologist Jodi helps people permanently get rid of unwanted hair. Best of all, she helps her clients feel good about themselves.

Probe electrolysis is the only method of permanent hair removal approved by the International Guild of Professional Electrologists, Inc., and the American Medical Association and recognized by the Food and Drug Administration.

Jodi explains this hair removal method, which was discovered over a hundred years ago by Charles E. Michael, M.D., is based on a simple principle but is dependent on skilled hands.

The electrologist inserts a very fine probe alongside the hair in the hair follicle. A very slight amount of electrical current is then applied through this probe which destroys the hair root, permanently ending further growth. The skin is not punctured or harmed in any way, and for most people the entire procedure causes very little discomfort. (According to Guild studies, most patients report tweezing and waxing to cause more discomfort than electrolysis treatments.)

Jodi tailors the electrolysis treatments to meet each individual patient's needs. Certain factors determine the number and the length of treatments required. The number of hair follicles contained in the area of treatment, the sensitivity of the skin, the particular area to be treated and previous methods of hair removal are all factors to be considered.

Jodi explains that if tweezing or other temporary hair-removal methods have been used prior to electrolysis, the hair has probably been strengthened. In addition, the hair root may have become curled, which will make treatment a bit more difficult.

Most patients find that a weekly session of 15 to 60 minutes is the most effective.

Jodi says the most rewarding part of her work is watching people gain self-confidence as the treatments progress. Jodi believes that's reason enough for her to continue her learning at seminars and workshops, like one she will attend in Houston June.

In addition to expert electrolysis treatments, Jodi offers waxing. This she recommends for those who want a nice bikini line for this summer. It's a little late to start electrolysis treatments, but a wax treatment can take care of it. Then you can pursue electrolysis later this year, if desired.

Jodi will give you a complimentary consultation at her office, 3610 W. Wall, Suite 105. Just call 689-7200 during her office hours to set an appointment. Late appointments are available.

Jodi's Advanced Electrolysis is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and 2 p.m. to 6 pm. on Thursday. On the first and third Saturday each month the shop is open 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Certified Electrologist Jodi McGee says the most rewarding part of her work is see people's self image improve. Call 689-7200 for a complimentary consultation.

Yogie will be at Yogie's Frozen Yogurt on Saturday

Yogie will make a special appearance at Yogies Frozen Yogurt, 2100 N. "A," this Saturday.

For months children have been asking when Yogie would come out of hibernation. Linda Gay, owner of Yogie's Frozen Yogurt, recently announced that Saturday will be the day.

It is reported that Yogie will be seen in the store and around the shopping area from noon to 3 p.m.

In honor of this auspicious occassion Linda has ordered FREE peanut butter and jelly sandwiches all around for children under 12.

With the weather warming up and those yogurt machines really going, it's no wonder that Yogie decided it was time to come out of hibernation. Five unbearably delicious flavors and a tasty sugar-free yogurt would tempt anyone out of hibernation, especially Yogie.

Chocolate, vanilla and strawberry cups and cones are always available. The other two flavors are changed regularly.

To top it off there are over 25 "bear necessities." Chocolate chip cookie topping, caramel, hot fudge, M&Ms, honey, crushed cherries, butterscotch, chocolate chips, crushed Butterfinger and crushed Oreo cookies are just a small sampling of Yogie's "bear necessities."

Floats, malts, sundaes, shakes and smoothies really get your taste buds going. Then there's the "Bear Maximum" — an absolutely unbelievable banana split with yogurt and toppings.

What a mouth watering treat!

Yogie suggests that before you bite into one of these delectable yogurt treats, that you try a tasty sandwich or black gap stew. Yogie's has big fresh sandwiches. Ham and cheese, chicken salad and tuna salad are all available to eat in or carry out, so just pick your favorite for lunch or dinner. You also have a choice of white bread or wheat bread.

The popular Black Gap Stew is made according to the recipe of one of Yogie's customers. With chilis and jalepenos, this spicy stew tastes great. This is even available in carry out containers.

Of course, they have chips, as well as Coke Classic, Diet Coke, Dr. Pepper, and freshly brewed tea to go with their sandwiches.

Plan to have lunch at Yogie's this Saturday and let the children visit with Yogie.

When you're ready to go order a pint or quart of yogurt to take home and enjoy later.

And remember Yogie's is open Monday through Thursday, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, noon to 10 p.m.

Courtney White and other children just love getting to see Yogie, who will be at Yogie's Frozen Yogurt, 2100 N. "A" on Saturday.

Graham's has the gifts you've always dreamed of giving Mother

Nell Williams at Graham's Rexall Pharmacy and Gifts, 317 Dodson Street, invites you to select a special Mother's Day gift from their wide selection.

Remember those trips to the old fashioned drug store when you were a child. Recall wandering up and down the aisles of beautiful gifts of glass what-nots, perfume and all sorts of marvelous wonders. It seemed there were so many things that Mom just ought to have. Perhaps the item was lacy or delicate, maybe colorful or breakable, or possibly even useful - whatever it was you resolved yourself that it would probably be gone before you got enough pennies saved. Now you do have the opportunity to get just the right thing for Mom at Graham's Pharmacy on Dodson Street.

As you browse through Graham's you will be reminded of that drug store you visited as a child and you can be sure to find the perfect gift for Mother's Day.

Graham's has a wide selection in a wide variety of prices. Jewelry, like pure copper bracelets, earrings, belts and colorful "chunky" jewelry, is on display. You'll also find nice jewelry boxes at the friendly store.

Music boxes, beautiful candles and silk flowers are easily found at Graham's. Tulip, lilac and crocus bunches make it easy to make a big arrangement for Mom. Mauve, peach and red are just a sampling of the colors you will find.

Beautiful musical birds add a special touch. Piano and flutterby music boxes play a variety of songs.

Perhaps, Mom has always wanted some Pfaltzgraff dishes. Now is the ideal time to get them. Pfaltzgraff has been making dishes since 1811. Each one is hand painted, dishwasher and microwave proof and freezer safe.

