Congress will probably confront same troubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political atmosphere may be less tumultuous when the incoming 98th Congress begins work on a new budget, but legislators returning to Capitol Hill next year are likely to find the problems they confronted in this election year have only worsened.

And, as with this year, President Reagan's position will be critical to the progress of the House and Senate agreeing to a spending blueprint for the federal government.

It took five months of bitter struggling this year among Democrats, Republicans and the White House before a budget plan was adopted and Congress could get on with its revenue and appropriations work.

Next year, Congress still will be confronted by record deficits, high unemployment and a deteriorating Social Security system, all of which put tremendous pressure on the budget.

Even some administration officals now concede the deficit could approach $200 billion in 1984. The Treasury is estimating a 1983 deficit of $115 billion. But private and congressional economists say the 1983 and 1984 shortfalls could be even larger.

In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, the government recorded a $110.7 billion deficit, dwarfing the previous record for red ink of $66.4 billion set in 1976.

Legislators generally agree that in 1981 and again this year, Congress made the "easy" budget cuts.

They also agree that the deficit reduction measures left are narrow and politically distasteful:

—Reducing the rate of growth in the military budget.

—Reducing the rate of growth in government benefit programs that are indexed — tied to the rate of inflation — including Social Security.

—Raise revenues through increased taxes.

The day after the elections, Reagan pledged to work with the new Congress "in a bipartisan fashion to solve the major problems that still have to be solved."

But, he added, "We will not compromise on principle — on what we absolutely believe is essential to the (nation's economic) recovery."

"The big unknown factor is what attitude the administration has," said House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla.

Reagan said during the fall campaign that it would take a "palace coup" to get him to agree to another tax increase, as he did this year when Congress passed a $98 billion package of tax increases.

The president also has opposed reductions in the Pentagon budget.

Democrats, meanwhile, have prospered by portraying Republicans as bent on dismantling Social Security and gutting government welfare programs; thus Democrats are not likely to meekly give up on those issues or appear to be alone in pushing for Social Security changes.

"You're not going to get Democrats to put any kind of controls on indexed spending if the administration doesn't put the military and tax proposals on the table," Jones said. If those are ruled off limits "then you face the prospect of stalemate again."

Meanwhile, with the elections over, Democrats again are mentioning elimination or modification of the third year of the personal income tax rate cut Congress passed last year as a means of shrinking deficits.

"If you've got deficits approaching $200 billion and $60 billion to $70 billion can be reduced by not having to go to the market place to borrow to pay for an additional tax cut, yes, it's a prime target," Jones said.

The key to how much progress is made on reducing deficits may be whether agreement can be reached on reducing Pentagon spending.

"If you stub your toe on the first one — the one that's in some respects the easiest thing to do — and that is to reduce the rate of growth in the military, then what are you going to do on taxes, what are you going to do on Social Security?" said a House Democratic aide.

Rigors of visit appear to be taking papal toll

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Puffy eyes, a shuffling gait and a faltering voice indicate that the grueling, 10-day tour of Spain is taking a heavy toll on the health of Pope John Paul II.

Visibly fatigued, the 62-year-old pontiff is in the ninth day of the first visit to Spain by a reigning pope. Today's intinerary took him to Valencia, the 15th of 16 cities on his tour.

By the time he leaves Spain, the pope will have traveled 4,470 miles — to nearly every corner of the Roman Catholic country. He will have delivered 50 speeches, climbed the stairs of 68-foot altars, castles, churches and cathedrals and stood for countless hours in bullet-proof "popemobiles," smiling and blessing crowds.

On Sunday, the pope had pockets under his eyes, a swelling on his forehead that church officials declined to explain, and a slow, shuffling gate. He frequently closed his eyes to rest during the five ceremonies he attended in the northeastern cities of Montserrat and Barcelona.

His voice often broke during his speeches.

Dr. Francisco Villadel, a member of the international team of physicians called to examine the pope after he was shot May 13, 1981, met his patient again Sunday when John Paul visited the sick at San Paolo Hospital.

"I would say the pontiff looks rather weary and needs a full rest," Villadel told The Associated Press. "He has been pushing himself."

After an average of five hours' sleep in the previous eight nights, the pope seemed more fatigued Sunday than on any other day of the Spanish visit, which ends Tuesday.

He rose an hour early — 5 a.m. — at the archbishop's house in Zaragoza and took a motorcade through chilly, rain-soaked streets to a helicopter.

Foul weather forced the chopper to land in Barcelona, instead of at the mountaintop monastery of Montserrat, after a bumpy, two-hour flight.

But the pope insisted on visiting the Shrine of the Black Madonna at Montserrat and took an 80-minute car trip over twisting mountain roads to reach it.

After being drenched by a steady downpour at the shrine, John Paul was driven back to Barcelona, where he visited in quick succession a hospital, a surrealistic half-finished church and the Barcelona Cathedral.

He skipped his doctor-ordered nap, ate lunch at 3 p.m., then addressed workers while standing beneath a windswept canopy near the spray of a bubbling fountain.

John Paul then celebrated Mass for 120,000 worshipers in Nou Campo soccer stadium before flying back to Madrid for a 10 p.m. dinner.

Today's schedule included an extra helicopter ride over an area ravaged by floods a month ago.

He has been accompanied by the director of Vatican health services, Dr. Renato Buzzonetti, who always travels with John Paul.

The Spanish government has a backup team of three doctors on call at each stop and arranged for an ambulance with an attending doctor in every motorcade. Medical specialists stand by at major hospital emergency rooms.

Iran claims victory, warns other nations

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Claiming a fresh victory in its war with Iraq, Iran turned its sights on Saudi Arabia and warned Baghdad's chief financial backer against attempting an oil war with Iran's revolutionary government.

Saudi Arabia, the largest exporter in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel, has threatened that when OPEC meets next month, it will slash its prices to undercut Iranian oil sales.

"This threat is like (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein's threat — it is a complete bluff," Iranian Oil Minister Mohammad Gharazi told foreign reporters Sunday.

The news conference, at the Oil Ministry headquarters in Tehran, came hours after Iran announced its troops had punched six miles into Iraqi territory Saturday night in the second reported cross-border thrust in three months.

"I don't think Saudi Arabia is going to do the same thing Saddam (Hussein) has done," Gharazi said.

But he added, "The conflict with the Saudi regime will not end. The Saudi government should be more careful."

Saudi Arabia claims Iran is undermining OPEC's efforts to sop up the world oil glut. The Saudis also are clearly nervous about Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's efforts to export his militant Islamic revolution to the conservative Arab nations of the Persian Gulf.

In an effort to contain the revolutionary fervor of Persian Moslem Iran, the Saudis and several other Arab Moslem nations have loaned billions of dollars to Iraq's war effort. Nonetheless, Iraq has suffered sharp reverses on the battlefield.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin testifies before the three-member commission investigating the September massacre of Palestinians in Beirut refugee camps.

Begin testifies on massacre

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin testified today he did not know in advance his defense minister sent Lebanese Christian militiamen into two Beirut refugee camps and never envisioned they would massacre Palestinians.

But in a 47-minute appearance before a three-man Israeli commission probing the September killings, Begin also testified he feared Israel's Lebanese Christian allies would seek revenge on Beirut Moslems following the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel.

Begin's testimony supported Defense Minister Ariel Sharon's earlier statement that he decided to send Israel's Christian allies into the camps to hunt Palestinian guerrillas. Begin said he learned of Sharon's decision at a Cabinet meeting on the day the bloodbath began, Thursday, Sept. 16.

Sharon had testified he acted under a Cabinet decision to give the Christians greater involvement in the Lebanese operation, which began when Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization.

But the commission was puzzled about why, if fear of vengeance existed, Begin's government approved sending Israel's Lebanese Christian allies into the

Hospitals' bed battle continues

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Two Midland hospitals will begin a two-week-long battle at the state health agency in Austin Tuesday to acquire additional beds in the Permian Basin.

The opponents — Midland Memorial Hospital and American Medical Corporation — will attempt to convince the Texas Health Facilities Commission's hearing officer, Gordon Hardin, that only one hospital should be granted the additional beds.

The public hearing will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and resume Nov. 15 through 19 at the THFC offices, 1600 W. 38th St., Austin. A decision is not expected to be made until mid-January 1983.

MMH has submitted a certificate of need application for a $15 million, 77-bed expansion, while AMC's application calls for a $17.9 million, 110-bed full service hospital.

If the THFC considers the local health systems agency's Sept. 20 recommendation on the proposed projects, MMH will have an edge on AMC.

While the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency Area 12 gave a favorable recommendation to MMH, it gave an unfavorable recommendation to AMC.

It is a law that no health institution can make any kind of addition or buy equipment exceeding $600,000 without a certificate of need application. This avoids duplication of services or, in other words, it keeps hospitals from springing up across the street from each other.

AMC has envisioned a full-service hospital, called Doctors Hospital Permian Basin Inc., to replace Midland's 60-bed Parkview Hospital.

Parkview Administrator Dick Liley, who also would be the administrator for the proposed facility, will join AMC's attorney, Ace Pickens, in Austin for the hearing.

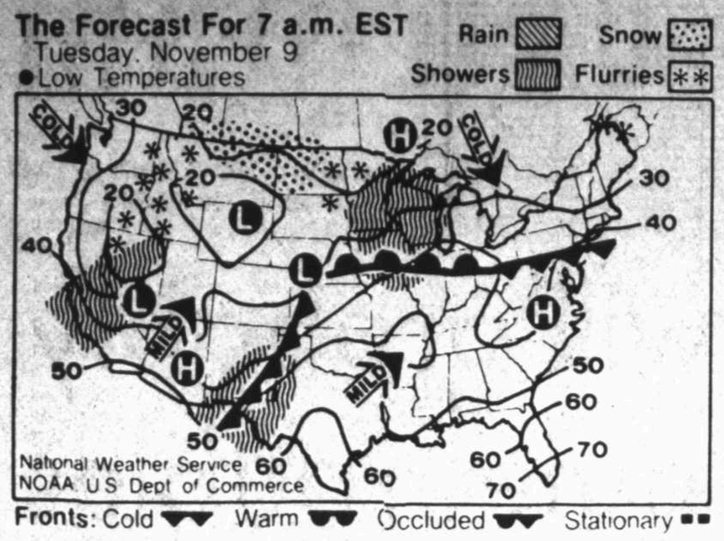

MMH President Ray Branson, accompanied by the hospital's attorney, Kevin Reed, also will attend the hearing.

Parkview will present its case first.

Liley said AMC's attorney will propose that both

Mississippi prison fire kills over 20

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — A fire set by a mentally disturbed prisoner in a padded cell filled the Harrison County Jail with thick, black smoke today, killing 27 prisoners and injuring 46 people, authorities said.

Six of the injured were in critical condition.

Some prisoners, awakened in the middle of the night by the toxic smoke from the plastic cell stuffing, put rags beneath their cell doors in a desperate attempt to save themselves. Others raced to lavatories for wet towels.

There were 95 prisoners in the jail when the fire began. Officials said there were no escapes because of the blaze.

"The smoke was really bad," said Biloxi Fire Chief Guy Roberts. "The fire wasn't real bad. We extinguished it right away, but the jail became filled with smoke and the jailer who was trying to let the prisoners out became overcome."

By the time officials got the keys from the jailer, the one-story brick-and-concrete building was filled with thick, black smoke and trapped prisoners were overcome, he said.

"The lights were still on but they weren't doing any good. All we could do was feel our way, feel under the bunks or wherever people were huddled," Deputy Fire Chief Bruce Marie said. "Some of them were trying to block the cells with rags to keep the smoke out before we got there."

Harrison County Coroner Ed Little said 25 men and two women died.

Inmate Charlie Acevedo said in a telephone interview from his hospital bed that there was "a chemical in the smoke. You could smell it when you breathed it in, and it would just about knock you out.

"The ones that stayed alive got wet towels and wrapped them around their face or got in a shower and put wet blankets over them," Acevedo said. "The ones that didn't, died."

Biloxi policeman Dan Russell, who was hospitalized with smoke inhalation, identified the inmate who allegedly started the fire as Robert Bates.

Russell, who helped pull several inmates from the jail, said he and another officer arrested Bates on Saturday night on a charge of public drunkenness after a disturbance at a Biloxi lounge.

"We thought we ought to pick him up for hi own protection," Russell said. "I wish now we hadn't."

Officials said Bates, whose hometown was not available, was not badly hurt and was taken to a hospital for observation.

George Zatko, an assistant warden at the jail, said the cell padding was made from "a type of polyurethane, I believe. I don't know exactly what it consists of."

The jailer, Tom Miller, was rescued shortly after the fire broke out a 1:31 a.m. and he was one of those in critical condition.

Marie said firefighters with air packs crawled on their hands and knees dragged many prisoners out, and Roberts said wreckers had to be used to pull bars off windows.

Marie said he could not hear the prisoners shouting and that most were unconscious when rescuers reached them.

A fire at the Harrison County Jail at Biloxi, Miss., killed at least 27 inmates and injured 46 late Sunday and early Monday. The fire presumably was started when a mentally disturbed prisoner who was kept in a padded cell set fire to the cell. Above, a firefighter stands next to some of the bodies which were recovered from the jail and, right, the aftermath of the blaze in one of the prison corridors is shown. Over 90 prisoners were housed in the jail.

Christmas parade may return

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Since it is difficult for some to get in the Christmas spirit in windy West Texas with autumn temperatures often soaring into the summer range, three Midland women have decided to organize the Chamber of Commerce's forgotten and abandoned Christmas Parade.

During a press conference this morning, sisters Sandy Lamb and Cindy Sites, along with veteran parade organizer Brenda Richter, announced plans for a parade which will promenade through downtown Midland Dec. 18.

After the Chamber of Commerce abandoned the Christmas Parade tradition several years ago, Ms. Richter organized a parade in December 1980 and made an attempt to hold another last December.

"We'd like to make it a community effort," Ms. Sites said. "Everybody is welcome to participate. We're giving people enough time to, hopefully, get floats. But anything is fine — if someone just wants to drive a car or a pickup through, that's all right."

An effort to entice the National Guard and business, school, church and community organizations to participate has begun and so far, according to Ms. Lamb and Ms. Sites, there seems to be enough interest expressed by those contacted that downtown Midland will have the holiday gaity it once possessed through the parade.

"I think the parade gets Christmas off (with) everyone getting out wishing everyone a Merry Christmas," Ms. Sites said. "It's hard to get in the mood for Christmas shopping out here in West Texas when it's 80-degree weather."

Persons interested in participating in the parade should contact Ms. Richter at 685-1085 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. or Ms. Lamb at 694-8322 and Ms. Sites at 694-3896, after 5 p.m.

Enclosed yard couldn't keep killers out of estate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbed wire encircled the estate where two leaders of a quasi-religious drug rehabilitation group were murdered, but the killers apparently entered through an unlocked gate, police say.

George Peters, 43, founder and chairman of the church of Naturalism, and James Patrick Henneberry, 31, its treasurer, were found dead early Saturday. Both had been shot but an autopsy was planned today to determine the exact cause of death.

A security guard found the bodies around 2:30 a.m. Saturday in one of two houses on the six-acre complex in the Hollywood Hills a quarter of a mile from the wealthy Mount Olympus area.

"There's a good possibility that whoever did it knew the victims," Detective Richard Kuster said, adding that robbery was the apparent motive because the place was ransacked.

Investigators think the killer or killers may have climbed a steep hill behind the property and entered an unlocked gate.

The site, ringed by fences topped by barbed wire and regularly patrolled by security guards, is within four miles of the Hollywood Hills house where actress Sharon Tate and four others were stabbed to death by Charles Manson and his followers in 1969, and within a mile of the Laurel Canyon house where four people were bludgeoned to death in July 1981.

The church is described in Nathaniel Lande's 1976 book, "Mind Styles, Life Styles," as a quasi-religious organization.

Bill would limit use of insanity plea

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Ray Farabee filed a bill today that limits the use of the insanity defense in Texas courts. He noted that public concern was heightened when John Hinckley was acquitted in the shooting of President Reagan by reason of insanity.

"The citizens of Texas need a law that prosecutes the criminals and treats the truly mentally ill. The current law is not strong enough to do that," Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said in a statement.

Farabee's proposal would prohibit experts testifying at a trial from drawing legal conclusions about a defendant's mental health, such as declaring him or her "legally insane."

The bill also would allow acquittal only for those who were so severely mentally ill or retarded that they did not know what they were doing was wrong. Current law allows acquittal even if the defendant knew what he was doing was wrong, Farabee said.

Midland hospitals prepared for two-week hearing projects should be approved, providing Midland with two full-service hospitals.

"Our whole strategy is to serve the residents of Midland by proposing that both projects be approved," Liley said. "Since we are first, MMH will have to decide whether to support our proposal or to take the position that their project is the only one that should be approved. To choose the latter will be a disservice to Midland residents."

