CLAIM BURKBURNETT OIL FIELD

VERDICT OF GUILTY LIFE SENTENCE IN COVINGTON TRIAL

JURY DELIBERATES EIGHTEEN HOURS REPORTING THIS MORNING.

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL IS FILED BY ATTORNEYS

Williams Tried For Murder Of One Of Eleven Negroes Found On His Plantation.

COVINGTON, GA., April 9.—John S. Williams, accused of the murder of eleven of his negro farm hands to halt a federal investigation of peonage, was found guilty of murder by a jury in Newton county superior court here today and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Motion for a new trial was immediately filed and hearing on the motion set for April 30 at Decatur, Ga., before Judge John B. Hutcheson, who presided at the trial.

The verdict of murder was recommended for mercy, which under the Georgia law automatically carried a life sentence, was ready exactly 18 hours after the case went to the jury and was calmly received by Williams. A moment later as his wife and children began to sob almost inaudibly, he seemed to be struggling to restrain his own emotions. Mrs. Williams sobbed on her husband's shoulder, his arm about her. Just after court adjourned the man's two daughters became hysterical and were led from the room by friends. Williams appeared more affected by his family's suffering than he had been by the verdict.

Williams was specifically on trial charged with the murder of one of the negroes found drowned in Newton county. Clyde Manning, negro farm boss for Williams and jointly indicted with him, testified that on Williams' order he and another negro, afterwards killed, had done the killing.

Williams had maintained a cheerful attitude during the trial and had stoutly maintained his innocence, although having admitted he might be technically guilty of peonage, as he said he had paid negroes fines and let them work out the debt.

Sentence was formally passed within a few moments after the verdict was read. Judge Hutcheson restated the verdict as read by T. R. Starr, a farmer and foreman of the jury and added: "And the verdict is the sentence of the court."

The verdict was not in exact form but in open court both sides agreed that it was legal by supreme court decisions and that no exception would be taken.

The motion for a new trial was made on the grounds that the verdict was "contrary to the evidence; contrary to the law and without evidence to support it."

The jury included seven farmers. The other five were merchants, and clerks and a barber. Most of the jurors were young men, six of them serving on the jury for the first time.

The case went to trial last Tuesday, one day being taken up with arguments for postponement and selection of a jury. The state took little more than a day to present its evidence while the defense relied solely on the unsworn statement of Williams.

JAPANESE WANT TO ENCOURAGE A MORE FRIENDLY RELATION

By A. L. BRADFORD,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Japan is about to make a number of important "gestures" to strengthen the relations between that country and the United States, it was learned today.

The mikado's government is understood to be making these important moves to avoid the least possibility of a break in the present friendly relations between the United States and Japan and to emphasize the absolute importance to the peace of the world in maintaining the strongest friendship between the two countries.

One of the important steps to be taken soon by Japan to strengthen American-Japanese relations will be the sending of a mission of members of the Japanese diet to the United States. The Japanese congressional party will leave early next month. There may be some significant pronouncement on the subject of American-Japanese relations while the mission is here.

There are probably no two countries in which "jingoism" is more prevalent than in the United States and Japan, it is believed in responsible quarters here. Race antagonism also is said to have been fanned during the past several months to a dangerous point by these two issues existing between the United States and Japan.

1—Japan's protest against the anti-alien land laws of California.

2—America's protest against the inclusion of the island of Yap under a Japanese mandate.

VERNON CHAMBER OPPOSES MEMBERSHIP DRIVE FOR THE WEST TEXAS ORGANIZATION

VERNON, TEXAS, April 9.—At a meeting of the senior board of directors of the chamber of commerce held yesterday, a proposition of the west Texas chamber of commerce to institute a drive among Vernon business men for membership in that body was turned down by the local commercial organization heads. It was pointed out at the meeting that Vernon business men support the local chamber, and it in turn is affiliated with the Texas and national chambers which offer it all commercial service required. It was noted further that such a drive among Vernon business men would result in much money being taken out of town. Directors expressed themselves as not being opposed to a membership in the West Texas body taken out by the Vernon chamber.

Directors endorsed an immediate election for the purpose of voting county general hospital bonds. They also endorsed the building on the grounds that Vernon is inadequately equipped at the present for the treatment of all kinds of diseases.

The chamber of commerce will issue a classified membership directory every quarter hereafter, and the first will appear the end of the month and will contain the names of all members in good standing up to and including the close of business on April 30. This directory will be generally distributed. Directors also discussed the building of a bridge over the Red river to give Vernon an outlet to the north. It was pointed out that the Seymour bridge has proved an immense advantage as an outlet to the south and a north bridge would prove equally profitable.

FRUIT GROWERS WARNED IN MIDDLEWEST STATES

CHICAGO, April 9.—The weather bureau here today received reports of considerable damage done to the fruit crop in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Western Missouri when the temperature dropped below freezing.

Warning was issued today of danger of additional damage tonight.

FRUIT GROWERS PREPARE TO PROTECT THEIR TREES

CHICAGO, April 9.—Fruit growers of the midwest today prepared to protect their trees from freezing weather, predicted for the next 24 hours. A heavy freeze would be ruinous to a great many fruit growers, government officials stated, as many trees are now budding or blooming.

NO COURT CONTEST ON ELECTION UNLESS RECOUNT IS DENIED

An apparent change in the original plans for an election contest was indicated Saturday, when it became known that the matter will not be taken into the courts for the present, but that the city council will be asked to order a recount of the ballots. Should the council fail to grant the request, court action will follow, but it is not considered at all likely that the council will decline the request.

The original plan, to take the contest direct to the courts, is understood to have been changed late Friday, it being the belief of Mr. Hodgins, contesting candidate, that such action was not necessary, and that a council order for a recount of the votes and a re-checking of the tally sheets would suffice.

Report Widespread Violence In Connection With British Strike

By United Press.

LONDON, April 9.—Widespread violence was reported today in connection with the miners' strike.

An airdrome at Newcastle was dismantled and equipment destroyed.

Telegraph poles and wires were felled near Shields.

Extensive incendiarism occurred last night in Northumberland. Hay stacks used for feeding pit ponies in the Bedlington colliery were burned and numerous stacks of wheat, barley and oats were destroyed in other districts.

Sporadic outbreaks of looting occurred in some parts of the strike area.

By ED L. KEEN
United Press Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, April 9—With Great Britain tottering on the verge of the greatest industrial war in history, the government continued its efforts today to avert the plunge into the abyss.

Premier Lloyd George received a special deputation of the "triple alliance" in secret conference. The meeting adjourned shortly before noon and while the labor leaders refused to discuss what had transpired, all bore a serious mien and indicated that no progress had been made toward halting the general strike of railway and transport workers, called for midnight Tuesday in support of the miners' strike.

Immediately after the conference with labor representatives, Lloyd George called into consultation the Marquis of Londonderry, vice-president of the air council and Sir Trenchard, air marshal. The country's air forces were included in the military mobilization order and are expected to be utilized for communication with remote districts and transportation of food.

What was regarded as a very significant fact was that King George and Queen Mary moved today from Windsor Castle to Buckingham in London.

Accepted as Good Omen.

The fact that the "triple alliance" leaders consented to meet the premier after yesterday's general strike decision—which would call out nearly 4,000,000 workers including the miners now on strike—was accepted as a good omen in official circles. The meeting was ostensibly for the purpose of formally conveying the strike decision to the government but there was a feeling that it also represented a disposition on the part of the laborites to negotiate if they saw their way clear to do so.

Refusal of the railway and transport workers of Liverpool and other centers to accept the general strike decision was pointed to in official quarters as indicating the correctness of the government's statement that not more than fifty per cent of the men will respond to the strike order.

Meantime, there has been a big response to the king's call for volunteers for a defense force. Drill halls were presenting scenes similar to those in August, 1914, at the outbreak of the world war. Destruction of mines through cessation of pumping continued to grow. Most of the mines in the Rhondda Valley were said to be flooded.

Glasgow already was experiencing a coal famine. It was estimated that fully 500,000 persons were out of work in Scotland and that this number would increase to two million if the general strike went through.

PUMPERS IN 1919 STRIKE ORDERED TO REMAIN ON JOB

By United Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 9.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America today called attention to the fact that in the strike of the British coal miners, the pumpers were called out, while during the 1919 strike in America the pumpers were ordered to remain at work. Ellis Searles, editor of the Mine Workers' Journal, declared that because the pumpers in America were ordered to remain at work to prevent flooding of the properties, the union officials are under federal indictment. Searles said:

"The British government is endeavoring to persuade the British miners to do one of the very things that members of the United Mine Workers of America have been indicted by the federal grand jury for doing," the statement said. "The British miners called out the pumpers who keep water out of the mines and save these properties from ruin. This action has caused an uproar in Great Britain.

"How different this is from the way the miners in America are treated. The indictment returned by the federal grand jury at Indianapolis against coal operators and members and officers of the United Mine Workers says that when the miners went on strike in 1919 they left pumpers and others at work in the mines to protect the properties and charges that this was a criminal act under the Sherman anti-trust law. The indictment charges that this was part of the alleged conspiracy entered into by operators and miners.

MURDER CAR SOUGHT IN VAIN BY OFFICERS AFTER MAN IS SLAIN

JOHN WHITMAN, TAILOR, KILLED FRIDAY NIGHT BY SOME ONE SHOOTING FROM AUTO.

MYSTERY ATTENDS AFFAIR, NO MOTIVE IS KNOWN

Young Man Shot Down While Escorting Young Woman To Her Home —Six Shots Are Fired.

Mystery, presenting perplexing problems to local police officials, surrounds the shooting and death of John Whitman, aged 24 years. The tragedy occurred at Second and Seymour streets at 11 o'clock Friday night and Whitman died at the Wichita General Hospital at 4 o'clock Saturday morning.

Whitman and Miss Cecil Hester, who resides within a hundred feet of the tragedy scene, were walking across the street when they were forced to stop and allow a speeding Ford roadster to pass. According to Miss Hester, when the car was but ten feet away, a shot sounded and Mr. Whitman fell to the ground, shot in the head just above the right temple.

The speeding automobile rushed on and although police searched the city the entire night and morning, no further trace was found of the car. Detective A. E. Bridgewater and several other officers traced the car, they said, as far as the bridge across Holliday creek on the old Holliday road. The only description the officers gave of the car is that one of the rear tires was a cord and the other a diamond tread.

Shoots at Machine.

City Policeman J. Wagner and J. A. Haigwood and H. J. Butler were within a block of the shooting. Wagner was ahead of the car and the other two men were behind. Butler was also forced to jump out of the way of the speeding car and he fired twice, the first shot puncturing the left rear casing.

According to Mr. Butler the automobile kept right on and just as they neared the crossing some man leaned out o fthe car and fired directly at Whitman's head. Mr. Butler and Mr. Wagner both saw the flash of the gun.

When the car came near Policeman Wagner, he fired two shots and he stated he heard someone in the car cry out "Oh, Slim."

Policeman Wagner and his two companions had been out looking for the party or parties who had entered his house earlier in the evening, stolen all the groceries and other belongings and set fire to one of the rooms.

No Motive Advanced.

Miss Hester is uncertain as to whether the shot that struck Whitman was fired from the automobile or whether it came from some other direction. One of the witnesses to the tragedy stated that several shots were fired by some unknown persons along the side of the street in the middle of the block.

The motive of the shooting of Whitman, if there was any, is not known as relatives stated that he had no enemies and had had no trouble of any nature as far as they knew. The deceased was in business with his brother Joe Whitman as the Barwise Tailoring company.

Officers are of the belief that the two men in the Ford were the same men who had entered the house of Policeman Wagner and that as they approached the street crossing after Butler had fired two shots at them they were of the opinion that they had been trapped in and fired the shot thinking that Whitman was an officer.

Is Taken to Hospital.

The theory is also advanced that the men had lain in wait near the home of Miss Hester and as they saw the couple approach the street crossing, rushed by in the car and accomplished their purpose.

J. N. Trimble of 210 Seymour street stated at police station Saturday morning that he heard six shots fired. Three were fired, he said, in close succession and after a brief interval three more were fired.

The injured man was hurried to the general hospitaly where Dr. J. A. C. Guest was called to attend him. He died at 4 a. m. without having gained consciousness. The body was removed to the Merkle Lunn undertaking establishment.

The hat of the dead man was turned over to county officials Saturday morning by Mr. Butler. The bullet entered the right side of the hat and penerated the brain, ranging downward.

Late News Briefs

BUENOS AIRES.—Frederic J. Stimson, American ambassador to Argentina, has notified the Argentine government that he has resigned his position. Prof. Stimson expects to return to the United States shortly.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—Potatoes sold for 18 cents a bushel on the market here yesterday. It was the lowest price reported in many years and was due to the receipt of thousands of bushels growers had been holding for higher prices since last fall.

EDMONTON, ALBERTA.—Albert Larsen, New York aviator, hopped off today on a flight in the north, planning to visit Peace River and the Fort Norman oil fields and to cruise into the Arctic circle, possibly going as far as Fort McPherson.

MEXICO CITY.—General Manuel Pelaez has been authorized by President Obregon to give any information concerning Mexico requested by the United States government while he is in Washington, and during his sojourn there he will confer with President Harding if the latter so desires, says an official statement tonight.

BARCELONA.—Emilo Ortunna, former minister of public works, announced to the International conference of communication and transit that he intends to petition the assembly of the league of nations to recognize Spanish as the official language of the conference.

MADRID.—Great damage has been done along the Mediterranean coast of Spain by a terrific tempest, according to dispatches. Three fishing boats have disappeared with their crews.

ASSISTANT PAYMASTER U. S. SHIP IS LOCATED; SHORTAGE IN ACCOUNTS

BOSTON, April 9.—Lieutenant Joseph Lynam, assistant paymaster of the United States ship Chester, who disappeared several weeks ago after it was said a $25,000 shrinkage was discovered in his accounts, has been found and will surrender himself to naval authorities, it was reported here today.

Lynam was traced by a reporter of the Boston Post, who said the lieutenant told him he had been robbed of $13,000 on March 31, and now is without funds.

Mystery of Location Of Confederate Seal May Never Be Solved

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The whereabouts of the official seal of the Confederacy, an unsolved mystery for more than half a century, probably will forever remain unknown. James Jones, aged negro employe in the senate office building, said to be the only person with a knowledge of where the seal was buried, died today without disclosing the secret.

Jones was serving as a servant of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, when Davis was captured. The story goes, Jones buried the seal before the federal authorities could obtain possession of the Confederate leader's effects, and to his death never revealed the spot.

LODGE AND KNOX IN POLITICAL HEAVEN AS A RESULT OF EVENTS

THINGS ARE GOING THEIR WAY AND THEY ARE FEELING VERY GOOD.

REJOICE OVER CRITICISM OF THE FORMER PRESIDENT

Also Gratified Over Prominence Given Knox Resolution Over Association Of Nation's Plan.

By MARK SULLIVAN
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and the Wichita Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9—The irreconcilable senators are feeling very good. Things are going their way. Lodge is in his heaven and Knox is by his right side. They and their acolytes and neophytes their seraphim and cherubin, are singing "Gaudeamus igitur" every time they meet. And, they meet very often, formally or informally. They are feeling so good and are so well pleased with themselves and with one another that they like to get together and celebrate, and tell one another how valiant they were and how joyful they are.

They are a happy band of brothers. They rehearse old battles like veterans fighting Chickamauga over, or Chateau-Thierry. Ever once in so often in the spirit of their rights, they dash outside the circle of their talk to kick the fresh immortelles from Mr. Wilson's tombstone and do a little war dance around his grave. That always refreshes them particularly. After that ceremony the ululation occasionally gets just a little close—as close as good orthodox republicans go—to faint, oh, ever so faint, intimations of what they could do if they chose to do it to any other president who might try to treat them as badly as Mr. Wilson did.

No clear-sighted person will deny that much of this is justified in the irreconcilables. Events have gone their way. You may like their issue or you may not like it; you may approve their tactics or not approve them, but if you have any sense of reality you will admit that the course of events favors and justifies them.

Not only did the nation, in that solemn referendum that Mr. Wilson called for, reject the treaty by an unprecedented majority, events subsequent to the election have tended to confirm the American public in their suspicion of everything that was done at Paris. Can anyone doubt that Mr. Lansing's book and the enormous circulation of his magazine articles, giving first-hand and contemporary evidence, must necessarily have further crystalized the public mind against Mr. Wilson, the league, Versailles, Paris and Europe altogether?

Here is Mr. Wilson's own secretary of state saying things about Mr. Wilson and secrecy and bamboozlement worse than anything the most violent irreconcilables said in the senate. It is futile to deny it. You may feel that Mr. Wilson's mistakes and Mr. Wilson's personality are beside the point, and that the world must have a mechanism for peace or civilization will perish. You may feel all that as a permanent conviction, but not even the most ardent, unless he is blinded to fatuousness by his faith can deny that the senate irreconcilables are entitled to the increase they have made in numbers, in power and in confidence.

Their increase in power and numbers is very marked. Only those close to the senate realize it. Not only have converts come to them through the force of events. Not only are many irreconcilables now who were reservationists before. In the reorganization of the senate committee on foreign affairs, and in the new steering committee that is going to have much power, individual irreconcilable senators have straightened their grip. Lodge, chairman of the senate foreign affairs committee, chairman of the steering committee and chairman of the republican caucus, who during the last session was a kind of parliamentary moderator between the irreconcilable and the reservation factions, is now an out and out irreconcilable.

All this explains not full but to a degree why Senator Knox's resolution is in the center of the news and President Harding's association of nations is not. The irreconcilables are able to have a program and President Harding is not. President Harding has a burden of responsibility that the senate can carry more lightly.

GOVERNMENT LIKELY TO ACCEPT ASYLUM OFFER, SAYS REPORT

Copies of a Washington dispatch to the San Antonio Express, stating that the government will probably accept Wichita Falls' offer of the asylum building for the government hospital, have been received here and are taken as additional indication that this city's chances are good.

The Express' message indicated that San Antonio considers herself out of the running.

No final decision is expected to be reached in the matter for about two

PETITION FOR INDIANS INCLUDES TULSA AND OKLAHOMA CITY WITH FOURTEEN MILLION ACRES OF LAND

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Claim to 14,000,000 acres of land in Texas and Oklahoma, including the cities of Tulsa and Oklahoma City and practically the entire Burkburnett oil field, was filed in the supreme court today in behalf of the Cherokee Indian nation, supported by a government patent issued by President Van Buren and certified as authentic by the interior department.

The claim was in the form of a petition for permission to intervene in the Red river oil lands case, an original suit between Texas and Oklahoma, involving jurisdiction over the valuable oil fields situated along the common boundary.

The motion was filed by John M. Taylor, a grand-nephew of General Zachary Taylor, an attorney for the Cherokee nations. He said the patent was discovered accidentally among the papers of a deceased chief of the tribe.

Bearing the date of December 31, 1838, the patent gave to the Cherokee nation "forever" a tract about 500 miles in length through the Panhandle section, comprising in all 14,375,133.14 acres. Only the possibility that the statute of limitations will nullify the claim prevents the Cherokee nation from having a "water tight case," counsel said. It will be contended, it was added, that this statute does not apply since the supreme court has held that it cannot be pressed against the government itself, and that the Indian tribe as wards of the government, are possessed of the same rights.

DECLARES CHEROKEE NATION WITHOUT A LEGAL STATUS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 9.—Doubt that the Cherokee Indian nation can lay claim to more than 14,000,000 acres of land in Oklahoma and Texas, as was done in a petition filed in the United States supreme court today because it has no official or legal status as a nation, was expressed today by S. P. Freeling, attorney general of Oklahoma. He said however that it might be possible for individual descendants of members of the nation to support the petition.

SUPREME COURT OF TENNESSEE AFFIRMS SUFFRAGE DECISION

NASHVILLE, TENN., April 9—The Tennessee supreme court sustained today the legality of the process by which Governor Roberts certified to the federal state department ratification of the women suffrage amendment by the state legislature. The court affirmed the action of Chief Justice Lansden in issuing writs under which the governer acted.

ALLEGED MISTREATMENT OF MEXICANS IN TEXAS WILL BE INVESTIGATED

AUSTIN, TEXAS, April 9—Mistreatment of Mexicans in Texas, as reported to Secretary of State Hughes by Mexican consuls, was under investigation by Governor Neff today.

A third note received from Hughes by Neff, said consuls allege an assault and kidnaping of two Mexicans at Briggs, Texas, and peonage conditions at Bastrop.

A Mexican was assaulted at Briggs and an interpreter kidnaped him so he could not take part in the trial, the state department said it was reported. Another Mexican, Sacramento B. Martinez, was alleged to have been mistreated there.

Another consul reported seventy-five Mexicans received no pay for work done on roads and bridges near Bastrop.

DISCUSS PLANS TO RELIEVE SOUTHERN COTTON SITUATION

NEW ORLEANS, April 9—Plans to solve and relieve the southern cotton situation were to be discussed today at a meeting of representatives of the federal reserve bank at Atlanta, Federal International Banking company of New Orleans and the war finance corporation.

The meeting here today is a continuance of the conference in Washington Monday when southern bankers met officials of the war finance corporation and members of the cabinet to discuss some plan to move the cotton crop of the south to the markets of the world.

Organization of a corporation under the Webb-Pomerene act to handle cotton exports is particularly to be discussed.

Eugene Mayer Jr., managing director, and Dwift F. Davis, a director of the war finance corporation, were here to participate in the discussions.

BALLOON DISCOVERED AT SEA 20 MILES OFF PANAMA CITY, FLA. NO TRACE OF THE BALLOONISTS

By United Press.

PENSACOLA, FLA., April 9.—A balloon, thought to be the one aboard which five aeronauts from the naval station here were blown to sea more than two weeks ago, was found floating at sea 20 miles off Panama City, Fla., last night, according to a report reaching the naval station here today. The balloon was picked up by a small boat and has been taken to Panama City.

A seaplane was dipatched from the naval station here to Panama City to identify the aircraft.

According to the report, the balloon was deflated when found. No sign of the missing balloonists was discovered.

DISCOVERY IS REPORTED IN A PRIVATE MESSAGE

By United Press.

KANSAS CITY, MO., April 9.—A report that the naval balloon blown out over the Gulf of Mexico recently had been found was received by the Kansas City Post today.

This private message was received:

"Panama City, Fla., April 9.—Lost balloon from Pensacola found this a m., 20 miles off Cape San Blas.

(Signature) "J. A. SMITH."

DEPUTY MAKING FIRST INSPECTION IN YOUNG COUNTY OIL DISTRICT

GRAHAM, TEXAS, April 9—Mike McNamara, who has been assigned to Young county as deputy inspector for the oil and gas department of the Texas railroad commission, is making his first inspection of the Young county field and meeting the operators.

One of the first matters that will be investigated by Mr. McNamara will be that of pipe line facilities in the field. If the pipe line company is unable to care for the full production, Mr. McNamara will insist on the operators not bringing in their wells until pipe line connections are made. This will result in preventing a waste of oil, he said.

It may be necessary to have wells pinched in, the inspector said, and added that in no case will he prevail on an operator to close in a well, as experience has shown that in cases where a well is closed in it can never be brought back to full production.

Following an inspection of the field and a study of conditions therein, Mr. McNamara will call the operators together and outline his policies in dealing with them in the future.

As Mr. McNamara comes to Graham highly recommended, it is thought that he will be a great help in the oil development of Young county. The inspector has established temporary headquarters at the chamber of commerce.

DROP OF 38 DEGREES IN TEMPERATURE AT VERNON

VERNON, TEXAS, April 9—The temperature Friday morning showed a drop of 38 degrees from the highest mark reached the preceding day, the mercury registering 41 degrees about 7 a. m. Wednesday night the temperature went to 42 degrees. According to records kept by the local weather bureau, the highest mark reached by the thermometer during March was 81 degrees. The lowest was 28 degrees. Total rainfall for the month was 2.2 inches. There were 16 clear days during March, 6 partly cloudy and 9 cloudy. There was some hail on March 13.

RICKARD ANNOUNCES THE BIG FIGHT WILL BE IN NEW JERSEY

NEW YORK, April 9—Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier will battle for the world's heavyweight pugilistic championship within the state limits of New Jersey on Saturday, July 2.

The exact location of a specially constructed arena will not be announced until later but selection of the site will be confined to Atlantic City, Newark or Jersey City.

This was officially announced here this afternoon by Tex Rickard, who will have sole control of the arrangements.

CONSTRUED SILENCE ON ISLAND OF YAP TO MEAN CONSENT

PARIS, April 9—Woodrow Wilson, by failing to object to award of the island of Yap to Japan when it came before the "big four" during the peace conference, was looked upon as, by silence giving consent, according to a dispatch received today from Stephean Lauzanne, editor of the Matin, who is now in Washington with Viviani.

"In May, 1919, the big four proposed attribution of the Pacific Islands to Japan," Lauzanne cabled. "Wilson remarked, 'I'll see.' The same evening hundreds of papers were laid before him, including the attribution of Yap. Wilson laid these aside. The big four construed his silence as giving consent.

"Now Secretary Hughes does not accept this interpretation. He contends that Leon Bourgeois and Jules Cambon represented the French government and that France is responsible."

LARAMIE HOLDS THE RANGE By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father.

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted his mother years before, and whom the girl has never seen. This strange father she finds engaged in certain dubious enterprises which he does not see fit to explain, but he shows a furtive affection for the girl and establishes her in a cottage at Sleepy Cat Junction with

BELLE STOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood whom he has engaged to run his eating house in the town. Kate hears mystifying references to her father's affairs from

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman, whom she likes, and

TOM STONE, foreman at Doubleday's ranch, whom she does not like at all. Also she hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, about whose character there seems to be sharp differences of opinion. Laramie, she gathers, is a figure of some importance in a war which is being waged between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country. One day at the eating house, meeting a stranger whom she believes to be a marshal with papers to serve on her father, Kate lures him away into the plains on the pretext of taking a ride with her, only to find, to her chagrin, that the man is not a marshal at all, but Jim Laramie himself. Soon afterward Doubleday closes his eating house at Sleepy Cat Junction and Kate goes to her father's ranch. Then, at a celebration staged by the proprietor of the town hotel, Van Horn approaches Laramie with the proposal that he line up with the Doubleday outfit in the feuds that are under way. Laramie refuses defiantly, and the incident has a dramatic climax when Tom Stone, half drunk, tries to murder Laramie and is knocked down by the latter's ready fist. The next day Laramie drops in at an eating house which Belle Stockley has opened on her own account, and here, after dining with JOHN LEFEVER, the deputy marshal, he strolls into the kitchen and confronts Kate Doubleday, confusedly trying to get out by a back door that will not open.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

Fourth of July at Doubleday's.

JIM walked to the door, explaining as he took hold of the knob, "The door wasn't locked; I could tell that from the way you handled it. You locked it, yourself——"

Kate could not hide her resentment. "It wouldn't open when I first took hold of it," she declared hastily. "I tried it before I touched the key."

"I know, but when you did take hold of the key you locked the door and then you couldn't open it; so you unlocked it and tried it again. After that you worked so fast I lost track." He pointed to the back of the lock. "The catch was on." And pushing down the catch he opened the door.

Kate was thoroughly incensed. "You are doubtless better acquainted here than I am."

