Divers continue search under collapsed bridge

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Rescue workers recovered two more bodies today from a rain-swollen creek where an interstate highway bridge collapsed, plunging at least four vehicles 80 feet into the swirling water and killing at least three people.

Up to 400 feet of the New York State Thruway bridge collapsed Sunday near this town 35 miles west of Albany. At least three cars and a tractor-trailer plummeted into rain-swollen Schoharie Creek.

Rescuers located two vehicles and one body late Sunday, and a third vehicle was spotted this morning with the bodies of two men inside.

That vehicle, a blue car with its roof crushed, was pulled out of the water about three-quarters of a mile downstream from the collapsed span, said Montgomery County Sheriff Ronald Emery. Two bodies were removed from the front seat after firemen cut through the roof, Emery said.

Early today, the creek had begun to recede and a white Cadillac could be seen above the water line about a quarter-mile downstream from the bridge. The first body, that of a man, was found inside the car, state police spokesman Robert Armet said.

However, the water near the collapsed span was still too rough to send in divers because of the threat of moving debris, said Armet. He would not estimate when it would be safe enough to use divers.

When the water calmed, divers using cables and hoist would attempt to lift the trailer of a tractor-trailer also located about a quarter-mile downstream from the bridge, said Technical Sgt. Larry Moyer. The back end of the trailer was sticking up out of the water with branches snagged on the tires. The cab could not be seen. Sunday night, two smokestacks believed to be part of the cab were above the water, but they were not visible today.

"This is something totally beyond the scope of what you think of," said Armet. "You can't believe this would happen." Armet said there were no signs of survivors and the possibility of finding any "would seem very remote."

The victims' identities were withheld pending notification of relatives, said Montgomery County Sheriff's Deputy Fred Overrocker.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who went to the scene Sunday afternoon, said there was no evidence of any defect in the 31-year-old, concrete and steel girder bridge, a part of Interstate 90.

"We don't know precisely what caused the collapse of the span, and that's disconcerting," he said.

Officials said the span went through extensive rehabilitation about two years ago and was deemed in good condition in its last inspection, in April 1986.

The collapse, which forced the closing of about 25 miles of the Thruway, is expected to have a major impact on the area's trucking industry. Drivers will have to take detours of up to 20 miles on secondary roads through rolling countryside.

Investigators trying to get access to Reagan's diaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials are trying to establish ground rules by which investigators of the Iran-Contra affair could look at President Reagan's personal diaries, a presidential spokesman says.

"We're working on developing a process" for making the material available to independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh and to the House and Senate select committees investigating the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and possible diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Sunday.

However, he said it was too early to say exactly what material would be made available and what the guidelines would be on the use of the notes or typewritten transcripts of them.

The Washington Post reported in Sunday's editions that Walsh and the congressional committees were weighing a White House offer to give them joint access to the notes pertaining to the secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran.

Fitzwater said the White House is working "with two staffs" — those of the independent counsel and the joint House-Senate committees — but said no arrangements have been ironed out.

The spokesman added that the White House has said all along the presidential notes or transcripts of them would be made available to the bodies investigating the Iran-Contra affair, as they were given to the Tower commission, the presidentially appointed panel that probed the affair.

The coordination of the White House dealings with the investigations still under way is being headed by Arthur V. Culvahouse, a law partner of Howard H. Baker Jr. After Baker took over as White House chief of staff last month, Culvahouse was brought in to succeed Peter J. Wallison in the chief counsel's job.

Retired NATO Ambassador David M. Abshire, who had been serving as Reagan's point man in dealings with the Tower probe and the other investigations, has left the White House. Abshire had said upon his appointment in early December that he would remain only through the end of March.

The Post cited unidentified sources as saying that giving joint access to Walsh and to the congressional committees would provide a "verifiable arrangement" that would improve on the kind of access given to the board headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

The Tower commission was not given access to the notes themselves, but to "relevant excerpts" of Reagan's personal notes, and that investigative board was not allowed to keep the material. Instead, its lawyers were permitted only to review typewritten transcripts of the notes.

Reagan has acknowledged he cannot remember when he authorized the Israelis to sell U.S. weapons stocks to Iran, but never has disputed that he approved of the deal.

Hahn reports second sexual encounter

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Hahn says she was forced into sex with the Rev. Jim Bakker and then "with another evangelist, and that Bakker 'couldn't get enough,'" Newsweek magazine reports.

The session with Bakker, 47, in a Florida hotel seven years ago lasted for "what seemed like an hour and a half," the 27-year-old former church secretary said in a transcript quoted in the magazine's April 13 issue.

Newsweek said the transcript was from a statement taped two months after the encounter.

On the tape, the second evangelist, who was not identified by the magazine, is quoted by Miss Hahn as saying: "You're not just going to give it to me, you're going to give it to me, too."

Miss Hahn, according to the transcript, said Bakker forced her to engage in oral sex and intercourse while she was woozy from a glass of wine. "I tried to get him off me," Miss Hahn said. "He couldn't get enough. He had to find new things to do."

Miss Hahn said that after she told Bakker she was a virgin and worried about becoming pregnant, he said, "I've had an operation. Don't worry about it, you'll appreciate it later."

Newsweek said Miss Hahn said she then was forced into sexual activity for another hour with an evangelist working with Bakker.

Lawmakers set to resume budget-writing task

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Coming off a one-week recess, House and Senate budget writers today resume the task of trying to write a 1988-1989 state spending plan.

Early last week, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones and House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd called their meetings to a halt to give panel members time to think about where to cut.

Rudd still hopes his committee can construct a budget that will fit within Gov. Bill Clements' $25.7 billion bottom line. He stopped hearings last week when it became obvious the panel was headed to a final figure well above what the governor said he'll allow.

"If it's possible to write it in this committee, we'll do that," Rudd said, confident he can twist enough arms to cut specific programs but unsure if a majority of the committee will approve the final product.

"We're responsible over here, and I think we'll continue to be responsible, regardless of the political fallout," said House Speaker Gib Lewis.

The Senate Finance Committee completed its deliberations last week, having drafted a $28.9 billion budget. On orders from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Jones directed the committee to reduce that by $1 billion to $15 billion before sending it on for Senate floor debate.

"We have gotten significantly more into the budget than there is any prospect of being funded by any conceivable tax bill," Jones said.

The budget writers on both sides face a host of conflicting pressures, including:

— Clements' staunch determination to veto any tax increase that brings in more than $2.9 billion over the two-year budget period;

— The growing demands on state dollars caused by increasing public school enrollment and human services caseloads;

— The need to eliminate a $1 billion fiscal 1987 deficit, which Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday need not be paid off by the Aug. 31 end of the fiscal year;

Ruling overturned excusing Texaco from posting bond

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that a federal judge mistakenly excused Texaco Inc. from posting a potentially ruinous $12 billion bond in its court battle with Pennzoil Co.

By a 9-0 vote, the justices overturned a federal court ruling that Texaco need only put $1 billion in security while the case is pending.

But today's ruling left open the possibility that Texaco could avoid posting the $12 billion bond through a successful appeal in Texas state courts.

U.S. District Judge Charles Brient in White Plains, N.Y., "should have abstained" rather than reduced Texaco's bond, said Justice Lewis F. Powell for the court.

Powell said the constitutionality of the $12 billion bond, which Texaco said could drive it out of business, is best left to the Texas courts for now.

"We cannot say that those courts, when this suit was filed, would have been any less inclined than a federal court to address and decide the federal constitutional claims," Powell said.

A state court jury found in 1985 that Texaco improperly interfered with Pennzoil's planned acquisition of an interest in Getty Oil Co. The jury awarded Pennzoil $11.1 billion against Texaco.

Texas, like most states, requires the losing side in such cases to post bond to protect the winning side.

Midland fisherman wins $10,000

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — Midland's John L. Swinney has a $10,000 fish story to tell after winning this weekend's Silver Bullet Bass Classic.

Swinney was awarded the fishing tournament's first place prize of $10,000 here Sunday for catching four fish. That was the limit allowed for this tournament, but the important fact was that his catch weighed a total of 13.61 pounds, 1.08 pounds more than second place J.L. Stracener of Abilene could muster.

Swinney, who has fished in the U.S. Bass tournament for years, made a professional gamble by turning in his four fish on Saturday, the first day of the two-day tournament.

The move paid off.

"My tournament experience told me that if you catch good fish the first day, the odds are with you if you weigh them all in," said Swinney. "I sweated it out Sunday when everyone was bringing in their fish."

Five West Texas lakes were used for the tournament, and Swinney caught all four of his bass at Lake Spence from a boat in high winds that reached 50 mph gusts, using a Smithwick Rogue and a four-inch air bubble lizard.

Stracener, who fished Lake Nasworthy, made his catch from a tube. Stracener received $5,000 for second place.

Midland's Lewis Conn placed 23rd with 5.41 pounds, winning $200.

Odessa woman killed in accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A two vehicle accident early Sunday night claimed the life of a 37-year-old woman and seriously injured the drivers of both cars.

Killed was Wanda Coggins Edney, 4100 Tanglewood Dr., Apt. 127.

Harold L. Sigmon, 34, 128 Vista Plaza, remained in critical condition with head injuries in the intensive care unit at Medical Center Hospital late this morning. Ms. Edney was a passenger in the Sigmon car.

In stable condition in the Medical Center Hospital intensive care unit late this morning was Frank E. Frawley Jr., 4342 Springdale.

According to police reports, the victim and both drivers were wearing seat belts when the two vehicles collided in the 4000-block of East University Blvd.

Accident investigators said the Sigmon vehicle apparently was backing out of a private driveway, preparing to move west on University and failed to yield the right-of-way. Frawley's vehicle, headed east, hit the Sigmon car almost broadside, according to police spokesman Cpl. John McMahon.

As of mid-morning, no charges had been filed in connection with the accident.

Jack Kemp enters race for 1988 GOP nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jack Kemp, declaring "there are no limits to our future," today entered the race for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination by pledging to enforce two tenets of the Reagan administration: no tax increases and an early deployment of the Star Wars missile defense.

Opening his campaign, the 51-year-old former professional football quarterback told a morning audience, "The central dilemma of our day is that we lie defenseless against Soviet missiles."

He said laser technology "that can today eliminate a cancer cell could tomorrow neutralize a Soviet ballistic missile in space."

Kemp criticized both the Democrats and the Reagan administration State Department for wanting to use the president's plan for a space-based defense system as an arms control bargaining chip.

"The State Department and the Democratic Party would rather use SDI (the Strategic Defense Initiative) as a bargaining chip and would rather blind this country to a treaty the Soviets have violated since day one than give America and our allies the defenses we need."

Kemp, at a later news conference, called on President Reagan to move ahead with deployment of a Star Wars system, telling reporters, "I would hope the president would announce a schedule of deployment for strategic defense."

In his speech, Kemp also called for support of anti-communist guerrilla movements throughout the world.

Asked if he would rule out the use of American troops, Kemp said, "I don't think it's going to require American blood. I think it's going to require American support."

Pressed on the issue, the congressman said, "I am talking about now. That's the only thing I can talk about."

Kemp joined former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware and former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in the Republican race.

Also expected to enter the contest are Vice President George Bush, Senate GOP leader Bob Dole of Kansas, former Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, and the Rev. Pat Robertson.

Kemp's wife and children were at his side when he declared his candidacy in the House Judiciary Committee hearing room before a crowd that spilled out into the hallway.

Kemp said he would "continue to oppose any plan, from any quarter, to raise taxes on the American people."

An advocate of a return to the gold standard, Kemp said, "We must guarantee the purchasing power of the dollar, make the dollar once again an honest dollar, a dollar as good as gold."

He also called on Congress to pass legislation that would nullify the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

Kemp said he would "take this campaign to company halls and to union halls; to young people and to senior citizens; to entrepreneurs and, yes, to inner city families so that we, the party of Lincoln, can once again hold up the dream of liberty and justice for all."

He said the nation should have a vision for the future that includes victory — "a victory for the idea that there is nothing wrong with America that cannot be fixed; and that there are no limits to our future if we don't put limits on our people."

Kemp, interviewed before today's announcement, conceded, "I don't have the resume the other people have."

But he insisted he is the candidate with the ideas and vision to carry forward President Reagan's policies.

"I'll be the only one in the race who was one of the key architects of the Republican platform upon which Reagan and Bush ran in 1984," he said.

Elected to the House from the Buffalo area in 1970, Kemp quickly established himself as a leading advocate of supply side economics, the theory that lowering tax rates would increase productivity and investment and lead to higher government revenues.

Kemp's view was adopted by Reagan in his 1980 presidential campaign and became the basis for the tax cut enacted during his first term.

Often criticized for his tendency to deliver overly long speeches on arcane economic topics such as monetary reform and the need for a return to the gold standard, Kemp promised that would change when he became a candidate.

"Up until now, I have been less a candidate than a teacher," he said. "I have been trying to change my party and I have gone against the orthodoxy in many instances."

"I do not represent the Old Guard of the Republican Party. I represent a progressive conservatism."

Kemp said he believes he has had an impact in changing the Republican Party.

"You can't look at the new tax code without at least giving some credit to Jack Kemp," he said.

Kemp drew both applause and criticism recently when he appeared before a conservative conference and called on Secretary of State George P. Shultz to resign. The conservatives gave him a standing ovation, but some of Kemp's rivals characterized his speech as grandstanding.

A tireless traveler on behalf of Republican causes and candidates, Kemp has visited about 20 cities a month since October and aides say he delivered 500 speeches in 1985-1986.

Despite all his speech making, the New York congressman has remained mired at about 7 percent in most national polls asking Republicans for their presidential preference. Bush consistently leads such surveys, with Dole running second.

Before winning his congressional seat, Kemp was quarterback for the Buffalo Bills and was the American Football League's Most Valuable Player in 1965. He led the Bills to four division and two league championships in seven years.

Kemp and his wife, Joanne, have four children, Jeff, Jennifer, Judith and Jimmy. Jeff Kemp is backup quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers in the National Football League.

Miss Hahn's account, which was followed by the settlement, quotes evangelist John Wesley Fletcher, who brought her to Bakker, as saying Bakker "has no sexual life with his wife," Newsweek said.

Without confirming the contents of the transcript, Miss Hahn told The Associated Press on Saturday that "however it was obtained it was immorally done and with the obvious intent to further damage and embarrass me."

She said that such a story would make "the victim twice the victim."

Elders of the Assemblies of God, to which Bakker has submitted his resignation, are investigating various charges in the matter, including Miss Hahn's charge that two PTL officials — the Rev. Richard Dortch, now president of the organization, and former board member Rev. Alme Garcia Cortese of New York — learned about the hotel incident three years ago.

In her statement Miss Hahn said she felt pressured by them to sign a three-page disclaimer that the incident had taken place. She said Cortese warned her on Nov. 1, 1984, "Sign the papers or you will never have any peace."

None of those named by Miss Hahn responded to requests for comment from Newsweek, the magazine said.

Bakker has said that Miss Hahn seduced him and appeared to know "all the tricks of the trade."

Steer This Way

By Jim Morris

Driving in the rain requires extra care. Reduce your speed and increase the distance between you and the car ahead.

Every car should carry booster cables; and every driver should know how to use them. Basic rule: positive to positive, negative to the engine block of the dead car. Make sure the cars aren't touching.

If your brakes feel spongy or soft, that's a signal to have them checked promptly.

Clean windows and lights before you drive in bad weather. A little effort pays off in better visibility.

It's a good idea to flush your radiator every year or two and start anew with fresh antifreeze. Even if old coolant still protects against freezing, it's certain to have picked up a lot of contaminants.

Roberts: 'I felt devil trying to destroy my life'

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) — During his 10 days of prayer in a controversial fund-raising campaign, evangelist Oral Roberts says he was caught in a spiritual tempest that brought him near death but left him strengthened.

"When I was like a howling hurricane was sweeping in from a spiritual standpoint, and my body was being buffeted," Roberts said Sunday in his first sermon since ending the vigil Tuesday at the Oral Roberts University prayer tower in Tulsa, Okla.

In January, the 69-year-old evangelist told a national television audience that God had told him he would die if he didn't raise $8 million for the medical missionary scholarship fund by Tuesday, March 31.

He said he decided to come down from the tower Tuesday night after hearing a voice say, "It is done. The medical missionary program has been birthed by the Lord."

On Wednesday, Roberts said he had received about $8.7 million in donations, an amount he said must be matched each year to fund the medical missionaries who study at his Tulsa medical school.

He said God told him to undertake the 10-day ordeal from which he said he emerged with enhanced healing powers.

"When I came down from that prayer tower, my hand was on fire," Roberts said. "It's on fire this morning."

At one point during the vigil, he and associates ceremoniously anointed the tower with oil, he said. He said he also sensed his strength fading more than once.

"Two or three times, I felt death on me. I felt the devil was trying to destroy my life," Roberts told a capacity crowd at a service dedicating the new 5,001-seat Church on the Rock that cost $15 million to build.

Officials estimate that one of every four residents is a member of the church in this city of 10,800 about 30 miles east of Dallas.

Roberts defended the prosperity he enjoys from his ministry, and said God returns wealth to those who give out of expectation.

"I live in one of the finest houses you've ever seen in your life," he told the congregation. "I have one of the finest, safest cars."

Apparently referring to some television stations that pulled his program after he announced the life-or-death ultimatum from God, he said, "Just don't censor us when we worship our God."

Larry Lea, pastor of the 7,000-member church and a rising star among charismatic evangelists, said of critics who say Roberts put God in the role of an extortionist, "I think it's ludicrous to say God would blackmail someone. He said he saw no opposition to Roberts' fundraising methods among the Rockwall congregation."