There are other things for the kitchen: Olde Towne ceramic accents, wooden paper towel racks, recipe boxes, bread boxes, trays and trivets. Then there are hand-painted teddy bear pitchers and beautiful crystal pieces.

Special plates marked "With Love, Mother" and mugs that say "Mom's the word" make great reminders for years and years.

What's your mom's favorite perfume? Nuance, LeJardin, L'Origan, Sophia? Graham's has it and more.

A luxury bath pillow, a windchime, satin hangers, a fold up umbrella or quartz wall clock would make a great gift.

Or, pick a fresh box of Pangburn candies to satisfy Mom's sweet tooth.

Of course, you will want to select a special Mother's Day message from the Ambassador cards right next to the soda fountain at Graham's.

While you're there, sit down and enjoy a REAL milkshake or a tasty sandwich.

So this Mother's Day say "I love you" in a special way. Go to Graham's on Dodson Street.

does your home need soffit and fascia?
First, you have to know what they are. Take a look at the overhangs of your home. The underside and outside facing of this area are where soffit and fascia are used. On most homes, even brick homes, these areas are made of wood, and, if your home's like most, they're in terrible, weather-beaten condition.
The answer to this problem is Revere Super-Gard Aluminum Soffit and Fascia. They provide beauty and protection to your home's eaves, requiring virtually no maintenance—ever!
Now that you know what they are, let us tell you more about what Super-Gard Aluminum Soffit and Fascia can do for your home.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Nancy visits Japanese children

TOKYO (AP) — Nancy Reagan joined Japanese youngsters in singing "You Are My Sunshine" today and presented them with a model of the Statue of Liberty.

She acted as go-between for the Martin Luther King Jr. elementary school in Washington, D.C., which is paired as a "sister school" with Tokyo's Nagata-Cho Elementary School.

Mrs. Reagan, who rejoined her husband Monday after separate visits to Malaysia and Thailand, toured several classrooms at Nagata-Cho, including the Returned Students Center which contains souvenirs brought back by pupils from abroad.

The memorabilia includes a kite from the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., and letters and snapshots from pen pals at Shelby County West Middle School in Kentucky. There is a banner with the words "Greetings From Dublin School, Ohio."

Smoke bombs stall commuters

TOKYO (AP) — A string of noisy smoke bombs, possibly set by radicals trying to disrupt the Tokyo summit, exploded in nearly a score of railroad and subway stations today. No injuries were reported but some 350,000 commuters were delayed getting to work.

A police spokesman said the crude bombs were "possibly the work of radicals" who have vowed to "crush" the 12th annual gathering of seven industrial democracies on grounds it was an imperialist scheme to start world war.

At least 17 of the devices exploded, including one planted near a subway kiosk five minutes' walk from the Akasaka Palace, the main summit meeting place, and another outside a hotel serving as headquarters for all of the delegations except the Americans.

Several duds reportedly were found, one of them in another station within sight of the palace. "Whoever did it got off the train, put it in the garbage can and got back into the cars," said Yotsuya station master Takao Tanaka.

Libyan radio rejects charges

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Libya's official radio today rejected what it called vague charges of terrorism leveled at Libya by Western leaders meeting in Tokyo, and quoted Col. Moammar Khadafy as praising Japanese extremists for "wrecking" the Tokyo summit.

The praise from Khadafy apparently was in reference to Sunday's firing of rockets by Japanese terrorists during the summit's opening ceremonies. The rockets missed their target and exploded without hurting anyone.

A Tripoli Radio commentary, monitored in Nicosia, later said "the summit failed as the Japanese people decided to liberate Tokyo, forcing the heads of state attending the summit to flee from Japan like lizards."

Role in Pakistan explained

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet forces disarmed many Afghan soldiers and surrounded the capital city of Kabul in the days just prior to the resignation of Afghanistan's communist leader Babrak Karmal, Western diplomatic sources said today.

Citing extensive reports from Kabul, the sources said Afghan secret police quickly broke up pro-Karmal demonstrations by women, students and others.

The extraordinary Soviet security measures apparently were intended to guard against any backlash from Karmal's supporters or the Afghan armed forces.

The government announced Sunday that the 57-year-old Karmal had asked to resign as Afghanistan's Communist Party leader because of ill health, and that he had been replaced by secret police chief Najibullah.

Karmal's departure came after indications the Soviet Union, which installed him in power in 1979, was unhappy with the government's inability to defeat a nationwide Moslem insurgency and gain any major support in the country.

Bangladesh tornado kills five

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A tornado hit an area north of Dhaka, killing five people and injuring more than 200, officials said today.

Officials of Rangpur district, 200 miles north of Dhaka, said the storm struck late Sunday. They said it battered villages and destroyed about 500 mud and straw houses.

Trees and electrical poles were uprooted, and vast tracts of crop land were damaged, they said.

Five people died, and about 50 of the 200 who received injuries were hospitalized, the officials said.

Severe storms also hit the neighboring districts of Nilphamari and Jhedinah, but there were no reports of casualties.

U.S. now placating Tunisia

TUNIS, Tunisia (LAT) — The United States is in the unusual position of trying to placate President Habib Bourguiba, leader of the only Arab state that refrained from openly criticizing President Reagan's air raid against Libya.

Along with France and other Western allies of this small North African country, the United States is worried that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy might choose neighboring Tunisia as a conveniently close, soft target to demonstrate his ire.

In the past, U.S. and French naval exercises have sufficed to defuse Khadafy's friendly and unfriendly moves toward Tunisia, whether they took the form of a momentarily accepted treaty of union in 1974, or last year's spate of letter bombs, mass expulsions of Tunisian workers and other unfriendly acts.

Bombing death toll revised

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — The government Monday lowered to 15 the death toll in the bomb of an Air Lanka jet Saturday.

Among the dead were two Japanese, a French citizen, three Ceylonese and two people from the Maldive Islands, where the plane was going. Three of the others were believed to be Britons.

Air Lanka, which says a bomb may have been smuggled aboard the plane in a vegetable shipment or other food being sent to the Maldives, said Monday that it had stepped up security in its cargo operations.

