Hurricane Danny not as deadly as feared

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Flash-in-the-pan Hurricane Danny left power failures, downed trees and minor flooding in its wake today, and emergency centers were quickly abandoned by people one official said "have been through this so many times before that they've got it down to a science."

There was one death. No other injuries were reported Thursday and none of the immense property damage left by such killer storms as Audrey in 1957, Betsy in 1965, Camille in 1969 or Hilda in 1964.

Still, Gov. Edwin Edwards declared a state of emergency in 13 parishes and said he would try to get federal aid to cover damages.

After building in intensity for three days, Danny finally stormed ashore at Pecan Island mid-morning Thursday with 85 mph winds gusting to over 100 mph.

It was downgraded to a tropical storm by 8 p.m. and by midnight, the National Hurricane Center said the storm's center was between Alexandria and Shreveport, heading north-northeast with 46 mph winds gusting to 63 mph.

Tom Creaghan, director of state emergency operations in Baton Rouge, said damage assessment teams would fan out today through Calcasieu, Cameron, Jeff Davis, Vermilion, Iberia and Evangeline parishes.

"We were tremendously lucky — nothing serious and no injuries," said Pete Picou, Civil Defense director at Cameron, about 35 miles west of Pecan Island.

"We had 300 people here less than an hour ago," said Timothy Hooper, manager of the Red Cross shelter at Lake Charles-Boston High School. "Just about all of them were from Cameron and when the Civil Defense gave the OK, 99 percent of them left within a half hour.

"They started cheering and then started packing. I tried to stop them but they heard it on TV and then there was no stopping them.

"Some of these people have been through this so many times before that they've got it down to a science."

The worst peril occurred 40 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico, where a Coast Guard helicopter rescued seven Texans who, oblivious to hurricane warnings because of radio trouble, sailed a 41-foot yacht into the storm.

They were airlifted to a suburban New Orleans hospital for treatment of injuries ranging from a broken leg to scrapes and cuts.

Another 60 or so people were stranded for a while on a bridge over the Intracoastal Waterway, near Louisa in St. Mary Parish.

In the town of Kaplan, a man was injured when a mobile home for an oil drilling crew was rolled about 60 yards. He was hospitalized.

Robert Henry Johnson, 24, of Houston, died Wednesday evening after being electrocuted when the boat he was pulling out of the water to avoid the storm hit a power line, said Galveston Medical Examiner Ray Lease.

"This was no hurricane," complained Gloria Padilla, who spent Wednesday night with her six children at a Red Cross shelter at Lake Charles.

Midland recording more DWI arrests, convictions

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Judged only by its drunk-driving statistics, Midland is no island of sobriety, despite its respectable, white-collar image. But looked at another way, the recent increases in arrests and convictions may simply mean Midland is almost as dangerous a place for drunk drivers as it is for their potential victims.

The number of people caught driving while intoxicated in Midland County has risen in recent years, but that doesn't mean there are more drunks on the road, according to County Attorney Mark Dettman.

"It might just be an increase in total awareness (of the problem) by the public, by the police, by everyone," said Dettman, whose office handles misdemeanor DWIs, which account for most of the cases.

In 1983, 801 DWI cases were filed in Midland County; in 1984, after the Legislature toughened the DWI laws, the number of cases filed shot up to 1,295, a 62 percent increase, Dettman said. Only 631 cases were filed through the first six months of this year, however, and arrest statistics are also holding steady, according to the Midland Police Department and the Department of Public Safety im Midland.

"'But statewide, the number of cases is going down," said Dettman. "Midland is not following the statewide trend."

The county attorney suggested two possible explanations for the high number of cases filed in Midland: good police work, which gives prosecutors stronger cases, and tougher juries, which reflect society's increased concern with the damage done by drunk drivers.

"That's the bottom line — the public's attitude. They're toughening up," said Dettman. "It's changed a lot."

"MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) has made our job easier," said Assistant District Attorney Chuck Roades. People accused of DWI "are afraid to go before a jury."

The District Attorney's Office handles felony DWI cases, in which the defendant has two prior DWI convictions. Those convicted of felony DWI face a penalty range of 30 days to two years in county jail or 60 days to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections, as well as a fine between $500 and $2,000. But there are problems establishing felony DWI cases against people whose prior convictions occurred before the Legislature toughened the statutes last year.

Many probations received before Jan. 1, 1984, don't count as prior convictions, according to Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams, and prior convictions where the defendant wasn't properly advised of his right to an attorney don't count either.

Before the current emphasis on DWIs, cases tended to be handled more casually, which has created some problems for prosecutors trying to use old misdemeanor convictions to make a felony case.

"Identification is a problem," said Ms. Sams. Simply proving that the accused felon is the same person who was convicted before is difficult if his fingerprints weren't on the judgement.

"County attorneys in the past were not concerned with getting fingerprints on the judgements," said Roades, who once worked for the Tom Green County attorney. Before the current emphasis on DWIs, "There was sort of a casual procedure down there."

But Dettman, whose office now fingerprints all DWI offenders, doesn't agree that identification is so difficult to prove in older cases.

"There's a whole lot of ways to prove prior convictions," he said. "I've told them time and time again, but they don't listen."

Ector County's new court awaiting appointment of judge

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ector County Courthouse renovation is nearing completion, and the county's fourth district court, the 358th, is scheduled to be ready for business Sept. 1.

District Clerk Jackie Barnes has published civil court dockets through the month of December, with civil cases slated to be heard in the new court beginning in September. But, there is a problem. Gov. Mark White has yet to name a judge to preside over the new court and may not before Sept. 1.

When the governor was in the Midland-Odessa area July 23 he said he would name the new judge in about a week. A spokesperson in the office of appointments secretary Dwayne Hollman said Thursday the governor may have made a choice between the two prospective candidates but, if so, he hasn't told anyone else.

When it was suggested that Sept. 1 is just around the corner, she said, "I wouldn't count on that either."

District Judge Joe Connally, who presides over the 244th District Court, was Ector County judge when he was appointed district judge. Connally said the governor waited until almost the last moment to appoint him.

The two leading candidates for the new 358th District Court judgeship are Bill McCoy, who was Ector County attorney for almost 10 years and, prior to that, an assistant district attorney under Jack Tidwell; and Cliff Hardwick, a former associate of well-known attorney Warren Burnett, who ran unsuccessfully against 161st District Judge R.L. McKim in 1980.

Shortly after the governor's visit here, a longtime Odessa attorney with strong Democratic Party credentials was asked why it was taking the governor so long to make up his mind. Both McCoy and Hardwick have strong constituencies, he explained, and it's a hard choice for him to make.

Another attorney, also a well-known Democrat, said there are two distinct groups of attorneys backing McCoy and Hardwick for the judicial appointment. But, he believes the support is based primarily on friendship rather than politics.

Although the governor has not yet announced the new judge, a source with strong contacts in the governor's office, but who asked to remain anonymous, said the governor has made up his mind and will name attorney Hardwick as judge whenever he decides to make the announcement. However, that report could not be confirmed.

White is also expected to name an administrative judge for the 7th Judicial District, which encompasses 39 counties in West Texas, including Ector and Midland. McKim, a Republican, served as administrative judge of the 7th Judicial District until his retirement last December.

'Ben Casey' star will fight theft charge, extradition to Beaumont

By KIT FRIEDEN
Associated Press Writer

The lawyer for actor Vince Edwards, better known as television doctor "Ben Casey," says the actor is "not into stealing Toyotas" and will fight any attempt to extradite him to Beaumont, Texas, where a warrant was issued for his arrest.

The one-time TV doctor is embroiled in a feud with some real-life doctors over a contract he signed with Medi-Quick Inc., a Beaumont medical clinic company.

Edwards, 57, was arrested at his home in Marina Del Rey Thursday on a Jefferson County, Texas, fugitive warrant alleging felony theft of services, according to authorities in Texas and California.

The warrant was the result of his alleged failure to return a 1984 Toyota that was loaned to him by Medi-Quick as part of a promotional contract, according to the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office.

Edwards' lawyer, Peter Knecht of Los Angeles, said the actor was released 12 hours later on his own recognizance after a brief appearance in Los Angeles County Superior Court. Knecht said the Texas officials had asked for a $25,000 bond.

Tutu blasts Botha's speech on apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Bishop Desmond Tutu today lashed out President P.W. Botha's long-awaited speech on apartheid, saying the lack of concrete steps to end racial discrimination made the chance for peaceful change "virtually nil."

Tutu, the black Anglican cleric who won the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, told reporters he was considering calling for immediate economic sanctions against the white-minority government.

He said Botha, who addressed his ruling National Party Thursday night, was acting like a "hack politician."

"I think the chances of peaceful change are virtually nil. We are on the brink of a catastrophe," Tutu said. "Short of a miracle, short of intervention by the international community, we are for the birds," said Tutu.

In nervous trading, the South African rand hit a record low of 38.50 cents, well below its previous 41.90 low in January. South Africa's mainly white anti-government Blash Sash organization said "the whole country will pay" for Botha's stance.

In the speech, Botha rejected equal voting rights for all races, saying it would be suicidal for the ruling white minority.

Tutu castigated President Reagan, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl for their policies toward South Africa, saying, "They have decided that blacks are dispensable."

"I don't think Mr. Botha is interested in peaceful negotiation. He is aware of his military strength," Tutu said. "He is interested in bludgeoning blacks into submission."

Other black leaders agreed that Botha had fueled the flames of revolt.

"The armed struggle continues," said Tom Sebina, information officer for the country's main black guerrilla organzation, the African National Council.

Botha also ended speculation that he might free Nelson Mandela, the jailed black leader of the outlawed ANC. Botha reiterated he would release Mandela only if he denounces violence, which Mandela refuses to do.

The one man, one vote principle for all racial groups "would lead to domination of one over the others, and it would lead to chaos," Botha declared.

"I am not prepared to lead white South Africans and other minority groups on a road to abdication and suicide," he said. "Destroy white South Africa and our influence and this country will drift into faction strife, chaos and poverty."

Under the system of racial segregation called apartheid, 5 million whites rule 24 million voteless blacks.

Ranier's ice caves disappear with receding glacier

By GEORGE TIBBITS
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE — Once, it was a treasured moment of a hike at Mount Rainier: To stand beneath a glacier within a grotto carved by water and wind and lighted softly in blues and greens by sunlight that filtered through thick ice.

Thousands enjoyed the walk above Paradise Lodge to the ice caves that would appear some summers at the foot of Paradise Glacier, one of 27 ice fields that scour the flanks of the 14,410-foot mountain in Washington's Cascades.

But glaciologists and Mount Rainier National Park officials say the caves appear to have vanished forever as the glaciers recede from an apparent warming trend in the Earth's atmosphere.

"Now they're essentially about gone," park spokesman Cy Hentges said in a telephone interview Thursday. Where the main entrance cave once arched 10 to 15 feet overhead, there's now only a "crawl space" about three feet high.

The caves once were a special attraction to Paradise, the lodge and visitor area at 5,500 feet on the mountain's south side. Snowfall often sealed off the ever-changing caves and the foot of the glacier for several years. But when conditions were right, rangers would lead guided tours along the three-mile walk through wildflower fields above the lodge to the ice tunnels.

Now, park officials would just as soon people stay away.

"No one could go in there," Hentges said of the tunnels. "It would be extremely dangerous."

Rangers and two U.S. Geological Survey scientists inspected the area last week. They found the entrance tube above Stevens Creek nearly gone and a side tube that had existed when the caves last melted out four years ago had been reduced to a small stream rimmed by ice just one or two feet thick.

Steven Hodge, a USGS glaciologist who went on the trip, predicted even that will be gone in about a month. "They'll only come back if we have a major advance of the glacier," he said.

But most glaciers, including the Paradise, have been receding over the past century, as part of what Hodge said may be a worldwide warming trend.

Unlike most of Rainier's glaciers, which are sources for rivers and streams, Stevens Creek begins above Paradise Glacier and flows beneath it. The water and the rushing air that accompany the stream carve the caves under the ice. The caves widen at the glacier's foot.

Ed Josberger, the second USGS scientist who inspected the glacier, said it's possible new caves may form at some point further up the glacial valley as the ice sheet retreats.

For now, however, Hentges stresses that the area near the foot of the glacier is hazardous. Besides the cave remnants, there are moulins — vertical shafts cut in the ice by meltwater and air — that plunge 30 or 40 feet through the glacier to water or rocks.

The tops of some of the shafts are hidden by thin ice and below the glacier, retreating ice has left rugged terrain criss-crossed with running water. Rangers recommend that only people well-equipped and experienced in snow and ice travel attempt climbing in the area.

"It's just not the place for the average person," Hentges said.

Mattox's plane fills with smoke

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says there were some very tense minutes when the cabin of his twin-engine airplane lost air pressure and filled with smoke during a midnight flight to Austin.

"In light of the other airline disasters that have recently taken place, I must admit I uttered a little prayer," he said after the Thursday morning incident. "It was a frightening experience."

An aide said it was the second time this year the cabin of the state-owned, 1967 Beechcraft King Air had filled with smoke.

The incident occurred shortly after midnight as Mattox, an aide and the pilot were returning from Huntsville. Mattox had been there for the scheduled execution of Jay Kelly Pinkerton, who obtained a stay from the U.S. Supreme Court just before midnight.

"Five to seven minutes out of Huntsville, the seal around the doors that ... maintains the pressurization of the cabin went out," Mattox said.

There was "a loud, whistling, air-escaping noise around the doors, plus it makes your ears hurt," he said.

Three to four minutes later, Mattox said, "The cabin within a matter of just a couple of seconds filled up with a very dense smoke, smoke that smelled like it was from an electrical fire. I was sitting about four feet from the pilot, and it was so dense you could just barely see him."

As they readied to make an emergency landing at Bryan, Mattox said, the pilot shut down some electrical systems. The plane began to descend and as it neared the ground, the pilot opened cabin windows, clearing out some of the smoke.

The plane was able to continue to Austin, landing about 12:45 a.m.

"It takes a good while to get an airplane on the ground, and you don't know how long you're going to be able to go without oxygen if that's what it takes," Mattox said.

"My first thought was that we were not going to be able to get the thing on the ground quick enough. I was afraid that the plane was on fire."

Elna Christopher, Mattox's press secretary, said the same plane caught fire this spring while on a flight to San Antonio.

"As we started to land, smoke came out from under the control panel," said Ms. Christopher, who was aboard the plane with Mattox and others of his staff. "It turned out to be a short in the control panel lighting."

Mattox said he hopes the Legislature will buy the attorney general's office a new plane.

Enjoying a week at Camp Ailihpomeh — complete with canoe races and other sporting activities usually considered too "risky" — is a group of 52 boys, all victims of hemophilia.

Camp caters to special needs of hemophiliacs

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

MARBLE FALLS, Texas — In between events at the Camp Ailihpomeh olympics, 12-year-old Paul Hampton talked about the common ground that brought the 52 boys together.

"I had two uncles that had it, they died. I have four cousins with it. I would have had a brother with it, but he died when he was 2-days-old," the boy said from beneath a big visor that blocked the Central Texas sun.

"One of my uncles had a throat bleed. One head a head bleed," he said, adding that one uncle died at age 3. The other was 60.

Ailihpomeh is hemophilia spelled backwards. For the campers, it's a week-long experience with activities usually considered too risky for children who suffer from the hereditary disease that interferes with normal blood clotting.

"They hardly let me play any sports," Wayne Martinez, 14, of El Paso said of his parents. "They're afraid I might get hurt seriously."

Hampton, who lives in nearby Briggs, said his parents also are careful.

"I don't blame them really," he said.

For one week, under the close eye of counselors and medical staffers, the hemophiliacs play softball and basketball, learn archery, go swimming and ride horses. Helmets are required for the horseback riders.

The basic plan is to run as close to a normal camp as possible, according to Dr. Keith Hoots, camp director.

"We try to come to camp equipped to handle major bleeding problems," said Hoots, assistant professor of pediatrics and medicine at the University of Texas at Houston.

Hoots started Camp Ailihpomeh five years ago. The camp is a project of Gulf States Hemophilia Center at the UT-Houston Medical School.

"One of the reasons we set it up is because most of the other camps are very, very uncomfortable having kids with this degree of bleeding tendency," he said.

"We know we are going to have a number of bleeding episodes, most of which are routine bleeds like they have at home and like they treat at home," said Hoots.

This week's top medical excitement was provided by Rhett Tutt of Silsbee, Texas. The 17-year-old junior counselor, a hemophiliac, barely missed running into a clothes line. But he managed to hit a second line, opening a facial cut that required three stitches to close.

"I was scared," he said.

In addition to the danger caused by surface cuts, hemophiliacs face the danger of internal bleeding that can damage joints. It adds up to a carefully planned menu of activities.

Horseback riding is the most dangerous activity offered.

"You never know what a horse is going to do. We have our kids wear baseball helmets. It's pretty rocky terrain around here," Hoots said.

"We've, knock wood, been remarkably free of life-threatening incidents. We've had a couple of scares," said Hoots.

An Austin helicopter ambulance has been notified about the camp and the potential need for quick help.

Routine care, including infusions of the clotting agent the hemophiliacs need, is handled at the camp. Many of the campers infuse themselves.

In addition to teaching activities, the camp tries to show the campers that hemophilia does not have to be a major obstacle in everyday living. Hour-long education sessions are offered each day.

"They have to live with the contingency (of facing a major bleed) all the time. It's not that they can't do most things, but there are certain things that are verboten — contact football. But most other sports, with good preparation, can be undertaken," said Hoots.

Hemophilia also carries "psycho-social" effects, he added. Current publicity about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome can be a problem.

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

IRVINE, Calif. — The ability to create mental images seems to originate in the left side of the brain, according to studies that cast doubt on the commonly held belief that this function is performed by the right side of the brain.

"A lot of people have assumed mental imagery is carried out by the right hemisphere because the right hemisphere is important for recognizing complex visual patterns," psychologist Martha J. Farah of Pittsburgh's Carnegie-Mellon University said Thursday.

But her recent studies show "the process of forming images from memory seems to be carried out in the left hemisphere of the brain," Ms. Farah said after presenting her findings to the annual meeting of the Cognitive Science Society.

The studies were carried out by Ms. Farah and her colleagues at Cornell Medical College and Harvard University.

Rick Granger, the society's program chairman and a psychologist-computer scientist at the University of California at Irvine, said "Popular left brain-right brain kind of books (which advocate the theory that mental images are formed in the brain's right hemisphere) for the most part are not based on recent scientific work.

"Some of the crucial pieces of a mental image may well be on the left side of the brain and there also may be crucial pieces in other localities."

Scientists have found the left side of the brain tends to be associated with language abilities and certain motor skills, although some speech-related functions are also found in the right hemisphere. They believe the right side is linked with visual and spatial abilities.

DWI

Using handwriting experts to identify the defendant's signature is one method, and getting their old probation officer to identify them is another, said Dettman, who must prove identification to give jail time to second offenders. Ms. Sams also mentioned those methods, but said fingerprinting is more difficult for defense attorneys to rebut.

Not many people are sent to the TDC for felony DWI, in part because even today's tougher juries are unwilling to send people to the penitentiary merely for being caught drunk three times.

"It's the nature of the crime — there isn't any victim," said Roades of DWI cases where no accident is involved. "Jurors are reluctant to send them down to the pen," though not as reluctant as they once were.

"We've sent three people to the pen at least since I've been here in the last eight months," he said. "In the old days, that was unheard of."

Sentences in county jail are much more common — about 25 percent of all Midland County DWI cases involve jail time, Dettman said. About half of these people are allowed to serve their time on weekends, usually because serving the days consecutively would be a hardship on their families, he said.

Most first offenders in Midland County receive two years probation and a fine between $250 and $1,500 if no accident was involved, Dettman said. The size of the fine depends on the defendant's blood-alcohol level, whether he had any prior arrests, whether his driver's license or insurance had lapsed, and other mitigating circumstances.

Second offenders generally get 15 to 30 days in county jail and a fine between $300 and $1,000, though "I've given people a year to do" in plea bargaining, Dettman said. Driver's licenses aren't suspended for first offenders if they attend DWI school; other defendants may lose their driving privileges for three months to a year.

Dettman is proud of his office's DWI conviction rate of 90 percent, which compares favorably to the overall state average of 67 percent for 1984. And Cynthia Grubb, president of the Midland County Chapter of MADD, is also impressed with local prosecutors' efforts to enforce the stricter laws which her organization worked so hard to get through the Legislature.

"I think both the County Attorney's Office and the District Attorney's Office are doing a very fine job," she said. "They're looking at DWIs with a lot more force and a lot more strength. They know the community is behind them."

"Morale is better bwcause they've gotten more support," said Captain Tony White of the DPS Highway Patrol in Midland. "For years there was just no support for what they were trying to do."

Correction

A line inadvertently was dropped from a column by Ed Thompson in Thursday's Reporter-Telegram.

The sentence read: To discourage the foreign imports, especially when those imports add to our deficit balance, is absolutely ridiculous.

The sentence should have read: To discourage the development of domestic energy resources, while encouraging increasing reliance on foreign imports, especially when those imports add to our deficit balance, is absolutely ridiculous.

Also, Ed Thompson is executive vice president of PBPA, not president.

EDWARDS

Knecht said the case was continued in Los Angeles County Superior Court until mid-September, but the matter may be resolved before then. He said he thought someone in Texas had "overreacted" to Edwards' inability to return the loaned car by June 28 when it was due.

"Obviously this man is not into stealing Toyotas. This matter should resolve itself," Knecht said Thursday night, adding that "this is the first arrest he's ever suffered."

The lawyer also vowed a fight against any attempts to extradite Edwards to Texas, saying the car was delivered to him by a Los Angeles area dealership even though it is owned by a party in Texas.

He said he also wanted to avoid Texas because "I think Beaumont is a lot smaller town, and in order to acquire this kind of filing (against) a celebrity known on sight reflects there is somebody that did something as a favor."

But Dr. Jim Barbee of Beaumont, whose Medi-Quick Inc. sought the charges against Edwards, sees it another way.

"(When) somebody thinks they're so big they can walk all over people, they need to be corrected," Barbee said Thursday night.

He said he was not familiar with all the details surrounding Edwards' arrest. But he said Edwards was overdue in returning the car loaned to him by Medi-Quick, which operates three family practice clinics in Beaumont and Orange.

Barbee referred other questions to Bob Morris, Medi-Quick administrator who was unavailable because he was flying to Los Angeles "on business," according to Barbee.

Edwards signed a contract with Medi-Quick after making the movie "Sno-Line" in Port Arthur in 1984.

According to police, Edwards was to do commercials and promotions for the group of clinics.

President Botha's speech undercut Reagan's policy on South Africa

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press

NATION

An analysis

WASHINGTON — By resisting any dramatic easing of its apartheid laws, the South African government has failed to give President Reagan what he wanted — ammunition to defeat strong congressional pressure for economic sanctions.

It may also have put another nail in the coffin of Reagan's controversial policy of "constructive engagement" toward the white South African government.

The administration had looked to the speech President P.W. Botha made on apartheid Thursday for a dramatic move to ease the plight of South Africa's black majority.

But it was disappointed.

Instead of giving the administration an opportunity to defeat sanctions, pro-sanction lawmakers claimed their position had been strengthened by Botha's speech. Heavy majorities in both the House and Senate already have voted for sanctions, although the Senate hasn't yet approved final passage.

In a speech regarded as unexpectedly uncompromising, Botha declared he will never support such equal political rights as one-man, one-vote for blacks. He indicated it would be unacceptable for South Africa's 24 million blacks to wrest control from the 5 million whites.

Yet the administration had called earlier in the week for "political rights, equality and justice" for South Africa's blacks. To Americans, political rights means one-man, one-vote.

The Reagan administration was subdued in its response to Botha's speech, calling it a "a positive statement," but otherwise declining to publicly characterize it. Administration officials said the most positive feature was Botha's expressed willingness for a dialogue with black leaders, although the conditions for such a dialogue weren't specified.

Reagan, who is recuperating in Santa Barbara, Calif., from recent cancer surgery did not watch the speech, which was carried live by the Cable News Network, so his personal response was not known. He has in the past bent over backward to defend actions of the South African government.

But a senior administration official, who did not want to be identified, said the speech was disappointing.

And Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, said Botha had given less to blacks than he had been led to expect when he met in Vienna last week with South African Foreign Minister R.F. (Pik) Botha.

"I'd have to say it was a rather diffuse reference today to the apparent commitment of a week ago to the participation of blacks," McFarlane said in one interview after Thursday's speech. "It was more conceptually cast today and that is too bad."

He also voiced disappointment that Botha didn't announce an end to the state of emergency, which Washington has sought, or the release from prison of Nelson Mandela, widely acknowledged as the key black leader in South Africa who has been imprisoned for more than 20 years.

"In our earlier talks there didn't seem to be a foreclosing in the release of Mr. Mandela," McFarlane said. "Today, he seemed to toughen that stand."

A statement by House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill was typical of much of the congressional reaction.

"This is an embarrassment for the defenders of constructive engagement," O'Neill said. "There's nothing in the speech to sustain a veto of economic sanctions....This is not veto material, it's override material."

"Our president's argument has been that constructive engagement would lead to reform, but there's no reform here," O'Neill said.

Actually, constructive engagement has been virtually abandoned in practice — if not in name — by the administration under pressure from the Congress and the public for more outspoken opposition to apartheid.

Congress has wanted to substitute a sanctions policy for constructive engagement.

Man shoots wife stricken with Alzheimer's to keep his promise, then commits suicide

EL TORO, Calif. (AP) — Reid Logan made a promise to the woman he loved, and he had to kill her to keep it.