Since meeting Roberts last year in Tulsa, Lea has become dean of spiritual affairs for the seminary at Oral Roberts University. Lea, 36, said Roberts is comparable to prophets in the Bible, who are said to be inspired by God.

Church on the Rock member Cindy Morhac, 25, reflecting the views of many of the congregation, said Roberts' revelations are similar to those given to Moses in the Old Testament.

"This is really nothing new," she said of the recent life-threatening ultimatum.

Roberts, in an Easter 1986 sermon in Dallas, also told an audience that God had revealed that he needed to raise the money by the end of 1986 to escape death, but did not reach the goal.

A spokeswoman for Roberts in February said he apparently had confused dates in the heat of his 1986 sermon.

On Friday, two New Orleans men filed a lawsuit against Roberts, claiming that he made other Christians look bad by making God appear as a blackmail. Among other demands, the suit calls on Roberts to provide contributors a chance to get their money back.

Reagan says difficulties block acid rain treaty

OTTAWA (AP) — President Reagan said today that acid rain is hurting the environment in both the United States and Canada, but told reporters he believes there are "great difficulties" in the way of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's proposal for a treaty to reduce the emissions.

Reagan was questioned by reporters first as he began a meeting with John Turner, the leader of Canada's opposition Liberal Party, on the second day of Reagan's visit to the Canadian capital.

Asked whether he opposed Mulroney's proposal to reduce U.S. acid rain emissions by 50 percent, Reagan said, "I am not against it. I would like a total reduction of it. It's quite a technical problem and a very major problem to achieve."

Questioned about Mulroney's proposal for a treaty between the two nations to set a schedule for reductions, Reagan said, "I think there are great difficulties, but one thing I am sure of is that both sides want to get a handle on acid rain."

Reagan declined to predict whether any agreements would be reached during the summit meeting with Mulroney, but added, "I think we have all come together on both sides with the hope of reaching a number of agreements."

Reagan was later asked why the United States would not agree to a treaty, in view of charges that acid rain is hurting Canada's environment.

"Well, we're not helping ours, either," he replied.

For his part, Mulroney, asked if he and Reagan were making progress on the acid rain issue, replied, "We're working hard."

Spokesmen for both sides had said earlier that no substantial agreements were expected.

Asked on Sunday about Mulroney's treaty proposal, Reagan's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said the administration has nothing new to offer on the issue of acid rain, spread by prevailing winds from U.S. plants across much of Canada.

After seeing Turner, Reagan met with Mulroney for their second session of talks. The president then was delivering a speech to Parliament and flying back to Washington late in the afternoon.

The president and the prime minister met for 35 minutes Sunday, longer than had been expected.

On other issues, — Reagan warned that it will take "much hard bargaining" to reach a free trade agreement between the two countries, and that "setting the goals is...easier than achieving them."

Reagan told a state dinner Sunday that the free trade talks initiated by Mulroney have "opened a historic prospect. Setting the goals is, however, easier than achieving them."

Mulroney said Canada will stand by its insistence on sovereignty over the Northwest Passage, declaring, "We own it, lock, stock and icebergs."

Canada is building the world's largest icebreaker to patrol the passage, which the United States contends is an international waterway. The United States also seeks the right of transit for its warships.

Mulroney said last week that Canada is "ready to negotiate an arrangement that respects our sovereignty in the Arctic, and within which appropriate accommodations can be made for our friends and allies."

On one issue, however, the two leaders agreed.

"They agreed to joint work in the fight against AIDS, which would be worked out jointly by the secretary of health and human services in the United States and the minister of national health and welfare here in Canada," Fitzwater said.

BRIDGE

Thruway spokesman Raymond Makay said replacement of a bridge usually takes two years but that authorities would try to speed up work on a new span.

About 25,000 vehicles cross the bridge in a typical 24-hour period of heavy traffic, a thruway official said. The thruway runs from the New York City area north to Albany, then west to the Buffalo area.

Overnight, about two dozen rescuers stood by with flood lights overnight as the creek receded.

"We can't do a thing," said volunteer firefighter Dennis Jablonsky. "There are trees coming down the creek 2 feet wide and 30 to 40 feet long, some longer. Refrigerators, a picnic table, benches, all kinds of debris."

The collapse prompted an immediate inspection of the 819 bridges on or over the 550-mile Thruway, said Thruway Authority deputy executive director James A. Martin. By nightfall, more than 100 bridges had been inspected with no major problems detected.

Cuomo said it was virtually certain other bridges would need to be closed.

Witnesses said three to five cars and the tractor-trailer fell into the creek when the concrete and steel girder bridge collapsed.

"I heard this noise, I looked up and the whole bridge was falling. There was a tractor trailer on it and a few other cars," said firefighter William Weller, who was on a nearby bridge.

Sid Brown, a Schenectady Gazette photographer watching firefighters check water levels from a bridge a mile downstream, said he heard a rumbling noise as a tractor-trailer plunged with the bridge. He said he watched a white car drive off the edge seconds later.

State police Maj. Edward Vanderwall said the westbound span of the four-lane bridge collapsed at 10:48 a.m. and the two-lane eastbound section immediately began to sag and went down about 15 minutes later.

Another 15 minutes later, more of the bridge collapsed.

State police said 350 to 400 feet of the road deck — most of the 525-foot bridge — ended up in the water.

Only two of four sets of supporting concrete piers remained intact.

Vanderwall said that shortly before the collapse, workers checked the bridge because of the swirling waters and found it safe. However, Arthur D'Isabel, a Thruway spokesman, said no Thruway worker conducted such an inspection.

Alexander Levine, the Thruway authority's executive director, said the extensive rehabilitation about two years ago included installation of a new deck and several supporting steel cross members.

The bridge was last inspected in April 1986 and deemed in good condition, said Martin.

Other area bridges had been closed Sunday because of flooding on the creek since Friday, officials said.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., a member of the Senate's Environmental and Public Works panel, said he wants to open hearings on the bridge collapse within a week.

Similar hearings will be held in Albany, said state Assemblyman Vincent J. Graber Sr.

Sunday's was the second fatal collapse of an interstate highway bridge in the Northeast in recent years.

A 100-foot section of an Interstate 95 bridge over the Mianus River in Connecticut collapsed in 1983, sending vehicles plunging 70 feet into a river. Three people were killed and three were seriously injured.

Federal authorities determined that a pin in an assembly supporting the bridge had slipped out of position.

On Saturday, the State Department denied reports that U.S. weapons still were being sold to Iran.

"We categorically deny that the United States is selling and/or sending any weapons to Iran," spokeswoman Sandra McCarty said in response to an NBC report Friday night.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Feb. 27, "There will be no more transfers of U.S.-origin military equipment, either directly or through any third party."

McCarty said Shultz's statement "stands as U.S. policy."

The president, however, has denied adamantly that he had any knowledge of a program of diverting arms sales profits or payments to benefit the Contra rebels fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Rudd said it'll take another two or three weeks before his committee finishes its work. An aide to Jones said the Senate could vote on an appropriations bill as soon as next week.

Early last month, the House passed and sent to the Senate two tax bills raising $2.9 billion by making permanent last summer's "temporary" sales and gasoline tax increases. Senate leaders say they'll take no action on those bills until both sides have completed work on the spending plan.

While Speaker Lewis remains reluctant about challenging Clements' pledge to veto any larger tax hike, Lt. Gov. Hobby flatly predicts lawmakers will approve more taxes — with or without Clements' approval.

Gorbachev postpones Czechoslovakia trip

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A top official said a slight cold forced Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to postpone today's planned visit to Czechoslovakia, where the conservative Communist leadership has resisted his style of reforms.

But a West German newspaper claimed Gorbachev had a case of the "political flu" because he angered the Prague government by planning to visit Alexander Dubcek, who led reforms in Czechoslovakia until Soviet tanks crushed liberalization in 1968.

Gorbachev, 55, appeared in good health last week during meetings with visiting British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Foreign Minister Roman Narozny announced the postponement Sunday and rejected a suggestion from a Western reporter that disagreements between the government and Gorbachev were the real reason for the delay.

He said the trip would take place later this week, but did not give a date. Reporters were advised to attend a news conference Wednesday for more details.

Official Radio Moscow said today the visit would take place "in the second half of this week."

The official Soviet news agency Tass, in distributing Narozny's announcement in Moscow, originally kept the reference to a cold but later dropped it.

Polish President and Communist Party leader Gustav Husak, 74, has given verbal support to Gorbachev's economic and political reforms in the Soviet Union, which include efforts to increase productivity and slightly increase competition for party office.

Husak and other Prague leaders have outlined plans for economic change in Czechoslovakia but say they will not rush to adopt all the Kremlin's reforms.

As Communist Party leader during the "Prague Spring" of 1968, Dubcek advocated some of the reforms Gorbachev is now pushing, including secret ballots in party elections.

That freedom of cultural and political speech came to an end in August 1968, when the Soviet Union led a Warsaw Pact invasion. Husak replaced Dubcek as party leader eight months later.

In Hamburg, West Germany, the newspaper Bild quoted "reliable sources in Moscow" as saying Gorbachev had planned to meet Dubcek, who was relegated to a menial job near his native Bratislava after falling from power.

Bild said conservative Czechoslovak leaders as well as some senior Soviet officials were enraged.

"Gorbachev was unable to overcome this opposition for now, so he chose to declare that he had the 'political flu,'" said Bild. In the past, the mass-circulation daily has received inside information leaked from the Kremlin to promote or discredit Soviet officials.

Bild said Gorbachev wanted to demonstrate his policy of openness, or "glasnost," by meeting Dubcek.

The newspaper said Gorbachev did not seek to rehabilitate Dubcek but rather to push the Czechoslovak government onto a more moderate course in economic policy and treatment of dissidents.

The Prague authorities have moved swiftly to repress dissent since 1968, harassing and jailing religious activists and human rights advocates such as the signatories of Charter 77.

Narozny refused to say whether Gorbachev's itinerary was being adjusted. Although he would not confirm Gorbachev's original schedule, the Kremlin leader was expected to spend two days in Prague and one in Bratislava, the capital of the republic of Slovakia in the southeast.

Pope visits Chilean political prisoners

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile (AP) — On the last stop of a pilgrimage marked by bloody clashes between police and government opponents, Pope John Paul II today told hundreds of prisoners he hoped they would soon be free.

In turn, the prisoners at the century-old jail in this northern desert town sang a Spanish song called "Messenger of Life" for the pontiff.

The white-robed pope stood on a platform with local bishops and told the inmates, "Christ was a prisoner too." He called for improved prison conditions everywhere, "to give more dignity to inmates, as persons, as children of God."

John Paul expressed his hope for "a quick return to your homes" for all prisoners.

He spoke to about 300 inmates, men and women, assembled in a roped-off patio in Antofagasta's main prison. Among the inmates were thought to be 14 political prisoners arrested for opposing President Augusto Pinochet's rightist military regime.

Some prisoners in Antofagasta have fasted to protest Pinochet's rule and demand better prison conditions. It was not known how many imprisoned government opponents heard the pope, as relatives of some inmates said some political prisoners were moved out of the jail just before John Paul arrived.

The prisoners wore sweaters and jackets rather than prison uniforms for the pope's visit. A line of green-uniformed national police troopers stood behind the inmates as the pope spoke.

On Friday, about 400 political prisoners throughout Chile announced they were ending a hunger strike in response to a plea from Roman Catholic Church officials. Some fasted as long as 38 days to protest jail conditions and seek to have their cases switched from military to civilian courts.

After the visit to the jail, the pope headed for an outdoor religious ceremony. Later today, he ends his six-day visit to Chile and flies to Argentina.

The government announced that Pinochet, who greeted John Paul upon his arrival Wednesday and met with him on Thursday, would be at the airport to say goodbye to the pope.

The weekend saw a respite from the violence that accompanied the pope's stay in Santiago, the capital, including a clash Friday between demonstrators and police in which at least 261 people were injured.

John Paul traveled the length of Chile from Punta Arenas near the country's southern tip, through Pacific coast towns with their backs to the snow-tipped Andes, to Antofagasta at the edge of the Atacama Desert, the world's driest.

Crowds at the weekend appearances were peaceful in contrast to those in Santiago, where demonstrators boldly hoisted signs urging: "Excommunicate the assassin," meaning Pinochet.

In Temuco, nearly 400 miles south of Santiago, the pope told farmworkers, "Your problems of land ownership are not hidden from me."

The crowd gave whoops of approval. He told the farmworkers and native Mapuche Indians, who comprise about 600,000 of Chile's 12 million people, that he recognized they "have been the object of injustice."

However, he urged, "Don't abandon farm life without justification... only to find, often, an even more difficult and precarious life in the city."

Archbishop Jose Manuel Santos of Concepcion, an industrial city about 275 miles south of Santiago, told John Paul of Chile's "anxiety over terrorism from the opposition and terrorism by the government" and "horrendous crimes whose authors go unpunished."

Human rights organizations have charged Pinochet's government with widespread human rights abuses, including the use of torture during interrogation of detainees. Pinochet took power in a bloody 1973 coup that overthrew elected Marxist President Salvador Allende.

Blockade of refugee camps ends with truce

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Guns fell silent today around Beirut's Palestinian refugee camps as a cease-fire took hold in an effort to end a 23-month battle between Palestinians and Shiite Moslems for control of the shantytowns, police said.

Spokesmen for both sides said their fighters strictly observed the Syrian-sponsored truce that began at 8 a.m. at the Bourj el-Barajneh and Chatilla camps.

Justice Minister Nabih Berri's mainstream Shiite Amal militia said it was lifting a 5-month-old blockade of the two camps at 10 a.m.

An Amal statement said it would allow convoys of food and medical supplies into both camps after the cease-fire started to ease starvation among the 30,000 residents.

The cease-fire agreement was reached Sunday night after a meeting in west Beirut of Amal leaders and officials of the Palestine National Salvation Front, an alliance of six pro-Syrian guerrilla factions.

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat and his Fatah guerrilla group were not represented at the meeting, called by Syrian President Hafez Assad.

But Palestine National Salvation Front spokesmen said they had assurances that Arafat's loyalists, who make up the majority of the fighters in the camps in Beirut and south Lebanon, would go along with the accord.

Earlier Sunday, Amal allowed one six-truck convoy of food and medicine into the Bourj el-Barajneh camp in west Beirut in the first shipment in six weeks.

Previous attempts to get food convoys through to the two camps have been frustrated by gunfire from Amal militiamen.

The new accord calls for a withdrawal of Palestinian guerrillas from highlands they captured from Amal east of Lebanon's southern port city of Sidon last Nov. 24. That PLO thrust ignited the latest round of camps fighting.

There was no word from Sidon today on whether the withdrawal from the highlands was complete.

Police say intermittent Palestinian-Amal fighting around the camps beginning in May 1985 has killed more than 1,600 people and wounded 3,800.

Unmanned module link-up with space lab fails, Tass says

MOSCOW (AP) — An unmanned, 11-ton space research module failed to link up with the orbiting Mir laboratory on Sunday, Tass announced in what appears to be a setback in the Soviet Union's development of a permanently manned orbital complex.

Tass said the module, called Kvant, approached to within 200 yards of the Mir but docking had to be aborted "owing to an irregular functioning of the control system."

It gave no details, but said telemetric data would be analyzed before a decision is made on "further work with the module."

The Mir, now occupied by two cosmonauts, was launched Feb. 20, 1986. The Soviet Union said it was the forerunner in a program for permanently staffed orbital stations. It has ports capable of taking up to six spacecraft at a time.

As described by Soviet space officials, the Mir would serve as base for the other craft, which would orbit separately so long-term scientific experiments could be conducted without electronic and other interference from main power plants and life-support systems. The craft would periodically dock with the Mir for maintenance, replenishment of supplies and rest and check-ups for any crew aboard.

The Kvant was launched Tuesday in what a Soviet official called "a new chapter in the history of manned space flight."

It contained a laboratory bay equipped with life-support systems. The cargo included a ton of scientific instruments and more than two tons of equipment that was to be transferred to the Mir.

Yuri Romanenko and Alexander Laveikin, now aboard the Mir, were to use the Kvant's equipment for "astrophysical observations and other studies," according to Tass.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Carter persuades Syrian president to release five imprisoned Jews

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter persuaded Syrian President Hafez Assad to release five imprisoned Jews, an American Jewish official said Sunday.

Abe Foxman, associate national director of the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League, told The Associated Press he asked Carter to raise the issue with Assad. Carter met the Syrian president during a Middle East tour last month.

The five Jews, three from Aleppo and two from Damascus, were imprisoned in November and December. The Israeli daily Maariv newspaper reported they were charged with helping Jews leave Syria illegally.

Foxman, speaking in a telephone interview during a visit to Israel, identified three of the released Jews as Toufik Hafif, 55, his son Dibo Hafif, 19, and Leon Guindi, 35. He said the other two were a father and son named Lalo, but could not identify them further.

Foxman said he doubts the gesture reflects any dramatic change in attitude toward Israel. Syria and Israel are bitter enemies and technically at war.

Maariv quoted unidentified Israeli sources as saying Assad's move was intended to improve his ties with Washington.

The former president told Israeli leaders he had noted a significant change in Assad's attitude toward Israel. He said Assad was now ready to recognize the Jewish state as a permanent entity in the region and to take part in an international Middle East peace conference.

Bombs explode at race track

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Fifteen bombs exploded almost simultaneously at a race track stable during a horse race Sunday, injuring five horses. Police blamed leftist guerrillas.

One of the horses, 2-year-old Valdez Pena, lost a leg and had to be shot. The condition of the other four horses was not known.

The bombs exploded at 4:25 p.m. at the Monterrico Hippodrome race track about 5 miles from downtown Lima, police said. The explosions ripped through a stable about 1.5 miles from the track.

