Democratic Aspirants Start Swinging

Shivers Crew Is Victorious In Initial Test

CHICAGO —(AP)— An anti-Truman delegation Saturday won the first round of a fight to represent Texas in the Democratic National Convention but a rival "Loyalist" delegation laid claims to final victory on the convention floor.

The National Committee approved the temporary seating of the group led by Governor Shivers, but ordered an investigation of its loyalty to the party and to the party's presidential nominee, whoever he may be.

Shivers issued a brief statement saying he was gratified that the National Committee had placed what he called "the regular Texas delegation" on the temporary roll of the convention. He said the group will hold a caucus Sunday to discuss the situation.

He later told a reporter he is confident his delegation "will win out in the end if fairness continues to prevail."

Former Rep. Maury Maverick, leader of the "Loyalist" delegation announced an appeal would be taken to the convention itself and said, "We know we will win."

"Everybody in the United States knows that Governor Shivers still clearly states that he refuses to agree to support the nominees of the Democratic Party," Maverick said.

Maverick told a news conference later that Texas and Mississippi had received "dirty, low down treatment" at the hands of national Chairman Frank E. McKinney.

He charged that party leaders "in high places" are "bootlicking the Dixiecrats in Texas" in hopes of carrying the state in the election.

Governor Shivers, meanwhile, said on an ABC radio interview that if the party platform turns out to be unacceptable to his group, "I think it definitely would" lead to a party split.

The showdown over the makeup of the big 52-member Texas delegation, with its possible influence on the party's presidential nomination, is expected to come on the floor of the convention this week.

But the issue may be put to a test even earlier if an attempt is made to win the convention's approval of a rule binding all seated delegations to support the party's nominee, whoever he may be.

A credentials subcommittee proposed adoption of such a rule in its report recommending the seating of the Texas slate headed by Shivers and another 18-member anti-Truman delegation from Mississippi.

The National Committee approved the recommendations of the subcommittee—and then went a step

Cole Water Plant Struck By Lightning

A bolt of lightning Saturday afternoon cut Midland off from one of its three major water supplies.

But, luckily, it came during a weekend when the water demands of the city are at their lowest.

Henry Nunn, city water and sewer engineer, said the bolt of lightning, coming in the midst of a heavy downpour which fell east of the city, disabled the pump station at Cole Park.

"The damage necessitated the ordering of some new parts and it probably will be early Monday before necessary repairs can be made."

The lightning struck the main pump house at the water field just as Duward Winkler, pumper at the Cole Park station, was entering the pumphouse.

"He was stunned momentarily," said Nunn, "but suffered no injury."

The disabling of the Cole Park supply left the city depending on water from nearby Rosedale and from Wadley Park, north of the city.

An estimated half-inch of rain fell in the Cole Park area, Saturday but most of it missed Midland itself, where only a short drizzle, enough only to wet the streets, fell during mid-afternoon. A light shower also fell in the downtown section Friday afternoon.

Further east, light rainfall was reported Saturday afternoon at Stanton.

FISHERMAN IKE — Ike, the fisherman, casts for trout in St. Louis Creek, near Fraser, Colo., where he is spending a week resting and fishing with his lifelong friend, Askel Nielsen, while the Democrats start the process of selecting his opponent for the presidency in their national convention opening Monday in Chicago.

Scramble For Ballots Rivals Delegate Row

CHICAGO —(AP)— Democratic aspirants leaped at last Saturday night into a frenzied, full-scale scramble for the party presidential nomination.

Some gossip and guessing had it that President Truman's alternate at the Democratic National Convention opening Monday might vote for Averell Harriman on the first ballot. Other unofficial prophets felt, though, that Vice President Barkley was building up strength on the basis of his long party record, and that the White House nod might go to him.

Harriman, Barkley and the others —Senator Richard Russell, Senator Estes Kefauver and Senator Robert S. Kerr—pulled off the wraps and went to work in earnest as convention delegates swarmed into town by every plane and train. They buttonholed. They jumped from news conference to rally to TV show.

But before the national convention can swing into the business of picking from among them or perhaps some favorite son, there may be a party-shaking row over the seating of contested Dixie delegates. There could be another Southern bolt along lines of the famous walk that split the party four years ago.

Veneer Ripped Away

A furious scrap is on over the decision of a contests subcommittee, ratified later by the full Democratic National Committee, to let anti-Truman delegations represent Mississippi and Texas at the start of the convention. Rival pro-administration delegations challenged the decisions and pledged a showdown fight on the convention floor.

The row ripped away the veneer of calm and outward unity that had settled over the convention scene.

Some of the war-like spirit seemed to be taking hold in the camps of rival delegates. There still was no name calling reminiscent of the Republican pre-convention maneuvering two weeks ago. But candidates stepped up their pace.

Supporters of Harriman, the mutual security director, let it be known they were in touch with the White House during the day. They laid no claim to any definite commitment from the President. But they insisted that new strength was flowing to the Harriman banner.

Barkley Claims Gains

A member of the Truman Cabinet who did not want his name used told a reporter he believed the Chief Executive would support Harriman for a ballot or two, then shift to Barkley if it appeared Harriman couldn't pull the grade. Truman's convention vote will be cast by his Missouri alternate.

Barkley backers claimed their man was picking up power by the minute, without any help from outside the convention.

Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby of Kentucky, who will nominate the popular veep for President, predicted that "Barkley will surprise a lot of people." Rumors that Barkley might get an assist from Illinois got impetus from a visit to Barkley headquarters by an Illinois delegate.

Forces behind Senator Russell of Georgia found something to cheer about, too. Evidently the South still likes him best, even though Russell did set off an alarm in Dixie by taking a crack at the Taft-Hartley

Party Split Threatens On Civil Rights

CHICAGO —(AP)— Democratic feuding over civil rights boiled over in public again Saturday, and worried party leaders grasped for some formula to avoid another North-South split such as occurred in 1948.

Two Northern senators, William Benton of Connecticut and Herbert H. Lehman of New York, ignored indications that many Dixie Democrats might be willing to compromise on the civil rights relations plank.

At public hearings by the platform drafters, Benton and Lehman called for:

1. "A ringing declaration for civil rights."

2. Action by the convention to ask the Senate to rewrite its rules. The idea would be to shut off filibusters — endless debate which Southern senators have used in the past to kill civil rights legislation.

Even Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, who as Platform Committee chairman had been counted on to try for a compromise, appeared to get into the row.

There are indications the whole issue may be fought out on the convention floor.

Mercy Ship Saves 45 Of 49 Aboard Blazing Freighter

NEW YORK —(AP)— The luxury liner Gripsholm turned mercy ship Saturday and snatched from death 45 of 49 persons fleeing a freighter fire 65 miles off the eastern tip of Long Island.

The 5,000-ton freighter, the Black Gull, valued at more than a million dollars, carried nine passengers, a crew of 40 and a rich cargo, including volatile chemicals.

A Gripsholm lifeboat, churning through the tossing waters of the Atlantic, picked 31 officers and crewmen from the bow of the flaming freighter.

They were clustered together, ready to leap into the sea as the chemically-fed inferno roared relentlessly toward them.

A passenger aboard the Gripsholm, Benjamin Harrison Namm, president of the Namm-Loeser Department Store in New York, said the Black Gull's hull was white hot," troubling the survivors as they scrambled into the lifeboat.

One Lifeboat Lost

Another 24 crewmen and passengers, six of them women, had jammed into the Black Gull's last lifeboat and pulled away from the burning vessel.

The other lifeboat had been lost. The four missing crewmen leaped 35 feet off the stern of the Black Gull.

Coast Guard cutters and planes found no trace of them, but kept up the search 15 miles in all directions from the ship.

Of the 45 survivors, 44 were transferred from the white-hulled Gripsholm to the Coast Guard cutter Mackinac. One, Third Officer Nils Våren, was burned so badly he remained on the Sweden-bound Gripsholm for medical treatment.

Pecos Man Jailed In Shooting At Pyote

MONAHANS — (AP) — Frank Vasquez, 29, Pecos, was held in the Ward County Jail Saturday in connection with the fatal shooting of another Pecos man, Gilberto Dominguez, 22.

Dominguez was shot four times late Friday night at Pyote.

District Attorney John Dennison said he had not established a motive for the shooting.

Primary Campaign In Midland, Area, Enters Final Week

Twenty-nine candidates facing opposition in their quest for district, county and precinct offices headed Saturday into the final, furious week of campaigning.

At stake in next Saturday's Democratic primary election are three district offices, three county offices and five precinct offices, in addition to numerous party offices.

While eight candidates are unopposed, interest is high in the outcome of the other races, and political experts expected the county to cast a record-breaking vote at the polls Saturday.

County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry reported Saturday 142 absentee votes already had been cast, with another 66 mailed out and expected to be returned before the Tuesday night deadline.

Monday, incidentally, is the last day for changing registrations from one precinct to another, and Wednesday is the last day for new residents, who have become eligible to qualify as voters, to obtain exemption certificates from the office of the county tax assessor-collector.

Three District Contests

The three district races, which are being contested, held particular interest as the first primary date neared.

Henry Russell of Pecos is facing Alan R. Fraser of Alpine for the office of associate justice of the Court of Civil Appeals at El Paso.

State Senator Hill Hudson of Pecos, seeking reelection for a second term is opposed by State Rep. J. T. Rutherford of Odessa. The senatorial district includes nine West Texas counties extending from Midland to El Paso.

In the race for district attorney, Warren Burnett and Charles Butts, both of Odessa, oppose each other. The district includes Midland and Ector Counties.

Congressman Ken M. Regan of Midland is unopposed for reelection, and Hulon B. Brown of Midland failed to draw opposition in his race for state representative.

Only three county races are contested, with District Clerk Lucille Johnson, County Judge Clifford Keith, Tax Assessor J. M. Speed, and County Treasurer Minnie Dozi-

Republicans Talk Of Entry Into County, District Races

Midland County Republicans were reported studying the possibility Saturday of submitting their own slate of candidates for county and district offices for the first time in history.

The report came as Richard Hughston, county Republican chairman, announced that members of his party for the first time will organize next Saturday on the precinct level.

The Republican precinct conventions will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, while the Democrats will meet in precinct conventions five minutes after the polls close Saturday night in their primary election.

Hughston himself declined to comment on reports of a Republican slate of candidates for county offices, although he did admit "it is a possibility."

County and district offices by tradition have been dominated by the Democrats and the Democratic primary elections have been regarded as decisive, with the November general election little more than a formality.

While the Democratic nominees for county and district offices are selected at the primary election, the Republicans would follow the convention procedure.

The county conventions for both the Democrats and the Republicans will be held August 2 and the Republicans at that time could approve a slate of candidates for county offices to oppose the Democratic nominees in the general election.

Hughston said the Republican precinct conventions will be held at the following places:

Precinct 1 — David Crockett School Auditorium.

Precinct 4 — Building T-24 at Terminal.

Precinct 5 — South Elementary School Auditorium.

Precinct 6 — West Elementary School Auditorium.

Precinct 7 — Sam Houston Elementary School Auditorium.

Open House Sunday To Fete Hospital's Second Birthday

Midland Memorial Hospital, a $1,500,000 living monument to the men and women who served their country in World War II, is two years old.

Sunday marks the second birthday of the modern hospital which was built by and for the people of Midland.

The occasion will be marked by an open house from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, and the public is invited to inspect the institution which has ministered to the needs of almost 9,000 patients who have come through its door since July, 1950.

"This hospital," said Administrator Burton N. Sears, "is the people's hospital. It was built with their nickels and dollars and it was built to serve them.

"We want them to come out Sunday afternoon and see what has happened to the dream which they turned into a reality."

There will be refreshments and members of the Hospital Auxiliary, as well as the hospital staff, will be on hand to conduct visitors through the four floors and explain the mechanics of one of West Texas' finest hospitals.

An invitation to inspect the hospital came, too; from the trustees, headed by Joseph L. O'Neill, Jr., as president.

Other members of the board include Olin R. Prather, J. Harvey Herd, George T. Abell, Tom Campbell, John W. House, Mrs. J. Howard Hodge, Frank Stubbeman, Dr. John B. Thomas, Al H. Vineyard and Mrs. Hal Peck.

The open house Sunday afternoon, incidentally, will give most Midland residents an opportunity to meet, for the first time, the new administrator of the hospital.

Sears, long trained in hospital administration, came to Midland several months ago from the City-County Hospital in Dallas to succeed Richard Harrell as head of the institution.

Many new residents of Midland will have their first opportunity to inspect Midland Memorial Hospital, which was financed through public subscription, with the aid of a federal grant.

They will see a well-equipped hospital with a capacity of 86 adult patients and 20 babies.

On the first floor are the administrative offices, X-ray treatment rooms, a modern laboratory, the Midland Diagnostic Cancer Clinic and the Midland Children's Clinic.

On the second floor are the many well - furnished, restfully-decorated rooms in which most of the patients are cared for while recovering from illnesses and surgery.

In the basement of the building is the physical therapy rooms, an emergency room, a well-equipped laundry and boiler room.

Monday will mark a change in the visiting hours at the hospital, with visitors permitted from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the afternoon and from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in the evening.

Truman Cites Glowing U. S. Economic Picture, Demands End Of Steel Strike

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Truman Saturday called for an immediate, negotiated steel strike settlement to end what he described as "great damage" being done the mobilization and the civilian economy.

Truman pinned blame for the 48-day tieup on steel management alone, saying it has spurned the government's offer of price increases "well in excess" of those required by law or justified by the wages sought by CIO steelworkers.

The peace appeal came in the President's mid-year economic messages to Congress—to a Congress not in session and therefore unable, even if willing, to reopen the mills by passing the new seizue law which Truman has asked.

"The only practical method now open for the steel dispute is bargaining between the parties," the Truman message said. "I have continuously urged that the parties recognize the emergency confronting the nation.

"It is imperative that the parties settle their differences immediately, and resume the production of steel—the loss of which is now causing such great damage to the national defense and to the civilian economy."

The steel crisis shadowed an otherwise glowing report on the nation's economic health. Even while carrrying the defense burden, Truman said, "our business system has been doing better and our people have been living better than ever before."

He painted this picture:

1. National output can be lifted another 100 billion dollars by 1960, above the present rate of 340 billion. Four million civilian workers can be added to the 62,500,000 now holding jobs.

2. The real income and living standards of consumers have risen during the two years of Korean warfare, despite higher taxes and inflation. Savings also have gone up.

3. A fairly stable price level is in prospect "if the current caution of businessmen and consumers is combined with adequate controls." Further inflation "can and should be avoided."

4. The federal deficit will be smaller than expected in the fiscal year just started—about $10,000,000,000 instead of the $14,500,000,000 he forecast in January. But Congress should restore rearmament to a pay-as-we-go basis by raising taxes.

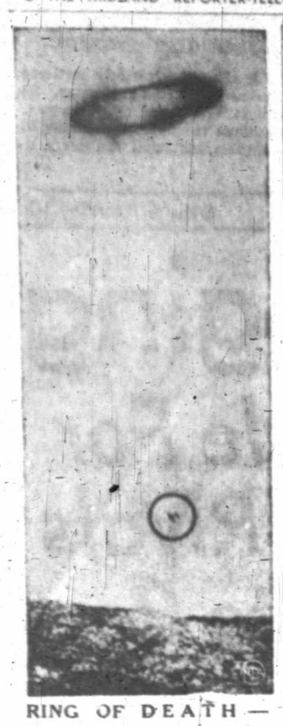

Truman treated gravely, however, the problem of labor-management strife represented by the steel dispute. The stoppage must be ended, he said, "before irreparable damage is done." The steel strike shows that merely delaying the showdown, as is provided by the Taft-Hartley Act, is not enough—"There must be a basic solution," Truman went on.

Recalling the wage-increase proposals of the Wage Stabilization Board, the President said:

"One of the parties has thus far refused to agree to a settlement, even though the other party has indicated its willingness to accept considerably less than the board recommended, and even though the government, in its earnest efforts to avoid a stoppage, indicated that it would grant price concessions well in excess of any required under existing law or justified because of the wage increases proposed.

"When one party to a dispute which is critically affecting the national interest recognizes no obligation to abide by the recommendations of the government—although the government is the only resort of the people when the parties cannot agree—the need for more adequate legislation is fully demonstrated." So far Congress has failed to provide such a law, he went on, and the hope of peace rests in collective bargaining.

Canned Foods May Be Next Casualty Of Steel Walkout

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—The neatly stacked rows of canned beans, tomatoes and other foods in your corner grocery soon may become another big victim of the steel strike.

Regardless of when the walkout is settled, it has lasted long enough now to threaten seriously the supply of steel which goes into the manufacture of the lowly but useful tin can.

The National Canners Association says continuation of the strike will make it impossible for the canning industry to process available farm crops.

Sufficient cans are on hand to preserve only about half the peach and tomato crops. The association says corn, tomatoes and peaches are in the greatest jeopardy.

Tin cans are made from a kind of steel called tin plate. That's just thinly rolled steel which is covered with a thin layer of gleaming tin.

All major sources of tin plate except one were shut off by the June 2 strike of the CIO United Steelworkers. Still in operation are the tin plate mills of Weirton Steel Company in Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio.

While Weirton steel is the second largest tin plate producer in the nation, it can hardly make enough for everyone. Most tin can manufacturers are using up their inventories now and face shutdowns when their stockpiles are gone.

Weirton has an annual tin plate capacity of 960,000 tons. Last year the entire steel industry made about 3,400,000 tons of tin plate for use in packaging food.

Now that the food packing season is at hand, the tin plate shortage has reached alarming proportions. If the supply doesn't open soon, crops now ripening can't be processed and the corner grocer will point to empty shelves and shrug his shoulder about next September or October.

East Germans Aim Campaign At Church

BERLIN—(AP)—East Germany, following the lead of other Soviet satellites, appeared Saturday to be embarked on a menacing drive against the church.

The controlled Eastern press assailed what it called "unhygenic and unworthy conditions" in vacation camps conducted by church officials, both Protestant and Catholic.

The press proposed that police check the camps for violations of government regulations before they are permitted to operate. West Germans immediately viewed the idea as an opening wedge to close out the camps, restricting such activity to the favored and subservient "Free German Youth" organization.

The attack on the camps known throughout Germany for years as ideal children's vacation spots, climaxed a keed of threatening gestures.

The Communist regime refused to grant travel permits for 5,000 Protestants to visit West Germany for the Lutheran World Federation at Hannover in August.

Race For Agriculture Commissioner Called Hot One In Democratic Primary

By TIM PARKER
Associated Press Staff

Hottest race among those seeking to become a member of the Texas governor's official family is the three-way contest for agriculture commissioner.

Three men, all farm-born and with experience in agricultural administration, are on the ballot which Texans will mark in next Saturday's state-wide Democratic primary.

They are incumbent John C. White of Austin, formerly of Wichita Falls; Walter McKay, Fredericksburg, and Billy E. Beard, College Station.

Here are the candidates:

Agriculture commissioner—

John C. White, 27, the "giant killer," of the 1950 election who defeated the late J. E. McDonald, commissioner for 20 years until then. A tall red-headed native of a Clay County farm, son of a tenant farmer, White worked his way through Texas Tech at Lubbock, won his degree in agriculture, and then taught vocational agriculture at Odell, Texas, and later at Midwestern University, Wichita Falls. Campaigns for orderly farm marketing, pure seeds, and soil and water conservation.

Former Department Worker

Walter McKay, 46, Fredericksburg, stock farmer and radio station owner, formerly with the Texas Agriculture Department for 22 years during which time he became familiar with office functions. Born and reared on a Caldwell County farm, graduated from San Antonio High School, and studied at Baylor University before becoming employed by the State Agriculture Department. He accuses White of inefficiency, "destroying" the pink bollworm plowup program in the Valley and of being guided to much by the federal government.

Billy E. Beard, 34, farmer and rancher, born on a rice farm in Jefferson County, studied in Liberty High School and Texas A&M College. After Air Force service during World War II Beard returned to farming and his A&M studies. Only Texas Aggie in the race, Beard quit as appraiser for the veterans land program to enter the contest, campaigns for employment of more competent personnel, better use of farm and ranch products, soil and water conservation.

Lieutenant Governor

Ben Ramsey, 48, San Augustine, is the incumbent lieutenant governor seeking his second term. Ramsey served two terms in the Texas House of Representatives and two terms in the State Senate before being appointed secretary of state by the late Governor Jester in 1949. He resigned to enter the 11-man race for lieutenant governor in 1950. Won in the runoff primary.

Frank Hessbrook Morales, 51, Austin funeral home operator. Morales has not made a statewide campaign. Morales paid his $600 filing fee in $1 and $5 bills and has limited his vote-seeking to personal contacts, principally in Austin. Wants higher pay for teachers and state employes, repeal of the motor inspection law, and equalization of old age pensions.

Attorney General

John Ben Shepperd, 36, Gladewater attorney, popular speaker, former president of the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce, who quit as secretary of state (an appointive post to which Governor Shivers named Shepperd) to seek the attorney generalship left open by Price Daniel's campaign for the U. S. Senate.

Curt Stiles, 37, Dallas attorney with eight years of civil and criminal law practice, opposes Shepperd. Oklahoma-born, Stiles is a Southern Methodist University law school graduate. He pledges an honest and economical administration.

Land Commissioner

Bascom Giles, 51, Austin, land commissioner since 1938, long identified with Texas' fight for title to its tidelands. Giles was employed in a minor post in the general land office shortly after graduating from high school in Austin. Giles says experienced hand is needed to supervise the permanent school fund which has grown from $56 million to $190,000,000,000 under his administration, and the university permanent fund, up from $27 million to $140,000,000,000 in the same period.

Guy Patterson, 46, Eastland real estate man and former car dealer there, opposes Giles. He claims oil and gas leases from state-owned lands should bring about three times more than they do into the school funds and that the Veterans Land Board should be reorganized.

Railroad Commissioner

Olin Culberson, 65, incumbent and chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission whose principal function is to regulate oil and gas production. Former Hill County Judge, Culberson has served two terms on the commission, formerly was its director of production. He pledges efforts toward greater industrialization of Texas through use of natural gas.

Joe Laird, 34, Houston, is seeking Culberson's post. Born in Polk County, Texas, Laird was graduated from high school in Houston, studied petroleum engineering and geology at Texas A&M and University of Oklahoma, has several years' experience as a practicing petroleum engineer. He quit as associate professor of petroleum engineering at A&M to make his campaigns. Pledges better secondary recovery program, more attention to butane fuel industry, conservation of natural gas, improvement of the state's production proration formula.

McCAMEY WTU HEAD

W. B. May is the new district manager for the West Texas Utilities Company in McCamey. He succeeds R. E. Ruble, who has been transferred by the company to Ballinger.

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)— A search in the Gulf for a ship reported in distress has been called off by the Coast Guard.

Officials here said the hunt was abandoned after a PBY had searched for the vessel Thursday.

Kefauver-Nixon Small Fry Romance Is Above Politics

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Politics notwithstanding, six-year-old David Kefauver has a faithful girl friend in Patricia Nixon, also six.

It is a durable attachment between the son of the Democratic presidential aspirant and the daughter of the Republican nominee for vice president—so far it is surviving even a Summer vacation separation.

But maybe that's because David got into some photographs in magazines and newspapers with his father and mother.

Tricia likes to look at David in the magazines even when he is here, you see, and the carryover of pictures while he is away in Tennessee for the Summer is a sort of bridge for the gap.

The Nixon-Kefauver small fry friendship started at a bus stop. That's where they met to go to school together last Winter—every day, said Tricia's mother.

The Spaniel, Too

The Nixons and Kefauvers are neighbors. They live about a block and a half apart. But that is close enough for David's cocker spaniel to follow him to his best friend's house to get a chance for a second supper in the Nixon kitchen.

Since David has been out of town, his family simply answered "no comment" when asked about his best friend, Patricia. But this week when his father stopped his car at the Nixon house to congratulate the vice presidential nominee, the Tennessean did not fail to greet Tricia fondly himself.

There was one report that Summer separation seemed to chill Washington's most famous small fry romance. That happened when reporters and photographers apparently kept Tricia posing and talking to them longer than she liked. Then a reporter asked her if she really was David's best friend. "Not any more," tossed back the tiny glamor girl.

But after they'd gone, she gave herself away—or maybe interest revived. As her mother thumbed through a magazine Tricia called a quick halt to the turning of pages.

"Oh stop, there's David," she cried.

Uncovered Dropcord Electrocutes Infant

LUFKIN—(AP)—A nine month old baby boy was electrocuted accidentally Saturday when he apparently brushed against an outside dropcord while playing on rain-soaked ground.

The tot, Hollis Perry, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Perry.

The accident occurred as the child played in the back yard of a home where his parents recently moved.

A grandfather, C. C. Sinclair of Jasper, arrived an hour later and suffered a heart seizure. He was termed "very ill" at a Lufkin hospital.

East German Red Leaders Order Defense Army Draft

BERLIN—(AP)—East German Communist leaders Saturday ordered registration of all persons from 16 to 65 to find out which industries can provide manpower for a "defense army" of 375,000 without crippling production.

The move affects 7,500,000 men and women. Registration teams will determine which industrial areas can get along with fewer workers. Then intensive drives for "volunteers" will be made in these areas by quota.

By this system, Communist leaders apparently hope to build their army without an outright draft law. They say East Germany must have a "defense army" to counter West Germany's alliance with Western Powers.

West German leaders said they regarded the registraton order as a sure indication that previous efforts to get volunteers had failed. American officers said East German People's Police units, the nucleus of the army, were increased last month from 60,000 to slightly more than 70,000. Another 10,000 are believed to have been recruited since then. But they come mostly from members of the Communist Free German Youth movement, who were given the choice of signing up or losing their standing in their Communist-run home towns.

The West German Socialist party, which maintains a private intelligence network in the Red zone, said the Communists were building huge new concentration camps to house East Germans objecting to their measures.

"The spirit of resistance is steadily increasing among the population of the Soviet zone," the Socialists said in a report issued at Bonn.

The West Berlin refugee center reported that, despite roadblocks and "people's police" with orders to shoot to kill, the number of refugees escaping to the Allied sectors here is steadily growing. In the first two weeks of July, the center recorded 4,400 who successfully made the break, one-fourth of them, the center said, were young men who feared they would be drafted into the "defense army".

If the number who cross the "death zone" around Berlin continues at its present pace, July may record an all-time high for refugees. There were 7,687 in June and 4,422 in May.

Air Force Checks Up On Recruiters At Abilene Office

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The Air Force said Saturday an investigation has been made of circumstances which led recruiting authorities to request transfer of two recruiting officers, Maj. Richard T. W. Rivers and S-Sgt. Sidney H. Cox, from their assignment at Abilene, Tex.

The results of the investigation are being studied by officials of the Continental Air Command, a spokesman said.

The major and sergeant now are assigned to the Reserve Training Center at Hensley Field, Texas, the spokesman said. Rivers, a reserve officer, is from Electra, and Cox is a native of Hominy, Okla.

The Air Force gave no reason for the investigation.

Four Bids Received On Masonic Temple

Four bids for the construction of the new Midland Masonic Temple were received Saturday by members of the Masonic Lodge Building Committee, of which R. B. Cowden is chairman.

The awarding of a contract was delayed until Wednesday afternoon in order to allow additional time for studying the proposals, Hank Avery, secretary of the committee and architect and engineer for the project, announced.

The committee will meet at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Masonic Hall to consider further the contract letting he stated.

Construction of the two-story building is expected to be underway not later than July 28.

The building is to be located at 1600 West Wall Street, will contain two lodge rooms, a large banquet room, four offices, kitchen, rest rooms, storage rooms and practice rooms.

John Lee Smith

Congress Candidate Is Midland Visitor

"We must clean up the filth and corruption that Truman and his gang have brought to Washington before we can hope to clean up the world," John Lee Smith of Lubbock, candidate for congressman at large from Texas, said in Midland Saturday.

The 37-year-old native West Texan and former Texas lieutenant governor, said that if he is elected congressman, he will work for the return of the Tidelands to the states.

The Lubbock attorney served as state senator from 1938 to 1942, and was lieutenant governor from 1942 to 1946.

A Big Week

This is the big week for the Democratic Party and for Democrats throughout the nation, with all eyes focused on Chicago where the party's national convention is scheduled to open officially Monday.

Here in the Lone Star State, however, the big event is the Democratic primary elections, which will be held Saturday. Campaigning for state, district and county offices will reach peak proportions this week despite the Democratic festivities in the Windy City.

• • •

Certainly Texans generally recognize the importance of the Democratic primary elections, since nomination in the Texas Democratic primary usually is tantamount to election. And surely Texas Democrats will take time out to study the qualifications of the candidates for public office in order to determine those for whom they will cast their ballots Saturday.

Then, certainly, Texas Democrats will go to the polls in record numbers on primary election day to exercise their cherished voting privileges.

Most Texas counties, particularly those in West Texas, have more qualified voters than ever before, and all previous voting records should be smashed Saturday as interest in political affairs appears higher than in many years.

• • •

Here in Midland, special efforts will be made by the League of Women Voters, JayCee-ettes, JayCees and the Chamber of Commerce to "get out the vote." But whether or not their efforts meet with success depends entirely upon the individual voter. It is up to YOU!

The piling up of a record vote in the Texas Democratic primary would be a fitting climax, indeed, for the unofficial observance of Democratic Party Week.

Let's take time out this week to select our candidates and then to vote for them on Saturday.

We Recomend

While on the subject of voting, The Reporter-Telegram, after due consideration based on the best information available, wishes to make the following recommendations on several state and district races in the July 26 Democratic primary.

For governor, the reelection of Allan Shivers, who has done and is doing a remarkably fine job for Texas as a whole.

For lieutenant governor, the reelection of Ben Ramsey.

For U. S. Senator, the election of Attorney General Price Daniel.

For attorney general, the election of John Ben Shepperd.

For railroad commissioner, the reelection of Olin Culberson, who has served long and faithfully.

For land commissioner, the reelection of Bascom Giles, a good and faithful public servant.

For state senator, the reelection of Hill D. Hudson, who has represented Midland and the entire district in a loyal faithful and highly satisfactory manner during his first term in the office.

Congratulations

Congratulations to the community-owned Midland Memorial Hospital on the observance Sunday of its second birthday anniversary.

Congratulations also are in order for the loyal and faithful, shareholders, trustees, officials, medical staff members and other personnel of the institution, which has served and is serving the hospital needs of Midland and area residents.

• • •

Midland Memorial Hospital has come a long way since it first opened in July of 1950, and it is hoped the installation will continue to progress and to prosper as future birthdays roll around.

Midland Memorial deserves the support and cooperation of Midlanders every day, but certainly congratulations and best wishes are in order today. It is hoped citizens will visit the hospital during its open house hours Sunday afternoon.

Wise people stop at a railroad crossing for a minute—others forever.

To the person who really deserves a pat on the back silence isn't golden.

If you want people to always believe you when you tell the truth, never get into the habit of lying.

You might just as well offer a penny for a person's thoughts—that's about all you can buy with it.

