Conferees adopt East-West security pact

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 35-nation Stockholm conference today formally adopted the first East-West security agreement of the decade, an accord designed to reduce the risk of an accidental war in Europe.

Delegates celebrated after the session with champagne toasts.

During this morning's final session of the 32-month conference, the clock remained at 10.56 p.m., the time it was stopped on Friday, the original deadline for the conference. Delegates said they had to "freeze" time because several issues were unresolved.

Agreement was reached late Sunday when Soviet and U.S. negotiators compromised on arrangements for notification, observation and on-site inspection of military maneuvers.

According to military experts, the final document will enable NATO, the Warsaw Pact and neutral European nations to foresee and judge with greater precision than before all sizeable military maneuvers and movements in Europe.

"There were issues we fought for and did not achieve but the result is definitely a step forward. It enables us to check the real will to build confidence," said a NATO military expert, who spoke on condition he not be identified further.

The agreement, an offshoot of the 1975 Helsinki accords, is the first East-West security agreement since the SALT II document on superpower strategic arms signed by Jimmy Carter and Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna in 1979. That agreement was never ratified by the U.S. Senate.

■ Reagan reports "movement" toward arms accord; Related story — 4A

NATO delegates, headed by U.S. chief negotiator Robert L. Barry, and Soviet delegation head Oleg Grinevsky, speaking for the Warsaw Pact, hailed the agreement Sunday as an example to be followed in arms control.

Barry and Grinevsky said they were not totally satisfied, but agreed they got more than was expected.

The negotiations, formally called the Conference on Security and Confidence-Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe, brought together delegates from the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and all European states except Albania.

Negotiators stopped the clock to get around the original Sept. 19 deadline for an accord and worked through the weekend to break deadlocks.

Barry said in a statement: "We have taken an important step toward reducing the risk of military confrontation."

"Confidence- and security-building measures represent a relatively new instrument for arms control and this conference has just begun to develop their potential. More remains to be done, implementation of these measures will give us valuable experience. But we have made a good start," Barry said.

Grinevsky told reporters: "We achieved the maximum possible, though I wish we could have also solved a number of remaining problems such as air activities.... The result sets a good example for further talks on arms control."

The Stockholm document will be evaluated and reviewed at a meeting beginning Tuesday in Vienna. It is to be ratified by the 35 nations before the end of the year, when it is to take effect.

The agreement stipulates that members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact must notify the other bloc at least 42 days in advance when planning military activities involving at least 13,000 soldiers or 300 tanks.

James Fair of Houston preaches to the deaf in their own language during a weekend revival at First Baptist Church. Fair, 57, has been deaf since the age of four.

These 'signs and wonders' performed for area deaf

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

In a chapel a woman is singing in a clear, piercing voice that is in no need of a microphone.

But only a few members of the audience hear her.

The rest of the audience "hears" the woman's words through a sign language interpreter.

The performance is part of a "Deaf Revival" that was held Saturday night and Sunday morning for the area deaf at the First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana.

On Saturday about 35 people turned out to "listen" to James Fair of Houston, who has been bringing the message to fellow deaf Christians around the state for about 30 years.

Residents from Odessa and Big Spring joined the about 18 deaf members of First Baptist Saturday and Sunday.

When he's not working as a proofreader in the Houston Post composing room, Fair preaches every Sunday as an interim pastor in Beaumont and he travels around the state about four times a year to other churches.

Unlike hearing preachers, 57-year-old Fair, who has been deaf since the age of four after a whooping cough attack, can speak to deaf congregation members in their own language.

"There's such a need for deaf people to hear God's word. It's not very often a deaf person has the opportunity to hear God's word in their own language," said Fair through an interpreter.

"How would you feel if you could not hear in your own language? You would feel uncomfortable.

"So when they hear in their own language, they feel comfortable," Fair said.

Ada Mae Smith, director of First Baptist's deaf services, agrees.

"They can understand a deaf person so much better in their own language. They can understand the concept so much better than when it is interpreted from a hearing person to the deaf," she said.

Before his sermon, a woman goes to the podium to direct the audience in a hymn. But instead of a chorus of voices rising, hands rise up to "sign" the hymn in unison.

A sole male voice sings for those members of the audience who can't read sign language.

During Fair's sermon a translator is used for the hearing audience. The translator's version seems somewhat stilted — which is probably how deaf people view their regular Sunday translations.

As Fair briskly moves through his sermon, signing every word and phrase, a blond toddler communicates to her mother through sign language, without disturbing the sermon.

Every Sunday sermons are translated for deaf members, but once a month the church will bring in a preacher to conduct his sermons solely for the deaf, Mrs. Smith said.

Fair is unusual because, unlike many other preachers brought in for the deaf, he's deaf also, she said.

"You don't find that many deaf people who have been called to preach and who are well versed in the Bible," Mrs. Smith said.

Time makes House close in on major money matters

WASHINGTON (AP) — With time rapidly running out on the 99th Congress, the House plans to tackle the year's three major money matters this week, and a special impeachment panel in the Senate continues the trial of an imprisoned federal judge.

The House plans action on more than two dozen bills, mostly minor, today and Tuesday.

But the money starts to roll Wednesday, when the House plans to vote on an election-year budget package designed to shave about $15 billion off the fiscal 1987 deficit without tax increases or major cuts in federal spending programs.

The budget plan, similar to one passed by the Senate on Friday, is a hodgepodge of items such as government assets sales, user fees for government services and accounting changes. It would allow Congress to drop the deficit below $154 billion, the threshold at which Gramm-Rudman calls for across-the-board spending cuts.

On Thursday, the House plans to vote on the tax bill, the largest-ever revamping of the federal income tax code.

House leaders also plan to bring up a $567 billion package to finance government operations for the year beginning Oct. 1.

President Reagan has promised to veto the controversial package, saying it spends too much money on domestic programs and cuts too deeply into the Pentagon and foreign aid. Among the items he objects to: continuing federal revenue-sharing with local governments, at a cost of $3.4 billion, after Congress' own budget called for eliminating that program.

Congress plans to adjourn Oct. 3, and at least an interim version of the spending package must be worked out between the House, Senate and the administration before lawmakers can head for the campaign trail.

In the Senate, imprisoned federal Judge Harry E. Claiborne returns to the witness stand today before a special impeachment panel.

A House prosecution team is trying to have him removed from the bench, from which he has refused to resign, despite his conviction on income tax evasion.

Mauro criticizes opponent's name-recognition campaign

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Texas Land Commissioner Gary Mauro, in town today on a campaign stop, criticized his opponent, Republican M.D. Anderson of Seven Points, for running on his name and not on the issues.

"I think Texans want more than a famous name," Mauro said at a press conference this morning.

"He's hiding behind that name in Seven Points hoping that voters will confuse his name with the hospital," Mauro said.

Mauro said Anderson — who he said in the past has gone by the names Marion or Dudley Anderson — owns the "Cedar Creek Plowboys Club" nightclub in Seven Points, southeast of Dallas, and "has no idea what the issues are" when it comes to the election.

In Henderson County where Anderson resides, Mauro said he raised $7,000 at a Sunday night fundraiser.

"I insist on running the General Land Office like a business.

"That is why land income is the only source of state income that has increased this year. Land income increased by 25 percent since 1985.

"The General Land office will deposit $800 million in the state coffers for education this year," Mauro said.

As chairman of the Texas Veterans Land Board, Mauro said he has also presided over an unprcedented improvement and broadening of the state's program for veterans.

At a press conference this morning at Midland Regional Aiport, Mauro, a Bryan native, said more loans for Texas veterans have been approved this year than ever — "all without costing the state a penny."

Houston juries returning tougher drug sentences

HOUSTON (AP) — As public opinion swings back to a general alarm about drugs, juries in Houston are handing out tougher sentences to convicted drug offenders, prosecutors and defense attorneys say.

"It's not hysteria," Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes said. "It's a normal reaction to a social problem."

But defense attorney Mike DeGeurin says he worries about juries looking more at the alleged offense rather than the individual involved.

The Houston Post reported Sunday that the average prison term for Harris County felony drug convictions has increased from about five years in 1983 and 1984 to about six years in 1985.

"It's really escalated, say, in the last several months," prosecutor Bob Loper said. "I've tried a few large cases recently and the juries really hammered those people."

Last week, a jury gave a 40-year prison term and a $5,000 fine to a 22-year-old Houston man for possessing one gram of crack. He had had one previous aggravated robbery conviction.

"I was shocked," prosecutor Gladys Aguero said. "I never thought they were going to give 40 years."

But prosecutors and defense attorneys agree many Houstonians increasingly are reacting in alarm to drug use and the social ills it may cause just as people did in the mid-1960s.

Coma victim recovers after request denied

BALTIMORE (AP) — A 44-year-old woman awoke 1½ months after she fell into a stroke-induced coma and six days after a judge refused her husband's request to disconnect her from life-support systems.

"I was shocked," the Rev. Harry Cole said of his wife, Jacqueline. "I asked her if she was awake and she nodded yes.... I asked her to smile and she did. I kissed her and asked her to kiss me back and she did."

Mrs. Cole had specifically told her husband that were she to become sick and unable to live a full existence, she would want life-support systems disconnected.

Supported by her four children whom he adopted nine years ago, Cole asked in May that her physician remove the life support.

Her doctor at Maryland General Hospital refused the request because the cerebral hemorrhage on March 29 hadn't left Mrs. Cole brain dead.

Cole, pastor at Lochearn United Presbyterian Church, asked a Baltimore Circuit Court judge to rule.

"Every shred of medical evidence dictated that Jackie had to die," Cole told the Baltimore Sun in a story published Sunday. "I decided that I needed to let her go."

Common Market, COMECON resume long-broken talks

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Common Market and the Soviet-led COMECON, Europe's top economic blocs, today resume a formal dialogue broken off six years ago with talks that could lead to greater East-West business cooperation.

The three-day meeting, to be held in Geneva, comes after COMECON, or the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, indicated it was interested in establishing formal ties with the 12-nation Western European trade bloc.

The two groups had broken off talks in 1980, in part because Moscow refused to recognize the West's largest economic community as a legitimate entity.

After COMECON expressed its readiness in September 1985 to establish official links, behind-the-scenes talks were held and the Common Market invited the 10-member East bloc group to the meeting that begins today.

The normally publicity-hungry Common Market did not announce the talks, and said in response to questions only that the meeting would be exploratory.

Participants will be technical experts, not senior officials, and no substantial agreements are expected.

However, officials said the session could lead to issuance of a joint declaration this year establishing relations between the trade blocs and pledging closer cooperation.

Both groups were founded after World War II to promote trade and economic ties among their members. The Common Market members are Britain, Belgium, Denmark, France, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and West Germany.

COMECON is made up of the Soviet Union, East Germany, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Mongolia, Vietnam and Cuba.

John Maslen, head of the Common Market delegation, said in an interview last week that he considered the meeting important mainly because it would resume the dialogue broken off in 1980.

The two sides had negotiated for five years without reaching agreement.

French visa easy to obtain — unless you're Arab

EDITOR'S NOTE: For tourists in Paris, the shadow cast by a series of terrorist bombings is everywhere. AP National Writer Lawrence Kilman, based in New York, is visiting Paris on vacation. Here is his report.

By LAWRENCE KILMAN

PARIS (AP) — The Arab traveler in Brussels begged for an immediate visa for France, but was told he would have to wait 15 days.

"Please," the traveler said. "My sister is getting married. I must be in Paris tomorrow night. It is an emergency."

"That is no emergency," the clerk in the French consulate said, dismissing the man with a wave. "The emergency is in France."

The consulate in the Belgian capital was packed. Two days earlier, French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, responding to a wave of terrorist bombings, had announced that visas would be required for most foreign travelers, including Americans.

I was standing in line behind the Arab traveler. My reason for visiting Paris was less urgent than his. As an American on vacation, I never expected to be in a foreign consulate wondering if I would be permitted to enter France.

I needn't have worried. The clerk took my American passport, and returned it with a visa immediately.

It's a good thing too, because as my train approached the French border, about 30 policemen checked passports and gathered some travelers without visas into the front car.

When we stopped, about 100 people were forced off the train. Many were kids with backpacks, or elderly couples on vacation.

They were herded into a visa office at the station. The next train wasn't due for three hours.

Americans are not the targets of the terrorism this time, but there are constant reminders in Paris of the bloody bombing campaign that has killed eight people and injured more than 160.

The tension is apparent, much like it was in Atlanta when a child murderer stalked the city, or like New York was during the Son of Sam killings.

In the Metro stations, policemen ask to peer into backpacks, grocery bags and briefcases. The shrill, rhythmic sounds of police sirens, familiar to most Americans from old movies, seem more urgent now. Heads turn as large police wagons rush by.

Newspapers feature shocking front-page photos of maimed bombing victims that are far too grisly for American newspapers.

At many of the tourist haunts, security is tight.

In the Pompidou Center, where an exhibition of modern sculpture is drawing large crowds, lines back up as guards frisk patrons. This is not a casual search; the guard ran his hands under my jacket and down the insides of my legs.

At the Marmottan, a quiet museum filled with paintings by Monet, guards are armed with metal detectors and give a thorough check to every bag. The guard who went through mine found a pungent ball of running clothes, a hunk of smelly cheese, and a bottle of wine.

At La Coupole, a restaurant and cafe haunted by the ghosts of Hemingway, Fitzgerald and Sartre, a polite, well-dressed host asks to look inside handbags.

Paris is not paralyzed by the violence. People are fearful of the bombings, but they continue to go to work, they ride the Metro, and they gather in large crowds as they do in all big cities.

And for Americans who wish to travel to France, complaining about the inconvenience of getting a visa seems petty. After all, the United States requires them of French visitors.

WORLD in brief

South African residents, migrant workers clash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Weekend fighting broke out in Soweto between residents and migrant workers living in hostels, and two people were seriously injured, residents of the black township said.

The government's Bureau for Information, however, mentioned no such clashes in its daily unrest report issued Sunday. It said Soweto police also denied reports that they killed five people at a funeral vigil Friday night and injured others. Those reports also came from residents.

Soweto residents said the weekend clashes in the Meadowlands district began when migrant workers attacked them Saturday night with spears, guns and staves.

Local police confirmed the attack, but denied residents' claims that police helped the migrants, most of whom are Zulus.

Emigres 'disillusioned?'

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet television has depicted Soviet Jewish emigres to the United States as disillusioned orphans who have left their motherland for a society they cannot adapt to.

After the Sunday broadcast, believed to be the first in the Soviet Union on the subject, a television commentator said the expatriates had made "a tragic mistake."

"Byvshchiye," (former ones), a 95-minute program about Jews who emigrated from the Soviet Union between 1970 and 1982, included an American documentary about Russians in New York and then a Soviet commentary.

Commentator Genrikh Borovik introduced the American film, which the Public Broadcasting Service broadcast as a "Frontline" documentary about four years ago. He claimed it was designed to show that Soviets cannot adjust to America.

Ruins found in China

PEKING (AP) — Archaeologists have discovered the more than 2,000-year-old ruins of a vacation palace built by China's first emperor, Qin Shihuang, the official Xinhua news agency reported today.

The ruins of several buildings and a well were found at Beidaihe, a seaside resort southeast of Peking in Hebei province, the agency said.

Qin Shihuang, who founded China's first dynasty in 221 B.C., had the palace built while on a tour of the area surrounding east China's Bohai Bay, the report quoted an archaeologist as saying.

Earlier this year, the ruins of another of Qin Shihuang's summer residences was discovered in Liaoning province, Xinhua said.

The report quoted archaeologist Su Binqi as saying the two discoveries have helped historians trace the influence of Qin design on the architecture of subsequent dynasties.

Israel will send in tanks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will send helicopter gunships and tanks into south Lebanon to stem attacks by Shiite Moslem guerrillas and may increase the number of troops it keeps in the region, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said.

Rabin told reporters Sunday that Israel's assistance to its Lebanese allies of the South Lebanon Army militia was meant "to absolutely break these attacks by inflicting large casualties" on Shiite fighters.

The latest rocket attack in south Lebanon on Saturday wounded three Israeli soldiers, the Israeli military command said. The attack occurred in the Israeli-occupied buffer zone that stretches six to 10 miles deep north of the international border and is meant to prevent guerrillas from attacking Israel itself.

The attack came one day after five French soldiers with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) were wounded by a rocket fired at their barracks in south Lebanon.

Classroom collapses

PEKING (AP) — A classroom collapsed at a rural school in central China, killing 11 children and injuring 35 others, the official China Daily reported today.

The newspaper said victims of the Sept. 12 tragedy were pre-schoolers attending a class in Dazheng, a village in Henan province.

It said the local Communist Party secretary and school headmaster had been arrested on charges of dereliction of duty for failure to repair the brick building.

All four walls were bowed outward and there were large cracks in the roof and walls from the theft of nine steel roof supports two years earlier, the daily said.

Nine-year-old kidnap victim helps authorities unravel plot

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — A 9-year-old girl who worked on her homework during 28 hours in a box in the woods helped to unravel an elaborate kidnap plot that the FBI said fell apart at the final detail: picking up the $1.5 million ransom.

Four men were arrested — one at his wedding — in connection with the kidnapping of Amanda Mueller, whose great-great grandfather founded the C.F. Mueller Co., noodle business, authorities said.

The plot, involving one of the largest ransoms ever sought in the United States, was planned as revenge for a failed real estate deal involving Amanda's father that cost one of the men a lot of money, said FBI agent William Wells.

"We believe they had a breakdown in their communications," said Wells. "They were confused as to where they were exactly supposed to be. ...I'd say they knew what they were doing, they were very detailed, up to the miscue."

Amanda was kept in a refrigerator box left in woods east of Naples in the 28 hours before she was found unharmed Saturday, the FBI said. The wooden box was painted black and had an air hole.

She was left with sandwiches, sodas, a pillow and a blanket. She insisted on taking along schoolbooks, and told authorities she worked on her homework.

Peter Farrell, 37, of Naples, and his 22-year-old brother, Paul, a second class seaman stationed aboard the USS Saratoga near Jacksonville, faced court appearances this morning in Jacksonville in connection with the kidnapping.

The younger Farrell was arrested at his wedding Saturday night.

Richard Sais, 29, of Bonita Springs, and Edward O'Brien, 38, of Naples, were being held on $750,000 bonds and faced appearances this afternoon before a federal magistrate in Miami.

The four were arrested Saturday, four days after Amanda was kidnapped. They were booked for investigation of state kidnapping charges and a federal charge of extortion, authorities said Sunday.

Peter Farrell, a real estate developer, blamed Amanda's father, John Mueller, for a failed real estate deal last spring, Wells said. He declined to be specific about the amount Farrell said he lost.

Mueller owns Mueller Co. Realtors in Naples with his wife, Barbara.

Amanda was abducted Tuesday after someone identifying himself as her father called her school and said he was sending a security guard to pick her up for a dentist appointment, Wells said.

The girl was released to one of the Farrells — authorities would not say which one. A kidnapper disguised as a telephone repairman watched from the road, the FBI said.

Within minutes, Mueller received a call telling him to go to the men's room at a bank in Naples for a note.

When he arrived, he found a note demanding $1.5 million.

Friday afternoon, Mueller received a tape-recorded phone call. It instructed him to put the money into two pieces of luggage and proceed north on Interstate 75, where he encountered several drop points with instructions that took him to the Southwest Florida Regional Airport in Fort Myers.

Mueller left the luggage at the airport, but it was never claimed.

Authorities acting on a tip from an acquaintance of Peter Farrell's found Amanda on Saturday morning.

Wells said Amanda was put in the box Friday morning, after being held in a Naples apartment rented by Peter Farrell.

"Amanda, while being held in the apartment, was at times locked in a bathroom, at times bound, and at other times was possibly given a tranquilizer. She assisted us greatly by going through the scenario, helping us identify certain pieces of evidence," Wells said.

News of the abduction was not released until Amanda was found because the kidnappers had threatened to kill her if reports were published, authorities said.

John Mueller's great-grandfather, C. Frederick Mueller, founded the C.F. Mueller Co., pasta business in Jersey City, N.J., in 1868. John Mueller's father, C. Frederick Mueller III, moved to Naples about 12 years ago after selling the company to the Foremost Corp. of America for $115 million.

Presidential contenders make important stop on campaign trail

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A sign over the door at the Iowa Democratic Party's headquarters here reads "Guest for the Day," and above it is space for a picture of whichever dignitary happens to be wandering through that day.

The sign stays in place. The picture, though, gets changed quite a bit as national politicians flood the state that holds the nation's first test of presidential strength.

Although that particular scene is set at Democratic headquarters, it could just as well apply to the Republicans.

Possible presidential contenders, Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, television evangelist Pat Robertson, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, New York congressman Jack Kemp, Missouri congressman Richard Gephardt and others have visited Iowa in recent months.

They often visit on behalf of other candidates or causes, making speeches and shaking hands at county fairs and senior centers. But eventually they acknowledge that, yes, they are considering a run for the presidency in 1988, and they're here to test the waters for Iowa's first-in-the-nation precinct caucuses.

Babbitt, in fact, has gone a step further. Two of his staffers now work with Democratic organizations in the state.

Laura May spends her days stuffing envelopes and making calls to raise money for Iowa Democrats in the 1986 elections.

"It was thought it would be helpful if some Babbitt staffers kind of got to know Iowa," said Ms. May. "I'm just kind of meeting the people of Iowa and learning Iowa politics."

Iowa's Democrats and Republicans alike have mixed feelings about the early attention from the national politicians. The time and money spent here help local candidates, they say, but the flood of big-name politicians trying to build support for 1988 takes away the focus of local races and can be wearisome to local organizers.

Babbitt's decision to provide staff for Iowa Democrats is new, party officials say.

"Quite frankly, I think it's a good idea," said Democratic Party spokesman Phil Roeder. "It's very mutually beneficial. We get an extra body around the office to do some work, and they have a person here learning the ropes in Iowa."

Babbitt staffer Wendy Dickstein can be found in Council Bluffs, where she labors over the schedule of congressional candidate Scott Hughes.

"I will be in Iowa for the duration of the thing," Ms. Dickstein said. "I'm really learning a lot about the district."

Party activists say the early maneuvering by presidential hopefuls has boosted their organizations, bringing in money and luring new volunteers.

"They have really been very helpful, but nobody is anybody's fool," said Iowa Republican Chairwoman Sally Novetzke. "We all know that while they're being wonderful, every time they're seen by another person it's helping them for 1988. We're using them and they're using us."

"A good deal of what's been accomplished so far is in the giving of money," said George Wittgraf, a Cherokee lawyer and backer of Vice President George Bush.