Authorities continue to assume that Tamil separatist guerrillas planted the bomb in cargo stored near the tail of the Lockheed Tristar.

Syrian president in Jordan

AMMAN, Jordan (NYT) — President Hafez Assad of Syria arrived here Monday for talks with King Hussein, in his first visit to Jordan since relations between the two neighboring countries turned hostile six years ago.

The talks are taking place while both countries are beset with domestic and external difficulties, and senior Jordanian officials say the two leaders have sought to defuse the tensions between them even if disagreements on several basic issues cannot be resolved.

Radioactive rain monitoring to increase

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials have ordered stepped-up monitoring to watch for radioactive rain from the Chernobyl nuclear accident, some of which has probably fallen on the United States already, officials say.

The discovery of radioactivity "barely above" normal background levels in the air off the Pacific Northwest coast over the weekend means — since it was carried by the west-to-east jet stream — that rain in the Midwest and on the West Coast likely carried at least some particles to the ground.

But in briefing reporters Monday, officials were careful to note they had no ground-level measurements of extra radioactivity.

Referring to the Midwest storms, Lester Machta, director of the air resources laboratory of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, told reporters, "My guess is that radioactivity will be detected there."

Sophisticated equipment might be needed to detect it in the West Coast rainfall, he said.

Machta, a member of the interagency task force keeping track of the aftermath of the Soviet nuclear plant accident, said background radiation in the atmosphere where instrument-laden planes flew was probably "zero or one" picocurie per cubic meter. But 2.5 picocuries were found at 30,000 feet about 150 miles off the Pacific Northwest coast and 12 picocuries were found at 18,000 feet in the Gulf of Alaska about 400 miles off Canada. (A picocurie is about two atomic disintegrations per minute.)

In drinking water, EPA permits 15 picocuries per liter, about a quart, of alpha-particle radioactivity.

Other radioactivity, carried by slower moving winds at lower altitudes, can be expected to reach North America as the days go by, the task force said.

In Moscow, meanwhile, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda issued the first detailed Soviet report on what happened at Chernobyl.

The report, due for publication today, said an explosion ripped apart the building that housed the plant's No. 4 nuclear reactor and the resulting fire shot flames nearly 100 feet into the air.

In anticipation of finding radioactivity in the United States, Meyers instructed the agency's 68 radioactivity monitoring stations to take daily samples of rainfall, instead of the monthly samples previously scheduled.

Asked what doses could be expected in rainfall, Lee M. Thomas, EPA administrator and head of the task force, said that could not be predicted until measurements turned up radioactivity in the water.

Also, the stations will step up milk sampling from monthly to twice a week.

Asked if he expected to issue any advisories on avoiding certain foods, as some European countries have done with milk and some vegetables, Thomas said, as he has before, "We don't anticipate having to do any of that."

In other developments Monday:

—The disaster could mean loss of 10 percent of the grain crop in the Soviet Union, about the same as a year of bad weather, said John Urbanchuk of Wharton Econometrics, a consulting firm, told the Joint Economic Committee.

—The Energy Department announced a special outside review of one of those uncontained reactors, the N reactor at Hanford, Wash. That is the only large reactor in the country with a design at all similar to the ill-fated Chernobyl reactor.

—The government said it hopes a visit to the Soviet Union by a delegation from the International Atomic Energy Agency indicates the Soviets are willing to make more information available on the accident.

—State Department spokesman Charles Redman said U.S. experts believe there is no reason for significant health concern for official American personnel in Moscow and Warsaw. He said this was a preliminary assessment based on the findings of American medical and technical personnel.

Shepard: Space flight no more riskier now

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Space flight has always been dangerous, even 25 years ago when Alan Shepard became America's first man in space.

Shepard and four of his Mercury program colleagues were reunited Monday to commemorate the 25th anniversary of America's first manned space flight.

"It's been dangerous for 25 years. We have to cope with it every single day," he said when asked if space flight was riskier now than before.

It was May 5, 1961, when Shepard became the first American in space aboard Freedom 7 and acknowledged his accomplishment with a cool, "Boy, what a ride!"

Fellow Mercury astronauts Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper, Wally Schirra and Donald K. "Deke" Slayton attended Monday's black-tie dinner at the California Museum of Science and Industry to honor Shepard and his 15-minute suborbital flight.

Slayton said America had become accustomed to success in the space program.

"This kind of gets people's thinking straightened out a little bit," said Slayton of recent launch failures, including the Jan. 28 Challenger disaster.

"You realize we aren't ever going to build a perfect system and they are subject to failure," he said.

Shepard responded curtly when asked what he would tell young people who might now be fearful of space because of the explosion of the Challenger, which killed all seven aboard.

"If they can't see beyond what's happening, if they can't see beyond the risk, I can't tell them anything," he said. "They've got to see that going in."

There was a lot of doubt and cynicism about flying in space" when he went up in 1961, Shepard noted.

The $150-a-plate dinner benefited the Mercury Seven Foundation, which was formed two years ago to award scholarships to outstanding students. More than 200 people attended, said organizer Pat Neal. A number of tables were bought by aerospace firms, including Rockwell International, TRW and McDonnell Douglas.

The proceeds from the evening will fund the foundation's first seven scholarships, yet to be announced.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, the seventh Mercury astronaut, canceled plans to attend because of a Senate session, said foundation spokesman Bret Parsons.

Betty Grissom, whose husband Virgil I. "Gus" Grissom died in a spacecraft fire in 1967, was expected but did not attend.

Cruise missiles could be used in future assaults

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has been ordered to dispatch more ships carrying cruise missiles into the Mediterranean, as U.S. military leaders consider possible use of the weapons in any future assaults against Libya, a broadcast report said.

CBS News reported Monday night that use of the missiles is being considered by U.S. defense officials preparing contingency plans in case further actions are ordered against the North African nation.

One of the cruise missile-carrying ships ordered into the Mediterranean was the nuclear attack submarine that ran aground in the Straits of Gibraltar last Tuesday, the network quoted sources as saying.

The missiles would carry conventional explosives, the network report said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, with President Reagan in Tokyo, said today he had no information on the CBS report.