A Summer Breeze

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1952, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Drew Pearson says: Senator Russell is able legislator but unacceptable to the North; He has carried the ball against civil rights program; Republicans have private arrangement with Russell on civil rights.

CHICAGO—Senator Dick Russell of Georgia happens to be a distant cousin of mine, so perhaps I should admit to some prejudice in his favor.

Of course, being cousins doesn't mean much these days of cutthroat politics, because Russell who is a cousin of Vice President Barkley, is opposed to him for the nomination, while both are cousins of Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

Forgetting kinship, however, and getting down to the qualifications that make for a good Preseident, it often has been said that Russell would be the most likely candidate to get the nomination if he were not born South of the Mason-Dixon Line. This probably is true.

By this is meant two things:

1. Senator Russell has been in the forefront of the Southern Democrats who have fought against the Truman civil rights program.

2. It is an inescapable fact that the leaders of the Democratic Party, in figuring out election strategy, have decided they must win the big Northern states even at the risk of losing the South. Four times Roosevelt carried enough Northern states to win, even without the South, and the secret of his success was swinging big blocs of city voters, among which the Northern negro is important.

This is an unpleasant way of putting it, but it's the way Democratic strategists, coldly calculating the electoral vote, have figured it. That is why Dick Russell, able as he is, popular as he is, has two strikes against him as a successful Democratic candidate.

Front Line Leader

This brings us back to point No. 1: If Russell had stood more in the background of the racial question, as Senator Sparkman of Alabama, Kefauver of Tennessee, or the two senators from Kentucky, there still might be a chance for the big blocs of Northern voters to overlook his record.

However, Dick Russell has been the key man in the Southern bloc's battle against FEPC, against cloture, and against civil rights generally.

This is due almost entirely to one thing—his ability. As one of the ablest men in the Senate, his Southern colleagues rely on him to carry the ball. He, in turn, has become their spokesman and chief strategist in forming the GOP-Southern coalition which really dominates the Senate.

The public may not realize it, but the Senate today is not really run by senatorial leaders representing President Truman, but by a coalition of which the spokesmen are Dick Russell and Bob Taft. When these two, representing the Republicans and the Southern Democrats, decide on a program, that program is adopted.

At Chicago, for instance, some observers were surprised to see the Republicans, meeting under the picture of Abraham Lincoln, adopt a civil rights plank in the GOP platform closer to the Southern states' rights position than that of President Truman.

Actually there was no reason for surprise. For Taft and other GOP senators have had the votes at any time they wanted them to put across a cloture rule to end Senate filibusters against civil rights. But there's been a long-standing arrangement on this between Dick Russell and the Republicans. So despite the GOP oratory about Abraham Lincoln, no program is passed.

In May 1950, for instance, the question of voting cloture against filibustering came up for debate. Republican leaders figured it would be a good thing to keep the civil rights issue on the frying pan, thus show that Truman was unable to control the Southern wing of his own party. Also Taft wanted to kill the proposed reorganization of the National Labor Relations Board.

So Dick Russell, spokesman for the South, agreed to vote against the NLRB reorganization, while Taft agreed to have just enough GOP votes swing over to the South to defeat cloture. And that was what happened.

This smooth teamwork has operated on various other measures. At about the same time, the Republicans wanted to defeat an Administration plan to run a government power line from the federal dam at Anaconda, Montana, in competition with Montana Power and Light. So Senator Russell worked out a deal with Senator Ecton of Montana and other Republicans to vote with them on the power line if they would vote with him on cloture.

This was what happened. Thus Montana Power and Light, which didn't want competition, was benefited on the GOP side, while the Truman civil rights program was blocked on the Southern side.

When you get away from racial problems, however, Senator Russell is far more liberal than his Georgia colleague, Senator George, who has supported President Truman on foreign policy, and has been a tower of strength in putting across the arms program.

Patronage, however, is another matter. There the senator from Georgia is a law unto himself. He considers the state of Georgia his own bailiwick as far as federal appointments are concerned, and although he lets his colleague, Senator George in on part of the gravy, he is highhanded in dealing with President Truman.

Although the President has promoted Russell's own brother to the U. S. Court of Appeals, nevertheless the senator has used his power of personal privilege to block an old supporter, Neil Andrews, as a U. S. district judge merely because he favored another man.

In his personal relations, Dick Russell is kindly and chivalrous. Although he has been the foremost opponent of civil rights, he has profound respect for the individual negro and the dignity of man.

When he saw a woman, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, being persecuted unfairly by Senator McCarthy and friends in her confirmation fight as assistant secretary of defense, he insisted on a complete and fair hearing; finally sent the matter to the Justice Department for perjury prosecution.

And when he found himself making uphill progress against his colleague from Tennessee, Estes Kefauver, and his beautiful wife, the bachelor senator from Georgia mused:

"Perhaps what I need is a Nancy."

Have A Laugh

By BOYCE HOUSE

These stormy state political conventions are nothing new. JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

What do you do when you get to a bad contract? Do you waste your time complaining about hard luck, or do you look for a loophole you can squeeze through?

Take today's hand, for example, played by Theodore Lightner, the well-known New York expert. Did he complain about his hard luck? Of course he did. Teddy is undoubtedly the best moaner in top flight bridge circles. But then he proceeded to make the contract anyway, much to the disgust of East and West.

It was clear that by any ordinary line of play Lightner would lose two trumps and two diamonds. The only chance was to win enough tricks in hearts and clubs to get rid of three diamonds. In short, he had to take finesses in both clubs and hearts, with a singleton in each suit!

Shaking his head dolefully, Lightner finessed the jack of clubs at the first trick. When it held, he took the ace of trumps and gave up a trump trick. A diamond came back, and he won with the ace.

Now he had to risk the heart finesse, whether he liked it or not. He made no secret of the fact that he didn't like it, but he tried the finesse, and it worked. Now he could get his three discards on the top clubs and the ace of hearts—and the shaky game contract was in.

Maybe it pays to be a pessimist!

Q—The bidding has been:

2 N.T.	Pass	?

You, South, hold: Spades K-6-4, Hearts J-7-2, Diamonds K-Q-8-4, Clubs K-7-6. What do you do?

A—Bid six no-trump. There should be a fine play for the slam even if North has a dead minimum for his opening bid of two no-trump. It would be foolish to invite a slam that you can practically guarantee.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding is the same as in the question just answered. You, South, hold: Spades K-Q-3, Hearts Q-J-2, Diamonds K-Q-8-4, Clubs K-J-6. What do you do?

CONVENTION COVERAGE

GOP Experts Say Old Guard Could Come Back; It's Not Out

CHICAGO—The Republican Old Guard, licking its wounds after the battle of the stockyards amphitheater, also is counting its numbers.

A careful muster made by Republican Party experts in a position to know its inner workings, comes up unofficially with an estimate that the Old Guard is still a powerful factor. It is down, but not out. It could come back.

The best place to measure this strength is said to be on the new Republican National Committee. It now is made up of 138 memoers. It is divided roughly as 75 Eisenhower Republicans and 63 Taft Republicans, for lack of better classifications.

This count may not be absolutely accurate. It was not made on the basis of an actual poll of the National Committee members. It represents a check on their known sympathies and the voting record of their state delegations in the recent Chicago convention.

The old National Committee was made up of two members—a man and a woman—from each of the 48 states, the District of Columbia Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands. Total membership, 106.

To this now have been added the 32 Republican state chairmen from the 32 states that have Republican governors and/or a majority of their congressional delegations made up of Republicans.

Automatic Members

Thirty-six members of the old National Committee retired or failed to win reelection by their state organizations. To say that the 36 new members who replaced them, plus the 32 new state chairmen represent the Eisenhower strength on the National Committee does not present the whole picture.

Some of the old members who stayed on have been for General Eisenhower right along. Included in the list are Sinclair Weeks of Massachusetts, Harry Darby of Kansas, J. Russell Sprague of New York and others. They were, however, a minority of the old committee.

Also, not all of the 32 chairmen, who automatically became members of the National Committee, are Eisenhower supporters. Men like Ray Bliss of Ohio, Wayne Hood of Wisconsin and others have been counted in the Taft ranks. The breakdown on these 32 state chairmen is roughly 20 for Eisenhower, 12 for the Old Guard.

The 36 retiring members of the National Committee are, however, largely from the Old Guard ranks.

Four members of the old executive committee, all from the Old Guard, won't be around any more. They are: James P. Dewey of Vermont, John E. Jackson of Louisiana, Cyrus ... Phillip of Wisconsin and Mrs. Charles S. Hickman of Iowa.

50 Veterans Remain

Other Old Guarders retired from the scene include such party wheelhorses as Ezra Whitla of Idaho, Harry Sommers of Georgia, Werner Schroeder of Illinois, Mrs. Bertha D. Bauer of Illinois, Harrison Spangler of Iowa, Jacob France of Maryland and Ralph Cake of Oregon.

There still remains on the Republican National Committee a hard core of more than 50 veterans of the Old Guard. They have stood their ground firmly and faithfully—most of them for a good many of the 20 long and lean years the GOP has been out of power in Washington.

Included in this list are such men as Clarence Buddington Kelland of Arizona, Ralph F. Gates of Indiana, Perry Howard of Mississippi, Guy George Gabrielson of New Jersey, Rep. Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, G. Mason Owlett of Pennsylvania, Rep. B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee, George T. Hansen of Utah and Walter S. Hallinan of West Virginia, to name a few of those most prominent.

The choice which now faces this Old Guard leadership is whether it will join General Eisenhower's new crusade. The alternative is to sit by, almost hoping that the new crusade fails so that the Old Guard again will gain control of what has been an exclusive, conservative club.

Q & A

Q—Must Indians who live on reservations have permission in order to leave?

A—Indians are not obliged to stay on these reserved tracts, but they usually prefer to stay because the reserved land is tax-free. They are at complete liberty to leave and return whenever they choose.

• • •

A—Important American cities.

• • •

Q—In World War I did any American troops fight under British command?

A—No. From the first, General Pershing insisted on a separate American Army. The Allies wanted to use American troops to fill up the ranks in their own armies but Pershing was firm.

Q—Is the Sea Lily a plant or an animal?

A—It is actually an animal. The featherlike arms which radiate about the head make the animal look like a flower, and are responsible for the name.

• • •

Q—How are most of the world's great art galleries maintained?

A—Most art galleries in Europe belong to the people and are run by the government. Most American art galleries are kept up by private gifts, endowments, and memberships.

I Can't Cry Now

By Addie McElfresh

Copyright, 1952, NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Katy Elmo has only one person to turn to when every one seems against her. This is Ted Jordan, the friend of her brother Chris who was killed. The sheriff's force seems to think Chris had been robbing a store and was shot by the storekeeper, who also died of wounds received in the battle. This was followed by the death on Katy's own farm, of Agnes Jerome, who knew something but was murdered. After being questioned by Dave Argus, a deputy sheriff, Katy goes home and asks Ted to come out to see her.

• • •

VI

INSTANTLY Katy Elmo wished she hadn't spoken about Agnes Jerome. Katy's pretense at light heartedness, and Ted's as well, vanished and the fear was back. It stayed with them.

It stayed and it grew until it touched even the dog Major. Major, though he lay with paws outstretched toward the hearth, was uneasy, watchful without ever moving his magnificent head.

"I don't like it, Katy," Ted said once, when the dog's ears made radar-like half circles. "Do you suppose someone is prowling?"

"Who would?"

"The person who killed the Jerome woman." He put it so matter-of-factly.

Ledbetter's deputy had said not to depend too much on a dog and now Ted was warning her, too. "The killer returning to the scene of the crime, Ted?"

But Ted was watching Major. The big shepherd was on his feet, on silent guard that didn't waiver even when Katy dropped a hand to his head.

"Shall I take a look around?"

"No!" Katy cried through fear that was raw in her throat, and coppery-tasting.

Ted looked at her, quickly, questioningly. "But darling! We can't just sit and wait for—for whoever is out there to come to us!"

Ted is afraid too, Katy thought. But Ted has faith in me, he knows I didn't—

She drew a sharp breath when there was a heavy-knuckled rap at the door. Don't answer it, Ted! Don't go!

But she didn't cry it aloud, it was only her heart that was pleading. Of course they would answer the door. It was something one always did. An everyday occurrence, answering your door. She started to her feet.

"No, you don't, Katy." Ted's hand on her arm pulled her back. "I'll see who it is."

• • •

HE grinned, barely, his own caution hiding the reassurance he intended, and Katy watched him go across the room into the hall. There was a tiny, terrible silence, punctuated by the turning of the knob.

"Oh. Hello!"

"You sound relieved. Expecting someone else?"

Dave! It was the voice of Dave Argus. Katy remembered to breathe again.

"We didn't know what to expect," Ted admitted.

"I imagine not." Then, as Katy went into the hall, "Hi, Katy Elmo. Still packing the chip on your shoulder for law and order?"

Katy stiffened in spite of the gladness that had come with the sound of his voice. "Can you give me one good reason why I shouldn't?" she challenged.

"I can." The gray eyes were laughing at her, teasing her when they shouldn't. Not in the face of murder.

Katy frowned.

"Me," Dave Argus finished, winking at Ted.

But Ted Jordan was in no winking mood. "Have you been prowling around the house?" he demanded.

"Yes, Dave," Katy said, "Major heard something, we think."

"Well, I"—Deputy Argus hung his head—"I did look around a little."

"In the dark? Why? What did you expect to find?"

"One thing at a time, Ted, one at a time," Dave held up a remonstrating hand. "In the dark, yes, because I wanted to see if I could follow that foot path—"

"Dave!" Katy gasped.

"—down from the gate like Agnes Jerome did." Dave Argus talked smoothly, as if Katy had not interrupted at his mention of the scene of the crime. "I walked in the dark, without seeing where I was going."

"You made it all right." Ted spoke. "So what?"

"I made it, but it was pretty rough going. And I wasn't running away from anyone, either."

• • •

KATY took a deep, steadying breath. What was Deputy Sheriff Dave Argus trying to say? It could be so important, yet the meaning seemed to escape her. "Why did you need to know, Dave?" she asked.

Dave Argus seemed to be taking his time about answering. The seconds of pause seemed like minutes. And as Katy waited for the reply she remembered the slanting morning sunlight and the creek rippling over the rocks and Agnes Jerome's body.

Finally, when it seemed that Katy could stand the silence no longer, Dave Argus said, "Because Agnes Jerome didn't come down that path. A stranger wouldn't have tried it, even if she had known a path was there."

June Hazlip Talks Politics With Governor Of Colorado

By JUNE HASLIP

(Editor's Note: June Hazlip, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Hazlip of Midland and a Summer student at Colorado University at Boulder, was one of a group of journalism students who interviewed Gov. Dan Thornton of Colorado in his office Friday. Her story, rushed to The Reporter-Telegram by airmail, appears below. Miss Hazlip, incidentally, started the Youth Center Chatter column which still appears regularly in The Reporter-Telegram.)

DENVER, COLO—In his cluttered office in the Colorado state capitol sits a man who suddenly has been thrown into the national political limelight. A man who looks more like a rancher than a governor and claims to be a "cattleman, not a politician"—Governor Dan Thornton of Colorado.

The governor recently became an object of national speculation through his association with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Republican presidential nominee, during the recent GOP convention battle.

Party grapevines and a national news magazine have circulated Governor Thornton's name as the next secretary of Interior should General Eisenhower win when national election time rolls around.

Apparently expecting the question and amused by it, Governor Thornton laughed heartily when asked whether he would accept the post should it be offered him.

Wants Ike Victory

"We have not talked about it. I have not been asked and I do not expect it," he smiled. "As far as I am concerned it is still in the rumor stage."

The governor also stated that he wanted nothing from his efforts but a victory for the general, but should he be asked to serve his nation in any capacity he would do so gladly.

"I think the reason for the rumor is my interest and study of soil conservation, water and natural resources," he said.

The governor, who is known to practically everyone from the capitol janitor to the top national leaders as "Dan," leaned across his desk and spoke earnestly of his interest in the nation's conservation problems.

For All Generations

"We are merely custodians of the land. America belongs to all generations, not just one. We should plan and use it wisely to increase productivity from one generation to the next."

This husky, 41-year-old ex-football player with the strong grip and friendly blue eyes, is typical of the current trend of youth in politics.

"On the young people rests the future of the nation," Gov. Thornton stated.

"We must use youth in every conceivable way, political and otherwise."

Young people, even the non-voters, can aid in the coming presidential campaign by being vocal and in organizing on college and university campuses throughout the nation, he declared.

"These organizations should not be for young Republicans alone, but should also include young Democrats, young Progressives, and all young people. They should be called 'Young Americans for Eisenhower.'"

When asked if 18-year-olds should be allowed to vote, the governor replied with a definite, "Yes."

"There is much merit in the 18-year-old vote," he said. "By the time a young person reaches 18 he has the normal responsibilities. He can be inducted into the service, and he should have the right and voice of the vote."

"If General Eisenhower should be elected, do you think this might become law," we asked.

The governor paused a moment, then answered. "I cannot speak for the general, but I think him to be the greatest believer in youth on the public scene perhaps in our nation's history.

"General Ike would be favorable to any advantages for youth. He is sold on the actions of youth."

In reference to the coming campaign, Governor Thornton said that it was not a Republican campaign but a crusade for all people to renew liberty and strengthen the two party system.

Split In Party

He believes there is room for improvement in the party, but that "under the inspirational leadership of General Eisenhower we can become a powerful political force."

A split in the Republican Party might have developed in the recent convention if party leaders, General Eisenhower and Senator Robert A. Taft, had not moved to heal that split, the Republican governor said.

"Nothing is solved by thinking in the past," he stated. "The main interest is in America. We must present a united front of forward thinking Americans to the world. The problems are in the future and we have a tremendous amount of work ahead.

"Americans must prove to ourselves and to the world that we can do the job under our competitive system and come through with flying colors, if we work."

The cowboy-booted governor, an ex-Texan, sent regards to two prominent Midland cattlemen, George Glass and Roy Parks. He spoke highly of West Texas cattle and ranches.

MIDLANDER INTERVIEWS GOVERNOR—A question directed by June Hazlip, Midland journalism student, brings a broad smile and a quick answer from jovial Gov. Dan Thornton of Colorado during an interview in his office Friday. Miss Hazlip, a Midland High School graduate, is a Summer student at the University of Colorado at Boulder.

Hitches In Three Nations Enough, Says Charlie Riss

SAN ANTONIO—(AP)—Almost everyone admits Pfc. Charles F. Riss, 27, of the San Antonio General Depot is a well-rounded Army man.

Riss has served in three armies—German, French and United States.

He speaks six languages.

He has been a U. S. prisoner of war.

He has fought the Russians.

Riss, a native of France, was impressed into the German Army after France was overrun in World War II.

"They asked me if I'd rather be in the army or go to a concentration camp," he explained. "I chose the army."

He served three years as a German soldier on the eastern front, fighting Russians. Forced to retreat, he retreated right into a U. S. prisoner of war camp, where he spent eight months.

When his history became known, Riss was repatriated to France. He volunteered for a year's duty in the French Army.

Still later, he joined an uncle in Boston, Mass., took out his first citizenship papers—and was drafted into the U. S. Army.

Riss, now a clerk-typist, pays high tribute to the effectiveness of German infantry basic training. And he thinks the Russians are good soldiers.

As for languages, Riss speaks German, French, Italian, Arabic, Dutch, English and an Alsace-Lorraine dialect.

He's a musician by vocation and intends to re-visit France when his discharge from the Army goes through — maybe next February. Then he wants to return to the states to make a living as an accordion soloist and entertainer.

"But no more army duty, please," Riss sighs.

Frank Lloyd Wright Scoffs At 'Modernism' In Housing

By SAUL PETT

NEW YORK—(AP)—It was a hot day, but not too hot for Frank Lloyd Wright to let go some blistering opinions.

Modern architecture, said the father of much in modern architecture, is overdone, is bad, is getting worse.

It's heading for the gutter, he said. "It won't improve for at least 10 years."

The modern American city? "A busted flush," said the 83-year-old architect.

The big urban apartment developments? "Nothing but sanitary slums."

The new Lever House and the United Nations Secretariat buildings? "Big boxes on small sticks."

"Modern architecture, like other things in history," he said, "is running in a cycle. First, a principle appears, wearing the countenance of a principle. The countenance has intriguing effects.

"But when the effects are repeated without anyone asking why. The principle is neglected or forgotten. The effects become style and the style, like all styles, go headlong toward the gutter.

"Now, we're having the effects going to the gutter and then, maybe within 10 years, we'll fish out the missing principles and develop the architecture of democracy, of freedom, of individuality."

Specifically, Wright thinks we're using glass "senselessly" and misusing steel "without really understanding its purpose."

"The ranch house which I developed in the West early in this century has been prostituted," he said. "I built them so they were low and broad and gave a great sense of shelter. The principles have been misunderstood.

"Picture windows?" They work both ways. People looking out forget the people looking in."

He compared architecture to other arts.

"You can listen to music and understand it," he said. "You can look at a painting and understand it. But a building is there as an experience. You have to live in it to understand it."

"The big city apartment projects are sanitary slums. They're great prison-like towers of brick rising up to the sky like a menace to the happiness of the people. They have transferred the slum from the body of man to the soul of man."

Cook Lost As Fire Devours Oil Tanker On Busy Waterfront

NEW YORK —(AP)— An oil tanker gushed up in flames Saturday and, wracked by mighty explosions, drifted out of control down the East River waterfront.

Then abandoned by its four-man crew, it was nudged into a pier by a fireboat and sank to the bottom.

The vessel's cook, Michael Lizzul, 52, of Manhattan, was missing.

Its assistant engineer, Donald Hastings, 35, suffered second degree burns and shock.

The accident would have caused even more damage had it occurred a few minutes sooner. The 135-foot wooden tanker had just unloaded 91,000 gallons of gasoline.

The tanker, owned by the Poling Brothers, finished its delivery to a Sinclair Refinery Company depot in Mt. Vernon, then started for Sea Girt, N. J.

As the vessel plied down the river off 79th Street, Capt. Thomas Nelson heard a terrifying shout from Hastings in the engine room below:

"The boat is on fire."

The crew fled for their lives.

Soon after they hit the water, the skipper said, three explosions boomed out.

Houston Rounds Up 25 Dope Peddlers

HOUSTON — (AP) — Twenty-five Houston dope peddler suspects, including at least five persons said by officers to be big time wholesalers, were behind bars Saturday night following an all night roundup by federal narcotics agents, P. A. Williams, supervisors of the Federal Narcotics Bureau here said.

The large scale raid, one of the biggest here in some time, followed weeks of painstaking undercover work by agents from other cities as well as Houston, Williams said.

The raiders also seized "so much marihuana and heroin that we haven't had time to add it up yet." Also included in the foray were rifles and pistols taken from the prisoners.

Niagara Falls is 167 feet high; upper Yosemite Falls, in California, is 1,430 feet high.

Dallas GOP's Hold 'Elect Ike' Huddle

DALLAS —(AP)— Dallas County Republican workers Saturday went about their work of organizing precincts for the election of Gen. Eisenhower with renewed enthusiasm, following a mass rally of 400 GOP partisans at which harmony and good will prevailed.

Not one discordant note marred an atmosphere of Republican solidarity at the rally in a downtown auditorium as ex-Taftites joined with Eisenhower backers in planning phase two of the battle for a Republicans administration and a two-party Texas.

Midland Production Credit Association Reports Record Membership, Net Profits

An all-time high membership and financial condition was reported by R. H. (Bob) Coffey of Midland, manager and secretary-treasurer of the Midland Production Credit Association, at its eighteenth annual business session and barbecue held Saturday at the Midland Livestock Auction plant.

Coffey pointed out the association now has 404 stockholders in the 12 county area it serves. He reported a net profit of $38,100 for the first six months of 1952. He said the association has $2,600,000 in loans and a capital stock of $561,000.

M. F. King of Midland was reelected president, and also was reelected for a three-year term as a director. King has been a director nine years, serving as president the last four years.

Charles J. Cox of Gorden City was reelected as vice-president and director. He has served as a director 11 years and as vice-president two years.

A third director, A. B. Bohannan of Midland, was elected.

Holdover directors are E. G. Branch of Rankin and Jim Franklin of Stanton.

Two associate directors were named. Bluford Thornton of Pyote was reelected, and F. W. White of Big Spring was elected a new associate director.

The directors reappointed Coffey for another year as association manager and secretary-treasurer. He had held the posts the last three and a half years. David W. Workman also was reappointed assistant manager and secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Virgil P. Lee, president of the Production Credit Corporation of Houston, urged the 145 members and guests present to "tighten their belts to offset a two year drouth period."

The speaker said "we are going to have to have less good times and shorter automobiles to offset high living costs and drought conditions."

Claude B. Cotton of San Angelo, field representative for the Houston Production Credit Corporation, accompanied the speaker to Midland.

District Judge R. W. Hamilton made the welcoming address.

Franklin, in an annual directors' report, pointed out that main offices of the association are in Midland, with a field office in Big Spring. George Elliott, Jr., is manager of the latter office. He said the association has members in the following counties: Midland, Martin, Howard, Glasscock, Reagan, Upton, Crane, Ector, Winkler, Andrews, Ward and Loving.

Six hundred pounds of barbecue and trimmings were served by Doc's Barbecue of Midland. Wives of association members served cake and pie.

Texas Office-Seekers Busy As Primary Election Nears

By The Associated Press

Texans have a double date with Democracy Saturday. Those who seek their favor, with six days left to work, are stepping up their pace.

At the polling booths in the Democratic primary election, voters will name their candidates. State and local offices are at stake—and also a U. S. Senate seat and 11 seats in Congress.

Also Saturday, control of the Texas Democratic and Republican Parties again will be determined in precinct conventions.

Attorney General Price Daniel, taking his campaign for the U. S. Senate to Texas' largest city Saturday night, said in a prepared address that "outsiders . . . are meddling in this election."

But Daniel predicted he will win by more than the two-to-one margin he had forecast earlier. He said a "well-financed, last-minute effort is being made to whittle down our margin of victory" but indicated a belief this would, instead, react to his benefit.

Congressman Lindley Beckworth, Gladewater, also after the seat being vacated by Tom Connally, toured 10 small towns in the Dallas area Saturday after a Friday night appearance in Dallas. In that speech, the young lawmaker charged Daniel is conducting a "scurrilous campaign." He said more than a million "slanderous" letters attacking him, but bearing no return address, have been mailed in Texas.

Ralph Yarborough, Austin, carried his campaign for governor into the heavily-populated Rosenburg area Saturday. In a compaign address there, he accused Governor Shivers of falsely claiming authorship of the first Texas old age pension law.

"Simply Not True"

"In an attempt to win back the votes of our mistreated old folks," declared Yarborough, "the governor repeatedly refers to having written the first old age pension law. This simply is not true. The first pension bill was written by Sanderford, Martin and Davis during the second called session of the 44th Legislature in 1935."

Shivers had said he would leave his campaign to his friends while he was in Chicago leading the fight for his conservative delegation to the Democratic convention. Saturday some of his friends came forward with an endorsement.

The endorsement, released by Shivers' campaign headquarters in Austin, was mailed to the state's 1,270 county judges and commissioners.

Family Constructs Schooner For Race

PASADENA, CALIF.—(AP)—When the William J. Williams family build a boat they do it first class—even if it takes two and one-half years.

The family recently finished their 40-foot schooner, the Enif, in their backyard and now have visions of entering the beautiful vessel in the 1953 Honolulu race.

Williams, a former sea captain, hand-sewed the sails for the yacht, working over 560 square feet of canvas in the family's living room.

Funeral Rites Held For O. W. Roberts

Funeral services for the Rev. O. W. Roberts, Sr., 62, a resident of Midland more than 30 years, were held at 4 p.m. Saturday in the Nennie W. Ellis Chapel. The Rev. Mr. Fellows, pastor of the Assembly of God Church in Houston officiated.

Mr. Roberts, pastor of the Pentecostal Holiness Tabernacle here, died early Friday at his home, 601 South Colorado Street, of a heart ailment.

A contracting brickmason by trade, he came to Midland more than 30 years ago from Abilene. He was widely known here. He was born Aug. 31, 1889, at Fulton, Miss.

Survivors include the widow; four sons, O. W. (Preacher) Roberts, Jr., of the Midland Police Department, Brooks and Wilbern Roberts of Carlsbad, N. M., and Jimmy Roberts of Midland; a daughter, Mrs. Philip Harvey of Odessa, and two sisters, Mrs. Bessie Ellison of Port Arthur and Mrs. Martin Buford of Abilene.

Pallbearers at the services were Lon J. Roberts, Ed Darnell, Fred Middleton, Alvin Roberts, Bill Keel and H. G. Bedford.

Excellent business background, owner and operator of (Hi-D-Ho Drive In) in Midland, employing 20 persons. Served 4 years in World War Two as enlisted man. Mess Sgt. in Officers Mess 4 years. Served three years as president of West Texas (54 counties) Restaurant Association. Am at present time serving two year term as Director of Texas Restaurant Association. Have ample time to devote to the affairs of County Business.

What I Will Work Toward If Elected

Cooperation of County, City and School officials in developing and maintaining recreational facilities for the people of Midland County (including County participation in building three swimming pools and parks in City of Midland.) Erection of Exhibit Building for County Fairs and Livestock Shows. To continue building and improving County roads in all sections of Midland County. To work toward getting a four lane (divided) highway from east city limits to Martin County line. Cooperation of County and City officials in handling charity medical cases. County to work on more extensive educational program to cope with juvenile delinquency.

I am in favor of a more adequate library for Midland and Midland County, but think the City of Midland should cooperate and participate in this project.

During the recent most welcome rains in and around Midland, we had a lot of flooded streets and homes in Midland, particularly north Midland. 50% of the water that came through the City was from the high plateau in North Midland County.

If elected your Commissioner of Precinct No. 1, Midland County, I will work with County and City engineers in getting this water routed north of town to East Midland Draw, instead of flooding your homes and city streets.

I think Midland County should be redistricted on a basis that each County Precinct start at Court House and run north - south - east - west respectively.

What I Will Oppose If Elected As Commissioner Precinct No. 1

I will oppose any form of Rubber Stamp Government, and will not vote on any issue that might lead to that type of government.

I will not accept any gift or compensation or promise thereof, from any person, firm or corporation for aiding any dealings with any agency of the County Government.

Warship Assumes New Task; Becomes New Weapon For God

VICKSBURG, Miss.—(AP)—A ship designed for dumping tanks and troops on enemy shores was blessed Saturday as a peacetime weapon for God.

The converted Navy LSM, its equipment and a crew of "technical missionaries", is a million-dollar project aimed at spreading Christianity and prosperity through an African jungle.

It's the most ambitious project thus far by millionaire manufacturer Robert G. LeTourneau who supports his interest in religion with about 90 cents of every dollar he makes.

Evangelist Billy Graham flew to nearby Jackson from his home in Montreat, N. C., and drove here Saturday to give the dedication.

The ship, drawn close to Dusty Mississippi River landing, 10 miles from here, was loaded with half a millions dollars worth of heavy earth-moving equipment.

Another quarter million dollars worth of spare parts was packed in the hold.