Bush, through his Fund For America's Future, has given about $40,000 to Iowa candidates and will spend about $75,000 before the 1986 campaign is over.

"We think, at this point, being helpful in the 1986 campaign in Iowa is the best politics for the future," Wittgraf said.

Though Babbitt has placed his staffers in Iowa, he's actually one of the latecomers. His first glimpse of Iowa was from the seat of a bicycle in July as he joined thousands of other bicyclists on a weeklong ride across the state.

On the other hand, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., who made his maiden trip to Iowa last October, had been in the state for five days by summer's end, with still more to come in the early fall.

Champion among Democrats is Gephardt. The Missouri congressman has visited the state on nine occasions and will keynote the Democratic Party's major fund-raising event in October.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., has made only one swing through the state, but his backers insist many of his 1984 supporters remain loyal. "We will definitely be seeing them all again this year," Roeder said.

Among Republicans, Ms. Novetzke said Dole, from another farm state, Kansas, clearly has been the most active in Iowa.

"He's doing the same things now that George Bush did in 1980. I'm sure he's building an organization," she said. "George Bush had good organization in 1980 and won the state. That same network is in place."

The maneuverings have led to fine distinctions about who is campaigning for what.

"Politics in Iowa has remained pretty much local politics, albeit with some visitors who are here with a longer view," Wittgraf said. "We simply do not discuss 1988 presidential politics. But we would be sure to let them know if and when about a 1988 presidential campaign."

Autumn's arrival: It 'needs no clock or calendar'

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Autumn is creeping south across America, glazing fields with the gold of harvest hay and woodlands with the crimson of changing leaves.

For those obsessed with punctuality, the autumnal equinox occurs this year on Tuesday at 3:59 a.m. EDT, a moment many people consider the end of summer and start of autumn.

"Leave the equinox to the record-keepers and know autumn where you find it, when it comes. See it, smell it, taste it and forget the time of day or year. Autumn needs no clock or calendar," wrote the late naturalist Hal Borland.

"The autumn with which we live is as variable as the wind, the weather, the land itself. Its schedule is that of the woodland trees, the wild grasses, the migrant birds," Borland wrote in his book, "Twelve Moons of the Year."

And his approach may well be reflected in the lack of agreement as to when autumn does, in fact, begin.

While the equinox is currently considered the beginning of fall by many people, that has not been universal. For example meteorologists consider autumn to begin Sept. 1, and in medieval Europe the season was considered to start on St. Bartholomew's Day, Aug. 24.

For Americans, while the equinox may have an exact moment, autumn means cooling weather, changing leaves, and new harvest corn and apples — things that may vary by a month or more from Maine to Louisiana and Washington to Arizona.

The equinox, nonetheless, has long been considered a significant event in itself — one closely observed by humans for thousands of years.

The fall and spring equinoxes are those times of equal daylight and night. They are among the four cardinal points of the year marking off the seasons of life, along with summer and winter solstices — the year's longest and shortest days.

The spring and fall equinoxes are the only two times of the year when the sun rises exactly in the East and sets in the West — all the rest of the time it's slightly north or south of the east-west line. That's because it is on the equinoxes when the sun crosses the equator on its apparent trip north or south.

Those two days, then, formed a major event for ancient civilizations which conducted ceremonies around them.

The great pyramids of Giza, Egypt, for example, built some 2,700 years before the Christian Era, were precisely constructed to the compass points. The error in alignment is about equal to the thickness of a piece of string, seen at a distance of six feet, astronomical experts at the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington report.

Such accuracy could only come from close knowledge of the rising and setting of the sun on these dates — and similar alignments occur in other Egyptian pyramids.

England's prehistoric Stonehenge, which may be as much as 3,500 years old, has stones aligned to the sun's rising and setting on the solstices in summer and winter.

There are Irish gravesites aligned to receive the light from the sunrise on the equinox, allowing it to shine down a passage and illuminate stones carved with figures.

As much as 2,000 years ago plains Indians in Canada constructed the Moose Mountain medicine wheel.

This and other medicine wheels consist of a ring of stone with patterns of spokes radiating outward which mark the sunrise at the solstice, and the rising of stars.

And the Mayan civilization in Guatemala in 300 A.D. built a pyramid with three temples. For someone standing on the stairway of the pyramid, the sun rises over the central temple on the equinoxes. On the solstices it rises over one or the other of the remaining temples.

Reagan addresses U.N. on arms issues

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan told the United Nations today that there has been movement in U.S.-Soviet negotiations to reduce nuclear-missile arsenals, but condemned Moscow's detention of an American reporter as "a particularly disturbing example of Soviet transgressions against human rights."

"The world expects better," Reagan said in his fifth speech to the United Nations.

"It expects contributions to the cause of peace that only the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union can make."

Reagan again demanded the release of Nicholas Daniloff, the Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report, and said the Soviet Union "bears the responsibility for the consequences of its action."

The president said there is no similarity in the cases against Daniloff and Gennadiy Zakharov, the Soviet physicist and U.N. employee arrested on spying charges a week before KGB agents plucked Daniloff from a Moscow street.

Reagan called Zakharov "an accused spy who should stand trial" and Daniloff "an innocent hostage who should be released."

Despite the strains in U.S.-Soviet relations caused by the reporter's indictment and the administration's expulsion of 25 Soviet diplomats from the United Nations, Reagan gave an up-beat account of negotiations in Geneva to reduce the nuclear arms race.

He confirmed that the United States was prepared to consider "an interim measure" to reduce intercontinental missiles, bombers and submarines by less than the 50 percent he initially had demanded.

At the same time, Reagan said, the Soviets have "embraced our idea" of radical cutbacks.

"So there has been movement," he said.

The Soviets had rejected the initial U.S. demand because it would have forced abandonment of many of the heavy land-based missiles that are the core of their nuclear arsenal.

In a conciliatory vein, Reagan said, "we have sought to take account of Soviet concerns." But, over the long haul, he emphasized that he seeks to halve strategic nuclear weapons on both sides.

Similarly, Reagan said he would like to see all medium-range U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe scrapped.

"Again," he said, "if the Soviet Union insists on pursuing such a goal in stages, we are prepared to conclude an interim agreement without delay."

"All this gives me hope," Reagan told world leaders assembled for the annual special session of the U.N. General Assembly.

"I can tell you the exchanges between our two sides this summer could well have marked the beginning of a serious, productive negotiation on arms reductions.

"The ice of the negotiating stalemate could break — if both sides intensify their efforts in the new round of Geneva talks" that opened last week.

Besides long-range and medium-range missiles, these talks deal with space-based defense systems.

Reagan, however, gave no indication of U.S. concessions on his "Star Wars" research program, which the Soviets have condemned as threatening to expand the nuclear competition.

Nor did Reagan offer any appraisal of the message he received last week from Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev. "For the moment, let me simply say we are giving it serious and careful consideration," he told the General Assembly.

As for the Aug. 30 arrest of Daniloff and his subsequent indictment, Reagan was stern:

"Let me, in the tradition of candor established at Geneva, tell you that a pall has been cast over our relations with the Soviet Union."

He called the Daniloff case "a particularly disturbing example of Soviet transgressions against human rights."

Reagan said the Soviets had made Daniloff, 51, "the subject of fabricated accusations and trumped-up charges."

Letting a toy robot help him put his thoughts into words is Paul Werner of Brookings, S.D.

First of expelled Soviet diplomats departs

NEW YORK (AP) — The first of 25 Soviet diplomats ordered expelled from the United States departed on an Aeroflot jet, some carrying color televisions and videocassette recorders.

Tom Middlemiss, a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, said that the State Department notified Port Authority police that 21 of the 25 United Nations diplomats would be on the flight Sunday. However, Middlemiss said Sunday evening that there was no way of knowing how many actually left.

The U.S. Mission to the U.N. said two of the diplomats were on the plane, the New York Post reported. State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCartey said she had no information about the departures.

The officials left from John F. Kennedy International Airport at 4:30 p.m., refusing to talk about their ouster.

Valentin Karymov, senior counselor at the Soviet Mission, said by telephone that he did not know how many of the 25 had left. But he said all would leave by the Oct. 1 deadline set by the United States.

Last week, Soviet officials had said they would fight the expulsion order.

"We hoped the United States government would alter the decision," Anatoly Khudiakov, Mission press secretary, said Sunday. "We still hope they would. But still...we are on the territory of the United States, on United States soil."

No formal protest has been lodged over the expulsion order.

$10 toy robot answers need of speechless man

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Paul Werner lost his voicebox because of cancer and a device he used to speak quit working, but he remained determined to talk and discovered a $10 electronic toy robot let him put his thoughts into words.

Speech pathologists at the University of Nebraska Medical Center now keep a supply of the toys, originally intended to make a child's voice sound like a robot. They found that the toys were as good as more expensive devices for some patients who have had their larynxes removed.

"I remember when he brought it in, I just about dropped over," pathologist Marsha Sullivan said. "I couldn't wait to get one."

"The quality isn't like the special devices, but it's something they can use while they're learning esophageal speech or while they're deciding what's appropriate for them," Mrs. Sullivan said. "And for something that sells for under $10, it can't be beat."

Werner, 55, of Brookings, S.D., said some people he works with can understand him better when he uses the robot than when he uses special devices.

"It's just super," he said. "It's hard to believe it can work so well."

When a tube attached to the toy robot is placed against the tongue and words are mouthed, the toy makes sounds like a robot talking.

After his larynx was removed, Werner stayed with his daughter while he received radiation treatment at the medical center and learned to speak with air from his esophagus.

Shortly before his surgery, a boy in the neighborhood was given one of the robots for his birthday.

Ian Middleton's mother asked him not to play with the toy around Werner because she was afraid he would be self-conscious about the way he sounded when he used a $300 prosthetic device that makes vibrations against the throat that can be shaped into words. But when the device stopped working, the robot took center stage.

"We went through and found it in the bottom of the toy box," said Werner's daughter, Deb Barnett. "Everyone else was surprised how well it worked, but Ian said he knew it was just what he needed."

"It was a lifesaver for my father," she said. "Your natural impulse is you want to talk and after what he'd been through he needed to talk."

Nasta Industries of New York introduced the "Electronic Voice Synthesizer" toy this year. Company officials learned about its new use in a letter from Werner's wife, Donna, said a spokeswoman for the public relations company that represents Nasta.

"It just was almost a fluke," Jodi Heimler said. "I don't know of any plans to use it as anything other than a toy, even though they say it's better than the expensive prosthetic devices."

Mrs. Sullivan plans to show other therapists at a state convention in October how the toy can be used. She usually sees from 20 to 30 laryngectomy patients a year and has recommended the toy to about 10 people since Werner's discovery this summer.

MARKETS

In its early years, when Cold War tensions ran high, the Soviet Union scorned the Common Market as an imperialist tool. COMECON members remain among the handful of nations that have not established diplomatic ties with the Common Market.

The Common Market invited COMECON to meet in Geneva only after the Soviet-led bloc agreed to allow the Common Market to negotiate trade deals with individual COMECON members.

Common Market officials believe COMECON's new interest in the Western trade group reflects Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's desire to strengthen Moscow's base for earning hard currency and widen its access to Western technology.

It also appears to be part of a campaign by Gorbachev to encourage Western Europe to act politically outside of NATO and separately from the United States, said Jan Zoubek. He is editor of East-West, a Brussels-based publication specializing in East-West economic relations.

Three-quarters of all Soviet exports to the West last year went to Common Market nations, Zoubek said. He estimates that Moscow relied on the Common Market for about half its imports from the West.

Trade between the Common Market and COMECON's European members totaled $43.9 billion last year, down 4 percent from 1984.

"Economically, it is urgent for COMECON to get some kind of agreement" with the Common Market, Zoubek said in an interview.

The Soviet push coincides with its unsuccessful attempt to participate in global trade liberalization talks under auspices of the Geneva-based General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Delegates to a GATT meeting last week in Uruguay rejected the Soviet request.

Common Market officials have insisted that any formal agreement with COMECON not include trade on a bloc-to-bloc basis.

They say COMECON, unlike the Common Market, has no responsibility for the trade policies of its members. COMECON also has no common tariff or commercial policy.

Common Market officials also are wary of the political implications of an accord with COMECON.

"We do not want bloc-to-bloc discussion (on trade) because this would imply condoning the separation of Europe," the Common Market's chief trade official, Willy de Clercq of Belgium, said last year.

Paperwork Reduction Act signed

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Calling it "another victory for quality education in Texas," Gov. Mark White today signed the Teacher Paperwork Reduction Act.

"Teaching must never be reduced to an exercise in paper pushing," White said. "It's the paperwork that needs to be reduced."

All four major teacher organizations in Texas supported the bill, which passed during this summer's first special session. Teacher group representatives said the law should improve sagging teacher morale.

The new law eliminates paperwork that doesn't deal with reports on attendance, lesson plans, grades or textbooks. It does not provide for sanctions against school districts that disobey those provisions.

"The business of the schools is teaching," said Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, House co-sponsor of the bill. "This paperwork bill will — at least I pray — go a long way to letting teachers teach and get on about their business."

Toddler gets heart-lung transplant

LONDON (AP) — A 2½-month-old boy has received a new heart and lungs, making him the youngest person ever to undergo such a transplant, Harefield Hospital in London announced today.

The boy, who was not identified, had the operation Saturday and was listed in "satisfactory" condition this morning, a hospital bulletin said.

The operation was performed by Magdi Yacoub, Britain's leading transplant specialist, the statement said.

Judge John Carroll Byrnes on May 9 heard Cole's petition, but denied the request, noting only 41 days since the woman lost consciousness and little legal guidance in making such a decision.

Six days later, Mrs. Cole miraculously opened her eyes.

Although her recovery is far from complete, Mrs. Cole says she is grateful to be alive. The former employee of the state Department of Education remains unable to walk, has trouble moving her fingers and suffers from severe memory impairment.

"I feel very warm when I think about (the recovery)," she said recently. "It's alarming to know that you were that close to death. It's scary. What's happened to me has enhanced my opinion that each day is worth celebrating."

Mrs. Cole says she "just happened to luck out. Fortunately, things didn't work out the way we hoped they would."

DRUGS

Recent sports scandals and President Reagan's anti-drug campaign have contributed to the public's awareness, Loper said.

Judges and juries also are responding to findings that so-called recreational drugs are more dangerous than previously believed, according to Bert Graham, an assistant Harris County district attorney who heads the trial bureau.

Juries now are more reluctant to grant probation to drug offenders, defense attorney Wendell Odom Jr. said.

That attitude will get tougher, prosecutor Rusty Hardin predicted.

Nevertheless, a defendant convicted of selling a small amount of narcotics has a better than 50 percent chance of probation, Hardin said.

State District Judge William Hatten recently granted deferred adjudication to a college student who pleaded guilty to selling one pill for $20.

Hatten said it was better for the student to be under his supervision the next 10 years than to send him to the penitentiary where he likely would be released soon.

The judge and many defense attorneys said prison is not the only answer to the problem.

In the Midland-Odessa area alone, Mauro said $8 million worth of loans has been granted.

"Not only are the Texas veterans programs the best in the United States, they create jobs right here in Midland," Mauro said.

"Twenty-six thousand Texans have jobs in construction today, because I came through on my 1982 campaign promise of creating a Veteran Housing Program for our Vietnam era veterans," Mauro said.

Mauro said many rank and file Republicans have endorsed him, including two GOP state representatives Randall Riley, R-Round Rock, and Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason.

Robertson likens his bid to JFK campaign

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson says his bid for the presidency ought to be likened to John F. Kennedy's 1960 campaign rather than to the Rev. Jesse Jackson's 1984 effort.

Robertson's preference is understandable.

Kennedy's campaign is remembered in part for his need to overcome prejudice against supporting a Catholic for president.

Jackson was combatting a deep-seated prejudice against blacks. Like Robertson, Jackson is a Baptist minister, but it was not the civil rights leader's religious calling that generated most opposition to his candidacy.

Jackson's campaign is recalled by many Democrats, including party nominee Walter F. Mondale, for its divisive impact.

Kennedy, of course, overcame the religious issue and was elected presydent.

But as Mondale would later recall, that was not the end of his struggle with Jackson. Long after his 1984 defeat, Mondale recalled that he gave Jackson special treatment during the fight for the nomination because "I recognized that he was the first significant black candidate for president."

With some bitterness, the former vice president recalled that Jackson did not reciprocate "and it hurt my candidacy."

Which comparison is valid for Robertson? Will he be remembered, like Kennedy, as someone who succeeded in overcoming questions about his religious beliefs? Or will Republicans remeber Robertson as someone who pressed his views so uncompromisingly that he became a divisive force in the election?

When asked about comparisons between his potential candidacy and Jackson's, Robertson has said that "there would be a difference" and that "I would be closer possibly to the mainstream of middle America."

At a recent news conference, the television evangelist tried to deal with the religious issue by pledging to "work to support religious freedom for all people."

He went on to recall Kennedy's campaign and said, "He appealed to the nation's sense of fairness and justice. Today, I would ask for the same fairness as was accorded John Kennedy."

Later, he was asked if, like Kennedy, he would pledge to resign the presidency if he ever faced a situation when his office would — in Kennedy's words — "require me to either violate my conscience or violate the national interest."

Like Kennedy, Robertson said he doubted any such conflict would occur.

"But, I believe if such a conflict developed, I would say, as John Kennedy did, yes, I'd resign the office," he added.

A look back at Kennedy's career and, particularly, his presidential campaign, demonstrates a powerful difference between his views and those of Robertson.

It was in his speech to the Greater Houston Ministerial Association on Sep. 12, 1960, that Kennedy offered his most comprehensive view of the religious issue.

"I believe in an America where the separation of church and state is absolute," Kennedy told the ministers "where no Catholic prelate would tell the president (should he be Catholic) how to act and no Protestant minister would tell his parishioners for whom to vote."

The views of Kennedy and Robertson would conflict nowhere more clearly than on the issue of school prayer.

Kennedy was president when the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the state board of regents prayer in New York.

Kennedy told a news conference that the decision should be "a welcome reminder to every American family that we can pray a good deal more at home, we can attend our churches with a good deal more fidelity, and we can make the meaning of prayer much more important in the lives of all our children."

"There can be no education without morality, and there can be no lasting morality without religion," Robertson told supporters last week. "For the sake of our children, we must bring God back to the classrooms of America."

Robertson expresses his views on moral and social issues in such uncompromising terms that he often leaves the impression that, like Jackson, in 1984, if he loses the race for the nominee, the winner might come under strong pressure to endorse the agenda of his defeated rival.

And there is concern among Republicans, that the agenda of the religious right does not have broad appeal among the new generation of voters that has given its strong support to Ronald Reagan.

Fate of Cape Hatteras Lighthouse questioned

BUXTON, N.C. (AP) — At the foot of the 116-year-old Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, pounding waves wash away 11 feet of beach a year. Just as unrelenting is the debate over how to save the spiral-striped symbol of the wild North Carolina coast.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plans to begin building a revetment and seawall around the 208-foot tower as early as January, anticipating it will become an island as the Outer Banks shoreline recedes over the next 50 years.

But that $5.6 million plan has stopped neither the people trying to build up the beach with artificial seaweed nor those who want to move the nation's tallest lighthouse inland.

"As soon as they build the wall it's going to seal its fate," said Orrin Pilkey, a professor of geology at Duke University and a member of the Move the Lighthouse Committee. "Once it moves offshore, it's doomed."

Pilkey said the seawall and the revetment, an underground structure, would not stand up to storms, adding that seawalls actually hasten erosion.

"The only way to save the lighthouse is to move it," Pilkey said.

"That's utterly ridiculous," said Hugh Morton, acting chairman of the Save the Lighthouse Committee. "There have been cracks discovered in the lighthouse...and it extends more than 50 feet below the ground."

Morton's group wants to keep the lighthouse where it is, checking the beach erosion with sand-catching synthetic "seaweed" rather than a seawall.

In 1982, the committee spent about $165,000 to place 5,000 units of artificial seaweed around the beach to settle the water-borne sand into bars. Another installation costing $91,000 is planned soon. The sandbag-anchored units of five-foot-long fabric strips have already filled a deep lagoon to the south of the lighthouse that could have been the greatest threat if a storm came from that direction, he said.

The seaweed plan, he argued, "could build enough beach to put (the University of North Carolina's) Kenan Stadium and Charlotte Motor Speedway out in front."

But officials of the National Park Service, which manages the lighthouse as part of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, say it can't be proved that the artificial seaweed is doing any good.

"It was uncertain exactly what could be attributed to the product," said Kent Turner, the park service's specialist on the lighthouse beach. "There was some...buildup along a pretty wide band of beach after the product went in."

Even so, the park service has accepted the Corps of Engineers' recommendation for the seawall and revetment. All that's needed are the final specifications and approval of funding legislation pending in Congress.

David Fischetti, an engineer who heads the Move the Lighthouse Committee, said neither the corps nor the park service gave enough consideration to his group's idea.

Move the Lighthouse estimated in 1980 that it would cost $2.75 million to cut through the lighthouse at its base, lift the 2,600-ton structure onto a concrete-and-steel track and move it about half a mile southwest to an area that would be stable for at least 200 years.

"So many projects have been done around the world that were much more difficult than this," Fischetti said. Czech engineers in 1975 spent $15.3 million to move a 12,000-ton cathedral 800 yards to make way for a coal mine, and in 1967, Italian engineers moved the 300,000-ton Egyptian temples of Abu Simbel to make way for rising Nile waters behind the Aswan Dam.

Moving the lighthouse probably would cost much more than Fischetti thinks, say officials of the corps and the park service, noting that it would have to cross a marsh.

"You can get into very costly structures just to build the roadway," said Tom Jarrett, chief coastal engineer for the corps' Wilmington branch.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which has vehicles that move massive rockets, advised the park service in the late 1970s that moving the lighthouse would cost many times what Fischetti estimated, said Jay Gogue, former regional chief scientist for the park service and now a researcher at Clemson University.

Trying to move the lighthouse would not only threaten to destroy it, it would also change its historical significance and require costly changes on navigation charts, he said.

Peace Corps remembered after 25 years

By JERRY ESTILL

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — They gathered under a cloudless sky with straw hats and parasols and smiles to remember their dead from a 25-year offensive fought with plows and medicines and books.

Bill Moyers, the Peace Corps' first deputy director, said Peace Corps people in general are in tune with poet Archibald MacLeish's notion of the "Need to make nonsense of our lives."

He said the 199 volunteers who died since President John F. Kennedy dispatched the first group overseas in 1961 "would not want us to be sentimental" in remembering them.