"To tell the truth, I have to be acquainted with rooms I go into. If I ever tried to get through a door and failed, it might not be pleasant. And there's a board fence, six feet high, all around this yard, so unless you're a good climber you couldn't have got out, anyway."

Kate felt she looked very silly, standing staring at him, and perhaps looking frightened—as she really was—for he went on as if he were explaining to a child: "I'm not permitted to tell you, but I'm going to——"

"Don't bother, please——"

"Yes, I'd rather. There is a way to get out without climbing the fence; a loose board I'll show you some time—but you must handle yourself fast to make your getaway."

"I never expect," she said contemptuously, "to have to make a getaway."

"'Then I was wrong," he said frankly, "for I kind of thought you were trying to make one a minute ago."

His composure irritated Kate. "You are very much mistaken," she declared with spirit in her words, for she saw—indeed knew—how persistent he was. "I was only trying to leave for home quietly and quickly."

His eyes were a study in silent laughter. "That's all I've ever claimed to be doing, any time in my life."

"But I can just as well leave by the front door—which, perhaps," retorted Kate, "you haven't always been able to do."

"Before you go——" he was standing directly in the archway, so she had to listen—"tell me about things at the Junction; I hear the lunchroom was closed up a while ago."

"It was. But——" Kate thought the time for explanation had come—"I was not working at the eating house when you came in there. I am Kate Doubleday and I wanted to save my father that day and I'm not a bit sorry for it."

"I suppose, then, I ought to speak out, too. I knew you were Kate Doubleday soon after I got into the lunchroom that day and I'm not a bit sorry for it. And I knew pretty soon you were trying to save your father. And I helped you."

"O——" Kate suppressed an incredulous exclamation.

"Believe it or not as you like, I helped you. And I'm not a bit sorry for it. Though he is no friend of mine, you have been from that day on; and if you ever give me a chance I'll prove it. The worst thing you did was to go back on your word——"

"My word was not freely given," Kate was speaking furiously.

"It shouldn't have been given at all, then. But it's all right. Will you be friends with me?"

"No man that speaks of my father as you spoke of him a moment ago can be my friend."

"It was Lefever spoke of your father. I couldn't shut him off. Of course, he didn't know you were here. I did know after I'd been here awhile. I heard you whisper. That's why I asked for the ink—I had no letters to write. There's a lot of hard feeling in this country right now. Every man in it has friends and enemies. You mustn't take it seriously when you hear hard words—I don't; and I hear plenty. Hadn't you and I better be friends to start with, anyway?"

"No," she exclaimed angrily. "Please let me pass."

He stepped promptly aside. "I never dreamed of doing anything less."

Kate started rapidly for the front door.

While the spirit ran high, rodeo riding began with the master artists of the range and the pink of horsemanship in the saddle.

Whom should she run into just as she opened it but Belle, coming back from her wretched telephoning! Kate inwardly blamed her for all her trouble, and she was on edge, besides.

"Where you going?" demanded Belle.

"Home," answered Kate, shortly.

"Home? You haven't had your lunch."

"I don't want any."

Belle caught Kate's arm. "Now you just hold on. What's the matter? Is it Laramie?" Belle must have read her face, for she answered nothing, only tried to get away. "But, child!" she exclaimed. "Where's your coat—wait till I bring it—and your gloves!" Nancy paused at the door. In a minute Belle came running back. "He's gone, absolutely. There isn't a soul anywhere about. Now you shan't go till you take a cup of coffee. Here's the cream—he left it at the wrong door, the stupid!"

Kate could not get away. And Belle had told the truth: Laramie was gone.

Whatever the shortcomings of the American frontier code, there never was a time in its history when a man could violate the principles of fair play and keep public opinion on his side. In this instance, Stone's conduct reacted unfavorably on the cattlemen. The townspeople that made money out of the trade of big ranches always stood up for the cattlemen, but they were put most unpleasantly on the defensive by the incident. Even had Stone's attempt on Laramie's life succeeded it would have been easier for the partisans to handle than the failure it proved. As a fait accompli it would have been regretted, but forgotten; as a failure it settled nothing.

Among the few townspeople that sturdily retained independence of opinion on all matters, none stood higher than the surgeon, Doctor Carpy. And encountering Doubleday on the street shortly after the Stone incident, he took it on himself to talk to him.

The Doctor had his office at his home, but back of the prescription counter in his little drug store—no bigger than a minute—he had a small room for emergency consultations. To this he invited Doubleday, and having ushered him in, seated him and closed the door. Carpy sat down: "There's few men, Barb——" The Doctor began by qualifying the adjective profanely—"few men in this country that dare to talk to you the way you ought to be talked to; of them few I'm probably the only one that would take the trouble. Your enemies won't talk and everybody friendly with you is afraid of you. You've got so d——d much property and stuff here they're plumb afraid of you. I'm a poor man, Barb—don't never expect to be anything else, and I don't give a hang for anybody," averred the erratic surgeon with more profanity, "and nobody gives a hang for me."

Doubleday, chewing the stub of a cigar, eyed his medical adviser with an unsympathetic stare, but this in no way disturbed the self-appointed critic. "For a long time now, Barb," he continued, "you've been in the nastiest kind of a fight on Jim Laramie. You've tried to run him off the range and you tried to beat him out of his land and you've tried to break him. He's got the best land in the Falling Wall and he's in your way. One time his wire is all pulled off his fence. Another time your foreman pokes a gun into his stomach."

Doubleday was grimly silent. "I've known Jim Laramie," Carpy went on, "since he was a boy. He's stubborn as a broncho if you try to ride him. He's the easiest man in the world to get along with if you make a friend of him. No matter what's said of Jim Laramie there ain't a crooked hair in his head; but he's no angel and when his patience quits—look out. What I'm going to tell you now, Barb, is on the square. It can't go no further. I tell you because you ought to know. A while back, just after this wire pulling, Jim Laramie walked into this room, shut the door and locked it, and sat down right where you're sittin' now. He told me the wire story; he told me he was through. He'd tracked the men to your ranch and was going to square accounts with you and Stone and Van Horn. He was on his way to the Junction and he told me he might not come back and wanted to tell me how to dispose of his property. He was after you and he meant, before he fell down, to get some or all of you. He asked me where you were, because he heard I knew. I did know, but I didn't tell him. I lied, Barb. I told him, the mines, but I knew you were at the Junction. He started for the mines. What happened to turn him off your trail I never yet learned. I never asked.

"Now you saw, or you heard anyway, what happened when Stone tried to kill him the other night. That man never can get Laramie. And don't depend on Stone and Van Horn to play you fair, for if they had to save their hides, Barb, they'd sell you. My advice is this: Put back Laramie's wire. Let the cattlemen, you and Pettigrew to lead 'em, do it to clear their own names. Say you know nothing about it, but it was a dirty trick, and tell this town that cattlemen fight but they fight fair. It'll do more to set you right and to set everything right on the range than anything else you could possibly do. And don't make a mistake. Laramie'll follow that wire pulling for years but what he'll get the man that did it. I know him. He's got a memory like an Indian."

Like all well meaning and candid friends, the doctor found himself at once in for a deal of angry abuse, but, as he explained, he had taken so much abuse from patients at various periods of his career—and abuse fully justified—that nothing Barb could add, deserved or undeserved, to the volume would move him.

"As our old governor back in Wisconsin said, Barb, 'I seen my duty and I done it,'" was the doctor's only retort to Doubleday's wrath. "Now if you're in a hurry, Barb, don't let me keep you, not a minute. I had my say, and if there's anything pressing you down street, go to it."

But angry as Doubleday appeared, Carpy had given him something to think about. Consultations were held—by precisely whom, no one could say, but in them there was dissension. Van Horn vehemently opposed any further overtures to Laramie, and he was vastly put out at being overruled. While the discussions were going on he talked in a veiled but emphatic way to Kate about the queer way her father was acting. Van Horn would shake his head with violent emphasis at the way things were going. But when Kate poured oil on the waters of his discontent, Van Horn was always responsive, and stayed to dinner or for the evening, if he were asked—and Kate was alone.

On the gentler side, however, he could make no headway. When he tried headaches for sympathy, Kate was stony-hearted. When he asked her one day at the spring to take down her hair, she told him she wore a wig. He looked at her amazed. And in spite of his objections to placating Laramie, a decision very unpalatable to him was reached.

Pettigrew, as spokesman, approached Laramie and insisted, in order to allay bad feeling, on replacing the barb wire. When Laramie declared the wire must be put back by the men who had cut it, there was naturally an impasse, but Tenison and Carpy, aided jointly by the representations of Lefever and Sawdy, induced Laramie to forego his punitive attitude and accept the amende as offered. This, as the doctor had predicted, put a pleasanter face on the tangled affairs of the range. And to strike while their iron was hot, and to keep it hot, the cattlemen announced a big Fourth of July celebration, at which old scores should be forgotten and friends and enemies meet in goodfellowship. The place for it, after much talk, was fixed at Doubleday's ranch. The saloonkeepers of Sleepy Cat, except Tenison, fought this, but they lost out.

Since her own home was to be the scene of the celebration, Kate took a particular interest in the undertaking. She made herself, in a way, hostess, and her father gave her free rein. The big crowd that responded to the public invitation found awaiting them, as they picturesquely rode in twos and threes and groups up the creek to the ranch house, all the "fixin's" for a rousing celebration. Men came for as much as fifty miles, and some of them by trails and over passes Kate had never even heard of. There were cattlemen, cowboys, sheepmen, little ranchers—all the conflicting elements of the country, besides a crowd from Sleepy Cat with the band, and all the town loafers that could possibly secure a conveyance.

There was for these latter worthies the attraction of a free feed—for they knew the prodigality of the cattlemen—but there was also the underlying hope that where so discordant elements were assembled a fight might occur; and nobody wanted to miss a fight. The principals necessary for a serious affair were present. The fact that all were armed was not significant, merely prudent. Men careless on this point were no longer attending celebrations of any sort around Sleepy Cat.

From the Falling Wall came the rustlers, every one of them except Doubleday's old foreman, Abe Hawk, who scorned all pretense of compromise. He advised Laramie not to go near the celebration. When Laramie intimated he might go, Abe was greatly amazed. A master of bitter sarcasm, he trained his batteries on his sandy-haired friend, and, these failing, he warned him he would be in serious danger. He intimated that the scheme was to get the rustlers all together and finish them in a bunch. In which event, one hated as Laramie was could hardly hope to escape unmolested. But Laramie persisted in his resolution to go, and he went.

Doctor Carpy made it a point to go. He was usually needed at Fourth of July celebrations professionally. But on this occasion he was, in matter of fact, sort of sponsor for the whole affair, and he brought Sawdy, Lefever, and Tenison along. The four drove out in the smartest wagon and behind the best team in the Kitchen barn, Kitchen with them and McAlpin driving.

By noon the big end of the crowd had arrived. The barbecue tables were set out under the trees along the creek. The roasting itself was in the skilled hand of John Frying Pan and before one o'clock he was ready to serve.

The day was fine, the crowd big, and everybody seemingly happy. Doubleday had told Kate, when arranging for the tables, that his particular friends would sit at his table, and she was on her way down to the creek to ask him how many there would be in the party, when whom should she find him talking with, of all men, but Laramie, who had just ridden over from the Falling Wall.

Before Kate could retreat her father had seen her. He called her over. To her astonishment he insisted on introducing to her his friend, Jim Laramie, of whom he was making as much as it was possible to make of a wholly undemonstrative man.

The band not far away was playing full tilt. Kate wished they could have made even more noise to hide her confusion, but there was nothing except to face the situation, much as it surprised her. Laramie, fortunately, seemed indisposed to say anything. He spent most of his time listening. Kate being far from demonstrative, her father was left to do the honors. And on such rare occasions as Barb was communicative, he was quite capable of good fellowship.

Laramie, however, seemingly under some restraint, soon made excuses and left to join the crowd.

Some of the little ranchmen had brought their wives along. A few of these women had their babies with them, and Kate returned to the house, where she made the mothers comfortable. There her father afterward ran across her. He stopped as he came up.

"You remember that man I introduced you to—Laramie?"

"Very well," Kate said wonderingly.

"Treat him well at dinner."

"But I'm going to eat here at the house." He shook his head. "You eat at the creek at my table."

She had no choice but to obey. When she returned to the pits the stones had been removed and John Frying Pan, with a pair of Sleepy Cat ice tongs, was lifting out the first big chunks of roasted meat. The crowd being called ran for the creek whooping and yelling, and while Kate watched John and his helpers dish up the meat the guests—nearly all men—seated themselves pellmell at the long benches. It was a noisy assemblage, overflowing with good nature, and when Kate, very trim in corduroy, walked to the head of the table to take her seat, the demonstrative ones rose and led in a burst of cheers. Good spirit is contagious. Kate enjoyed it, but when they began calling for a speech she ran away to the coffee boilers. From the coffee she returned to join her father, and to find with him and old man Pettigrew at the head of the table, Laramie, calmly seated, and the fourth place waiting for her.

Van Horn as host to other cattlemen and guests presided at the next table. Unluckily, where he sat he could see Laramie opposite Kate. But if he was discomfited the group at the next table below, where Doctor Carpy presided, flanked by Lefever, Sawdy, Kitchen, and McAlpin, was correspondingly elated at the spectacle of the Falling Wall and the Crazy Woman sitting in harmony.

Despite the unpleasant stories Kate had heard about him she found nothing to complain of in Laramie's manners, except that he always drank with his spoon in his coffee cup. But he was, she told herself, on his good behavior, and under the circumstances would naturally try to appear at his best. Little as Kate relished her assignment of making things pleasant for him, the bubbling spirits of the occasion to some extent infected her, and she soon found it not difficult to help along with small talk and to make the queer combination at the table go.

There was really no great need for her to work hard in this way—both her father and Pettigrew were very lively. Laramie seemed a bit dazed at being set up with such honors in the house of his enemies. But though he did not volunteer much, when Kate said anything that afforded a chance for comment he improved it.

The talk went a good deal to cattle and range matters, but Pettigrew, a crafty fellow, told good stories about men that everybody in and out of Sleepy Cat knew, and appealed frequently to Laramie for confirmation or a laugh. Some of the laughs he got were a little dry, but they were not all natured, and Kate enjoyed the rough humor. The two cattlemen finished their dinner, and without ceremony got up to see how the crowd was being served, leaving Kate with Laramie. "How do you like old Pettigrew?" was the first thing Laramie asked her as the bearded cattleman moved away with her father.

"The only thing I don't like about him," said Kate, candidly, "is his eyes."

She was looking at Laramie as she spoke and finishing her coffee. He lifted his own cup. "You're a good observer," he said.

"How so?"

"A man's eyes are all there is to him. You don't mind if I smoke?"

"Not a bit."

He drew a sack of tobacco from a breast pocket.

"Not going to run away, are you?" He was fishing for cigarette paper when he asked. He spoke as if he had no special interest in the matter, yet the question startled her. Kate had not made a move to go, but she was thinking, when the question came, of how she might manage to escape. She flushed a little at being anticipated in her intention—just enough perhaps to let him see he had caught her, not to say irritated her. As luck would have it, Van Horn, who had risen, sauntered toward them. Kate was glad just then to see him. "I hope you got enough to eat," she said as he approached.

He seemed stiff—Kate did not realize what he was put out about. He made some answer and turned to Laramie. She felt at once the friction between the two men, not from anything she had reason to suspect or know—for she knew then nothing whatever of their personal relations. Nor was it from anything said; for an instant neither man spoke. Instinct must have made her conscious, for as soon as Van Horn looked at Laramie she felt the tension.

"Well, Jim, where'd you blow from?" demanded Van Horn after a pause.

Laramie was making ready to smoke. He was in no haste to answer, nor did he look at Van Horn, but continued, cowboy fashion, rolling his cigarette in the finger tips of his left hand, his right resting on his hip. "I didn't blow," he retorted.

"How'd you get here?" asked Van Horn.

"I was invited."

Van Horn laughed significantly. While Kate would rather have been out of it, she thought it time, since she was in it, to say something herself. "I didn't suppose anybody needed a special invitation for a Fourth of July celebration," she interposed. "The town has been covered for two weeks with bills inviting everybody."

Van Horn laughed again. "It wasn't you invited him, eh?" he demanded of Kate. The thing was said so unpleasantly she would have retorted on impulse, but Laramie took any possible words out of her mouth.

"Why don't you ask me who invited me? Barb Doubleday invited me. That's enough, isn't it? And Pettigrew invited me. And," he added, completing his cigarette in leisurely fashion, "while that wouldn't be any particular inducement—you invited me."

Van Horn stared. "How do you make that out?" he asked quickly.

"You asked me to take in this barbecue when you tried to get me to line up with you at the Mountain House."

Van Horn took alarm. "That was put up to you in confidence," he said angrily.

"So was the barbecue," responded Laramie. "I couldn't take in the first proposition, so I'm enjoying the second." He turned away from Van Horn, and, ignoring him, spoke to Kate. "You remember you said you were going to show me your ponies."

It was Kate's turn to stare. "You must be mistaken."

He did not press the subject. "Perhaps you've forgotten," was all he said indifferently.

"When or where did I ever say that?" Kate asked, resenting the intonation.

He looked down, then, looking up, his eyes rested on Kate's. He was not disturbed. "Is that a challenge?" he asked.

"If you wish to make it one," she returned coolly.

"The 'when' was one day at Sleepy Cat Junction, the 'where' was up the Falling Wall river below the canyon."

"O," she exclaimed, collecting herself, "I had forgotten."

"Do you remember now?" he asked, and she thought there was resentment in the question. "If you don't," he added, "we'll let it go."

"Why, I suppose I must have said something like that. Anyway," she added, "we'll go see them to make sure I've kept my promise. Come, Mr. Van Horn," she suggested, turning sweetly to him; "don't you want to see the ponies?" To include Van Horn it was plain to be seen would spoil the trip for Laramie, but she cared little for that. "Wait just a minute," she continued. "I must tell John Frying Pan before I go to give the Indians something to eat."

The feeling between the two men she left together flared up at once. "Does this mean you're going to hitch up with the cattlemen, after all?" demanded Van Horn. Laramie, who had lighted his cigarette, stood looking after Kate.

"I hitch up with nobody."

"Then don't spend your time hanging around Kate Doubleday."

"So that's where the shoe pinches?" Laramie threw away his cigarette as he spoke. "I've taken a good deal from you, Van Horn."

Van Horn egged him on unabashed. "You've got your nerve with you to show up here at all."

"A man needs his nerve, Van Horn, to do business with crooks like you."

Doubleday, passing near the two men at that moment, heard the last exchange. He called out in his heavy, rasping voice to Van Horn: "Look here, Harry." Laramie walked away and Doubleday took Van Horn in hand. "You messed up things once with Laramie, didn't you? And you didn't get him, did you?" continued Doubleday, choking off Van Horn's words. "Now we've got him here, let me run this thing."

"I can tell you right now you won't line him up," blurted out Van Horn, very angry.

Doubleday had a way of raising his chin to override objection, and his voice grew huskier with stubbornness. "Just let me run this thing, will you?"

"Do as you please," retorted Van Horn, but with a stiff expletive that irritated Barb still further. Then swinging on his heel, Van Horn marched away. Barb was so incensed he could only keep his raised finger pointed after Van Horn, and as his eyes blazed he shouted through a very fog, his profane throat scraping: "I will."

On the level stretch between the ranch house and the creek the cowboys staged after dinner a Frontier Day show and a Fourth of July celebration combined. The fun began mildly with the three-legged races and the business of the greased pig. From these diversions it proceeded to foot races, in which Indians shone, and to keenly contested pony races between cowboys, Reservation bucks, and sports from Sleepy Cat. Money was staked with freedom and differences of opinion were intensified by victory and defeat.

While the spirit ran high, rodeo riding began with the master artists of the range and the pink of American horsemanship in the saddle. In each succeeding contest the Sleepy Cat visitors, headed by Sawdy and Lefever with big, loose bunches of currency, backed their favorites freely, and men that counted nothing of caution in their makeup took the other end of every exciting event. Flushed faces and loud voices added to the rapidly shifting excitement of the scene as one event followed another, and the betting fever keenly roused called, after every possible wager had been laid, for fresh material to work on.

It was at this juncture that the shooting matches began. In a line and in a country in which many excelled in perhaps the most important regard, rivalry ran high and critics were naturally fastidious. The temptation to belittle even excellent work with rifle and revolver was, in Sawdy and Carpy, partly due to temperament. Both men were bad gamesters because they bet on feeling rather than judgment. They would back a man, or the horse of a man they liked best, against a man they did not like, and often knew what it was to close the day with empty pockets.

On this Fourth of July at Doubleday's both men, as well as Lefever, had been hit by hard luck. Their free criticism of the horse racing and the shooting did not pass unresented, and the fact that Tom Stone and his following had most of the Sleepy Cat money while the sun was still high did not tend to temper the acerbity of their remarks.

Nothing that the crack shots of the range could do would satisfy either Sawdy or Carpy. Van Horn, himself considered an expert with rifle and gun, was master of these ceremonies, and the belittling by the Sleepy Cat sports of the best the cowboys could show nettled him. "What've you got that'll beat it?" he demanded. "Before you knock this any more put up some better shooting."

The taunt went far enough home to stir the fault finders. Sawdy and Carpy took grumpy counsel together. Presently they hunted up Laramie, who, in front of the ranch house, was talking horses with Kitchen and Doubleday. They told him the situation and asked for help.

"Come over to the creek and show the bunch up, Jim," was Sawdy's appeal.

The response was cold. Laramie refused to take any part in the shooting. Sawdy could not move him. In revenge he borrowed what money Laramie had—not much in all—and went back sore. With the peeve of defeated men, the Sleepy Cat sports called for more horse racing to retrieve their fortunes—only to lose what money they had left and suffer fresh jeering from Van Horn and his following.

But abating in defeat and with empty pockets nothing of their confident swagger, Carpy and Sawdy, reinforced this time by Lefever—McAlpin trailing along as a mourner—headed again for the ranch house after Laramie.

They found him on a bench where he could command the front door, talking idly to Bill Bradley and whittling. He was there intent on waylaying Nancy, who was inside. His friends descended on him for the second time in a body. They laid their discomfiture before him. They begged him to pull them out of the hole. It was too much in the circumstances to refuse the men he counted on when he himself needed friends, but he yielded with an ill grace.

"What do you want me to do?" he demanded, finally.

They told him. He would not stand up before a target, nor would he shoot in competition with anybody else.

"I've only got a few cartridges, anyway," he objected, "and suppose when they're shot away these fellows get a fight going on me?"

It was argued that there were enough gunmen in the Sleepy Cat crowd for defensive purposes and that there was no end of available ammunition. A way was found to meet Laramie's objections on every point, and it only remained to hatch up a scheme for lightening the cattlemen's pockets.

With Carpy, Lefever, and Sawdy, Laramie sat down apart. An exchange of views took place. Sawdy had something in mind he had once seen Laramie achieve, and on this—and the possibility of its success—the talk centered. The feat, it was conceded, would be a stiff one. It was put up to Laramie. He consented, after some wrangling and with misgivings, to try to pull the thing for the benefit of his misguided friends. The minute consent was assured, his backers hurried away in a body—McAlpin as crier, Lefever and Sawdy to raise money, and Carpy to bully Van Horn and Stone and their following.

The news that Laramie would shoot caused a stir. Not every one present had seen him shoot. His reputed mastery of rifle and gun was often in question; and no more grueling test before friends and enemies could ever be given than what he was to attempt now.

Not every one got clearly, as the talk went on, just what the trial was to be. Sawdy, having reinforced his resources, announced the event as Laramie against his record—to tie or to beat.

Laramie himself, unmindful of the controversy, held to the bench. He was still sitting there, head down and still whittling, when Bradley came to say the crowd was waiting. He asked Bradley to bring up his horse.

Kate, coming out of the house, drew his attention. He threw away the stick in his hand and rose.

"I hear you are going to shoot," she said.

"Can't get out of it very well, I guess."

"You wouldn't shoot the time I asked you to."

"I didn't actually refuse, did I?"

"Pretty near it."

"It's a harder case today. Your men have got all the money. My friends are broke. And they've asked me to help them out somehow. That's the only reason. If you really want to see me shoot, all you've got to do is to tell me the next time you see me."

"Oh, I'm going to see you shoot now." She looked at the gun holster slung at his left hip. "They say you are left handed."

"They've got work enough lined up today for both my hands."

Bradley returned with the horse and climbed awkwardly down from the saddle. Laramie tried the cinches and turned to Kate.

"Are you all ready?" she asked.

"Just about."

"You try the cinches. I should think you'd want to try your gun."

"I tried that this morning before I left home. All I've got to do before I begin is to slip an extra cartridge into the cylinder."

Leading his pony, Laramie, clinging to the talk as long as he could, walked with Kate toward the creek.

Leaving her on a slight rise, where he told her he thought she could see, he got into the saddle and rode down to where the crowd had assembled.

MARKETS

COTTON MARKET.

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The general disposition to wait for British labor developments was shown in a very small volume of business in the cotton market here again today. The opening was steady at a decline of 20 to 6 points under some scattered liquidation but there was no selling pressure of consequence and active months held within 3 or 4 points of yesterday's closing during the early trading or around 12.11 for July. Curtailment of mill production in Fall River for the week was estimated at 120,000 pieces and business in print cloths remained quiet but a better inquiry was reported for yarns.

There was a spurt of covering for over the week-end and some domestic trade and Liverpool buying. May sold up to 11.76 and July to 12.89 and the market closed very steady at a net advance of 11 to 17 points.

Cotton closed very steady.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9.—Quiet steadiness prevailed in the early trading in cotton today. Values sagged gently under the continued unfavorable strike news from England and in the first half hour of business lost 6 to 7 points. Some support was derived from the cold wave crossing the country, the fear being that it might extend far enough south to injure young cotton.

For a while the demand was supplied by selling orders from Liverpool but when this ceased, week-end covering started on the short side and there was an immediate response by values. Toward the close the active months were 9 to 11 points higher than the last quotations of yesterday with May up to 11.41.

Cotton closed steady at net advances of 7 to 14 points.

	High	Low	Close
May	11.42	11.25	11.39
July	11.85	11.66	11.82
October	12.33	12.14	12.32
December	12.41	12.41	12.59

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9.—Spot cotton steady and unchanged. Sales on the spot 957 bales; to arrive none. Low middling 8.25; middling 11.00; good middling 12.75.

Texas Spot Cotton.

DALLAS, April 9.—Cotton: Middling, 10.25; steady. At Houston, 10.60; steady. At Galveston, 11.25; steady.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Depressing economic news from England and scattered selling at the start was responsible for a bearish wheat market at the, start today. Opening quotations which varied from 2c lower to ½c higher, with May $1.34 to $1.34¼, and July at $1.11¾ to $1.12¼, were followed by slight declines, and then somewhat of a reaction.

The market rallied sharply toward the finish because of buying induced by a forecast of freezing temperatures over the belt, and closed firm with prices unchanged to 1¼c higher, including May $1.33¾ to $1.34 and July $1.12¾ to $1.13.

Corn acted rather firm. After starting unchanged to ½c higher, including July 63½c, the market declined a little, then recovered much of the loss.

Corn later developed a firm undertone on reports of freezing temperatures in the west and on light offerings. The close was firm, ½c to 1c net higher, with July 63¾c.

Oats although firm at the beginning suffered from absence of selling pressure. After starting ½c lower to cc higher, including July 38¾ to 38½c, quotations hovered around opening figures.

Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Uneasiness over the big labor tie-up in Great Britain has acted like a weight on the wheat market this week. Prices this morning compared with a week ago showed declines varying from ½c to 3c a bushel. Net changes in corn ranged from ½c off to 1⅛@1¼c advance, oats gained ½c to 1⅛c and provisions lost $1 to $3.15.

Aside from British strike developments timely rains which meant the removal of any likelihood of a dry weather scare counted most as an influence tending to lower the value of wheat.

Corn and oats developed comparative strength owing chiefly to smallness of receipts, together with wet weather delay to seeding of oats.

Provisions lacked support, a decided increase having been shown in western stocks of meat and lard.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The only noteworthy feature at the sluggish opening of today's stock market was the further decline of Pennsylvania to a new low record. On the initial sale of 2,700 shares that stock dropped 1 point to 33, the next offering forcing the price down to 32¾. Oils were fractionally higher but reacted when pressure against Mexican Petroleum was resumed. United States Rubber, Westinghouse, Stromberg Carburetor and American Can preferred were lower by fractions to 1¼ points. Exchange on London rose substantially over yesterday's final quotations, a more hopeful feeling prevailing regarding the British labor crisis.

PLAN CLUB ROOMS IN MASONIC TEMPLE FOR MEMBERS' USE

Local Masonic organizations are equipping one of the rooms in the Masonic temple for use of their members. The club will be known as the Temple Club, and will be provided with tables for billiards, pool, dominoes and other games. It is also planned to have a library, and donations of books, for this purpose, are being asked by the committee.

The club is expected to be a pleasant meeting place for members of the Masonic bodies, and is planned to add to the social side of the order. It will open about May 1.

"WHY WOMEN PAINT AND MEN PUFF," SUBJECT FOR KNICKERBOCKER SUNDAY

"'Why Women Paint and Men Puff' may seem a strange subject," said Dr. Knickerbocker to a Times reporter, "but in the smiling depths of this humorous presentation of the subject is the philosophy of beauty and questions of vital morals in which men especially need instruction and inspiration. We are going to have 300 men out at 9:30 at the Olympic theater.

"There is going to be over 1,000 others, men, women and children, in the Sunday school at the church building. We are going to give a bunch of bananas to the first 100 that arrive and another big bunch to the seventh hundred. This, of course, is just a pleasant advertising feature but will be carried out in a bona fide way.

"At 11:00 a. m. at the church, my subject will be 'The Investment of a Life.' At this service Mr. and Mrs. Huckabee will sing a special duet.

"At 7:45 at night, I will continue the series of tragedies of life and will preach on 'The Confessions of a Society Girl.' These confessions are startlingly realistic and are the bona fide history of a young society girl who gave me her life history to use in this sermon. Fathers and mothers are especially urged to hear this sermon. At the night service an illustrated tableau song will be one of the special musical features."

City Briefs

The local fire department completed one full week at midnight Friday without responding to a single alarm. The last call to be recorded came in late in the afternoon of Friday, April 2.

The case against A. H. McClelland, charged with affray, was dismissed in the city police court Saturday morning. Tom Hickman, who is alleged to have engaged in a fight with McClelland, was fined 1 cent by a jury Friday and the city attorneys figured that at this rate they couldn't afford to prosecute the case.

Protests are again coming into the police department about chickens running at large in the residential district of the city and playing havoc with gardens. Chief Huff threatens to play executioner for a few of the feathered flock if he receives more than one complaint from one locality.

"Hope the Police Think I'm a Liar," Says Roy Harris

By JOSEPH WASNEY
United Press Staff Correspondent.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 9.—"I hope the police think I'm a liar, then I can go free and they can do the worrying."

Roy Harris, self-styled accomplice in the murder of Joseph B. Elwell, New York clubman, told this to the United Press today just after having undergone another cross-examination in which he stuck stubbornly to his story of the killing.

Detective Sergeant Oswald of New York said he would take Harris to that city, probably today for further interrogation.

"I think he wants to break into the movies," said Oswald when asked as to Harris' motive for making a bogus confession.

"That's ridiculous," countered Harris. "Of course I'm telling the truth. My conscience made me do it. I wish I wasn't telling the truth, as then I would only have to face a sentence of forgery. One thing, I am able to sleep since making the confession. Before that every night I had bad dreams."

Harris was pacing up and down his cell as he talked today and he seemed anxious to be on his way to New York.

"Just let them march the women in the Elwell case," he said, "and I'll sure pick out Mrs. Fairchild, who paid Bill Dunkin and me to kill Elwell. It will be a cinch—much easier than identifying her picture."

Harris identified "Mrs. Fairchild" by photograph and the woman was questioned by detectives in New York. She indignantly denied the charge and convinced the police of her innocence.

Transfer Passengers on Northwestern.

Passengers on train No. 4 on the Wichita Falls & Northwestern were transferred Saturday at mile post 64 near Tipton where a washout was had due to the recent rains. The passenger train on the Wellington branch carried the passengers as far as Mangum.

Workmen succeeded in spanning the washout with a foot bridge and reports are to the effect that the road would be in shape to take train No. 2 all the way to Mangum without a transfer of passengers.

It is believed that the road will be in good condition all the way to Elk City by Tuesday.

'' had not thought up anything to do with my tire when I woke up this morning. When I went out to the barn to milk the dummed brutes I snuck it along, and tried to blow it up with my hand over the place where the bust is, but I did not have enough wind. I would not think it would take so much wind.

I thought mebby our cow could do it, but when I went to see if I could get her to try it I found that the mouth was not shaped right, and I was playing with it so long that my father called me to know if the cow had kicked my branes out. He needn't worry. If I had any branes I would not be wearing short pants all my life and milking a cow and her dotter twice a day.

My mother said that she had to go to town and might not get back till noon and I must stay and take care of Annabell Lee, and when she went my ant went with her, and I took Annabell Lee and my tire out under my lookout tree which I fixed yesterday and waited for the bunch to come, but I guessed they were waiting somewhere for me to come, and neither of us didn't. So then I put the tire around Annabell Lee double, and put the end through, and that left a dandy place to tie some thing to, so that gave me an idee.

I went and got the rope I pull Jubilee up with, and tied it in the end of the tire and then I clumb up the tree, but when I had got up to the branched the rope was kinda short, so I hung by my knees to a limb and let my head hang down and then I pulled Annabell Lee up off the ground. She was a heavy little bugger when she is lifted up like that, but I finely got her up to where I was and then I put one arm through the tire and then I could use both arms to climb with so finely got her up to the lookout board, and then I put the rope through the tire and tied it around the board and there she was.

Jubilee wanted me to pull him up but I did not have another rope. Then Mrs. Farrel come out of her yard and screamed when she seen Annabell Lee and said for me to take her down out of that instantly, and I asted her who she thought she was the mother of, and she said if I was her kid she would beat me till I could not hold up my head. I guess if she had a few she would know that their mothers do not beat them on their heads.

I left Annabell Lee up there and slid down and went to the barn to look for a rope to pull Jubilee up, and just then my mother and ant both came, and when me and Jubilee heard them

And just then my mother and ant both came, and when me and Jubilee heard them scream we skun out through the manure hole and went over to Miss Farmer's.

scream we skun out through the manure hole and went over to Miss Farmers and stayed there till near milking time, and all at once my father come sailing in and drug me home by the ear.

I bet there ain't a fella in our bunch 'tuff enough to stand what I got. If I had known what I was going to get me and Jubilee would of run away from home, but there ain't any sense running away afterwards.' I did not dast ast how they got Annabell Lee out, for fear I would get licked again. I went to bed early without being told.

Tire-Damaging Tacks Result in Arrest of A Garage Proprietor

A charge of malicious mischief was filed late Friday against a local garage proprietor, who, it is alleged, scattered tacks on the pavement near his place of business in an apparent effort to stimulate his tire repairing business.

Mrs. A. N. Lummus, of 1418 Ninth street, discovered the tacks and the source thereof, and reported the matter to the officers, with the result that the proprietor was arrested and a charge filed. The defendant was released on $100 bond.

AETNA WELL IS REPORTED DOWN TO ABOUT 2,100 FEET

VERNON, TEXAS, April 9. The Aetna well in the Goss subdivision is down about 2,100 feet, according to H. M. Sparks, president, and much difficulty has been encountered in machinery and water trouble. Good sand caves have also hindered progress materially. A broken swivel and three fishing jobs give some indication of the difficulties encountered at the Aetna. Operators plan to make this well a real deep test.

WILL KIRBY RUN FOR SENATOR.

Robert R. Penn, writing in the Dallas Journal, reports that a quiet movement is under way for what its promoters hope will be a real opposition to the democratic nominee for United States senator in 1922. According to Mr. Penn, an effort is being made for a fusion of Baileyites, republicans and American party members to support the candidacy of some well known Texan, probably John Henry Kirby. Protection of Texas industries is expected to be the leading plank in the fusion platform.

It is pointed out that Mr. Kirby is a close personal friend of Mr. Bailey, who has always favored a tariff on Texas products. Mr. Kirby has declared that he voted for Harding and this, of course, puts him in good standing with the republicans. Leaders in the American party are mostly disappointed and disgruntled democrats who would go to almost any length to defeat a democratic candidate. So considering all the elements mentioned it appears plausible that they could unite in support of Mr. Kirby. Anyhow the suggestion of Mr. Kirby's candidacy offers an opportunity for interesting discussion.

Revelation in the Stillman divorce case have moved the New York Times to declare that such laxity of morals as have been brought to the public gaze in connection with this suit is by no means common among the leaders of finance and society in New York City, whom it defends as observing generally as high standards of moral conduct as the common run of people. The Times evidently fears that the publicity given this divorce suit is likely to create a mistaken view of life among the influential in New York. Our New York contemporary does well to defend the fair name of its leaders. Its defense suggests that the reports of a Southwestern murder trial may have given to many readers throughout the country a false impression as the morality of men prominent in the oil business. Such immorality as was revealed in this trial is certainly the exception rather than the rule. No business or class has a monopoly on virtue or immorality.

The Waco Times-Herald frequently re-iterates that the plow is the basis of our civilization. The Times-Herald never loses an opportunity to urge the establishment of agricultural schools. It is now suggesting that the state normal schools at Canyon City, Alpine and San Marcos be made agricultural schools. The paucity of the attendance in these normal schools is cited to show that there is little demand for institutions of their present character. The Times-Herald further suggests that the conversion of these schools into agricultural colleges will fill the demand of West Texas for an agricultural college.

Editorial Echoes

Waiting For the Carcass.
(Beaumont Journal)

Some of the democratic leaders have given it out that the republican congress is sure to make a lot of bunders and that advantage will be taken of all such blunders to bring the outs back in.

That sounds all right from a party standpoint. The democrat who thinks more of winning an election four years from now than he thinks of a bigger and better and more prosperous America, can get a lot of comfort out of the fact that the opposition is sure to make a number of mistakes. But what we need in this country is a spirit working for the country and its glory at all seasons, whether the administration is headed by a republican or whether it is headed by a democrat.

Of course there are republicans who opposed Woodrow Wilson at every turn of the road and did all they could to embarass his administration, because they knew that it would help win the 1920 election. There are any number who take the narrow view on both sides of the house. But no patriot can afford to do that; the nation needs to be strengthened by the wisdom and the best work of every congressman and senator, regardless of his political faith, and it is a poor excuse to give to say that democrats are merely paying republicans with the same kind of coin, when they set out to roll logs in the way of progress and prosperity.

There is a need for such action at Washington as will bring back confidence; business is suffering throughout the land because nobody seems to be certain of his ground. Faith, encouragement, light are needed, and it is just as much the duty of a democrat to assist now in getting the tangles straightened out as it is the duty of a republican. When a democrat says that he is going to lay back and only act when there is a carcass of failure to feast on, he is giving notice to the country that he does not propose to do his full duty.

The thinking man puts the United States above any party; he had rather see it prosper with the opposition in power than to see it down with his own party in the saddle. He is for America first and for the republican or the democratic party afterwards. There is no other way to be loyal; there is no other way to measure up full height to that standard of manhood that all individuals given public office should have.

Some of the republicans were "buzzards" during the closing months of the Wilson administration; we cannot deny that. There were men who were proud that things were not going well because they preferred to see their country in distress rather than to give credit to a democratic president. But such a fact does not justify any democratic congressman in "laying down." Regardless of who is in power at Washington, this is America, this is our country, and for it we must live and act.

The Naval Treaty

By A. CONAN DOYLE

Copyright, 1921, by Harper & Bros. Published by special arrangement with The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The story thus far:

Dr. Watson, during his schooldays, had know very well a lad named Percy Phelps. His mother's uncle was Lord Holdhurst, the great conservative politician, whose influence got his nephew a good position at the foreign office. One day Dr. Watson received a letter from Phelps asking him to bring Sherlock Holmes to him, as he was in deep trouble, and was just recovered from an attack of brain fever. Watson and Holmes hurried down to Brairbrae, his place at Woking. They were greeted in the drawing room by a rather stout man who received them with much hospitality, and who turned out to be Joseph Harrison, whose sister Annie was engaged to marry Phelps. They were then shown into Pheip's room, where Annie was installed as nurse. Phelps then told his story. About ten weeks before, his uncle, having the utmost trust in him, gave him the original secret treaty between England and Italy, a document of importance, to get possession of which the Russian or French government would pay tremendous sums. Lord Holhurst asked his nephew to lock it in his desk in the foreign office and, after hours, to stay along and copy it. Phelps went out for a hurried dinner and then went back to copy the document, anxious to get through his work in time to catch the eleven o'clock train to Woking, on which he expected to meet Joseph.

The work took longer than he expected, however, and he soon saw that he could not catch his train. When it was about a third done he rang a bell which connected with a lodge below stairs where a commissionaire remained all night, ready to make coffee on a spirit lamp for any late worker. A woman answered the summons, saying she was the commissionaire's wife. Phelps ordered coffee, and when it did not arrive, he ran down stairs to see about it. The commissionaire sat there asleep, and, while he was apologizing, the bell in Phelps' room rang sharply. Terrified, Phelps rushed back upstairs. The copy of the treaty he was making was there, but the original was gone. It was a quarter to ten o'clock. Phelps and the commissionaire ran into the street and questioned the nearest policeman, who had seen only the commissionaire's wife pass. It had been raining all evening, but there were no marks of mud on the floor. The police and Phelps went to arrest the commissionaire's wife, who ran from the door when she saw them coming, explaining her action later by saying she thought they were brokers come to collect a bill.

Phelps was so overcome with all that his disgrace would mean that he collapsed, and was taken home, where he had brain fever. He was quickly installed in a cheery bedroom on the ground floor, where Joseph was asleep at the time, and Annie nursed him, with a nurse who was on duty at night. Nobody knew he had the treaty in his possession. The commissionaire and his wife were examined without result. Phelps was despondent, but was gradually regaining his strength. Holmes promised to take up the case and said he would return to Briarbrae the next day.

Holmes interviews Lord Holdhurst, who says he feared grave results from the loss of the treaty, which have not yet occurred, which seems to indicate that it has not yet reached the hands of the French in Russian foreign office. It is possible, suggests Holmes, that the thief has had a sudden illness. "An attack of brain fever," supplements Lord Holdhurst coldly. Holmes disclaims any such suggestion and Holmes returns to Briarbrae, to learn that the night before, the first night Phelps had been without a nurse, somebody, shrouded in a cape, had tried to enter his room. Phelps had scared him off. Joseph and the groom next morning had found a trail across the grass to a wooden fence that skirted the road over which the thief had apparently jumped.

Holmes, Phelps and Joseph went to look at these tracks. Holmes asked Miss Harrison to remain in the room and later on secretly asked her not to leave the room all day. Then Holmes sent Phelps up to London with Dr. Watson in Holmes' apartments. Before breakfast next morning Holmes arrived in London with one hand bandaged.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

The table was all laid, and just as I was about to ring Mrs. Hudson entered with the tea and coffee. A few minutes later she brought in three covers, and we all drew up to the table, Holmes ravenous, I courious, and Phelps in the gloomiest state of depression.

"Mrs. Hudson has risen to the occasion," said Holmes, uncovering a dish of curried chicken. "Her cuisine is a little limited, but she has as good an idea of breakfast as a Scotchwoman. What have you there Watson?"

"Ham and eggs," I answered.

"Good! What are you going to take, Mr. Phelps—curried fowl or eggs, or will you help yourself?"

"Thank you. I can eat nothing," said Phelps.

"Oh, come! Try the dish before you."

"Thank you, I would really rather not."

"Well, then," said Holmes, with a mischevious twinkle, "I suppose that you have no objection to helping me?"

Phelps raised the cover, and as he did so uttered a scream, and sat there staring with a face as white as the plate upon which he looked. Across the center of it was lying a little cylinder of blue-gray paper. He caught it up, devoured it with his eyes, and then danced madly about the room, pressing it to his bosom and shrieking out in his delight. Then he fell back into an arm chair so limp and exhausted with his own emotions that we had to pour brandy down his throat to keep him from fainting.

"There! there!" said Holmes, soothingly, patting him upon the shoulder. "It was too bad to spring it on you like this, but Watson here will tell you that I never can resist a touch of the dramatic."

Phelps seized his hand and kissed it. "God bless you!" he cried. "You have saved my honor."

"Well, my own was at stake, you know," said Holmes. "I assure you it is just as hateful to me to fail in a case as it can be to you to blunder over a commission."

Phelps thrust away the precious document into the innermost pocket of his coat.

"I have not the heart to interrupt your breakfast any further, and yet I am dying to know how you got it and where it was."

Sherlock Holmes swallowed a cup of coffee, and turned his attention to the ham and eggs. Then he rose, lit his pipe, and settled himself down into his chair.

"I'll tell you what I did first, and how I came to do it afterwards," said he. "After leaving you at the station I went for a charming walk through some admirable Surrey scenery to a pretty little village called Ripley, where I had my tea at an inn, and took the precaution of filling my flask and of putting a paper of sandwiches in my pocket. There I remained until evening when I set off for Woking again, and found myself in the high road outside Briarbrae just after sunset.

"Well, I waited until the road was clear—it is never a very frequented one at any time, I fancy—and then I clamored over the fence into the grounds."

"Surely the gate was open!" ejaculated Phelps.

"Yes, but I have a peculiar taste in these matters. I chose the place where the three fir-trees stand, and behind their screen I got over without the least chance of any one in the house being able to see me. I crouched down among the bushes on the other side, and crawling from one to the other—witness the disreputable state of my trouser knees—until I had reached the clump of rhododendrons just opposite to your bedroom window. There I squatted down and awaited developments.

"The blind was not down in your room, and I could see Miss Harrison sitting there reading by the table. It was quarter-past ten when she closed her book, fastened the shutters, and retired.

"I heard her shut the door, and felt quite sure that she had turned the key in the lock.

"The key!" ejaculated Phelps.

"Yes; I had given Miss Harrison instructions to lock the door on the outside and take the key with her when she went to bed. She carried out every one of my injunctions to the letter, and certainly without her cooperation you would not have that paper in your coat pocket. She departed then and the lights went out, and I was left squatting in the rhododendron bush.

"The night was fine, but still it was the sort of excitement about it that the sportsman feels when he lies beside the watercourse and waits for the big game. It was very long, though—almost as long, Watson, as when you and I waited in that deadly room when we looked into the little problem of the Speckled Band. There was a church clock down at Woking which struck the quarters, and I thought more than once that it had stopped. At last, however, about two in the morning, I suddenly heard the gentle sound of a bolt being pushed back and the creaking of a key. A moment later the servants' door was opened, and Mr. Joseph Harrison stepped out into the moonlight."

"Joseph!" ejaculated Phelps.

"He was bareheaded, but he had a black cloak thrown over his shoulder so that he could conceal his face in an instant if there were any alarm. He walked on tiptoe under the shadow of the wall, and when he reached the window he worked a long-bladed knife through the sash and pushed back the catch. Then he flung open the window, and, putting his knife through the crack in the shutters, he thrust the bar up and swung them open.

"From where I lay I had a perfect view of the inside of the room and of every one of his movements. He lit the two candles which stood upon the mantlepiece, and then he proceeded to turn back the corner of the carpet in the neighborhood of the door. Presently he stooped and picked out a square piece of board, such as is usually left to enable plumbers to get at the joints of the gas pipe. This one covered, as a matter of fact, the T joint which gives off the pipe which supplies the kitchen underneath. Out of this hiding place he drew that little cylinder of paper, pushed down the board, rearranged the carpet, blew out the candles, and walked straight into my arms as I stood waiting for him outside the window.

"Well, he has rather more viciousness than I gave him credit for, has Master Joseph. He flew at me with his knife, and I had to grass him twice and got a cut over the knuckles, before I had the upper hand of him. He looked murder out of the only eye he could see with when we had finished, but he listened to reason and gave up the papers. Having got them I let my man go, but I wired full particulars to Forbes this morning. If he is quick enough to catch this bird, well and good. But if, as I shrewdly suspect, he finds the nest empty before he gets there, why all the better for the government. I fancy that Lord Holdhurst for one, and Mr. Percy Phelps for another, would very much rather that the affair never got as far as police court."

"My God!" grasped our client. "Do you tell me that during these long ten weeks of agony the stolen papers were within the very room with me all the time?"

"So it was."

"And Joseph! Joseph a villain and a thief!"

"Hum! I am afraid Joseph's character is a rather deeper and more dangerous one than one might judge from his appearance. From what I have heard from him this morning, I gather that he has lost heavily in dabbling with stocks, and that he is ready to do anything on earth to better his fortunes. Being an absolutely selfish man, when a chance presented itself he did not allow either his sister's happiness or your reputation to hold his hand."

Percy Phelps sank back in his chair. "My head whirls," said he. "Your words have dazed me."

The principal difficulty in your case," remarked Holmes in his didactic fashion, "lay in the fact of there being too much evidence. What was vital was overlaid and hidden by what was irrelevant. Of all the facts which were presented to us we had to pick just those which we deemed to be essential, and then piece them together in their order, so as to reconstruct this very remarkable chain of events. I had already begun to suspect Joseph, from the fact that you had intended to travel home with him that night, and that therefore it was a likely enough thing that he should call for you, knowing the foreign office well, upon his way. When I heard that some one had been so anxious to get into the bedroom, in which no one but Joseph could have concealed anything—you told us in your narrative how you had turned Joseph out when you arrived with the doctor—my suspicions all changed to certainties, especially as the attempt was made on the first night upon which the nurse was absent, showing that the intruder was well acquainted with the ways of the house."

"How blind I have been!"

"The facts of the case, as far as I have worked them out, are these: This Joseph Harrison entered the office through the Charles street door, and knowing his way he walked straight into your room the instant after you left it. Finding no one there he promptly rang the bell, and at the instant that he did so his eyes caught the paper upon the table. A glance showed him that chance had put in his way a state document of immense value, and in an instant he had thrust it into his pocket and was gone. A few minutes elapsed, as you remember, before the sleepy commissionnaire drew your attention to the bell, and those were just enough to give the thief time to make his escape.

He made his way to Woking by the first train, and having examined his booty and assured himself that it really was of immense value, he had concealed it in what he thought was a very safe place, with the intention of taking it out again in a day or two, and carrying it to the French embassy, or wherever he thought that a long price was to be had. Then came your sudden return. He, without a moment's warning, was bundled out of his room and from that time onward there were always at least two of you there to prevent him from regaining his treasure. The situation to him must have been a maddening one. But at last he thought he saw his chance. He tried to steal in, but was baffled by your wakefulness. You may remember that you did not take your usual draught that night."

"I remember."

"I fancy that he had taken steps to make that draught effacacious, and that he quite relied upon your being unconscious. Of course, I understood that he would repeat the attempt whenever it could be done with safety. Your leaving the room gave him the chance he wanted. I kept Miss Harrison in it all day so that he might not anticipate us. Then, having given him the idea that the coast was clear, I kept guard as I have described. I already knew that the papers were probably in the room, but I had no desire to rip up all the planking and skirting in search of them. I let him take them, therefore, from the hiding place, and so saved myself an infinity of trouble. Is there any other point which I can make clear?"

"Why did he try the window on the first occasion," I asked, "when he might have entered by the door?"

"In reaching the door he would have to pass seven bedrooms. On the other hand, he could get out on to the lawn with ease. Anything else?"

"You do not think," asked Phelps, "that he had any murderous intention?" The knife was only meant as a tool?"

"It may be so," answered Holmes, shrugging his shoulders. "I can only say for certain that Mr. Joseph Harrison is a gentleman to whose mercy I should be extremely unwilling to trust."

Newspapers First
The person who buys a newspaper every day—and at least one member of every reading family does—spends more money in a year on that item than he does on any other regularly printed publication.
He spends more on his newspaper because it is worth more to him. If it cost him ten times as much, he would still buy it—or if it were priced beyond his means he would arrange to borrow it from his neighbor.
He would have it because without it he would be at a disadvantage among his neighbors and competitors.
He would not know what was going on. He would be left standing still while "the world and his wife" kept moving on.
When a medium of information is so close to the people, when it is so vital to them, is it any wonder that the columns of the newspaper are such a potent place to advertise?
Is it any wonder that newspaper advertising brings results in good seasons or bad?

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS AND VARNISHES

What one gallon of S W P will do
TRUE PAINT ECONOMY is determined by the area a gallon covers, not by gallon price. "Gallon" is a measure of quantity, but not of cover, or service. Get this thought thoroughly in deciding on S W P instead of ordinary paint: A gallon of S W P (Sherwin-Williams House Paint) covers 360 square feet, 2 coats. Ordinary paint covers 200 to 250 feet. S W P outlasts two to three ordinary paintings, saving the cost of several additional paintings in both material and labor.
These savings are far more vital than any possible economizing on first cost.
Sherwin-Williams PORCH & DECK PAINT — Prevents warping and splitting, is economical, easy to apply, attractive in colors, water-proof and almost wear-proof.
Sherwin-Williams Preservative Shingle Stain — a powerful wood preservative of creosote base. Protects shingle roofs and sidings against warping, splitting and wear.
S-W REXPAR — Outdoor Varnish — for protecting outside surfaces. Its fine body, clearness, and depth of light gives great beauty to exposed woodwork.

POWER

By RICHARD LLOYD JONES

ALL men have a love of power, but not an equal capacity to gratify it. Power is something more than energy; it is a directed force. Whatever tension the steam gauge on a locomotive may show, the engine is a lifeless thing without a brain-guided hand to move its throttle.

Power is force under control. The waterfall is wasted energy; harnessed to a wheel, it produces mill power.

Concentration is the secret of power. Hitch your energy to some fixed purpose.

To be noble is to be powerful. Negative goodness is never a contributing goodness; positive goodness is. Positive goodness has purpose. Energy put to purpose is power.

The world always makes way for the man of power and he makes room for many. So does real power direct for good.

The men of greatest power are they who give to the world a spiritual rather than a material force.

Napoleon was great because he directed his power to make himself a crowned master of men.

Lincoln was greater because he used his power to make men masters of themselves.

Christ was the greatest because He used His power to spread the glory of the Golden Rule over the world, teaching men that they serve themselves best when they serve others.

His example brings to every man, woman and child the simple lesson that in all the world there is no sweeter thing than a soft and gentle power which unceasingly works for the good of many.

So it is that they who have the most power in the world are they who are most generous in heart.

