Trustess OK voting districts

Colorado City school trustees Thursday night approved a resolution and order to convert the present at-large system of electing board members to single-member districts.

The motion, approved unanimously by the board, also instructed attorneys to settle the

LULAC lawsuit, all according to written resolution and order before the board.

The action came following an agreement on voting district boundary lines between the school district and its attorneys and the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) and its attorneys, said Dr. Jim Ramsey, superintendent.

LULAC filed a federal lawsuit Jan. 30 against the school district, contending the district's at-large method of electing trustees dilutes minority voting strength.

In March, United States District Judge Halbert Woodward granted an injunction stopping the May 6 board of directors election.

Ramsey said since both sides have agreed to the boundary lines of the seven voting districts, it will be up to the U.S. Justice Department to give a final approval to the plan.

Ramsey estimates that it may take several months before final approval is given and that it could be January before elections are held.

CISD voters will decide on all seven places on the school board during the election. Three of those will have to run again in May, said Ramsey.

Current board members are Dwayne Harris, Billy B. Bridgford, Kathy Bassham, Floyd Lee Ritchey, Brenda Aguillon, Eddie Gregory and Ruben Alvarez.

Ramsey said it took many man-hours to work out the voting district map because the ethnic race of the occupants of each house had to be determined. However, the districts probably will have to be redrawn following the 1990 census.

The school district had met informally with members of the local LULAC chapter to discuss the issue of single-member districts prior to the suit being filed. Ramsey said that the school district never said it was against single-member districts.

LULAC did not have any representatives at the Thursday meeting.

The Colorado City council will consider a similar plan when it meets Tuesday at 5:15 p.m. LULAC has not filed suit against the city, but the council agreed to go ahead and formulate plans for single-member voting districts and assisted the school district in preparing a map of the city showing the racial make-up of the residents.

In other business, the school board:
• amended the 1988-89 official budget;
• gave permission to advertise for bids for a pickup truck, a copier and two duplicator machines; and;
• approved the revised calendar for the year.

Ramsey showed board members a plaque that will be presented to Barbara Gray who retired recently as director of the Wallace Center. Mrs. Gray is hospitalized in Abilene, and the plaque will be presented to her there.

CISD enrollment is down first day

Enrollment in Colorado City schools the first day of the new year was down about 70 students from a year ago, said Dr. Jim Ramsey, superintendent.

On Thursday, the first day of classes, Kelley Elementary had an enrollment of 334 while Hutchinson Elementary had 304, middle school, 294, and high school, 335.

However, Ramsey said more students probably will enroll after Labor Day. Last year, school did not start until after Labor Day.

All the principals reported a fairly smooth first day, despite construction projects at Kelley, Hutchinson and the middle school that delayed the start of school for three days.

"The first day went pretty well," said Juan Espinoza, Kelley principal. Because the cafeteria was not ready after being abated of asbestos, students "brown-bagged" lunch both Thursday and Friday. Maintenance personnel will have the cafeteria ready when school resumes Tuesday after the Labor Day holiday. Asbestos was also removed from the hallways at Kelley and new floor tile installed.

Bobby Lemons, Hutchinson principal, said his teachers were able to get in their classrooms Wednesday morning, the day before school started. He said his school enrollment is close to last year's enrollment figure and anticipates more students to enroll. Asbestos was removed from hallways and classrooms at Hutchinson and new floor tile installed in the hallways.

Jim McLean, middle school principal, said the first day went "better than expected" and described it as a good start. His school has been undergoing major renovation for several months which is nearing completion. Also, asbestos was removed from the CVAB building at the middle school campus.