The Pentagon refused comment on the report, saying it did not discuss the deployment of ships or combat contingency plans.

One official, who asked not to be named, said Monday night the Joint Chiefs of Staff are "always reviewing different options in case orders come down for further strikes against Libya."

"The use of cruise missiles might be one option, but I can't confirm that's the case," the official said.

A second official stressed Monday that as a general matter, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger "is very reluctant to pursue any military option at this point."

"The secretary believes the first raid served a purpose of sending a message to Libya about our response to terrorism," the official said. "Short of some new outrage, the secretary believes a military option is not the way to go immediately when more of our allies are accepting the need for diplomatic, political and economic steps against Libya."

FCC expects phone rates can go lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lower long-distance phone rates, due to go into effect June 1, may generate so much additional calling that rates can go lower still, the Federal Communications Commission says.

Initial projections by the FCC's common carrier bureau, released Monday, say the volume of calling minutes may increase about 5 percent.

The National Exchange Carrier Association, clearing house for money collected from long-distance companies to help pay for switching equipment at each telephone company central office, was ordered by the FCC to recalculate, by May 12, the share that should be figured into the cost of each long-distance call.

Although any reductions apparently would come to only fractions of a penny per minute of calling, the savings to each of the long-distance companies could be in the millions of dollars and perhaps more than $100 million in a year.

Resolution thanks Britain for support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved a resolution thanking the government of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for its assistance in implementing the U.S. air strikes against Libya last month.

The resolution, which was cosponsored by 245 House members, was passed Monday by voice vote after a brief debate.

Only one member, Rep. Mike Lowry, D-Wash., spoke against the resolution, objecting to its description of the raid as "defensive," because it was difficult to apply that word to a surprise night attack. He also said it was misleading to say that it was an anti-terrorist action.

The resolution states that the use of the British-based American war planes "substantially reduced the risk to American servicemen and significantly contributed to the success of their mission." The resolution also states that such cooperation is essential to effectively combat terrorism.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Costume jewelry makes perfect gift for mom

Copley News Service

If you're pinning your hopes on making this the year you give a Mother's Day gift mom really will like — and use — you can broach the issue and come out in style.

Women — even moms — love jewelry, and one of the most popular pieces of jewelry this season is the brooch or pin.

Since costume jewelry is in fashion, you don't need to invest in a brooch destined to become a family heirloom. You don't have to worry about finding a design that, because of its expense, should complement several of mom's outfits. Costume jewelry is so affordable you can splurge on a pin that will match only one of mom's outfits, because you — or she — can afford to purchase a separate pin for each outfit.

According to a survey by Monet Jewelers, a costume jewelry manufacturer, nearly 50 percent of women aged 18 to 59 purchase costume jewelry for themselves, spending an average of $200 per year. Women prefer costume jewelry to the real thing because it is affordable and innovatively designed, updating basic wardrobes inexpensively, the study said.

Some of the niftiest pins at the moment are baroque with oversize faux jewels and encrusted with pearls, some of which dangle from tiny chains.

Ovals, bars, hearts and crowns also are popular for more serious looks, but jeweled dragonflies, hand-painted faces and flamingos are more lighthearted and fun. Pins with initials or names of cities — such as New York or Paris — also are fun, especially if mom wanted a trip but it wasn't in the budget.

As for wearing pins, just about anyplace is fashionable these days — on a lapel, pocket or shoulder pad, at the neck in place of a tie or necklace, down a sleeve or at a cuff.

CNS Photo

Old and new costume jewelry will spiff up any wardrobe.

If you think a pin won't prick mom's fancy, there are other costume jewelry options available. In fact, there is such an array of faux-and-fun fashion at hand that you practically are guaranteed of finding the perfect piece of jewelry for mom at a price that's right for you.

Polished and dull-finish metals in gold and silver tones team up with brightly colored stones or stand alone to create dramatic and flashy earrings, necklaces and bracelets.

Earrings are available in styles from gold-tone hammered disks to dangling hoops and geometric shapes. Multi-link metal chains make popular necklaces and bracelets, as do gold-coin motifs.

Chunky, clunky plastic jewelry also is popular — big beads, geometric shapes, bold colors — for necklaces, bracelets and earrings.

If you can't pin down mom's tastes, statistics show that pearls consistently appeal to the broadest range of women's tastes, according to a spokeswoman for Monet. Whether classically simple or updated with new colors and bold shapes, pearls remain the definitive accessory item for any occasion or fashion look.

You can find everything from simple single-strand bracelets and necklaces to long strands of pearls mixed with gold beads and faux gems. Large rounded pearl earrings backed by a glint of silver or gold create a look that goes anywhere.

Monet offers these tips for choosing quality costume pearls:

■ Look for pearls made of glass rather than plastic, since heavier glass best simulates the weight of genuine pearls and hangs properly around the neck.

■ Choose costume pearls that are dipped several times in a pearlescent lacquer imparting a luster that looks real and resists damage from perfume, hair spray and cosmetics. Repeated dipping also minimizes chipping and peeling.

■ Examine the color and size consistency of pearls on a strand. If the necklace is graduated, the size of each pearl should be perfectly proportionate to the next largest pearl on the strand.

Dress up Mother's Day with gift of stylish fashion

Copley News Service

This Mother's Day, dress up the day with a gift of fashion fun.

One surefire success is to purchase a stylish dress perfect for taking mom out to dinner at a fancy restaurant — or to the theater or opera.

This season, dresses are elegance wrapped up in slimmer, shapelier, more feminine silhouettes. Some flair out in swingy skirts, others are body-conscious knits. Shapely suits sport softly padded shoulders, which largely have replaced the boxlike menswear look.

But depending on mom's fashion sense and lifestyle, it may be more appropriate to give her an exercise in the latest styles of active wear.

Pair a spa membership with an aerobics outfit. Infuse mom with energy by giving her a leotard with high-cut legs and color-coordinated shimmery tights.

Leotards dance with wild prints, color and new styling details. Leg silhouettes continue to rise, because unless a woman is really overweight, the high-cut legs make her look slimmer.