Years ago, Logan, 78, promised his wife, Edith, also 78, that he would never send her to a rest home.

Then Alzheimer's disease crippled her mind and he found himself unable to care for her because his own health was failing due to a heart condition.

Investigators say he kept his promise by killing her and taking his own life. They had been married 48 years.

"It appears to be a murder-suicide situation," Lt. Richard Olson of the Orange County Sheriff's Department said Thursday. "His wife had Alzheimer's, the gentleman had heart problems. There's nothing to indicate to us that it was anything other than that."

Logan, a retired aerospace executive, called the Orange County Sheriff's Department on Tuesday and said he had killed his wife and was going to kill himself.

When deputies arrived at the trailer park in El Toro, 45 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles, where the couple had lived for 11 years, they found the bodies in the bathroom.

Results of a coroner's autopsy, released Thursday, showed Logan died of a gunshot wound to the head and his wife of a skull fracture, Olson said.

Dorothy Fenton, a neighbor, said Mrs. Logan "was probably one of the most brilliant women we knew until the disease struck and she began drifting."

Logan's daughter, Arlene Niceley, said her stepmother suffered from Alzheimer's, a degenerative brain disorder. "My father had a heart condition and was killing himself trying to take care of her."

Ruling may lead to busing of disadvantaged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling prohibiting public school teachers from instructing disadvantaged students in parochial school classrooms could lead to busing or curbside schooling, educators say.

Education Secretary William J. Bennett said Thursday that school officials must obey the high court ruling. But he also stressed that school districts must continue providing federally funded services to poor children attending religiously affiliated private schools.

On July 1, the court struck down programs in New York City and Grand Rapids, Mich., in which public school teachers were conducting classes in religiously affiliated private schools.

The 5-4 majority said the so-called "shared time" programs eroded the Constitution's requirement of separation of church and state.

The Supreme Court ruling involved a $3.2 billion federal program — Chapter 1 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 — that aids more than 5 million disadvantaged children nationwide. The court said instructional services funded by the program could not be provided on religious school premises.

But Bennett told administrators in a letter Thursday the high court decision did not affect a requirement that services to disadvantaged children under Chapter 1 must be provided to eligible private school children "on an equitable basis." He said the department would continue to enforce that requirement.

Bennett, who has called the ruling terrible and "badly reasoned," told the officials: "I sympathize fully with the problems and confusion caused by that decision....I appreciate the difficult position of your agency."

The secretary said nevertheless that education agencies "must make every diligent effort to comply with the court's decision as soon as possible."

But he added that the department would support well-grounded legal requests by state and local educational agencies for more time to revise their programs.

Bennett said students affected by the ruling could be bused to public schools, using funds from the program.

But one educator — Samuel B. Husk, executive director of the Council of Great City Schools — said "fewer children would be served" since most districts have no funds to administrate such a plan.

Husk said some parochial schools may park a trailer on the street outside school buildings to provide a "neutral" classroom location.

Education Undersecretary Gary Bauer said the department does not want school districts to interpret the Supreme Court decision as meaning they can halt Chapter 1 services to disadvantaged students at religiously affiliated schools.

Carcinogen, not just aldicarb, may have leaked at Carbide

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Chairman Warren Anderson, on a trip to "chemical valley" aimed at boosting the company's image, faces a report that a solvent suspected of causing cancer in animals made up most of a leak that injured 135 people.

Union Carbide Corp. had said a gas cloud that escaped Sunday from its Institute plant was a mix of aldicarb oxime, a pesticide ingredient, and dichloromethane, a synonym for methylene chloride.

Although the company's news releases focused on the effects of aldicarb oxime, federal investigators believe the gas was two-thirds methylene chloride, a suspected carcinogen, and one-third aldicarb oxime, The Los Angeles Times reported today.

The newspaper said methylene chloride can also cause nervous system and brain disorders when inhaled in large doses. It could also cause eye, skin and respiratory irritation.

Thad Epps, a Carbide spokesman in Institute, said early today he could not comment on the Times report.

Anderson was scheduled for talks today with Gov. Arch Moore and a meeting with a group called the National Institute for Chemical Studies.

The group was organized by area businessmen after methyl isocyanate wafted from a Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, in December, killing more than 2,000 people and injuring thousands more.

Anderson's trip was scheduled well in advance of Sunday's leak and a second leak of a less toxic chemical on Tuesday.

Officials and residents exposed to the toxic fumes on Sunday said Thursday they want to hear more than the familiar assurances that plants are safe.

Anderson "has to address the issues. He has to say these leaks will be detected. He has to say there will be an effort to put in more fail-safe systems," said Thomas Cole, president of West Virginia State College.

Tests on lab mice show aldicarb pesticide affects immune system

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A new study on the pesticide that sickened hundreds this summer when improperly used on California watermelons points up a need for further tests on chemicals in the environment, scientists say.

Researchers at the University of Wisconsin say they found that the widely used bug-killer aldicarb can affect the immune systems of laboratory mice at doses now considered safe in drinking water.

The lower the dose of the chemical a mouse received, the greater the effect in some of the blood cells that protect mice from infection, a finding that runs counter to conventional scientific knowledge, the researchers said.

But they said they could draw no conclusions from the study whether levels of aldicarb that have been found in the well water in some areas of Wisconsin, New York, Florida and other states are hazardous to health.

"At this time, we do not have any hard evidence there is a health risk from ingestion of aldicarb in very low doses," Ronald Hinsdill, chairman of the university's bacteriology department, told a news conference Thursday. "We do have a caution flag."

He said the researchers regard their work as very preliminary and recognize that it raises more questions than it answers about the health risks of chemicals in small doses.

"I think we have significant findings and they ought to be followed up," Hinsdill said. "We hope that now the resources of the federal government and state can be mobilized to do research on the health effects of pesticides in general."

Party girl first lady won't reveal her age

Nancy Reagan

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (CNS) — President Reagan will throw a belated birthday party for his wife this weekend at their mountaintop ranch, although first lady Nancy Reagan "has not decided" how many candles should be on the cake.

Mrs. Reagan's birthday was on July 6, but a celebration originally planned for a ranch trip last month was canceled because of the TWA hostage crisis at the time.

Some 70 guests, including all of the Reagan children and grandchildren, were invited to the party, which will have no press coverage, the White House announced Thursday.

There is some dispute over the actual age of the first lady. Although she claims to be 62, some records list her as being 64.

Fraud in Gosch case?

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A man accused of fraudulently taking money for the return of a newspaper carrier said the boy, missing for three years, had been sold into Mexican slavery by a motorcycle gang.

Robert Herman Meier II, 19, of Saginaw, Mich., also known as Samuel Forbes Dakota, surrendered to federal authorities at the U.S. border at Niagara Falls, N.Y., Thursday. He was being held at the Erie County Jail in Buffalo pending a bail hearing today, the FBI said.

Investigators accuse him of fraudulently taking $11,000 from John and Noreen Gosch, whose son, Johnny, then aged 12, disappeared on Sept. 5, 1982 while delivering newspapers.

A letter the investigators say Meier wrote to Johnny's parents said the boy was taken as part of a large child-slavery ring operated by a motorcycle club to which Meier belonged.

German wine tainted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents announced Thursday they have found traces of a poisonous chemical in a West German wine exported to the United States.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said the chemical, diethylene glycol, normally used in automobile anti-freeze, had been found in a bottle of 1984 Haus of Franz Liebfraumilch, shipped by a German company.

Officials said they would not halt the sale of German wines because ATF's extensive testing had uncovered only one German wine with a small amount of the chemical.

Insurance needs probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader, saying the insurance industry is creating a crisis by raising rates and canceling coverage for many businesses, has called for a federal investigation.

Medical malpractice insurance, protection for midwives and day care centers, liability insurance for municipalities and many other forms of coverage have been affected in recent months.

Man with AIDS freed

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Theft charges were dropped against a man accused of stealing a bicycle and a judge gave him $20 for bus fare back to Ohio after the man reported he had AIDS, authorities said.

Municipal Judge John D. Downer asked Marion County Deputy Prosecutor Jon M. Bailey not to file formal charges, Bailey said Thursday. "Rather than expose court and sheriff's personnel to this hazard, no charges were filed. There isn't any doubt it was a good arrest."

More cheese recalled

(LAT) — Potentially dangerous bacteria was discovered by federal investigators in Liederkranz cheese sold by General Foods Corp. and the firm voluntarily issued a national recall of the product, government and company officials said on Thursday.

The specific type of bacteria found in the General Foods cheese is not the same as that which caused the recent epidemic in California but it can be just as deadly, a Food and Drug Administration microbiologist said.

Both FDA and company sources said the entire contaminated cheese batch — consisting of about 20,000 packages — was recovered in an Ohio plant where it was being processed, but that the recall was initiated on Wednesday anyway.

Sergeant keeps her cool in penitentiary kitchen

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Sgt. Kate Polk keeps it cool in the Texas Department of Correction's Retrieve Unit kitchen, officials say.

Usually drinking ice water during the dinner shift she supervises, she does not overreact or lose her temper, they say. But she also doesn't hesitate to confront challenges to her authority.

Her cool and effectiveness brought Ms. Polk to the rank of sergeant after nine months with the TDC.

Her rapid rise through the ranks is uncommon, but what makes Ms. Polk even more unusual is her status as the first female sergeant in a men's unit kitchen in TDC.

She supervises the shift of regular employees and inmates who cook the dinner meal every day between 11:45 a.m. and 8 p.m. at Retrieve near Angleton.

Assistant Warden L.V. Plenti said she is watched closely by almost everybody — prisoners, other female employees and fellow employees.

"They watch her because she is a woman," Plenti said.

What they've seen, he said, is an employee doing an excellent job.

Ms. Polk's supervisor, Capt. L.J. Gerick, agrees.

"I just wish I had a lot more officers like her," he said. "The inmates respect her. Not just because she's a lady."

She doesn't have difficulty bringing problem inmates into line, he said.

Some situations demand her "cool."

"You can never lose your temper," Gerick said. "When you lose your temper, then they got you right where they want you."

Ms. Polk credits her success to determination.

When she decided to go to work for TDC, she said it was for "a challenge, I guess. Just something I wanted to do. Something I wanted to do good at. I wanted to learn from this. I can profit from it."

Success will come from doing the job well, she said.

She usually does not think of her status as the TDC's only woman kitchen supervisor in a men's prison.

"Sometimes I do and sometimes I don't," she said. "I don't have time to really think about how others feel about me."

Ms. Polk said her biggest challenge is "trying to keep in mind at all times where I am and trying to keep myself under control, trying to keep myself in an authoritative position."

There was little reaction among inmates or staff when Ms. Polk started as dinner shift supervisor.

"There was surprise at first," Ms. Polk said. "It took some time for them to get adjusted to me being here."

"I thought there would be (some reaction) when I got her here," Gerlick said. "A long time ago, I would have said, 'No women in pens (penitentiaries). No women in a man's pen and no men in a women's pen.' Now, times have changed. We have no problem."

Institutional cooking always feeds complaints among those forced to eat it.

Ms. Polk says most complaints are about quantity, but not all are so run-of-the-mill.

"Since I'm a female, they expect motherly meals," she said. "They get the best I can put out."

Violence among the inmates does not bother her, a reaction she thinks is typical.

"I can't be here and be under fear," she said. "It's just in your nature to adjust to where you are and just don't worry about it."

Gerlick said there is not much to worry about because inmates working in the kitchen are not considered troublemakers.

Ms. Polk considers her job to be more kitchen supervisor than guard. She had no kitchen experience before joining the TDC.

Her future is still undecided. She could stay with the TDC, perhaps go for captain, or look for work elsewhere, perhaps with a restaurant.

"I don't know. Time will tell," she said. "It's a tough decision to make because I feel like here, I'm contributing to something. But at a restaurant, you're just there."

She's had few problems at work and considers her TDC experiences to be mostly positive.

Three men catch shark in dark

SANDY POINT STATE PARK, Md. (AP) — It wasn't easy catching a 9½-foot shark from a 14-foot boat, but three men did just that, and did so in the dark.

Robert Arndt, 32, Douglas Stover, 28, and Glenn Hardy, 35, all of Baltimore, were fishing about a mile off Sandy Point near the Bay Bridge earlier this week when the 475-pound bull shark bit.

"I was about to sit down in my 14-foot bass boat to light a cigarette when — wham! — the shark took the bait," Arndt said. "None of us could believe what was happening."

Arndt said he and his friends had hooked a shark twice before, but cut the line when it appeared one of the men might fall overboard.

State park ranger Jeffrey Ruark said, "We seldom see sharks that big." But he added that sharks are not unusual that far into the bay, especially when a lack of rain makes the water saltier.

Arndt, Stover and Hardy fought the shark until dawn as it pulled south toward Annapolis and open sea.

"We didn't have those fancy chairs you find on ocean-going fishing boats where people sit and place the fishing rod in a metal tube," Arndt said.

"Instead, I had to kneel in the stern and hold on for dear life while one of the other guys steered and the other waited for the shark to tire."

The shark finally slowed after about five miles, but getting it into the boat proved to be a bigger problem than hanging on to it.

"When we saw what we had and how big it was, we could hardly speak," Arndt said.

The three finally got a rope around the shark's head, he said. It took four shots from a .357-caliber Magnum handgun to kill it.

Park rangers back at Sandy Point helped the men maneuver their trophy onto a floating dock, from which they could dump it into their boat. Back on land, a tow truck hoisted the shark onto Arndt's pickup truck.

War of uncertainty

With the return Wednesday of what the Communist government in Hanoi says are the remains of 26 Americans missing in the Vietnam War, there again is reason for the families of missing U.S. servicemen to begin hoping that someday — someday — the fates of their loved ones will be known.

Perhaps nothing is as devastating for the families as the uncertainty. The Vietnam War has been over for 10 years; finally, this year, the veterans of the conflict who were shunned on their return to the United States, have been belatedly welcomed home. In many other ways, the wounds of the war have healed. But not for the families of the 2,400 or so American servicemen who are still listed as POW/MIAs — missing-in-action or prisoners of war.

For those families, there always are the doubts, the uncertainties, the desire to know their loved one's fates. In the absence of that information, they are torn. They cannot give up on the hope that the next day will bring a word of life — or death. The years pass, but no message of encouragement — or finality — is forthcoming.

Occasionally, as on Wednesday of this week, hope arises when the government of Vietnam releases more servicemen's remains from that tragic and controversial war. Last month, the Communist government in Hanoi even went so far as to suggest a high-level visit to help resolve the emotionally-charged issue of the Americans still listed as missing-in-action.

That type of visit would be helpful only if it would encourage greater cooperation in resolving the issue of the fates of the 2,400 servicemen.

Hanoi is anxious to "normalize" relations with the United States. It would be to Vietnam's benefit to be able to do so. But before that normalization can come about, the fates of the missing must be known.

Until that is accomplished, the families of the missing servicemen will go on fighting their own private Vietnam War.

'Example' wrong one

I would like to take this opportunity to salute a team of outstanding athletes which has been a joy to support and a fine example of good sportsmanship. The team I am referring to is the Midland Eastern Little League All-Stars. They ended their season recently in Pecos with a 6-2 tournament record.

Along with my praise for their efforts, I feel compelled to offer these young men an apology. I sincerely apologize for the actions of certain Pecos Little League officials who abused their authority and shortchanged this team of their right to a berth in the State Tournament in Waco. This example of lying and cheating is what our young people were exposed to recently.

My apology goes with the hope that our youth will not lose faith in the entire "adult" population. I realize that the demands put on young people to respect authority, obey their elders and be honest and just, lose their meaning when something like this happens. I ask them to rise above the selfish egotism of some people and take pride in their accomplishments and their good sportsmanship.

In closing, I would appeal to my fellow members of the "adult" community to please remember that our young people look to us constantly for example and direction. Our examples speak far louder than our words. Let us make them proud to follow in our footsteps.

My thanks to all the people who have supported the team and made this baseball season not only successful but exciting and memorable.

Objections confusing

We read with interest the full page ad and comments recently regarding the new trouping Teen Esteem Machine.

We are confused as to what the group is objecting to. Is it Planned Parenthood or the Esteem Machine? We feel that they are two separate issues and should be addressed in that way.

Upon careful reading of the ad, the quotes have been taken from literature allegedly distributed by Planned Parenthood. They DO NOT come from the Esteem Machine presentation as implied. This is misleading if the intent of the ad is to educate the community on the Esteem Machine.

It also appears that the statements quoted were presented out of context; the design being that by "lifting" statements from the main body of a reference, an emotional reaction is sought rather than a reasoned response.

The issue as we see it is freedom of choice. After studying carefully all viewpoints and opinions regarding the Esteem Machine, then each of us has the opportunity to attend or not attend an Esteem Machine performance, the choice, the responsibility, should be an individual one.

While we respect the sincerity of this group's concerns, we do object to what seems to be an attempt to deny the community access to information that we as individuals MAY decide is useful to our children's educational experience. The question of the Esteem Machine's validity and its impact must be left to each individual family.

Drug programs needed

Recently I heard that the United States was losing the battle against drugs. I have a strategy that might turn the tide.

Drug education in our schools has been proposed as a weapon against this problem. This is surely true, but I don't think there has been a concentrated enough effort toward this end.

I think a one-hour, very vividly done educational program, should be shown to kids over and over once during every six-week period in school.

This clipping could show heroin addicts in withdrawals, people in vegetated states in asylums, yellow drunks dying, families at funerals from drug overdose victims, an example of how much money is squandered on various drugs, addicts committing burglaries to support their habit, and various other tragedies.

It might be a little too traumatic to show first-graders, but I heard third-graders in Odessa were already smoking pot, so maybe that would be a good level at which to start the program.

I believe that maybe in a generation or less the drugs would start piling up in the pushers' hands, the poppies would start dying on the stem, coffee beans would start replacing cocoa beans, and we could breathe a sigh of relief. How about it?

CHARLEY REESE

Reforming education just a fad

Reforming public education is a fad these days, but I don't believe it can be done for the same reason you can't expect a sheep-killing dog to change its own diet.

Charley Reese

The problem with public education is public education. No bureaucracy is going to reform itself. No vested interest is going to shed its interest. In such circumstances, reform becomes merely a camouflage for doing more of the same.

There are generally two approaches to reform. One, favored by politicians eager to claim credit without exerting any effort, is to provide more money. This defies common sense and empirical evidence which shows no necessary cause and effect relationship between expenditures and results. It has the advantage of appealing to the education bureaucracy and unions as well as providing statistics for editorial writers who, as ignorant as the politicians, think quality can be measured on an expenditure-per-whatever basis.

The second approach is to insist on measurable test results, a return to "basics," longer school days, and tests for teachers. That approach begs the question.

The fundamental problem of public education is that there is no longer a consensus about what public education ought to accomplish. The original purpose of public education was to produce people who could earn a living and to indoctrinate them with basic American values.

Today there is no agreement on what American values are. Changes in the workplace have had the effect of converting universities into white-collar vo-tech schools. This has caused the public schools to view academic subjects as vocational education and to minimize benefits for those children who have neither the aptitude nor inclination for the kinds of job training universities provide.

There's no point in blaming teachers. Teachers are no longer sure what is expected of them because school administrators, school boards, and parents are no longer sure. Our culture is fragmented and the fissures run clean through society from parents to politicians.

What are American values? Free market economy or socialism? Finance capitalism or property-based capitalism? Judaic-Christian morality or hedonism or humanism? Nationalism or internationalism? Warrior society or pacifist society?

No subject can be taught in a moral-philosophical vacuum. Every human operates within a moral-philosophical framework even if it's not consciously defined. It shows in whatever the person does whether it's teaching, writing a textbook, or administering a school system.

In the absence a consensus on what that moral-philosophical framework should be, then individuals go off in their own directions. That's why public education has become a divisive force, rather than a unifying force.

Aggravating the situation is the loss of control over the education process by parents. Local control exists only in form and lip service but not in substance. Lay school boards are shamelessly manipulated by the professional staffs. The major influence on public education today comes from colleges of education which have as much contact with and sympathy for grassroots America as a Martian.

The solution then is to break the public education monopoly. The best way to do this is to provide a voucher system, which we already do on the university level (the GI bill). This will foster and encourage private education and thus force public education to compete for students.

It will also be necessary to prohibit public education from regulating private education. Else, it will regulate it right out of existence.

To do this will require a political war because while the public education bureaucracy has a spotty record of looking out for the interests of children it has an excellent record of looking out for its own interests.

Warren Leamon, a University of Georgia professor of English, has written a brilliant article on this theme in the spring issue of Southern Partisan. Some, though not all, of the ideas in this column are based on his article.

JACK ANDERSON

Late poet may be coming home

WASHINGTON — While most of the world would consider the upcoming Reagan-Gorbachev talks the most important face-to-face meeting of 1985, a fiercely loyal band of American poets, professors and intellectuals has focused instead on a meeting held in June in a small, tastefully appointed apartment in Venice.

Jack Anderson

The participants in this unrecorded negotiating session were Olga Rudge, 90-year-old former mistress of the late poet Ezra Pound, and Professor Carroll Terrell of the University of Maine, president of the Ezra Pound Society.

They discussed plans to disinter Pound's body from its resting place in Venice's "isle of the dead," San Michele, and rebury it in the poet's birthplace, Hailey, Idaho.

Pound, who is considered by some America's greatest poet — or at least second only to Walt Whitman — had wanted to be buried in Hailey. But when he died in Venice at 87 in 1972, there was little possibility that he'd be brought home.

Although his poetic gifts were not seriously disputed, Pound had disgraced himself with wild statements that were, variously, anti-Semitic, anti-Christian, anti-Moslem and anti just about anything else. He compounded his quirky bigotry by fulminating over the radio during World War II on behalf of Italy's fascist dictator, Benito Mussolini.

Pound surrendered to Italian partisans in 1945 and was literally caged in an American military detention center in Pisa. Ruled mentally unfit to stand trial for treason, Pound was confined in St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, D.C., until 1958. While he was there, in 1949, Pound received the prestigious Bollingen prize for his poetry.

On his release, Pound returned to Italy and worked on his "Cantos," an 802-page epic of man's intellectual history.

Like other members of the Ezra Pound Society, Terrell deplores the poet's racist statements and other egregious personal failings. But he's pained that this most American of poets should lie buried in a foreign land, an exile even in death.

Terrell thinks this year, the 100th anniversary of Pound's birth, is an appropriate time to begin the campaign to bring him home. The 68-year-old professor hopes to be on hand in the year 2000, "about as early as we can expect America to accept him."

"When he is brought back," Terrell told our associate Les Whitten, "it should be with honor for his poetry, whatever one may feel for him as a person." He said Miss Rudge wants Pound taken home on one of his nation's naval vessels, as W.B. Yeats was returned to Ireland from France.

Since Pound's loyal, long-suffering wife, Dorothy, died in 1973, much depends on the feelings of their son, Omar, a distinguished poet himself, who lives in Princeton, N.J.

"I hate moving him from that beautiful site," he said, "but my historical instincts are that there would be a kind of resurrecting in bringing him to Hailey." He thought perhaps a modest monument in Hailey would be a suitable compromise. Omar even suggested a quote from the Cantos for the memorial: "Let an old man rest."

Much depends also on the residents of Hailey, a small town just down the road from Sun Valley. City Council President Joseph Maccarillo said he knew that Pound was a native son, but had not been aware of his racist rantings. In view of that, he said, Hailey's acceptance of the poet's body "is going to be a tossup." Maccarillo said he'll have to think long and hard about it himself.

CONTRA JUSTICE: Responding to congressional concern over charges of human rights abuses, the largest of the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan contra groups, the FDN, has announced that it will soon set up a judicial system to try those accused of trampling on the rights of civilians within its jurisdiction. "We will be the first guerrilla organization ever to set up its own code of laws," a top contra officer told our associate Jon Lee Anderson.

Using a roving prosecutor and "juries of conscience," the contras will try colleagues accused of murder, torture and rape — all of which will be subject to the death penalty. Lesser crimes will bring imprisonment, though exactly where is not clear.

Will criminal charges be retroactive? "Of course not," said the contra officer. "That would violate the human rights of the men." The Sandinista government in Managua and international human-rights organizations have charged the contras with the murder of thousands of Nicaraguans in the past.

The contras were vague when asked about their treatment of captured Sandinista soldiers, infiltrators and suspected civilian spies — who are customarily executed.

Reagan can 'boot' protectionism

WASHINGTON — There are signs President Reagan will put a dramatic end to summer doldrums by opting against any relief for the ailing domestic shoe industry, a signal he will not follow Herbert Hoover's protectionist trail to world economic chaos.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

He is supposed to act by Sept. 1 on recommendations of the government's International Trade Commission (ITC) to cut shoe imports. With his Cabinet split and foreign trade the "in" political issue, conventional wisdom here smells compromise. Besides, Capitol Hill warns: Yield on shoes or you'll get Draconian legislation on textiles, lumber and much else.

But this may be the time for Reagan to stand tall on trade. Rather than temporize on a case so lacking merit, he may well make clear that descent into protectionism is intolerable. That decision would ignore short-term politics, hanging tough despite the risks.

If so, he will display a kind of courage not yet seen in the Reagan presidency. While he has frequently upheld ideological purity on questions where public opinion is on his side (notably, opposing higher taxes), the president this time would be fleeing a bipartisan lynch mob with no supporting polls in his pocket. It will take the veto pen of a Great Confronter rather than coaxing from the Great Communicator to beat back a suicidal plunge toward protectionism.

The administration has too long avoided any coherent public policy on trade, not dealing with internal divisions. This explains current administration debate over the ITC shoe recommendations. Four Cabinet-level agencies — Commerce, Agriculture, Labor and the U.S. Trade Representative's Office — want at least some relief.