Power cannot have too gentle an expression, for its opponent is always weakness.

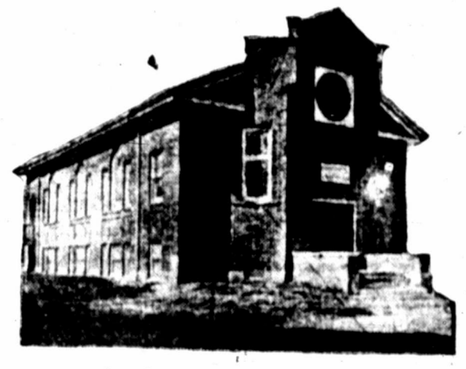

Manhood is measured by the use made of its power.

And as power is purpose, scholarship is never the measure of man's power. At best it is but a source of helpful equipment. What one WANTS to know is often of more value than what one knows. It is not what you have done that makes you do; it is what you WISH to do that makes you go on.

There is many a college-bred man amply equipped with book lore who, like the locomotive, with safety valve sizzling, stands still because he lacks purpose; he has no power to handle the throttle; he knows not how or where to go. Mere information is never knowledge unless it is usable, and it is usable only when it is well arranged, concentrated and digested with power.

There is no strength in bread and milk until the stomach gives their latent forces a fixed purpose; then they translate themselves into power.

So gain that you may give, for in giving and not in getting lies the secret which all men covet —the secret of real power.

ALL THE NEWS OF ALL THE SPORTS ALL THE TIME

Omaha's Belated Rally Falls Two Runs Short And Spudders Win 7 to 5

Clarence Darrough gave about 700 frigid fans heart failure on several different occasions yesterday afternoon at Athletic Park, but his stunt in the final chapter capped them all. The Spudder "rabbit" who was as wild as a March hare all during the contest was enjoying a four-run lead when Barney Burch's tribe from Nebraska came to bat in the ninth. They immediately proceeded to pole out a couple of base hits, which, coupled with a pass and a boot, came near spilling the beans. The opposition managed to chase a couple of runs across the platter and had runners on second and third with only one out, but Clarence tightened up in the nick of time and forced the last two hitters to fan the breezes and give his club a 7 to 5 victory.

The locals looked like a new club at the start of the pastime with Rothfuss in left and Works on first. The latter, however, was injured in the fifth round when he and Haney, the visiting third sacker collided at first on a close play. Haney had dumped one down the third base line and was traveling to first with all the speed he possessed. McDonald's peg was a trifle wild and Works had to stretch down the line to stop it. As he reached for it, he and Haney crashed and the two men dropped in their tracks. Both were laid out prone for a few seconds but finally recovered sufficiently to walk to the clubhouse. Haney's face was covered with blood from a gash sustained over his right eye, but Works came out of the clash with a whole hide.

Before the accident the new first sacker was living up to all the nice things that have been said about him and was fielding in big league fashion. The youngster is built like the figure 1 and if a peg ever gets by him it will sure be a wild one.

Rothfuss a Slugger.

Rothfuss in left got in solid with the fans right off the reel. He handled his only two chances in the field with the ease and grace of a Cobb, but it was with the willow that he made his big hit. The box score shows that he hit safely only once—a long triple to right, but he pounded that old agate with a vengeance every time. One of his drives enabled Lee to turn in the fielding feature of the day. He captured a ball off Rothfuss' bat that was tagged for three bases only after a marvelous sprint.

Danny Clark spoiled a wonderful day by a boot in the final chapter, but up to that time he made several stops and throws that were of the circus variety. He also contributed three safeties, one a double, as his portion on the offense. Buddy Tanner kept up his terrific hitting streak, by poling out three safeties, all of which figured in the Spudder tallies.

McElwee's hitting was also worthy of note. He delivered three bingles during the course of the matinee, all of which were hard hit balls.

"Barney" Burch jumped into the fracas in the fourth session in the role of a pinch hitter, but the best he had to offer was a pop fly in back of the box. He received a warm welcome from the fans who showed that they had not forgotten his work here last year.

Overcoats in Order.

Overcoats were in order as a chilly wind swept across the diamond that made it extremely uncomfortable for the fans. It was the coldest day that a game has been staged at the park and Darrough, especially, felt the cold. He was wilder than in any game in which he has ever worked for Salm. He issued no less than eight complimentary tickets to first during the day's play—a feat which is not at all characteristic of his work.

Another new umpire was on deck and though the visitors tried to make him look bad he missed very few. Several took exception to his decision on balls and strikes but they looked prett ygood to the writer.

Darrough's wildness in the opening round was responsible for the visitors' first marker. With one away, Clarence couldn't find the plate for Haney. Lelivelt's infield out put him on second and he romped home on Griffin's bounder over Darrough's head. Platte also drew a pass, but was forced at second for the third out on Lee's grounder to Tanner.

The Spudders lost no time in jumping into the lead and a pass also figured in one of their two counters. Rothfuss waited until Powerman threw four wide ones and ambled to first. He promptly stole second and counted on Tanner's line drive to center. McDonald's bounder to Lelivelt forced Buddy at second. Clark pasted one down the first base line that Lelivelt never touched and the blow was good for two bases. Works' grounder to Clare chased Tex home with the second tally.

Score Two in Second.

The Omahans were helpless in the second while the Spudders collected a couple more by good old fashioned swatting. McElwee opened with a clout that was too hot for Powerman, but was forced at second by Kitchens. Darrough fanned. Rothfuss slammed a triple to right that scored Kitch and he tallied a moment later on Buddy Tanner's second blow to left. Buddy died stealing.

The visitors got one run back in the third after two were out on Lelivelt's safety and a lucky triple by Griffin. The latter's hit was a dumpy fly in back of first that Clark kicked in the direction of the clubhouse while trying to field. McDonald drew a pass for the Spudders in this frame and stole second, but the next three men were unable to push him around.

A pass to Clare and a single to center by Lingle made the visitors dangerous in the fourth, but Darrough put on the brakes and forced Burch to pop to the infield and Gislason to tap weakly to Works. McElwee singled for the locals in their portion of the inning, but was the first victim in a double killing on Darrough's hit to Baumgardner, who relieved Powerman in the box.

Haney's infield hit on which he and Works came together in the fifth gave the Westerners a chance, but first was as far as they got. A pass to McDonald in this chapter after two were down gave the Spudders an opportunity which they grabbed for another tally. Tex stole second and scored on Clark's hard drive to right.

Dangerous in Sixth.

Darrough had a tough storm to weather in the sixth, but pulled out unscathed. He passed the first three men to face him and did not start to pitch until he had populated the corners. With the bags choked Baumgardner hit weakly to Darrough and the runner on third was thrown out at the plate on a close play. Gislason popped weakly to Rothfuss in short left while Ryan, who went in at third after Haney was forced out of play, hit the ozone, much to his disgust. The final strike was called and it was as perfect a strike as ever went over a pan.

Singles by McElwee and Kitchens in this round were wasted, but both sides counted in the seventh. Once again Darrough's ascension gave the visitors a counter. Lelivelt walked for a starter. Kitchens snared Griffin's foul fly and then threw the ball to right field for no reason at all, allowing Lelivelt to take second from which station he scored on Platte's paste to left.

Last Two in Seventh.

The Salmites chalked up their final two runs in this chapter by cutting loose another bunch of free hitting. Tanner started things off with a hit to deep short and Clark poked his third bingle to right after McDonald had fanned. Comstock's pop to Lelivelt made the second out, but a scratch double by Miller chased the runners to the bench. Jake's hit was a pop fly in back of first that was just out of reach of three fielders and one which caused even Jake to shake his head. It filled the bill, however, and put the game on ice for the Spudders.

The spectators started to leave at the beginning of the ninth, but were not long in returning to their seats. Darrough was just as wild as ever and started by passing Lelivelt. Griffin and Platte followed with hard cracks to center that were good for one base each and Lelivelt crossed the platter on the last drive. Lee's grounder got away from Clark and Griffin counted. A sacrifice by Clare put the tying run on second and a safe hit would have played havoc, but arrough came through like a champion at this juncture and fanned Lingle and Baumgardner.

The Wichita Falls "Twilight League" officially opened its season yesterday with the University club, Elks club and Morgan Seeders winning their games from the Methodists, Pond Laundry and Northsider A. C., respectively.

The University-Methodist game was a six inning affair, a rally in the fifth by the winners which netted four counters giving them the game, 5 to 4.

The Morgan Seeders got the jump on their opponents in the opening round and started off with a lead which they never lost the final score being 5 to 3.

The Elks toyed with the laundry outfit and pounded the apple all over the lot for an 11 to 0 victory.

BANTAM CHAMPION LOSES DECISION TO MONTREAL

CLEVELAND, OHIO, April 9.—Young Montreal of Providence R. I., outdistanced, outpunched, and outpointed Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, in ten fast and furious rounds last night. Montreal won seven rounds by a wide margin; two were even, while the ninth went to Lynch. Lynch had one eye closed and was bleeding profusely from the mouth when he left the ring.

DICK GRIFFIN AWARDED DECISION OVER NUNES

EL PASO, TEXAS, April 9.—Dick Griffin of Fort Worth, Texas, outpointed Danny Nunes of Sacramento, Cal., last night and won a referee's decision in their fifteen round bout. Griffin took the count of eight in the second round on a left hook to the jaw. Griffin scored two knockdowns in the fourth.

Black Sox Unable To Secure Games

CHICAGO, April 9.—The semi-pro baseball team organized by the Chicago "black sox" found themselves unable to book games today.

The team, which includes the majority of the indicted white sox players, has been attempting to book games with some of the best local nines in this section.

The latest effort to book games with teams of the Central Industrial Baseball Association failed. George Chamberlain, president of the association, announced that no club in his league would be permitted to play them.

SPORT BRIEFS

Coach Carl Lundgren of the University of Illinois and fifteen players are at Purdue today to open the western conference baseball season against the LaFayette school this afternoon.

Three home runs by Flack and Mollocher of the Cuns and one by Beck of the Wichita, Kan., team were the main features of the game yesterday which the Cubs won by a walkaway score of 13 to 3. After the game the Cubs entrained for Kansas City, where they will meet the Blues today.

A military athletic carnival for war veterans has been set for May 30 at Chicago under the control of Chicago national guard organizations.

A plan for a track meet between Wesleyan University and Amherst college, in which each college will hold its own event and the results transmitted between the two by telegraph is announced for the spring schedule of Amherst.

Ban Johnson, president of the American league, in a statement to Chicago fans has asked support for Manager "Kid" Gleason of the Sox, who reorganized the team this year after the 1919 world's series scandal.

R. P. Merriman of Waterbury, Conn., and Gardner White of Nassau, N. J., meet today in the 36-hole final for the north and south amateur golf championship at Pinehurst, N. C. The title is held by Francis Ouimet of Woodland, but he is not defending it.

This afternoon and Sunday the Louisville club of the American association and the Boston Nationals are scheduled to play exhibition games on the Colonels' Louisville field.

George Gibson, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has released Lindquist, recruit pitcher, to the Coffeyville, Kan., club of the Southwestern league.

Philadelphia fans will have their first look at the 1921 teams of the Philadelphia American and National leagues at Shibe park today, where an inter-club game is scheduled. The city championship already has been won by the Athletics, who took their third straight from the National leaguers at Charlotte, N. C., last Thursday.

The Culver Military academy of Indiana will appear for the first time in an eastern athletic meet at the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival April 29 and 30.

Greater New York's three major league baseball teams will make their 1921 debuts on the home lots this afternoon in a pre-season game. The Giants will meet the Washington Americans at the polo grounds and the Yankees and Dodgers will do battle at Ebbetts field.

Pitcher Carl Mays probably will oppose Cadore in the Yankee-Dodger game and Douglass will pitch for the Giants against Zachary of the Senators.

In a nip and tuck game the Boston Americans managed to defeat the Petersburg, Va., team 7 to 4 but the victory was not clinched until the final inning yesterday on the Virginians' home grounds. Dispatches say that a bad case of nerves among the minor leaguers in the ninth frame went a long way toward losing the game for them.

NEGRO HEAVYWEIGHT UNABLE TO KNOCK OUT OPPONENT

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—Jack Thompson of Denver stood up for eight rounds against Harry Wills of New Orleans here last night and assimilated everything the leading colored heavyweight had to offer. Thompson's face and body were cut and bruised by Wills' wicked blows. Wills, however, could not get the Denver boy off his feet.

WHITE SOX EN ROUTE TO THEIR OWN BACK YARD

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 9.—The White Sox were enroute to Chicago today. They are booked for a game in Milwaukee tomorrow. The team will work out on their home diamond until Tuesday noon when they leave for Detroit to open the season.

Whew!

CHICAGO, April 9.—The American team of Madden and Magin led the field in the six day bike race today. The plucky team which won the last race held here last fall, gained the lead after stealing a lap.

Cubs 13; Wichita 3.

WICHITA, KAN., April 9.—In a slugfest the Chicago Cubs defeated the local Western League team here yesterday 13 to 3. Flack with two homers and Hollocher with one featured.

Darrough Cool Under Fire.

Clarence Darrough pitched two ball games out there yesterday. The dimnutive hurler was in the hole all afternoon, but came through with flying colors every time. The more dangerous the situation, the better he became and that is a fact that cannot afford to be overlooked. The fact that he was wildest when there were none on and did not blow up when a pass or a hit would have been fatal shows that the youngster is cool under fire and is made of the stuff that real hurlers need.

Hear Ye, Tennis Enthusiasts!

A Wichita Falls Tennis organization will probably be organized at a meeting of all tennis enthusiasts in the chamber of commerce tonight. The meeting has been called by W. A. Ellis, secretary and the only remaining officer of last year's organization. Mr. Ellis has received the assurance of the city that a couple of courts will be laid out if enough show up to warrant it and there is no reason why a first rate club should not be organized. There is a large number of net players in the city who are only waiting for an opportunity to display their wares and if they really want such an organization they should be on hand tonight to assist in mapping out a plan of action.

Black Sox Out of Luck.

When the story broke that the Black Sox were about to organize a club of their own, we wondered if any team in the country would stoop to meet them. It did not seem possible that any true lover of the sport would openly sponsor crooked work and that is just what it would amount to if they were able to schedule games. We see by a story today that their applications for games have been refused on all sides thus far, and it is to be hoped that they are just as unsuccessful in the future.

Bantam Champ Licked.

Wonder if we have another "cheese" champion in Joe Lynch, the bantam king? Joe received the lacing of his young life in Cleveland last night at the hands of Young Montreal, a supposedly second rater. Montreal won practically every round in the opinion of the critics and all that saved Joe's crown was the fact that it was a no-decision affair. These no-decision bouts are life savers for more than one champion.

Where Is It?

Today's the day Tex Rickard is supposed to name the site of the championship mill between Dempsey and Carpentier. The big promoter has certainly received enough publicity on the coming bout over the selection of the site. He's got all the fight fans in the country guessing though in the opinion of many it will be staged some place in Jersey. However, no matter what place is chosen, it is a cinch that Tex has picked a winner. He doesn't pull many skulls and the coin will flow into whatever gate he selects.

Will Forget Mokan.

Unless Rothfuss' work yesterday was a flash in the pan, local fans will soon forget all about Johnny Mokan and his prodigious war club. This boy took four wicked cuts at the apple yesterday and that all his blows did not fall safe was not his fault. He faced both left and right handed hurling and one was as easy for him as the other. He also showed that he knows how to look 'em over by swinging at nothing but the best. Salm's lead off problem is now solved.

Works Unfortunate.

Our elongated first sacker, Works, also proved to the satisfaction of all those present that he has covered the initial corner before. He's sure death on ground balls and it's almost impossible to throw the ball away from him. His baptism at the local park was extremely harsh, however. His collision with Haney was a "head-on" affair if there ever was one. The men bumped heads with a dull, sickening thud that could be heard all over the stands. The visitor, however, received the worst of the deal and it is doubtful whether he will be able to appear again in the present series.

Burch to Work Sunday.

"Barney" Burch told us that he'd go in the box for a few innings at least Sunday and show his former rooters that he can still toss 'em over. He says he's got more hop on his fast (?) one than he ever had and he expects to win a goodly number of games for his club. Though he is the owner of the club, Jack Lelivelt is managing the outfit and Jack is one of the most capable in that line in the minors.

PLAYING BOTH ENDS.

I had thought when skies were gray
And the winter wind shrieked shrilly,
When dark shadows blurred the day
And the atmosphere was chilly—
"Days like this are dull stagnation,
Profitless—my efforts show it—"
Having naught of inspiration
For the toiling daily poet.

I had thought on such occasions,
"This can be no time for working";
So I lit upon evasions
That would give me cause for shirking;
"Wait," I thought, "until the golden
Sunbeams drip, and fans cheer Kelly,
To my muse I'll be beholden
And I'll show 'em I'm a Shelley."

Seven days the sun's been shining,
Seven days the sky's been blue,
Seven days the lattice twining
With the rosebuds peeping through;
Seven days of springlike weather
As I wished for—well I know it,
With the gleam upon the heather,
Inspiration for the poet.

Yet, with feet upon the table,
Idly puffing at my cob,
I have never yet been able To get busy on the job;
And I murmur—"In this jelly
Brand of weather there, alas, is Little chance to be a Shelley,
So I'll wait until it passes.

"I will wait till skies are gray,
And the winter winds shriek shrilly,
When dark shadows blur the day
And the atmosphere is chilly,
Days like this are dull stagnation,
Profitless—my efforts show it,
Bringing too much perspiration
To the toiling daily poet."

After winning a flock of pennants, Connie Mack fell into the cellar six years ago and has stayed there ever since. Now, for the first time since 1914, he has a sprightly chance to emerge and finish as high as sixth place, if he can only hurdle the Force of Habit, which is no light hurdle to take.

THE SPECTACULAR JOCK.

Jock Hutchison proved to be the best golf player in the United States last season, and he seems to have made up his mind to lead the clan again this year.

His two impressive victories at Asheville and Pinehurst not only give the thistle-haired wonder a running start, but also prove that he is hitting the ball in a winning way, chockful of confidence and control. Jock is afraid to meet no man in a test match. His only periods of depression come when he is putting poorly, and then he can sink to a highly melancholy state of mind. But, as a rule, he jams that approach pitch of his so close to the cup that putting isn't highly vital.

Jock is the most spectacular golfer in the country and one of the best liked.

Keep your eye on him at Columbia this impending July when the open starts.

Where nearly six months have been required to locate the battleground of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, only about ten days were needed to locate the main sectors of the great war.

A FOLLYANNA THOUGHT.

You'll find that joy comes out of pain,
That black dawns soon grow redder;
For "Game called on account of rain,"
Soon leads to double-header.

F. H. B.—As far as we have been able to check up returns, Strangler Lewis has cleared more in the last year than any other professional contender in sport. His earnings have been figured in the neighborhood of $400,000, for Lewis has been wrestling on an average of five nights a week over considerable stretches of time. Dempsey in this same period has cleaned up something less than $200,000 in the ring, and not over $250,000 all together.

Lewis has a big jump over Dempsey in his ability or his opportunity to work 100 times to Dempsey's one appearance.

We observed where an eminent young golfer gave a display of sixteen difficult trick shots that seemed almost impossible, but this amazing dexterity did not keep him from missing a number of three-foot putts when the tournament opened.

There is said to be little truth in the rumor that the Davis Cup has cabled the Polo Cup to this effect—"Come home and all will be forgiven."

The first sprinter to run 100 yards in nine seconds will automatically become the world's leading exponent in the art of self-defense.

"One big fault that 'Babe' Ruth has," says a critic, "is that every swing he takes at bat is a home run swing." If the net result of a home run swing is fifty-four home runs a year, we know of two or three earnest athletes who would esteem it much bliss to fall heir to this grievous fault.

PHILLIES LOOK LIKE CELLAR CHAMPIONS

Donovan's Crew Lacks Everything Needed For a Winning Ball Club.

By N. A. NOYES
United Press Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—"Wild Bill" Donovan did not get any flowers when he took over the management of the Philadelphia Nationals. He just got verbal sympathy.

In aspiring to do what no other manager has accomplished since the days of Pat Moran, Donovan needs but one thing—a ball team.

With what he has at his disposal, Quaker City fans will crown him a success if he lifts the Phillies out of the cellar.

Minus an infield, with a mediocre pitching staff, and a poor bunch of catchers, the Phils seem destined for the role of helping some other club win the race.

When Gene Paulette was banished by Judge Landis, the infield was reduced to Art Fletcher a fading but reliable veteran. There are no first baseman, second baseman or third baseman of dependable ability on the club.

Barring a preponderance of left-hand hitters, the outfield looks more like a baseball team with Williams, Neal, Meusel, Stengel and Lebourveau.

Lee Meadows, Jimmy Ring, secured from the Reds, and Baumgartner, youngster, seem to be the best of an inferior pitching staff.

The Tartars Had Literary Tastes

THE lowly and uncultured Tartars—when books fell into their possession—ate them to acquire the knowledge contained therein. They doubtless suffered indigestion. At least, they weren't overlooking any bets.

There are mistakes both of commission and omission. Better, by far, to be satisfied that you have done your best and endure indigestion, than overlook real opportunities and feel the pangs of unavailing regret.

LEGAL NOTICES

CITATION BY PUBLICATION.

The State of Texas. To the sheriff or any constable of Wichita county, Greeting: You are hereby commanded to summon Lambert Tolliver Oil & Gas Co., a corporation, by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 30th district court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the 3rd Monday in June A. D. 1921, the same being the 20th day of June A. D. 1921, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 10th day of May A. D. 1920, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 8061A wherein, David Ruby is plaintiff and Lambert Tolliver Oil & Gas Co., a Delaware corporation and the City National Bank of Commerce, of Wichita Falls, Texas, a national banking corporation are defendant and said petition alleging in substance, that on or about Oct. 15, 1919, plaintiff as agent for Champion Oil & Gas Co., a corporation, and J. Wener, Wm Fischman, Louis Borgenicht and Harry Stoll of New York City entered into written contract with Lambert Tollier Oil & Gas Co. by which it agreed to sell to plaintiff certain oil and gas leases named in said contract. That it was provided in said contract and agreement that $5000 was to be placed in escrow in National Bank of Commerce of Wichita Falls, Texas, and in event plaintiff failed and refused to comply with said obligations assumed in said contract, the money was to be paid to defendant. That thereafter said contract was mutually changed by plaintiff and defendants, parties thereto and defendant agreed to release plaintiff from the obligation to pay said $5000 but they are now withholding same from plaintiff to his damage five thousand dollars. That the National Bank of Commerce is now merged with the City National bank and is known as City National Bank of Commerce, of Wichita Falls, and it is now holding said $5,000 escrow money and refuses to pay same to plaintiff, to his damage $5000 prays for citation and for judgment jointly and severally against defendants for $5000 interest costs of suit, etc. Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same. Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the 12th day of March A. D. 1921. A. F. Kerr, clerk district court, Wichita county, Texas. Mar.19-26April2-9.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION.

The state of Texas. To the sheriff or any constable of Wichita county, greeting. You are hereby commanded to summon Homer D. Etheridge by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 30th district court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the 3rd Monday in June, A. D. 1921, the same being the 20th day of June, A. D. 1921. Then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 15th day of December, A. D. 1921, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 1787-A, wherein Belle Etheridge is plaintiff and Homer D. Etheridge is defendant and said petition alleging: That plaintiff and defendant were lawfully married on the 27th of February, 1910, and contained to live together until the 30th day of May, 1920, during all the time that they lived together the plaintiff faithfully demeaned herself toward defendant, discharged all her duties as a faithful and obedient wife of the defendant, but the defendant did on the 30th of May, 1920, abandon the plaintiff. That during the time they lived together he was cruel, harsh and inhuman in his treatment and conduct toward the plaintiff, failed and neglected to support plaintiff, etc. That there was born of said union, a child, Nina Etheridge, nine years of age, who is now in the custody of the plaintiff. Wherefore, plaintiff prays, that the defendant be cited to appear and answer as herein provided, and have judgment dissolving the marriage relation between the plaintiff and defendant and for such other and further relief, special and general in law and in equity, as she may be entitled to receive, and further prays that the care and the custody of their infant child of said marriage, Nina, nine years of age, be left with its mother and an order granting to your defendant the right to visit and see said child at all reasonable times. Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same. Given under my hand and the seal of said court at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the 30th day of March, A. D. 1921. A. F. Kerr, clerk, district court, Wichita county, Texas. By Eunice Jackson, deputy. April 2-9-16-23.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

The state of Texas, county of Wichita. By virtue of a certain order of sale issued out of the honorable district court of Wichita county, on the 7th day of April, 1921, by the clerk thereof, for the sum of eight hundred thirty ($830) dollars and costs of suit in cause No. — in said court, styled Farmers State Bank of Burkburnett versus Western Globe Oil Company, No. 2, and placed in my hands for service, I, Fred K. Smith, as sheriff of Wichita county, Texas, did on the 8th day of April, 1921, levy on certain personal property situated in Wichita county, described as follows, to-wit: 200½ shares of the par value of $100 of the capital stock of the Western Globe Oil Company No. 2, at 622 American National Bank Bldg., in the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, and levied upon as the property of said A. S. Goodloe. And on Wednesday the 20th day of April, 1921, at the court house door of Wichita county, in the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. I will sell said property at public vendue for cash to the highest bidder as the property of said A. S. Goodloe by virtue of said levy and said order of sale. And in compliance with law I give this notice by publication once a week for two consecutive weeks in the Wichita Daily Times. Witness my hand this the 8th day of April, 1921. Fred K. Smith, sheriff Wichita county, Texas; H. C. Dakan, deputy. April 9-16.

CONSTABLE'S SALE.

The State of Texas, County of Wichita. By virtue of a certain writ of execution issued out of the honorable 78th district court of Wichita county, on the 29th day of March, 1921, by Federal Supply company, against G. W. Appleby, Clark Wilcoxson and Appleby & Wilcoxson, for the sum of Fourteen Hundred Twenty-two and 50-100 ($1422.50) Dollars and costs of suit in cause No. 8513-B in said court, styled Federal Supply company versus G. W. Appleby, Clark Wilcoxson and Appleby & Wilcoxson and placed in my hands for service, I, Frank Morgan, as constable, precinct No. 1, of Wichita county, Texas, did on the 1st day of April, 1921, levy on certain property situated in Wichita county, described as follows, to-wit: 2 100-barrel galvanized tanks located on the following described tract of land. A certain forty (40) acre tract of land adjoining the lease known as the "Eazy Mark" and on the east side of said lease, same being a part of survey No. 21, H. & G. N. Ry. Co. lands in Wichita county, Texas, and owned by J. L. Powell, and levied upon as the property of said G. W. Appleby, Clark Wilcoxson and Appleby & Wilcoxson, and on Tuesday, the 3d day of May, 1921, at the court house door of Wichita county, in the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, between the hours of ten a. m. and four p. m. I will sell said property at public vendue for cash to the highest bidder as the property of said G. W. Appleby, Clark Wilcoxson and Appleby & Wilcoxson, by virtue of said levy and said writ of execution. And in compliance with law I give this notice by publication in the English language, once a week for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding said day of sale in the Wichita Daily Times, a newspaper published in Wichita county. Witness my hand this the 7th day of April, A. D. 1921. Frank Morgan, constable Precinct No. 1, Wichita county, Texas. Apr. 9-16-23.