Another reason Doctors Hospital has been pitted against MMH for the same beds is because of national guidelines which rule how many medical beds are needed for this area. While AMC officials have said they'd be happy if both hospitals were granted the beds, which is possible, MMH officials have indicated in the past that they do not think this would be feasible.

Doctors Hospital, with its proposed location in northwest Midland at the corner of Preston Drive and Loop 250, would include Parkview's existing beds and add 34 medical/surgical beds, 10 obstetric beds, six intensive care beds and 14 bassinets. The obstetrics, perinatal and emergency services would be a level II (intensive care) classification.

The three-story, 93,500-square-foot facility will cost AMC $17,920 and Midland taxpayers nothing. In addition, Parkview Hospital currently has in excess of $200,000 budgeted for charity, or indigent care, at no cost to the taxpayer.

MMH's expansion would increase the hospital's licensed bed capacity from 195 to 272 beds, which includes 40 medical/surgical beds and 37 postpartum beds. The addition would include a new labor and delivery area with six labor rooms, two birthing rooms, four delivery rooms, a four-bed recovery room and the nursery, which would have a capacity of 32 bassinets and six intensive care beds.

MMH's board of directors will listen to four investment bankers on proposed financing for the project Thursday. The expansion could be financed with general obligation bonds, which requires a majority vote by Midland County residents, or revenue bonds, which bypasses voter approval.

The confrontation between the two hospitals will boil down to obstetric and neonatal (intensive care) beds.

While many of Midland's physicians would like to see two full-service hospitals, some are not in favor of two separate obstetric departments. Their contention is that the obstetric beds should be centralized.

UTEP professor found dead

EL PASO (AP) - A 50-year-old University of Texas-El Paso psychology professor has been found dead with his throat slashed, police said.

UTEP professor Jack Parker Landrum was found dead Sunday afternoon, splayed on a bed in his three-bedroom home. He was found by a male friend, said Lt. John Lanahan.

Haitian refugee finds questions make freedom quite a bit trying

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Pierre Luco Marcelin has gained freedom from a detention camp for Haitian refugees, but he hasn't shaken ghastly memories of the shipwreck that brought him to this country while leaving 33 of his compatriots dead.

Marcelin, one of 30 survivors of the ill-fated voyage, has been repeatedly questioned by federal authoritities still investigating the capsizing of a rickety sailboat Oct. 26, 1981, off Hillsboro Beach.

After the shipwreck, the beach in an affluent shorefront section was littered with near-naked bodies twisted into odd positions by fierce waves that dumped them ashore. "It looked like a combat zone," said police patrolman Joe Dente.

The 33 Haitians who died, including two pregnant women, were among 50,000 Haitians who have attempted to escape from their impoverished island and find a new life in the United States.

Immigration agents say they still want to know more about a refugee smuggler known only as Gustave, believed to be the man behind the 800-mile voyage, and the unidentified owner of the La Nativite.

Marcelin emerged as a spokesman for the survivors of the wreck. Investigators say they still want to know whether he is Gustave's son or connected to a ring of Haitian smugglers, both of which he denies.

"They kept asking the same questions, 'Who is your father? Do you know Gustave?' Why do they ask the same questions?" Marcelin asked. "They showed me his picture, but I didn't know him. I passed a lie detector test to show I'm not lying."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Burnbaum said the investigation "hasn't gone away. It isn't on the back burner. It will come to a head sometime. It includes everyone it originally included."

Marcelin said the repeated questions make it difficult for him to enjoy his freedom from the Krome Avenue detention camp, where he was sent after the wreck.

"Maybe this (interview) will finally convince them I know nothing of Gustave or any of these things," he said recently.

Marcelin said he "didn't know exactly" who his father was.

On his initial processing forms with INS, Marcelin listed Gustave's Cap Haitien home address as his own. But he now says a boy he met on the boat had given him the name.

"I needed an address in the capital where I could send a letter," he said. "I used this boy's address.

Democrats lead committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Election Day's Democratic victories in the House hit the Agriculture Committee's Republican minority hardest, sweeping out five of the firmest supporters of President Reagan's often-criticized farm policy.

Three of the four highest ranking Republicans on the committee fell to Democratic challengers by the thinnest of margins in primarily rural districts. Two freshmen Republicans on the panel also lost tight races.

The survivor of the leadership quartet, Rep. James Jeffords, swept to an easy re-election victory in rural Vermont. The harsh critic of the president's farm program captured 70 percent of the statewide vote.

NONE OF THE Democratic committee members who sought re-election were denied new terms after fighting to alter the administration's plans for less government involvement in agriculture at a time when net farm income has plunged to the levels of the Great Depression.

The Republican minority of no other House committee was hit as hard by general election defeats. The Senate Agriculture Committee will remain under Republican control.

Most analysts attribute the GOP defeats to factors other than the incumbents' support of Reagan's free-market farm policy that yielded a four-year commodity price support program labeled "totally inadequate" by many producer groups.

None of the campaigns saw overemphasis on farm issues despite the rural constituencies involved. Analysts said the nation's overall economic problems coupled with redistricting and various local issues undermined the incumbents.

"WE DON'T view the thing as a referendum on farm policy as much as a referendum on the same things that the other elections were a referendum on," said Bruce Hawley of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Added one Republican aide, "I would imagine there were quite a few farmers who voted against us, but there were more who voted for us."

Countered Bob Mullins of the National Farmers Union, a Reagan critic: "Everyone who spoke up against the present farm policies was returned. Their (committee Republicans) support had to play some role in it."

"It was not the overriding issue, but there was enough dissatisfaction with the agriculture policy that it contributed to the defeat overall," Mullins said, adding that the overall economic problems in rural areas are tied closely to the depressed farm situation.

DEFEATED AT the polls last Tuesday were:

—William Wampler of Virginia, the No. 1 Republican on the committee and an eight-term congressmen who, while not actively supporting all of Reagan's proposals, did not actively oppose many that drew strong opposition from farm groups. Wampler lost by less than 1,200 votes, according to unofficial returns.

—Paul Findley of Illinois, the panel's No. 2 Republican and the top GOP member of the key grains subcommittee. Findley served as Reagan's point man during the year-long battle over commodity price support programs. A 22-year congressional veteran, he was defeated by 1,400 votes.

—Tom Hagedorn of Minnesota, the No. 4 Republican on the committee and the senior GOP member of the dairy subcommittee that has struggled with the skyrocketing costs of dairy price supports since Reagan took office. Although Hagedorn split with the administration in the latest dairy battle, he joined the administration in opposing production control programs sought by a number of producer groups. He lost by 7,000 votes.

—Clint Roberts of South Dakota, a freshmen who was pitted against a Democratic Agriculture Committee member, Tom Daschle, for the new, redistricted at-large seat in that state. Daschle was a leader in the most recent fight with the administration over the farm program, sponsoring the so-called Farm Crisis Act that the administration and Roberts opposed. That race was viewed as a clear-cut choice between pro- and anti-Reagan congressmen. Roberts lost the statewide balloting by 10,000 votes at the same time South Dakota's Republican Gov. William Janklow rolled up a re-election victory with 70 percent of the vote.

—John Napier of South Carolina, the other freshmen who stood steadfastly by the president during nearly all the often-close committee votes. He lost by less than 5,500 votes.

THE DEMOCRATS, who have held a 24-19 majority on the Agriculture Committee for the last two years, will take over some of those lost Republican seats next year, reflecting their larger majority in the full House.

But Agriculture Department spokesman John Ochs said the loss of Republican members should not make it any more difficult for the administration's farm program.

"Agriculture is very parochial," Ochs said. "It doesn't make any difference what party you are, so partisanship doesn't really effect use that much."

St. Lawrence cousins 4-H Gold Star winners

GARDEN CITY — Cousins Karen and Lisa Halfmann, both of St. Lawrence, were recently named Gold Star winners at the Glasscock County 4-H Achievement Awards Banquet.

Karen, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Halfmann of St. Lawrence. Her record book on safety took top honors in the county and district and placed second in the state. Offices held include president of the Glasscock County Council and Club, president of the Beef Club and treasurer of the Swine Club. She is currently treasurer of the senior class at Garden City High School and president of the Catholic Youth Organization in St. Lawrence.

Lisa, also 17, is the daughter of Tex and Barbara Halfmann of St. Lawrence. Her record book on Family Life placed first at county and district and third at state. She is reporter for the 4-H Council, president of the Family Life Project, treasurer of the Home Economics Club and reporter for Swine and Beef clubs. A senior at Garden City High School, she attended the Farmland Industries Co-op Youth Leadership Conference in Liberty, Mo., earlier this year as a delegate from Texas.

David Frerich's record book in petroleum power placed first at county, district and state, earning him a trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Ill.

Among the adult award winners were Marie Pechacek, B.J. Havlak and Tex and Barbara Halfmann.

Stockpile expected to grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government forecasters seem to be biding time until the fog clears away from this fall's huge corn crop and they can see how much of it may hit the market.

"Prices for all feed grains weakened in October, as harvest of this year's record 8.3-billion-bushel corn crop gained momentum," the Agriculture Department said last Thursday.

Use of feed grain — which is primarily corn but also includes sorghum, barley and oats — is expected to show an increase in 1982-83 but still fall short of putting a dent in the huge supply.

"Thus, a further buildup in stocks is probable," a new feed outlook report said. "The 1982-83 corn carryover could rise 40 percent to near 3.3 billion bushels" by next Oct. 1.

The record corn crop, plus a slightly larger harvest of other feed grains and only "a modest increase" in total use probably will keep prices at the farm below year-earlier levels at least until late next summer, the report said.

Corn prices are projected to average $2.20 to $2.40 per bushel, compared to $2.45 last season and $3.11 in 1980-81.

The inventory of grain stocks on Oct. 1 showed that there were 86.6 million metric tons of corn, sorghum, barley and oats in the U.S. marketing pipeline, the most since the record Oct. 1, 1961, stockpile of 92.6 million metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn, as an example. The metric ton is commonly used by USDA and the grain trade in describing collective supplies of feed grain.

Animal export business keeps growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of animal products, from high-grade beef to poultry, have turned into a $4 billion annual business that has room to grow further, says the Agriculture Department.

The growth has turned the United States into a net exporter of meat and other animal products, with shipments last year exceeding imports by $750 million. In 1970, the United States exported only about $865 million worth of of those products while imports totaled $1.56 billion.

Some examples:

—Fresh and frozen beef exports rose to $242 million from $29 million in 1970. Japan, the major buyer, took about two-thirds of last year's exports, followed by Canada, Saudi Arabia and the Bahamas.

—Exports of variety meats such as livers, tongues and tripe, have increased more than fourfold to $300 million last year. The major markets are Europe, Japan and Mexico.

—Pork exports were worth $250 million in 1981 and would probably have been more except for a substantial increase in world pork output during the decade.

—Shipments of poultry and poultry products increased during the 1970s and last year were valued at $770 million. However, sales have suffered this year from subsizized sales in the Middle East by the European Community and Brazil.

—Exports of whole cattle hides were worth $600 million last year, and fur skins added more than $300 million to the U.S. export total.

The export situation for animal products was examined in a new issue of Foreign Agriculture, which is published each month by USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service. The report was written by James Fowler, an economist in the agency.

One of the major growth categories is live animal exports, which grew from 234,154 head in 1979 to 399,724 head in 1981. Sales are made to more than 75 countries a year.

"Canada and Mexico remain the largest customers for U.S. live animals, purchasing mostly feeder and slaughter cattle, but also a considerable amount of breeding stock," the report said.

Overall, the 1981 shipments included 17,536 head of dairy breeding stock and 14,715 beef cows and bulls.

Farmers paying higher electric bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers' electric bills are up more than 50 percent from what they averaged three years ago, according to a government survey.

According to the Agriculture Department's annual summer survey of electric bills, the average payment by farmers nationally was $83.90 per month, up 20 percent from the 1981 averaged of $69.80.

The average monthly bill in 1980 was $61.90, and the 1979 average was $55.10 per month.

Put another way, based on average October prices for each year, it took about 25 bushels of wheat to pay a farmer's monthly electric bill this year; 18.5 bushels in 1981; 14.8 bushels in 1980; and 13.8 bushels in 1979.

Wheat prices last were about $3.35 a bushel, on a preliminary basis. In the three previous Octobers, wheat averaged $3.77 in 1981; $4.19 in 1980; and $3.98 in 1979.

Part of the reason for the larger bills this year is that farmers used more electricity — an average of 1,356 kilowatt hours per month, up 4 percent from 1,307 in 1981.

In 1979, the average was 1,299 kwh per month, and in 1980 the average rose to 1,313 before falling to 1,307 last year.

The cost per unit of electricity, however, has increased steadily to an average of 6.31 cents per kwh this year, a gain of 18 percent from 5.34 cents per kwh in 1981. Power costs paid by farmers averaged 4.72 cents per kwh in 1980 and 4.24 cents in 1979.

Some of the biggest farm users of electricity are in the West, with Arizona and California tied at 3,000 kwh per month, followed by Washington at 2,880.

Rates in Arizona averaged 7.4 cents per kwh, down from 7.6 in 1981. California's, however, jumped to 7.2 cents per kwh from 5.4 cents last year, the survey showed.

The average bill in Arizona was $222 per month, compared to $216 in California.

In Washington, which traditionally has lower electicity costs, the rate average was 2.6 cents per kwh, up from 2.3 cents last year. The average bill was $74.90 for 2,880 kwh.

Some of the highest costs of electric power are in the Northeast. In New Jersey, for example, the average use was 1,300 kwh at a cost of 9.1 cents per

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Collector of female shoes may have problem

Dear Dr. Solomon: My teen-age nephew has collected several pairs of women's shoes. My brother (the boy's father) thinks it's cute and says his son will outgrow it. I think the kid has a problem. Would you have any suggestions to offer in such as case? — Mrs. B.R., Cincinnati

Dear Mrs. R.: It is difficult to gauge the seriousness of a problem — if it is a problem — from a distance, but I would not ignore it. Possibly your brother could be persuaded at least to discuss the situation with the family's physician, who I assume knows the youngster fairly well.

Does your brother know where these women's shoes came from? If your nephew is involved in stealing, it would only aggravate the problem.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read your column the first thing when I pick up the newspaper, but my wife tells me you had a question on allergies to birds and I must have missed it. Is it true that a pet parakeet can cause a person to come down with an allergy? — Howard, Boston, Mass.

Dear Howard: When a physician discusses allergies to pets, the patient and his or her family usually think in terms of dogs or cats. But in many of my patients I found that birds, such as parakeets and canaries, can be responsible for serious allergies. In fact, Dr. Meyer B. Marks, of the University of Miami School of Medicine, says that pet birds can cause more inhalant problems than either dogs or cats. The symptoms include coughing, wheezing, runny nose, nasal obstruction and sneezing.

When you consider that there are an estimated 25 million-plus birds in homes in the United States, you can begin to appreciate the extent of the problem.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife and I have talked over the fact that we don't want to have any more children, and she says she's willing to be sterilized. That would be all right with me but I'm afraid she may be sorry later on and that this would upset her. Has this been a problem in any of your patients or among women in general? — Max, Philadelphia

Dear Max: It is obviously not possible for me to predict how a woman I've never seen will react to a sterilization procedure, but there has been at least one study of the subject.

Dr. Peter Cooper and his colleagues at Warneford Hospital in Oxford, England, interviewed 200 women both before and after they underwent elective sterilization. The researchers found no difference in the psychological symptoms in the women before and after the operation. Those who showed some evidence of psychological disturbance after the surgery was performed had generally shown the same degree of disturbance before they had the operation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently took my daughter for a measles vaccination. While we were still in the doctor's office, she passed out. She seems to be O.K. now, but I would like to know what it means that she had this reaction to a shot. — Mrs. Y.B., Tulsa, Okla.

Dear Mrs. B.: You describe what may have been a postimmunization seizure. Assuming that is the case (although I can't be certain), the chances are very favorable that your daughter will not experience any after-effects.

Dr. Deborah G. Hirtz, of the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke in Bethesda, Md., studied 39 children who had had a seizure within two weeks after an immunization. Almost all the children were between six months and four years old. Only one of these children was found to have a neurologic problem at seven years of age.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been trying to become pregnant but with no luck. I want to go to a specialist to find out why, but my husband refuses to come with me. He says it must be my problem because he never had any trouble with sex. Maybe if you write about it, he'll change his mind. Thank you. — Florence, Queens, N.Y.

Dear Florence: It seems your husband needs someone to sit down with him to explain the facts of life. Being able to perform the sexual act does not necessarily mean that a man is fertile and able to become a father.

