Reno says no one exonerated

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno said Sunday she has found nothing in videotapes of White House coffees to incriminate President Clinton or other officials covered by the post-Watergate independent counsel law.

But she promised to keep investigating and said she ignores "name calling" by Republican critics who have demanded she resign.

"Nothing has been closed, and nobody has been exonerated," including Clinton, Reno told NBC's "Meet the Press." Claims that the Justice Department is winding down its investigation into suspect campaign fund-raising activities at the White House are mistaken, she said.

Republicans have pounded Reno in recent weeks, saying she should resign or face impeachment for failing to seek an independent counsel to investigate White House fund-raising practices.

"We believe, many of us, that she is trying to stand in the way of a good investigation. ... She is fighting for the president of the United States instead of doing her job," Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., chairman of the House committee holding hearings on fund-raising violations, said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Reno said this month that, while continuing to investigate fund-raising phone calls Vice President Al Gore made from the White House, she had found no evidence that President Clinton had violated the law in inviting wealthy donors to the White House for coffees or sleepovers.

She has until Wednesday to decide whether to push ahead with an inquiry into phone calls the president apparently made from the White House.

On Sunday she said that after reviewing newly released videotapes of the coffees, "we do

Denver's plane

A pilot was killed Sunday in the crash of a single-engine plane owned by singer John Denver, a Coast Guard spokesman said. The identity of the pilot, recovered by a lifeguard in the Monterey Bay, was not immediately known. Denver, 53, is a licensed pilot. Jeanie Tomlinson, managing director of Wind Star, the environmental group co-founded by Denver, said the singer hadn't returned her phone calls Sunday night. "We wait and see and we keep the most good thoughts we possibly can that he's okay," she said.

Assisted suicide

For 10 long and frustrating years, Diane Coleman talked to legislators, trying with little success to get out the message that assisted suicide could be used to get rid of healthy but disabled people — like her. But everything changed for Coleman this summer, when the issue went to the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court issued a very narrow ruling.

Testimony in Jones-Clinton case to start

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sworn testimony in the sexual harassment suit against President Clinton begins this week with all sides scurrying for damaging evidence and digging in for a protracted standoff. Talk of an out-of-court settlement is dead for now.

The depositions start off simply enough, Monday in Little Rock, Ark.: Paula Jones' mother and sister will testify to what she told them of the alleged 1991 hotel-room encounter. Next week, former co-worker Pamela Blackard and friend Debra Ballentine, both confidantes of Mrs. Jones at the time, are to give depositions.

Jones

From there, scheduled testimony veers from the principals. Subpoenas betray strategies: his to prove her a profit-driven liar, hers to prove him a chronic adulterer.

It is Clinton's often-ignored codefendant who will peer into Mrs. Jones' sexual past — a defense the president's team was forced to forswear months ago after an uproar by women's groups.

Bennett

Some half-dozen witnesses to Mrs. Jones' sexual reputation, including past boyfriends and a former employer, have been subpoenaed by Bill Bristow, attorney for Arkansas state trooper Danny Ferguson. They will testify in depositions beginning Oct. 17.

Both Clinton and Ferguson are named in the $700,000 suit, which U.S. District

Federal investigators looking into CD business

NEW YORK (AP) — FBI agents and federal prosecutors are looking into whether millions of dollars worth of CDs have been diverted and sold, cheating artists like Madonna out of royalties and ripping off big music companies.

The concerns have prompted Time Warner Inc., the world's largest media and entertainment company, to examine its own music distribution business for the second time in two years.

According to two longtime industry insiders who say they have been interviewed by the FBI, the questions center on whether unscrupulous employees have been misdirecting newly manufactured CDs and selling them improperly for cash.

The problem, industry critics said, is a distribution system that at best lacks adequate controls and at worst is littered with pockets of stubborn corruption.

"They have created an underground cash economy with the cash sales of record product to such an extreme that everyone's getting in on the party," said Lee Hasin, a retired music producer and former owner of Lancer Music Inc. of Philadelphia.

Hasin has made stamping out industry corruption something of a one-man crusade and has sent reams of information to federal investigators.

The most recent investigation puts the spotlight on the music industry for the second time this year. In May, federal investigations into alleged price-fixing in compact disc sales and overseas music videos came to light.

One way the CDs can be improperly sold, Hasin said, is through "one stops,"

Hurricane Pauline survivor bids farewell to family

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Her legs are wrapped in bandages, and she needs help from fellow mourners to climb the three steps to the cemetery plot.

Alicia Alvarez Gutierrez had been swept from her house by a torrent of mud and water that Hurricane Pauline sent coursing through Acapulco. She survived only because a power cable wrapped itself around her legs and neck, nearly strangling her.

It was her lifeline to reach the bank.

Ludiflor Alvarez, sister of Alicia Alvarez, cries during funeral services for her father Ernesto Alvarez, mother Maria Gutierrez and sister Margarita Alvarez in a local Acapulco cemetery on Saturday.

Her parents and her little sister weren't so lucky. She watched as the current carried them away. And now, on a sun-drenched afternoon, she has come to the cemetery to lay them to rest.

The funeral is one of many taking place around Acapulco as families begin to bury at least 207 confirmed dead. Dozens remain missing and rescue workers are digging up more bodies from the mud-filled streets every day. Thousands more were left homeless when Hurricane Pauline unleashed flash floods Thursday in the slopes above this Mexican resort's famed beaches.

Algerian children live in fear, die in silence

PARIS (AP) — Children are murdered and their bodies incinerated. Throats are slit. Heads are severed. The instruments of death are crude: knives, axes, even hoes.

The horrors of the conflict between Islamic insurgents and the military-backed regime are largely invisible, and the victims' screams go mostly unheard.

The Algerian government, bent on economic reforms and attracting foreign investment, offers frequent assurances the violence is winding down, and declines foreign help. Most nations have stayed silent.

The Algerian media is censored. Foreign correspondents are rarely issued visas, are seriously restricted when visas are given and have been the target of death threats by militants.

In this war behind closed doors, one can only make an informed guess about the death toll, variously estimated at 75,000 to 100,000 since 1992. That was the year the insurgency began, to win back votes "stolen" when the army aborted legislative elections the Islamic Salvation Front was winning.

Today, a new vocabulary is emerging to describe the horrors.

"It's genocide. There is no other word," said Djamil Benrabah, who co-heads Our Algeria, an organization that helps victims.

It is "the pure and simple extermination of a defenseless civilian population," said Benrabah, whose wife was killed in a 1995 attack by gunmen. He spoke in a telephone interview from Algeria.

There also is a psychological terror. It stems in part from the nature of the conflict, neither a full-blown civil war nor a classic urban guerrilla campaign. The majority of attacks occur in isolated areas, but intermittent car bombings in Algiers or at markets make everyone would-be victims.

There is a surreal aspect to this conflict that kills indiscriminately, but fails to derail political reform and leaves untouched Algeria's petroleum sector, which provides 95 percent of the nation's export income.

President Liamine Zeroual has promoted a sense of well-being, undertaking a vast revamping of the nation's institutions. In less than two years, he has staged presidential elections, a referendum and a parliamentary vote. Local elections are set for Oct. 23.

The Aug. 29 massacre of about 300 people in Rais, a bedroom community of Algiers, was a turning point.

"It was the first time people understood it was really true," said Salima Ghezali, a respected commentator and editor in chief of the newspaper La Nation, banned since December.

Rais, she said during a visit to Paris, is made up of emigrants from the capital. Families took the bodies of loved ones, many mutilated, back to Algiers for burial. Reality finally sank in.

The Armed Islamic Group said in a Sept. 26 communique that the massacres were "an offering to God." The group, said to be a volatile mix of Muslim extremists, desperate youths and common bandits, vowed to continue its bloody crusade to topple the regime and install an Islamic state based on their strict interpretation of Koranic law. Among other things, that would require women to wear veils and stay home, and make Koranic education obligatory.

Since Rais, more than 600 people have been killed by armed groups in massacres around Algiers, finally rousing the international community.

In the latest violence, taking place overnight Saturday in a village south of the capital, attackers slit the throats of a family of 11, then hacked the corpses with axes, hospital sources said Sunday. They spoke on condition of anonymity out of fear of reprisals. No one claimed responsibility for the attack.

Zeroual has rejected an offer by U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to mediate, equating any foreign initiative with interference.

The killings escalated in increments, first targeting government or security forces, then intellectuals, journalists and foreigners before exploding into random savagery.

Enthusiasm grows for Cuban papal visit

BEJUCAL, Cuba (AP) — Waving Vatican flags and singing songs to their patron saint, hundreds of Cuban Catholics crowded into a tiny church Sunday for one of a series of Masses that are stirring enthusiasm for a papal visit.

It was to have been an open-air Mass, but — in a sign of lingering tensions between the Roman Catholic Church and the communist government — local authorities ordered the service to be held behind church walls, parishioners and church sources say.

Some 500 people poured into the sanctuary to gaze upon the image of the Virgin of Charity — Cuba's patron saint — and hear Cardinal Jaime Ortega call on them to prepare for Pope John Paul II's visit in January.

Ortega has celebrated several open-air Masses attended by hundreds — beginning with one outside Havana's cathedral last month — extraordinary events in a country where public worship has been banned since the early years of the 1959 revolution.

"We have celebrated the previous Masses under the Cuban sky, which is your sky, which is ours," Ortega said. "Today we have to celebrate inside. But here we are.

"Despite the limitations that keep us from demonstrating our love publicly ... we show you all of our affection," the prelate said to loud applause. "And we prepare for the visit of John Paul II to Cuba."

Although he didn't say why the Mass was not held outside, parishioners and church sources said Ortega's office had received word from local officials in this town near Havana that the service had to be indoors.

"Apparently the local authorities were not comfortable with it because these outdoor celebrations are not usual," said Laura Peralta, 54, who was wed in the church, celebrated baptisms there and had her two sons married by a priest.

"Still, we have never been harassed because of our faith, all these years," she said. "And now we are waiting for the pope with open hearts."

It was not clear if other Masses would have to be held indoors. The government granted permission for 14 open-air Masses this fall as part of the church's campaign before the pontiff's Jan. 21-25 visit.

Cuba was officially atheist from the early 1960s until 1992, and religious believers were banned from the party, the military and several professions. Scores of priests were expelled, Catholic families sent their children abroad, and the communist government expropriated Catholic schools and even cemeteries.

Since the collapse of Cuba's Soviet bloc allies, however, officials have softened their approach toward religion.

In 1991, Catholics and other believers were granted permission to join the Communist Party. President Fidel Castro called his celebrated meeting with John Paul a year ago "a miracle."

But the government apparently remains uncomfortable with public worship.

Public religious processions have been banned since a clash between Catholics and government forces left a young man dead in 1961.

"We have not had public celebrations in Cuba in so many years," said the Rev. Gabriel Torres Salazar, parish priest at St. Lazarus Church in nearby El Rincon. "We await the pope's arrival with much emotion."

Iranian woman rescued after 22 days in well

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A woman thrown into a dry well by her relatives in a dispute over an inheritance survived there for 22 days before rescue, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Khadijeh Iran-Nejad, 55, was pulled out after a passing peasant heard her cries for help, the daily Iran News reported.

Two family members tossed Iran-Nejad into the well and then flung boulders after her to try to make sure she was dead, the newspaper said.

The boulders missed her and cracked a canal under the floor of the well, the newspaper said. Iran-Nejad survived by soaking a cloth in water seeping from the cracks and sucking on it, it said.

The paper said Iran-Nejad was hospitalized in good condition. Iran News said the incident happened in the town of Sirjan in the southeastern province of Kerman, but did not say when.

Rowboat race across Atlantic gets under way

LOS GIGANTES, Tenerife Island (AP) — Two American women, a newly released convicted killer from France and 57 other adventurers shoved off from this Canary Island on Sunday in a 2,700-mile race across the Atlantic — by rowboat.

The 24-foot boats scattered immediately, bobbing in the waves and looking like colorful, oversized snowmobiles, their sides plastered with sponsors' stickers.

The 30 two-member teams will be rowing about two months before reaching the finish line in Barbados. One of the teams delayed its departure until late Sunday because a member had stomach trouble.

It's not simply a question of who will win the race, or even finish it, but whether or not the competitors will survive.

The death rate for people attempting to cross an ocean in a rowboat is about one in nine, according to Kenneth Crutchlow, executive director of the London-based Ocean Rowing Society, whose members are veteran ocean rowers.

For 34-year-old Pascal Blond, released from prison in September after serving seven years for beating a man to death in a brawl, the undertaking represents redemption. He had previously served another seven-year sentence for killing someone else with a knife in a gang fight when he was 18.

His teammate, veteran oarsman Joseph LeGuen, met Blond last year while giving an ocean-rowing workshop to prisoners near LeGuen's hometown of Brest.

"Pascal told me, 'I want to row an ocean,'" said LeGuen, a burly 50-year-old with a shaved head. "Jails are meant to break people, turn them into vegetables. But Pascal always resisted. He is mentally and physically strong — ideal for this race."

"I'm not that way anymore," said Blond, a muscular man with close-cropped hair, referring to his dangerous temperament as a youth.

Victoria "Tori" Murden, a veteran mountaineer and the first woman to ski to the South Pole, is in the race "to reduce life to the bare minimum."

"All the superfluous stuff is gone," explained Murden, who coordinates projects aimed at revitalizing poor Louisville, Ky., neighborhoods. "It comes down to your hands and your heart making it happen."

Murden's partner is Louise Graff, a friend since high school who works in a French restaurant in Charleston, S.C.

To help minimize the danger, two yachts making the crossing will be on standby for emergencies.

The boats have emergency locator transmitters, but the yachts won't be able to immediately save foundering racers.

The boats carry inflatable lifer-afts. Each team prepared and carries its own food, ranging from rice and beans to precooked pasta primavera and Oriental chicken. Onboard desalinators provide drinking water.

If they break down, each boat carries 150 liters of bottled water as ballast.

Except for a 6-foot, 6-inch aft sleeping compartment and a forward storage area, the boats — made from inch-thick mahogany plywood — are open to the elements.

Of 53 ocean-crossing attempts, 24 have been successful, and six rowers have died, according to the Ocean Rowing Society.

Despite the dangers, the competitors were relaxed moments earlier.

LeGuen noted before he shoved off with Blond that the race won't really start for about a week.

"When people's behinds really start hurting, when their backs are aching, when their fingers are a mess of broken blisters, that is when the race will truly begin."

Race updates available on Internet at http://www.challengebus.co.uk and http://www.oceanrowing.com. Murden's and Graff's web page is http://www.adept.net/americanpearl.

BOOKS: Unsold books are offered free to other towns backs.

"I've got enough (books at home), but I still get more," said Friends member Bill Robinson, who helped set up the donated books on 185 long heavy-duty tables.

"I don't worry, about what I don't get," Robinson said. "There's always more. There are some treasures to be found, and people know it."

Those treasures that aren't bought are offered free to libraries from towns all around West Texas and New Mexico, especially for upstart and expanding libraries. The donated books serve the common interest of increasing literacy and reading.

"Whatever they could carry away, we donated," Friends Book Sale chairman Mary Mann recalled of books donated last year to a small library near Ruidoso, N.M.

Two years ago, Friends books helped stock a small-town library in Arizona.

"We are trying real hard to contact all the libraries from here to the Panhandle but they have to ... carry them away."

Representatives of libraries may contact Mrs. Mann or Friends members Shirley Gist and Janice Gist to arrange for accepting donated books.

Any book that remains when the sale ends Sunday can be donated, she said.

Last year's sale netted the Friends' about $28,500. Proceeds go toward upgrading the Midland County Public Library through capital outlays such as more shelving, furnishings, computers and other improvements.

The sale's first day, 6-9 p.m. Wednesday, is exclusively for Friends members to browse and shop. Membership fee is $5 a person or $10 for a family.

The Thursday sale from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. is open for $2 admission.

After that, there is no admission charge. Hours thereafter are noon to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. On Sunday, books sell for $1 a yard stacked cover to cover.

"We're really trying to move the books," member Sandy Robinson said. "It's worth the membership price."

More than just books, the sale includes hundreds of items from dishes to tools and linens to clothes in the Midland Genealogical Society's Trash-to-Treasure Sale.

"One person's trash is another person's treasure," said Donna Perrigo, who heads up the Trash-to-Treasure sale. "And we have no trash, only treasures."

Geologist-genealogist David Miller noted that "Midland has one of the best genealogical libraries around."

Like the Friends' books, the genealogical society's hodgepodge of items are donated.

But they are becoming harder to come by since many garage-sale leftovers end up in retail resale shops, Mrs. Perrigo said.