Technical Missionaries

Stored in odd corners was gear for jungle camping, a portable machine shop, electric generators, farm tools, trucks, autos, pre-fabricated huts and a light plane.

All this and the 20 "technical missionaries" will make the trip downriver and across the Atlantic to the Republic of Liberia, West Africa.

The project, blessed also by the State Department, is backed also by LeTourneau, 63, a bald, bespectacled heavily built businessman who thinks it's foolish to try to convert natives to Christianity while their bellies cry for food.

Equally foolish, he thinks, is the "handout" system, which creates "rice Christians" — the missionaries' wry term for natives who stay converted as long as the mission will feed them.

Instead, LeTourneau plans to clear the jungle with heavy machinery, build villages, roads and teach the natives modern farming.

"The same man who teaches the natives how to raise their standards of living will teach them the love of the Savior who died for them," he said.

Half-Million Acres

The "technical missionaries" will have half a million acres of Liberia as their test tube.

No white man can own land in the republic, but the Liberian government, the State Department and LeTourneau worked out an 80-year-lease.

Gustav Dick and Louise Dick, LeTourneau's son-in-law and daughter, will head the expedition. Their three children, aged 11, nine and six, will go along.

The 265-foot ship, named for LeTourneau, was bought from a Pittsburgh shipper and converted at a total cost of $250,000.

LeTourneau, who has wrestled with the "practical side of Christianity" since early youth, doesn't figure he's running a giveaway show.

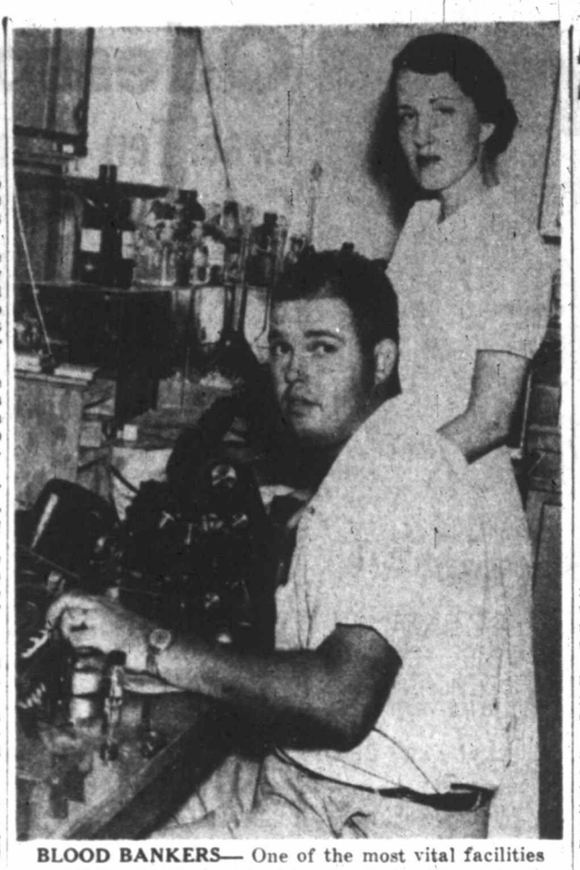

Liberia has one of the world's finest stands of timberland-mahogany. With luck, LeTourneau hopes to make the project pay a good part of its way.

But it doesn't expect the "LeTourneau Foundation of Liberia" to ever become a self-supporting institution.

"It could turn out to be a business," he said. "But if there weren't bigger fish to fry I assure you I wouldn't tackle it."

The ship, dubbed LeTourneau's Ark pulled away from the river landing, near the LeTourneau plant, later Saturday. It will take about three weeks to make the trip.

LeTourneau waved bon voyage and plans to fly to Africa in one of his private planes in time to meet the ship when it arrives.

RIGHT MAN, RIGHT DATA

FORT WORTH — (AP) — The source of certain information sought by the Star-Telegram Saturday was both authoritative and unhappy.

All violators of traffic regulations at Fort Hood must take a six-hour vehicle operators' safety course, given on "weekends at inconvenient hours," according to a description of Fort activities issued there this week.

"What are 'inconvenient hours' at Fort Hood?" was the question.

"The course is given from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday and 8 to 10 a.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday," the querulous voice of a lieutenant replied. "I just finished taking it. They're getting awfully strict around here."

Shivers—

further by calling for an inquiry by the full Credentials Committee of the party loyalty of the rival delegations form the two states.

So far, the anti-Trumanites from both Texas and Mississippi have refused to pledge they would not bolt.

Governor Keeps Mum

When a reporter asked Shivers about the proposal rule to bind all delegations to support the party's ticket, the governor declined comment. He said that was one of the matters his group would discuss Sunday night.

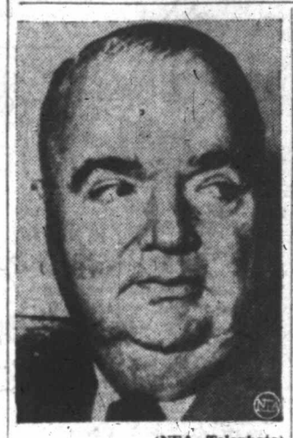

In his written statement, Shivers said he would be "happy to appear before any committee of the National Convention and answer any questions that might be asked."

The action of the National Committee was taken by voice vote on the motion of Jacob M. Arvey, Illinois national committeeman and generally a supporter of the Truman Administration. Arvey said he leader of the "Lolayist" delegation, committee.

Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, a front running candidate for the presidential nomination, issued a statement saying the Texas and Mississippi delegations that won out Saturday were not Democrats. He said they did not believe in majority rule, which he called the first principal of democracy.

A similar statement came from Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., speaking for Averell Harriman, most outspoken pro-Truman candidate for the nomination.

"It is not truly democratic to say, 'If we don't win, we won't play,'" said Roosevelt.

Napier, Senatorial Candidate, Pinched By Houston Officer

HOUSTON—(AP)—E. W. Napier, Wichita Falls, candidate for the U. S. Senate, was escorted—protesting—to Houston Police Headquarters Saturday while he was still standing on top of his car.

The incident occured like this:

Napier came from Hempstead to Houston on a campaign tour.

He was making a speech from a platform on top of his car, slowly cruising down Main Street, when Officer J. J. O'Rourke stopped him.

An argument ensued about whether the candidate could continue his talk.

With Napier still on the platform, O'Rourke got in beside the driver and ordered the automobile driven to the station.

Napier continued speaking enroute.

Napier left the station, found his car, got in it and drove off. He said he will be back in Houston at noon Wednesday to make another speech—from the top of his car.

Delegates—

Labor Law and saying it should be "supplanted."

A group of Southern governors and senators talked with the Georgian and came away saying they still are for him. It was explained that Russell was still in favor of the objectives of the T-H Act.

Alabama To Russell

A majority of the 22-vote Alabama delegation appeared to be switching to Russell. Supporters of Senator Kefauver of Tennessee conceded as much. They thought they controlled the Alabama contingent until today.

Pro-Kefauver delegates said they probably wouldn't resist a plan to let Alabama give way to Georgia so that Russell's name can be the first put in nomination at the convention. Alabama has first place on the list of states when the roll is called for nominating speeches.

But Kefauver people still could point to the Tennessee senator's strategic spot as front runner in the presidential sweepstakes. And they said a check Saturday shows even more support in some states—Washington, for example — than they had counted on.

Kerr Plays for Deadlock

Kerr is making his big play for secondary strength. His hope is that all the other possibilities will deadlock and he will have enough second-choice support to cop the nomination.

The Oklahoma senator spent the day sounding out various delegations and visiting his public headquarters at the Conrad Hilton Hotel to tune up on a song or two with some of his rooters.

The decisions in the National Committee on the Mississippi and Texas contests boosted Russell's delegate strength by one third, from 121 to 161 1/2. And he probably can have any time he flicks a finger the 10 1/2 convention votes assigned to Governor Shivers of Texas.

On The Associated Press scoreboard, votes of delegates who will be seated when the convention opens are now divided this way:

Kefauver 257 1/2.
Russell 161 1/2.
Harriman 112 1/2.
Kerr 45 1/2.
Stevenson 41 1/2.
All others, including Barkley, 231 1/2.
Uncommitted 380.
Needed to nominate 616.

Oil Questions Sets Off Riots In Iran; Many Are Injured

TEHRAN, IRAN —(AP)— Troops and police crushed violent demonstrations here Saturday against Premier Ahmed Qavam who has pledged to seek an oil settlement with Britain.

Even as rioting flared with threats of assassination, the new governmental chief told a news conference he would do everything in his power to get Iran's oil flowing again.

Many persons were reported arrested — exactly how many police declined to say. At least seven were reported bayoneted in fighting that broke out as crowds backing ex-Premier Mohammed Mossadegh roamed the streets shouting "Death to the traitor, Qavam."

The newspaper Nabard, which opposed Mossadegh, said 200 were injured in the capital. It reported 500 arrests within the last 24 hours.

The pro-Mossadegh Bakhtar Emrooz said demonstrations, strikes and street fighting occured throughout the nation, especially at the oil center of Abadan.

Six truckloads of soldiers were spotted around the British Embassy.

At the same time Ayatullah Kashani, Iran's top religious leader and a close supporter of Mossadegh, called on the nation's armed forces to disobey government orders. In a communique, he told servicemen:

"The actions of Ahmed Qavam, which are based on his ambition and aimed at return of the British and imperialists, should not be enforced by your hands, making you responsible for bloodshed and the crushing of truth."

Eva Peron

Argentina Mourns As First Lady Eva Peron Nears Death

BEUNOS AIRES, ARGENTINA—(AP)— Eva Peron rallied somewhat Saturday and was reported resting peacefully, but her doctors' bulletins failed to dispel a prevailing impression that she is sinking.

The Argentine first lady has been ill eight months, gravely ill the last 10 days. The diagnosis has never been disclosed officially. Mrs. Peron underwent a major operation last November after examination by a New York cancer and tumor specialist, Dr. George Pack.

President Juan D. Peron has kept close to the bedside of his wife since her condition worsened.

Gloom deepened Friday night when all radio stations in Argentina interrupted their programs to broadcast a bulletin that she had declined noticeably. Subsequent bulletins said her condition had improved, but government officials appeared downcast and gloomy.

Congress Friday hurriedly passed a bill awarding Mrs. Peron Argentina's highest decoration, the Collar of Liberator Gen. San Martin. Peron signed the bill Saturday. The Army minister, Gen. Franklin Lucero, announced in a statement that all Army ranks will contribute to a projected monument for Mrs. Peron.

Swimmer Saves Two Stranded In Water

TEXARKANA —(AP)— Robert Ewell, 69, Waco, and his grandson, Martin Robert Ewell, nine, Dallas, escaped drowning Saturday by clinging to partly submerged tree limbs for almost 40 minutes before being rescued.

The two were fishing in a pond south of Texarkana, Ark., when their boat overturned. They grabbed tree limbs and hung on until Red Cross swimmer Mitchell Young, 23, brought them to shore.

William Rhea Dies; Leader In Masonry

McKINNEY —(AP)— William J. Rhea, retired businessman and state Masonic leader, died Friday of a heart ailment.

He was past commander of the Knights Templar of Texas, past district deputy grand master of the Ninth Masonic District and a member of the Knights of York Cross of Honor.

'Surprising' Gains Claimed For Barkley

CHICAGO—(AP)—Jubilant aides of Vice President Alben W. Barkley said Saturday night his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination is gaining momentum by the hour.

"Barkley will get a surprising number of votes on the first ballot," they said after a long series of pre-convention conferences at the Kentuckian's headquarters.

The stratosphere begins at an altitude of about ten miles at the equator while, at the earth's poles, it begins at a height of six miles.

Russell Satisfies Southern Leaders On His Labor Views

CHICAGO—(AP)—Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia was reported Saturday to have allayed the unrest among his Dixie followers who had been upset by his call for a new labor law to replace the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Georgian, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, huddled with a group of Southern governors and senators, and apparently patched up whatever differences there may have been.

Senator Holland and Senator Smathers of Florida said after the meeting that "we have discussed with Dick Russell his attitude relative to the Taft-Hartley Act and find he has not changed his position in the slightest. . . ."

They said in a statement that Russell "still supports the objectives of the act and will continue to do so and is in no sense for its repeal."

Others besides the Floridians at the meeting included Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, Gov. Hugh L. White of Mississippi, Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas and Gov. Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana, Senator Byrd of Virginia, Earl Long of Louisiana and former Gov. Cameron Morrison of North Carolina.

Senator Stennis of Mississippi also was present but said he came on other business.

Vote For Ike?

Byrd was asked by newsmen if there was a chance that Virginia's uninstructed delegation to the national convention might decide to switch to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the GOP presidential nominee, as their choice to head the state Democratic ticket.

Byrd replied that "all I can say is that I'm in a Democratic convention at this time."

Virginia has set up machinery to hold another convention after the Chicago nominee is named, and could act as it chose then.

Russell told reporters later that "I hope and believe the Virginia delegation will vote for me."

Russell issued a statement denouncing reports that, after voting originally for the Taft-Hartley Act, he changed his position recently as the result of talks with John L. Lewis, leader of the United Mine workers.

Russell said he had lunched with Lewis but they parted "without either having convinced the other of the correctness of his position on labor-management legislation."

Russell said that his position in the field of labor legislation is "clear and consistent."

More Thingamajigs Fill Sky To Hex Flying-Saucer Fans

ALBUQUERQUE—(AP)—Call them saucers if you like, but Southwestern skies are being flooded with luminous objects, Dr. Lincoln La Paz reported late Saturday.

"By whatever name you call them — flying saucers, guided missiles, space ships—they all act strangely," La Paz, University of New Mexico fire-ball expert, said.

What are they? La Paz said he would like to know. But from their behavior, he thinks they are not:

Shooting stars, whose falling lights are due to be seen more and more frequently the latter part of July and August.

Meteorites, since meteorites shine for only short times, and invariably make loud sounds.

Here are a few of the antics of the objects:

They can reverse directions and cruise back and forth.

They travel at high speeds in wide sweeping circles.

They are spherical or disc shaped, and for the most part, give off a steady yellow light.

They travel at extremely high altitudes, and can be followed for as long as three and one-half minutes.

Three Billions Put Into Atomic Outlay

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission, granted almost three billion dollars in the closing days of the last Congress, is pushing a huge expansion program to develop a complete "family" of atomic weapons.

An AEC spokesman said a site for a new $1,259,500,000 gaseous diffusion plant probably will be selected and announced within the next few weeks. The AEC has indicated it will be located somewhere in the Ohio River Valley.

Expansion probably will be started first at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky., plants, the spokesman said.

The supplemental appropriations bill providing $2,898,800,000 for Oak Ridge and 459 million for Paducah.

AEC Chairman Gordon Dean told Congress the purpose of the whole expansion program "is to gain precious time by achieving minimum stockpile objectives established by the Department of Defense, and to achieve them about four and one-half to five years earlier than we would achieve them if we went at our present rate."

Admiral Rank Given Brother Of Officer Navy Once Silenced

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The Navy announced Saturday the promotion of Henry Crommelin from the rank of captain to the temporary grade of rear admiral.

Two years ago the promising Navy career of Henry Crommelin's elder brother, John G. Crommelin, ended when he was furloughed at half pay, with captain's rank. He refused to stop making speeches against armed services unification. He requested and was granted, retirement, and was later promoted on the retired list to rear admiral. He was a Navy flier with a brilliant record as commander of an aircraft carrier in World War II.

Henry Crommelin, now an active rear admiral, is 48. His retired brother is 49. As a captain, Henry Crommelin has been on the Joint Staff of the Commander in Chief, Pacific.

700 Convicts Give Blood To Red Cross

SOLEDAD, CALIF. —(AP)— Seven hundred of the 1,338 prisoners in California's Soledad State Prison—scene of recent rioting—turned out Saturday to donate blood for Korean War wounded.

Officials of the San Jose Red Cross Blood Bank, which sent two mobile units to the medium-security prison, called the response "overwhelming."

Warden Bert O. Webb commented: "We're very proud of the men's record. They were given no special privileges for donating and no pressure was put on them to do so."

HONG KONG — (AP) — Nationalist guerrillas raided a Communist-held island off the Red mainland July 15, looted a supply store, and escaped with four captured motor junks, a Hong Kong newspaper reported Saturday.

Brooklyn Bums Clip Bucs, 9-1

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Right-hander Carl Erskine, aided by three home runs, one a grand-slammer by Peewee Reese, hurled the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers to an easy, 9-1 victory over the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

It was the Dodgers' eighth straight win and their twelfth in a row over the Bucs without a defeat.

Andy Pafko and Billy Cox also homered for the Dodgers. It was Pafko's twelfth of the season and Cox's first. Ralph Kiner smacked his nineteenth for the Bucs in the final inning.

Erskine never was in trouble as he picked up his tenth triumph against only two defeats. Left-hander Howie Pollet was charged with his eleventh loss of the season. He's won three.

Reese's grandslammer, fifth of his major league career, came in the eighth inning off reliefer Paul LaPalme.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Pitcher Warren Hacker made it three shutouts in his last four starting stints as he hurled the Chicago Cubs to a 3-0 victory over the New York Giants Saturday.

It was a scoreless duel between Hacker and Jim Hearn for seven and a half innings. Then Hearn's usually dependable defense failed him as Shortstop Al Dark and Davey Williams, the New Yorkers' aggressive second baseman, were charged with errors.

Charley Coe, Buster Reed Meet In Trans-Miss Finals

DENVER — (AP) — Charley Coe, the two-time winner from Oklahoma City, and Buster Reed of Sanger, Texas, scored victories Saturday in the semi-finals of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament.

Coe, champion in 1947 and 1949, and Reed, a member of the North Texas State National Collegiate golf champions, will play for the title over 36 holes Sunday.

Coe, who has been off form the last few days, played top-flight golf in ousting Bill Carey, Denver, 4 and 3. Coe's putter behaved perfectly.

Reed Wins

Reed chipped within three feet of the pin on the 358-yard No. 17 and holed out for a birdie 3 that put him one up on Ed Hopkins, Abilene, Texas. Reed won the match by halving the eighteenth.

Coe moved through the quarter-finals Saturday morning with a 3 and 2 win over Duke Carey, Denver, a cousin of the player he whipped Saturday afternoon.

Reed won his quarter-final match in 19 holes from Bill Parker, 18-year-old Tulsa caddy.

Hopkins fired three-under-par golf, the best of the day, in winning his quarter-final test from Bernard Woody, Denver, 4 and 3.

Bill Carey played even par for his 5 and 3 quarter-final victory over Dick Spangler, Lincoln, the Nebraska State champion.

Putts Fall Short

Hopkins was plagued by weak putting. He missed several chances to win holes against Reed when his putts fell short. Hopkins had a birdie four on the 601-yard No. 3 to go 1-up. Reed evened the match with a par four on No. 4 when Hopkins went one over. Reed went one up with a birdie two on the 128-yard No. 7.

They halved No. 8 but Hopkins pulled even when Reed slammed two drives out of bounds on No. 9. Reed went one-up on No. 11 with a birdie two on the 137-yarder. Hopkins squared the match on No. 13 with a par three while Reed went one over. They halved 14, 15, and 16 before Reed went in front to stay on the seventeenth.

Texas League Club Aims For Boost In Game Attendance

BEAUMONT—(AP)—The low attendance for Texas League games in Beaumont is expected to be aired at the meeting of the league in Oklahoma City Monday.

A meeting was held here Friday among civic leaders and Guy Airey, owner of the club, and plans made for special days and other attendance boosting ideas as the gate in the current home stand dipped as low as 335 on one occasion and was over the 1,000 mark only four times in nine dates.

Friday night, 3,061 fans turned out as the Roughnecks played Dallas a doubleheader and Dave Hoskins, the negro pitcher who has been packing them in over the circuit, hurled for Dallas.

Tennessee Star Named Tech Coach

KNOXVILLE, TENN. — (AP)— The Knoxville Journal, in a story for Sunday's editions, said Buist Warren, former University of Tennessee back, has accepted the backfield coaching job at Texas Tech at Lubbock.

Warren, coach at Oak Ridge, Tenn., high school the last three years, would succeed another former Tennessee star back, Walter (Babe) Wood, who resigned to enter the insurance business.

Warren would be an aid to DeWitt Weaver, captain of the 1936 Tennessee team and now in his second year as head coach of the Red Raiders.

A member of Warren's family at Oak Ridge reported he was in Lubbock conferring with Texas Tech officials.

Palmer Triumphs In Canadian Open At 25 Under Par

WINNIPEG, MAN. —(AP)— Johnny Palmer, an obliging invader from North Carolina, carried off the Canadian Open golf championship Saturday by shooting a six-under par 66 for a record medal score of 263 in the 72-hole tournament.

Palmer wound up 25 strokes under par. His score lopped five strokes off the old Canadian Open record of 268 shot by Bobby Locke in 1947 over the par-71 Toronto Scarboro Course. Locke was 16 strokes under par.

Two other U. S. players—Freddy Haas and Dick Mayer tied for second with 274. Haas finished with a 66 today and Mayer with 68.

Three Americans shared fourth place with 275's—Doug Ford, Al Zimmerman and Skee Riegel.

Palmer, carrying off $3,000 first prize, won by 11 strokes—the largest margin in the Open at least since 1933 when Joe Kirkwood had an eight-stroke bulge.

Fred Hawkins, El Paso, finished with an 82-70-74-71-287 to take $75.

Jack Heppinstall has been the head athletic trainer at Michigan State for 37 years. He is the only trainer the Spartans ever have had.

Israel Ten Gets Try At Win Sunday

Still looking for a way in which to stop the Odessa Oilers, Indian Manager Zeke Bonura is expected to call on Right-hander Israel Ten (11-8) Sunday to go on the mound for the Tribe in its final game of a two-game set against the league leaders at Oiler Park in Odessa.

Ten holds one of the two victories the Indians have managed to take from the Oilers this season. Way back on May 11, Ten threw a four-hitter at the Oilers as Midland slipped by to a 3-2 win. And the Indians have been looking for a victory every since.

Eddie Jacome holds the only other Midland win over Odessa. He blanked them, 4-0 in the second game of the season.

But since then, it's been Katie bar the door as the Oilers have captured 11 out of 13 tilts with the Tribe.

Saturday night, they did it again when their ace, lefty Evelio Ortega twirled a brilliant two-hitter to pace Odessa to a 7-1 win.

It was Ortega's sixteenth win against four defeats. Both Midland hits—a triple by Bill Brown followed by a single by Scooter Hughes—came in the fifth inning and accounted for the lone Indian run.

Keith Nicolls was charged with his seventh loss of the year against 16 wins. Four of the defeats have been handed him by Odessa.

Leftg Loyko homered for Odessa in the first with none on.

Ortega walked three and one runner reached base on catcher Felix Castro's error on an infield fly. The Indians have never beaten Ortega in his three years in the Longhorn League.

The same two clubs play here at 8:15 p.m. Sunday with Carlos Villarreal slated to hurl for Odessa.

Tom Morgan, Yanks Nip Pale Hose, 4-2

NEW YORK —(AP)— Tommy Morgan made his final appearance of the year in Yankee Stadium a winning one Saturday as the New York Yankees defeated Chicago, 4-2, to extend the sagging White Sox' losing streak to six games.

The victory enabled the Yanks to boost their American League lead to five and one-half games over the runner-up Boston Red Sox, who dropped a 4-0 decision to the third-place Cleveland Indians.

Morgan, service bound, was forced to retire after seven innings because of a blister on his right index finger but by that time the Yanks had the decision locked up.

Billy Pierce, White Sox ace, suffered his fifth defeat at the hands of the Yanks and it was the Sox' seventh straight loss in the Stadium.

Sportswriters Face Fast Social Whirl At Coaching School

FORT WORTH —(AP)— Texas sports writers are going to be on the move August 4-8 when they come here for the annual Texas High School Coaches Association's annual school all-star football game and all-star basketball game.

Usually the all-stars are the boys who get the royal treatment in a busy round of social activities but they'll be busy practicing for the all-star games and being used as demonstrators at the coaching school.

The sports writers will attend social functions given by the Fort Worth newspapers, a buffet dinner, a barbecue at TCU, the annual Texas Sportswriters Association breakfast and there'll always be food and refreshments at the press room in Hotel Texas.

Mills Hurls Drillers By Braves, 11-0

ARTESIA —(AP)— The Artesia Drillers broke out of a 21-inning-long string of no scoring with a single run in the first inning and went on to drop the Sweetwater Braves, 11-0, here Saturday night.

The Drillers were propelled to the win with two big innings. They raked in four markers in the fifth frame and exploded for six in the sixth.

Irvin Armin, who left the game in the fourth because of a sore arm, and Reliefer Rooster Mills limited the Braves to three hits. Mills took the win.

Gil Grajeda, who left the game in favor of Manager Alex Carrasquel in the sixth, suffered the loss.

The Drillers' first-inning run came on a single by Vince Sarubbi and Paul Halter's triple to break their 21 innings of scoreless play. Pete Pichan's two-run single and Jim Ackers theft of home highlighted the Driller fifth. Joe Bauman's two-run double was the big blow in the sixth.

Rockets Drub Dusters 5-3 In Cellar Battle

ROSWELL — (AP) — The Roswell Rockets survived a last-inning rally by the Vernon Dusters to drop the Dusters, 5-3, Saturday night in a battle of the tail-enders in the Longhorn League.

Rocket Hurler Bob Weaver had a four-hit shutout going into the ninth, when the Dusters jumped on him for four hits and three runs.

John Reimold, Goldy Gholson, Popeye Carrerras and Eddie Bucnski all nicked Weaver for singles and Joe Niedson worked him for a walk in the eleventh-hour rally that fell two runs short.

Though hurt by four errors by his mates, Weaver was not in serious trouble until his shutout was ruined in the ninth. Three Rocket double plays helped him along.

He fanned seven and walked only three in notching his ninth win against eight losses for the season.

Lefty Lloyd Wallis, lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh, took the loss. He struck out eight.

Singles by Bobby Lemmel, Stubby Green and Newcomer Elwood Grantham, plus a Duster error, gave the locals two runs in the initial frame. They added another in the second when Frank Calo led off with a single, was moved to second by Weaver's sacrifice and scored on Lemmel's single.

A pair of walks, another Duster error and Les Palmer's double, the only extra-base hit of the night, completed the Roswell scoring with two runs in the fourth frame.

Big Innings, Hits Pay Off For West

SAN ANGELO —(AP)— Much like the American League of a few years back, the West All-Stars of the Longhorn League depend on power, the home run and the big inning.

And it pays off, as witness the five West wins in as many tries.

Again this year the West boasts the rippling muscles and the strong backs while the East team must depend on pitching, speed and fielding finesse.

Let's look at the record. This year's West team boasts a terrific team batting average of .286 among their starting eight players, not counting pitchers. This is against a team batting average of .226 for the East.

Add the three utility players for the West and the average drops to .245. The Easterners' three utility men are hitting about as well as the regulars and their addition drops the team average to only .224.

The West's eight regulars have rapped out 823 hits against 795 for the East and their base knocks have traveled for a total-base count of 1,322 against only 1,127 for the East.

FIRST FOR UMPIRE

CHICAGO —(AP)— Gordon Froese, newest member of the American League's umpiring staff, ejected his first player from a game only eight days after reporting as an arbiter. The guy who was at the wrong end of the thumb was Manager Paul Richards of the White Sox. It was Richards' sixth banishment of the season.

Sens 2, Browns 1

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Jackie Jensen's home run, Ken Wood's double and Mickey Vernon's pop fly single to center gave Washington two runs in the eighth inning and a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Browns Saturday night. Big Spring Thumps San Angelo By 4-1

BIG SPRING —(AP)— Gil Guerra notched his fourteenth win of the season as Big Spring nudged San Angelo, 4-1, here Saturday night.

Guerra set the Colts down with four hits and never was in trouble. His mates staked him to a three-run lead in the first inning, when they rifled four straight hits off the offerings of J. M. May.

May retired in the fifth inning when he was hit on the pitching hand on a drive by Al Costa. The extent of his injury was not known immediately.

Three double plays helped Guerra out of as many tight spots.

The game was played in an hour and 30 minutes, fastest game of the season here.

Olympics Open In Sodden Splendor Before Wildly Cheering Spectators

By TED SMITS

HELSINKI—(AP)—The 1952 Olympic games opened Saturday in sodden splendor before 70,000 spectators who cheered wildly for the big Scandinavian and American teams but greeted Russia's first appearance with mild but polite applause.

One unscheduled incident marred the rain-saturated, solemn ceremony. A shapely woman in a flowing white robe tried to get the loud speaker on the central dais to harangue the crowd but was hustled away by police.

Paavo Nurmi, Finland's immortal distance runner of the 1930's, wearing the pale blue and white uniform he made famous, carried in the Olympic torch set ablaze on Mount Olympus.

Hans Kolshmainen, another Finnish Olympic champion, lit the flame atop the 24-story stadium tower, where it will burn throughout the games.

This set of games is the biggest ever, with 5,870 athletes competing. Russia is taking part for the first time and Germany and Japan are returning after a war absence.

For an hour and ten minutes, 8,000 athletes and officials from 69 nations paraded around the brick red running track, their jackets clinging limply to their husky frames. They churned the cinder surface into muck. Sunday the actual competition starts on a running track which apparently has been damaged.

Red China, although admitted to the competition, was not in the parade.

J. Lyman Bingham, executive director of the American Olympic team, said he understood the white-robed woman was trying to make a "peace" demonstration.

Only a few minutes before the outbreak, the President, Juho K. Paasikivi, spoke the simple phrase that set the games in motion:

"I declare the fifteenth Olympic games at Helsinki open."

The Olympic hymn was sung, 3,500 homing pigeons from Sweden and Denmark soared up, and artillery outside the stadium fired a 21-gun salute.

All day it rained—cold, wet, and miserable. But every seat in the trim, modernistic stadium was taken.

The appearance of Nurmi on the track created a sensation. No one knew who would have the honor of carrying the torch in its stadium appearance until Nurmi, now 55 and a little thick around the middle, came in with the same effortless, space eating stride that ground down all opposition 30 years ago. The crowd went wild.

Although this was the official opening of the games, actually competition has been under way all week in soccer, basketball and field hockey because of the bulkiness of the field.

Sunday, competition starts in track and field—the central sports of the ancient games. Finals will be held in the high jump, 10,000-meter run and women's discus. Preliminaries start in the 100-meter run, and 400-meter hurdles.

Winning Squash Matches Is Howe Family Affair

BOSTON —(NEA)— The Howes are to squash what the Cabots and Lodges are to Boston.

As a matter of fact, the Howes live in Boston, too.

Chances are you never heard of them.

Maybe you never heard of squash.

But it's no accident that Peggy Howe, the junior miss of the family, is the women's national champion. Her mother, Margaret, was also the national champ, and Peggy's twin sister, Betty, held the title only two years ago.

Squash, played on four-wall indoor courts, is primarily a Winter game.

Summer doesn't mean retirement for Peggy, however, for this brisk young woman of 27 hies over to the tennis courts. The last couple of Summers she's entered several tournaments as a doubles partner of Helen Pederson Ribhanny, a ranking player. The two have staged exhibitions in New York resort areas.