It should be obvious that when a couple is infertile, the problem may reside in either partner or in both. There is little point in one partner undergoing an extensive workup to determine the cause of infertility when it may be the other partner who requires assistance. In working with both partners, I found that three out of four couples who had this problem were able to have a normal child within 24 months.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I want to thank you for some advice you gave one of your readers and which I used for myself. My mother is 82 years old and seemed to be getting senile. I remembered that you had written that this is not always a hopeless condition. I took her to a doctor who specialized in geriatric medicine and told him about all the pills she was taking. He gave her a complete examination and changed some of her medicine, and she has been much more alert and like herself ever since. Many thanks for your help. — Mrs. E.L., Los Angeles

Dear Mrs. L.: All I can add is to emphasize what I've said before. There are many treatable causes of dementia (mental deterioration) that are often overlooked. A condition should not be considered hopeless until there is solid evidence that nothing can be done.

For Mrs. L.R., Jacksonville, Fla.: Unfortunately, burns from hot tap water are not uncommon in young children. One way to minimize the possibility of such accidents is to set the thermostat on the hot water heater to no more than 130 degrees Fahrenheit. Parents with young children, in particular, should seriously consider doing so.

M.R., Salt Lake City: I postulate that my anti-smoking shot works by releasing enkephalins ("in the head") and endorphins ("endogenous-morphine"). These are naturally occurring peptides found in thepituitary and the brain, especially in the hypothalamus.

This year should be light year for flu, doctor says

HOUSTON (AP) — If you are suffering now from the fever, aches and misery of the flu, it may be a little comfort to know that you're probably safe from a repeat of the disease for a year or so.

If you're not yet one of the unlucky ones with the disease, it may be encouraging to know that the winter of 1982-83 is expected to be a "light" year for influenza infections. Chances are good you'll escape the ailment altogether this season.

Man's ancient war with the flu bug is in a lull this year, says Dr. Thomas R. Cate, a professor of microbiology and immunology at the Influenza Research Center of the Baylor College of Medicine here.

Cate said there is less than a 50-50 chance that a person will get the flu in any particular year and the odds improve when the flu virus has failed to produce a new strain.

For this winter, "there is no new strain in the offing," he said.

Influenza comes in three different virus types — "A," "B" and "C."

"C" generally is not of major concern, and "B" can cause minor, localized epidemics every two to three years, Cate said.

But "A" is the big troublemaker.

"The 'A' type is the one that is responsible for giving influenza its bad name," said Cate. "It is capable of undergoing changes that leave people susceptible even if they have had flu in the past."

In effect, the "A" type of virus can change so radically that the body has no immunity protection, he said.

"As far as the body is concerned, the 'A' type changes enough to be a new virus," Cate said. The body can establish a lifetime immunity against the unchanging disease organisms, such as measles or chicken pox, but not against the "A" flu virus.

The "A" type of virus changes a little bit each year, said Cate, but every decade or so the little rascal makes a major change that can cause near-worldwide misery.

"Minor changes can lead to local epidemics," said Cate. "But every 10 to 30 years the 'A' makes a major change. Then you have a pandemic (world epidemic)."

Experts on every continent keep up with the gradual changes the flu virus makes and are able to predict roughly when there will be another worldwide outbreak. For this season, said Cate, there is no major concern about a pandemic, and the individual odds of getting the disease are reduced.

If a person does come down with flu this year, Cate added, the chances are the victim will be protected by natural immunity from a repeat of the flu for a year or more. Unless, of course, type "A" makes an unexpected major change.

Despite decades of research, there still is no medical protection against worldwide outbreaks of flu.

"There is simply no way to prevent epidemics with the tools we have now," said Cate. "Prevention techniques now are not aimed at avoiding epidemics, but at preventing deaths in the high-risk groups."

These "high-risk groups" are the elderly or people with respiratory problems or chronic diseases that weaken their resistance. To them, a simple case of the flu could be fatal, often from killing bacterial infections that invade a body already weak from the flu.

High-risk patients should get annual flu shots in the fall, even when there seems little prospect of major outbreaks, Cate said.

Jamie continues steady recovery

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Little Jamie Fiske, the 11-month-old girl who received a life-saving liver transplant, continued her steady recovery today, the University of Minnesota hospitals said.

A statement by the hospital said Jamie, listed in satisfactory condition in the pediatric intensive care unit, could be removed from a respirator today.

"She is continuing to show signs of improvement," said the release. "Doctors continue to monitor her closely and have indicated they are pleased with her progress."

The youngster is the daughter of Charles and Marilyn Fiske of Bridgewater, Mass. Born last Nov. 26, she was somewhat jaundiced at birth and the disease was traced to biliary atresia, in which bile backs up into the liver.

Physicians said she would have died by her first birthday if she had not received the new liver. The transplant was performed Friday.

After Fiske made a desperate plea for help, a family in Utah offered the organ from their child, killed in a car-train accident. The vital organ came from Jess Bellon, a 10-month-old boy. The parents, Lared Bellon, and his wife Leann, approved the donation.

Bellon, who had heard Fiske's televised plea for help, said later, "I had no idea it would ever affect me."

"We've been told she's not out of the woods yet," Fiske said Sunday. "They just hope she stabilizes and she has been doing that."

Letters, telegrams and phone calls wishing Jamie well continue to pour into the University of Minnesota Hospitals and Clinics in Minneapolis.

Meanwhile, doctors removed the liver of a Sioux City donor and whisked it to Pittsburgh on Sunday, where it was implanted in a 42-year-old California woman.

The unidentified recipient, dying of a disease that affects the liver's bile ducts, had been waiting for five months in a Pittsburgh motel for a liver.

Brian Broznick, a member of the University of Pittsburgh medical team performing the operation, said the woman would have less than a month to live without the transplant.

She was listed in critical condition after the operation ended about 4:30 a.m. today, hospital spokeswoman Katheryn Behrens said.

The liver transplant will be the 70th conducted this year, as surgeons continue to refine the operation.

Janet Flanagan, director of public affairs for the Sioux City Hospital, said the donor, a Sioux City area man, suffered brain death about 12:45 p.m. Sunday and his relatives consented to the donation of his organs.

Hospital officials would release no further information on either the liver donor or the recipient.

Soviets celebrate 65th anniversary of revolution

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev, celebrating the 65th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, extolled Soviet military might and warned that aggressors would face "a crushing retaliatory strike."

But, in a tough speech at a Kremlin reception attended by U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman, Brezhnev added that the "essence of our policy is peaceableness, the sincere striving for equitable and fruitful cooperation."

Revolution Day, commemoration of the 1917 revolt that led to the founding of the Soviet state, was celebrated in Moscow Sunday with the traditional display of the Soviet Union's military brawn.

Hundreds of thousands of Muscovites jammed Red Square to watch the display of military hardware rumble across the cobblestones. Soviet generals displayed two weapons never seen before at the parade — an improved surface-to-air missile and an updated armored personnel carrier reportedly used against insurgents in Afghanistan.

DEFENSE MINISTER Marshal Dmitri F. Ustinov, 74, presided over the military ceremonies, standing beside the 75-year-old Brezhnev atop the red marble mausoleum of revolutionary leader Vladimir I. Lenin.

He told the troops massed on Red Square: "The aggressive forces of imperialism, primarily the U.S.A., have led the intensity of their military preparations to an unusual level, are fanning the flames of armed conflicts in different regions of the world, and irresponsibly are threatening to use nuclear weapons."

At the Kremlin reception, Brezhnev said:

"We shall do our utmost to see to it that those who like military ventures should never take the land of the Soviets unawares, that the potential aggressor should know: a crushing retaliatory strike will inevitably be in for him. Our might and vigilance will cool, I think, the hot heads of some imperialist politicians."

Neither Brezhnev nor Ustinov explicitly mentioned President Reagan in their remarks, in which they reiterated Soviet intentions to seek negotiated arms reductions.

Brezhnev said, "The Soviet Union will continue persistently fighting for detente, for disarmament. We shall be building up efforts to avert the threat of a nuclear war...

"ADDRESSING THE foreign representatives, present here, I should like to emphasize that the essence of our policy is peaceableness, the sincere striving for equitable and fruitful cooperation with all who want such cooperation."

Reagan struck a similar chord in a messsage to Brezhnev that was printed by the government newspaper Izvestia.

"On the occasion of the national holiday of the Soviet Union," he said, "I would like to convey congratulations on behalf of the American poeple to the people of the Soviet Union. The United States will continue to work in the name of peace and relations with the Soviet Union, which are based on mutual restraint and respect of principles of international rights."

Besides Brezhnev and Ustinov, other members of the ruling Politburo on the review-stand in Red Square included Yuri V. Andropov and Konstantin U. Chernenko. They are widely regarded as contenders for the presidency if Brezhnev, whose health is declining, should die or become incapacitated.

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Viktor V. Grishin and Mikhail S. Gorbachev were also present.

As on other recent occasions, Politburo member Andrei P. Kirilenko was notably absent. He reportedly has retired for health reasons, but there has been no official announcement.

TELEVISION COVERAGE of the parade did not show a closeup of Brezhnev as he struggled to climb stairs to the reviewing stand. Later closeups of him, however, showed he was wearing glasses.

Ambassadors of the United States, Britain, Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Japan and Australia boycotted the parade again this year to protest the Soviet Union's movement of troops into Afghanistan in December 1979. Those countries' embassies sent lower-ranking diplomats to the parade.

The ambassadors from China and New Zealand also were among the foreign dignitaries in attendance.

The Soviet military parades these T-72 tanks, the latest medium tank deployed in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, through Red Square Sunday, to mark the 65th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution. The tank's main weapon is a 125mm gun. The U.S. Defense Department said 9,000 such tanks were built between 1976 and 1980. The 1917 revolt led to the founding of the Soviet state.

Neo-Nazi arrested in murder of teen-ager

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A neo-Nazi dedicated to "preserving the white race" has been arrested for investigation of murder in the slaying of a white teenager who had tipped police about people distributing racist fliers in three schools.

Perry Bernard "Red" Warthan, 41, of Oroville, was arrested Saturday and booked in the county jail, according to Butte County sheriff's officials. An unidentified juvenile also was arrested for investigation of murder.

The body of 17-year-old Joseph Hoover, shot eight times in the head with a .22-caliber gun, was found Oct. 13 in the underbrush outside this community of 9,400 people. He was last seen Sept. 30 as he left home for a party.

Days before his disappearance, the youth had given police the names of some people linked to the distribution of more than 200 racist fliers in Oroville and Las Plumas High schools and Central School in Oroville, according to police Chief Jan Duke.

The leaflets, stuffed into school lockers on Sept. 11 and 12, were headlined "FREE PASS — Stay Out of School." They offered mock passes to students who took a quiz with multiple choice answers couched in racial slurs and stereotypes.

The fliers also featured a drawing of a black face being punched by a fist bearing a swastika armband, and a "Dial-a-Nazi" phone line that played anti-black messages.

Alarmed by the literature, blacks staged school boycotts Oct. 25 and Oct. 26 to protest what they called a Nazi terror campaign.

About 80 percent of the 160 blacks at Oroville's six elementary schools stayed home the first day, and 30 percent the second. Fifteen of 56 black high school students were absent the first day, but attendence was normal the second day, school officials said.

Warthan, business manager of the Socialist White People's Party, has denied any involvement in Hoover's death, blaming it on drug activity.

"Hoover was never a Nazi," Warthan said in the interview before his arrest. "He did hang around, though, and he liked camping with us. He was a prospective recruit, but he hadn't asked for an application," he added.

Number of prisoners increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of federal and state prisoners increased by 6.9 percent in the first half of this year and could rise by a record rate in all of 1982, the Justice Department reports.

There were 394,380 inmates as of June 30, the bureau said Sunday.

No time for surprises

Texas aviators should fly safer in the future because of fuel safety sessions now being conducted by the Texas Aeronautics Commission in conjunction with the Federal Aviation Administration and other groups.

The sessions were prompted by a rash of air crashes and emergency landings resulting from plane fuel tanks being filled with improper fuel. Midland experienced its own version of near disaster on May 2 when a small aircraft took off from Midland Air Park, experienced problems and through the skill of the pilot was safely landed on a city street.

That aircraft's fuel tank, an investigation showed, was filled with the incorrect fuel which caused the engine's malfunction. The ending of that story basically was a happy one. No one, not even the craft's pilot, was injured although some property damage resulted. Unfortunately, misfueling incidents don't always end that way; and in some instances the result is a tragic one.

Avoiding that disastrous course is the purpose of the fueling seminars now being held around the state by the commission. In addition to educating flight-line technicians, fuel-service technicians and aircraft refuelers to the dangers of misfueling aircraft, flying officials are considering other steps to cut down on the number of incorrect fuelings. One proposal that would seem to offer a measure of safety would be fitting aircraft fuel pumps with oversize nozzles to prevent accidental misfueling.

Of course, it will be impossible to ensure that no more misfueling disasters occur. But recognizing the problem is taking a positive step toward correcting it.

It's good to know that TAC, the FAA and other organizations are moving on this situation. The wild, blue yonder is no place for pilots to discover they've got the wrong substance in their fuel tank.

Socialist '31 revisited

Spanish socialists have triumphed over center- and right-wing opponents, and rebounded from their exile during the dictatorship of Gen. Francisco Franco, to win a solid parliamentary majority — their first since 1931. There was dancing recently in the streets of Madrid, streets where Franco's civilian "fifth column" rose up as four military columns entered the city in 1939, ending a bloody civil war that cost 700,000 lives.

But the victory of the Socialist Workers Party led by Felipe Gonzalez, 40, a popular leader who ran on a moderate platform, was accompanied by an ominous fall in the vote for centrist parties. Whether this will lead to polarization between leftists and rightists, or to a new military threat, is of concern to all who prize democracy.

Gonzalez' party is the overwhelming choice of the Spanish people, who voted peacefully, with a nearly 80 percent record turnout. Gonzalez is expected to be elected prime minister by the Spanish Parliament and to take office in early December. History shows that popular support is no defense against extremism in Spain.

In 1931, the socialists adopted a constitution that proclaimed religious freedom, separated church and state, secularized education (previously controlled by the Roman Catholic Church), nationalized church property and dissolved the Jesuit Order. Anti-clerical measures are largely regarded as the stimulus of the reactionary movement which led the military to revolt.

Spain is a much more modern, pluralistic nation than the Spain of 1931. And the socialists are no longer an anti-clerical movement. But a coup attempt in 1981 and reports of troop movements before the election show uncertainty over the military's reaction.

Gonzalez has proposed to depoliticize the military and make promotions based on merit. He has pledged to renegotiate the contract with the United States for military bases in Spain. He has pledged a plebiscite on Spain's admission to NATO. These acts are all within his constitutional rights, and there is little doubt that Spain's military could use reform to better defend Spain from enemies outside its borders, rather than political opponents within. But we hope Spain allows America to keep its bases and remains a member of NATO. These ties to the West should transcend changes of political parties, and the Spanish bases are of great strategic importance to our Air Force and Navy.

Gonzalez is coming to office on a wave of hope. He must move slowly and in cooperation with the opposition if he is to hold his country together while bringing Spain out of the dark ages of fear and intolerance and the bloody years of turmoil which it has suffered in this century.

Another View:

A bipartisan attack

If the election results nationwide were a mandate for anything, it was for members of both parties to work together to solve the country's problems. The results certainly couldn't be called a rejection of President Reagan's program or policies.

Wall Street clearly didn't interpret them as a rejection. The Dow Jones average closed at a new all-time high in a huge post-election stock market rally; analysts said the surge indicated a belief that President Reagan's economic programs would not be crushed by the election results.

In the election, Democrats gained about two dozen seats in the House of Representatives to increase their margin of control, and gained several governorships. Republicans maintained their 54-46 control of the U.S. Senate.

The House and statehouse losses were a setback for the Republicans and undoubtedly reflected concerns about the recession and unemployment. But the Democrats' gains were hardly spectacular and certainly far short of the 1980 Reagan-led GOP landslide.

That was a mandate, for less taxes and less government, and nothing in the recent election suggests that voters want to turn away from the theme which has undergirded the president's economic program of getting government off the backs of America's people and productive energies.