Political advisers agree. Why risk building up the protectionist bloc by refusing to help shoes? If the president now shows that statutory procedures for getting help from the ITC are bootless, it is argued, textiles and lumber will cite slamming the presidential door to justify demands for legislative protection.

This same argument also claims shoe relief is needed to keep Sen. John Danforth, chairman of the Senate Finance Subcommittee on International Trade, from falling totally into the protectionist camp. His state of Missouri is the nation's second-leading shoe producer but provides many more jobs in textiles. If there is no relief for shoes, goes the argument, Danforth could end up pushing textile quotas.

The president is urged to say "no" by State, Treasury and the Council of Economic Advisers (CEA), partly because they understand a favor for shoes could not possibly halt the protectionist avalanche. Besides, they argue persuasively that the shoe case so lacks merit that this is the ideal place to draw the line.

It is not merely that American consumers are being asked to fork over an extra $1.3 billion a year for their new shoes to save 26,000 jobs. Rather, this is an industry that simply cannot compete with the rest of the world. Most certainly it is suffering from import competition, but it is undeniably fair competition.

Administration officials urging a "no" verdict talk privately of an America someday without shoe factories and argue the U.S. must shift to doing what it does best. These same officials believe the trade deficit results mainly from American prosperity and Western stagnation elsewhere that has drastically reduced foreign sales. The answer, they say, is growth abroad. But such plain talk has never emerged publicly from a Reagan administration unable to come to grips with trade.

Secretary of State George Shultz and CEA Chairman Beryl Sprinkel argue the free trade case can yet be made by the Great Communicator. In truth, with protectionist mob hysteria infecting Congress, the most the president can hope for is the one-third plus one vote in one house needed to sustain his veto of seemingly inevitable protectionist legislation.

In the dubious belief that they won the special election in the Texas 1st Congressional District on the protectionist issue, Democratic strategists glory in thinking they have finally found the antidote to Reaganism. But it is a poison pill: passage of a 25 percent tariff barrier ensuring global retaliation. Republicans are joining in to replay 1929, when the Smoot-Hawley tariff, passed by a Republican Senate and signed by Republican Hoover, triggered the Great Depression.

John Connally and Walter Mondale are recent examples of candidates who anticipated rich political harvests from preaching protectionism but wound up experiencing no such windfall. Reagan can expect caterwauling from politicians who ignore these lessons of history, but the shoe case gives him a chance to show he's got the guts to transcend short-term expediency and the will to avert catastrophe not too far in the distance.

BALTIMORE — Lawyers for accused Soviet spy John Anthony Walker Jr. admitted Thursday that their client left a grocery bag later found to contain classified documents at a rural Montgomery County, Md., "drop site," and then returned twice to check whether his "contact" had picked up the delivery.

The admission came during a hearing in federal court here on Walker's unsuccessful bid to bar the contents of the paper bag from being used as evidence at his trial. FBI agents have testified the bag was filled with trash, a "Dear Friend" letter from Walker to his Soviet contact, and a stack of classified documents from the USS Nimitz.

U.S. District Court Judge Alexander Harvey II, in the first of two days of hearings on motions in the case against Walker and his son, Navy Seaman Michael Lance Walker, also ruled that FBI agents had violated John Walker's constitutional rights in obtaining a statement from him shortly after his arrest. As a consequence, Harvey said, the statement, which he described as "brief and exculpatory," may not be used at Walker's trial.

Harvey granted defense motions that father and son be tried separately and said he would set a trial date for Michael Walker, who served on the Nimitz, after John Walker's trial, scheduled to start Oct. 28.

The admission about John Walker's activities in rural Poolesville on the evening of May 19, shortly before his arrest on espionage charges, cannot be used against him at his trial.

Walker's lawyers made the statement about the grocery bag — their first acknowledgment of their client's activities that day and his connection to the bag of classified documents — to support their argument that Walker had not abandoned the bag and retained a "reasonable expectation of privacy" in its contents.

Therefore, argued lawyer Thomas B. Mason, the government violated Walker's constitutional rights by searching the bag without a warrant, and the fruits of that search should not be admitted at his trial.

Mason said detailed instructions from Walker's contact told him to look for a delivery from the contact at the grocery bag drop site.

CBO predicts budget-deficit cutting will fall far short of Congress' goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Congressional Budget Office is predicting higher deficits than Congress estimated when it passed the budget just two weeks ago, and an economy less robust than predicted by the Reagan administration.

But CBO Director Rudolph G. Penner says he "can't help but be upbeat," because of what he sees as a dramatic effort to stem the tide of red ink.

The budget office, in a report Thursday to the Senate and House Budget committees, estimated the deficit for the year beginning Oct. 1 would be $175 billion. Deficits would decline to $163 billion in fiscal 1987 and $143 billion in 1988, it said.

The budget passed by Congress on Aug. 1 assumed deficits of $172 billion in fiscal 1986, $155 billion in 1987 and $113 billion in 1988. The deficit for the current fiscal year is estimated at $210 billion.

The Congressional Budget Office is a non-partisan organization set up by Congress to do research and provide advice to congressional committees on budget matters. Although it issues reports, it does not make recommendations.

The administration and Congress started this year with the goal of deficits below $100 million a year by fiscal 1988.

The CBO predicts, even if Congress obeys all the budget guidelines, that deficit reduction will fall far short of that goal — largely because it sees a more modest economic recovery than the boom predicted by the White House for the second half of this year.

Penner said the results "may be a disappointment" to people who expect quicker results, but the budget still represents "dramatic progress in attacking the deficit problem." Deficits without the budget changes would be $100 billion higher in 1988, he said.

Significantly, he said, the yearly deficits, while declining gradually in dollars, make dramatic drops when considered in relation to the growing economy.

The deficit, 5.5 percent of gross national product this year, will drop to 4.2 percent next year and, if budget priorities are maintained, decline to 2.1 percent by 1990, the report said.

That pattern is sharply in contrast to what the budget office expected just 18 months ago, when deficit projections topped $400 billion a year and 6 percent of GNP, Penner said. As a result, there is less fear of "hyper-inflation" — quickly rising prices — and sharply lower standards of living that would be caused by government debts eating up more and more of the nation's money.

The new forecast says the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will rebound in the second half of this year from the weak 1 percent annual growth rate posted in the first six months.

But while the administration predicts a 3 percent rise in the gross national product, the CBO said growth would be just 2.6 percent.

Angels' broom sweeps El Paso Diablos

Angulo hurls 6-0 shutout

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland starting pitcher Ken Angulo achieved a first Thursday night against the El Paso Diablos by going the distance for a seven-hit, 6-0 shutout in the second game of a doubleheader at Angels Stadium.

Angulo's shutout is only the third of the year recorded by Texas League pitchers against the red-hot Diablos, but the first achieved without any relief help. His victory over El Paso completed a sweep of the night. Ray Chadwick and Todd Fischer combined to gain a 7-5 victory in the opener.

"I would imagine they're not an easy team to shutout," said Angel manager Joe Maddon. "Even without (Glenn) Braggs they are a formidable team."

"A shutout is a tough thing to do against these guys because they can really hit the ball. They're tough one through nine in the lineup" said Angulo, who improved to 8-5 on the year. "They're the best team in the league and you've got to respect them."

Things may not have gone as well for Angulo but for teammate Greg Key, who blasted a grand slam in the bottom of the fourth inning to snap a scoreless deadlock. The Angels added two more runs in the frame before the Diablos could get the final out.

"That grand slam made it easier for the pitcher tonight," said Maddon. "Kenny pitched a great game, but Key's grand slam put some runs on the board quick. It was good for Greg because he's been struggling at the plate. He hit that one on the nose. He's always had a history of being a good clutch player."

"He's Mr. Clutch," echoed Angulo. "It was a great hit. He hit the heck out it. It was the game winner and it helped me get the confidence I needed."

Billie Merrifield led off the inning with a double up the middle and, after David Heath walked, went to second on Fernando Villaescusa's sacrifice bunt. An intentional walk to Doug Davis loaded the bases for Key's homer over the center field fence, his second round-tripper of the year.

One out later, Mark McLemore walked, went to second on Brian Hartsock's walk and scored on Phil Stephenson's single to left. Merrifield followed with his second double of the inning to score Hartsock, a shot off the left field fence.

Angulo was in trouble in the fifth inning when John Gibbons led off with a single and stolen base, but got out of the jam when Gibbons was stranded on third when the Angels turned their third double play of the game (fourth of the night) to end the inning.

"It wasn't pretty, but I'll take it," said Angulo. "The outfield shagged some flies down for me and the defense turned some double plays. Dave Heath (catcher) called an excellent game for me and I have to give him a lot of credit. I have to give everybody on the team a lot of credit."

THE ANGELS spotted Chadwick a 4-0 lead in the third inning of the first game with a one-out rally. Key led off with a single up the middle and moved to second when Mike Madril reached on an error by Diablo first baseman Billy Joe Robidoux.

Both runners advanced when McLemore grounded out to the mound for the second out and Hartsock was walked intentionally to load the bases. The strategy didn't pay off as Stephenson connected for a three-RBI double to right-center. He scored on Merrifield's single to left.

In the top of the fifth, former Midland Cub Jesus Alfaro blasted a solo home run to left field, his 13th of the year, to cut the margin to 4-1.

The Angels countered with three runs in the fifth when Madril and McLemore singled and Stephenson walked. Merrifield brought in one with a sacrifice fly and Villaescusa and Davis each added RBI singles for a 7-1 lead.

Chadwick, who had allowed only two hits and two walks in the first six innings, got into trouble in the top of the seventh when, after getting the first out, he walked three straight batters.

Julian Gonzalez came in and was called for a balk while facing Kiki Diaz, who eventually walked. Jim Paciorek added an RBI single and suddenly it was 7-3, the bases were loaded and only one out.

Again, Maddon went to the bullpen, this time calling on Fischer. After the two-RBI double, Fischer sturck out heavy-hitting Joey Meyer and got Alan Cartwright to groundout back to the mound to save the game.

"Ray's been throwing the ball well lately," said Maddon. "He started to break down mechanically there at the end. He wasn't overpowering tonight, but he got the job done. This was the least stuff he's had in his last three or four starts."

WITHOUT ALL his best stuff, Chadwick still managed to record five strikeouts, including one against Alfaro who lost his grip on a swing and sent the bat flying back at Chadwick in the second inning.

"It hit me on the knee but it didn't hurt," said Chadwick, who improved to 4-2 and thinks Wednesday night's rainout hurt more than helped him. "I think last night caught up with me. I threw a lot in the bullpen thinking I might get to throw and then came out again tonight.

"I actually started tiring in the fifth inning. I didn't really have a good fastball so I was trying to throw to different spots. In the seventh inning, I just couldn't get it over the plate.

Enter Gonzalez and then Fischer.

"Fischer was pitching up and down when I first got here but in the last three or four weeks, he's been awesome," said Chadwick, who joined the team June 26 in El Paso after 10 innings of work in "A ball in Redwood."

ANGEL NOTES: The Midland victories over El Paso knotted this series at two games apiece, but the Angels are still way behind for the year against the Diablos. El Paso holds a 18-8 edge over Midland...The Diablos, by virtue of a Beaumont split with San Antonio, managed to cut their magic number to four despite two losses...Merrifield was the leading Angel batter in both games with a 3-for-4 overall performance, including two doubles. Key was 3-for-5 with four RBI...Tonight, the Angels and Diablos play their fifth game of the stand. El Paso will throw right hander Mark Ciardi, 5-1, while Midland counters with righty Jamie Orozco, 1-1...

Dorsett hits Poke camp

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — After ending his 25-day-old holdout, running back Tony Dorsett says he's going to put away the name-calling and put on his Dallas Cowboys practice gear today for a team workout.

"I'm happy to be back and I never thought I'd say that about training camp," Dorsett said Thursday as he arrived at the National Football League team's training camp. "It's been an ordeal."

After meeting with his attorneys in Los Angeles to go over his new five-year contract, Dorsett met with Cowboys president Tex Schramm for more than an hour, met with the media for 20 minutes and then went to a local hospital to take his camp physical.

Although Dorsett was to practice with the team today, Coach Tom Landry said the running back will not play Saturday night in San Diego and will see his first game action Aug. 26 in Texas Stadium against Chicago.

"I just want to be a part of this team, and I'm extremely happy," he said Thursday. "Through all this, there has been a lot of things said, some that shouldn't have been. Apologies have been made and I owe an apology to the fans of America."

Dorsett was to be paid $450,000, $500,000 and $550,000 the next three seasons. Instead, he'll get $450,000 for each of the next three years and $500,000 a year in a two-year contract extension.

He is to get annuity payments of $300,000 annually from 1993-2012, a total of $6 million. In addition to getting $450,000 between the time he retires and when the annuity payments begin, he has a five-year, $850,000 real estate deal set up by the Cowboys.

Dorsett, a nine-year veteran who has "no bad feelings" towards the Cowboys now, said he decided to come back last weekend after watching the Dallas-Green Bay exhibition game on satellite-fed television.

Dorsett said he is at his playing weight of 185 pounds and ready to play. He added that he is "on a mission now to help this team gain some respect. Last year we lost some and I'm back to help get it back."

Tulane's Williams gets new trial

Prosecutors' dirty tricks blamed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state judge said another trial will begin in three weeks on sports bribery charges against John "Hot Rod" Williams, the former Tulane University star accused of fixing two basketball games.

District Judge Alvin Oser granted a mistrial on Thursday after agreeing with defense lawyers that prosecutors used dirty tricks in trying to win a conviction.

"The case is back in its original position again," Oser said after granting the mistrial.

Assistant district attorney Bruce Whittaker said he would appeal the mistrial order. Oser gave him a week to take his plea to the state's 4th Circuit Court of Appeal.

Williams is accused of three counts of conspiring to fix basketball games and two counts of accepting bribes to shave points in games against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State. The counts carry a maximum total penalty of 17 years in jail and $35,000 in fines.

DEFENSE LAWYER Michael Green grumbled through two months of pretrial motions that prosecutors were hiding evidence that might help to prove Williams' innocence. Such evidence is called Brady material after the U.S. Supreme Court rule establishing the law requiring disclosure of such exculpatory material.

Oser had ordered prosecutors to give him all statements, transcripts, reports and other evidence so he could determine whether it qualified as Brady material. On three occasions, Oser warned prosecutors not to withhold anything.

On Wednesday, former Tulane forward Jon Johnson testified that he gave a tape recorded statement to assistant district attorney Eric Dubelier. Prosecutors had never mentioned that to Oser, who ordered the tape produced, examined it and found it contained Brady material.

Green then asked that all charges against Williams be dismissed, saying that information contained in the tape would have helped him cross-examine four prior witnesses. He said prosecutors had denied Williams his constitutional right to a fair trial and deprived him of protection against double jeopardy.

Oser refused on Thursday to dismiss the charges, saying that Louisiana law has no provision for such action by a trial judge.

GREEN THEN requested a mistrial, an option he had rejected when Oser offered it on Wednesday.

Green said that after being made aware of the Johnson transcript, he received a telephone call telling him that prosecutors had a picture of their star witness, Gary Kranz, posing with a mound of cocaine and similar pictures of others involved in the case.

Green reluctantly asked for a mistrial, saying it was a better alternative than taking a long recess to examine the new material and recalling witnesses for further examination in the light of the new evidence — all before a jury that had been locked up in a nearby motel for several days.

Whittaker said there was never any attempt to hide Brady material, just a difference over definitions.

"We are talking about a photograph of a state witness using cocaine — a witness who admitted on the stand that he used cocaine," Whittaker said. The picture could not possibly help to prove Williams innocent, he said.

JOHN WARRICK, one of the jurors excused by Oser when the mistrial was granted, said he spent a lot of time reading magazines in his motel room. Newspapers and television were forbidden because of the possibility that news reports would influence their decision.

"We knew that there was something technical being argued," he said.

"The defense was ahead on points. It seemed like they were trying the witnesses, instead of John Williams," he said.

The feat of two leadoff hitters hitting home runs in the first inning of the same game has happened just three times in major league history. Who was the first? The last? The second?

Thursday's answer: Steve Filipowicz is the player who hit a homer for the New York Giants baseball team and scored a touchdown for the Giants football team. Filipowicz hit two homers for the Giants in 1945 and scored two towuchdowns for the football team in the same year and three the next.

Dodgers' streak ends

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Their names are Welch, Valenzuela, Hershiser, Reuss, Honeycutt, Niedenfuer, Diaz and Howell. Those Los Angeles Dodgers pitchers combined for 52 innings over six days without allowing an earned run.

The string became a club record, surpassing the 48 set in 1968 when Hall of Fame members Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale led the staff, but ended in the first inning Thursday when the Atlanta Braves scored an earned run against Fernando Valenzuela, who went on to gain his seventh straight victory.

"This is the most complete staff I've had since I've been here," said Tom Lasorda, who is in his ninth year as the Dodgers' manager.

"We've got five stoppers is what we've got," said catcher Mike Scioscia after Wednesday night's game in which Bob Welch ran his scoreless streak to 16 innings and dropped his earned run average to 1.67 in a 5-0 victory over Atlanta.

WELCH, 9-1 for the season after elbow troubles in the spring, has had two complete games during the 52-inning streak that began last Friday night after he allowed a second inning home run to Cincinnati's Nick Esasky.

His eighth straight victory was the pitching staff's major league-leading 19th shutout this season.

Also sharing the honors are:

—Valenzuela, 13-8 going into a Thursday afternoon game against Atlanta, went all the way for a victory over the Reds Saturday night, allowing only an unearned run.

—Jerry Reuss, 10-7, hurled a complete-game shutout Sunday.

—Oral Hershiser, 12-3, pitched seven innings before going out for a pinch-hitter Monday night. He gave up one run and it was unearned.

—Rick Honeycutt, 7-10, hurled six innings, and reliever Tom Niedenfuer the final three as they combined for another shutout Tuesday night.

—And relievers Carlos Diaz, Ken Howell and Niedenfuer combined for two scoreless innings in relief in the game Hershiser started.

"This is like an epidemic and I'm glad it's catchy. To get five guys going all at once, that's awesome," said pitching coach Tom Perranoski. "I don't remember that happening. There's usually one or two out of kilter."

THE DODGERS had an 18-21 record on May 11 when they began their charge back. Including Wednesday night's game, their record since then is 49-23 — matching the NL East Division leading St. Louis Cardinals for the same period.

Niedenfuer has contributed significantly to the team resurgence, allowing runs in only five of his last 30 appearances.

After Wednesday night's shutout, the Dodger staff earned run average for the season was just 2.81.

In their first 111 games, the Dodgers scored 429 runs, 383 of them earned. Opponents had scored 387 runs, but only 314 were earned. Los Angeles had a team batting average of .254 to just .227 for the opposition.

Hernandez hits hard times

Associated Press

Although reliever Willie Hernandez has fallen on hard times in recent days, neither friend nor foe has forgotten what he means to the Detroit Tigers.

"A pitcher, like a hitter ... sometimes doesn't get the ball exactly where he wants to," Cleveland's Andre Thornton said after hitting his second game-winning homer off Hernandez in six days to give the Indians a 7-6 victory over the Tigers Thursday night. "We all do that."

Thornton capped Cleveland's four-run ninth inning with a three-run homer. Last Friday, Thornton homered off Hernandez, 7-7, as the Indians beat the Tigers 4-2.

"He cannot be losing too much," Thornton said in defense of Hernandez. "We'd like to have somebody with 24 saves. If you want to give him to us, we'll gladly take him."

Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson also defended Hernandez, who won both the Cy Young and the Most Valuable Player award in the American League last year when he only failed to make good on one save opportunity.

"I would hope you don't throw somebody down that's played as long as he has," Anderson said. "You're never going to have two years like that. No man could do that."

"He's going to end up having 35 saves this year," Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales said. "If you run relievers out there enough, they're going to get hit."

Thornton, who had a poor start this season because of injuries, had five RBIs in the game.

"If I get a good pitch to hit and hit it hard, it's going to drive in a run," he said. "If it goes out of the ballpark, that's just the cream of the pie."

Trailing 6-3, the Indians opened the ninth when pinch-hitter Benny Ayala singled, moved to second on a walk and scored on a single by Julio Franco, who has now hit in 16 consecutive games. Thornton then pounded a pitch from Hernandez into the upper deck in left field for his 11th home run of the season, making a winner of Curt Wardle, 4-4, who pitched one inning of hitless relief.

AL Roundup

Rookie Nelson Simmons knocked in three runs with two homers and Darrell Evans added a two-run shot to help the Tigers take a 6-2 lead after six innings. Simmons, just recalled from the minors on Monday, went 4-for-4.

The Indians led 1-0 in the first off Tigers starter Walt Terrell on an RBI single by Thornton, but the Tigers scored three times in the bottom of the first off Indians starter Roy Smith as Evans hit his 27th homer of the season and Barbaro Garbey added a sacrifice fly.

Simmons, who also homered Wednesday, hit a solo shot leading off the fourth and a two-run homer in the sixth for Detroit. Thornton's RBI grounder and Brook Jacoby's run-scoring double accounted for Cleveland's other runs.

The loss dropped the defending World Series champion Tigers 11½ games behind idle Toronto in the AL East.

Twins 14, Mariners 5

Kent Hrbek hit a grand slam and Gary Gaetti added a three-run homer as Minnesota collected 16 hits in a rout of Seattle.

Despite the power-hitting attack, Twins Manager Ray Miller said an error by Mariners third baseman Jim Presley on a sacrifice bunt was the key play. With Minnesota leading 1-0 in the fourth inning, Mickey Hatcher singled home two runs before Presley threw Tim Teufel's sacrifice bunt into right field, making the score 5-0.

Gaetti completed the eight-run inning with his homer and Hrbek hit his third grand slam of the season in the fifth.

"The bunt turned things around for us," Miller said. "If Teufel is out on that play, maybe Seattle gets out of the inning down just three or four runs."

John Butcher, 9-11, allowed 10 hits in eight innings to get the victory. He had a shutout going into the eighth before Phil Bradley and Ken Phelps homered.

Brewers 7, White Sox 5

Cecil Cooper broke a 3-3 tie with his fifth career grand slam in the seventh inning as Milwaukee beat Chicago.

The Brewers loaded the bases against Chicago starter Floyd Bannister, 5-10, on singles by Charlie Moore and Ed Romero and a walk to Robin Yount. One out later, Cooper hit his ninth homer of the season for a 7-3 lead.

Teddy Higuera, 10-6, was the winner, while Rollie Fingers recorded his 15th save.

Robin Yount added a homer for the Brewers and Scott Fletcher hit his first of the season for the White Sox.

Orioles 9, Rangers 1

Cal Ripken knocked in four runs with a three-run homer and a double to lead Baltimore's rout of Texas.

Ripken's double helped the Orioles take a 2-0 lead in the first inning. The Orioles knocked out Chris Welsh, 2-5, with five more runs in the second. Ripken's 18th homer — 100th lifetime — and Alan Wiggins' run-scoring double keyed the rally in the second.

Storm Davis, 7-7, scattered six hits while striking out seven and walking three in seven innings. Sammy Stewart pitched the final two innings in Baltimore's third straight victory.

Pennant pressure mounts

Cardinals, Mets knotted again

Associated Press

Pennant pressure is starting to build in the National League East, a division where you sometimes need to win more than once a day to stay in first place.

The St. Louis Cardinals proved that to the New York Mets Thursday, sweeping a doubleheader from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-1 and 4-3, while the Mets could manage only a 10-7 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Cardinals regained a share of first place in the NL East as they tied the Mets at 69-43. Ozzie Smith finished the day with a bases-loaded walk in the 12th inning, forcing in the winning run. Smith acknowledged growing pressure in the division.

"In many cases, it's not always good to be in first place unless you can sit out there with a six- to seven-game lead," Smith said. "When you're having to win, it's tough to win every day."

Darrell Porter's two-run single and Kurt Kepshire's eight-inning, five-hit pitching led the Cardinals to victory in the first game.

The Cardinals have won eight of nine — the losses were the Nos. 8 and 9 in a row for Pittsburgh. The Pirates, since a 6-3 triumph July 22 at Los Angeles, have lost 14 straight contests away from home.

They have failed in 60 straight games to win after entering the ninth inning behind in the score. They came close Thursday, tying the second game on Jim Morrison's pinch-hit home run in the ninth.

"There comes a time when they will probably turn around," a sympathetic Smith said of the Pirates. "They just have to keep their heads up and keep trying."

Bill Campbell, 3-2, pitched the final inning for St. Louis and picked up the victory.

Willie McGee singled and scored twice in the nightcap, helped by two of starter Bob Walk's balks. McGee, improving his league-leading batting average to .361, had five hits on the day but suffered a slight ankle sprain in the second game.

"He was going home to ice it down. He won't play tomorrow," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "We'll just have to see what happens. It's a day-to-day thing."

Andy Van Slyke hit his ninth homer of the year and Tommy Herr had four hits in the nightcap.

Mets 10, Phillies 7

Though they scored five runs off Dwight Gooden in five innings, the Phillies and their five pitchers could not hold off the Mets. Gooden's no-decision kept his personal 12-game winning streak intact.

"It was a weird day," Gooden said. "I just didn't do my part.

"I kept falling behind in the count," he added. "I felt like I had good movement on the fastball. In fact, it was one of my best. But I kept falling behind with it, and when you do that, it becomes a pretty good pitch to hit."

Len Dykstra's two-out ground-rule double broke a 7-7 tie in the eighth inning, and the Mets added two more runs in the inning on a three-base error by Von Hayes in left field.