"She'd have been another Maureen Connolly if she'd concentrated on tennis earlier," says Mr. Ribhanny.

HERE'S HOWES — Peggy Howe, right, followed her twin sister, Betty, as the women's national squash champion. (NEA)

"Oh, I just play tennis for fun," says Peggy, blandly. "It's so much easier than squash, which is much faster and more strenuous."

Miss Howe will take on any comers to prove her point.

Does it follow that a squash player is good at tennis, or vice cersa?

"Oh, no," she shakes her head. "The wrist action is entirely different, and in squash you have to be a lot quicker."

Tall, slim Peggy Howe used to carry her interest in sports off the courts.

She was a secretary in the Yale athletic offices.

Dunlap Leads Texas League Hit Parade

DALLAS—(AP)—Grant Dunlap, the clouting Shreveport first baseman, continues at the top of Texas League batting but some of the boys show symptoms of moving in on him and making it a battle down the stretch.

With the race at the two-thirds mark, Dunlap is batting .347 on 94 hits in 271 times at the plate. He dropped a point from last week whereas the muscular catcher, Babe Martin of San Antonio, added four and now is batting .341.

Frank Kellert, Oklahoma City first sacker, also is moving into the picture. Kellert raised his average from .326 to .332 last week.

There's a new home run leader. It's Kellert, who has moved past the slumping Jerry Witte of Houston. Witte appears stuck at 17 circuiters while Kellert has bashed out 19.

Twenty new traps were installed at Northwood for the U. S. Open championship. Yardage on the par 70 course is 6,779.

Midland, Roswell, Vernon Win; Odessa Splits With Angelo

By The Associated Press

Big Spring's drive on first place in the Longhorn League went into reverse because of two defeats Friday night as the loop did a reversal from its usual hit-free form.

Big Spring suffered a double defeat, 1-0 and 7-4, at Roswell's hands and dropped off the pace by six and a half games.

Front-running Odessa lost one of two games, 6-5, to San Angelo, then took the nightcap, 4-3.

Artesia suffered through its twentieth consecutive scoreless inning as Jesse Sosa of Vernon put the Dillers down on two hits. The Dusters won, 3-0.

Midland won the other game, beating Sweetwater, 12-6.

Mexican Baseball Loop To Aid Team Wiped Out In Crash

MEXICO CITY —(AP)— Mexican major league baseball clubs voted Friday to give one player each to Monterrey to replace the term virtually wiped out in a bus accident last week.

In addition, all suspensions now in effect on Monterrey players were lifted and the club was given the right to hire all registered players not now under contract.

Two Monterrey players were killed and 11 injured when their bus and a truck collided. Their series here last weekend was cancelled and a special meeting of club owners called to figure out means to keep Monterrey still playing.

The owners also voted to hold two benefit games, with proceeds going to the relatives of the killed and to the injured players.

YARDSTICK—When Dorothy Stitham, Auburn, Wash., nurse, hooked this imposing 125-pound halibut in Puget Sound, she established a yardstick. The 67-inch prize is the largest ever caught by a woman on sports tackle in Washington. (NEA)

Recreation Program

McCAMEY—Summer recreation director, Bob Kennedy, announced last week that a swimming meet will be held in McCamey Wednesday against Iraan.

All teenagers from 15 down will be eligible to compete in the meet.

A ping-pong tournament will take place the same date.

Slated For McCamey

A teenage basketball game against Rankin will begin at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the old gym. A return game will be played July 29 in Iraan.

Two teenage baseball games against Crane will be held this week. Details will be announced later.

Expensive Skeet Shooting Called Pure Amateur Sport

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
Assiciated Press Sports Editor

The National Skeet Tournament, a sports spectacle in which the participant pays all the expenses and gets nothing in return except a cup or two, will open in Dallas Sunday and run a week.

It's quite an event. Some 500 persons, most of whom have more money than they know what to do with, will spend plenty of it on shells, entry fees, trap boys, targets, officials, and awards which they hope to win themselves.

If ever there was an amateur sport this is it.

During this tournament some 500,000 shells will be fired and almost that many clay targets will be smashed. Those shells alone will cost better than $50,000. The shells weigh over 46 tons. They will be propelled by 15 tons of gunpowder.

Here's an example of what it costs to participate in skeet tournments: Mrs. Leon Mandel, Chicago socialite who has gone into the game with the intentions of becoming the greatest marksman of them all who is making rapid strides toward that objective, spends $12,000 a year at it.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Akin of Dallas got into skeet shooting only last year. They counted up at the end of the year and found they had spent between $50,000 and $60,000.

Otelia Deckshot of Dallas, who doesn't go into the thing anywhere near so heavily, paid out $1,000 on four tournaments.

It's truly a rich man's and rich woman's game.

Easy To Learn

Skeet is easy to learn but for that reason it is the most exacting sport and the sport in which it is more difficult to win than most any other.

You will see men break 199 targets out of 200 and wind up in sixth place. You have to be perfect to take home the trophies in this endeavor.

Skeet is only 26 years old. It was started by three quail hunters in Adover, Mass., who wanted something to practice on. They shot at targets in a circle but got complaints from a fellow that they were killing his chickens. So they cut it to half a circle.

Skeet shooting today is in a half-circle with eight stations. You shoot from every angle.

The National Skeet Shooting Association chose Dallas as its permanent home in 1949.

One thing about a Texan: Let him get you in his own bailiwick and he'll beat your ears down for sure. Thus Texans dominate the National Skeet Tournament in Dallas every year.

But Texans have some advantages to make them the best in the world in this sport. There are more people who like the outdoors and they have more money to spend. Skeet shooting can be carried on 12 months out of the year in Texas because of favorable weather conditions.

Good Military Training

There are some 8,000 persons who shoot registered targets in the nation. There are probably 60,000 who participate in skeet shooting but on a limited scale.

The association was formed in 1935. The second world war came along to give it a big boost. The military installations used it to train to shoot Germans and Japs.

There's no doubt but that it is one of the most entertaining and interesting sports of all. Everybody likes to have a gun in his hand and knock over a target, be it a tin can or a clay pigeon. Thousands of people are willing to pay for the privilege of doing it.

And there's still another important feature of skeet shooting:

Nobody has to pay to watch it.

If this isn't an amateur sport there never was one.

South All-Stars Win Big State Tilt

The Big State League, having holidayed for its first annual All-Star game, this one dominated by pitching, Saturday night resumed its battle on the regular schedule.

Friday night the South club took a 3-1 victory over the North composed of Wichita Falls, Texarkana, Paris and Longview in Austin. Tyler, Austin, Temple, and unrepresented Waco formed the South All-Stars.

Dean Stafford of Tyler homered over left field for three runs to decide the tilt.

Wiley Moore of Longview scored the North run in the seventh when he singled, went to third on a single by Texarkana's Al McAfee and scurried home on a fly-out by Wichita Falls Bob Mainzer. Despite threatening weither, 3,187 fans attended the game.

Brown University will become the eighth member of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League at the start of the 1953-54 season.

Bauman Still On Top Of Longhorn League Batters

The batting leadership of the Longhorn League still rested in the hands of mammoth Joe Bauman of Artesia last week, even though his average slipped below the .400 mark to .390.

Midland's Pat O'Keefe, in third place in the Longhorn averages the preceding week, moved into the runner-up spot with a .381 mark, just one percentage point better than John Tayoan of San Angelo and Leo Eastham of Odessa, who are tied for third place.

Bauman also is leading the loop in home runs with 30, in total bases with 208 and in RBI's with 89. However Sweetwater's Charlie Tuttle is pressing Bauman for the RBI leadership. Tuttle has 88 to his credit.

Other individual league leaders follow: Eastham, stolen bases, 24; Bases on ball, Emil Carlini, Sweetwater, 99; most hits, John Tayoan, San Angelo, 131; 2B, Rudy Briner, Artesia, 39; 3B—Roman Loyko, Odessa 14; Most strikeouts for a pitcher, Keith Nicolls, Midland, and Gil Guerra, Big Spring, tied with 140 each.

In team averages, Artesia leads the lot in batting with a .303 mark while Big Spring leads in fielding with a.955 average.

The following statistics include games played through July 14, with these exceptions: Big Spring at Vernon, June 25-26; Sweetwater at Vernon July 2; Odessa at Vernon (2) July 7; Roswell at Vernon July 11; Odessa at Midland (2) July 14.

SPORTS NOTES from the BENCH JOCKEY
By BOB ADAMS

Much to-do has been made about the supposedly temperamental Pat O'Keefe, right fielder for the Midland Indians.

Spec Gammon, Odessa American Sports scribe and the official scorer for Odessa's home games, told of an incident recently where he scored an error on one of O'Keefe's drives instead of a hit.

Says Gammon, "When O'Keefe started for his outfield post, he turned and shook his fist vigorously in the direction of the press box."

Pat also is said to throw fits when his teammates chide him for listening to classical records, a pastime in which he is said to engage quite frequently.

Maybe he is sensative about his music and about his ball playing. As for the latter, if he is temperamental there should be more players who are so afflicted.

For Pat conscientiously trys to improve himself constantly.

For example, before leaving on the present road trip, Pat asked John Redfern, who owns a motion picture camera, to take pictures of him fielding and hitting a ball.

Someone had suggested to O'Keefe that he was catching a ball improperly and that he was standing in wrong at the plate, and he asked Redfern's help in detecting the imperfection.

If Pat's temperamental, it's because he is so bent on winning and on improving himself.

Lefty "Leon" Hayes, a hurler who was released by the Odessa Oilers recently, has joined the Midland Jaycee semi-pro nine.

Hayden White, former right fielder for the Midland Indians, has returned here from Houma of the Evangeline League and also is expected to join the JayCee nine.

Quotes of note from Baseball Digest.— Bill Veeck, sport-shirted manager of the St. Louis Browns, once addressed a dinner with this statement: "If we keep making trades, we will have a couple of Browns on about every team in the American League—then anybody can win the pennant.

Another excerpt from the mag—"You can't figure how good a player is at his position by fielding percentages. Take this case for instance: Figures show that Zeke Bonura (now manager of the Midland Indians) one year was a better first baseman than George Sisler.

• • •

An acquaintance of ours who knew Indian Rookie Hurler Herb Dwire back when he was hurling Little League ball, in Shreveport, La., says Dwire played on the same Byrd High School team in Shreveport as Seth Morehead, the left-handed hurler for whom the Philadelphia Phillies recently paid $50,000.

• • •

A tip of the hat to all the "grown folks" who contributed so freely of their time toward the Little Leagues here this Summer.

The season saw a big expansion program here, making it possible for many more boys to participate.

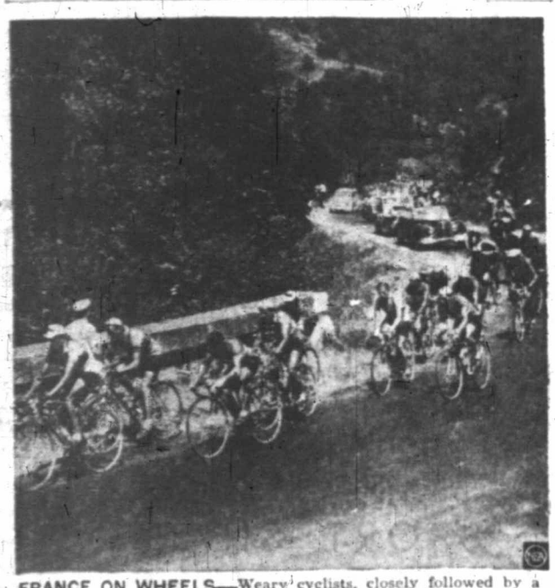

Rosie Hart Mows 'Em Down As Midland Fem Nine Wins

Mowing 'em down in the tight spots, Rosie Hart twirled the Rhodes girls softball team to its second victory over Coahoma Friday night, 11-5. She had the backing of long hits on the part of her teammates.

Coahoma had moved to a 3-1 advantage by the third inning, but Edith Davies put the Rhodes lassies back into the contest with a home run. Later Bobby DeLapp walked to the plate to swat a triple and thee RBI's. Elouise Graham brought home two more runs with a double, and Rosie followed with a two-bagger to help her own cause.

The Midland strikeout artist allowed the Coahomans to load the the bases with none out in the sixth inning. And in the seventh she struck out two with two on and one out.

Friday night, the Rhodes girls will appear in a benefit game in Midland with Pecos as the tentative opponent.

FRANCE ON WHEELS—Weary cyclists, closely followed by a motorcade, strained leg and back muscles as they pumped their way over and through the Alpe D'Huez Mountains competing in Tour de France, the country's annual long bicycle race. (NEA)

Tribe Dumps Braves, 12-6

SWEETWATER— (AP) — Unleashing a 13-hit attack and taking advantage of sloppy fielding, the Midland Indians battered the hapless Sweetwater Braves 12-6 here Friday night.

Sweetwater couldn't do anything right as the Braves committed six errors and permitted the Indians to steal eight bases.

Midland spotted Sweetwater two runs in the first inning on two errors and Warren Sliter's two-run single, the Indians took over with three runs in the second on a single by Julio de la Torre, Scooter Hughes' double and a two-run single by Earl Bossenberry after Menapace had walked and Jacome was hit by a pitched ball.

Midland made it 6-2 in the third on singles by Manuel Temes and Bill Brown and De la Torre's triple.

A single by Temes, a walk and two stolen bases coupled with a Sweetwater error gave the Indians their seventh tally in the fourth. Singles by De la Torre and Scooter Hughes and a double by Brown made it 8-5 in the seventh. Ed Menapace stroked a two-run homer for the Indians in the seventh. Midland used three errors and a walk to score its final two runs in the eighth.

JayCee Nine Trims Black Indians 11-8; Odessa Next

Swinging back into action in the Permian Basin Semi-Pro Baseball League, the Midland JayCees travel to Odessa Sunday to take on the Odessa Gushers in a game starting at 3 p.m.

The JayCees stepped out of League play Friday night to hand the Midland Black Indians an 11-8 lacing at Midland Indian Park.

Exploding for six runs in the top of the ninth frame, the JayCees roared past the Black Indians for an uphill victory the first time the teams have met this season.

In Friday night's action, John Lomax started the hitting fireworks in the ninth by lashing out a sharp single. Lefty Leon Hayes, a former Odessa Oiler who was making his first appearance with the Midland, semi-pro nine, was safe on an error and Rob Hillin lashed out a line single to load the bases.

Then doubles by Joe King and O. L. Martin and singles by Bernard Selle and Bob Moser, with a pair of errors thrown in for good measure on the part of the Indians, resulted in the six run splurge.

Hayes, who pitched the final three innings, setting the Black Indians down in order in the bottom of the ninth, took credit for the win.

The remaining schedule for the four-team Permian Semi-Pro Loop is as follows:

July 20 — Midland JayCees at Odessa; Big Spring at Midland (Colts).

July 27 — Midland JayCees at Midland (Colts); Odessa at Big Spring.

August 3 — Big Spring at Midland (JayCees); Midland (Colts) at Odessa.

August 10 — Midland (JayCees) at Odessa; Big Spring at Midland (Colts).

August 17 — Midland (JayCees) at Big Spring; Odessa at Midland (Colts).

August 24 — Midland (Colts) at Midland (JayCees); Odessa at Big Spring.

Texans Sign Rookies To Grid Pacts

DALLAS — (AP) —Three rookies, one of them an all-Southwest Conference tackle — Giant Kenneth Jackson — Saturday signed contracts with the Dallas Texans.

Jackson played at Texas and was All-Conference in 1950. He was in the Navy last year, playing at San Diego Naval Training Center.

Others inking pacts with the Dallas pro footballers were Leslie Molnar of Buffalo and Bill Sherman of St. Mary's University.

Molnar finished at Buffalo in 1950 and was with the Marines at Camp LeJune in 1951 where he played football.

Sherman finished football at St. Mary's in 1949. When the school discontinued football, Sherman turned to pro baseball and was with Marysville and Sacramento.

Four players were placed on the Texan reserve list. They were Vince Kaseta, Tennessee end, and Bobby Griffin, Baylor halfback, who gave up football for private business, and Jim Mutscheller, Notre Dame end, and Herschel Forester, Southern Methodist guard, both of whom are going into the service.

Texas Cowgirls Make Red Artist Forget 'Peace Dove'

VALLAURIS, FRANCE —(AP)— Pablo Picasso, Communist originator of Moscow's "peace dove," can't resist being friendly to Americans—especially the beautiful "cowgirls" here for Texas Week on the Riviera.

Without urging, he posed for more than an hour with mannequins from the Harris Company of Dallas.

"He sure likes good looking women," said Leon Harris, 26-year-old vice president of the fashion store and leader of the Texas contingent.

French pottery makers at the Vallauris shops where Picasso works had a similar version in French of what the artist said about pretty Texans: "Oo la la, magnifique!"

Harris, who speaks French fluently, said Picasso chatted with him "about everything except politics. He even tried to explain his work to the girls, who didn't understand a word he was saying."

The artist asked for an explanation of Texas cattle brands which were printed all over the brief playsuit worn by chesnut-haired Jaunita Ransome, one of the prettiest models.

Picasso expressed admiration for the dress inspired by the Texas and Navajo costumes which Harris' head mannequin, brunette Connie Baughman was wearing.

He also advised Harris which ranches he should visit when he goes to Spain.

Silent On Politics

The girls' impression of the artist was: "He seemed so nice!"

Sitting on the beach in a pair of white bathing shorts besides the curvesome dark-haired girl who is the mother of his two children, Picasso had a friendly smile and a handshake for the American correspondent. He refused comment but examined with interest a picture of himself with two Texas girls in a Paris newspaper. The accompanying story suggested the designer of the famous Communist peace dove was developing a new pro-American attitude.

At the pottery, Picasso's assistant pointed out four objects which the artist decorated Friday. They might have been inspired by Texas Week. They were a plate painted with a rim of steers or bulls, a bowl with a bull in the middle, a plate with a goat's head and a plate with a portrait head.

DO BILLIONS LEAVE YOU GASPING?

Congress' Spending System Not So Confusing, After All

By CHARLES MOLONY

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The government has authority from Congress to spend about 137 billion dollars, but doesn't expect to spend much more than half of it during fiscal 1953, which started July 1.

Officials said Saturday they couldn't spend the whole amount before the fiscal year ends next June 30 if they wanted to—and they don't. They're figuring now that this year's actual expenditure will be around 80 billions.

If the government does spend 80 billions, it will have to get 10 billions from borrowing, for its income from taxes and other sources isn't likely to top 70 billions this year.

Confusing. Well, it isn't bad at all, if you get straight on one basic point — the difference between an expenditure and an appropriation.

An expenditure is easy to comprehend, just what it sounds like—payment for goods when they're delivered, or for wages and salaries when they're earned. Payment is by check, and the money has to be available before the check is written.

Appropriation is what throws people off. Many think you have to have money before you can appropriate it; still more believe that when there's an appropriation for a specified year, it's the top amount that can be spent in that year.

Not so, at least not in government language, where appropriation, briefly and simply, means this: an act passed by Congress and approved by the President that (1) authorizes an agency to spend, and (2) requires the Treasury to see to it that the money is available when needed, by borrowing if necessary.

To nail down the point that the money doesn't have to be on hand for Congress to appropriate it, note that spending authorizations are outstanding to the tune of 157 billion dollars, then note the Treasury's present cash balance. It's $8,500,000,000 now, and that happens to be higher than usual.

Check-Book Carry-Over

As to an appropriation for a specified year—fiscal 1953, for example—being the top amount that can be spent in that year, note this: the government expects to spend more than 80 billion dollars this year, although Congress only authorized about 73 billions for that period.

Where does authority to spend the other seven billions come from? The answer: from spending authorizations granted for previous years, but not used up.

That's the clue also to how there happens to be a total of 157 billion dollars in spending authority available now, when only 73 billions was provided specifically for this year.

The really big-money appropriations for recent years have been for buying military goods—ships, planes and so on—and these carry over from one year to another until all the money is spent, whenever that may be.

The reason why the Defense Department has 60 billion dollars in carry-over spending authority on top of 47 billions newly provided for fiscal 1953 will be clearer if you consider this:

A one-year-only appropriation was enough for building a Navy vessel in the days of the small sailing ship, but it wouldn't work so well for the giant aircrafe carriers of today, which may take five years or more to build.

The carry-over appropriation is largely a product of the advancing machine age and its increasingly complicated gadgets.

REPORTING THE TOP NEWS IN REAL ESTATE

STARS IN YOUR EYES will appear when you see the size and facilities that the kitchen of this new Austin stone home offers. It is 20x30, including the utility space, with natural finished cabinets and ceramic tile features. What a place for a party! But there is more than this spectacular kitchen. 3 bedrooms, large den, two ceramic tile baths, huge living room and separate dining room. Central heating and air conditioning, tile fence, storage house. Two-car attached garage. This home on Princeton is the one for you.

JUST THE WAY YOU LIKE IT because it has a fence; good lawn, some young trees, and the street is paved and paid for on both sides (it's on a corner on Estes). Two nice bedrooms, 19-foot living room, convenient kitchen with washer connection. Only $10,200.

BEAUTY WITH A DESIGN for graciousness is to be found in this white chipped brick home on Indiana. Three wonderful bedrooms, 2 ceramic tile baths, breezeway, storage, and 2 carports. On a corner lot with both sides paved, clean fence, patio for outside living and relaxing. Owner will leave Bendix washing machine, connection for dishwasher, furnace heating. ON AUGUST 1ST you will be making another rent payment for about $125, and it will hurt you to think that you have nothing to show for it. Maybe it is time for you to reconsider and start looking for your full dollar's worth. What about a neat 2-bedroom, 21-foot living room, kitchen and dining area, home for as low as $1,800 down? There is a nice lawn in front and back, attached garage, window air-conditioner, and it is only 2 years old. No redecorating needed. Full price: $8,250.

GOT A TOT OR TWO? The floor plan of this 2-bedroom and den home will be the very thing for you. The den is located just off the living room, and in it, the kids could run wild. Attic insulation, furnace heating, carpeting in living room and hall, recently redecorated on inside, fenced yard. Assume G.I. loan and pay only $54 per month total. ONLY $9,900.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION will nominate its choice for the presidency this week at Chicago. Midland, also, is doing big things—especially in the way of expanding facilities for homeowners. If you are confronted with the problem of finding the perfect home or of selling your home, or any other difficulty, why not contact us for assistance? It does not cost to deal with us—it pays you in a thousand ways. Why not stop by the office for a friendly chat?

TRANQUILITY IS MORE THAN A WORD—It is a way of life. And a new home invariably accomplishes this end. Here is a home which will assure you peace of mind, graciousness, and relaxation. It is a 3-bedroom, den, 2-ceramic tile baths, master design. Constructed of the finest materials available, and built to last a century. You'll love the solid brick fireplace in the very spacious living room, the delightfully appointed kitchen, and the worlds of closets. In the inviting den is another fireplace (of Austin Stone), paneling on one wall, and cork floor. Central heating and air-conditioning, some carpeting, Disposall unit, and a multitude of other features. This is truly the home luxurious. Priced under $35,000. Please, by appointment only.

YOU WILL FEEL FRIENDLY and affectionate toward this awkward little brick home that we have on West Kansas. It has 2 bedrooms, warm living room, and an attractive bath. Off the kitchen is a rear porch which can be used for summer sleeping quarters. Water well. The lot is 217x100. Can be purchased for as little as $2,000 down. Full price is $7,400.

JUST FOR SIZE, try this new home which has 3 bedrooms, big kitchen, and comfortable living room. Carport and storage, water well and pump, tile fence, paved street, and lawn started. It can be handled for about $2,500 down, and the full price is ONLY $9,500!!

SCHOOL WILL BEGIN in about 40 more days. Do your house-shopping early. Located in TOWN NORTH, on a paved street, is a new, superbly constructed 2 bedroom home with expansion living room, a delightfully arranged kitchen (with pantry), tile bath, and large closets. The attached garage is completely finished and can be easily converted into a den at infinitesimally small cost. If you have an eagle-eye for lasting construction, see this NOW. ONLY $9,850.

WANT MORE BREATHING ROOM? Let's start with the lot, which is 92x293. The home has 2 large bedrooms, spacious living room, and separate dining room. Approximately 1,258 square feet of living space, furnace heating, lots of closets. Water well, beautiful lawns, and the house is only 3 years old. Crescent driveway in front. $11,500.

4 BEDROOMS, DEN, 2 BATHS, FOR $15,750. Brand new, with large utility room, 2-car detached garage, ducted for air-conditioning, graveled alley, and owner will plant shrubbery and pave street at no additional expense. FHA financing. As little as only $3,650 down. Please re-read this ad, whistle if you must, then call us IMMEDIATELY.

DOCTOR'S CLINIC ON WALL STREET AVAILABLE. Beautifully constructed to appear like palatial home. Two full and four 1/2 baths, electrically equipped for all modern, professional machines. Just over 5,000 square feet. About 5 years old.

LOOKING FOR A BUSINESS which will profit you immeasurably? We cannot divulge many of those that we have listed because of conflicting interests, but a call at our office will reveal that there are many hidden opportunities. It is so small an expenditure of energy to dial 2-1693.

WE CANNOT PREDICT the Democratic nominee to be selected next week in Chicago, but we can predict higher prices of homes in Midland and elsewhere. Every newspaper is screaming this to the public. If the prices of homes seem high to you, remember that when they bought, they paid less. Don't you REALLY believe that now is the time for you to invest in your home?

GRAFALAND

To describe this residence as a 3-bedroom home would be like calling a chinchilla wrap a lady's coat . . . a true but hardly adequate statement. On a very large corner lot in the heart of Grafaland, this Austin Stone home is in the setting it truly deserves . . . and from the heavy shake roof to the solid foundation, it was built for generations of comfort and enjoyment.

The huge living room is the natural focal point, with immediate access to the large, airy family room, the beautiful, panelled den, the dining room and kitchen, and the three comfortable bedrooms. Refinements include fireplaces in the living room and den, 7 1/2-ton U. S. Airco air conditioning, 200,000-B.T.U. heating system, circulating hot water, indirect lighting with mercury switches, and innumerable others. Two full tile baths, with a half-bath off the kitchen. The carpeting and drapes are in exquisite taste, of course. And leading to the double garage is a large, tiled porch designed for outdoor living enjoyment.

This gracious home, one of the most beautiful and outstanding in Grafaland, is waiting for your inspection . . . just call and let us know when you would like to see it.

WHY
ARE CLASSIFIED ADS SO LITTLE?
Classified Ads are little because they need not be big to get attention. Classified Ad readers are interested only in what the Classified Ads offer—not their size. Besides, a small Classified Ad costs very little. A 15 word ad four days costs less than a carton of cigarettes.

Why Fight Drouth?

Why continue to suffer drouth losses when good land with plenty of underground water to insure uniformly heavy production under irrigation is available at low prices and on easy terms?

The Stribling ranch in the famous San Luis Valley of Southern Colorado consists of 80,000 acres of fertile land now in early stages of development into a prosperous irrigated farming community. Land values, now low, are due to advance enormously as it is brought into production. REA power for pumping. Crops now growing prove land will produce 400 to 600 bushels per acre of potatoes, 40 to 50 of wheat, and up to 100 bushels of oats or barley. But it is best suited for balanced stock farming with livestock on permanent irrigated pastures of clover, alfalfa and grasses. Summer gains of cattle or sheep on such pastures range upward of 500 pounds per acre.

Any size tracts of level land suitable for development into irrigated farms are now available at from $50 to $75 per acre, with no down payment to those who can and will invest an additional $40 to $50 per acre to develop for heavy production. Adjacent hill land, $10 per acre.

For appointment to see, call owner, collect, at address below between 8 and 9 A.M. or after 10 P.M.

Culberson Warns Against Shortage Of Heating Oil

FORT WORTH —(AP)— Increase in the manufacture of heating oils by the nation's refiners in an effort to avert a possible shortage next Winter was urged Saturday by Olin Culberson, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission.

He made the statement en route to the McElroy-Wilshire gasoline plant in Western Upton County, where he aided in its dedication.

Culberson said he was not predicting a shortage of fuel oil, but was stressing ways of avoiding such a situation.

He declared the refiners faced the challenge of furnishing sufficient heating oil next Winter, and statistics indicated production of the product must be increased by 25 per cent of the refinery yield instead of the 23 per cent normally had.

It was Culberson's opinion such a rate will have to be maintained for the next nine months or "else it is not beyond the realm of possibility that the supply of heating oil can get in a short situation."

He called attention to the sharp increase in the Texas oil allowable last week, which he termed timely and made available crude in bounteous supply.

"We don't fix price nor volume of refinery throughout, we only make the crude available," said Culberson.

He urged consumers to fill their tanks now, and asked the dealers and distributors to encourage such action.

Plenty Of Crude

"Should shortage of heating oil develop, no one can say that the Texas Railroad Commission made crude short," emphasized Culberson. "There is an abundance of available crude.

"If the refiners are holding back on making heating oil for which they receive a less price per gallon than they do for gasoline it can't be chargeable to the Railroad Commission of Texas."

Elliott Will Manage Hamon's New Office In Central Building

Jake L. Hamon, with headquarters in Dallas, has opened an office in Midland to handle his West Texas operations. It is in room 120, Central Building.

A. C. Elliott, who recently resigned as western division geologist for Shell Oil Company, will manage the Midland office for Hamon.

Elliott has been in Midland with Shell for four and one-half years. He joined that concern in 1937 as a field geologist.

Elliott graduated from Texas A&M College with a degree in geology. He was with the geophysical department of Magnolia Petroleum Company until 1937 in the Gulf Coast area. He left that concern to go with Shell.

Elliott is president of the North Midland Little League.

Some Oil Is Recovered In Dawson DST

Cities Servi-- Oil Company No. 14 Dupree, wildcat in Northwest Dawson County, encountered oil, gas and sulphur water on a four-hour drillstem test of the Fusselman.

Interval tested was from 11,924 to 11,980 feet. No gas or fluid surfaced. Recovery was 1,300-foot water blanket 270 feet of oil and gas-cut mud, 180 feet of oil and gas-cut sulphur water and 10 feet of free oil. Open flowing bottomhole pressure was 1,140 pounds and 15-minute shutin bottomhole pressure was 3,595 pounds.

Operator was drilling ahead for another drillstem test.

The Fusselman was topped at 11,920 feet, elevation 3,093 feet.

Location is 550 feet from north and west lines of the southeast quarter of section 67, block M, EL&RR survey and 15 miles northwest of Lamesa. It is in the shallow Welch field.

Van Alstyne Quits As Superior's Landman; To Go Independent

C. W. Van Alstyne has resigned as district landman in Midland for The Superior Oil Company. The resignation is to be effective July 31.

After that date he will work as an independent oil operator, broker and trader. He will continue to make his home and headquarters in Midland.

Here For Nine Years

Van Alstyne has been district landman for Superior in Midland for nine years, having come to this city to handle that job in July 1943.

He has been associated with Superior for 14 years, having had five years of service with the concern in California prior to coming to Midland.