The blasts occurred as the feature race was to begin and could be heard by the people at the track, but racing was not canceled.

Police linked the attack to the Shining Path, a Maoist-inspired guerrilla group that has been fighting for nearly seven years to topple Peru's elected government.

The guerrillas have been active in the capital for the last three years. Reporters at the track said it was the first time guerrillas targeted a race track, a popular destination for Sunday outings.

Marchers protest new press law

HONG KONG (AP) — More than 600 students and union members marched to the Hong Kong governor's residence to protest a new law making it a crime to publish "false news" that is likely to cause public alarm.

The protesters Sunday were headed by the Joint Committee for the Promotion of Freedom of Press and Expression and also included some members of the Legislative Council, the colony's lawmaking body.

They ended their march outside the council's headquarters, where they submitted a petition to amend the press law.

Violation of the law, approved last month, is punishable by a maximum $12,800 fine and two-year prison sentence.

The media and academic groups say the law could curb press freedom in this British colony of 5.5 million people, due to revert to Chinese rule in 1997.

Passersby find counterfeit bills

TOKYO (AP) — Passersby have discovered about $2.7 million in counterfeit yen bills discarded in garbage dumps and other locations around Tokyo in recent days, the Kyodo News Service reported today.

It said pedestrians found a total of about 40,000 forged 10,000-yen bills stuffed in plastic bags from Thursday through Sunday, and brought them to local police stations. Ten thousand yen is worth about $66.

Police could not immediately be reached for comment.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠93 ♥7 ♦KJ973 ♣AJ965
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Dbl ?

What do you bid now?
A. - One thing is sure the opponents have a good majorsuit fit somewhere. We would opt for five diamonds as a two-way action. There is a chance that partner might make it; but if he doesn't, it will surely be a cheap sacrifice against a probable enemy game.

Q.2 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠83 ♥AJ762 ♦8643 ♣J2
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ 2 ♣ Pass Pass
Dbl Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A. - The answer depends on your methods. If you are using negative doubles, two hearts is sufficient because partner might have a minimum opening bid and is simply protecting your possible penalty double. If you are not, partner must have a good hand, so you should show that you have reasonable values by jumping to three hearts.

Q.3 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠J76 ♥9 ♦AKJ72 ♣AKJ10
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 1 ♣ ?

What do you bid now?
A. - Slam depends almost entirely on what partner holds in spades. Since you know where you are going to play the hand, you can now afford to jump shift to three clubs now. Assuming partner doesn't cue-bid spades at his next turn, you should then jump to five diamonds. Your failure to cuebid spades indicates that you have no control in the suit, so partner can't push on to slam unless he has first or second-round control.

Q.4 - East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K98 ♥7 ♦J107632 ♣632
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
3 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A. - Matters are serious. The opponents can make a lot of tricks at a heart contract. To make it more difficult for them to get into the auction we suggest you make an advance sacrifice of four spades. A raise to five spades might prove more effective, but could propel the opposition into a makable slam they might not normally bid.

Q.5 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠7 ♥854 ♦AKQ1093 ♣AQJ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A. - You have to decide between re-bidding those magnificent diamonds or showing your excellent support for partner's suit. We think you should jump to three diamonds. Since partner has made a two-over-one response, this creates a game-force, giving you the opportunity to show your club support at your next turn.

Q.6 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠83 ♥AJ72 ♦Q83 ♣A762
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A. - If you are playing limit raises, this hand qualifies as maximum for that action. If you are playing forcing jump raises, we think you are a whisker light for that, so we recommend a temporizing bid of two clubs, to be followed by a heart raise at your next turn.

Mourners remember Buddy Rich

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Buddy Rich was a rough and tough but vulnerable jazzman who did not fear death, only life without his drums. Johnny Carson told mourners who gathered Sunday to bury Rich. The irascible drummer suffered a fatal seizure Thursday. He was 69.

Carson joined singers Mel Tormé and Frank Sinatra, comedian Jerry Lewis, former band leader Artie Shaw and actor Peter Falk in eulogizing Rich before a group of about 200 at Westwood Memorial Park.

Rich's famous drum set sat idle in front of his casket as a trio of musicians played softly in one corner.

"Buddy was not afraid of dying," said Carson, a longtime friend and amateur drummer. "He was just afraid of living and not being able to play the drums."

"People who knew him through his music missed the best part of the man," said Carson, on whose show Rich often appeared.

The talk-show host then faced the casket and said tearfully: "So dear friend, thanks for the memories and the music and thanks for making our lives more complete by letting us be a part of yours."

The audience was filled with entertainment notables including comedian-producer Mel Brooks, actress Angie Dickinson, Milton Berle, composer Henry Mancini, Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner and comedian Morey Amsterdam.

A child prodigy who never had a music lesson in his life, Rich died at UCLA Medical Center, where he was an outpatient undergoing chemotherapy treatment for a brain tumor. He underwent surgery earlier in the year for the cancer.

Tormé, who met Rich in 1945 at the Hollywood Palladium, read notes from a biography he is writing about Rich.

"He rap-tap-tapped his way into millions of hearts. He was forceful, original, inventive and downright astonishing. It's comforting to know there was a genuine genius among us."

Barbara Corday, president of Columbia Pictures Television and a niece of the late drummer, called Rich irascible and impossible yet with the softest heart. She said it was like having Santa Claus as an uncle.

"I was the only kid in Brooklyn with a grass skirt because he brought it back from Hawaii."

In the late 1930s, he played with a number of Big Bands led by the likes of Joe Marsala, Jimmy Dorsey and Shaw.

Shaw said Sunday that Rich "had an unquenchable, vital spirit that his body couldn't contain. He just outgrew his body."

"If you wanted somebody to drive a bunch of men to where they'd never been before, Buddy was your man. He did it with every ounce of vitality and energy in him," he said.

Rich's career spanned the Big Band era and many years touring on the road. His last performance was with Tormé at the Hollywood Palladium in January.

Dorsey introduced Sinatra to Rich in the 30s. Sinatra summed up the feeling of the gathered crowd: "He was true genius with what he did. No man, woman or child will give us again what this man has given us."

Rich is survived by his wife, Marie, and daughter Cathy.

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — The mother-daughter duo The Judds, and Randy Travis lead the field with four nominations each going into tonight's Academy of Country Music Awards.

George Strait, Reba McEntire and Alabama have three nominations each.

The ceremony, the now-respectable stepchild to Nashville's yearly Grand Ole Opry awards, will be televised on tape delay nationally on NBC from Knott's Berry Farm, which some have dubbed Grand Ole Opry West.

The 22nd annual show comes as country-western with a rock edge is emerging from doldrums thanks to such artists as Travis, Dwight Yoakam and Steve Earle.

"I'm real inspired by what I see coming up the pike right now," Dolly Parton said in a recent interview. "It is going back to what we were trying to do years and years ago when nobody was buying it (country music) and people were ashamed to say they liked it."

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Former major league pitcher Bill Lee, known as the Spaceman for his offbeat antics, says he plans to enter the 1988 presidential race even though he doesn't live in this country.

On the Rhinoceros Party ticket.

"I want to do away with chairs, get a country that can stand up for itself instead of sitting on their rear ends waiting for politicians tell them which way the wind is blowing," Lee said Sunday in a telephone interview from Montreal.

Lee, who retired from baseball in 1982 after 14 years in the majors with the Boston Red Sox and Montreal Expos and now is a baseball instructor at camps and clinics, said his slogan is "No guns. No butter."

"Both can kill you," he said.

The satirical Rhinoceros Party was founded in Quebec in 1982 to make light of government and political parties. The Fly-By-Night Consulting Service in West Chester is managing the campaign for Lee, who lives in Moncton, New Brunswick.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch is being catty about his competition with "Danger Mouse," a cartoon crime-fighter.

Danger Mouse, whom Koch chased from the airwaves, failed to show up for a scheduled appearance on the mayor's Sunday morning TV show, "Koch on Call."

"I guess he's out fighting for justice," said WNYW-TV spokesman Isabel Fernandez. WNYW canceled "Danger Mouse" last month to make room for Koch, although the mouse drew an average of 200,000 viewers to Koch's 40,000.

Koch, in announcing that Danger Mouse was a no-show Sunday, held out the possibility that the rodent, "a member of the Rat Union," might appear on his show next week.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald Lambro, a nationally syndicated columnist, author and radio commentator, today becomes national affairs editor of The Washington Times, the newspaper reported today.

Lambro, 46, succeeds Marc Lerner, who will work on several special projects for the paper.

The newspaper, meanwhile, named as its deputy national affairs editor Patricia Wilson, a Times assistant national editor and former White House correspondent for the Reuters news agency.

Lambro will continue to write his twice-weekly column which has been distributed nationally by United Features Syndicate, the newspaper said.

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — The godfather and namesake of Frank Sinatra, Francis P. Garriek Sr., died Saturday. He was 90.

Garriek was a close friend of Sinatra's parents, Marty and Dolly Sinatra, when Sinatra was born in Hoboken in 1915.

Garriek, who worked as circulation manager for the now-defunct Jersey Observer newspaper for more than 50 years, got Sinatra his first job as copy boy there in the 1930s. Sinatra paid Garriek a visit in November just before Garriek's 90th birthday.

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Fred Tamburro, the leader of the Hoboken Four, the singing group that launched Frank Sinatra's career, died Saturday. He was 74.

Mikhail's pawns

The world waits hopefully for the Soviet Union to make good on its hints that more Jews may be permitted to emigrate. But how much of Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms in the Soviet Union is real and how much is window dressing. Time will tell.

Since 1979, when the number of departing Jews reached a high-water mark of more than 51,000, the rate has dropped to 100 or fewer a month. But during the last month, at least 400 were allowed to leave. Should that be reason for hope?

In recent talks with leaders of the world's Jewish community, Soviet officials promised they will allow most of the 11,000 refuseniks and their families to depart for Israel by way of Romania.

According to Soviet officials, the Soviet state also is preparing to relax restrictions on Jews left behind, thereby making their conditions somewhat less intolerable.

But Soviet actions often fail to match promises. For example, Soviet officials promised Morris B. Abraham, president of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, and Edgar M. Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, that they would allow Jews to open synagogues, but only where there is a demonstrated need.

The Soviet state, of course, will determine where that need exists. It also will determine how many of the 11,000 refuseniks must remain because of one of its favorite excuses, national-security interests.

Meanwhile, the lot of the Soviet Jews is reminiscent of the worst days of Stalin. They are discriminated against in jobs, housing and virtually every aspect of their lives touched by the all-encompassing Soviet state. The campaign to stamp out the Jewish religion is so imposing that even the teaching of Hebrew is prohibited by law and punishable by prison.

When Jews apply to emigrate, their conditions deteriorate even more. Few are allowed to leave, thus becoming refuseniks, which is to say pariahs. They are fired from their jobs and targeted for arrest under a Catch-22 Soviet law that makes unemployment a crime. Their children lose all hope for higher education or they are stripped of civil rights. Moreover, they are more likely to be conscripted into the military. If refuseniks press their cases too publicly, they face possible imprisonment or confinement in mental institutions.

Actually, the 11,000 known refusenik families represent only a tiny fraction of the 3 million Jews living in the Soviet Union. The best estimate of those wishing to leave places the number at about 300,000. In all likelihood it is higher.

It is important to remember that along with Jews, other groups such as Baptists and generic political dissenters are also targeted for special abuse by the Soviet regime. It is impossible to estimate accurately just how many non-Jewish Soviet citizens would emigrate if they could. But the Soviet state, which claims to be the perfect representative of the people's will, operates much like a giant prison camp, with guards manning the towers to make certain that inmate-citizens don't escape.

That the Soviet Union indicates an increase in Jewish emigration suggests it is maneuvering the West for some Russian advantage. Now as in the past, Moscow moves the Jews as pawns on the international chess board.

Night of the 'stars'

The other night was the night the stars came out, some in Hollywood, others in New Orleans' Superdome — perhaps even some in the sky, though no one among the millions glued to their TV screens watching the first two could be sure about the third.

There were winners of all types: sentimental favorites such as Paul Newman and Michael Caine, who finally won the Oscars most people hoped they would; controversial ones like Indiana University's oddball stoic Coach Bobby Knight, whose Hoosiers won another NCAA basketball title; young ones like Keith Smart, who made the closing-second jump shot that ensured Indiana's one-point victory; old ones like Bette Davis, who forgot some of her lines but delivered the rest in her still-crisp, much-imitated voice; and funny ones like Aussie actor Paul ("Crocodile Dundee") Hogan, who impulsively advised the Oscar losers to forgo the usual niceties: "Storming out of the building would be nice."

None, so far as we know, took Hogan's advice.

Beyond the fact that someone had to lose — four of five Oscar nominees and a classy Syracuse team in a game so well-played that no one deserved to lose — there was only one flaw in an otherwise delightful spring evening: For the fourth time in 12 years, basketball and movieland performed their rituals on the same night.

Anyone without a VCR who likes both spectacles either had to channel-switch or pass up at least part of one event for the other. Even the Indiana-born producers of "Hoosiers," a film nominated for 10 Oscars, stayed home to watch the spot that inspired the movie. Surely such devotion deserves a little future compassion from the schedule-makers.

(Footnote: While the Hoosiers won, "Hoosiers" lost — in all 10 categories.)

Fake bolts could lead to air crashes

WASHINGTON — Eight years after a federal agency warned that substandard steel bolts in commercial airliners could lead to disaster, bogus bolts still pose a threat to air travelers.

"As few as three bogus bolts in the wing root assembly of a jumbo jet could potentially cause the crash of that aircraft and the death of all its hundreds of passengers and crew," a 1979 Federal Trade Commission report warned. The report documented 11 instances where the dangerously weak bolts were found in airplanes.

Despite the uproar that greeted the 1979 report, back-alley bolt shops are still operating, industry experts told our associate Stewart Harris. The momentary publicity, plus tighter controls by aircraft companies, forced some of the potential killers out of business, but others simply got better at covering their tracks.

"I suspect they did a little of both," said Jim Costello of Standard Pressed Steel in Jenkintown, Pa., one of the largest makers of high-strength aviation bolts in the country.

Here, for example, are two recent cases known to Costello:

— About 18 months ago, a West Coast machine shop cut off the ends and re-threaded several SPS bolts. This drastically altered the temper of the carefully crafted bolts. The machine shop tried to get the dangerously altered bolts certified by a laboratory, but the lab instead turned them over to an SPS affiliate in the area, which identified them as bogus, reworked bolts.

— Air Italia last year found a box of out-and-out counterfeit bolts on its shelf. The counterfeiters had put the SPS trademark on their phony fasteners. They looked like similar counterfeits found years earlier at Aerospatiale, maker of the A-300 Airbus jumbo jet.

The Federal Aviation Administration has recorded only one instance of a bogus fastener since the 1979 report: In 1983, the FAA issued an alert on bogus nuts made by a Florida firm and provided to Pratt & Whitney for engines. They did not meet specifications, and the alert warned that "there is a potential that some of these parts may have entered the commercial aviation market and could cause an unsafe condition." Pratt & Whitney discarded the bogus nuts.

Unlike cheap counterfeits found in other industries, most of the bogus aviation bolts are not imports, but domestically modified, high-tech bolts originally made to exacting standards by reputable manufacturers.

High-quality aviation bolts are about the strongest industrial fasteners money can buy — but it takes a lot of money to buy them. They're designed to withstand repeated shocks of 100,000 pounds per square inch or more, and they take days to manufacture. A rush job can run the cost up to hundreds or even thousands of dollars per bolt.

Like Costello of SPS, distributor Roy Oliver of Inglewood, Calif., is convinced that the threat is still there. He told us of firms that regularly place orders with him for bolts of a specified length "or longer."

"This is a tipoff that the bolt will be cut and replated," Oliver explained. Both steps require reheating the bolts, which were carefully tempered by the manufacturer; the reheating leaves them either too soft or too brittle. "The frequency of bogus parts getting into the system is probably continuing at the same basic rate" as in the early 1980s, said Oliver, who has been working for 10 years to stop the flow of bogus bolts.

Another West Coast distributor, who requested anonymity, told us that at least one major airframe maker still resells bolts — some of them rejects — that are swept up from the floor of its assembly line. The 1979 FTC report noted that this was one source of inexpensive material for the bogus-bolt shops.

GALLOW HUMOR: A bitter joke circulating in the Ukraine, the second largest Soviet republic, links two gruesome events, one historical and one current. The historical reference is to Josef Stalin's purge and starvation of millions of Ukrainians in the early 1930s; the current reference is to the Chernobyl nuclear plant blowup, another Ukrainian disaster. "Why is Gorbachev a smarter man than Stalin?" the joke goes. Answer: "Because Stalin only killed the Ukrainian peasants. Gorbachev turned them into radioactive fuel."

MINI-EDITORIAL: The Byzantine response of Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu to the Turkish flotilla's feat into the Aegean Sea the other day was predictable: He blamed it all on the United States and threatened the U.S. military bases in Greece again. We hate to be impatient with an old ally, even when it is run by such a bodacious gadfly, but has anyone given any thought to calling Papandreu's bluff? If we simply said, "OK, we'll pack up — and move our bases to Turkey, which appreciates us," it might just do wonders.

Education boss nixes 'Draft Bennett' move

WASHINGTON — Education Secretary William J. Bennett has said no thanks to an appeal from New Hampshire Sen. Gordon Humphrey and other conservatives that he authorize a Bennett presidential draft.

Humphrey was deeply impressed by Bennett's speech in Nashua, N.H., March 12, the first time the senator heard him speak. At a private dinner in Washington's Madison Hotel, Humphrey and several prominent conservative leaders suggested the formation of a Draft Bennett organization, followed by an announcement later that he would seek the Republican nomination.