Previously, five out of 10 persons "would donate their stuff to us" following their home garage sales, she said. But those leftovers increasingly are going to the resale businesses, and the give-away ratio has dropped to one in 10. On the flip side, Mrs. Perrigo noted that a Midland woman recently gave the society the contents of two household storage units.

Among the Trash-to-Treasure lot are a dog house and an old mechanical Underwood typewriter and jewelry, puzzles, glassware, lamps and computer hardware.

"We've got a CD/ROM" among the sale's items, noted John Hammett. "We're high tech. Some assembly required."

Aside from the 50-cent and 75-cent books, the Friends sale includes higher-priced better books of literary, art, historical, and scientific worth and a silent auction for rare books that strike the fancy of member Barbara Larsen, who is managing the hourly auction.

For instance, she selected a book entitled "The Religion of Geology" for the auction.

"It had all the right sediment," quipped Colleen Scury.

Mrs. Larsen's selections include the likes of the 1899 "The Life and Achievements of Admiral (George) Dewey" and this inscription: "The bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring."

And there are the 1940s "The Better Little Books" that feature a series on cowboy Gene Autry, U.S. Marshal Lightning Jim, and Allen Pike of the Parachute Squad USA. Up for auction, too, is the 1928 book "Get Rid of the Fat."

The record 80,000 donated books, which were collected over a year's span, were moved over the weekend from the Friends' 2305 Michigan Ave. warehouse in two 18-wheeler trailer loads and a bobtail truck, noted Bill Stewart, Friends president. Moving was donated by Don Twitchell of ABC Moving & Storage.

"It's good for the community, and we enjoy doing things for the community," said Don Thomson, who helped move the books. "The community has been nice to us. Besides, you are supposed to help your community and do God's, Jesus Christ's, and the Holy Spirit's work. The praise and glory go to God."

The Friends' Book Sale is "to recirculate books" and to "help the library," Stewart said. "To me, a story is lot more enjoyable when you're reading it because you can use your imagination. With television or the movies, you've got to take what you get."

Of the range of books in the sale, Stewart said, "I can't think of a subject we don't cover if it is decent to read."

JONES: Sources say first lady believes husband's denials

(From 1A)

Court Judge Susan Wright Webber scheduled for trial next May.

Susan Carpenter McMillan, a Los Angeles public-relations woman who acts as Mrs. Jones' spokeswoman, accused Bristow of doing the president's dirty work.

"It disgusts me, and Mr. Clinton's lawyers are letting it happen. These are the same tired old tactics that have been used against rape victims and molested children," she said.

Clinton, who was Arkansas governor when he allegedly propositioned the former state employee, stands accused of sexual harassment. Mrs. Jones sued Ferguson for defamation, fingering him as the source of a published account that depicted her as eager to be Clinton's mistress.

Bristow said he is not influenced by the president's lawyers. "I'm doing what is best for my client. If one files a defamation case, one puts one's personal reputation at issue," said the attorney, who once defended one of Clinton's major political foes in an Arkansas criminal matter.

The president's defense team, led by Washington powerhouse Robert Bennett, served subpoenas in the last two weeks on groups with ties to Carpenter McMillan or Mrs. Jones' legal fund.

The fund's former director, Cindy Hays, will ask Judge Wright this week to protect donor records for fear of harassment.

But Bennett and his partner, Mitchell Ettinger, say they the fund-raising documents will lay bare Mrs. Jones' motives. Their longstanding theory that she is bankrolled by Clinton's political enemies — a charge she vigorously disputes — seemed to gain some credence Oct. 1 when The Rutherford Institute, a Virginia conservative group, enlisted as her official fund-raising arm.

"We believe she is being controlled by people who are extreme right-wing political Clinton-haters, and that's relevant to issues of motive and bias," Bennett said.

As for an out-of-court settlement, he said no negotiations had been held since Mrs. Jones' Dallas firm, Rader, Campbell, Fisher & Pyke, came on board this month. Other sources close to the case didn't expect talks to resume until closer to the judge's mid-April decision on summary judgment, if at all.

White House sources say first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton believes her husband's denials of misconduct but wants a settlement in order to avoid an embarrassing trial.

Calls to Rader, Campbell, Fisher & Pyke were not returned.

Bennett's team is also pursuing suspicions that Mrs. Jones' income tax returns showed she has treated her legal fund as a business. "It will be instructive to see how she's using this money," Ettinger said. "If she is gleaning profits from this case, it goes directly to motive and credibility," Ettinger said.

Facing the judge's Jan. 30 deadline for depositions, Mrs. Jones' attorneys dished out their own discovery requests last week. They included, Bennett said, one that would compel the president to list "every woman that he ever kissed outside of marriage."

Bennett has until next month to respond, and he vowed to object: "You think it's relevant to ask about every woman he's kissed? Come on."

As if the subpoenas were not testimony enough to how uncomfortable the case could become for all parties, Bennett appeared on CBS' "Face the Nation" Sunday and discussed Clinton's genitals.

Armed with a urologist's report from the president's annual physical, Bennett once again rejected Mrs. Jones' assertion that Clinton has "distinguishing characteristics" on his sexual organ.

"The president is a normal man," Bennett said.

RENO: Attorney General doesn't follow 'shrill accusations' not have any evidence of criminal activity" among the president or other senior government officials covered by the Independent Council Act.

She emphasized there will be no pause in "one of the most complex investigations in this nation's history." She also has no plans to resign, she said.

Asked about comments Saturday by House Speaker Newt Gingrich that she "looks like a fool" for not seeking an independent council, she said, "When the speaker calls names I don't pay too much attention. What I try to do is listen to people who have constructive ideas and keep an open mind.

"I follow the evidence. I follow the law. I don't follow innuendo. I don't follow shrill accusations."

Reno said she was angered by the White House's failure to notify her immediately about the existence of the videotapes. White House officials again apologized for delays but insisted there were no ulterior motives.

"I deeply regret that we did not get those tapes off earlier," White House lawyer Lanny Breuer said on CBS' "Face the Nation." But he said the White House has a "proud record" of providing more than 100,000 documents to Congress and the Justice Department.

White House chief counsel Charles F.C. Ruff said on ABC's "This Week" that he made a mistake in not telling Reno of the tapes at a meeting the day after they were discovered. But "it had nothing to do with any effort to conceal the information," Ruff said. "We would never do that to the Department of Justice or to anyone else."

Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, who sits on the Senate committee investigating fund-raising irregularities, told CBS the delay in releasing the tapes was "part of a whole pattern of noncompliance. ... Whether it's malfeasance or it's simply incompetence, it's inexcusable."

A Democratic member of the Senate committee, Sen. Richard Durbin of Illinois, said on "Fox News Sunday" that while the tapes "turned out to be yawners," it was "a clumsy episode, and the White House failure to produce these videotapes on time was an embarrassment to everyone."

SURVIVOR: Horror seen as sea of mud washes her family away

grave. But she doesn't see the cloth-draped caskets. All she sees, she explains later, is her family.

She sees them praying in their living room as the waters rise around their concrete house. She sees a sudden surge of mud burst in, taking her sister, Margarita, and her mother, Maria.

She sees her father, Ernesto, holding onto a doorway beside her. Another wave crashes in, carrying them downstream as well.

She feels the metal cable gripping her neck — it has left a deep gouge — and remembers how she used it to haul herself to safety.

And she sees the bodies of her relatives a day later, scratched and bloated, set out in a morgue beside dozens of others who met a kindred fate. She nods to the coroner that, yes, she can identify them.

As mourners throw white flowers and clods of dirt upon the lowered caskets Saturday, Alicia rises from her plastic chair and tries to hurl herself into the hole.

"Let me go!" she sobs as friends grab her skirt, forcing her back into her seat. "I should be in there. I want to be in there. These are my three loves. Mine! Mine!"

She slumps back, defeated. "God bless you, little father," she says.

The Alvarez Gutierrez family has many friends. Ernesto built a small taxi company into a bustling business; his wife was active in the Roman Catholic church, organizing drives to help the poor.

Margarita, like Alicia, worked as a secretary in the family business. Their father believed in sticking together.

And that is what they were doing Thursday when they heard the roar of water, the boulders pounding against the door.

"My parents were asking God to stop the water from rising any more;" Alicia says. "But He didn't."

On Friday, the bodies of Ernesto, Maria and Margarita were found, bound in death as they were in life, somehow kept together in the raging river that carried them a mile downhill.

From the morgue, Alicia took the bodies to a funeral parlor, where she never left their side.

Yet before they were buried, Alicia suffered a final injustice.

Her family already had a choice plot paid for, in the middle of a grassy field, among the unpainted concrete tombs.

companies that act as middlemen between manufacturers and small music stores.

Here's how it works: Employees at either manufacturing plants or record labels order a certain number of CDs — say 500 — shipped to a distributor as payment for advertising in the distributor's catalog. So far everything's aboveboard.

Instead of ordering the 500 CDs, however, the employee orders 2,000 and is paid cash for the extra 1,500. The distributor can then sell the extra CDs at a profit, and everyone walks away richer.

Plane owned by John Denver crashes

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. (AP) — A pilot was killed Sunday in the crash of a single-engine plane owned by singer John Denver, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The identity of the pilot, recovered by a lifeguard in the Monterey Bay, was not immediately known. Denver, 53, is a licensed pilot.

Jeanie Tomlinson, managing director of Wind Star, the environmental group co-founded by Denver, said the singer hadn't returned her phone calls Sunday night.

"We wait and see and we keep the most good thoughts we possibly can that he's okay," she said.

Messages left at Denver's Aspen, Colo., home by The Associated Press were not immediately returned Sunday night.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Steve Aitkins said identifying the victim would be difficult. The Coast Guard completed its search for debris for the night, but planned to resume at daybreak.

"We'll search tomorrow for more clues," Aitkins said. "But at this point it's almost like a John Doe case. We have a body but it's unrecognizable. We won't know right away unless someone comes forward and says they know who was on that plane."

Officials said the body was unrecognizable because of the fatal injuries caused by the crash.

Aitkins said the ground crew at the Monterey Airport confirmed that Denver owns the plane.

The plane crashed about 100 yards off rocky shoreline in the bay just north of Monterey, and near a jut in the land known as Lover's Point. Temperatures Sunday were in the 70s and the skies were clear.

Denver established himself as a star in the 1970s with his melodic, light folk-pop.

He scored hits with songs like "Take Me Home, Country Roads," "Rocky Mountain High," "Sunshine on My Shoulders," and "Thank God I'm a Country Boy."

Denver was named Country Music Entertainer of the Year in 1975.

Denver was in a previous plane accident in April 1989. He walked away uninjured after the 1931 biplane he was piloting spun around while taxiing at an airport in northern Arizona.

Can't sleep? Always tired? Sleep Center can help

This comfortable room at the Sleep Center of the Southwest is where Bari Lynn Smith, RPSGT, conducts studies that help her to get patients a good night's sleep. In her hands is a Continuous Positive Airway Pressure machine, a treatment device for sleep apnea.

A well-known comedian tells of growing up in a household where his father snored so loudly that everyone in the house would breathe in rhythm with him. The problem was, his father would breathe—then stop for long periods. "Dad," the family would cry out, "breathe, so we can breathe!"

Sleep disorders become un-funny very quickly, for both the sufferer and the family. If you can't sleep well at night, you quickly begin to feel tired during the daytime. Then it becomes hard to think and function at work or while driving (this is really dangerous). In fact, according to Bari Lynn Smith, a Registered Polysomnographic Technologist with Dr. John Bray's Sleep Center of the Southwest, lack of sleep can lead to increased blood pressure, swelling of feet and legs and other medical problems.

Sleep apnea and insomnia account for 85 percent of all sleep problems. Apnea is typically caused by an obstruction in the airways which causes a person to hold their breath. Snoring can be an indicator of at least the beginning of this condition. The obstruction can be caused by a cold or allergies (almost everyone is affected by this from time to time) or by the tonsils, adenoids, uvula or soft palate.

Ms. Smith says this often begins to affect men as early as their 30s (although a third of apnea patients are women) who were athletic and are now somewhat overweight.

Diagnosis may be accomplished in a simple office visit. Other times, a night in the sleep center is necessary. This lets a sleep professional closely monitor the patient's sleeping patterns to determine what is wrong.

The patient enters the comfortable, bedroom-like setting 30 to 45 minutes before their regular bedtime and follows their usual routine (watching TV, reading, whatever). The patient's spouse can come, too. Children are accompanied by a parent. Ms. Smith connects a few small sensors to the patient's skin and scalp, which monitor brain activity, blood oxygen levels and other activity.

"Sometimes the treatment is something basic like a nose spray or a suggestion to stop eating right before bedtime," Ms. Smith explains. Other people can learn not to sleep on their backs.

For some, a dental appliance that holds the tongue out away from the air passage may be the key.

Another device, called a CPAP (Continuous Positive Airway Pressure) quietly creates an airflow through a mask that keeps airways open.

Surgery to trim the soft palate or uvula is another option, as is the removal of swollen tonsils or adenoids.

If you or a family member can't sleep, the Sleep Center of the Southwest may allow you to rest easy once again. If you're missing out on sleep, you're missing out on life.

Dr. John Bray of the Sleep Center of the Southwest lays claim to being the Permian Basin's only Diplomate of the American Board of Sleep Disorders Medicine and Clinical Polysomnography. The Sleep Center is working toward accreditation by the American Sleep Disorder Association. Located at 606 B North Kent, the phone number is 570-NITE.

It's not 'just hormones': women receive help for effects of hormonal changes

As women reach their forties and fifties, it's not unusual for them to experience depression, headaches, insomnia, hot flashes, mood swings and other symptoms. According to gynecologist Dr. James Humphreys, these are common signs of hormonal changes which may or may not be accompanied by menopause.

In most cases, this is not a disease—these symptoms are brought on by the body's reaction to natural and normal changes at this stage of life. "When these symptoms happen apart from the stopping of menstrual periods" says Dr. Humphreys, "many women think they are caused by hormonal changes. Other causes could exist, but hormones still are usually the culprits."

The best news is that it's not necessary to simply "grin and bear it." Hormone Replacement Therapy (HRT) often can improve these symptoms.

Dr. Humphreys says the amount, type and length of hormonal treatments are determined after a thorough checkup, taking into account the general health and medical history of each patient. He also determines if hormone therapy is indicated at all. Of course, the final decision on whether to undergo this treatment is up to the patient.

Treatments consist of taking pills of one hormone or two, if necessary. How often a woman must take the pills can vary from every twelve hours to only a few days per month. Dosage also varies widely, depending on such factors as the amount of hormones already being produced by the patient's body tissues. An HRT program can continue as long as necessary or until there is a medical reason to discontinue it, such as the development of liver or gallbladder disease.

Along with easing the above mentioned symptoms, hormone therapy can bring other benefits. Dr. Humphreys says it can slow the rate of bone loss common after menopause, reducing the later risk of osteoporosis. The arteries also benefit. Hormone therapy can reduce the incidence of coronary artery disease and general atherosclerosis (clogging of arteries throughout the body).

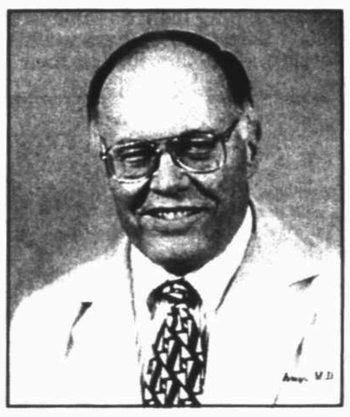
"In early life, men are much more at risk for coronary artery disease than women are," says Dr. Humphreys. "However, after menopause, women generally catch up pretty quickly. This treatment can help them reduce their risk."

No medical procedure is completely risk-free, and this one is no exception. Dr. Humphreys explains that while some studies have shown an increased risk of breast cancer under this treatment, other studies show differently. Research in this area is continuing. "We regularly screen for breast cancer anyway," he adds.

Does this sound familiar?

If you have one or more of the following problems, you could be a candidate for Hormone Replacement Therapy (HRT).

- Hot flashes
- Night sweats
- Insomnia
- Headaches
- Mood swings
- Dizziness
- Anxiety
- Bladder problems
- Dryness of skin
- Heart palpitations
- Breast tenderness



When it comes to the irritating symptoms of hormonal changes, Dr. James Humphreys says, the best news is you don't have to simply "grin and bear it."

Word from Walt stresses reading

We keep hearing (and reading) how important reading is to the educational success of our young people. It is very important; there's no doubt about that.

But we are not the only ones who recognize the critical importance of good reading skills. Take, for instance, someone whose name young people should recognize — Walt Disney.