The Mets have won 10 of 11. The Phillies have lost six of eight.

Tom Paciorek, Gary Carter and Ray Knight homered off Philadelphia starter Jerry Koosman in the first inning for a 5-1 lead. Backman started the Mets' first with a walk and Paciorek hit his first homer. One out later, Carter hit his 17th of the year, and, after George Foster walked, Knight hit his fifth.

"If we keep playing like this, with everybody contributing, I don't see why we can't walk away with it," Dykstra said of the division race.

NL Roundup

Dodgers 5, Braves 4

Pinch-hitter Terry Whitfield's two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning gave Los Angeles a seventh straight victory. Fernando Valenzuela, 14-8, also won his seventh straight. He was an inning away from a loss when Whitfield batted for him.

Tom Niedenfuer pitched the ninth inning for his 12th save.

Bruce Sutter, 7-5, was trying to protect a 4-3 lead provided by Dale Murphy's National League-leading 31st homer, a two-run blow in the fifth.

Bob Horner's RBI single in the first ended the Dodgers' string of consecutive innings without allowing an earned run at 52. It was also the first earned run scored by the Braves in 28 innings.

Reds 5, Padres 4

Pinch-hitter Tony Perez's single with two out in the 10th inning drove in Ron Oester. Cincinnati wasted a 4-0 lead, surrendering four runs in the ninth inning, but John Franco came on to retire a batter for his 10th straight victory. Franco's lone loss this season came on April 13 in the Reds' fourth game.

"I love that situation where you can score somebody with a hit to win the game," said Perez, just 3-for-15 as a pinch hitter this year. "I just try to hit the ball back through the middle everytime, especially with a runner on third."

In the first inning, Dave Parker sent a towering blast 20 rows deep in the right-field seats for his 23rd home run of the year.

Pete Rose went 0-for-3 and still needs 20 hits to break Ty Cobb's all-time hit record of 4,191.

Astros 4, Giants 1

Mike Scott scattered six hits and retired 16 of the last 17 batters, 13 of them consecutively. Scott, 12-6, helped give the Astros a 9-2 record against San Francisco this season. Houston has won 15 of its last 17 games with the Giants.

"I had trouble keeping the ball down early," said Scott. "I really didn't have much through the first four.

"Then my control improved and I was getting ahead of the hitters. My new pitch, a forkball, or split-fingered fastball, is the key to my success. It keeps them guessing."

An error by San Francisco shortstop Jose Uribe led to three unearned runs.

The Astros scored three unearned runs in the fourth, two on Bill Doran's 12th home run of the season.

The paid attendance of 2,384 was the Giants' lowest home crowd since 2,151 watched then play the Braves on September 18, 1980.

Expos 7, Cubs 3

Vance Law's two-run homer helped send the Cubs to their 10th loss in 11 games. Montreal scored three times in the second inning, twice on a bases-loaded double by Tim Raines, who also stole his 46th base. Davey Lopes swiped his 42nd this season and is tied with the Cardinals' McGee for third place. McGee's teammate Vince Coleman leads the major leagues with 81.

Bill Gullickson, 11-8, pitched 6⅔ innings to win his first game since July 26, with relief help from Bert Roberge and Randy St. Clair.

Chicago starter Steve Engel, 0-2, still seeking his first major-league win, surrendered five runs in seven innings.

Wiggins thrives in new Bird home

BALTIMORE (AP) — Alan Wiggins, whose baseball career was dangerously close to ending only weeks ago, is thriving in his new environment.

The second baseman of the Baltimore Orioles was acquired in a trade with San Diego after he went through a drug rehabilitation program for the second time and the Padres insisted he would never play for them again.

He is finding the American League a good place to be.

"If you'd give him a report card right now," said General Manager Hank Peters, "he'd grade out very well both in the field and on the bases, and he's hit the ball better than we thought he would coming back after a relatively little amount of work."

As for the drug rehabilitation, Wiggins is subject to periodic testing, as recommended by a three-doctor panel which heard his case under baseball's drug review program.

Peters declined to discuss any aspect of the rehabilitation or testing, saying only: "We're pleased with Alan's attitude and his habits are good. He's a happy addition to the ballclub, and has been well received by the other players."

Wiggins spends a lot of time in a room off limits to members of the media when he knows they seek comment from him, and sometimes refers to them as "snoops."

Chisox' Guillen lays No. 1 claim

CHICAGO (AP) — Ozzie Guillen, overshadowed at the start of the baseball season by the hype surrounding another Chicago rookie shortstop, has quietly responded by staking his claim as the No. 1 shortstop in town.

It was the Cubs' prospect — Shawon Dunston — who grabbed most of the headlines in April.

Meanwhile, Guillen has played a stellar shortstop for the White Sox. And although his average dipped as low as .210 in early June, he has surged since then to his current .277.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Set your sights high and there is no limit to what you can accomplish. Expert advice is needed to solve a financial problem. Your income rises as you become productive. Look for new outlets for your creative talents. A special course or training seminar helps you beat out the competition. Stop hiding your light under a bushel. A certain amount of self-promotion is essential if you hope to emerge on top at work. Contact prominent people personally. Romantic partner admires your drive. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Robert De Niro, tennis' Guillermo Vilas, Giants manager Jim Davenport and infielder Brad Wellman, actress Maureen O'Hara.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Welcome a lull in your busy schedule and join family friends. A personal problem proves easy to solve once you lay your cards on the table. Romance looks terrific.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your charm will carry you far at a social event. Widen your circle of friends. Insurance and investment matters require attention. A practical approach pays off handsomely. Get together with a friend tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An emotional scene could get you into hot water with member of opposite sex. Be both diplomatic and patient. Stay in the background at a social function. Keep spending down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A learning experience takes on new importance. A special commendation could be in the works. Romance deepens. Family members applaud your choice. It could be time to make a permanent commitment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance requires patience and discretion. If possible, postpone a social encounter. Keep any unflattering opinions to yourself. This is no time to have a showdown with loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be more selective when it comes to romance. You are inclined to let your emotions run away with you. Show common sense. Keeping up with current events makes you a more interesting companion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be careful with what you say today. A stubborn attitude could cost you allies. A small child is likely to reveal truths you would rather not hear. Face reality. Help out in an emergency.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New responsibilities fall on your shoulders. Learn how to do a special procedure personally. An announcement startles you. Hide your surprise. A vacation is favored if you share expenses.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may face a tough choice when making a final decision. Follow up new business leads. Others may not keep their promises. Be prepared to shift gears at a moment's notice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can accomplish more than you think today. Avoid all forms of gambling. A positive approach works best when dealing with someone who is emotionally overwrought. Offer encouragement, not criticism.

3 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Among the many play techniques, the holdup is one of the easiest to master. But it can prove deceptive. Consider this hand and decided whether South, declarer at three no trump, should hold up the ace of spades one round, two rounds or not at all.

Only the fact that his ace of hearts was singleton and that, therefore, entries to dummy would be hard to find, caused South to be conservative in the auction and venture no further than three no trump. His judgment proved to be sound, for even nine tricks were not easy to make.

Since spades probably were 5-2 and there were only eight fast tricks and no entry to the table, it was obvious that a hold-up play in spades was going to be essential to make the contract. If South d. hold up, he will be defea.. regardless of which defender holds the king of clubs.

If declarer holds up the ace of spades twice, he can be defeated with good defense. West must overtake his partner's spade return and clear the suit. Then he can cash his winners when he gets in with the king of clubs. Of course, this plan would suceed if East has the king of clubs.

The double holdup in spades is not essential—if East has a third spade, declarer can lose no more than three spades and a club. What declarer must consider, however, is how to assure the contract if West has five spades and the king of clubs.

Correct technique is to win the second spade with the ace, cash the ace of hearts and four rounds of diamonds to exhaust the defenders' cards in that suit, and then throw West in with a spade. He can take his spade tricks, but then he must either put dummy on lead with a heart or else lead a club into declarer's tenace to give him his ninth trick.

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Secretive Madonna wedding tonight

Madonna

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Madonna Madness. Or maybe it's Sean Penn. For sure, the wedding tonight has set off paparazzi fever (although the common refrain from older entertainment types is, "I didn't know they were that big"). Last weekend, they looked like any ole young Westside Los Angeles Brentwood Country Mart in their muscle shirts — Penn sporting an upper-arm tattoo. At a pre-wedding dinner party Saturday night, guests got to see Madonna cuddled up on the groom's lap all evening. Security for the wedding is so tight that the 200-plus guests had to call Thursday to find out the site of the party. The glitz-trade rumors, such as that floral centerpieces are being built around spike-heeled shoes, continue to flow. Such a p.r. rush seems surprising, one prospective partygoer said, when only half the guest list showed up several months ago for Madonna's party at the London Club following her appearance at the Universal Amphitheater, "and the biggest name there was David Lee Roth."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rock singer Boz Scaggs has been freed on bail after being arrested and booked for investigation of driving under the influence of alcohol, police said today.

Investigating officers P. J. Jackson and Debra Franks said the 41-year-old Scaggs was arrested early Monday, allegedly after running a red light.

They said Scaggs failed to pass a field sobriety test and was booked at City Prison at the San Francisco Hall of Justice. He was also accused of not having a driver's license on him, and running the red light.

He was ordered to appear in Municipal Court Sept. 17.

Scaggs, who is also a composer and guitarist known for such songs as "Lido," made his debut in the San Francisco Bay area in the late 60s and hit the height of his popularity in the 1970s.

The Union Street address listed as Scaggs' home is the address of the Blue Light Cafe, opened by Scaggs last year.

Hudson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — AIDS victim Rock Hudson is in "a fabulous frame of mind," and has a healthy appearance but complains about hospital food, his publicist says.

"He's reading and doing crossword puzzles," Dale Olson said Thursday after he visited the 59-year-old actor at UCLA Medical Center. "He jokes, is receiving visitors. He looks vital."

Hudson complained about bland hospital food and asked friends to prepare home-cooked treats for him, including Mexican meals, Olson said.

Hudson remained in fair and stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The actor entered the hospital July 29 for treatment of acquired immune defiency syndrome, which weakens and eventually destroys the body's immune system. There is no known cure for it.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers, one of the first Hollywood entertainers to become involved in raising money for AIDS research, says Rock Hudson should not have tried to hide the fact that he had the deadly ailment.

"I think the way the situation was handled was horrendous," Miss Rivers, substitute host for Johnny Carson on the "The Tonight Show," said in an interview with syndicated columnist Marilyn Beck.

"His people knew the truth all along and should have just come out and acknowledged it was AIDS," Miss Rivers, 52, said in quotes confirmed Thursday by her publicist, Richard Grant.

Reed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Donna Reed will receive more than $1 million in a settlement ending an episode of off-stage intrigue over her loss of the role of Miss Ellie in "Dallas," her attorney said.

The agreement was reached Monday in negotiations with an attorney for Lorimar Productions, producer of the hit CBS prime-time soap opera, Michael Donaldson said Thursday.

Miss Reed will receive her regular salary of $17,250 a week for the 1985-86 season and $19,838 a week for the 1986-87 season, for a total of more than $1 million, Donaldson said. A request to halt production of the show was denied.

Miss Reed, 64, sued Lorimar for $7.5 million for breaking her three-year contract after the company replaced her with Barbara Bel Geddes, who originated the role of matriarch of the oil-rich Ewing family.

Miss Bel Geddes gave up the role in 1984 when she underwent heart surgery.

Presley

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Thousands of fans toured Elvis Presley's mansion and visited his grave Thursday, paying tribute to the "king of rock 'n' roll" with poems, flowers and photographs before the eighth anniversary of his death.

A week of tributes and events dedicated to Presley, who died Aug. 16, 1977 at the age of 42, was centered on a memorial service and candlelight march late Thursday.

Betty Lou Watts stood in the drizzle without a raincoat or umbrella, a bouquet of blinking fake roses in her hand as she and 200 to 300 other fans waited for the candlelight vigil to begin.

"I'll stand out here till daybreak if I have to," said Mrs. Watts, of Severna Park, Md.

She said she preferred to stand in the rain at the gates of the two-story, white-columned house Presley called Graceland, rather than wait in the shelter of a shopping center across the street with the other fans.

"The closer I am to him, the better I like it," she said.

Mrs. Watts said she would put the blinking red roses on Presley's grave.

"He lit up our lives," she said.

The event was expected to attract 10,000 or more fans, said officials of Graceland Enterprises Inc., which operates the mansion as a tourist attraction.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne, once referrred to in the British press as "Princess Grump" and "Awful Annie," was toasted as "our true princess" in one of the country's daily tabloids.

The occasion was Anne's 35th birthday Thursday, and the tabloid Mirror used the occasion to praise her for her work as president of Save the Children Fund, which has taken her to several Third World nations.

The Mirror once described the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II as a sharp-tongued "sourpuss."

She spent her birthday cruising off the coast of Scotland on the royal yacht Brittania with her children, Peter, 7, and Zara, 4, Buckingham Palace said.

Seattle faces Detroit in exhibition

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks, who didn't generate much offense in losing their National Football League exhibition opener last weekend, will face Detroit tonight.

The Lions tied Buffalo 10-10 in their preseason inaugural in the head coaching debut of Detroit's Darryl Rogers, while Seattle was losing 19-7 to the Indianapolis Colts.

There are 10 games Saturday night. Indianapolis is at Chicago; the New York Jets at Cincinnati; Philadelphia at Cleveland; Pittsburgh at Minnesota; Atlanta at Tampa Bay; Buffalo at Miami; Green Bay at the New York Giants; Houston at New Orleans; New England at Kansas City and Dallas at San Diego.

Washington is at the Los Angeles Raiders Sunday and Denver at San Francisco Monday night.

Seattle Coach Chuck Knox went with rookie Gale Gilbert and U.S. Football League veteran Frank Seurer at quarterback against the Colts. Seattle's only touchdown was scored by the defense on a 37-yard fumble return by strong safety Ken Easley.

Easley injured his left knee and ankle in practice Wednesday, but Knox said Thursday that Easley probably will not be sidelined more than a matter of days.

"It's definitely good news," Knox said.

Seahawk spokesman Gary Wright said Easley was not expected to play in Friday night's game.

Knox earlier called his decision to go with Gilbert and Seurer last week "a chance for them to feel a little bit of what the NFL is all about." Gilbert, signed by the Seahawks as a free agent after playing college football at California, played the first half last week, completing 6 of 15 passes for 64 yards. He was intercepted once. Seurer, who played three seasons for the USFL Los Angeles Express, was 10 for 19 for 112 yards. He threw two interceptions.

Against the Lions, Knox said he will go with veterans Dave Krieg and Jim Zorn at quarterback.

Although Gilbert and Seurer managed to generate only 220 total yards of offense, Knox wasn't upset at the play of his team in the Indianapolis game. He kept mostly third stringers on the Hoosier Dome field late in the game.

In addition to Krieg and Zorn, Seattle's quarterbacks last season, running back Curt Warner and wide receivers Steve Largent and Daryl Turner did not play for Seattle in Indianapolis. Krieg and Largent were Pro Bowlers last season.

Warner and the other veterans will play against Detroit, Knox said.

"We like to win every time we go out," Knox said, "but we don't ever want to sacrifice getting a chance to look at personnel to achieve a victory."

Seattle has been installed as a five-point favorite for the Detroit game in Seattle's Kingdome at 7:30 p.m. PDT.

The Seahawks posted a 12-4 record during the 1984 regular season to advance to the playoffs for the second consecutive year. The Lions were 4-11-1.

The Seahawks and Lions met twice last season. The Seahawks were 28-24 winners in an exhibition game and Seattle also won the rematch, 28-17, in the Detroit Silverdome.

In their 1985 exhibition opener, the Lions led 10-3 until 2:29 remained. Buffalo managed a tie when Bills' wide receiver Andre Reed ran 19 yards for a touchdown on a reverse. Neither team could score in the 15-minute overtime.

Detroit's points came on a 6-yard touchdown run by quarterback Eric Hipple and a 30-yard field goal by Ed Murray.

Rogers said he will use 13-year NFL veteran Joe Ferguson, 35, acquired in an offseason trade with Buffalo, in the first quarter and Hipple in the second quarter against the Seahawks.

Rams punish Cardinals

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Barry Redden rushed for 109 yards and two touchdowns in the first half Thursday night to lead the Los Angeles Rams to a 39-7 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in a National Football League exhibition game.

Redden, filling in for holdout Eric Dickerson, scored on a one-yard run in the first quarter and an eight-yard run in the second as the Rams ran up a 20-0 halftime advantage. Redden did not play in the second half.

A.J. Jones also scored two second-half touchdowns for Los Angeles.

Mike Lansford kicked two first-half field goals for Los Angeles, a 27-yarder and 53-yarder just before halftime.

Los Angeles built a 29-0 lead before the Cardinals finally scored in the third quarter. That came when reserve quarterback Rick McIvor connected with Clyde Duncan for a 42-yard touchdown pass.

The Rams got a safety by defensive end Doug Reed on the first play of the second half.

Rookie Sam Potter added a 31-yard field goal in the fourth quarter for Los Angeles.

Los Angeles quarterback Dieter Brock completed 10 of 19 passes for 145 yards, playing only the first half.

St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax hit on 7 of 13 pass attempts, including six in a row at one point, for 78 yards before exiting late in the second quarter. McIvor came on to complete eight of 13 passes for 140 yards and a touchdown.

Los Angeles sacked Cardinal quarterbacks nine times, eight coming against McIvor, while St. Louis recorded three sacks in the game.

Henry Ellard led all receivers with five receptions for 75 yards, all in the first half.

Former BYU golf star takes Buick Open lead

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Rick Fehr, who lives in Seattle, makes himself right at home on Michigan golf courses.

In 1982, Fehr won the Western Amateur, which is played at Pointe O'Woods Golf Club in Benton Harbor, near Lake Michigan on the western side of the state.

This year, as a 23-year-old rookie on the Professional Golfers Association Tour, he tied for ninth in the U.S. Open at Oakland Hills in June. On Thursday, the former Brigham Young University star fired a seven-under-par 65 at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club to take the first-round lead in the Buick Open.

"I have a great track record in Michigan," Fehr said. "My best event as an amateur was the Western Amateur and my best finish as a pro was at the Open," which was played about 30 miles from Grand Blanc in the Detroit suburb of Birmingham.

FEHR ENTERED today's second round with a one-stroke lead over another rookie, Paul Azinger, and a two-shot lead over Bill Kratzert, Gil Morgan, Charlie Bolling, Greg Twiggs and Scott Hoch.

Ninty-eight golfers were in at par-72 or below over the rain-softened 7,014-yard course. Seventy-eight broke par and 33 were below 70.

Fehr, making only his seventh 1985 start in a PGA Tour event, had an outstanding record as an amateur. He played on the Walker Cup team and twice was an All-American at BYU.

However, he doesn't hold a Tour card from the PGA's qualifying school. As a result, Fehr was unable to compete in Tour events this year and spent most of the season playing on the Tournament Players Series satellite tour.

He finally landed a PGA starting spot in the Houston Open as a qualifier and later was granted a sponsor's exemption for the Westchester Classic.

"Finishing ninth at the Open opened the eyes of some more sponsors and got me into some tournaments," Fehr said. "I was a bit discouraged because of not getting into any tournaments. It helped that my father knew some people."

In his seven PGA events this year, Fehr has earned $31,569, more than the 150th man on the 1984 money list, thus exempting Fehr from qualifying for the remainder of the 1985 season.

"I'll be a little nervous when I start the second round, but I've been under pressure before," Fehr said. "It will be different if I'm still in the lead Saturday night. For now, I'm going to go out and play aggressively."

ON THURSDAY, Fehr started his round on the 10th hole and played the back side in 3-under-par 33 with birdies on the 12th, 13th and 14th holes. Playing the front nine in 4-under 32, Fehr birdied the 1st, 4th, 6th and 8th holes. He didn't card a single bogey during the round.

The key to Fehr's success was putting. He rolled in a 45-footer at No. 6 and 20-footers at the 8th and 14th.

"I'm pretty good at scrambling," Fehr said. "I have a good variety of shots around the greens."

Azinger, 25, the medalist at the PGA qualifying school last fall, was 35-31 for his 66. He carded seven birdies and a single bogey.

"I just knew I'd play good today," Azinger said. "I looked out the window at the rain and I didn't care."

Amy Alcott surges to 3-stroke lead

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Amy Alcott only needed one practice round on the Stouffer Pinelsle Resort Golf Course to know it was her kind of place, and one round of competition to prove it.

"It's one of the most beautiful, picturesque golf courses I've ever played," Alcott said Thursday after surging into the first-round lead of the LPGA Nestle World Championship of Women's Golf

"You have to think your way around it," she said. "Each hole here has it's own distinctive personality, just like a person. It makes it fun to play."

Alcott, who has three major championships among her 23 career victories, registered seven birdies during one 10-hole stretch in the $200,000 event, finishing with a 7-under-par 65 for a 3-shot advantage over Patty Sheehan, who had an eagle 3 on the 461-yard fifth.

"This is a situation that I thrive on," Alcott said of the event, limited to a field of 12.

"You have to be a consistent player to get in this tournament," she said. "I really enjoy the competition."

Alcott, a two-time winner this year, had played only once in the last month and was well-rested for the hilly terrain of the 6,007-yard course on Lake Lanier Islands, 50 miles north of Atlanta.

"I played awfully well," she said. "I was very pleased with it."

Alcott got five of her eight birdies with putts in the 10-to-20-foot range and took her only bogey on the fourth when her approach was short and she then failed to sink her putt after chipping to within 10 feet.

Sheehan called her 68 "a solid round," adding that the eagle got her going.

"Nothing was happening and then No. 5 woke me up," she said.

Judy Clark was alone in third place at 69, but thought she should have shot better.

She said a spectator at the par-3 15th confused her by saying what other players had been hitting to the green.

"It kind of broke my rhythm, my concentration," Clark said. "I let it bother me, and I shouldn't have."

Defending champion Nancy Lopez, a four-time winner in her last nine outings, had four birdies in succession early in the round, but then faltered and was tied at 70 with Beth Daniel, winner of the first two World Championship events in 1980 and 1981.

U.S. Open champion Kathy Baker was six shots back and deadlocked at 71 with Jane Blalock and Betsy King.

Pat Bradley and Bonnie Lauer each shot 72.

Seminar costs writer

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — A newspaper sportswriter pleaded no contest Thursday to four counts of violating Arcadia's municipal code, which prohibits gambling in the city.

Gordon Jones, 55, entered the plea in Santa Anita Municipal Court before Judge Eleanor Provost and paid a $500 fine, said Los Angeles County Deputy District Attorney Bruce Marrs.

Eighteen misdemeanor bookmaking counts, filed against Jones after a handicapping seminar on Feb. 23, were dismissed Thursday and replaced by the municipal code violations, Marrs said. Jones is employed by the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Arcadia's municipal code states: "No person shall operate any public place where any game of chance is played, conducted or permitted."

Jones' attorney, Robert E. Courtney, said the writer admitted he rented a banquet room to conduct his seminar.

Momentum leads Aggies into '85

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

SWC Preview

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — The Texas Aggies start the 1985 football season with a new offense, a settled defense and a bit of momentum left over from the final two games of the 1984 season.

The Aggies sputtered through a mid-season slump last season but they closed out with a flourish, knocking off Texas Christian and Texas, both bowl-bound, for a 6-5 record.

It was Jackie Sherrill's first winning record in three seasons as head coach and, he hopes, the start of an Aggie resurgence.

"I'm very excited about this team," Sherrill said. "We are pretty well settled defensively going into the fall and that's a very big plus."

A mood of calm has descended over the Aggie defense that didn't exist prior to last season when defensive coordinator R.C. Slocum had to replace four starting linebackers and and top backup.

"We were really scrambling a lot at this time last year," Slocum said. "We lost four starters and one backup linebacker. This year things are a lot more settled. I can give you my two-deep lineup right now."

Johnny Holland, Todd Howard and Steve Bullitt return as starting linebackers this season and Larry Kelm has stepped in to replace graduated Ken Ford.

The Aggies' biggest defensive loss was end Ray Childress, a first-round draft choice of the Houston Oilers. Rod Saddler has been moved into Childress' old left end position.

"You go into the season realizing that no one will play the way Ray Childress did last year," Slocum said. "You don't replace anybody like Ray. "He personally stopped so many drives last season."

Offensively, the Aggies have more graduation holes to fill but they appear solid at quarterback with Craig Stump starting fall practice as the starter backed up by Kevin Murray, who missed most of last season with injuries.

The Aggies must replace three starters on the offensive line including center Matt Darwin. Tight end Mark Lewis and split end Jimmy Teal have also departed along with running back Thomas Sanders.

Rod Bernstine has been moved from running back into the starting tight end position and Roger Vick and Anthony Toney will fill the running back spots.

Eric Franklin, younger brother of former A&M kicker Tony Franklin, will handled field goal duties and Todd Tschantz, a junior from Richardson, will do the punting.

The Aggies open the season Sept. 14 in Birmingham, Ala. against the Alabama Crimson Tide, coached by Ray Perkins, a former Alabama teammate of Sherrill's.

Huskers may dedicate year

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne said Thursday the team is considering a dedication to Brian Hiemer, who committed suicide this week.

"Some players have expressed an interest in doing something, but we haven't made any plans yet," Osborne said following the team's first preseason practice at Memorial Stadium. "Whatever we do will come from the players."

Other teams have dedicated seasons to a player by wearing black armbands, putting the player's number on jerseys or helmets and making the player an honorary captain.

Following the two-hour workout, Osborne said he told the Cornhuskers he will try to make arrangements for players wishing to attend Hiemer's funeral. Services were scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday at Sacred Heart Church in Shelby, Hiemer's hometown.