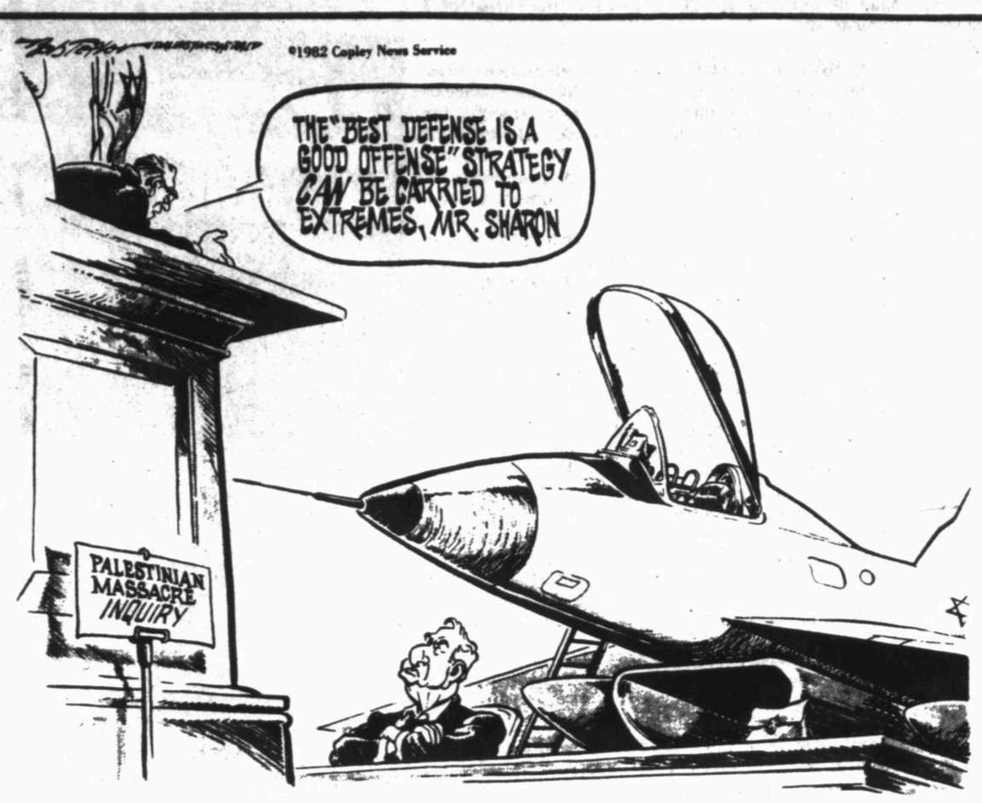

President Reagan's task will now be more difficult. The Democrats' big advantage in the House will make it harder to forge the coalitions that have helped get his program through thus far, and it causes some to worry about stalemated government.

President Reagan, however, has worked extremely well with Congress, and as he said after the election, "There have been concessions and compromises in both directions on all of the major issues" during his first two years.

Democrats would surely be making a mistake if they pressed to the point of stalemate proposals that could rekindle the superheated inflation and interest rates of the Carter years, or proposals that would reduce American defense credibility.

It will be up to President Reagan, Republicans, and Democrats to work together in tackling an urgent national agenda — unemployment, Social Security, federal budget deficits — on a sound basis. Indeed, the welfare of the nation depends on it.

CHARLEY REESE

Materialists running U.S. into ground

If you can make money, do it ... if it feels good, do it ... if it ain't illegal, it's okay.

Charley Reese

If you had to sum up the Babylonian philosophy which has corrupted the United States, those three statements would do nicely. Taken together, the statements are the basic premises of a purely materialistic and hedonistic approach to life.

It is certainly not new, however many new labels are pinned on it by social scientists whose main contribution seems to be coining new phrases to describe ancient well-known phenomena. Many nations have adopted this philosophy and, of course, they all went to hell. In the long-run, the materialist is never a match for the idealist, even when the ideals of the idealist are mistaken, as in the case of communism.

The fundamental weakness of the materialist is that he sees himself as the center of the Universe. Since he is the end-all and be-all of his own existence, he becomes conservative in the worse sense of that word — afraid to take risks and absolutely appalled by the idea of a sacrifice. Since a sacrifice is exchanging something of value for something of higher value, it is inconceivable to a person who has no higher value than himself.

The materialist has three means of dealing with enemies. The weak ones he will crush; the strong ones he will first try to manipulate and if that fails, appease. Appeasement is simply another word for bribery. As wise men knew long before the wheel was invented, appeasement ultimately fails and leads to desperate battle or to surrender.

This corrupt philosophy is not the philosophy on which the United States was founded. That philosophy could be summarized as: free people are more important than money; do what's right even if it hurts; and make your laws conform to your moral code, but when they don't, live by your code, not by laws.

The American Revolution was not profitable, was not comfortable, and was not legal. The materialists in those days stayed with Great Britain, which was already succumbing to that corrupt philosophy. They and their British allies were defeated by the idealists even though the idealists were poor, out-numbered and out-gunned.

There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that unless we regain our moral and spiritual foundation, the United States will fall like a rotten apple before the onslaught of people who still believe in something larger and more important than themselves.

To put it in the simplest terms, we must base our personal decisions on what is right and not on what is profitable or comfortable or legal and we must demand that our government do likewise in its domestic and foreign policies.

Our government doesn't do that now. To be frank, much of what our government has done in this century has been shameful. We turned over to the Soviet dictator, Joseph Stalin, 600,000 people who had fled his terrible regime. Then we gave him Eastern Europe in the vain hope that if Soviets had Eastern Europe as a buffer zone, they wouldn't be aggressive. We gave away South Vietnam, Cuba and Laos when the cost of keeping them free got too painful. We have tried to appease communism in Cuba, Korea, Afghanistan and Central America. Now we are dumping Taiwan in the vain hope of bribing the Red Chinese to be our allies. If the Israelis weren't so gutsy and their American supporters so vocal, our government would long ago have sacrificed Israel to appease the oil sheiks.

We have enslaved five generations at least with debt in our greedy pursuit of material comfort on the cuff. Rather than face up to the damage imports are doing to our economy we tax those still working to put those unemployed on the dole. Rather than keep the peace in our towns and cities, we support a half million lawyers who quibble endlessly at high hourly rates over words, phrases, precedents and the meanings of same while every year more Americans die in criminal attacks than were killed fighting the American Revolution.

Materialists who have neither shame nor morals run this country, and if the majority of Americans who still value traditional morality don't throw them out of power, they will run it right into the ground.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Millionaire Cabinet' spares no expense

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's "Cabinet of Millionaires" has lived up to its title. Despite explicit presidential orders to show restraint on the refurbishing of their private offices, the Cabinet members have lavished the taxpayers' money on decor and doodads.

Jack Anderson

The president wanted to set an example of "a government that lives within its means." But the wealthy Cabinet secretaries interpreted that to mean within their means. Unfortunately, they're not using their own money to install luxurious creature comforts at the office; they're using yours and mine.

To a millionaire, of course, the amounts spent are peanuts. But just compare some of their expenditures on luxurious trifles with the amount of income tax withheld from your paychecks.

A General Accounting Office report, not yet released to the public, gives some examples of Cabinet extravagances:

— Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige spent $17,140 on such fripperies as dimmer switches for his office lights and the repainting of his chauffeur's room. The millionaire businessman evidently has a thing about locks. He spent $350 having the locks changed on his floor, another $463 on repairs and replacements, and $76 for copies of 30 keys.

— Secretary of Education Terrel Bell wants to phase out his department, but he apparently wants to go out in style. He managed to spend $10,272 revamping his office; $6,279 of that was for painting his own elegant suite.

— One mysterious item in Bell's redecorating splurge was $18 to have two flagpoles shortened by three inches apiece. A department spokesman explained that the flagpoles were too tall for the secretary's office.

— Samuel Pierce, secretary of Housing and Urban Development, found his kitchen sorely lacking in gourmet items. He spent $103 for a food processor and $160 for dishtowels, potholders, pieplates and a fancy set of knives. A HUD spokesman said the hardware was needed for official entertainment.

— Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis bought 24 dozen wineglasses and two dozen beer mugs for a bargain price of $286, and spent several hundred dollars on picture frames. A department spokesman explained that the glassware was needed for entertainment, and that the existing stock had somehow worn out. "You have to replace that sort of thing," he said. "Glassware is used on a daily basis. It becomes worn and it becomes necessary to replace it."

— The GAO auditors found that the Transportation Department had spent a grand total of $32,797.17 to spruce up the offices of four top officials. But the department spokesman challenged that figure. "Eight thousand dollars approximately was miscoded," he said. "Miscoded" is bureaucratic jargon meaning that the GAO counted funds spent by the previous Democratic administration — which, presumably, was also responsible for wearing out all those wineglasses and beer mugs.

Subtracting the "miscoded" amount and the money spent on other officials' offices, the spokesman arrived at a mere $1,693 for Lewis' own office.

In all, the Cabinet secretaries went through more than $68,000 of General Services Administration funds on the redecoration of their offices, according to the GAO. But sources told my associate John Dillon this was by no means the total amount of government funds spent for office elegance at the V.I.P. level.

The GAO ran individual audits only of DOT and HUD to see how much of their own agencies' money was spent by Cabinet and sub-Cabinet officials. HUD's expenditure came to $23,046; DOT's was the aforementioned $32,797.17.

Who was the most frugal Cabinet member of all? Interior Secretary James Watt. He laid out just $18 — to replace some coat hooks on his office doors.

HOMES FOR THE HOMELESS: The Israeli government has been widely accused of trying to drive all Palestinians — not just troops — out of Lebanon. The accusers pointed to the razing or bombing of Palestinian homes in Israeli-occupied territory as evidence of this intent.

In fact, the State Department, in a secret cable in late September, expressed concern about the possibility of a mass migration of the refugees to Syria. They were apprehensive about a possible exodus, saying it "raised the prospect of permanent partition." This prospect could have been encouraged by the Israelis, and such a migration would result in fewer Palestinians to challenge the Israeli position.

But the Israelis have now offered to provide solid housing for some of the 60,000 homeless Palestinians, in spite of the Lebanese government's reluctance to encourage continued Palestinian residence. Israel has offered 200 to 500 prefabricated concrete dwelling units for the homeless Palestinians in Lebanon.

The prefabs would be in addition to the 10,000 tents the United Nations is putting up for the refugees.

INSIDE REPORT:

Declining Glenn's help grounded Bradley

WASHINGTON — Los Angeles mayor Tom Bradley's campaign staff might have blown his chance to be the nation's first elected black governor when it turned down an offer from Sen. John Glenn to campaign for Bradley among white middle-class voters.

Rowland Evans

Glenn, an enduring hero to Middle America since his astronaut days, was in California just before the election. Democratic political consultant Joe Cerrell, handling Glenn's California schedule, offered the senator's services to the Bradley campaign. But the mayor's men, confident and obviously busy, said no thanks.

Robert Novak

Long-headed pros of both parties in California had a hunch from the start that white, middle-class Democrats would pick Republican George Deukmejian when they actually entered the voting booth. Pollsters had more than a hunch; they noted the difference between Bradley's very high approval ratings and relatively modest lead over Deukmejian and knew it spelled trouble.

DOLE'S TV FROLIC

While Republican senator Robert Dole's non-stop television interviews election night predicted such massive GOP defeats that the Republicans in Congress would have to strike out on their own even against President Reagan himself, he was relying on the White House for the latest bad news.

Adding to White House pique over the Senate Finance Committee chairman's televised comments were frequent telephone calls to the Roosevelt Room for more returns. The calls were placed by none other than Bob Dole.

Presidential aides supplied him with what information they had, then minutes later would see him on television putting the worst twist on that information. "Dole seemed to be telling the world that if he had been in charge the last two years, everything would have been all right on Nov. 2," grumbled a presidential aide.

MAINE'S REVENGE

Sen. Bob Packwood may have cost himself re-election as chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee by giving a thin-lipped "no comment" when asked why he had ignored Maine's Rep. David Emery in announcing efforts to salvage troubled Senate races two weeks before the election.

At that point, Emery was running behind appointive senator George Mitchell. Nevertheless, Packwood's tart dismissal of Emery's campaign as seemingly unworthy of notice guarantees the opposition of Maine's Republican senator William Cohen. Packwood has been challenged by Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana to be campaign committee chairman for the 1984 election, and other senators may also run.

Cohen regards Packwood as a "champion of incumbents" interested only in helping to re-elect sitting Republican senators. The more incumbents elected, the more I.O.U.s Packwood could collect in his bid to remain campaign chairman. Emery lost, but the 11 incumbents who won may be in Packwood's debt.

FALWELL'S TRIBLE

An Oct. 1 "Dear Paul" letter from Rep. Paul Trible to New Right strategist Paul Weyrich laid the groundwork for last-minute campaign help from Moral Majority president Jerry Falwell that probably turned the tide for Trible's surprise election to the Senate.

Trible wrote Weyrich, an intimate friend of the Rev. Falwell, that if he had been in the Senate this year he would have voted to put Sen. Jesse Helms' pro-life amendment on the Senate calendar instead of having it killed by parliamentary tactics. Trible told Weyrich that "while I do not now support the right-to-life amendment, my mind is not closed on this issue."

It was on the strength of that letter that Falwell sent out a mass mailing to Virginia voters with this message: Republican Trible may not be perfect, but the Democratic nominee, Lt. Gov. Richard Davis, is far worse. That mailing is credited with electing Trible by only 36,000 votes.

FREEZE POLITICS

An unintended consequence of the White House ban on administration officials publicly opposing nuclear freeze propositions was Edward Teller, father of the H-bomb and bogeyman to the peace bloc, arguing President Reagan's position just before the election.

ABC sought a top administration official to appear Oct. 28 opposite Boston anti-nuclear activist Randall Forsberg on "Nightline," five days before one-fifth of the nation would vote on the freeze. But the White House, fearing identification with a losing cause, rejected the offer.

The result was that Dr. Teller, looking and sounding a little like Dr. Strangelove, was recruited to argue the Reagan case. Administration officials felt Forsberg could have been easily bested in a debate on the issues but was the clear winner on image.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 8, the 312th day of 1982. There are 53 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 8, 1917, Nikolai Lenin became chief commissar of Russia and Leon Trotsky was named premier.

On this date:

In 1980, about 1,000 medical students went on strike in the Polish city of Gdansk in support of the Solidarity labor movement.

Turkish citizens create parliament, give president sweeping powers

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish citizens, voting on a single-choice ballot, overwhelmingly ratified a constitution that creates a new parliament but gives the president sweeping powers and restricts political opposition.

Approval of the constitution automatically makes Gen. Kenan Evren — whose junta has ruled by decree since the September, 1980, coup — president for seven years.

With 60 percent of the ballots counted, state radio and television reported early today that 92 percent of those voting voted "yes" for the constitution. There were no other issues or candidates on the ballot and no Turk was allowed to campaign for rejection.

The turnout was reported at over 90 percent. The government had stipulated that any registered voter who did not cast a ballot would lose voting rights for five years.

The government hailed the affirmative vote as an endorsement of two years of military rule that restricted basic freedoms, but effectively quashed the terrorism that was ripping apart the NATO-member nation before the bloodless coup.

Official sources say political activity, banned since the military takeover, will be allowed to resume about six months before parliament elections tentatively set for next fall.

But the new constitution — drafted by the martial-law regime as the first step back toward parliamentary rule — bans the top echelon of the defunct parties from any political activity for 10 years. This means new parties will have to be formed from scratch and new leaders will have to be mustered for the parliament elections next year.

The document also sharply restricts political activity, forbidding parties to have youth or women's branches or any affiliation with labor unions, professional organizations or foreign political groups.

Evren, who is the sixth general elected president of the 59-year-old Turkish republic, ran a two-week, one-man campaign in all major urban centers. Everywhere he went, Evren urged the people to accept the new constitution if they did not want a return to past days of internal strife.

The polls closed without any violence reported. There were no soldiers on the streets or near the polling places.

In the three years before Evren led four top generals in the coup, violence between extreme-right and extreme-left claimed 5,000 lives.

The leftist faction Dev-Sol last week seized the Turkish consulate in Cologne, West Germany, and a Turkish travel agency in Amsterdam, Netherlands, to protest the election.

The constitution replaces one endorsed by a national referendum in 1961. The ruling generals have blamed the liberal 1961 constitution for the growth of political terrorism and parliamentary paralysis which they say forced them to overthrow the government.

The previous two-house parliament has been replaced by a single assembly of 400 members. With his widely strengthened powers, the president can dissolve parliament and call for early elections.

He also can declare a state of emergency and rule by decrees that would only later be subject to Parliament's approval. The president has power to veto bills and constitutional amendments and to call a national referendum on any amendment.

He can appoint many high-level officials, including university presidents and supreme court justices.

Illinois governor's race canvass won't be finished until Wednesday

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago elections officials say they won't finish a city vote canvass in the neck-and-neck Illinois governor's race until Wednesday and Cook County returns won't be complete until Friday.

An official canvass of the Chicago vote was scheduled to continue today. At the end of canvassing Saturday, results from previously unrecorded votes in 14 precincts had narrowed Republican Gov. James Thompson's lead to 6,960 votes ahead of Democrat Adlai Stevenson.

U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said his office had received no evidence of vote fraud in the city but U.S. marshals would continue to monitor the Chicago vote counting because of "a lot of complaints."

Michael Lavelle, chairman of the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners, said Sunday he hoped to complete the Chicago count and release the results by Wednesday morning.

Partial computer checks of 14 so-called "zero precincts," where initial tallies showed no gubernatorial votes, unearthed 4,466 previously unrecorded votes — 3,714 for Stevenson and 752 for Thompson.

Those figures, added to results of a county-by-county check of vote totals by the Associated Press, showed Thompson with a statewide total of 1,814,925 votes to Stevenson's 1,807,965, a margin of 6,960.

Lavelle stressed that the figures released were unofficial.

Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper also said he hoped to have a suburban canvass ready by Wednesday. He said a final countywide canvass, adding Chicago and suburban totals, should be ready to be sent to Springfield, the capital, by Friday.

Spokesmen for both candidates said they remained optimistic about the outcome of a statewide canvass, which is expected to culminate Nov. 22 when the state Board of Elections releases final vote totals and certifies the results of the election.

"We think we'll pick up 10,000 votes in the Chicago canvass, and that Adlai will win," said John Schmidt, a lawyer representing Stevenson. "Here we've seen a shift of nearly 3,000 votes in just 14 precincts."

Soviets hijack plane, force landing in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Three Soviet citizens who hijacked an Aeroflot airliner to the Turkish Black Sea coast and asked for political asylum will be tried as hijackers in Turkey, the Foreign Ministry announced.

The 25 passengers and crew of the Aeroflot Antonov-24 turbo jet spent the night on board the plane, waiting to be flown home sometime today, the state radio reported.

The hijackers, identified by Justice Ministry officials as Soviets of German descent, forced the airliner's pilot to land at a Turkish-American NATO base near Sinop on Sunday. The plane was on a domestic flight from Novorossisk to Odessa, both on the Black Sea coast, an Aeroflot spokesman said.

The hijackers, whose names were given as Arthur Schuller, and Vitaly and Boris Schmidt, surrendered to Turkish authorities after the plane landed at Sinop.

Official sources said Monday that the plane would return to the Soviet Union as soon as a new pilot arrived. The original pilot, Ivan Nicolai, received knife wounds during a scuffle with the hijackers. Two other passengers also were injured, officials said.

All three were returned to the plane Monday after being treated for their wounds at the Sinop state hospital, the state radio said.

The hijackers, who have asked Turkey for temporary asylum and want eventually to go to West Germany, were armed with one gun, two knives and a screwdriver, the radio report said.

Shortly after the hijacking, the Soviet ambassador to Turkey, Alexei Rodionov, met with Turkish Foreign Ninistry officials to ask for the return of the plane, the passengers and the hijackers.

But Turkey intends to try the hijackers here, the Foreign Ministry said. Under the law, armed hijacking is punishable by a five-to-15-year prison term.

The Sinop base is a NATO communications and electronics base operated jointly by Turkey and the United States. Its chief function is to monitor Soviet military activity.

Chinese Nationalists pay defecting pilot in gold

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A Communist Chinese air force pilot soared into the capitalist stratosphere today — collecting 413 pounds of gold, worth $2.7 million, as a reward for defecting to Nationalist Chinese-ruled Taiwan.

Wu Yung-keng, this island nation's newest multi-millionaire, collected the prize even though he failed to meet all the terms of the standing reward offer.

The bounty offer of 5,000 taels of gold, or 413 pounds, calls for delivery of the defecting pilot's plane.

Wu, 25, flew his MiG-19 reconnaissance jet to South Korea on Oct. 16 and asked for political asylum on Taiwan.

He arrived here two weeks later, but the South Koreans kept his plane, and unconfirmed reports say they will return it to China, possibly through the United States.

Wu collected his bounty at a ceremony presided over by Gen. Hau Pei-tsun, chief of the general staff.

The Taiwanese government, apparently willing to pay dearly for what they see as the propaganda victory of a defection, commissioned Wu as a major in the Nationalist Chinese air force and gave him an air force medal.

"When I landed in (South) Korea, I openly declared my withdrawal from the Chinese Communist Party." Wu said. "Now, again, I solemnly announce before 1 billion Chinese people at home and abroad, effective today, I shall always denounce communism and determinedly fight for the freedom of the mainland compatriots."

Diplomats in Paris report unrest in Upper Volta after weekend coup

PARIS (AP) — Diplomats here reported serious disturbances in the impoverished West African nation of Upper Volta, where a weekend coup by low-ranking soldiers toppled the two-year-old military government of Col. Saye Zerbo.

The diplomats, who declined to be identified, gave no details of the disturbances reported Sunday in Ouagadougou, the capital of Upper Volta.

Landlocked Upper Volta remained sealed off from the outside world today, with its borders and airports closed and all communications links severed.

State radio reports monitored here Sunday said the plotters moved against the government Saturday night and Sunday morning. The reports gave no details on how the coup was carried out or the fate of Zerbo.

The new rulers imposed a nationwide dusk-to-dawn curfew and appealed for the people to rally behind the new junta, the "Provisional Committee of National Salvation."

The radio, in a proclamation broadcast Sunday, said the junta was composed of non-commissioned officers and soldiers.

It announced the dissolution of Zerbo's ruling military committee and said that all personal liberties, with the exception of what it called "political liberties," would be guaranteed.

It was the fourth coup in Upper Volta since the former French colony gained independence in 1960. Zerbo seized power Nov. 25, 1980, ousting Gen. Sangoule Lamizana.

Lamizana took power in 1966, but was elected president in 1973 in what was hailed as one of the most open and fair ballots in the history of African independence.

Neither Lamizana nor Zerbo was able to solve massive economic problems lingering from a devastating 1968-74 drought.

Bradley concedes in California contest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley has conceded defeat in his bid to become the nation's first elected black governor, telling Gov.-elect George Deukmejian: "The voters had a clear choice, and they elected you."

Bradley campaign chairman Nelson Rising announced the decision not to seek a recount shortly after Bradley sent a telegram of concession Saturday, promising to assist Deukmejian and the state "through the difficult times ahead."

The Democratic mayor lost Tuesday by 52,295 of 7.5 million votes cast, or a 49 to 48 percent, behind the Republican state attorney general.

"Mayor Bradley was prepared to concede the election to Mr. Deukmejian Wednesday morning, but the results were so close that we, his advisers, ate believed a thorough examination of the election returns was appropriate."

Lady Liberty to be closed for repairs

NEW YORK (AP) — The Statue of Liberty is "literally falling apart" and will be closed for major repairs for as long as a year beginning in 1984.

Repairmen may have to cut off the statue's raised arm and the torch it holds because they are so corroded, said David Moffitt, the National Park Service superintendent of Liberty Island.

He said famous statue in New York Harbor, a gift from France nearly 100 years ago, is an "extremely serious situation."

Its copper exterior is in good shape, Moffit said, but the raised right arm and torch probably will have to be removed.

Soviets apparently planning step forward in space race

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

MOSCOW — The world's most powerful space rocket, emblazoned with the Red Star of the Soviet Union, is to be test-fired for the first time next year, according to authoritative sources here. The Russians hope to perfect it by 1985 to hurl into orbit the 110-ton core of a mammoth manned space station.

Russian officials won't officially acknowledge that they are developing the huge rocket, code-named "G". But they speak openly of their concept for Cosmograd — or "city in the sky."

Sources — all of them involved in the nation's space program — provided a rough outline, and a few details, of the massive project that has long been a Soviet dream.

It would be occupied year in, year out, by rotating crews of medical researchers, astronomers, workers making pure drugs and materials, satellite repairmen and cosmonauts conducting reconnaissance and other military chores.

SOME WOULD INHABIT this weightless world for perhaps years in long-term research projects. Others would man high-technology construction crews, assembling manned and unmanned rockets destined for the planets and other parts of the solar system.

The sources, who asked to remain unidentified, provided these statistics about the "G" rocket: It will stand more than 300 feet tall, generate about 11 million pounds of liftoff thrust and be able to boost more than 300,000 pounds into orbit.

The largest rocket ever launched successfully was America's Saturn 5, which propelled astronauts to the moon in the late 1960s and early '70s and then was retired. It departed Earth on 7.5 million pounds of thrust and could carry more than 200,000 pounds into space.

"The plan calls for a series of test flights leading to an operational launch of the new rocket after two years," said an official who asked not to be identified.

He said the goal is to launch a 220,000-pound cylindrical station in 1985 and to initially have 10 to 12 persons on board, conducting scientific and defense assignments. American military analysts are concerned the station could serve as a launching platform for satellite-destroying laser weapons.

SUCH A PLATFORM would be 10 tons heavier than America's long-dead Skylab station and would be considerably larger than the 42,000-pound Salyut station now operated by the Soviets.

Cosmonaut Konstantin Feoktistov, discussing future space station plans without going into dates or other details, said an initial platform could be enlarged by adding modules.

"There will be observatory modules and whole plants for manufacturing products in zero gravity," he said. "Lounge modules will be the living quarters for cosmonauts to take a rest after the heavy workload they will handle in space."

Feoktistov said such a station "will accommodate enough people to man a whole scientific laboratory." He predicted there eventually will be many such platforms "carrying rotating resident crews."

NASA and the U.S. Air Force want very much to build a large space station but so far have received only a vague commitment from the Reagan administration and a few million dollars to continue studies.

"The Soviet space station activity is very intense and it is growing," said NASA administrator James M. Beggs. He predicted first elements of a U.S. permanent station would be in orbit by 1990.

"IT WOULD BE nice if the Soviets launched one," Beggs said. "It would probably make it a lot easier for us to get a go-ahead."

He said the Russians' current Salyut 7 station represents "another step forward in the Soviet Union's quest for dominance in near-Earth space. It is imperative that the United States and the free world meet the challenge effectively and soon."

Success is by no means assured for the "G" rocket.

The Soviets have had problems in the past with a large booster. Three failures in as many launches in the late 1960s and early '70s forced them out of the man-to-the-moon race with the United States. The behemoth they plan to launch next year is a much improved model of that ill-starred rocket.

Until the Soviets achieve their big station they will continue gaining long-term orbit experience with their very successful Salyut series.

Cosmonauts Anatoly Berezovoy and Valentin Lebedev have been aboard the station since May 13, and next week they will exceed the old space endurance record of 185 days set by Soviet space travelers aboard Salyut 6 in 1980.

"The cosmonauts aboard the Salyuts are gaining much knowledge on the effects of long-term weightlessness on the human body and they are learning how to operate effectively up there," reported Dr. Roald Sagdeyev, director of the Soviet Institute of Space Research.

THE SALYUT STATION is serviced periodically by unmanned progress transports which ferry up fresh food, fuel, water, oxygen and mail.

The cosmonauts devote considerable time to material processing experiments, hoping to manufacture products that cannot be made on Earth because of gravity.

"If we could develop manufacturing in space for materials and pharmaceuticals, it would make a space station very practical," Sagdeyev said.

Sagdeyev said Soviet planners also are considering developing a space platform as an energy station, collecting the sun's energy, converting it to electricity and transmitting it to Earth for distribution.

Shuttle countdown going well, although windows are still dirty

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown for space shuttle Columbia's first operational mission began without a hitch, but its windows still needed to be washed before the scheduled Thursday blastoff.

"It's not a priority item, but it's got to be done," said Mark Hess, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, after the countdown began Sunday for the shuttle's first commercial trip.

While grounded, Columbia's windows accumulated a film of dirt that could hinder the astronauts' vision and fuzz up photographs. Technicians were scheduled to clean them today.

Today's timetable also called for activating Columbia's power-producing fuel cells, pressurizing fuel tanks and reviewing flight software items stored in the computer memory banks.

The fiery liftoff, scheduled for 6:19 a.m. CST Thursday, will be Columbia's fifth trip into space, but the first for "business for which the space shuttle was intended," said veteran astronaut Vance Brand.

After four previous test flights, the shuttle will carry its first payload — two commercial satellites to be launched into orbit.

Satellite Business Systems Inc. and Telesat Canada, Ltd. each is paying NASA $10 million to carry the two communications satellites.

The SBS satellite is scheduled to be released eight hours after liftoff. The Canadian payload is to be ejected Friday.

"The four earlier trips tested the vehicle and proved it works; our job is to make it start paying for itself," said Brand, who will command the four-man crew aboard the upcoming mission.

The four astronauts who will make the journey were in Houston today concluding months of training at the Johnson Space Center. They will fly here Tuesday morning to make final preparations for the launch.

The crew will be the largest ever launched in a single spaceship. Never have more than three people left Earth together, although as many as five have been together in orbit in linked-up vehicles.

Brand was on one of those five-person flights — the 1975 joint journey by three American astronauts and two Soviet cosmonauts. With him this time will be three space newcomers: pilot Robert Overmyer and mission specialists William Lenoir and Joseph Allen.

Lenoir and Allen will monitor the payloads, each weighing 7,200 pounds, conduct 90-minute countdowns for each and trigger the spring devices that will fling them out of the ship's cargo bay into orbit.

On Sunday, Lenoir and Allen are to take the first space walks of the shuttle program and the first by American astronauts in nine years. They will spend 3½ hours in the open cargo bay, testing space suits and shuttle systems and evaluating tools and techniques for future crews.

Soviet 'attack' on U.S. carriers at sea revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet navy has sent its advanced supersonic Backfire bombers on simulated missile attacks against U.S. aircraft carriers for the first time, according to American naval officials.

The officials also report that "just recently, the Soviets began conducting Backfire operations over the Sea of Japan, adding a new dimension to the threat to the sea lanes in that area."

Navy officials said this when asked recently about persistent reports that Soviet naval leaders have begun making wider use of the twin-engine Backfires, the most modern long-range bombers in use today.

Since these planes first appeared in the mid-1970s, U.S. naval strategists have warned that the sophisticated swing-wing Backfire bombers and their air-to-surface missiles pose a potentially serious danger to U.S. carrier battle groups and other warships protecting vital sea lanes.

The Backfire maneuvers simulating missile attacks occurred in late September and early October during a major U.S. naval exercise involving 15 U.S. ships, including the nuclear powered carrier Enterprise and the conventional carrier Midway, in the Northern Pacific.

At the time of those exercises, Adm. Sylvester R. Foley, commander of the U.S. Pacific fleet, told of repeated buzzing by Soviet warplanes and described such Soviet activity as common during naval exercises.

Navy reports then also mentioned older Soviet naval bombers, but there was no mention of any appearance of Backfires.

Senior Navy officials appeared reluctant to discuss the Backfire operations publicly, but decided to respond to questions.

"It is the first time that Backfires operated in relatively close proximity to a carrier," Navy Lt. Cmdr. Tom Jurkowsky said.

But Jurkowsky declined to go into any detail on the number of Soviet Backfires that took part in the simulated missile attacks or to provide any other specifics.

However, intelligence sources said eight Backfires staged a total of two practice attacks against the Enterprise and the Midway Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

According to these sources, who asked to remain anonymous, the bombers came within 120 miles of the carriers, which is well within the range of the AS-4 Kitchen missiles.

Week of decision arrives for gloom-shrouded NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Garvey, chief of the National Football League players union stayed behind after management's chief negotiator Jack Donlan and mediator Sam Kagel had checked out of the hotel where they had endured eight fruitless days of talks.

While the gloom created by the continued inability to settle the players strike extended into Commissioner Pete Rozelle's office, with the commissioner talking Sunday about releasing the block of hotel rooms reserved for the Jan. 30 Super Bowl Game, Garvey continued to sound hopeful about the season being resumed.

The union leader's optimism that a settlement will be reached is based on pragmatic view: "You don't throw away a $600 million industry."

GARVEY ALSO says he thinks the future of the season could be decided by midweek. "I think we will set up a meeting with Jack and one or two others within the next three days," he said. "I think someone will have to put a deal together and then see if it flies with us and it flies with them. I don't say it will be an easy sell, but it will happen."

Among those who seemed to disagree with him was Art Modell, the owner of the Cleveland Browns, who said, "Speaking for the Browns, I would rather give up the season than make a deal with I can't live with downstream.

"Some club owners are very unhappy with the offer we have already made." If we go any further, we would be committing suicide."

Garvey does not envision a settlement coming in a media-beseiged surroundings of previous negotiations. It won't be a formal, mediated session. "I think we are beyond that now," he said.

WHEN THE strike talks collapsed again on Saturday night, for the second time in two weeks, and when the Management Council, bargainers for the owners, packed up and left the hotel, and Kagel followed them Sunday, the union vowed to stay until the negotiations resume.

"The players will stay out until they get a fair collective bargaining agreement," said Garvey. "They just aren't going to put up with the old ways any longer."

Garvey spent part of the day, the 47th day of the strike, waiting for the phone to ring. It didn't. Finally, he called Donlan, at the Management Council office. Donlan was home, spending the day with his family.

"If he wants to bargain," Garvey said, "he knows where to find us."

If Garvey sticks to his word, he'll also be on the phone sometime today — with the National Labor Relations Board, taking the necessary steps to get an unfair labor practice complaint issued against the management council.

Garvey and the union didn't take kindly to the management council decision to send out to the 28 teams a 4½-page synopsis of a 75-page document it gave to the union, one delineating its latest proposal. Any interested players, the owners say, can call their teams and get one.

That, Garvey says, is an attempt to bypass the union and negotiate directly with the players. And that, it continues, is illegal. Garvey is expected to advise the players that the synposis — even the 75-page document — contains loopholes.

DONLAN AND Sargent Karch, the union's chief counsel, say the latest union move in the NLRB's direction will only hinder the already staggering bargaining process.