Black and dark shades are favorite colors because they make people look thinner. Paired with bright accessories or combinations of brights, these leotards give a jazzy look that keeps the beat.

Leg work gets a lift when tights are color coordinated, not matched, to the leotard. Choose from shimmery or flat matte colors or prints, and add leg warmers and a good pair of aerobic shoes.

Give a road-running mom airplane tickets to Boston or New York to watch — or compete in — those cities' famous marathons.

To keep pace with fashion while training, give her a new outfit. Look for prints with panache. Stripes with sizzle. Color, color, color. Today's running wear is setting new records in fashion excitement, breaking away from its staid past in designs styled in nylon knits for the ultimate in performance as well as appearance.

Stripes are in front as the favored design motif in shorts and singlets — basic fashion for the fast track. They look dramatically fresh in bold graphics featuring bright neon tones like reds, purples and yellows.

Another design motif takes its cue from impressionistic canvases — abstract, pretty prints are interpreted in powder-puff pastels from bluish pinks and blues to aquas and lilacs.

If mom's a swinger — on the tennis court or golf course — the fashion accent remains on tailored separates with colors selected to match the season. Aside from color, the biggest emphasis is on trim and detail. Classic tennis whites — shorts, socks, shirts and jackets — rush the fashion net with braiding, stripes and signature-color trim on hems, cuffs and plackets.

Maternity stores offer sophisticated career styles without cute frills

NEW YORK (AP) — Five years ago, pregnant career women had difficulty finding sophisticated, off-the-rack maternity fashions. Their choice was limited to little-girl pinafore styles and poor quality fabrics.

That has changed, thanks to several career women who went through pregnancy, discovered the lack and started up maternity-wear companies to fill the need.

Diane Graham, pregnant with her third child, last year opened a maternity boutique in Kansas City, Mo., and soon followed up with a mail-order catalog called Diane's Designs, specifically aimed at working women.

Today's birth rate is the highest in a decade, and about 80 percent of all mothers-to-be continue to work, according to a 1985 Harvard Business School survey. This means they have a greater need for and more money to spend on maternity clothes than pregnant women a generation ago, who usually quit work as soon as they began "showing."

At the age of 31, Ms. Graham simultaneously runs her own engineering firm and her new business. A designer produces her maternity line, which has an adjustable feature that allows a woman to wear the clothes during and after pregnancy.

"My first design was an adjustable skirt — something you could wear through your maternity and after — that didn't look like a maternity outfit," Ms. Graham said. "It has buttons on the inside, which you can adjust as your stomach grows so you can even wear a blouse inside."

Diane's Designs' spring line retails from $35 to $250. Ms. Graham said she hopes to gross $1 million in 1986.

For an evening out, Reborn Maternity offers a silk cocktail dress with pleat and button detail.

Another budding maternity business, run by Kristiina Ratia and Lyn Peterson, is the New York-based Motif Collections, which sells its line to specialty maternity shops and department stores around the country.

The women, successful interior designers with seven children between them, said they decided to launch a business after the response from a questionnaire they sent out "was unanimously negative about the maternity clothes available."

"We felt that you're so conspicuous when you're pregnant anyway that it was no time for gimmicks or to be far out in your dress," she said.

Consequently, the styles designed by the two women are simple and tailored, "letting you be in step with your peers as much as possible," Ms. Peterson said.

Ms. Ratia, 35, a former international model and designer of children's clothes and interiors, said Motif Collections used only natural fibers in a "very slimming style so you don't have all that extra fabric hanging on you. All the clothes are cut so they are narrower in the back. The average maternity maker makes a jumper with equal fabric in the back and front."

Another company was started by business teacher Pauline Wallis, who recalled that when she was pregnant 11 years ago, "I went to a wedding in my ninth month and got up to dance and the band stopped playing. They were so stunned that I would have the audacity to try to dance. You wouldn't find that now."

That experience, coupled with her inability to find appropriate clothing for her teaching job, led Ms. Wallis and her husband, Matthew, to open Reborn Maternity, now an eight-store, $5 million yearly business in the New York area.

The maternity fashion industry is estimated at $300 million, but some industry experts believe $1.5 billion is spent at retail because many pregnant women also shop in large size and men's departments.

The main difference between maternity fashions today and those of only four years ago is variety and styling, Ms. Wallis said.

"Three or four years ago, we didn't have any of the blouson tops. We had A-line tops, which made it very difficult to wear with a skirt. Also, this year many of the skirts don't have the halenca top. Instead we have a ribbed panel, which allows you to wear non-maternity tops for a longer time."

Halenca panels, a stretchy midriff section sewn into maternity skirts and pants, require tops to be at least hip-length to cover them.

Ms. Wallis said the hottest silhouette this season is the drop-waist "because it looks like a non-maternity."

Sizes are adjusted by the manufacturer, so if you're a size 8, you'll still buy an 8. But knowing whether a style purchased at five months will still fit at nine months is harder to figure out. Many stores provide "belly pillows" which fill in where your imagination can't.

Victorian women altered clothing to acheive maternity wardrobes

NEW YORK (AP) — If pregnant women think they're restricted in the types of maternity fashions offered today, they should study their 19th century predecessors.

They could not buy such clothing off-the-rack and either had to have costly dresses custom made or have their wardrobes altered.

There is little documentation of what pregnant women wore in the mid- and late 1800s primarily because the clothes, like mourning garments, were seldom handed down for posterity. After months of constant wear, they were often discarded or altered beyond recognition.

The 1882 diaries of one Victorian woman, Mrs. Edward Seaton, show how she handled the clothing problem. The diaries were published in a 1972 article in the Journal of the Costume Society.

In her 14th week of pregnancy, she wrote that she "was extravagant" and went to the tailor "as I must be carefully arrayed now."

The tailor-made dress, draped loosely from the bust down, proved to be an ideal camouflage for a spreading waist. It had a lace collar and a train trimmed with a bow.

From her account, it appears that Mrs. Seaton had only one other dress specifically made for maternity wear. The rest she altered or let out.