Bennett responded in the negative. Apprehensive that such a move would curtail his mission at the Education Department, Bennett was dubious about running. As news of the Madison Hotel dinner leaked, Bennett was urged not to make the plunge by Rep. Jack Kemp, his close friend who wants to be the conservative choice for president.

NEW ODD COUPLE
Right-wing Republican leader Sen. Jesse Helms and left-wing Sen. John Kerry, new chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, are the Senate's latest odd couple, pushing the Reagan administration into decertifying three Caribbean countries as responsible U.S. allies in the battle against drugs.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Both members of the Foreign Relations Committee, they are now awaiting Senate action that would force the administration to label Panama, the Bahamas and Mexico as states not in compliance with U.S. anti-drug traffic standards.

Their bill, backed by Majority Leader Robert Byrd, would cut foreign aid to the three countries by one-half. In dealing together for the first and possibly last time, the staffs of both senators are playing the polite game of "after you, Alphonse, after you, Gaston."

WHITE HOUSE RIGHT
The selection of Ken Cribb, Attorney General Edwin Meese's right-hand man, as assistant to the president did not have the intended favorable impact on conservatives.

New Right leaders grumble that Cribb has been "layered" on top of the domestic policy chief, conservative Gary Bauer, while moderates dominate the rest of the staff. Cribb will be watched closely to see if he is used as protective coloration for decisions otherwise unacceptable to the conservative movement.

Cribb was picked over Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds and Colorado beer baron Joe Coors, both deemed "too controversial" by White House chief of staff Howard Baker.

BOREN ON DURENBERGER
Although Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren will say nothing publicly, intimates say he has let it be known among his colleagues that if Sen. David Durenberger were a member of his committee he would fire him off it.

That verdict befits the Senate's angry mood in the wake of Durenberger's leak of intelligence that the U.S. may have had an Israeli spy during Israel's invasion of Lebanon. What riled senators is their suspicion Durenberger was trying to loosen Jewish American purse strings for his 1988 re-election campaign in Minnesota against Hubert H. Humphrey III.

Durenberger's tour on the Intelligence Committee ended when the new Congress took over in January. Senators fear that if the Ethics Committee lets him off scot free despite violating the Senate's no-leak rule, the administration will claim it simply cannot afford to tell its secrets to Capitol Hill.

LAXALT'S CAMPAIGN

Republican conservative operative Rich Williamson has opted out as potential campaign manager of ex-senator Paul Laxalt's late-starting bid for the presidential nomination.

Williamson, a former Reagan White House aide and ambassador to the atomic energy organization in Vienna, was asked by Laxalt how much time he could devote to the campaign. Williamson's reply: He would do what he could for his old political associate but he could not leave his law practice in Chicago.

That makes another veteran operative, Jerry Carmen, the likely head of the Laxalt campaign. Currently national chairman of Citizens for America and Republican National Committeeman from New Hampshire, Carmen is former head of the General Services Administration and ambassador to the United Nations in Geneva.

Evangelist flap embodies religious freedom

Several people have suggested that I write a column ridiculing the TV evangelist, Jim Bakker and his wife, Tammy. I will do that as soon as elected officials and journalists who have had extraordinary affairs within the last seven years resign or otherwise demonstrate, as Bakker has, more concern for their organization than for their own welfare.

Charley Reese

Bakker resigned from his PTL ministries to prevent a hostile takeover by people he says planned to use his sexual misadventure seven years ago to discredit him. So far it seems that Bakker is acting in an honorable fashion. I haven't noticed any public officials or journalists guilty of blunders falling on their swords.

I'm not a supporter of Bakker or of any other TV evangelist but I do believe in the Constitution, which last time I looked guaranteed freedom of religion. That means if people want to practice their religion on television they are free to do so. That means if people want to send money to evangelists, they are free to do so. It also means that it's none of the public's business who sends what to whom for what reason or how the money is spent.

Some of the mainline churches are already suggesting that there be some kind of public accounting of TV ministries. That's bunk. Unless they want a public accounting of every church's funds, they'd better back off because if you establish the principle that the government has a right to audit the books of churches which appeal for funds on television, then you've established the principle that the government has the right to audit the books of churches period.

That would be inconsistent with freedom of religion. It is not, or at least ought not to be, the government's prerogative to decide what is and what is not acceptable religion. The Supreme Court has already come dangerously close to that ruling that a South Carolina religious school was not entitled to a tax exemption because its religious rule prohibiting interracial dating by its students conflicted with public policy.

If only those religious ideas which conform to public policy are acceptable, then you have a state religion. Public policy and the law are not the same. No one has a right to violate the law on religious grounds, but by the same token, if the First Amendment is to have any meaning, no one's religious beliefs should have to meet any test of conforming to public policy.

I'm all in favor of prosecuting Christians who violate the immigration laws but I would be strenuously opposed to the government yanking the church's tax exemption or auditing its books because its members believed they should violate immigration laws.

It's a fundamental rule of a free society that government must confine itself to regulating behavior, not thought. A free society must allow people to be whatever they want to be — bigots, anti-Semites, communists, Nazis, whatever. Only when beliefs are translated into behavior which violates the law should the government intervene. Otherwise, you have to have thought police and we'd be no different than a communist society where it is a crime to think unacceptable thoughts.

There is a dangerous trend in our society, based on human nature, to rule out of bounds unpopular thought. Feminists have a tendency to want to silence any one they declare sexist; others want to silence anyone they think is racist; some atheists want to silence religious people and some religious people want to silence atheists, and so on.

Only recently we saw groups objecting to a TV miniseries, "Amerika," because they did not want the ideas in that series broadcast.

People who are afraid of or hostile to ideas are no friends of the U.S. Constitution or of the Bill of Rights. For people to send money to preachers who live high on the hog may seem like a bad idea to us but a free people are not required to conform to our ideas about how preachers should live. In short, unless you are a contributor to Bakker, butt out.

Congress was off this day in 1787

Associated Press

Friday, April 6, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY
The Pennsylvania Herald carried this story:

"It is with concern we have to inform the public, that the hon. Charles Biddle, Esq. vice-president of this commonwealth, had the misfortune of breaking his leg as he descended the stair-case of the state house. He was instantly attended by Dr. Hutchinson, who administered every physical aid which could alleviate his excruciating irritation. In justice to his feelings we must declare that he bore this accident, with the fortitude and patience of a Christian Philosopher."

The Philadelphia Street Commissioners met to examine stone for the new sewer in Fourth Street. The stone was not of a good quality so they agreed to continue their search. Since the sewer in Sixth Street was in danger of being clogged by recent street work, it was necessary that it be arched over immediately. "Poor Will's Almanac" reminded its readers this was time to set out ranunculus and anemones. Tube roses could also be set in the ground in rich light borders.

CONFEDERATION TODAY
There was no Congress as it was Good Friday.

DELEGATES TODAY
George Washington's weather was

1787 Constitution Daybook

cool all day. The mercury was 44 at morning, 54 at noon, and 45 at night. He rode to all the plantations. Corn was being planted at Muddy Hole. Oats were sown at Dogue. Flax and clover were planted at the Ferry. John Langdon of Portsmouth, N.H., wrote Washington:

"I was honored a few days since with your Excellency's kind favor of the 10th Ult. in which you are pleased to acknowledge the merits of Mr. Lear this testimony which you have given of him will be considered both by himself and friends as a mark of the highest honor and I hope he'll embrace every opportunity of shewing his gratitude for this and all other favors."

Tobias Lear, a native of Portsmouth, was secretary to Washington. He had held that appointment for two years. Langdon was president of New Hampshire in 1785 and doubtless influenced the general in Lear's behalf.

Benjamin Franklin attended the Supreme Executive Council, which he chaired as president of Pennsylvania. He also presided at this evening's session of the Society for Political Inquiries.

LOOKING BACK

John Langdon (1741-1819)
John Langdon was born on a farm in Portsmouth, N.H., on June 26, 1741, (for December 1739 or 1740 — accounts differ). He attended the local grammar school, served for a while in the office of merchant Daniel Rindge, and then went to sea. By 1774, he had become an active and prosperous ship owner, ship builder and merchant.

In 1774, he was one of the volunteers who seized Fort William and Mary in Portsmouth harbor. By 1775, he was the speaker of the New Hampshire Legislature, and a delegate to the Continental Congress. Thereafter, he was an agent for the Continent, purchasing military supplies, building ships (including the America) and at the same time continued in private business as a privateer owner and merchant. By 1784, he had started an active trade with the French West Indies, exporting barrel staves, fish and such and importing sugar, rum and cotton.

Associated as a Continental agent with marine superintendent and financier Robert Morris, he also acted as Morris' Portsmouth correspondent, and as agent for the Bank of North America. He had been speaker of the New Hampshire House in 1777, '78, '79, '81 and '86, of the state Senate in 1784, and president of the state in 1785.

On this day 200 years ago, Langdon had been married for just over 10 years to Elizabeth Sherburne, and was the father of a daughter, Elizabeth (Betsy). A son had died in infancy.

Due to election delays at home, Langdon didn't take his seat in the Convention until July 23.

Langdon was moderately active in the debate. He seemed to have perceived the nature of federalism as envisioned in the Constitution, saying, on Aug. 23, "As one of the people...I can say, the National Government is mine, the State Government is mine — In transferring power from one to the other — I only take out my left hand what it cannot so well use, and put it into my right hand where it can be better used."

Northeast remains under water; Southeast digs out

Associated Press

Rain continued to fall over much of the Northeast today after a storm dumped up to 5 inches on the mid-Atlantic states and much of New England over the weekend. Flood warnings remained in effect today in New England.

The central Appalachians received more snow today after up to 26 inches closed roads and collapsed a building.

Four people died in weather-related traffic accidents in Kentucky, one each in Ohio and West Virginia crashes, and an Ohio man died while shoveling snow, police said.

About 700 people in New York, Maine and New Jersey waited to get back into their flooded-out homes today, authorities said.

A limited state of emergency remained in effect in New Jersey, where flooding in the Passaic River Basin forced evacuation of about 350 Wayne residents.

Low-lying areas were under as much as 6 feet of water early today, and residents made their way about in canoes and rowboats, checking their homes for damage as water lapped at the foundations.

Several roads and bridges were washed out in eastern New York, and 50 Schoharie County families have been evacuated from their homes, said Ron Connors, director of the county's office of emergency management.

Officials in Maine continued assessing the damage from the state's worst-ever flooding. The Red Cross estimated Sunday that 2,300 dwellings had been damaged.

About 300 people living along Maine's Saco River were warned not to return today as heavy rain threatened more flooding. "Before moving back in lock, stock and barrel, for God's sake, wait a day," Biddeford Fire Chief Raymond Parent said.

In central Ohio, two women delivered babies Sunday after emergency squads used snowmobiles, tractors and four-wheel-drive vehicles to help them get to the hospital through 10-foot snowdrifts.

Finance officials to target trade, Latin American debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of the world's most pressing economic problems — trade imbalances and Latin American debt — are likely to dominate high-level talks this week among finance officials of the United States and its key trading partners.

But analysts expect little in the way of new initiatives to emerge on either front from sessions of the 151-nation International Monetary Fund or from separate talks among the major industrial democracies.

The week-long session will be the first meeting of the international organization since Brazil indefinitely suspended interest payments in February on some $70 billion in debt it owes to commercial banks.

Brazil is expected to outline a new five-year plan for economic growth that includes a proposed restructuring of its debt payments.

At the same time, finance ministers from the six nations that signed a stopgap accord in Paris in February to stabilize currency swings — the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France and Canada — are expected to re-examine that arrangement to see if it is working.

Under the agreement, the six nations agreed to take steps to support the dollar to break its fall.

Super Dream Pill Guaranteed Weight Loss

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to a review of customers' files, here's what people are saying about the amazing, vastly improved "new version" of the world famous Dream Pill System for fast, guaranteed weight loss featuring Super Lite Dreams tablets:

"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply."

Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, Alabama
"Losing 1 lb. per day."

Mr. J.G., Pineville, Kentucky
"I've lost 34 lbs. and I'm still losing."

Mrs. J.K., Garden Grove, California
"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great...have lost 27 lbs."

Mr. A.D., Anadarko, Oklahoma

The System's Dream Pill combines two natural substances called L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Diet researchers believe that growth hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to, down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail.

Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body "think" it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry.

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. Much to her amazement, while taking L-arginine for its healing effects on a broken foot, Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

High temperatures forecast for Monday April 6.

Weather will be clearing

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for decreasingly cloudy skies tonight and partly cloudy skies on Tuesday. Forecasters at the NWS are predicting a high in the upper 50s and a 20 percent chance of showers on Tuesday.

Tonight, the low should be in the middle 30s with winds out of the east at five to 10 mph. Winds will be out of the south at 10-15 mph on Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 49 was 53 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1959. Today's 39-degree low was 14 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1936.

STATE

Skies were cloudy across Texas today with light rain in many areas. High pressure at the surface, coupled with an upper level low pressure system in the Texas Panhandle, kept skies cloudy, the National Weather Service said.

Winds were from the north and northwest across the Panhandle, North Texas and Southeast Texas while winds were generally from the northeast and east in South Texas, along the Rio Grande plains, and the Trans Pecos. Elsewhere, winds were generally less than 10 mph.

The weather service said light showers should continue throughout the day. Lows tonight were expected to be in the 30s and 40s except for some readings in the 50s in far South Texas.

NATION

A storm spread rain from the Northeast into the Midwest today while fair weather prevailed across much of the nation.

The storm, which dumped up to three feet of snow on the central Appalachians during the weekend, was centered off the mid-Atlantic coast early today.

Rain extended from New England to the lower Great Lakes region, upper Ohio Valley and middle Atlantic Coast states. Snow showers lingered in the central Appalachians.

Elsewhere, rain spread across Louisiana and east Texas and was scattered across the Northwest. Fair weather prevailed across most of the rest of the nation and temperatures remained unseasonably low in the Southeast.

Snow-prompted travelers' advisories were in effect for extreme western Maryland, the west central highlands of Virginia and the mountains and eastern sections of West Virginia.

Heavy rain led to flood warnings for rivers and streams in southern Vermont, much of Massachusetts and southwestern Maine.

Dr. Stephen Jon of the China Acupuncture Clinic shows various pressure points that correspond to certain diseases.

Poking around for a cure for that nasty smoking habit or perhaps a nagging back pain that just won't go away? The answer might be found on Kent Street in Midland where the proverbial East has met West Texas.

China Acupuncture Clinic opened its doors in February. Dr. Stephen Jon and Dr. William Zhang are the proprietors of this facility, the second of its kind in Midland.

"At first, I didn't believe in acupuncture because I had learned Western medicine," said Zhang of his initial skepticism of acupuncture, the 2,000-year-old art of healing done with needles.

Both doctors said they have medical degrees in "traditional" Western medicine, not unlike any doctor around town. They are specially trained and certified, however, in all forms of acupuncture as well.

"When I started treatment with Dr. Zhang I had three health problems," said Gloria Riley, 61, of Odessa. "I have gone to doctors in every field of medicine and all I have managed to do is live a life of being very ill for the most part."

She began treatment with Zhang several months ago and claims he has helped her overcome back pain from an accident, high blood pressure and an allergy to cold air.

Ms. Riley was first brought to Zhang by her daughter, Darlene Carlton, 43, who suffered from headaches and an allergy to cold air. "The needles don't hurt...I think it's fantastic. It builds up your health instead of breaking down something else," said the daughter.

Acupuncture works on a "ying" and "yang" theory, Zhang said. There are 14 meridian lines in the body — three on the front and back of each arm and leg and one on the front of the body and one on the back.

Along these lines are certain pressure points that correspond to certain diseases and disorders in the body. When pressure from a needle or massage is applied to these points, the disorder should begin to fade, Zhang said.

There are several forms of acupuncture including the traditional (needles are inserted into specific pressure points) and electro-acupuncture, when electronic stimulation is added to the traditional method.

In addition, massaging the pressure points can help in some treatments, Zhang said.

Getting the point

Dr. William Zhang, above, points out some of the pressure points on the ear that are targeted when someone wants to quit smoking using acupuncture. Doctors use a twisting motion to insert the needles into a patient.

Needles of different sizes, left, are used in traditional acupuncture treatment. Darlene Carlton, below, receives electrical stimulation through needles in the doctor's attempt to treat her chronic headaches.

Permian Basin readies for natural disasters

By LYN MILLER

Tornado season is here. Just one of the natural disasters that the Office of Emergency Management, located in the Midland City Hall, is concerned with.

That office has been established by the city and county, in accordance with the 1975 Texas Disaster Act.

The act mandates that every county and incorporated municipality develop and maintain an emergency management program.

County judges and mayors are designated as Emergency Management directors and have the overall responsibility for protection of the public. In 1978, R.G. Edgerton was appointed as coordinator of the Emergency Management office in Midland and handles day to day activities of the office.

Possible disasters that could occur in the Permian Basin may be from a natural hazard as a storm, fire or flood; or a disastrous incident involving a hazardous material spill, train derailment, major transportation accident or other related incident.

During an emergency, this office has the responsibility of coordinating all governmental and volunteer agencies that would lend assistance to those affected by the incident.

In 1979, the Skywarn Weather

Spotters Network was established with the installation of two meter FM amateur radio station at the National Weather Service located at Midland Air Terminal. This installation has been invaluable in providing adequate warnings of approaching severe weather to the public.

Recently, the warning capability of this system was enhanced by the installation of additional communications equipment which allows for direct communication with the Amateur Radio station at the National Weather Service office from almost any location in the Permian Basin. This task was accomplished by a group of Amateur Radio Operators at their own expense and involved no taxpayers' money.