Midlanders To Start Soon At Shallow Crockett Test

John H. Healey and W. R. (Dub) Yarborough, both of Midland are to start drilling by August 1 on their No. 1 University which is to be a 3,300-foot wildcat in Central-North Crockett County.

Location is 330 feet from south and west lines of the northwest quarter of section 20, block 7, University survey. It is almost on the south line of Reagan County.

The drillsite is 15 miles southwest of Big Lake. It is three miles southwest of the Grayson field and five miles northwest of the World field —both shallow producing areas.

The Healey and Yarborough prospector is contracted to test the San Andres-Permian lime.

It is on a 320-acre farmout from Cities Service Oil Company.

Mixed Reactions Are Shown After Investigation Decision

By TEX EASLEY

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The Justice Department's decision to investigate a reputed international oil cartel brought mixed reaction Saturday.

Senator Hennings (D-Mo) commended the Justice Department action in preparing for criminal and civil actions against five major U. S. oil firms and two foreign companies.

To Probe Soon

Attorney General James P. McGranery announced Friday a District of Columbia grand jury soon would start probing "the international oil cartel," and civil antitrust actions would be brought in district courts to prevent a repetition of the alleged offenses.

But an official of a nation-wide oil trade organization, who declined to be identified, expressed doubt that any concrete action would come from the probe.

This official took the position that the domestic laws of this nation would have no control over the over-seas operations of the American concerns, which are carried on under separate business establishments incorporated under foreign governments.

The inquiry grows out of loud and persistent complaints by Hennings that a few large oil companies had dominated production and prices of petroleum outside the U. S. Senator Long (D-La) last week joined him in urging that a report on the matter prepared by the Federal Trade Commission be made public. The report has been kept secret on the ground that it would adversely affect our foreign relations.

The companies which McGranery authorized a grand jury to investigate are: Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, The Texas Co., Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. and Gulf Oil Co., all of the United States; and Royal Dutch Shell and Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., pre-dominatly British concerns.

Tulsa Oil Show Expected To Draw Record Attendance

TULSA—The International Petroleum Exposition Housing Bureau office for the May 14-23, 1953 show in Tulsa will be opened August 1 at 616 South Boston in Tulsa, according to Barton A. Meyers, bureau committee chairman.

Requests for hotel accommodations should be sent in as soon as needs can be ascertained, but it is emphasized that no action will be taken to confirm hotel reservations until Jan. 15, 1953.

Listings of private rooms, homes and apartments will begin immediately and assignment of private housing units will begin in September, as soon as listings can be checked by the committee. Companies and individuals who wish to secure private homes or apartments are urged to submit their requests as soon as possible.

More than 15,000 different oilmen attended the last exposition, held in 1948, and William B. Way, exposition general manager, predicts that attendance will be greater than ever. "The two day longer show will permit companies to stagger more field men to attend the show and aid in providing more accommodations," he said.

Civil Air Patrol Names Chaplains

DALLAS—(AP)—A chaplain and deputy chaplain were appointed Saturday for the six-state Southwestern region of the Civil Air Patrol.

The posts went respectively, to Rev. W. Jack Lewis of Austin, executive director of the Christian "Faith and Life" Community, and Rev. John F. Anderson, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Dallas.

Col. D. Harold Byrd of Dallas, vice chairman of the national executive board of the CAP, in making his first appointments as commanding officer of the region, said both men would be lieutenant colonels. The region embraces Texas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi.

VISITING PARENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Toms of Austin are guests in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Tom, 1611 West Texas Street. The Charles Toms are students in the University of Texas.

Hanley Test On Ector, Midland Line Flows Oil On Drillstem Test

Hanley Company and associates No. 1 C. V. Headlee, Northeast Ector County wildcat, just over the line from Midland County flowed oil naturally at the estimated rate of 20 to 25 barrels per day from the Wolfcamp-Permian lime in a drillstem test at 10,085-143 feet.

There were no signs of formation water in the fluid developed during the one hour test.

Gas surfaced in five minutes and drilling mud came to the surface in 32 minutes. Oil started flowing out at the top in 45 minutes.

The oil flowed to pits for 15 minutes and the flow was estimated at the rate of between 20 barrels and 25 barrels per hour. Open flowing bottom hole pressure was from 900 pounds to 1,025 pounds.

Shutin bottom hole pressure after 15 minutes was 1,520 pounds.

The fluid left in the drill pipe when the tester was closed unloaded as the tool was being closed. It was all oil. There were no signs of water.

To Pennsylvanian

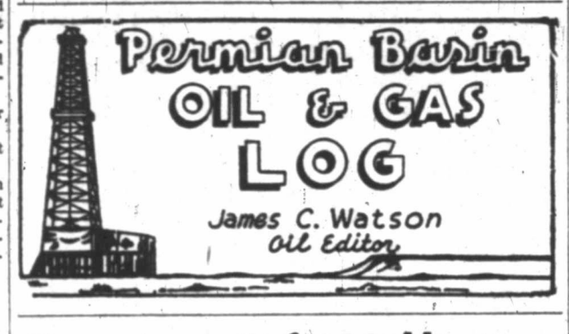

The wildcat, which is contracted to 11,000 feet to try for production in the Pennsylvanian lime, has drilled to 10,173 feet where it will take a drillstem test early Sunday.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 39, block 41, T-1-S, T&P survey. It is approximately 10 miles due west of the city of Midland.

The prospective discovery is five miles northwest of the Midland Air Terminal. It is approximately 10 miles northeast of Odessa.

This wildcat is located on a block of leases which was assembled by El Capitan Oil Company of Midland.

That concern turned some of the acreage out of the block to Spartan Drilling Comany and Hanley Company for the drilling of a well. El Capitan retains considerable acreage in the region adjacent to No. 1 Headlee.

Survey Of Williston Basin Oil Prospects Made By Journal

TULSA—The Williston Basin, newest oil area on the continent, should be able to produce 25,000 barrels of crude oil per day by the end of 1953 and 200,000 barrels per day by 1963, The Oil and Gas Journal predicts.

On the basis of the eight producing fields now proven in the area astride the Dakota, Montana, and Canadian borders, the Journal estimates that the Williston Basin ultimately will develop reserves of 2,500,000,444 (2-1/2 billion) barrels of crude. This is considerably more than the proven reserves of either Oklahoma or Louisiana, both large producing states.

"Enthusiasm for the potentialities of the Williston basin has yet to reach its limit", the oil publication says in a series of articles in this week's issue reviewing the development in the year and a half since oil was first discovered in North Dakota.

Results of the past year's drilling and more precise knowledge of the geology of the region now make it possible to put fairly definite limits on the extent of the oil-bearing formations properly falling into the Williston Basin.

The Journal article places its extent at 118,500 square miles, or 75,835,000 acres — 35,200 square miles in North Dakota 18,630 square miles in South Dakota, 24,900 square miles in Montana, 35,600 square miles in Saskatchewan, and 3,950 square miles in Manitoba.

Even though the entire area may not prove productive, the Journal says its estimate of two and one-half billion barrels of reserves may turn out to be conservative because, by comparison, the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southwest New Mexico has reserves of 10 billion barrels although it covers only 90,000 square miles.

The Williston Basin now has eight producing fields — three in North Dakota, four in Montana, one in Manitoba. A discovery has been indicated in the Saskatchewan portion of the basin. At present these fields have only one to three producing wells each with the exception of Beaver Lodge field in North Dakota—site of the original discovery—which has close to 20 wells completed.

More Discoveries Expected

There are 51 drilling rigs now operating in various parts of the Williston Basin, the Journal reports, and additional oil discoveries are expected to be made within the next few months.

The Journal warns, however, that producing capacity in the Williston Basin may build up faster than outlets can be found for the oil.

Standard Oil Company of Indiana has announced that it will build a refinery at Mandan, N. D., with a capacity of 15,000 barrels per day, to be completed about the middle of 1954.

May Have Difficulties

If the region's ability to produce crude oil increases as fast as anticipated, much of the oil may have difficulty finding a market because of the land and expensive railroad haul to refining areas.

Sooner or later a large pipe line will be built out of the Williston Basin, but the Journal declares that such a project wil not be undertaken until the basin has proven the ability to produce around 60,000 barrels per day.

In the meantime, the publication says, there may be periods when many Williston Basin wells will be curtailed to a small portion of their producing capacity, awaiting the development of sufficient reserves to justify construction of new refineries or pipe lines.

DST Shows Oil, Gas In Glasscock

Sinclair Oil & Gas Company No. 1-Hall, wildcat in Northwest Glasscock County, 16 miles northwest of Garden City and eight miles southeast of Stanton, found sweet gas and oil and gas-cut mud on a drillstem test of a leonard section.

Interval tested was from 7,498 to 7,640 feet. Tool was open three hours and 15 minutes. Total recovery was 310 feet of heavily oil and gas-cut mud.

The project unloaded sweet gas from the drillpipe all the time it was being pulled.

Open flowing bottomhole pressure ranged from 95 to 195 pounds.

Operator was drilling ahead.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 6, block 34, T-2-S, T&P survey.

Swabbing Tests Are Underway At Sterling Project

Tex-Harvey Employes Incorporated No. 1 Jessie Ellwood Chappell and others, wildcat and indicated multipay discovery in Northeast Sterling County, was swabbing to clean out and test.

Open hole section from 7,754 to 7,760 feet was washed with 500 gallons of mud acid and treated with 2,000 gallons of regular acid.

The well is making some oil and acid residue on swabbing tests. No gauge has been reported on amount of free oil being made. The section being tested is in the Ellenburger.

No. 1 Chappell has indicated production from the Strawn, Mississippian and a detrital.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines or section 43, block 18, SP survey and 18 miles north and slightly east of Sterling City.

Fields Schedules 4,800-Foot Test In C-E Tom Green

Bert Fields of Dallas No. 1 J. S. Campbell is to be a 4,800-foot wildcat in Central-East Tom Green County. It is two miles northeast of Mereta and 467 feet from north and west lines of the Campbell lease in the F. Dirks survey.

It is on a farmout to Fields from The Texas Company.

Outposts Are Staked To New Field In SE Reagan

Paul F. Barnhart and R. T. McDermott and others staked locations for two outposts to the recently opened South Barnhart (Ellenburger) field in Southeast Reagan County.

Their No. 1-21-B University will be drilled 5/8 mile southeast of The Atlantic Refining Company No. 1-C-48 University, discovery well of the field. Site is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 21, block 48, University survey.

The other outpost is their No. 1-12-A University, one and one-half miles north of the discovery and one-half mile south of production in the Barnhart (Ellenburger) field. This new test is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 12, block 48, University.

Both tests are to drill to 9,800 feet.

McGuigan Is Named Manager Of Lion's New Regional Office

Under a decentralization plan which has been announced for the operations of Lion Oil Company Midland is to be the headquarters for the Southwestern region of the concern's production and exploration division.

F. H. (Mack) McGuigan of this city has been named manager of the Southwestern region.

F. H. McGuigan

Has Been Geological Chief

He has been division geologist for Lion for the Permian Basin area of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico for almost 10 years.

Lion has divided the area in the United States in which it operates into four regions. The Southwestern region will supervise the company's land, geological and production work in New Mexico, North, West-Central, Panhandle and West Texas.

District offices at Abilene, Amarillo, and Roswell, N. M., will be included in the Southwestern region.

Work Under Howell

All the new regional offices in the Lion organization will work under the newly formed production and exploration division in the concern's headquarters offices at El Dorado, Ark.

John E. Howell, vice president of the company, will be manager of the production and exploration division.

Frank Richardson will act as Howell's assistant, with the title of assistant general manager of the new operating division.

Staff At Headquarters

The staff will consist of R. T. Ellzey, as manager of land; E. D. Klinger, as chief geologist, and F. E. Steele, as general superintendent of oil production.

Announcement of the new arrangement was made at El Dorado by T. M. Martin, president of Lion Oil Company.

"Due to the company's growth and expansion in recent years the need for decentralization of authority has arisen, resulting in the necessity for decentralizing activity for production, land and geological services," Martin said.

Other Regions Listed

"The operating area of the company's new division will be divided into four regions, each of which will be headed by a regional manager.

The Rocky Mountain region, consisting of Rocky Mountain and Williston Basin areas, will be headquartered at Denver, Colo., under the management of C. L. McArthur.

The Southwestern region, consisting of New Mexico, North, West-Central, Panhandle and West Texas areas, will headquarter at Midland, Texas, under the management of F. H. McGuigan.

One At Wichita

The Central region, consisting of Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska, will have its headquarters at Wichita, Kan., with R. L. Williams as regional manager

The Southern region, comprised of Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Gulf Coast and East Texas areas of Texas, will be headquartered at Shreveport, La., under Bert E. Gamble as manager."

Howell, assisted by Richardson, will continue to direct the activities of pipe line and gas-gasoline departments of the company, the announcement stated.

Week's Well Completions Exceed 300

AUSTIN —(AP)— The greatest number of oil well completions for a single week this year was reported by the Texas Railroad Commission. The number was 313 for this week, the only time completion have exceeded the 300 mark in 1952.

Operators have brought in 6,459 oil wells this year compared with 6,007 a year ago.

Only eight gas wells were completed, compared with 50 last week. The year's total of 488 compared with 472 for the similar 1951 period.

There were 107 dry holes for the week.

Wildcatters drilled 14 oil wells, 3 gas, and 60 dry.

Plugged were 109 dry wells, 5 gas and 44 oil.

The total average calendar day allowable as of today was 2,749,126 barrels, up 12,212 from a week ago.

Littlejohn Opens Land Office For Houston In Casper

Henry E. Littlejohn, Jr., formerly in Midland as assistant landman for Houston Oil Company of Texas, has opened an office for that concern in Casper, Wyo., at 148 East Midwest Avenue.

W. G. Olson is the district geologist for Houston in that area. He formerly worked for Continental Oil Company in Casper.

Littlejohn originated the Permian Pete cartoon which runs in The Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday.

W-CTO&G Barbecue At Possum Kingdom Set For August 7

The annual Summer barbecue and stag get-together of the West-Central Texas Oil & Gas Association will be held on August 7.

The affair will be at the Chemical Process Company lodge on Possum Kingdom Lake.

Persons who plan to attend should notify Robert J. Tiffany, secretary of the association at Abilene. The party is free to the membership of the W-CTO&GA and their invited guests.

Truman Signs Bill Extending Time To File Oil, Gas Suits

President Truman has signed into law a bill extending for another year the time for filing of claims against the government in connection with oil and gas rights on lands now 10 to 100 feet below the surface of Lake Texoma on the Red River between Texas and Oklahoma.

When the government built Denison Dam, some of the reservoir area had to be acquired by condemnation. Oil had been discovered nearby so the government let the mineral rights remain with the original owners of the lands.

Six-Year To File

The waters of the lake covered the lands in question by March 15, 1945, and the former property owners had six years from that date to file suits against the government for the loss or reduction in value of their mineral rights.

Sixty-two suits, involving $2,740,000 in claims, were filed before the six-year time limit expired.

More Suits

Since March 15, 1951, another 39 suits involving $433,000, were proposed by former land owners but were not accepted by the courts because the time had expired. The bill just signed by the President permits the filing of such suits until mid-July of 1953.

Most of the claimants who had not filed before the expired deadline were holders of small mineral interests. Among reasons given for failure to file was belief of many that they could not sue the government, that the government would settle the matter administratively, and that litigation costs would be prohibitive.

Spraberry Trend Given 52 More New Oil Wells

The Spraberry Trend received 52 more completed oil wells during the past two weeks period to bring that area's total to 1,940.

The Driver area received 11 of the new wells to give that field a total of 326. The Tex-Harvey field gained five to boost the total in that area to 531.

There were 121 rigs drilling in the Trend's fields July 19.

Varied Electrical Use Poses Problem

MINNEAPOLIS —(AP)— You can find almost any kind of electricity if you look far enough, say the scientists in an engineering laboratory here.

Most U. S. electricity is 60-cycle, but you can find 25-cycle as one place in India—and across the street it's 50-cycle. The Isle of Capri has 42-cycle, Gibralter, 76 and Cairo 40 or 50.

So the laboratory here, part of a company which makes automatic controls, has machines which will make electricity with any desired cycle. They use it to test control devices designed for export.

Paley Commission Report Spots 'Go Slow' Sign On Gas Industry Expansion

By JOSEPH HUTTLINGER
Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON—A go slow sign on natural gas industry expansion is put up in the Paley Commission report on materials resources of the U. S.

The commission, of which George R. Brown, chairman of the board of the Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation, was one of the five members, sees four major "challenges" ahead.

One is to spur on natural gas discoveries; another to avoid waste and flaring in the gas fields; a third to change the "pattern of use" away from factories and toward homes and other "high-advantage" users; and the last to lay the basis for "an orderly transition to other fuels" in decades to come when gas plays out.

The milestone document, which promises to be a basis of government oil and gas policies in years to come, may run head on into a confidential plan at the Petroleum Administration for Defense for a huge gas pipe line program.

The PAD plan, still being perfected, is to outline an expansion program over the next year or two, comparable to the PAD's 18-month oil expansion program.

While the 60-day steel strike may set back major oil and gas programs as much as a year, the basic issue will remain. This is whether to have a cautious expansion policy, as the Paley report suggests, or to have an ambitious one as the PAD is said to be considering.

Strong Words Used

In unusually strong words from a commission bearing an industry representative, the Paley report says:

"All reasonable steps by private parties and by state governments to encourage unified operations . . . will strengthen conservation of both fuels." The report suggests the states get tough about gas flaring, and stop gas use in the carbon black field.

On wasteful uses of gas, the Paley report says:

"Considering the nation's limited reserves of natural gas, there is no economic virtue simply in further expanding pipe lines, but a clear advantage exists in extending or enlarging access of high advantage users."

The report explained that the Federal Power Commission already considers whether a proposed gas line will have "high advantage" or high-paying users, such as cooking stoves. This might get even "greater weight," says the report.

The gas company wanting to build a line in the future should be required to show efforts to "minimize off-peak dumping by developing storage," it went on.

"Go Slow" Warning

One section of the report, which is being interpreted as a definite go slow warning on expansion, advises the FPC that "costly overexpansion" must be avoided.

"Excessive building of pipe lines and over commitment of limited reserves could lead, when reserves are gone, to premature obsolescence of costly capital equipment, for operators and consumers alike," says the report.

It adds that the gas pipe line companies, and the financiers who put up the capital, will watch this, but that the regulatory bodies have a "strong responsibility," too.

As reassurance, the Paley report explains: "The problem is not yet one of whether or not to authorize further pipe line construction, but of how much to permit and under what circumstances."

The next 25 years promise an adequate supply of natural gas, although the commission both hopes and expects some industrial users to shift to other fuels, if only because gas prices may rise.

After that, however, some readjustments may be needed. Gas from coal may be produced, and carried in some of today's natural gas lines, the commission explains, but it sees the cost of this gas as relatively high.

Texas Operator Plans 11 Wildcat Tests In Southeast U. S. Areas

WAYCROSS, GA —(AP)— H. A. Stallings, director of the State of Georgia Oil and Gas Commission, has announced that he has been informed that E. B. Larue, of Athens, Texas, will drill nine wells in Georgia and Alabama, one in Mississippi, and one in Florida—a total of eleven wildcat wells now scheduled.

The statement followed a conference of Hon. Herman Talmadge, governor of Georgia; Howard C. Christie, Vice president of the Southern California Petroleum Corporation; Garland Peyton, State Geologist of Georgia; H. A. Stallings, Director of the Georgia Oil and Gas Commission; E. B. Larue and Miss Wilma Waddell, paleontologist.

Own Large Blocks

Larue owns one-half interest together with the Southern California Petroleum Corporation in 273,000 acres of oil and gas in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, in 304,000 acres together with Reredel Associates of New York; in 80,000 acres together with Dillard Larue, of Tyler, Texas and owns individually 165,000 acres and 308,000 acres together with Blair Holdings Corporation of New York.

Test oil and gas wells are scheduled for Clinch, Mitchell, Telfair, Liberty and Grady counties in Georgia and others are scheduled for counties in Alabama and Mississippi and Florida.

Gordon Brothers, Zeckendorf, Form Oil Partnership

A partnership has been formed by Louis A. J. Gordon of Midland, his brother Tulane Gordon of Houston, and William Zeckendorf of New York City for oil industry operations.

The partnership has been established to acquire oil properties in the Southwest and to explore, drill and develop potential oil areas, according to Tulane Gordon, who made the announcement of the formation of the new concern.

To Increase Operations

He said the partnership would bring about increased operations for both himself and his Midland brother and would also give Zeckendorf oil operations in this region.

Zeckendorf is president of Webb and Knapp of New York City.

P. T. Barnum Had Nothing On U. S. Oil Business--- 'Greatest Show On Earth'

Everyone in the oil country has claimed for a long time that the oil business is the greatest "game" in the world. And the romantic growth of the industry with its fabulous individuals and unsurpassed contribution to the domestic welfare gives ample proof of this proud claim.

It remained for the editors of The Sunray News, employe magazine for Sunray Oil Corporation, however, to turn the phrase in this Summertime season when the nations' circuses—The Greatest Show on Earth—are on the road into a unique oil-circus editorial correlary in the current issue of the monthly magazine.

"The Greatest Show on Earth . . . OIL" is the title of a page one feature in the current Sunray News as written especially for the magazine by Ruth Sheldon Knowles, former Tulsa newspaper woman. Pointing out the excitement of the circus in the drama of the sawdust ring, the big tent and the grand entry, the Sunray News describes the related pagentry of the circus and the oil industry as follows:

"These are the Geologists and Geophysicists—those trapeze artists who have to be agile to explain the geological reason why oil wasn't where they said it was to begin with. But as they swing from one "high" to another they do find oil with the greatest of ease.

"Those advance agents are the Landmen on their way to the next place the Big Show will play. They'll lease the circus grounds, appease the city fathers, make arrangements for all the circus will need while it's on the road, and whip up everyone's interest in the performance.

"See the fearless animal trainers? They're the Drillers and Production Engineers—taming wildcats into oil wells.

"Look at the wizardry of those tumblers — Refiners, rearranging their hydrocarbons in endless combinations to produce myriads of products for home and industry.

"And the elegant ringmasters—the Executives—those whips and top hats are just for show, of course.

"Oh, there's the balancing ace—the Lawyers—no, not those trained seals, but those high wire artists over there. Don't hold your breath—they always make it—or at least, almost always.

"Shake that circus stardust out of your eyes and take a look at the usually see—Pipeliners, Roustabouts, Pumpers, Foremen—the canvasmen setting up the tent, checking the rigging, loading the circus train—the Stenographers, Clerks, Office Workers—the wardrobe mistresses, cooks, attendants, the great army that makes it possible for the Big Show to stay on the road and be the most streamlined, fastest moving, best service giving show on earth.

And here come the clowns—all of us—audience and performers—Employes and Shareholders—for its our sense of humor that puts fun into our work, acts our part in Oil—The Greatest Show on Earth!"

Large Behind Scenes Force Keep Wheels Turning At Midland Memorial Hospital

They can't lock up Midland Memorial Hospital overnight at closing time and go home.

The doors never can close and the job of caring for the sick is a never-ending, 24-hour-a-day responsibility.

Naturally this requires the skills and the services of scores of technicians and other workers, who must co-operate with the medical staff in keeping the hospital in operation.

Most of the work goes unnoticed against the drama of the battle against illness and death.

But every day, a behind the scenes force of 120 workers keeps the wheels rolling at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Directing their efforts is Burton Sears, a trained hospital man who took over the post as administrator of the hospital several months ago.

It is his job to co-ordinate the efforts of the hospital force and to see that every action is pointed toward the hospital's main objective —making sick people well.

Statistics Cited

A few statistics for a typical month—such as last May—demonstrate the wide variety of services necessary to keep the hospital functioning.

During that month 472 patients entered the hospital and were placed under the care of the medical staff, which is headed by Dr. H. Glenn Walker, and the nurses, headed by Mrs. Francis Hardwick.

During the months, there was an average of 73 patients in the hospital every day, a little below the capacity of 88 adult patients and 20 babies.

The hospital staff doctors performed 149 major and minor operations and took care of 229 persons who showed up for emergency treatment.

During the month 10,302 meals were prepared in the hospital kitchen under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Brownlee, dietician. At least 6,000 of those were served in the patients' rooms and a third of those were individually-prepared special diets requested by attending physicians.

To keep the hospital well supplied with clean uniforms and bedding, the laundry, under the direction of Mary Reed, must handle from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds of laundry a day.

Basement Facilities

Down in the basement, 618 physical therapy treatments were given under the skilled hands of Thomas King, the trained physical therapist on the hospital staff.

During the month, hundreds of X-ray examinations and treatments were given by Dr. H. D. Gilliam, the staff radiologist, and 1,125 laboratory tests were made under the direction of Chief Laboratory Technician Nathan Wakefield.

And there were hundreds of little jobs for Roy L. Peek, hospital engineer, who must keep the boilers operating, the lights working and the floors clean.

Business manager of the hospital as well as administrative assistant to Sears is D. D. O'Connor, and the librarian who keeps the medical records of the 8,985 patients who have entered the hospital since it opened two years ago is Helen Byrne.

These key workers, of course, are assisted by scores of trained workers, who see to it that the doors of Midland Hospital remain open 24 hours a day, dedicated to the job of healing the sick.

Midland Cancer Clinic Receives $3,300 Grant

The Midland Diagnostic Cancer Clinic has been granted $3,300 by the Texas Division of the American Cancer Society to help carry on its work here.

Award of the grant to the Midland unit and 26 other similar units throughout the state, was announced in Austin Saturday by Dr. V. G. Brindley, vice president and chairman of the Texas division's executive committee.

The grant is the third received by the Midland clinic since it was organized more than a year ago. Following its organization, it received a $1,200 grant and a year ago received $3,300 in the annual award of such grants.

Schleicher Tests Plugged, Abandoned

Pan American Production Company No. 1 Tom R. Henderson and La Gloria Corporation and Edwin L. Cox No. 1 E. Otto Williams are two Ellenburger failures in Schleicher County.

Thirteen and one-half miles east of Eldorado, No. 1 Henderson was abandoned on total depth of 6,884 feet. It was located at the center of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 4, block A 2, GH&SA survey.

La Gloria and Cox quit No. 1 Williams on total depth of 6,000 feet after finding no fluid in the Ellenburger. It was drilled 18 1/2 miles northeast of Eldorado and at the center of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 24, block A, GH&SA survey.

Martin Officials, County Absolved In Jail Fire Suit

STANTON—A $384,000 damage suit brought by a former's inmate of Martin County jail was dismissed here Saturday as to three of the defendants.

The action was dismissed as to County Judge James McMorries, the Commissioners Court and Martin County itself by District Judge Charlie Sullivan, who heard arguments here Saturday on the defense motion.

The suit had been brought by Alfred Moody, who was injured when a fire, which claimed two lives, broke out in the county jail last December 27.

Also named in the suit were the City of Stanton and various other city and county peace officers.

CAUSE, CURE CHILL WORKER

INGLEWOOD, Calif.—(AP)—Factory Worker George D. Pauly, 35, dropped a 150-pound cake of ice Saturday.

It landed on his big toe. Later at a hospital the doctor found Pauly suffered only cuts on the toe and advised:

"Go home and keep your foot in an ice pack."

SEEKS ELECTION—Blind since the age of 17, Anita Blair of El Paso, Texas, told New York newsmen she hopes to be the first sightless woman elected to Congress. At present, a candidate for the Texas State Legislature in July primaries, Miss Blair is visiting New York with her 14-year-old seeing-eye dog, Fawn.

AUTOMOTIVE HINT

Because of inadequate distribution during the warm-up period, the use of too heavy an oil, rather than one too light, often is responsible for worn cylinder blocks.

MANY AVOID DECLARATION

OMAHA, NEB. — (AP) — Omaha World-Herald Reporter Tom Allan took the second paragraph ("We hold these truths to be self-evident," etc.) from the Declaration of Independence, fixed it up in petition form and asked persons encountered at random to sign it.

Of 25 persons approached, only four signed. Sample comments:

"Sounds sorta Communistic. Some of these Communist writers have a way of writing things, you know."

"What are you trying to do, overthrow the government?"

Atomic Citadel Being Built Beneath Streets Of London

By FERN RICH
NEA Special Correspondent

LONDON — The second city of London, which has been growing beneath England's capital for the past year and a half, is supposed to be a big secret.

But like most secrets, nearly everyone knows about this one. The catch is that no official will say "yes," "no" or even "maybe."

What actually seems to be going on is the building of an atom-proof citadel, 45 feet beneath London streets. Seven shafts have been excavated, all of which will be linked by tunnels and possibly by electric trains.

Supposedly there are thousands of rooms being constructed, complete with power generators, food storage facilities, telephones and all the equipment necessary to permit the various ministries and civil servants to carry on government in case of atomic attack.

Londoners are now well aware of the citadel used by Prime Minister Churchill and government leaders during the Battle of Britain. It accommodated 2,000 people and was built of steel and concrete.

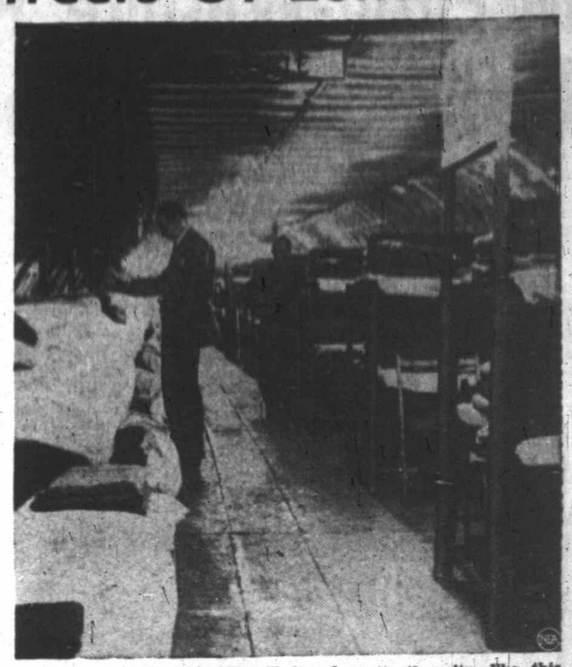

It was called the Rotunda and still exists and has been maintained. In another part of London, about three miles from Whitehall is a World War II deep air raid shelter which has also been maintained and which some guess will be included in the underground network.

Not far from Parliament Square and Big Ben, some of the most impressive construction work is going on behind thick walls at least 10 feet high. Doors in the wall are equipped with buzzers and a postage stamp size peephole. Police signs request that roads be kept clear due to "excavating work in progress."

I buzzed for the foreman and a burly, kindly-faced giant opened the door, came out on the sidewalk and quickly closed the door behind him. I told him I wanted to know about the digging and asked for the foreman. He was very polite and said he would fetch him.

Still standing on the sidewalk outside the high wall, I tried looking inconspicuous while passersby turned to stare. The foreman, a gnarled, cheerful Irishman with a rich brogue, answered my questions.

"I'm not allowed to show you the place, miss, he said. "I'm sorry."