'There is more treasure in books,' Walt Disney once said, 'than in all the pirates' loot on Treasure Island ... and best of all, you can enjoy these riches every day of your life.'

"There is more treasure in books," Disney once noted, "than in all the pirates' loot on Treasure Island ... and best of all, you can enjoy these riches every day of your life."

Disney was correct in his assessment of the importance of books and reading. Of course, Walt Disney died many years ago, but even in the years since, the truth of his statement remains unchanged. Reading is still critically important and as such, it is getting particular emphasis in Midland schools nowadays.

In fact, five Midland schools are to receive Texas Education Agency reading grants for at-risk children totaling $158,000. Those grants will truly help the youngsters at West and Bunche Early Childhood centers, and Burnet, DeZavala and Pease Elementary Schools.

Yes, reading is tremendously important for all youngsters. The better they read, the better they will progress in education throughout their lives.

We hope they all will find the real "treasure" that Walt Disney was referring to and that they enjoy these "riches" every day of their lives.

ANOTHER VIEW

Fathers critical for educational success

There's no question that the absentee father underlies much of what ails society. The issue was the prime motivation of the Million Man March last year, and was one of the subtexts of Washington's Saturday gathering of the all-male Promise Keepers.

That also was the pretext of a study by the U.S. Department of Education. The study found, not surprisingly, that fathers played a crucial role in children's educational success. Among children whose fathers are highly involved in school activities, the study found, more than half of the children brought home report cards with mostly A's.

This applied not just to children in two-parent homes. It also applied to children whose parents were divorced but whose fathers continued to stay involved in their children's education. That's an encouraging notion.

Cuban cigars roll into the United States

The growing trendiness of cigars is making life even busier than normal for U.S. Customs officials in South Florida.

Anderson

Once concerned mainly with catching Latin American drug dealers shipping their illicit wares across the Gulf of Mexico, Customs officials now have to contend with a growing trade in contraband cigars from Cuba.

With its large Cuban exile community, Miami has long been a center for anti-Castro sentiment. But that hasn't stopped many Floridians from trying to make a buck off Cuba's reputation as the producer of the world's best cigars. Last year, Customs officials seized more than $1 million worth of Cuban cigars, or four times as many as were seized just two years earlier.

But Customs officials we spoke with say the popularity of Cuban cigars has also created another problem for tobacco-lovers: counterfeit Cubans.

A box of good Cuban cigars can cost as much as $300 in Cuba. Smugglers must of course also worry about bringing their contraband into the United States, where they can charge many times that amount for the premium smokes.

With prices so high, it comes as no surprise that some enterprising con artists have begun taking less-expensive cigars and selling them as Cubans, simply by putting on fake labels. Most buyers would never know the difference – until they light up their illicit smoke.

The profit margins for sellers is enormous. Instead of going to the trouble of bringing in expensive cigars, they enjoy fantastic mark-ups by peddling cheap imitations at premium prices.

Cuban cigars -- like all products from that country -- have been illegal in America since 1963, when President John F. Kennedy imposed an embargo on that Communist country. But according to Kennedy aide Pierre Salinger, the cigar-loving late president bought about 1,000 Cuban smokes before announcing the embargo.

And ever since then, the wealthy or well-connected have still managed to get their hands on Cubans. A loophole in the embargo allows Americans visiting Cuba to bring home up to $100 worth of the smokes, which is considered enough for personal use. Others get their fix by bringing them in from other countries, which don't have any bans on Cuban products.

Even Customs officials sometimes get into the act. Bill Anthony, the director of public affairs for the Customs Service in Washington, likes a good Cuban cigar as much as anyone. He recently got the chance to sample the forbidden fruit when he attended the wedding of his old friend and roommate, Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., in France.

Anthony's indulgence was completely legal, and he says he avoided any temptation to bring some home with him. But he did confess to us that there are pictures of him at the wedding enjoying one of Fidel Castro's finest exports. He added that he took the label off before the picture was snapped, lest anyone get the wrong idea about Customs' commitment to enforcing the embargo.

Customs officials also note that catching cigar smugglers takes a back seat to enforcing drug, immigration and money-laundering laws, the day-to-day activities that make South Florida one of the busiest Customs outposts.

UNDER THE DOME -- The congressional debate over "fast-track" trade legislation is destined to become a bellwether issue for any Democrat who hopes to succeed President Clinton in the White House when his term expires in three years.

Most Democrats hate the fast-track approach, which gives the president authority to negotiate NAFTA-like trade agreements with other countries. But Vice President Gore supports it, as do most Republicans in the House and Senate.

One of the top issues for Democrats is auto safety. When NAFTA was being debated, critics complained that Mexico's lax safety and environmental standards would soon become the norm in the United States. It sounds as if they may have been right, after all.

According to Department of Transportation officials, the government has done a lot to beef up inspections of Mexican trucks entering the United States. A report by the General Accounting Office from April of this year notes that the DOT is providing extra funds to the states to promote truck safety and to increase border inspection activities.

But when Rep. Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, paid a surprise visit to the U.S.-Mexico border crossing in Laredo, Texas, earlier this month, he found one lone U.S. inspector charged with monitoring the safety of about 2,500 trucks that cross that border each day.

According to that same GAO report, however, about 45 percent of the Mexican trucks that enter the United State were "placed out of service for serious safety violations."

RHETA GRIMSLEY JOHNSON

Commercial television still a wasteland

FISHTRAP HOLLOW, Miss. — For a decade there was no TV in this old house. I didn't want one.

Johnson

Quite possibly I was the only newspaper columnist in America who kept up with the Gulf War by radio. Without the fantastic pyrotechnics, war was what it is: ugly. (National Public Radio did a splendid job in its coverage, by the way.)

Not having TV was more of an aesthetic decision than a philosophical one, I have to admit. To have TV here would have meant clamping one of those ugly antennas to the roof of the house. Cable doesn't reach this far.

This house has all kinds of cosmetic problems. But on days when I'm seeing my glass as half full, this place has the feel of a Cotswold cottage. I didn't see adding a metal wart.

Television somehow seemed superfluous here deep in the country, anyhow. I could sit on the porch and hear the frogs and owls. On Saturday nights when I was feeling festive, there was always the Old Blues Doctor on radio.

Without TV I read more, thought more, heard more. I don't think I was being a fanatic. Fate, after all, had taken cable down another road. And I had TV before moving here and after moving away.

It was just one small dam built against the onslaught of technology.

Then, one day not long ago, I was cruising the aisles of a discount store when I saw something new in appliances. There was a TV-VCR combination about the size of a toaster.

It wouldn't take up much room, I thought, and it might be nice to watch college football on the fall weekends I sometimes spend here.

It felt a little like I was betraying someone — myself, perhaps — when I paid for the TV and mushed on to another store for an antenna. They hadn't improved in looks one whit.

Living in Georgia had spoiled me, I figured, made me less apt to choose quiet twilights and reading myself to sleep. I had grown used to a companion, the empty noise of commercial TV.

I strapped the pole to the corner of the roof less visible from the road. When you stood at the front gate, the antenna was impossible to see. The TV was my dirty little secret. The deed was done.

I get four channels when the weather is good, one when it's not. There is more snow on the tiny screen than in Idaho's Sawtooth Mountains in January.

The first night I watched I could almost make out a beauty-pageant contestant playing some concerto on a grand piano; I think it was a concerto. But I wouldn't swear.

On another channel was a dumb show about high school football players being urged to take steroids. I think they were football players. The show may have been about rugby.

The other two channels didn't like the wind, or stars.

I spent an hour or so fiddling with the remote before the absurdity struck me. I had missed both the bluegrass and blues shows on the radio while trying to get a decent picture on the black box at my feet. I had traded rare free time trying to tap into banalities.

Still determined to use my new toy, I punched in "Educating Rita" with Michael Caine, a good movie but one I've seen a dozen times. I have a few more movies in a box under the bed. I know "None But the Lonely" and "The Long, Hot Summer" are there, somewhere.

This morning I was thrilled to find CBS enduring only a mild blizzard. But then I remembered it didn't much matter.

Charles Kuralt is dead.

CHARLEY REESE

Charley's Axioms point at naked truth about government

While everybody is yapping about the Internal Revenue Service, people should remember that the real problem is government spending. Taxes and their collection are an effect, not a cause.

Reese

This same Republican-majority Congress that is knocking the enamel off its teeth about the IRS is spending more money than even Bill Clinton asked them to spend. That's sort of like talking more vulgar than Madonna.

The problem is not confined to Washington. Most state and local governments are big spenders, too. And big spenders must necessarily be big taxers. There is no way to reduce taxes without first reducing the amount of money governments at all levels spend.

Government has become a gigantic wealth-transfer machine that takes money out of some pockets and puts it into other pockets. The pockets out of which come the trillion-and-then-some federal budget naturally want lower taxes while the pockets into which goes the trillion-and-then-some think government is being stingy and should do more.

Income redistribution is actually a moral issue. Is it right to force at gunpoint some people to support other people? That's what all social spending is — forced subsidizing of one group by another group. The National Endowment for the Arts, for example, is compelling all the people to support a tiny minority of individuals who claim to be artists of one sort or another.

It should come as no surprise that the elite is more adept at getting government subsidies than the poor. The money elite is smarter than poor people, usually a great deal less moral and more selfish, and is awash with cash that is the cattle prod of politics. That's why the tax code for the rich looks like Swiss cheese and the tax code for the paycheck people looks like granite.

A working man or woman who borrows money to pay for their children's health and education needs cannot deduct the interest, but a Wall Street wolf who borrows billions to take over and loot other businesses can deduct every penny of his interest. But enough of that.

Just remember Charley's Axioms of Government.

1. Whatever government spends it will tax and borrow.

2. Spending must be cut before taxes can be cut.

3. Anything government does at the expense of all for the benefit of a few is immoral on its face.

4. Politicians who claim to be in favor of lower taxes while voting for bigger budgets are low-down lying dogs.

5. The rich will always have more influence on government than the poor and the middle class.

6. It is a rare bird who will use power to benefit the common good rather than his own good.

When you look at the naked truth of government as it is, rather than as it is depicted in theories, you must inevitably come to the conclusion that the only alternative is small, limited government or bad government.

It took a revolution to create a small, limited government in the 18th century and it will take another, though hopefully a less violent one, to do it in the 20th or 21st century.

That's the choice. Government as it is will just keep on getting bigger and more oppressive until it finally evolves into a dictatorship so obvious than even the most naive will not be able to deny it. The good news is that life is most interesting when we have a challenge.

Assisted suicide ruling increases lawsuits, legislation and lobbying

NEW YORK (AP) — For 10 long and frustrating years, Diane Coleman talked to legislators, wrote to newspapers and organized demonstrations, trying with little success to get out the message that assisted suicide could be used to get rid of healthy but disabled people — like her.

But everything changed for Coleman this summer, when the issue went to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The high court issued a very narrow ruling, upholding laws in New York and Washington state that ban assisted suicide but taking no position on future laws allowing the practice.

After years of waiting as the case dragged on, activists on all sides agreed: The future of assisted suicide will be decided state by state, and that meant war.

Like other advocates, Coleman has seen a flurry of change since the June ruling. Not Dead Yet, the Forest Park, Ill.-based group she founded, now has a board of directors, a mailing list of 2,000 people and a Web site that's been visited 20,000 times. The group is regularly consulted by assisted suicide conference organizers and the media.

"The court just left the door open for a states' rights struggle," said Coleman, who has a neuro-muscular disorder that put her in a wheelchair at age 11. "We know (proponents) are ready, they're moving."

Lawyers on all sides have begun preparing for battle in state courts and legislatures. Bills are in the works, new interest groups have formed, small groups have become national players, medical organizations are highlighting the subject at conferences and medical schools are talking about it with their students.

The Supreme Court's ruling had another, perhaps more significant effect — it put the issue of assisted suicide on the mind of the public.

"It's a common kitchen table conversation now," said Barbara Coombs Lee, executive director of the Seattle-based Compassion in Dying, a nonprofit group that brought the cases that landed at the Supreme Court.

Since the ruling, Compassion in Dying has opened two new offices, in Oregon and Northern California. It has also created the Center for End of Life Law and Policy that will look for ways to bring the issue into state courts.

Lori Andreas can attest to the change. As a clinical nurse at Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland, she sees it all the time. Last month, the family of a patient who had lingered in a coma for nearly a year asked Andreas: Can we give him something to make this end?

Predictions vary wildly about the future of assisted suicide and whether state courts, legislators and the public will agree with the Supreme Court.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court said New York and Washington were not violating their citizens' constitutional rights by banning assisted suicide.

Terminally ill people do not have a constitutional right to assisted suicide, the court said, and helping end another's life conflicts with "our nation's history, legal traditions and practices," wrote Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist.

However, the court left the door open for legalizing assisted suicide, and several justices noted that the two state laws don't forbid doctors from giving patients pain medication even if there's a risk that the drugs will kill.

Thirty-five states now outlaw assisted suicide, nine states consider it a crime through common law, five states have never decided either way and Oregon has legalized it — the only state to do so.

Three years after Oregon voters approved the law through a referendum, however, legal challenges have stalled it. Pressured by assisted suicide opponents, legislators have called for a vote Nov. 4 on whether to repeal the law.

Regardless of what happens with legalization, the assisted suicide cases have already forced changes in how the medical industry approaches end-of-life care, and pain management in particular.

Medical schools, including Oregon Health Sciences, have expanded their programs in palliative care, which focuses on treating physical and emotional pain. The American Medical Association says it will teach every doctor in the country how to properly treat dying patients before the year 2000.

"I think what everyone recognizes here is that there wouldn't be an enormous cry unless there was a strong feeling that people who are dying and people with disabilities and chronic pain are not getting adequate services," said Burke Balsch, medical ethics director for the National Right to Life Committee in Washington.

The committee sponsored a weekend retreat for legislators after the ruling, laying out potential anti-assisted suicide bills: one to allow patients' relatives to sue anyone who helped in an assisted suicide, another to protect doctors who dole out lots of pain medicine from civil and criminal charges or those from state medical boards.

Farrakhan urges support for black day of atonement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan is urging black Americans to stay home from work and school on Thursday to honor a "day of atonement" that he said would tell whites they can no longer take blacks for granted.

Farrakhan, interviewed Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press," predicted millions would participate in the observance. "We believe that it will be practiced in over 100 cities in America and it will grow from year to year," he said.

He said the day, coming on the second anniversary of the "Million Man March" in Washington that Farrakhan organized, has its roots in the Jewish day of atonement.

"We believe that the children of Israel are a sign or a prototype of the 400-year suffering of blacks in America. Since we are not quite slaves and not quite free, we are somewhat in the same position as the children of Israel in the wilderness."

But he said there was also a political message: "When whites of this nation wake up on that morning and they don't see their cook or they go to the airport and we don't see the baggage carrier or you don't hear the music or you don't see the face of black people, then you begin to think how relevant and how important are black people to this nation."

Farrakhan has urged black athletes as well to stay home. Asked whether players in the baseball playoffs or pro football games should miss their games, he said, "that's a personal decision that each participant will have to make."

On the Promise Keepers, the Christian group of mainly white men that held a massive rally in Washington this month, Farrakhan said that "as white males they should also see that there is a responsibility on the part of the white male to rectify the wrong that was done by former generations" to minorities.

He said he was willing to talk to Jewish leaders, with whom he has had an ongoing feud, but would not apologize for past deprecatory remarks he has made about Jews.

"That demand for me to apologize comes out of an arrogance that makes one feel that if I am critical of Jewish behavior relative to black people, that all of a sudden I have to apologize."

Acclaimed author James Michener discontinues kidney dialysis

AUSTIN (AP) — Ninety-year-old James A. Michener has taken himself off life-sustaining kidney dialysis.

Linda Milanesi, spokeswoman for the James A. Michener Art Museum in Doylestown, Pa., said the renowned and prolific author opted to stop the medical treatment last week.

His condition has not changed since his decision.

"Basically, he's stable and resting at home," she said Sunday, referring questions to long-time Michener friend and associate John Kings.

'He has spent his life respecting the press ... He asks now that the press respect his privacy.'
— Michener friend John Kings

In a brief statement, Kings said: "Mr. Michener is undergoing evaluations. He is perfectly well and comfortable. He has spent his life respecting the press and what it has to do. He asks now that the press respect his privacy."

Kings would not take any questions.

An unnamed source told the (New York) Daily News, "He's decided he doesn't want to go on living like this," referring to weekly mechanical blood cleansing.

The prolific writer has more than 40 titles to his name. He released his latest books, "A Century of Sonnets," earlier this year. He reportedly has been working on a memoir about his illness.

Michener's literary success began with "Tales of the South Pacific." The book won the 1948 Pulitzer Prize and was the basis for "South Pacific," a long-running Broadway musical and later a motion picture.