Osborne said the Cornhuskers had a good practice despite the tragedy.

"Everyone is enough of a competitor that they try to do their best," Osborne said. But he added, "I'm sure some players are affected by it."

Because of Hiemer's death, freshman linebacker Todd Millikan worked out at tight end, where Hiemer had been expected to share starting duties with another senior, Todd Frain.

"We're pretty thin (at tight end) right now," Osborne said. "We've gone from a pretty strong situation to one where we're a little worried about depth."

Gene Huey, the Huskers' receivers coach, described Hiemer, 21, as "a real conscientious person, a very gentle, compassionate human being."

"Every coach talks about what great people their players are, but that certainly wasn't a cliche with Brian," Huey said.

Hiemer's body was found by his father near an outbuilding on the family farm 4 miles north of Shelby. Hiemer, who had shot himself in the head with a .22 caliber rifle, died Wednesday morning at University Hospital in Omaha.

"There was nothing that led me to believe anything was wrong," Huey said.

Reiner: Candy 'as sexy as they come'

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — John Travolta, step aside. You're going to have to make room for John Candy within the ranks of movie sex symbols.

Carl Reiner, who directed Candy in Paramount's new "Summer Rental," says Candy is as sexy as they come and that he recognized the quality long before the chubby Canadian reached his present eminence.

Reiner reports, "His wife says that she loves to hug him, because it's like hugging a soft down comforter."

In "Summer Rental" Candy plays a part Cary Grant might have essayed in 1945, a loving husband and father presiding over a disaster-rife family vacation in Florida.

The movie, rated PG despite a female character determined to show everyone her new endowments, is described by Reiner as a "very sweet story...about a guy who peaked when he was 18 and on a vacation finds out what he can do as an adult.

"... It's very simple, very sweet, but I liked it because I liked the feeling of family.

"Still it wouldn't have been special without a special star. And John Candy, because he's what I call a leading man, becomes very interesting. I gravitate to non-heroic-looking stars. I just love them.

"I don't know who broke it open originally. Probably Humphrey Bogart was the first un-regular-looking leading man. But now we have a Dustin Hoffman and an Al Pacino.

"So for the role of a husband and father of three kids I just loved the idea of John Candy.

"Also, I was the first one to notice — before Playgirl did — that he was sexy. I came home and told my wife, 'That guy is a sexy guy.' He has a softness about him that's appealing.

"I looked at him a lot while I was cutting the picture and I said, 'That face gets to you.' He wears very well."

Reiner, working with Candy, found him to be "a very sweet human being and a very shy human being.

"But he can be as mean as a cat as an actor because, with people who are that sweet, inside there's a terror raging to get out. That's why a lot of us go into acting — to get that terror out. It's there with Candy.

"The more sweet the person, the more deep the anger. But what's nice is he keeps the anger in control."

Reiner chose Richard Crenna to play the villain, pinning him down only after a couple of weeks of tough negotiation.

Texas oil lobbyist calls for unification

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Former State Represenative, Joe Hanna, of Breckenridge told members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) Thursday at Midland Petroleum Club that the Texas oil industry would need to be more alert, organized and present a more unified front in years to come to make known its position in Austin.

Hanna, a 16 year veteran of the Texas House of Represenatives and former chairman of the House Energy Committee, has been retained by PBPA, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners, North Texas Oil & Gas Association, Panhandle Oil & Gas Association, West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association, East Texas Oil & Gas Association and Gulf Coast Oil & Gas Association to represent the associations in Austin. It is the firm time the Texas energy associations have unified to provide a common lobby in Austin.

Hanna said the Texas oil industry could no longer assume that elected represenatives in Austin understood the oil industry, that an educational process would be needed for some. He also pointed out that there were also some in the House who were not as sympathetic to one of the state's prime industries as they should be.

One of the primary tasks Hanna intends to tackle in representing the industry is a general consolidation opinion of Texas independents on energy-related issues within the state.

"There will be some differences of opinion by region," said Hanna. "Certainly, all of us will not have the same views on white oil, but generally we can form a concensus on most matters involving the industry."

Hanna said he intends to meet with the top executives of the seven associations on a quarterly basis to review issues and formulate a unified front. He said it would take careful scrutiny to gleen the 5,000 bills submitted each year to see if any might have a negative effect on the oil and gas industry.

Hanna expressed hope that many bills with negative aspects to the industry might be corrected by consultation with the author of the bill and modification of the bill before it gets out of committee.

During off years, Hanna plans to travel the state, speaking to the various associations and represenatives within the area. He will also be working closely with the President of the Senate, Speaker of the House and various regulatory agencies.

Failed bank to reopen Monday with new charter

FARMERS BRANCH, Texas (AP) — The Park West Bank, closed by the Comptroller of the Currency after being crippled by soured energy loans, will reopen Monday under a new charter as the Park West State Bank, the Federal Insurance Deposit Corp. says.

The FDIC declared the 2-year-old suburban Dallas bank insolvent at 3 p.m. Thursday. Two hours later, the agency said its board had approved the transfer of the bank's $11.4 million in insured deposits to the new state bank.

The bank had another $5.5 million not covered by insurance because those accounts exceeded the $100,000 insurance limit, the FDIC said.

In an unusual addition to its statement about the bank closing, the FDIC also criticized the Bureau of Indian Affairs for its selection of banks for its deposits.

The BIA, a unit of the U.S. Department of Interior, had put $69 million into 28 banks that failed, said an FDIC spokeswoman who declined to identify herself. She said the BIA was choosing banks for its deposits primarily on the interest rate being offered.

The FDIC said banks offering unusually high interest rates are often in financial trouble, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs has invested its funds in more than one such bank.

In Thursday's closing, the FDIC said, the BIA had $3 million in the Park West Bank, which must be covered by the FDIC.

Uninsured depositors and non-depositor creditors will share proportionately with the FDIC in the proceeds from the liquidation of the failed bank's assets, the FDIC said.

The agency said prompt advance payments will be made to those depositors based on a formula.

The FDIC said in a written statement an insured deposit transfer was arranged because no acceptable bids were received for a merger of the failed bank into another institution.

Congress budget resolution hailed as 'tremendous progress'

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The director of the Congressional Budget Office on Thursday hailed the budget resolution passed by Congress as "tremendous progress" against the deficit as the CBO predicted it could yield a $175 billion deficit next year.

At the same time, in the latest sign that the economy remains sluggish, the Federal Reserve reported that industrial production rose by a weak 0.2 percent last month while U.S. industry continued to suffer from a surge of imports.

Although the CBO forecast is less optimistic than the $172 billion deficit anticipated by Congress when it passed the resolution, it is decidedly more upbeat than the Reagan administration's warnings that the shortfall is likely to exceed $200 billion.

Unlike the White House, the nonpartisan budget office assumed in its forecasts that Congress actually would have the discipline to make the spending cuts mandated by the budget resolution, which both houses hastily passed as they left town for their August recess.

Senate Republicans, who had hoped for cuts in Social Security and sharper reductions in domestic programs, had widely denounced the budget proposal as inadequate. On the other hand, some House Democrats insisted it did not put a big enough dent in defense spending.

CBO director Rudolph G. Penner acknowledged that the budget resolution "doesn't solve the problem entirely, but compared to past history, it is a very dramatic change."

He warned, however, that the amount of deficit reduction it envisions does not "allow for safety" — that is, does not contain a cushion against an economic slowdown or an international crisis that could heighten the need for military spending. If such setbacks occur, the deficit may soar, he suggested.

The CBO predicted a continuing decrease in the deficit in subsequent years — to $163 billion in 1987 and $143 billion in 1988. This falls far short of the goal that congressional budget writers had set for themselves earlier this year, which was to cut the deficit to less than $100 billion in 1988.

GM to offer 7.7 percent financing

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — General Motors said Thursday that it will offer 7.7 percent discount financing on a wide range of 1985 model car and truck lines until early October in an effort to clean out heavy inventories of unsold cars that piled up during a strike by the nation's car haulers.

But analysts said that they doubt that the cut-rate loans, which cover cars and trucks that account for two-thirds of GM's vehicle sales, will be enough to reverse the long-term erosion of GM's market share by Japanese automakers.

The analysts predicted that GM, as well as Ford and Chrysler, will be forced to continue promotional campaigns beyond October and well into the 1986 model year.

"With the Japanese taking more and more of the market, we will see more incentives from all of the domestic manufacturers later this year," said Ted Sullivan, an analyst with Data Resources in Lexington, Mass.

"We think that GM, Ford and Chrysler will all have incentives, especially on small cars, in the fourth quarter," he said.

The discount financing offer was announced the day after a tentative settlement was reached in the three-week car-haulers' strike, which had virtually stopped the flow of new cars to the nation's domestic and imported car dealerships.

On Wednesday, GM reported a 10 percent decline in sales during the first 10 days of August compared to a year ago.

Ford and Chrysler are expected to follow GM by announcing similar incentives within the next few days.

A spokesman at Ford, which is not currently offering any sales promotions, said that the company is studying GM's program, but he refused to say whether Ford will match it.

A spokesman for Chrysler, which is already offering 8.8 percent financing or cash rebates on its compact and sporty mid-size models, refused to comment on whether the automaker would follow GM's lead.

Officials at American Motors, which now has 8.5 percent discount financing on all of its 1985 model Renault passenger cars, said that they have no plans to offer even lower rates to match GM.

The Japanese importers, which already have low inventories and a great deal of unmet demand for their cars, are not expected to offer incentives.

GM's program, which began Thursday and expires Oct. 2, covers 1985 models that account for 70 percent of its passenger-car volume, GM said. But it excludes such popular models as the small cars that it receives from Japan and GM's California joint venture with Toyota.

Donoghue's Money Fund Averages (1m)		43	7.06	7.30
(Averages for all 260 taxable funds)
30-day average		yield		7.03

Yield columns represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (r) -- restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 260 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 decreased $366 million to $200.2 billion during the week ended Aug. 13, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield remained at 7.06 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 7.03 percent from 7.02 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity stayed at 43 days for the second consecutive week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Despite lower yields reported by many government-only money funds, Donoghue's 7-Day Average Yield for all taxable money funds held at 7.06 percent for the second week. The average maturity also held at 43 days. Portfolio managers are waiting for stronger indications of interest rate direction before lengthening or shortening the maturities of their funds' portfolios. Tax-free money fund portfolio managers have extended their funds' maturities over the past two weeks to lock in higher yields that are currently available in the municipal securities market. Yields on short-term tax-free securities have risen over the past four weeks. The 7-day average yield for all tax-free money funds has risen from 4.28 percent to 4.48 percent in the past two weeks."

Greyhound cuts back bus operations

Washington Post News Service

Greyhound Corp. on Thursday announced a major restructuring of its Greyhound Lines subsidiary that will drastically shrink the nation's largest bus system, cutting its work force by nearly 16 percent.

In a multiphase program that will begin immediately and probably will be finished by the end of 1985, Phoenix, Ariz.-based Greyhound will lay off or offer early retirement to 400 management employees and 1,500 unionized rank-and-file employees out of Greyhound Lines' total work force of about 12,000, the company said.

In subsequent stages of the restructuring, Greyhound Lines will continue a previously announced plan to reevaluate bus terminals and garages and will assess whether it should keep operating certain money-losing routes.

The goal of the restructuring is to reduce the Greyhound Lines unit, which lost $1.3 million in 1984, "to a level consistent with the current competitive and economic climate in the intercity bus industry," the Greyhound announcement said.

The structure and staffing of Greyhound Lines was meant to serve the 64 million passengers that traveled the system in the late 1960s but is too much for the 34 million passengers that Greyhound expects to carry this year, the company said.

When the restructuring is completed, Greyhound chief executive John W. Teets said in a statement, "Greyhound Lines will yield our target of a minimum of 15 percent return on equity and will be a profitable, viable company for shareholders and a secure environment for employees."

Sakowitz plans to close three boutiques

HOUSTON (AP) — Sakowitz Inc., the fashionable department store chain that has filed for federal bankruptcy protection, announced it will close two Houston boutiques and one in Dallas.

The family-owned business also said Wednesday it has procured financing from its five principal lender banks and another unidentified "source."

The 83-year-old retailer on Aug. 1 filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Sakowitz officials said the company will close a men's boutique located in a downtown Houston bank and another one in southwest Houston that was primarily a catalog clearance center.

The company also announced the closing of a boutique in the Dallas suburb of Highland Park.

The closings leave Sakowitz with five boutiques in Houston and Dallas and 10 department stores in Texas, Oklahoma and Arizona.

Sakowitz spokeswoman Donna Manyin also announced it has secured an unspecified amount of financing from its five principal lenders and an unnamed "source."

Loffland Brothers Co. Rig 75 works in the Gulf of Mexico.

Loffland Brothers begin 24-well offshore program

NEW IBERIA, LOUISIANA — Loffland Brothers Co. will begin operations by late this month on a 24 well offshore drilling program expected to last five years for Mobil Producing of TX & NM, Inc., of Houston.

In announcing the new contract, W.E. Schultz, Loffland president, said, "This new offshore contract, along with other contracts we have recently been awarded in Wyoming, California, Texas, Louisiana and Canada, reflects continued customer trust in our experienced personnel and excellent drilling equipment."

The drilling program will be located offshore Texas, on Mobil Producing TX & NM's Platform E in the High Island Block A-596 area.

The company will be using Loffland's Rig 75, an SCR rig rated to 22,000 feet featuring a MidContinent U-1220 drawworks and a 158-foot derrick.

Ensearch announces Gulf producer

DALLAS-(SWN)-Enserch Exploration Partners, Ltd. has announced that a well in Ewing Bank Block 999 in the Gulf of Mexico in which it has a 25 percent working interest has produced on test at a sustained rate of 2,692 barrels of 42.3 degrees API gravity oil and 11.3 million cubic feet of gas per day with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,803 psi through a 36/64-inch choke at depths between 9,854 and 9,940 feet. The well is a confirmation to an oil discovery in Green Canyon Block 29, which was announced in June 1984, made by an operating group in which EP is a 25 percent working-interest partner. Block 29 adjoins 999 on the south.

Placid is the operator of the Ewing Bank Block 999 well with a 27.1 percent interest. Other partners and their respective interests are: Louisiana-Hunt Petroleum Corp., 16.8 percent; OPUBCO Resources, Inc., 9.5 percent; Penrod Energy Co., 8.7 percent; HI Production Company, 5.1 percent; Petro Hunt Corp., 3.9 percent; and Prosper Energy Corp., 3.9 percent.

Testing will continue on the Ewing Bank Block 999 well in another zone at 8,300 feet to evaluate further the commercial potential of this Green Canyon field. Earlier, at the 10,060-foot level, a flow rate of 200 barrels per day was achieved from a formation with skin damage. Engineers estimate that with the damage corrected, a flow of 700 barrels per day can be achieved.

Prolific discovery flows 2,064 bopd

HOUSTON-(SWN)-Transco Exploration Partners, Ltd. and Channel Exploration Co. of Ventura, California, announce a new oil field discovery on the Landslide prospect in the San Joaquin Valley in Kern County, California. The wildcat discovery well is located about 25 miles southwest of Bakersfield and three miles south of the Yowlumne Field.

The discovery well was drilled to a depth of 12,670 feet. During production tests, the well was perforated between 12,190 and 12,556 feet in a massive Miocene Stavens sand and flowed at a stabilized rate of 2,064 barrels of 30 degree API gravity oil per day and 405 thousand cubic feet (Mcf) of natural gas per day through a 28/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 800 pounds per square inch and a casing pressure of 3,250 pounds. Additional development wells are planned to determine the size of the reservoir.

Channel is the operator of the discovery well, the first well drilled in the recently formed Channel-TXP joint venture exploration program in California.

Oil drilling resumes in Pueblo Co.

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — A wildcat oil well, the first in Pueblo County in about three years, is being drilled just west of the city on land owned by a car dealer.

Car dealer Robert A. Jackson said he is one of several landowners who have leased oil and mineral rights to Roanoke Inc., of Fort Worth, Texas.

That company has contracted with Roach & Pierce Drilling Co., of Littleton, to sink a test hole on land just east of the La Mesa Encatada property owned by Jackson.

Roach & Pierce is proceeding with the drilling operation even though Jackson has not obtained a special-use permit for the operation.

He has, however, received authorization to proceed from Jim Spaccamonti, director of the Pueblo County Department of Planning and Development.

Triton, Amoco enter agreement

DALLAS--(SWN)--Triton Energy Corp. has announced that New Zealand Petroleum Company, Ltd., a 61 percent owned New Zealand subsidiary, has entered into an exploration agreement with Amoco New Zealand Exploration Co. Amoco New Zealand is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Amoco Production Co., which is, in turn, wholly-owned by Standard Oil Company (Indiana). The agreement provides for Amoco to earn a 30 percent interest in Petroleum Prospecting License (PPL) 38074 in the southern part of the South Island in exchange for acquiring and processing 1,000 kilometers of seismic data.

The seismic program is scheduled to start immediately and be completed by mid 1986. Amoco also has the option to earn an additional 30 percent interest in PPL 38074 by drilling two exploration wells before March, 1987. The company estimates that the total cost of the seismic and drilling programs will be $13.5 million if the entire earning program contemplated by the farmout agreement is completed.

The agreement is a positive development for New Zealand Petroleum, a Wellington based oil and gas exploration company which is listed on the New Zealand Stock Exchange and has a NASDAQ listing in the United States under the symbol NZPCY. The company has conducted considerable seismic work in the license area, which will now be enlarged upon by Amoco's planned exploration program.

The Chamber's board of directors is currently working through an evaluation of its activities and goals in order to form the most effective Program of Work possible for 1985-1986. Response has been good to a survey of Chamber members, which was included in August's Monitor newsletter. Early results indicate that members would like to see the Chamber give high priority to: supporting improvement of general construction, maintenance, drainage and traffic flow associated with city streets; pursuing a long term resolotion to Midland County jail inadequacies; lending active support to UTPB; securing additional commercial air service; seeking funding for major state highway projects in Midland, especially related to Loop 250; and providing input and direction on local and state water-related problems.

Hormel workers vote for stike, but still worry

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Despite an almost festive mood as they overwhelmingly voted down a contract offer, some union meatpackers at the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. plant say they're worried about a strike set to begin Saturday.

"It'll be a financial hardship — I've got three kids," union member Steve Bartley said Wednesday as Austin workers voted 1,261 to 96 to reject Hormel's offer and schedule a walkout beginning at 12:01 a.m. Saturday.

But, he said, "You've got to stop it somewhere. If we don't draw the line now, we're just going to have problems all along the next few years."

Inside the union hall the mood was almost festive as volunteers painted picket signs, union members gathered in small groups to drink coffee and chat, and supporters could be heard honking their horns as they drove past.

The vote capped 10 months of feuding between the union and Hormel, which in October cut workers' wages in what it said was an effort to remain competitive.

Hormel is offering Austin workers a base wage of $10 an hour as of Sept. 1, matching the wage at nine other Hormel union plants. The industry average is $8 to $9 an hour, the company said. Austin workers now earn a base wage of $9.25.

The company offer also matches other Hormel plants on holidays, vacations, pensions, and health insurance, according to a letter sent to all union members on the eve of the contract vote.

Charles Nyberg, Hormel vice president and general counsel, said the strike vote came as no surprise, "in view of the attitude of the union over the past many months.

"For the near term, we plan to shut down the Austin plant. That's a short-range decision. Our intermediate and long-range plan is we definitely plan to operate the plant."

Jim Guyette, president of Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, was expected to meet in Chicago today with international union officers and local union officials from nine other Hormel plants.

Local P-9 has staged a campaign against Hormel in recent months in an effort to win the contract they want, and have threatened to intensify that campaign if they stage a strike.

"We intend to go after Hormel and its other customers to tell the consumers just how much pain and suffering goes into that pound of bacon they buy," Guyette said in announcing the strike.

IBM has slow start with its JX personal computer

New York Times News Service

TOKYO — With great fanfare, IBM Japan introduced its JX personal computer almost a year ago. More powerful than IBM's ill-fated home computer in the United States, the PCjr, and smaller than a PC, the JX boasted sparkling color graphics and the capability to use either Japanese or English software. Its introduction marked IBM's advancement into Japan's small business and home marketplace, potentially a huge base of computer users in a gadget-happy country.

So far, however, the JX has not met with a kinder fate than its American relative, the PCjr, whose production was halted earlier this year. Carole A. Ryavec, a computer analyst with Merrill Lynch in Japan, estimated 1984 sales at a paltry 6,000 machines, and some other analysts put the numbers even lower. Nikkei Computer, a trade journal, estimated JX sales in the first six months of 1985 at 2,000 machines.

IBM Japan will not comment on sales figures. But its executives do not claim great success, and that may be a telling sign for those in the industry who speculated a few months ago that the JX, made by the Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., might be brought to American shores.

"JX was the first product that I.B.M. had to offer in the storefront," said Takeo Shiina, head of IBM Japan. "We are still learning the process."

The NEC Corp., though it will not release exact sales figures, estimates that its comparable model is outselling IBM's by several times.

Analysts say JX's slow start may be due in part to the fact that the home market, like in the United States, may not yet exist. "There's nothing wrong with the machine," said Ryavec. "It's a perfect case where the technology is way beyond the users."

IBM Japan's chief competitors, however, both Fujitsu and NEC, appear to be out-selling the JX because of their superior retail sales networks, according to analysts. Some also credit NEC in particular for understanding the Japanese market better.

Shiina nonetheless has faith in the JX. "I believe that JX has a unique character," he said, noting its ability to use United States-developed software and high-resolution color.

South Carolina court rules asbestos firms not liable

New York Times News Service

A federal jury in South Carolina found Thursday that two former asbestos makers, the National Gypsum Co. of Dallas and the United States Gypsum Co. of Chicago, were not liable for the $284,000 cost of removing the product from five school buildings in Spartanburg, S.C., two years ago.

During the two-week trial in Greenville, lawyers for the two companies argued that the levels of exposure were not high enough to constitute a health hazard.

Last March, the two companies won a similar suit when a federal jury in Tennessee found them not liable for the cost of removing asbestos from school buildings in Anderson County.

Lawrence T. Hoyle, a Philadelphia lawyer who represented National Gypsum, estimated that 100 similar cases are pending against 50 to 60 companies. Asbestos, which has been found to cause cancer and respiratory disease, was widely used to insulate schools and is now being removed.

Clearinghouse releases prices

HOUSTON — The U.S. Natural Gas Clearinghouse has released its survey of domestic spot market prices for natural gas for August. Prices for the current month range form a low of $2.25 per MMBtu on the Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line system to a high of $2.40 per MMBtu on the Columbia Gas system.

August prices showed stout declines across the board from those survey prices reported for the previous month, ranging from 5¢ per MMBtu on the El Paso Natural Gas system to 20¢ per MMBtu at Garden City, Louisiana and on the Transcontinental Gas Pipeline system.

The decline in prices is primarily attributable to the continued availability of excess gas supplies and the seasonably abnormal softening of demand for natural gas in the major northeast markets.

As reported earlier, the Clearinghouse is a joint venture formed to facilitate transactions in the growing U.S. spot market for natural gas.

Its members include the investment banking firm of Morgan Stanley; Gasclear, Inc., a corporation owned by the law firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld; and affiliates of the pipeline sustems of Colorado Interstate, Columbia Gas, El Paso Natural Gas, Houston Natural Gas, Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line, and United Gas Pipe Line.

Standard Sales reports sales up

ODESSA — Standard Sales Company, Inc. of Odessa, local distributor of Anheuser-Busch beers, has announced an increase of two percent in total sales during 1984, compared to 1983 sales.

Sales Manager Jerry Brooks also reported that Budweiser remains the best-selling beer locally, and first half 1985 sales have increased 9.7 percent over the same period in 1984.

"The noteworthy aspect of our company's and Anheuser-Busch's sales performance in 1984, extending through the first half of this year, is the continued dynamic growth of the Budweiser brand at a time when our competition, and the beer industry in general, is experiencing flat to declining trends," said Brooks.

Nationally, Budweiser sales along, during 1984, topped the combined multi-brand sales of Anheuser-Busch's closest competitor. Despite a less than one percent industry growth rate over each of the past two years, Budweiser sales have jumped by more than four percent during the same period. Budweiser sales are up approximately five percent nationally through the first half of 1985.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Fees for cashing coupons common

By BILL DOYLE

Q. The "good ole boys" at local banks are ripping off people who cash or deposit interest coupons from "bearer" bonds, by charging anywhere from $1 to $10 for each coupon. I have had accounts in at least 10 banks when I lived in other parts of the country and never had to pay such charges.

I recall reading in your column that paying agent banks never charge fees for redeeming interest coupons. How can local banks get away with this?

Doyle

A. Because they are not paying agent banks for your bonds. It's obvious that you don't know a great deal about bonds. Let's get back to basics and spell out a few things.

At the time a particular bond issue is made, a bank is named paying agent. That bank is responsible for paying interest to the owners of bonds in that issue.

If the bonds are in registered form, the paying agent bank mails out interest checks. If the bonds are in "bearer" form, with interest coupons attached, the paying agent bank pays interest as the coupons come due, are detached from the bonds and presented for payment.

When you clip a coupon on which interest is due from one of your bonds and present it to your local bank, your bank has to send it to the paying agent bank for that bond issue. That involves time, effort, paperwork and expense for your bank. Until about five years ago, many banks handled this as a service for their customers — without charge. Now, however, most banks lay on fees. This is not just a "local" thing. Banks all around the country are doing it.

