Tehran radio says RJO has Waite

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Tehran Radio said today Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite was kidnapped in Lebanon by the Revolutionary Justice Organization.

The state-run radio, monitored in Nicosia, said the group seized Waite claiming he was a U.S. spy.

"It is necessary to note that Terry Waite, accused of espionage, was captured by an armed Lebanese group known as Revolutionary Justice," the radio said without elaboration.

There was no independent confirmation of the report, one of a series concerning Waite since he disappeared Jan. 20 while on a mission to free foreign hostages in Lebanon. No group has claimed to hold Waite.

Revolutionary Justice, which claims to hold two Americans and a Frenchman in Lebanon, is believed made up of pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists. It has threatened to kill its French hostage.

Revolutionary Justice last month accused Waite of espionage and charged he had been used to pinpoint suspected terrorist hideouts for an American military attack on Lebanon. The group did not say it was holding Waite.

It was not clear whether the Tehran Radio report was merely interpreting that statement to indicate Revolutionary Justice holds Waite or if the Iranians were disclosing new information. There also has been a series of unconfirmed reports that Waite is being held in Iran's embassy in Beirut. Iran has denied the reports.

Waite was believed headed for a meeting with members of another Shiite faction, Islamic Jihad, when he disappeared. He had been negotiating with Islamic Jihad to free two Americans, Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

Druse militia leader Walid Jumblatt has claimed Waite, 47, was held by the Iranian-backed Shiite Hezbollah, or Party of God, in Lebanon.

Hezbollah has said it holds no foreign hostages. But Western and Lebanese intelligence sources have identified the fundamentalist faction as the parent group for various Shiite kidnap groups in Lebanon, including Islamic Jihad and Revolutionary Justice.

The Tehran Radio report was primarily about three Iranians who have been missing in Lebanon for five years.

'Under' budget is rule

County officials held the line on spending in 1986 to finish the year 17 percent under budget, according to the annual report submitted to county commissioners Monday.

County Auditor Bernhard Bartels reported the county spent some $9,596,726 of the just over $11,535,947 budgeted for all county operations. This equaled 83 percent of funds budgeted for fiscal 1986, which ended Dec. 31.

The county also realized some 97 percent of budgeted revenue for the period, collecting some $10,295,509 in taxes, fees, services and interest payments. Commissioners had included just over $10,605,265 in the 1986 budget.

With an emphasis on clearing county delinquent ad valorem accounts, the county realized some $3,887,262 in taxes for the period — up from the $3,859,324 estimated.

Interest earned and revenue sharing funds also exceeded budget expectations. The county earned almost $483,113 — an increase of some $132,113 over the 1986 estimate. Revenue sharing funds from the federal government totaled $229,454 — up from the $180,000 estimated.

Only two of the county's 12 funds exceeded 100 percent of their expense budgets. The Scurry County Group Medical fund spent some $229,930 for the year, exceeding the $188,000 budgeted for it.

Hermleigh Water Works also exceeded budget by some $3,483 — up from $25,248 budgeted.

The county held general fund expenditures to 87 percent of the estimate, spending some $3,457,449 of the $3,955,689 budgeted.

The county general fund ended the fiscal year with some $8,713,787 in assets and liabilities. The road and bridge fund was listed at $2,511,081. The hospital operating fund closed with almost $11,867,643 with the depreciation fund listed at some $1,206,120.

In other action, commissioners released some $500,000 in securities from the West Texas State Bank.

In addition, court members accepted the high bid of $51 from Bobby Goodwin for a used IBM Selectric typewriter from the county tax assessor's office. A bid from Ann Walton for just over $50 was also submitted.

One-act cast faces 1st round Tuesday

The first round of competition for Snyder's one-act play is Tuesday as the District 2-4A contest is held in Big Spring.

The SHS entry of "Hamlet" will be the second play performed during a full day of productions. Nine one-acts are expected to be entered.

The contest will begin at Big Spring High School at 10:30 a.m. Snyder's entry will go on stage at approximately 11:20 a.m.

Under UIL rules, no play may run longer than 40 minutes. A 10 minute period is set aside to allow setups for the next play.

The Big Spring competition will include a noon break from 1 until 1:30 p.m. and a supper break from 5 until 6 p.m.

Two schools are scheduled to perform following the 6 p.m. break. The public is invited to view the contest but individuals will only be admitted between plays.

The cast and crew for "Hamlet" includes 10 seniors, five juniors, four sophomores and six freshmen.

Following Tuesday's competition, the top two plays will advance to the area contest scheduled in Snyder. It will be in Worsham Auditorium April 4--a Saturday.

It will be followed by the regional contest at Brownwood's Howard Payne University on April 25; and the state competition in Austin May 8-9.

Snyder High School one-acts have qualified for the state meet 18 times. Seventeen of these appearances have been under the direction of Worsham.

6th graders set concert for parents

Parents of sixth grade students in the Snyder schools are invited to a performance of the Snyder Junior High School choir at 1:30 p.m. Friday in Worsham Auditorium at Snyder High School.

Sixth grade students from all schools in the district will be be performing. In addition, junior high choir director Barbara Perkins will explain the requirements of the junior high choir program for the students and their parents following the performance.

The students will be performing the choral "All American" for the afternoon event.

Pastor to address sex ed.

A local pastor has requested and been placed on the school board agenda Monday to discuss the planned-for sex education curriculum in the Snyder school system.

To address school trustees is Ken Branam, pastor of First Baptist Church here and a recently announced school board candidate on the April 4 ballot.

Branam is also a member of the district's advisory committee which studied the implementation of the sex education curriculum at the fifth grade, seventh grade and high school level.

In a letter mailed to the district, he notes his purpose in appearing before the board is to address trustees "concerning the Sex Education materials."

The district plans to offer an approximate two-week section of sex education material--called the curriculum for "self-responsibility"--as part of health class studies at the three grade levels.

This portion of the study program is to be voluntary. Last week, the district sent home forms to affected parents asking if they wished their child to receive the sex ed.-related instruction.

For parents opting against it, their children will be placed in a study hall-type session for the two-week period.

Branam's appearance is scheduled at the beginning of the board agenda as part of a monthly period set aside for comments from school district patrons.

The meeting is to begin at 7 p.m. at the school administration building.

The session is the board's March meeting and has been postponed from the normal meeting time since this date was during spring break.

Other agenda items facing the board include the annual contract renewals for such administrative-level positions as assistant and vice principals at the junior high and high school, transportation director and maintenance director for the district.

The board will also officially call for the April 4 ballot. This will include the appointment of election judges, absentee clerks

Weekend arrival of spring here is all too brief

From Local, Wire Reports

Spring officially arrived in Snyder Saturday and, by Sunday, 79 degree temperatures were reported. But, the beautiful weather was short-lived as high winds and scattered, light rain were reported Sunday around 10 p.m.