WE'LL HANDLE BETTER CANDY WHEN THEY MAKE IT

It's hard to figure how anybody COULD make Candy better than it's made in the CRANE and ELMER factories, but if anyone ever does, you'll be able to buy it here. We take pride both in the quality of our Candy and the crisp, fresh way we have of keeping it for you.

Crane and Elmer don't know it all, at that; those NORRIS folks turn out a brand of Peanut Brittle that your sweet tooth ought to get acquainted with.

W. B. CHAUNCEY AND E. S. GOODNER NAMED AS SCHOOL TRUSTEES

W. B. Chauncey, attorney, and E. S. Goodner, wholesale grocer, were Friday night appointed members of the school board to fill vacancies caused by the resignations of W. W. Brown and Overton McDowell. Both of the new members have children in the schools and were chosen by the board on account of their interest in public affairs.

A "get-acquainted" banquet for all the teachers will be held in the near future, it was decided at Friday night's meeting, upon motion of W. M. Priddy.

Reorganization of the board was followed by the appointment of committees by Judge Carrigan, as follows:

Teachers' committee—Mrs. M. M. Addickes, chairman; E. S. Goodner and W. T. Willis.

School property and building committee—W. H. Priddy, chairman; W. R. Ferguson and W. B. Chauncey.

Rules and regulations committee: W. B. Chauncey, chairman; Mrs. M. M. Addickes and W. T. Willis.

Finance committee—W. R. Ferguson, chairman; W. M. Priddy, and E. S. Goodner.

Advisory committee—W. M. Priddy, chairman; W. B. Chauncey and E. S. Goodner.

MRS. JOHN KAY HOSTESS TO BETA DELPHIANS THURSDAY

Mrs. John C. Kay was hostess to the Beta Delphian club Thursday afternoon at her home on Travis street, and an interesting study session was devoted to the consideration of "Education," in a program led by Mrs. T. L. McGee.

Roll call was answered by current events. Mrs. Charles Crowell discussed "The Child," in connection with education; Mrs. Bernard Martin read an interesting paper on "Schools and Education" written by Mrs. Dan Thornberry, absent on account of illness in the family, and also gave a short and especially interesting review and criticism of a magazine got out by 31 chambers of commerce and 33 principals of colleges showing the percentage of teachers who have college training. The rate was showed to be very small, at least one-third of the teachers not having graduated from high school itself. Mrs. L. P. Amason led the discussion of ethics in the school.

During the social hour the hostess and her daughter, Miss Ollie, favored the club and guests with a beautiful duet. Mrs. Elizabeth Cole gave a piano selection which was very much appreciated also, and at the close of the informal program the hostess served a delicious salad course to the following: Mesdames Porter Oakes, Walker, Elmer De Montell and R. O. Kinley, guests, and Mesdames Bernard Martin, Amason, J. W. Akin, T. L. McGee, Fred C. Barron, John Davenport, S. L. Conn, Charles Crowell, I. D. Meredith and John C. Kay.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR BRIDE-ELECT LAST WEEK

Mesdames T. Kelly and Charles Walker entertained at the home of the latter, 1718 Collins street, last week in honor of Mrs. Maggie Harris, whose marriage to Tom Shelton of Winnsboro has been announced for April 23.

The home was very prettily decorated in pink and white cut flowers and potted plants, and the guests hemmed tea towels in a very interesting contest to see who could do the prettiest work. At the close of the "hemming bee" prizes were awarded Mrs. Jim Newland and Mrs. Stowe, both being presented with dainty bottles of toilet water.

The "surprise" part of the party came when a miniature bride and groom entered the living room to the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march, bearing a big pink and white decorated basket filled with beautiful gifts for the bride's trousseau and new home. The little people were J. T. Newland and Miss Virginia Green, and they made a very handsome "couple" in their pretty finery.

The hostesses, assisted by Mesdames Nordan, Everett and Moore, served ice cream in pink and white hearts, and angel food cake to the following: Mesdames Hartman, L. A. Nordan, Cliff Everett, H. George Bell, Newton Huff, Jim Newland, Moore, Cornell Henry F. Taylor, Thomason, Nix, Green Stowe, Gilbert, Golden, Walsh, McAfee, Ewalt and Pattilo, and Misses Bates and Bates, and Corgil.

MRS. FRED COUPER HOSTESS AT COUNTRY CLUB LUNCHEON

Although the Country club rooms have been the scene of many delightful and enjoyable social affairs this year, none have been more replete with loveliness and individuality than the five-course luncheon with which Mrs. Fred T. Couper honored Mrs. J. A. Hall and Miss Emily Smith of New York City, guests of Mrs. L. R. Buchanan.

Tall honeysuckle and other spring flowers were used in abundance, and unique place cards, each bearing an original rhyme descriptive of different guests, were read during the luncheon. The reading of these called forth much merriment.

Those enjoying the beautifully planned affair included: Mesdames J. A. Kemp, Frank Kell, H. B. Patterson, A. H. Britain, J. L. Jackson, Harry May, Burton Stayton C. E. McCutcheon, W. M. McGregor, M. M. Anderson, H. F. Weldon, Bernard Martin, L. R. Buchanan, J. A. Hall and Couper, and Misses Berehiece Jackson and Emily Smith.

UNITY CLUB MET FRIDAY, MRS. R. L. MILLER HOSTESS

The Unity club met Friday afternoon with Mrs. R. L. Miller, and a very interesting study of "Milestones" was conducted by Mrs. E. B. Gorsline.

Papers were read by Mrs. W. J. Daugherty on "Family Studies in Modern Drama," by Mrs. J. A. Kemp on "Contrasting Ideals of Family Life from 1860-1885 and the Present Day," and by Mrs. H. A. Young on the life of the woman of the old South in 1860. A general discussion of the play followed.

The hostess served a dainty salad plate during the social hour to the following: Mesdames G. D. Anderson, E. B. Gorsline, J. C. Hunt, J. A. Kemp, O. E. Maer, W. N. Maer, H. B. Patterson, W. M. Priddy, W. L. Robinson, Eugene Sherrod, Marvin Smith, Claude Wood, H. C. Young, A. Zundelowitz, J. C. Berney, Woojen of Junctionville, Fla., guest of Mrs. Priddy, and J. O. McDowell.

FIRST METHODIST YOUNG FOLKS HAVE "AROUSEMENT" MEETING

The "Skyscrapers" of the First Methodist Epworth League had an "arousement" meeting at the home of Miss Ida Baggett Friday night, when League yells and songs were practiced, George Truitt and Paul Pearson acting as yell leaders.

A short business session was followed by a number of games, including wireless telegraphy, pit and "42." The hostess served delicious homemade candy to the following: Messrs. and Mesdames O. G. Scott, J. W. Thorne, W. E. F. Wright, Mesdames H. C. Harris and Mattie Jaco, Misses Zula Stokes, Minnie Mae Peyton, Alene Covey, Jewel McElrath, Myrtle Bowman, Stella Baum, Ruby Edwards, Vivienne Harris, Florence McCulloch and Edith Slaten and Messrs. A. B. Mhoon, George W. Truitt, Paul Pearson, R. J. Crow, C. D. Hare, C. W. Ruffner, M. P. Albritton, E. C. Huckabee, Drummond Harris, H. A. Kinkead and Irvin Donner and Leonard Scott.

Miss Ruby Edwards furnished piano music throughout the evening.

BRIDE-ELECT INSPIRATION FOR TWO PRETTY SHOWERS

Miss Gussie Kiel, whose approaching marriage to William C. Chapman was announced by her sister, Mrs. T. R. Boone, last week, was the inspiration for two lovely parties the past week, at both of which she was complimented with a shower.

The first party was given Thursday night at the home of Mrs. C. W. Snider, when the Business Girls' class of the First Methodist church entertained with a kitchen shower for the popular bride-elect. The shower and pretty were a complete surprise to Miss Kiel, who, with Mr. Chapman, had been invited to be the guests of Miss Leona Lorimer at a theater party in the evening. When they arrived to join Miss Lorimer the girls—50 or 60 in number—were all assembled. A delightfully planned program was given by several talented members of the girl reserves corps, Miss Helen Snider reading, Miss Onelta Dean singing several solos, Miss Ena Everton giving an artistic dance number, and special music being provided by the girls' string orchestra—Misses Lucile Benson, Lucile Wiley, Dena Pickle and Edna Kay. Miss Virginia Walters also assisted in the entertainment.

The shower was presented Miss Kiel in a big box, each gift in a smaller box. All were opened, making a wonderfully interesting array of kitchen furnishing, from kitchen spoons to handsome aluminum stove ware, and the guest of honor was very much delighted.

Light refreshments were served late in the evening.

Miss Brothers Entertains.

The second compliment for Miss Kiel was given by Miss Katherine Brothers, who entertained the Girls Friendly club and a few other guests, including the wedding party, in her honor Friday evening. Miss Kiel was invited for 9:00 o'clock, and when she arrived she was greeted with a shower of lovely linen gifts from 30 or 40 of her girl friends. Many of the remembrances for her chest were particularly handsome, including several sets of Madeira napkins, beautifully embroidered pillow cases, embroidered scarfs and towels, and other such indispensables. The gift from the club, a handsome set of sterling salad forks in her selected pattern—St. Mary—was presented by Miss Kate Balkema, president of the club.

After the opening and inspection of the gifts, Miss Brothers passed individual note paper to the guests, with the names arranged in a horizontal line of letters on the page, and asked that each one write directions for "managing a husband," using the initial letters for each line, or sentence. These were presented Miss Kiel to read on her honeymoon.

In another contest, "The Bride's Trousseau," Mrs. Elizabeth King Randolph guessed the most of the articles, and was given a beautifully embroidered piece of silk lingerie, which she immediately presented to the guest of honor to add to her chest.

Miss Brothers, assisted by her sister, Miss Lois Brothers, served a pretty refreshment plate of rose ice cream molds, angel food cake and mints to the following: Mesdames Mark Moore, George Henderson, Richardson, Julian McFall, Randolph, Thomas Stroud, E. T. Duff, T. R. Boone and Charles Chenault; Misses Florence Jackson, Mary Colquitt, Florence Brown, Irene Davidson, Lily Corwin, Kate Balkema, Louise Kodadek, Florence Davis, Willie Davis, August Wisdom, Violet Davis, Irene Rainey, Lalla Boone, Ethel Rainey, Mary C. Boone and Gussie Kiel.

Several other entertainments are planned for this week in Miss Kiel's honor.

The Bible Study class of the First M. E. Mission society will meet in the church parlors Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, with Mrs. C. E. Huckabee leader in place of Mrs. Haines, who is out of town.

The study subject will be a comparison of the reformer Luther and the missionary Paul. Members are all requested to bring their Bible.

Mother's Council to Present "Cinderella" At Strand Saturday

The Mothers' council of the Alamo school will open its Saturday morning bi-weekly movie matinees for the children Saturday, April 16, with the presentation of "Cinderella." A good comedy will also be shown.

The matinee will begin at 9:30 promptly, and children will be admitted for 15 cents, grown people for 25 cents, including war tax.

The Alamo mothers have been working on the children's matinee movies proposition for some time, and recently made the announcement that they had completed arrangements for the presentation of a bi-weekly picture specially planned for children. They have secured the first two to be presented—"Cinderella," with a popular star, and "Little Red Riding Hood," which will be presented on Saturday, April 30.

The council is very much indebted to Mr. Stowe, manager of the Strand, the new movie house on Scott avenue, for the use of the house, operator and music free the Saturday morning when the children's movie is being presented.

The proceeds of the movie will be used for the beautification of the Alamo school campus.

More Than 100 Clubs Will Be Represented At District Meeting

More than 100 womens' clubs will be represented at the meeting of the First District Federation in Wichita Falls week after next—April 25-27, inclusive. Arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates are about complete, though more homes are wanted. Two hundred delegates and visitors are expected in the city for the three days convention, and the local committees have planned an exceptionally attractive program of events.

A number of hostesses have asked for delegates from certain towns, and to know if such towns would be represented. Delegates are expected from the following, and local women who wish to entertain visitors from any particular town are asked to call Mrs. G. D. Anderson, chairman of the homes committee: Albany, Arlington, Amarillo, Archer City, Anson, Aspermont, Bellevue, Bowie, Brownsfield, Canyon City, Childress, Chillicothe, Clarendon, Crowell, Dalhart, Dublin, Farwell, Floydada, Graham, Goree, Hale Center, Hamlin, Haskell, Henrietta, Hereford, Jayton, Jermyn, Kirkland, Lamesa, Lubbock, Llano, Margaret, Matador, Memphis, Mineral Wells, Mount Vernon, Newcastle, Olney, Plainview, Post, Quanah, Running Water, Seymour, Shamrock, Slaton, Stamford, Stephenville, Vernon, Throckmorton, Weatherford and Wellington.

IDAHO HIGH SCHOOL GIRL WINS $5,000 SCHOLARSHIP

Miss Katherine Butterfield

Miss Katherine Butterfield, seventeen-year-old Weiser, Ida., high school girl, who won the Firestone scholarship for the best essay in the national essay contest in which 227,000 high school students in all parts of the country participated. The scholarship, a four-year university course valued at $5,000, is offered annually by H. S. Firestone. Miss Butterfield was taken to the White House, where President Harding congratulated her on her achievement.

LATEST STYLE

By LENORE

Interesting combinations of contrasting materials is the keynote of many a new frock, as in this graceful, well-proportioned model, created by Lanvin in dark blue twill cloth over a slip of fawn colored foulard figured in blue. Divided between the old shortness and the new length, this design cleverly solves the problem by making the panels two inches longer than the slip. A gilt buckle at each side gathers the bodice in snugly at the waist and dispenses with the services of a belt.

One of the nicest things about this type of dress is its effectiveness in various combinations of materials, especially silk with Georgette, and the opportunities it permits in remodeling a last season frock.

Pattern No. 133.

A pattern for the above model (No. 133) can be obtained in sizes 34, 36, 38 or 40, by sending to Lenore, 8 West Fortieth street, New York city, your name and address, number of this pattern and the size required, and 25 cents in postage stamps. Be sure to keep this newspaper clipping of the garment to use as a working model when the pattern reaches you—which will be within two weeks.—The Editor.

Plainswoman Wins "Signs of Spring" Contest, With Mrs. R. Storey Second

THE FIRST SIGN OF SPRING.
(By Mrs. Meade Griffin, Winner of First Prize).

It's not the faintest hint of green, across the wide, brown plain,
Nor yet along the horizon the long grey clouds of dust;
It's not the smell of mellow dirt in warm and early rains,
Nor e'en the sweet notes of the lark, who sings because he must

It's not the scattered purple blooms of violets, bold, though shy,
And peach trees' early blushes are as often indiscreet;
Nor jonquils—hardy, brave, who hold their yellow heads so high,
It's none of these, the plains folks dare trust only the mesquite.

For garden planting, barefoot boys,
hens setting, wild flowers gay,
An early Easter, gingham frocks—
all these may yet see snows;
At each we oldtime plains folk, doubting, shake our heads and say—
"Mesquite has been here since the first. When spring has come—it knows."

• • • •

HOW DO I KNOW?

(By Mrs. Roy Storey, Winner of Second Prize).

How do I know that spring is here?
To me the fact was today made clear.
Hubby came rushing in, all in a flurry,
"Quick—where's my tackle, hon, I'm in a hurry—
Fishin' with Jones and the rest of the bunch.
Say, could you fix me a bit of a lunch"
Throw in some sandwiches and something sweet;
We'll get plenty of fish, so won't need any meat"
But I slip in some bacon; dozen slices or more.
(Hubby has been on these same trips before).
"Where's that old black and white checked suit of mine?
"Say' but isn't this weather fine"
"What's that' You gave that suit away"
"Why, I wanted to wear that suit today
"Where's my Panama hat? What' Gave that away too"
"Why, it was perfectly good, almost like new."
Through trunks, closets and shelves
he frantically searches,
Meanwhile making threats upon bass,
catfish and perches.
Finally he considers himself properly
attired,
To wear such clothes at other times
he couldn't be hired.
At last the bunch comes by, and stops with a shout,
He grabs up the traps and they gaily set out.

So it's not the small boy's lusty call
"Come on out, fellers, and let's play ball!"
Nor yet because, at the house next door to mine,
Winter clothes are sunning on the line,
While just across the street, with spade and hoe,
Mrs. S is helping her flowers to grow.
All these things I might be too busy to see,
But this one sign could never escape me.
For the same thing happens, year after year,
And tells me without doubt that spring's again here.

MRS. GRISHAM ENTERTAINS NEW CENTURY CLUB FRIDAY

Mrs. W. J. Grisham and Mrs. D. C. Whitney were joint hostesses to the New Century club Friday afternoon at Mrs. Grisham's home. James Barrie, the novelist, was studied and discussed, Mrs. Barnard reading an excellent paper on Barrie's life and works, and Mrs. R. C. Smith giving a review of "The Little Minister."

The hostess served refreshments to the following: Mesdames D. G. Whitney, Charles Hartsook, T. P. Adams, C. B. Felder, R. C. Smith, J. C. A. Guest, W. B. Hamilton, C. W. Daniels, W. W. Silk, G. Clint Wood, C. B. Montgomery and C. J. Barnard, and Mrs. Lynch, a guest.

Mrs. Meade Griffin of Plainview, a "housekeeper of the plains," and regular reader of The Times, has been awarded the $5 prize for the best "Signs of Spring" article, and Mrs. Roy Storey of 821 Elizabeth street, the second prize of $3, in the contest recently closed on the woman's page.

There were a number of articles which had to be ruled out on account of length, 500 words having been named as the limit, and among those which did not win prizes, several were well written, several had fair ideas, and several ran close thirds to the prize winners. An honor list would include the following, under either one or more of the three heads: Miss Joanna Powell, general delivery; Mrs. S. F. Holmes, 1005 Fourteenth street; Miss Rosa Adelaide Marquis, 1104 Austin street; Mrs. C. L. Ferguson, 1320 Harrison street; Frances E. Lyon, 1105 Austin street; Mrs. J. D. Meredith, 1695 Eleventh street; Mrs. O. M. Reeves, Avenue H and Polk street, and Mrs. E. Stanley Field, 1608 Kemp boulevard.

Both prize winning "Signs of Spring" articles are in verse, and are given elsewhere on the woman's page. Thirteen of the articles submitted were in verse. The articles were chosen on absolute merit, however, verse not having been preferred.

SANS SOUCI ENTERTAINED AT HOME OF MRS. OTIS GEERS

The Sans Souci club was entertained last week at the home of Mrs. O. G. Geers Wednesday of last week, and the afternoon was very pleasantly spent at "500." High score at the game was won by Mrs. M. F. Hamric, who, having been so fortunate several times before, asked Mesdames Howard Knowles, R. B. Morton and Lee Wilson to cut for the prize, a beautifully embroidered towel. Mrs. Wilson won in the cut. The low score prize, a cut glass bud vase, was presented Mrs. L. E. Stewart.

The hostess served refreshments to the following: Mesdames M. F. Hamric, Howard Knowles, A. J. Lester, F. N. McClure, R. B. Morton, Eugene Nicholson, G. O. Parker, Felix White, Claude Williams, Lee Wilson, C. C. Glover and L. E. Stewart.

For each type of skin
—a special treatment

If you cannot keep your skin smooth, clear, flawless—you may be sure it is because you are not using the right treatment for your special type of skin.

Skins differ widely in character—and each different type of skin needs a different kind of care.

You will find the right treatment for an oily skin—for one that is exceptionally sensitive—pale and sallow—subject to blackheads and blemishes—coarse in texture, etc., in the famous booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch." This booklet is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and find the special treatment for your skin. Begin using it tonight.

Within a week or ten days you will be astonished at the improvement in your complexion.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

"JINGLE DICK" DETECTIVE CHIEF, KNOWS CROOKS AND THEIR WAYS, THROUGH HIS LONG EXPERIENCE

By H. F. JOHNSON.

"Look out for the eyes and the second letter men—and keep a watch on Jingle Dick, he's around here somewhere too."

Warnings such as the above are growing more and more obsolete in Texas now, and in time they will cease altogether, at least so far as the "Jingle Dick" part is concerned, but at one time they were as prevalent as base hits off Spudder pitchers, and localities in which such admonishments were passed were usually in for a lot of trouble.

To the uninitiated, a sentence such as the one above is perfectly meaningless and has no portent whatsoever, but to officers of the law, who are familiar with the ways of criminals and who can talk their "language," "Look out for the Eyes" etc., is a clear cut message.

"The Eyes," be it known, is the official title bestowed by denizens of the nation's underworld on the Pinkerton Detective agency. The "second letter men" is the same thing given to the Burns detectives, and "Jingle Dick" is none other than W. A. Boyd chief detective of the Wichita Falls police department.

The detective chief has had a career which approaches about as close to being the kind we read of in the story books, but which never actually takes place, as has any one, for he was chief detective of the Texas Bankers association for 14 years and previous to that time was a peace officer of Waco. He has traveled over 100,000 miles in chasing crooks, one trip alone taking him to Australia and back in search of a notorious safe blower, he has gone into practically every state in the union and he has captured and convicted nearly 500 depraved menaces to society, all of which has given him first hand information as to how the police-dodging element works. His title "Jingle Dick" was acquired while serving with the Bankers association and it is by this that he is known to hundreds of those who prey on society.

In commenting recently on crime and crooks in general Mr. Boyd made two things plain, the first that there were two distinct types of thieves and bad men, and second that the "crook plays" depicted by the movies, with secret passages, underground dungeons, trap doors and all the other paraphernalia so commonly seen, are nothing more than lurid brainstorms of movie directors.

These two classes of crooks, says Mr. Boyd, are the petty thieving kind who snoop around back yards at night, who break into houses after clothes and silverware, who stand on the street and pick pockets and who content themselves with other smaller offenses, while the other and really dangerous type is that of the educated and polished thief who plays for high stakes and who has a well organized band of supporters behind him. It is this latter kind which furnishes all the sensations for the papers and which constitutes the greatest menace to law-abiding communities.

"There is no denying that criminals are organized," said Mr. Boyd, "for there are thousands of them in the country today who have perfect organizations and who work much more systematically than lots of business enterprises. They have a language all their own by means of which they can carry on conversation in plain hearing of the average man without him ever getting an inkling as to what they are talking about."

The chief said that many years ago he captured a notorious bank robber, one who had henchmen by the legion and who was backed by thousands of dollars with which to fight prosecution, and who had retained a big lawyer to represent him. The robber was in jail at Savannah, Ga., and was wanted by both the United States Secret Service department and by the Texas Bankers association.

"I asked permission to go and talk with him," said Boyd, "and this was granted on condition that the lawyer be allowed to go into the cell with me. He made it plain that he would veto any questions I might ask which would incriminate his client, but the thief and I talked for twenty minutes. I asked him all kinds of questions and when we left the lawyer wanted to know 'what in the devil we had talked about?'"

These high class crooks are banded together into cliques just as are members of legitimate professions and they are unwavering in their loyalty to one another, especially to those of their own particular band. Cases of the "aristocratics" turning state's evidence against one another are very rare, although instances have been known where one band, in order to save one of its own members, has revealed the operation of another group in a distant section of the country.

Loyalty to his clan is a traditional characteristic of the "good" crook, according to the chief. The word and dependability of a thief is accepted without question in the underworld, and woe unto him who breaks faith with any of his brothers. It is an unwritten law that all thieves must stick together for their common good, and one who fails to merit the confidence reposed in him does not last long.

"Even the 'blue print' men," says Jingle Dick, "know that they can trust a prosperous crook. The 'blue print' men are those who have no moral scruples against a life of crime but who through fear of retribution have not the courage to participate in robberies or murders themselves. They make comfortable livings though by planning out "jobs" and by furnishing all necessary information to those who really do the work. They spot a likely looking store, investigate it, find out whether it carries articles worth pilfering and whether it is a safe risk. They send all this information to a robber, in some cases even making blue prints of the place, and when the job is done fifteen per cent of the proceeds of the haul go to the one who planned it."

Many times the blue print man and the real thieves never see each other, but if a successful theft is made the former never fails to get his fifteen per cent, even though it would be perfectly easy for the robbers to forget all about him. Experienced robbers are able to tell at a glance whether plans submitted to them on the quiet are from a reliable, "blue print" source, or whether they are faked and sent out by officers trying to arrange a "plant" to catch an unwary crook.

The chief detective believes that the robbery of a local clothing store not long ago was a "blue print" job, perpetrated by an outside band which came into Wichita Falls at the suggestion of local forces. However, he believes at the same time that the clothing store was not the original object of the thieves, who probably had designs on an adjacent jewelry shop and who were foiled through some unforseen agency.

Going back to the organization of criminals, it appears that there is nothing left undone to afford a maximum of safety and protection to the members of a band. An efficient attorney is hired by the year to keep his charges out of jail, or to get them out when they are arrested, and other precautionary measures are made against detection by the police. Each member of the band is assessed a certain fee and this goes into a fund which is always at the disposal of a member who gets into the clutches of the law. The chief then illustrated his point by citing several instances which have taken place in this city.

"Take the cases of white men being held up by negro women and robbed of their money. The victim raises a hue and cry about being robbed and he can generally lead the police to the very person he suspects. Then after the woman is arrested she is soon released on bond of $1,500 or $2,000, and it doesn't stand to reason that a negro woman can furnish that amount of money on a day's notice, so if she hasn't the support of some organized band with strong financial backing where does she get it?"

Organizations of this kind are not prevalent in Wichita Falls, according to the police, but there are several in the larger cities of the state. Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio all have them and in such places as Chicago, New York and St. Louis they are of course as thick as the thieves themselves. Wichita Falls, however, is believed to have at least one or two.

In dealing with crooks, especially bank robbers, Chief Boyd has found that kindness will accomplish much more than threats of force or fear of the law. He believes that by making friends he can gain more with the criminal element than by prosecuting them relentlessly on a slight provocation. This is not meant to imply that when incriminating evidence is available against a thief it is wise to deal leniently with him, but unless it is intended to make out a case on some specific charge there is no use in treating him harshly, even though he deserves it.

To illustrate this the chief stated that not many weeks ago he found a safe blower in Wichita Falls, a man whom he knew to be a lawless character, but against whom he had no incriminating evidence.

"I could have put him in jail," he said, "but we had nothing against him and neither did any other officer in the country. He ought to be in the pen, but we couldn't convince a jury of the fact and even if he had been arrested we would have had to turn him loose again, so I merely stopped him, told him I knew who he was and that I was going to watch him while he was in town."

This resulted in the fellows leaving the city within a few hours time, and he harbored no ill feeling against any one.

It is work such as this that makes Boyd an asset to the city. He has been an enemy to crime for years. He has sent hundreds of criminals to the penitentiary and has routed hundreds of others, but he has never dealt with them unfairly and they respect him for it. They know that he is in Wichita Falls and they know that he knows them, all of which has resulted in their staying clear of this section.

"If Boyd never went out of his office he would be worth all that the city is paying him," said Commissioner Bralley some time ago. "They know that he would spot them if they attempted to come here and plan a robbery, and at the same time they know that he has always been fair and square with them, so rather than loot property over which he has jurisdiction they confine their efforts to places where a loss would cause him no trouble."

And all of this is perfectly true. "Jingle Dick" is known far and wide and his reputation is such that the city is profiting by it. He knows crooks and he knows their ways.