And so, he tried not to be Sunday at Arlington National Cemetery.

Moyers recalled the early group as a little ragtag, with little stomach for pretense and none for piety. "The most idealistic staff and volunteers always kept their fingers a little crossed," he said.

When the Washington International School Children's Chorus first effort revealed that not all its young members have perfect pitch, Moyers observed that "like any good Peace Corps volunteer, they sing in their own key."

And Moyers — a White House press secretary, a newspaper publisher, now a commentator for CBS News — acknowledged that, "We were all friends in Peace Corps Washington. We stabbed each other in the front. The art of running the Peace Corps from Washington is the art of running the circus from the monkey cage."

This was a memorial with more laughter than tears.

But Moyers was steely serious in his description of the society these Peace Corps workers would find if they were alive now, comparing it with the frustrations that built in the nation's youth in the 1950s and bubbled into action in the '60s.

He talked of MacLeish's "snakeline sin of coldness of the heart" that Moyers said "bedevils us today."

He worried aloud about a people "buying on credit while hearts atrophy" and asked the crowd jamming the marble amphitheater adjacent to the Tomb of the Unknowns whether it shared his unease that "someone else is in charge and I just live here."

"The years have been hard on the nation's gross national psychology," he said, with too many people "counting their money and getting high and letting television experience live for them."

"We are struggling today with two passports," he said. "One is stamped America, the other is stamped human beings."

No names were called. The relatives rose on their own cue and walked to the front while the Morgan State University Choir sang ever so softly, over and over and over: "I've got peace like a river in my soul."

The only mention of Kennedy — and it wasn't by name — was when Moyers recalled an earlier time when so many people were "spiritually unemployed" and "then came the call and the lethargy was shattered."

The call, answered most symbolically in congressional creation of the Peace Corps 25 years ago today, was to Kennedy's 1960 inaguration plea for Americans to "ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

For these particular veterans, the oft-forgotten second part of the admonition had equal appeal. "My fellow citizens of the world, ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man."

Both are writ large in stone — large enough to photograph — at Kennedy's gravesite on a hill just across a hollow from the site of Sunday's service and it was at that spot where they took each others' pictures.

Most of these people had stopped there earlier after passing the White House, crossing over Memorial Bridge and making their way up a steep slope in what the 25th anniversary program listed simply as "Walk to John F. Kennedy Gravesite." Afterward, many of them walked back the same way.

It was near the end of the memorial service when Sargent Shriver, the first director of the Peace Corps, and Loret Miller Ruppe, the current director, stepped forward to hand out single yellow roses and hugs to family members of the departed volunteers.

No names were called. The relatives rose on their own cue and walked to the front while the Morgan State University Choir sang ever so softly, over and over and over: "I've got peace like a river in my soul...I've got love like a river in my soul...I've got joy like a river in my soul."

NATION IN BRIEF

Ex-Social Security head cleared of 1982 charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has cleared former Social Security Commissioner John A. Svahn of conflict-of-interest charges stemming from the 1982 award of a computer contract to a firm where Svahn once worked.

In Sept. 12 letters to Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and William S. Cohen, R-Maine, the department said it upheld a decision by a federal prosecutor's office not to prosecute Svahn.

The department's public integrity section upheld a May 29 decision by the U.S. attorney in Baltimore not to prosecute Svahn, said John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman.

The investigation stemmed from a General Accounting Office report that Svahn went to lunch 12 times with former associates at Deloitte Haskins & Sells, one of two firms that won the $15 million computer contract.

The GAO reported that company officials spent $2,000 on meals for Svahn and other Social Security Administration officials while the computer contract was up for bids.

Bypass surgery report grim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quality of open heart surgery varies from hospital to hospital, with the danger of dying about triple the national average in 10 of the country's medical facilities, a published report says.

The report, published Sunday by Knight-Ridder Newspapers, said more than 1,000 Medicare patients are dying unnecessarily in coronary bypass surgery. The figures are based on a computer analysis of federal government figures on the death rates for every hospital in the country that performed the operation on Medicare patients in 1984, the newspapers said.

Coronary bypass operations have grown increasingly common in the past decade, with an average of more than 200,000 operations now performed each year at a cost of $5 billion.

The Knight-Ridder stories listed 107 hospitals that performed this surgery with mortality rates of 3 percent or less, a rate that experts said was excellent.

But the report also named 10 hospitals where death rates were more than five times higher — from 15 percent to 23 percent.

Tunnel fire delays masses

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A smoky fire in a tunnel beneath Park Avenue Sunday night disrupted train service from Grand Central Terminal by the Metro-North Commuter Railroad and delayed thousands of passengers heading home after a day in Manhattan, the authorities said.

Grand Central was closed for more than three hours after Metro-North officials cut off power to the tracks shortly before 7 p.m. Metro-North officials said they did not know whether rush-hour service this morning would be affected.

Manhattan-bound trains were halted at 125th Street, and passengers heading for Westchester County and Connecticut were given free subway rides from Grand Central to 125th Street, where trains departing for the suburbs ran at least 30 minutes behind schedule.

The Metro-North delays were not the only headaches that travelers in the metropolitan region had to contend with last night. Volume of traffic backed up vehicles headed in either direction at the Lincoln Tunnel shortly before 8 p.m., according to the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

Tie-ups also slowed Manhattan-bound motorists on the George Washington Bridge and New Jersey-bound drivers heading through the Holland Tunnel.

The two-alarm Metro-North blaze, in a room deep below 49th Street, broke out at 6:40 p.m. and was declared under control at 8:20 p.m., according to a fire department spokesman, Robert Hanover. No injuries were reported.

Voyager readies for trip

MOJAVE, Calif. (AP) — If all goes well with a second test flight of the experimental aircraft, officials say Voyager may take off next weekend on its attempt to make the first spin around the globe without a stop.

Pilots Dick Rutan, 48, and Jeana Yeager, 34, plan to take 10 to 12 days to pilot the odd-looking aircraft up to 27,000 miles without stopping and without refueling.

Team spokesman Peter Riva said the current record for nonstop, unrefueled flight is 12,500 miles, set in 1962 by a B-52 that flew from Okinawa, Japan, to Madrid, Spain.

Voyager soared above the Mojave Desert on Sunday on the first of its two final test flights. Rutan and Ms. Yeager ended the test flight after about three hours, landing at Edwards Air Force Base, about 15 miles southeast of their base of operation at Mojave Airport, said Rutan's father, George.

"The results they got were really good," he said, adding that the final test flight, which could last as long as 48 hours, may start today at Edwards, followed by the world flight as early as next weekend.

With a wingspan three feet wider than that of a Boeing 727 jetliner, Voyager weighs only 1,838 pounds without fuel and is basically a flying fuel tank with cramped spaces for its two pilots.

Terror revived

Paris is living a new reign of terror. The "citadel of civilization" recently was bombed for days. The victims were guilty of eating out at a restaurant. Police carrying a bomb found in a cafe were cut to ribbons when it exploded in their hands.

A Lebanese terrorist group claimed responsibility for the bombings, as if killing and maiming innocent people was an act of responsibility. The group demanded the release of its leader, Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, from French prison.

Abdallah was arrested in connection with the murder of a U.S. military attache and an Israeli diplomat in 1982. Despite France's knowledge of Abdallah's involvement, the French were prepared to release him for a French diplomat kidnapped by Abdallah's terrorist group. A deal was set up. The diplomat was released. But before releasing Abdallah, French police searched his apartment and found the weapons used to kill Col. Charles Ray. Instead of being released, Abdallah was tried and sentenced to four years in prison.

That sparked the bombings.

Abdallah's story is a case in point about France's — and Western Europe's — shifting attitude toward terrorism. At first, the French appeared ready to appease the terrorists by exchanging Abdallah. Then the French hardened their resolve to bring him to trial — and the terrorists struck back all the harder.

But the French government didn't back down. Instead, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac required visas for visitors to France from countries outside the European Economic Community. He dispatched troops to airports and borders.

"Terrorists should expect from the French government no clemency of any sort, direct or indirect, official or unofficial, secret or open," Chirac said on French television. "One of the people placing these bombs will inevitably be caught and he will talk. And we will take Draconian measures; we will be without pity for anybody, absolutely anybody found to be manipulating these terrorists."

Visas are certainly not "Draconian" measures. But Chirac seems to be implying that France will strike at the leaders "manipulating" the bomb-throwers. Does that mean that France, which refused to take part in the U.S. bombing of Tripoli, would strike at terrorists outside the borders of France? Perhaps so.

France knows, deep in its history, the causes and the effects of terrorism. The historic Reign of Terror in Paris occurred when the leaders of the French Revolution consumed each other in a bath of blood. The new reign of terror has been spawned, in part, by toleration of terrorism. France long has had sympathy for Third World causes, and has given sanctuary for refugees from political persecution. But now some causes are stained with the blood of innocent people.

France must turn away from terror to the other voice in French history — the voice of reason.

Lumber barons rule timber industry

WASHINGTON — Smokey the Bear is not only blind to the cost of preferential treatment given to lumber barons who buy timber from our national forests, but he's deaf to the most blatant evidence of bid-rigging and conspiracy by the industry.

Jack Anderson

Forest Service brass hats' cozy relationship with their corporate customers includes providing unparalleled subsidies for the comfort and convenience of the timber industry, and bailing out lumber companies that bid too high prices through their own cupidity and stupidity.

Now we've learned that the bureaucratic guardians of the nation's timber resources have for years ignored reports from conscientious Forest Service employees that some logging companies have conspired to keep down the price they pay to harvest the public's trees. The rangers report what they know, but somehow the charges of wrongdoing always seem to get lost in the paper shuffle.

In fact, Forest Service management is so notorious that one ranger told Agriculture Department auditors he doesn't even bother to report apparent violations because he figures his bosses would leave him out on a limb instead of backing up his charges.

This ranger witnessed one incident, for example, in which a timber buyer threatened his competitors, but it was not reported. Collusion among rival bidders, however, is more common than threats.

The auditors' report, obtained by our associate Stewart Harris under the Freedom of Information Act, was based on records from 80 national forests in the Pacific Northwest and Georgia. It cites 18 cases of possible antitrust activities between 1981 and 1983; the Forest Service pursued only three.

Here are some of the discouraging highlights of the report:

— Two rangers overheard four timber buyers arranging not to bid against each other. The first bid ended in a four-way tie. Then a ranger saw the buyers flip a coin to decide who would win the second bid. The coin-toss winner's bid was 5 cents higher than the losers' bids. The Forest Service canceled the sale after the rangers reported the incident, but made no effort to investigate the perpetrators.

— A timber buyer asked for a recess during oral bidding so that, in his words, he could "wear (the other bidder) down about 50 pounds or so." While the Forest Service officials quibbled at length over the propriety of recessing an auction, the two buyers left the room. When they returned, one withdrew from the bidding. The case was referred to the agency headquarters in Washington, D.C., but officials there let the matter die.

— The Forest Service dropped an investigation of alleged bid-rigging simply on the basis of denials by the three accused buyers, even though a witness submitted an affidavit charging that one of the suspects had admitted the plot. Agency officials also failed to interview another witness who had evidence of collusion among the three buyers.

— Rangers in one national forest missed altogether a clear pattern of non-competitive bidding among four companies. Twenty out of 26 timber sales between January 1981 and June 1984 either had only one bidder, token competitive bids or a winning bid that was exactly the same as the lowest price the Forest Service would take for the timber.

According to the National Forest Management Act of 1976, all 18 cases studied by the auditors should have been referred to the Justice Department for investigation. Only three were; the Forest Service lost the paperwork on two other cases.

Footnote: Beginning Oct. 1, Forest Service officials will use sealed bids in timber sales to cut down on collusion among timber companies suspected of antitrust activities.

HUMOR VS. TUMOR: Robert Warren is a septuagenarian songwriter who made his name during Watergate with a record called "Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell and Dean" ("To think that a bug/ worth hardly a shrug/ could end up by getting us/ tossed in the jug"). Now he's cut an album called "Insanity" that has equal bite; it's due out soon.

Warren has just been diagnosed as having pancreatic cancer spreading to his liver, but he refuses to complain, reminding us: "Tumor rhymes with humor." Here's a sampling of his lyrics, reflecting his ability to view things like a child — the kind of child who noticed that the emperor had no clothes.

"If we want to beat Russia, it's perfectly plain/ We'll do it by selling 'em all that grain/ And whatever else they choose to buy./ That's THE WHITE HOUSE LULLABY."

Or this bit from "The Takeover Tango":

"If it's your firm that's taken over/ And you're the one to get the boot,/ Don't worry — you'll wind up in clover./ Thanks to the golden parachute."

Or this:

"We've got a bomber — the new B-1./ The 'B' is for boondoggle second to none / By 1999/ It ought to be off the line/ And obsolescent as high-button shoes./ It's easy to see/ We've got those BACK-TO-THE-DRAWING-BOARD BLUES.

"Then there's the gun called the Sergeant York/ A truly gargantuan barrel of pork./ It had one tiny quirk/ It simply refused to work/ There was a goof, but they ain't sayin' whose./ It's plain as can be/ We've got those BACK-TO-THE-DRAWING-BOARD BLUES."

And finally a snatch of YIPEE-YUPPIE-I-AY:

"You won't find us fillin' our tummies with burgers,/ And tuna on white is a cardinal sin./ We lay in gourmet from the neighborhood shops/ If it wasn't for takeout, we'd never eat in."

New look at Cuba

The release of 69 Cuban political prisoners and about 40 members of their families serves, among other things, as a reminder of how much work remains to be done to create a constructive policy in the United States regarding Cuba.

There can only be relief and celebration that these political prisoners are at last free. Not all necessarily are heroes, for many were part of the Batista regime whose repression created the climate that brought Fidel Castro to power. Some had been imprisoned almost from the day Castro took power on Jan. 1, 1959 — symbols of the new repression that he found necessary to maintain his power.

But they are free largely because of the initiative of the U.S. Catholic Conference, not the U.S. government. The Reagan administration continues to muddle and meander — seemingly conciliatory one day, then hostile and punitive the next. The result has been to give Cuba an importance that it does not deserve and to miss opportunities to begin the long process of reestablishing a constructive relationship.

The basic goal of U.S. policy, to isolate Cuba, has failed. Cuba now has diplomatic relations with most of the important nations of the hemisphere. One exception is the military dictatorship in Chile. The Latin nations have understood the importance of restoring normal relations as Cuba has abandoned its aggressive policy of exporting its revolution to other Latin nations.

Much of the anger in Washington is generated by Cuba's firm commitment of friendship and support to the Sandinista government in Nicaragua. The Reagan administration sees this as an obstacle to its crusade to overthrow the Sandinistas and install whatever brand of government the contras may contrive. What Washington fails to grasp is that it is alone among the free nations of the hemisphere in seeking the overthrow of the Nicaraguan government, in mounting a devastating war against the Nicaraguan people.

Efforts to restore the 1984 immigration agreement failed again in July. Under the plan, Cuba would repatriate about 2,700 criminals and mentally ill persons who came in the Mariel flight of 1980 and the United States would undertake to accept about 20,000 Cuban immigrants each year. It is a good plan. It broke down almost as soon as it commenced, however, when the United States launched its Radio Marti broadcasts to Cuba and Havana understandably reacted. The new effort to restore the agreement has again foundered because the United States was unprepared to offer timely compensatory radio time to the Cubans.

Jorge I. Dominguez of Harvard, writing in the fall issue of Foreign Affairs, notes that "Cuba is at a turning point." One way Castro wants to turn is to improved relations with the United States. It makes sense for both nations. The efforts to isolate Cuba, as in the new sanctions announced by President Reagan in August, serve only to harden the ideological rhetoric and posturing of Castro and to raise sympathy for him in the rest of the hemisphere. Castro seems firmly in command of his nation. As Dominguez points out, seven U.S. presidents have failed to dislodge him. But if there is ever to be change in Cuba, it will come as Cuba is drawn back into full relations with the rest of the world — the United States included.

Shootdown brought nations close to war

NEW YORK — Exactly how and why Korean Air Lines Flight 007 was shot down over Sakhalin Island on the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1, 1983, may never be known. But Seymour Hersh, in his new book, "The Target Is Destroyed," tells us more, more persuasively, than anyone else has been able or willing to do.

Tom Wicker

The story will not make happy reading in the Reagan administration, Congress, the intelligence agencies or for many in the press — though it ought to be said at once that Hersh categorically rejects the idea that KAL 007 was a "spy plane" or that it was deliberately sent into Soviet airspace by United States or South Korean officials.

This account — based on extensive research in the United States and the Soviet Union and among numerous intelligence officials, only a few of whom allowed use of their names — also refutes the theory that once the plane wandered into Soviet airspace, American officials did not warn the pilots but capitalized upon the "intelligence bonanza" that resulted from Soviet air defense activities. That possibility had been raised in this column, but Hersh's refutation seems to me conclusive.

The Hersh account makes clear, however, that numerous United States military tracking posts in the North Pacific did pick up information that, had it been understood, might have alerted them to KAL 007's danger. But owing to sloppy performance on the part of some units, the prevalence of routine procedures that did not cover the situation, delicate intelligence relations with the Japanese and misunderstanding of complex electronic data, no such warning ever was given — nor was the need for it realized.

Even after the shootdown, as electronic evidence of unusual activity by Soviet air defense forces began to overlap word of a missing civilian airliner, sketchy reports to Washington were at first played down. Then, when the significance of events began to dawn on intelligence and political officials, they leaped to erroneous judgment on the basis of raw and unevaluated intelligence data.

These early misjudgments, in Hersh's telling, combined with the ingrained anti-Sovietism of the Reagan administration, the desire of State Department officials to improve their standing with the White House and the possibility of a propaganda windfall, to produce the concerted American charge that the Russians deliberately and wantonly had shot down what they knew to be a civilian aircraft.

This story was all but immediately accepted by most of the United States press — which since has questioned it hardly at all — by Congress and by much of the world. The desired propaganda victory was scored, then repeated several times over.

But Hersh demonstrates that several hours before Secretary of State Shultz first went on the air with this angry accusation, Air Force intelligence officers pieced together the real story, dismissed at first but soon to be amplified and accepted throughout the intelligence community. Inept and overanxious Soviet air defense forces, confusing KAL 007 with a military RC-135 that had been gathering electronic intelligence along the periphery of Soviet airspace, had shot down what they believed — after unsuccessful identification attempts — was a military plane intruding on their airspace.

The Russians, angered by what they assumed was a deliberate American lie, responded with the charge that KAL 007 had been a spy plane deliberately sent to its fate by the Reagan administration. The Soviet Union had no more evidence for this — as Hersh's high-level interviews in Moscow subsequently demonstrated — than Washington had for its version of events.

Nevertheless, in this convincing account, the two sides blundered close to war, primarily because each wanted to believe the worst of the other and was willing to distort and misuse intelligence information — not to mention the loss of 269 lives — to make a political case. On the American side, at least, the highest intelligence officials went along with this political manipulation of their supposedly honest product. And to this day, no substantial retraction or correction has been offered by the Reagan administration to the world.

Most of this was after the terrible fact. Seymour Hersh's less persuasive account of how KAL 007 reached its fatal rendezvous over Sakhalin will be discussed in another column.

CHARLEY REESE

Paraplegic artist considers himself 'blessed'

When it starts to rain on your soul and you feel like going to bed with a hot cup of self-pity, think about Rick Crump.

Charley Reese

When the pervasive cynicism of modern intellectuals starts to erode, like acid rain, your faith in human decency, think about Rick Crump.

Now, who is Rick Crump?

Well, he's a 43-year-old paraplegic who lives in Orlando, Fla. Nothing unusual about that. Sad to say there are several thousand paraplegics in the United States.

He also paints pictures. Nothing really unusual about that. We have all read stories of paraplegics who take up painting.

Well, what the heck is unusual about Rick Crump?

He's a man who can slap the arms of his wheelchair with his withered hands and say, "I'm blessed," and really mean it. He doesn't mean blessed with material goods. He lives in a spotless but modest, un-air-conditioned house not far from the runway of a busy airport. Civilian paraplegics receive nowhere near the assistance paraplegic veterans receive. Rick's van is ancient, rusting, and all he can afford.

He means he's blessed with a happy family. You see Rick Crump's story is not about one exceptional human being; it's about four exceptional human beings.

Crump broke his neck as a 15-year-old diving into shallow water. As with all surviving paraplegics, he had first to fight the war of acceptance. He nearly died that first year. Terrible pressure sores. Serum hepatitis. One afternoon while his mother visited him, he laid his weary head on the pillow and fell asleep. He didn't wake up for two weeks.

"When I did, it turned around. 'This is the way I am going to be,' I said to myself, 'and I can either die or live.' I chose to live." Live he did, even one time as a hippie in a commune, he says with a laugh. He began to teach himself to paint. His goal was and is to produce paintings no one can tell were done by a paraplegic. And no one can. He made friends. And then it began to unravel. Deaths in his own family. Friends moving away. He ended up in a nursing home.

That's where he met Kathy, the remarkable woman who is now his wife. She was a divorced mother with two young boys. One of two jobs she held down in a hard effort to make ends meet was a nurse's aide in the nursing home. They struck a friendship. And, at last, Crump asked her to marry him.

"Everybody was against it," she says. "My family was against it. My best friend warned me not to do it." What made her disregard all that advice? "His gift of gab," she says with a loving nod toward Crump, "and the boys, who adored him."

So two remarkable people struck a bargain. A woman who wanted more than anything to have time to spend with her children and a man who wanted a family. Crump promised he would paint every day, not a light promise for a man whose crippled arms cannot stretch out, who has to laboriously paint with his eyes barely two inches from the canvas, who requires hours and hours to do what a non-handicapped artist can do in half a day.

And it worked. Friendship turned into love. The two boys, Robby, now 14, and Tommy, 11, are fine youngsters who love Crump, who is so proud of them you can hardly get him to talk about anything else. The magic in the Crump home is the cheerful, loving atmosphere. They don't have much money. Crump gets down occasionally. But they are together and they work at making it work. Both boys play football and both parents go to the games. Both parents are there when the boys get home from school. They take vacations. They care about each other. It's a miracle, Crump said of his marriage and family. "I feel blessed by it. This (he indicates his wheelchair) has taught me so much. I've learned patience and compassion. I've learned what life is really all about."

Of his art, Crump said he feels the best is yet to come.

"It takes a long time," he says with a smile, "to learn to leave out the things that are not important."

In 1792, the French Republic was proclaimed.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, declaring that all slaves held in states in rebellion would be free as of Jan. 1, 1863.