"It won't prevent the two sides from negotiating, but it will make it very difficult," Karch said. "Obviously I'll be involved as a witness or a lawyer or both. Jack will be involved. The same thing goes for their side. Ed will be involved. So will (union chief counsel Joseph) Yablonski."

"We're not talking about weeks," Donlan added. "It could be months. It could be years ..." And even then, Donlan added, a ruling against the management council wouldn't substantially change the negotiation process.

Rozelle Sunday talked about the Jan. 30 Super Bowl date.

"Week by week, it is just trickling away," he said. "Theoretically, the Super Bowl could be moved. We don't have to have hotel rooms to play a Super Bowl game; all we need is a stadium and getting the Rose Bowl would not be a problem. But there are a lot of other factors involved with changing the date and every one of them is negative."

Rozelle added that sometime this week the league would inform the Los Angeles Convention Bureau that because the regular season might not resume, the NFL would release its commitment to approximately 5,500 hotel rooms it reserved for players, owners and members of the news media.

"We will tell them that they can seek optional business," Rozelle said. "If we don't we will have a lawsuit on our hands. But we'll also ask them to hold as many rooms as possible."

Rozelle said that that he had received letters from Roone Arledge, ABC News and Sports president, and Arthur Watson, president of the sports division at NBC, in which the two network executives said there would be problems in televising games rescheduled for after Jan. 30.

Staying behind in the hotel with Garvey were some of the player representatives. Among them was Mike Ozdowski, likebacker for the Baltimore Colts. He made about $14 in tips for an hour's worth of work.

That's considerably less than he used to make in autumns past, when he was careening around the field for the Colts. On Sunday, he spent the afternoon tending bar in the Summit Hotel in midtown Manhattan. He was killing time along with some other reps in doing chores at the bar. There was little else to do on the seventh Sunday wiped out by the strike.

Mustangs among few unbeatens

SMU awaits the verdict of pollsters

By Associated Press

Southern Methodist is alone atop the Southwest Conference football standings — thanks to the Baylor Bears — and by sundown could be the No. 1-ranked team in the country.

The Mustangs are 9-0 and 6-0 in the SWC after their 41-14 triumph over the Rice Owls. Thanks to Baylor's 24-17 upset of No. 5-ranked Arkansas, the Mustangs are a game ahead of the 4-1 Razorbacks and own a game and a half edge over the 3-1 Texas Longhorns.

The No. 1-ranked team in The Associated Press poll, Pittsburgh, was bounced 31-16 by Notre Dame, and now the pollsters must decide between the Mustangs and unbeaten Georgia. The Bulldogs were ranked No. 3 last week but beat Florida 44-0.

SMU ranked No. 1 in the country for two weeks in 1950 before it was beaten. The No. 2 ranking was the highest for the Mustangs in 32 years.

In other games Saturday, Texas Tech beat Texas Christian at homecoming 16-14 on a last-second field goal and the Texas Longhorns gave Houston the worst whipping in the school's history, 50-0, in Memorial Stadium.

SMUt tailbacks Eric Dickerson and Craig James share more than a position — they have a common goal: They want the Mustangs to be No. 1. But it may take the Ponies until Jan. 2.

"We just don't seem to get respect," Dickerson said after the 41-14 victory over winless Rice. "Early in the season it was, 'Wait until the Texas game.' Now it's, 'Wait until the Arkansas game.' If we were 12-0 they would say, 'Wait until next year.'"

James figures only one ranking will really have meaning. "I'm looking forward to waking up and reading the paper on Jan. 2, and seeing SMU No. 1," said James, who gained 130 yards against the Owls. "That's what really counts: being No. 1 on Jan. 2."

Texas must have known it would be the Longhorns' day against Houston when sub fullback Ervin Davis "intercepted" a pitchout intended for tailback Mike Luck and ran 11 yards for a Texas touchdown.

The play came with 2:11 to play in the second quarter and extended Texas' margin to 23-0. Less than a minute later, Texas scored again — after a Houston time out had stopped the clock — and the game became a runaway.

The 50-0 thrashing was the worst football defeat in Houston's history.

"It was supposed to go to Mike Luck," admitted Davis, who obviously was startled when he looked up and the ball was almost in his face. "I was looking to see who I was going to block. I just took it. It was a whole lot of surprise."

Texas passed on the first play of the game — for a 17-yard gain — and opened up its offense with tight end reverses, delayed draws, fake reverses, a screen pass and a bomb in tying its season-high offensive output with 448 yards.

Houston lost four fumbles and had three passes intercepted, and coach Fred Akers of Texas said, "When turnovers started our way, it got out of hand. It was a disaster for them, an embarrassment."

"Shoot, forget that game," said Houston coach Bill Yeoman. "Go down the road and forget the ballgame ... Hey, scores don't bother me. There are W's and there are L's — this is an L. It doesn't make any difference whether it's one point or 600."

Baylor defensive end Preston Davis said it best. "This was our bowl game." It was his interception set the stage for the Bears' shocking 24-17 victory over No. 5-ranked and previously unbeaten Arkansas.

The Bears had beer subjected to a week of public humiliation after lo ing 30-15 to Tulane, their third consecutive loss. Co ch Grant Teaff not only tongue-lashed the Bears but he also scrimmaged them hard most of the week, trying "to find out who wants to play."

Teaff found out. "It sure has been a long time since we had any fun," said tailback Alfred Anderson, who frog-leaped four yards for the winning touchdown with 2:38 to play after Davis had intercepted Mark Mistler's double-reverse flea flicker pass.

Arkansas lost more than just the game. Tailback Gary Anderson suffered a toe injury and Jessie Clark sustained a hip pointer and had two teeth knocked out.

TEXAS TECH sophomore placekicker Ricky Gann Two weeks ago he beat Rice in Houston on a last-second field goal. He did it again Saturday against TCU.

"We knew if we could get the ball spotted inside the 30 Gann could kick it — even into the wind," said Tech coach Jerry Moore. "We were plannilng all along to let the clock run down...and give Ricky a chance to kick it."

The ball was spotted at the 17 and traveled 32 yards to give Tech a 16-14 victory.

Meanwhile, Anthony Hutchison rushed a SWC record 43 times for 175 yards for the Red Raiders.

"I talked to him earlier in the week and told him that since he had been running well he would be our I back for the last three gammes of the season," Moore said. "We wanted to let him carry about 30 times. We had no idea he'd carry as often as he did."

Unbeaten SMU, Georgia, ASU rule college roost

Notre Dame running back Larry Moriarty celebrates first Irish TD against Pitt and he kept on celebrating after game as No. 1 Panthers were upset.

By Associated Press

Southern Methodist, Georgia and Arizona State form college football's ruling troika after a weekend of upsets.

Saturday's action also saw Notre Dame write another dramatic chapter in its storied history and LSU storm back into the ranks of the elite while getting Bear Bryant to mumble about retiring.

The list of unbeaten-untied major teams shrank to three when Notre Dame stunned No.1-rated Pitt 31-16, adding the Panthers to a long list of Irish upset victims, and fifth-ranked Arkansas fell to Baylor 24-17.

That left the race for No.1 in this week's Associated Press poll looming as a three-way battle among second-ranked SMU, a 41-14 winner over Rice; No.3 Georgia, which thrashed No.20 Florida 44-0; and fourth-rated Arizona State, which came from behind to turn back winless Oregon State 30-16.

HOWEVER, nipping at the heels of the big three are sixth-ranked Nebraska, which walloped Oklahoma State 48-10, and No.7 Penn State, which buried North Carolina State 54-0. And don't overlook unbeaten-but-tied No.11 LSU, the nation's top-rated defensive team, which throttled No.8 Alabama 20-10, a licking which Bryant termed "the best beating we've had since the '60s."

Bryant, college football's winningest coach with 322 triumphs in 38 years, said he would inform Alabama's president "in a heck of a hurry that we need to make some changes, need to start at the top."

Elsewhere, 10th-ranked Washington edged No.9 UCLA 10-7, No.12 Florida State swamped South Carolina 56-26, No.13 Clemson shaded No.18 North Carolina 16-13, No.14 Oklahoma beat Kansas State 24-10, No.15 Michigan defeated Illinois 16-10, No.16 Southern California clobbered California 42-0, No.17 West Virginia squeaked past Temple 20-17 and No.19 Maryland nipped Miami 18-17.

Part of Notre Dame's heritage is upsetting No.1 teams (see Georgia Tech, 1953; Oklahoma, 1957; Texas, 1970; Alabama, 1973 and 1974; Texas again, 1977, and now Pitt), "and that's what I talked to the players about," said Coach Gerry Faust. "I read off all the past upsets to them before the game."

DURING THE game, Notre Dame erased a 13-10 fourth-quarter deficit on a 54-yard flea-flicker pass from Blair Kiel to Joe Howard and Allen Pinkett added insurance scores on runs of 76 and 7 yards, while the Notre Dame defense snapped Pitt quarterback Dan Marino's record streak of 19 games in which he had thrown a touchdown pass.

After the game, Pinkett said: "Coach said this win will go down in Notre Dame history. This is a chance for us to hush a lot of criticism and give us back our national respectability. This puts us back in the national picture."

But not as much as Georgia, which got "one of my best ones" from Herschel Walker, who rushed for 219 yards on 35 carries and scored on a 30-yard gallop and two 1-yard plunges. The two-time All-American, a junior, boosted his career rushing total fo 4,920 yards, an NCAA three-season record.

"Herschel Walker was magnificent," said Coach Vince Dooley. "He just keeps amazing me every game. I had no idea this was going to happen. I thought we played tremendously well. It just turned out to be a game where everything we tried went right and everything they tried worked against them."

WALKER HAS tormented Florida for 649 rushing yards in three meetings and Gator Coach Charley Pell again called him "the most dominating college football player. I don't believe a team can defeat Georgia unless you can find a way to keep the ball away from Herschel. He's that good."

Luis Zendejas kicked three field goals and Todd Hons, Alvin Moore and Darryl Clack ran for touchdowns of 1, 4 and 25 yards to help Arizona State overcome stubborn Oregon State. The Sun Devils trailed until Moore's 4-yard run with 1:11 left in the first half.

"After last week's emotional game against Southern Cal, it was hard getting up for this one," said quarterback Hons. "The intensity just wasn't there."

Nebraska's Mike Rozier carried 33 times for 251 yards — four short of the school record — and four touchdowns against Oklahoma State, while the Cornhuskers' held Ernest Anderson, the nation's leading ground-gainer, to 68 yards on 15 attempts.

Bannister heads FA list

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Floyd Bannister of the Seattle Mariners is expected to be the top pick when baseball's annual free agent bidding begins on Wednesday.

The 27-year-old left-hander had a respectable 12-13 record with a weak team in a small ballpark and led the American League in strikeouts.

Bannister is one of three Class A players who will be in this year's free agent draft. The others are outfielder Steve Kemp of the Chicago White Sox and outfielder-designated hitter John Lowenstein of the Baltimore Orioles.

A Class A player is one rated in the top 20 percent of his position in his league. Any team that signs a Class A player must give up a professional player as compensation.

Kemp hit .286 with 19 home runs and 98 runs batted in, while Lowenstein hit .320 with 24 homers.

The other biggest names in the free agent draft are designated hitters Hal McRae of Kansas City and Don Baylor of California, and first baseman Steve Garvey of Los Angeles.

Several players signed huge contracts with their former teams just before the free agency deadline. Jason Thompson re-signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates for $5.5 million for five years, or slightly more than $1 million per year.

Steve Garvey

...no longer a Dodger

Chet Lemon of Detroit signed for $3.25-million spread over five years; Rick Cerone of the New York Yankees, $2.4 million for four years, and Larry Herndon of Detroit, $2.8 million for four years.

But there still will be plenty of players available.

They include infielders Bill Almon of the Chicago White Sox, Bump Wills of the Chicago Cubs, Alan Bannister of Cleveland and Reggie Smith of San Francisco; outfieders Al Cowens and Bruce Bochte of Seattle, Omar Moréno of Pittsburgh, Rick Manning of Cleveland, Ellis Valentine of the New York Mets and Joel Youngblood of Montreal; catches Gene Tenace of St. Louis, Joe Nolan of Baltimore and Alan Ashby of Houston; and pitchers Paul Splittorff of Kansas City and Pete Falcone of the New York Mets.

His old team, the White Sox, selected a Pittsburgh farmhand, catcher Joel Skinner.

The compensation pool for Class A players is taken from a pool of unprotected players provided by most major league teams.

Garvey requires no compensation because he has been in the major leagues for 12 years. A player who has previously been through the free agent draft, such as Tenace, also is exempt from compensation.

A team that loses a Class B player — the second 10 percent — is compensated by two amateur free-agent draft choices. There are four Class B free agents this year; Ashby, Nolan, Falcone and Almon.

Sul Ross sacks up TIAA, heads for NAIA-II grid playoffs

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

ALPINE—Last time Sul Ross University experienced the excitement of post-season play was back in the mid-1960s when the Lobos were still a member of the Lone Star Conference.

In fact, Sul Ross played its NAIA semifinal game at Midland's Memorial Stadium, losing to Linfield, Ore., College in a wild scoring thriller.

They were still scoring in boxcar figures Saturday in clinching the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association with a 32-25 victory over defending co-national champion Austin College.

The win left the Lobos 8-0 and in all probability landed them in the NAIA playoffs for the first time since the mid-1960s. Only this time, it is in Division II, instead of Division I.

SRU DECIDED it couldn't afford the climbing price of membership in the Lone Star Conference and, after a few years as an independent, became one of the charter members in the TIAA, where no one gives scholarships and league members play home-and-home series.

From the packed stands Saturday afternoon, the Lobos seem to be paying less for their football and enjoying it more.

Sul Ross beat AC in the first meeting at Sherman, 23-21, turning back the Kangaroos in the game's fading moments and Saturday's game was almost a carbon-copy.

Sul Ross saw a 24-10 halftime lead disappear when AC, which completed only four first half passes, stuck to the ground to grind out 71 and 81 yard touchdown drives. The second came on the last play of the third quarter and when quarterback Jim Vice flipped a pass to Scott Krikorian for the two-point conversion, AC led 25-24 and SRU fans wondered if history, 1981 style, wasn't in the making.

Last year, Sul Ross won the first game and AC the second, and with it the ranking that led to the NAIA invitation.

But with Lobo Quarterback Larry Hill picking apart the Roo defense by hitting Burnett Williams, his big tight end, on passes for 15 and 27 yards and 10 yards to Steve Hummel, SRU was in scoring position. Maurice Stephens concluded the 65-yard drive with a 10-yard run. SRU passed for two to make it 32-25.

ONCE AGAIN, the Lobos had to turn back late drives by AC. The first was repulsed at the seven with 4:36 to go and two incomplete passes by SRU gave the Kangaroos another shot. This time, they stormed to the 19, but Frank Fryer intercepted a pass inside the 10 and returned it 67 yards time flashing inside :30.

As it turned out, the game was a battle of quarterbacks. Hill, a senior from San Antonio, passed for 256 yards to ramrod the SRU attack. His 19-yarder to Williams produced the first TD and his passing set up the one-yard plunge by Andrew Hill to reclaim the lead at 14-7 after AC had tied it. It became 21-7 when tackle Carl Lee gummed up a deep reverse moments later and recovered the resulting fumble in the end zone.

For AC, junior Jim Vice wound up with with 113 yards on eight completions, but it was his 100 yards rushing and another 180 by Greg Garrison that kept the Roos in the game.

Longest losing streak ends

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — It was a joyous scene, even to the police at Rynearson Stadium who had to scramble out of the way for fear they would be trampled by stampeding Eastern Michigan University students.

"There goes our recruiting budget!" a school official cried out as both goal posts came down. "But who cares!"

After suffering through a 27-game losing streak — longest in the nation — Eastern Michigan students, players and coaches all had a right to celebrate after the Hurons' 9-7 Mid-American Conference football victory over Kent State on a cold, gray afternoon Saturday.

Bob LaPointe, who became the Hurons' interim coach five weeks ago after Mike Stock was fired, clutched the game ball in the dressing room. He had celebrated his 38th birthday the day before and felt it was the perfect gift.

"I told you five weeks ago that if we worked hard and believed in ourselves and never gave up, we could do it," LaPointe told his players. "Don't forget what it feels like because we can feel it again this year."

The Hurons, 1-8 for the season and 1-6 in the MAC, travel to Bowling Green next week before hosting Western Michigan in their final season game.

"We just felt this was an opportunity we couldn't let go," LaPointe said.

Ironically, Hirschmann had missed field goals from about the same range in one-point defeats against Toledo and Ohio earlier this season.

Hirschmann recalled that he even considered giving up football after missing a 32-yard effort with 13 seconds remaining against Ohio.

"I was really disappointed after that game," Hirschmann said. "But I love football. And all the guys came up and shook my hand after that game. Coach LaPointe came up and hugged me and told me we'd get one sooner or later."

