ROOSEVELT PROCLAIMS NECESSITY OF N.R.A.

"SELFISH GAIN" IS DENOUNCED BY PRESIDENT

Talk Made Before 4,000 At Conference of the Code Authorities.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—In fighting words, President Roosevelt today proclaimed the necessity of the national recovery administration for economic rehabilitation and flouted fears that it is the forerunner of fascism or communism.

In effect, he urged the people of the United States to take direct action against those who refused to fly the blue eagle, tantamount to boycotting "those who think only of selfish gain."

Without mentioning the case of the Wierston Steel company, which has attracted wide attention, he reiterated the right of employees to organize and to choose their representatives by "free choice."

"Those two words," he said, "mean just what they say."

The president's address was delivered to more than 4,000 gathered at the conference of NIRA code authorities and trade association code committees. It was his reply to criticism offered at the suggestion of Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator.

All through the president's speech ran the warning that industry must follow through with the government idea of increased wages.

Mr. Roosevelt, in effect, called for a boycott against those who refuse to fly the blue eagle. He said common sense required the consuming public to compel the selfish few to play the game.

He promised protection for small business and demanded the letter and spirit of the law be imposed to prevent action which are:

1. Clearly monopolistic
2. Wink at unfair trade practices.
3. Deny labor free choice of representatives
4. Hostile to the public.

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks were construed as a last warning to so-called "chiselers."

"I am always a little amused and, perhaps, at times, a little saddened, by those few writers and speakers who proclaim tearfully, either that we are committed to communism or that we have adopted fascism and a dictatorship."

"The real truth of the matter is that for a number of years in our country the machinery of democracy has failed to function."

"What we seek is balance in our economic system—balance between agriculture and industry and balance between the wage-earner, the employer and the consumer."

In conclusion he gave a word of warning, observing significantly:

"We cannot tolerate abuses of economic power—abuses against labor, abuses against employers or abuses against the consuming public, whether they persist, either with the aid of codes or despite their prohibition."

About 40 or 50 workers comprising both men and women, met at the Baptist church at 2 p. m., Sunday to form the preliminary arrangements for taking a religious census of Baptist church members and attendants, with the workers starting out immediately after their assignments.

W. D. R. Owen, chairman of the work and Francis V. Williams, stated, the census is a preliminary to the revival which opens in the Baptist church, the third Sunday in March March 18 with Rev. C. Y. Dossey, state evangelist, in charge, assisted by Rev. Blair, Cisco, associational missionary, and director of the singing.

Political Campaigns May be Affected by Recent Session Of the Texas Legislature

By GORDON K. SHEARER
AUSTIN, Tex.—State Senator Clint Small, Amarillo candidate for Governor, had a good break on the moratorium bill.

His votes on the highly controversial topic accomplished the seemingly impossible. They pleased both sides. He opposed the bill in the form in which it came before the Senate for final vote. That appeals to those who do not approve the moratorium. When it got enough votes to pass despite his opposition, he led the movement to give it the 21 votes necessary to make it effective at once.

That should effect any emity he gained from his original opposition. And, more remarkable, the two votes are entirely consistent, so he is not open to attack upon that score.

The moratorium bill was only one of many measures of the special session of the legislature, that may have a bearing on the results of the summer's political campaigns. Some will affect non-member candidates.

There is the bill making it bribery for a state or county employe to contribute to the campaign of his chief or chiefs. Prospects are that the Governor will veto the bill because it failed to get enough House votes to be in effect all through the campaign.

If signed it will be effective after June 27. The first primary election will be only a month distant. Before June 27, employees could make contributions and be "within the law." After June 27, they would face fines and jail sentence for contributing.

The session gave the legislative committee on nepotism 45 more days in which to file a report. This means there will be available in documentary form by mid-April the testimony taken by the committee and data gathered from 15,000 questionnaires.

The report may make nepotism a leading campaign issue. Employment of relatives within specified degrees now is prohibited, but the committee investigation went farther. It will reveal how relations, not within the present law's restrictions, get on the state payroll. For instance, the law does not apply.

Squirrel Remained In Hollow Limb on Long Ride to Town

S. A. Hightower, who works at the Texas Electric Service company office in Ranger, has a couple of pet squirrels out at his house who probably won't be lonesome, because they now have another squirrel to keep them company.

It happened like this: Yesterday Hightower decided that what the squirrels needed was a hollow tree to play in, or at least a hollow limb in which they could nest or play.

He went out in the woods, found just the kind of limb he had in mind for his pets, and after much work, chopped it off the tree and brought it back to town in his car.