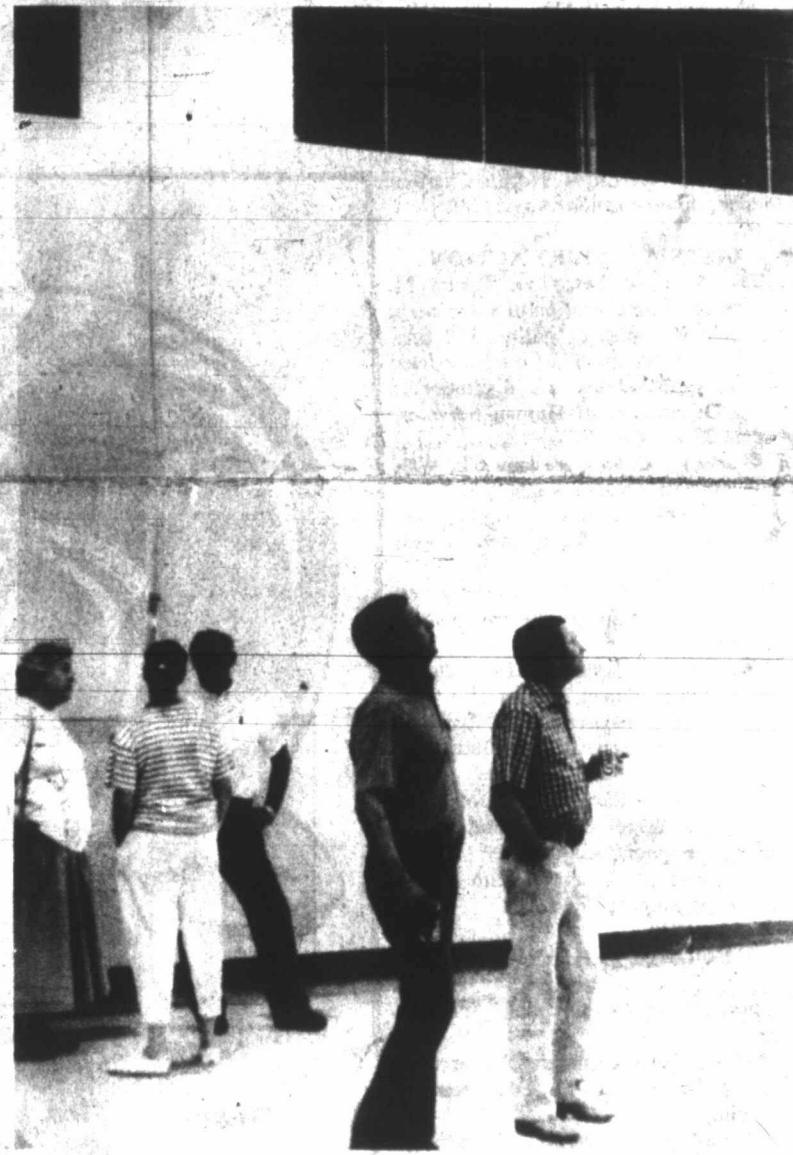

"We had a great day," said Jerry Reynolds, high school principal. "Everything went smoothly."

Transportation supervisor Bill Denson and maintenance supervisor James Owens also reported a fairly smooth first day.

"We've still got some little things to do, but we'll get it done," said Owens. "All in all, everything is pretty much intact."

Ramsey praised the maintenance department for the work done during the summer months.

"James' people have worked extremely hard this summer," said Ramsey. "Sometimes we forget about them. The custodians and maintenance people have done a good job this summer."

CHECKING IT OUT - Colorado ISD trustees and administrators toured Kelley and Hutchinson elementary schools and middle school Thursday night to view the work currently underway or finished. Here board members Dwayne Harris, right, and Ruben Alvarez look at the ceiling in the cafeteria at Kelley from which asbestos has been removed.

Hale to seek continuance

Attorney for Mitchell County Pct. 3 Commissioner Larry Hale will seek a continuance concerning a petition seeking to have Hale temporarily suspended from office.

A hearing to consider the petition was to have been held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in district court here. Instead, District Judge R.L. McKim will conduct a hearing for a motion for continuance, said County Judge Mac Morris.

McKim was to consider a petition filed in the 32nd Judicial District Court seeking the temporary removal of Hale, currently under indictment for official misconduct.

Named as "relators" (those who filed the petition) are County Judge S.L. (Mac) Morris, Pct. 1 Commissioner Ed Roach, Pct. 2 Commissioner Johnny Shackelford, Pct. 4 Commissioner Bill Preston and County Attorney Clay Strange.

The petition states that "Hale has committed numerous acts of official misconduct during his term of office, three of the said acts having given rise to indictments by the grand jury of Mitchell County."

The relators ask that the court temporarily suspend Hale from office and appoint another person to perform the duties of that office.

Kids' Day event slated

The Kiwanis Club annual Kids' Day parade and watermelon feast will be Saturday, Sept. 23, with registration starting at 9:30 a.m. on the south parking lot of the courthouse.