For decades, Michener, a former teacher, wandered the globe from Japan and Korea to Hungary, Hawaii, Afghanistan, Spain, South Africa, Colorado, Israel, Chesapeake Bay, Poland, Texas, Alaska and the Caribbean.

He lived in every part of the world he wrote about.

He has made his main home in Austin since working on his 1985 novel, "Texas," his longest book (1,096 pages) and a 1 million-copy seller.

His books have argued for universal ideals: religious and racial tolerance, hard work and self-reliance.

He never quit working, saying "as long as the old brain keeps functioning, I know the desire will always be there. I can hardly wait to get up in the morning, to get back to work."

Michener has shared his fortunes with a number of educational institutions, making him one of the world's leading philanthropists.

He's made the University of Texas, which is based in Austin, among his biggest beneficiaries of late, donating more than $37 million in gifts, including a $15 million donation in 1992.

On Oct. 3, the University of Northern Colorado announced that Michener was donating manuscripts and other writings to the school to establish the only official repository of his works. Michener earned a master's degree and taught at the school from 1936 to 1941. A library on the school's campus already bears his name.

Michener was born Feb. 3, 1907, in New York City, and was taken as an orphan to the Bucks County Poorhouse in Doylestown, Pa. His name, James Albert Michener, came from his adoptive Quaker parents, Edwin and Mabel Michener.

His writing career began while he was serving in the Navy during World War II. As chief naval historical officer for part of the South Pacific, Michener wrote fictional sketches of Americans at war.

He offered the manuscript anonymously to Macmillan, which published it as "Tales of the South Pacific" in 1947.

His next book, "The Fires of Spring," was autobiographical, telling of a poor Pennsylvania boy who becomes a writer.

In "Voice of Asia" in 1951, Michener presented a variety of view points gathered from interviews in Japan, India and other Orient countries.

"The Bridges at Toko-ri" (1953) and "Sayonara" (1954) were based on the Korean war, and in 1955 Michener produced a history of Japanese prints, "The Floating World."

Michener was in Austria during the Hungarian revolt in 1956, when some 20,000 refugees crossed to the West. He personally assisted dozens of them to safety and accounts for his experience in the 1957's "The Bridge at Andau."

At that time he lived in Hawaii, where he worked seven years on 1959's "Hawaii," the first of his historical-geographic blockbusters.

Then Michener was in Afghanistan to write "Caravans" (1963); in Israel for "The Source" (1965); in Spain for "Iberia" (1968) and "The Drifters" (1971).

He wrote a sympathetic account of the tragic student protests at Kent State University, which appeared in 1971 as "Kent State: What Happened and Why."

Between trips during the 1960s, Michener again was based in Pennsylvania, where he worked as chairman of the Bucks County Citizens for Kennedy Committee. He wrote of a book about it, "Report of the County Chairman," in 1961.

In 1962, he lost a bid for Congress.

In 1974, Michener completed "Centennial," an epic tale of Colorado. The book became a 26-hour television miniseries, the longest ever.

Other Michener books include, "Sports in America" (1976), "Chesapeake" (1978), "Space" (1982), "Poland" (1983), "Alaska" (1987, "Caribbean" (1989), "Mexico" (1992), "Literary Reflections" (1993), and "This Nobel Land: My Vision of America" (1996).

State suspends herbicide use pending study

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The use of some chemical herbicides is needed to make swimming and boating easier in some public lakes and rivers. But state officials are afraid treatment is going overboard in some waterways.

In addition to the herbicides used by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to kill exotic plants that gum up the waters, people living along the lakes and rivers have also been adding chemicals.

How careful the private sector has been is uncertain, and the state is halting its own use of herbicides in two South Texas lakes until it can determine if too much poison is used in sources of drinking water.

Unregulated use can let herbicides slip through treatment plants, which cannot remove the chemicals from tap water, officials say.

"We know we use the chemicals responsibly and legally," TP&W biologist Galen Jons told the San Antonio Express-News. "As far as what private homeowners put in the water, we don't know. I have been out on lakes and seen areas that you know it has been done. You can see the dead and dying plants."

The study should end next spring.

Because of increasing concerns, state Rep. Edmund Kuempel, R-Seguin, asked the House Committee on State Recreational Resources to conduct its own review.

"I may propose legislation," he said. "First, we have to determine if there is a problem."

Officials with the Guadalupe-Blanco River Authority said the chemicals are quickly diluted to safe levels and break down into harmless compounds.

But environmental groups and some residents along the lakes aren't satisfied the spraying is safe. Texas parks officials said concern by the groups prompted the state review.

"It's a chemical cocktail we are being served in our drinking water," said Robin Richardson, who lives along Lake Placid and is president of Health Awareness and Water Knowledge.

The Exam

It was the final examination for an introductory English course at a large state university. Like many such freshman courses, it was designed to weed out new students, having over 800 students in the class! The examination was two hours long, and exam booklets were provided. The professor was very strict and told the class that any exam that was not on his desk in exactly two hours would not be accepted and the student would fail.

A half-hour into the exam, a student came rushing in and asked the professor for an exam booklet.

'You're not going to have time to finish this,' the professor said, as he handed the student a booklet.

'Yes I will,' replied the student. He then took a seat and began writing.

After two hours, the professor called for the exams, and the students filed up and handed them in. All except the late student, who continued writing.

A half-hour later, the last student came up to the professor who was sitting at his desk preparing for his next class. He attempted to put his exam on the stack of exam booklets already there.

'No you don't, I'm not going to accept that. It's late.'

The student looked incredulous and angry. 'Do you know who I am?'

'No, as a matter of fact I don't,' replied the professor with an air of sarcasm in his voice.

'DO YOU KNOW WHO I AM?' the student asked again.

'No, and I don't care.' replied the professor with an air of superiority.

'Good,' replied the student, who quickly lifted the stack of completed exams, stuffed his in the middle, and walked out of the room.

The truth is behind us: But women don't always want to hear about it

WICHITA FALLS — When it comes to discussions concerning their wives' appearance, husbands learn early on that the best policy is to simply lie.

It's the one area in a marriage where they have our permission to lie through their teeth. Just do it. When we ask, "Does this dress make me look big?" their answer should never be, "Compared to the dress you had on yesterday?" They know this.

When we complain that our rear ends are getting too big, the quick response should be, and with feeling, "You look fine, dear." It's routine.

Sometimes it takes longer than we'd like, perhaps years and a few mishaps later — like, for instance, "But your rear end has always been proportionately larger than the rest of your body" — but eventually, the lesson is learned, and we're allowed to continue with false hope that the mirror is lying and our husbands are, in fact, giving us the honest-to-goodness truth.

Even my husband — the author of the "But your rear end has always been proportionately larger than the rest of your body" line — has figured out this process. After a few bumps in the road, we've reached an understanding that I will, from time to time, complain about the way I look, and he should never, under any circumstances, agree with me.

At least not to my face.

Training for Life

James 'Doc' Dodson has devoted his adult life to treating athletic injuries, and, after nearly 4 decades, he has no plans to retire.

By Amy Brasher
Staff writer

If there was a hall of fame for athletic trainers, Midlander James "Doc" Dodson would be in it.

For 39 years, Dodson has worked as a trainer in Midland and beginning in 1990, Dodson proved wrong the saying, "nothing in life is free," by providing physical rehabilitation to injured athletes of the community and surrounding areas.

This community service is provided by a man who was selected as one of eight trainers in the world to work at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich, Germany.

After working some of the greatest athletes in the world, Dodson said he is often asked why he returned to working with high school and college athletes. His response, "I work with the greatest athletes in the world now."

From little league to high school football, Dodson has greeted the sleepy-eyed athletes from 5:30 a.m. to 7 a.m. Monday through Friday, as they prepare to work through their injuries. On Saturdays, he offers a clinic for surrounding area athletes. He also travels out of town to smaller schools that don't have trainers of their own, monitoring their treatments each week. Many of the athletes said that with his encouraging words, "That's as far we'll go today, but tomorrow we can go farther," they are motivated to work harder in order to get back into the game.

"They (athletes) know that they are getting the best treatment for them," Dodson said. "I really do care about them, not just as an athlete but as a person as well."

The community service doesn't end with the physical rehabilitation. Dodson spends a great deal of time attending various games in and out of town observing the athletes performances as well as cheering them on.

Mother Teresa mural adorns Texas church

By Valeria Skold

CLEVELAND — There is something mystical happening to a little yellow-brick church in this small Liberty County community.

Every sunrise for the last four weeks, an elderly Mexican gentleman, clad in Eastern-inspired dress of sandals and white slacks, arrives at the walls of St. Mary's Catholic Parish. Before the sun can warm up the morning air, he prepares a mixture of vibrant acrylic and oil-based colors — lilac, marigold, azure, translucent white — which speckle and stain his brown fingers.

Using a 10-foot-long bamboo stick attached to a broad brush, he begins his work. The paint-soaked bristles sweep across the sharp jawline of an emerging face, caressing it with color. He continues tirelessly into the sunset, switching his painting hand when one becomes numb.

"He works from the morning, until his arm does not (keep up with) him," said Brother Angelo Scolozzi, pastor of St. Mary's Parish. Scolozzi, a devout follower of Mother Teresa, introduced her Third Order of Missionaries of Charity to the United States a year ago. His parish is the only one in the world accepted by her order,

Getting kids to stop wiggling is like pulling teeth

"Dahhy, dahhy!" she said, "Wook! Mah oof if loof anb ihdz abaht to cuhmm aht."

I shot a quizzical stare her way, wondering what she was trying to say and why she was talking that way.

"Say WHAT?" I asked her.

"Mah oof if loof anb ihdz abaht to cuhmm aht."

I nodded and smiled.

"OHHHHH!, your tooth finally came out. Why didn't you say so in the first place?"

Patterson

At least I hoped her tooth was out. If not, she had just told me that a mouse had crawled into bed with me two nights ago and had been sleeping near my toes.

It's hard to tell exactly what a kid is saying when she has half her arm jammed in her mouth as she works to free a loose tooth.

By my precise calculations, my three children will spend a combined six years with one hand in their mouth by the time they are 12.

Children spend a great deal of time wiggling. Mainly they wiggle their teeth, but they also do a lot of overall body wiggling, too. The body wiggling is the result of parents talking to them openly about the pain associated with a tooth coming out.

"Do you think it'll hurt much, dad?" my daughter asked the other day.

"Oh, honey, don't worry. It won't hurt much. But, um, it is a part of your body that is ... well ... falling out, so it may sting for a minute, yeah."

Major body wiggle.

It's the role of the parent to sufficiently plant these seeds of fear in a child's head. And for some reason, parents feel it's necessary to tell our kids that if they can't get their tooth out, we can always do it for them with ...

a. a pair of pliers or,

b. by tying a string around the door knob and then around the tooth, and slamming the door.

Double major body wiggle.

It is also our duty as parents to ensure our kids that if push comes to shove, we can always force their tooth out. After all, pliers and doorknobs are how we got all 20 of our primary teeth out when we were kids.

You seldom see children become financial or political successes. And this again is the fault of loose teeth. Kids can't shake hands to seal a multi-million dollar acquisition or meet the electorate if they've got slobber on their fingers.

It takes, on average, maybe 4-8 weeks for a tooth to go from being securely fastened in the mouth to falling out and bleeding all over the bathroom counter or the kitchen table or the desk at school or the cat. For those 4-8 weeks, a child constantly has her hand in her mouth, wiggling and jiggling.

Loose teeth necessitate hands in mouths constantly, which also explains why soccer is now the sport of choice for kids. They can play and use their hands to wiggle at the same time.

The other thing we have to deal with during the loose-tooth years is the Tooth Fairy.

There are four great mysteries of childhood, and the Tooth Fairy ranks right near the top. He'll never

Passing the test: The right and wrong way to prep

OK, high-school students: I want you to stop piercing your noses for a moment and listen to me, because I'm going to talk to you about a topic that is more important to your future than anything else except flossing — your SATs.

Barry

It is very unfortunate that these tests cause some of you to experience great stress — or, as you say in your own teenage lingo, "make a cow." You believe that if you get a low SAT score, you're a dope, and you'll have to attend some third-rate college where the classrooms have wheels and the athletic teams have a nickname like "The Fighting Tarpaulins," and you'll wind up in some boring dead-end loser job such as rag picker or leech monger or Whitewater investigator.

This is incorrect, young people! A low SAT score does NOT automatically mean failure! Remember that Charles Lindbergh got only 240 on his verbal, and he went on to invent the phonograph. And if that's not inspirational enough, let me tell you a little story about a young man who took his first SAT and did very poorly. His parents were disappointed; his friends laughed at him; his dog went to the bathroom on his feet. But that young man did not give up. He signed up to take the SAT again, and he prepared by getting up every day at 3:30 a.m. to study, and when the time came to take the second SAT, he walked into that testing room and set an American record — which will probably never be broken — for falling asleep. Today he makes his living wearing ill-fitting pants and serving contaminated hamburger to the public.

The point, young people, is that there is a right way and a wrong way to prepare for your SATs, and unless you are even stupider than you look, you want to do it the right way. To help you, I would like to present the following list of "Common Questions and Answers About the SAT," which was prepared by the American Association of High School Educational Professionals Hiding Out in the Lounge.

Q. What is the SAT?

A. The term "SAT" is a set of initials, or "antonym," standing for "Scholastic Attitude Treaty Organization." This is a series of tests that predict your ability to perform in the college environment by measuring the degree to which you possess knowledge that nobody would ever in a million years actually need.

Q. What is the origin of the SAT?

A. The SAT was developed by the prestigious Educational Testing Service, which is located in Princeton, N.J., home of Harvard University. The original idea behind the SATs, as stated in the E.T.S.'s Official Historical Statement of Goals and Purposes, was "to sell a huge quantity of No. 2 pencils that we ordered by mistake." So the E.T.S. invented a standardized test wherein high-school students were required to fill in circles on an answer sheet. The first SATs had no questions: Your score was based entirely on how many circles you filled in, and you could get extra credit by writing on your desk. When colleges complained that too many students were getting high scores, the E.T.S. introduced questions, mostly on topics of interest to E.T.S. personnel, such as "Where can you get decent Chinese food in the Princeton, N.J., area?" Today, the questions are developed by a prestigious team of world-renowned academic experts, who get them from "Jeopardy."

Q. Does the SAT ever contain errors?

A. Yes. Just last year, for example, an alert Michigan youngster named Jeremy Winklehopper received national attention when he noticed that, contrary to what he had learned in physics class, the SAT defined "gravity" as "a type of snake."

Q. What happened when this was brought to the attention of the Educational Testing Service?

A. Everybody enjoyed a hearty laugh, and then Jeremy's score was changed to minus 46,000 points, thus assuring that no college would ever accept him. He is currently employed in the field of urinal maintenance.

Q. Was the SAT definition of "gravity" changed?

A. Yes. It is now defined as "a heavy type of snake."

Q. What should I do if I don't know the answer to a multiple-choice SAT question?

A. Experts suggest that you start by "weeding out" the answers that are obviously false. Some of the telltale signs to look for are:

The answer contains swear words.

The answer is followed by a little sarcastic note in parenthesis such as, "Oh, sure, THAT makes sense."

The answer contains the phrase "according to a White House spokesperson."

Q. I have heard that I can increase my SAT score by attaching a $20 bill to the answer sheet. Is this true?

A. "Absolutely not," stated an Educational Testing Service spokesperson who identified himself as Bob. "You're going to have to do way better than that, with the price of decent Chinese food being what it is in Princeton." Bob noted that the record for highest SAT score ever is still held by Donald Trump, who, while only in sixth grade, got 117 billion points.

Q. Can you give me the answers to this year's SAT test?

A. Well, I suppose if you sent me a large sum of cash money, I could. But that would be wrong, and I would never do such a thing, according to a White House spokesperson.

CHURCH: Size, magnitude of subjects creates many looks

(From 1B)

Scolozzi said.

The artist he commissioned is Arturo Moyers, a famous disciple of David Alfaro Siqueiros, one of "los tres grandes" (the three giants) in Mexican mural painting. Moyers' signature brush strokes can be found on 26 murals in Mexico and some of the latter works of Siqueiros, who in his old age trusted Moyers to finish many of his paintings.

Moyers left his art work in Mexico this past summer to come to St. Mary's, dedicating these early autumn months to depicting the images of the Holy Trinity — Father, Son and Holy Spirit — flanked by Mother Teresa and Lady Guadalupe, on a 40-by-70-foot outside wall of the church. When complete, it will be the only known religious mural on the outside of a church in the Catholic Diocese of Beaumont.