Rain amounts did not exceed .10 of-an-inch locally, but the high winds and chilly weather continued here Monday morning.

For the West Texas area, the low temperatures were to range from the upper 20s Monday night in the Panhandle to in the upper 30s closer to Snyder.

Temperatures in the upper 60s were expected by Tuesday afternoon for this area.

Sunday, a tornado reportedly touched down in Motley County northeast of Lubbock just before 10 p.m., but sheriff's officials there said no damage or injury had resulted.

Hail up to one inch in diameter pelted the Permian Basin near Midland and winds gusted to 40-50 mph as the storm roared through that area.

Another line of thunderstorms that passed through the Abilene area late Sunday was reported entering the western portion of Tarrant County early Monday.

The tornado watch for the Abilene area ended after the storms moved eastward out of the area, the National Weather Service said.

Further north Sunday night, tornadoes spawned by the strong storm system ripped down power lines and whipped up dust across the Panhandle and North Central Texas. No one was injured and property damage was not believed to be serious, however.

Much of Central Texas remained under a tornado watch until 7 a.m. Monday, but storm activity appeared to be dropping off. Forecasters indicated more storm activity was possible.

"We've had several funnels here in the county, and we've lost several power lines," Lipscomb County Sheriff's dispatcher Mark Peil said Sunday night. "Most of the activity was up toward Follett," a town on the Oklahoma border.

Heavy rains and hail accompanied the funnels that swept northeastward toward Oklahoma, but other than some flattened trees and fences, no other damage was reported, he said.

In South Central Texas, Bracketville had wind gusts of 50-60 mph as a series of strong thunderstorms passed through the area late Sunday.

Classifying prisoners used to be easy

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Scotty Kyle's job used to be a lot easier, but that was in the old days, when the Texas prison system had 15 or 20 percent of its beds vacant.

Now, with prisons near capacity, the process of matching inmates with prisons and cell block wings based on their crimes and background has turned into an ordeal.

Kyle heads a four-man committee that meets in a cramped second-floor meeting room of the Texas Department of Corrections Diagnostic Unit. The committee that receives prisoners from the county jails opens its doors two days a week now and gets as many prisoners in that amount of time as it used to get in a five-day week.

The nation's third-largest prison system has been trapped in a cycle of two days open and five days closed because the population within the 26-unit system has exceeded a state-mandated 95 percent capacity.

Prison officials don't know how many inmates to expect from the state's county jails, nor do they know how many inmates are going to be released on a given day by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles until the day before the release.

Add to that some internal confusion when space is especially tight, and three sets of administrators might be filling one open bed with three inmates.

"It borders on chaos," said Carl Reynolds, general counsel for the Senate Criminal Justice Committee. "It's a logistical nightmare."

It's a nightmare Kyle lives.

"I come in at 7 a.m. with a pot of coffee and get going," he said. "Nobody leaves this room unless they have to go to the bathroom. Nobody leaves to eat. I don't take phone calls. We stay until we finish."

He sits at a long conference table. In a briefcase at his side are files on inmates who will be classified that day. A computer terminal on the other side shows where the vacancies are.

In the old days, he used to work on a stack of files, carry them down to the computer room to be entered into the system. He can't do that anymore.

"If I wait that long, the count will have already changed," he said, meaning he would have to redo the classification.

A 5 percent buffer that is supposed to give the prison system flexibility in times of crowding isn't what it seems. Because of special designations, some cells are set aside and can't be used for the general population, Kyle said.

The number of beds in the system is 42,241, but 808 beds are in the infirmary and solitary sections and are automatically excluded. That leaves a capacity of 41,433, but even that number changes daily because of court-ordered single-cell housing.

With an inmate count of 38,773 earlier this month, the system was 94.75 percent capacity. It had 1,658 free beds. But after the hundreds reserved for the infirmary, death row, women and the mentally ill, the actual number of beds that could be used for the general population was 264.

"When you talk about a system as large as Texas, that's not a lot of flexibility," said Debbie Roberts, manager for the prison's social services.

If there is no room, sometimes inmates are held over at Diagnostic or the nearby Goree Unit — also used for intake of inmates — until room is found.

Some relief, however, is in sight. A new 2,500-inmate prison is scheduled to open in September.

Fall of cotton brings hard times to Roscoe and area

ROSCOE, Texas (AP) — By all rights, Roscoe should be the crossroads of West Texas. After all, the town sits at the intersections of Interstate 20 and U.S. 84, both major highways.

But most travelers ignore the place.

There's little oil in the area, and the cotton field to the right of the Roscoe exit, plowed over and leveled after a devastating crop failure last year, advertises that there's little reason to visit.

Like many old farming towns on the West Texas plains, Roscoe has a main street lined with empty storefronts and abandoned buildings. The last drugstore closed two years ago.

Rural sociologists consider the next few years critical for the future of many small towns such as Roscoe and businesses depending on agriculture as they search for ways to deal with the continuing farm decline.

The researchers, noting the direct relationship between the farm economy and the vitality of small-town business districts, say an extended crisis of three or four years would greatly diminish chances for their survival.

Roscoe's economy depends on cotton, but alternating drought and flood conditions ruined much of the crop in four of the past six years. A state-of-the-art cotton gin built in 1981 by a Roscoe farmers' cooperative now belongs to a bank after the co-op defaulted on its construction loan.

This year, dampness has delayed the annual harvest. Heavy machinery can't operate in the fields. The fibers, dirtied and devalued by the delay, cling to spindly cotton plants like wet tissue paper.

Much of Roscoe's population, which has remained fairly steady at about 1,600 since 1960, works in Sweetwater, making Roscoe a rural bedroom community of sorts for the larger town. Other residents are farmers or farm workers, church or school employees and merchants.

City leaders appear to accept the town's decline. There is no Chamber of Commerce. A recent effort to start a Jaycees chapter fizzled because of lack of interest. One reason may be a lack of new, young leaders. Most of the local Lions Club members are 50 or older.

Mayor Ron Stovall, the vice president of Roscoe State Bank who at 40 is one of the community's younger leaders, said no organized effort is under way by the city to recruit business and industry. He and Roscoe State Bank president Clyde Jay say there's little reason.

Suit could force residents to give up country vistas

SUNNYVALE, Texas (AP) — A legal battle is brewing that could turn the Shelbys' country dream home into an urbanized nightmare.

Bill and Judy Shelby's place, just 20 minutes east of downtown Dallas, has a sprawling lawn and a few ducks in a pond, as well as room for horses and a swimming pool. From the living room of the three-bedroom brick home, you see nothing but miles of ranchland, dotted by a few cattle and farmhouses.