Let's sum up. You don't pay a fee when you cash an interest coupon at the bank that is paying agent for your particular bond. You most likely will be charged a fee when you cash an interest coupon at other banks.

Q. Over the past few years, when interest rates were much higher, I bought bonds of telephone and electric utility companies with interest rates ranging from 14.25 to 16.25 percent. I reasoned that these companies could not get into much financial trouble and will always meet the interest payments on their bonds.

Nobody recommends buying such bonds. Why?

A. Although your reasoning in buying those bonds was good and your timing in making the purchases was excellent, you're very wrong about "nobody" recommending their purchase.

Virtually every full service brokerage firm, whose business is to buy and sell securities for customers and to do research on what are expected to be good buys, maintains a list of recommended bonds.

I have stated in this column, many times, that high-quality bonds can be fine investments. But the caution also has been sounded here that bond prices fall when interest rates rise.

Because the market prices of bonds go up when interest rates go down, the values of the bonds you own now are well above the prices you paid. Congratulations. You should be happy.

• • •

Q. Is there any government agency that will take effective and positive action against corporations that get interest checks to bondholders three or four days after the interest payment dates? This is the case with several bonds I own. They should be made to mail the interest checks two days before the due date.

A. Some corporations and other bond issuers do just what you suggest. But most don't and can't be forced to do so.

A bond is a debt security, obligating the issuer to pay interest on the due dates. Typically, the bond issuer deposits enough money in an account at the bank that is paying agent for the bonds right on each interest due date. Let's face it. That's smart cash management by a bond issuer.

The paying agent bank can't cash interest coupons or mail out interest checks until it receives the necessary money from the bond issuer.

Technically, you could make a personal visit to the paying agent bank and get your interest on each interest payment date. Since that's impractical, an interest check is mailed to you and arrives a couple of days after the due date. That makes you unhappy. However, the bond issuer has met its obligation to you and other bondholders.

Group wants to stop child abuse at home

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Steve Roberts cited some sobering statistics.

"Since 1978, reported instances of child abuse have risen 79 percent in Midland County," said the director of Family Services of Midland. "It occurs often enough that one in 67 parents will be accused of abusing a child."

Roberts is heading up the initiation of a local chapter of Parents Anonymous, a support group and counseling program designed to help families stop child abuse in the home.

"Sometimes parents need to be taught certain parenting skills," he said. "They need to learn that there is a difference between discipline and punishment. They also need to feel that they are OK as people but just need to learn a different way of doing things."

Although Roberts regularly counsels victims of sexual abuse, he notes that, at least in the beginning, Parents Anonymous will not address that area.

"Right now, we're going with physical and emotional abuse," he said. "Sexual abuse is more a power kind of issue. When the adult sexually abuses the child, they often have not been capable of having normal adult sexual relationships. It's a very controlled kind of abuse, while physical or emotional abuse is not."

Roberts loosely defines child abuse as "anything that would impair or hurt the child's physical or emotional growth."

"We must teach the parents what is normal discipline," he said. "Normal" is not the same for every parent, he suggested.

"For some, hitting the child with a fireplace poker is normal discipline," he stated. "A young child is defenseless. We have an obligation to help them until they can take care of themselves."

Roberts said that child abuse is not concentrated in any one economic level.

"Several studies have shown that you can't pin it down and say child abuse only occurs with people who make less than a certain amount," he said. "Also there are different kinds of child abuse. Even those who make enough money but who didn't have good parenting models growing up may use a different form of child abuse. It's more emotional.

"Say, for example, that your dad tells you every day that you'll never amount to anything. Two things happen here. First, it doesn't help your self esteem and second, you begin to think that your dad doesn't think much of you. That's real mental abuse."

Roberts hopes to begin the local chapter as early as October. Although Parents Anonymous started in 1970 in California and first formed in Texas in 1979, only 14 chapters exist in the state.

"This will be the only one for 100 miles," he said. "The nearest ones are in Lubbock and Abilene."

The program is being initiated by Family Services, Texas Department of Human Resources and the Abel-Hanger Foundation.

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

According to Director of Family Services, Steve Roberts, child abuse in Midland County has increased more than 79 percent since 1978. One in 67 parents will be accused of child abuse.

"Sometimes parents need to be taught certain parenting skills. They need to learn that there is a difference between discipline and punishment."
— Steve Roberts, director of Family Services

The group will meet once a week and provide support to help each member break the cycle of child abuse and reinforce the new behavior patterns they are learning, according to a report from Family Services.

Family Services is currently looking for volunteers to help out in the program. Duties will include helping with training children and parents in their new skills and in transporting the families to and from group meetings.

A special two-day training program will be offered by the state office of Parents Anonymous.

Roberts stresses the importance of getting the parents to accept that they have a problem.

"It's important that they know there is support there and to know that they can be accepted even though they have done something against society's code."

Persons interested in volunteer work should call Family Services at 689-8021.

Americans cool off with wine coolers

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

They are derided by wine critics, but the new wine coolers are the fastest growing alcoholic drink in the country with sales this year expected to top $700 million.

The concoction of fruit juices, seltzer and wine currently holds a 15 percent share of the wine market. That's a 7,000 percent increase in sales since the first cooler made its debut four years ago, according to Impact Newsletter's annual wine study.

Much of this success is credited to advertising. The recent TV blitz is not only taking customers to the trough, but also making them drink Bartles & Jaymes Premium Wine Coolers, California Coolers and some of the other 35-odd brands currently on the market.

For those who haven't tried one, a wine cooler is basically a combination of carbonated water, white wine and fruit juice or fruit flavors. But a few — such as Colorado Chiller by Adolph Coors Co. — mix a malt base with unidentified "natural flavors."

Wine drinkers say coolers are awful. Beer drinkers are slightly more gracious. But cooler connoisseurs are the first to admit they drink them because they don't like wine. And beer makes them feel too full. The wine cooler is just right.

The typical customer is between the ages of 21 and 28, said Sam Day, president and general manager of Imperial Liquors, 3211 N. Midkiff Road.

The typical customer also is a woman, said Dave McMurray, manager of Gardski's Restaurant and Bar, 4410 N. Midkiff Road.

When asked why women prefer coolers, McMurray said "There's a feeling that women, especially younger women, like lighter-style, slightly sweeter drinks."

McMurray calls this another trend toward the "pop wines" like Annie Green Springs and Boone's Farm introduced in the '70s, which taste more like fruit juice than alcohol.

He keeps two brands in stock: Citrus Cooler and Orange Cooler. "We're just trying them out," he says, or there would be more selection. But, since more than two dozen brands have been introduced just this year, he makes it a point to stay aware of what's most popular with customers.

"That's easy," said Sue Brooks, co-owner of Polo Liquors, 4519 Garfield St. "California Cooler. It's the main seller."

True, according to those who monitor wine sales.

Dennis Wright, wine critic and representative of American Wine and Importing Company of Midland, confirms that California Cooler is the granddaddy of its expanding family. It holds more than a 53 percent share of the market.

The company was founded in 1981 by two friends from Stockton, Calif., and reads like the classic entrepreneur tale. Michael Crete and Stewart Bewley are said to have concocted their first cooler in their spare time using a rented building in 1981. Last year, they sold $95 million worth of California Coolers. This year, they sold the company — for $142 million.

California Cooler has been so successful that industry experts go so far as to credit the product with pushing California's wine industry into the black. But competitors are quickly closing in.

"I think the commercials made a difference in the success of B & J," Mrs. Brooks said of the cooler produced by Ernest & Julio Gallo Winery.

Bartles & Jaymes, which was introduced this past spring, already is a close second to California Cooler and in some markets the leader.

Day, who sells coolers but doesn't drink them, said Bartles & Jaymes is No. 1 in his liquor store. Mrs. Brooks said her sales show California Cooler still king.

Both said Seagram's Cooler, another new entry, is in the top five along with Sun Country, a cooler produced in New York.

But McMurray thinks the trend toward light-alcohol drinks is part of what's encouraging sales.

"It's a cheap high" he said in reference to the low alcohol content. "It's a high you can live with."

The bottled coolers range from a low of 4 percent alcohol by volume to 6 percent.

Even the non-wine drinkers are tempted to try wine coolers.

"One regular customer," said Day, "is a about 70 years old and comes in about twice a week for a four-pack. He usually drinks Jack Daniel's."

Earl and Lori Erdmann of Midland are among the thousands of young urban professionals nationwide to discover the popularity of wine coolers. Wine specialists say the beverage is the fastest selling in the country with sales expected to top $700 million this year.

Man gets 99 years in woman's murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury deliberated less than an hour Thursday to set a 99-year prison sentence for a 25-year-old Odessa man found guilty late Wednesday of the October 1984 murder of a 39-year-old lounge owner.

The jury of nine men and three women also assessed Donny Lee Bretz a $10,000 fine.

Bretz and his 20-year-old stepbrother, Gary Lynn Waqua, were indicted Jan. 10 on charges of capital murder and robbery for the Oct. 25 stabbing death of Gayle Stifflemire. They were later reindicted on the lesser charge of murder because, according to the district attorney's office, neither previously had been convicted of a violent crime. Waqua is expected to face trial on the murder charge in September.

During deliberations Thursday morning, jurors sent Judge Gene Ater a note asking him to explain the difference between a life sentence and 99 years and how much they could fine Bretz.

Ater advised jurors that they should follow the written instructions he gave them. Once the jury set Bretz's punishment, and before he dismissed them, the judge explained that under the present rules of criminal procedure jurors are prohibited from considering how many years a person convicted of a crime will serve before being eligible for parole and whether a person accused of a crime has a prior criminal record, unless he or she takes the witness stand to testify in his or her own defense. He said this is about to change.

One juror reportedly said that the jury had deadlocked for a short time, with 11 jurors wanting to sentence Bretz to 99 years in prison, while he held out for a life sentence. The holdout juror said he agreed to the 99 year sentence only after the others agreed to the $10,000 fine.

Bretz was defended by Odessa attorneys Richard Alvarado and Allen Stroder, who attempted to capitalize on conflicting testimony presented during the trial, arguing that the state had failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Bretz had intentionally and knowingly cause the death of the lounge owner.

District Attorney Eric Augesen, admitting conflicts could be found if sentences were excerpted from testimony, told jurors they must consider the entire body of evidence and, when they did, they could not help but hand Bretz the maximum sentence.

In his final argument, Augesen asked jurors to set Bretz's sentence at 99 years, saying they must send a message to the community that these kinds of acts will not be tolerated in Ector County.

Testimony during the trial indicated Bretz and Waqua entered the Tally Ho Lounge, 3114 W. 2nd St., the night of Oct. 25 and that Bretz asked about a jacket he claimed he had left there. One witness stated Bretz and Waqua acted nice at first, but then got loud and noisy. Ms. Stifflemire threatened to call police and the two men subsequently left the lounge, but later returned and, after some words were exchanged, a scuffle ensued, with several pool cues being broken.

Ms. Stifflemire's mother, Georgia Converse, testified Bretz struck her with a pool cue. She also stated she saw a "dark haired man" sitting on top of her daughter with a knife in his upraised hand. The dark-haired man was subsequently identified as Waqua. Bretz is alleged to have taken the lounge's cash register containing about $300 and placed it in a waiting car.

Pathologist Dr. Robert Bright, testifying Tuesday, said the autopsy on Ms. Stifflemire revealed she suffered multiple stab wounds to the chest and upper abdominal area. Some of the knife wounds were very deep, Bright said, penetrating her left lung, diaphragm and liver, which produced massive internal bleeding.

Midlanders' junk mail survived crash

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Tragic accidents such as the recent crash of Delta Airlines Flight 191 in Dallas often have a way of creating the dramatic from the ordinary.

A routine flight turns into disaster, making even the sight of a child's doll conjure up unthinkable imageries. A missed flight is no longer thought of with anger, but thanksgiving.

And junk mail becomes valuable.

When Rodney Magee received his mail a week ago, the charred letter inserted in a plastic envelope stuck out among the usual bundle of business correspondance addressed to Midland Gallery, owned by Magee.

Stamped clearly across the front in bold red letters was the standard U.S. Postal Service apology for mail damaged en transit.

"Damaged in an air, rail, truck or ship accident, beyond control of the U.S. Postal Service," read the marking.

Dated August 1, 1985, and routed through New York City, the letter was worthless to Magee.

"It was just a letter from some company trying to sell us something," said Magee's wife, Debbie. "Normally we would have just thrown it away."

At first, Mrs. Magee said, the couple was momentarily confused by the letter.

"It was in that plastic bag and we just thought it was really strange," she said. "But when we realized what it was, it really took us back there. It was a vivid reminder of what happened."

The letter was soaked and still reeked of jet fuel, said Mrs. Magee, when the couple received it. Still smelling pungently of burning matter, the letter is a fragile irony of the Aug. 2 tragedy which took more than 130 lives.

After receiving the letter, the Magees contacted the postmaster and were informed that they were the only Midlanders to get mail from Flight 191.

"We were told that only 100 pounds of the 6,000 pounds of mail in the cargo bay had been salvaged," she said. "We figured out that if the average letter weighed two ounces, then only 800 letters were saved."

Those statistics have led others holding similar mail to be the quarry of collectors of morbid memorabilia.

"We had read about a man in Corsicana who said that collectors were offering $100 for any envelope from the crash," said Mrs. Magee. An article that appeared in the Corsicana Sun said "collectors are already offering up to $300 in a bidding war."

Mrs. Magee, however, stated that they will not sell the letter.

"We will probably frame it and put it up in the gallery just because it's so unusual," she said.

The Magees have owned Midland Gallery for four years since moving to Midland.

Rodney Magee, owner of Midland Gallery, received this letter recently, a part of the cargo of the ill-fated Delta Airline Flight 191 that crashed recently at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport.

Midland woman undergoes surgery after shotgun attack

From Staff Reports

A 20-year-old Midland woman was undergoing surgery this morning for a bullet wound to the chest after being shot at her home about 4 a.m. today, and police are looking for two men in connection with the incident.

According to a spokesman with the Midland Police Department, Mary Martinez, 404 E. Estes, returned to her home at 3 a.m. today. About 4 a.m. there was a knock at her door and she asked who was there, according to the report.

There was no answer and then someone outside the door started shooting. Ms. Martinez was struck in the upper right side of the chest with a .38-caliber bullet, investigating officers reported. The woman was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital.

Officers said eight shots were fired from outside the house: one shotgun blast through the front door, five .38-caliber shots through a window at the side of the front door, a shotgun blast through the bathroom window at the back of the house, and a .38-caliber shot through the kitchen window.

Police said they are looking for one or two Hispanic males who reportedly left the scene in a dark-colored vehicle.

Beaumont city manager resigns amid controversy

BEAUMONT (AP) — The fire chief of this financially troubled city was named interim city manager after the city manager resigned amid controversy surrounding Beaumont's $20 million securities investment loss.

City Manager Karl Nollenberger submitted his resignation letter effective Oct. 1 to City Council and Mayor Bill Neild on Thursday. Nollenberger was not in his office Thursday, a secretary in his office said.

"It is important that the city manager maintain the ability to serve as a facilitator of community issues and problems," Nollenberger said in his letter. "When the city manager becomes the issue, that ability is impaired."

Fire Chief Pete Sheldon will replace Nollenberger, who assumed the post in May 1983, as interim city manager, the City Council decided after a closed-door meeting Thursday afternoon.

On Tuesday night, several hundred people attended a City Council meeting and cheered when speakers called for Nollenberger's resignation.

The demand came after Nollenberger handed council members a proposed 1985-86 budget that includes layoffs for more than 130 city workers.

The city lost $20 million in March when ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., failed. City officials discovered that the company had never put the investment in Beaumont's name.

City health department cautions parents on vaccination deadlines

From Staff Reports

The Midland Health Department is cautioning parents that they only have two more Mondays on which to have their children vaccinated before school starts.

"We're going to be closed on Labor Day Monday, and if parents wait until that week to get their kids vaccinated, they won't be able to," warned Jim Roberts of the health department. "The schools will not allow the children to go school unless they have been vaccinated."

Eight-year-old takes second film in stride

By GIGI SHAMSY

DALLAS (AP) — It's 8:30 a.m. and Gennie James had already been awake for three hours. Unlike other 8-year-olds on summer vacation, Gennie isn't watching morning cartoons.

Instead, an overworked production assistant shuttles Gennie away from her trailer and to a 1952 Plymouth station wagon — where she will spend the next hour shooting a half-minute scene.

A makeup specialist dashes to Gennie's side to re-position her hair. A technical assistant rushes over and squirts Gennie with bug spray to fend off insects. The director of the movie squats down next to Gennie and carefully coaches her on her next scene.

She happily takes all this frenzied activity in stride. After all, this is her second movie, and she has starred in a Hallmark television special.

Gennie, freckle-faced and alert, speaks like a seasoned professional about her experiences from this movie and her first movie role, as Possum Spalding in "Places in the Heart."

Gennie's newest venture is in the role of Aylene Porter in the Martin Jurow production "Papa Was A Preacher."

The film is based on a book of the same name written by Aylene Porter and describes a year in the life of the Porter family. It is the true story of Aylene, her sister and six brothers, who move with their parents from Dallas to a church in a rural Texas town in 1952.

Jurow is a Harvard Law School graduate who has also produced "Terms of Endearment," "Breakfast at Tiffany's," "Waltz Across Texas" and "The Great Race."

ROBERT PINE, best remembered from his television role as the sergeant in "Chips," plays the part of "Papa" and Georgia Engel, known for her portrayal of Georgette on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," plays "Papa's" wife, Pearl.

Gennie has become so comfortable with her co-workers that filming the movie is like "having a great big party just for kids," she said.

"I enjoy doing pictures," she said as she folded her hands and crossed her legs. "It's different every time I do a movie. People get really close — like a real family.

"My favorite part about this movie is all these nice people and the way they relate to each other. When you meet the people who are going to be your brothers and sisters in a movie, six boys and one other girl, you start feeling like a real family.

"Everyone is so sweet, and they all make time to talk to you — even when they're really busy. I really missed them when I was away." She was confined to her home in Navasota for two weeks with hepatitis.

She runs over to the three oldest boys in the movie who are throwing a softball around and practicing their next scene.

Brandon Sokolsky, who plays Aylene's brother "Raybon," leans over and kisses Gennie on the cheek. Gennie smiles and motions to 6-year-old co-star, Joshua Butts, to come investigate the creek behind the church.

Although Gennie says she has grown extremely close to her new movie family in Dallas, she still places a high priority on being a good big sister to her younger brother, Johnny, in Navasota.

"JOHNNY JUST turned four, and he doesn't know that I am away in Dallas on this business and not just away visiting someone," she said. "When I'm home, I make sure that my best friend, Nikki, and I include Johnny in whatever we do. I mean, he's just a kid, and I can feel what he's feeling when we let him play with us."

Gennie also values spending time with her parents. Her mother, Sally, is using her vacation time away from her job to accompany Gennie during the movie filming.

"I've spent a lot of time with my mom during this movie," she said. "But now I'm looking forward to spending time with my dad when we go on a tour of 10 cities across the country for my Hallmark TV special."

Gennie says it is because of her dad that she is in the movie business. "He's the one that got me into this," she says with a giggle. "I know he's proud of me. We've been really good buddies — partners for eight years.

"My dad is now an Aggie — and he's proud of it," Gennie says as she tells what Texas A&M courses her father is taking as part of a continuing education program.

"I'm glad he's proud," she continues. "I'm glad when he goes somewhere, or when he's been studying, and he has new things to tell us."

She says the Hallmark special, called "Hug-A-Bunch," will air on television after October but, with a finger over her mouth, she says she cannot reveal anything else about the special because "It's a secret."

GENNIE AND red-haired Joshua are now sharing a bowl of grapes.

The two quickly leap from their pint-sized director's chairs to run around a nearby clump of bushes.

Sally James, who was calmly working on a crossword puzzle, is now trying to coax her daughter back to her chair in time for the next scene.

Robert Pine leans over and guides her with the words "Listen to your mother, Gennie," and she reluctantly sits in her chair. It is 9:15 a.m. and time for the first scene.

A contagion of yells fills the air as five production assistants yell "Picture Up!" and prepare the cast for filming.

In this scene, Gennie runs into the arms of "Papa" as he pulls a 1952 Plymouth into the driveway. It sounds simple, but it takes the crew a total of 75 minutes to perfect this scene.

FIRST, GENNIE'S hat flies off her head as she runs toward Papa.

Then, the camera angle is not quite right, and director Steve Feke will not be satisfied until another scene is shot.

Next, an airplane flies overhead, and the production crew stops everything until it is out of earshot.

The cast and crew cope with the 95-degree heat and the many interruptions as they manage to stay ahead of the schedule.

To add to the confusion, a security alarm system goes off across the street, and the production assistants run to quiet the noise.

Feke immediately moves his crew to another set to begin filming a scene without sound until the problem has been solved.

Air Show '85 slated for weekend

Aircraft buffs who stay on the solid earth to fly their airplanes will be exhibiting and flying scale models of propeller-driven antique airplanes and military jets this weekend at the Chaparral Flying Site south of Midland.

The event, Air Show '85, for fliers of radio-controlled aircraft, is being sponsored by the Hi-Sky R/C Club of Midland, according to Mark Wornell.

Flying will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday.

Wornell said scale-model aircraft will include those of the Fokker triplane and Sopwith Pup of World War I vintage; the famed P-51 Mustang, the Mitsubishi Zero, and the Grumman Hellcat and Bearcat from the World War II era; the MiG-15 of Korean War note; the Piper J3 Cub in one-quarter scale; the T-28 post-World War II trainer, and jet fighters, including the F-104 and F-16.

"They'll be aerobatic competition," said Wornell. Aircraft on static display will be judged. In addition, spectators will select a "people's choice" by vote.

The flying site is east of Chaparral Cars Inc. and Cotton Flat Baptist Church about four miles south of Interstate Highway 20 off the Rankin Highway.

There is no admission charge, Wornell said.

Contest director is Bill Coombes of Midland.

Injured were Nathaniel McClarty, 36, of Odessa, driver of the BMW, who was listed in good condition at Odessa' Medical Center Hospital with cuts, bruises and abrasions; Esteranzae McClarty, 33, also in good condition at MCH with unknown injuries; Sarah McClarty, 6, in stable condition with a broken leg, arm, hip fracture and a hairline fracture of the chin; Ian McClarty, 2, treated and released and Jimmy Griddle, 43, of Odessa, in stable condition with cuts, bruises and abrasions.

All were in the McClarty vehicle and no seatbelts were worn, reported the DPS.

Senn was not injured in the 4:55 p.m. accident.

Man jailed on child injury charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 20-year-old Odessa man remained in the Ector County Jail today in lieu of $15,000 bond on a charge of injury to a child.

Bryce T. Jones, 1302 S. Jackson, was arrested by Odessa police about 2:35 p.m. Thursday in connection with injuries allegedly suffered Aug. 9 by 18-month-old Brandon Keith Gaytan, also of the Jackson Street address.

The injuries were discovered at Medical Center Hospital by officer Gerald Dickson when the infant was brought in for treatment. The infant remained in critical condition today.

A probable cause affidavit, filed in municipal court by Det. David R. Smith, stated Jones told officers the infant was in his care Aug. 9 and fell from a kitchen chair. According to Smith, Jones said he picked the child up and shook him "because Brandon Keith Gaytan had interrupted him."

Examination by doctors at Medical Center Hospital, Smith stated, indicated the injuries suffered were "consistent with a violent shaking of the child." A warrant for Jones was issued Thursday by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

Local woman witness to home's burglary

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman told the Midland County Sheriff's Office that she witnessed the burglary of her own home Thursday morning, when she heard noises and hid.

Reports said that Pamela June Kirk, 30, of County Road 1160, ½ mile south of County Road 140, went out the back door of her house when she heard a vehicle drive up. Returning to the house to see who it was, she reported that she then heard voices inside the house, so she hid until the burglars left.

She observed two white males in their early 20s loading her color television set and a cassette player into the back of a small, white pickup truck with a silver camper shell, reports said. One of the suspects had reddish blonde hair.

The theft was estimated at $580.

Reports stated that Ms. Kirk then observed the truck leave and go south on County Road 1160 toward FM 1213. Officers noticed tire tracks that indicated new mud grip tires had recently been placed on the truck. Footprints were also observed.

The burglary occurred around 11 a.m. Thursday, reports said.

Also reported by the sheriff's office was the theft of 10 air conditioning units from a Midland business, reports said.

Oberkampf, No.7 Industrial Loop, reported that 10 air coolers valued at $3,000 were taken from a fenced in yard area outside the business.

The theft occurred between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 4:30 p.m. Thursday. Reports said tire tracks indicate that a vehicle pulled up to the fence on the east side and the items were then lifted over the fence. There are no suspects.

Two residential burglaries and two thefts were reported by the Midland Police Department.

According to reports, Jack L. Pollick, 49, 3305 Camarie, told police that sometime between 4:30 p.m. Aug. 6 and 1 p.m. Wednesday, four pistols and assorted keys, valued at $1,050, were taken from his residence.

Also reported was a burglary at 1406 W. Ohio.

Andrea Tillett, 31, said that sometime between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 1 a.m. Tuesday, a camera, flash unit and lens were taken from her house. The theft was estimated at $495.

The City of Midland reported the theft of an air pump, valued at $500, from 508 N. Carver. The theft occurred between 6:30 p.m. Friday and 10:30 p.m. Monday, reports said.

A bicycle, valued at $350, was reported stolen by Mike L. Evans, 900 Raymond. The theft happened around 8 p.m. Thursday, reports said.

Roberts added that at times in the past the schools have vaccinated children at the school after the academic year began, but due to a shortage of nurses, he doubts the schools would offer the service.