It is Scolozzi's hope that the mural will instill a spiritual identity to the fast-growing Hispanic community — perhaps not as grand as the Sistine Chapel in Rome, but one that will represent the church's milestone 50th anniversary in the year 2000.

"Here was nothing to see," Scolozzi said. "It will put Cleveland in the tourist anthologies."

The work-in-progress is entitled, "Atras en el porvenir acercandose al tercer milenio," or "Back to the Future Approaching the Third Milennium."

At the top of the church wall Moyers has painted God the Father above Jesus Christ in a symbolic vertical line representing the masculine side of Christianity. It is crossed by Mother Teresa, referred to as the Mother of the World and the church figure of the future, on the left, and the Virgin Mother of Guadalupe, the human roots of the church, on the right. Out of Mother Teresa's veil will march modern Church figures such as Pope John Paul II and Bishop Joseph A. Galante of Beaumont, in a procession carrying crosses.

The mural's uniqueness has prompted passersby to marvel at the impressive work, if but for the sheer magnitude of the figures and the forceful precision of his lines. With exact detail Moyers has captured the long slender fingers of Mother Teresa pressed against her lips in silent prayer, detailing every craggy line around her pensive eyes.

But there is a further mystery behind the painting. Moyers employed a visual technique unique to Siquieros' school of painting known as perspective polyangular. The enormous hands and piercing blue glaze of Jesus Christ are painted in such a way that they constantly face the viewer, regardless of the angle. The visual phenomena is further enhanced when seen while walking across the church grass and peering sideways as the image follows the viewer.

PATTERSON: Only Santa ranks higher on mystery scale than Tooth Fairy have enough pull to vault past The Man, but he's a valuable figure to a kid. In descending order of importance, the Four Mysteries of Childhood are:

1. Santa Claus. Comes down a chimney, eats cookies, drinks milk, leaves toys. Childhood mysteries don't get any better than this.

2. The Tooth Fairy. Always brings money, but usually only a couple of dollars. To a kid, a couple of bucks is not nearly as good as toys, but still there's that indescribable feeling of excitement that someone has come into your room when you are asleep, reached under your pillow and left you money.

3. The Easter Bunny. Brings chocolate, hides eggs, would be right at home in an "Alice the Wonderland" movie or a Pee Wee Herman show. The strangest of all childhood mysteries. Still weird to me as an adult.

4. The Boogey Man. Hides under your bed. Sort of like the Tooth Fairy. Never leaves anything. Just takes, takes, takes. Sort of scarey. Only Santa commands more respect and fear than the Boogey Man.

Just last week, one of our kids lost a tooth. She proceeded to write the following note to the Tooth Fairy:

"Dear Mr. Fairy,

"I have lost another tooth. I hope you can use it. If you can, will you please leave me $500 or $1,000. I would like $1,000, but $500 would be OK, too."

The next morning, she got up and found $5. She seemed disappointed. So Mr. Fairy wrote her back when he heard that he had let her down.

"I'm sorry I was only able to leave you $5. I would have left you a lot more," Mr. Fairy said, "but the Boogey Man took it."

TRUTH: Second lessons husbands learn involves flowers

(From 1B)

Apparently, husbands don't always carry this mission statement around in their wallets, just in case the urge to tell the truth becomes too great, and they must refer to it for guidance. Apparently, no one told them that, even when their wives are out of earshot, they should never let the words slip from their mouths that, yes, despite what's been said, their wives are getting rather wide in the backside.

Seems someone in my house needs to go back to school. I say my husband missed that particular lesson; his response would be, "That wasn't on the syllabus."

Even though I have given him permission to lie on occasion, it was still painful to learn that he has been, all these years, telling me exactly what I wanted to hear. And it took a 3-year-old playing with an answering machine to uncover the truth.

The flashing red light should have been a red flag signaling, "Danger Ahead. Brutal Honesty Around the Corner." I should have turned back.

Thinking I had an unusually long message saved on the machine, I pushed "Play" and sat down to listen. The truth had been saved when our daughter had pressed the "conversation" button while her daddy was talking on the phone to his best friend in Atlanta, whom we were preparing to visit for the weekend.

The two, I heard a few hours after the fact, were discussing the college football game we were flying home to see and were concerned that all of us would not be able to sit together. Here's the bulk of the conversation:

"We only have four seats together, right?" our best friend asked.

"Yep," came my husband's voice.

"But there's five of us going to the game."

"Yep."

"Do you think we can all fit?" the friend asked, obviously not convinced.

"Four seats together — we can all squeeze in."

"Are you sure? I mean, 'Craig' (I changed his name to protect his feelings) has a pretty big butt." (I know that some people find that last word offensive, and I considered changing it to a more acceptable one. I apologize, but that's the harsh truth.)

"Yep," Sam replied. (Listening to the tape again, I hear hesitation in his voice, like he knows where this conversation is going but has no power to alter its course.)

"My wife's butt" — the friend pauses, "and your wife's butt." Their gentle laughter bubbles to the surface, followed by the friend saying, "Sam, we're the fit and trim ones here."

"Yeah, Wes, we're the skinny ones compared to those people."

Their conversation detoured to more benign topics, like flight numbers and rental cars. But, quite frankly, I was too stunned to listen further. When Sam came home that night, I was waiting by the machine, like a cat hiding in a bush waiting to pounce on an unsuspecting mouse.

"So," I said, when he walked into the room, "I have a big butt, huh?"

"What?"

"You and Wes said I have a big butt!"

"I didn't say that," he said, his mind shifting in reverse as he scrambled to remember just what he had said.

"No? Would you like me to push 'play' now?"

In some courts of law, a tape-recorded conversation is not admissible. But in the court of marital law, these two husbands are guilty, caught telling a little white truth.

Listening to that message was like looking at myself in a three-way mirror, something I haven't forced myself to do in quite some time. It was a rude awakening.

But I'm not ready to erase the brutal truth just yet. Because the second lesson a husband learns quite early is that when he messes up big time, redemption in the form of flowers or jewelry should follow.

I prefer sapphires myself. Nothing big or gaudy, oh no.

Maybe something about the size of my rear end.

DODSON: Watching young people grow thrilling for Midland's most famous trainer vice and I enjoy working with the athletes. It's a hobby that I have enjoyed over the past several years and a lot of fun," Dodson said.

University of New Mexico Athletic Director David Binder once worked as a student trainer under Dodson.

"As a student trainer, James treated me with respect and courtesy," Binder said. "James Dodson influenced the athletic training field more than anyone I know because he truly respects the athletes. He is known all over the world as far as the athletic training field goes—he has influenced so many lives and made a difference.

"Midland should be very proud of his integrity and foresight," he added.

Sonia Mikeska, athletic trainer for Midland College, said Dodson is a role model to athletic trainers.

"He is an excellent teacher who teaches by example and hands-on learning. He has inspired me to be as involved as he is with the athletes," Ms. Mikeska said.

"He doesn't treat an athlete as just another ankle sprain or bad knee, he gets to know them as an individual, which puts the athlete at ease," she added.

In 1951, Dodson began as a trainer at Poly High School in Fort Worth. The Texas Christian University graduate made his mark in Midland eight years later when he took the athletic training job at Midland High School. For 31 years, he provided physical rehabilitation for the Bulldogs before joining the Southwest Orthopedic Center where he works in conjunction with Drs. Floyd, Powers and Smith.

"The biggest thrill I have is watching the young people grow up and become good citizens—knowing that I had a small part in their lives means a great deal to me," he said.

However, many athletes believe Dodson played more than "a small part," including Gary Brewster, former professional basketball player for the Buffalo Braves.

Brewster, also a former basketball player for Midland High School, said Dodson taught him a lesson both on and off the court.

Brewster is now athletic director and basketball coach for Trinity School and said Dodson taught him how to work through pain to continue playing the sport he loved. "I incorporate the lessons I learned from Doc when I teach my students," he said.

Dodson's inspiration and commitment to the athletes leave many Midlanders wondering what will happen after he retires. As far as retirement, Dodson said he has no plans of quitting what he loves to do.

DEAR ABBY

Fire-safety plan begins with knowing when to go

DEAR ABBY: Please allow me to give your readers some lifesaving advice about fire: Take it seriously. Every year the National Fire Protection Association chooses a special theme for Fire Prevention Week (Oct. 5-11 this year), to focus needed attention on the fire problem. For 1997, it's "Know when to go! React fast to fire." It's the basis for an educational campaign to get people thinking about fire BEFORE it happens.

We selected "Know when to go! React fast to fire" because it's vital that people understand that fire and smoke alarms must be taken seriously, wherever you may be. Please ask your readers to take these simple steps:

■ When in public buildings, such as restaurants, malls, etc., always locate the two exits nearest you. If you see blocked exits, or doors that are chained, report it immediately to someone in charge. (Call the fire department if it isn't promptly corrected.)

■ If you hear a fire alarm, react immediately. Don't wait to see what others do. In most cases, the safest action is to leave the building. Wait until the fire department gives you clearance before you go back inside.

■ When staying in hotels, always familiarize yourself with the escape plan posted on the door of your room. Locate the two exits nearest you and check the doors to make sure they're unlocked.

■ Set a good example for your children. In a calm and positive way, point out exits and talk about the safest response in the event of a fire. Have a home fire-escape plan and practice it twice a year. If the alarm does sound, stay calm — but leave quickly.

Obviously, there is a great deal more information on fire safety. However, these key points will go a long way toward preventing fire injuries and deaths. Thank you, Abby, for sharing them with your readers. With your help, we're working to reduce the fire loss problem in the United States and all over the world. — GEORGE D. MILLER, PRESIDENT, NATIONAL FIRE PROTECTION ASSOCIATION

DEAR MR. MILLER: I'm pleased to help you publicize a message as important as this one. Too often people underestimate the speed and growth of a fire. They think there's plenty of time to escape, but in a fire, time is the enemy. It's important to plan ahead for an emergency, to know when to go — and to act immediately. It can make the difference between life and death.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for eight years and have always had problems with my mother-in-law. I'll call her "Girdie."

Last week, Girdie came over to our house, uninvited, with all of her church friends, to parade through "her son's house" to show it off. Abby, she walked right past me after I opened the door and began her tour. She went into all of the bedrooms and bathrooms, and I felt like it wasn't even my home anymore.

Is there any way to gracefully hint that her actions are not appreciated without starting World War III? —FRUSTRATED IN CLOVIS, CALIF.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your mother-in-law appears to have the hide of a rhino. However, when personality types like hers are challenged, they often become extremely sensitive to criticism. Therefore, your husband should tell his mother that she placed you in an embarrassing situation with her unannounced visit and by bringing strangers into your home without first consulting you. He should also insist that she never do it again.

HEALTH BRIEFING

'Old wives' tell new tales

In nature, slightly more than half of all babies born are boys, an observation that has long been noted.

But in the British journal Nature, researchers observe that the boy-girl birth ratio can actually differ dramatically if a man marries a much younger woman, or a woman marries a much younger man.

The Liverpool-based researchers report that when a man marries a woman at least five years his junior, the couple's firstborn is twice as likely to be a son. When a woman marries a man at least five years her junior, the couple's first child is twice as likely to be a daughter.

The study, based on 301 families, found something of a trend in the opposite direction for second children, but it was not statistically significant.

The researchers could not explain why the gender ratios shift this way. Nor could they shed light on the findings of earlier British studies that the age gap between husbands and wives widens during wartime, bringing with it a bigger proportion of male births.

But they did suggest that the finding fits in with observations about social structures in the animal world and the marriage and child-bearing patterns of kings and presidents.

Among animals, they noted, having male offspring carries more status, while among humans, elite men are more likely to marry much younger women and have more sons than daughters.

Study raises hopes

An experimental antiviral drug appears able to speed recovery from the flu by 20 to 40 percent, reducing the course of the disease by one to three days, according to a study released recently. The drug, zanamivir, was effective in controlling symptoms of both influenza A and B among 262 patients in North America and the United Kingdom, researchers report in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Zanamivir, an inhaled powder made by Glaxo Wellcome, reduced average recovery from major symptoms by 20 percent, from five days to four.

But the biggest benefit went to people on either end of the diagnostic spectrum — those who were already feverish and those who were diagnosed early on — cutting their recovery time by 40 percent, from seven days to four.

The drug, which needs more tests of safety and effectiveness before the US Food and Drug Administration would approve it, is one of a growing number of antivirals being studied for flu treatment. Two drugs, effective only against influenza A, are already on the market; a drug similar to zanamivir is being developed by two other companies.

Each year, more than 200,000 Americans are hospitalized and more than 40,000 die of flu and pneumonia.

While antiviral drugs help ease symptoms, the sure way to prevent the flu is through a flu vaccine. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health recently announced that it plans to distribute 615,000 doses of flu vaccine at no charge to local boards of health during flu season, which begins next month.

Public health officials recommend flu shots for people 65 years and older, and those who have heart disease, lung disease or weakened immune systems.

Antidepressant helpful

For the small percentage of women who suffer severe premenstrual syndrome, an antidepressant called sertraline could help ease the symptoms, a new study finds.

The finding is in line with studies of other antidepressants and a severe form of PMS called premenstrual dysphoric disorder, afflicting an estimated 3 percent to 5 percent of menstruating women.

The study, supported by Pfizer, which makes sertraline, found that 62 percent of the women who took the antidepressant showed improvement. The report is in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Pills unnecessary?

HOUSTON (AP) — Resist the urge to give vitamin supplements to the little folks at your house who pick at their food.

Over-the-counter supplements can be toxic, and megadoses can be very bad news, says Dr. Kathleen Motil of the USDA's Children's Nutrition Center at Baylor College of Medicine.

"Too much iron can be fatal, and there are cases where excess vitamins A and D can damage the kidneys, heart and brain," she says.

Motil says vitamin supplements are unnecessary for any child who is healthy and eats a balanced diet. "Even the most finicky eater will get enough vitamins and minerals with a varied diet that includes meat, dairy products, grains, fruits and vegetables," she says.

Placebo sometimes is most effective medicine

By Bill Hendrick
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Dr. J. David Haddox recalls the day not long ago when a patient he knew very well came in with a headache so blinding that the Emory University anesthesiologist decided to treat the man with an intravenous solution.

Salt water.

No medicine. Just plain, saline solution — the stuff of tears and sweat.

And it worked. The man's headache went away, almost miraculously.

Why? The placebo effect, answers Haddox. The man thought pain-killing medications were dripping into his body through his IV, and his mind made the pain in his head go away.

Haddox stresses this isn't standard treatment. He knew the man, figured his pain was caused by stress and decided the saline had less of a chance of inducing adverse effects than real medication, which he had on standby. But the case highlights the awesome and still inexplicable power that positive thinking can have in healing, he says.

"We only know it's very powerful," says Haddox, a dentist, anesthesiologist and president-elect of the American Academy of Pain Medicine. "We don't know what the mechanism is. That's the big question in research."

Sometimes, he says, patients respond positively if they trust their doctors, or even if their physicians offer a few comforting words. An article this month in the Journal of the American Medical Association underscored the power of positive thinking, presenting evidence that "religious involvement" can make people feel physically, as well as mentally, better. It may be, says researcher Dr. David Larson of the National Institute of Healthcare Research, that religion does the same thing as Haddox's saline: It gives one's mind control over the body.

This kind of research may help doctors find new ways to help patients, and new ways to help patients help themselves.

Doctors should help their patients develop positive attitudes by finding hobbies or exercising to take their minds off problems, mind-body experts say. They may also want to consider medication, instead of tranquilizers, and recognize that laughter is indeed good medicine for the blues that often accompany serious illnesses.

Larson, who has been conducting research for years on what he says is a powerful link between religion and good health, believes such things may strengthen the body's disease-fighting abilities.

Dr. Ray Dingledine, an Emory pharmacologist, says body chemicals similar to morphine, called endorphins, are released into the bloodstreams of people who think they're being helped — whether by medications, comforting words or meditation.

"It's not quite clear what triggers the release," he says "Certain physicians have an ability to impart that sense of well-being in their patients, and that's probably the basis of the placebo effect. It can be quite strong. We know in dentistry it can be equivalent to a mild dose of codeine, so it's not a trivial thing."

Doctors are apparently getting the message.

A Harvard Medical School survey last year found that 99 percent of physicians believe what people think can help in healing. They singled out religious faith as a belief powerful enough to alter the body's chemistry.

Another study last year by researches at Queen's University in Ontario found that flour pills used as placebos in a study of a drug for enlarged prostates were so effective that some men wanted to keep taking them after the two year test was over.

Does the mind really have the power to overrule or at least alter biological rules?

The answer seems to be yes, says Larson.