"This is something we dreamed of," said Mrs. Shelby, 36, who moved her family here three years ago from Garland, a suburb closer to Dallas. "I just figured this was the way it was always going to be."

But for nearly two years, a Sunnyvale developer has been drafting plans for a high-density neighborhood of at least 3,600 housing units on a 1,196-acre site in the middle of the community. Today, there are fewer than 700 homes in the town.

The development — which would include townhouses, cottage homes, larger homes and a retail center — would surround the Shelbys' 6-acre plot on three sides.

The Town Council in January turned down the request for the planned development, which would have increased the population at least five fold in 20 years, according to the developer's estimates.

In response, the developer, Sunnyvale Properties Ltd., filed a $15 million lawsuit against the town, three council members and one former council member who opposed the project.

The developers claim the town is purposefully excluding minorities and lower-income people who might live in the proposed neighborhood. In addition, they charged that Sunnyvale's strict zoning policy severely limits the potential value of their land.

Early inmate release sparks disagreement

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two of the state's top officials are at odds over how to interpret the recently passed law designed to ease crowding in Texas prisons, and one side says the disagreement could cost the state money.

Gov. Bill Clements' reluctance to allow early prison releases outlined by the law could bring additional court fines time at a time when officials of the crowded system are in federal court attempting to show progress in carrying out reforms, Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

"If the prison population exceeds 95 percent, we are subject to an additional contempt citation," Mattox said. "When we are in excess of 95 percent, it makes it more difficult to show that we are in good faith and attempting to take the necessary steps to come into compliance."

At issue is the Prison Management Act that gives the governor the authority to reduce prison sentences for about 11,000 nonviolent convicts during times of crowding within the Texas Department of Corrections.

The act was envisioned as a safety valve to allow for the release of hundreds of inmates. It stemmed from U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's findings that the state wasn't doing enough to control its prison population.

Justice last week postponed fining the state $800,500 a day for not curbing crowded conditions and improving inmate living conditions.

Clements last week refused, over Mattox's protests, to call for the third early release of inmates when the prison population went over a state-mandated 95 percent.

The prison system, the nation's third largest behind California and New York, has been locked in a weekly cycle of being open two days and closed five. Prison doors have been closed to new inmates eight times this year because the population has exceeded 95 percent capacity.

Although Clements supported the new law when it passed in the Legislature last month, he now seems hesitant to call for massive early releases, said Carl Reynolds, general counsel for the Senate Criminal Justice Committee.

Mattox said he is unsure of convincing the courts the state is making big strides to improve prison conditions when it can't resolve the crowding problems.

Simple Rest Room Labels Offer Patrons Best Relief

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is regarding the letter in your column from "Proud Texan," who had asked for suggestions on how to label men's and women's washrooms in his new country-western club.

The hotel school in San Francisco (City College) makes a very strong point of stating that public rest rooms should be labeled "Men" and "Women." Their second choice is simply "Ladies" and "Gentlemen," but not recommended.

Never, never should they be "Cows" and "Bulls," "Senores" and "Senoritas," "Boys" and "Girls," "His" and "Hers," "Guys" and "Dolls," and on and on. I've been told that there are no hotel schools in Texas, so the "Heifers" and "Bulls" have to go to Stillwater, Okla., to learn these things.

SOONER IN ARIZONA

DEAR SOONER: The letter concerning what to put on rest room doors flushed out several interesting letters. For example:

DEAR ABBY: As an alternative for "Men" and "Women" on the doors of one club's rest rooms, it was handled this way in an Annapolis, Md., restaurant: "Buoys" and "Gulls."

DENNIS GORDON, LAGUNA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the column stating that females were offended to see "Cows" on the ladies' room door, but after it was changed to "Heifers," not one lady complained.

The Big Spur in Springdale, Utah, solved that problem with signs that say "Does" and "Bulls."

LYNN BORNHOLDT

DEAR ABBY: "Proud Texan's" letter reminded me of an embarrassing incident I experienced when I was in college a long time ago. My date took me to a brand-new country-western nightclub where the rest rooms were labeled "Fillies" and "Stallions."

Being a city girl, I knew nothing about horses, so I gambled, figuring I had a 50 percent chance of being right. Well, as luck would have it, I walked in on several "stallions." I don't know who was more embarrassed — the stallions, me, or my date who saw me going into the wrong bathroom!

Since then, I've seen some cutesy names for country-western rest rooms. For example: "Studs" and "Belles" and "Dudes" and "Dames," but I still prefer just plain "Men" and "Women."

CITY GIRL IN ALABAMA

DEAR ABBY: We got a big kick out of reading about the problem the country-western club in Texas had when considering what to put on the rest room doors. It reminded me of the same problem here in Baltimore several years ago.

The manager of a local club was confronted by an irate female who didn't know which rest room to use because all they had on each door was a picture of a dog!

The manager said, "For goodness sakes, lady, don't you know one of them is a pointer and the other is a setter?"

One injured during roundup

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — It was a bad weekend for rattlesnakes in the Big Country, where snake-handlers at two rattlesnake roundups bagged 6,774 pounds of the critters.

Held a week after Sweetwater's famous rattlesnake roundup, the two events ending Sunday saw various displays in snake-handling, awards for the most snakes bagged and special honors handed out for snakes of incredible length.

Brownwood's 23rd annual event was marred when Greg R. Anderson, 29, of Irving was hospitalized in critical condition with a rattlesnake bite. He was bitten while alone hunting snakes along the Brown-Comanche county line.

One of the snake-handlers at the first-ever Breckenridge roundup was also bitten, but it was described as a "dry bite" with no venom released.

Breckenridge's roundup was deemed a success by roundup chairman Richard Byers, who said the event would become annual. Roughly 2,500 snakes — or 3,774 pounds — were collected.

First-place winners for the most snakes collected were Richard and Kile Oliver, who bagged 627 pounds of snakes. Charles Wall took second-place honors in the division with 200 pounds, while Arthur and Chester Guinn collected 196 pounds to win third place.

The longest snake at the Breckenridge show was a 68-inch belly-crawler captured by Charles Jennings. Wall had the second-longest reptile, a 66-incher.

All winners were Stephens County residents.

Bakker says full story will come out

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL's new chief evangelist urged tearful followers to dig deeper for donations in his first sermon since a sex scandal forced Jim Bakker to resign as spiritual leader of the 500,000-member TV ministry.

"Let the world know this ministry is going to stay strong," the Rev. Richard Dortch told the congregation at PTL's home church at its sprawling complex Sunday as a PTL television crew taped the two-hour service.

Bakker last week handed over control of the traditionally Pentecostal PTL ministry to the Rev. Jerry Falwell, fundamentalist Baptist founder of the Moral Majority, after admitting being blackmailed over a sexual encounter seven years ago.