Children must have a number before they are eligible to win a prize. Total prize money is $200.

The parade route will be south on Oak Street, east on Second Street and end at the Kiwanis Club park.

Categories will be costumes, pets and wheels. First prize winner in each category will win $25 while second place prize winners receive $15 each and third place, $10 each.

A grand prize winner will receive $50.

For more information, contact Elmer Martin at 728-5226 or Don Henderson at 644-2001.

The event is open to all children of Mitchell County.

COMPLETED PROJECT - This is one of two recently completed bridges in precinct 2 that spans Morgan Creek. The bridges are located on county roads 290 and 280, three miles north of Iatan. Also under construction is a bridge spanning the Colorado River next to the historic Cedar Bend Bridge. The old Cedar Bend Bridge has been declared a historical landmark and will not be torn down. However, it will be closed to traffic.

AUSTIN -- State Representative Robert Junell has endorsed a special drug educational project sponsored by the Texas Department of Public Safety Officers Association called "Join the Move!" This statewide program encourages young people to join the fight against drug abuse. This summer, Texas school children across the state are participating in the first phase of "Join the Move!", a student artistic competition.

Representative Junell also had the opportunity to visit with the Honorary Chair of the project, Alice Sessions, wife of FBI Director William Sessions, during her recent visit to the capitol on behalf of the statewide project.

The meeting gave both the opportunity to discuss the challenges of drug education in our schools. Mrs. Sessions stressed that drug education efforts are having an impact, citing a recently released survey by the National Institute on Drug Abuse reporting that cocaine use by high school seniors decreased significantly between 1978 and 1988. "We are getting the message out that Texans simply will not tolerate drug abuse in our state. That is why it is important for young people to take a stand, to say we will not allow drugs to rule our schools or our communities."

The DPSOA also hosted the "Join the Move!" Summer Conference, a special gathering of drug education experts, August 24-27 in New Braunfels.

The conference was a rare opportunity for drug education experts from Texas, as well as leaders from the Texas business community, to get together and study the drug educational landscape as it now exists in the state.

If you would like more information about the project, write the DPSOA at P.O. Box 4998, Austin, TX 78765.

Letters to the Editor

Monopoly game still going?

TO THE EDITOR: I've long thought about writing this letter to express my thoughts concerning our city and county. I wasn't born and raised here so I believe I'm taking an outsiders in the town I chose to live in. Where I live I've waited for four months for our dirt road to be smoothed but it hasn't happened yet. As I see the problems in the town are because of a lack of jobs; and no new businesses coming unless it's started by the little group of players in the game. In older days, farmers and ranchers wanted their town to grow so they could make more money selling their product at a profit; and in return buy feed and seed at cheaper prices. Now, farmers receive discounts for not raising their crop. And cattle prices are fairly good. But, it appears we have a one-sided game of monopoly going on; and the people don't have any property or money; so the game becomes more one-sided until we change the players of the game! It will remain the same; they don't want to spend any money improving the town in regards to cleaning it up. A person could drive to the southside of town a block from the railroad tracks and see sewer water running into the Colorado River; this connects to our water supply. Our water already tastes bad enough without this square on the board, yet it's still happening.

But all these things could be changed if people had enough pride in their town to do something about it. I'm not saying it's all because of the little group; some of it is because of our own state and government. But, we as the people, have a right to speak our mind; as it says in our constitution. Or have we the people forgotten what our forefathers wrote on that piece of paper. And remember, it takes all the people to make things better. No few people can accomplish this task.

Charles Brown

Where do you stand?

NEW INNOVATIVE SERVICE - Kiker-Seale Funeral Home and several other West Texas funeral homes have developed an extended service company called Majek Sky. The pilot, Sam Thiele, is pictured with the company's Piper Saratoga.

Kiker-Seale Funeral Home now offers unique service

Kiker-Seale Funeral Home, in joint venture with funeral homes in Snyder, Big Spring, Abilene and Odessa, has purchased an airplane to transport remains to and from the West Texas area. The service, called Majek Sky, found its beginnings in May and according to Bill Seale, "It has proven to be a beneficial addition."

This extended service saves tedious scheduling with commercial airlines, some of which decline to carry caskets, said Fred Thompson, manager of the local funeral home.