LONDON UNDERGROUND: Shelter beneath the city, like this World War II version near Claphab South Station, could be the reason for all those holes in the ground they're digging in London these days. But officials won't talk about it.

"But it is an atomic shelter?"

"This one," he said, being careful not to answer my question directly, "is a very important site. It leads right into Buckingham Palace and Westminster Abbey. And it's a beautiful job!"

"How many workmen are there at this shaft?"

"I've got only 80 now but there were more in the beginning."

"When did you start work?"

"Last June."

"When will you finish?"

"We hope to be through by next month."

"Then what?"

"Well, then I hear talk of their putting the Colonial Office on top of this."

The old Colonial Office was several blocks away and in very shabby condition.

"Of course, if you steel boys stay on strike," he continued, "that plan will have to be scrapped.

"You can't keep people from talking," the foreman explained. "It isn't much of a secret, you know. As a matter of fact, theres' another of these holes over there (he pointed toward Horseferry Road near Victoria Street) which hasn't got a big solid fence around like this one. You can stand there and see just what the workmen are doing."

At the other "secret" shaft just as the foreman had said, was the usual group of sidewalk superintendents watching the excavating of pits, one of which was filled with water which kept coming up from below.

"Room enough down there for the whole British Army, I'd bet," said one man to another.

"Frightening, isn't it?" a striped-trousered one commented, then looked up at the bright blue sky into the warm sunshine, shuddered and walked away.

As the foreman said, London's mysterious holes - in - the - ground aren't much of a secret. Except for the fact that the Ministry of Defense says there aren't any.

'Greatest Kissers' Get Medical Frown

CAIRO—(AP)—Ethiopians are the world's greatest kissers. This is the conclusion of an observer who recently visited Ethiopia.

Men and women, meeting on the streets, kiss one another three times on the right and left cheeks. There is much mouth kissing, too.

Kissing of walls around churches, and even the pavement and ground in front of churches, is widely practiced. Foreign doctors frown on these common kissing habits, warning that they can further spread syphilis, which already is widespread in Ethiopia.

More Than 2,500 Attend McElroy-Wilshire Plant Dedication Ceremonies

CRANE—More than 2,500 persons attended the formal dedication program of the new McElroy-Wilshire gasoline plant in Central-West Upton County, 12 miles east of here Saturday.

A program was held at which the featured speakers were Olin Culberson, Austin, chairman of the Railroad Commission of Texas; D. A. Hulcy, Dallas, president of Lone Star Gas Company, and Donald N. McDonnell of New York City, executive vice president and acting chairman of the board of directors of The Wilshire Oil Company, Inc.

The new plant is owned by Lone Star and Wilshire. The former concern built and will operate it.

Olin Culberson

D. A. Hulcy

The visitors were shown through the gasoline plant and many of them also visited some of the 24 producing Ellenburger oil wells in the Wilshire (Ellenburger) oil field in which the plant is located.

There are presently 11 drilling rigs operating in the field. Gas for the plant comes from the wells now producing in the field.

Capacity of the plant is such that it can be enlarged to care for all additional gas that may be produced in that region through the drilling of new producers.

Dedication Held

After the inspection tours were completed the dedication program was held. That feature was followed by the serving of a barbecue lunch to all visitors.

Hulcy reviewed the program of Lone Star Gas Company which begun in West-Central Texas in the Ranger-Cisco-Breckenridge area in 1923 for providing a market and a use for casinghead gas which was being and has been flared from oil wells. He declared that his company had furnished a market for more than 700 million cubic feet of such gas since 1923.

Hulcy also said that the company was constant increasing its purchases of that mineral fuel.

Conservation Benefits

He pointed to the benefits that have been and are being derived from the conservation programs of the petroleum industry which are being carried on in cooperation with the Railroad Commission of Texas.

The gas company president also praised the Texas petroleum regulatory body for his program of conservation and the fairness with which that body works with the petroleum industry.

RRC Praised

McDonnell, the Wilshire executive also praised the Railroad Commission for having pioneered the program of petroleum conservation.

He pointed out that the gasoline plant and the Wilshire (Ellenburger) oil field, as well as all other operations of the American petroleum industry were, "a tribute to the rights and privileges we enjoy under the great American system of free enterprise."

McDonnell said that his company wanted to grow and develop with West Texas and to assume its proportionate part of the taxes for the schools, the counties and the state.

Wilshire's headquarters are in Los Angeles and New York. It's Texas division has its headquarters in Midland.

McDonnell said that Wilshire intends to continue to concentrate its activities in West Texas and New Mexico.

He lauded Frank W. Lake of Midland, vice president of the concern for his work in this area and said, "Wilshire's success in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico are due to the untiring efforts and vision of Frank W. Lake, our vice president in charge of our Texas operations."

Award Given

A. W. Breeland of Dallas, assistant director of personnel for Lone Star, in charge of safety presented an award to the construction crew which erected the new plant for not having a disabling accident to any workman while the job was underway.

L. T. Potter of Dallas, a vice president of Lone Star Gas Company was master of ceremonies for the dedication.

The Rev. H. D. Christian, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Crane gave the benediction at the conclusion of the program.

Lieut. Gen. Ernest O. Thompson and William J. Murray, Jr., the other two members of the Railroad Commission of Texas, had planned to attend the dedication, but were unable to do so.

The new plant will be operated by Lone Star. The residue gas from it will be taken by El Paso Natural Gas Company and will go into that concern's distribution system.

Culberson, in his address, praised Lone Star and Wilshire for having erected and put the gasoline plant in operation in less than 16 months after the first producer was completed in the Wilshire, (Ellenburger) oil field.

He declared that such procedure was a great contribution to the conservation of the gas from the field that otherwise might have been flared and its fuel content lost.

Companies Praised

The Railroad Commission chairman praised Lone Star and Wilshire for having instigated and carried through the plan for erecting and operating the new plant without any suggestion or request from any regulatory body having been made for such being undertaken.

The plant represents an investment of approximately $1,500,000. It is presently handling five million cubic feet of gas per day.

From that gas is produced 5,700 gallons of propane, 4,800 gallons of butane and 6,500 gallons of natural gas each day.

Plant Capacity

The plant can process a maximum 16 million cubic feet of gas per day with present equipment. By adding additional compressor horsepower its through up can be increased to 32 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Hulcy in his address termed the new plant, a "striking illustration" of free enterprise and an argument against centralized federal control.

By WARREN PAGE
Shooting Editor.

The trend in small arms for the GI seems to be toward the quick-firer. The swing now is to guns like out T-47 lightweight, which in some models will squirt as long as the trigger is held back, or the various forms of the Tommy, Schmeisser, and Sten guns. Perhaps those hose-nozzled rifle-guns have their military uses, but I for one am strictly from Missouri on the need for even a semi-automatic in the sporting rifle category.

From where I sit, the sporting rifle, if we leave its target use aside for the moment, is primarily a weapon with which to kill game in a sporting manner. That is to say quickly, cleanly, and safely.

In 99 sporting kills out of 100, it is only the first shot that a hunter can place exactly for a clean hit, right where the bullseye should have been painted on the animal.

A lot of boom-boom-boom after that may toss plenty of lead in the fleeing critter's general direction, but those follow-up shots aren't going to be worth one iota more than the shooter's ability to aim then, no matter how fast his gun can spit lead.

Up in Maine last Fall three of us were hunting a ridge east of Parker Stream. The west ridge was the territory of four other deer hunters out of the same camp. Two of them were carrying semi-automatic rifles —which is to say their rifle actions automatically kicked out the fired shell and fed in a new one, firing once for each pull of the trigger.

By mid-afternoon one of our trio had neatly popped a nice eight-pointer. A few minutes after that we heard a multiple-shot fusillade from across the creek, and as we started to haul our buck out, there was another burst of half a dozen fast shots. We could hear the other four nimrods stomping around in the swamp by the brook, trying to follow a blood trail left by a buck they'd hit some place or other with one bullet or another—and they never did find him. One aimed shot, one buck for us—two sprayings, wet feet and a wasted deer for them.

A quick-shooting sporting gun is handy in that you don't have to learn how to work the bolt or the slide or the lever to make fast follow-up shots. But the rate of fire of a sporting weapon isn't—or at least needn't be—any faster than the shooter's ability to recover from recoil and get his sights bearing for the follow-up shot. If you play staccato tunes on the trigger of a self-loading weapon — and none of our sporting equipment is designed to permit full automatic fire, or squirt until the trigger is released or magazine emptied—you'll quickly lose control of the gun.

Walk out to the center of a 10-acre lot sometime and put five rounds through any self-loading gun bigger than a .22 just as fast as you can pull the trigger. The last bullet will zip off toward a cloud or the neighbor's barn. With sporting weapons, it's aimed shots that pay off, not blind squirts.

The autoloading shotgun, on the other hand, is actually a basic part of our smoothbore scheme of things. It's cheaper than most doubles, usually easy in recoil and you don't have to pump anything. But even the "automatic" shotgun isn't any better on ducks or doves than our ability to recover for the second and the third shots.

"Please answer a question on play," asks a New York correspondent.

"My partner and I needed 120 points for our initial meld. I had no wild cards in my hand and therefore was depending on my partner to go down. The pack was frozen by the opponents, and my partner threw away two big jokers and a deuce.

"When the hand was over I said that my partner should have kept his wild cards to help him make his initial meld, but he said that he had picked them up one at a time.

"I don't see how this alters the case. Even if he picked them up a half at a time, he should still keep his own wild cards and let the opponents get the pack.

"What is your verdict on this?"

My verdict is guilty as charged. The partner should be sentenced to a year without wild cards. At the end of that time he may have a proper respect for jokers and deuces.

When the opponents freeze the pack they expect to win it sooner or later. Otherwise they wouldn't freeze. That being so, there is no advantage in throwing a wild card into the pack for them to collect when they pick up the pack. Charity is a great virtue, but it begins at home.

The only excuse for throwing a wild card into a pack that the opponents have frozen is to warn your partner to play safe. The wild card is a signal that the opponents have made a mistake; that you will surely capture the pile away from them.

What should you do with a non-descript sort of hand when you pick up wild cards one at a time? Just be thankful that you are picking those wild cards up. Hold on to them and try to build your hand up. The opponents will probably win the pack, but you may be able to meld out before they have done much damage.

Q—If you have a red three and forget to pick up another card in its place, do you get another card when you discover the mistake or do you forfeit this right?

A—You do not get another card later on. When you put a red three down and allow the next player to begin his play, your right to a replacement vanishes forever.

Canadian Oil Sands Promise To Provide War-Proof Fuels

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK — (AP) — Enemy submarines could snip this nation's oil lines from Venezuela and the Middle East. An all-out war could strain our oil resources—big and growing as they are.

But Canada reminds us today that she could furnish an ace in the hole—from 100 to 300 billion barrels of the war necessity, lying close to the surface in the tar sands of Northeastern Alberta.

That is a potential three to nine times as great as the 32 billion barrels of proved oil reserve which the American Petroleum Institute says this nation has.

No Russian sub could reach that Canadian life line of oil. But there's a hitch: no oil flows from there yet, because of the high cost of production.

Three American, 10 Canadian and one Swedish company are starting work this Summer to seek a way to produce gasoline and fuel oil economically from this vast deposit and to bring it to the American market at a cost competitive with oil products from conventional oil wells.

A Toronto engineer, S. M. Blair, in a report to the Alberta government says that removing the earth overhang of 50 to 500 feet and getting the tar sands to the processing plant would cost 55 cents a barrel.

Extracting the valuable sulphur and processing the crude oil would cost another $1.35.

Piping the crude oil to Lake Superior would add $1.02 to the cost —for a total of $3.10 a barrel. Similar oil brings $3.50 a barrel on the American market now. Under Blair's estimates this would be a profit margin of 40 cents.

The Swedish Shale Oil Company is leasing part of the Alberta government's pilot plant at Bitumont to see if it can't reduce these costs by extracting the oil through underground combustion.

Leases Are Taken

Two American firms — Socony-Vacuum and Suh Oil—have leased between them 150,000 acres in Alberta. Another, Shell Oil, has geologists looking the sands over. Ten Canadian companies have leased 250,000 acres. This Summer the oilmen are core-drilling to find out for sure how much oil is there, and how much overhang of earth and rock must be removed to get at the rich sands.

The mixture of oil and sand is about as thick and heavy as tar. It stretches for 100 miles along the Athabaska River and its tributaries in beds 100 to 200 feet thick. The total area has been estimated from 8,000 to 30,000 square miles. The oil content is estimated at from 100 to 300 billion barrels. And the sulphur content at one to three billion long tons compared to a 1951 world demand for 12 million tons of sulphur.

Hospital's 'Banker' Charges Interest--One Pint Of Blood

By COPE ROUTH

Not many people ever heard of Nathan Wakefield and his name never appears in the newspapers when Midland banks report periodically on their financial status.

But the chunky, cigar-smoking man with a crew haircut is one of Midland's most important bankers.

His teller's cage is the laboratory at Midland Memorial Hospital, his checkbook a slender needle attached to a rubber hose leading into a sterilized glass jar, and his vault a gleaming white refrigerator kept at four degrees Centrigrade, barely above freezing.

For Nathan Wakefield runs the Blood Bank at the hospital and in little more than a year more than 131 gallons of the scarlet, life-giving fluid have flowed under the direction of his skilled fingers.

The Blood Bank is just what its name implies.

Day in and day out, a small supply of blood of the various types is kept for use the minute it is needed.

"And we don't sell blood, either," explained Hospital Administrator Burton Sears. "At least we don't like to sell it.

"When a patient needs a pint of blood, we would rather it be replaced by some donor who shows up to give a pint of blood in exchange.

Credited To Account

"The donated blood is then placed in the patient's account in the bank and we are able to maintain an adequate supply."

The supply isn't very large, either.

"We try to keep about 40 pints of the four different types on hand," explained Wakefield. "We could, of course, keep more than that on hand, but that is the amount we need during an average 21-day period and we don't like to use blood more than three weeks old."

The Blood Bank was established a little more than a year ago when the Business and Professional Women's Club donated the huge electric refrigerator to the hospital.

The club then arranged for donors to contribute the "capital stock" to the bank, so it could get started.

It has been maintained, of course, by donors replacing blood as it is used by hospital patients.

"When a patient needs his first pint of blood for a transfusion," Wakefield continued, "we ask that it be replaced by two pints. This is usually done by a friend or relative.

Interest Rate

"After that first transfusion, it is replaced on the basis of one pint for every pint used. That initial extra pint is a sort of interest we charge.

"Like in any business, there are some who won't pay their blood bill and that extra pint serves as a cushion to keep the supply at the desired level."

The Blood Bank does not buy blood.

"A lot of people," said Wakefield, "think they can come in and sell their blood to the hospital.

"Occasionally someone, hard up financially, comes in and wants to sell us a pint of blood but we can't buy it.

"Other people come in and just want to donate blood. A man from Odessa came in the other day, said he was just driving by and decided he wanted to give the hospital a pint of blood.

"We took it and credited it to his name. If he ever needs blood, it will be here to his credit."

There are two or three persons who regularly report to donate blood. Wakefield said they are suffering from hypertension and the loss of the blood actually makes them feel better.

Accident Cases Lead

Most transfusions are given in accident cases, but on every major surgery case, a pint of blood is prepared for use in case it is needed. The blood is warmed to room temperature and then shaken gently to mix the red cells with the plasma.

Last month, a Monahans negro lost a leg in a train accident and received eight pints of blood by transfusion, but that din't quite reach the record mark.

One patient was bleeding internally and we gave him 11 pints—the amount the average person has in his system—before the bleeding "He recovered."

Wakefield, officially a medical technician, joined the staff here in December, 1950.

Working with him is Betty Atkinson, another medical technician.

GI'S CITATION PUT IN BRAILLE

DALLAS—(AP)—The blind parents of S/Sgt. William G. Dunaway, who won the Silver Star for gallantry in Korea, now can read for themselves the citation naming their son a hero.

The citation, writen in Braille by the Dallas Lighthouse for the Blind, was presented to Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Dunaway, Dallas.

Their son is now a member of the El Paso police department. He served with the Marines in Korea.

The citation credited him with rescuing wounded Marines.

Hospital's Medical Staff Keeps Pace With Progress

By DR. H. GLENN WALKER
Chief of Medical Staff
Midland Memorial Hospital

The staff of Midland Memorial Hospital has made great strides since opening day. The facilities and the service both are much better. It is the hope of the staff that as there is enlargement that efficiency will continue to grow.

The staff comes from many schools with many backgrounds, and many changes have to be made to meet the needs.

It is good to report that all doctors now actively practicing medicine in the Midland County Society are members of the Midland Memorial Hospital Staff.

Some people of this area still have their loyalty elsewhere. They want to get attention for the petty illness, but when they really get something wrong they go to see a doctor they have confidence in, and the one their mother used. Supposedly that is natural, but it is surprising how many of these same patients have departed from their father's occupation and are seeking employment in other vocations than that of their father.

A few years ago there may have been some justification in sending a patient to Dallas or elsewhere with stomach ulcers, or to a clinic if the diagnosis could not be found. In Midland today, however, 85 per cent of the hospital staff are specialists. In the normal community, 85 per cent are general practitioners. It is almost certain that you need not have your electocardiogram sent to El Paso or elsewhere and then pay a large travel expense to see a specialist. There are several members of the staff who can do these things as well as you can get them done elsewhere.

"Nothing Wrong"

I know that one of the largest clinics in this country, when it has finished all the laboratory and X-ray findings, in 80 per cent of the cases, finds nothing faulty in the mechanism of the body and tells the individual to go home and give his loyalty to his family physician.

Recently a Midland woman wanted a trip to New York. She tells with "gusto" about going to New York for her "operation," a simple thypoid affair that easily could have been done in the modern operating rooms of Midland Memorial Hospital. It was a nice trip, but, if she really had been ill, she would have received much more comfort from her relatives, friends, and minister here in her home town by "giving" her loyalty here.

It makes it very difficult for your physician to "give" his best when you have a divided loyalty.

Emergency Cases

It is with difficulty that the staff of the hospital has taken care of the emergency room. If at all possible, go to see your private physician about your illness, don't go to the hospital just looking for a doctor to get free treatment. You will be charged if you can pay and, with work available, there is little reason for charity. An emergency is hard to define, but if you have been ill three weeks and decide at 3 a.m. that you want to see a doctor before you go on vacation, that definitely is not an emergency. Please "give" the physician a night's rest if you can. Not a single man on the staff really minds getting up to see an accident case or a man with an acute appendix, or a child with a very high fever.

To be of service to his community is the utmost desire of each physician. It is a lack of understanding that has made our way rough in getting a new hospital open and going. I firmly believe that this is to be the medical center of the Permian Basin Empire, and I know that with the cooperation of each family living here, it will be so.

The staff expects to make adjustments to meet the needs of a growing community. Some of our staff members are leaving for further education and military purposes. You will miss them and so will we. There are others coming. We will look into their records and, if properly qualified, they will become members of the staff and we hope you will give them your loyalty.

Beautification Job Launched At Midland Memorial

After two years the Midland Memorial Hospital has launched a beautification program.

And, within the next year, Administrator Burton Sears hopes the hospital will have as green a lawn and as beautiful a landscape as any spot in the city.

Opened two years ago, the hospital has been too busy trying to break even financially and perfecting its internal organization to worry much about the outside appearance.

A small lawn was grown just outside the hospital, but water was too expensive to do more than that.

City To The Rescue

Then a couple of months ago, the City of Midland came to the hospital's rescue.

The City Council agreed to furnish the hospital with $500 worth of water monthly, with the city footing the bill.

Of that amount, $200 worth was to be used inside and $300 worth outside.

So Sears now is in the process of planning a long-range landscaping program.

The grounds already have been cleared of rocks and smoothed off and grass has been planted. Shrubbery will be added as soon as the planning work is completed.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—(AP)—North Carolina letter carriers are dog-gone tired of fighting with snapping dogs. New Medicine Halts Mastitis In Cattle

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — (AP) — Bovine mastitis, an inflammation of the udders of dairy cows, can be controlled effectively by a new form of the antibiotic neomycin, the Upjohn Company here reports.

The disease affects about 6,000,000 U. S. dairy cows, causing loss of millions of tons of milk yearly.

SINGAPORE—(AP)—Political commissars of Malay's Communist terrorist army have secret jungle huts in which to make love to lady friends. But the lower ranks of the force are compelled to await the women "left over from the upper ranks."

This was revealed by a surrendered terrorist commander, Ching Kuen, of the Fifth Communist Regiment, who gave himself up with 12 members of his unit, including three women.

Half a million copies of an open letter by Ching Kuen containing "eye-openers" of terrorists life in the Malayan jungles were airdropped to his comrades.

Army Doctor Says GI Feet Injured By 'March Fracture'

WASHINGTON —(AP)— An Army doctor has recommended easier marches for young soldiers in training—to help save their feet from injury.

Lt. Col. Francis D. Threadgill of the Army's Fort Ord, Calif., hospital reported evidence that long road marches given before proper conditioning of new men helped cause "march fracture"—a fracture of certain bones of the fore-foot.

Although commonest among soldiers, it is sometimes seen in waitresses, postmen and others who walk a great deal, the colonel said.

Asserting that in actual combat the foot soldier is seldom called upon to do long-lasting marching without let-up, Threadgill said, "It would appear unwise to cause march fractures by creating conditions which will not be met in the field."

"Training should produce a soldier with ability to withstand prolonged stress under varied conditions. The time necessary to inculcate the ability to perform repeated road marches without ill effect can be much better spent in other necessary fields in training the modern soldier."

Another triggering cause of march fracture, he said, is "the presently current game of 'chicken fighting' in which two soldiers engage in the sadistic attempt to jump on their opponent's feet."

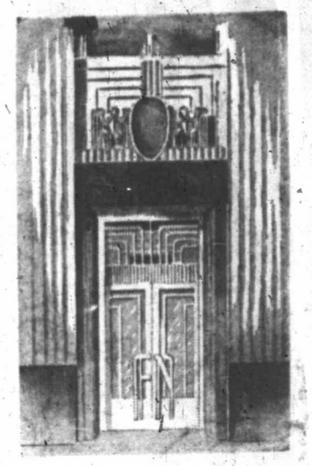

Note to GI's. The colonel's remarks were carried in the U. S. Armed Forces Medical Journal, which says in its masthead that "the opinions expressed in this publication are not necessarily those of the Army, Navy, Air Force or Department of Defense."

STRAWBERRY SHORTAGE

CORNWALL, CANADA—(AP)—Local truck gardeners blamed the poor outlook for strawberries here this year on the bees. J. A. McDonald said, "It's been raining so much the bees haven't pollinized." He pointed out the bees won't work when it is raining.

Daddy Ringtail And Gobbledy-Gook

Uncle Bunkum now was sitting out in the swing on the porch. Daddy Ringtail was with him, of course, and so was the Huffen Puffen, the friendly wolf.

Said the Huffen with a happy chuckle: "I am a very important fellow, I am, I am. I am the Huffen Puffen!"

Daddy Ringtail smiled to hear those words, and so did Uncle Bunkum. Oh, the Huffen is a very important fellow indeed, he thinks. Oh my yes, even though he isn't smart at all.

"Huffen Puffen," said Uncle Bunkum, "just how important are you today?"

Said the Huffen: "Oh, I am so very important, I am, that I have questions that no one can answer."

"Can too!" said Uncle Bunkum, because he was sure that he could answer any question that the Huffen could ask.

"Can't either!" said the Huffen, because he was sure that he could ask some questions that no one could answer at all.

"Gentlemen! Gentlemen!" Daddy Ringtail called out to them both. "Let the Huffen do his question-asking. Let Uncle Bunkum answer. Then we shall know if Uncle Bunkum can answer the Huffen's questions."

The Huffen said he would do it. Uncle Bunkum said he would too.

And so the Huffen said: "Uncle Bunkum, can you tell me what is a Gobbledy-Gook?"

The Huffen laughed out loud, because Uncle Bunkum now was scratching his head with a thought of trying to think just what a Gobbledy-Gook might be. Oh, Uncle Bunkum could never answer, the Huffen was sure, because whoever heard of a Gobbledy-Gook? Nobody had, not even the Huffen.

But suddenly, Uncle Bunkum laughed out a cackly laugh. Said he: "Why, a Gobbledy-Gook is little like a rabbit whose cousin once was a big giraffe."

And so Uncle Bunkum had answered the Huffen's question, and everyone was proud of Uncle Bunkum. Yes, and the Huffen was very surprised to know there is a Gobbledy-Gook.

Please, please don't ever tell him that Uncle Bunkum was only teasing. A Gobbledy-Gook is really something that isn't, you know. Happy day!

Red Workers Bemoan Tacks In Vegetables

VIENNA —(AP) —In Communist Hungary's nationalized industries, workers complain they find thumb tacks in vegetables served in factory canteens.

The Budapest newspaper Szabad Nep recently published a series of complaints from workers. Some of the gripes were:

"I found wire in my vegetables ...there were pebbles in the soup . . . the cheese and jam were sent on the same plate, were mixed up and inedible . . . one day when things were bad, thumb tacks were in the vegetables."

Expansion Of Bath Should Be Planned When House Erected

Home bathroom expansion should be planned when the house is built.

Costs for increasing such facilities often are unnecessarily high, according to a home remodeling report by the Tile Council of America, because provision for extra plumbing was not "roughened in" when the house originally was constructed.

Failure to install extra drain and water piping in the walls when the house is built too frequently results in expensive tearing-out of walls when powder rooms, basement toilets, or second shower facilities must be added due to family growth.

The report also makes these other recommendations concerning foresight in bathroom planning:

Using durable materials such as clay tile for the bathroom walls and floor avoids the necessity of costly resurfacing when the house is several years old. The same long-range economy is suggested for plumbing fixtures and piping.

Estimate Future Needs

It is wise to estimate future water needs accurately and install a system which will deliver adequate supplies when additional tubs, toilets and sinks are put in.

Initial installation of compartmented facilities probably will be adequate for the family's needs for a long time. Such equipment usually consists of a bath-and-a-half in the space usually alloted to the single bathroom, and includes a separate toilet room, a tub-shower combination, and an individual shower stall. These facilities not only share the original installation of clay tile, but also the plumbing lines, thus cutting costs.

Conservative selection of wall, fixture and floor colors is important in the long run. "Decorator" choices of which a family may tire easily should be avoided.

Americans use about 135 pounds of wheat flour per capita annually.

HOME OWNERS QUESTION BOX

Q—How can bulged linoleum be flattened?

A—If the bulge is along a seam, lift the edge and push linoleum paste under the loosened section. If the bulge is in the middle of a sheet, cut through the center of the bulge with a sharp razor blade and squirt paste underneath with an ear syringe. If the cut is made along a line in the pattern, it will not show. Weight down repaired areas until the paste dries.

Q—If the roof of a house has ugly lines, what can be done to make it less noticeable?

A—A situation like that calls for clever use of color. The solution is to make the roof and the sidewalls the same color, or, at least, to have a roofing color and a sidewall color that blend closely with each other. Asphalt shingles are ideal for that purpose. They are made in both solid and blended colors, ranging from subtle pastels to black.

Q—If oil has been spilled on a softwood floor, staining the boards, what can be done?

A—Cover the stain with dry portland cement or plaster of Paris as soon as possible after the oil has been spilled. This will absorb the oil. If this doesn't work, try gasoline or benzene, taking precautions against fire.

Q—Is it possible to get rid of clothes moths by finding their breeding place and destroying it?

A—Yes. If there are moths in a house, there usually is a central place from which they come. This might be an old carpet or a bundle of old clothes hidden away on a closet shelf or in the attic. If moths are frequently seen, a search should be made for this "nest."

The U. S. Navy dirigible Shenandoah was destroyed at 5 a.m., Sept. 3, 1925, by a thunder squall while passing over Ava, Ohio.

Better Kitchens May Be Boost To Property Income

Better kitchens can mean better income for property owners.

Modernization of the room in which the homemaker spends so many hours of the week is considered by many leading experts to be a key factor in apartment and home improvement. Remodeling of the kitchen not only boosts investment returns, but also obtains tenant goodwill.

Because of the importance of kitchen improvements, the Tile Council of America has compiled this basic list of major renovations as an aid to property owners and their contractors:

1. The more automatic equipment installed, the better. The woman who lives in the house or apartment wants modern ranges, refrigerators and as many extras as possible, like disposal units and dishwashers.

2. Ease of cleaning is a "must." Owners with one eye on tenant approval and the other on long-range economy are turning to durable material such as clay tile for walls, splashbacks behind sink and range, and counter surfaces.

Lighting Facilities

3. Be sure to increase the lighting facilities, either through expansion of windows or by installations of modern fixtures at points in the kitchen where illumination is essential; over the sink, above the range, and at storage facilities.

4. Utilize space to the best advantage by installing plenty of work counters. Economy will be achieved in the long run if these surfaces are of stainproof, waterproof material which needs no replacement.

5. Floor plans are especially important. Three major types of step-saving arrangements are: all-on-one-wall, L-shaped and U-shaped. The latter is the most highly approved, with the sink at the base of the "U."

6. Provide plenty of storage cabinets. No kitchen is efficient without ample cupboard space.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

"Somebody told us one of your pointers: that low discards are safer than high discards," writes a Cincinnati correspondent. "A few days later somebody else said you advised throwing a high card as the first discard.

"Looks to me as though one of these people misquoted you. Which one of these statements was true and which was false?"

Strange as it may seem, both statements are true. The reason is that you don't try to play safe at your first discard.

Suppose your opponent takes the pack immediately after you have made your first discard. What have you lost? Nothing very much. Moreover, it's far better to lose the pack at that time than to lose it later on, when it would contain more cards.

Suppose your opponent doesn't take the pack after you have made your first discard. Then you have gained something. You have gotten rid of an embarrassing card and have thus made room in your hand for something more useful.

In short, no matter what happens you are in no trouble if you make your dangerous discard at your first opportunity.

Now let's see what happens if you keep the dangerous card in your hand and try to play safe. If you're very lucky, you may pick up cards that match the dangerous card; and then it becomes a useful part of your hand.

But more often that dangerous card just stays useless and begins to clutter up your hand. If you discard it eventually, when the pack is good and juicy, you are then running a very grave risk.

If you keep it in your hand, you are under the handicap of playing with one (or more) useless card in your hand.

Either way, you are unhappy if you fail to get rid of the dangerous cards very early in the hand.

After the first two or three discards, however, the pack becomes worth fighting for. Now you don't dream of making dangerous discards if you have any intention of struggling to win the discard pile. And at this point you want to have a few low cards to throw, provided that there is no special reason to keep them in your hand.

Bartender-Notary Sure Of Customers

WINONO, MINN. — (AP) — Because youngsters under the legal age of 21 were trying to buy drinks at his bar, A. H. Kohner, owner, had himself commissioned a notary public.

Now, when a too youthful appearing person asks for an alcoholic drink, Kohner gets out his seal and papers to take a sworn statement. The customer gets a copy, the reverse ide of which carries excerpts from state laws on perjury and a list of possible penalties for violation.

Only ones who complain, says Kohner, are those under 21.