Mrs. Bowles Tells How Cuticura Healed Her Child's Head

"My little girl began with an itching on her head which kept getting worse. Her head was simply covered with blisters which caused her to scratch and rub it all the time. She was very fretful and could not rest at night. She lost all her hair and became terribly disfigured.

"I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After the first few applications we noticed a marked change so I bought more and when I had used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment she was entirely healed." (Signed) Mrs. P. T. Bowles, 502 Race St., Farmville, Va., July 14, 1920.

Cuticura Soap daily and Cuticura Ointment occasionally prevent pimples or other eruptions. They are a pleasure to use, as is also Cuticura Talcum, a fascinating fragrance for perfuming the skin.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. M, Malden 48, Mass." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

$3,500 Reproducing Piano That Fooled Experts Is in City

What is said to be the zenith in home musical instrument manufacture is the $3,500 Knabe "Ampico" reproducing piano just received in Wichita Falls by the Wichita Music Co. It is said that Wichita Falls is one of the smallest cities, in point of population, that has ever been awarded the distribution of this instrument, as the manufacturers are very jealous of the instrument's dignity and particularly careful that it be handled by firms of only the highest repute.

According to Manager K. O. Williams of the Wichita Music Co., this reproducing piano is the only mechanical piano that has ever received a large audience of musical critics. Eight hundred piano experts were assembled in the drawing room of a Baltimore hotel. The world-famous Godowsky had just rendered a selection that was greeted with a tremendous demand for an encore. In humoring the audience, which had no means of knowing the wonderful instrument was a reproducing piano, because of the mechanism being so cleverly concealed, Godowsky "faked" the keyboard and it was not until the next day's newspapers came out that the audience was advised of the deception.

ALLEGED HOLD-UP MAN KILLED AT MUSKOGEE, POLICEMAN WOUNDED

MUSKOGEE, OKLA., April 9.—L. E. Turner, 22, alleged hold-up man, was dead today and Policeman G. C. Parker was suffering from gunshot wounds in the hand as the result of a gun battle between Turner and a squad of policemen here last night. The shooting occurred at the Frisco railroad station here after one of Turner's victims had identified him as her assailant. Turner fell, shot through the heart. Relatives of Turner are said to live at Salina, Okla.

CONDEMN PARADES OF THE ALABAMA KU KLUX KLAN

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., April 9.—Seven local unions of the United Mine Workers of America meeting at Brookside last night adopted resolutions condemning the parading through the mining districts of masked members of the Ku Klux Klan.

The resolutions also condemned a committee of citizens of which a Birmingham minister is chairman, for "publication of articles bearing on the speeches of Van A. Bittner, international representative," declaring in question "were calculated to inflame the public mind."

The unions went on record as favoring the stay of Bittner in the Alabama field "until it is organized." State and county authorities were called upon in resolutions to "stop such things as the Ku Klux Klan parades" which were termed "inimical to peace."

Interstate Vaudeville

AMUSEMENT CALENDAR FOR COMING WEEK

POTPOURRI PROGRAM MONDAY AND TUESDAY AT WICHITA THEATER

Commencing Monday, "Potpourri programs" will be offered the first two days of the week at the Wichita theatre according to Manager Seeman, who states that his playhouse will not be dark at any time from now until the close of the vaudeville season.

The "Potpourri" attractions will consist of a widely assorted mixture of vaudeville, local talent and good pictures. The management doesn't know yet himself just exactly what the bill will offer, but he guarantees that it will be well worth seeing. There always is one or two acts of the week bill in town by Monday and these will be recruited to give something in the vaudeville line, while the remainder of the program will be made up of local talent and special movie features.

There will be plenty of fun and lots of surprises, according to Mr. Seeman, and the show will be worth a dollar of anybody's money, only the popular prices will still prevail and make it all the more enticing for the public.

Headlining the Keith bill which opens on Wednesday will be Marie Cahill, one of the best known musical comedines on the stage at the present time. Miss Cahill has but recently signed contracts with the Keith Interstate circuit and will make her initial appearance for the company in this city. Four other good acts will complete the bill.

"THE FAITH HEALER" TO BE ATTRACTION AT EMPRESS ON MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Healing by faith, or a demonstration of the presence of divine power in human affairs is the basic theme in George Melford's latest Paramount picture, "The Faith Healer," which will be shown at the Empress next Monday and Tuesday.

The play upon which the picture is founded, was written by William Vaughn Moody, whose play "The Great Divide," scored success some years ago. The stage production of "The faith Healer" also proved highly successful.

The story concerns a young shepherd who feels the divine call to go forth and heal the sick and suffering. When he is at the height of his work, love enters his life, and with the birth of his passion he feels his divine power waning. He is on the point of renouncing his mission, when it dawns upon him that love is a gift of God, and that he can entertain a pure love for the girl and at the same time go on with his work. With this comes a return of his healing power and a renewed consecration to his work, aided by the girl, who also devotes her life to his mission.

Maurice Tourneur's latest Paramount production, "The Bait," will be the feature attraction Wednesday and Thursday. Hope Hampton, the well-known Texas screen beauty, plays the leading role.

"The Bait" is described as a pleasing combination of romance, thrills and mystery, with the usual colorful Tourneur production methods in evidence. The story centers around a pretty shop girl, who, singled out by a master-crook as his pawn in a game to capture and later blackmail a young millionaire, is "framed" by the crook and then rescued by him while on her way to jail. Out of gratitude, she becomes an innocent prey to his schemes and learns the truth only when it seems to be too late. But, after a thrilling experience, matters turn out happily.

Besides Miss Hampton, the cast of "The Bait" includes Harry Woodward, Jack McDonald, Joe Singleton and James Gordon. Jorn Gilbert wrote the scenario.

"A Message From Mars," which comes on Friday and Saturday with Bert Lytell in the feature role was adapted by Arthur Zellner and Arthur Maude from the successful stage play by Richard Ganthoney. It is a Maxwell Karger production made for Metro. The story tells of the regeneration from selfishness of Horace Parker, a wealthy young Englishman, through the agency of a messenger from Mars, condemned to shadow him until his moral cure is effected. A series of thrilling episodes brings on the desired consummation.

The supporting cast includes Raye Dean, Maude Milton, Alphonz Tibier, Gordon Ash, Leonard Mudie, Mary Louise Beaton, Frank Currier and George Spink. Arthur Martinelli did the photography and M. P. Stauleup designed and executed the art interiors.

JUDGE LINDSEY TO APPEAR FOR EXECUTION OF SENTENCE

DENVER, COLO., April 9.—Judge Ben Lindsey of the Denver juvenile court, was to appear in district court today for execution of a sentence of a year in jail or $500 fine for contempt of court. The judge has declared that he would rather go to jail than betray the confidence of a child.

The sentence was imposed by John Perry, then judge of the district court in Denver on August 13, 1915, for Judge Lindsey's refusal to divulge a statement made by Neal Wright, a boy of 14, a protege of the juvenile court, whose mother was on trial on a murder charge.

AT THE OLYMPIC THREE DAYS THIS WEEK

Scene from "THE DOLLAR A YEAR MAN" starring ROSCOE (Fatty) ARBUCKLE—A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

MOVIE FANS WILL HAVE TO WORRY ALONG WITHOUT SEEING HAMON CASE SHOWN ON SCREEN

No films in which Clara Smith Hamon figures will be shown here.

Civic and church organizations that are protesting against such pictures being shown are using up good energy to no purpose, according to moving picture authorities, for there is very small chance that the pictures will ever be displayed anywhere.

Almost as soon as it was announced that the young woman had signed a movie contract, organizations of producers, distributors and exhibitors throughout the country were adopting resolutions putting such pictures under their official ban. And these organizations control so large a part of the movie industry as a whole that they are very apt to have their way.

Recent editions of moving picture trade magazines received by local theatre managers tell of prompt and effective action against the pictures. Following is an excerpt from the Exhibitors' Herald:

"If it were not for certain serious under-surface considerations we would be inclined to view the proposal to put into pictures one Clara Smith Hamon, recently tried for the murder of her paramour, as a bit of tawdry nonsense.

"If the individuals who became possessed of this brilliant notion merely set out quietly on their ridiculous mission and had not courted the attention of the country through publicity there would be nothing for us to do but to hope that they were not mortgaging their homestead to build this monument to their stupidity.

"As the matter now stands the people of the nation through the newspapers have been greeted with the information that Clara Smith Hamon is going into pictures.

"It is easy to imagine the sickly disgust that spread over the minds of all sane and normal men and women when they read this item; one can almost hear the shrill-voiced reformers gloating over this news, meanwhile pointing it out to their listeners as another evidence of the 'depravity of the movies,' as another proof of the irresponsible management of the motion picture industry.

"The fact that the companies and individuals who are recognised as the responsible factors of the industry have had nothing to do with the absurd proposal unfortunately does not free the industry of blame, because it is not known to the public. This comprises the disturbing element in the matter.

"Viewed by and large there is not an iota of justification for the plan of putting this woman into pictures. The motion picture simply has been victimized by certain rash persons whose commercial vision seems to be as badly obligued as their judgment of the moral fitness of things.

"There need be no apprehension that a plague in the form of such a picture will ever be visited upon the screen. There is not a chance of the necessary sanction for this being obtained from the exhibitors of America. All the injury that can be done has been done by the mere announcement of such a plan.

"The case is typical of periodic outbreaks aimed to besmirch the screen with products of the public contributed by the yellow and scarlet press. And such it is worth careful consideration.

"There must be no compromise; the thought of this industry on matters of this kind must be made plain to the entire world. The rank, greedy commercialism which would give birth to such a plan as putting the central figure in a sordid, sexy shooting mess into motion pictures must be regarded as a menace of pestilence and no opportunity should be overlooked to let the public know that this is the thought of the industry.

"Clara Smith Hamon pictures and their kind belong in waxworks; not on the screen."

The same publication also says that the film will be denied distribution.

AT THE EMPRESS MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Ann Forrest and Milton Sills in the Geo Melford Production
'THE FAITH HEALER' A Paramount Picture

Inasmuch as the National association of the moving picture industry, and the Moving Picture Theatre Operators of America have formally declared against it, it is not expected it will get very far. William A. Brady, president of the first-named organization, has intimated rather strongly that theatres that show the picture will not be allowed to continue to get films from distributing companies.

In former years, when the moving picture industry was younger and less sanely conducted, moving pictures such as those dealing with the affair at Ardmore were literally fought for by theatre managers. If a woman who had figured in a sensational divorce or murder case did not herself go into the pictures, the story of the case in question would be filmed and served to the movie-going public in large and nauseating doses. The protests in those days came from those who feared the effect of such pictures on the public. Today, it appears, the movie business is conducted by men who have learned that such things are bad business, both morally and financially, and they do their own protesting.

NINE MILLION FEELING BENEFIT OF FLATTENING OF THE AMERICAN DOLLAR

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Approximately 9,000,000 school teachers, widows, stenographers and a large number of male white collar workers now are feeling the benefit of the fattening of the dollar which began to take an added value in June.

The dollar now is worth 63.2 cents in comparison with the purchasing power of the 1913 greenback, according to the reports of the department of labor today. In June the dollar was worth but 45.6 cents.

TOM BURNETT, VETERAN COWMAN, TELLS HIS PLANS FOR MAKING THIS YEAR'S ROUND-UP THE BIGGEST YET

Mrs. Lucille Mulhall Burnett in a tussle with a longhorn.

Tom S. Burnett, Round-Up Manager

"Interview Tom L. Burnett, manager of the round-up" was the assignment slip I found lying upon my desk when I came into the editorial rooms to start my daily toil Saturday. This little slip had been written by the city editor, the fellow higher up who tells we reporters what to do.

I picked up the little slip of paper and to my mental vision there came a picture of Tom L. Burnett and I smiled as I thought that this work of interviewing him should be much more pleasant than many such trips the city editor has sent me on in days past and I hied myself over to the office of Jerome Stone at the City National bank building where the round-up headquarters are located, hoping that I would find Mr. Burnett in. I walked right into the office and congratulated myself on my luck as I noticed that Mr. Burnett was there, and shaking hands with the man who is to thrill the populace of the section I introduced myself and stated my business.

"Glad to meet you said Tom," (he is one of those jolly fellows easy to meet and you naturally fall into the habit of calling him by his first name) "but you don't want to see me you want to talk to Fog Horn Clancey, he's my chief liar, kind of professional you know, and he attempted to introduce me to Fog Horn, his secretary and press agent, but I told him that I had met Fog Horn, and had been commissioned by the city editor (my boss) to talk to him and get his own story of the round-up.

"Well, I don't know just how to tell you the things you want to know so that you can print them in the correct form for a newspaper," he said. "I have always kept a little out of the way of newspaper men as I am not much on telling things for print, but if your boss told you to talk to me I suppose you have to do it in order to make good."

"Well, to begin with, there is not a whole lot of fun in staging one of these affairs, but a kind of fascination to see the cowboys and cowgirls out there trying to outdo each other and win the big prizes. There are a hundred and one little things that come up that must be looked after if a fellow is to put on a round-up that will be a credit to himself and the town in which he holds it; and it's expensive too. The expenses are far greater and the profits much smaller than one would think, and out in the open where you are at the mercy of the elements, it always has a fellow looking for clouds and wondering if it will rain and cause him to lose several thousand dollars.

"My reason for staging the round-up, is that I want to give the cowboys and cowgirls, all of whom are my friends, a jolly good time, and because I know that the round-up will help Wichita Falls. I am always glad to do anything I can for this city. I punched cattle all around this section when there was hardly enough people here to raise a fuss, and now that there are so many here I like to raise a fuss with them and I believe that this round-up will be a real fuss, and after I have gotten the round-up established here as an annual feature I will probably sit back and let the citizens of the city stage it themselves as there is almost too much details for one man to look after and handle.

"I believe that this will be the roughest contest on cowboys and cowgirls ever held in the state. I have sent west and gathered up the worst lot of bucking horses that could be found and I'll miss my guess if there are more than ten rides in the forty or more entries that ever get as far as the grand stand finals, and I look to see a lot of cowboys bucked off those horses, and in the steer riding the going will sure be rough. I found some of the wildest, meanest Brahmas in the country. They came from near Booth, Texas, and they never saw anything but mesquite and cactus. All they seem to know is that every living thing is their enemy and they will quit grazing anytime to fight. You have heard the old saying about an animal that would fight its shadow; well the fellow who invented that saying I believe had just met a Brahma steer, and if you have never seen a bucking Brahma steer you've missed a lot.

"As to contestants, there will be I believe, twice as many as were here last year and they will be the best that ever roped a calf or rode a bucking horse. As for the bulldoging it will again be one of the features, and I have procured some of the wildest Mexican steers for use in this event and it is sure to be exciting."

When asked about the chances of the local bulldogger Slim Caskey, Mr. Burnett stated that as manager of the round-up he did not believe it quite proper for him to say anything for or against any contestants chances to win, but he added that Slim beat them all here last year and they say that he is better now than ever before.

The calf roping will bring together the fastest cowboys in this line of sport and will be even more exciting than last year. In answer to my query regarding the report that Senorita Villa would rope against Mrs. Burnett, he said that it was true that a challenge had been made indirectly, and that it had been accepted by him and Mrs. Burnett. But that he believed that the person challenging was one who believed that if their identity was known that Mrs. Burnett would be afraid to meet them in a contest.

"They are mistaken in that," he said, "she believes that she can beat any woman in the world and I am of the same opinion, and if the senorita fails to put in her appearance to rope against Mrs. Burnett I will try and get some other lady roper to rope against her."

According to Mr. Burnett there will be many special features on the program that were not seen here last year, such as "Oppollo" the auto jumping horse, Mamie Francis, lady horseback rifle shot; Guy Shultz, of Bliss, Oklahoma in an attempt to bulldog a buffalo; Mr. Weeks' saddle and high school horses, and if the weather is good he stated that Slim Caskey had volunteered to attempt to bulldog a wild steer from a speeding automobile.

"WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?" IS TO HAVE RE-SHOWING AT MAJESTIC, MONDAY ONLY

Wallace Reid in his famous automobile story "What's Your Hurry," is being brought back for a re-showing at the Majestic theatre on Monday only of this week, the great favor with which it was received on its first presentation having convinced the theatrical men that such a move would be a wise one.

"Whats' Your Hurry" is a companion picture to "The Roaring Road," one of Reid's first auto productions, and it has all the zip and pep which has made the popular stars name a byword in the movie world. The story deals with the life of a young auto salesman who is in love with his employer's daughter, said employer being a wealthy automobile manufacturer who has won a name and fortune by making motor trucks. The young salesman gets his boss into all kinds of trouble, even having him pinched for speeding once, but eventually puts over a big deal and wins all he wants.

On Tuesday another old timer, William S. Hart, comes back in "The Cradle of Courage," which had a big run when shown here for the first time. Hart never fails to draw well in Wichita Falls and his work in the forthcoming production is such that capacity crowds are expected.

Wednesday and Thursday brings Buck Jones in "The All Man Trail" while on the first two days of the week James Oliver Curwood's story of "Isobel" will be featured. The Jones production, is of course a western, while the latter one is a story of the frozen north. Both are exceptionally good.

"ONE MAN IN A MILLION" ON PROGRAM AT STRAND MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Movie fans of the city are in for a treat when "One Man in a Million," the latest Robertson-Cole super-special release starring the inimitable character actor George Beban, opens at the Strand Monday and Tuesday. This new six-reeler has been nothing short of a sensation wherever shown, and critics are on record as having declared it the greatest drama ever filmed. In the leading role, Mr. Beban gives a performance that he has never before equalled during his long career in the theatrical business.

The story of "One Man in a Million" has to do with the reward brought by kindness. Mr. Beban in the role of Lupino Delchini, an humble and big hearted Italian, becomes pound master in a western town as the result of a good turn he performed for a secret service operative. From the very start therefore, the picture carries the high interest which is always felt in animals and their many pranks. At the pound Lupino finds Flora Valenzi, a stenographer, whose heart is as big as his own. Her love for the kindly Italian grows with the days but she conceals it carefully.

There are many dramatic moments and many comedy situations. Mr. Beban who, as well as playing the leading role, wrote the story, produced and directed the picture, has apparently thought of everything that goes to make a successful photoplay.

Players of uncommon merit make up the cast of "The Silent Barrier," first of the Louis Tracy novels to be produced on the screen by Gibraltar Pictures for Louis Tracy Productions, Inc., which comes on Wednesday and Thursday.

Sheldon Lewis, prominent for years as leading man and character actor on the stage and screen, heads the powerful ensemble in "The Silent Barrier," contributing the same brand of characterization that marked his work while playing opposite such distinguished stage stars as Mrs. Fiske, Ada Rehan and Blanche Walsh.

A role of equal importance is in the capable hands of Gladys Hulette, whose screen achievements have won marked praise. Miss Hulette, who has appeared with De Wolf Hopper, Bertha Kalich and Nazimova and later scored a distinct triumph as the original Tyltyl in the New Theatre production of "The Blue Bird" has been seen on the screen in "The Streets of Illusion," "The Cigarette Girl," "Miss Nobody" and "A Crooked Romance."

The closing picture of the week is to be "If Only Jim," Harry Carey's latest and biggest western thriller. Carey and William S. Hart are the two best drawing cards in Wichita Falls and their pictures always bring out capacity crowds, which indicates that this film will be well patronized.

STRAND FEATURE THIS WEEK.

GEORGE BEBAN in "ONE MAN IN A MILLION"

"DOLLAR A YEAR MAN" IS OLYMPIC OFFERING FIRST THREE DAYS OF WEEK

Remember the dollar-a-year men? There were lots of them during the war and they did a great service for the country. Walter Woods saw in this an idea for a humorous photoplay for Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle and wrote, "The Dollar a Year Man," which comes to the Olympic the first three days of this week.

The story concerns the visit of a prince to a California coast town, with the local yacht club appointed as host. Fearful lest Pinney, their only plebian member, should slap their royal guest on the back, the club members lead him off on a trumped-up kidnapping plot. But the plot develops into a real one and Pinney, who is an amateur detective, is given a chance to really show what he can do in the detecting line. He rescues the prince and then joyously slaps him on the back all during the ensuing banquet, and to the surprise of the clubs members, the prince slaps back. "Fatty" is at his best in this new picture and he is given excellent support by Lila Lee, Winifred Greenwood, J. M. Dumont, Edward Sutherland, Edwin Stevens and Henry Johnson.

Theatregoers will have an opportunity to see Charles Ray in the screen version of Sol Smith Russell's stage success, "Peaceful Valley," at the Olympic the last three days of the week. In this vehicle Mr. Ray reverted to the role which has made him one of the screen's greatest favorites—that of a rube. The story was adapted to the screen by Isabel Johnston from Edward E. Kidder's memorable stage play, which is credited with 5,247 footlights performances and which ranks as one of the most popular spoken comedy-dramas ever produced.

As Hosiah Howe, a struggling sunny-hearted farmer lad with a widowed mother and young sister to support, Ray is declared to have delineated a screen character that will live as one of the outstanding artistic accomplishments.

In the leading feminine role opposite Ray is Anna May, and other well-known members of the cast are Charlotte Pierce, Harry Myers, Lincoln Stedman, Walter Perkins, William Courtright, Vincent C. Hamilton, Jesse Herring, Lydia Knott, Melba Lorraine and Ida Lewis. Jerome Storm, assisted by Harry Decker, directed the production.

"THE GREAT LOVER" WILL FEATURE SPLENDID BILL AT THE GEM THIS WEEK

"The Great Lover," a Frank Lloyd production released by Goldwyn holds the feature position on the movie bill at the Gem this week, although there are at least three others which could very well serve as headliners. "The Great Lover," which is a story of the life of high society in New York, Paris and Milan, deals with the career of a young soprano vocalist, played by Claire Adams, who is taken as an understudy by a famous baritone singer and who is to appear in concert in support of him. Intrigue and scandal arise due to the reputation of the baritone and before the picture ends some highly exciting scenes take place.

Tuesday brings another thriller of an entirely different type to the Gem in the form of Jack London's celebrated novel "The Mutiny of the Elsinore." This is a tale of bloody pirate warfare on the high seas and is considered as London's best.

Wednesday finds the popular Robert Warwick in "Jack Straws," while Shirley Mason in "Girl of My Heart" will put in her appearance on Thursday. "The Green Flame," a J. Warren Kerrigan attraction, comes on Friday and the week will be closed Saturday with the usual round of westerns comedies and news reels.

PRICES REDUCED AT ALL D. F. R. THEATERS

Ten to Twenty Per Cent Cut In Cost Of Tickets Announced, Effective Monday.

Announcement was made last week by H. S. Ford, manager of the Dye, Ford and Rodgers interests in this city, that effective Monday, prices of admission to all theatres controlled by his company would be reduced from ten to twenty per cent. This means that four theatres in Wichita Falls will be affected, entailing a saving weekly of hundreds of dollars to the public and that other D. F. R. theatres in Texas will also be similarly effected.

Prices on the new scale as announced by Mr. Ford, are as follows:

Olympic—Matinees, 12 to 5:30, children 10c, adults 20c. Evenings, 5:30 to 10, children 10c, balcony 25c, lower floor 40c.

The berry is the most delicate of the fruits.

YOU know this from your experience in buying the little boxes at the fruit store. Some are green, others are overripe, and the whole flavor is nothing like the berries that you ate down on the farm.

To be richest and best, berries must come to full ripeness on the vine and then within the hours must be preserved in pure sugar.

GENERAL REDUCTION IN WAGES PROPOSED BY M. K. & T. ROAD

CONFERENCES WILL BE HELD IN ST. LOUIS OFFICES APRIL 18 TO 22.

REDUCTION TO BECOME EFFECTIVE ON MAY 1

Katy System In Texas Operates At Loss Of $7,000,000 For Year 1920.

A general reduction in salaries and wages of officers and employes is proposed by the receiver of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad, and a conference on this subject will be held in the Railway Exchange building in St. Louis from April 18 to 22. The proposed reduction is to go into effect on May 1, 1921.

At approximately the same time of the announcement of the proposed reduction comes the annual report of the Katy system in Texas, which shows that for the year ending December 31, 1920, the road was operated at a net loss of $7,113,951.

In the announcement of the proposed reduction the receiver states that it is desired to hold a conference with the employes who are duly designated and authorized to represent the employes for the purpose of reaching an agreement as to what constitutes just and reasonable rates of pay in the light of present conditions.

On April 18 there will be a conference with telegraphers and telephoners; on April 19 with engine and train service employees; on April 20, all shop and other employes covered by decision No. 2 of the United States railroad labor board; on April 21 with those engaged in maintenance of way and structure, engine and boiler room employes, and on April 22 with all signalmen and all others covered by article 9 except section 1 in decision No. 2 of the United States labor board and all employes in other departments not specifically classified.

The annual report of the Katy in Texas shows the following figures: Total operating expense, $31,512,797.63; operating revenue, $29,712,862.00; leaving a deficit of income from operations of $1,799,935.00; income from other sources, $55,294.00; leaving a total deficit of $1,243,641.00; reduction for taxes, rents, leases etc., $5,870,309.00 of a net loss of $7,113,951.00.

ANOTHER WEEK MAY SEE COMPLETION OF GRAHAM EXTENSION

Definite announcement as to the date for the excursion to Graham, inaugurating service over the Southern's extension, will probably be made this week. It is hoped to have the excursion on April 21, San Jacinto day, but that date cannot be positively set until it is known that everything will be ready.

There is every reason to believe that the steel will be laid into Graham by April 16, which means that the end of another week will see the link completed. However, unforeseen contingencies may cause some delay.

NORTH WICHITA MAY ALSO GET CAR LINE

Early Action On New Building Program Of Traction Company Is Expected.

Early action upon contemplated changes in street car routes may be expected, according to information at the traction company offices, with a possibility that a line to North Wichita will be included in the program.

The company will probably submit its routing program, as a whole, to the city council in connection with its request for a franchise up Eighth or Ninth streets, which request is to be renewed in the near future; it was withdrawn, after pending before the council for some time, on account of the company's plans for additional lines.

If the proposed new line to the Riverside cemetery is built westward on Sixth street, it is probable that a line to North Wichita, via Travis street, can be added to the program.

In connection with the traction company's plans, officials of the company pointed out that erroneous impressions might be drawn from its annual report, filed Friday, showing a gross profit of about $20,000.

"That doesn't mean that we made that much money at all," Manager L. L. Albritton said, "the depreciation charges alone, which don't show in the report, would wipe out the apparent profit."

Systematic saving means success, and saving with the City National Bank of Commerce means success in good company, happiness, comfort, freedom from care. CITY COUNCIL WILL ORGANIZE MONDAY FOR MUNICIPAL YEAR

The swearing in of one new member, Dr. J. F. Reed, consideration of the pending election contest and organization for the ensuing year are expected to be features of Monday night's session of the city council.

In view of the statement of Commissioner Bralley that he has no objection to a contest and that he does not wish the office unless it was obtained fairly, no opposition to the request for a recount of the votes is anticipated.

In addition to the installation of the new member of the council, R. E. Shepherd will be sworn in for his two-year term. Commissioner Bralley, who will not be sworn in until the contest is settled, will be sworn in for a one-year term. His predecessor, M. A. Bundy, was elected a year ago for a two-year term which would expire in 1922.