Inside the cage the limb looked like it would make an attractive home for his pets, but Hightower wanted to make sure. He poked a stick up into the hollow limb to see just how far the hole ran, and out jumped a grown squirrel.

So, now there are three grown squirrels in the cage where there were but two yesterday.

Conductor on W. F. R. & S. Hurt In An Accident

A conductor on the Wichita Falls, Ranger & Southern Railway, whose name was given at the West Texas Clinic and Hospital as McBride, suffered a painful injury to his hip about 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Reports of the accident, which were meager because he had just been admitted as a patient about press time, said that he probably had a broken hip, but that X-rays were being taken at that time to determine the extent of his injuries.

The accident occurred when one car of the train on which he was working was derailed and overturned. McBride, the conductor on the train, was thrown from the caboose when the car ahead overturned and was painfully injured.

Doctors were unable, after a cursory examination, to determine the exact extent of his injuries, though it was feared that one hip had been fractured.

Since the fishing season closed on the last day of February all fishing rights at Hageman lake have been cancelled, it was announced today by Jim Ingram, who has the fishing rights on the lake.

The closed season is from the last day of February until the first day of May. It was pointed out, during which time it is unlawful to catch game fish of any kind, because that is the spawning season.

New fishing permits are to be issued prior to the opening of the lake for fishing on May 1, it was said, and no fishing will be allowed until May. The fishing season is determined by state law and there are no exceptions to its restrictions.

'A VERY REAL IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS

Francis M. Law is the president of the American Bankers association. He is watching "the fur fly" on the banks of the Potomac. He had an audience with the President. He told F. D. R. that "there's a very definite and very real improvement in business." He stressed that banks are returning to a more normal lending policy and he placed it in the record that the banking structure "is very strong and that it has helped to restore confidence." In conclusion he said, and said it with a smile: "Business men are attacking their problems with renewed confidence and looking forward to profits this year."

Whenever a banker discovers recovery on the way it is safe to wager a dollar for a dime that there are rainbows in the heavens. American bankers have been on the rack for four long years. They have had a heavy load to carry. Now "they are damned if they do and damned if they don't," but business is business.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT the building of a city should be handled as carefully as any big business proposition and in a common-sense way.

A city must have a healthy growth, for in this turmoil of modern business and development a city must stand up under stress and disappointment and always go forward. Cooperation on the part of all must be had.

Those who enter into the fight for a bigger, busier city will discover that never before have they had presented to them a proposition of equal magnitude and attractiveness.

All can materially help the home city if they begin right now to make the coming months ones of production and prosperity.

It would be difficult to find one citizen who cannot in some manner help to increase the prosperity of all.

Everyone can, without detriment, inconvenience or expense, at least remember that the home city is their city and act accordingly to the end that harmony and prosperity may come.

ply to relatives of legislators working in departments. The committee found many of them in such births. It also looked into actions of the related legislators to measures affecting such departments.

The session close was marked by announced retirement of a prominent member of both House and Senate, Miss Margie Neal, Carthage, only woman Senator, in accepting election as president-protem, said she is serving her final term, believing she has demonstrated that a woman can make an "average senator." Rep. Bob Long, Wichita Falls, active in oil legislation, said he was making his "final appearance."

Genial E. M. Johnson, Palestine, will also retire from the House as he is running for lieutenant governor, and in the closing days, was commended to the voters in a resolution passed by fellow members.

J. J. (Jack) Patterson, who was fourth in the 1932 race for railroad commissioner (long term), is out this year as a candidate for state comptroller. Last campaign, he resided in San Antonio. Now he has returned to North Texas and lives in Dallas. He has 133,000 votes in the 1932 race against such campaigners as C. V. Terrell, Lee Satterwhite and Roy Tennant. Tom Hunter's "open house" campaign for Governor has gotten under way with appearances at Dallas and Fort Worth, to be followed by similar gatherings elsewhere. It is something new in state campaigning. Instead of making addresses, the candidate goes to a hotel, announces he is there and invites the voters to come see him. Responses indicate it is proving effective.

L. H. Middleton, Fort Worth contractor-candidate, has launched a court house steps campaign for governor.

The legislative session and bond business have kept Lieut. Gov. Edgar E. Witt and Attorney General James V. Allred off the stump.

Reactions to the announcement of Maury Hughes, Dallas, and the campaigning of C. C. McDonald, Wichita Falls, are still unknown quantities in the problem of who will be next Governor of Texas.

T. C. U. Baseball Prospects Bright

FORT WORTH, Tex.—With 10 lettermen returning from last year's championship squad, Texas Christian University's baseball prospects will be the brightest in several seasons when training gets under way here March 1.

The largest array of baseball talent, with 25 conference prospects to report, will provide the material from which Coach Dutch Meyer will assemble his team.