In 1927, Gene Tunney successfully defended his heavyweight boxing title against Jack Dempsey in the famous "long-count" fight in Chicago.

In 1950, Omar N. Bradley was promoted to the rank of five-star general, joining Dwight D. Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur, George Marshall and Henry H. "Hap" Arnold.

In 1964, the musical play "Fiddler on the Roof" opened on Broadway. It would run 3,242 performances.

Dallas area heavy with Salvadorans

DALLAS (AP) — About 18,000 Salvadorans are scattered throughout the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex, making the area the fourth-largest concentration of Salvadorans in the United States, officials say.

However, few of them seek political asylum because they regard their chance of obtaining legal residence as slim.

It is a community that largely has arrived since 1980, according to Proyecto Adelante, a refugee support agency in Dallas. The refugees' presence in the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan area trails only that of Los Angeles, Houston and Washington D.C.

Officials at Proyecto Adelante say the Salvadorans have fled to the United States to avoid civil war or persecution at home, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday. But few are being granted permanent residency.

As the number of Salvadorans losing asylum cases and being sent home has grown, the number of petitions from them seeking political asylum has dwindled in the Dallas area from 1,135 in 1983 to 35 in 1984 and 194 last year.

Of 2,200 political asylum claims filed in Dallas since 1982, Proyecto Adelante has won permanent residence in only five cases, the newspaper said.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization officials say that Salvadorans who once stepped forward to ask for asylum now wait until they're arrested to file their requests.

"The only people who are in danger are people who seek permission (from U.S. authorities) to stay here," said an 18-year-old Salvadoran who lives in Irving and only gave his name as Ricardo. "Nobody seeks permission anymore."

Most refugees who enter the country, sidestep the organized sanctuary movements here and come into the country on their own, usually paying smugglers at border checkpoints in Guatemala, Mexico and Texas.

Lucas Martell, a retired coffee plantation manager, says he fled El Salvador with his wife, children and grandchildren after national guardsmen burned down his home in 1982, then beat and interrogated him. Now 86, he lives in the South Dallas home of his son, Ernesto Martell.

"No tenemos libertad" — we have no liberty.

"Here we feel like we are hiding," he says. "We're constantly hiding."

Spokesmen for refugee support agencies say most Salvadorans head to Dallas and Houston seeking jobs and escaping feelings of vulnerability near the Texas border. In some cases, refugee support groups urge Salvadorans northward, telling them they have a greater chance of winning immigration appeals in big cities.

State 'coming from behind' to boost economy

AUSTIN (AP) — When Texas leaders decided they wanted the state to have a reputation as a national center for research and high technology, legislators treated the notion more as a measure of pride than need.

So when 16 "high-technology" bills promoted by Gov. Mark White went to lawmakers in 1985, the Legislature passed only one requiring new money.

But now the status of the technology bills has changed, supporters argue.

In the wake of the oil-price drop that has left the Legislature battling a projected $2.8 billion deficit, business and university leaders throughout Texas are arguing that the state must invest in diversifying its economy.

"Business as usual is out of business," said Pike Powers, formerly a state representative and now an attorney with Fulbright & Jaworski in Austin. "It is imperative that the state develop the technologies needed to make it competitive."

During the next two months, two key state groups — the Select Committee on Higher Education and the governor's Texas Science and Technology Council — will map strategy for how the Legislature should support research and technology during the regular session in January.

"Advanced technologies combined with the traditional entrepreneurial abilities of Texans will form the base for a new Texas economy," says a draft report of the governor's Science and Technology Council.

The council proposes three five-year plans for raising the state to national prominence in science and technology.

The argument is hardly new. Lawmakers heard it in 1982 with the Texas 2000 Report, and again during the 1985 session.

STATE IN BRIEF

Victims of robber familiar, gave him money on spot

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man who became so familiar to some of his victims that they gave him their money before he could demand it has admitted he committed 72 robberies in the Dallas-Fort Worth area since February.

The man, Gizenga Antonio Taylor, 22, was being held Sunday in lieu of $25,000 bond on an aggravated robbery charge, police said.

Some of the 65 robberies in Dallas included return trips to businesses he had robbed before, according to K.C. Edmonds, a Dallas police robbery investigator.

"Some of the guys (clerks) recognized him, and they'd just open the cash register, put their hands up and let him take the money and walk out the door," Edmonds said.

Taylor was arrested Friday in suburban Balch Springs moments after a robbery at a convenience store.

Investigator R.C. Johnson said Taylor told him he stole between $60 and $80 in each robbery and used the money to pay the rent on his home. He said he began the series of robberies after he lost his job at a fried chicken restaurant in Fort Worth.

In addtion to the 65 Dallas robberies, police said, Taylor admitted to five robberies in Fort Worth, one in Duncanville and the Friday robbery in Balch Springs.

Two inmates recaptured

TENNESSEE COLONY, Texas (AP) — Two prison inmates were recaptured after the truck they commandeered ran out of gas while a third inmate who escaped in a separate incident remained at large, officials said.

Two Beto I escapees were apprehended Sunday morning two hours after they abducted an unarmed Texas Depar ment of Corrections guard and b und him in a prison garbage truck, said TDC spokesman David Nunnelee.

In a separte incident, Jerry Glenn Morris, 32, a trusty who worked in the unit's dog kennel outside the prison grounds, was last seen Sunday morning, Nunnelee said.

"As far as I know, he just walked off," he said.

Morris was serving 12 years for attempted murder in Trinity County.

David Wayne Beason, 24, and Donald Dorries were recaptured Sunday on Interstate 45, where they were stranded, Nunnelee said.

Thousands clean beaches

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Officials estimate that several thousand people took part in a statewide cleanup of Texas beaches over the weekend.

Despite intermittent rainshowers and the steamy sea air that prevailed in between, the wave of trash pickers swarmed a three-mile stretch of Padre and Mustang islands on Saturday, leaving behind dozens of stuffed garbage bags.

Inside the bags were items like plastic containers, weathered twine and Styrofoam pieces. The pickers also found strewn bottles from Mexico, Germany and France, and assorted other odd lots of garbage.

They were participating in a statewide cleanup Saturday in hopes their efforts would alert others to the continuing problem of tons of litter along the Texas coast.

"This is going to raise people's opinion about what's going on out here. But if you just think about it, the trash will be back out here tomorrow," said Dan Wilcox, who along with several other members of a Rotary Club took part in the cleanup along Padre and Mustang islands.

"When you get out and really look at what's out here, you get disgusted. It's sickening," Wilcox said.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro ventured out to Mustang Island to help. He agreed that one cleanup will do little to dent the beach litter problem.

Clues sought in slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — Detectives were looking for clues to the slaying of a 36-year-old woman who died after her daughter tried to knock a gun from one of five masked intruders, police said.

Shu K. Leung died at her home Saturday, said Harris County sheriff's Dectective F. J. Pratt.

Mrs. Leung and her 17-year-old daughter, Mui Ben Leung, were watching television early Saturday when the electricity went out in the house, the detective said.

The two opened a back door to check the circuit box and were confronted by five men wearing bandannas over their mouths and noses, investigators said.

Farm union: Pesticides on grape crops may be poison

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Cesar Chavez, leader of the United Farm Workers of America, said the nation's grape growers may have poisoned many people by spraying pesticide on their crops.

Chavez appeared in Dallas over the weekend and again in San Antonio on Sunday as part of a four-day Texas tour to publicize the union's latest grape boycott.

Consumers should be wary of grapes contaminated by pesticide residue, Chavez said as about 20 supporters clapped and cheered "Viva Cesar" at a news conference in San Antonio.

"Nobody knows how many people have been poisoned," Chavez said.

Chavez claimed in a Dallas Peace Center conference, attended by 120 at Southern Methodist University, that pesticides sprayed on the fruit in California may cause birth defects, cancer and other ailments.

The union plans to begin random testing of farm products within the next four months, Chavez said.

"We must not allow the government and self-interest of grape growers to threaten lives of farmers and their families," Chavez said. "What we do know is human lives are worth more than the grapes those grocers are selling to us.

Previous grape boycotts organized by Chavez in the early 1970s prompted California legislators to pass the first law in that state giving farm workers the right to form a union and bargin collectively with growers.

Chavez now criticizes California Gov. George Deukmejian for ineffectively enforcing that law.

WHAT IS PREVENTIVE MEDICINE TODAY?
1 It is much more than the prevention of contagious diseases!
2 It is involved in treating the patient as well as the disease. It is much easier to treat the patient before the disease occurs.
3 It is improving the immune system to make it competent through dietary control, lifestyle programs, exercise programs, relief from mental stress, and early detection of disease & malignancy.
4 A competent immune system that can be maintained will avoid most of the degenerative diseases, allergic and auto immune diseases, and many forms of cancer.
5 Lifespan can be increased along with a better quality lifestyle.
6 Lenghty illnesses and pro-longed hospitalization can be avoided.

Mostly cloudy skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The weather outlook for Tuesday is mostly cloudy with mild temperatures and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The National Weather Service is forecasting a high in the middle 80s with southerly winds at five to 15 mph.

The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a low tonight in the upper 60s with partly cloudy skies and winds out of the southeast at five to 15 mph. The forecast also calls for possible isolated evening thunderstorms, but the chance of rain is less than 20 percent.

Sunday's high of 88 was 12 degrees below the record high set for the date in 1977. The 65-degree low of this morning was 19 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1972.

STATE

A large ridge of high pressure over the Northeast continued to push warm, moist air into Texas from the Gulf of Mexico.

The warm, moist air was expected to continue moving into the state through Tuesday, bringing with it partly to mostly cloudy skies and widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over most of the state.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s over West Texas and the 70s over most of the rest of the state with a few areas in extreme South Texas expected to have lows only in the 80s.

Highs Tuesday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

The warm, moist air triggered some areas of light rain in South Texas and along the upper coastal plains, but most of the shower activity remained offshore in the Gulf of Mexico at dawn.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s over West Texas and in the 70s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 62 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 81 at both Galveston and Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state include 68 at Amarillo, 72 at Wichita Falls, 74 at Fort Worth, 76 at Waco, 75 at Austin and Houston, 76 at Brownsville, 72 at San Angelo, 67 at Lubbock and 68 at Midland and El Paso.

NATION

Rain dampened broad sections of the nation today and heavy thunderstorms rumbled across the upper Midwest, while temperatures dipped to the 20s in Wyoming.

A flash flood watch was posted in central Wisconsin. Showers and thunderstorms extended from northern Michigan across central Wisconsin into southeast Minnesota.

MILWAUKEE — Corey Pavin's 10-foot birdie putt on the fourth playoff hole Sunday beat Dave Barr for the $72,000 first-place money in the Greater Milwaukee Open. Pavin needed only to two-putt on the par-4, 390-yard No. 4 hole for the victory after Barr missed the green with his approach shot. He bogeyed the hole. Pavin's final round 67 and Barr's 70 created a regulation tie...

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Bruce Crampton rolled in a 13-foot putt for par on the final hole to hold off Chi Chi Rodriquez and Lee Elder and capture the $200,000 PaineWebber World Seniors Invitational. Crampton finished with par 279 and his fourth tournament title this season. A playoff loomed when Crampton hit his second shot, a 4-iron, landed in a bunker on the right side of the green.

Rodriguez had four birdies to close with a 68 for 280. Elder had an up-and-down round that found him at 10-under-par at the 10th hole, only to shoot double bogey at 12 to go back to 280...

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Patty Sheehan's 15-foot birdie putt on the first extra hole of a four-way playoff to win the LPGA San Jose Classic in defeating Ayako Okamoto, Amy Alcott and Betsy King finishing tied at 212.

Sheehan sent an 8-iron 15 feet below the cup, Okamoto had a 10-footer downhill, Alcott was 30 feet away and King was 40 feet away."All I was trying to do was hit a good drive and play normal golf," said Sheehan, 29, "I figured if I could make birdie I'd still be in the playoff or have a win."

It turned out to be a win when each of the other challengers missed their birdie chances.

Auto Racing

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. — The Race for Life 200 Indy-car race was postponed Sunday after rain and fog halted the event after just three laps. Road America and CART officials announced the rest of the 50-lap event will be run on the 4-mile road course on Oct. 4...

Goody's 500

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Rusty Wallace grabbed the lead on a restart with 20 laps remaining and outran Geoff Bodine for a one-car-length victory in Sunday's Goody's 500 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race. The win, Wallace's second of the season and his career, was worth $40,175 from the total purse of $336,180.

Bodine, who started on the pole after setting a Goody's 500 qualifying record of 90.599 mph, earned $28,250. Wallace, Bodine and third-place finisher Harry Gant were the only drivers on the lead lap at the conclusion of the event at the Martinsville Speedway's .526-mile oval.

Twenty-six of the 30 cars that started were still running at the end of the 500-lap race, which was held under temperatures in the upper 80s and high humidity levels.

Baseball

ARLINGTON — Majority owner Eddie Chiles said he fears the sale of his Texas Rangers stock to the Gaylord Broadcasting Co. will be rejected at Wednesday's owners meeting at Newport Beach, Calif. That weekend admission was the first time Chiles has admitted publicly that he thinks the sale, which reportedly could bring him $50 million, would fall short of the required three-fourths majority vote of American League owners necessary for approval.

Castoff comes back to spook NFL Oilers

Oilers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Greg Hill's 26-yard interception return touchdown run with a Warren Moon pass was sweet revenge indeed. Two years ago the Houston Oilers decreed that he wasn't good enough for the NFL.

At least the Oilers cut him and two years ago, if you couldn't make the Oilers, you weren't deemed NFL material. The Oilers were that bad.

The runback helped the Kansas City Chiefs nail down a 27-13 victory over the Oilers.

"Once I had the ball in my hands I knew I was going to score because it was clear sailing," said Hill, part of a defensive charge that harried Moon all day. "This was a sweet, sweet victory. It was vengeance for me. There's not a team I'd rather beat."

After seizing a quick early lead, the Chiefs' defense, led by linemen Bill Maas and Art Still, spent the day charging in on Moon, who threw two interceptions and was only 18 of 40 for 229 yards.

"They didn't show us anything we hadn't seen before," said Houston tackle Bruce Matthews. "The only problem was their personnel. You can't very well grind the ball out when you need four touchdowns. We had some pretty good pass rushers to block: Still and Mass."

"You saw the game. You know what happened," Mass said. "When a team is forced to pass and the defense knows it's forced to pass, then you're going to see some sacks. If they had gone ahead early in the game, we might not have had a sack all day."

Moon, who had not been sacked in Houston's two previous games, was sacked seven times by the swarming Chiefs' defense.

Hill's touchdown return put the Chiefs on top 27-0. Then all the momentum shifted to the Oilers.

After scoring two quick touchdowns, Houston drove to a first-and-goal at the 1-yard line midway through the fourth quarter. But Scott Radecic threw Chuck Banks for a 3-yard loss on second down before Moon missed on two straight passes.

The Chiefs, 2-1, dominated from the outset, building a 13-0 halftime lead on Todd Blackledge's 29-yard touchdown pass to Carlos Carson and two Nick Lowery field goals.

After Herman Heard's 11-yard touchdown run following a Houston turnover, the Chiefs led 20-0 in the third. Hill stepped in front of Allen Pinkett to steal Moon's poorly thrown pass less than a minute later and romped 26 yards to put Kansas City on top 27-0.

Houston scored with 2:33 left in the third quarter when Jeff Donaldson picked up Blackledge's fumble at the 1-yard line and fell into the end zone.

More revenge: Archer bombs Cowboys

Bomb sets up winning FG

Cowboys

IRVING (AP) — Dallas' two-game winning streak became history as Atlanta quarterback Dave Archer caught the Cowboys on their heels with a 65-yard pass in the waning seconds Sunday at Texas Stadium. It didn't wipe out the Cowboys on the spot, but it set up the winning points.

Archer's 65-yard pass to Floyd Dixon set up Mick Luckhurst's game-winning 18-yard field goal with 20 seconds left in a wild 37-35 NFL victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

"He had a lot of time and just threw the ball as hard as he could throw it," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "It was a 'Hail Mary' throw.

"If it comes down in your hands, you win. If it doesn't, you don't."

Archer, who vowed revenge before the game because of the way the Cowboys treated him last year in a 24-10 loss, said he didn't have any choice.

"We didn't have any time outs," Archer said. "We caught Dallas coming on a blitz and Dixon just got behind his man."

Archer said, "Dallas said some things about the way they intimidated us last year. I didn't like it. I've remembered it for 12 months."

The Falcons went 79 yards in four plays as Dixon slipped behind rookie Johnny Holloway, who fell down.

"I just looked up and there it (the ball) was," Dixon said.

Atlanta Coach Dan Henning said the Falcons didn't have an ideal situation.

"It didn't look good, but Archer came up with the big play. Floyd made an excellent adjustment to the ball. We looked dead. We overcame a lot of adversity," Henning said.

"This would not have been the end of the world had we not beaten Dallas, and it's not the end of the world that we have beaten them."

Henning added, "Texas Stadium and Miami are the two toughest places to win on the road in the NFL."

Atlanta, beating Dallas for the first time in 10 years, is 3-0 for the season, while the Cowboys dropped to 2-1.

Dallas quarterback Danny White, who needed acupuncture treatments for a pulled thigh to play, rifled four touchdown passes, including a 22-yarder to rookie Mike Sherrard with 9:05 to go for a 35-27 lead.

Atlanta's Gerald Riggs scored on a 2-yard run with 3:28 on the clock to bring the Falcons to within a point.

On second and 18 from the Atlanta 12, Archer completed a 21-yard pass to Ken Whisenhunt.

Floyd Dixon hauled down a 65-yard pass from Archer to the Dallas 2.

The ball was moved to the 1-yard line on a holding call, then Luckhurst kicked his third field goal of the day.

The Cowboys weren't through.

Tony Hill stepped out of bounds on the Atlanta 8-yard line on the final play of the game, a 60-yard pass from White.

The Falcons scored twice in 60 seconds to secure a 27-21 lead in the third quarter.

After Whisenhunt hauled down an 18-yard scoring pass from Archer, Bobby Butler stepped in front of a wayward White pass and returned it 33 yards for a touchdown.

White struck back on a 7-yard touchdown pass to Hill to give Dallas a 28-27 lead.

Timmy Newsome scored two touchdowns in 22 seconds to give Dallas a 21-13 halftime lead.

He scored on a 1-yard run after a 31-yard White to Sherrard pass with 1:47 left in the half.

Then defensive end Jesse Baker sacked Archer and Jim Jeffcoat recovered the fumble at the Atlanta two.

On the next play, White rolled out and passed to Newsome for the score.

White directed Dallas on an 80-yard drive in the first period capped by a 1-yard touchdown pass to rookie tight end Thornton Chandler.

Luckhurst had field goals of 47 and 33 yards for the Falcons but their big play of the first half was produced by defensive end Mike Pitts.

Morehead creates NCAA record

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In overcoming a 33-point deficit to win a football game, the Eagles of Morehead State didn't just break an NCAA record. They created one.

"I'm sure we'll make a special entry in the record book to account for what happened in that game," an NCAA official told the Associated Press.

Morehead State went into halftime at Wichita State on Saturday trailing 35-3. One of the things Coach Bill Baldridge remembers telling his troops during a fiery halftime speech was, "You're letting yourselves be intimidated when you have no reason to be intimidated."

Morehead was afraid of nothing in the second half, mauling their hosts 33-0. The Eagles capped their 36-35 victory with a 2-point conversion when Baldridge wanted to go for a tie.

TED BATTLES

Kick Trojans while they're down

It's not so much a question of how the University of Southern California won as to how Baylor managed to lose.

Talk about mismatches, this game should never have been scheduled. This one was as bad as LSU against Miami, Ohio, or Rutgers against Kentucky.

No way Kentucky or LSU belonged on the same field with the Scarlet Knights of the Raritan or the institution that is known the world over as the Cradle of Coaches.

I know, on paper it sounded good, Baylor against USC, where they breed Heisman Trophy winners like it was a rabbit factory.

Look at the statistics, time of possession, yards amassed...any of it...and it's plainly evident that USC had no business on the same field with Baylor...yet the final score was 17-14 even after the recount.

The Bears knew all about the Trojans, except that you don't let them stay within hailing distance. If you get the chance, you brutalize 'em, like Michigan did, 49-0, in the 1948 Rose Bowl and Notre Dame did in 1977, 49-14.

Don't give 'em a chance to pull it out with a freak play or, chances are, they will. It's as much of an SC tradition as the Heisman Trophy.

They were doing winning games in the last minute even before guard Johnny Baker kicked a field goal in the closing seconds to beat Rockne's last team back in 1931.

In 1964, a thrice-beaten Trojan team snatched a national championship from Ara Parseghian's first Notre Dame team in the waning seconds of the season, 20-17, in the Coliseum.

That 99-yard run with a popped up fumble, Baylor should have known that's when the Trojans are most dangerous, when the opposition is camped on the lip of USC's goal line. That's when they've got you right where they want you.

It must have been in 1974 or 1975, before Hayden Fry arrived at Iowa. The Hawkeyes were struggling through some dreadful seasons, yet were on the verge of upsetting USC at Kinnick Stadium.

Twice the Hawkeyes drove inside the Trojan 10 and twice Charlie Phillips caught a pop-up fumble and raced for a TD, giving USC victory, and Phillips the AP Lineman of the Week award.

Maybe one of the most dramatic rescue jobs of all came in the 1939 Rose Bowl, against a Duke team that was undefeated, untied and unscored upon, the last of a now extinct breed.

The Blue Devils led 3-0 and were less than two minutes away from a dream come true when Doyle Nave, an obscure fourth string tailback, entered the game and became an instant SC legend along with O.J., Marcus, Morley Drury, Orv Mohler, Grenny Lansdell and Irving Warburton. The last four should be legends on their names alone.

Nave uncorked a long bomb to Antelope Al Krueger to spoil Duke's perfect record, 7-3.

Grant knows better now. Get USC down and kick 'em while you can....hard.

Game of Week: Midland vs. Lee

Lee, MHS, Permian, Angelo unbeaten going into 4-5A

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

After three weeks of play, four District 4-5A teams own perfect 3-0 records and the league, as a whole, has a 16-5 record for a winning percentage of .762.

Midland High and Midland Lee are both among the unbeatens alone with 4-5A champion and state 5A runner-up Odessa Permian and San Angelo.

All four posted convincing victories Friday night to show why they are the four favorites in the race for the two 4-5A playoff berths.

One of the four unbeatens must fall and, unfortunately for Tall City football fans, it must be either the Bulldogs or Rebels as the two meet Friday at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

IN THE pre-district finale for Midland High, the Bulldogs came away with an "as expected," 36-0 victory over Lubbock Coronado, a team Midland Lee beat in Week 1, 48-7.