Transport of a loved one on this private service also is usually less expensive to the family and may take one day in comparison to the three days it could take on a commercial line.

The private plane can fly into the smaller airports that the commercial airlines do not service. This saves road time for funeral home personnel, who may have to drive from a big airport to a small town many miles away, and allows funeral plans to be completed without delay.

"Families we serve have been appreciative of this extended service," said Thompson.

Majek Sky has flown as far as Townsend, Mont., which is 1,816 miles away. Other trips have taken the plane to Indiana, Nebraska, Arizona, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and all over Texas.

"Provisions are made for a representative of the family to accompany the remains," said Thompson.

Sam Thiele is the pilot. He is a certified commercial pilot and is qualified to fly any type of plane. He also is a certified mechanic and flying instructor.

Tourism program stresses friendliness to employees

COLLEGE STATION -- Texans are friendly to begin with, and a new training program helps tourism providers direct that friendliness to the state's best advantage.

"No one thought Texans were unfriendly, but the tourism industry requested a training program that would help service producers focus on the customer and on how to make the best possible impression," said Susanna Coppemoll, an assistant with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The result is the Texas Hospitality training program for the tourism and service industry that was implemented last May. The training program offers separate, one-day training sessions for managers and employees in learning to effectively manage service and being guest oriented, respectively.

The program topics include the "circle of service" that surrounds a guest and how to make guests the center of attention when it comes to service.

"Another of the items the program emphasizes is knowing your own community," Coppemoll said. "Many service providers are unfamiliar with historical attractions or amenities available in their own city."

To provide training for all the service and tourism personnel around Texas, the Extension Service Recreation and Parks specialists are training instructors for the program.

"The instructors participate in a two-day training program that provides them with all the videotapes and other materials needed to conduct the hospitality training in their home area," Coppemoll said.

At present, there are 35 instructors operating across the state giving programs on a regular basis ranging from once a week to once a month or less often in some areas, the Extension Assistant said.

The program's reception has been good. An initial mailing of more than 400 instructor applications to tourism and chamber of commerce organizations across Texas resulted in 127 completed applications.

"We have already conducted nine training programs and we have 18 more scheduled for the next few months," Coppemoll said. "For now, we have to train more instructors before we can even begin to meet the demand from the industry."

The Texas Hospitality program is a project of the Extension Service Recreation and Parks Department in cooperation with the Texas Department of Commerce's Tourism Division and the Southwestern Bell Foundation.

For more information contact Susanna Coppemoll at (409)-845-5419 or Texas Hospitality Training, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843-2261.

Bentsen urges Yeutter to use net crop values

Washington, D.C. — Senator Lloyd Bentsen urged Secretary of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter not to penalize farmers by deducting the gross value of second crops when calculating disaster payments.

Bentsen said a Department of Agriculture plan to deduct gross value of second crops in determining disaster payments would be a mistake and called on Yeutter to instead use net values.

"Department plans to deduct the gross, not net, value of the second crop would result in huge losses in disaster payments for many farmers who have gone the extra mile by planting a salvage crop after losing their first crop. About half of the acreage in Texas which is eligible for disaster assistance has been planted to a second crop," Bentsen said.

Legislation was recently enacted which will provide disaster assistance to producers who lost crops due to natural disaster this year. Section 110 of that law provides for a reduction of disaster assistance payments in cases where a second, substitute, crop is planted on failed acres.

"A farmer who lost a wheat crop that was expected to yield 35 bushels per acre will be eligible for about $60 per acre in disaster payments. However, if he planted a salvage crop of milo and made only a partial crop, which is likely in a drought situation, the use of a gross value rule will slash his disaster payments to about $14 per acre. This is because the gross value of that milo crop will be about $46 per acre. However, after expenses of about $41 per acre the farmer will actually take home only about $5 per acre from that milo crop," Bentsen said.

"The bottom line is this: If you use a gross value rule you will punish the farmer who tried to produce a substitute crop and reward the farmer who did nothing. When expenses and disaster and deficiency payments are calculated in for both farmers, under the gross value approach the farmer who did not plant a salvage crop comes out ahead by about $30 per acre compared to the farmer who did. However, under a net value rule the incomes of the two farmers would be roughly equal," Bentsen said.

"Attempting to grow a substitute crop is normally a good farming practice and is in fact often required of farmers who have Federal Crop Insurance coverage," Senator Bentsen said.