In her 20th week, she wrote she would have "to do a little necessary work to my clothes, which I am sorry to say want letting out."

Within five weeks of the birth, Mrs. Seaton had the dress tucked to fit her normal figure.

She proudly wrote afterwards that she managed to camouflage her pregnancy so well that a relative had commented after the baby's birth: "Where in the world did that little baby come from?"

Gifts of fragrance can capture mom's lifestyle

Copley News Service

Whether mom is a romantic or a realist, a runner or a recluse, into high fashion or jeans, there are gifts of fragrance that suit her personal style — and that make a perfect gift for Mother's Day.

For the mother on the go, there are sleek travel soaps and compact travel sets of lotions and perfumes.

For the fashionable mother, there are lacquer pendants and gold compacts that encase solid perfumes and double as chic fashion accessories.

For the romantic, there are bath crystals paired with inflatable bath pillows. Include body powder for the perfect end to a lengthy and luxurious bath.

For a practical mom, perfumed body creams soften and smooth the skin as they scent. To make the gift even more useful, pair the cream with a soft, fluffy terry cloth or velour robe.

For the professional, small spray cologne dispensers fit in her purse or briefcase for easy pick-me-up fragrance applications throughout the day.

For the innocent and fun-loving, bottles of perfume are paired with satin-and-lace teddy bears.

A mother's lifestyle will give ideas not only about appropriate gifts to combine with a fragrance, but also about the fragrance itself.

According to McCall's magazine, light florals like lilac or lily of the valley and citrus scents have an innocent, delicate image probably best suited for younger women and romantics. Heavy, musky scents may be more appropriate for more mature and exotic women. Fresh green scents — anything associated with the outdoors such as grass, herbs, leaves or pine — seem to go with active, athletic types.

Fragrances that blend floral and sweet Oriental scents are more intense and sophisticated than floral scents alone. A woman who is bold, independent, artistic and avant-garde usually prefers extremely complex fragrances that blend a variety of scents, such as florals, musks and green scents.

If it's difficult to determine what fragrance best suits mother, go for the names when selecting fragrance. Match the selection to her favorite designer.

Finding the right fragrant gift for mother is sure to please her — and fill Mother's Day with the sweet smell of successful gift giving.

Lingerie boutique opens for Mother's Day

New York Times News Service

Men often feel as secretive as spies when they buy lingerie for women.

So just in time for Mother's Day, Bloomingdale's has instructed the staff of its new fourth-floor Intimacies boutique — which sells everything from $3 cotton panties to $1,800 Chantilly lace ensembles — to "make it less intimidating," said Lee Fabris, the store's fashion director for lingerie. "They are to be sensitive to the fact that he is a man — too shy, perhaps, to ask about a size."

The dramatic new shop, Rhonda Pinzer, a Bloomingdale's spokesman, said, "has given me a whole new outlook on underwear."

By ULA ILNYTZKY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Fans of chic, ladylike dressing can get their fill this fall with the sophisticated styles of Adele Simpson and Givenchy. But for knock 'em dead glamour Mackie's still your man.

Here's an overview of these designers' collections previewed recently:

MACKIE

The king of glitter turns sedate for fall, offering toned-down evening wear which is sleek, sophisticated but still dazzling.

Mackie, taking a page from the rest of Seventh Avenue, believes in simplicity this season. His two-tone gowns that sport a solid black skirt, slit high in fronts and colored bodices in either violet, fire engine red or turquoise epitomize this pared down look.

Instead of yards of beads and spangles, the bodice is studded with a few black sparklers around the collar, armholes and peplum for a head-turning, not drop dead look.

Like nearly everyone else on Seventh Avenue, Mackie is paying tribute to the turtleneck this season, but with typical Mackie flair the designer adds a tuxedo bowtie at the back of his turtles. He even uses the kicky, backward bow on backless halter gowns.

A set of trompe l'oeil gowns in hot pink, lilac and aqua are fun. The lilac gown sports a draped, glittering necklace which is actually rhinestone studs sewn onto the dress. Another has a military brand around the arm, and a solid black gown has a see-through netting back with a gold and rhinestone studded necklace design sewn onto the delicate material.

Perhaps in homage to Cher, who helped make him a household name and who attended the show, Mackie should design a set of gowns with midriff cutouts — a favorite style of the svelte singer-actress.

The black gown had diamond cutouts at the midriff, each criss-cross strand done in glittering silver beads. Silver detail was also sprinkled around the armholes of the gown.

But Mackie wouldn't be Mackie if he didn't offer at least a few drop-dead styles, the nicest of which were his multi-colored streamer gowns.

These were done in solid black beading with streaks of color cascading down the gown in glittering violet, yellow, pink and turquoise and seen in plunging V-necklines or strapless styles.

Though not known for his daytime styles, Mackie nevertheless offered many for fall; some were nice, others boring.

He used a Mexican serape print liberally in cashmere sweaters, short, cropped jackets and as waist detail on slim skirts. Another daytime favorite was his jumbo check done in bright pink, lime green and aqua wool skirts.

A set of colored, palm-print sweaters, sporting a giant hand on the back or sleeves of lush cashmere sweaters, are a fun look for fall.

SIMPSON

Adele Simpson celebrates the female body with waist-cinching styles in tailored and classy dresses and suit ensembles accented with rhinestone buttons and black velvet collars and cuffs.

Donald Hopson, who designs the Simpson collection, likes mid-calf and ankle-grazing skirts which he believes gives the styles an elegant and flowing feeling. But there's also a smattering of mid-knee lengths in the collection.

Solids are Simpson staples. Black and charcoal and appealing emerald and coral abound.

An alpaca wool circle coat in coral that swirled like a cape was exquisite over a matching coral jersey knit dress. Zippered in back, the ankle-length, A-lined dress featured a mock turtleneck.

A variation of this was a coral wrap-a-round jersey top worn over a straight, short black skirt or a wrap-a-round jump suit teamed with an unstructured, hip-length alpaca jacket.

Shirt dresses are also a new look for fall and winter. For day, the designer offers this style in knit jersey and silk, with matching scarves worn inside V-necklines or notched collars.