The Bulldogs picked up rushing touchdowns from halfbacks Anthony Adkison and Tommy Yorkman and quarterback Jaime Madrid. Also, Madrid threw touchdown passes to halfback Tyrone Oliver and wide receiver Michael Ball.

The Bulldog defense came up with its first points of the season, recording a safety in the second quarter.

The shutout is the second for Bulldogs this year and the only thing keeping the MHS defense from a perfect record is the lone TD Andrews scored the previous week in the fourth quarter.

Midland High has outscored opponents 71-6 and have allowed only a little more than 100 yards per game total offense.

FOR THE Lee Rebels, it was a long round trip to the Border City Friday but one made shorter by a 20-0 victory.

The Rebels received two second quarter touchdowns from quarterback Rodney Johnson and halfback Joe Woodard and a fourth quarter score from halfback Durian Jenkins.

Lee ranks third in district with 89 points, allowing only 22, also third in the league.

What statistics don't measure is the intensity of a Midland Lee-Midland High matchup, especially one at the start of the district season with both teams still in the playoff race.

In the past, the two teams have concluded the season's play and only once in five years has the outcome affected the playoffs: 1982 when MHS posted a 14-6 upset victory to lock MHS, Lee, San Angelo and Odessa High into a four-way tie for second. San Angelo won the coin flip for second place and went into the playoffs.

IN OTHER 4-5A games Friday, Odessa Permian came from behind to beat Amarillo High 42-20.

The Sandies led 13-7 in the third quarter before running back Shawn Crow took over, gaining 255 yards on 18 carries and scoring three touchdowns.

San Angelo remained unbeaten with a 56-7 thrashing of For Worth Dunbar led by Bronza Moore's three-TD effort.

Abilene Cooper notched its first victory of the season, a 17-13 decision over Lubbock Montery and Odessa High blanked Hobbs, N.M., 14-0.

Abilene High, tied with Cooper for last at 1-2, was the only 4-5A team to lose Friday, falling to Fort Worth Eastern Hills, 28-27.

Area grid races heat up

From Staff Reports

Andrews leaped to the forefront of the District 2-4A race Friday night with a victory over Lamesa, joining Big Spring, Monahans and Fort Stockton in the win column after one week of district play.

The Mustangs will play Fort Stockton this week with hopes of cementing an early lead in the always-tough district scramble. Lamesa will host Lake View looking for its first district win.

But this week, the rest of 2-4A awaits the arrival of another contender — defending state champion Sweetwater, idle last week.

The Sweetwater Mustangs will travel to Big Spring, the newcomer in the district. The outcome could go a long way toward determing if the new kid on the block will become bully or also-ran.

The Steers, after several years of cellar-dwelling in District 4-5A with Midland Lee and Odessa Permian, are hoping their demotion to Class 4A can signal a trip to the playoffs.

Against Lake View last week, the Steers showed they are certainly ready to compete in the new district. But a 56-6 loss to the No. 1-ranked 4A team in the state, Lubbock Estacado, showed their isn't too much difference between the very best in 4A and the big boys in 5A.

District 2-4A

Last year, Sweetwater was the very best in 4A, waltzing through an undefeated season in 2-4A and all the way through the state playoffs. This year, there seems to be little change.

The Mustangs trounced 4-5A's Abilene High in the second week of play before taking an open date last week. They should be chomping at the bit when they arrive in Big Spring Friday night.

Game of Week: TCU-SMU

Houston impressive; Baylor distraught

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

SWC Football

The Southwest Conference's list of unbeaten teams has dwindled to just Arkansas and Texas Christian.

The SWC had some proud moments on Saturday when Houston upset Oklahoma State 28-12, Texas held on to down Missouri 27-25, Texas Tech bounced New Mexico 14-7, and Texas A&M trounced North Texas State 48-28.

However, ninth-ranked Baylor's 17-14 loss to unranked Southern California damaged the SWC's prestige as did Arizona State's 30-0 crushing of Southern Methodist.

Arkansas rolled by Tulsa 34-17 and TCU outlasted persistent Kansas State 35-22.

The SWC raised its outside record to 12-6.

In games this week, TCU and SMU play at 2 p.m. in the Cotton Bowl in an SWC opener for both teams. Baylor is at Texas Tech in a noon (Raycom TV) league matchup, Texas A&M hosts Southern Mississippi at 6 p.m., New Mexico State is at Arkansas (Little Rock) 7 p.m., Southwest Texas State is at Rice at 7 p.m. and Tulsa is at Houston 7 p.m.

Baylor's loss to USC in Waco on a 32-yard Don Shafer field goal as time ran out was an agonizing nationally televised loss for the Bears who totally dominated the Trojans until the last seven minutes.

"There's no way I win that one," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "I can't ask a team to play any better. I never had a team play better and lose."

Teaff's play-calling came in for some criticism from the 35,000 rain-soaked fans, who booed his decision to play conservatively after USC tied the game 14-all.

USC's Tim McDonald ran 99 yards with a Charles Perry fumble late in the first half to tie the score and Teaff said it killed the Bears.

"We were looking at being ahead 14-0 then all of a sudden it was 7-7," Teaff said. "It was the most freak touchdown I ever saw."

SMU suffered its first shutout in five years under Coach Bobby Collins. It was the school's worst loss since a 47-14 defeat by Texas A&M in 1979.

"We were our own worst enemy. If you get beat one point or 30 points you get beat," Collins said. The Mustangs fumbled five times.

TCU's Tony Jeffery had only 54 yards rushing on 17 carries in the victory over Kansas State. Last week Jeffery rushed for 343 yards on just 16 carries, an SWC record.

"I was just trying to contribute to the team and bring us home another win," Jeffery said. "Another 300 would have been nice but I really didn't think I'd get 300 against Tulane so this isn't a letdown."

Arkansas' victory over Tulsa came before 51,080, the first non-sellout crowd in Razorback Stadium at Fayetteville since 1976.

Arkansas noseman Tony Cherico was credited with five unassisted tackles and five assists, including several big plays.

One of those was late in the third quarter when he rushed Tulsa quarterback Steve Gage into a bad pass on third and goal from the Arkansas 8.

A backup quarterback led Houston's surprise.

Mark Davis came off the bench to throw two touchdown passes.

"I'm going to give the ball to my momma and let her put it in the trophy case," Davis said.

Davis got his chance when starter Gerald Landry suffered a hip pointer.

Davis, younger brother of former UH quarterback Danny Davis, threw touchdown passes of 23 yards to Dwayne LeBlanc and 49 yards to Paul Smith.

In Columbia, Mo., Texas Coach Fred Akers said, "Missouri came back on huge errors in the kicking game. They kicked us in the kicking game."

The Horn defense, grilled last week by the passing of Stanford quarterback John Paye, also had trouble containing Tiger quarterback Ronnie Cameron, who gained 133 yards on 18 carries.

Bias death brings crack down on drugs

By BOB DART
New York Times News Service

TALLAHASSEE, Fla — Football coach Bobby Bowden has a new drug policy for his Florida State University Seminoles this season. "If we test a kid and it comes out cocaine, he's through playing."

The cocaine-induced death of Len Bias, the University of Maryland basketball All-American, has reverberated through the closed world of college athletics like the harsh echo of a faulty stadium PA system. Almost all major college football teams are testing their players for drug abuse this fall. The National Collegiate Athletic Association will require drug tests at bowl games as well as national championship tournaments in sports ranging from basketball and baseball to field hockey. The tests will be unannounced and may be administered before, after, or even during a game.

The word is out among players that coaches are cracking down.

And at FSU, when the players reported back this fall, said Bowden, the drug tests were all negative.

"That hasn't happened in the past," he said.

COACH JOE Paterno says Penn State tests its football players for drugs "frequently, randomly, arbitrarily." When recruiting players, Paterno explained, he promises parents that he will take care of their kids at college. Keeping them off drugs is part of the bargain.

However, coaches and players alike believe that the perspective of the problem has been lost in the hysteria about drug abuse among athletes. College players who use drugs are discovered because they — virtually alone among the student population — are the ones who are tested, the athletes say. Then, because they are already in the sports spotlight, their drug problems are publicized.

"If the main goal is to treat student-athletes like any other student, well, test them for drugs, too," said Spencer Tillman, a running back for the Oklahoma University Sooners. "I personally don't have a problem with the testing. I never did drugs. But it seems like it's an overzealous effort. Testing all students, that would make it equal."

FOOTBALL players are tested for drug use at the University of Texas, said coach Fred Akers, but he said this generation of Longhorns may be less involved in the drug culture than some of their predecessors.

"I think they used to have more (drugs) in the 60s," he said. "Anyway, there's less of it in athletics than any other organization you can name. We're monitored. They don't monitor the rest of the students. They don't monitor doctors or sportswriters or lawyers. Athletes are the only people who get monitored."

But coaches say it would be naive to believe there are no drug users among college athletes. Football players are just part of the greater society, they explained, and drugs are part of that society, too.

"That stuff is rampant," said Bowden, talking about cocaine in general. "That stuff is out there now."

The Seminoles are subject to random spot checks for drugs.

"In the past, if a boy had drugs, we would suspend him for a game," said Bowden. "We'd give it time to get out of their system, then test 'em again."

Three positive drug tests, he said, and the player was off the team. Now, with cocaine, one positive finding for cocaine merits dismissal from the team. The player keeps his grant-in-aid for the rest of that academic year, however.

At Texas, Akers said, there are attempts "to try to rehabilitate them."

"If there's a constant problem," he said, "pretty soon they'll be gone."

COACHES say it is hard to predict who, among their players, would be drug abusers. If they could tell, the coaches said, they wouldn't recruit these players.

When recruiting high school prospects, Akers pointed out, "we're only allowed to have visits with them three times in their homes, three times at the school. That's it. You don't get to know them that well."

At Georgia Tech, said Coach Bill Curry, the drug testing is voluntary, but all the players comply. The second time a player tests positive, Curry said, the player has to call his parents, with a coach present, and tell them about the drug test results. The athletic department pays for drug counseling, he said.

At the University of Georgia, the player has to call his parents upon verification of the first postive test for illicit drugs. This is followed by professional counseling. The third drug offense results in an automatic one-year suspension for a Bulldog football player.

The NCAA will test football players at bowl games and all athletes at championship tournaments. The tests are designed to detect any one of 200 banned substances. If the athlete tests positive, he or she will be banned from competition for at least 90 days.

Nathan 'Who' helps Tampa 'What' to first victory

Associated Press

Nathan Wonsley was considered too small for the NFL when the league was conducting its college draft. On Sunday, he proved to be the big man in Tampa Bay's attack as the Bucs won their first game of the season, defeating the Detroit Lions 24-20.

"As the NFL draft went on, each and every lonely night I sat in my room thinking I wouldn't get drafted," said Wonsley, a 5-foot-10, 190-pounder out of the University of Mississippi. "It was very discouraging. I knew I couldn't stop there, because I didn't get to college by stopping and being a quitter."

Wonsley has two brothers in the NFL: George with the Indianapolis Colts and Otis with the Washington Redskins. All three are running backs.

"I went back to the drawing board," Wonsley said. "I went to the weight room and worked out every day. I ran every day.

"Every time a scout came around, I went out there and gave him 100 percent. Finally, the Bucs called and said they'd give me a shot."

When James Wilder, the Bucs' regular running back, was unable to play because of a bruised chest, Wonsley was ready. He rushed 18 times for 138 yards, including touchdown runs of 22 and 55 yards, against the Lions.

The victory was the Bucs' first on the road since beating Minnesota on Nov. 6, 1983, snapping a 19-game streak.

"I was very proud of Nathan's running today," Tampa Bay Coach Leeman Bennett said. "James will still be the starter, but Wonsley will play more and there could be a chance that we would have them in the ballgame together."

The Bucs, 1-2, scored 14 points in the second quarter and 10 in the third. The Lions, who scored 14 in the fourth quarter, also are 1-2.

Wonsley's 22-yard run 14 seconds into the second quarter gave the Bucs a 7-0 lead and his 55-yard run at 10:24 of the third quarter put the Bucs up 24-6.

"They were afraid that I couldn't produce," Wonsley said. "But now they can see that I can play under pressure."

Tampa Bay quarterback Steve Young, getting his first start of the season after Steve DeBerg was benched, scored on a 9-yard run at 4:06 of the second quarter.

NFL Roundup

Giants 14, Raiders 9

Quarterback Phil Simms threw a pair of touchdown passes to wide receiver Lionel Manuel and the New York defense did the rest as the Giants downed the winless Los Angeles Raiders.

The victory was the second in a row for the Giants after a season-opening loss to Dallas. New York has given up a total of only 16 points in its two wins.

The Raiders, 0-3 and off to their worst start in 22 years, got field goals of 22 and 35 yards from Chris Bahr on their first two possessions and a 33-yarder by Bahr with 5:44 left in the game. Los Angeles was held without a touchdown for the second consecutive game.

Broncos 33, Eagles 7

Running backs Sammy Winder and Gerald Willhite combined for 195 yards rushing to lead Denver, 3-0, over the winless Eagles in Philadelphia.

Winder gained 104 yards on 20 carries, scored two touchdowns and set up a field goal, while Willhite rushed for 91 yards.

The Broncos so dominated Coach Buddy Ryan's Eagles that he sent in backup quarterback Gary Kubiak with 9:03 left in the third period for some game experience.

Denver led from the opening kickoff when special teamer Mike Harden knocked the ball loose from returner Junior Tautalatasi and it rolled out of the end zone for a safety.

Wesley Walker of the New York Jets outleaps Miami's Don McNeal to snare Ken O'Brien's sudden-death touchdown pass in 51-45 foot race in New Jersey's Meadowlands.

Rams 24, Colts 7

A fumble recovery and pass interception set up first-half touchdowns by Ron Brown and Eric Dickerson, respectively, as the Los Angeles Rams, 3-0, downed the winless Colts in Indianapolis.

Quarterback Steve Bartkowski passed for 160 yards, including a 10-yard scoring pass to Brown, while Dickerson, who started the day ranked second in the league in rushing yardage, gained 121 on 25 carries.

Jets 51, Dolphins 45, OT

At East Rutherford, N.J., Wesley Walker caught a 21-yard touchdown pass on the last play of regulation to tie the game, then grabbed his fourth scoring pass of the game from Ken O'Brien, a 43-yarder, 2:35 into overtime to give the New York Jets, 2-1, a victory over Miami, 1-2.

Walker's outstanding performance helped offset six touchdown passes by Dan Marino, who moved atop the all-time NFL passing ratings.

The two teams combined for a record 884 net passing yards, surpassing the old mark of 883 yards set by San Diego and Cincinnati in 1982.

Vikings 31, Steelers 7

Minnesota quarterback Tommy Kramer found rookie wideout Hassan Jones six times for 140 yards and two touchdowns to lift the Vikings over Pittsburgh.

Kramer completed 19 of 27 passes for 257 yards and three touchdowns as the Vikings improved their record to 2-1.

The Steelers, who have scored only 17 points this season, fell to 0-3 — their worst start since 1970.

Bills 17, Cardinals 10

Buffalo won its first game of the season and only the Bills' fifth in their last 37 outings as they defeated St. Louis behind the passing of Jim Kelly and the running of Greg Bell.

Bell rushed for 79 yards and one touchdown, a 6-yard run, while Buffalo's other scores came on a 2-yard run by Ricky Moore and a 35-yard field goal by Scott Norwood.

St. Louis, 0-3, managed only a 27-yard field goal by rookie John Lee and a 19-yard scoring pass from quarterback Neil Lomax to rookie Vai Sikahema with 58 seconds left in the game.

Seahawks 38, Patriots 31

Quarterback Dave Krieg's 67-yard touchdown bomb to Ray Butler with 1:14 left in the game capped Seattle's 17-point explosion in the final three minutes against New England.

Butler, who had teamed up with Krieg for a 54-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter, beat cornerback Ronnie Lippett down the right sideline for the decisive points.

That play ruined an outstanding passing day for the Patriots. Quarterback Tony Eason threw for 422 yards, including three long touchdown passes to Stanley Morgan.

Seattle is now 3-0, while New England, which hadn't given up a touchdown before Sunday, fell to 2-1.

49ers 26, Saints 17

Jeff Kemp completed 29 of 44 passes for 332 yards and a touchdown, leading San Francisco over New Orleans.

Ray Wersching added four field goals as the 49ers, 2-1, survived a halfback-option TD pass and a 101-yard kickoff return by the Saints' Mel Gray.

New Orleans lost starting quarterback Bobby Hebert with a broken right foot when he was sacked on his second play of the game.

Redskins 30, Chargers 27

Wide receiver Gary Clark caught a 14-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jay Schroeder with 1:16 left, lifting Washington over San Diego. Clark made the winning catch one play after he beat San Diego defensive back Wayyne Davis for a 55-yard gain as the Redskins, 3-0, covered 69 yards in 44 seconds.

The loss ended a seven-game home winning streak for the Chargers, 1-2.

Rolf Benirschke accounted for all of San Diego's second-half scoring with two field goals.

BAYLOR LOSS

This one really hurt

WACO (AP) — Donnell Teaff, the wife of Baylor Coach Grant Teaff, sat quietly while her husband described the ups and downs of Saturday's 17-14 loss to Southern California.

"This one really hurt," she said. It's a tough loss to take."

The ninth-ranked Bears lost the nationally televised intersectional game on a 32-yard field goal on the last play.

Don Shafer made the kick in a driving rainstorm.

"I called all the elements down on him and he still made it," said Teaff of Shafer's kick. "He hooked it a little but he did an absolutely great job."

Teaff called two time outs to allow an approaching thunderstorm to hit Baylor Stadium as USC positioned itself for the field goal attempt which Shafer hit at the final gun.

"Games like this don't happen very often," said USC Coach Ted Tollner. "We were inept for three quarters, then found a way to win."

Baylor outgained USC 408 yards to 197 but lost.

"You can't ask a team to play any better," Teaff said. "I've never had a team play better defense and lose."

USC only had two first downs, both by penalties, going into the fourth quarter.

"I don't guess there was any way we were going to win that one," Teaff said, referring to a 99-yard fumble return by Tim McDonald just before the end of the first half.

McDonald grabbed Charles Perry's fumble out of the air and scored despite the hot pursuit of Matt Clark.

"We were tied 7-7 at the half and should have been up 14-0," Teaff said. "It was an excruciating loss but I've had a loss worse. What hurts is for a team to play as well as we did and get beat."

It was the first nationally televised non-conference game in Waco since Baylor defeated Syracuse in 1966.

"Well, the TV people got their money's worth," Teaff said.

Baylor made about $125,000 off the national television. A crowd of 35,000 was announced in attendance.

Soccer fans set blaze

BRADFORD, England (AP) - Twenty fans were being held in custody Sunday after rioting and a fire at Saturday's English League Second Division soccer match between Bradford City and Leeds United.

Police said rampaging Leeds fans set a grass bank and a mobile food van ablaze.

As smoke billowed across the field and fans spilled on to the playing area, the referee suspended the game between the two northern English rivals.

Police said a total of 64 fans were arrested for violence before, during and after the game. The incidents led to calls for the Leeds fans, allowed for the first time this season to follow their team away from home, to be banned from all away grounds.

Because Saturday's match was a local match, more than 13,500 fans were at the Odsal Stadium, which is Bradford City's home ground until its Valley Parade Stadium is repaired after fire damage last year.

Police said they had to deal with several incidents of crowd disorder during the match. The game had to be halted for 30 seconds during the first half while police broke up fighting between rival fans. But the most serious incidents happened with only 10 minutes remaining, with Leeds heading for a 2-0 defeat.

Superintendent Leslie Hainsworth, who was in charge of crowd control, said the trouble started on the Leeds' section of the terraces, when fans set fire to a grass bank.

A bigger "classmate," above, looks on as Cindy Dixon's Schnauzer proves one thing — it's all in the right rear paw. The dogs help their masters, left, learn how to walk a dog with a leash. A dog day afternoon at obedience class necessitates a break for a poodle who hadn't wanted to sit down earlier.

Dogmatic approach

The name of the program is a bit misleading.

Though aptly titled "dog obedience class," the teacher claims it is more a process of teaching people instead of dogs

The eight-week-long dog obedience classes, which have run every winter for the past 11 years, teach the owner to train his dog five basic commands — heel, sit, down, stay and come, Dalton Byerly, Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and program teacher said.

"Dogs are just like people — they're capable of feeling pain, pleasure, happiness and so on," Byerly said.

He said a communication gap exists between people and dogs that slows down the processes of learning and teaching commands.

"And while the people do become more educated about their dogs, surprisingly few dogs become totally trained.

"The SPCA has the idea that you can't whip the dog into shape.

Instead, we use a softer approach of teaching the owners how to think like their dog," Dalton Byerly, SPCA director said.

The owner is taught to show the dog his displeasure in the form of a firm "no", Byerly said.

"Spanking or hitting doesn't do any good.

If you yell at your dog to "come" after he's run away and he comes to you and you beat him, you'll teach him to never come back to you again," Byerly said.

It's all in the voice and the actions, Byerly said.

A problem comes into being when the owner is torn between love and the need for a sense of correction, Byerly said.

It's the same as raising a child.

One doesn't like to chastise a child in a loud voice and then turn around and say, "That's OK honey," Byerly said.

"When the dog performs well, your voice and disposition should change as opposed to when he's done something you dislike," Byerly said.