At this time of the year, in particular, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Weather Radio and most commercial radio and television stations broadcast safety instructions during times of severe weather activity.

Emergency management is vital to the citizens of any city and county. To insure a plan for protection of the public, should a disaster occur in this area, an emergency management program has been developed.

The plan is divided into four phases. The first, mitigation, consists of those actions which may prevent or reduce the consequences of a disaster; second, preparedness, involves identification of the potential hazards a community faces and resources available to deal with the situation; third, response, concerns those actions that follow a disaster and are designed to prevent loss of lives and property and provide emergency assistance; and fourth, recovery, consists of the short and long-term actions which return all systems to normal or improved standards.

Midland is in the process of developing and updating functional annexes to the Emergency Management Plan which deal with identifying the department or organization that will provide various services in a time of emergency. Generally, the same daily services will be available, with the exception of the workforce being augmented with reserves or volunteers.

Each entity has been instructed to develop Standing Operating Procedures for use under emergency conditions. These, as well as the annexes of the Emergency Management Plan, should address all potential hazards that the jurisdiction may face.

The Emergency Management Coordinator has the responsibility of seeing that proper training is made available and of monitoring both volunteer and local governmental agencies in the handling of unusual incidents.

Since familiarity helps to insure the success of an emergency plan, a hazardous materials exercise (Haz-Mat I) has been scheduled in Midland during the first part of May.

The purpose is to test the ability of various city/county departments and agencies to respond to a train derailment involving fires and chemical spills.

At present, the Emergency Management Office is working with members of the Chemical Manufacturers Association for the purpose of forming a local advisory committee which would provide technical advice regarding steps the chemical industry is taking to protect the public and the environment.

Plans call for local representatives to present the program, titled Community Awareness Emergency Response (C.A.E.R.) to various clubs and organizations in the near future.

A disaster can occur at any time and place in the city or county. Local government officials realize this and are implementing steps to protect life and property from the effects of hazardous events.

Lyn Miller, an employee at Midland City Hall, coordinates information for this column.

Sexual assault of woman under investigation

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the sexual assault of a 23-year-old woman early Sunday at an apartment complex in the northwest part of the city.

According to reports, the victim told police she returned to her apartment at the Clusters Apartments, 4415 Northcrest Dr., about 2 a.m. Sunday. An hour later, she said a security alarm in the apartment went off, and when she awoke she was confronted by a man wearing a multi-colored ski mask.

She told police the man had a

large knife and threatened to "slit her throat." She fought with the man, and was assaulted in her bedroom, police said.

The only description of the attacker was a white male, five feet seven inches tall, weighing approximately 150 pounds.

Police also are investigating several burglaries, including one in the 3300 block of Moss Avenue that resulted in the loss of painting equipment valued at $5,500.

According to reports, a spray painting machine with a 100-foot cord and spray gun valued at $4,000 and a spray painting machine with a 50-foot airless hose valued at $1,500 were stolen. The burglary occurred Saturday between 7:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., police said.

A Kruggerand valued at $600, a one-quarter carat diamond ring valued at $500, a gold nugget wedding band valued at $300, and a pair of gold nugget earrings valued at $200 were reported stolen from a residence in the 3300 block of Cimarron. According to reports, the burglary occurred between 6 p.m. Friday and 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

In other reports, a cassette player valued at $150, a 13-inch black and white television set valued at $75, and a jam box valued at $35 were reported stolen from a residence in the 1800 block of East Hemlock Avenue.

A surveillance camera valued at $600 and two 12-packs of beer valued at $12 were reported stolen from The Deli, 1822 E. Pecan Ave., police said. According to reports, the burglary occurred just after midnight Sunday.

Hearing on prison contempt citation due April 13

Associated Press

It has been almost three months since Gov. Bill Clements met with U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to discuss steps the state must take to comply with a federal court order to improve prison conditions.

Clements has made strides to comply with the judge's order, saying "we're not going to do a snow job on anybody." But attorneys for inmates who filed suit to improve conditions predict a continuing struggle.

In coming weeks, several developments are expected:

— Justice set an April 13 hearing to decide whether to fine the state on a Dec. 31 contempt of court ruling.

— The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals is reviewing the state's appeal of Justice's contempt ruling.

— Clements is expected to fill the last two vacancies on the Texas Board of Corrections.

— The board, after Clements makes a recommendation, is expected to select a permanent director for the prison agency.

— The Legislature is mulling 320 bills affecting prisons, paroles, sentencing and other aspects of the criminal justice system. A month ago, legislators voted for $20.4 million in emergency funds to complete prison improvements and reduce inmate overcrowding.

For the past two months, the prison system has been forced to shut down most of each week because the inmate population exceeded a 95 percent capacity limit set by a state law passed to appease the court.

Texas is one of 35 states whose prisons have been under scrutiny by the judiciary on the federal level.

"In comparison to the other states, the conditions there in Texas are some of the worst in the country," said Dan Manville, a Washington attorney who represents penal issues for the American Civil Liberties Union prison project.

PTA life members honored Tuesday

From Staff Reports

The Midland City Council Parent-Teacher Association will have a reception for PTA life members from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the Lee High School Youth Center, 3500 Neely Ave.

PTA life members are those individuals who have given distinguished service to youth.

INS to resume illegal immigrant arrests in September

HOUSTON (AP) — Most illegal immigrants in Houston have had little reason to worry about being picked up and deported since November, when immigration officers were ordered to stop raiding businesses and to halt most routine arrests.

But the hands-off attitude, which was initiated by Houston's district office of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and was adopted nationwide, is only temporary, said Carey D. Murphy, supervisory criminal investigator with the INS.

Arrests of illegal immigrants who do not qualify for amnesty under the Simpson-Rodino immigration law are expected to resume in September, he said.

The INS decision to hold off on most arrests until Sept. 1 allows time for prospective amnesty applicants to arrange their documents and for employers to obtain employee records required under the new law, he said.

He noted, however, the U.S. Border Patrol, the enforcement arm of the INS, is still arresting illegal immigrants crossing the Rio Grande into the United States and those spotted at immigration checkpoints near the border.

The Temptations literally blew into town Saturday night, but even those famous West Texas winds didn't stop the more than 3,000 music lovers in Chaparral Center from enjoying the feel-good music of Motown's legendary singing group. The performance was all for a worthy cause — the concert, sponsored by KMD-TV, KODM-96 FM Radio, the Midland Reporter-Telegram and Las Manos, was a benefit for the Museum of the Southwest.

The show was opened by comedian Blake Clark, who kept the audience laughing with his ideas on everything from dogs, Californians and Southerners (he's from Georgia) to politicians, including Presidents Carter and Reagan.

Then for an hour and a half, the Temptations — Otis Williams and Melvin Franklin, two of the original members of the group, plus Richard Street, Ron Tyson and Dennis Edwards — performed their hit songs from the '60s and '70s for an enthusiastic audience that kept clapping, jumping and dancing to the music.

The music was heard by at least four generations of fans in the audience, from grandparents with their teenage grandchildren to parents with their tiny babies. Clapping, whistling and cheering accompanied the music from the opening note.

And it was evident the performers appreciated the audience as much as the fans enjoyed the group. They did not hesitate to reach down from the stage to shake fans' hands. "When we first started doing this we were 19 or 20," said Williams to the audience. "Now we're — well — we want to thank you for your support all through the years, because without you, these surely would be no us."

Of course no Temptations live performance would be complete without the characteristic Temptations' "step," and this concert was no exception. Every song was carefully choreographed and looked flawless — and effortless — in execution. In fact, the quintet didn't stop moving the entire time they were on stage.

The group sang most of their hits, including "I'm Gonna Make You Love Me," "The Way You Do The Things You Do," "Not Too Proud To Beg," "I Wish It Would Rain" and

"Papa Was A Rolling Stone." Franklin, the Temptations' bass singer, was showcased in an unexpected rendition of "Old Man River."

But when they broke into "My Girl," their signature song, the audience jumped to its feet and cheered. And when four fans were invited to join the Temptations on stage and actually helped them sing the song, the audience went wild.

The Temptations have been music legends since their first hits, "Get Ready" and "The Way You Do The Things You Do" made the charts in 1964. One of the top pop and rhythm and blues groups for more than 20 years, the Temptations admit to a recent resurgence of popularity. "That's because there's no real songs being written (today) like the songs in the '60s," Williams said.

The old songs seem to appeal to younger fans as much as to their parents. As for their new audience, Williams said, "We love it. That's what it's all about."

Some '80s songs by several different artists have been remade in the '80s. When asked about this phenomenon, Franklin said, "They say imitation is the biggest form of flattery." And he had no trouble picking out his favorite Temptation song: "My Girl."

The Temptations were invited to perform at the benefit by Las Manos, an auxiliary to the Museum of the Southwest. "We worked through an agent in New York," said Norma Webb, co-chairman of the event.

"We asked and they came," added Bonnie Hubbard, the other co-chairman. "We thought they would be a group everyone would be enthusiastic about."

"We thought they would appeal to a large audience," Ms. Webb added. Between $20,000 and $30,000 was expected to be raised for the museum's endowment fund, said Claire Woodcock, president of Las Manos.

DEAR ABBY

Readers applaud virgin's 'no'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers and blessings upon you for telling "Hurting in Hartford" — that 17-year-old virgin — that she is neither weird nor stupid for sticking with her principles. She'll never lose a guy who's worth having if he drops her because she refuses to have sex with him. In fact, she's lucky to be rid of the creep.

I was a 24-year-old virgin when I got married, and I've been happily married for 26 years. I never had any guilt, illegitimate children or venereal diseases. If more girls stayed virgins until they got married, we'd have a healthier world, a lot less misery and lower taxes. — SUZIE IN MOBILE, ALA.

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I hope "Hurting in Hartford" listens to your advice. When I was 16, I refused to have sex with my steady boyfriend, so he dumped me for a girl who would. I remember how hard I cried when he told me he wouldn't be coming around any more.

Well, his new girlfriend gave him

VD, and he gave her a baby before her 17th birthday. — GLAD IT WASN'T ME

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you told "Hurting in Hartford" to hang on to her virginity. If I had been as strong as she seems to be, I wouldn't have lost mine at 15. It has taken me eight years and four relationships to learn that a relationship built on sex doesn't last.

If the fear of pregnancy doesn't keep her out of the sack, the fear of AIDS should. That, and the desire for a permanent relationship, is what has kept me from making sex the payoff for a date. I learned the hard way that if a guy really cares for you, he won't ask you to do anything you're not ready for. Giving in at 15 was the dumbest thing I ever did. — LEARNED TOO LATE IN ROCKFORD

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Hurting in Hartford" whose relationships never lasted any longer than three weeks because she wouldn't have sex with her dates. Please, keep on saying NO. Putting out will not win you popularity. It will only get you a bad reputation because no matter what a guy says, he will talk about you afterward to other guys.

I didn't put out, and I was popular. I was the editor of our high school paper, on the debate team, a cheerleader and vice president of our graduating class.

Sure, there were guys who tried to score with me, but when they knew they couldn't, they respected me and remained my friends anyway. Deep down in my heart I knew I was saving myself for someone who would appreciate me for having saved that special gift a girl can give only once. I met that guy in college. We've been married for six years, and I couldn't be happier. — M.M. IN LITTLE ROCK

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in reference to "Hurting in Hartford." I want her to know she's not alone. I will turn 20 next month and I'm still a virgin. I plan to stay that way until I'm married. I've had three relationships that ended because I wouldn't have sex.

I'm not a cold fish. I enjoy hugging, kissing and cuddling, but I'm not a tease. I tell them up front how far I'll go. I'm only human, but I never get into a situation I can't handle. Remember, you'll never miss what you haven't had. — NOT HURTING IN ENID, OKLA.

Beauty queens choose piano playing

DALLAS (AP) — A pretty girl may be like a melody, but Miss America hopefuls actually play the melodies — on the piano. In fact, piano playing is one of the talents most frequently chosen by women competing in the annual pageant.

To find out why piano is so popular with America's "Misses," the National Piano Foundation headquartered in Dallas recently surveyed past contestants and winners. Their reasons are as varied as the women themselves, but all agree that the ability to play the piano has affected their lives well beyond their pageant days.

"I had performed for so many years that the talent competition was the easiest part of the pageant for me," says Amy Sue Linder Beninato, Miss Massachusetts 1980. "In the talent segment the focus is entirely on your capabilities as a performer, not just on outward appearance."

Choosing the piano as her talent was also a natural for Carol Janson, Miss Colorado 1986 and a student at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. "Piano has been my life since early childhood," she says. "It is everything to me." Janson's ultimate goal is to become a concert pianist and teach at a university.

"Music study definitely gives you a discipline that applies to every aspect of your life," she says. "Not only do you learn to apply practice and study principles that help in other academic areas, but music study also gives you a special insight and a deeper appreciation of the arts."

While being a "Miss" has interrupted her usual practice and performance schedule, Janson still manages to squeeze in three to four hours of practice each day and has several performances planned for spring.

Contestants say sharing their talents with others is one of their greatest pleasures. In fact, many of them have gone on to become piano teachers, both full and part time.

Mary-Ann Farrell, Miss New York 1984, currently lives and teaches in New York City, where she has an unusual group of students.

"I literally teach the United Nations," she says. "I have students whose families are from Israel, Japan, Ethiopia, China, Brazil, Germany, Singapore and Yemen. The exposure I received from the Miss America Pageant certainly has helped me to increase my clientele."

Hype ends; Let 'em box

Hagler meets Leonard tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — After months of hype and a frenzied build-up, Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Sugar Ray Leonard finally meet tonight in a middleweight title fight that could be boxing's richest ever.

Hagler and Leonard will earn a combined $23 million in the scheduled 12-round bout before 15,000 spectators in an outdoor arena at Caesars Palace. They stand to collect several million more on proceeds from closed-circuit television.

It is a fight that was never supposed to happen, a fight that Leonard walked away from twice before. It is also a fight that Leonard finally orchestrated, coming out of retirement to challenge Hagler and attempt to rewrite boxing history in the process.

"He is the ultimate champion. That's why I came back," said Leonard, who last fought three years ago in a desultory performance against journeyman Kevin Howard.

"I think he's on an ego trip," Hagler says of Leonard's motivation. "He sees me doing good, he sees all the press, all the attention I get."

If the fight had happened five years ago, as many thought it would, the question would be simple. Could a great welterweight champion move up in weight to beat an equally proficient middleweight?

Hagler is guaranteed $12 million plus a percentage of the gross, while Leonard will get $11 million for the bout, which is scheduled to begin about 10:15 p.m. CDT.

The fight will be shown to an estimated 3 million viewers at some 1,500 closed-circuit TV outlets in the United States and Canada, including in Midland at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. It also will be shown on pay-per-view television, mostly in Southern California, and will also beamed to about 75 foreign countries.

The questions are many, and the most troubling involve Leonard's eyes.

Critics charge that Leonard, who underwent surgery in May 1982 to repair a detached retina in his left eye, is risking blindness by going back into the ring and exposing the eye to Hagler's punches.

The Nevada State Athletic Commission, responding to the fears, had Leonard undergo a retinal exam by three eye specialists last October and another just last Tuesday. After each, he was pronounced fit to fight.

"I'm not concerned about my eye, not in the least," Leonard said.

Leonard's camp was sufficiently concerned over the perception that Leonard's eyes might be bad that his lawyer, Mike Trainer, voiced worries that the referee would stop the bout if Leonard was cut or had a slight swelling around the eye.

"We're concerned that, because of the hysteria, one fighter might be treated differently than the other one," Trainer said. "We don't want public and media concern over Ray to carry over to the fight."

Hagler, for his part, says he certainly won't worry about his opponent's eye.

"He's the one who made the choice to fight," Hagler said. "This is a dog-eat-dog sport, a man's sport. If it was my eye, do you think he'd back off and say, 'Marvin, your eye?'"

Hagler is a 2½-1 favorite in the 13th defense of the middleweight title he won with a third-round knockout of Alan Minter in September 1980. Hagler, 62-2-2, hasn't lost since dropping a 10-round decision to Willie Monroe in 1976.

"I don't feel I have anything to lose in this fight because I've done it all," Hagler said. "I'm going out the undisputed middleweight champion."

Hagler's World Boxing Council title will be on the line against Leonard, but Hagler no longer holds the World Boxing Association version of the crown. The WBA stripped him of the title for failing to defend it against a top-ranked contender, a decision that was upheld by a federal appeals court last week.

Houston opens season with Scott against Dodgers

Astro ace trouble for LA

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Mike Scott, the king of the National League hill in 1986, hopes to start this season the same way he pitched in the spring — by shutting out the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Scott and the Houston Astros begin defense of their NL West championship tonight at home against Los Angeles, which counters with right-hander Orel Hershiser.

In three exhibition outings against the Dodgers, Scott did not allow an earned run in 12 innings. Last year, when he won the NL Cy Young award with an 18-10 record and a major-league leading 2.22 earned-run average and 306 strikeouts, Scott was 2-1 against Los Angeles.

Hershiser has a 7-1 career record against the Astros, including 2-0 last season.

THE 1987 regular season was to open today with the Cleveland Indians at the Toronto Blue Jays, the first time the first game of the major-league season was scheduled to be played outside the United States.

In other American League openers today, it was Texas at Baltimore, New York at Detroit, Chicago at Kansas City and Boston at Milwaukee.

In other National League openers today, it was Montreal at Cincinnati and San Diego at San Francisco.

Scott finished out the 1986 regular season by going 4-0 at the Astrodome with a 1.71 ERA. He then shut out the New York Mets in Game 1 of the NL playoffs.

Manager Hal Lanier said Houston's pitching, which ranked second to the Mets in team ERA, will continue to improve.