Compound In Cement Curbs Athlete's Foot

COLUMBUS, OHIO—(AP)—Someday swimming pools, showers and locker rooms may have built-in protection against your contracting athlete's foot, says Radcliffe F. Robinson, biologist of Battelle Institute here.

The protection would come by adding cooper compounds to regular Portland cement concrete used in the building. The copper compounds can destroy or halt the growth of fungi and molds.

In British administered islands of Oceania, head hunting was, until recently, a vital part of the ceremonial life of the people and its suppression lead to social decay and a sharp reduction in population.

Cropdusting Texans Teach Art To Locust-Ridden Iranians

WASHINGTON, —(AP)— Two Texans enroute to their homes in Dallas stopped over here to report to the State Department on their "Operation Locust" mission to Iran.

The pair, Jim Springer and Don Chesher gave a dramatic account of their low-flying sorties spraying insecticides over a land where men for centuries have used only flails to combat the devastating sarms of locusts.

"You can't imagine the tragedy to a land when the locusts swarm over it," Springer said. "They move in like a cloud and strip all the foliage off every living green thing.

"When those people see how we can fly over a vast area and kill more locusts in minutes than hundreds of them can in hours and days, they are deeply grateful."

Stomped To Death

He recalled seeing 27 men surround an area of a few acres and corral the teeming insects into a concentrated mass to be beaten and stomped to death.

Springer and Chesher are employed by a private airline, which sent them over to Iran in four-motored transport planes laden not only with insecticides, but with small single-engine aircraft used in spraying. The Texans also taught Iranians how to fly the small planes.

The Iranian locust control operation was done by the private airline under contract with the government. The mission was financed out of funds provided for the administration's point 4 program.

Accompanying the airmen about Washington during their stay here was Ken Smith, former Bonham resident, who is attached to the Point 4 headquarters.

"I can't imagine any other foreign aid expenditure we make," he declared, "That creates more good will dollar for dollar."

He recently visited Iran, Pakistan and India to check up on the locust control program throughout that part of the world.

The Agriculture Department has issued a report on methods of transporting and handling grain by motortruck in Texas and the Southwest.

The report was based on a study of 117 business concerns handling an estimated 30 to 35 per cent of the grain grown in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Data showed that 77 per cent of them used motortrucks along with railroad facilities for shipping and receiving grain. None used trucks exclusively, about 23 per cent relied solely on railroads.

Trucks moved about 25 per cent of all grain handled by the companies showing a breakdown on transportation figures.

Transportation of grain from the farm or country elevator into terminal positions by truck was undertaken by three types of operators: The merchant or itinerant trucker, the for-hire or specialized commodity, and the company operating its own trucks.

The motor equipment used to truck grain was found to be fairly well standardized. The bobtail grain truck was used generally to transport grain from the farm to country elevators. The tractor- trailer was universally used for the movement of grain to other than country elevators by the several types of grain truckers.

Truck operating cost studies, the report continued, indicated the typical specialized commodity carrier costs were about 17.5 to 18 cents per vehicle mile. When trucks were operated at a 50 per cent load factor, the breakeven point (Where revenue per hundredweight equals cost per hundredweight) appeared to be approximately 200 miles with a 30,000 pound pay load and about 325 miles for a 36,000-pound load.

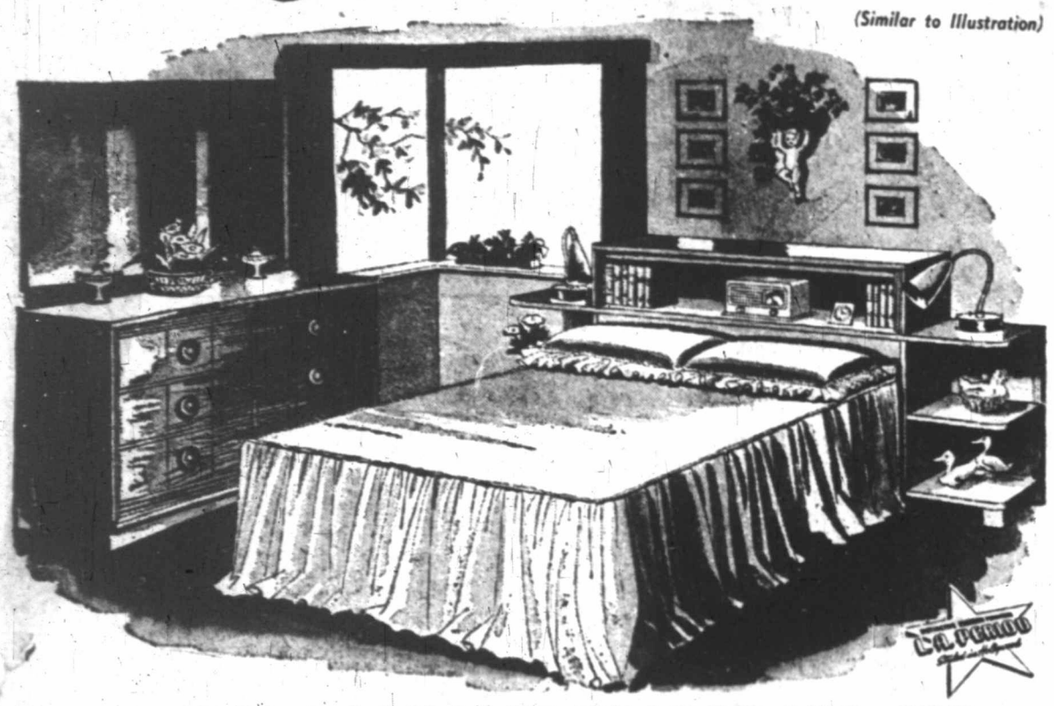

Truck rates for grain were reported to be relatively unstaple, tending to fluctuate in line with competition from other truckers and the amounts of grain in an area to be moved.

Generally, however, they were found to be substantially lower than rail rates between identical points,

Many Midland Families Entertain Out-Of-City Guests

GUESTS FROM LOUISIANA — Summer is the favorite time for exchanging visits with relatives and friends who live in other parts of the country. And Midland has its share of out-of-city visitors. In the "relatives" classification comes Mrs. Ralph Bloom, center, of Tallulah, La. Mrs. Bloom and her daughter, Rachel, are visiting in the home of Mrs. Bloom's sister, Mrs. Charles Romer, left, at 1409 West Wall Street.

TO GRANDMOTHER'S HOUSE WE GO—Clutching their favorite pets, Susan Sidwell, three years old, and her seven-year-old sister, Nancy, pose with their grandmother, Mrs. Ernest Sidwell. The children are spending the Summer in their grandmother's home at 1907 West Indiana Street. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sidwell of Brigham, Utah. The Persian kittens are native Midlanders and privileged members of the Sidwell household.

FLORIDANS VISIT IN MIDLAND—Mrs. M. C. Ulmer, right, has as her guests her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Corrigan III, and children, Hugh IV and Eddie, of Vero Beach, Fla. Little Eddie, age one and a half, finds books more fascinating than cameras, but Hugh, three years old, has a solemn interest in the photographer. The picture was taken in the Ulmer home at 111 North C Street.

VACATION IN MIDLAND—Mrs. Arthur M. Chase, Jr., left, and daughter, Judy, of Houston are visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Smith, Jr. and family, 1710 Princeton Street. Here, Judy, on divan, and her young hostess, Darryl Smith, practice up on their latest accomplishment — ukelele strumming. The Smiths and their guests are to return Sunday from a week's trip to Santa Fe and other points in New Mexico.

Scientists Hold 'Home Week' At Los Alamos A-Bomb Site

LOS ALAMOS, N. M. —(AP)—Take vacation during the Summer? No, that's not for many of the scientists who live here. This is the time of year when they get a chance to work with the greats who were in on the start of the A-bomb.

Although many of the big names have gone back to pre-World War II duties, they haven't served connections with development of atomic power. They use their Summer leaves working here or just visiting their old stomping ground. In a sedate way, these months resemble a college homecoming.

The roster of returning alumni is formaidable. Dr. Hans Bethe, presently with Cornell University, is a visitor during his leave from the school. He was the leader of the Theoretical Physics Division which did the advanced work on development of the bomb.

Dr. Edward Teller, another of the leading theoretical physicists in conception and development of the bomb, returns to Los Alamos whenever it is possible to leave his work in the Physics Department at Chicago University.

Dr. Kenneth T. Bainbridge, who was in charge of the program for testing the first bomb on the South-Central New Mexico desert July 16, 1945, has just spent a few days here during his leave from Harvard University.

Dr. George Kistiankowsky, professor of chemistry at Harvard where he returned after serving at Los Alamos when it opened early in 1948, is on an extended working sojourn here.

Long's peacetime job is in the Chicago University Institute of Metals under Dr. Cyril S. Smith, another of the wartime big names here. Smith still serves the AEC in an advisory capacity and the Los Alamos laboratory when it needs metalurgical advice.

Dr. Robert Becher, chairman of the Armed Forces Atomic Energy Committee, also is paying a visit here. He left war-time Los Alamos to serve a term as atomic energy commissioner and now is assistant to the president of California Institute of Technology.

Most of the senior staff here is made up of persons who were deputies to the war-time leaders. It's "old home week" all Summer long.

Johann Guterberg printed the first Bible in 1456.

TO WED IN SEPTEMBER—Mr. and Mrs. Hubert C. Sedlacek of Tacoma, Wash., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their youngest daughter, Elaine Mildred of Midland, to James Murrie Perkins, also of Midland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Murrie A. Perkins of Trumbell, Conn. The wedding is scheduled for 2 p.m. September 13 in the St. Ann's Church in Midland. Following the ceremony a reception will be held in the Ranchland Hill County Club. The bride-elect is a graduate of the Tacoma General Hospital School of Nursing in Tacoma and now is a member of the Mast Clinic Staff. Perkins received his degree in geological engineering from the Colorado School of Mines in 1949. He is a geologist for Magnolia Petroleum Company.

Actress Picks Round-The-Clock Apparel

For her own summer wardrobe, actress Jane Wyman has chosen these fashions, all by California designers. She wears (left) a late-day dress in lace with low-cut, wide neckline, brief sleeves and full, stiffened skirt. Circus theme is borrowed (center) for striped pink, white and charcoal organdie blouse worn with charcoal grey skirt in glazed cotton. Skirt has a high rising band that buttons in front center. Short dinner dress (right) is in beige spun rayon-and-cotton. Brief bolero covers halter-top dress that can go dancing. It has low neckline filled in with pleated organdie—By Gaile Dugas, NEA Woman's Editor.

Midland building permits, which totaled $14,000,000 last year, last week soared past the $11,000,000 mark on the way to a new all-time record for 1952.

The total, including numerous permits for residential alterations as well as new homes, was given a big boost by a permit for a $135,000 office building to be built by John P. Butler at 401 North Marienfeld Street.

The $307,000 worth of permits issued during the seven-day period ended Friday brought the 1952 total to $11,087,577.

Air Conditioning Advances To Help Builders Of Homes

NEW YORK —(AP)— Complete year-round air conditioning of a new home at no extra cost may be just around the corner, say equipment manufacturers.

They hope to be able to show that you could offset the cost by taking advantage of savings in construction that would be possible by designing a house specifically for air conditioning.

Cloud Wampler, president of the Carrier Corporation, says, "It's something we're trying to evaluate," along with future savings in costs of redecorating and keeping draperies, rugs and furniture clean.

With air conditioning the home owner could save money by leaving out windows that added little or nothing to the view from the inside or the appearance from the outside. He wouldn't need them for ventilation.

"There would be no need for screens, ventilating devices or storm windows," Wampler says.

Also, another possibility of saving money would be to omit a breezeway, screen porch or other place designed especially for keeping cool. You could keep cool better inside.

Meanwhile, what appears to be a boom in complete year-round air conditioned houses has started.

Among the first was a 210-home development in Dallas, Texas, equipped by General Electric, with the air-conditioned homes selling in the $12,000 bracket. GE estimated the added cost for air conditioning at about $1,000. Another similar 125-home project has been started there.

Carrier is furnishing equipment for a project of 500 air-conditioned homes in Kansas City, selling in the $18,000 to $17,000 class. The added cost of the air-conditioning equipment is estimated at $1,240. Another similar project is at New Orleans. Several others are in the works in various parts of the country.

After-swimming care of your elasticized bathing suit should consist of gently squeezing the suit through lukewarm soapsuds; working soap into soiled spots with a soft washcloth; and rinsing thoroughly and drying in shade. Never use an iron.

Mrs. Milford Hall Brinkerhoff

Lubbock Vows Unite Winders, Brinkerhoff

In a single ring ceremony Saturday in Lubbock, Ella Jo Winders of Midland became the bride of Milford Hall Brinkerhoff, also of Midland.

The Rev. Herbert Bratcher officiated at the high noon ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lebon D. Winders of Dimmitt, Texas. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Zach K. Brinkerhoff of Dallas.

Furnishes Wedding Music

Ralph Hamm of Dallas, organist, played several nuptial selections. Vows were exchanged before a background arrangement of three baskets of white gladiolus and stock, backed by candelabra holding white tapers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a ballerina length dress of white silk Shantung, fashioned with a full, pleated skirt and a fitted bodice with a peter pan collar. The bodice was styled with a round yoke and three-quarter length sleeves fastened by self-covered buttons. Self-covered buttons also extended down the front of the bodice.

The bride wore a white velvet headdress and carried a white Bible topped with an arrangement of white orchids and lillies-of-the-valley.

Gene Allison Winders of Dimmitt was the maid of honor. She wore a ballerina length dress of yellow shantung with white accessories and carried a yellow carnation bouquet.

Zach K. Brinkerhoff of Casper, Wyo., served as best man. Ushers were Kenneth Ballard and R. W. Brinkerhoff of Calgary, Can., brother of the bridegroom.

Following the wedding a reception was held in the Plainsman Hotel. For a wedding trip to Colorado the bride chose a chestnut-colored suit with brown and white accessories.

After August 10 Mr. and Mrs. Brinkerhoff will be at home at 2012 Bedford Drive.

More Important To Do Things With Children Than For Them

What a great many modern parents don't seem to realize is that it is not as important to do things for your children as to do things with them.

The Browns are an example of this. Mr. Brown works hard to give his family everything he can. Mrs. Brown tries to give the children every "advantage."

The Browns actually do a lot for their children. But they do almost nothing with them.

Night after night the children are left with a sitter while the Browns go out. When there are guests the children are out of sight by the time the guests arrive.

The family as a unit rarely does anything together. Mrs. Brown wants the children out from under foot when she is working. And Mr. Brown doesn't want them bothering him when he has an occasional free evening at home.

When it comes time for a vacation, the children are left with a relative or paid sitter, and the Browns go off to spend their vacation with another couple or two.

They claim it wouldn't be any vacation to take their children along.

So actually, though the Brown children have a great many advantages given to them, their parents do very little with them.

They are shut out from any real participation in family life. In fact, there is no real family life so far as working and playing together are concerned.

The Browns are missing the real satisfactions of parenthood and their children are missing the real warmth and security of family life, simply because the Browns don't realize that what you do with your children is even more important than what you are able to do for them.

Spectacular evening gowns from the mid-season collections in Paris include this dress (left) with "corset bodice" by Jean Desses. Black tulle is combined with cerise taffeta, with the latter worked into the tightly-swathed bodice. The taffeta is used for a sweeping panel-train. Velvet is important in the mid-season collections. Jacques Fath uses it (right) for a strapless evening gown of white lace with giant bow and streamers in velvet covering dress front. Brief bolero emphasizes a daring decollete, is worn with long black velvet gloves.—By Rosette Hargrove, NEA Staff Correspondent.

Midlanders Say Vows In St. Ann's Church

Vows were solemnized Tuesday morning in St. Ann's Church for Therese Finch and Joel R. Sims, Jr., both of Midland.

The Rev. T. J. Kennedy, O. M. I., officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Finch of Midland. Mr. and Mrs. Joel R. Sims, Sr., also of Midland, are the parents of the bridegroom.

Church decorations featured vases and baskets of white gladiolus and marconi daisies. Mrs. Albert Kelley, organist, played a program of nuptial music and Mrs. Frank Thompson, soloist, sang "Ave Maria." Mrs. Hugh Scrabacz, also a soloist, sang "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother."

Given In Marriage By Father

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white satin with a chapel length train. Her bridal veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Margaret Finch of Midland, twin sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a floor length yellow organdy dress and carried a bouquet of aurattum lilies.

Bridesmaids, all of Midland, were Mary Ann Finch, sister of the bride; Patsy Yeager, and Ruth and Jude Repman, cousin of the bride. Their dresses, of orchid, pink, yellow and green, respectively, were worn with matching accessories. They also carried bouquets of aurattum lilies.

George Goss Yeager of Midland served as best man. Groomsmen were Hal Finch of Midland, brother of the bride; Francis Hunt of Hereford, Texas; Bill Amburg of Longview, and James Wallace of Midland.

Reception Held

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Finch, Margaret and Mary Ann, assisted the couple in receiving the guests.

Arrangements of American Beauty roses decorated the reception rooms. Out-of-city guests were Donna and Joseph Adamkiewicz of Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. Walter Dabbs, Mrs. Thelma Price and Mrs. Clora Janeway of Clovis, N. M.; Mrs. Irene Wilkinson of Albuquerque, N. M., aunt of the bride, and C. J. Finch of St. Louis, Mo., uncle of the bride.

For a wedding trip to points in New Mexico and Colorado, the bride chose a pink linen suit with white accessories and a white orchid corsage.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Academy in Milwaukee and attended the University of Iowa where she was affiliated with Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Sims was graduated from Midland High School and later attended McMurry College.

After their wedding trip the couple will live in Hutchinson, Kans., where the bridegroom is stationed with the Naval Air Corps.

Be sure to rinse all your cottons thoroughly to keep the colors bright and clear.

Elegant Cottons Enrich Summer Season

The new-found elegance of cotton is evidenced by these designs, in which the fabric has been handled exactly as any luxury fabric would be treated. Hope Skillman's needlepoint pique is used (left) for an evening gown that has front skirt panel filled in with nylon tulle. Applique embroidery is used to emphasize the forward skirt movement and hipline. Tweed damask cotton (center) is cut into a full-skirted Summer suit that has wide, rounded collar and arched hipline. Copper-colored coin dots sprinkle the surface (right) of this dress that has arched hipline and very full front panel. Neckline is cut to deep V.—By Gaile Dugas, NEA Woman's Editor.

Atlanta Oldsters Form New 'Three Score And O'er' Club

By MARGARET PRICE
AP Newsfeatures

ATLANTA — A sweet little lady won a blue ribbon for a silk quilt a few months ago and thus indirectly began a club movement for women "three score and o'er."

Such a club had long been a dream of Mrs. William Guy Smith, president of the Fifth District, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, but it took the blue ribbon to push the dream to reality.

Last fall she suggested that a neighbor, Mrs. W. L. Lyon, a spry 89, enter some of her needlework in a contest at the Southeastern Fair in Atlanta.

Mrs. Lyon protested that her work wasn't nearly good enough but Mrs. Smith finally persuaded her to enter. Mrs. Lyon sailed through the first judging, winning first prize for her lovely quilt and, eventually, the blue ribbon grand prize for the entire contest.

To Mrs. Lyon, who had sometimes felt, well, a little left out of life, it was wonderful. Her son said she quickly used up the prize money calling all her out of town relatives to tell them the news.

Seeing what a bit of recognition could do and knowing there are thousands of older women who felt left too much to their knitting, Mrs. Smith decided to take time in her busy life to found a club for women past 60.

She knew there are clubs for such age groups elsewhere but hoped the one in Atlanta would be different in that from it would spring a network across the nation affiliated with the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

Volumes have been written in recent years about the aged, a steadily growing group. There have been efforts to meet their special problems but most social workers agree the efforts have been pitifully inadequate.

Mrs. Smith felt that what little has been accomplished stemmed from individuals who decided to help in their own small way.

So she called some older women she knew and helped them found the "three score and o'er" club. Twenty charter members attended the first meeting. None was under 70 and nearly half were in their eighties. Some were driven to the meeting at the home of one member by their children, who were glad their mothers were finding new interests.

Others, like Mrs. S. R. Dull, 88, author of "Southern Cooking," a book widely used by housewives for years, came on buses.

Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, also 88, was elected president and promptly set the tone of the meeting with the thought, "You are not old until regrets take the place of dreams." Another member suggested the group consider as a motto, "Not add years to our lives but life to our years."

The club has held the first two of its monthly meetings now and the list of those interested in joining has grown so fast other local clubs may be formed. The women plan to take turns discussing hobbies and are considering presentation of some sort of "playlet."

Some of the women are wealthy, others are not. Some suffer from such complaints as arthritis, others are as active as their grandchildren.

The women soon will have to consider whether to admit one applicant who called Mrs. Smith to say, "I am not yet 60 but I would like to join the club. I want to learn how those women reached that age. And surely anyone who has lived that long has much to teach us."

SLATES SCOTCH FOURSOME

The Midland Country Club will sponsor a golfer's Scotch Foursome at 3:30 p.m. Sunday on the club course.

The public installation will begin at 8:15 p.m. Miss Pryor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Pryor, 402 East Broadway Street.

The ceremony will be read at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the First Methodist Church in Washington, D. C.

Miss Maberry was graduated from Tacoma Academy in Washington, D. C., and later attended Southwestern Junior College and Washington Missionary College. Pittman served three years in the Army.

Oklahoma Postman Finds Mary Ann's Postman-Hating Dog

An interesting dog story comes out of Oklahoma City, Okla., and concerns a canine owned by Mary Ann Searles, who moved from Midland to Rogers, Ark., a few months ago. The dog's name is J. J.

It seems that J. J. strayed off and became lost in Oklahoma City where Mary Ann and her mother, Mrs. I. A. Searles, had gone to visit Mrs. Searles' brother, C. T. Howard. Mary Ann, of course, was much distressed.

She recalled that even in Midland her pet, J. J., had a violent dislike for postmen, so she told several postmen of her misfortune.

Sure enough, one of the postmen located J. J. and walked more than one mile to deliver the animal to its owner—even though J. J. doesn't like postmen.

Mary Ann reportedly is very happy about it all.

PROXY POPS PAY PLAINT

MEN AND WOMEN TAKE OFF UGLY FAT

Many people have reported amazing results with this home recipe. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your druggist and ask for 4 ounces of liquid Barcentrate. Pour into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill bottle. Then take just two tablespoonsful twice a day. That's all there is to it. If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender, more graceful curves; if unsightly pounds and inches of excess fat don't just seem to disappear almost like magic, from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles, just return the empty bottle for your money back.

Lost 32 Pounds

"I am writing to tell you how much good Barcentrate has done for me" writes Mrs. H. J. Fontenat, Box 633, Anahuac, Texas. "I weighed 196 pounds when I started and am now down to 168 and am still taking Barcentrate. I feel better than I have in six years and I cannot begin to tell you how proud I am to lose weight."

And Mrs. J. W. Harp, 908 S. Cedar, Cleburne, Texas, writes to say: "I think Barcentrate is wonderful. I lost 20 pounds taking it—from 140 to 120. I now have my normal weight and feel like a new person."

Southerners Can Sink FEPC Handily Despite Party Plank

WASHINGTON —(AP)— No matter what kind of civil rights plank they produce at Chicago there's no more reason to believe the Democrats can pass civil rights laws in the next four years, if they win, than they could in the past four.

And in the past four they couldn't, in spite of the fight and promises made at the 1948 convention. In fact, it would be harder now for the Northern Democrats to get through civil rights legislation than it was in 1948.

Why? Because the Southern Democrats—using a special Senate rule which the general public may not understand very well—were able to slaughter the Trumanites' efforts at civil rights legislation since 1948. They can use the same rule and tactics again.

This is an explanation:

No law can be passed unless both House and Senate approve. Both houses transact their business according to rules of their own. The rules in the two houses are not the same.

Limit On Debate

In the House no one can filibuster (talk without limit until the other side gives up and a measure is killed) because the House has rules limiting debate. That is why the House, with a majority of Northern Democrats and Republicans, teaming up against Southern Democrats, has several times passed civil rights bills, only to see them die in the Senate.

Before examining what happens in the Senate, a little arithmetic is of the utmost importance. There are 96 senators. They pass laws by a majority of those present and voting, provided a quorum is present. A quorum is 49 of the 96 senators.

But on some very vital, or very controversial things, more than just a majority vote is needed. On them the vote must be two-thirds. But, and that's where the catch comes in, there are two kinds of two-thirds.

Almost Impossible

A simple two-thirds of those present and voting — when there's a quorum of at least 49—is a little more difficult to get than a majority vote. But two-thirds of all 96 senators—that's 64, called a constitutional two-thirds—is so hard to get that it's almost impossible.

And this is where you begin to move into the civil rights problem.

If the Northern Democrats move to bring up a civil rights bill, the Southern Democrats can start a filibuster. That will kill the whole business unless the filibuster can be broken.

It can't be broken unless that constitutional two-thirds—64 of the 96 senators—vote for cloture (which means a vote to stop a filibuster).

But if the filibuster against the motion to bring up the bill is broken, then as soon as the bill itself is brought up, the Southerners can start another filibuster all over again, this time against the bill.

May Sound Easy

And that filibuster can't be broken except by a constitutional two-thirds vote.

But, since the senators themselves made the rule, can't they just vote to change it so that a filibuster could be broken by, say, a simple majority or a simple two-thirds vote? Sounds easy.

But trying to change a Senate rule can be toughest of all. For this reason: Any time the Northern Democrats suggest changing the rule, the Southern Democrats can filibuster endlessly. Why? Because there's no Senate rule providing for a means to break a filibuster against a proposal to change the rules.

In other words, the Northern Democrats' only real hope of getting through civil rights legislation would be a rule change reducing the required cloture vote on motions and bills. But the Southerners can filibuster, without worry about cloture, on any attempt to change the rule at all.

JayCee-ettes Offer Special Voters' Service

Arrangements are being made by the Midland JayCee-ettes to offer a transportation and baby-sitting service to voters during the Democratic primary Saturday.

Mrs. Howard Ford and Mrs. R. M. Minton, Jr. are cochairmen of the project. Present plans call for several JayCee-ettes to be assigned to each precinct. Working in teams, one member will take the voter to and from the polls while another will baby-sit with the voter's children.

The service will be offered from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Those interested may telephone Mrs. J. P. Marchioli at 3-3126 Saturday.

Mrs. Burvin Hines and Mrs. James W. Mims are in charge of publicity.

Almost All Cameras Take Color Pictures

"Will your camera take color?"

That was the question many people had asked us, so we repeated the query to Midland Studio and Camera Shop, local camera advisers and after a one-second glance at our shutter-box they said that it would.

"Practically all cameras," he said, "accept color film of one kind or another. The only ones in widespread use that do not take color are the odd-sized cameras.

"Most people today realize that taking color shots is just as easy as black-and-white pictures. But sometimes they get mixed up about what 'kind' of color pictures. For example, you can take Kodacolor shots with any 120, 620, 116, 616 or 127 size camera. These Kodacolor shots make wonderful color prints. Then there is the 'transparency' type of color shooting which gives you a processed film for projecting onto a screen, and also the choice of making excellent prints. These films are available for the 120, 620, 35mm and Bantam sizes.

"For movies, all amateur cameras take beautiful color shots."

That seemed clear, so we asked if there is any special advice about shooting color.

"The first rule of color pictures," they explained, "is to read the instructions that come with your film. If you don't have the patience to do this, then by all means visit an experienced camera dealer and let him show you the simple settings. It's really quite simple, and the very slight extra care is worth so much because you just can't beat wonderful lifelike Color."

Our confidence restored we went home and tried Midland Studio's advice. It worked, and now we have some really wonderful color pictures. (Adv.)

SO THIS IS NEW YORK

BY NORTH CALLAHAN

NEW YORK—Things have not been normal here the last few days, but they have been "conventional," to coin a phrase. Hardly had the dust of the Republican convention in Chicago cleared away when New Yorkers—and I suppose just about everyone else—sharpened their eyes to read the newspapers and turned up their radio and television sets for the Democratic one to follow. It simply is marvelous how one can sit at home and watch the proceedings on the convention floor just as if he had a ringside seat. And unlike the delegates there, if one gets tired of oratory, he can turn off the set.

Attended a luncheon at the Union League Club given by W. Arthur Grotz, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the road. An enjoyable part of the occasion for me was sitting beside my old friends, Tom Phelps, Andy Anderson and Joe Docter, who chatted of oil and traffic and taconite. But after we had eaten, our genial host announced we were to see a short film on the history of his railroad. It was one of the best moving pictures of this kind that I have seen, vivid, dramatic and informative. Not only did it portray the vital role that railroads as a whole, as well as Western Maryland, have played in our nation's history, but it showed what they mean in the lives of average Americans today.

If you think the cost of living is high, you ought to try supporting Hippo, the huge hippotamous of New York's Bronx Zoo. This king-size hog has an appetite that only a Brobdingnagian chef could love. And yet Hippo is a vegetarian—on a somewhat wholesale basis, that is. So for his recent birthday he received as a gift a ton of cabbage, carrots and kale. Now this might seem a bountiful amount even for that cavernous mouth. But when one considers his daily diet, Hippo got peanuts for his anniversary. Each day he consumes 12 bales of hay and nine gallons of soup.

On a ride around Manhattan Island by boat with some fine visiting newspaper editors, I overheard the spieler saying something about the uptown home of Edgar Allen Poe, so I decided to acquaint myself better with this literary shrine. His small cottage still stands, I found, in the Fordham section. Here the father of the detective story and poet of the weird and supernal sought his never-attainable Ulalume in this shack by what was then a mill pond, paying five dollars a month rent for it, because that was all he could afford. Just a little over a hundred years ago, 1846 to be exact, Poe lived here. His beloved wife lay dying with tuberculosis, and when she passed on to "that distant Aiden," the shock left a great, permanent scar on the poet's sensitive self. Two years later, just before his own death, Poe took his pen in quivering hand, and though suffering from cold and hunger wrote in memory of his wife, the immortally beautiful, "Annabel Lee."

A reader sent in the following piece. Maybe it's because of my own three-year-old boy, but I think you'll like it too: "A boy is Truth with dirt on its face, Beauty with a cut on its finger, Wisdom with bubblegum in its hair, the Hope of the future with a frog in its pocket. Boys are found everywhere. Mothers love them, little sisters hate them and brothers tolerate them, and Heaven protects them . . . Nobody else is so early to rise, so late for supper. Nobody else gets so much out of trees, dogs and breezes. Nobody else can cram into one pocket a rusty knife, a half-eaten apple, three feet of string two gumdrops, six cents, a slingshot, a chunk of unknown substance . . . A boy is a magical creature—you can lock him out of your workshop, but you can't lock him out of your heart. You can get him out of your study, but you can't get him out of your mind. When you come home at night with only the shattered pieces of your hopes and dreams, he can mend them like new with two magic words, "Hi, Dad!"

Manhattan Musing: You always can tell a native New Yorker—but you can't tell him much . . . especially if he's never been west of the Hudson, he's the surest guy in the world about what this country needs, what it will take to remedy the need and how He will play an important part in same.