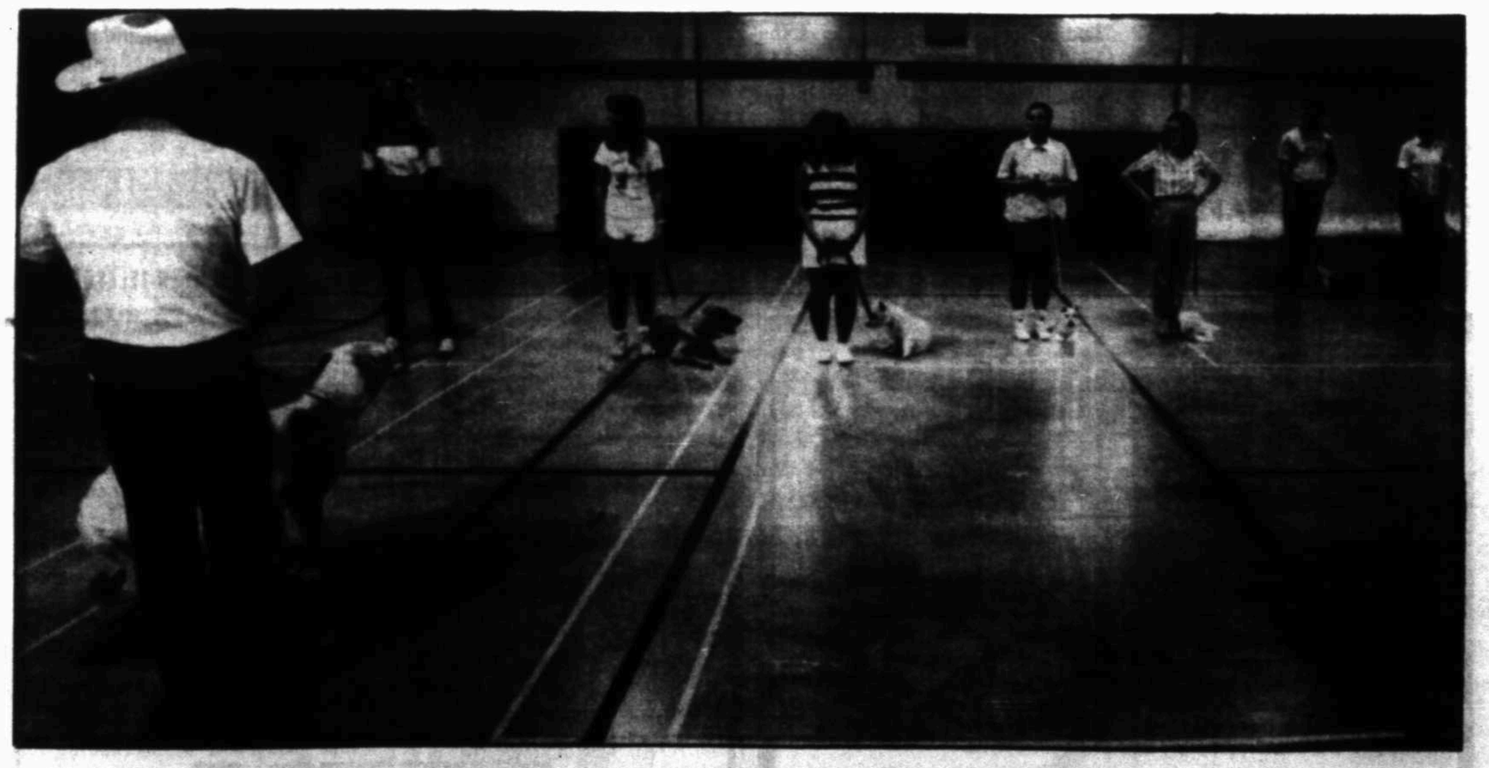
The first four weeks of the program, owners are taught how to talk to their dogs, Byerly said.

The last half of the program centers around repetition and practice of commands, he said.

Byerly said during his tenure with the City of Midland's animal control, he only picked up one dog who'd been to obedience school.

"That was Winston, an Olde English Sheep dog. Getting out and running away was all a big joke to him.

"Hell couldn't have kept him down," Byerly said.



Dalton Byerly, director of Midland's SPCA and professor of the group, doggedly attempts to help owners "think like their pets."

Kids 'old hands' at air travel before age 12

By BECKY KNAPP

AUSTIN (AP) — It's 3:15 p.m. Saturday, and as a little truck buzzes across the runway at Robert Mueller Municipal Airport, a pre-teen lad, skateboard slung over his shoulder, waits for his flight with the nonchalance of a seasoned flier.

A dark-haired little girl, clutching her mother's hand, wriggles from one foot to the other as the harried ticket taker repeats his announcement that all children flying alone should come forward.

At Gate 2, Lindsay Elton, 10, and her brother, Johnathan, 7, are first in line at the boarding gate, waiting to be escorted onto a Southwest Airlines flight to El Paso.

A few feet away, Estella Molina, 9, is also waiting to board the El Paso flight. For the past three weeks, she has been in Austin visiting her brother and sister-in-law.

Pinned to the children's shirts are tags that identify them as UM's, the term that airline companies use when referring to unaccompanied and going.

Just a few years ago, a child traveling alone was an oddity that adult passengers usually treated like a darling orphan. Flight attendants didn't mind, and, in fact, got a kick out of the passenger who needed to have his beef patty cut up for him.

Airline deregulation has changed all that. Air fares are so low that, for Texas parents, it might be cheaper to send a kid to his grandmother in Buffalo than to send him off to summer camp.

Generally, the kids enjoy traveling alone.

"It's a lot funner to fly alone because you get to be by yourself," said Joey Linquist, 8, who flew from Midland to visit his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Finkey of Austin. Joey said "being by yourself" makes a kid feel more grown up.

Even though an unaccompanied minor is charged the adult fare, overall ticket costs are so affordable that the airlines are seeing more children than ever traveling alone, said Lisa Self, travel agent and owner of Travel Travel.

"Fares are now so low that everybody's flying more, not just the children," Ms. Self said, "but there are a lot more children flying this year than in previous years. It used to be too expensive to send the kids to the grandparents or Dad, but with the lower fares, people can do it."

Lower air fares, combined with the high rate of divorce among American families, contribute to the large number of children boarding planes without adults, Ms. Self said.

"The majority of unaccompanied minors we see traveling are from divorced families, and the parent is sending the child back to the father, or the mother, for the summer," Ms. Self said. "We see a few that are going to visit grandparents or other relatives, but the majority are from divorced families, I think."

As a result, many kids have become old hands at air travel before they've reached their 12th birthdays.

Matt Vaughan, 10, is such a kid.

The son of Karen Walker of Austin, Matt flies four or five times a year, said his stepfather, Mitchell Walker. On a recent weekday afternoon, Walker was at the airport to meet Matt, who was returning from a visit with his father in Houston.

Because most of the major airlines have incorporated strict security precautions to help prevent kidnappings and abductions of children, he had to present identification to retrieve Matt from the airline.

Matt showed identification to Martha Burdell, the Southwest Airlines attendant who escorted Matt off the airplane. Ms. Burdell checked Walker's ID, name, address and phone number, and the stepfather had to sign for the boy before Ms. Burdell could turn Matt over to him.

"It kind of slows you down a little, checking him in, because you have to fill out all those little pieces of paper," Walker said. "But I like it better."

The security may make parents feel better as their child trots off toward the plane, but for some flight attendants, it has added more pressure to a job that is already demanding.

"I don't mind having kids on the flight, but I really don't like being responsible for them," said one attendant. "Taking someone else's child on and off the plane is a lot of responsibility."

Laurie Paschal, a Southwest Airlines attendant based in Dallas, said she doesn't see unaccompanied minors as added work.

"Most kids flying alone really behave and really enjoy it," she said. "I don't think it's hard on the flight attendants at all, and it's easier on the family financially because the kid can go even though they might not be able to afford for the whole family to go."

American Airlines attendant Sharon Fifer, based in Washington, D.C. said that in addition to identification information the child wears on a tag, she finds it helpful to know any other information that will make the child's flight enjoyable.

"If a child gets ear pain or is scared or has allergies, that's helpful to know," Ms. Fifer said.

American, like many airlines, will not take unaccompanied children younger than 5 years old, and children 5 through 7 are allowed to travel unaccompanied on direct non-stop flights only if no changes are required.

Other people's trash, junk is one man's treasure, profit

HOUSTON (AP) — Alfred Van Fossen's office is filled with bits and pieces of a buried past.

From the musket balls that line glass cases to the cannon balls on the floor, each piece represents a "find" for Van Fossen — a treasure.

"Anything that has historical value is a treasure," he said. "Other people's trash and junk is my treasure."

Van Fossen hunts treasure for fun and profit. He also considers himself a historian and is meticulous about documenting any information he can round up on each piece.

Treasure-hunting is not only Van Fossen's livelihood, but his hobby and stress-reliever. His hunting days began as a youth in Alabama, and his first discovery was an old cigar box full of coins found tucked inside a cave.

His fascination with history and legends eventually grew into a full-time passion, and he now operates a treasure-hunting supply business in a coverted gas station perched on a street corner near downtown Houston.

"Everybody's a treasure hunter, but you've got to find something before you're a treasure finder," he said. "The secret is having good common sense so you can think."

The burly 51-year-old Van Fossen has ventured to Greece, Mexico, Canada and Central America in search of treasure, but he always returns to his home and business in Houston where he offers advice on hunting.

Signs advertising treasure-hunting gear are posted outside the office. Inside, the rooms are filled with coins, masks, books, statues, old bullets and squawking parrots.

Although he's searched foreign lands and waters, Van Fossen says there is plenty of treasure hidden in Texas.

"There's more treasure buried in this state than any other, bar none," he said. "Texas has more mysteries than anybody."

Treasures sometimes are found buried in dirt, or in wrecked ships beneath silt and sand.

Finding it can be as simple as using a metal detector, or may require a lot of manpower and equipment. But Van Fossen said a potential treasure finder must first research the project or risk wasting time and money looking in the wrong place.

Scientific lab for study of matter needs support

By FRANK TROMBLEY

ODESSA — Three Texas congressmen representing Midland-Odessa and the West Texas area have met with Department of Energy officials seeking support for the location of the Superconducting Super Collider project near Garden City.

Representatives Larry Combest, Tom Loeffler and Charles Stenholm met last week with William Martin, deputy secretary of energy, and presented him with a study that indicates the SSC project could be constructed at a substantially reduced cost of $2.3 billion. DOE project cost estimates have been in the range of $4 billion to $6 billion.

The study was conducted by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce SSC steering Committee and outlined private financing options to help fund the project. According to Combest, federal budget restraints threaten to delay the project.

The super collider is a linear accelerator, or super atom smasher, that would allow scientists to study the fundamental nature of matter. The SSC is considered the most advanced scientific laboratory in the world. Utilizing a circular track from 60 to 100 miles in circumference, scientists could create collisions between counter-rotating beams of protons, which they believe would lead to a more complete understanding of the creation of the universe.

"Our proposal addresses the Department of Energy's chief problem with the Super Collider, which is cost," Loeffler said. "By slashing the Super Collider's projected cost and financing it without immediate taxpayer outlay, this proposal lops as much as $3 billion off the price tag," he said.

"I think the West Texas proposal deserves a fair shot from the central design group and the Department," said Loeffler, who represents Midland and the San Angelo areas.

"Without question," Combest, whose congressional district includes Odessa, said, "I want the Super Collider located in West Texas, but first we must get the project approved. I am hopeful that this material (presented to the DOE deputy secretary) will be instrumental in obtaining support for the program," he stated.

Stenholm, who represents the 17th Congressional district, including Abilene, said, "I am convinced that the Super Collider is an investment in the future competitiveness of our country. We must move forward with this project and this proposal could give the green light to forge ahead," he stated.

"This project offers the United States the opportunity for revolutionary scientific breakthroughs and could create thousands of new jobs and high-tech businesses. Stenholm expressed the belief that the United States stands "to lose numerous long-term benefits by not going ahead with the program."

As a result of the meeting, the three West Texas congressmen noted in a joint news release issued by Combest's office, the Department of Energy and central design group will review the West Texas study and provide an assessment report on the proposal's findings.

Referring to the proposal submitted for consideration, Stenholm said, "From a rational basis, West Texas is a natural site for the Super Collider. It may be the least expensive site in the nation considering land, construction and labor costs in our region. DOE needs to take these factors into consoideration in determining the feasibility of the project."

According to the three congressmen, the deputy secretary indicated a decision regarding the fate of the Super Collider "would be forthcoming within the next couple of months."

World War II women to mark WASP anniversary

From Staff Reports

SWEETWATER — World War II women pilots — WASPs — will be returning to Sweetwater, Thursday through Sunday, for the 44th anniversary of the Women's Airforce Service Pilots (WASPs) of Avenger Field.

From 1942 to 1945, almost 2,000 women pilots left their civilian roles as housewives, nurses, secretaries, debutantes, factory workers and actresses to train as pilots in performing flying services for the United States Armed Forces.

"We are anticipating 600 WASPs to attend the reunion, and 10,000 spectators to take part in the 'Salute to the WASPs' at the Sweetwater Air Fair," said Deidre Gantt, Air Fair coordinator.

WASP training was "rigorous," and many WASP candidates "washed out." But by V-E (Victory in Europe) Day in 1945, more than 1,000 women had earned their wings and were providing essential flying services for the Armed Forces. WASPs went through a "demanding" 27 week ground and flight school.

WASPs ferried more than 12,000 airplanes, logged more than 60-million miles in every type of airplane operated by the U.S. military, and piloted aircraft that towed targets for gunnery practice and flew damaged aircraft to repair factories. Federal politicians cut off WASP funding in 1944, declined to incorporate WASP into the U.S. Army Air Forces, and apparently then were "not convinced of the reliability of female pilots, especially in combat conditions," according to the Sweetwater Chamber of Commerce. The chamber is promoting the Air Fair and WASP reunion.

The WASPs will be saluted in the weekend — Sept. 27 and 28 — air show at Sweetwater Municipal Airport.

The Air Fair begins at 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday, but the main events will be launched at 1 p.m. both days. Beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, the fanfare will include aerial performances by the Confederate Air Force, the U.S. Navy's "Leapfrogs" Exhibition Parachute Team and the U.S. Navy Balloon Team. Weekend performances also will include aerobatic acts by Bob Sears — "The Avenger" — in his Super Decathlon and Pat Day performing aerial ballet in his biplane. The U.S. Air Force C-130 Hercules and a U.S. Army AH-64 Apache helicopter will give demonstrations.

Aerobatic routines will be flown by Bob Sears of Sweetwater, Kirk Fulton of Lubbock, James Jones of Odessa, and Pat Day, Fred Michna, Ole Olsen and Richard Osborn, all of Midland.

Weekend residential, auto burglaries probed by police

Edwards Street. According to reports, the items were taken Saturday, sometime between 8 p.m. and 10:45 p.m.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a residence in the 800 block of W. Tennessee Avenue. According to the victim, Jan Pfister, assorted gold chains, earrings, silver chains and rings valued at $1,000, a 19-inch color television with remote control valued at $500, a .22 caliber blue steel automatic revolver valued at $400, a silver tea set and brass tray valued at $220, a radio valued at $70 and a clock radio valued at $20 were reported stolen. Reports said the burglary occurred sometime Friday.

Police are looking for a suspect in the burglary of a residence in the 3800 block of Fannin Avenue. According to the victim, Robert Peterson, three 10-speed bicycles valued at $900, eight soccer balls, soccer nets valued at $100 and a bag valued at $50 were stolen, apparently sometime between 11:30 p.m. Thursday and 5:30 p.m. Friday.

The suspect in the burglary is described as a white male, 40 years old, six feet two inches tall, weighing approximately 200 pounds, with brown hair.

Police are also investigating the theft of several firearms from a vehicle. The victim, Joe Lawrence Howell, 1001 N. Dakota, told police .38 caliber revolver valued at $300, a double barrel shotgun valued at $255, and a .22 caliber rifle valued at $255 were stolen from the vehicle while it was parked in the 1200 block of S. Rankin Highway. Reports said the burglary occurred late Friday night.

A 19-inch portable color television set valued at $900 was reported stolen from a residence in the 500 block of S. Tyler Street. Reports said the item was stolen sometime between 4 p.m. Friday and 10:20 a.m. Saturday.

In other reports, a stereo booster valued at $215 was reported stolen from a vehicle parked in the 500 block of W. Eugene Avenue. Lula Shaw, who reported the burglary, told police the item was stolen sometime Sunday. Police have a suspect, described only as a black male, approximately five feet seven inches tall.

An AM-FM eight-track stereo valued at $275 and a black and white television set valued at $80 were reported stolen from a residence in the 300 block of N. Adams Street. Reports said the items were taken sometime between 10 p.m. Friday and 11 a.m. Saturday.

Police Roundup

No injuries were reported following three weekend fires

From Staff Reports

No injuries were reported this weekend following three fires, two of them apparently deliberately set, that were reported to the Midland Fire Department, according to officials.

Four units and 11 firefighters from the Midland Fire Department were called to the scene of a residence fire Saturday afternoon, according to reports. The fire, at 4721 W. Dengar Ave., was blazing when firefighters arrived shortly after 2 p.m. After the fire was under control, the water heater was determined to be the origin. The cause is under investigation, reports said.

Four units and ten firefighters were called to a truck fire in the 300 block of W. Dakota Avenue early Saturday, reports said. The truck was blazing when firefighters arrived on the scene just after 2 a.m. Damage to the vehicle was listed as light, confined to the seat. According to reports, the fire was deliberately set.

Arson was also listed as the cause of a fire that heavily damaged an automobile Sunday. Four units were called to the fire, near the intersection of Washington Avenue and McGarvey.

Nose fast becoming darling of therapeutic drug developers

Copley News Service

The newest battlefield in the war against disease is the human nose.

Lined with absorptive mucous membranes and home of a giant blood supply, the nose is a perfect avenue for drug delivery. Able to absorb drugs quickly — as any cocaine user knows — the nose is fast becoming the darling of therapeutic drug developers throughout the country.

From Long Island, N.Y., to Mountain View, Calif., drug researchers are working on nose-delivered drugs that will fight diseases like prostate cancer and the common cold, vaccinate against influenza and measles, and protect against cluster headaches, chemotherapy-induced nausea and even pregnancy.

Nose-delivered insulin — now being tested at Harvard's Beth Israel Hospital — could replace daily injections for millions of insulin-dependent diabetics. And similarly, through trials beginning soon in San Diego, some pernicious anemia patients will be able to give up monthly B-12 injections for one quick sniff from a vial.

The nose is a perfect vehicle for drug delivery, says Dr. Richard Bender, a San Diego oncologist who is experimenting with nasal drug delivery systems. "You have in one small surface an enormous blood supply and an absorptive surface in an orifice that is easily seen and readily available. When you think about it, the nose, as a delivery route for drugs, is just an extension of common sense."

Avoidance of the stomach is one chief reason why nasal drug delivery is so promising. This is particularly important in the treatment of pernicious anemia, a condition caused by the body's inability to absorb B-12 through the stomach lining. Patients with pernicious anemia must take monthly injections of B-12 — a costly, inconvenient and painful process.

Bender, a physician with Kaiser's Southern California Permanente Medical Group, is beginning limited trials of an experimental B-12 nasal spray designed for pernicious anemia patients. Formerly a researcher with the National Institutes of Health, he says that clinical trials on the East Coast already indicate that the nasally administered drug, developed by Nastech Pharmaceuticals, is just as effective as injections.

If Bender's study and those scheduled at other U.S. medical centers duplicate these findings, the spray could be available as soon as next year.

Bender also plans a second study with a Nastech nasal drug — this one an anti-nausea medication for cancer patients ill from the after-effects of chemotherapy. The nausea and vomiting associated with chemotherapy can be so severe that patients are often kept in the hospital, where they can be treated intravenously with a drug called metoclopramide.

Metoclopramide by nose may allow patients to be at home, supported by their families and in an atmosphere more conducive to recuperation, Bender says. The drug is not absorbed as well nasally as it is intravenously, but doses can be increased to be effective.

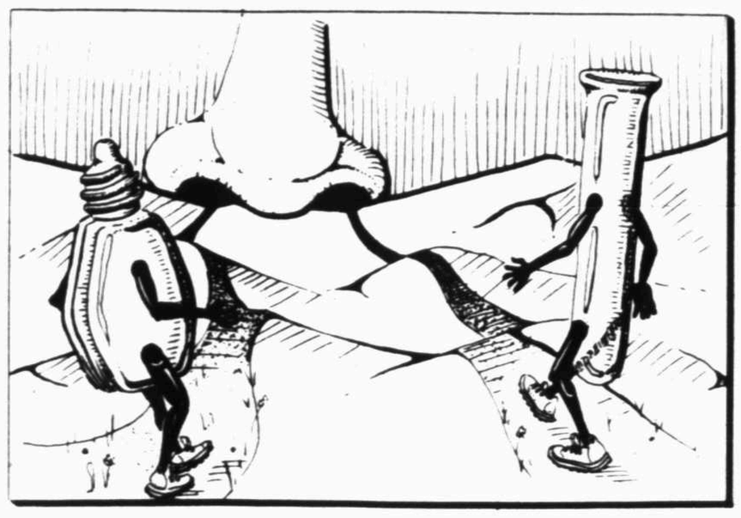
Bender expects to try the drug and assess its effectiveness in about 20 patients. Approximately 80 more will participate in clinical trials at other medical centers throughout the country. Successful trials could lead to the drug's availability within two years.

Nastech further plans to develop nasally administered narcotics that would also help cancer patients avoid the hospital.

The idea of insulin by nose may have even greater potential. Last November, scientists at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital in Boston and a drug company, California Biotechnology Inc., announced they had received government approval for tests in humans of insulin delivered by nasal spray.

Peptide drugs like insulin are metabolized in the stomach and small intestine, which makes oral administration useless. That's why so many diabetics are forced to give themselves daily injections.

The new nasal preparation, developed by Harvard's Dr. Jeffrey Flier and Dr. Alan Moses, is human insulin aided by a substance that enhances its absorption directly into the bloodstream through the thin nasal membranes. If successful in continuing trials, the method could free insulin-dependent diabetics from daily injections. Besides being easier to use, the nasal drug also allows the insulin to be quickly absorbed into the blood, where it reaches peak levels within 10 minutes.



CNS Graphic

If the nose works for insulin, theoretically it should work for certain contraceptives. Currently, the hormone LHRH, another peptide drug, is being tested by Johnson & Johnson's as the main component of a birth control nasal spray.

LHRH acts by releasing other hormones, which lead to the development of the egg in women and sperm in men. Normally released by the body in short bursts every few hours, LHRH can be turned around for use as a contraceptive simply by releasing it continually, the change upsets the body's chemistry, impeding egg development.

Years of testing remain before a product will be available, according to researchers, including those at California Biotechnology, who developed the nasal-delivery system and licensed it to Johnson and Johnson's.

Already limitations are known, as one Biotechnology researcher explains: "LHRH also reduces libido and secondary sexual characteristics. So at this point, it's not practical to talk about it as a male contraceptive."

Further along are other peptides called LRF agonists that are being investigated as a treatment for prostate cancer.

A standard treatment for prostate cancer has been to give female hormones in an effort to block out the production of the hormone testosterone, because most prostate cancer cells are dependent on testosterone for growth. But side effects are common, including increased risk of cardiovascular disease and retention of fluid.

Recently a new hormonal therapy has been developed that works in a different way. LRF agonists work by halting the pituitary gland's production of testosterone. But one drawback has been that the drug required daily injections.