"Without question our staff is better coming out of spring training this year than it was last year," Lanier said. "Last year we didn't know what we had after (Mike) Scott, (Bob) Knepper and (Nolan) Ryan."

Knepper will oppose Fernando Valenzuela, runnerup to Scott in the Cy Young voting, on Tuesday night.

"Now we know that Jim Deshaies is a major-league pitcher and we'll have Danny Darwin for a full season."

"No question that our bullpen is stronger at the start of this year," Lanier said.

The Astros will start the season without troubled shortstop Dickie Thon, placed on the team's reserved injury list with continuing eye problems. But reliable shortstop Craig Reynolds is in the wings to start for another season.

Tim Lincecum, Bob Horner, Rich Gedman and Ron Guidry, all of them unsigned free agents, were among those missing as the 1987 season started.

There was still a question as to whether all opening-day games would be officiated by major-league umpires. Negotiators for the umpires and the American and National Leagues continued talking into the early-morning hours today. Both league presidents have instructed all teams to have substitute umpires ready in case of a strike.

A SPOKESWOMAN for Richie Phillips, the general counsel of the Major League Umpires Association, said Phillips recommended to the union's executive board that the umpires show up for work, despite the lack of a contract agreement, because there had been "significant progress" in the talks.

In Milwaukee, reliever-turned-starter Bob Stanley was scheduled to open for the AL champion Red Sox against the Brewers and 20-game winner Teddy Higuera. Roger Clemens, the league's Most Valuable Player and Cy Young winner, ended his 29-day holdout on Saturday, but Red Sox manager John McNamara said the earliest Clemens might pitch would be the weekend.

Commissioner Peter Ueberroth planned to be in Candlestick Park to watch San Diego and Eric Show take on the Giants and 20-game winner Mike Krukow. A crowd of 58,000 was expected for the opener of the Giants' 30th season in San Francisco.

In Cincinnati, site of the traditional NL opener, Tom Browning was scheduled to pitch for the Reds against Montreal and Floyd Youmans.

MHS faces showdown with Cooper

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

In the 1986 District 4-5A baseball season, Midland High was picked as a dark horse underdog, third or fourth in the pack. The Bulldogs matched Abilene Cooper at 10-4 then lost a playoff game for the title.

Sound familiar? In pre-district polls this spring, Midland High was picked as a dark horse underdog, fourth or fifth in the pack. With their 15-5 victory over Odessa High Saturday at Angels Stadium, the Bulldogs are 4-1, just one game behind the 5-0 Cougars.

ALSO LIKE last year, the Cougars are highly regarded in the state polls, ranked second. They have the stats to back up the ranking and are a team Midland High coach Tim Whalen respects as his Bulldogs head into a 4-5A battle today at Abilene Cooper.

District 4-5A Baseball

"It's gonna be a showdown," said MHS head coach Tim Whalen, whose Bulldogs knocked off Cooper twice last year. "I don't know if we can play with those people, I really don't know if we can. But, we're gonna go down there and try."

"We've got to play well because there's no room for errors. We've got to have something happen like clutch hitting because those guys gorilla the ball."

Midland High second baseman Jim Werner, who leads the 4-5A hitters with a .684 average, echoed some of Whalen's comments.

"It's going to be a tough game," said Werner. "It's always tough to play there because there are fans are behind them and the umpires favor them. But, if we can play as well as we can, we'll have a chance to beat them."

Cooper and MHS are both coming off one-sided victories. The Bulldogs pounded Odessa High 15-6 Saturday at Angels Stadium while Cooper demolished Abilene High, 28-0.

Eric Boyd, 3-1 overall and 1-1 in 4-5A play, is expected to get the start for Midland High. The Cougars could throw one of two pitchers at the Bulldogs, Jason Satre or Danny Whitford.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the district, slumping 1-4 Abilene High takes on 3-2 Midland Lee while 3-2 Odessa Permian hosts 1-4 San Angelo. Odessa High has the day off from 4-5A play but will play Brownfield. All games are at 4 p.m.

The Rebels are going into the AHS game with one injury from San Angelo. Catcher Jason Logi was hit in the hand by a Bobcat batter Saturday and had to leave the game. His status for Tuesday is unknown.

For the Rebels, Durian 'Cal' Jenkins is a possible starter on the mound. The Abilene High pitcher that survived the Cooper massacre, if any, will get the start against Lee.

"When I call down to the bullpen, I don't ask to see a guy's birth certificate. I want the guy who can get that major-league hitter out." — Texas Manager Bobby Valentine, who started rookie pitchers in 102 games last year on the way to a second-place finish in the AL West.

Betsy King captures first major LPGA golf title

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Patty Sheehan popped the cork and drank champagne. Betsy King, stoic by comparison, seemed mostly grateful that she was going to get a few days' rest.

It wasn't exactly obvious which of the two golfers had just won the $800,000 Dinah Shore tournament and which had lost.

King was the winner, sinking a 3-foot par putt on the second hole of a playoff Sunday at Mission Hills Country Club to collect the $80,000 winner's prize.

Sheehan missed a putt for par from similar range, a miss that relegated her to second place and cost her $38,000.

"In that kind of a situation, when you're nervous, sometimes you can make a mistake," King said of Sheehan's missed putt that opened the door for the playoff victory.

"Inside, you're hoping that the other person makes that kind of mistake. When she missed, I felt good because I knew that after I putted I'd either be holding the trophy or just walking on to the next playoff hole."

King, who won the Tucson tournament just two weeks ago, collected her ninth career win and her first major title.

She shot a final-round 68 as she and Sheehan, who had a closing 7-under-par 65, wound up regulation play tied at 5-under-par 283.

The last day turned into a threeway battle between King, Sheehan and defending champion Pat Bradley.

Bradley, who began the day tied with King for the lead, barely missed making it a three-way playoff when her long birdie putt on No. 18 just skirted the hole.

She finished with a 69 that left her a stroke back of King and Sheehan, but nevertheless earned $38,000 for her third-place finish.

Tony Dawson, 6-7, 205 forward, Gulf Coast Community College of Panama City, Fla., averaged 30.6 points a game with a 66 percent shooting accuracy from the field. In two seasons, the Kinston, N.C., native has scored 1,616 for a 15.1 average.

Honors include all-conference, all-state, all-regional, conference MVP, MVP at state tournament and Florida Player of the year. His coach is Jim Oler.

Texas

Mike Knorr, 6-5 forward at Cisco Junior College, was a two-year starter, averaging 11.5 ppg and 3.9 rebounds as a freshman and 21.5 and 8.5 rebounds as a sophomore.

An all-regional selection, Knorr, whose home is Kilgus, hit 52.9 from the field and 67.3 from the line. He was unanimous all-conference and named to the all-Region V second team.

Dale Earnhardt wins again

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — After six NASCAR races this year, Dale Earnhardt is walking around with a big smile on his face while his competitors are shaking their heads in disbelief.

Earnhardt and the Richard Childress team, who have won four of the first six events on the Winston Cup circuit, including Sunday's Union 400 race, have led 1,211 of a possible 1,297 laps for 55.7 percent and are averaging nearly $60,000 in winnings per race.

With a little bit of luck, they could have shut out everyone this season. Only a faulty alternator at Atlanta last month and a bad pit stop in the Daytona 500 have kept him from winning all six races.

Earnhardt's 24th career win came at the First Union 400 race Sunday at the 1.5-mile North Wilkesboro Speedway. He lapped all but three cars in the 32-car field and was just a few seconds away from lapping all his competitors when the sixth caution was thrown on lap 240 for an oil leak on Geoff Bodine's Chevrolet. He never regained that big of an advantage because of two more cautions in the race's latter stages.

There were no injuries in the wrecks, but one of Kulwicki's crewmen was hurt on a pit stop during the third caution. John Junk was taken to Wilkes General Hospital for X-rays.

Scott Simpson wins Masters trip to Augusta

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Scott Simpson considers The Masters a fun tournament, and his two-shot victory at the Greater Greensboro Open ensured he'll get a chance at some good times this week at Augusta.

Simpson survived a momentary lapse on the back nine at the Forest Oaks Country Club and held off at least five golfers to take a two-shot triumph in the $900,000 tournament.

Simpson turned in a 2-under-par 70 for a four-day total of 6-under-par 282 in conditions which resembled the middle of winter instead of early spring in North Carolina.

Thus, instead of a trip to Hattiesburg, Miss., for a satellite tournament, Simpson will take his wife, two children and $108,000 in first-prize money to Augusta National.

"It's not really a great course for my game because I don't hit it very long," Simpson said. "But it's a really fun tournament and it's a lot of fun to go there. If I can hit my irons good and close, I should be able to play good."

Simpson called the GGO victory nerve-wracking, and not just because he hadn't won since the 1984 Westchester Classic.

"It meant so much to win, to go to Augusta," Simpson said. "I was close the whole way."

Simpson and Tom Byrum dueling through the first nine holes, with Simpson collecting a birdie on No. 9 to take a one-shot edge.

Simpson watched his lead grow when Byrum bogeyed the 10th hole. But Simpson played back to the field with bogeys at 12 and 14. By then, Chip Beck was within one shot and Clarence Rose was within two.

"When my game left me, I was just thinking about trying to hit some good golf shots," Simpson said. "At that point, I was just trying to keep going, stick with trying to hit the best shot."

After holding par at 15, Simpson sank a 12-foot putt for birdie at the 16th green.

"I just hadn't hit many good shots on the back nine. I was just a little bit off," Simpson said. "I finally made a good swing. It felt great. Then I made a good swing at 17 and two good ones on 18. A great way to finish."

Simpson locked up the victory with a 20-foot putt for birdie at 18. In addition to breaking the drought, the triumph wiped out most of the memories of a lost opportunity at last week's Tournament Players Championship.

"I was just trying to come here and keep playing good, whatever that was going to bring," Simpson said.

Exhibition season ends in rain, snow

Associated Press

If major-league umpires decide not to work today's opening games in a contract dispute, they went out with a splash.

John McSherry's National League crew ordered Sunday's exhibition game in Washington, D.C., between the New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies to begin in a steady rain and 36-degree temperatures.

"This game wouldn't have been played except for the fact that they sold 40,000 tickets (45,614 tickets were sold, representing the largest crowd in the history of the District of Columbia, although many stayed home) and they didn't want to give out any refunds," Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt said. "It's wrong, it's over, it's history."

And when they called the game after five innings — as soon as it became official — with the Mets leading 1-0 and the rain having slackened to a mere drizzle, it drew a lusty chorus of boos from a vast majority of the crowd that attended RFK Stadium's first major-league game in 15 years.

"You hate to see a game played under these conditions," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "We're lucky no one got hurt."

The only player who seemed to enjoy the miserable conditions was Mets pitcher Sid Fernandez, who entered the game with a 4.95 spring ERA and allowed only one hit — pinch hitter Milt Thompson's two-out single in the fifth inning — while walking one and striking out seven.

The Mets nicked Joe Cowley for a first-inning run on Mookie Wilson's leadoff double and Gary Carter's two-out single. Cowley allowed six hits.

The Cleveland Indians and Toronto Blue Jays played to a nine-inning 8-8 tie in Buffalo, N.Y., en route to Toronto. Steve Carlton, signed by Cleveland on Friday, pitched three innings and gave up one run and two hits. The four-time Cy Young Award winner relieved fellow 300-game winner Phil Niekro, who allowed four hits and two runs in his three innings.

Cleveland's Mel Hall went 4-for-5, homered twice and drove in five runs. The Blue Jays tied the score with four runs in the ninth off Ernie Camacho, including Kelly Gruber's two-run double and Jesse Barfield's RBI single.

Mario Soto, Cincinnati's one-time pitching ace, won't star for a while, either. The veteran right-hander was placed on the 15-day disabled list. Soto had arthroscopic surgery on his right shoulder last August to have bone spurs removed. He has thrown without pain this spring but isn't at full strength.

Soto pitched five innings in Saturday's exhibition game against Montreal. He allowed eight hits and four earned runs and said he was pleased with his performance.

On Sunday, Kal Daniels homered and Eric Davis had an RBI triple as the Reds beat the Expos 5-3. Reds starter Ted Power pitched seven innings, allowing three runs — two unearned — on five hits.

In other exhibition games: Gary Pettis' squeezed home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning as the California Angels nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 and swept their three-game Freeway Series. The Dodgers scored off Kirk McCaskill in the second inning on Pedro Guerrero's second home run of the spring. McCaskill allowed seven hits and struck out nine in six innings.

Carlton Fisk's two-run homer in the seventh inning off rookie Logan Easley gave the Chicago White Sox a 12-11 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Greg Walker, Gary Redus, Ron Hassey and Ivan Calderon also homered for the White Sox while Barry Bonds had two homers and Bobby Bonilla one for Pittsburgh. Each drove in five runs.

Dan Gladden, who came to Minnesota in a trade with San Francisco last week, drove in four runs as the Twins beat the Houston Astros 12-7. Gladden had a two-run double in a five-run third inning and a two-run triple in a six-run seventh. The victory gave Minnesota the best spring record in the AL at 14-10.

Terry Pendleton hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning to lift St. Louis over the Kansas City Royals 8-2. Ozzie Smith also homered for the Cardinals.

Ed Lynch held San Diego to one run and six hits in six innings as the Chicago Cubs defeated the Padres 3-1 for a sweep of their two-game weekend series in Denver. A crowd of 20,894 witnessed Sunday's game in blustery weather. Saturday's contest drew 31,147.

Home runs by Jose Canseco and rookie Mark McGwire powered the Oakland A's to an 8-3 victory over the Giants. Canseco's homer was his seventh of the spring and he finished the spring with a .382 batting average. Oakland's Dave Stewart allowed one run and four hits in six innings.

Mike Morgan, pitching in his home town of Las Vegas for the first time in nine years, limited the defending Pacific Coast League champion Stars to five hits and one run in five innings in the Seattle Mariners' 3-1 victory.

Albert Hall's two-run double in the ninth inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 6-5 victory over their Greenville, S.C., farm team.

Stern looks at Motta's accusations

DALLAS (AP) — National Basketball Association commissioner David Stern is expected to have an announcement by Tuesday concerning allegations that the Houston Rockets are trying to manipulate their playoff position by not playing their hardest to win games, a newspaper reported today.

Stern said the accusations made by Dallas Mavericks coach Dick Motta against Rockets coach Bill Fitch were "in the process of being looked into."

"We will have obviously some response because people have asked about it," Stern told The Dallas Morning News on Sunday. "We are going to deal with it."

THE COMMISSIONER declined further comment on the matter, but clearly was displeased about the avalanche of publicity that resulted from the charges by Motta, the newspaper said.

If Stern decided the integrity of the league has been damaged — either by Motta for making the accusations or by Fitch if the accusations were deemed to have merit — Stern is empowered to assess a fine or impose other disciplinary action.

Motta predicted that the league probably would be upset with him for making the charges and that he probably would be fined.

Motta said the Rockets were "manipulating" because they were trying to get out of the same playoff bracket as the Lakers. If the Rockets finished fourth or fifth in the Western Conference, they would have to meet the Lakers as early as the second round.

If they finish sixth or seventh, however, they would not have to play the Lakers until the conference finals, assuming they were able to win the first two rounds.

Motta complained Thursday to NBA vice president of operations Rod Thorn and then made his feelings public in a story that was published Friday in The Dallas Morning News.

"Obviously, that's a pretty serious accusation," Thorn said. "I would think it would be a very tough thing to prove, and I would think that the commissioner might be very upset about it. I think he might be upset with coach Motta for making an accusation, but maybe Motta can (prove it)."

The publicity intensified Sunday when a taped interview with Fitch was played at halftime of the Philadelphia-Boston game on CBS. Fitch called Motta's charges "irresponsible."

"When Motta made those statements," Fitch said, "he must have been thinking about when he was a ninth-grade coach in Idaho because he brought some ninth-grade thinking with those statements."

CBS OFFICIALS called the Mavericks' offices and asked if Motta would submit to an interview, but they were told Motta had said he would no longer comment on the matter.

Motta became upset after watching the Rockets-Suns game from Phoenix on Wednesday night on a satellite cable broadcast. With 6:42 left in the game, the Rockets were within two points, 98-94, but their best players were on the bench.

Akeem Olajuwon did not play during the last 8:31. Ralph Sampson did not play in the fourth quarter and Rodney McCray played only 4:43 of the fourth period. "Houston looks like they're messing around," Motta said. "They look like they're manipulating it was about the most blatant I've ever seen."

Fitch has said he is resting his regulars and playing different combinations to prepare for the playoffs and said he did not care who the Rockets' first-round opponent is.

Hogs' Broyles fails to stifle move rumors

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — University of Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles said he isn't looking to move the Razorbacks from the Southwest Conference to the Big Eight Conference.

But Broyles said if he were working for such a change, he wouldn't make any announcement about it. "If such a thing should happen, it would come as a blockbuster, overnight," Broyles said in an interview published in Sunday's Arkansas Gazette.

The newspaper reported that Arkansas, Baylor and Rice could soon be the only SWC schools not under some sanction from the NCAA. Arkansas could suffer financially if other SWC schools got in such difficulty with the NCAA that they were prohibited from playing in bowls or on television.

Broyles said the Big Eight would first have to issue an invitation to Arkansas. Big Eight Commissioner Carl James said Friday that the conference is off-record as saying it wants no new members. That vote came after inquiries by Northern Illinois and North Texas State University, James said.

Ken Hatfield, the UA football coach, said the decision to switch belongs to Broyles, but added, "We are some of the credibility left in the SWC."

"We have enjoyed playing in the SWC all these years. I've always gotten along well with the coaches around the table. If it ever got to the point where you would not be able to trust other people ... well, if trust has been breached, you'd take a different approach," Hatfield said. "But it's not my say."