Boosters elect new officers

New officers for 1989-90 were elected and a treasurer's report reviewed during a meeting of the Wolves Booster Club Tuesday night.

Officers elected are Phil Anderson, president; Larry Blassingame, vice president; Glenda Edwards, secretary; and Joe Morren, treasurer.

The treasurer's report was given by Morren who also served as treasurer last year.

Membership tickets were distributed to members to sell for $5 each and ads for football game programs were distributed to members with hopes to secure new ads for 1989-90.

It was decided that a door prize (a game football with varsity football members' signatures) will be given away at each meeting. You must be present to win.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, Sept. 12, at 7:30 p.m. at the middle school cafeteria.

First graders to receive books

First grade students at Kelley Elementary School will receive a gift-book titled My Favorite Book.

My Favorite Book is designed and written to bring "positive" influence into each of the children's lives.

It illustrates the beauty of their world and the people who are in it, especially themselves.

Sponsors of the program - Dr. Dee Roach, Colorado Feed and Seed, Gas 'n Grub and Ratliff Insurance Agency - see it as a valuable contribution toward the development of the young people in the community.

POUND KITTY - Freddy, a five-week-old male kitten, is available for adoption from the city pound located at Mitchell County Veterinary Clinic, Highway 208 South. For more information about him or other pets available for adoption, call 728-8055.

Smokers' flight guide is offered

For people who want to know beforehand which airline flights allow smoking, a new brochure, "Passport to Smokers' Flights," provides the answers.

Compiled by the Tobacco Institute, the booklet is a timetable of flights in North America that should permit smoking.

Smoking on airline flights of two hours or less currently is prohibited in the United States. The ban is due to expire in April 1990, although various proposals to extend the ban have been introduced in Congress.

To receive a copy of the timetable, write The Tobacco Institute, 1875 I St. N.W., Suite 800, Washington, D.C. 20006. ll

Producers should unify

COLLEGE STATION — The animal rights and welfare movements will not go away and cannot be ignored. Therefore, livestock producers should present a unified front in educating consumers about their industry, Dr. Stan Curtis said here last week.

Curtis, a professor of animal science-environment from the University of Illinois, said that livestock care practices such as branding, castration and dehorning are alien concepts to most consumers today and therefore a little frightening.

Curtis noted that the 100 producers attending the 1989 Texas A&M University Beef Industry Conference in the Rudder Center Theatre would understand the logic behind and the practicality of many of these practices. However, many consumers don't, he said.

The animal rights and welfare activists are a minority, but are very vocal and have demonstrated their ability to exert pressure on the media and consumers.

"They are a serious threat to all of animal agriculture," Curtis said.

Livestock producers can take a proactive and a reactive stance when dealing with these activists. He urged livestock producers to make necessary changes themselves.

He quoted Winston Churchill as saying, "Be sure to take change by the hand before it takes you by the throat."

For example, instead of investigating only production and animal health, the industry should welcome research on animal welfare, he said.

"If the public is ethically offended...then it doesn't matter what scientists find," he said.

Livestock producers should assure agriculturists that the animal welfarists are serious. Over 1,000 letters addressing animal rights and welfare are sent to United States Congressmen each week and the legislature will take action, with or without advice from livestock producers, he said.

Additionally, each producer should point out instances of frank animal neglect and abuse, he said.

There are instances of such abuse by producers, feedlot and market operators and employees, Curtis said.

"There are places we can pull up our own cinches," he said.

There are people in the industry who do not have a humane attitude toward animals. "That does not set well with the public. We have to watch what we do," he said.

Producers should encourage 99 percent brain and 1 percent brawn when working around animals and design working situations around the animals' psychology.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth." (Psalm 121:1-2)

"IN WHICH DIRECTION ARE YOU LOOKING"

Did you know that the direction in which we look tells much about us? For example, a backward look indicates stagnation. Looking from side to side is a sign of fear. And a downward look reveals depression of shame. But, and upward look is a symbol of hope and life.