The new LRF agonist nasal-spray, now in clinical trials at UCSD Medical Center and other centers, would eliminate need for injections. It could be the first time that a cancer therapy could be administered at home.

Also tested at San Diego, at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, has been lidocaine for cluster headaches, a series of excruciatingly painful events for which there has not been much treatment. Physicians Marjorie Seybold and Jeffrey Kittrelle showed that the drug lidocaine used nasally can relieve cluster headache symptoms. The drug is thought to work by anesthetizing certain nerves implicated in the headaches' onset.

Nasal sprays are also being investigated as a cure for the common cold and as a vaccination against influenza. Last January the New England Journal of Medicine published two studies, one conducted in Australia and the other at the University of Virginia, demonstrating that use of an alpha-interferon nasal spray can prevent 40 percent of colds.

The drug was especially effective in preventing colds caused by rhinoviruses, the largest single group of cold-causing viruses and the kind blamed for most of the colds brought home by schoolchildren.

Although the interferon sprays caused irritation and minor nasal bleeding sometimes, the main drawback of treatment is likely to be price.

Schering-Plough Corp in New Jersey, which funded both studies and has spent millions to develop interferon-based medicines, isn't talking about how much the drug will cost — if or when the Food and Drug Administration approves it. But some analysts estimate that it could cost between $25 and $50 per application.

Unless its price drops considerably, interferon's most practical use may be to protect those most endangered by colds: asthmatics, cancer patients whose immune systems are compromised and the elderly.

Another experimental drug called enviroxime has proved to be effective against rhinoviruses in the test tube. But because it is relatively insoluble and therefore difficult to use effectively in patients, researchers at Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, are experimenting with its use in a nasal spray.

At Baylor, another antiviral drug called ribavirin is also being tested for its effect on two other viruses — respiratory syncytial virus and parainfluenza virus — that cause serious illness and sometimes death in the very young.

But the real promise for nasal drugs may be in vaccinations. Several years ago Dr. Albert Sabin tested a nasal measles vaccine abroad with favorable results. Representives of the Centers for Disease Control, the World Health Organization, Pan American Health Organization and the Mexican government are currently meeting to explore the possibility of using such a vaccine in Mexican children.

And virus experts are also extremely hopeful about a nasal vaccine for flu. Since the flu virus itself enters through the nose it would presumably be a good target for local antibodies there.

A new nasal flu vaccine has been developed from viruses grown by Dr. John Masaab of the University of Michigan and funded by the National Institutes of Health. Early tests have showed the vaccine safe and effective in producing antibodies.

Key questions are whether the nasal vaccine is more effective than the injected vaccine, whether the immunity lasts longer and whether the public will be more willing to take nose drops than the conventional shot in the arm.

At Baylor College of Medicine, Dr. Robert B. Couch and his colleagues have tested the nasal flu vaccine thoroughly in college students and are now giving it to the elderly and the very young — groups at high risk of danger from flu. Children are important because they spread infections easily from family to family throughout a community. Widespread use of vaccine among children might help prevent epidemics, and nose drops are a quick, convenient and inexpensive way of giving it.

And as nasal drugs of all types become more common, we may need to give our nose more credit for its important role in the treatment and prevention of disease.

DEAR ABBY

Considerate mom still follows her rules

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the mother who planned to divide her fortune in three equal parts to be given to her three children, even though she took turns living with two of her daughters. The other one hardly looked at her.

I think you should have run the enclosed letter again. I've kept it in my Bible for years, so if I ever have to live with my children, I will remember these rules. Thank you for your column. — EVELYN M. PORTER, CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, PA.

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, when my widowed mother came to live with me and my husband, she made our lives so miserable that I determined that I would never bring such misery to my children if I ever had to live with them. One day I sat down and wrote myself a letter. In it were some pertinent rules, and on the outside of the envelope I wrote, "To be opened on the day I go to live with my daughter, heaven forbid." I tucked it away in an old book and forgot about it. I've been widowed and self-sufficient for six years, but now I was recently forced to give up my job and go live with my oldest daughter. I've opened that letter and I think your older readers might benefit from it as I intend to. Here are the rules:

1. Give what you can toward your keep. Any budget will stretch just so far.
2. Keep yourself clean and neat.
3. Remember, it is THEIR home. Be especially considerate of HIM. He allowed her to bring you here.
4. Give them privacy at every opportunity.
5. If they want to go away on a vacation, but are hesitant because of you, offer to visit another relative or friend so they will be free to go.
6. Don't offer any advice or express any opinions unless asked.
7. Volunteer information that they might be too embarrassed to ask for, such as arrangements for your burial, hospitalization, etc.

These rules were written over 20 years ago. I read them often and am determined to keep them.

DEAR ABBY: Is honesty really the best policy? Before I married my husband, I confessed that I had had sex with a steady boyfriend. I thought I loved him and we had gone together for two years. Well, we broke up and drifted apart, but he was the only one.

I thought I was doing the right thing by being honest with my fiance, but was I ever wrong! Now every time we have an argument, he throws it up to me and calls me every vile name in the book.

I never asked him about what he did before he married me, but I have heard from some of his longtime friends that he had sex with just about every girl he ever went with, and there were dozens.

Being honest just got me into a lot of trouble. So I guess I can answer my own question. Is honesty really the best policy? The answer is no, right? — ME IN THE BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR ME: Wrong! In my opinion, honesty is still the best policy. Where is it written that one must answer every question that is asked? It's a person's privilege to say, "Please don't ask me any personal questions and I won't ask you any." Then live by it.

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem rather odd, and you'll probably think I'm weird, but here goes: I am going to be married soon and I have already designed my wedding gown and plan to make it myself. It's going to be black lace and taffeta. I've told only a few people and have already been ridiculed, asked if I was "crazy," and I was even accused of being a Satan worshipper. I am not. I believe in God, I just to like black.

I know from history that white was not always the traditional color for brides. In our culture black is worn by mourners, but I am not superstitious. In other cultures, white is worn for mourning, so why not black for weddings?

I would appreciate your opinion. — DIFFERENT IN INDIANA

DEAR DIFFERENT: What does your fiance think? His is the only opinion you need. If he has no objection, wear black and good luck.

VA alters rules on legal drug use

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Administration has revised its regulations on prescription drug use following a finding by its inspector general that VA hospitals across the country were using some ineffective drugs, according to a report published.

The inspector general found that during fiscal year 1985, 160 of the VA's 172 hospitals used $1.1 million in prescription drugs that the Food and Drug Administration had declared, or expected to declare, ineffective, according to a report in The Washington Times. The newspaper obtained a copy of the inspector general's report through the Freedom of Information Act.

The inspector general's office said it found "no evidence that the use of such drugs would place the safety of any VA patient at risk," the Times said.

But the report recommended that the VA immediately stop using the ineffective drugs because Congress had outlawed their use for Medicaid patients and because alternative, FDA-approved drugs were available.

The inspector general's office suggested that the VA keep an up-to-date list of drugs the FDA had declared ineffective, or has not yet declared effective, and rewrite its regulations to ensure the drugs are not purchased, the newspaper said.

John W. Ditzler, who was chief VA medical officer when the report was issued last June, agreed with the recommendation and took the necessary corrective steps, the Times quoted the report as saying.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Tuesday, September 23, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your way with words could lead to new career and romantic opportunities. Be careful about taking on too many responsibilities too soon. You already have as much work as you can handle. Do not let a feeling of restlessness tempt you into doing things that will not be good for you or your family. Pursue your goals aggressively and you will win big!

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Ray Charles, Toronto Blue Jays reliever Dennis Lamp, sculptor Louise Nevelson, actor Walter Pidgeon, the "Boss" Bruce Springsteen, Mickey Rooney, film star Romy Schneider, jazzman John Coltrane, Yankee baseball executive Woody Woodward

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Taking the line of least resistance will put you behind the eight-ball. Stand up for your ideas! Show courage now and you can make great progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Some stress in an everyday relationship must be expected. The important thing is to deal with any differences of opinion in a positive way. A former romantic partner could show up. Go slow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Get your guard up if you encounter a fast talker. Traveling without adequate preparation will not produce results. A discussion of marriage is on the horizon.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Changes at work or home boost your spirits. Be very careful where a risky financial scheme is concerned. You are right to expect more mature behavior from romantic partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Business partnerships enjoy favorable influences today. Get back to anyone who calls you. You may have to put in extra hours on the job. This is the wrong time to delegate authority.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Community activities bring you recognition and satisfaction. Your interest in music and art could lead to a second job. A financial responsibility cannot be ignored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A family member may stall on repayment of a loan. You are in for a busy day, but can get everything done if you are organized and keep moving.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Listening to gossip is a real time-waster. You can accomplish wonderful things if you remain positive in your outlook. Do not let the competition get you down. Work at your own pace.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Your personal relationships begin to stabilize, providing a strong support system. Deep philosophical questions need to be answered. Draw on your past experiences when setting romance right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A loan proves easy to obtain because of your honesty. A real estate deal can be both a problem and a blessing now. Ask questions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A beneficial job change could be made possible by the events of the next few days. A new love relationship brings great joy. Find the time to learn what a child really thinks.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Concentrating on one objective at a time will prove highly beneficial. Avoid taking the shotgun approach. Rely on those whose loyalty has never been in doubt.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠1092 ♢Q10765 ♠AK852
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♢	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You had a borderline opening bid, but passed because of your weakness in the majors. Now your hand has improved to the point where you could make a slam opposite a minimum opening bid with its values in the right places. You must make a forcing bid to start with, and the jump shift to three clubs is obvious. It guarantees a fit for partner's suit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ3 ♡AJ1065 ♢7 ♠KJ63
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Are you tempted to double for penalties? However, even if the opponents do not remove to diamonds the penalty you accrue may not make up for the game, and possibly slam, you are surely giving up. It is wrong to double for penalties when you have support for partner's suit. Bid two hearts. That is forcing, and will allow the auction to develop normally.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A83 ♡5 ♢KJ10652 ♠KQ7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—A forcing bid of some kind is required, but no satisfactory one is available. Even proponents of fourth suit forcing at the one-level will only delay their problem by bidding one spade. We suggest some jump bid, but three diamonds is only invitational. Therefore, we prefer the jump to three clubs. If partner is short in clubs, he probably has diamond support and will show it, or else bid no trump.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K65 ♡AK3 ♢AQ9 ♠KJ65
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	2 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—No one disputes that you have the best hand at the table. However, that does not mean you have to take a minus score. Since partners strain to keep the bidding open over one club, you can expect little help. To double for takeout or bid no trump will almost surely lead to a loss for your side. Pass, and hope to beat the opposing contract.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K102 ♡AQ63 ♢Q5 ♠AJ87
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You should be thinking in terms of a possible slam, rather than merely game. The easiest way to probe, and the one giving you the most room while keeping the auction at a modest level, is to bid three clubs. To return to opener's minor after agreeing a major suit is forcing, and partner's next bid might help you determine the hand's possibilities.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠63 ♡2 ♢K9875 ♠Q10953
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♢	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?
A.—You can bet on the opponents being able to make game, and perhaps even slam. Therefore, you should take advantage of the vulnerability to make it as difficult as possible for them to get together. Our vote goes to a jump to five diamonds, or even six. Force them to guess at a high level.

'Cagney & Lacey' captures most Emmys

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — It was one tough case for Chris Cagney; it took her four years to crack. Every year she got close, but her partner always beat her to the collar. Until this year. This year she got the Emmy.

When she picked up the statue Sunday night, she cried.

Characteristically, Sharon Gless, who plays Cagney in CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," thanked her partner, who she said "is the most relieved person sitting in the audience."

"This was part of my dream.... I am the luckiest girl in the world," said Ms. Gless, edged out the past three years by fellow nominee and co-star Tyne Daly, who plays New York police Detective Mary Beth Lacey.

NBC garnered 19 of the 31 creative Emmys awarded Sunday; CBS had 10, while ABC and PBS had one apiece. Counting crafts awards given out two weeks ago, NBC collected 34 Emmys, CBS 22, ABC 6 and PBS 11 — one of them Sunday.

ABC's much-nominated "Moonlighting" was eclipsed by "Cagney & Lacey," winning only a crafts award for editing two weeks ago.

The NBC telecast ran just a minute over three hours, virtually on schedule, hosted by comedian David Letterman and "Cheers" star Shelley Long.

NBC's first-year comedy series, "The Golden Girls," beat out "The Cosby Show" and garnered five Emmys, while NBC's "Peter the Great" was named best miniseries and its "Love Is Never Silent" was named best drama or comedy special.

A special Governors Award was awarded in advance to longtime comedian Red Skelton.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor was honored for her efforts in the battle against AIDS as Richard Gere, Linda Ronstadt, John Forsythe, Diahann Caroll and Madonna helped raise $943,000 to combat the deadly disease.

About 2,300 people attended the second annual Commitment to Life benefit Saturday night at the Wiltern Theater.

Other celebrities participating were Dudley Moore, Elizabeth Montgomery, Richard Chamberlain, Carole Bayer-Sager and Burt Bacharach.

Former Washington Redskins player Jerry Smith, who has AIDS, sent a message, which was read by former New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame, checked out of a hospital although doctors wanted to keep him a bit longer for observation, a hospital spokesman said.

"He was explained the risks of leaving" Yale-New Haven Hospital, where he spent the night after fainting Saturday, said hospital spokesman Tom Urtz.

Hesburgh, 69, was in New Haven to attend the inaugural of Yale University's new president, Benno C. Schmidt Jr.

Urtz said Hesburgh's vital signs and cardiogram were normal.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Actress Betty Lynn, who as Thelma Lou left lipstick smears on Barney Fife's face in "The Andy Griffith Show," is teaming up with Andy Griffith in a TV series this fall.

She credited Griffith for suggesting her to producers of NBC's "Matlock," in which she'll be a secretary to Griffith, who plays an Atlanta attorney.

"Andy has written a few little scenes just for me, very funny," Miss Lynn said by telephone from her Los Angeles home. "I hope they're kept in."

Miss Lynn said she still watches reruns of the 1960s' program that had her chasing Barney in her most memorable role. "It was wonderful to be a part of it. I loved the humor of it," she said.

Irwin

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Former Apollo astronaut Jim Irwin says he may turn to other adventures after having failed to find Noah's Ark during six expeditions to Turkey.

He said donors paid for the trips and that donations continue to his High Flight Foundation, a nonprofit organization to finance his travels to spread the faith. Other searches he might launch are for the Ark of the Covenant, chariot parts in the Red Sea and the real Mount Sinai, he said.

"Some people make light of it and ask how can a technical person, an astronaut, believe in the Bible," the 56-year-old former moonwalker said. "I guess I was also a skeptic in my early days, but I've come to believe what the Bible says as being true."

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Greek singer-songwriter Mikis Theodorakis, who wrote the anthem for the Palestine Liberation Organization, was greeted by dozens of demonstrators during a concert tour.

"I brought my band and my music to you with my love. I do not agree with terrorism in any shape or form," he told the audience Sunday.

As Theodorakis' band began to play, several demonstrators chanted "Arafat out" and threw fireworks on the stage. Four people were expelled by police.

Theodorakis wrote the anthem, which calls for an independent homeland for the Palestinian people, at the request of PLO Chairman Yassir Arafat.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shirley Metzenbaum, wife of Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, remains in stable condition in a hospital's intensive care unit after she was knocked unconscious in a bicycle accident, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

The Metzenbaums were bicycling on a path in the George Washington Memorial Parkway along the Potomac River in suburban Northern Virginia when Mrs. Metzenbaum fell and hit her head on the concrete, said Roy Meyers, the senator's former press secretary. The accident took place at about 11:30 a.m. Sunday, he said.

Meyers said Metzenbaum, in a call from Mount Vernon Hospital at about 11 p.m., said his wife had regained consciousness and spoke to him at about 10 p.m.

Betty Woodfin, the hospital's nursing supervisor, said Mrs. Metzenbaum, 63, had suffered a head injury and was in stable condition in the intensive care unit.

Gold soars

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against all major currencies in early European trading today, while gold prices soared by more than $10 an ounce.

The dollar was boosted by a European Common Market announcement that its 12 member nations will intervene jointly if necessary to halt the American unit's slide.

Bullion dealers attributed the jump in the price of gold — quoted in London at $442.75 mid-morning — to speculative buying by professional investors.

London dealers said trading was hectic and nervous and predicted the gold price would bounce in a wide range through the day.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $430.25 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $430, and jumped sharply in later trading.

At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $442.75.

In Zurich, the bid price shot to $442.50 by midmorning, up from $429.50 late Friday.

The dollar's recovery followed an announcement Sunday by Common Market finance ministers meeting at Gleneagles, Scotland, that they and their national bank governors have agreed on a united front to stop the dollar's fall.

Last week the dollar fell below two marks to a three-year low against the West German currency.

Today, the dollar moved back up to 2.0300 marks, from 1.9855 late Friday.

London's Financial Times business daily reported today that the European ministers were particularly angered by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker's predictions last week of a lower dollar, which they saw as an attempt to "talk down" the American currency.

Problem banks overwhelming federal regulators

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The list of problem banks is growing so fast that federal banking regulators say their examiners are being overwhelmed by the workload.

As a result, federal examiners are falling far behind in audits of banks with known problems. Even worse, regulators said, they may be failing to identify healthy banks that are slipping into trouble.

"You have to concentrate on those banks that are the biggest risk to the system. You just hope that while you're not in a bank, nothing bad is happening there," said Comptroller of the Currency Robert Clarke, whose office supervises the roughly 5,000 federally chartered banks.

Once a bank is identified as having problems that could lead to failure, regulators prefer to examine the bank's books and management more than once a year. But at nearly half the problem banks supervised by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the books have not been checked by examiners in more than a year, the agency said.

"We're spread very thin. We don't have enough people to catch the problems," FDIC chairman L. William Seidman said. The FDIC, one of three federal agencies responsible for overseeing the safety and soundness of the banking system, supervises about 9,000 state-chartered banks and insures deposits in nearly all the nation's more than 14,500 banks. About 1,400 of those banks have problems that are serious enough that they will lead to a failure if they are not corrected. Thousands more have incipient problems that need the close attention of both management and regulators.

The shortage of examiners poses "an enormous risk to the banking system," said William M. Isaac, the former chairman of the FDIC. He said the banks that are just beginning to have problems can benefit the most from examinations. The really sick banks know what has to be done — although sometimes they will fail anyway. But Isaac said the bank that is just beginning to have problems may not know exactly what steps to take and management can be helped by regulators. But there are not enough examiners to help all those banks — nearly half have not been examined in the last year.

That shortage has several roots. Budgetary restraints have hindered hiring. Higher salaries offered by private banks — and more recently by the Federal Home Loan Bank system — have lured away some examiners. And the regulators themselves reduced their examination staffs in the early 1980s, when problems were virtually non-existent and computer technology was streamlining the examination process.

But auditing problem banks requires more examiners than checking healthy banks, and the number of problem banks has been growing since 1982. Only the Federal Reserve Board, which is isolated from administration budget pressure, feels it has enough examiners, and is examining the 1,000 banks it supervises at about the rate it wants to.

The comptroller's office has 250 fewer examiners than it did in 1980, but 1,000 more banks that need closer surveillance.

The FDIC began to add examiners in late 1984, until budget pressures stopped the process. The agency hoped to boost its examiners' staff from 1,500 to 2,100, and has about 1,700.

But problems, especially at banks that lend to agriculture and the energy industry, continue to grow. Furthermore, regulators said, the steady pressures to allow banks to enter more types of business increases the pressures on examiners, who must ensure that banks conduct the business safely and soundly.

The push to allow banks to engage in a wide variety of new activites increases the potential for bank profits, but it also increases risk. Comptroller of the Currency Clarke said deregulation will force supervisory agencies to monitor banks more thoroughly, straining their already overburdened examination staffs.

More than 100 banks have failed so far this year; by Dec. 31, another 60 are expected to be closed, which would break last year's record of 120 closures. In 1980, 10 banks failed.

While banks are failing at a record rate, problem banks are being added to the list far faster than they are coming off. At the end of last year there were about 1,140 problem banks. Today there are 1,422. FDIC chairman Seidman estimated that another 160 banks will fail next year.

Isaac, who reduced examiners in the early 1980s but reversed himself in 1984, said federal budget authorities are being "penny-wise and pound-foolish" in holding down examiner hiring. The costs of one major bank failure would wipe out any savings, he said.

FDIC chairman Seidman has been pressing to have some of the agency's spending restraints lifted. The funding for all three bank-regulatory agencies comes from the banks they supervise, not from the federal budget.

FDIC chairman sees more bank failures in 1987

New York Times News Service

BOCA RATON, Fla. — The chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. predicted Friday that 150 banks, or just over one out of every 100, would fail next year, the same number of failures predicted for this year.

As a result, the FDIC will for the second consecutive year not be rebating insurance premiums to members, the agency's chairman, William Seidman, said.

"We don't see material changes in the troubled areas sufficient in a way that would indicate a decline in bank failures," Seidman said in an interview here before addressing the New York State League of Savings Institutions. "We don't see changes in the problem areas we saw last year: energy, agriculture and real estate."

With his remarks Friday, Seidman has, in effect, served notice that in the insurer's view the industry will remain in its battered state.

That view has made the agency chary of following its usual practice of rebating to banks a portion of the insurance premiums they pay. The FDIC will again not make a refund next year, Seidman said, adding that the insurer would end 1986 with its earned surplus — its assets less liabilities — at $18 billion, up $500 million from the end of 1985.

Gas prices fall with end of summer driving

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An oil industry analyst says the end of the summer driving season triggered a nearly half-cent drop in overall gasoline prices during the past two weeks.

"Some markets are rising, and some are falling. There is a lot of volatility right now," Trilby Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter, said Sunday. Her organization's twice-monthly survey found a gallon of gasoline selling for a combined average of 87.85 cents between Sept. 5 and 19.

"Prices on a national level are soft, because of the seasonal decline after the peak summer driving season, and, simply, because we have more supply than we are burning," she said.

The average price includes all grades of gasoline and both self-serve and regular service, reported by nearly 16,000 stations.

The survey found regular unleaded gasoline at self-service pumps down three-fourths of a cent to 80.19 cents a gallon. Also at self-serve pumps, regular leaded was selling for 74.89 cents, down more than half a cent, and premium unleaded was selling for 94.29 cents, down by nearly seven-tenths of a cent.

Prices at full-service pumps remained nearly unchanged. Regular leaded was down two-hundredths of a cent, to $1.04 a gallon, while regular unleaded was down a tenth of a cent and selling for $1.10 a gallon.