Big Eight conference schools are Nebraska, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Colorado, Kansas, Kansas State, Missouri and Iowa State.

The other SWC teams are Baylor, Houston, Rice, Southern Methodist, Texas A&M, Texas Christian, Texas Tech, and the University of Texas.

Latest Laker Magic act: Quadruple triple-double

Associated Press

Magic Johnson's latest act of legerdemain is a quadruple triple-double.

The Los Angeles Lakers' star scored 23 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and added 10 assists Sunday — the fourth consecutive game he has hit double figures in all three categories — in a 120-118 NBA victory over the Denver Nuggets.

The triumph gave the Lakers their third straight 60-victory season (60-15) and also reduced their magic number for clinching the home-court advantage throughout the playoffs to one.

"They are so good you can't afford to make any mistakes," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We made a few in the last quarter and they certainly took advantage. We had a couple of defensive lapses, took a couple of bad shots and they ran the lead from one (point) to seven just like that."

NBA Roundup

Denver's Mike Evans scored the first basket of the fourth quarter to give the Nuggets a 97-96 lead over Los Angeles. But the Lakers' James Worthy made a three-point play and then scored consecutive baskets for a 104-96 lead.

"If you let Denver get a jump on you early, you can be in for a lot of trouble," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "When Magic hit that one 3-pointer (for a 119-107 lead) I felt pretty good about our chances. Once we got the lead into double figures I figured it would be tough for them to come back."

Warriors 120, Spurs 119

San Antonio sent the game into overtime 107-107 on a 3-point shot by Jon Sundvold with one second left in regulation. But Golden State's Chris Mullin made three straight baskets in the extra period to give the Warriors a 120-112 lead with 1:28 left and give them their first playoff berth since 1976-77.

The Spurs have lost six in a row.

"These guys have taken a lot of negative stuff over the years. I have confidence we can win in the playoffs," said George Karl, who got the Warriors into the playoffs in his first year as the team's coach. "I'm surprised it happened this early. Right now, I'm just really happy for the Joe Barrys and Sleepy Floyd. They deserved it."

76ers 106, Celtics 104

Charles Barkley scored 28 points, including the game-winning basket in overtime, and pulled down 18 rebounds. Although the Celtics are 55-21 overall, the loss dropped their record to 19-19 on the road.

Barkley's follow shot with 1:19 left in overtime gave the 76ers a 106-104 lead. Roy Hinson made one of two free throw attempts with 16 seconds remaining and Boston's Larry Bird missed a long one-hander from the corner with three seconds left. Bird finished with 39 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists.

A 3-pointer by Bird followed by Robert Parish's layup gave Boston a 104-99 advantage in the overtime period. But the Sixers scored the last seven points as Boston turned the ball over three times.

Pistons 125, Bucks 107

Rookie John Salley scored a career-high 28 points as Detroit pulled within 1½ games of Atlanta in the Central Division and dropped third-place Milwaukee six games out.

Salley scored 12 points as the Pistons took a 66-57 halftime lead and the 7-footer from Georgia Tech, Detroit's No. 1 draft choice, added 11 in the fourth quarter. Salley also had 10 rebounds and five blocked shots.

Salley's previous scoring high was 17 points against Indiana last Thursday. In his last seven games he has made 31 of 42 shots.

Leonard gets rich for living fantasy

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — With lights flashing and dice rolling, this Disneyland for adults is hosting the ultimate sports fantasy tonight.

Sugar Ray Leonard's challenge for the middleweight championship opens wondrous new vistas for ex-jock broadcasters. Look for Joe Garagiola to catch in the World Series and Merlin Olsen on the defensive line in the NFL playoffs. Then we can have John Madden coach in the Super Bowl and Tom Heinsohn post up under the basket in the NBA playoffs.

Forget the Emmys. Who needs a cute little statue, when you can get a real piece of the action?

Wealthy citizens looking for a little adventure in their lives routinely pay a couple of thousand dollars to satisfy their sports fantasies. It allows them to warm up and hang out with their old heroes. Leonard not only isn't paying for the privilege, but he's collecting $11 million in the bargain.

ONLY IN America.

Leonard has fought once in five years, and then not very well against somebody named Kevin Howard. Forced into premature retirement by a detached retina, Sugar Ray has spent the rest of his time since 1982 as a boxing broadcaster for HBO.

Ordinarily, that recent resume would not qualify one for a shot at Marvelous Marvin Hagler's middleweight championship. But Leonard is America's hero, with all of the requisite assets — an Olympic gold medal, good looks, well-spoken. So when he got an itch for Hagler, boxing winked at the rankings and invited him to scratch away.

Bingo, we've got another Fight of the Century.

Of the sport's three governing bodies, only the World Boxing Council could understand Leonard's qualifications for this challenge and certify the fight as a title bout. The International Boxing Federation chose to look the other way and the World Boxing Association took a more militant stance, stripping Hagler of his crown. That matter remains locked in litigation.

FIGHT

Hagler also holds the International Boxing Federation crown but Leonard can't win that title in tonight's fight. The IBF is not sanctioning the bout and will declare the title vacant should Hagler lose.

The titles, though, are almost secondary in this fight, which has so captured the attention of the public that promoter Bob Arum predicts it will be the biggest grossing bout ever. Arum said the fight will do at least $80 million and could approach $100 million.

"I wasn't supposed to make all this money," Hagler said. "I wasn't colorful, I wasn't marketable, I wasn't a showbiz-type person. But look at me now."

Leonard says it isn't the money that lured him out of a retirement that began after he looked unimpressive in knocking out Howard in May 1984. Rather, he says, it is Hagler himself.

"He's the only reason that I've been able to train for an entire year," Leonard said. "I knew I wanted this more than I wanted any other fight. I was willing to sacrifice for it."

To get the feel of fighting again without having a tuneup bout, Leonard had a series of four fights in training last fall using 10-ounce gloves and without wearing headgear.

Leonard said he won three of the fights, two by knockout. The fourth fight, last December, was stopped in the second round when Leonard was cut above the eye.

Still, it wasn't until about three weeks ago that Leonard says he knew he had finally shaken the ring rust and was ready to fight.

"It's just something inside me that tells me all is well," the 30-year-old former champion said. "It's difficult to explain, but what's there tells me I'll win the fight."

Leonard, who turned pro in 1977 after winning the 1976 Olympic light Certification of the fight has been only one of many cause celebres in this match.

For one thing, Hagler never has been thrilled with Leonard's warm, homespun image. "Just because he's America's sweetheart doesn't mean I'm a bum," the champion said.

Marvin still resents the way Madison Avenue welcomed Leonard with open arms after his Olympic victory in 1976. Hagler was fighting for peanuts in those days while Sugar Ray became an immediate big-money media star.

"I wasn't marketable," Hagler said tersely. "I didn't have charisma. But look at me now."

Go ahead, look. His shaven head gives Marvin a menacing image, especially matched against the handsome Leonard, who says and does all the right things.

In their last joint press conference, Hagler showed up looking like a desert warrior, wearing a French Foreign Legion hat. Leonard was decidedly less militant, dedicating the fight to terminally ill children.

THEN THERE is the continuing matter of Hagler's age. He is listed as 32, but suspected of being at least two years older than that. Co-manager Pat Petronelli felt compelled to present a birth certificate as evidence. Angelo Dundee, who trains Leonard, answered that by saluting the champion as, "A man of all ages."

And there is Leonard's eye. "A non-issue," declared promoter Bob Arum. For proof, he offered the testimony of Dr. Louis Angioletti, director of the retinal diagnostic center of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary.

"I found Ray perfectly fit," Angioletti said, reporting on his examination of the damaged retina.

Is his eye at risk, though? "Boxers have a greater risk by virtue of their profession," he said. "But Ray Leonard has no greater risk than any other boxer on the card before or after his fight. That's the bottom line."

Not really. The bottom line is that a boxing broadcaster with one fight in five years is getting $11 million to live out a personal fantasy.

Get ready, Garagiola. You're next.

welterweight title at Montreal, has a 33-1 record with 24 knockouts. Unlike Hagler, who had 49 professional fights before being given a title shot, Leonard's career has been highly visible since his first professional fight, which was televised nationally.

Hagler makes no secret of his resentment of Leonard, who he feels has gotten far too much attention for his own good.

"Just because he won a gold medal and is America's sweetheart, that doesn't make me a bum," Hagler said. "I've had more knockouts (52) than he's had fights."

The fight itself matches fighters who are comparable in physique, although Leonard has had to beef up to get closer to the 160-pound middleweight limit. Leonard said he weighed 157 pounds last week and expected to be close to that for the official weigh-in today.

The heaviest Leonard has ever fought at was 153 pounds for a junior middleweight bout against Ayub Kalule in June 1981. He won the WBA 154-pound title in that fight but never defended it.

"It has not changed my speed," Leonard said of the added weight. "People may think differently, but I'm faster than any people out there."

At 5-foot-10½, Leonard is an inch taller than Hagler, but Hagler has an inch advantage in reach at 75 inches.

Leonard's trainer, the veteran Angelo Dundee, said his charge could surprise those observers who think he will attempt to frustrate Hagler with movement.

"Ray will be the banger in this fight," Dundee said. "He's put on 10 pounds so it figures he'll hit 10 pounds harder."

Hagler says he also has a few tricks up his sleeve.

"I just may outbox him," Hagler said. "I fought a great strategy fight against Tommy Hearns (knocking him out in three rounds in April 1985). We're hoping our strategy will work the same against Leonard."

Blues nail Red Wings in OT for Norris crown

Associated Press

Winning the Norris Division title was sweet for the St. Louis Blues ... and sweeter still because of the team they beat out.

"It was a little extra motivation, playing against Jacques' team tonight," said Blues center Doug Gilmour, whose two goals helped the Blues gain a 3-2 overtime win over Detroit in the NHL Sunday night.

Jacques Demers, of course, was the Blues' coach for three years before defecting to Detroit, where he turned the Red Wings from a last-place team into a contender this season in the Norris. In fact, the Red Wings seemed to have the division title locked up with a seven-point lead just nine days ago before fading in the stretch.

"It's just like you got shot," said Demers, whose team lost the title by one point to the

NHL Roundup

Blues. "You're numb, but you know a great team beat you."

It wasn't the only Norris race to go down to the wire on the last day of the regular season. The fourth and final playoff berth in the division was up for grabs between the Chicago Blackhawks and Minnesota North Stars.

The Blackhawks managed to squeeze in with a 5-2 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs. They wound up finishing third and will play Detroit in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs on Wednesday night while St. Louis plays Toronto in the other Norris matchup. The North Stars finished with as many points as the Maple Leafs, 70, but the Leafs got the edge on more victories, 32-30.

All other playoffs spots had already been determined. The matchups will feature Edmonton against Los Angeles and Calgary vs. Winnipeg in the Smythe Division; Hartford playing Quebec and Montreal vs. Boston in the Adams and Philadelphia against the New York Rangers and Washington facing the New York Islanders in the Patrick.

In other games Sunday, it was Winnipeg 3, Calgary 1; New York Islanders 9, Philadelphia 5; Quebec 6, Boston 4; Washington 6, New Jersey 5 in overtime; Buffalo 6, Hartford 0; Montreal 8, New York Rangers 2 and Vancouver 5, Los Angeles 2.

Edmonton won its second overall points title, which is worth a $200,000 bonus to the team. The Oilers, winners of the 1984 and 1985 Stanley Cups, had a 50-24-6 record for 106 points, six more than Philadelphia. The Oilers also scored the most goals in the league for the sixth straight year, 372.

Baseball salaries down

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Baseball salaries on Opening Day this year will average at least $6,500 less than they did in 1986, according to a published report.

Information obtained Sunday from the Major League Player Relations Committee and published Monday in USA Today also shows the major difference this spring is in the group of players with two, but not more than three years' service. Salaries for those players — a group that includes Boston Red Sox ace Roger Clemens — went from an average of $315,000 to $178,000, a drop of 44 percent.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose today against all major currencies except the British pound, which hit a four-year high in early European trading.

Against the dollar's higher trend, the British pound broke through the $1.62 barrier for the first time since January 1983. The pound was quoted at $1.6210 at midmorning, up from $1.6150 late Friday.

A trader at London's National Westminster Bank said sterling was lifted by signs of British economic recovery and weekend opinion polls showing Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party well ahead of the main opposition parties. The governing Conservatives are viewed as pro-business.

Finance officials from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Japan, Canada and Italy are expected to reiterate support for stabilizing exchange rates, traders said.

This might help stabilize the dollar-yen rate and help push the dollar up against the West German mark, traders said.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with rates in Europe late Friday:

- 1.8245 West German marks, up from 1.8140
- 1.5195 Swiss francs, up from 1.5130
- 6.0705 French francs, up from 6.0350
- 2.0593 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0465
- 1.2990 Italian lire, up from 1.2920
- 1.3072 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3070

The dollar fell marginally in Tokyo, closing at 146 Japanese yen, down from 146.05 yen Friday, despite intervention by the Bank of Japan in support of the U.S. currency. Dealers said the central bank bought $200 million to $300 million in its 10th consecutive day of intervention.

In later London trading Monday, the dollar edged back up to 146.15 yen.

Gold bullion edged above $420.50 as trading was described as thin. London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $420.55 a troy ounce, up from $418.30 late Friday.

Gold was bid in Zurich at $420.60, up from $418.50.

Hong Kong markets were closed for a public holiday.

Silver bullion continued its recent rise, trading at a bid of $6.46 an ounce in London, up from $6.30.

IBM flexes muscles at premiere

By JOHN MARKOFF
PAUL FREIBERGER
Hearst News Service

International Business Machines Corp. introduced four new faster personal computers, bringing the computer giant up to speed with a top-of-the-line 32-bit computer. But IBM surprised the industry by not moving as strongly as expected to break with the "clone market" that has been cutting into its sales.

The new line is called the IBM Personal System/2. The products include improved graphics features and a new graphic interface, which will allow users to work with a mouse in a similar manner to Apple Computer Inc.'s Macintosh models.

The computers include proprietary IBM-developed technology that in some ways make them incompatible with rivals.

Prices range from $1,695 for the cheapest model to $10,995 for the most powerful. However, prices normally are discounted from IBM's suggested list.

IBM also introduced a new desktop publishing system and a range of new information storage devices, including an optical storage system.

Also announced was a new advanced operating system jointly developed with Microsoft. It's called Operating System/2, but IBM said it won't be available for users until early 1988. The new operating system will offer sophisticated multitasking features to take advantage of the higher performance 80286 and 80386 microprocessor chips, which are being used in today's most advanced IBM and IBM-compatible desktops.

Larry Ford, a group marketing executive with IBM, explains several of the new features of the company's new Personal System/2 computer systems during the unveiling ceremony at the firm's New York headquarters.

Several industry experts said that the new line indicates that IBM has no plans to break up the market for clone computers but instead is attempting to consolidate its hold on its largest customers.

During the past two years, IBM has lost market share to foreign and domestic computer makers selling systems that better their standards. There had been some speculation that IBM's newest generation of personal computers would employ technology that would make it difficult to imitate.

Union seeks benefits from Safeway

DALLAS (AP) — Union officials representing Dallas-Fort Worth area Safeway Stores Inc. employees say they will ask the company for severance pay and extended health benefits following the shutdown of 141 stores.

In a Sunday meeting on the shutdown, officials told employees they will resort to boycotts if necessary in their efforts to persuade the stores' new owners to hire Safeway employees.

Safeway announced Friday that it will close its 141-store Dallas division on April 24. The company said the shutdown is part of a restructuring announced last November when it was acquired in a $4.3 billion leveraged buyout by its management and the New York investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.

The Oakland, Calif.-based grocery chain said it has received commitments from other grocery chains to buy more than half of the division's stores. Safeway said it expects to sell the remainder by the closing date.

The closure affects about 8,600 workers in North Texas, about 6,700 of them in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

At the Sunday meetings, employees voiced their concerns about the closure, said Harry Carter Sr., president of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union Local 368, which represents more than 5,500 clerks and checkers at Dallas-Fort Worth area stores.

Health insurance benefits for full-time employees will continue through June, but the union plans to ask the company to make additional contributions to keep the health plan operating for workers who are still unemployed after that time.

Union officials said they plan to negotiate severance pay based on seniority.

Companies that have said they will buy Safeway stores have indicated they will not automatically hire Safeway employees, but will take applications.

"I reviewed with the members what position we will be taking with the companies that buy the stores," Carter said. "We will demand that they keep the employees. We intend to do everything legally in our power to persuade them to hire these employees," he said.

Carter said the union plans to negotiate with the new owners and hopes to arrive at an agreement. "But if not, we will start boycotts and the whole ball of wax."

Wagner & Brown sweetens offer to Gencorp

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — An investment partnership has offered to sweeten its takeover bid for Gencorp Inc. by $10 per share to about $2.45 billion, three days after the company urged shareholders to reject the original proposal. Gencorp spokesman Steve Ellis said the company would have no comment on the latest offer by a partnership of AFG Industries Inc. of Irvine, Calif., and Wagner & Brown of Midland.

Bond market rally ignites Dow to record high

NEW YORK (AP) — A rally on government bond markets helped ignite a stock market rally that pushed stock prices higher and set another record for the widely watched Dow Jones industrial average. The DJIA had the biggest one-day gain in its history Friday, 69.89 points, to reach a new closing high, 2,390.34.

Fed may tighten credit policy to curb inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Policy-makers at the Federal Reserve left monetary policy unchanged at a meeting in early February, but indicated they were ready to tighten credit conditions if forced to by economic conditions. Minutes of the meeting released Friday stated members of the policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, expressed concerns about inflation and the declining value of the dollar.