One of the first matters to be taken up at the beginning of the new municipal year is the budget for the year. Heads of the several city departments are expected to submit their separate budgets within a short time.

EARLY HARVEST IS EXPECTED IN WHEAT FIELDS THIS SEASON

Although the green bug has appeared in several places in Wichita and neighboring counties, the pest arrived too late, in the opinion of local grain men, to do material damage, and it is still believed that Wichita county will harvest one of the biggest crops in her history.

With plenty of moisture in the ground, wheat in this section is unusually far advanced, and an exceptional harvest is anticipated. In many fields the wheat is already headed out and at an advanced stage for this season. Oil men who often journey to Graham and Breckenridge report that in Young and Archer counties wheat looks nearly a month ahead of season.

The City National Bank of Commerce appreciates the business entrusted to it and endeavors to show this appreciation by the excellence of its service. The bank invites new accounts in the confidence that it can please new patrons just as it has satisfied thousands of old ones. 331-1tc Remarkable Values in Fine Rugs All This Week at McConnell Bros.

We are overstocked with High-Grade Rugs and Druggets. Back in the buying season we expected an enormous demand this Spring, and while we have sold literally hundreds of these beautiful creations of the weaver's art, and at regular prices, we now find that we must remove a large number at a sacrifice, and now is the time to do it. Everyone at this time is thinking gravely of cleaning the house, and with Spring cleaning goes the necessity of replacing worn and dirty Rugs. Opportunity creates duty when Up-to-date Rugs can be bought right.

Last Six Years Have Changed English Social Spirit More Than Preceding Six Centuries

Men Went Out to War From Isolated Rural Districts and Poverty-Stricken City Tenements and Mingled for First Time in Their Lives—Came Back Changed, Hating War and Blaming Not Only Germans but Civilization.

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

In many ways the social spirit of England has been more changed in the last six years of history than in the six centuries preceding them. Such a statement may seem fantastic in exaggeration for the sake of an easy and arresting phrase, yet it is exatly true of certain characteristics of English life and habit, for the war was a convulsion which shook England to the core and broke up many of its old instincts and traditions of social faith.

In spite of modern developments of democracy and industry, the progress of education, and the growth of cities, England remained, until the world war, amazingly feudal in its structure and insular in its habits of thought. The old landed aristocracy maintained in the countryside the power and allegiance which they had possessed for hundreds of years, and the small farmers and tenantry, fast rooted to their soil, had no sense of change and no desire for change.

LIKE CHAUCER'S ENGLAND.

In counties like Somerset and Devon, Warwick and Gloucester, Norfolk and Suffolk, the peasant laborer was, in his ways of speech and thought, but little different from his forefathers of Tudor and Plantagent times, spoke almost the language of Chaucer, so that to the London man, modernized, quick-witted, the "yokel" of the south, west, and north was incomprehensible in his dialect, and primitive in his outlook and understanding.

The landed gentry, in old country mansions, changed the cut of their clothes, danced the foxtrot, adopted the latest social fashion, but instinctively, in the very fiber of their bodies, in allegiance to a tradition of life and to a certain plot of land which was theirs, were intensely insular.

I remember a year or two before the war a startling instance of the conservatism of English life beyond the cities. It was when the craze for "pageants" had caught hold of English imagination, so that in many old towns the people dressed themselves in the costumes of the past, reread the history of their forefathers, and acted the drama of the centuries from Saxon times to their own present. In Norfolk there was such a pageant, and one scene of it was to represent a chapter of history when five hundred years ago, the gentlemen of Norfolk, with their squires, came to pay homage to Mary Tudor, their princess. Five centuries had passed, but every actor in the scene bore the same name, lived on the same soil, held the same place, as those ancestors of his who had knelt before the Tudor princess.

In a thousand ways like this England held to the past. The people were insular, and the sea which divided them from the continent was a great water of defense against the spirit of change, except in outward, superficial things.

WAR CHANGED EVERYTHING.

Then the war came and changed everything in the spirit of the English people.

At first it seemed as though it would be like other wars of England—a foreign expedition of a little professional army, and of young lads eager to see "foreign ports" by taking the king's shilling. They would fight gallantly, many would be killed, there would be exciting reading in the news prints, and then the bells would ring for victory, the lads would come marching back, the English life would go on again, hardly touched or altered. Even at Waterloo there had been only twenty-five thousand English soldiers. To the mass of English folk the Napoleonic wars had been a remote and distant thing not affecting their own lives much.

When the world war broke out the British troops who were sent, according to the pledge with France, were called the "expeditionary force," as in the old days. But presently the regular army was spent, and presently all the youth of the nation was sent out, the younger brothers following the older brothers, the married following the single men, fathers of families conscripted like the boys at school.

England was all in—all her men, all her women, and no escape for any of them in the service of death. No living body in England was exempt from the menaces of destruction. Death came out of the skies and chose old men and women, nursing mothers, babies, anyone. The enemy attacked them in little homes in back streets, in big factory centers, in the heart of London.

So England was no longer safe in her island. An insland people, uninvaded for a thousand years, with utter reliance on her fleet as an invincible shield, were suddenly shocked into the knowledge that the sea about them was no longer an impassable gulf between them and all foreign foes. It was a shock which broke up the old psychology and the instincts of a thousand years.

English youths went out to the death fields, hundred thousand after hundred thousand, until four million men had gone that way. From first to last on all fronts the men of the English countries—not Irish, or Scots, or Welsh, or Canadian, or Australian—made up 64 per cent of the British fighting forces. They were English soldiers who fought most, and endured most, and died most; because there were most of them, though the world heard least of them, because the English people don't talk most about themselves. Out of every four men who went out to the world war one did not came back again, and of those who came back many are maimed and blind and some are mad. England and the spirit of mind of England were altered by so great an ordeal which had come to every home and heart.

WAR MADE LABOR PROSPEROUS.

In many ways the alteration was plainly visible during the war, especially to fighting men who came home from the dirty trenches on three days' leave, or seven. The home-staying people—the old and middle-aged, the women, the workers in the factories providing the material and munitions of war, the government officials, clerks and employers of labor, even the young girls—seemed to be possessed by a new energy, a more vital spirit, a restless and energetic excitement. They were all "out to win." They were all, in big ways or little, dynamic in their activities. Caste was for a time abolished. University professors were acting as field laborers. Patrician women were making munitions with factory girls.

A great, strong, spiritual wind seemed to have swept through all classes of English life. It had cleansed even the slums of great English cities which had seemed past cleansing. Before the war an immense population in England crowded into the cities, had lived below the overty line or on the thin edge of it—miserably, precariously, dirtily. There was a mass of floating, casual labor ofter out of work, huddled in the hovels of back streets, in filthy conditions. Their children were ragged, barefooted, underfed.

Now those conditions had been altered by the war. The demand for labor was so great that every able-bodied man could get a good wage. The government and the employers paid great wages for skilled work. Mechanics who had found trouble in getting forty or fifty shillings a week now gained two hundred or three hundred shillings a week. Any girl with her hair hanging down her back or tied into a pigtail could get a wage that her father would have envied before the war. Munitions girls were getting three and four pounds a week, some of them far more than that. Small families, all working, paid by the government money, raked in an incredible weekly revenue. For the first time they had a broad margin of money for the fun of life as well as for its sharp necessities.

I remember being home on leave once during the war and walking in the park of a poor district of London on a bank holiday—that day when the poor people used to come out of their slums in their rags to enjoy a little liberty. This time there were no rags, but well-dressed children, girls over-dressed in the imitation of fashionable ladies, a strange new look of prosperity and well-being. At that time the workers in factory towns had more money than they knew how to use, and bought absurd little luxuries, and grabbed at the amusements of life without thought of the morrow. There were pianos in the homes of coal-heavers, and the wives of laborers wore fur coats—in summer as well as in winter.

The fighting man, back from the trenches, where he risked death every day and every minute of everyday for one shilling two-pence, was startled by the money made by the luckier men who worked for war at home. He saw injustice there, inequality of service and reward and sometimes was bitter and blasphemous on the subject. But, on the whole, the soldier did not begrudge the money earned by the home workers. They were his folk. He was glad of their luck, though he did not share it. He believed that when he came home—if he came home—he, too, would get high wages for any job he might get.

His wrath and the wrath of the home workers (in spite of their own prosperity) were reserved for the manufacturers and financiers who were making enormous profits out of government contracts—vast profits out of the massacre. "The profiteers," as they were called, sometimes fairly and sometimes unfairly, became the worst hated class in England by the masses of working people, and by the old gentry who gave their youths to war, according to old traditions and the law of their caste, without any reward but that of pride and honor. They saw themselves doomed by the uprising of the New Rich. The small landowner, the country squire, the nobleman of the old order, aloof from trade and manufacturers, gave their wealth to the service of the state as they gave their sons, and upon them fell, year by year, a heavier burden of taxation. Before the end of the war, and after the end of it, many of them sold their estates, which had been in their families for hundreds of years, sold also their family treasures. The new rich took possession of many old mansions, bought the family heirlooms of the old regime, renovated and vulgarized old historic places.

I know one family of the ancient order whose history in the war is typical of others. There were four sons, and all of them were in the army or navy, and two of them were killed. The daughters became nurses and devoted themselves to the wounded during all the years of war. The mother died by the strain of war. Increasing taxation bore down heavily upon an already impoverished estate. The father, a peer whose name belongs to the great memories of England, sold the pictures of his ancesters to an American millionaire, then the treasures and relics of his house. It is now an empty shell, and the eldest son, back from the war, farms a little plot of land, with one of the new rich in possession of the great estate, which belonged to the family since the first Charles was king.

NEW POOR AGAINST NEW RICH.

A social revolution has been accomplished in England by this turn in the wheel of fortune. The New Poor—once the old gentry—are scraping along on the remnants of former wealth; the New Rich possess their place, and so far have not learned those traditions of kindness, of generosity, and of noble manners which made the older gentry pleasant people, whatever faults they had. In a way previously unknown to a great extent in England, small traders, little manufacturers, business adventurers without capital or power, seized the chance of war, the needs of a government reckless of all cost, provided the supplies of war came in, and made rapid progress to great prosperity. Their profits mounted higher and higher, and, thought the government imposed upon them an excess-profits duty, most of them dodged it, in one way or another.

MIDDLE CLASS HARDEST HIT.

It was the middle class man or woman that was hardest hit by taxation before the ending of the war, and by the prices of life's necessities rising higher and higher every month. The laboring classes kept mostly beyond the pace of these rising prices by rising wages. Well organized and fully aware of their new importance as the workers for victory, they saw to it that their wages should always be on the upgrade and beyond the tide of living costs. If that did not happen they went on strike, and the government yielded—every time. The government paid every kind of wage for work, though secretly it knew that there would be a fearful reckoning when victory was assured, if it might be assured, which was not always certain. But there were many people between the devil and the deep blue sea, between the profiteers and organized labor. They were unorganized. They were living on the interest of small capital. They were dependent on fixed salaries, or professional fees which could not be increased. Their rents were raised. The income-tax assessor had no mercy on them. The cost of living frightened them. They were reduced to a state of stinting and scraping, underfeeding, clinging to shabby clothes. They, more than any, belonged to the New Poor.

Then at last the war ended and masses of men came back from the battlefields, leaving an army of ghosts behind them—their dead comrades. Then all things changed under the surface of English life.

THE MEN WHO CAME BACK.

Those men who came back were not the same men as those who had gone away. They had been utterly changed. They had gone out from villages in England where their life had been very narrow, very limited in ideas and speech. Many of the boys in those villages were as simple and unthinking as the peasants of the Middle Ages.

From the city slums they had gone out in the big battalions, and the undersized, underfed, ill-aired lads of that city life had been broadened and strengthened, well fed, well aired in an outdoor life that was healthy and fine when it was not deadly and dreadful. They had taken frightful risks as a daily habit, until the thought of death was not much to them. They had mixed and talked with men of many minds. They had thought strange thoughts in the silence of night watches with the instant menace of death about them.

Some of the men were broken in nerve. Some of them were brutalized and demoralized by this life of war. Many of them were bitter and resentful of the things they had had to do and suffer and see. All of them hated war. Most of them had come to think that not only the Germans were guilty of that war, though most guilty, but that something was wrong with civilization, with the governments of nations, with the Old Man who had sent the young man to the trenches, because this massacre had been arranged or allowed.

A Musical Sensation

and the greatest compliment ever paid the Wichita Music Co.

Awarded Local Distribution of the World-Famous Knabe "Ampico" Reproducing Piano—

PRICED $3,500 AND WORTH IT

It's a great compliment to us—a very, very great compliment. For not every musical house can secure this testimony of confidence from the manufacturers of the Knabe "Ampico" Grand. It is only after the most thorough investigation and full convincement by and of the manufacturers that the standing of the House is compatible with the dignity and grace of the instrument itself that a dealer is able to secure this really great honor.

The music lovers, and particularly the lovers of the Piano, have not seen or heard the zenith of musical instrument perfection until they have seen and heard this wonderful, all but human, mechanical creation. It is now on display in our demonstration halls and whether you are able to pay $3,500 for a piano or not, you are cordially invited to see it and hear it. There are now only two such pianos in this part of Texas; they are in two of the wealthiest homes of Wichita Falls.

Come, See This Remarkable Demonstration of Man's Ingenuity

The Graceful Appearance of the Ampico

In appearance the Ampico differs in no way from that of the ordinary grand or upright piano. The mechanism is so skilfully designed that it occupies the minimum of space and is concealed inside the instrument. There is no unsightly box or cabinet to disfigure it or encumber the room. The case is not lengthened or thrown out of proportion in any way. There is no distortion of the mechanism of the piano itself, and although it contains the wonderful Ampico, it may be played by hand in the usual way.

Automobile News

Actual Shortage of Automobiles Near, Dealers Here Say

That both Wichita Falls and every other section of the country are face to face with a very real automobile shortage, is the belief of a large number of local automobile men and others interested in the automotive industry. Several dealers reported last week that certain types of cars were not to be had except subject to later delivery, and other types now apparently plentiful are expected to feel this condition within a very few weeks at the most.

This announcement will strike Mr. Average Citizen as somewhat strange, in view of the known fact that a large number of automobile factories have been completely closed down or running on only part time. It is fully understood by automobile men and bankers, however, and was not unexpected.

During the period of readjustment, when the automobile factories would have been more than glad to receive orders, and, by the same token, when the dealer would have been more than delighted to stock up against the approaching shortage, the banks could not see their way clear to put out large sums to the automobile dealers, and the dealer, not being a banker, did not have the large capital necessary to pay for any considerable number of cars. Gradually the cars in the hands of the manufacturers were bought up by the dealers, until today demand is exceeding the immediate supply in many lines.

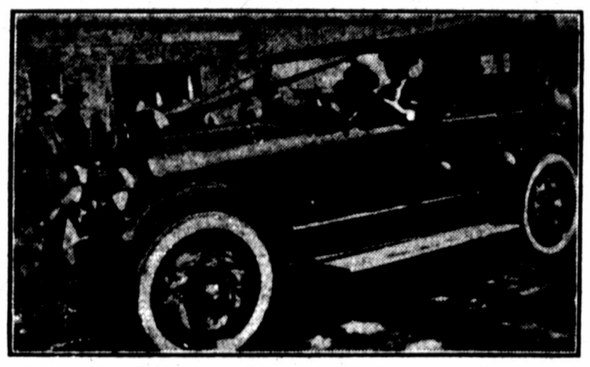

That the shortage is showing itself particularly in the increasing numbers of used cars that are being sold is a known fact to those familiar with Automobile Row. For the past several weeks local dealers have been unusually successful in disposing of used cars, and some predict that if this used car demand continues to increase as it has in the very recent past it will have a tendency to cause a deciding stiffening in used car prices.

Conditions generally in automobile circles are conducive to optimism, with every indication that practically all dealers will soon be able to dispose of all the cars they can secure.

Carbon is a serious trouble in running engines and is caused by the rings not bearing properly against the cylinder wall, thus allowing the piston to pump the lubricating oil to the head of the piston, where it is burned at the time of the explosion. This causes a bluish smoke and leaves carbon deposits, usually on the head of the piston or in the combustion chamber.

There is but one practical way to test radiators for leaks and that is to submerge them in a tank of water and applying air pressure to the core.

NEW HAYNES ROADSTER

This excellent "snap shot" of the new 1921 4-passenger Haynes roadster was taken during the recent automobile show parade. This car has attracted considerable attention since its first arrival in the city, and seems to be in keen demand. The Nolen-Stringer Co. is local distributor for the Haynes, as well as for the Lincoln car.

WITH THE AUTO DEALERS

D. H. Rubsam, manager of the Marshall Huff Motor Co., local distributors of the Oakland, Jordan and McFarland machines, spent the greater part of last week in Vernon.

D. L. Fritz, local distributor of the Marmon, drove two new machines up from Dallas last week. He reports the roads between Dallas and Wichita Falls to be in poor shape.

A Packard single six touring car was sold last week to a local purchaser by the Williams-Thompson company.

E. O. Smith of Birmingham, Ala., has taken a position as salesman with the Nolen-Stringer company, local distributors of the Haynes and Lincoln cars. Mr. Smith has been in the auto game for several years and is well acquainted with the southern field.

Sid Gaines of the Gaines Auto Supply company returned late last week from a fishing trip on the White river near Bentonville. He reports having met M. A. Bundy, former city commissioner here, who is mayor of Bentonville, and a number of other local people sojourning in that locality. There are a dozen or more Wichita Falls families at a summer resort near Bentonville, according to Gaines.

G. R. Overstreet, Hupmobile distributor from Fort Worth, was in Wichita Falls last week visiting with Eckman and Von Allmen, local distributors for the popular Hupp machine.

C. L. Nolen of the Nolen-Stringer company will spend a large part of the coming week in the Wichita trade territory.

W. K. Thompson and Lloyd Weaver will leave Sunday afternoon for Dallas to attend the auto show in that city. They will drive down.

A. B. Booth, H. A. Self and S. G. Hawkins of the Overland Motor company spent last week in the Overland territory.

Hupmobiles were delivered to John L. Swanner, F. A. Rising and T. F. Aston during the past week by Eckman and Von Allmen.

L. L. Dixon, local agent for the Buick, was in Henrietta on business last week.

William Morris, of the William Morris Co., Dallas distributors for the Hudson automobile, was the guest of the Lloyd Weaver Automobile Co., local Hudson distributors, Wednesday.

An automatic warning signal so constructed it will sound a Klaxon when a car is leaving the company's place of business has been installed by the Electric Service Station on Scott ave. By a clever arrangement of a swinging lever, to the end of which is attached a piece of rubber hose, cars passing out of the garage complete an electric circuit. While no serious accident has happened to suggest the need of such an arrangement, it is the belief of Manager Forcier of the Electric Service Station that such a device may be the means of preventing a possible accident.

O. C. Somers, manager of the Victory Motor Co., local Premier and Oldsmobile distributors, accompanied by C. S. Brown of the same concern, recently completed a highly profitable tour of the territory adjacent to Paducah, Matador and surrounding towns, demonstrating the Premier to the prosperous ranchmen of that section. Mr. Somers reports the wheat crop as looking unusually good in that part of the state, and every indication being that a large harvest will be reaped.

C. W. Nolen of the Nolen-Stringer Co., local Lincoln and Haynes distributors, made a trip to Dallas last week to drive back a four-passenger Lincoln. He came via Graham where he demonstrated this popular car to citizens of that city.

An important addition to the sales force of the Nolen-Stringer Co., local Lincoln and Haynes distributors, was made last week in the person of Edward O. Smith, formerly with the Winton distributors in Birmingham, Ala.

W. A. Donahue of the Buick Motor Co., Dallas, was a visitor at the store of the Dixon Motor Co., local Buick distributors, Thursday. He and L. L. Dixon made a trip to Henrietta Thursday to visit several prospects in that section and on their return reported success.

Lester Erron, well-known in local automobile circles, has accepted a position as salesman in the used car department of the Nolen-Stringer Co., local Haynes and Lincoln distributors.

Among the sales reported at the end of the week by the Lloyd Weaver Automobile Co., local Hudson and Essex distributors, were a 5-passenger Essex to L. I. Bennett, a 5-passenger Essex to W. F. Payne, a 7-passenger Hudson to L. P. Douglas, and a number of used cars. Last week was "used car week" with the Lloyd Weaver Automobile Co., and while quite a number of cars were disposed of, it is understood that the company still has several used cars on its floors that will be permitted to go at attractive prices to close out the present used car stock.

PIKES PEAK AUTO RACES TO BE HELD SEPTEMBER 5

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., April 9.—Automobile men all over the United States will be interested in the announcement that the Pikes Peak automobile races for the $2,000 Penrose cup and cash prizes aggregating $2,100 are to be held this year on September 5. In 1916 and 1920 these races to the summit of the highest automobile highway in the world created nationwide interest. Last year there were twenty-six entries.

The races this year will be over the same course from the Crystal Creek bridge to the summit of Pikes Peak, approximately 12 miles, 2,200 feet, with a flying start not to exceed 200 yards. The events are under the rules and with the sanction of the contest board of the American Automobile association and the entry blanks properly certified must be in the office of the Pikes Peak Automobile Highway company at Colorado Springs not later than August 8. Drivers have the option of carrying a mechanician. The races are divided into three events and the drivers go against time.

Event No. 1.—Open to A. A. A. Classification class "C" cars, with a piston displacement of 183 cubic inches or less. Prizes, cash: first $500 second $200.

Event No. 2—Open to A. A. A. Classification class "C" cars, with piston displacement of 183 to 300 cubic inches. Prizes, cash: first $500, second $200.

Event No. 3.—Open to A. A. A. Classification class "D" cars, with a piston displacement over 300 cubic inches. Prizes, cash: first $500, second $200.

To the car making the best time regardless of class or event entered in, goes the Penrose trophy under the terms of the deed of gift.

The Penrose silver and gold cup, 43 inches high, is the most magnificent trophy ever offered to the ambition of the automobile driver. The course is to be the tip-top of America's most famous mountain and is in fact a boulevard from 20 to 50 feet wide with easy curves and fair grades. The altitude at the summit is 14,109 feet.

The races are being staged at the same time as the mammoth Colorado Sports Carnival which includes airplane races from Denver to Colorado Springs, circling the top of Pikes Peak, and a polo tournament for the championship of the west and the Foxhall Keene cup at the country club on Broadmoor.

ANOTHER NASH ACHIEVEMENT

THE NASH FOUR is another Nash achievement—a light weight, moderate sized, four-cylinder automobile, possessing to a marked degree those excellencies of performance which have made the Nash name stand for motor car quality the country over.

UNUSUAL power, exceptional economy, beauty of line and appointment, comfort above the ordinary, and great dependability are Nash virtues, displayed by this Nash Four. Illustrating its high quality throughout is the fact that cord tires are standard equipment.

NEW HEIGHTS REACHED BY A GOOD NAME

In numbers and in monetary value, the production of Dodge Brothers cars during the twelve months recently ended, was, with a single exception, without parallel.

There is a deep and a special significance in this sales record.

Because they did not seek it in the ordinary way, it is all the more impressive that sales precedence should have been conferred upon their product.

The point of this achievement is that from the day the business was founded, Dodge Brothers never once laid stress on mere volume of production.

They never strove to surpass in the quantity of cars produced during any given period.

Their thought lay deeper than that. It was a deliberate thought, which looked toward the ultimate, not the immediate.

Their implicit conviction was that the one thing with which they should concern themselves was the true value of the cars they manufactured.

Given that good value, they were assured that greater and greater sales must of necessity follow.

They had faith, in other words, in the discernment of the average man and woman of America and of the world.

They were satisfied that as the value of Dodge Brothers car revealed itself, appreciation, admiration and larger volume would automatically follow.

They visualized this great good will, ever growing and continuing to grow, as long as motor cars should go forth bearing their name.

They never permitted themselves or their associates to lose sight of this great principle in which they believed so thoroughly.

Their life work had taught them that there was no other sound way in which to build.

The lesson of it, the logic of it, is too plain, too clear and too complimentary to Dodge Brothers to require or permit extended comment.

Suffice it to say, that Dodge Brothers are more deeply appreciative than ever of the confidence it demonstrates on the part of the buying public.

Suffice it to say that this institution will never deviate by so much as a hair's breadth from the manufacturing principles which have brought about this unique and splendid tribute from the American people.

THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS'

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: Having read your columns with much interest and benefit the past year and having recently gotten into similar troubles myself thought I would ask you for some information which I seem unable to get through the usual channels. I recently bought a second hand worm drive 1-ton Ford truck. It was said to be in "good condition and all right," and did seem to run all right upon a short trial of perhaps half an hour, but upon three weeks' use I find the following troubles: Only 5 and 6 miles per gallon of gas. The engine gets so terribly hot in a few miles. Oil oozes out around two of the plugs though I never put in more than one quart at a time and keep it about at or just below the higher gaugecock in base. When starting in "low gear" the truck moves ahead very slowly and does not gain speed by increasing the speed of engine, so I do not think the car is moving fast enough when I let the foot lever back into "high gear" because when the high gear clutch does take hold it seems to "grab" and give the truck a terrible jerk and almost kills the engine. Should the foot lever be allowed to come back from "low" into "high" suddenly or gradually the same as a cone clutch in the sliding gear transmission cars? It also takes a great amount of cranking to start my engine and I just about have to carry a "strong man" along with me as a "self starter." Now I have tried various remedies for all these troubles and consulted mechanics and repair shops but get practically no information, vague and evasive responses to my queries, except that they would have to knock the engine and everything all down to find out the trouble but giving me no limit to the expense or assurance of any benefit from their mysterious operations. Any information and help you can give me shall be most gratefully received, and thinking you for kind attention, I am—C. N.

Used cars should be purchased from well known, responsible dealers who are willing to stand back of their sales talk. Low mileage on gasoline and overheating of engine indicates bad adjustment of carburetor, late timing of spark or running on retarded spark. If the cylinders, pistons and rings are worn, you will continue to have foul cylinders and plugs. The only remedy is to rebore the cylinders and fit new pistons and rings. Perhaps the cylinders are not scored or out of true, in which case oversize pistons and rings properly fitted will remedy the trouble. Use a first class lubricating oil and drain the case about every thousand miles. The oil becomes thin and loses its body very quickly. When this takes place, it readily passes the pistons into the combustion chamber and causes trouble. Likewise you experience more trouble in the clutch. Use an oil recommended by the manufacturer of your engine. Evidently the low speed needs adjusting to prevent slipping and you may find it necessary to install new lining on the contracting bands. Correct adjustment of the low speed will enable you to get the truck moving faster before engaging the high speed. This to a large extent will eliminate the jerk even though let in quickly. The engagement of the clutch should be gradual, but do not hesitate to the extent of sacrificing too much of the forward momentum of the truck. A weak spark due to weak magnates will cause hard starting. Try a good battery and note the difference. Send to the home office of the company for an instruction manual covering your model truck. Give engine number, etc.

Motor Department: What causes the last cylinder (No. 4) on my Ford to collect more carbon than the remaining three? I have to clean it out quite frequently, but rarely have to touch the other cylinders.—L. P.

The piston rings may be worn, the cylinder walls scored, the connecting rod dip more deeply than the others. Probably you keep the oil level too high.

Motor Department: What is the best way to stop a leak at the petcock? The spark plugs are similarly defective. —L. O.