Continental calls off jobs guarantee for Frontier

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines workers were disappointed and frustrated Sunday as Continental Airlines continued to maintain that the plan to guarantee 4,000 Frontier workers' jobs is off.

Continental's parent, Texas Air Corp., announced earlier this month that it intends to buy People Express Inc., the Newark, N.J.-based carrier that owns the bankrupt, Denver-based Frontier. As part of the deal, Texas Air said it would buy the remaining assets of Frontier, which has filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Texas Air had proposed guaranteeing jobs for Frontier workers, but on Saturday Continental officials said the offer was called off after Frontier unions "hardened positions which had earlier seemed resolvable and introduced new and unacceptable demands."

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said "the Frontier leaders themselves have decided to throw away the future of their employees."

But Frontier union representatives said the Texas Air offer really was no guarantee of a job.

"I think they legitimately wanted to offer us the jobs but they had to have it on their terms," said Lorraine Loflin, head of Frontier's Association of Flight Attendants local.

Union officials said Continental had begun to back away from guarantees offered last Monday when it announced its intention to buy People Express. That purchase was to be contingent on Frontier workers giving up $200 million in bankruptcy court claims resulting from a no-lay-off agreement between People Express and the unions.

But Loflin said the unions wanted assurances that they could reassert the claims if the People Express purchase didn't go through, or if Continental didn't live up to its promise of jobs.

Hicks maintained Sunday that, "We haven't changed our proposal at all since the beginning of last week. We're only asking them to give up claims associated with no-furlough contracts."

Hicks said Continental, via Texas Air, still will pursue the $176 million purchase of Frontier's assets, which include 25 Frontier planes and 12 gates at Stapleton International Airport.

Frontier union members scheduled two meetings Monday — one for the Air Line Employees Association (representing ground workers) and the AFA, the other the Air Line Pilots Association. They originally were scheduled for votes on ratification of the proposed acquisition, but instead the discussion is expected to center on where to go from here.

Tom Smith, a former Frontier pilot, said "I'm still hopeful, optimistic" about a job.

EPA releases car mileage figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new car mileage figures are out, and the Chevrolet Sprint ER took top honors again, joining nine other Japanese imports among the 10 cars going the farthest on the least amount of fuel.

As usual, the worst mileage was recorded by a Rolls-Royce.

"There is no question that customers are placing a higher priority on performance of the vehicle," Bill Ball, director of the government relations staff for General Motors Corp., said in an interview.

At press previews, "all the general managers said they expected increased sales of large engines and turbos (turbochargers)," Ball said.

The Sprint ER gets 54 miles per gallon in city driving and 58 mpg on the highway, according to the EPA tests conducted each year as part of the agency's checks on auto exhaust pollution. One model of the Honda Civic HF gets 52 mpg and 57 mpg, the same results recorded last year. A Rolls-Royce in last place got 8 mpg and 10 mpg.

The Sprint ER's results are worse than last year's figures of 55 mpg and 60 mpg. EPA said it had not changed its test procedures, and Ball said he had been told by Chevrolet engineers that the lower mileage reflected "normal testing variability."

As part of the emphasis on performance, in the coming model year the Sprint and its Pontiac and Suzuki nameplate twins will be offered with a turbocharger, Paul said. That pushes the mileage down to 37 in the city, 43 on the highway, according to EPA. The car is made by Suzuki Motors, a GM affiliate.

The emphasis on performance again confronts GM and Ford with a dilemma. Last year, the Department of Transportation lowered the mileage standard after those companies protested they could not meet it.

The automakers are back again this year, with the same request for 1987 and 1988 models. DOT spokesman Hal Paris said he had seen estimates that GM could be faced with $300 million in fines if its request were not granted in full. A decision is expected the first week in October.

Or, Ball said, the companies would have to restrict production, which would mean lost sales, lost market share, unhappy customers and "unemployment — the overwhelming focus would be the economic effect."

The normal standard is 27.5 mpg, calculated as a combination of the city and highway figures before the EPA's application of deflation factors aimed at making the numbers representative of real-world driving. The standard was 26.0 mpg for 1986 cars, and that's what Ford and GM want again.

Various models of the Sprint and its nameplate twins captured a total of seven out of the top 10 places on the mileage list. Two Hondas and a Subaru made it an all-Japanese top 10, not for the first time.

The diesel-powered Ford Escort and its twin, the Mercury Lynx, was the best car manufactured in North America at 37 mpg-45 mpg. Another diesel, the Volkswagen Golf, captured second place with 36 mpg-41 mpg.

The best gasoline-powered North American model was the Renault Alliance, made by American Motors at Kenosha, Wis. The Alliance with a four-speed manual transmission and an indicator light telling the driver when to shift gears for best economy tested at 34 mpg in city driving and 41 mpg on the highway.

Foremost Dairy lays off 400 workers

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Nearly 400 people employed at the Foremost Dairy Inc. plant in Springfield have been told they will be out of work after the weekend because of the company's financial trouble, according plant officials.

"It's a very sinking, saddening feeling," Elmer Dryden, general manager of the plant, said Friday after making the announcement to the plant's 372 employees. "A lot of tears were shed today, I can assure you."

Earlier this week Foremost's parent company, Knudsen Foods Inc. of California, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, which provides the company with protection from creditors while it reorganizes its debt. Reorganization plans were rejected Thursday by a bankruptcy judge in Los Angeles.

"We had an offer from someone to buy the Springfield plant and other components of Knudsen, but the ruling doesn't allow that," Dryden said. "We knew we were in for rough sailing when we filed a Chapter 11."

Foremost is a division of Knudsen Foods Inc., the primary subsidiary of holding company Winn Enterprises, based in Los Angeles. Knudsen owns two dairies — Knudsen and Foremost — as well as a handfull of small dairy-products concerns.

The dairies ran into financial difficulties a year ago, but in mid-July they missed $18 million in payments to suppliers.

After Winn announced it was seeking a buyer — or bankruptcy — for Foremost and Knudsen, Mid-America Dairymen Inc. briefly halted milk deliveries to Foremost's plants in Springfield and Joplin. The Springfield-based cooperative is the largest supplier to Foremost in Missouri.

The payments were made and the deliveries resumed one day later.

Foremost has plants in Springfield and Joplin and operates in Arkansas, Kansas, Texas, California, Hawaii, Arizona and Louisiana.

"Officially, the Foremost plant in Springfield will operate no longer than Saturday night," Dryden said. "The company is non-functional as a dairy as of this weekend."

"We stopped receiving milk as of Wednesday, and the last shipment from here to our branch distribution points will be Saturday (today). I've been in the dairy business 38 years, and this is the first time I've ever been without a job or had to look for business," he said.

"All my years with the company are down the drain," he added. "I'm concerned for myself, but my main concern is for the employees there."

Reagan orders energy review

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Friday ordered a high-level review of the nation's security in energy, but the action was regarded as essentially a device to improve the election chances of oil patch Republicans, various industry and political sources said.

"It is largely a political gesture," said John H. Lichtblau, head of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, an industry-supported research organization in New York.

He added, "Now they can say, look, we are studying this at the highest level" and Republican candidates in such leading producing states as Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma will no longer have to "live with the embarrassment" of an administration appearing to do nothing about depressed oil prices.

The president disclosed his intention to order the study in a speech Thursday in New Orleans on behalf of Rep. W. Henson Moore. Moore is widely considered to be running moderately ahead of Rep. John B. Breaux, a Democrat, and others in the battle for the Senate seat of retiring Democratic Sen. Russell B. Long. The election is Sept. 27.

J. Bennett Johnston, the state's other senator and the ranking member of the Senate Energy Committee, called the administration's review "political pap for the election." He predicted that when the campaign was over, the administration would still be committed to "the same old thing" — a reliance on market forces — and that no fee or quotas, both of which he favors, would be adopted.

Here kitty, kitty

Natasha, a Siberian tiger, takes a bath at the Exotic Feline Breeding Compound at Rosamond, Calif., which is dedicated to the preservation and breeding of wild cats.

ROSAMOND, Calif. — Natasha, an 8-foot-long, 375-pound Siberian tiger was a hot cat on a recent sizzling summer day here in the middle of the Mojave Desert.

The 2-year-old stood straight up on her hind legs and stretched against her cage, towering over tiny, 4-foot-2 keeper Jean May.

This cat takes to water like a fish.

Natasha is one of 35 rare wildcats at the compound, which lies on the outskirts of this small desert town 80 miles north of Los Angeles.

Dedicated to the preservation and reproduction of endangered purebred wildcats, the compound is one of only two private wildcat-breeding facilities of its kind in the nation — the other is on the East Coast. Major zoos throughout the country ship their cats here in the hope that they will end up getting more cats back.

Now housed at the 68-acre compound are four Temminick's golden cats from Nepal, two snow leopards from the Himalayas, six Siberian tigers, a Bengal tiger, two African leopards, four Northern Chinese leopards, four Canadian cougars, three California cougars and three Northern (American) bobcats.

Wildlife enthusiasts will find few of these animals either in captivity or still running free in the wild. All are considered endangered species.

Joe Maynard and his wife, Jeanne, started the nonprofit, tax-exempt wildcat-breeding facility in 1978 and opened it to the public as a wildlife museum two years ago.

Rarest of the rare at the compound are the four Temminick's golden cats. Only nine are now in captivity, according to the International Species Inventory System based at the Minnesota State Zoo, in Apple Valley, Minn.

Zoos that now have wildcats here to be bred are Oklahoma City, San Diego, Memphis, Tenn., Omaha, Neb., Dallas and Toronto. Other zoos ship rare cats to the compound from time to time. The wild cats are sent here to breed with cats from other zoos or with cats owned by the compound. The care, housing, and feeding of the animals are provided by the compound. In return, the compound splits the litter with the zoo and has the rare cats on hand for research and exhibit.

Some members of the Exotic Feline Breeding Compound, which has 1,000 members who pay a minimum of $15 a year in dues, help pay for the upkeep by adopting an animal, contributing $40 to $100 a month.

Zoos are attracted to the compound because of the tendency of some animals not to breed in captivity. Many cats are affected by the interruptions in mating patterns caused by the urban locations of the zoos and the great numbers of people visiting them. The animals seem to breed better at the Rosamond.

Successful breeding of the cats is no simple task. A research team from the National Zoo in Washington, which spent several days last year collecting and testing semen from all of the adult male cats at the compound, discovered that male fertility levels vary with the season of the year, just as female heat cycles vary.

To strengthen the blood lines of the endangered cats and to avoid inbreeding, as can easily happen with zoo stock, officials look at the breeding history of particular animals by consulting the International Species Inventory System about the species, and then select mates from the computer at the Minnesota zoo. More than 65,000 animals from 15 countries are included in the inventory, Nate Fleshness, ISIS program director said.

Dr. Freeland Dunker, 32, an Escondido, Calif., veterinarian, one of several veterinarians and medical doctors who provide medical services to the wildcats said the breeding record of the compound is testimony to the success of the facility.

"FFBC is highly respected by major zoos as a research and breeding place for endangered species. Blood samples from these cats are being used by ISIS to establish norms in blood chemistry and hematology studies of the various species," Dunker said.

Lori Trahan, 26, a Lancaster, Calif., dental technician is one of 11 volunteers — all women — at the cat compound who serve as guides and help care for the animals. Trahan has devoted 25 hours a week here for two years "because I love being around these animals."

Veterinarian Don Gillespie regularly drives 140 miles from Santa Barbara, Calif., to check the health of the cats. When Tedi Bear, a three-year-old female Siberian tiger came down with a bacterial infection, Gillespie transfused a gallon of blood from Caesar to Tedi Bear to save the female tiger's life. Caesar and Tedi Bear are from the same litter.

For two days volunteers held Tedi Bear's head in their laps while bottles of IV fluids dripped into her system. Tedi Bear recovered and apparently is now in purr-fect condition.

Dr. Richard Deeley, a Lancaster dentist, has done root canals on a north Chinese leopard, a clouded leopard and a Temminick's golden cat.

In addition to the volunteers, support for the wild-cat compound comes from the dues of the members of the organization. Last year, the compound's expenditures came to $110,000, but the costs would have ballooned to $221,000, Maynard said, had the volunteer labor not made up the difference. Maynard is president of the organization, while his wife serves as vice president.

Chen-Chi, a Northern Chinese leopard and one of 15 of his subspecies in the United States, is the most recent product of the labors here. Chen-Chi, which is Chinese for Great Protector, was born here March 24.

For now, Chen-Chi has the run of the Maynard home and will continue to be a house pet for the next several weeks. It is hoped that Chen-Chi will eventually breed with Su Lin, a year old female North Chinese leopard at the compound.

Two adult cats run free at the compound but never venture anywhere near the wild cat cages and enclosures.

No wonder. They're a couple of smart Siamese cats.

Joe and Jeanne Maynard, right, care for Chen-Chi, a 4-month-old Northern Chinese leopard, one of 35 rare large cats at the Exotic Feline Breeding Compound. Chen-Chi, below, has the run of the house.

Dedicated to the preservation and reproduction of endangered purebred wildcats, the compound is one of only two private wildcat-breeding facilities of its kind in the nation — the other is on the East Coast. Major zoos throughout the country ship their cats here in the hope that they will end up getting more cats back.

Chautauqua: Ancient origins, finger on present-day pulse

By STEPHEN W. BELL

CHAUTAUQUA, N.Y. (AP) — The Chautauqua Institution is an intellectual summer camp where Leo Tolstoy, Thomas A. Edison and Rudyard Kipling once strolled in shaded Victorian splendor.

In an impatient world of overnight package express and video cassette movies, Chautauqua's taproots reach deep into American history.

Reading, religion, philosophy and the spoken word dominate a nine-week summer session of study, recitals, concerts and lectures that attracts 300,000 people and swells the upstate New York village's winter population of 500 to 10,000 on summer weekends.

Although Chautauqua's origins date back to the 1870s, it has its finger on the pulse of present-day America.

Last summer, Soviet and American experts were invited here for a week of debate on superpower relations. This summer, a group of about 270 people affiliated with the institution held a conference with Soviet officials in Jurmala, a Baltic Sea resort in the republic of Latvia.

The five-day conference ended Friday with Soviet delegates denouncing a U.S. order to expel 25 of Moscow's diplomats at the United Nations, while American speakers alleged that the KGB was holding American journalist Nicholas Daniloff hostage.

The Chautauqua group considered cancelling the conference because of Daniloff's arrest, but decided to debate the subject during the privately sponsored conference. The group is due back in the United States Wednesday.

Started by a Methodist minister and a wealthy industrialist from Ohio in 1874, Chautauqua has survived two threats to its existence. It went into receivership in the 1930s and attendance declined in the 1970s.

However, a fund drive in the early 1980s raised about $8.5 million, and Chautauqua is thriving. Today, the institution, pronounced "Shuh-taw-kwuh," has an $11 million endowment.

A 25-member board of trustees, comprised of long-time attendees, oversees the institution, its 105 buildings, a $6.8 million annual budget and 700 in-season employees.

Privately-owned clapboard homes with gingerbread trim on institution grounds cost more than $100,000 in a region where homes normally sell for one-third that price.

The 856-acre compound hugs part of the shoreline of 22-mile-long Chautauqua Lake, 75 miles south of Buffalo.

"The people who come here tend to come back and their children tend to come back and their children's children tend to come back, because it provides a respite in a changing society," said spokesman Phil Zimmer.

Theodore Roosevelt, one of nine American presidents and 12 unsuccessful presidential candidates to visit, said Chautauqua "is typical of America at its best."

Perhaps that is what bothered Kipling. "I don't like Chautauqua," he wrote after a visit in the early 1900s. "There's something wrong with it and I haven't had time to find out where. But it is wrong."

Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered his famous "I Hate War" speech at Chautauqua, and daily lecturers — who now speak in a 6,000-seat open-air amphitheater — have included Alexander Graham Bell, Jane Addams, John D. Rockefeller, William Jennings Bryan, John Philip Sousa, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Susan B. Anthony, Count Basie and Gloria Steinem.

Around the turn of the century, Chautauqua was widely copied around the country, and countless communities had their own "Chautauquas."

There is a strong religious current, co-founder Dr. John H. Vincent later became a bishop. However, over the years it has evolved to include all faiths.

The main attraction seems to be the lack of structure.

Chautauqua is an intellectual and cultural candy store. Visitors can sample a morning lecture on China's Long March, attend a four-hour afternoon class on paper cutting and then have dinner at the institution's 160-room Athenaeum Hotel, one of six hotels, while the lecturer and crafts teacher dine nearby.

"In one course you may have a 7-year-old kid working alongside a grandmother from Pittsburgh," Zimmer said.

Each summer, the institution sponsors courses for a fee for both residents and non-residents in subjects ranging from quilting, Brazilian stitchery and Zen to financial planning, use of computer software and leadership.

"You can tell a newcomer to Chautauqua because that's a person on roller skates, holding a stop watch with an anxious look on their face trying to rush to each event," Zimmer said.

With three orchestras, a dance and dramatic theater and an English-language opera company, the institution also offers sophisticated instruction for pre-professionals.

In 1931, George Gershwin wrote "Concerto in F" in one of the many 10-by-10 "practice shacks" that dot the grounds.

But the freedom to choose a speed reading course over one on chair caning also includes the freedom to choose nothing.

There is a relaxed attitude that draws people to white wicker chairs on wide porches to re-read a Dickens classic, or take a swim and then wander to the Ice Cream Shoppe.

"You can be a part of the world here," said Zimmer, "and apart from it."

Chautauqua is a place of brick streets where cars are left outside a barbed-wire fence and the shuttle bus stops wherever you wish to alight.

"Many of our people are doctors and lawyers and Indian chiefs who work very hard in Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Buffalo. They retreat here for the summer, unwind, get to know their families again and go out recharged and energized in the fall," Zimmer said.

A family of four staying at the Athenaeum or one of the seven inns or guest houses could expect to pay $2,000 for a week.

But Chautauqua has bounced back from the days when President Samuel M. Hazlett would go to Edison's second wife Mina, the daughter of co-founder Lewis Miller, and ask for $50,000 to keep the place open during the Depression.

One late-summer day recently, David Davidson, whose uncle was Hazlett, visited Chautauqua for the first time since the 1940s. He's 64, retired as an oil exploration expert for Atlantic Richfield Co., and now lives in Denver.

He recalled the boyhood summers he spent working at Chautauqua.

"Those three summers I spent here are just indelible in my mind," Davidson recalled from the steps of the 30,000-volume library. "I met so many good kids here, boys and girls. We had so much fun. Those were the days of innocence."

NASA's solution to cause devised years ago

NEW YORK (AP) — The solution that NASA proposed to the problem that caused the Challenger explosion was devised years before the disaster, The New York Times reported in Monday editions.

A leaky booster seal caused an explosion that destroyed the Challenger and killed its seven astronauts just after launch Jan. 28.

NASA unveiled a $300 million redesign of the seals on Aug. 12. The key element in the redesign was invented in 1981 to lock seals tightly in place by latching down an element of the joint, the newspaper said.

Lady Bird seeks stronger beautification act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lady Bird Johnson, who as first lady led a campaign to rid the nations' roadsides of billboards, is asking senators to strengthen the 1965 Highway Beautification Act.

Mrs. Johnson, the widow of President Lyndon Johnson, in a telegram sent Friday asked the Senate to pass legislation sponsored by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash.

David Endicott, a spokesman for Gorton, said debate on the measure is expected today or Tuesday. He said it is unclear whether a less restrictive substitute would be offered.

Part of a highway authorization bill, the measure would ban new billboard construction along federal highways and give states the power to decide whether or not to reimburse billboard owners forced to dismantle their signs. Federal law currently requires reimbursement.

The telegram was also signed by businessman and environmentalist Laurence S. Rockefeller, who chaired a presidential commission that supported the 1965 legislation.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

The ultimate strategy: A good buy!

By Tom Cooper

Show me any successful business person...I'll show you a person who has most likely arrived at the solution to two problems: 1st, how to inform the public about the given product or service and 2nd, how to get the public to buy!

The auto industry is no different. For the past 100 years automotive executives have been pondering the solution to these problems. These men first promoted their products through racing and auto shows. No amount of advertising could have taken the place of these functions because of the nature and the novelty of the product. It was an idea that was so new that it would have been hard to fathom just seeing pictures and descriptions. It had to be seen and experienced 1st hand and the durability of the product had to be proven. Once that was accomplished advertising could take its place in informing the public further about the product.

With the advent of the various advertising media the first problem, of informing the public, had been simplified somewhat. But still a biggy was how to get people to buy. And complicating matters is the natural aversion many people have to saying yes to a salesman of any kind.

One of the strategies dealers have developed is convenience, ease of delivery & service and etc., and its true we have come a long way in that area. In the early days when auto dealerships were found only in big cities, convenience was not something to be regarded lightly. For instance, country folk had to order and pay for their cars through the mail. When the car was delivered (by rail at the nearest station) the buyer had to uncrate the vehicle, and add the vital fluids. Since no salesman was around to explain all the "buttons and whistles" the new owner had to figure out for himself how to start and operate the car.

While convenience is important today, auto dealers learned long ago that it takes more to sell a car to some people. A number of strategies have been devised over the years. Henry Ford 1st offered rebates of $40 to $60 in 1914 on his Model T's. Ford later introduced an idea which seems somewhat less practical for automobiles, a lay-away plan. The Willys-Overland company, builder of the Jeep, 1st developed the idea of setting up a finance company to provide financing for its vehicles. And since that time every major American automobile company has followed suit.

Recently, we have seen what may be the ultimate in strategies to get the public to buy. Our money conscious culture can't resist a good buy, and the current rates are certainly that. And we owe it all to those men who have "racked their brains" over the last 100 years to figure out how to get the American people to buy their products.

This feature appears each Monday as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram

WHAT DOES 2.9% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE GMAC FINANCING REALLY MEAN TO YOU?

FIRST This is the lowest set of finance rates ever offered by GMAC.

SECOND Probably the most important thing is that there is no dealer financial participation that will affect your cost. As a matter of fact we still have units at the old price (units built before April 11, 1986) that can be bought at prices below invoice prices.

THIRD Even though we have sold over 80 new units on this program we still have over 80 new units left to choose from.

FOURTH We will post special sale prices in all our 86 GMC inventory to show we mean business.

HERE IS AN EXAMPLE:

1986 GMC SIERRA CLASSIC

- Factory Air
- 305 V-8 Engine
- Automatic Transmission
- Power Steering
- Power Brakes
- Tilt Wheel
- AM/FM Stereo
- Tinted Glass

and much much more!