According to Roberts, Texas schools and day care centers require that all children have their shots up-to-date before going to school. The shots are administered at several intervals in the preschool years. The vaccine, which provides protection against diptheria, pertussis and tetanus (DPT) is given at 2, 4 and 6 months of age and again at 18 months. A final vaccine is required between ages 4 and 6 years.

"All children should be accompanied by an adult, either a parent or guardian, not an older brother or sister," said Roberts. "Health records should be brought along with them if they have them."

The Midland Health Department is located at 501 Andrews Highway. The DPT vaccine is being administered from 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. Mondays. For additional information, call 683-4281.

GAO report says warships don't need Gulf Coast port

HOUSTON (AP) — Existing naval ports along the East and West coasts could have accommodated the dozens of warships the Navy has assigned to the Gulf Coast, a General Accounting Office briefing paper says.

The briefing paper, issued in Washington, says it may cost $1 billion to build and outfit new port facilities to take care of the warships to be dispersed in the Gulf of Mexico.

"Existing naval home ports on the East and West coasts have the capacity to accommodate the 30 ships that are to be assigned to the new ports, without any major expansion of port facilities," the paper said.

Assistant Navy Secretary Chase Untermeyer said the GAO briefing paper "does not make any sense at all."

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger announced last month that the warships will be scattered among nine Gulf Coast areas, including a battleship, training aircraft carrier, cruiser and destroyer and guided-missile frigates and minesweepers.

"The dispensing of the ships to these ports may not improve survivability of the 600-ship Navy or provide a quicker response time of potential conflict area," the briefing paper said.

PUC refuses to hear AT&T appeal

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has refused to hear AT&T Communications' appeal of an administrative law judge's rejection of its $123 million emergency rate relief request, a PUC member said Thursday.

The $123 million request, first rejected by Commission Judge Phillip Holder July 29, was only an interim measure; the company is seeking a $139 million rate hike in Texas that is still pending.

"We felt that the administrative law judge's order was correct and did not need to be reviewed," Commissioner Dennis Thomas said Thursday, adding that the vote was unanimous.

Libertarian: Party officials lied

PHOENIX (AP) — Claiming Libertarian officials lied to him, a Texas man resigned Thursday from the party after a committee killed his proposal to change the party's name.

John McDivitt of El Paso, has been a Libertarian for 11 years, but said he may leave the party's national convention here before it ends Sunday because of the by-law committee's vote.

McDivitt said the by-laws committee told him they would allow his proposal to change the party's name to the Independents to be brought to the floor for debate, then unexpectedly killed his proposal.

"This very radical organization tries to turn the system upside down on the outside, but when you want to do something internally, they become the most ultraconservative people you've ever met in your life," McDivitt said.

He said he will return to El Paso and examine his options, which include becoming an independent or rejoining the Texas Libertarian delegation if the members decide to change the state organization's name to the Independents.

Case of man who posed as agent for KGB will go to jury today

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal fraud charges against Bratislav Lilic, who the FBI says frequently posed as a KGB agent to swindle people, were scheduled to go a jury today after final arguments.

The 33-year-old Yugoslavian is accused of swindling $46,000 from a distraught Austin father whose son was reported missing after a 1983 typhoon in the South China Sea.

Four days of testimony ended Thursday without Lilic ever taking the stand. U.S. District Judge James Nowlin denied a defense request to acquit him based on insufficient evidence.

Byron Eden, a Chicago FBI agent told jurors Thursday that Lilic told him he had fast-talked foreign governments out of thousands of dollars.

"He took advantage of his foreign accent to pull these cons against these foreign governments," Eden testified. "He described himself as a con man and a burglar — nonviolent."

Both Eden and Ron Butler, director of security for B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League in New York, testified at length Wednesday with the jury out of the courtroom.

After previewing their testimony, Nowlin ruled it could be presented to the jury, except for references to Lilic's two previous prison sentences.

Butler later was dismissed without appearing before the jury, after defense attorneys protested they did not get advance copies of a tape he made with a hidden michrophone.

Lilic is accused on four counts of lying to Douglas Pierce, a wealthy Austin businessman, and persuading Pierce to give him $46,000.

He is accused of posing as a Soviet agent and promising he could win the release of Pierce's son, John, who has been missing since the drilling ship Glomar Java Sea sank Oct. 25, 1983, in the South China Sea.

Pierce's body never was found. His father is convinced his son drifted in a lifeboat to Vietnam and is still being held prisoner there. Pierce testified he has spent $400,000 searching for his son.

Lilic faces up to 35 years in prison if convicted of the four federal charges against him.

Eden testified Thursday that Lilic told him Jan. 8, 1984, in the Chicago FBI office that his first contact with a foreign government came when he demanded $25,000 of the South African consulate in Chicago for weapons "which he had no means to provide."

Eden said Lilic said he was double-crossed by a Yugoslavian associate who got the $25,000.

"He then told the consulate that he really needed the $25,000 plus another $5,000 to deliver the weapons to South Africa, which he said he got," Eden said.

White: Grant should help reduce violence in prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — A $346,000 grant will help fund a special team of prosecutors in a program to reduce violence in Texas prisons, Gov. Mark White said Thursday.

White said the prosecution team will focus on counties with the largest backlog of cases from the Texas Department of Corrections system.

White said the grant "sends out a clear crime message — we don't tolerate crime or violence on the streets of Texas and we won't tolerate crime or violence in our prison system."

FBI agents arrest 'mastermind' of bank robberies by helicopter

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who allegedly masterminded three 1984 bank heists where stolen aircraft were used as get-away vehicles was arrested by FBI officials.

FBI agents arrested Marvin Augusta Rodgers, 40, at a Houston gas station without resistance at 8:50 p.m. Wednesday, FBI spokesman Ron Kettler said. Rodgers was ordered held without bond Thursday when he was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Karen Brown in Houston.

Kettler said Rodgers, of Houston, allegedly had shotguns, rifles and pistols in his car at the time of his arrest.

Armed U.S. marshals escorted Rodgers, who was in handcuffs, waist chains and leg irons, out of the courtroom and to the Harris County Jail where he remains.

"We just felt like the guy was a little more of a risk than usual because of his background," U.S. Marshall B.F. (Stu) Baker said of the restraints on Rodgers.

He is accused of scheming to steal two helicopters from Scholes Field in Galveston and a Cessna 210 plane from Hooks Airport in Tomball in 1984 and using the aircraft in get-aways after allegedly robbing three banks of a total of nearly $300,000.

Grackles attack unprotected citrus on trees

McALLEN (AP) — Rio Grande Valley citrus growers hurt by killer freezes the past two winters now have another enemy to contend with — grackles.

"It's a shame. You work for something and then these birds are going to take what you cared for for nine months," said Tommy Thompson, a Mission grower who noticed damage to one of his orchards a week ago.

"There's never been any testing that has proved to keep the birds away," he said.

In December 1983, the Valley experienced a week of subfreezing temperatures that eventually decreased the citrus acreage from 70,000 acres to about 30,000 acres. Damage was estimated in excess of $100 million and about 9,000 people lost their jobs in the fields and packing sheds.

In mid-January of this year, several days of temperatures in the teens damaged the leaves, which once helped to cover the citrus from the birds.

Growers said they expected some Valley citrus by October and although the black birds are not new to the area, they could hurt the industry.

"Whether there are more birds now or less fruit, I don't know, but I do know we are experiencing more damage than we have seen at this time than in the past," said Dr. Richard Hensz of the Texas A&I University Citrus Center in Weslaco.

"It's probably been going on for the past six to eight weeks and (the birds are) still out there working," Hensz said.

Hensz and other industry officials said there appears little can be done to stop the grackles.

"It's not just a nuisance, it's a significant problem," said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual in McAllen. "I understand the damage is much worse in some areas than in others. But we don't have a good handle on it now as to the damage."

Because of this year's earlier freeze, leaves were lost. When the grackles flock to the orchards, they pick at the fruit for the oil in the peel. Then they rub their beak on their feathers, Prewett said.

"Once they pick a hole in the fruit other insects get into these," he said. "It can cause other fruit to fall down."

Murder charges against Lucas dismissed

LUBBOCK (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas' confessions aren't enough to get him convicted of three area slayings, but the self-professed serial killer will remain a suspect, a Lubbock prosecutor says.

District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell said Thursday he will seek to dismiss three murder charges against Lucas because "the only evidence we had to connect him to these murders were his confessions."

His decision came after a five-month investigation by the district attorney's office, Darnell said, but he added the cases would remain open and Lucas would remain a suspect.

Lucas, currently on Texas' death row, confessed to hundreds of murders in several states, but earlier this year recanted most of them.

Last year, he was indicted on capital murder charges in connection with the 1975 slaying of Deborah Sue Williamson, 18, and with the 1976 stabbing death of Elizabeth Ann Price, 44. He also was charged with murder in the 1971 stabbing death of Naomi Miller Martin, 54.

All three women were living in Lubbock.

In Miss Williamson's case, Darnell said investigators obtained information that Lucas was released from a Michigan prison Aug. 22, 1975, and was in Maryland on Aug. 24, the day before her murder.

"Because of that, it raised serious questions as to whether he had been in Lubbock the night of the killing," Darnell said.

Darnell said Lucas also claimed another man, Ottis Toole, was with him during both the 1975 and 1976 slayings, but he said new evidence strongly suggests he did not meet Toole until 1979.

Darnell said doubts about those two confessions led prosecutors to question the third as well. He said investigators will continue to search for evidence outside the confessions to tie Lucas, or anybody else, to the cases.

Nudism 'way to take away status symbols'

WILLS POINT (AP) — The way the American Sunbathing Association sees it, removing clothes is just another way to get rid of status symbols.

About 400 members of the association, including infants and grandmothers, have gathered in East Texas at the Pondarosa Ranch to talk about their favorite pasttime — nudism.

"When you remove your clothes, you take away status symbols, and you see and accept people the way they really are," said Ellyn Kern, who owns a nudist camp in Indiana. "You feel much more comfortable."

The sunbathing association bills itself as the largest nudist organization in the Western Hemisphere.

"I believe everyone should have at least the chance to try it out," said Hap Hathaway, public relations chairman for the association. "It's not as big a change as it seems."

Jim Hadley, 59, the owner of a Miami-area camp said practicing nudism is a basic American right.

"That's what this whole country was made for: freedom for each one to exercise their own moral code," he said. "There are other types of recreational activities I think are unusual."

Nudist clubs prohibit sexual contact between guests, association officials said.

"Some people come thinking they'll be able to witness or partake in overt sexuality," said Pete Hadley, Jim Hadley's wife. "That's not true. They will be asked to leave."

Many conventioneers said they have encouraged their children to take part in nudist activities.

"I think it is a beautiful atomosphere for them," said Mrs. Kern, who has four grown children. "They accepted themselves and each other. My son's childhood friends now come to camps with them."

Charles Moss, who owns a nudist camp outside of Decatur, one of 11 in Texas, said voyeurs are in for a disappointment.

"For the most part, you're not likely to see the body beautiful," he said. "Most people have imperfect bodies. It's very asexual."

Body identified as Abilene man

ANSON (AP) — Pathologists have identified decomposed remains buried in a ditch along a dirt road as that of a 23-year-old Abilene man who has been missing since July.

The victim was identified on Thursday as Adam "Junior" Garcia, said Jones County Sheriff Mike Middleton.

The identification, made through Garcia's dental records which were sent to the Southwest Institute of Forensic Sciences in Dallas, has changed the missing persons investigation into a murder inquiry, said Middleton.

"Based on evidence at the scene, we're looking at it as a homicide," he said on Thursday. "We will be working on this jointly with the Abilene Police Department."

Middleton said Garcia's body was discovered Tuesday evening. He said it appeared the victim had been dead about three weeks.

Garcia was last seen July 1 when he left work at J.D. Moore Transport and Storage in Abilene. Police thought foul play was involved in Garcia's disappearance, and that of a 26-year-old friend, who was last seen June 7.

But the friend was found alive Aug. 3 in Portland, Ore., where he was arrested on a public intoxication charge, police said.

Garcia's body was found buried in a ditch along a dirt road about 12 miles east of Anson, which is about 25 miles north of Abilene and one mile north of U.S. Highway 180.

Judge rules protesters must stay off private lot

HOUSTON (AP) — Anti-abortion demonstrators must stay off the parking lot of an abortion clinic, a judge has ruleld.

State District Judge Michael O'Brien agreed Wednesday with attorneys for the Aaron's Women's Clinic that protesters should not use the facility's privately owned parking lot to express their beliefs on abortion.

O'Brien on Wednesday granted a temporary injunction restricting the protesters to the public sidewalk in front of the southwest Houston building.

Members of Right-to-Life Advocates and other anti-abortion groups have argued the lot is a "quasi-public forum" where they should be allowed to express their ideas.

Peter Elliot, president of Right to Life Advocates, said the group will continue their protest by picketing on the sidewalk.

American experts join JAL investigation

WORLD

TOKYO (AP) — American aviation experts today flew by helicopter to a remote mountain ridge where 520 people died in the crash of a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet. New evidence was found that indicated the plane's tail section had disintegrated in flight.

The Americans — from the Federal Aviation Administration, the National Transportation Board and the Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. which built the plane — carried cameras and were dressed in mountain-climbing gear. The group was accompanied by Japanese investigators.

At one point, a Japanese official pointed to an adjoining ridge where a gap in the solid treeline indicated the plane, fighting for altitude, had plowed through before smashing into the steep mountainside on Monday.

It was the worst single-plane crash in air history. Only four people of the 524 abaord the 747 survived. There were six Americans among the 22 foreigns on board.

Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported searchers located a piece of the vertical stabilizer on another mountainside some distance from the crash site, along the path of the stricken Boeing 747SR.

Police in Kanagawa prefecture said a piece of heat insulating board, possibly from the plane, was found at the shore of Sagami Bay, south of Tokyo, where several other chunks of tail section debris were recovered earlier.

The stabilizer and other parts of the plane's tail section were found in the sea, about 90 miles from the crash site.

Japan's largest daily newspaper, the Yomiuru Shimbun, published a grainy photograph taken by an amateur photographer, showing a silhouetted jet flying overhead with most of its tail fin, including the rudder, missing.

If authentic, the picture could provide evidence in determining what caused the crash.

The photographer, Keiichi Yamazaki, said in a telephone interview he was in his garden in Okutama, 40 miles west of Tokyo, at 6:50 p.m. Monday when he noticed the plane "flying very low, with a lot of noise."

It was unusual, he said, because aircraft rarely fly over the area where he lives.

747SR's tail hadn't been inspected

SEATTLE (AP) — Japan Air Lines had not checked the tail of the 747 jumbo jet that took 520 people to their deaths, despite a company inspection program, officials said, denying that Boeing Co. had recommended the action in 1984.

Boeing, recognizing that some 747 fleets were aging, in 1983 issued a report telling airlines to inspect the planes thoroughly for cracks, corrosion and metal fatigue in structural parts that had never been inspected, company spokesman Dave Jimenez said Thursday.

Boeing also developed a special inspection program for the 747SR in mid-1984, which was sent to the only two airlines that use that model — JAL and All Nippon Airways, Jimenez said.

However, Tadao Fujimatsu, JAL's director of public relations in New York City, said Boeing had told the airline special checks were unnecessary for the 747SRs, designed specifically for high-volume, short-range domestic flights.

Fujimatsu told the Los Angeles Times that JAL had created its own inspection program, but had not yet checked the tail assembly of the plane that crashed Monday northwest of Tokyo, killing all but four people aboard.

Japan's Transport Ministry on Thursday ordered inspection of the tail sections of all 747s flown by Japan-based airlines after preliminary evidence indicated the crash was caused by a structural failure in the tail section.

Investigators say parts of the tail broke off the plane before it crashed. The parts were fished from the sea about 90 miles from the crash site.

Boeing had no comment Thursday on preliminary investigation results, said company spokesman Jim Boynton. The investigators include officials from the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration and Boeing.

Boeing, working with the FAA, published its 1983 inspection report as part of an inspection program it develops for all of its aircraft, Jimenez said. It specifically calls for checks of small parts such as forgings and castings throughout the plane, including those in the tail assembly.

The FAA also recognized that the 747 fleet, built in the early 1970s, was aging, and in November 1984 mandated that Boeing's program be followed by all U.S. airlines, said Jimenez and FAA inspector Bill Zenker in San Francisco.

The airlines have until November to comply, Jimenez said. FAA rulings do not affect foreign airlines.

FAA records show there have been 11 reports of structural deterioration in tail sections of U.S.-based Boeing 747s in the past five years, the Times reported.

Ten cases involved cracks, sheared bolts and corrosion in components related to the tails' horizontal stabilizer and one centered on a 4½-inch-long crack and a 7-inch crack in a rib of one plane's upper rudder, it said.

Japanese leader visits war shrine

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

TOKYO — In a move condemned by Buddhists, Christians and Japan's opposition parties, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Thursday became the first postwar Japanese leader to officially visit Yasukuni Shrine, the headquarters of Japan's wartime emperor-worship and militarism.

On the 40th anniversary of Japan's surrender to the United States, Nakasone and 18 of his Cabinet ministers made official visits to the shrine to pray for peace and for the souls of the war dead after commemorating Japan's war dead in a non-religious government ceremony also attended by Emperor Hirohito.

Nakasone's decision to transform what previously had been private visits to the shrine into official" ones — with funds from the national treasury used to pay for flowers — was the most controversial action he has taken so far to carry out a pledge to make a "final accounting" of the taboos of Japan's postwar era.

Yasukuni Shrine, stripped of its official state support by U.S. occupation authorities and a postwar Constitution requiring separation of religion and politics, still enshrines the souls of the more than 2.5 million servicemen who died in Japan's 1931-1945 "Pacific War," first against China and then the United States and most of Asia.

Among those honored there are the late Prime Minister Gen. Hideki Tojo and six others convicted as "Class A" criminals at the occupation-era Tokyo war-crimes trials.

Average college student changes

Those seeking higher education older

By KEITH B. RICHBURG
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A Census Bureau report released this week says that during the 1970s the college population became older and increasingly female.

The report, "School Enrollment — Social and Economic Characteristics of Students," surveyed school enrollments for 1980 and 1981.

The shifts in education it reflects are posing new and difficult choices for policy-makers. For example, at a time when officials are debating the proper focus of college-student-aid programs, the survey found that 52 percent of college students are now 22 or older, defying the traditional notion that a college student is a young person who is still able to rely on his parents for support.

Students aged 18 and 19 represented 25 percent of the total number of college students, according to the report, down from 31.6 percent in 1970.

Meanwhile, the proportion of students aged 25 to 29 increased from 11.4 percent in 1970 to 14.2 percent in 1981. The proportion of students aged 30 to 34 nearly doubled between 1970 and 1981, jumping from 5 percent to 9.9 percent.

Education Secretary William J. Bennett, defending his controversial proposals to cut college-student aid, has argued that families could make up much of the difference by belt tightening and better financial planning.

More recently, C. Emily Feistritzer of the National Center for Education Information, sparked an emotional debate in the education community when she wrote in a column for The Washington Post last month that older students have been hogging student aid intended for the 18 to 22 year olds.

"We are now seeing younger, poorer seekers of higher education competing with older, richer ones for long-term, low-interest federal loans as the newcomers take advantage of a program that was not created for their benefit," she wrote. Her column sparked some angry responses from older students who contended that they are not in a better position to pay the high cost of a college education.

According to the Census report, much of the growth in the older student population can be attributed to women. Women students in the older age groups more than doubled their numbers between 1970 and 1981.

"You just can't look at higher education in the same old way," said Alan W. Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. He said the shifting student population is changing the way professors teach, since older students who work tend to be more demanding and prefer evening classes.

Nun not inspired when featured on greeting cards

CHICAGO (AP) — A greeting card comany being sued by a Roman Catholic nun says it has pulled cards bearing her picture from the market and has offered to donate its profits from the card to her order.

However, an attorney for the nun said she would pursue her lawsuit against the company, California Dreamers Inc. of Chicago.

"If they think they can commercially exploit someone, embarrass them and laugh it off by saying, 'Now we'll give you the money we got wrongfully,' they've got another guess," said William Linklater, attorney for Sister Candida Lund of the Dominican order.

The card features a black and white photograph of an unidentified nun seated in chair, with the words, "It's all right if you kiss me."

Inside, it adds, "So long as you don't get in the habit."

In her Cook County Circuit Court suit, Sister Candida contends the photograph is of her and was used without her knowledge. She describes the words on the card as a "filthy, seamy and degrading verse, appealing to prurient interests."

Sister Candida has won a temporary court order barring the sale of a "filthy, seamy and degrading" greeting card she says features her photo.

The lawsuit charges California Dreamers with invasion of privacy and misappropriating the picture; presenting Sister Candida in a false light; defamation; and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

EARNEST KIKER

Use pesticides to stop hopping, boring, garden pests

By EARNEST C. KIKER

Herbicides in lawns

With the August rains, starting the first of September comes the rescue grass in home lawns. Now is the time to start treating with herbicides. Balan is probably the best for a fall application around August 15th or so.

Peach trees

August is the time to spray peach tree trunks for peach tree borer. Spray now for peach tree borers with Dursban (R) to prevent damage and potential tree loss from these insects.

Shade trees

Lots of reports of borers are coming in from around the county. About half of the reports of tree sickness or death attributed to borers actually involves borers. Borers generally only attack trees which are under some kind of external stress such as too much or too little water, herbicide injury, cold damage or gas leaks. There are cases, however, when borers attack trees which are apparently otherwise healthy.

Borer control is difficult because the grubs are located well inside the tree and cannot be killed with insecticides effectively. (Even systemic chemicals which work so well on sucking insects on the leaves and stems do not control borer grubs in tree limbs and trunks). This means that to control borers we must control the adult beetles. Most of the borers we have are longhorned beetles. Longhorned beetles are generally cylindrical in shape, from ¾ inches to 2½ inches long and have long antennae. Their markings and colorations are quite variable.

Homeowners should look for these beetles and spray tree trunks with Dursban, Borer-Sol, or Lindane when the adult borers are seen.

Grape Leafhoppers

Grape leafhoppers are showing up across the county on grape and Virginia creeper leaves. Their feeding causes speckled, bleached-out specks on the leaves, which later turn yellow and fall from the plants. These insects can be controlledjusing Malathion and Diazinon if care is taken to get spray on the undersides of the leaves as well as on the top surface. However, since most of the leafhopper feeding occurs on the bottom leaf surface, I prefer systemic insecticides such as Cygon.

Pecans

Pecan aphids are damaging many pecan trees at this time — namely, the attackers are black pecan aphids and yellow pecan aphids. Check your trees for these pests. Black aphids will cause small portions of the leaves to turn yellow in color, then darken. Only a few of these pests per leaflet are enough to cause the leaflet to drop from the tree.

Yellow pecan aphids are more prolific, but more can be tolerated by the tree. If 20-25 or more yellow pecan aphids can be counted (on the average) per compound leaf, spraying is suggested. Effective foliar sprays include Malathion, Zolone and Pyrin.

Glut of corn won't help farm struggle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department economists are predicting farmers may average about $2.50 per bushel for this fall's record corn crop, down from $2.65 for the 1984 harvest and $3.25 for the 1983 crop.

The reason is a slump in exports and, of course, the huge supply of grain. And not just in the United States — it's a worldwide glut.

According to new USDA projections, this fall's U.S. corn harvest will help balloon world grain inventories 22 percent from current levels.

Good harvests in most of the major grain-producing countries point to "a burdensome level of world stocks" at the close of the season in 1986, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said earlier this week.

By 1986, world inventories of surplus grain are expected to be a record level of about 241.6 million metric tons, compared with a current carryover of 198.4 million tons.

The buildup in stored grain a year from now will occur despite record grain utilization during 1985-86, the report said.

In all, global output of wheat and "coarse" grains such as corn and sorghum is expected to total nearly 1.35 billion metric tons in 1985-86, a 2 percent increase from last season. About 510 million tons will be wheat and 837 million tons coarse grains.

Total use was shown at more than 1.3 billion tons, a 1.5 percent increase. Wheat use was put at 502.9 million tons, unchanged from last season, and coarse grains at 801.1 million tons, up from 782.8 million tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn. The 1985 U.S. corn crop, for example, was estimated on Monday at 8.27 billion bushels or about 210 million tons.

U.S. grain production this year was estimated at 322.3 million tons or 24 percent of the world total. Comparatively, the record total grain year for American farmers was 1982, when they produced 326 million tons or 26 percent of that season's world grain total.

India and Egypt to get 'raisin aid'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe it won't make the great grape glut go away, but a new raisin food aid deal announced by the Agriculture Department is expected to help.

Richard W. Goldberg, deputy undersecretary for international affairs and commodity programs, said 2,140 metric tons of raisins — about 4.7 million pounds — will be donated to India and Egypt as Food for Peace humanitarian aid.

"Both of these countries, with large and growing populations, have large numbers of people facing malnutrition problems," Goldberg said in announcing the donation under Title II of the Food for Peace program.

The donation program also includes grains, grain products, dairy products and vegetable oils.

According to sources who spoke only on condition they not be identified, the raisin donation to India and Egypt is part of a much larger plan to funnel about 20,000 tons of raisins to needy countries through the Agency for International Development's network of relief agencies.

It 'mushroomed' into a good year

WASHINGTON (AP) — For many who had a stake in the mushroom business, it was a pretty good year, the Agriculture Department says.

Production in the 1984-85 mushroom year that ended June 30 rose to 596 million pounds, up 6 percent from the previous year. The value of production also was a record, rising 1 percent to $494 million, the department's Crop Reporting Board said this week.