Two weeks earlier, Bakker, who spent 13 years building PTL into a $172 million empire, disclosed that his wife, Tammy Faye, was being treated for drug dependency at a clinic near their home in Palm Springs, Calif. Falwell said she was at the Betty Ford Center.

Speedy approval of AIDS drug sought

AUSTIN (AP) — Hundreds of Texas AIDS victims are seeking help on Capitol Hill to pressure the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to speed approval of the sale of ribavirin, a drug reportedly effective in treating the disease.

Troy Stokes of Austin, a spokesman for the group, said in a letter to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that "hundreds, perhaps thousands" of AIDS victims in Texas and California have for months been using ribavirin bought in Mexico on advice of their physicians.

But the Mexican connection — an informal arrangement with Mexican representatives of the drug's California manufacturer for bulk, discount purchases of ribavirin in Mexico — was cut in February because of pressure from Mexican authorities, he said.

"We feel that we're falling through the cracks," Stokes said, adding that the drug still is available in pharmacies in Mexico but no longer can be bought in large quantities or at a discount.

"In short," Stokes said, "what we have is hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Texans who took part in this wearisome arrangement because their doctor advised it. The doctors still advise the medication, but do not know where their patients can be supplied."

Ribavirin is an anti-viral drug found after lengthy clinical trials at medical centers throughout the United States to be effective in slowing the progression to AIDS with minimal side effects.

Stokes was the car-pool coordinator for a Houston group that made the bulk purchases in Matamoros, Mexico, for about six months before the sales were stopped, he said.

Overtrick was fool's gold

The trump suit helps declarer maintain control of the hand. Today's declarer lost control in his rush to garner an overtrick. The bidding seems unnatural because South bid his hand so that the partnership could reach three no-trump if North had only three-card spade support. When the queen of diamonds was led against four spades, declarer knew that his safest play was simply to duck that first trick. Whatever happened next, he could simply play out the A-K of trumps and then go about his business of running the heart suit. The defender with the long trumps could trump in when he wished, but the contract would almost surely be safe.

Unfortunately this line of play sacrifices a probable overtrick. If the diamond queen held the trick, West would likely play through dummy's club queen, hoping East held the king. And if West had started with the club king, East would overtake with the diamond king to play back a club. In either case, hearts might need to split 3-3 for declarer to make an overtrick. So declarer grabbed the first trick and played out the A-K of spades.

Now the contract was doomed, barring a defensive malfunction. Declarer tried running the heart suit. If he threw clubs, West would wait until he won the lead with a diamond and would then draw all the trumps. So South tried to throw his diamonds away. West ruffed in on the fourth heart, cashed his diamond jack and led a club. That was four tricks for the defense, and our greedy declarer had to watch his contract go down the drain.

Top posts disappear as industry shrinks

DALLAS (AP) — Six top executives of leading public energy companies in Dallas have stepped down under pressure in the last 13 months, and industry observers say others are likely to follow.

Some say the trend reflects the turmoil in the oil industry, but others say it is a rejection of old-fashioned management — with six-figure executives' salaries — and wasteful wildcat drilling strategies of the past.

"It doesn't have anything to do with some great watershed period, a new crop of managers or whatever," said Charles Ramsey, former president and chief executive of May Petroleum.

"The industry has gotten hammered from all directions," said Ramsey, who now is an investment banker for a brokerage.

Other industry observers, critical of oil company management, say the changes reflect a much-needed shift from outdated strategies to more professional, risk-management approaches.

"The driller mentality has to go," said an oil industry analyst who asked not to be identified. "A lot of oil company executives drilled themselves into bankruptcy and they are trying to drill themselves out."

The departing executives are leaving some of the most prestigious jobs in Dallas at the prime of their careers. Most are in their mid-50s and earn $200,000 to $800,000 annually.

Thomas Goff was the most recent to step down. Triton Energy announced the resignation of the 54-year-old president and chief operating officer without elaboration in a one-sentence press release.

Goff was well-liked in business circles and considered a competent manager during Triton's earlier growth periods. But sources close to the company told the Dallas Times Herald that Goff and his $298,000 salary became expendable with recent Triton acquisitions that brought other experienced managers aboard.

Bill Saxon also stepped down this month as chairman and chief executive officer of Saxon Oil, the company he founded in 1968. Saxon's high-risk Oklahoma gas ventures attracted widespread interest from investors before the market collapsed in 1982.

Glenn Gage, head of the extractive industries group at Arthur Young, said he is not surprised by the changes.

"A level of management has to be eliminated," Gage said. "We are seeing this within most oil and gas companies."

Mike O'Donnell, director of the oil and gas services group for Arthur Andersen & Co., said he would not be surprised to see more changes at the top.

"Within the last two weeks, we have had an increasing number of inquiries for people to fill senior positions," O'Donnell said.

J.F. Pat Gratton, an independent Dallas geologist, said the structural changes could have a positive affect on how the industry does business. But he suggested it might require new faces.

Early in December, 78 countries around the world reported a total of 36,538 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the World Health Organization. This count does not include people who had already died of the fatal condition. However, WHO officials believe the incidence of AIDS, particularly in Latin America, has been under-reported.

Baker: Reagan should meet with reporters more often

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr., buoyed by President Reagan's performance at last week's news conference, is seeking new ways to increase Reagan's visibility.

At the same time, Baker said Sunday, he would like to find a way to decrease the growing tension between Reagan and reporters who cover the White House.

But two well-known political pollsters say they aren't sure whether Reagan, even with changes in style and visibility, can raise job-approval ratings that have been sliding since disclosure of the secret sale of weapons to Iran and possible diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," Baker said he feels it's a good idea for Reagan to hold regular news conferences. But he also said, "There are other ideas, and I'd like to explore those, on how the president appropriately interfaces with the press corps."

"The key point, though, is the president should meet with the press, in my view, as often and frequently as seems appropriate, and another key point is he's awfully good at it," Baker said.

Reagan's general inaccessibility to the White House press corps has, in recent months, been the cause of growing friction as journalists have aggressively sought to question the president during picture-taking sessions.

Reagan's top spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, has said the president does not feel the photo sessions are appropriate settings for reporters to question him. Yet, Reagan's news conference Thursday was the first he had held since Nov. 19. The November news conference was the first since one early last August.

White House planning also includes a new round of travel for the president, who has not made a public appearance outside Washington since bestowing medals on the designer and pilot of the "Voyager" aircraft Dec. 29 in Los Angeles.

Reagan is scheduled to visit Columbia, Mo., this week to launch his campaign for bolstering the nation's competitive edge in international trade.

White House aides have sought to end Reagan's seclusion — partly imposed due to the six-week recuperaton physicians ordered following prostate surgery Jan. 5 prostate surgery, but also by his determination to remain silent about the Iran-Contra affair until he could digest the findings of the Tower commission.