Defensive back Mike Lewis said the players never thought of themselves as the biggest losers in college football.

"We could have won a lot of those games," Lewis said.

Bird finds range as Celtics win

NBA ROUNDUP

By Associated Press

Larry Bird and base-stealing champion Rickey Henderson have two things in common — they wear green uniforms and they always get a green light.

"Not giving Larry a green light to shoot is like not giving Henderson the green light to steal," Boston Celtics Coach Bill Fitch said Sunday night. "It's just not something you do."

Bird, who went in the game shooting 45.5 percent after five games, hit 15 of 20 shots and scored 38 points Sunday night to pace the Celtics to a 102-100 victory of the New Jersey Nets.

Spurs 101, Suns 100

George Gervin was not as hot as Bird, hitting 16 of 31 shots, but his 14 straight successful free throws gave him 47 points in San Antonio's narrow victory over Phoenix.

Gervin's last point was a free throw with nine seconds left that gave the Spurs a 100-98 edge. But since the Suns fouled Gervin away from the ball, San Antonio also kept possession of the ball.

Sonics 102, Bucks 90

Seattle improved its record to 6-0 as Fred Brown scored 20 points in relief of flu-stricken Gus Williams.

Lonnie Shelton added 20 points for the SuperSonics, while Sidney Moncrief led Milwaukee, also with 20.

Lakers 103, Blazers 89

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 22 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to pace Los Angeles over Portland.

The Trail Blazers kept the game close for 32 minutes, but a 13-4 spurt in the last four minutes of the third quarter gave the Lakers a 72-62 lead. Then eight straight points by Los Angeles early in the fourth period made it 82-66, and Portland never threatened after that.

Beth Daniel was third at 214...

FOOTBALL—The Seattle Seahawks assistants keep busy formulating game plans, in case the NFL schedule restarts — though their next personal game plans may include looking for new jobs. Most of the seven coaches believe that, with the firing of Coach Jack Patera, they will gone when their contracts expire in January, as are most assistants when the head coach is axed. The assistants — Jerry Rhome, Jackie Simpson, Jack Christiansen, Andy MacDonald, Howard Mudd, Frank Lauterbur and Rusty Tillman — have kept busy formulating the last seven game plans as if the season would resume. "It's not a whole lot of fun," said Rhome, the Seahawk's offensive coordinator, and a probable candidate for the head coaching job. "Every coach on the staff feels the same way. It's (the uncertainty) not going to stop us from doing pretty well, if we get the chance."...

Saturday's Oklahoma-Missouri Big Eight game will be one of three regional games televised by CBS, beginning at 11 a.m...

Wide receiver Brian Kelly caught three touchdown passes from Warren Moon and Jim Germany rushed for two more scores Sunday as the Edmonton Eskimos routed the Saskatchewan Roughriders 46-22 in the final regular-season CFL game. Kelly, former Washington State star, caught passes of 11, 38 and 7 yards from Moon, who became the first quarterback in CFL history to pass for more than 5,000 yards in a single season...Linebacker Ben Zambiasi returned an intercepted pass 15 yards for a touchdown, then made a key tackle late in the game to lead the Hamilton Tiger-Cats to a 24-21 victory over the Winnipeg Blue Bombers...With quarterback Condredge Holloway led the Toronto Argonauts to their first CFL championship 1971 with a 28-14 win over Ottawa. BASKETBALL—The UCLA Bruins, looking up at Oregon State when the last three Pacific-10 basketball seasons ended, are favored to finish on top this time, according to coaches in the conference. Six of nine votes went to the Bruins in a poll of PAC 10 coaches. UCLA Coach Larry Farmer has four returning starters in Kenny Fields, Rod Foster, Darren Daye and Michael Holton. He also has, in Montel Hatcher, a guard he calls "one of the best freshmen ever at UCLA." Fields is one of three players on last season's 10-man all-conference team returning. The others are John Revelli of Stanford and Charlie Sitton of Oregon State. The Bruins are strong in experience and quickness, Farmer admitted, but he added, "I think Oregon State is going to be as good as anybody in the country."...

Bowman reaches 600 wins

Scotty's Sabres beat Canucks

By Associated Press

In 1967, Scotty Bowman began coaching in the National Hockey League with the St. Louis Blues. Today, he has 600 victories, something only one other NHL coach can claim.

In 1970, a swift center named Gilbert Perreault was the first draft selection of the expansion Buffalo Sabres. Today, Perreault is the only original Sabre left and the proud possessor of 400 NHL goals.

The combination of Bowman behind the bench and Perreault on the ice led the Sabres to a 3-1 victory over the tired Vancouver Canucks Sunday night. Bowman downplayed his achievement — only Dick Irvin, who coached 27 years in the league, for Chicago, Toronto and Montreal, and had 690 triumphs, has surpassed 600 wins.

"It (600 wins) is not a target," said Bowman, who coached the Canadiens to five Stanley Cups before joining the Sabres in 1979. "There will be others to get it. It goes up pretty quick when you have teams that win 40 or 50 games a year.

"I've had some great teams in Montreal and St. Louis."

Bowman admitted that "coaching is more of a challenge now. The game is changing. Goals against is the key thing now because the game is higher scoring."

The game with Vancouver wasn't high-scoring as Bob Sauve faced only 18 shots from the Canucks, who were finishing off a five-game eastern swing. Perreault got his 400th at 3:31 of the third period and it was the game-winner.

NHL Roundup

Bruins 7, Red Wings 0

Pete Peeters registered his first shutout of the season but had to stop only 16 shots as the Wings were blanked for the third time this year.

"I had three cracks at it already, and I've lost them all in the third period," Peeters said."It gave me a lot of satisfaction. I'm not playing for the shutouts. A shutout is just something you can look back on and say, 'that was nice.'"

Luc Dufour scored two goals for Boston.

Flyers 2, Islanders 2

The NHL champions continued to struggle and have now gone 0-2-2 in the last week, including a loss to the Flyers Saturday night in the first game of their weekend home-and-home series.

Mike Bossy's slapshot skidded through goalie Rick St. Croix in the third period to lift the Islanders into the tie.

Capitals 6, Whalers 2

Bobby Carpenter had a goal and two assists and Czechoslovakian rookie Milan Novay set up three goals for the Capitals, who outshot Hartford 42-21 to win for the first time at home this season.

Jets 5, Flames 2

Winnipeg beat goalie Don Edwards for the first time in nine tries as Paul MacLean scored twice. The Jets put three shots past Edwards in a span of 2:51 of the first period to break a three-game losing slide. Winnipeg outshot Calgary 38-24.

Black Hawks 7, Maple Leafs 3

Tom Lysiak had two goals and two assists as Chicago extended one streak — the Hawks are unbeaten in six — and ended another — four straight ties. Defenseman Doug Wilson added a goal and two assists.

If they call off the NFL season...

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

If they call off the National Football League season, we can wait 'til next year. Or, can we?

It could be that next year may be lot like this one, with the likes of Jack Donlan, Ed Garvey and Sam Kagel, replacing Terry Bradshaw, Earl Campbell and Tony Dorsett as the central figures of the NFL. And with the National Labor Relations Board, lawyers, judges and Ted Turner as the supporting cast.

Suppose the season is called off, or its clock just allowed to run out without another play being called. That still leaves the same contract impasse and it adds a number of new questions. Among them:

— Would the players and owners continue to bargain through the winter and spring to reach an agreement that would allow a normal season in 1983? "We'll negotiate again next year, I assume," says Leonard Tose, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles. But in most sticky bargaining situations, agreements are only reached under a deadline, which will be lacking as soon as the season is called off.

— IF THERE is no agreement, would the owners open training camps next summer? Probably. But nobody knows how many players would show up. A mass return would probably break the union — something that in itself might keep a number of players out.

— Would players bolt to the United States Football League? The NFL maintains that the individual contracts between players and teams supersede the collective union contract and that the courts have upheld that view.

But Kansas City guard Tom Condon, a member of the union's executive committee and a lawyer, says: "Our legal position is that if they cancel the season or they let it dissipate on its own, then we're free agents." The union may go to court to get that view upheld and in any case, it maintains that a quarter of the NFL's 1,500 players will be free agents at the end of the season.

— Would the players form an entirely new league? The Turner Broadcasting System, which carried the two union all-star games, is willing to pay for television rights, and the union executive committee will meet this week to search for other financial sponsors. That would also raise legal questions and like the USFL matter, would be decided in the courts and before the NLRB, making it a boon for lawyers and few others.

WHAT ARE the chances that if the season is called off, an agreement can be reached? Ask one of the main actors.

"Deadline negotiations are more normal than otherwise," says Donlan, management's chief negotiator. "I've always found that negotiations are most effective when the pressure is on. If it's not resolved this year, there will be precious few pressures."

With no agreement, both sides think the likely step for the league would be to open training camps and hope that all but the hard-core union activists would report. In fact, the NFL's Competition Committee will meet this week to discuss that eventuality.

But union sources maintain that won't work, that even those players who disagree with the Players Association position would consider that union-busting and stay out. "A lot of players assume this may be the end of their careers," Condon said Sunday on ABC's "Sportsbeat. "They want to stick it out because they feel we deserve a fair agreement."

The USFL? A group of players stopped by the new league's offices last week and say they'd be warmly welcomed. But probably not warmly remunerated. The average salary for 1,000 free agents the USFL has signed is reported at $22,000 a year, far below even the union's $83,000 estimate of the present NFL average salary.

Buffum, Shepherd win in Michigan Road Race

HOUGHTON, Mich. (AP) — The team of John Buffum of Burlington, Vt., and Doug Shepherd of Livonia, Mich., drove to victory in the Press on Regardless off-road rally, a race marred by the first fatal accident in the 34-year history of the event.

Buffum and Shepherd drove a 1981 Audi Quattro in 150.18 minutes over the 580-mile course, run on back roads in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Drivers are only timed during 180 miles of high-speed stages, while the remainder of the course consists of getting from one stage to another. The transit segments must be completed within a certain time to avoid penalties.

Strike costs $275 million

NFL careers go with season

By The Associated Press

With the resumption of the National Football League season in such serious jeopardy and millions of dollars already fumbled away, reaction to the latest breakoff in negotiations varied from expressions of hope to warnings of careers ended.

The strike has cost both the league and its striking players nearly $275 million through seven weeks. And, according to Tom Condon of the Kansas City Chiefs, who is a member of the NFL Players Association Executive Council as well as a lawyer, it might cost "a lot of players" their careers.

"Any time, a player has to be ready to give up his career," Condon said on ABC-TV's 'Sportsbeat.' "And so, a lot of players are in that posture, that this may be the end of their careers and they want to stick it out because they feel that we deserve a fair agreement."

TO GET ANY type of agreement, Baltimore Colts player rep Mike Ozdowski said, "one side or the other is going to have to give. I don't think the talks have reached a stalemate."

But Mike Lynn, general manager of the Minnesota Vikings, wasn't so optimistic. He called the current impasse "the grimmest it's ever been with the negotiators and the mediators packing up and leaving. Lynn added that the next two or three days would be crucial to the fate of the 1982 season.

It was Lynn's estimation that the strike was costing the Vikings about $1 million a week. It's hurting the three television networks which broadcast NFL games because substitute programming has not drawn the kind of high ratings the NFL attracts. Cities where games are scheduled are losing an estimated $2 million a week in hotel and restaurant revenue and concessionaires are losing an additional $2 million a week.

Pasadena, Calif., which is to host the Super Bowl on Jan. 30, already has committed a substantial amount of money to fixing up the Rose Bowl.

"We have stepped up our five-year plan and gone ahead with $5 million worth of improvements at the Rose Bowl and surrounding area," Mayor Loretta Glickman said. "This was done in anticipation of revenue from the Super Bowl game."

THE MONETARY losses become almost staggering when you add in an uncounted fortune in ancillary sales for the league of NFL products — footballs, pennants, dolls, clothing, etc.

Still, neither NBC or ABC seem willing to shuffle their programming lineup if the strike is settled and the season extended beyond Jan. 30.

"We have commitments," said Arthur Watson, president of NBC Sports, which is supposed to televise the Super Bowl and has lined up advertisers for the game at $385,000 per 30-second spot. "The advertisers are an important part of this relationship."

"If the season is extended, it creates some rather difficult problems," said ABC Senior Vice President Jim Spence. Many of those problems involve non-sports programming for ABC, which telecasts an NFL game each Monday night.

Some people aren't exactly crushed over the lack of pro football action, be it on Sunday afternoon or Monday night.

"I miss it, no doubt," said Sydney Hankoff, a 65-year old resident of Baltimore and a Colts' fan. "But when you come down to it, there are more important things in life."

HANKOFF SAID that customers at the convenience store where he works "aren't exactly moping in their beer."

SW Texas State captures third straight LSC title

By The Associated Press

Southwest Texas State has assured itself of no worse than a tie for its third consecutive Lone Star Conference football crown.

SWTSU, No. 1-ranked team in NCAA Division II, blasted Angelo State 42-10 before 16,200 fans who were jammed into Bobcat Stadium in San Marcus.

The 'Cats tied a school record with their 12th consecutive victory.

They intercepted six Angelo State passes with cornerback David Glasco claiming three of them.

SWT is now 9-0 and 5-0 in LSC play. Angelo State, East Texas and Abilene Christian are two games behind the Bobcats with two games to play.

In other LSC games, East Texas gained a school record 627 yards in ripping Texas A&I University 37-22; Abilene Christian trampled Sam Houston State 36-10, and S.F. Austin throttled Howard Payne 27-10.

East Texas gained 265 yards rushing and 362 passing. Quarterback Kyle Mackey completed 17 of 31 passes for 295 yards. He threw two touchdown passes before suffering a knee injury late in the fourth quarter.

Running back Ricky Dirks gained 145 yards rushing and caught four passes for another 122 yards.

Anthony Thomas rushed for 184 yards on 27 carries to pace ACU by Sam Houston.

West Virginia steel men buck industry trend with mini-mill

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — In an age when the U.S. steel industry is in full retreat, Bob Bunting and Carl Calloway are going in the opposite direction — running a "mini-mill" they say is about to show a profit after only 10 weeks of operation.

The men are the principal operating officers of Steel of West Virginia, Inc., a 235-employee mill that converts scrap into specialty items for a select but lucrative market.

Six months ago Calloway was a recently retired accountant who had no idea he would be trying to help run a steel mill.

"I had never been in the mill before," he said last week. "And I only had a slight acquaintance with Bob."

Back then, Bunting was the local plant manager for Connors Steel, a division of the Pittsburgh-based H.K. Porter Co. As the man who ran the day-to-day operations of the Huntington facility, he sensed H.K. Porter was about to close the mill.

"Bob called me one day last April and I thought he wanted to set up a golf game," Calloway said. "But it wasn't about golf; he wanted to have lunch. And when we got together he said, 'I want you to help me buy the Connors Steel plant.'"

After some thought, Calloway said yes.

"I'm sure that we'll show a profit for October," said Bunting, the president of the operation. Calloway, the vice president and the man who's good with figures, doesn't disagree.

Neither was willing to say how much money they would make. They did say, however, that the business is on schedule and they are confident Steel of West Virginia and its employees has a secure future.

How can a small mill in southern West Virginia make money when much of the steel industry is in trouble?

"There are several reasons," said Bunting, who grew up in a Pennsylvania steel town. "For one thing, we're very competitive in tooling costs, and we also have an experienced work force that knows how to produce."

For another, he said, the company concentrates on specialty items — such as lightweight I-beams for the trucking and mobile home industries, and track rail for coal mines — that haven't particularly interested the steel giants in the past.

"There are two kinds of mills," Bunting said. "There are integrated mills, which make steel from iron ore, and mini-mills that use scrap. Well, we're one of some 50 mini-mills operating in this country today. And, for the market we specialize in, we have relatively few competitors, either here or abroad."

That's a major reason why Bunting was willing to mortgage his home to help back the venture, and why Calloway was willing to plow tens of thousand of his own dollars into the plant.

They, and 15 other local investors, with the help of eight Huntington bankers and the governor's office, put together the $3 million purchase package.

"There are 17 or 18 investors who own 15 shares," Calloway said. "Bob and I each own one of these 15 shares."

Both men play down the concept of ownership and don't like to talk about labor and management.

"We don't view it in those terms," Bunting said. "This is a cooperative effort that stresses teamwork."

He said the plant is being run much differently than when it shut down at the end of July, with more than 600 people on the payroll. When it reopened in mid-August, there were some 400 fewer workers, and many of those in Steelworkers Local 37 were making far less than they had a few weeks earlier.

However, as union officials pointed out, some of the men did have jobs, and the mill was still open.

"It's no secret that we wanted to reopen as a non-union operation," Bunting said. "That wasn't in the cards, however. But we have a tremendous cooperative spirit here now and, while I don't mean to say anything against unions, it's as if we don't have a union."

And, no bosses.