Growers received an average of 82.9 cents per pound, down from 86.6 cents in 1983-84. However, yields increased, averaging $3.55 per square foot of growing space, compared with $3.41 the previous year.

For some women, money most desirable male trait

Copley News Service

It's an embarrassing little secret in this liberated age, but nonetheless true: Many women still find money to be one of the most desirable traits they are looking for in a man.

And many men — who have been trying to be the warm, vulnerable, sensitive creatures women say they want them to be — are discovering that this emphasis on having to possess a high income, too, is something they deeply resent.

Consider the following stories:

— Ed Bennett is a 37-year-old massage therapist who would qualify on anybody's scale as a genuine hunk. He has a classic, semi-rugged profile, big blue eyes, wiry muscles and a self-containment that coexists with a thoughtful receptivity and politeness. He likes intelligent, career-oriented women and is nourishing enough to fall into the category of a liberated man.

But Bennett isn't married, although he yearns to be. The reason? He doesn't make enough money. A woman he was dating seriously told him she wouldn't marry him as long as he held his former job as a manual laborer. One woman he met at a party remarked, "You're a gorgeous man, but I'm interested in a man with money." Another professional woman told him after two dates that, although she was crazy about him, she was looking for a successful man and wanted him to meet her secretary.

SAID BENNETT, who considers himself "emotionally scarred" by these experiences: "When I meet a woman now and she says, 'What do you do?' I panic."

— Dr. Jeff Matloff, 34, is an attractive and sensitive psychologist, who owns his own home and a late-model car, takes vacations in Mexico, is a good listener and values talking about feelings. With an annual income of around $45,000, he has never thought of himself as a man who was lacking in anything to offer a woman.

Yet, one night last year, over a romantic seafood dinner, the pretty schoolteacher he was dating asked point blank how much money he made. When Matloff told her, she replied: "Is that all? How do you expect to find a good wife on that?"

CNS Photo

"I was really shocked," said Matloff, who used the experience to question his own values. "I eventually told her I hoped she found someone who could give her what she wanted. It was a strange experience seeing the aspect of provider seeming to be more important than things like caring."

TEN YEARS AGO, writer Warren Farrell, author of "The Liberated Man," predicted that when women gained economic parity, they would no longer look to their mates as a source of income and would instead be content with the more nourishing type of "new liberated man" whose sensitivities precluded the tough competitiveness necessary to make it in the business world.

Some experts agree, however, that the years have proved otherwise.

Said Dr. Melvyn Kinder, a Beverly Hills, Calif., psychologist who is co-author of the new book, "Smart Women, Foolish Choices": "It's absolutely not true. The more a woman has financial success, the more she expects that in her mate."

Women wanting men who make more money than they do is "still quite common," he said. "To some degree it's quite understandable. Part of what we've gone through in the last five years is a major depression. But many women weigh that more heavily than is good for them. It's not an ultimate predictor of a good relationship or a good life together."

AND, SAID KINDER, women are really doing themselves a disservice by insisting that their men be warm, intelligent, attractive, trustworthy, honest, emotionally stable, as well as material successes. This means, he wrote, that "80 percent of the single women are interested in 20 percent of the available men," a set of odds that is bound to end in disappointment. "Smart women," he said in the book, "need to become more realistic in their expectations if they want to form close long-term relationships with men."

Said Barbara Jones, who teaches the class "How to Marry for Money:" "There are a lot of women who would like a more traditional marriage, believe it or not."

According to two San Diego psychologists, a certain amount of this attitude is due to a healthy realism on the part of women.

Said psychotherapist Leie Carmody: "As long as there is not as much room at the top for women, and as long as women bear children, then there's always the awareness of who needs to be the main breadwinner. ... That's not an unhealthy dependency need. That's realistic."

DEAR ABBY

Compassion main course when dining with disabled

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've never written before but now I need your thoughts on a subject that really bothers me. I don't know how to put this delicately, but what is your opinion of people who take persons who are unable to eat normally to high-class restaurants? I mean people who have had strokes, can't eat without drooling and make a terrible mess.

A co-worker told me that he and his wife went to a lovely restaurant for a relaxing evening, only to be seated right next to a family that included a woman who had to be fed. He said there appeared to be more food coming out than going in and it looked like she was vomiting. He said it was revolting, and it spoiled his appetite.

This kind of stuff doesn't bother me because I'm a nurse, but I can understand how some people might not be able to tolerate it.

If people want to take someone out who can't eat normally, out of consideration to the other diners, why don't they request an out-of-the-way table? — SEES BOTH SIDES

DEAR SEES: Most people with special needs do request an out-of-the-way table, but it's not always possible to accommodate them. Those who cannot eat normally desperately need to get out and dine in a lovely restaurant, and their friends and families deserve commendation for taking them. If one happens to encounter a "revolting" sight, he need only turn his head and avoid looking in that direction again. I, too, can see both sides — but my plea is for more compassion and understanding on the part of the "other diners."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year-old male. In my youth, I hitchhiked great distances — even coast to coast. I was given rides by many kind and interesting people. Only in one situation did I have any concern for my personal safety, and that came to nothing.

In recent years I have not picked up hitchhikers, but, when my wife passes on (she is terminally ill) I plan to travel extensively by car. Long stretches of highway driving will be lonely, and I would gladly give rides to strangers for companionship if I could substantially reduce the risk of robbery or worse.

Abby, is it safe to pick up hitchhikers? And what measures can a driver take to reduce the risk if he does give someone a ride? — TACOMA READER

DEAR READER: No, it is NOT "safe." For 100 percent protection, pick up nobody. I would offer a would-be hitchhiker the same advice. Sorry, but we're living in crazy times.

Money mania may mean mental mayhem for some

Associated Press

Everyone knows money can't buy happiness, but for some rich overachievers the price of wealth is a series of hangups that range from impotence to insomnia.

Scientific studies of these poor rich whose problems stem from an obsession with wealth are absent from psychological journals but, according to an article in the September issue of Science Digest, clinicians who specialize in treating the rich see patterns emerging from their case studies.

Jay Rohrlich, a psychiatrist in New York's Wall Street whose clients are mostly financial executives, said of them:

"To some, money means security. To some it means power. To others it means they're going to be able to buy love, and to a fourth group it means competition and winning the game."

The belief that money can buy these things, psychologists say, can lead to impotence, insomnia, heart attacks and troubles with spouse or children.

The need for power forms the bottom line for the executives with six- and seven-figure salaries treated by New York clinical psychologist Bonnie Jacobson.

"The bigger the pile, the more powerful they think they'll feel," she said. She added, "Yet, in therapy, these people often have an enormously unrealistic feeling of powerlessness."

Rohrlich said many of his clients see their identity wholly in terms of their wealth and don't want to part with it. He described one man, worth millions of dollars, who lives in a studio apartment, listens to a portable radio and wears 10-year-old suits. All his money goes into his stock portfolio.

He spoke of the "paradox of power," in which wealthy people are driven to make money by a need for approval.

"But as you make more money and achieve greater power, others view you as less needy and themselves as needing more from you," he said.

Tips keep computers humming

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Computer failure is the bane of office operations nowadays, but a few simple tactics can help keep the machines up and running.

These maintenance practices will help avert disk drive failure, the most frequent cause of computer breakdowns, according to Microservice Management magazine here.

— Keep diskettes in their jackets and also in a closed container, and keep the area in which they are stored and used as clean as possible.

— Keep disk doors closed.

— Keep foreign objects, such as paper clips and pencils, away from diskettes and the disk drive.

— Clean drive heads regularly, and align disk drives two or three times a year.

Hairdresser picks Del Rio for restaurant

DEL RIO (AP) — The yellow and black portable billboard reads: World Famous Schnitzel Cordon Bleu. Today's Special: Karl's Burger.

Karl Flugel greeted patrons as they entered his tiny restaurant, called World Famous, located in the Del Rio Motor Lodge on Avenue F or U.S. Highway 90 West.

Flugel is a friendly man with sparkling eyes, bearded face, quick smile and casual attire. He was wearing a knit sport shirt, bermuda shorts, tennis shoes, a stylish cap and white apron.

"What would you like?" he asked with a distinct German accent. "But, please, no Karl's Burgers," he teased. "I am sick of making them."

Karl's Burger is as close as you'll get to a hamburger, so if you're in the mood for a Big Mac, drive on. Flugel's creation is a chopped sirloin cooked in a spicy cream sauce and served "mit" German style fries or potato salad at lunch or "mit" home fries, a vegetable, soup du jour, homemade or imported bread, butter and salad for dinner.

Guests are encouraged to relax. "Please allow for all orders 15 to 20 minutes since everything is cooked to your personal specification," the menu says.

Flugel is a newcomer to Del Rio, having lived in the United States off and on for 17 years. A native of Bonn, West Germany, he arrived in the West Texas town in May to take over ownership of the Del Rio Motor Lodge, bar and cafe. His business is being remodeled. Meanwhile, he is "feeling out" the tastes of Del Rio residents and area diners.

He plans to rename the motor lodge the Innsbruck Inn before next year's telephone directory is published. He is changing the bar — currently closed for remodeling — into Flugel Gast Haus, and he is making World Famous into an exclusive restaurant.

"I DON'T want to run a bar. I want to run a restaurant," Flugel said flatly. "I don't care for cocktails. I would rather specialize in wine and beer." Eventually, he plans to start a beer club of the world.

"My idea is eventually having 50 imported beers." He said the beer would be purchased from a San Antonio distributor. Flugel must first obtain a carrier permit to transport it to Del Rio.

The gast haus will typify a German guest house, serving such dishes as schnitzel, rouladen and sauerbraten. The adjacent restaurant, seating 25 to 28 people, will be a "small place for people who really like good meal," Flugel said.

The guest house will have an a la carte menu. "Here (at World Famous) it will be different. There will be a choice of various meals which I put together from day to day. There will be three variations of a five-course meal that I will prepare myself."

Specializing in European cuisine has some drawbacks, Flugel acknowledged. The German bread comes from Dimpflmeiers Backhaus in Toronto, Canada. The veal for the schnitzels is shipped from Wisconsin, and the German sausage comes from New York. One package of sausage costs $14.14 while shipping costs for three packages is $17.03.

"That is something you have to live with when you are that far off the beaten track."

Why did he decide on Del Rio for his venture?

"If I be in a big city, shall we say San Francisco, San Diego or Chicago, you have already established competition. To compete with them takes more money than if you choose a smaller place where you be big fish in a small bowl."

But why Del Rio, specifically?

"I like to sail, and I got a boat in the water (Lake Amistad). It's the best place if you don't want to be in California or Florida. And, I like bullfights."

THE RESTAURATEUR, in his earlier years, was an award-winning archer, receiving a bronze medal as a member of the German national archery team in 1963. The target-shooting archer competed in the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City, representing his homeland. While he is still a German citizen, Flugel said he needs only to appear in court to become an American; his paperwork has been completed.

Flugel, a member of two invitation-only international gourmet societies, is not a chef by trade. He is a hairstylist. He is also a businessman and an author.

Flugel said his grandfather and father were hairstylists. As the eldest son he was to take over the family business, a chain of five salons. Flugel went through a three-year apprenticeship as a hairstylist during his teen-age years. When he was nearly 18, he went to work as a steward doing odd jobs on a luxury ocean liner based in Amsterdam.

"That is why I got involved in food. I worked on different ocean liners for 3½ years, and the best part was this — I could always double up as a hairdresser. I could make money twice in this unique position.

"Because of hairdressing I made 17 trips around world on ocean liners.

"Then I lived in London, and it was first time I actually worked professionally, making a living, as a chef. I went to cooking schools with gourmet societies."

Flugel, who speaks five languages, is a member of Chaine des Rotisseurs, a French cooking society. Members of this group are not necessarily chefs, but rather people who are interested in good food. "Cooked food," he stressed, "not fried or on an open fire."

He is also a member of La Ronde des Gourmets, an international society with a membership limited to 500. "You have to be recommended by two or three members before they consider you a member. Then you have to put a dinner together."

Brazilian Indians now fighting for rights

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

BRASILIA, Brazil — When Marcos Terena left his Brazilian Indian tribe as a child, he discovered prejudice and disrimination among the people he and other Indians call "whites."

He says it was easier to say he was Japanese, who have been migrating to Brazil for the better part of this century.

"I didn't know what poverty was," he recalled here recently. "I didn't know what rich was either. I discovered I was poor."

Today the 30-year-old Terena is the head of the government's newly created Indian Culture Department and is one of Brazil's leading proponents of Indian rights.

The Indian Culture Department, part of the Culture Ministry, was formed by the civilian government that took over this past March from a military regime that held power for two decades.

During those years, the military came under fire of human rights groups over the treatment of Indians. Among the groups were the Brazilian Society of Indigenists, the Anthropology Research center in Boston, Survival International U.S.A. in Washington, D.C., and Survival International in London.

Terena agreed with the human-rights groups' criticism but said the situation now is getting better.

In his new job, Terena said, he hopes to educate the "whites" — anyone who is not Indian — about the vast and complicated cultures and traditions of the native Brazilians.

"The white children now learn that the Indian lives in the jungle, he's naked and lazy," Terena maintained.

There are about 220,000 native Indians from about 140 tribes left in Brazil. At the turn of the century Brazil had about 1 million Indians. The non-Indian population now is mainly white, black and mixed race.

Most Indians live in isolated Amazon jungle areas that now are being exploited by prospectors seeking mineral riches. Many Indians were wiped out by diseases brought by intruders. Some still roam the rain forests wearing little or no clothing; others farm or work in the cites.

Terena, whose last name is the same as his tribe, says he also wants to change the structure and teaching methods of government-sponsored schools in Indian villages.

"The teachers who come into the tribes don't understand the Indians," he said. 'They say to the children, 'The airplane flies.' But many of these people don't know what an airplane is. The teacher should say, 'The bird flies.' "

Terena supports the idea of the Indians learning Portuguese, the language of Brazil, while still retaining their native tongues.

He said that much of what he wants to bring to the new job comes from his own experiences.

He left the Terena tribe in the western Amazon jungle when he was 9 to accompany an ailing aunt to live on a farm near a city.

"My aunt had epilepsy, but no one at the village knew what it was or how to treat it. After that, I think I wanted to become a doctor."

Leaving his parents, six siblings and a thatched home, Terena was enrolled in an evangelical school.

"In the tribal village there are no differences," he said. "Suddenly I noticed I looked different, my customs were different."

Brushing a shock of thick black hair from his eyes, Terena said he "felt ashamed" of his identity.

"I started telling people I was Japanese. It was easier."

Terena now refers to that part of his life as "the time I had Indian amnesia."

That ended six years ago. Since then, Terena attended schools in Brasilia, and learned about the Bureau of Indian Affairs, called by its Portuguese acronym Funai and charged with protecting the native Brazilians.

"My experience with Funai was that they were a repressive and corrupt organization in my village," the Indian said. "But it was at Funai in Brasilia that I ran into other Indians, and I realized I had the same blood. I had more. I had education."

Last year Terena held the second highest post in Funai and now has his own department.

"Our hope with the new government is that this will continue," he said. "The Indian culture is rooted in the land. And the whites must mark off our lands."

Terena still travels to his village, where 13,000 of his tribe still live.

"I tell them they have rights and the government has promised to protect them and our land," Terena said. "I tell those who leave the villages that they must help our people with what they have learned outside."

He says that one day he will return to his homeland to live and hopes to marry a Terena, "to preserve our tribe."

But before he leaves, he says, there is work to do to make whites understand the Indians and their needs, and to make the Indians understand they are not second-class citizens.

"I am proud to have discovered my Indian identity and to know that while I survive it is one more Terena living," he said. "And when I die, it will not be Marcos dying, but yet another Terena dying."

The crew of the British powerboard Virgin Atlantic Challenger poses prior to departure Monday from New York City. Their attempt to set a trans-Atlantic crossing record ended Thursday with the ship's sinking.

British boat sinks hours from new speed record

By JO THOMAS
New York Times News Service

LONDON — The Virgin Atlantic Challenger, a powerboat trying to beat the trans-Atlantic speed record of the liner United States, filled with water and sank just below the surface in stormy weather Thursday only hours from the British lighthouse that marked the end of her 2,850-mile course.

Her crew of nine, including a yachtsman who had rowed the Atlantic and a millionaire sponsor whose experience was limited to a canal boat, were rescued unhurt by a banana boat, the Geestbay, that lumbered along in answer to their calls of mayday.

The $2.1 million Atlantic Challenger, a 65-foot-long twin-hulled vessel with two 4,000-horsepower engines, was reported still floating, submerged and bow-up, 138 miles from the finish line at the Bishop Rock Lighthouse in the Isles of Scilly, where champagne and the relatives of the crew were waiting.

Ted Toleman, Atlantic Challenger's skipper, who with other crew members was whisked off the banana boat by helicopter, reported that his vessel met disaster when it hit a solid object beneath the surface.

"They were going along very smoothly when suddenly there was a bang and they hit something," said Tim Powell, the project chairman, who talked with Toleman as soon as he arrived Thursday night at the Isles of Scilly, off southwest England.

"It was something hard — they still don't know what it was," said Powell. "But the Atlantic Challenger filled with water very quickly. They had no choice. They went through the emergency drill they had rehearsed and got out calmly into their dinghies and waited to be picked up."

The evacuation was so fast that the crew had no time to use the radio carried to give an alert, he said. The mayday message was sent out automatically by radio sets in the lifeboats.

Peter Bohanna, a member of the Atlantic Challenger team in London, said that solid objects, often hidden beneath the waves, are not unusual in the Atlantic. "There are hundreds of crates and other things that have fallen off ships, just floating around," he said.

The Atlantic Challenger, with a top speed of more than 50 miles an hour, had zoomed out of New York Harbor on Monday, her British crew dressed in red and white to match the colors on the powerboat's gleaming hull. Their aim was to beat the trans-Atlantic speed record of 3 days, 10 hours and 40 minutes set in 1952 by the American passenger liner United States and to recapture the Blue Ribbon Trophy for Britain.

The attempt had met with some opposition, however.

"This trophy is meant for ocean liners not toy boats," Frank Braynard, curator of the American Merchant Maritime Museum, which houses the trophy, said before the voyage began. No matter what the Atlantic Challenger did, he said, he did not intend to hand over the trophy.

"If necessary," he said, "we will stand arm-in-arm around the trophy to stop them taking it."

Along with Toleman, a former European and British powerboat champion, the crew included Richard Branson, the millionaire chairman of Virgin Records and co-sponsor of the project; Chay Blyth, a round-the-world yachtsman who has rowed the Atlantic, and Dag Pike, one of the world's foremost navigators of offshore powerboats.

When the Atlantic Challenger reached her first refueling stop, an oil rig off Halifax, Nova Scotia, 500 miles from New York City, it was ahead of schedule. But she hit electrical storms on the second leg of her journey. A school of whales was encountered, as well as the largest number of icebergs in 60 years.

Seven hours before the second refueling stop, Toleman decided the boat was going too fast and consuming fuel too quickly. At the stop, the boat delivering the fuel malfunctioned and Atlantic Challenger was delayed for more than an hour.

WORLD IN BRIEF

TWA craft reclaimed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three American crewmen left today with the TWA Boeing 727 that had been at the Beirut airport since it was hijacked by Shiite Moslem extremists in June.

The plane left shortly after noon for the 25-minute trip to Larnaca, Cyprus.

Airport officials said the three Americans had arrived from Larnaca aboard a regular flight of the Lebanese national airline, Middle East Airlines. It identified the crewmen only as Capt. Valix, First Officer Corley and Flight Engineer Seeland.

The plane was hijacked June 14 on its way from Athens to Rome with 153 people aboard. The hijackers shot and killed a U.S. Navy petty officer, and held 39 Americans until July 1, when they were released in Damascus.

The hijackers had sought the release of more than 700 prisoners, most of them Shiite Moslems, from an Israeli jail.

Oil terminal damaged

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Maritime salvage executives based in the Persian Gulf said today that Iran's main oil export terminal at Kharg Island had suffered serious damage in a raid by Iraqi warplanes.

Their comments corroborated a claim by Iraq on Thursday that it had attacked Iran's main oil terminal and demolished it.

"Yes, indeed, the island was attacked Thursday afternoon and, according to radio messages received here, the damage that befell loading facilities must be enormous," said one European marine salvage executive.

Pilot facing difficulties

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A French pilot trying to be the first to circle the globe in an ultra-light airplane said Thursday his biggest problems have been bureaucratic, not technical.

"Really the greatest difficulties are these administrative problems," Patrice Franceschi, who started his trip Sept. 29, 1984, in Paris, told reporters here. "It surprises you, but that's the way it is."

He noted that he has been in 17 countries since starting the trip — "that many bureaucracies, you have to arrange each time." He said French embassies along the route have been instrumental in helping smooth the way.

Franceschi, 30, said the unforeseen technical, legal and customs problems have caused him to extend the trip from his original estimate of seven months.

Embassy attack queried

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government has condemned the attack on the Mexican Embassy in Guatemala City and said it expects detailed information from Guatemala on the circumstances surrounding it.

Two Guatemalan employees of the embassy were killed after a hand grenade thrown into the garden exploded Wednesday morning.

"This attack constitutes a deplorable act and is, in all lights, irresponsible," a statement from the Mexican Foreign Ministry said late Wednesday.

It said Mexico's ambassador to Guatemala, Abraham Talavera, "is in contact with Guatemalan authorities with the object that the origin of the attack be investigated and that a detailed report be presented about the circumstances in which it occurred."

The employees killed were both Guatemalans, working as the embassy's gardener and a messenger.

Jewish activist convicted

MOSCOW (NYT) — A Jewish activist who is a member of an unofficial peace group was sentenced Thursday to three years at hard labor on a charge of "malicious hooliganism," his wife said.

The activist, Vladimir Brodsky, was tried in a makeshift court in a factory that makes construction materials.

Only his wife, Dina, was allowed inside. She said the charges against her husband, who had served two 15-day terms for "petty hooliganism", were a fabrication, and that an appeal was planned.

Brodsky, 34 years old, irritated authorities because of his activism as a member of the independent group that has issued calls for disarmament by the United States and the Soviet Union.

More AIDS in Africa?

BRUSSELS, Belgium (LAT) — Belgium medical researchers are reporting an alarming increase in the prevalence of the fatal disease AIDS in some African nations where, in contrast with the United States, it is spreading chiefly among the heterosexual population.

The African nations where the disease has been spotted are Zaire, Rwanda, Burundi, Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda.

Researchers believe the disease could spread from equatorial to West Africa, and eventually pose a much larger public health problem than in the United States or Europe, due in part to the fact that it is established among heterosexuals, and because of the prevalence of such other diseases as malaria that seem to make Africans more susceptible to AIDS.

AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, destroys the body's natural immunities to other diseases. It is nearly always fatal. In the United States its largest incidence has been among homosexual males, Haitians, intravenous drug users and recipients of donor blood.

Soccer riot victim dies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — An Italian soccer fan died from injuries sustained in a riot prior to the European championship game, his doctor said. His dead raised the toll from the May 29 riot to 39.

Luigi Pidone died Wednesday after spending 77 days in coma, doctor Jean Louis Vincent of the Erasmus Hospital said Thursday.

Pope faces challenges in Kenya

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Pope John Paul II's African campaign against birth control, abortion and sterilization faced its biggest challenge in Kenya, where the government is encouraging contraception to stem the fastest-growing population in the world.

Before arriving today in Nairobi, the Kenyan capital, the pope scheduled a brief stop in Lubumbashi, Zaire's second largest city located in the central African country's mineral-rich south.

The pope, who is on the ninth day of a 12-day, seven-nation swing through Africa, struck at birth control earlier in the week in Cameroon.

In a hard-hitting speech on Monday, John Paul attacked what he called a "strong anti-life mentality."

He charged that such methods as artificial birth control, abortion and forced sterilization were being introduced in developing nations "as if it were the compulsory path to development and progress."

The issue is of major concern to the government of the east African nation of Kenya where the yearly birth rate is more than 4 percent, a rate that would triple its population to 57 million in 25 years.

The issue has become a sore point between the Roman Catholic Church and the Kenyan government.

In Africa, where population growth is outstripping food production, the overall birth rate is 3.1 percent, the highest of any major region.

The government of Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi has been pressing artificial birth control, provoking an outcry from local Roman Catholic Church leaders, who have charged that the government is seeking to legalize abortion.

Kenyan Cardinal Maurice Otunga, who protested bitterly last year when he learned women were being surgically sterilized at government facilities, has said the most famine-stricken countries have no over-population problem.

"The problem is not that the Earth is unable to feed everyone," he said recently. "The problem is of distribution and production. We have not challenged the Earth enough."

In Cameroon, the pope told Africans "their glad acceptance of your children as God's gift to you stands to your glory and honor."

Nevertheless, he said, the church recognizes "the grave problems" posed by population growth in some parts of the world. He asserted that such growth can be checked by abstinence from sexual intercourse during a woman's fertile period.

A Kenyan editor, Hilary Ngweno, in an editorial in his weekly review magazine, ridiculed the church stance on birth control, likening it to the church's former refusal to accept Galileo's theory that the sun was the center of the solar system.

"Fortunately, the people of Kenya don't have to wait 500 years to wake up to the dire implications of unchecked population growth," he said.

Last month, the U.N. Decade for Women conference in Nairobi discussed, among other things, family planning and population control.

On Thursday, the pope beatified Anuarite Nengapeta, a Zairean nun bayoneted to death for resisting a rape attempt by a soldier. The nun's beatification moved her a major step closer to sainthood and the distinction as black Africa's first woman saint.

The pope also publicly forgave former Col. Pierre Openge Olombe, the soldier convicted of killing Anuarite.