For night, these styles are worn in metallic silk or jersey with plunging necklines and front or back slits. All are pinched at the waist with three-inch belts.

GIVENCHY

Hubert De Givenchy, the quintessential maker of classic and tailored designs, will not disappoint his well-heeled fans with his constructed and body-conscious fall and winter collection.

Purple, black, bright blue, red and emerald are repeated in coats, suits, dresses and evening wear, making coordinating easy.

Wool and alpaca coats, all in a becoming knee length, have tiny stitched details and are either generously full or slim.

Givenchy, whose clients include Princess Caroline and Jacqueline Onassis, also offers a full selection of vinyl raincoats in black, white and gold lame. One style has velvet trim at the collar, cuffs and pocket flaps, and another has subtle specks that look like rain droplets.

The designer's butter-soft leather suits in scintillating colors of deep violet and red are knockouts. Offered in hip-length boxy jackets or more fitted, notched-collar jackets over narrow, back-slit skirts, the outfits are particularly appealing in combinations of two colors.

Although Givenchy offers a large selection of silk and velvet dresses, it is his knit wool jerseys and sweater dresses that stand out. Slimming, with skirts just grazing the knee, the jerseys are particularly attractive when a dominant color is offset with a midriff band in a bright, contrasting color.

The sweater dresses, in either one or two-piece outfits, are topped with a matching geometric-patterned cardigans.

Medicine affects The Pill's effect

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please warn women who rely on birth control pills that if they take antibiotics, the effectiveness of the pill may be greatly reduced.

My grandson and his lovely wife are soon to be parents — thanks to the antibiotics she had taken for a brief time due to an infection in her ear! She was more than a little surprised to learn she was pregnant. Thank heavens, they can afford this unplanned pregnancy — many young couples can't.

Please print this for others who do not know the facts of life (no pun intended). — INDIANA GRANNY-TO-BE

DEAR GRANNY: It's inconceivable (pun intended) that a physician would fail to mention this fact to a patient of childbearing age. Thanks, Granny, for a valuable letter.

DEAR ABBY: A myth in a good cause is still a myth. In a recent column on the importance of one vote, one of your readers stated, "In 1960, one vote change in each precinct in Illinois would have defeated John F. Kennedy." Good story — but not true.

Kennedy received 303 electoral votes in 1960. He needed 268 to win. Illinois had 27 votes. Had Kennedy lost Illinois, he still would have had 276 electoral votes — and still would have been elected president.

Best from your friends at the Chicago Tribune, RANDY CURWEN, CHICAGO

DEAR RANDY: Another Illinois reader claims to have spotted another flaw in the list of so-called historical events submitted by an Alabama reader. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A reader from Talladega, Ala., submitted a list of historical events pointing up the importance of one vote. Among them: One vote saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.

Wrong! Andrew Johnson WAS impeached. I submit the following from The World Book: Andrew Johnson, the 17th president of the United States, was the only president ever to be impeached. He became chief executive upon the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. The Civil War had just ended. Johnson, a Democrat from Tennessee, wanted to carry out Lincoln's program of kind and generous treatment for the defeated Confederate States. But he faced a Republican Congress controlled by men determined to punish the South. Congress passed a series of harsh laws over Johnson's repeated vetoes. Feelings became so strong that the House of Representatives voted to impeach him. But the Senate failed by one vote to remove Johnson from office. — PHILIP BATEMAN, DECATUR, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for "Smart and Confused," who felt superior. Feeling superior is not all that rare. I also have always felt superior to most of my contemporaries. Oddly enough, I kept running into people who felt exactly the same way. To paraphrase Ambrose Bierce: "An egoist is someone who thinks more of himself than he does of me."

Feeling superior is an arrested state of development. Compassion, not intelligence, is the greatest human attribute. An ounce of kindness is worth a pound of cleverness. It's nice to be intelligent, but it's intelligent to be nice. — GARY ENGLE, BELTON, MO.

American designers show fall lines

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Traveling full circle from the mannish, layered looks of a few seasons ago, American designers are showcasing femininity and offering pared down, svelte styles for fall and winter '86.

When the two weeks of fall fashion previews kicked off in New York on April 28, fashion critics and buyers saw a striking return to body-conscious dressing. The renewed interest in curves has been several seasons in the making, but this time designers are whole-heartedly embracing it.

Lush cashmere sweaters and cuddly cardigans abound for fall. Stirrup pants, which made a big splash last fall, continue to be a strong look this year, worn with roomy sweaters in Icelandic and Nordic patterns.

But the turtleneck, a winter staple in most wardrobes, is shaping up to be among the strongest styles emerging for fall, along with the return of the short, fitted jacket.

Oscar de la Renta offers his turtlenecks in cashmere sweaters worn with cardigans while Norma Kamali pairs hers with an interesting ski pant and skirt combination with bolero jackets. Kamali's slim pants are jazzed up by layering a sassy, skirt panel over the thighs.

Bill Blass loves the turtleneck look and uses it liberally in a set of red wool jersey dresses with ribbed neck and cuffs for day and sophisticated hip-shirred gowns for night, said Blass spokesman Craig Natiello.

Calvin Klein also makes good use of the turtleneck but, in keeping with his minimalist styling, updates it with something called a half-turtle. "It's not a complete turtleneck," said spokesman Paul Wilmot. "It makes half a roll. It's almost like a high crew neck."

Geoffrey Beene is one of the few designers on Seventh Avenue who does not embrace the turtleneck for fall. There isn't one in the collection. "He hates doing what everyone else is," said a spokesman.

But Beene agrees with the rest when it comes to clean, fluid lines whether its his sand colored wool jersey day dress with matching coat or a shimmering, evening gown that alternates waves of cellophane-thin, silver panne velvet and black jersey.

The overall look for fall is narrow waists and styles with rounder shoulders and hips. The nipped jacket, which calls attention to the waist, is teamed with minis and low-heeled shoes, as well as ankle-grazing skirts.

Fall: Everything old is new again

By BETTIJANE LEVINE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Do new clothes have to look new? Do they have to be last word, up to the minute, full of flash and dash? The current thinking is no.