"The mind is the biggest placebo," he says. "It does have a powerful physiological force. It reduces stress — the '911' events. And that's got to help."

Yoga master Frank White, 77, works out at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. White, who took up yoga when he was 67 years old, credits yoga for getting rid of his flab and keeping him healthy.

Septuagenarian hooked on yoga

Formerly fat 77-year-old now is considered yoga master

By Martin Miller

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At 77, Frank White is the picture of health. A rather offbeat one, too.

With a completely shaved head, the fitful vegetarian stands an even 5-foot-8, 145 pounds. He can boast of an enviable cholesterol count, low blood pressure, and a near religious workout schedule — everyday, up to two hours at a time.

Except for the Midwestern accent and his earring, the bespectacled former actor is like Ben Kingsley playing Gandhi.

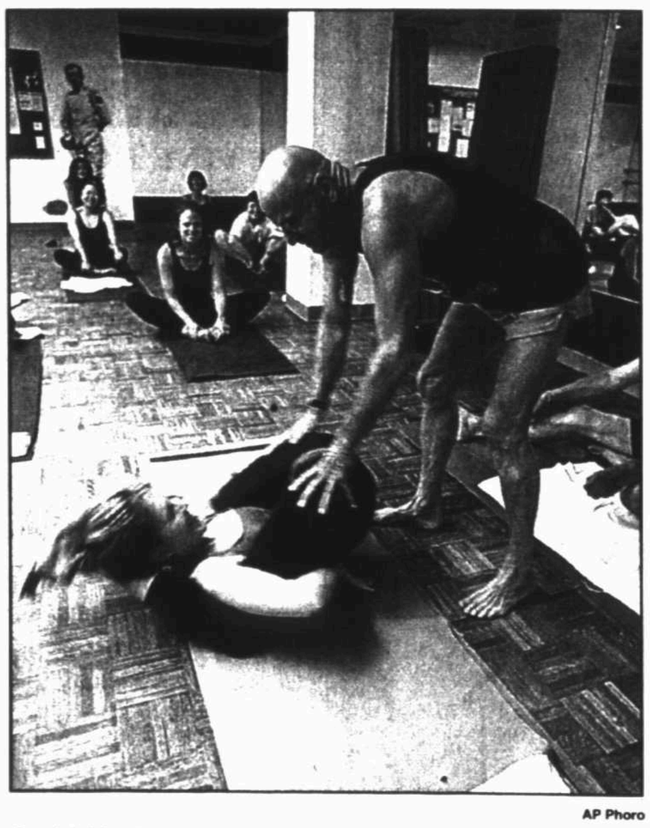
But just nine years ago, White looked more like the picture of near hell. He was 50 pounds overweight, drank a quart of booze, and smoked four packs of cigarettes a day. All of which did little to improve his heart condition or osteoarthritis.

"I was headed for the cemetery," White said.

Then came yoga, along with Alcoholics Anonymous. Within six months after enrolling in his first yoga class, he began teaching it. Today, he is considered one of the best yoga instructors in Los Angeles.

"AA gave me my life," he said. "But yoga gave me a new life to lead."

With the zeal of a converted sinner, White leads as many as 15 yoga classes a week throughout the Los Angeles area. His aerobic yoga classes, which run 90 minutes, provoke the kind of sweating seen during NBA games. But the action and dialogue is slightly different than what you might hear at court side.



AP Phoro

When he is not performing the precise yoga movements himself, White patrols his students — straightening a leg here, readjusting an arm position there. He also peppers his class with impromptu pointers on lungs, hips and spleens.

"You'll feel loose as a goose when you leave tonight," promises White — whose screen and television credits include "Rosemary's Baby," "Hill Street Blues" and "St. Elsewhere."

His students swear by him. After one class as she toweled off the sweat, one student volunteered: "Frank is the best."

Said another: "I've lost 18 pounds in Frank's class."

Before enrolling in White's class seven years ago, yoga student Carole Scurlock of Pasadena said she had lower back pain. According to Scurlock, yoga and White erased the problem.

"He's an inspiration," said the 54-year-old graphic artist. "He's so defiant of his age. I'm aware of the transformation he's made and continues to make. I admire how he presses on and helps others."

White also volunteers as a yoga instructor to people with AIDS, multiple sclerosis and cancer.

"Of course, it doesn't cure the diseases," White said. "But it makes the patients more comfortable. Yoga promotes healing and it does take away some of the pain."

Though gaining in popularity, yoga still doesn't attract the number of enthusiasts it should, White said. He blames bad stereotypes.

"People think yoga is sitting in the lotus position, burning incense in your navel, and chanting ohms. Most people have no idea of the physicality of yoga. It's the most complete workout for the body on the planet. And contrary to what people believe, it's very aerobic."

Study: Transplant medicine may help eczema

Associated Press

BOSTON — An ointment version of a widely used drug for transplant patients appears to be effective against eczema.

Researchers say the medicine, a form of the drug known as tacrolimus or FK506, may offer an alternative to corticosteroid creams.

In a study in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, doctors from Heinrich Heine University in Dusseldorf, Germany, found that three weeks of treatment made skin rashes disappear in about three-quarters of patients.

They cautioned that more study will be needed to test the medicine for longer periods on larger patches of skin.

The study was conducted on 213 people with eczema, also called atopic dermatitis, at 16 European hospitals. The experimental medicine is made by the pharmaceutical company Fujisawa, which paid for the study.

The researchers reported that the only apparent side effect of the ointment was a burning sensation.

While often effective, corticosteroid creams can make the skin deteriorate. This can be a problem in areas where the skin is thin, such as the face and neck. Tacrolimus appears to avoid this drawback.

The drug is ordinarily used to help prevent rejection of transplanted organs.

Some stores specialize in aching backs

By Jennifer Steinhauer
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — New Yorkers have an amazing knack of creating their own problems, then setting up cottage industries to solve them.

They purposefully live in a place 20 miles from any true food source and have farm-picked vegetables delivered monthly to their apartments. They park their cars in the cheapest garage they can find, then have to take a cab to them. They choose to sit for 12 hours a day craning their necks at a computer screen, then get an expensive massage to feel better.

Now, stores that have been sprouting up all over the nation to cater to those with back, neck and shoulder pain have made their way to New York, following on the heels of the 10-minute massage industry pioneered by the Great American Backrub chain.

In the last few months, two new stores, JoAnne's Bed and Back Shop and Relax the Back Shop, have opened in Manhattan, the first of several stores each company is hoping to open in the region.

The theory is simple. People who spend all day staring at computers, perhaps following up with a gym workout, are time bombs — minutes from a strained lumbar region, a throbbing trapezius and a neck with a permanent crick.

"A lot of the injuries and problems we see in New York are related to posture and to people sitting for a longer period of time," said Susan Bergholtz, a licensed physical therapist in Manhattan. "With typewriters, people used to get up and walk around. Now, people get up and go to work and go home three days later."

Health-care business analysts estimate that Americans spend $2.5 billion a year trying to correct back problems, and over roughly the last year about a dozen back-care chains have opened around the nation. Baby boomers are the driving inspiration behind almost all new retail concepts, because they make up the largest part of the national pocketbook.

It was the aches and pains of that demographic group that led Mark Levin, 49, a private investor, to put together $1.5 million to finance JoAnne's Bed and Back, which recently opened on Lexington Avenue near 62nd Street.

JoAnne's sells everything from travel pillows designed to support the head during an airplane trip to a $3,000 shiatsu massage lounger chair. There are office chairs, home recliners and special beds that recline electronically.

"So many of our friends have minor back problems," Levin said. "And they can be solved with the correct bed or chair." JoAnne's had $4.3 million in sales in 1996, up from $3.8 million in 1995.

Relax the Back Shop sells 500 different products, both those that treat pain, like hot and cold packs, and those that prevent it, like chairs.

"The idea here is that to correct the position of your spine, you need products at home and work and for sleep and travel that can help you do that," said Dairl Johnson, the chief executive of Relax the Back Shop. "You can't say, 'I sat in my office chair all day and now I can sit in an unsupportive slouchy couch at home.'"

Retail experts are somewhat skeptical about the potential for a large market of shoppers in these stores. "My question is whether they will be able to sustain themselves over the long haul," said Kurt Barnard, a retail consultant in Scotch Plains, N.J. "Yes, there are lots of people who need ergonomic chairs, but they are not very decorative, and only those who really need them and were told to buy them will be repeat customers," Barnard said.

"I think we may be dealing with too much of a specialty here."

TEMPE, Ariz. — Former Odessa Permian quarterback Stoney Case played and scored for Arizona Sunday in the Cardinals' 24-13 loss to the New York Giants.

Case, a third-year player, got his first extended NFL action after starting quarterback Kent Graham left with a sprained ankle. Case was knocked out and was 18-of-33 for 222 yards and two interceptions.

The former standout at Permian high school and the University of New Mexico scored on a 1-yard sneak with 53 seconds left.

Murray's record

MINNEAPOLIS — Nine years, seven teams, 237 touchdowns. That's how long it has been since Eddie Murray missed an extra point.

That's an NFL record, which Murray set Sunday with three conversions, breaking Tommy Davis' 32-year-old mark of 234 in a row.

Signed by the Minnesota Vikings three weeks ago after sitting out all of 1996, Murray broke Davis' record after Cris Carter's 6-yard touchdown catch with 10:34 left in the second quarter as the Vikings took a 7-0 lead over the Carolina Panthers.

Minnesota went on to win 21-14.

After his first conversion, Murray got a loud ovation from the fans, who surely appreciated his game-winning field goal at Arizona the previous week as much as his place in history.

"I was pretty emotional about it, and then the acknowledgement from the fans was extremely gracious of them," Murray said. "I've only been here three weeks, and they seem to have put their arms around me like I've been here for 12 years."

Prime time show: Cowboys vs. Redskins

By Joseph White
AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. — Just like old times. Redskins vs. Cowboys. Monday night football. First place in the NFC East on the line.

It could have been even more, one of the headliners of the year: 4-1 vs. 4-1.

That was before telltale cracks turned into fissures for both teams in difficult losses last week. Now Washington and Dallas are 3-2 and face potential long-term problems as they resume one of the NFL's biggest rivalries at new Jack Kent Cooke Stadium.

"This is kind of a desperation game for both of us," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "Both of us need this one."

Perhaps trying to ignite a spark or two, both coaches spent the week taking shots at their own players. Switzer said three of the team's offensive stars — running back Emmitt Smith, left tackle Mark Tuinei and left guard Nate Newton — were slowing appreciably with age. Redskins coach Norv Turner took a subtle dig at any player who would use the team's rash of injuries as an excuse.

■ Records: Dallas is 3-2. Washington is 3-2.
■ Television: ABC. Radio: KODM (97.9 FM), KCRS (AM 550).

"When you're out there, nobody cares what the circumstance is," Turner said. "That's got to be the mindset. We get to put 11 guys out there, and every one of those 11 has to carry the load."

Such goading made for introspective moods in both locker rooms.

"It's a nationwide game," Redskins guard Joe Patton said. "In order for you not to look embarrassed, in order for you to get recognition, in order for you to get some kind of regrouping, you've got to go out and play a heck of a game against the Dallas Cowboys. We know we squandered a chance, and you can't squander too many chances."

Cowboys fullback Daryl Johnston knows Dallas must make a good account of itself.

"If we don't, we could find ourselves in the same shape as last year, out of the race for the home-field advantage," he said.

Both offenses are sputtering in the red zone. The Cowboys outgained the New York Giants more than 2-to-1 last week and still lost 20-17. Smith has yet to score a touchdown this year, and quarterback Troy Aikman has

Marlins 'Livan' right, take 3-2 lead to Atlanta

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

MIAMI — Maybe it was meant to be for Livan Hernandez and the Florida Marlins all along.

Marlins 2
Braves 1

How else to explain what happened in the NL championship series?

Hernandez pitched one of the great games in postseason history, striking out an NLCS record 15 and allowing just three hits as the Marlins beat Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves 2-1 Sunday for a 3-2 lead.

Starting only because of Alex Fernandez's torn rotator cuff and Kevin Brown's viral infection, Hernandez added the latest twists to a series full of odd turns. The 22-year-old rookie from Cuba took advantage of plate umpire Eric Gregg's wide strike zone, as did Maddux.

"I'd like to say I expected this," Marlins manager Jim Leyland said. "But I don't think there's a person in this room, in the stands or in the world that expected this."

Jeff Conine, the lone player left from Florida's first game in 1993, hit a go-ahead single in the seventh inning that moved the 5-season-old Marlins within one win of becoming the fastest team to reach the World Series.

The victory touched off a big celebration in the middle of the diamond. Marlins players rushed from the bench, bullpen and all over the field to congratulate Hernandez while team mascot Billy the Marlin waved a banner from atop the mound.

The loss, meanwhile, left the Braves in familiar territory. Atlanta rallied to win the final three games of the 1996 NLCS, including the last two at home, to overtake St. Louis in seven games.

Leyland is well aware of Atlanta's playoff comebacks. The Braves overcame a 3-2 deficit to beat Leyland's Pittsburgh team in the 1991 NLCS, and beat Leyland's Pirates in Game 7 of the 1992 NLCS.

Game 6 will be Tuesday night at Turner Field. Tom Glavine, the winner in Game 2, will oppose Brown, the Game 1 winner.

In his first start since Sept. 27, Hernandez retired 17 of the last 18 batters, throwing a called third strike past Fred McGriff to end the game. He won for the second time in three days, having pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings in Game 3.

"The kid did not make any mistakes," Braves manager Bobby Cox

Indians capture wild win over Orioles

By Ken Berger
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — With more hocus pocus at home plate and another game-winning hit from Sandy Alomar, the amazing Cleveland Indians are one win away from the World Series.

Indians ...8
Orioles ...7

First, Alomar scored from second on a two-run wild pitch in the fifth inning, a bizarre play that rivaled the wacky 12th inning of Game 3. Then, after the Indians blew a two-run lead, Alomar hit the winning single off Armando Benitez in the ninth Sunday night to give Cleveland an 8-7 victory over the stunned Baltimore Orioles.

"We expect to play Game 7 every day we come to the ballpark," Alomar said. "We don't take anything for granted no matter who we're playing. We play like there is no tomorrow."

Cleveland seized a 3-1 lead in the AL championship series as the frazzled Jacobs Field crowd cheered nonstop for several minutes after Alomar's hit landed in the left-center field gap. Baltimore, with an AL-best 98 wins during the regular season, faces elimination in Game 5 on Monday and will try to become only the ninth major league team to overcome a 3-1 deficit in a postseason series.

"Somebody's messing with fate, the way I look at it," Orioles manager Davey Johnson said.

Home plate, the pristine dish that symbolizes baseball's endearing simplicity, has become the focal point for a messy, thrilling, nerve-wracking series.

Alomar — who squats behind it as the Indians' catcher — was right in the middle of the mayhem. The star of the division series with a Game 4 homer that staved off elimination, he hit a two-run homer in the second and an RBI single in the fifth that led to the strange parade of runners on Arthur Rhodes' wild pitch.

Then, in another of Cleveland's dramatic moments, he got the winning hit in the ninth after a walk to Matt Williams with first base open.

The Indians scored two runs on a wild pitch with two outs in the fifth to take a 7-5 lead and complete a comeback from a three-run deficit.

Baltimore pulled within one in the seventh and Jose Mesa blew the lead in the ninth. He allowed the first two runners to reach on a walk and a single, and Rafael Palmeiro hit an RBI single off the reliever's glove.

No more lead?

No problem.

Alomar and his magic wand were coming up in the bottom of the inning.

Manny Ramirez led off the ninth with a walk — the first runner in three-plus innings against reliever Alan Mills. Lefty Jesse Orosco came on and almost picked off Ramirez at first, which would have been a replay of the ninth in Game 3.

Kevin Seitzer, batting above .400 as a pinch-hitter in his career, hit for Jim Thome and sacrificed Ramirez to second.

After Williams walked on a 3-2 pitch with two outs, Alomar came to the rescue.

Alomar won MVP honors with a decisive two-run homer in the All-Star game, and drove in the winning run with a ninth-inning single as the Indians clinched their third straight AL Central title by beating the Yankees.

The came the Game 4 homer against New York.

And now this.

The key to the night may have been the bizarre in the fifth.

Rhodes relieved Scott Erickson with two outs and walked Brian Giles, loading the bases. Rhodes then

Some 24 cars were involved in an incident on the backstretch of the Talladega Superspeedway on Sunday in Talladega, Ala., during the DieHard 500. Jeff Gordon's left rear tire shredded, starting the melee.

Crash punctuates Labonte's win

By Mike Harris

TALLADEGA, Ala. — This was definitely not the way that Jeff Gordon wants to be the center of attention at a Winston Cup event.