Shivers, Yarborough, Mrs. Traylor Seek Democrats' Okay As Governor

By TIM PARKER
Associated Press Staff

The three candidates for governor in the July 26 Texas Democratic Primary include two men with long records of public service and a San Antonio housewife trying for her first public office.

Gov. Allan Shivers, asking his second full term, is the leader of the conservative, anti-Administration faction now in control of the state government.

Ralph Yarborough, Austin attorney, is a former district judge and assistant attorney general.

Mrs. Allene M. Traylor, San Antonio housewife and mother of four, is also a businesswoman.

National Significance

Shivers' emergence as a leader among Southern Democrats opposing the Truman Administration adds significance to the race. The 44-year-old governor heads the conservative Texas delegation to the National Democratic Convention which begins in Chicago Monday. He favors Senator Richard Russell of Georgia for the presidential nomination.

Yarborough, 48, has not tied his candidacy to either side in the intra-party ruckus. When he announced last May 1, he was asked if he had the support of the "Loyal Democrat" organization opposing Shivers. Yarborough replied:

"I am not running for governor because of their sponsorship. All political factions and beliefs have asked me to run. I hope to get everybody's support. I hope to get their (Loyal Democrats) support."

He did say he believes in the party loyalty pledge, which is favored by the "Loyalists" and opposed by Shivers.

Here are the candidates:

Campaigns On Record

Allan Shivers, born Oct. 5, 1907, at Lufkin, son of Judge and Mrs. Robert S. Shivers. Studied at Woodville and Port Arthur, received law degree from University of Texas. Began law practice at Port Arthur at the age of 24, in 1934 was elected state senator and served 12 years without defeat. Upset straw votes by winning lieutenant governorship in 1946 shortly after returning from two years in American military government service in Europe and North Africa.

He became governor on the death July 10, 1949, of Beauford Jester and won term of his own in 1950. Tall, rangy and erect, he has campaigned on his record including legislation for higher teacher pay, better roads, higher old age pensions, expanded public health program and better care for mentally ill.

He married the former Marialice Shary in 1937 and became active manager of wealthy Shary holdings — orchards, fruit exchanges, farms, real estate holdings, oil property—in the Valley. The Shivers have three children.

Stresses Conservation

Ralph Yarborough, 48, Austin attorney, graduate of the University of Texas Law School, he taught in rural Texas schools three years, practiced law in El Paso and Austin, and served as an assistant attorney general four years, from 1931 to 1935, under James V. Allred, then attorney general and later governor. Yarborough served as district judge of the 53rd District Court in Austin for five years prior to World War II.

He served three and a half years during the war with the 97th Infantry Division in Patton's Third Army in Europe, and in occupied Japan. He ran unsuccessfully for attorney general in 1938. Yarborough was a member of the original board of directors of the Lower Colorado River Authority, and says depletion of Texas water and soil resources is a major issue in his campaign.

He has charged waste and corruption in Texas government, growing bureaucracy on the state level, and has accused Shivers of "consorting" with big-time gamblers. Yarborough has led Community Chest and Red Cross campaigns at Austin and is active in Boy Scout work. The Yarboroughs have one son.

Mrs. Allene M. Traylor, 44, San Antonio. A San Antonio native and wife of an electrical contractor there, she has been active in municipal politics but is seeking elective office for the first time.

She has charged there is waste and graft in the Shivers state administration and that jobs have been given on the basis of political friendship. Mrs. Traylor would raise pensions for the aged, boost school teachers' pay, and believes this could be done by means of economy and without new taxes.

Her husband is a World War I veteran. They have four children, ranging from six to 26 years old and including a 20-year-old son in the Air Force. Like Shivers and Yarborough, she is in favor of a direct presidential primary in Texas.

First Wife, Widow Divide Insurance Of Dr. Rutledge

HOUSTON —(AP)— The insurance of the late Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, who committed suicide after being convicted of murder, was divided Friday between his former wife and his widow.

Attorneys for the women met with Federal Judge Ben C. Connally and agreed that $6,500 will go to Mrs. Eula Ruth Davis of Bethpage, L. I., and $3,500 to Mrs. Sydney Rutledge.

Dr. Rutledge, 29, was sentenced to 70 years in prison for slaying Byron Hattman, an engineer, who the pediatrician claimed seduced Mrs. Rutledge. He killed himself in Houston April 4, 1951, shortly after he lost an appeal from the sentence.

Mrs. Rutledge filed suit in federal court here after it was discovered that Dr. Rutledge's GI insurance named his former wife as beneficiary.

Girls, Bless 'Em, Triumph Even Among Future Farmers

DALLAS—(AP)—You'd expect a bunch of Future Farmers of America to discuss pigs.

Instead they talked about girls at their Texas State Convention this weekend.

Jeff White of Cooper said he had heard that the FFA was going to drop its practice of selecting a state sweetheart.

Dwain Smith of Hale Center, a state vice president, said that's right.

"The sweethearts are getting too much publicity," Smith said.

White countered that the girls boosted the boys' morale.

The debate got hot.

Finally the delegates voted down a motion to change the present situation of selecting a state sweetheart.

Then they picked Sarah Reynolds, 15, of Pittsburgh as sweetheart for 1952.

Paisano Baptist Encampment Attracts Many Midlanders

The famed Paisano Baptist Encampment will open its thirty-second consecutive session Monday at the encampment grounds located at Paisano Pass between Alpine and Marfa. The meeting in the Davis Mountains will continue through July 27.

At least 44 Midland Baptists have made reservations to attend the encampment, according to the Rev. Vernon Yearby, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Tariff Rates Cut On Many Exported Wares Of Mexico

MEXICO CITY —(AP)— Mexico had reduced its export tariffs on a long list of products Saturday to increase sales abroad by lowering prices.

The duty on frozen shrimp was cut from 15 to 10 per cent. Export tariffs were cut to three per cent on fish, honey, shark livers, flowers, cocoa, onions and garlic, citrus fruits and cotton textiles.

Partially manufactured forms of zinc and lead, two of Mexico's major exports, had their duty cut. Zinc will pay 5.3 per cent and lead 12 per cent. Copper was not mentioned in the list.

The order, virtually wiping out the old flat 15 per cent duty on all exports, has been sought by exporters for some time. The original 15 per cent duty was put into effect when Mexico devalued the peso in 1948 so that exporters would not get all the extra profits due to devaluation. Since then production costs have gone up so much that growers said elimination of the duties were necessary.

UN GENERAL ASSEMBLY TO MEET IF TRUCE SIGNED

HELSINKI —(AP)— United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie said Saturday he has been empowered to call an extraordinary meeting of the General Assembly within a fortnight if the Korean truce talks prove successful.

"Nobody really knows what is happening in Korea right now except the participants in the truce talks," Lie told a press conference.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

(Copyright, 1952, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc)

Drew Pearson says: Speaker Sam Rayburn, most popular man in Congress, is reluctant candidate; Eisenhower's crack about French religion was cabled to France immediately; Views of presidential candidate must be studied, not suppressed.

CHICAGO—If a popularity vote were taken in the House of Representatives, the winner among the Democrats—perhaps even among the Republicans—would be an egg-bald gentleman from Texas who presides over the House with an iron hand, and who is affectionately referred to as "Sam."

Speaker Sam Rayburn would be the ideal candidate for the Democratic ticket today if he were ten years younger. Just past his 70th birthday, however, Sam is not an active candidate, although if his friends had their way, he would be.

It now has been almost 40 years since Sam came up from the Texas prairies to sit in Congress. That was in 1913, during the administration of Woodrow Wilson. Sam has seen two great wars since then. He has weathered the Republican victories that swept many of his Democratic colleagues out of office. He has helped write legislation for six different Presidents.

And through it all he still has kept his integrity, his idealism, and his sense of humor.

Cornerstone Of New Deal

Most people have forgotten it, but Sam Rayburn was responsible for writing most of the legislative cornerstone of the new deal—the laws which no Republicans are likely to wipe off the books. As chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, it was Sam's job to push through the Truth-in-Securities Act and the Securities and Exchange Commission which cleaned up Wall Street; the Holding Corporation Act which broke up some of the big utility combines; plus rural electrification, and the Federal Communications Act.

Few men in the past century can equal that record.

Friends who have talked to "Mr. Democrat" about running for President don't get much encouragement. On the contrary, Sam talks seriously of retiring from Congress altogether.

His chief dream is to build a library in his home town, Bonham, Texas. He already has raised part of the money for the project, has collected an old mantelpiece from the White House when it was remodeled, and gathered together an assortment of gavels he used in presiding over joint sessions of Congress when addressed by Queen Elizabeth, Winston Churchill, General MacArthur, General Eisenhower, and others.

Sam also has made arrangements to take his congressional desk back home from Washington, and wants to set up an exact replica of his speaker's office. There, surrounded by the laws which he helped to write, the hearings he has held, and the records of the debates he has argued, Sam wants to sit and visit with the people he loves, and enjoy life.

Eisenhower And France

A number of readers have queried me as to what General Eisenhower actually said about atheism in France and the disintegration of the French moral fibre. They also have asked about the propriety of publishing his remarks, for fear it would play into Communist hands.

The answer to question No. 1 is that the general, in talking to the press and a group of delegates at Chicago on July 8, did criticize France for its religious and moral attitude. The newspapers did not invent his remarks. He volunteered them.

The answer to question No. 2 is that there wasn't the remotest chance of hushing up the general's statement, since it was cabled to France by the press associations and by French newsmen within a matter of minutes. It was published in all the French newspapers the same day.

For instance, here is the "bulletin" which International News Service cabled to France:

"Gen. Eisenhower said today France has 'gone astray' morally and declared one of the reasons is that the French brag that they are 50 per cent agnostic or atheist.

"He asserted France has reached the point where the moral fibre disintegrates, and added:

"'One reason France has gone astray is that they brag that they are 50 per cent agnostic or atheist.'"

Other cabled dispatches to France were similar.

Scrutinizing A Candidate

Those who expressed the view that Eisenhower's statement should have been suppressed or not commented upon apparently forget two things:

1. It is not possible for the United States any longer to live ostrich-like with our heads in the sand. As the most powerful country in the world, what our leaders do or say is cabled immediately to every part of the world.

2. One of the most important reasons for an election campaign is to gauge and size-up the candidate. To do that is necessary to know what he says, and what his judgment is regarding any and every important situation.

President Truman continually has been criticized, and rightly so, for making off-the-cuff statements which affect our foreign relations. If Eisenhower is addicted to the same habit, then the American public have a right to know it, in advance.

The fact that this criticism of an important ally came from a man who had been working daily among them, naturally hurt—for several reasons. The obvious one was that it gave ammunition to the Communists. But also important is the delicate situation in France with the Catholic leaders, who happen to be the best friends of the United States and the most vigorous opponents of communism.

The leaders of the French government today belong to the Catholic group. The statement that 50 per cent of France is agnostic or atheistic will be construed by the enemies of the church as a reflection on the church, since France officially is a catholic country.

But perhaps equally important, the Catholic group must have the cooperation of the moderate, non-Communist socialists and leftists in order to stay in power. On one side they face the Communists, on the other side the De Gaullists. Therefore, the present Catholic leaders must have the support of the non-Communist left, which probably is the group Eisenhower meant to criticize.

These are some of the political niceties so important in France today which the general, having lived for more than a year in France, presumably should know, and certainly must be able to deal with if he is to be an efficient President of the United States.

COUNTY
COMMISSIONER
Precinct 1

BILL MOORE
Veteran World War II

To the people of Midland County, I take this way of trying to reach everyone as we all know this county has grown and is still growing, so please consider this a personal visit with you.

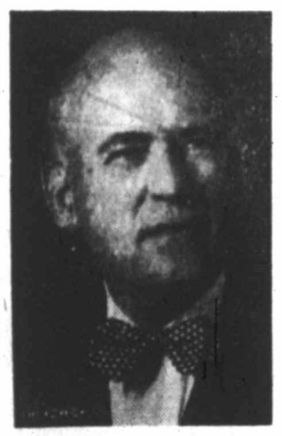

I have been a farm and ranch boy all my life until several years ago when Uncle Sam decided he needed a rugged fellow to do four years service during the war with the Far Eastern Air Service Command operating in the South Pacific. I decided then and there, if and when I returned to the States I would try to do something here to make this a better place for my son and yours to live. I have been trading cattle in order to keep the meat supply moving but in traveling thru the county and neighboring counties, I have decided I could do a better job serving as Commissioner of Midland County, Precinct No. 1.

There are roads, highways, community centers, parks, swimming pools, librarys and various other activities in the county that are in need of prompt attention by some one who knows the need for such things. In fact I am for everything needed for a progressive county like ours.

I own property both in the city and county, therefore, I feel the taxes as much as the next fellow. I am not one to spend foolishly because I learned the hard way, by honest work. I will appreciate your vote and influence in helping me win. I thank each and everyone.

Yours sincerely,
Bill Moore

Big Spring Cantata Composer Initiates Habeas Corpus Suit

MILWAUKEE—(AP)—A habeas corpus action has been started by Frank Grandstaff, 50, to win his release from jail here.

Grandstaff is the Tennessee ex-convict whose "Big Spring Cantata" won him a pardon from a life prison term in 1950.

He contended in his circuit court action that there is not enough evidence to hold him for trial on burglary charges.

He was arrested in Milwaukee on May 18 and was bound over to municipal court for trial after District Judge Harvey Neelen ruled there was sufficient evidence to try him.

No date has been set for the trial.

Grandstaff was granted a pardon by the Tennessee governor where he was serving a life term as an habitual criminal.

Trains Take Aliens To Mexico Interior

SAN ANTONIO—(AP)—The U. S. Immigration Service sent a trainload of Mexican aliens homeward into the interior of Mexico Friday night.

And the service said it hoped to make the train shuttle of wetbacks a daily operation if train equipment is available.

The train which left Reynosa contained 10 cars and had armed Mexican guards to keep order and prevent the passengers from jumping off.

It was bound for the cotton fields near Durango City.

Democrats May Be Headed For Rip-Roaring Convention

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON—The Democrats may be hearing for one of their old-style rip-roaring fights at this year's convention.

For the first time in 28 years a really tough tussle for the presidential nomination is in prospect. The 103-ballot battle in 1924, which ended with the nomination of a dark horse candidate, John W. Davis of West Virginia, was the most prolonged in the history of both major parties.

For nine days the balloting went on in Madison Square Garden, New York City, before Davis was chosen to break the deadlock between Alfred E. Smith and William G. McAdoo. The fight almost split the Democratic Party.

Klan Issue

Besides the nomination contest, there was a fierce struggle over the party's platform stand on a resurgent Ku Klux Klan. It led to fist fights among delegates and long-lasting bitterness in some state delegations.

A platform plank declaring for religious freedom and condemning race dissension, without mentioning the klan, was adopted. A proposed plank denouncing the klan by name was defeated by four-and-a-fraction votes.

During the nominating speeches a wheelchair was trundled onto the platform. In the chair was the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, who made a nominating speech for Smith. This was an early bit of political showmanship by the man who became the champion nomination winner.

Sharp battling is expected at both the Republican and Democratic conventions in Chicago. However, the doings probably will be docile compared with the gun-toting pow-wows of earlier years.

First GOP Convention

Back in 1856, when the Republicans held their first nominating convention in Philadelphia, delegates from the Far West came East by stage coach, carrying long rifles to ward off Indians and mountain lions. It took some of them seven weeks to make the trip.

The 1856 Democratic Convention assembled in Cincinnati to the roar of the Empire Club's Artillery. The Thomas Benton delegates from Missouri, excluded from the convention hall, knocked down the doorkeepers to gain entrance.

"Bowie knives and revolvers were brandished, but no great harm was done," a newspaper reported.

The controversy over extension of slavery was at shooting stage in bloody Kansas. Rival factions had captured towns and burned the houses of political enemies.

An Abolitionist Speaks

An abolitionist senator from Massachusetts said: "President Pierce goes to the Democratic Convention with the light of the burning dwellings of Kansas flashing upon his brazen brow."

Gen. John C. Fremont of California, Mexican War veteran and Indian fighter, was nominated for President by Republican delegates who shouted: "We'll go for Fremont! He grappled with the grizzly bear, and he beat the Indians. He can lick the slavedrivers."

When the Republicans nominated Lincoln in 1860 the country was on the verge of civil war. When the news reached the South a Richmond newspaper said: "The Union is sundered."

1860 Convention Split

The Democrats held their 1860 convention at Charleston, S. C. Failing to get a nominee after taking 57 ballots, the convention broke up when several Southern delegations pulled out and returned home.

The remaining delegates reopened the convention in Baltimore, and Stephen Douglas was nominated for President on the fifty-ninth ballot. It was the second longest ballot-battle in convention history.

The convention sponsored two schools of floral designing, a business clinic, an aquacade performance, and other activities.

Joe Laird Outlines Campaign Platform During Visit Here

Joe Laird of Bryan, candidate for a post on the Texas Railroad Commission, visited in Midland Thursday and Friday in the interest of his campaign.

The independent geologist and petroleum engineer says he is seeking the Railroad Commission job because he wants the position and believes he can perform a service to the state. He offers 17 years of technical professional engineering training and practical oil production experience.

Joe Laird

During his visit here, Laird issued a nine-point platform statement, as follows:

1. Greater encouragement for more and better secondary recovery programs in order to materially increase the ultimate production of oil and gas.

2. Greater attention to the problems of the transportation industry and enforcement of the Motor Carrier Act.

3. The organization of a separate division to handle the problem of the butane fuel industry.

Gas Conservation

4. Conservation of natural gas supply by encouraging more gas processing plants.

5. Elimination of certain practices in connection with gasoline plant operations, now allowed, which prevent the royalty owners from obtaining their full one-eighth of the production.

6. Texas receiving its proportionate share of the nation's market demand for crude oil each month.

7. A foreign oil import rate that will allow the continued development of domestic petroleum reserves.

8. Closer understanding with the oil operators as to the significance and need of new reports and the use to be made of the information required.

9. The elimination of much of the bureaucratic paper work now required where the information is of no significance.

AF Reservists May Apply For Training Wing Assignments

Opportunity now exists for Air Force Reserve personnel to be assigned to the 8708th Pilot Training Wing at Hensley Field, it was announced here Saturday. Members who have evidenced sufficient interest in the Reserve program to attend drills in a non-pay, non-flying status will be given preference for assignment to the 8708th, where they can be paid four days pay per month for a weekend drill, can renew their flight proficiency and enjoy privileges such as the officers and NCO clubs, PX privileges, and weekend cross country flights.

They will drill one weekend, usually the third, each month, 1340 to 2230 hours on Saturday and 0800 to 1630 on Sunday. Quarters are available on the station. Presently assigned are C-46 and T-6 type aircraft, with T-28 and possibly T-33 type, expected later in the year, Lt. E. J. Elliott explained.

The present policy of sending C-46 aircraft the first weekend each month anywhere in the continental limits where groups of reservists desire to spend the weekend has proved popular.

Numerous Vacancies Exist

Numerous vacancies exist in officer personnel. Especially needed are non-rated adjustants, administrative, legal, supply, maintenance, air installations, intelligence, finance, ground instructors, training and comptroller personnel.

Rated vacancies include operation and instructor personnel with preference to former training and command personnel. Officer vacancy grades vary from colonel to lieutenant. Airman vacancies are numerous.

If enough interest is displayed here, airlift by C-46 type aircraft may be arranged. Interested reservists should contact Sgt. H. E. Cook, 9816th VART Squadron in the Capitol Building, dial 2-2062 or their local flight commander.

Speech By Beautiful Girl Not In Script At Olympics

HELSINKI—(AP)—A beautiful girl in a flowing white robe ran around the track at the opening of the Olympic games Saturday and then tried to harangue the crowd of 70,000 before she was hauled away.

Finnish police said the tall blue-eyed girl was from West Germany.

They did not identify her. The police said she had neither passport nor identity papers.

A police spokesman told newsmen:

"She just suddenly went nuts."

Police said when she was taken away she said "I only wanted to say a greeting."

With arms outspread, the tall, shapely girl ran onto the Olympics track from an entryway. It was the same one through which a few minutes earlier the famed flying Finn, Paavo Nurmi, had carried the sacred fire of Olympus for the lighting of the games' torch.

The loose, white robe was apparently designed to look like an ancient Greek costume. It clung to her figure as she ran around the track and up into the speaker's stand.

There she paused a moment to catch her breath. The rain-soaked spectators were puzzled but silent. The girl leaned toward the microphones and said in German:

"Friends of mine . . ."

An Olympic official ran out and began tugging at her. The girl said in English:

"Ladies and gentlemen . . ."

A police spokesman said she arrived in Finland two days ago, coming by way of Stockholm.

After the questioning by police, he said she would be taken to a hospital for observation.

EAST HIGHWAY 80 - MIDLAND, TEXAS

Dirt, Squirt and Quirt

— FARM, DAIRY AND RANCH NEWS —

Pardner, the additional moisture which fell on at least two occasions last week in Midland and vicinity really was made to order.

The only thing wrong was that it didn't cover quite enough country, but DSQ believes still more is yet to come, and that it again will rain, even on the Leonard Proctor country to the Southeast, which so far has been out of the rain belt.

So keep that slicker handy, Pardner. The rainy season is on in West Texas!

• • •

Jess Miles says his ranch in the Seminole country received a big rain Thursday night.

"Let's keep up this rain talk," he urged.

• • •

Some of the boys residing out on the Andrews Highway estimate the Thursday night rainfall there as high as two inches as the moisture swept in from the Northwest.

• • •

DSQ got wet for the second time in a week and enjoyed it thoroughly on both occasions. It could be those Thursday night political talks brought on the downpour. If so, let's have more candidate rallies.

• • •

The market was strong and active but cattle were scarce at the Midland Livestock Auction Company sale Thursday. Stockers especially were in demand and prices were up $1 or more per hundred on all classes from the week before.

• • •

E. D. Richardson, Midland banker, now has his own private swimming pool on his farm just south of the city on the Rankin highway. The big calishe pit on the Richardson place caught about 15 feet of water in a two-inch rain which fell in that vicinity last Sunday. Rich says the pool should make a pretty good duck pond this Fall, too.

Rich says he is planting his farm in combine maize, since it is too late for cotton. He expects a bountiful feed crop.

• • •

County Agent Charles Green calls up to inquire where we got our advance rain information when some of the supposedly official forecasts pointed to "continued dry." It's a trade secret, Charlie. He now predicts a big feed crop this Fall.

• • •

Those fellows chugging around in motorboats in Midland Draw last weekend should have charged admission. It was quite a show and attracted plenty of attention and interest. The Reporter-Telegram received a number of news tips concerning the boats.

"I have seen everything now," one caller informed the newspaper.

• • •

County Agent Green, incidentally, urges farmers who have cotton to maintain a constant vigil for bollworms and to take control measures immediately should infestation occur. Green always is happy to advise with farmers concerning this and other problems.

• • •

George Glass, just back from a fishing trip to Colorado, is telling friends a true story—but the yarn doesn't concern Colorado or fish. It concerns the Glass ranch located a few miles north of Midland.

It seems that George and Mrs. Glass rushed out to the ranch immediately after their return from the mountain trout country to check on the heavy rains which had fallen there during his absence, and to see the green grass which had been missing a long time.

Driving across a pasture they noticed a cow on the ground and went to investigate, thinking perhaps the animal was dead. But George discovered, believe it or not, that the cow was bogged down to her belly in mud—right out in the middle of the pasture. (This boggy country!)

George tells us he got a rope and somehow managed to free the cow from the good old mud, single handed.

"Country sure looks good," George declared.

Texas Future Farmers will hold their 1953 state convention in Fort Worth, it was decided at their annual meeting in Dallas last week.

The American Junior Rodeo Association was organized recently at the Texas Junior Rodeo at Levelland, and Lowie Rice of Big Spring was named first president of the national association.

Headquarters of the association will be maintained at Post, with Alvin G. Davis, junior rodeo producer and announcer, serving as secretary-manager.

The association was organized to establish a recognized point award system for junior and high school rodeo contestants whereby champions may be named and appropriate awards made each year. First champions will be named at the end of this year.

The 15th Annual Big Spring Rodeo and Cowboy Reunion will be unreeled August 6-9 in Big Spring's Rodeo Bowl, with purses, and prizes totaling $3,400.

The Hardin-Simmons Cowboy band will provide music for the rodeo performances and will lead the big reunion parade on August 9. The rodeo stock will be provided by Beutler Brothers of Elk City, Okla. The championship show is approved by the Rodeo Cowboys Association.

Most young Texans will not be interested in a report which has just been compiled covering castorbean plantings in the state. Up to June 28, a total of 78,148 acres had been planted in 122 counties under the Commodity Credit Corporation program. In addition, the Baker Castor Oil Company has some 16,800 acres under contract in North and Northwest Texas.

According to W. I. Ross, assistant agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, castorbean production is new to a majority of the counties. The beans, says Ross, have been planted on many types of soils from light sands to creek bottoms and in many instances on land too low in fertility to make a fair return on any kind of a crop. Ross adds that producers no doubt will be disappointed from the returns where the beans have been planted on the low fertility soils. He says 11,884 acres are under irrigation and the remaining 63,263 acres under the CCC Program are on non irrigated lands.

Farmers have better bargaining power in selling their cotton if they know the grade and staple, according to H. J. Matejowsky, who is in charge of the Abilene cotton classing office, U. S. Department of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration.

Best and most economical way to get your cotton classed is to join a cotton improvement group, Matejowsky points out.

This is a group of farmers organized primarily to promote the improvement of cotton. When they organize, adopt a variety of cotton, file and application, arrange for sampling and meet certain other requirements, the group is eligible for benefits of the Smith-Doxey Act.

These benefits include classification for group members and a USDA price sheet. Both are provided without cost.

Group application forms may be obtained from county PMA offices, county agents and ginners. The application should be mailed to the Abilene office. The deadline for taking applications is August 15.

An offer of a 1,000 reward for a humane trap that will be acceptable to commercial trappers as a substitute for existing steel-jaw traps has been announced on behalf of the American Humane Association by Mel L. Morse, the association's executive director.

The American Humane Association is the national federation of more than 600 local and regional humane societies in the United State and Canada. Its headquarters is in Albany, N. Y.

Morse said the only stipulation about design or construction of the trap sought is that it must hold a trapped animal without harm or kill it instantly and that the trap must be commercially acceptable as a substitute for traps now commonly used.

"The American Humane Association has only a humane interest in making this offer," Morse said. "Patent rights will remain the property of the inventer. We are offering the $10,000 reward merely as an incentive to inventive thinking. We hope that we can help, with this reward, to develop a trap that will minimize the suffering which is an unavoidable result of trapping."

Vacation memories are all the more fun when you give credence to your glowing remarks by exhibiting photographs of the resort spot and new friends. It is particularly important to have an album of vacation picture to prove you really have met "the handsomest boy in the world."

Then, too, you will pose for other people whom you meet on vacation time. If you want a new beau to remember you when he goes back home, learn how to pose for a photograph. Here are some tricks to remember.

1. If he wants to take your picture at high noon, be sure you beg off. That is the time of day when hard shadows are likely to be cast on your face because the sun is directly overhead. Midmorning or afternoon, on the other hand, offer flattering lighting.

2. If you're inclined to squint when you face the sun, try tilting your head up at an angle so your features and facial contours are well lighted but the sun doesn't shine directly into your eyes. Or perhaps the person who photographs you will want to try the soft effect of side or back-lighting from the sun, using a supplementary flash attachment on his camera to "fill in" the front shadows on your face.

3. When it comes to your figure, the old rule in posing is worth remembering: Hips and shoulders should be at an angle to the camera and they'll look slimmer. Legs will seem trimmer and more graceful if they're kept close together or crossed slightly. Legs should be at an angle to the camera, too. Skinny girls can take a graceful pose by placing one leg a little in front of the other, and putting a hand gracefully on the hip. A seated position sometimes helps conceal figure flaws.

4. When posing for a swim suit picture, remember your posture. Slouching wil create unattractive bulges and wrinkles. So stand or sit tall. A good way to get yourself in the proper position is to push the waistline back as far as possible. If you remember to do that, your bust will automatically lift, and your abdomen will flatten. If the camera is held low and tilted slightly upward you'll get a longer line in the snapshot.

5. Wet your lips just before the picture is to be taken and try to hold your breath for the second it takes to snap a picture. If your picture is being taken outdoors, you will be better off without makeup. Heavy eyebrows and mascara will make you look too made-up in direct sunlight. Foundation cream and powder, lipstick and perhaps a tiny line at the outer corners of the eyes is all the makeup you need for an outdoor picture.

6. Be sure that you suggest a good background to the picture taker. If he wants you to pose in front of a cluttered background, steer him to another spot. You can get lost if posed in front of crowds of bathers or eye-catching "Keep Off" signs or the like. The sky is an ideal background.

Four Dramatic High Spots Due As Democrats Convene

WASHINGTON —(AP)— There ought to be at least four dramatic high spots in the Democratic convention this coming week in Chicago.

The first is due Monday night. Gov. Paul A. Dever, of Massachusetts, will make the keynote speech. If he follows President Truman's wishes he will make a ringing call to the Democrats to push right ahead for more New Deal and more Fair Deal measures.

The second high spot is due late Tuesday afternoon when the Credentials Committee is scheduled to report on the permanent delegates to be seated.

There are hot contests over seats for two sets of delegates, those from Texas and Mississippi. In each state there is one group selected by the "regular" Democrats, and one group named by the "Truman Democrats."

The two groups will have been screened by the National Committee, which met this past week, and by the Credentials Committee. But both decisions can be appealed to the full convention. If that happens we will have a repetition of the Republican floor fight over delegate seating.

The real Democratic family fight is due to start Tuesday night and produce the third high spot. Then the Resolutions Committee will report on the platform on which the party will campaign.

Almost certainly there will be a fiery debate on the civil rights plank. This will have to include some statement on the Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC).

Democrats started this idea under President Roosevelt. The purpose is to prevent employers from discriminating against workers for reason of color or religion. This splits the Southern and Northern delegates wide apart.

Some Northeners, particularly Northern negroes, want a compulsory bill under which the federal government could penalize employers for discrimination.

There is no way of knowing how long the debate on civil rights will take. Party program-makers have left the program open at this point so that the debate could continue on through Wednesday.

The next big piece of business will be the nominations for the presidency. So the fourth dramatic high spot—the voting for a top candidate—may not come until Friday.

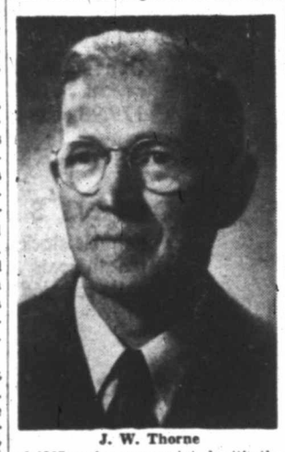

As the convention gets ready to open it looks like the Democrats are going to vote on a good many more candidates than the Republicans did—so the speeches can roll on for some hours. There are seven avowed candidates, and 20 names, all told, figuring in the race.