The commission issued its report Feb. 26, and Reagan gave a nationally broadcast address March 4, in which he said he accepted its findings and criticism.

In 1940, the 500,000 Jews of Warsaw, Poland, were forced by the Nazis to live within a walled ghetto.

Agents checking background of 5 candidates for FBI post

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents are checking the backgrounds of three judges, a prominent private attorney and a federal administrator who are candidates to be nominated as FBI director, sources say.

The sources, both inside and outside the executive branch, said Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who is in charge of the search, has narrowed the list of candidates to these five men, but still plans another personal appeal to one of them, U.S. District Judge D. Lowell Jensen of San Francisco, to take the job.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said late last week the list includes Jensen and four other men. The sources said none of the other four have been named in any published or broadcast speculation about whom President Reagan will nominate to succeed William H. Webster, who has been nominated to take over the CIA.

The other two judges on the list also work outside Washington, as does the private attorney. The federal administrator works in Washington but not in an investigative, law enforcement agency and not in a job appointed by the president.

Meese is holding the names under very tight security, the sources said, because he is under heavy outside pressure from various people who have suggested candidates.

One source said the secrecy allows administration officials to avoid telling these outsiders their candidates did not make the final list. But in an effort to mollify some of these outsiders, the names of several of their candidates have been leaked even though the men were out of the running or never really in it, this source said.

These sources said six men prominently mentioned in published speculation about candidates either never have been or no longer are under consideration.

These six were identified as:

Supreme Court Justice Byron R. "Whizzer" White; Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; former top-level FBI official Lee Colwell; U.S. Circuit Court Judge William W. Wilkins Jr.; unsuccessful Michigan gubernatorial candidate William Lucas; and Detroit Police Chief William L. Hart.

The sources said Jensen — for decades a close friend and associate of Meese — has expressed reluctance to take the post.

Lawyers give most of campaign funds

DALLAS (AP) — Two out of three lawyers who contributed to Dallas County civil court judges eventually appeared before the jurists on cases, the Dallas Morning News reported.

The county's seven veteran civil court judges received from 75 percent to 96 percent of their identifiable campaign contributions from lawyers, the News reported Sunday.

Backers of legislative efforts to change the way state judges are selected say political and financial relationships between lawyers and judges raise questions about the integrity of the bench. Texas is one of only nine states that select all judges in partisan elections.

"It's a corrupt system," said John Hauer, a past president of the Dallas Bar Association. Dallas judges have not been corrupted, he said, but costly partisan elections "don't lead to impartiality, to say the least."

Many lawyers giving campaign contributions to judges said their intent was not to buy influence but to ensure a stable, quality judiciary. Judges said financial supporters should expect nothing more than courtesy and diligence in return.

The newspaper concluded that judges sometimes appointed contributors, former law partners or campaign workers to act as receivers or guardians for children or mentally impaired people involved in personal injury lawsuits. The appointed lawyers were paid fees supervised and approved by the judge.

Civil Judge Harlan Martin, who by the newspaper's reckoning received 91 percent of his contributions from lawyers, said:

Carter meets with Assad; mum on meeting topic

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter met twice with President Hafez Assad, but refused to say whether he and the Syrian leader discussed eight Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

"I'll have something to say at the airport before I leave (for Jordan on Tuesday)," he said Sunday after his talks with the Syrian leader.

Carter described his first three-hour meeting with Assad as very interesting, broad-ranging and pleasant. Asked if the hostages were discussed, he said such information should come from the Syrians.

The second session lasted 45 minutes, followed by a banquet Assad hosted for Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, at the Muhajerine Presidential Palace.

Assad spokesman Jibrane Kourieh said the talks "focused on international relations, the situation in the Middle East and its developments as well as the Lebanese question." He gave no details.

Carter said Saturday he would urge Syria to act "if there's information or influence that can be exerted" to get the hostages released, and that Syria has shared such information with the United States in the past.

Eight Americans and 16 other foreigners are believed held by at least four separate radical groups in Lebanon, mostly Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran.

Most of the kidnappings took place in Moslem west Beirut between February 1984 and last January. Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, dispatched 7,500 troops to west Beirut on Feb. 22 to stop fighting between rival militias.

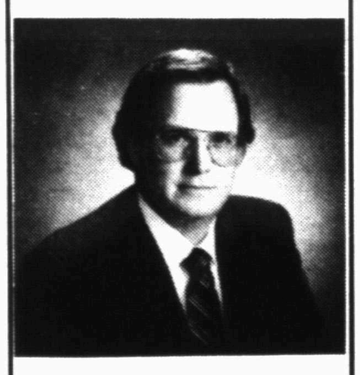

Carter's visit to Syria was the most controversial stop of his five-nation tour of North Africa and the Middle East, which already has taken him to Algeria and Egypt. He also plans to go to Jordan and Israel before returning home April 3.

During his presidency, Carter angered the Syrians when he engineered the 1979 Camp David peace accord between Israel and Egypt. It was the first peace treaty between Israel and an Arab nation since the 1948 Middle East war.

4A teams dominate at Reef; Tigers strong in high jump

Big Spring's Steers put together a 156-point performance to run away with the Class 4A boy's division of the Canyon Reef Relays here Saturday.

Lubbock Estacado, which moved up in class for the relays, won the 5A division with 150 points. San Angelo Central finished second with 119.

Snyder's boys scored 24 points to tie for ninth place with San Angelo Lake View.

The Tigers continued to get most of their points in the high jump. Big Spring's Brian Mayfield soared 6-9 to win the event and set a new relays record. Snyder's Terry Garza went 6-2 for second place, edging Lamesa athlete Jimmy Scott, who also went 6-2 but had more misses. Daniel Chasteen of the Tiger team was third after clearing six feet, and teammate Chris Garrett was sixth with an effort of 5-10.

In all, Snyder polled 17 of its 24 points at the high jump pit.

Thance Springer took fourth place in the shot put for Snyder with a throw of 42-1. Jeff Rose also grabbed a fourth place ribbon by clocking an 11.37 in the 100 meter dash.

In other Snyder results, Dan Krenek was sixth in the 800 meters with a 2:12.95 and the Tiger 1600 relay team was sixth with a 3:35.45.

Lubbock Dunbar placed second in the single-day relays with 93 points while Lamesa - led by Gerry Woodberry's 10.43 in the 100 meters - was third with 50 points.

Snyder is scheduled to compete in the San Angelo Relays on Saturday, March 28. The Tigers head for Big Spring on April 4 and will enter the District 2-4A Track and Field Championships in Andrews on April 10.

At National Tournament...

Dusters fall to Moberly, take fourth place

SENATOBIA, Miss. -- Lori Sandbothe put a rebound up and in as the final buzzer sounded here Saturday night, lifting Moberly Area Junior College of Missouri to a 70-68 upset victory over fifth-ranked Western Texas College.