The series points leader, hoping to close in on his second Winston Cup title, was instead the catalyst for a wild 21-car accident that allowed pursuers Mark Martin and Dale Jarrett to close in and helped teammate Terry Labonte win his first race in more than a year.

Labonte passed leader Kenny Schrader and second-place John Andretti two laps from the end and went on to beat younger brother Bobby Labonte by less than two car-lengths in Sunday's DieHard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway.

The defending Winston Cup champion, who had fallen to sixth in the season points with a second-half slump, earned his 19th career victory and his first since the race at Charlotte on Oct. 6, 1996.

"At a track like this, you just have to be patient," Labonte said. "We figured something eventually would happen."

It did, when Gordon's left rear tire shredded on lap 140 of the 188-lap race.

■ Die Hard 500

Labonte was actually leading the see-saw race when the accident began behind him.

"I just saw the start of it in the mirror," he said. "I don't know what happened. I just saw they tore up a bunch of cars when I went by."

What happened was that Gordon's left rear tire shredded, igniting the melee.

Gordon, Martin and Jarrett were all were part of the accident and all three were running at the end with badly damaged cars, but Martin and Jarrett each gained valuable ground on Gordon.

Martin gained 15 points and now trails by 110,

Jags' Stewart breaks through with five TDs

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — James Stewart had been lost in the shadow of Natrone Means in Jacksonville's meager running game. On Sunday, he found himself in the company of players like Jim Brown and Jerry Rice.

Stewart became only the fourth player in NFL history to rush for five touchdowns in a game, leading the Jaguars to a 38-21 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"My dad is from Cleveland so I grew up hearing about Jim Brown," said Stewart, who ran 15 times for 102 yards, only the second 100-yard game of his pro career. "I can't be mentioned with those guys. They're all great running backs. My career is young."

Stewart, who got the bulk of the load when Means sprained his left ankle in the first quarter, ran for 102 yards on 15 carries, only the second 100-yard game of his three-year career.

He scored on runs of 7, 8, 2, 1 and 1 yards, and became the first player to rush for five TDs since Buffalo's Cookie Gilchrist on Dec. 8, 1963, against the New York Jets.

Ernie Nevers and Jim Brown are the only other players who have at least five rushing touchdowns in a game. Nevers holds the record with six.

The last player to score five touchdowns in a game was 49ers receiver Jerry Rice on Oct. 14, 1990 against Atlanta.

That kind of performance was expected out of the Eagles (2-4), who ran 50 times for 203 yards last week in a win over the Washington Redskins and were fifth in the league in rushing.

But the Jaguars defense stuffed the Eagles early, and the offense did its part by taking a 21-0 lead after the first quarter. Two of them came after long drives, the third after a blocked punt.

All of them ended with Stewart in the end zone. The Jaguars improve to 5-1 for the season.

Lions 27, Buccaneers 9

TAMPA, Fla. — Barry Sanders ran for 215 and scored three touchdowns as Detroit ended Tampa Bay's eight-game home winning streak.

Sanders, a three-time NFL rushing champion, scored on runs of 80 and 82 yards and caught a 7-yard TD pass from Scott Mitchell. Sanders, who was held to 20 yards in a loss to the Bucs earlier this season, moved ahead of Jim Brown into fourth place on the league's career rushing list.

Patriots 33, Bills 6

Foxboro, Mass. — Drew Bledsoe threw two touchdown passes and Curtis Martin ran for 99 yards for as New England maintained its hold on the AFC East lead.

The Patriots intercepted four passes from Buffalo backups Billy Joe Hobert and Alex Van Pelt, who replaced the Todd Collins, who left with a bruised left shoulder on the second possession for Buffalo (3-3).

"I was too excited," said Hobert, who hadn't thrown a pass this season before Sunday. "I didn't want to go into the game in those circumstances, and then it got worse."

Falcons 23, Saints 17

NEW ORLEANS — Chuck Smith had five sacks and Morten Andersen booted three field goals to lead Atlanta to its first win under coach Dan Reeves.

Atlanta (1-5) set a team record with 10 sacks.

Andersen, a former Saint, hasn't missed a field goal in the Superdome against New Orleans (2-5) in eight tries. On Sunday, he connected from 25, 32 and 55 yards.

Dolphins 31, Jets 20

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Dan Marino threw for 372 yards and two touchdowns to snap New York's three-game winning streak.

Marino hit 27 of 38 passes for his most yardage against the Jets since 1989. He has thrown for more yards and TD passes against New York than any other opponent.

Miami (4-2) had five sacks of Neil O'Donnell and shut out the Jets (4-3) in the second half until 1:03 remained.

Oilers 30, Bengals 7

Memphis, Tenn. — Steve McNair threw for 199 yards and three touchdowns as Tennessee broke its four-game losing streak by beating Cincinnati (1-5) before 17,071 fans in the Liberty Bowl.

The Oilers (2-4), who came in with the NFL's worst pass defense, sacked Jeff Blake six times. He threw for only 130 yards with just one complete pass in the second half before being replaced by Boomer Esiason.

49ers 30, Rams 10

SAN FRANCSICO — Steve Young threw three touchdown passes and San Francisco forced three fumbles and blocked a punt in winning its fifth straight game.

The 49ers (5-1) scored 20 points off the miscues en route to their 15th consecutive win against the visiting Rams (2-4), who haven't beaten San Francisco since 1990.

Young, who was 19-of-30 for 223 yards, completed his first 10 throws, including touchdown passes of 5 yards to Terrell Owens and 10 yards to Greg Clark. His 11th attempt was intercepted by Ryan McNeil and returned 75 yards for a touchdown, the only time the Rams found the end zone.

Vikings 21, Panthers 14

MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Johnson threw two TD passes — one to himself — as Minnesota (5-2) gained a share of the NFC Central lead.

Johnson's pass and catch came at the end of a 17-play, 91-yard drive. His throw was batted down by Greg Kragen, but it bounced right back to Johnson, who dodged Michael Barrow in the backfield and scrambled 3 yards for the score.

The Panthers (2-4), who benched Kerry Collins after committing nine turnovers in the last two games, lost their third consecutive game.

Giants 27, Cardinals 13

TEMPE, Ariz — Danny Kanell got a big assist from Tyrone Wheatley, who ran for 103 yards and scored a touchdown for New York.

The last time a Giants runner had 100 yards was Dec. 17, 1995, when Rodney Hampton ran for 187 against Dallas.

Kanell, starting his first game in place of the injured Dave Brown, finished 13-of-28 for 198 yards and a touchdown, and the Giants (4-3) romped to their third straight win under Jim Fassel, who was offensive coordinator last year for Arizona (1-5).

Steelers 24, Colts 22

PITTSBURGH — Mike Tomczak, who replaced injured Kordell Stewart near the end of the first half, hit Courtney Hawkins on a 28-yard scoring pass as Pittsburgh (4-2) withstood six turnovers to beat winless Indianapolis.

The Colts (0-6) blew a 10-0 lead, then nearly pulled off a comeback of their own as Jim Harbaugh threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Brian Stablein with 3:35 remaining.

But Chris Oldham batted away the potential tying 2-point conversion pass to Stablein and Cary Blanchard, who had made 13 consecutive field-goal attempts, badly pulled a potential game-winning 42-yard attempt wide left with 2:44 remaining.

Favorite Packers just get by 0-7 Bears

By Mike Nadel
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — The Green Bay Packers don't care that they were 11 1/2-point favorites over the winless Chicago Bears.

And it didn't matter to the defending Super Bowl champions that they needed Chicago's unsuccessful 2-point conversion with 1:54 to go to hang on for a 24-23 victory Sunday.

"Everyone expects the defending champs to blow everyone out every week. Well, that's not going to happen," Packers receiver Antonio Freeman said. "We're satisfied where we are."

Brett Favre survived an early interception to throw three touchdown passes and help the Packers (5-2) pull into a tie with Tampa Bay atop the NFC Central.

"I told the guys the same thing I have told them all season — enjoy the win," said coach Mike Holmgren, whose Packers haven't beaten the point spread in 1997. "I don't think we have played our best football this season ... but it is a wonderful win. We are very, very happy."

The Bears (0-7), meanwhile, matched the worst start in their 78-year history and were defeated by their oldest rivals for the eighth straight time. Chicago also lost its first seven games in 1969, when it finished 1-13.

Still, Bears running back Raymont Harris was encouraged by his team's performance.

"I'm really excited because I've seen something in my team that I haven't seen in the previous six weeks," said Harris, who rushed for 101 yards.

Asked if the loss was nothing more than a moral victory, he smiled and said: "If that's what it sounds like, I'm feeling it."

The Bears pulled within a point on Erik Kramer's 22-yard touchdown pass to Chris Penn. Rather than go for an extra-point kick, Chicago coach Dave Wannstedt went for the lead. But Kramer's short pass sailed over Harris, who was covered on the play.

Everyone in Chicago's locker room, especially Wannstedt, defended the call.

"It was a no-brainer," Wannstedt said. "We told the team when we got the ball, 'If we go down and score, we're going for the win.' It was a play that our entire team was comfortable with."

The Packers expected the decision.

"When you're 0-6, you have to go for it," Freeman said. "That's the game right there — no time outs, no wins, nothing to lose. Go for it."

Of course, if the Bears had taken the lead, Favre might have marched the Packers right down the field. Even though he struggled, getting intercepted on his second pass and nearly getting picked off four other times, he's still the NFL's two-time MVP.

"Well, it was a winning performance, so I'll take it," said Favre, who was 19-of-35 for 177 yards. "It's a good time for a bye week. We need to sit back and tell ourselves that we're back in this thing."

ALCS: Game features play at plate

(From 1C)

bounced a 2-2 pitch to Marquis Grissom, allowing Justice — Grissom's teammate in Atlanta — to sprint home with the go-ahead run.

Webster, at the center of the controversial game-ending play Saturday, chased after the ball this time and flipped to Rhodes, who was upended by a hard-sliding Justice. The ball got away, allowing Alomar to race home all the way from second, giving the Indians a 7-5 lead.

It was eerily similar to a play in Game 6 of the 1995 ALCS, when Kenny Lofton scored from second on Randy Johnson's wild pitch. Cleveland beat the Mariners to advance to their first World Series in 41 years.

Now, the Indians are one victory away from their second.

Jacobs Field experienced yet another emotional meltdown. So did the Orioles, who thought Justice interfered with Rhodes and Webster.

After sliding into Rhodes, Justice and the pitcher got tangled up at the plate. Rhodes angrily pushed Justice aside and ran after the ball. As Rhodes threw to third baseman Cal Ripken, who was covering home, Justice was all over Webster and appeared to be ducking to avoid the throw.

"I've seen some strange things, but I've never seen two guys score on a wild pitch before," Johnson said. "I felt like somebody had a hold of Rhodes, tackled Rhodes."

been getting hit more than usual.

"The ways things have been talked about around here, we can't run the ball at all," said Smith, who is 13th in the league in rushing after undergoing ankle and foot surgery earlier this year.

The Redskins couldn't run it either in a 24-10 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles, with Terry Allen netting just 30 yards. Quarterback Gus Frerotte took a pounding behind a line that has undergone yet another injury-induced shuffle.

Both teams have great cornerbacks, yet they are offset by defensive lines thinned by injuries and an off-the-field absence — the Cowboys' Leon Lett is serving a drug suspension, while the Redskins' Sean Gilbert is holding out.

The Cowboys will give rookie Antonio Anderson his first start after tackle Chad Hennings was lost for up to eight weeks with a groin injury, while the Redskins' rotation could include as many as three inexperienced players who were cut less than two months ago.

"Their front seven guys, there's some things that we feel like we might be able to do," Smith said. "Right now, if you watch me run, I'm falling forward as opposed to falling backward all the time last year."

The Cowboys took another blow late in the week when strong safety Darren Woodson hyperextended his right knee. Rookie Omar Stoutmire will start instead.

The Cowboys-Redskins rivalry, getting its first Monday night exposure in four years, lost some of its nationwide appeal during the 1990s as the teams struggled at various points.

Many on the Cowboys now see it as just another game. Not the Redskins. They've had this one circled in red since the schedule came out in the spring.

"It's still a great headliner," Redskins tackle Shar Pourdanesh said. "You got two division leaders that are tied for the lead going at it. You can't beat it. That we both lost last week should make it even more interesting because we're more hungry now."

MC golfers win at Andrews, take second straight crown

Staff Report

ANDREWS — It now looks as if being tied with Western Texas College after one round brings out the best in the Midland College golf team.

Just like in last week's Odessa College Invitational, the Chaps were knotted with Western Texas after the first round, with both schools sporting a first-round total of 278 at the Andrews County College Invitational. And just like five days earlier, MC rose to the occasion Sunday, shooting a 283 in the wet and windy conditions at the Andrews Country Club to defeat WTC by nine shots and win its second tournament of the week.

For the second straight tournament, both Midland College and Western Texas simply outclassed the rest of the field. The Chaps finished the two-day tournament with a total of 561, a new two-round record for the tournament. The 570 of WTC was well ahead of third-place finisher New Mexico Junior College, which tallied a 586 total.

"I'm proud of this team," MC golf coach Delnor Poss said. "To win and set records shows the team is playing exceptionally."

Western Texas claimed the top two individual medalist spots with Andreas Lundgren shooting a 138 and Jonas Wahlstedt carding a 139. The final four spots on the all-tournament team, though, were filled out by the Chaps.

MC's Charlie Prince (69-71) and Kenneth Ferrie (71-69) finished tied for third at 140, the second straight tournament both finished in the top three. Coming in fifth was Nathan Goulding at 66-76 — 142 while Ryan Hogue was sixth at 72-72 — 144.

Final results from the Andrews County College Invitational completed Sunday at the Andrews Country Club:

Singh denies Els fourth straight World Match Play championship

Associated Press

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Ernie Els couldn't gauge his distance, and it cost him a chance to win his fourth straight World Match Play title Sunday.

Vijay Singh beat him 1-up, ending Els' 11-match unbeaten streak in the tournament.

Neither Singh nor Els could get the measure of the wet fairways and spongy greens, soaked by all-day rain Saturday and half-dried by gusty winds Sunday.

In the 18-hole third-place match, Brad Faxon defeated Nick Price of Zimbabwe 5 and 4.

Singh, taking advantage as Els struggled to find his rhythm over the first 18, was up by three holes after a 2-under 70 as Els shot 73 on the West Course at Wentworth.

Els cut slowly into Singh's lead and squared the match for the second and final time at the par-5 30th hole with a 4-foot birdie putt.

The par-4 33rd turned out to be the decisive hole. Els hit his second shot into a greenside bunker. His wedge out of the sand landed 7 feet away and he missed the par putt.

Duval wins playoff for first career PGA Tour victory

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — David Duval, a seven-time runner-up on the PGA Tour, made a 10-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a three-man playoff Sunday and won the Michelob Championship, his first career victory.

Duval's putt, after Duffy Waldorf took a 5 and Grant Waite left a long birdie try about 18 inches short on the par-4 18th, was worth $279,000.

All three finished with 13-under-par 271 totals on the 6,797-yard River Course at Kingsmill Golf Club. Duval and Waite after final-round 67s, Waldorf after a 70.

Eichelberger wins tourney

NAPA, Calif. — Dave Eichelberger birdied the final two holes Sunday to cap a final-round 2-under-par 70 and win the $800,000 Transamerica seniors tournament by four strokes over a group of four.

Eichelberger's victory, his first of the year and third as a senior, was worth $120,000 and increased his earnings in his best season as a senior to $728,922.

Eichelberger started the final round at 6,632-yard Silverado Country Club course with a one-stroke lead.