While voting to hold monetary policy stable, the officials signaled a willingness to restrain monetary growth if needed to control inflation.

Auto sales up in March, but 1987 still slow

DETROIT (AP) — The U.S. auto industry's car and truck sales rose 8.7 percent in March over a year ago, but analysts say 1987 sales remain slow and will force some makers into further production cutbacks. Industry leader General Motors Corp. had a 4.7 percent sales drop in March, compared with a 17.8 percent rise by Ford Motor Co. and a 6.3 percent gain by Chrysler Corp.

K-Mart selling its five-and-dimes to McCrory

DETROIT (AP) — K mart Corp., declaring the five-and-dimes of its origins no longer had a place in its business plans, plans to sell its domestic Kresge and Jupiter stores to McCrory Corp., owner of TG&Y and J.J. Newberry. Neither company would specify a price saying the final amount will depend upon the size of the inventory in the 76 stores when the deal is closed in June.

The first Kresge stores was opened in downtown Detroit by Sebastian Springle Kresge in 1899, under the slogan "Nothing Over Ten Cents."

Mortgage rates reach nine-year low in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — New home mortgage rates dropped to their lowest level in nine years during March, with an average interest rate for all mortgages falling to 9.14 percent, according to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The rate was the lowest since December 1977, and compares with 9.23 percent in February.

Rates for fixed-rate mortgages declined to 9.46 percent from 9.51 percent. The rate for the most popular type of adjustable rate mortgages, with caps on rate increases, fell from 8.51 to 8.43 percent.

Three charged with 'trading with the enemy'

MIAMI (AP) — Three men have been indicted for allegedly selling more than $1 million in sophisticated computer equipment to a company for shipment to Cuba, violating the U.S. Trading With The Enemy Act. "This should be the first of many cases like this down here," said Pat O'Brien, U.S. Customs Service special agent in Miami.

The 13-count indictment charges sales of computers to Siboney International in Panama for shipment to Cuba.

IBM warns against 'cloning' its new computer

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. has quietly made it known it will throw its full legal force against any company that tries to make illegal copies of its new personal computers.

IBM's warning reflects a growing assertiveness by high-tech U.S. companies angry at the theft of their multimillion-dollar research by "clone" makers, several leading patent lawyers said Friday.

Midland furrier buys California designer

Beverly Drive in Beverly Hills, Calif. Alan Shae is managing partner and designer at Dicker & Dicker, a position he has held for eighteen years.

The capabilities of Dicker & Dicker will allow Swartz to expand control of quality and design exclusiveness in its Texas stores, as well as expanding the scope of the business to include national wholesale operations. Dicker & Dicker is considered within the fur trade to be among the top five design firms in the world, says Swartz president Andrew Swartz.

Dicker & Dicker financial and accounting operations will be consolidated into Swartz' Midland offices, where existing staff members will handle the increased work load, according to a company spokesman. Purchasers: Economic growth rate improves

By CALVIN SIMS

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — The economy continued to expand in March, but at a much faster pace, the National Association of Purchasing Managers said in its monthly report to be released today.

According to the trade group's latest survey of 250 purchasing managers at major industrial companies, new orders increased sharply in March, production rose modestly and employment expanded for the first time since 1984.

The group's economic index rose to 53.9 percent, from 51.9 percent in February. Rumors that circulated in credit markets on Friday indicated that such a rise had taken place, but there was no effect on the market. Any reading above 50 percent means the economy is growing, while any figure below it indicates that the economy is contracting.

"The economy ended the first quarter with a healthy, if not substantial, improvement," said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's business survey committee and director of materials management at Pitney Bowes Inc.

Forty-one percent of the purchasing managers reported an increase in new orders, while only 9 percent indicated declines. In February, 33 percent of the managers reported more new orders, while 16 percent saw declines. Bretz said that the sharp rise in the growth of new orders assured a good beginning for the second quarter.

The association's report said that 34 percent of the managers showed higher production in March, compared with 31 percent in February. However, 11 percent reported lower production, up from 9 percent in February.

An overall increase in employment was reported for the first time since August 1984, according to the purchasers survey. Increases in employment were reported by 16 percent of the survey's respondents, the highest number since March 1985, compared with 12 percent in the previous month. And 14 percent said employment declined in March, compared with 20 percent in February.

Prices for industrial supplies rose for the seventh consecutive month, the association said, with 32 percent of the managers reporting higher prices in March and only 6 percent reporting lower prices.

Speed of vendor deliveries slowed in March, with 5 percent of the managers reporting faster deliveries, compared with 7 percent in February. Thirteen percent said that deliveries were slower, compared with 9 percent in the previous month.

Mall merchants get helping hand

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

With competition becoming even more fierce in the retail market, customer service is the buzzword for retailers in the 1980s, says Pam Muston, a retail service specialist with Melvin Simon & Associates, developers of the Midland Park Mall.

According to Muston, Melvin Simon is attempting to position the mall as having a strong customer service base. The developer — the largest mall developer in the country — has developed several training programs for its malls around the country.

Muston has spent the last several months traveling the country, presenting "Selling," a program from Melvin Simon that is designed to reinforce training by the individual retailers. She presented the program to Midland Park Mall store managers and sales associates last week.

One reason customer service is gaining in importance, according to Muston, is the nationwide oversaturation in the retail marketplace, and now European retailers are attempting to enter the U.S. market. After all, she said, "There are only so many customers to sell to, and customer service can add that bit of an edge for your store."

The reason the retailing industry has been revamping itself during this decade is due, in part, to the baby boom generation. What Muston sees as the primary reason, though, is the rise of the working woman, who still demands convenience, the ability to shop and put together a look. As a result, she said, the all day shopping trip is no longer as feasible as it was: "On Saturday, the working woman still has to go to the cleaners and buy the groceries for the week."

Another factor is the explosion in product choices, as in electronics and computers, which makes product knowledge very important. "When you have 50 televisions or computers to pick from, you need personal attention from someone who can help you decide what is best for you," Muston commented.

"Plus, this is the age of computerization," she added. "We're dealing more and more with machinery, such as automated bank tellers. We're looking for a friendly smile. We want the convenience of self-service, but we also want someone to help us when we need it."

Muston noted that sales associates often don't realize the power they have. "They are the good will ambassadors, the image maker for the customer. To the customer, Margo's is that sales person who greets them at the front of the store."

The seminar is part of what Muston sees as the changing role of the shopping center developer, which she said is changing from that of a rent collector to an active partner, aiding the retailers by presenting seminars, and also becoming active in the community. "It's exciting for me being with this company, because my background is in retailing, and I'm excited to see the developer get involved with the retailers. After all, if the retailers are successful, then we're successful."

Melvin Simon & Associates developed the "Selling" seminar in 1983, geared to educating managers and sales associates in the basics of selling.

The seminar covers the basics, such as the fact that the customer is the number one priority. Also, the six basic selling skills will be gone over. The six, according to the program, are:

- Approaching the customer.
- Discovering the customer's wants and needs.
- Presenting merchandise.
- Overcoming customers' objections.
- Closing the sale, and
- Suggestion selling.

To make sure the lessons are sticking, the mall is also recruiting an army of secret shoppers to prowls store malls and grade clerks on the finer points of customer service.

Under program, which is scheduled to begin in May, the mall will recruit shoppers and train them to evaluate the mall stores.

Susan Jacinto, marketing director for the mall, said that after they complete their training, the shoppers will evaluate each store on the six basic selling skills and rank each store on a scale of one to five. She said the shoppers will visit each store at different times of the day, and the evaluation process will take approximately a week.

Also, beginning in April, a new video presentation will be made, that will hopefully be the start of a reference library available to mall officials and the individual stores. As Muston noted, "Due to scheduling problems, not all stores can come to a seminar such as I'm giving. These visual presentations, the store can have a 20 minute session on Saturday morning. And it will help reinforce all year-long the points made in my seminar."

Import company, country distinctions blur

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen ads emphasize the West German engineering of the automaker's Golf, GTI and Jetta cars without adding that they are built in Pennsylvania.

Honda commercials don't mention that the Honda Accord and some Civic models are built in Ohio.

And in one of Chevrolet's TV spots, the camera zooms in on a Chevrolet Spectrum to the automaker's "Heartbeat of America" theme song. There's no mention that the Spectrum is made by Isuzu Motors Co. in Japan and imported by General Motors Corp.

It's becoming harder for consumers to tell whose car they really are buying — a foreign-brand car built in the United States, a U.S.-brand car built overseas, or a car built by one foreign automaker and sold by another.

"It's going to become so pervasive that it's going to be impossible to keep track from a consumer's perspective," said John Hammond, a partner and analyst with J.D. Power & Associates in Westlake Village, Calif.

While trade disputes publicly emphasize automakers' different nationalities and interests, companies are creating a global network that recognizes few political boundaries. Joint ventures also have blurred distinctions between companies.

"It's confusing for buyers. In many cases the buyers don't know or care where their car was made," said

Thomas O'Grady, industry analyst with Integrated Automotive Resources Inc. in Wayne, Pa.

Chrysler Corp. ads play up Japanese quality and point out that Dodge and Plymouth Colt subcompacts, sporty Chrysler Conquest and several of the automaker's small trucks are made by Japan's Mitsubishi Motors Corp. for Chrysler.

Chrysler also owns part of Italy's Maserati luxury sports car maker and one-quarter of Mitsubishi, which owns part of Korea's Hyundai, the widely successful maker of the Hyundai Excel and maker of Mitsubishi's coming Precis subcompact.

GM owns part of Isuzu, Suzuki and South Korea's Daewoo Motor Co., which is making GM's new Pontiac Lemans subcompact. GM also owns all of Britain's Group Lotus, a luxury sports car and engineering company, and Vauxhall Motors Ltd., as well as Australia's Holden's Ltd. and Germany's Adam Opel AG.

Ford Motor Co. owns part of Kia Motors Corp. of South Korea, which makes Ford's coming Festiva minicar, and a fourth of Mazda Motor Corp., which designed Ford's Mexican-built Mercury Tracer compact.

Mazda also is building an assembly plant in Flat Rock, Mich., and Ford will sell at least half of the cars produced there under Ford nameplates.

For example, GM's Chevrolet Nova was designed and engineered by Toyota and is made in Fremont, Calif., at a joint GM-Toyota plant that also produces Toyota's FX16 car. Chrysler and Mitsubishi are building a plant in Illinois.

Indeed, a growing number of foreign automakers, including Subaru-maker Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd. and Toyota, are building or planning U.S. factories to escape import quotas set by the Japanese government.

Fortunately for the car buyer, the importance of which country a car is made in has diminished significantly in the last seven years.

Japanese cars -- made in the U.S.A.

Smaller Japanese car manufacturers — Mazda, Subaru, Isuzu, Mitsubishi and Suzuki — are planning to establish assembly plants in the U.S. by 1988. This follows the lead of the "big three" Japanese manufacturers — Toyota, Nissan and Honda — whose U.S. plants allow them to avoid import quotas and increase their American sales. Mazda and Mitsubishi each plan to build 120,000 cars per year in the U.S. by 1991.

GM will use Fiero lessons

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — If advance dealer orders are any indication, Chevrolet's new Corsica and Beretta will be hot sellers. But even if those initial orders do translate into consumer purchases, the General Motors Corp. knows only too well that a fast start does not guarantee big sales over the long haul.

It learned that lesson from the Pontiac Fiero — the two-seat sports car whose development had been hailed as a sign that entrepreneurship could flourish even at bureaucratic GM.

With Pontiac's sales in a slump in the early 1980's, the division's managers saw the car, with its skin of easily replaceable plastic panels and rear-mounted engine, as a badly needed way to project a youthful, performance-oriented image.

But GM's corporate forecasters were pessimistic that a car with only two seats would sell more than 30,000 a year — too low a level to meet profit targets. Pontiac officials, then led by William E. Hoglund, a vice president, insisted that sales would be at least twice that many. After an extended period of infighting, they won and the car was introduced in late 1983.

At first Hoglund and company seemed vindicated. Sales in 1984, the first full year the car was on the market, totaled $3,465, more than three times the corporate estimate. The next year, Pontiac sold 90,303 Fieros.

The unfavorable comparisons evidently began to cost Pontiac business. Last year Fiero's sales slipped to 68,340. In the first two months of 1987, sales totaled only 6,719, or just over 40,000 on an annualized basis.

GM officials now say that the Fiero's sales were only expected to be in the 60,000-to-70,000 range and are merely dropping back to a "normal" pace.

Parts makers: Japanese given unfair advantages

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. auto parts manufacturers and members of Congress are complaining that states are giving Japanese competitors an unfair edge over American suppliers by luring the foreign firms here with special incentives.

"It is perplexing to see U.S. states falling over themselves in Tokyo ... offering incentives that have the effect of giving foreign-owned companies an unfair advantage to produce over American-owned companies," Rep. Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio, told a Senate subcommittee last week.

John Riess, chairman of the Motor and Equipment Manufacturers Association, said the federal government has a responsibility "to keep the states from possibly destroying themselves as they continue this wild bidding."

Riess, group vice president of Gates Rubber Co. in Denver, Co., which makes belts and hoses, cited the example of Japan's Mitsubishi Belting Ltd., which announced plans to build a plant in Illinois after receiving a $2 million loan from the "Build Illinois" fund, a promise of $500,000 in state and federal aid for employee training and other local incentives that could be worth $900,000.

Other witnesses told the Senate Labor and Human Resources subcommittee on employment and productivity that U.S. auto parts makers already are being shut out of the market in Japan by carmakers there who prefer to deal exclusively with their traditional suppliers.

Bruce Bowden, vice president of marketing for Stant Inc. of Connersville, Ind., which makes fuel and radiator caps, said his company hasn't focused on selling parts to Japan because "from a salesman's perspective, it is nonproductive to attempt to sell a product where no intent to buy exists."

Bowden said his firm also has run into a series of roadblocks in trying even to bid on supply contracts for Japanese cars being assembled in the United States.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who convened the hearing, said America has a $3 billion deficit in the trade of auto parts with Japan. Noting that progress has been slow in bilateral talks to open Japanese markets, he served warning that "there has to be action, or the Congress — in a way that may not be wise, that may not be prudent — is going to take some very solid steps."

The United States and Japan are engaged in ongoing talks on how to improve U.S. access to the Japanese parts market, but U.S. negotiator Bruce Smart said the problem is difficult because the main barrier to American goods is the purchasing habits of Japanese firms, not governmental barriers.

Smart, undersecretary of Commerce for international trade, said the bonds between Japanese carmakers and their suppliers are hard to sever because they operate like "a family of tightly knit companies."

Smart said his firm also has run into a series of roadblocks in trying even to bid on supply contracts for Japanese cars being assembled in the United States.

Dallas media firm seeks to reincorporate

DALLAS (AP) — A.H. Belo Corp., parent of the Dallas Morning News, is asking shareholders to approve the reincorporation of the company in Delaware to take advantage of that state's flexible corporate laws, company officials said.

Belo mailed proxy statements to shareholders Tuesday, a spokesman said. Shareholders will be asked to vote by May 6, when Belo holds its annual meeting.

A statement by the Dallas-based media company said Delaware laws were "more conducive to the operational needs and independence of corporations."

Belo also wanted to take advantage of a 1986 Delaware law allowing the company to limit the liability of its directors under certain circumstances.

"The extensive and well-defined corporate law would lend greater predictability and guidance in managing and structuring Belo's internal affairs and its relationships and contacts with others."

The reincorporation proposal must be approved by holders of two-thirds of Belo's 10.8 million common shares outstanding, the company said in a statement.

Pilots offer to buy United Airlines

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines pilots have offered to buy the carrier for $4.5 billion, a spokesman for the pilots said today.

The bid was outlined in a letter Sunday to UAL Inc. Chairman Richard J. Ferris, said pilots' spokesman James Damron. Service, safety and profitability would improve if UAL agreed to sell, he said.

The company is studying the proposal, which it views as "an invitation to negotiate," said airline spokesman Matt Goring.

The pilots are troubled by the company's recent decision to diversify and move away its "core" business of operating an airline, Damron said. UAL has acquired Hertz Rent-A-Car, Westin Hotels and Hilton International and is changing its name to Allegis and its image to that of a total travel-service company.

"In today's highly-competitive industry environment, a first-class airline cannot afford the drain of financial capital and corporate commitment that results from excessive diversification," said the letter from F.C. Dubinsky, chairman of the group representing United's 6,000 pilots.

107th annual Statistical Abstract of U.S. published

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trivia buffs and those simply curious about the details of life in America can read to their heart's content — or at least for 900 pages — in the new, updated version of the Statistical Abstract of the United States.

The 107th annual collection of the obvious and esoteric provides such glimpses of America as the fact that there were 96 breweries in the country as of 1984, down from 156 in 1970, even though per capita consumption of beer during that time increased from 28.4 gallons to 31.5 gallons.

The book provides material for researchers, dilettantes, pedants, journalists and numerous others searching for detailed data.

Palestinians portrayed bad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Palestinians have a poor image in the United States because many Americans associate them with terrorism, former Attorney General Ramsey Clark says.

"We are so easily deceived by these fears," Clark told about 400 people gathered for a three-day convention of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee. "It is difficult to protect the lives and rights of Palestinians in a climate of fear," he said Saturday.

Clark said Palestinians face more discrimination than any other ethnic group in the United States.

Man charged in explosion

CLEVELAND (AP) — An Ohio man was ordered held on $50,000 bond to face charges that he mailed a bomb, causing an explosion six weeks ago inside a Dallas post office.

Postal inspectors said there was damage but no injuries in the Feb. 21 blast.

U.S. Magistrate David S. Perelman on Friday set the bond and ordered Dennis Fraley sent to Dallas to face a three-count indictment.