Judging from the preview photos of fall fashions, Old Money styles are more bankable than those freshly minted. And good bloodlines in design are as important as in British family trees.

Perry Ellis' walking suit, for example, is an update of a standard that was first seen on upper class fashion plates in 1901. It hasn't changed much since then, but that, precisely, is its charm.

Cashmere, having yet another heyday, certainly has good lineage. A simple little sweater set like Oscar de la Renta's, or a cashmere sweater dress like the one by Calvin Klein, has been a staple in upper crust closets since the 1850s.

And perhaps the newest thing about Louis Dell'Olio's blazer for Anne Klein this fall is that it adheres so strictly to tradition.

Ralph Lauren, of course, is a primary projector of this gentrified mood. He's built a $1.2 billion retail volume with his updated preservations of Old Money styles — and all the accessories that go with them. His are the kind of outfits presumably coveted by the clubby, elegant, aristocratic set — but available to anyone who can pay.

The layered Ralph Lauren outfit is a compilation of Old World sporty luxuries. The tweed greatcoat, over a belted coat with cowl-neck cashmere sweater and slacks, would have been perfect for a voyage on the Queen Mary to the British Isles.

INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WEEK
MAY 4-10, 1986

JUST LIKE HALLEY'S COMET...

Classified ads are FAST, HIGHLY VISABLE and DEPENDABLE!

This week the Classified staff of the Reporter-Telegram is celebrating International Classified Advertising week and we're doing it in a BIG WAY!

We are offering 'Guaranteed Results' on classified word ads placed during this special week, so call us for all the details.

Our staff is a lot like the comet ...Fast, Highly Visable & Dependable! Although we're not as visable to our customers as we'd like to be since the majority of our business is transacted by telephone, we're giving you the opportunity to see the friendly, professional, dedicated people you do business with.

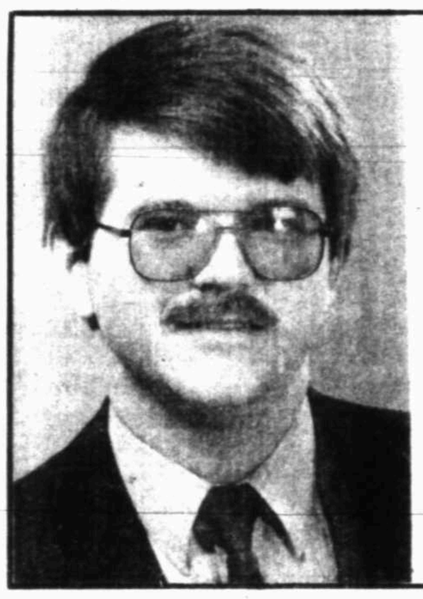

Dan Danser
Classified Manager

Dan served in U.S. Army Aviation with a tour in Vietnam. He graduated from the University of Phoenix with a degree in Management in 1982. He began his 14 year career in Classified advertising in Tucson, Arizona and has worked in Arizona and California in both management and sales before relocating to Midland in 1985 to become Classified Manager for the Reporter-Telegram.

Erin Coats
Telemarketing Supervisor

Erin is a native Midlander and has recently returned to Midland after spending 10 years in East Texas. She brings 5½ years of classified experience with her, serving as Classified Ad Manager of the Palestine, Texas newspaper. Her duties include sales training, supervision, planning and promotion of classified.

Tom Cooper
Account Executive

Tom has worked at the Reporter-Telegram for 3 years; 8 months in Circulation and the rest in Classified. He is responsible for the sale, layout, copy writing and proof reading of advertisements of approximately 40 accounts on a regular basis. He also writes a weekly column which appears each Monday in the Automotive section.

Mary Garza
Account Executive

Mary has spent the past 1½ years servicing her classified advertising accounts for the Reporter-Telegram. She really enjoys her job because of the constant change and the challenge it provides but most of all because she knows how well classified works for her customers.

Craig Horton
Account Executive

Craig has been an account executive for the last 3½ years. Prior to working for the Reporter-Telegram he spent 5 years as a customer service representative in domestic sales for Drilco in the Midland area. Craig enjoys working with people and helping them improve their sales through his knowledge and experience in advertising.

Jeanne Osterman
Assistant Supervisor

Jeanne has worked in classified for 4 years and is in charge of system training in addition to her regular accounts. She also assists the supervisor in planning special programs and making the telemarketing department flow smoothly. A native of Wisconsin, her outside interests are music, aerobic dance, fishing and swimming.

Pam Presley
Classified Consultant

Pam is a fulltime consultant and has earned the 'Salesperson of the Month' award twice since she began work in December of 1985. She lists her hobbies as motorcycle riding, reading, and swimming. She takes her job very serious and strives to assist each customer in placing informative ads that sell their items and products.

Chris Williamson
Classified Consultant

Chris has worked as a fulltime consultant for 2 years. She was raised on the eastern shore of Maryland and has lived in Midland for the last 7 years. Chris expedites box replies to customers in addition to handling telephone accounts. Her spare time activities include ceramics and caring for her Golden Retriever and 2 Guinea Pigs.

Kathy Keets
Classified Consultant

Kathy is a native Midlander, has worked in classified for 7 months and has earned the 'Salesperson of the Month' award twice. Prior to her working here she lived in Austin where she spent 2 years as an administrative secretary for the University of Texas. She handles a large account load and is seldom caught without a smile on her face!

Mary Jane Robilliard
Classified Consultant

Mary Jane is our parttime afternoon consultant. In addition to regular telephone sales, she also handles legal notices. She moved to Midland from Rock Springs, Wyoming with her husband and two children in 1985. Mary Jane earned the 'Classified Salesperson of the Month' award only 3 short months after she began work and her sincerity and enthusiasm continue!

Terri Wheeler
Classified Consultant

Terri is our morning parttime consultant and is in charge of legal notices, notarizing affidavits and mailing tearsheets along with telephone sales. She has worked in classified since October of 1985 and enjoys fishing, boating and camping with her husband and son.