MONDAY, OCT. 13, 1997

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Mull over a decision, and get key feedback. An associate will give you an earful. Listen to what he says, but know that, ultimately, it is your call. You gather information from usual sources. Watch your temper; in frustration, you could speak words you never intended. Tonight: Go to bed early.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Though initially bothered by another's temper, you get to the root of the problem. Your insight permits you to see the long-term effects of this argument. You can get the results you want, and have others back you. Seek success. Tonight: Plan a Monday night get-together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ An early-morning squabble could gather steam if you are not careful. Realize what the implications will be. Listen to a boss who has a lot of ideas that could serve you. Handle responsibilities, clear your desk and push a project. Tonight: You can handle it all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You had stirring dreams or didn't sleep well last night. It could affect your attitude without your realizing it. Your emotions are easily triggered; the challenge is to pull away and gain perspective. Make calls, seek out another's expertise, willingly learn. Tonight: Let your mind explore!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ A major brouhaha erupts. You have your hands full early in the day. Have a discussion with a close associate. You can be sure that money is involved. Do not confuse your priorities. Tonight: Cheerfully reason with the irrational.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Pressure is high from a partner, roommate or family member. The issue may be difficult to resolve immediately, as the roots are far deeper than you are aware. Excellent communications are possible when you approach this person from a rational viewpoint. Tonight: Say yes to life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You are angry when you walk into the office but can use this energy to get work rolling. You are amazed by yourself and how much you accomplish. There are no limits. Organize your schedule, eliminate the superfluous and make a "must" appointment. Tonight: Go to the gym.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ A money issue forces you to take action before you are prepared. Creativity is high, so you find unusual solutions where you saw none. Follow-through counts. Use humor and imagination to bypass nearly any problem. Flirtation abounds. Tonight: Be your loving self!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Remaining calm could take a major act of self-discipline. It appears so much is happening so quickly that you are subject to fits of temper. Keep discussions flowing. Express your feelings so that others know where you stand. Tonight: You are happiest at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might be directing anger where it doesn't belong. Discussions will clear the air and help you find out what is going on with you. You might be surprised by what ails you! A boss has a lot to say, and it is most helpful. Tonight: Breeze through errands.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ News allows insight and a dynamic opportunity. You feel like taking off at the drop of a hat. Do not let anyone stop you. Finances might be more of an issue than you anticipated. Have reasonable expectations. A friend may be cantankerous. Tonight: Count on unusual fun.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You are personality-plus, which is fortunate, as the pressure could be intense. Your charm helps reverse an unpleasant situation with a higher-up. Make difficult things easy; it is within your power. A partner shares financial and emotional needs. Tonight: Togetherness delights you.

ANSWERS TO THE WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A J 7 6 5 2 ♡A Q J 8 4 2 ◇4 ♣Void

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?

A - If you have a method of getting both suits into the auction, by all means do so. If not, we suggest an overcall of one spade — it is highly unlikely the bidding will die there. The problem with a double is that, should the opponents now indulge in preemptive action, you might not be able to locate your best fit.

Q. 2 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 8 4 3 ♡Q J 10 7 6 4 ◇Q ♣A 8

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
Pass	Pass	1♡	Pass
2◇	Pass	2♡	Pass
3◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A - How many times do you want to sing the same song? You have already told partner you have long hearts and North has been supremely disinterested. This hand is going nowhere. Pass while there is still the chance for a plus score.

Q. 3 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K 8 7 6 3 2 ♡K Q 5 ◇7 4 ♣A 6

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2◇	Pass
2♣	Pass	3♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - There is a strong tendency to bid three no trump — it has become ingrained not to raise partner's second suit with only three-card support. However, the single club stopper might not be enough to essay three no trump — the hand lacks a known source of tricks. Since your two-spade rebid virtually denied four hearts, raise to four hearts! Partner's ability to take ruffs in the short-trump hand could make this Moysian fit a viable contract.

Q. 4 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q 8 5 4 2 ♡A J 8 3 ◇A 9 4 ♣K

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Dbl	Rdbl	2♣

What action do you take?

A - Partner's redouble might or might not be based on spade support. Regardless, it asks you to yield right of way in case partner wants to double the opponents. You have no reason not to respect North's wishes. Pass.

Q. 5 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K 7 6 3 2 ♡7 ◇A 7 6 2 ♣Q 9 3

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1♣	1♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A - Obviously, it is a question of whether you should bid over partner's overcall or not. Since partner did not make a takeout double of one club, chances of locating a spade fit are not promising. Nevertheless, you have too much to pass. One spade or one no trump could both be winners — it is up to you. So long as you acted, take a top score.

Q. 6 - As South vulnerable, you hold:

♠K 7 6 4 ♡6 3 ◇K 9 5 ♣A J 9 2

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	2♡	?

What do you bid now?

A - These days, a jump to three spades would be preemptive, not forcing. Since your hand values to a full opening bid in support of spades, our vote goes to a full-blooded jump to four spades. Even thinking about slam is an overbid!

Keith Richards won't retire because he says women still find him attractive

OKEMOS, Mich. — Jerry Linenger is looking forward to becoming a former astronaut.

"I've flown in the shuttle, traveled 50 million miles and done the space walk," he said Friday while visiting his sister in Okemos. "I think it's time to relax."

Linenger, an Eastpointe native, spent five months early this year aboard the Russian space station Mir.

"My crewmates, my cosmonauts, didn't speak much English," he said. "The only thing I taught them was Michigan. Every time we passed over it, they'd say, 'Jerry, Jerry, Michigan.'"

Linenger plans to retire from NASA in January and move back to Michigan with his wife and two young sons.

"I'm not looking for a 9-to-5 job or anything," he said. "I always wanted to be a forest ranger."

PHOKENG, South Africa — The King of Pop is now an African tribesman.

Michael Jackson, with ex-wife Lisa Marie Presley and her two children nearby, was made an honorary member of the Bafokeng Ka Bakwena (People of the Crocodile) tribe Saturday.

Micheal Jackson is now an honorary member of an African tribe.

Dressed in a military-style jacket adorned with gold badges, Jackson walked slowly as Lisa Marie clutched his arm and ululating women lined a path in this town 90 miles northwest of Johannesburg.

An aide carried a blue-and-yellow umbrella to provide shade for Jackson at all times as he took a day off between two Johannesburg concerts.

Jackson's parents, Joseph and Katherine, met the tribe a few days before and also got "citizenship" certificates.

Since his divorce from Lisa Marie, Jackson has married nurse Debbie Rowe, who gave birth in February to their son, Prince Michael Jackson Jr.

LOS ANGELES — The late Dodi Fayed's Malibu mansion is up for sale for $10 million.

Fayed, who died in a car accident in August with Princess Diana, bought the five-acre estate in June from Florida investor Edward Sacks for about $7.3 million.

Sacks, who turned the main house into a 9,000-square-foot, six-bedroom Tuscan villa, bought the property from Julie Andrews and husband Blake Edwards.

Keith Richards says no one would be asking retirement questions if he were black.

NEW YORK — Keith Richards, in the middle of a 33-city Rolling Stones tour, isn't considering retirement — in part, he says, because women still find him attractive.

"No one would be asking about retiring if we were old black guys," the 53-year-old Richards said in Sunday's Daily News.

"Nobody said anything like that to Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington or Count Basie. ... Besides, the chicks still dig me. The lingerie collection this year is my biggest ever."

Richards may or may not write a book someday.

"I've joked about it. I tell people I want to start by saying, 'Hitler was on my tail,' but I don't know where to go next. I haven't really considered it seriously. For one thing, I don't know how it ends."

SAN FRANCISCO — Despite a string of hit movies, including the summer blockbuster "Face/Off," John Woo says he's terrified to be on stage.

"Two things scare me in life: One is having an interview in front of the camera; the other is getting an award," the filmmaker said Saturday after receiving a Golden Ring Award from the Asian American Arts Foundation.

"I have a speaking problem — and I don't even speak well in my own language," he said, adding that he manages to get by using the two words most important for a director: "Action" and "Cut."

The Chinese-born director was among more than a dozen Asian Americans honored for their contribution to the arts. The others included actors Tia Carrere and Russell Wong.

NLCS: Hernandez strikes out 15 Braves

(From 1C)

said. "He just did not make any mistakes."

Hernandez, wearing No. 32 on his hat in tribute to Fernandez, pitched out of a first-inning jam and walked two. The 15 strikeouts broke the NLCS record shared by Mike Scott and John Candelaria.

"During the game, you can't think about that," the 22-year-old rookie said through an interpreter. "After the game, people can tell you what it is you did."

Mike Mussina fanned 15 — two short of Bob Gibson's postseason record — for Baltimore in the ALCS on Saturday at Cleveland.

The 25 strikeouts by both teams was a record for a league championship series game. Of the 25, eight were called by Gregg.

"My strike zone has been consistent on both sides for 20 years," Gregg said.

This matchup, though, has become one of most topsy-turvy playoff meetings ever. Not since the 1976 ALCS had two teams alternated wins for the first five games of a postseason series.

And now the Marlins are in position to win it, despite hitting only .177 so far.

Hernandez finished in style. He struck out Keith Lockhart to start the ninth, speared Chipper Jones' liner for second out and got McGriff looking.

Maddux, the victim of five unearned runs in the opener, lost again because of a ball that was not caught, albeit it involved a difficult play.

Bobby Bonilla opened the seventh with a drive to deep right that snow-coned in Michael Tucker's glove as he crashed into the wall. The ball popped loose, as did one of Tucker's contact lenses, and Bonilla wound up with a double.

There was an eight-minute delay while Tucker and others looked for the elusive lens. Tucker eventually left the game and, when it resumed, Conine singled up the middle on Maddux's first pitch, stopping an 0-for-13 slide in the series.

"I've been here since Day 1," Conine said. "This was really something today."

Maddux struck out nine in seven innings, allowing four hits. Still, his record fell to 8-7 in 17 career postseason starts.

Hernandez got into immediate trouble when Kenny Lofton tripled on the second pitch of the game. Bonilla briefly visited Hernandez when he then fell behind in the count of Keith Lockhart, who walked.

"I wanted to make sure he wasn't being too careful," Bonilla said.

But Hernandez showed October skill beyond his years to escape the jam, striking out Jones, McGriff and Ryan Klesko in succession. He did it by relying on backdoor sliders and offspeed stuff, rather than overthrowing his fastball, a common mistake by young pitchers.

Maddux, baseball's best control pitcher, quickly put himself in a first-inning problem. He hit leadoff man Devon White in the right leg with an 0-2 delivery, though Maddux and Cox argued to Gregg that White moved into the pitch.

White, obviously not hurt too badly, was running on the next pitch and credited with a steal when Maddux's fastball went wildly to the backstop. One out later, Bonilla reached low-and-away and lined an RBI single to center, a hit that prompted Maddux to shout at himself as he ran to back up the play.

Michael Tucker tied it at 1 when he homered to dead center off Hernandez to start the second.

Notes: Jones was hit in the head by a fly ball in batting practice. The Atlanta third baseman was checked in the clubhouse, and returned for practice. ... Hernandez was ruled out by Gregg for striding out of the batter's box while fouling a pitch in the fifth.

Stewart wins IRL crown

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It was both Tony Stewart's longest night and one of his best.

Driving to win the Indy Racing League season championship, and not the Las Vegas 500k, Stewart spent a frustrating time behind the wheel Saturday before finally getting a chance to celebrate with the IRL season title.

Stewart finished 11th, far behind winner Eliseo Salazar. But it was good enough to hold onto his lead over Davey Hamilton and win the title in the final race of the season.

"It was the longest night I ever had in a race car in my life," Stewart said.

The driver who dominated much of the IRL season despite winning only once never was a factor in the race held on a chilly and windy night at the Las Vegas Speedway.

Stewart started in the second row, but backed off quickly and drove cautiously with an eye on Hamilton to take the championship.

Rio Grande Valley schools threatening to sue for 3rd district

■ Southern Texas schools expect UIL to solve crowded 5A districts by adding a third district for the 19 Valley schools.

McALLEN — The 19 Class 5A high schools in the Rio Grande Valley are crowded into two districts, and they don't like it.

District 31 has 10 schools and District 32 has nine schools. Of the 30 other Class 5A districts in the state, none has more than eight. There are 13 districts with eight schools, three with seven and 14 with six.

The Rio Grande Valley schools are threatening to sue unless the University Interscholastic League adds a third district during its biennial realignment in February, the McAllen Monitor reported Sunday.

"It's an issue of opportunity," said Gil Garza, athletic director at Pharr-San Juan-Alamo. "I think it's time our kids got the opportunity that other kids around the state get."

In most Class 5A sports, three teams advance to the playoffs. In football, for example, the Valley will send six of its 19 teams to postseason play. If there were three districts, nine teams would advance.

Principals and athletic directors from area 5A schools met in September to discuss their options. One solution includes legal action; the group decided to draft a letter to each school district's respective board of trustees asking them to consider litigation.

UIL officials say they are sympathetic, but geographic and travel considerations across the state make two large districts in the Valley the most feasible option.

UIL athletic director Charles Breithaupt hinted that the Valley will have to grow from 19 Class 5A schools to at least 21 before the area would be realigned into three districts.

"I have to take into consideration everyone in Texas," Breithaupt said. "In a state our size, with the number of schools, (aligning districts) is difficult."

Brownsville athletic director Joe Rodriguez wants the UIL to consider rotating the burden of a 10-school district. For example, Houston could have it for two years, then Dallas, then other metropolitan areas so that everyone shares the burden.

Schools across the state will report attendance figures at the end of this month, and, in November, the UIL staff will begin the arduous process of reclassifying schools by enrollment then realigning them into workable districts for academic and athletic competition.

Valley officials, though, worry that the their region will labor under diminished opportunity for two more years. With the Pharr-San Juan-Alamo school district adding another 5A school to the mix, the area could be looking at two 10-school districts.

The difference in opportunity is more marked in a sport like cross country, Garza said. The top three teams plus the top 10 individuals advance from district to regional competition. The same holds true for UIL academic competitions such as math, poetry, journalism and drama.

CAR: Martin trails Gordon by 110 points

(From 1C)

while Jarrett closed in to 155 points behind after trailing by 197 coming into Sunday's 500-mile race on the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval.

The accident began when Gordon's left rear tire was cut down while he was running near the front of a 32-car lead pack traveling more than 190 mph.

It had been like that almost every lap since the green flag first dropped, with 14 different leaders and only a couple of minor incidents slowing the cars down until the big crash.

"I felt the left rear go just before (the car) turned sideways," Gordon said. "I started going sideways. I tried to straighten up, then I bounced off the 98 (Andretti). When I tried to straighten up again, I just went spinning. That's the last thing you want to have happen to you in the middle of a pack like that."

After bouncing off Andretti, Gordon's Chevy veered sideways, slamming into the wall and sending speeding cars sliding, spinning and crashing everywhere around him in a spectacular chain reaction.

Among the drivers whose cars were damaged the worst was Martin, who won the Winston 500 here in April.

"I knew it was going to happen sooner or later," Martin said. "I was just driving a conservative race and waiting for them to wreck up front. We were just unlucky to get caught up in it."

Jarrett's car was less heavily damaged than the others, although he was unable to compete at the front of the pack. He finished 21st, while Martin was 30th and Gordon 35th in the 42-car field.

"We need to pick up a whole lot more than that," Jarrett said. "They had their misfortune and we needed to be able to take more of an advantage of it, but we couldn't."

Also knocked out of contention were Sterling Marlin, Dale Earnhardt, Joe Nemechek, Jimmy Spencer, Michael Waltrip, Dick Trickle, Mike Skinner and Greg Sacks.

Once the accident was cleaned up, the battle at the front was left to the Labonte brothers, Andretti, Schrader and pole-winner Ernie Irvan, who finished in that order.

Schrader, looking to end a winless string that has reached 199 races, moved past Terry Labonte to take the lead on lap 181, bringing Andretti with him. But Labonte, who led five times for a race-high 70 laps, stayed close and made his move at the start of lap 187.

"I've got to thank Bobby because he let me back in line," the winner said. "Then he let me get by the 33 (Schrader), too. Once I got by him, I had to hold Bobby off."

Labonte, who won $116,725, averaged 156.603 mph in the race slowed by four caution periods for a total of only 22 laps. He became only the second Chevrolet driver to win a race this season. Gordon has the other 10 Chevy wins, while Fords have won 18 times.

Other than the big crash, the incidents were relatively minor with Billy Standridge, Wally Dallenbach Jr. and Brett Bodine each bringing out a caution. All escaped injury, as did the drivers in the 21-car crash.

This race, which previously was run in July or August, drew a crowd estimated at more than 130,000. The spectators enjoyed a sunny, warm day, with low humidity and a high of 85, about 10 degrees cooler than the usual summer weather at Talladega.

Rapids stop Dallas 1-0 in MLS playoffs

DALLAS (AP) — Sean Henderson scored on header in the 42nd minute to give the Colorado Rapids a 1-0 victory over the Dallas Burn on Saturday in Game 1 of the best-of-3 MLS Western Conference championship series.

Henderson scored off Matt Kmosko's cross-field pass. The Burn defense was shifting toward the right to cover the ball when Henderson headed the ball across the goal mouth and into the edge of the net.

It was the first postseason goal against the Burn. The team advanced to the second round after shutting out Los Angeles in two straight games.

The Burn tried to score during the last half-minute of the game when the entire team, including goalkeeper Mark Dodd, surged forward on Jason Kreis' 45-yard free kick. The ball floated over the defensive wall to Damian, whose header clipped the left post and bounced back into play before the rebound was hammered harmlessly into the side netting.

Game 2 is Wednesday night.