Texas Christian nose out Texas University for the title last year, largely through the mastery work of Hesel Kinzy, Texas Christian mound ace, who again will lead the Frog's pitching staff. Meyer has hopes of winning two consecutive titles, something no team other than Texas University has done since Uncle Billy Dusch took over baseball coaching at the state university.

A glance at the lettermen available shows only a few holes in the Texas Christian lineup, with ample capable Sophomore material to throw into the gaps.

For catchers Meyer has Wallace Myers, Jacksboro, football and basketball star, and Fred Miller from last year's squad. Lettermen pitchers are Kinzy, Dan Harston, Dallas, and Jimmy Jacks, Fort Worth.

Darrell Lester, Jacksboro, giant Sophomore right-hander, is looked to as a valuable addition to the mound staff. He is a speed ball artist.

There are three lettermen infielders, Elbert Walker, Ralls, and Warren Logan and Frank Lozo, Fort Worth. Jack Graves, Beaumont and Paul Donovan, Fort Worth, are veteran outfielders.

Besides these Boaz Hoskins, Ft. Worth, pitcher, and Bill Hudson, Newark, outfielder, are squadmen from last year who did not letter.

At least six outstanding Sophomores will compete with the veterans for regular places in the infield and outfield, including Jimmy Lawrence, football star from Hartlingen.

Only four conference schools, Texas, A. & M., Baylor, and Texas Christian, will compete in baseball this year, Meyer said. Each team will play a four game series with the other three teams, making a 12 game season.

Magnolia Begins Advertising Its Famous Products

The Magnolia Petroleum company has begun its 1934 newspaper advertising in this section of the country with the first of a series of advertisements, which appears in today's issue of this paper. The Magnolia company, in its present campaign, is calling attention to Mobiloil and Mobilgas, two of the products which have become popular wherever good gasoline and motor oil is used.

The advertising in today's paper will be followed by other advertisements giving the motoring public important information about one of the most famous gasolines and motor oils in the world.

Old Paper Contains Queer Advertising

BRECKENRIDGE, Tex.—A husband's advertising in the merchandising public that he will not be responsible for his wife's bill, is no modern idea.

A newspaper, printed in a New York town in 1800 and kept in the family of Robert Taylor of Breckenridge for four generations, reveals an advertisement of a husband telling the public in general to "send my wife home when she visits and sell her nothing on the credit."

Another man advertises a grist mill and a negro "wench" for sale. Still another bewails the loss of a "red bull branded on each horn."

In the news column is an article by John Adams, then president of the United States, and a poem eulogizing George Washington, who had died a short time before.

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PABLITO, a handsome 17-year-old youth, works at the palatial Florida home of millionaire JIM FIELD.

The son of a titled Englishman and a servant girl, Pablito knows nothing of his parents. When a year old he ran away from ANTELA, the hairless old woman in whose care he was left. Since then he has lived with NORRIS ANDERSON, a mysterious individual who has seen better days.

Field's estranged wife and their daughter, ESTELLE, arrive at the Florida home. Pablito sees Estelle and almost at once falls in love with her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

At the door of his wife's rooms Field paused and knocked. A maid he remembered admitted him and, as she saw him, her face grew hard and chill. He heard her murmur something about seeing if Madame could see him and he waited in the gray and silver sitting room. In a few moments Norma appeared and settled her self in a low chair. Field pulled another close to hers and dropped into it.

"I wanted to tell you, Norma that I appreciate your attitude to Estelle about me."

She answered in a level under tone, her eyes on the rug at her feet. "I want to preserve for her as long as possible," she said, "all the illusions that make life happier. Then, too, you were not there—and I was I couldn't very well say anything ill of you."

He did not fully understand this. She saw it and smiled a trifle wanly.

"You don't see much logic to that, do you?" she questioned.

"I see what you're getting at all right," he answered honestly, "but I think it's bunk!"

"It is only decent."

He paid no attention to this but went on. "Norma—are you going to tell her now?"

She stiffened, becoming erect and tense. "It would kill all that I have done my best to nurture in her," she answered with the first show of the old warmth and feeling he had heard in her voice.

"We will have to pretend a great many things that aren't true and that I know now never were true."

"I'll try to make it easy for you," he promised a trifle thickly. He found himself close to unsteadiness from the relief her words had brought him.

"Jim," she began slowly and less confidently, "will you promise me to be careful about the things, the people—women I mean—whom she sees?"

"My dear Norma, I am 50," he answered bluntly.

She nodded, her head a bit high, her eyes sudden chill. Then she stood up with the manner of royalty at the moment of a dismissal. Presently Field found himself outside in the glare of the sunlight.