Saints of God should always look up, for our help and our hope is in the LORD our God who dwells in the heaven of heavens. To be sure, saints (born-again believers) should look up, for life and hope is evident by the fact that Jesus said, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up. That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life."

newsworthy trends

Social Spending Rising Much Faster Than Defense

One of the great Washington myths is that the Defense Department is a bloated bureaucracy that soaks up federal dollars at the expense of social programs. Military spending has increased massively during the 1980's, runs the argument, while social spending has been cut to the bone. Hospitals and schools have supposedly been sacrificed for the sake of tanks and planes. Procurement scandals prove the corrupting effects of Pentagon largesse, say critics, and a huge redistribution of government resources is necessary to address America's pressing social ills.

A glance at the federal budget for the near future and recent past can refute these notions. Contrary to widespread public belief, U.S. military spending—when adjusted for inflation—has been declining since the mid-1980's. According to the latest five-year budget released by the Bush Administration, Pentagon expenditures for fiscal year (FY) 1990 will increase by less than one-half of one percent over 1989, far below inflation. Small yearly increments well under expected inflation are requested for 1991 and 1992. These figures are subject to change by Congress, which has for years revised downward any proposed spending for defense.

period, the figures for Social Security show a 25.1 percent rise—from $232.2 billion to $290.8 billion—and those for income security a 14.0 percent increase—from $137.0 billion to $156.2 billion. The total 1993 expenditures on defense, including defense-related Department of Energy projects, is less than half the total for Medicare, health, income security, Social Security, and veterans' benefits. These figures don't even include the proposed 1993 budgets for education, training, employment, and social services or community and regional development. Over the past four years, hikes in social spending have outpaced defense spending by five to one.

It is enlightening to compare these real cuts in military expenditures with proposed real increases in major categories of social spending. Outlays for Medicare, for example, will jump 7.8 percent in 1990 and will rise a hefty 40.1 percent to $69.8 billion in 1993. Over the same

To sum up, the U.S. spends well over twice as much on social programs as on defense. The spending gap between the two has significantly widened in the past four years, and will likely grow much larger over the next three years. The idea that a swollen military budget should be further gutted to free up money for a "starved" set of social programs simply does not support the facts.

Tick-borne Diseases

A few columns back, I covered "summer hazards." One topic touched in passing deserves a closer look—the tick-borne diseases, Rocky Mountain spotted fever and Lyme disease.

Rocky Mountain spotted fever (RMSF) is most prevalent in the Southeast where it is spread by the bite of a mature American dog tick (less frequently by the Lone Star and Gulf Coast ticks).

The good news is that the tick must be attached for some time, to transmit the disease and that RMSF is relatively easy to treat if identified promptly. The bad news is that untreated, RMSF is a serious disease, damaging the kidneys, liver, lungs and blood. It is potentially fatal.

Early RMSF symptoms resemble the flu. Severe headache, chills, sweats, a high fever (103 to 105), and muscle aches and stiffness occurring a few days to two weeks after a tick bite are reasons to be suspicious and consult a doctor.

Lyme disease was identified in Lyme, Conn., in 1975 and has become a major concern nationwide. The disease now has shown up in 43 states and is a serious problem in the Northeast, upper Midwest and Northern California.

Lyme is rarely fatal but is very debilitating. Untreated, it can lead to arthritis and neurological problems.

Lyme is transmitted by the bite of a tick known as Ixodes dammini, and other species of ticks are under suspicion. Unlike RMSF, Lyme may be transmitted by the bite of even a tiny nymphal tick of which the victim may be unaware.

Although Lyme disease is fairly easy to treat in its early stages, diagnosis can be difficult. Initial symptoms may be sporadic and mimic other maladies. Early symptoms appear several days to several weeks after the bite and may include a red "bull's eye" rash around the bite and flu-like headache, fever, stiffness and extreme fatigue.

Prevention is better than any cure. To avoid ticks, wear dark, protective clothing with long trousers tucked into boots and long-sleeved shirts buttoned at the cuff. Ticks are less attracted to dark colors; however, light colors do make ticks easier to see. Frequent "tick checks" of the body also are advisable. (In tick country, one should travel with very good friends.)

Use a 100 percent DEET insect repellent on yourself, and in highly infested areas, use the chemical permethrin on your clothes, particularly the lower legs.

To remove a tick, use tweezers to grasp its head and pull gently until it comes loose. Avoid squeezing the tick's body as that may "inject" more contamination into the victim. When removing a tick, do not use your bare fingers; wear plastic gloves or at least use a tissue or a paper towel to keep from contaminating your fingers.