A mixture of shellac and graphite to the consistency of paste is very good to stop such leaks. It is possible that the threads are crossed. If so, rethreading is necessary.

Motor Department: No. 2 cylinder has no compression or power. I find that the exhaust valve does not seat. In other words, when it is forced up it will not come down. Do you suppose the spring has lost its strength or is the valve worn out?—F. S.

The valve stem probably is bent and should be removed and straightened. If bent or worn badly it would be more advisable to use a new valve. In replacing valves care should be taken to reseat properly. If all the valves are not seated poor compression and loss of power will result. Test the spring at the same time.

Motor Department: The other night when I attempted to start the engine in my car there was a very loud explosion in the back of the car. Ever since then I notice that the engine, or, to be more correct, the exhaust, makes more noise than it did before. It sounds almost as "cut-out" were partly open. What do you think is wrong.—E. L.

The explosion you heard is a common occurrence on some cars, and is caused by accumulated gas in the exhaust pipe and muffler becoming ignited. Evidently the explosion loosened the muffler, so that the noise you hear is the leaking of exhaust gases. The muffler should be removed and reassembled in order to make a satisfactory repair job.

Motor Department: As a constant reader of your paper and Motor Column, I beg for your suggestion on my theory. I have a 1914 four-cylinder Cadillac, 5-passenger touring car, which is O. K. as can be expected and I am overhauling same, as I make my own repairs. I am asking for information which is somewhat too deep for me. While I have it down I thought now would be a good time. How can I install double ignition, that is 4 more plugs with the 4 I now have, I am using the Delco system which came on the car, 6 volt battery timer and distributor, starting on 6 dry cells, then switch over on storage battery.—H. M.

You would have to eliminate the Delco generator in order to install a magneto. Extra spark plugs could be installed in the other valve caps. It would be quite an expensive change and hardly seems advisable. However, you can better judge the cost by consulting a Cadillac dealer.

Motor Department: Please tell me how to adjust ring gear and pinion on my car to stop the growl. Car has been run about 25,000 miles. The gears are apparently in good condition—no chipped or broken teeth or perceptible wear. Any information will be appreciated.—A. L.

Adjust pinion so that it lines up with edge of ring gear, then move ring gear over till it meshes closely with pinion and runs quietly. You will find the adjustment inside by removing cover. When properly adjusted a piece of newspaper may be run through between the teeth without being chewed to pieces.

Motor Department: Can the small brass tube which carries the oil from the transmission to the front end of crank case on a Ford engine become clogged? If tube becomes stopped up, what effect will it have and how could it be known?—F. C.

These tubes become clogged on rare occasions and the engine runs dry, finally stopping with a seized piston or bearing. The upper fly wheel housing must be removed and a wire run through the tube.

Motor Department: I have a Model 60 Overland touring car, and would like to know how to take the differential apart. The crown gear is chipped and I would like to replace it with a new one. Any information you may give will be appreciated.—OWNER.

Take off the rear wheels and axle housing cover. Loosen the two large nuts one on each side of the differential on the axle shafts. Pull the axle shafts out and then by unscrewing the four bolts that hold the caps on the differential housing, the differential may be lifted out.

Motor Department: I have a Chalmers car, model M. The clutch slips whenever there is any pulling. Have put as much as a pint of kerosene in the clutch case along with the oil. Is that enough? What should I do to tighten the clutch to prevent slipping? Car has been run about fifty thousand miles and clutch is probably worn a little.—L. K.

Use a lighter oil or add some more kerosene. If it still slips tighten up on the springs. Sometimes new plates must be installed. This can only be determined by experiment. Judging from the service obtained it may be more advisable to install new clutch plates.

Helpful Hints.

The best method to test ignition on a Ford car is to speed up the engine slightly and to hold down three vibrators at a time. This leaves one working and the corresponding cylinder firing. If the engine stops that cylinder is not firing.

The connections on dry cells should always be kept tight. Any one connection in a series which happens to be loose will cause difficult starting. The vibration of the car is very apt to loosen these, and a frequent inspection will oftentimes save a lot of delay in starting the engine.

A way of reducing the wear on the coil vibrator points with battery ignition is to reverse the direction of the current flow through the system.

HUDSON

Not Enough Hudsons

Super-Six Still Holds Exclusive Position

Hudson shortage is a fact. Buyers know it. Instead of immediate deliveries an increasing number find they must wait.

Total stocks of Hudsons, everywhere in the country, average less than two cars per dealer.

Our own spring demand must be met from such small stocks as we had the foresight to get during the slack season past.

Note What You Save

Now we see better than ever before what hold Hudson quality has among motor car users.

The present market is selective. Hence the emphasis of Hudson value. Its cost advantage gives $1,000 or more saving against any car to which you compare Hudson quality, reliability and performance.

Perhaps you hold Hudson the greatest of all cars. Surely, in many respects, you acknowledge this is so.

For instance the Super-Six motor. It is exclusive to Hudson. For five years it has been the master type. No other has been developed to match its efficiency and endurance. It practically annuls vibration. The smoothness which results is appreciated not only in riding ease. It means absence of strain, and friction. Repair freedom and a long life car results. It accounts for Hudson's five years of sales leadership.

And if you plan to buy soon, bear in mind that deliveries are already difficult and stocks must be even more limited as the season progresses.

King & Weaver Get One Contest Letter From Woman in Jail

Literally everybody wants an automobile. Ladies in the home, ladies in the hotel, and even ladies in jail! But the lady in jail is not so much interested in the automobile as in the $15 in cash the King & Weaver Automobile Co. is going to pass to the woman of Wichita county writing the best letter of not more than 250 words on either of the two subjects, "Why I Want My Husband to Buy a Car," and "Why I Want My Husband to Sell Our Old Car and Buy a New One."

"But if I were out and my hubby had the money, an' everything," writes the demure little housewife who temporarily sojourns in the bastile, "I'm sure he wouldn't buy an automobile, but an aeroplane. And if it would not be of any particular difference to anybody," she continues, "I think I should buy a submarine"" Just the same, she makes a lunge at those fifteen pesos and comes along with the womanly—always womanly—postscript, to the effect that if the judges can strain a point and award her the one and a quarter dozen iron men she'll be very much obliged, as she most certainly can find a use for it. What she's in jail for and just who she is is nobody's business but her own and the judge's.

The King & Weaver contest positively closes Tuesday night at midnight, April 12. All letters in the company's office or bearing a United States postmark prior to this hour and date will be counted in the contest—and somebody's going to get the $15, that's sure. The winning letter will be published in next Sunday's Times.

UP-TO-MINUTE NEWS OF AUTOMOBILE PROGRESS

Compiled by The Southern Motor Manufacturing Association, Ltd.

An incident where three tractors heled to save a large quantity of wheat occurred recently at Floydada, Texas, where a granary containing 1,160 bushels of wheat burst during a rainstorm, necessitating the removal of the wheat regardless of road conditions. Six hundred bushels were hauled to shelter in the town by the three tractors and 560 bushels were hauled by twenty horses, all over roads considered impassable with heavy loads. The tractors outtraveled the horses and made the trip of sixteen miles in four and one-half hours with only an occasional stop to clean the lugs. The average load hauled by each tractor was 16,000 pounds.

The town of Reading, Mass., has been indicted on a charge of criminal neglect in failing to maintain a highway in a proper manner. The Middlesex county, (Mass.) grand jury brought the indictment. The town was indicted under a statute that provides that a city or town must keep its highways reasonably safe and convenient for public travel.

Decisions of the federal courts that automobiles carrying liquor or drugs could be seized and sold, which for a time threatened the contract sales business of the motor car industry, have been met by insurance companies. Now when a car is sold on the installment plan in Los Angeles, Cal., the dealer making the sale requires insurance against fire, theft and carrying of drugs or liquor. The rate of premium is said to be very small.

A motor truck designed for use on narrow roads is equipped with a horizontal fifth wheel under the center of the body, which serves as a turn-table when the truck is lifted by jacks.

COCHRAN COMPANY MOVING BACK TO ITS OLD LOCATION

"We have enjoyed boom times and boom buildings and boom prices, now we are going to try to enjoy old times, old buildings and old prices," said Manager B. C. Cochran of the Cochran Motor Co., local Chevrolet distributors, in explaining the necessity of his company's removal from its former location at 608 Indiana to the building next door, 612 Indiana. The move was made Thursday.

As a result of this move, the Cochran Motor Co. is advertising its fixtures and shop equipment for sale at special prices. Full details of the sale appear in the advertising columns of today's Times.

George P. Dickson of Atlanta, special factory representative of the Haynes Motor Co., was a visitor at the store of the Nolen-Stringer Co., local Haynes distributors, Friday. Mr. Dickson has recently covered a large part of the south, and, like practically all men who are constantly going about, reports a general improvement in all lines of business.

Paul J. Von Allmen of Eckman & Von Allmen, local Hupmobile distributors, returned to the city Saturday after a business trip to Fort Worth.

Don't forget that the bearings of the electric generator and starter need oiling from time to time. A few drops of high grade oil will prevent unnecessary wear and damage to the bearings.

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS

Interesting and Important Facts That Every Motorist Should Know.

The proper way to adjust the axle gears is by adding shifts.

When grinding valves bring piston to top center and place a piece of waste or cloth between it and the valve.

Complete vaporization is necessary to avoid carbon deposition within the cylinders and also on account of lubrication.

The handling of sulphuric acid should be done with car and with full respect for the powerful agent for destruction which it is.

Leakage at the stuffing box may usually be stopped by tightening the nut around the pump shaft, but persistent leakage calls for repacking.

The constant pressure of piston rings against the cylinder wall in time wears both the cylinders and the rings.

To gain the most mileage per gallon of gas see that your cylinders are kept free from carbon. This can be avoided by the occasional use of some reliable carbon remover.

A fire extinguisher can be made by dissolving three pounds of salt and one-half pound of sal ammoniac in one gallon of water.

With loose pistons or improperly fitting piston rings it is possible for the gasoline to pass down into the crank case before the explosion.

When the threads of a bolt or stud have been damaged, and no dies are at hand to clean them up, a little work with a triangular file will often make them good as new.

To loosen a screw that is so tightly screwed that it is quite impossible to move it with the leverage of the screw driver handle, apply a wrench to the screw driver blade, pressing down firmly on the top of the screw driver with one hand and turning it by means of the wrench.

Very often it is practically impossible to remove the hub caps from wheels, due to the threads rusting. By placing a jack under the wrench and lifting the car with the jack, the weight of the car will loosen the cap.

A WONDERFUL WAY TO GUARD AGAINST FAILURE AND WANT!

How—How Do They Do It. It's Easy Enough To Talk About It But The Thing Is—To Do It

How much are you making? Yes, YOU! Is it three dollars and fifty cents a day? Or is it five dollars, six dollars, seven dollars, ten dollars or fifteen dollars? Are you satisfied with it? Or do you continually grumble—without doing anything to make it more? But maybe this isn't your fault. Maybe you don't know how to GO ABOUT making it more. Lots of people are that way. Millions of them. Yes, millions! And they're not to blame either. They'd do more, they'd earn more, if they only KNEW HOW—right down in their hearts they're willing enough. They're just as anxious and ambitious, and thrifty, and hopeful, and earnest as they can be. Only they just don't seem to understand the knack of making more wages.

The reason you know it can be done—your proof that YOU can do it—is simply the fact that OTHERS are doing it. Did you ever stop to think of that? What right have you to believe that you can't do what OTHERS can do? What right have you to continually belittle your own ability in your own mind? Maybe you've been doing this for years, unconsciously or otherwise. Maybe you've been the culprit who's robbed "you" out of the bigger wages you could have earned these many years. It's just like a fellow pilfering from himself, day after day.

Now, the whole thing depends upon a fellow's ENERGY. His energy of mind and body. Yes, your energy is the secret of it all. Your energy is the factor that decides whether you will always earn ordinary wages per day or two or three or ten times that amount per day. What is "Energy," you say? What is the thing—really? You know what the word means, you have often heard it mentioned, even heard it explained by high-sounding talk, perhaps. But even now maybe you haven't figured out what "Energy" really consists of—and why. It's the whole foundation upon which rests every man's individual destiny.

That thing called your energy is just like one of those dummy engines you've seen hoisting loads of freight to the deck of a steamer. The energy is a little engine in the body—a little engine with big power. IT'S THE THING THAT HOISTS YOU JUST AS HIGH AS YOU WANT TO GO IN LIFE!

Without this Engine of Energy you can never earn what you are entitled to. You may think you can, but you cannot. And in the end you will fail. You will fail as sure as you live. No sick man ever makes much of a success in life. And most sick men don't realize how sick they are. They are the great semi-sick majority. They go along from day to day with a number of petty ailments that pester them and impede their progress in life.

There are thousands of women in the same condition. Many of these are bright, intelligent, ambitious people who have all the necessary determination to go ahead, who have loads of ability, but who lack the necessary physical background—the strength, the energy, the vitality.

Many of these people are realizing what it is that has HELD THEM DOWN and many of them have been lucky enough to stumble across the big truth that it is MORE IRON THEY NEED IN THEIR BLOOD, organic iron—such as is found in Nuxated Iron.

There is a big reason why millions have taken Nuxated Iron. This big reason deserves your serious thought as you read this article. This big reason is that real organic iron is the Great Magician that helps transform weak, wishy-washy, anemic people into virile human beings of dynamic force—people who go after the things they want in life because they have the Zest and Zip to do it. NUXATED IRON is composed of real organic iron and not metallic or mineral iron. You want more PEP? Then Buy a package of Nuxated Iron today. Sold only in tablet form, with the initials "N. I." on each tablet. By all druggists in tablet form only.

A Better Battery for the Man Willing to Pay for It

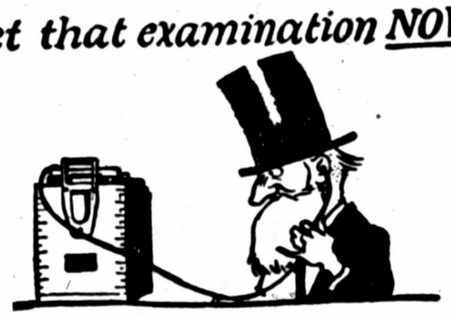

THE EVEREADY BATTERY has never been "cheap." It is made only for replacement sales through Service Stations, and every Battery is made as carefully as if it were the only one its manufacturers were ever going to make. It is built for the man who wants a better Battery and is willing to pay for it. The EVEREADY BATTERY is real economy in the long run.

IN spite of the old proverb, it IS sometimes too late to mend. When plates are buckled and terminals are corroded through neglect or unusually hard service, there is little left for the battery-man to say but "New battery".

Don't let it get that far. Drive around today to the Prest-O-Lite Service Station and have a thorough examination made. Some trifling fault may be uncovered now that may result disastrously if not remedied.

Anyhow, find out. That's what Prest-O-Lite Service Stations are for. You will get courteous treatment and, what is even more important, honest advice.

When you do need a new battery, you'll be glad to know that Prest-O-Lite is back to pre-war prices and that an allowance will be made on your old battery. Get that examination now

SULLIVAN OUTLINES PLANS OF REPUBLICAN PARTY INCIDENT TO CONGRESS CONVENING MONDAY

By MARK L. SULLIVAN,
(National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and the Wichita Daily Times)
(Coprright 1921, by the New York Evening Post)

WASHINGTON, April 9.—On Monday the republican party takes complete possession of the government. It takes possession with a franchise from substantially seventy per cent of the voters, and with majorities in the house and senate rarely equalled by any party at any time in our history. For two years with mathematical certainty the party can carry out its will. And for at least four years the only thing that could possibly interfere would be a practically unforeseen reverse in the congressional elections in 1922, a reverse which would need to be so large as to be most improbable. The republican party takes possession of its power with enormous security. It is one of those occasions when a party, if it has great and courageous leadership, can afford to ignore a temporary unpopularity and do what is sound and far seeing in the sure confidence that time will justify it.

What, now does the republican party plan to do with its power? Every epoch like the present, in which one party or the other comes strongly into power after a lapse of years, is marked by legislation of such importance as to constitute a shift in the direction of our national history. In 1896 it was the revision of the tariff in favor of the manufacturing and other propertied classes. In 1912 the democrats took the direction of revising our banking and currency laws in the interests of the borrower and adopting the federal farm loan law in the interest of the borrowing farmer.

Plan Budget Bill.

This present republican congress is going to mark its beginning with legislation in the direction of what may be called better housekeeping by the national government. One of the first acts which congress will pass and which the party will depend upon for the approval of the public will be the budget bill. This bill has been described as the most important act in the field of government business and finances since the civil war, excepting only the federal reserve banking act. In brief the budget bill brings to the business of the government the same compactness, economy and centralized responsibilities that has been discovered to be essential in private business. The bill picks out the secretary of the treasury and lifts him out of and above the rest of the cabinet and makes him responsible for all requests for money made to congress and for the spending of that money. Other incidents of the bill being a corresponding compactness and centralized responsibility to the appropriation of money by congress. The budget bill was first passed over a year ago. President Wilson, while heartily endorsing the spirit of it and the great bulk of its details vetoed it, because of what he conceived to be a constitutional objection to one of the details of the bill. After this veto the lower house of congress made the requested change and repassed the bill. In the senate, however, the second passing of the bill was prevented by a filibuster on the part of one man, Senator Reed of Missouri. Now however, the bill will be passed by a republican house and senate and signed by a republican president and will be given to the country as the first performance of an administration dedicated to "more business in government and less government in business."

Government Reorganization.

The second measure to be passed in this field will be known as the government reorganization bill. This is meant to be a supplement to the budget bill and has the same object of compactness, economy and centralized responsibility in the government's business. The bill will cure that utterly allpshod archaic incongruous distribution of bureaus and heads of the departments, which results, for example, in the publication of "sixteen different cook books by sixteen different bureaus," or as Mr. Hoover put it, the commerce department having charge of polar bears while the interior department has control of grizzly bears and the agricultural department of brown bears.

These are the two big fundamental measures that the republican leaders have in mind.

Aside from these measures congress will turn promptly to the subject of tariffs and taxation. The programme so far as it has crystallized at this writing is to pass immediately three measures which belong in a group, which are emergency in their conception and temporary in their intention. The first of these three measures is the emergency tariff bill to last for a period of six months until a permanent tariff can be made. The second is an anti-dumping measure designed to protect American producers against the importations of foreign goods under the familiar conditions known as "dumping." The third is known as the "American valuation bill, intended to prevent the practical nullification of our tariff by the present chaotic differences in exchange between our own money and that of foreign governments.

Revision of Taxes.

With these three emergency measures out of the way congress will turn to the two subjects of revising the taxes and writing a permanent tariff bill.

In revising of the taxes the changes now in sight are these. The income taxes and surtaxes on very large incomes—the ones which run over 40 to 70 percent, will be repealed and rearranged so that 40 per cent will be the highest tax laid on any income. The purpose of this change on large incomes is not primarily to make it easier for the rich. The purpose is based on the discovery by experience that the present surtaxes have caused the owners of large amounts of money to put that money in the tax exempt bonds of the federal, state and municipal governments. The hope is that by reducing the higher rates, the possessors of these large fortunes will be induced to restore their money to investment in the development of private corporations, like railroads, public utilities and other forms of private business.

If any change on the smaller incomes from $50,000 a year to $100,000 is made it is more likely to be in the direction of increasing them than of reducing them.

Another change tentatively discussed in the field of taxation is the repeal of the excess profits tax on corporations. This repeal is contemplated on the theory that during the present period of deflations the corporations will not have large profits and this form of taxation will yield little.

The final change within the field of taxation that so far that has the approval of any number of important leaders is the adoption of the "direct sales tax," which is substantially a tax of either one half of one percent or one percent, as may later be decided on the entire gross sales of everybody who sells goods or services.

War Brings Change.

As to the making the new permanent tariff, the republican leaders are just beginning to see the expected difficulty and opposition inherent in the change brought about by the war in the fiscal and economic relations of America to the rest of the world. The fact the war changed us from a borrowing nation to a lending nation and that a lending nation always tends toward facilitating imports is just beginning to be apparent. The advocates of a tariff high to the point of being prohibitive will not have in the present congress the support they have always had in the past from the manufacturing and capitalist classes of the east.

The strongest demand for a high tariff now comes not from the manufacturing communities of New England and the east so much as from the farming communities of the middle west and west.

In any event this situation will cause a division among the republicans and other conditions are so chaotic as to make it impossible to predict anything about the outcome of the tariff except to say the developments will be surprising. So much for the main outlines of the republican program. There are a number of isolated measures which will come up from time to time: one will be the immigration restriction bill which was passed by the last congress by a majority of 30 to 1 in the senate and over 7 to 1 in the house, but which was vetoed by Wilson. There is no reason to anticipate that the preponderance of sentiment in favor of this bill will be less in the new congress than the old.

Reapportionment.

Another important bill will be the reappointment of congress based on the last census. The issue in this bill is whether the lower house of congress shall be kept at its present size of 435 members or whether it shall be increased by 48 members. If the size is kept at 435 it will mean that in the shifting of population revealed by the last census certain states will gain members and certain other state, notably Missouri, Iowa and Indiana will lose members. It is the hesitancy to compel any state to have a smaller number of congressmen than it has heretofore had and a fraternal dislike on the part of the members of congress to exile some of their associates that constitutes the only argument for increasing membership.

One other important measure that will come up early in the new session is the bill appropriating twenty-five million dollars to Columbia to cover damages alleged to have been done that country by our action in recognising the republic of Panama when it seceded from Columbia in connection with the building of the Panama canal. To this bill there will be strong opposition. It was probably a mere accident that led President Harding to choose this measure as the first that he has asked the senate to accept as a part of his program in the field of foreign relations. Nevertheless as it has turned out, he is now in the position at the very outset of his administration of pressing for the passage of a treaty which is going to have determined opposition.

Unfinished Business.

Two things will come up in the coming congress which are in the nature of unfinished business. They are the army and the navy appropriation bills. The army bill passed the last session, but was vetoed by Wilson, probably because congress has cut the requested appropriation in half and reduced the army to 150,000. The navy appropriation bill passed the house, but the senate wished to raise it from four hundred million to five hundred. When this question comes up now we may have a renewal of the effort of Senator Borah and others to bring about some degree of disarmament. This, as well as the Columbia treaty, will be a field in which some degree of insurgency may arise.

So much for the republican program. As to the democrats the only program they can have as a minority party is a program of opposition. Just what they will do in that line is not yet crystalized.

In the house the democratic representation is so small compared to the republican that the party will necessarily be feeble. Even more striking than their weakness in numbers is their weakness in leadership. In fact, in the house so many able democrats were dislodged by the landslide last November that it can almost be said that their leadership there, so far as it can now be foreseen will be negligible. In the senate, while the democrats are only 31 out of 96, they number among them so many able men that their leadership in opposition may well turn out to be formidable. If the republicans give these democratic leaders the opening, we may see a tariff debate of a distinction adequate to the best traditions of the senate. The traditional democratic attitude of course is, as to the tariff, revenue only, and as to taxation, no taxes on fundamental articles of food, clothing or shelter. Whether under the changed conditions the democrats will stand by this historic attitude remains to be seen.

Nothing of Idealism

All this program of the republicans is within the field of what may be termed the material side of government, the field of ordinary government housekeeping, business methods and routine. It contains nothing within the field of idealism, and nothing related to those great questions which compose the spectacular milestones of history. If anything of that kind arises it will be most likely to be condemned with our relations to the rest of the world. It will arise in connection with international co-operation for disarmament or for the prevention of war through an international court of justice. Something of that kind certainly must come up. It must come up because Harding has promised it. But for the present, there is no crystallization among the leaders of a kind likely to lead to immediate initiative on the part of Amerira. The fact that this is a condition which may change on any day, does not make it any the less a fact. Many millions of our citizens wish that this were not so but for the present that is all that can be said in an account intended to record what is actually in sight.

SEIZE DRUGS VALUED AT HUNDRED THOUSAND WITH MARKINGS OF GERMANY

NEW YORK, April 9.—Drugs valued at more than $100,000 in half pound packages said to bear Darmstadt, Germany, markings, were seized early today in a Mott street apartment. David Botti, importer and occupant of the apartment was arrested.

Police said the drug cache evidently was part of a $350,000 shipment which had been smuggled into the country. In a Brooklyn raid several weeks ago drugs bearing similar markings were taken.

Public Service and Public Opinion

SUCCESS in public service depends upon public opinion. Public Service—heat, power and light, etc.,—is a part of the prosperity of a community. Public Service vitally concerns every person and every industry in the city, or in the town where it is located. Public Service is, in fact, PERSONAL SERVICE.

We all know that the quality of personal service which we receive depends largely upon the degree of our personal co-operation and consideration for those who serve us. Maintain an unfriendly attitude toward public service, and you injure every individual in your community, you hamper development, you balk business.

Unfriendliness toward public service is in reality unfriendliness toward the public itself. Constant criticism—without understanding; knocking—without investigation—all tends to react against your own interests.

Public Service is not defending itself. It needs no defense. It is potent that public service, by its very nature, is more interested in doing the right thing than are its critics.

The successful manager of an electric light and power company knows positively that the public's best interest is paramount. One of the greatest contemporary writers in the United States says: "I do not know a class of business men who are trying harder and who are succeeding more in their efforts to build up towns and cities, local interests and industries, than those of the public service companies. They are co-operating with the cities all over the country to create more industry. They are helping in every way possible to build better and bigger business in the towns where they are located."

Public Service and Public Opinion are interdependent.

YOU KNOW, I LIKE YOU - WE CAN GET MARRIED IF MY RICH GUARDIAN GIVES HIS CONSENT
LET'S GO AND ASK HIM
PLEASE, I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES
GOLF CLUB

BOO HOO! I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES
WHAT'S GOOD FOR A BLACK EYE?
BLESS YOU, MY CHILDREN - COME WITH ME TO MY PRIVATE BANKER'S - I WANT TO GIVE YOU $100,000 WORTH OF LIBERTY BONDS FOR A WEDDING PRESENT
HELLO, GUARDIAN THIS IS MY FUTURE HUSBAND, BOOB McNUTT

WAIT HERE WHILE I GO IN AND GET THE BONDS
NICE UNKIE BOOB - I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES
COUNT THEM FOR ME BECAUSE I CAN'T COUNT PAST $8,000

I WONDER WHAT'S HAPPENED TO HIM - WE'VE BEEN WAITING HALF AN HOUR
I'LL GO IN AND SEE, DARLING
SAY, I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES

YOU'RE A LIAR! YOU'VE GOT $100,000 WORTH OF BONDS THAT BELONG TO ME AND I WANT 'EM!
YOU CROOK! I'VE ONLY GOT $34,671.10 OF YOUR MONEY
THERE SEEMS TO BE A SLIGHT DIFFERENCE OF OPINION
I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES

WAH! I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES
HEY, THERE!

NO OLD BANKER CAN SOAK MY GUARDIAN AND GET AWAY WITH IT

THERE!
YOU HIT THE WRONG MAN!
UNKIE, DEAR - I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES

HOW COULD I TELL WHICH WAS WHICH?
I WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES
YOU HIT HIM JUST AS HE WAS WINNING - GET OUT OF HERE AND DON'T LET ME EVER SEE YOU AGAIN!
HARK! HARK! I HEAR THE SWEET VOICE OF THE NIGHTINGALE