Moberly's win, which gave the Lady Greyhounds third place in the NJCAA National Tournament, came after Western had dropped a 16-point lead in the first half.

Northeast Mississippi College won the championship game of the six-day, 24-team tournament with a 78-74 win over St. Gregory's, Okla.

Western's loss put an end to a 31-4 season which included the college's first women's regional title, a conference championship, and a fourth place finish here.

"This is a tremendously good bunch of kids," said WTC coach Kelly Chadwick. "It's been a pleasure working with them."

He did not have good words for the officials, however.

"I thought it was a terribly, poorly officiated ballgame. That last call was absolutely the worst call I've seen in 20 years of coaching," he spat.

Chadwick was referring to a traveling call whistled against WTC's Lisa Thompson with 15 seconds to play. Moberly's Cassandra Michel had missed a shot with the score tied at 68 and Western's Kayla Thompson rebounded to set up a fast break attempt. Lisa Thompson got behind the defense and took the long pass but was called for traveling when she came down with the ball.

Moberly took possession but Western's defense responded well. The Lady Greyhounds' Michel finally was forced to take a desperation 20-foot shot as time ticked away. Her effort bounded from the rim but Sandbothe was there for the rebound and put the ball in as the buzzer sounded.

Western had come out strong, opening a 14-4 lead as Lisa Thompson, Wendy Milner, Brenda Welch and GiGi Robinson all contributed offensively. The advantage grew to 16 points, 28-12, on a basket from Milner.

Suddenly, however, the Dusters went cold from the field. Moberly scored the next six points as WTC missed on four straight trips up the floor. The Lady Greyhounds went on to outscore Western 17-2 over the final four minutes of the half, and took a 35-34 lead into intermission on Sandbothe's free throws with 28 seconds left.

Moberly went to the line for eight shots in the final 2:31 of the half and made seven of them.

"That's been typical of us this season. We come out smoking hot and get to playing too fast," said Chadwick. "I guess we were doing too many things right and in trying to do things faster, we got out of control.

"Moberly has a good team. You have to be good to get this far. But I think we know it should have been an 8-10 point ballgame in our favor," he added.

The second half was close all the way. Western led most of the 20 minutes, though never by more than five points. The score was tied six times.

Moberly's Sandbothe, a 5-11 freshman, led all scorers with 23 points. Sabrina Brooks, an all-tournament choice, had 17 and Marcia Brooks added 12.

For Western, Welch notched 22, Milner 20 and GiGi Robinson 8.

Welch, the 5-11 sophomore from Jennings, La., added all-tournament honors to those of conference MVP, all-region, and region MVP. Lisa Thompson, Sabrina Brooks and Sandbothe were all honorable mention all-tournament.

In earlier action, Snead State, Ala., won seventh place with a 71-64 win over John A. Logan, Ill. and Central Arizona took fifth with a 74-64 victory over Kilgore, Texas.

Study: nicotine may promote cancer spread

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Nicotine seems to promote the spread of cancer throughout the body, and people who already have the disease should be encouraged to stay away from tobacco to improve their odds of surviving, new research suggests.

The study finds preliminary evidence that nicotine, the addictive drug in cigarettes, disrupts one of the body's built-in defenses against cancer's spread, and raises questions about long-term use of nicotine gum to break the smoking habit.

"All too often, patients who have tumor disease take a very fatalistic attitude," said Dr. Gesina L. Longenecker. "They say, 'I already have the problem. I might just as well not deny myself the pleasure at this point.' In fact, it is not such a good idea to take that attitude."

Longenecker, a pharmacology researcher at the University of South Alabama, presented her findings Sunday at a meeting sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

"The message is clearly obvious," said Dr. Robert V.P. Hutter. "If you avoid use of tobacco, you will avoid nicotine, and you will avoid enhancement of metastasis," or the spread of cancer.

However, Hutter, of St. Barnabas Medical Center in Livingston, N.J., doubted whether he would encourage someone whose cancer had already spread to quit cigarettes, since the damage already was done.

Longenecker said that giving up smoking makes more sense for people being treated for cancer that has not yet spread.

Although smoking is a recognized cause of cancer, many experts believe it is some of the other ingredients of cigarette smoke rather than nicotine that cause the disease. A tumor frequently is not fatal unless it spreads. And the new data suggests that nicotine adds to the damage by helping this to happen.

Nicotine also presents other hazards. It can trigger heart disease and strokes by aggravating high blood pressure and causing clogging buildups on the walls of blood vessels.

Longenecker believes nicotine contributes to cancer by interfering with the body's release of the hormone prostacyclin, which suppresses the activity of blood platelets. The platelets, in turn, assist in the spread of cancer.

Cancer spread begins when a cell is released from a tumor and finds its way into the bloodstream.

"It eventually will stick somewhere to the lining of the blood vessel and crawl its way through the blood vessel to an extravascular site and begin to grow," said Longenecker. "The interaction of tumor cells with blood platelets seems to facilitate the process of tumor metastasis."

Longenecker found that ordinarily, the lining of the blood vessels and even the tumor itself release prostacyclin, which holds the platelets in check. But nicotine interferes with this release, so the platelets are more active than they ordinarily would be.

Platelets make blood form clots, but when they are especially active, they can aid a roving tumor cell in several ways, she said.

Untested fruits, vegetables reported

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration tests for pesticide residues in less than 1 percent of the millions of tons of fruits and vegetables imported each year from Mexico and other countries, studies show.

FDA officials have four inspectors to cover the 1,200-plus miles of the Texas-Mexico border from Brownsville to El Paso. About half of their time is spent on other domestic duties, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday after reviewing congressional studies and interview various officials.

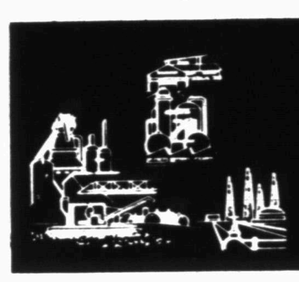

A recent report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, noted, "the FDA inspector stationed at Hidalgo, Texas, is also responsible for border crossings at two other locations.

"These three points of entry are spread over a distance that makes it almost impossible for one inspector to monitor all imported food shipments."

General Accounting Office auditor Ron Hughes, who conducted a study of the FDA program to monitor pesticides in U.S.-produced foods, said the agency needs to devote more time and money to pesticide monitoring.

"It's a big problem, and it's what can you afford. In all fairness to FDA, they have other programs, they have 20-odd programs they are responsible for, and pesticides is just one of them."

FDA officials in Washington are drafting a reply to the accounting office reports

According to French philosopher-author Voltaire, "The secret of being a bore is to tell everything."