Remember, Lyme disease is relatively new, and many urban/suburban physicians have never seen a case of it or RMSF. Mention your outdoor activities in general and any known tick bites in particular if you have reason to go to the doctor.

CONSUMER ALERT

by Jim Mattox
Attorney General

Consumer's Right To A Fair Report

A consumer's application for a credit card, charge account, personal loan or other form of credit is usually dependent on a "credit check" supplied by a consumer reporting agency (credit bureau). These agencies gather and sell consumer background information to creditors, employers, insurers, and other businesses.

Because credit bureaus maintain computerized information on hundreds of millions of consumers, there is always a chance of error. Federal law requires these agencies to maintain complete and accurate files and investigate consumer complaints of errors. In some cases, however, consumers have been unable to resolve incorrect listings with the reporting agency.

After receiving hundreds of consumer complaints against one of the nation's largest credit bureaus, the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division filed a lawsuit alleging that the company failed to maintain accurate consumer information, and failed to investigate and correct information within a reasonable period of time.

That lawsuit has since been settled and consumer complaints are being addressed. But consumers should be aware that they have specific rights and protections concerning credit reports.

The right to know. The name and address of the reporting agency used by a business must be supplied to the consumer by that business.

The right to access. Consumers may request information about their files from any credit reporting agency. Upon request, an agency is required to tell the consumer about every piece of information - except medical information - in the report. Agencies are also required to tell consumers the name of anyone who received a credit report in the past six months, or an employment report in the past two years. Although agencies are not required to provide a copy of the report, some do.

Freedom from fees. An agency cannot charge for the information if a consumer's application was denied because of a report furnished by that agency. However, the consumer must request the report within 30 days of receiving the denial notice. In other cases, the agency may charge a reasonable fee.

The right to accuracy. If notified by the consumer, a credit bureau is required to reinvestigate and make corrections in that consumer's report. In case of disputed evidence, both versions - the consumer's and the agency's - can be included in the file.

The right to confidentiality. Besides the consumer, credit reports can only be given to those with a legitimate business need.

Freedom from discrimination. Creditors may not deny consumer credit because of sex, race, marital status, age, national origin, or because the consumer is receiving public assistance income.

Up in the sky, it's the 'Birds'

By Bert Randolph Sugar
PM Editorial Services

To cop a line ... or three: Look, up in the sky. It's a bird, it's a plane, it's Superman. No, it's not a plane or Superman, but it sure as dickens is a bird - or several, if you like. Those birds being Baltimore Orioles. They're not only up in the sky, they're up in the standings as well. And therein lies a tale.

It was just a year ago that those same Orioles were less than soaring. In fact, they were limping. From the start of the 1988 season through their first 21 games, the O's were exactly that - 0 for the season. They were the most woebegone team in baseball, and in baseball history as well. Even a new manager couldn't put them back together again.

It was during this period that a group of us were sitting at the New York saloon known as Runyon's, sipping solace through a straw and discussing the pitiable plight and flight of the Orioles. Someone - I don't quite remember who it was, maybe Terry Cashman, the baseball balladeer - started comparing them to the Atlanta Braves, an equally pathetic band of players.

We soon began talking about the team that owner Ted Turner had labeled "America's Team," but nobody could remember having been included in the voting. The Braves all looked like anchormen on Turner's cable news channel and played with all the verve and movement of some of Turner's billboards. Whatever they were, "America's Team" they were not.

Anyhow, baseball push came to shove, and a small wager was made between supporters of the Braves and yours truly, a supporter of the Orioles. I bet the O's, despite not having won a game yet that season, would wind up with more wins than "America's Team."

This so-called "loser's pool" soon became a laughingstock among the so-called serious baseball fans throughout the metropolitan area. There were three or four good games to choose from on television every night; yet someone wandering into Runyon's off the street would witness the strange sight of grown men sitting in a booth rooting for or against the Atlanta Braves. Our sanity was beginning to be doubted, let alone whatever reputation we once had for good taste.

Well, to make a long story even longer, those two teams, the Orioles and the Braves, outdid themselves, finishing in a flat-footed (which is the way they played, too) tie for most wins. Truth to tell, the Orioles lost more games, and that, too, became the subject of another argument. In the end, the Orioles successfully laid claim to the title, "the worst team in baseball."

Now another year has gone by, and no longer are the Orioles or their fans laughingstocks.