The way Norma's head could lift, so proudly, had always made him feel himself to be crude and rough. This, with her dislike of seeing him and her withdrawals into silence, had made him more crude and rougher.

She was still capable of the same

Again and again Pablito found her face turned his way.

trick, he realized; the trick of making him feel far beneath her. "Damn it!" he thought, blinking in the sunlight. But there was a reason for him to endure it now. The reason was a slender girl who looked much as Norma had when he had married her with the intent to tame her and "bring her down a bit."

At the end of a dock which stretched long and black in the water Field saw Pablito swabbing out a fishing boat. He saw also the enchanting blue of the white-flecked water and the sway of the tall palms against the depths of an almost cloudless, silver-blue sky. Estelle would no doubt be light in such things, as her mother had before her. The camp had amazed her. Well, there was no other like it, he decided contentedly.

He followed the dock which smelled of seaweed and salt and was always darkened and damp from spray and when he was near Pablito he spoke to him.

"Nice day, Smith."

Pablito stood erect. "Yes, sir, fine," he agreed.

"Lord, you're a good-looking specimen," Field thought. He said aloud, "You usually run the 'Silver Dart,' don't you? I may go out in it later."

"Yes, sir."

It was a badly aimed prayer, the only sort one could say now, failed to believe in much of anything. She had created a great deal for Jim Field in her slightly young years, she realized. She hoped Estelle would never care for any man quite so much as she cared for herself.

THAT afternoon Pablito took Estelle and Jim Field for the first of their many rides together in the "Silver Dart." Estelle was stirred to admire in the riotous color, the salt tangour of the air, the blazing yellow and the utter greenness of the shore.

"I think," she said slowly, "that I have never seen any place so beautiful!" As she spoke her eyes roamed upon Pablito and, seeing him, she knew suddenly that she had never seen a young man who was so fine in form and face. She did not mention this. She could only wish with a new hunger that they might be friends. She was sure this youth with the blue eyes and straw-colored hair would be a friend worth having.

The men in the boat saw her; nothing and no one else. Field watched her steadily with a slight smile lifting and softening his some times cruel lips. Pablito's eyes followed her with a breathless awe. He saw her as a rare mixture of child and woman. She had a dignity, unusual in American girls, which made her at times seem far beyond her years. At other times, with the faint showing of a soft trustfulness, she was sweetly young. Appallingly young, Pablito thought, knowing Field.

"She knows everything of good," he decided tenderly, "and nothing of evil." And for a moment his heart turned cold as he wondered what lay before her.

Estelle's soft brown hair, which a color came into her cheeks which were a little this because she had been growing so fast. He could not help watching her almost steadily. And again and again he found her face turned his way.

The hum of the motor and the swish of water as it broke to a white-churned froth kept Pablito from hearing much that was said, but one question of Field's shook his world for him because it brought her close.

Field said, "I think I'd have a fancy dress party for you here. Would you like that?"

"Oh, yes!" Estelle answered and because she had been so suddenly warmly and vibrantly happy Pablito smiled without knowing it. He had answered her smile. No woman or girl had ever smiled on him before unless tendering him with her lift of lips, the wrong sort of invitation.

A barefoot boy who guards a drunkard does not hold the key that opens doorways into kindness. Now he knew kindness and the difference in smiles and the knowledge was so beautiful that it brought an ache to his breast. He thought, "I love you and it's not puppy stuff. You're beautiful and kind. I love you!"

And so came the love of a lifetime in a land where there is warmth and early ripening.

Bumper Maple Sugar Crop Seen

By United Press
NEW YORK.—Up in Vermont they are getting ready for the harvesting of the biggest maple sugar crop in history. More trees will be tapped than ever before, more sugar per acre will be produced, and the total crop is expected to average higher in quality than in any previous year.

A survey of the maple sugar industry, made by Arthur C. Bartlett for The Country Home, shows that while Vermont leads in production of this crop, New York state and Quebec will be close seconds this year. But the Vermont product is better standardized and of higher average quality than its rivals.

"Did you ever have any pure, undiluted maple sugar?" Bartlett asks. "Think twice before you answer, because very little simon-pure maple sugar ever gets to market. It gets diluted with cane sugar and corn syrup and other ingredients, just like the blending of whiskies, which we lately have heard so much about."

"As a matter of fact, the blenders probably have done more to build up the maple sugar market than anybody else. Most people find pure maple sugar just a little too rugged for their palate."

Bartlett's statistics show that there is only enough pure maple sugar produced in an average year to supply half a tablespoonful for each man, woman and child in the United States. And a good part of the crop goes to the tobacco manufacturers for use in sweetening and flavoring cigars.