Alexander's offers termite inspection

As a homeowner you can't ignore the threat of termite damage. The cost of the termite problem in the United States is approaching $1 billion dollars a year with about one in every 50 homes being damaged.

Craig Alexander, owner of Alexander's Pest Control, tells us that this time of the year is the most active for termites and that termites will do more damage to homes this year than all fires, hurricanes, and tornadoes combined.

When termites swarm in the spring they are often mistaken for flying ants, because both have wings. Swarming termites quickly shed their wings, though, and burrow into the ground to start new colonies.

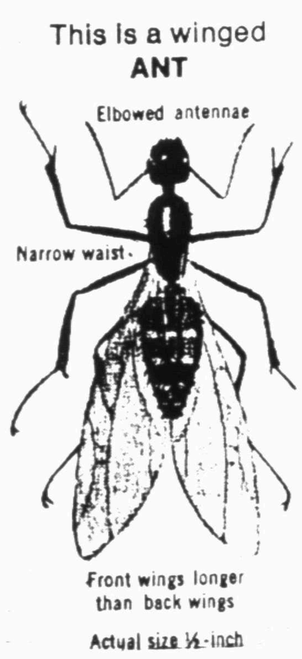

Chemical treatment is the only method of termite prevention and control ever proven to be totally effective. Alexander's Pest Control surrounds your house with a chemical barrier, so termites can't get in. This also kills any termites which may already be inside.

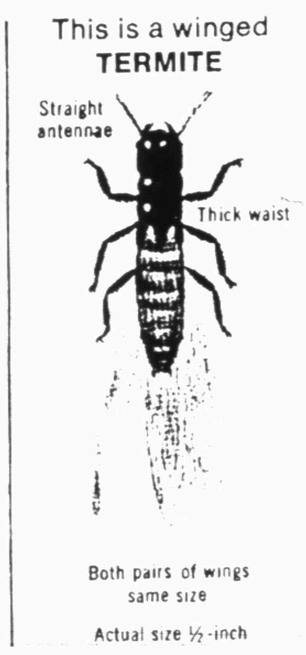

Instead of hoping termites don't attack, make sure they can't. Instead of being worried, be protected. All it takes is a call to Alexander's Pest Control at 573-7133.

Your home is the largest investment you have, so you don't want to take any chances with it. Call the professional - Craig Alexander.

Theft, unlawful entry worked over weekend

Police investigated a range of incidents during the weekend to include a possible stolen car, an unlawful entry at a local restaurant and two vehicle burglary complaints.

Regarding the missing auto, Debbie Hays of 1700 Ave. M reported at 10:42 a.m. Sunday the apparent theft of her 1983 Nissan Centra.

The vehicle was found abandonded in the 1000 Block of Ave. I by officers on routine patrol at 1:30 p.m. Investigation of that case is continuing.

Detectives are also investigating a criminal trespass complaint filed by Roy Carter of The Shack restaurant Sunday morning.

Carter told police it appeared the building had been entered by someone between 12:30 a.m. and 7:40 a.m. Sunday.

Nothing was found stolen from the restaurant.

The two vehicle burglary complaints were filed Saturday night.

Leon Gutierrez and Felix Martinez, both of Snyder, contacted police between 1 and 2 a.m. Saturday to file those reports.

Both men reported that their vehicles had been entered and items taken while they were parked at the Latin American Center on 13th St. Friday night.

In other weekend action, city officers logged five misdemeanor arrests including three for public intoxication, one for driving while intoxicated, and one for being intoxicated on a premises licensed to sell alcohol.

Weekend has 2 minor wrecks

Two minor traffic accidents were reported in Snyder over the weekend.

Involved in the first -- at 9:53 a.m. Saturday in the 800 Block of Ave. R -- were a 1981 AMC driven by Marta Guerra Martinez of 1711 13th St. and a 1976 Dodge driven by Daniel Morin of Rt. 3, Snyder.

The second mishap was reported at 8:16 p.m. Sunday in the 3700 Block of College Ave.

Involved in it were a 1986 Oldsmobile driven by Neilda Word of 311 24th St. and a 1985 Pontiac driven by Michelle Lee Osborn of 3006 El Paso Ave.

Police also reported clearing a recent hit-and-run incident over the weekend.

A 1978 Oldsmobile driven by Rosalie McGlaun of 1200 25th St. was found to have been involved in a collision Friday in which a vehicle owned by Charles Cain of Snyder was damaged while parked at Furr's Supermarket.

'Airplane' scam warned against

By The Associated Press

"Airplane," the newest twist on the age-old illegal pyramid scheme, is turning up in communities around the nation, and authorities are urging unsuspecting players not to be taken for a ride.

"On these pyramid-type schemes, for the most part, the victims are just about as greedy as the promoters," said Spencer Barasch, associate general counsel for the state Securities Commission in Oklahoma, where dozens of "Airplane" games have sprung up.

"'Airplane' is like an Oklahoma tumbleweed drifting down the street."

There are variations, but a typical "Airplane" game is started by a "pilot" who persuades two people to pay him an entry fee to be "co-pilots." The fee reportedly has been as high as $1,500, but typically is $100.

The co-pilots, in turn, recruit two players each. These four, who also pay the fee, become "flight attendants" and each recruits two "passengers," again for $100.

When a plane is full — say, with 14 entries — the pilot has $1,400 and the pyramid splits in half, with the co-pilots becoming pilots, flight attendants becoming co-pilots, and passengers becoming flight attendants. Newly recruited passengers pay the pilot $100 each, and the pyramid continues splitting and growing.

Of course, the longer the pyramid is running, the more difficult it is to find willing players. Those not yet pilots would lose their money when the pyramid collapses.

Used needles pose high risk

DEAR DR. GOTT — I clean a doctor's office. She uses disposable syringes, which are thrown into the wastebaskets. When I take out the plastic bags, I get stabbed by the needles and they draw blood. What infections could I get and what precautions should I take?

DEAR READER — You are at very high risk of contracting serious, blood-borne infections, including hepatitis and AIDS. The doctor should know better than to discard disposable needles unless she has either capped the needles or, preferably, clipped them off and discarded them in a special container. Her present system exposes her to legal liability and exposes you to disease. If you are hesitant to confront the doctor with your questions and concerns, show her this column.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Should an older person have a pneumonia shot? I had pneumonia last year. Could the shot cause it to come back?

DEAR READER — Pneumonia is caused by many types of micro-organisms. Pneumococcal infection affects as many as 500,000 people a year, with a fatality rate of 5 percent to 10 percent. Patients at highest risk for life-threatening infection are the elderly, people with immune deficiencies, patients with diseases of the spleen or lymph glands, alcoholics and blacks who have sickle cell anemia. Therefore, pneumococcal vaccine is recommended for such patients, because it prevents a form of pneumonia that can be fatal.

The current vaccine is not effective against all 83 pneumococcal strains, but it does provide resistance to the 23 most common strains.

The vaccine will not cause the pneumonia you had last year to recur.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm male, 61 and have always been very active. In spite of that and my present regimen of biking, fast walking, windsurfing and skiing, I am depressed about my progressive loss of strength. I suppose this is what aging is all about, but shouldn't my history of activity have forestalled this muscle-wasting?

DEAR READER — As we age, muscles become weaker and less bulky. Even active older people will have a progressive decline in athletic performance and muscle strength. This is an unavoidable consequence of age.

Nonetheless, physical exertion is beneficial for heart, lungs and the circulation; it makes people feel better. You may not be able to overcome the effects of growing older, but physical activity certainly will improve the quality of your life. Keep it up and be content to be a little less strenuous than you once were.

BP agents remove kids from school

ZAPATA, Texas (AP) — Critics say the Border Patrol has moved into Zapata schools in a crackdown to prevent families from applying for amnesty under the new federal immigration law.

The Border Patrol, however, says it takes children of undocumented aliens out of school to keep deported families together. Arresting potential amnesty applicants, says the Border Patrol, has nothing to do with removing children from schools or deporting their parents.

But school officials say the Border Patrol's move into local schools is unprecedented in the community of 8,000, about 50 miles southeast of Laredo.

Officials at Zapata's high school, elementary, middle and junior high schools told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times that uniformed Border Patrol agents recently have taken nine children from their classrooms.

Arresting families, including picking up children at schools, is becoming common in rural areas but not in cities such as Laredo, where such a move would enrage the public, said Alberto Luera, executive director of Centro Atzlan in Laredo, a non-profit group.

School officials say that all of the children's families have lived in Zapata for years. But the officials could not say whether the families lived in the United States before Jan. 1, 1982, a condition of amnesty under the new law.

Aliens who can prove they have lived in the United States since 1981 qualify for amnesty under the new law. But the Immigration and Naturalization Service will not begin taking applications until May 5.

Rafael Torres, of the American Friends Service Committee in Laredo, says the action in Zapata is an unprecedented move by the Border Patrol to disqualify as many families as possible before amnesty applications are accepted.

Border Patrol Agent Richard Marroquin, second in command at the Border Patrol sector in Laredo, denies the accusation. Marroquin said agents picked up the children so that they would not be left without someone to care for them.

Marroquin also denies that taking children from school is unprecedented, but Zapata School Superintendent Antonio Molina disagrees.

"This is the first time this has happened," said Molina, who has been with the school district 35 years, 25 as superintendent.

"They came to me asking for several students ... that their parents wanted the kids because they were being deported," Molina said, referring to a March 10 incident.

"That's really unusual here. We've never seen them here before," Molina said. "I'm trying to find out if they can do this, legally. I don't know. But I've been unable to get a legal opinion if they have the authority to do it."

Elementary school principal Humberto Gonzalez Jr. was angered at having to turn over a child to federal agents. He said they should have waited until school was out.

"That got me very angry .... Why don't they wait for these kids to get out of school?" he said.

Drug testing program extended at school

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — School officials have expanded a voluntary drug-testing program to include all extracurricular activities in an effort to curb peer pressure often linked with drug abuse.

Longview High School was the first district to begin testing athletes in 1984, state records show, but the program will now include all other extracurriculars, said Mary Ruth Dunlap, school activities director.

"It's for the student rather than trying to seek people out," she said. "We're not trying to catch somebody."

Instead, she said, the voluntary drug testing will offer students a way of escaping the peer pressure to use drugs by giving them a reason to say no. It will also give them help if they are using illegal drugs.

"It will be done in a very subtle way of course," she said. "There won't be any big issue made."

Students in extracurricular activities who agree to voluntary drug testing will follow the same guidelines as athletes in the program, Mrs. Dunlap told the Longview News-Journal.

Three students in the program will be randomly chosen to be tested for drugs at three times during the school year. The test will show the presence of any drugs in the urine that were ingested 14 days before the test, according to program guidelines.

The test will be voluntary, and no student will be tested unless the parent and student have signed a written authorization form.

"Informally, we've gotten some very good feedback," she said. "We're hoping they'll all say, 'Yeah, lets do it,' "

Chemical Pump Service Serves Many Oil Patch Needs

Chemical Pump Service, owned locally by Tom Machen, serves the needs of the oil patch, by carrying a full line of Texsteam Electric Drive Injectors. The 4100 Series Texsteam Injectors are positive displacement, plunger-type pumps which are gear driven and utilize electric motors, V-belts or other rotating drives as the power source. The unit's gear drive is housed in a precision-bored, heavy cast iron case with anti-friction bearings on the high speed shaft. The output gear, made of high strength alloy iron, is supported in a special bearing arrangement assuring extremely long life with maximum rigidity.

The entire worm-gear drive mechanism runs in a lubricant bath for longer operating life, even under the most adverse operating conditions.

The Texsteam 4100 Series can by used for chemical injection and for handling corrosive fluids.

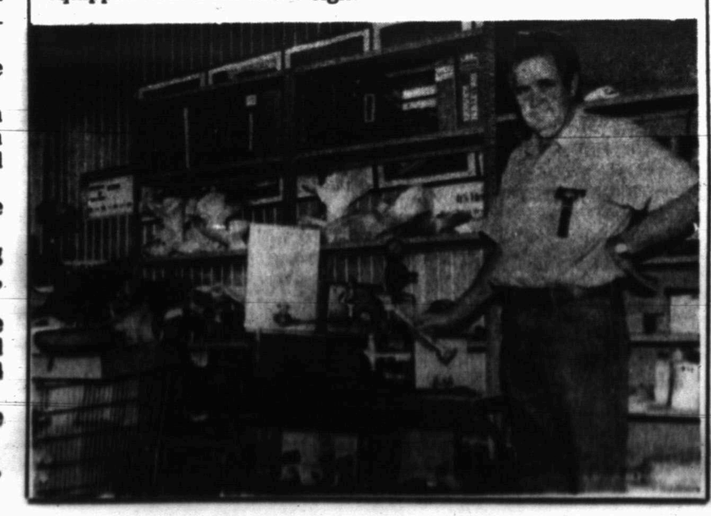

Because these units can be equipped with from one to eight heads, a wide range of additives may be accurately handled from one installation. This versatile pump has found wide acceptance for use in refineries, LACT units, salt water floods, tank batteries, process plants and in water treatment for boilers

The Texsteam 4100 Series Injectors are easy to install. No expensive foundation or piping is required. These pumps will give you many years of economical and trouble-free service.

In addition to Texsteam Electric Drive Injectors, they also carry Western, Calgon and Percision Pumps and Bendix, Wico, Fairbanks Morse and American Bosch Magnetos.