"Everybody is on salary here yet we have almost no absenteeism," he said. "It's rare if we have two people off at the same time. And if we do, those who are off the job know that their teammates are having to pick up the slack, because we don't call anybody in to replace them."

"The lines between labor and management were drawn too rigidly" when Connors ran the plant, he said. "Now, however, everybody's involved in the process. This is the way we operate."

The two men predict that this is the way other U.S. steel mills, those who want to survive, will be operating before too long.

Worried S&L officials lobbying federal regulators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan officials, worried about losing money in savings accounts that pay low interest, are urging federal regulators to require a minimum of at least $2,500 in a new high-interest account mandated by Congress.

The officials have joined other groups in lobbying federal regulators who are scheduled to meet Nov. 15 to decide its features.

Congress passed a bill this year ordering regulators to create the account so that banks and savings and loans could be more competitive with the money market mutual funds which hold $230 billion. The account, Congress said, should be "directly equivalent to and competitive" with the funds.

The account will be free of an interest rate ceiling. No minimum balance was set in the legislation, although legislators suggested it be no more than $5,000.

Some, including an S&L regulator, want the institutions left to decide for themselves the entry fee. But the financially strapped S&L industry is worried that too small a minimum will draw money from low-paying passbook accounts and boost its costs.

Money market funds, concerned the new account might offer unfair competition, say no minimum balance requirement should be imposed by regulators. But they want the interest rate on the account pegged to a market rate, such as three-month Treasury bills.

They also question whether the new account should be given federal deposit insurance, contending that an unrestricted account could put the insurance funds at risk.

Banks and S&Ls, however, feel the federal insurance, provided up to $100,000 per depositor, will give them an edge in luring back money they've lost to the funds. The funds don't carry that insurance, although the Investment Company Institute, which represents some 700 of them, hinted recently it might be looking into some type of an insurance program.

While other features of the account must be decided by the regulators, debate seems sharpest over the amount of money investors should be required to make for an opening deposit.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations, which represents about 4,000 savings and loans, is urging an initial minimum of from $2,500 to $5,000 to protect S&Ls from large shifts of money from passbook accounts. Savers earn interest of 5½ percent on those accounts at savings and loans, and 5¼ percent at banks.

If a lower initial balance were set, institutions would have to pay a higher rate of interest on more accounts, the S&L officials said. "For savings associations, this is a matter of current concern, given the poor earnings of most associations."

But their competitors, bankers, contend that no matter the minimum set, the money market funds will lower their entry fees.

"It is important to emphasize that the initial investment requirements of the money funds cluster around $1,000, and that the money funds will certainly undercut any minimum," said the American Bankers Association, which has a membership of some 13,000 banks.

The association doesn't recommend a set minimum, noting some bankers suggest entry levels of $1,000 to $2,500.

Rather, it calls on the regulators to "work to free" the institutions from imposed minimums.

He said in an October letter to Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, chairman of the regulatory panel that will make the final decision, the account could lose "substantial attractiveness and marketability" if a minimum deposit were set by the government.

But Regan told a group of bankers, also last month, that the panel "will put a minimum (on the account). ... It seems to be coalescing around $5,000 but that's not a certainty."

Under the legislation, savers will be allowed to write up to three checks and authorize three automatic transfers a month on the account.

The account is to be authorized by Dec. 15.

Foreclosure rate increases

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The number of home mortgage foreclosures in California has soared 165 percent this year, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

Some experts, however, said the foreclosures do not signal a crisis because most of the losses are occurring among real estate speculators.

A survey by the Times found that foreclosures in 40 counties jumped to 17,549 in the first eight months of 1982, up from 6,623 for the corresponding period in 1981. In Los Angeles, foreclosures rose from 1,682 to 4,624, and in Orange County from 350 to 1,251.

The number of California property owners behind in their mortgage payments is at an all-time high, the study said.

"Until this recession is resolved, we're looking forward to more defaults and more foreclosures," said Joel Singer, director of research for the California Association of Realtors.

Statewide, the percentage of those whose property was auctioned because of foreclosure rose from 8 percent in the first eight months of 1981 to 15 percent this year, said foreclosure specialist Hal De Long of Santa Ana. An unknown number of people filed for bankruptcy to forestall such sales, he said.

Unemployment, slow economic growth, declining real estate values and balloon payments from unusual home financing plans have spurred the increase in foreclosures, real estate experts said.

The percentage of properties in which foreclosures occur is still less than 1 percent of all housing owned, said Kenneth T. Rosen, chairman of the Center for Real Estate and Urban Economics at the University of California, Berkeley.

The situation, he said, is "not a crisis," but it is "a disturbing sign of how serious the (state of the) economy is."

Another expert called the rise in foreclosures "not particularly serious," saying that the increases are occurring mostly among speculators who once could sell homes profitably to meet debts, but now find the market soft.

"I don't deny people are having problems but there's not a widespread situation of people losing ther homes," said Fred Case, professor of real estate at UCLA's Graduate School of Management. "It's more the gamblers losing their homes."

New study profiles women in senior managment

By SALLY KORIS
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Who are the women occupying senior offices in American corporate suites? What are their backgrounds? What obstacles have they faced on the way to the top? What sacrifices have they made? How much do they earn?

Korn/Ferry International, an executive search firm, and the University of California's Graduate School of Management set out to find some answers. In a survey released last week, they painted a composite picture of ambitious women who averaged 46 years of age, $92,000 in annual income, vice president in title and likely as not single — but, if married, are both the main breadwinner and homemaker for the family.

"We did a survey profiling corporate executives three years ago," explained Lester Korn, chairman of Korn/Ferry. "At that point, women were not quite in the senior management ranks, but they were one step away. We concluded that now was a good time to see what kind of strikes have been made."

They surveyed 600 women holding vice presidential or higher positions in Fortune Magazine's top 1,000 industrial concerns and also surveyed 300 of the largest companies in specialized areas. The survey yielded some fairly predictable results from the half of the women who responded, but its detailing of the lonely life led by many women at the top was somewhat surprising.

These women overwhelmingly attributed their successes to ambition, drive and a willingness to take risks, but added that hard work, persistence and being at the right place at the right time had a great deal to do with achievement.

Most of the women surveyed were extremely ambitious — much more so than their male counterparts. Some 76 percent said they aspire to a higher position, while only 33 percent of senior men executives surveyed by Korn/Ferry three years ago said they desired a higher post.

The study also reveals that women are willing to do exactly what men have always done to get the job done: work long hours (most put in about 53 hours a week), travel as necessary, relocate and accept challenging and risky assignments.

Some 34 percent of the women began their careers in managerial capacities and another 34 percent began in clerical and secretarial positions. Almost 30 percent of the women now work in general management and 16 percent are in marketing-sales, dashing the old stereotype that women executives are predominantly in personnel, legal and other non-line functions.

While women executives publicly minimize gender as an obstacle to success, in the privacy afforded by the survey, 40 percent cited "being a woman" as the greatest obstacle to their success. "Lack of confidence" came in a poor second with 11 percent of the vote.

But Patricia Katsky, director of the management Field Study Program at UCLA, says the gender issue should be taken seriously. "The kind of women who are public figures will never say they've been held back by the male-dominated world," says Katsky. "But the women surveyed here haven't sought out publicity, and so their answers are much more representative and carry more weight."

The survey also revealed that most of the women were the first-born child, grew up in an urban setting in the Northeast and identified more with their fathers while growing up. Most are white, Protestant, drink moderately, but never smoke or take tranquilizers.

Some 52 percent of the respondents are unmarried; 28 percent never married, 17 percent are divorced. Of those who divorced, more than half blamed it on their careers. The percentage of women who are married is relatively small compared to male counterparts: Against 94.6 percent of the males, only 40 percent of the women were married. And 61 percent have no children.

Competition lowers prices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Competition between self-serve gas stations and dealers that offer discounts for cash is causing prices to drop, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

A survey Nov. 5 showed the average price for all grades of gasoline was $1.25, down from $1.26 on Oct. 22, said Lundberg, who publishes the weekly Lundberg Letter on industry trends.

"Cash discounting over the past month has been the major contributing factor in bringing the national overall price of gasoline down," Lundberg said in a telephone interview.

Four major gas companies — Mobil, Amoco, Chevron and Exxon — have offered lower prices to customers paying with cash rather than credit cards following Arco's dissolution of its credit card program in April and the subsequent lowering of its prices.

"Cash discount islands are in fact offering a lower average price than the self-service islands are offering," Lundberg said.

Decreased gasoline demand and continued world overproduction has forced gas prices down. Gas wars for the lowest pump price are also contributing to bargain prices, he noted.

Lundberg said the trend is likely to continue with softening oil prices on the world market.

In several cities across the country, cash-only islands had an average price 3 to 4 cents lower than self-service islands. The self-service islands may accept cash or credit cards, and thus do not offer the extra discount that accompany cash-only purchases.

In Los Angeles; San Diego; San Francisco; Portland, Ore., and Phoenix, Ariz., the difference was 5 cents. And in Reno, Nev., motorists could pay cash and get gas for 9.7 cents less than they would if they paid with a credit card at self-serve islands.

Overall, self-service gasoline was 3½ cents cheaper than full service in 1977. Today that gap is 9 cents, Lundberg said.

Lundberg speculated that the price war is making the cheapest gas, leaded regular, so attractive that motorists whose cars require the more expensive premium unleaded may be switching grades despite potential damage to their vehicles.

In his most recent survey, average prices for leaded gasoline ranged from $1.16 per gallon for regular grades at self-serve stations to $1.45 for premium grades at full-service pumps.

Since July, when gas prices were the highest they have been this year, the overall price of gas has dropped 4½ cents, Lundberg said, and prices Nov. 5 were down 6½ cents since the end of last year.

Retailers optimistic about Christmas sales upturn

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post
News Service

Despite continuing high unemployment and a seeming reluctance by consumers to spend the nation out of recession, retailers across the country are guardedly optimistic about the prospects for a slight sales upturn with the Christmas season.

The improvement, however, will be far from spectacular, they concede, particularly in California, Texas and Florida, where fourth-quarter sales are not expected to match the projected 5 percent to 7 percent rise in sales nationally. Sales in the first nine months rose 1 percent to 2.5 percent.

Walter F. Loeb, a retail analyst with Morgan Stanley in New York, said sales in these Sun Belt states will rise only 3 percent to 5 percent because of delayed effects of the recession, high unemployment and the recent Mexican peso devaluation which has hurt tourism in the three states.

And the sales increases are not expected to come without considerable and aggressive price promotion. Already, some retailers have resorted to steeper price cuts than a year ago in their seasonal November promotions.

Whether the improved sales crystallize depends on how ready, willing and able consumers are to turn out for holiday shopping. So far, there is little indication as to the willingness of consumers to return to old, free-spending habits.

Fabian Linden of the Consumer Research Center of the Conference Board, a nonprofit organization sponsored by business, said preliminary readings from the board's monthly consumer survey suggest that consumer confidence was down again in October.

"The main reason was unemployment," the center said. "Not only is the level of unemployment so distressing, but the fact it has been so high so long. Over the past 12 months, unemployment has been consistently above 9 percent."

"We can't put our finger on why the consumer is holding back," said Franklin Simon.

Auto supply tops ideal level

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic new-car stockpiles remained at a 69-day supply at the end of October, unchanged from the month before, Ward's Automotive Reports said today.

Inventories declined overall, but Ward's said that, based on monthly selling patterns, the five U.S. automakers still had enough cars on hand to last them 69 days. A 60-day supply is considered ideal.

The total industry stockpile of just under 1.3 million cars on Oct. 31 was down from 1.34 million at the end of September, and declined from 1.48 million cars, or an 81-day supply, at the end of October last year, Ward's said.

Dealers of Chrysler Corp., which has been struck by Candian workers, led the industry declines with a 64-day supply, down from an 88-day inventory on Sept. 30, while General Motors Corp. had a 69-day supply and Ford Motor Co. had a 71-day stockpile, the publication said.

Ward's said American Motors Co.'s inventory rose from a 71-day supply to 80 days at month's end, but Volkswagen of America Inc. reduced its auto stockpile from 70 days to a 65-day supply.

For some, nostalgia means flipping on the television set to find a greasy-haired character in white socks and a leather jacket, one arm akimbo and a thumb jerked skyward.

Others need only rummage through a dusty trunk to shake memories from an old straw hat and a racoon coat.

But for members of the Society for Creative Anachronism, who long wistfully for history's Middle Ages, no such memories exist. Instead, they take pleasure from the past by re-creating a time when lords fought valiantly for their ladies and a man's honor was as staunch as his broadsword.

Occasionally described as the world's longest-running costume party, SCA has blossomed from a May 1, 1966, backyard get-together in Berkeley, Calif., into an international organization numbering more than 5,000 members.

Sunday afternoon, on the sun-speckled shores of Wadley-Barron-Lake, loyal subjects of the Permian Basin's SCA branch — the incipient Shire of Tir nam Dubh Loch — gathered for a hearty round of fighter, dance and theater practice.

LADIES IN 11th century gowns mingled with warriors in clinking chain mail armor. An occasional herald cry, "Hear ye, me lords and ladies...," could be heard above the bustle.

Surveying the scene from a comfortable perch was Tamhas MacPharlain of Argyle, the shire's seneschal, or leader. In the "mundane" world, a term members use to describe the world outside of SCA events, MacPharlain is known as Jack Haley of Odessa, second-ranking security official at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

Having been a SCA member for a few years, MacPharlain claimed the land from Monahans to Big Spring early this year and took command of the fledgling Permian Basin shire.

He said the shire's name, derived from the region's rich oil reserves, becomes "Land of the Black Lake" when translated from Medieval Scottish into "mundane" English. Only half in jest, MacPharlain said the shire is now researching "The Legend of the Loch Dubh Monster," more commonly known as the oil patch pump jack.

UPON JOINING SCA, members research and claim an imaginary Middle Age "persona," including a name, ancestry, hobbies and skills. Included in the local shire, for example, are a jester, a seamstress, a Samurai warrior, an artist, a calligrapher, armor craftsmen, some Vikings and several would-be knights, known generally as fighters.

MacPharlain said the shire is eager to enlarge its membership, and will be conducting several events and demonstrations in the near future. An arts and science exhibition and Faoldach Feast will be held Dec. 4 in Odessa.

Members may participate in many SCA events each year, ranging from shire feasts and practices to kingdom-wide crown tournaments, where the winner of a hand-to-hand combat tournament is named king — or queen. A crown tournament for the Kingdom of Ansteorra (Texas and Oklahoma) will commence Nov. 13 in Dallas.

SCA bills itself as a non-profit, educational organization dedicated to researching and re-creating Medieval customs, combat and courtesy. MacPharlain, a 12th century Scot of Viking descent, said SCA is all that, and loads of fun as well.

"IT'S A WAY of just living your fantasy," he said. "There's a lot of people that want to be a knight in shining armor. There's a lot of ladies that have been waiting for a knight in shining armor."

Carl Knappe, who assumes the persona of Fredic Kamphfer, a Tuetonic crusader, and is one of a handful of Midlanders in the shire, said a SCA event can be a flight to fantasy. "Just for that short time, you think, 'Hey, I've escaped from," as SCA says, "the mundane world,' " he said.

Tom Floyd, an Odessan, acts as the shire's Knight Marshal, the chief referee for hand-to-hand combat, when he assumes his persona as Owain Llwyd. His wife, Brenda (Edain Llwyd), sews many of the costumes worn by inhabitants of the shire. Their two sons, 9-year-old William (William Llwyd) and 4-year-old Arthur (Earendil Llwyd), scurried about Sunday, staying safely beyond the reach of swinging swords as two helmeted fighters battled with ratan weapons.

A compressor mechanic in the "mundane," Llwyd said he's long been interested in history and war games. Once he's attained the proper mix of skills — including fighting, chess, dancing and general knowledge of matters Medieval — required for knighthood, Llwyd said his sons will become his squires and begin their training for knighthood — a high honor in SCA's "Known World."

"IT'S JUST A nice way to spend a Sunday," said Llwyd. "One of the few days I'm off, ever, is Sunday. I look forward to it."

"It's something we can do together, the whole family," said his wife, Edain, who holds down two, "mundane" jobs. "Just getting away from the humdrum world of today. We have a lot of fun, everyone here is nice. It's just exciting, and I really do like it.

"When I was a little girl, I always dressed up. I can dress up now being a big girl, and not think anything about it," she said, chuckling. "It's kind of a release from the 'mundane' world. You can be what you've always wanted to be."

Several members said one of SCA's most appealing traits is its seeming ablity to attract people of high honor and abundant good humor.

"I'm in it personally for the fighting, the honor and the trust you can have in these other people," said Samuel de Noce, 20-year-old Sam Galindo of Odessa.

MacPharlain recalled one tournament when a merchant was confronted by a lord who wished to make a purchase, but had apparently left his coin pouch in another tunic back in a distant shire. Nonetheless, the merchant gave the man the item in question, trusting that payment would be quickly forthcoming. According to MacPharlain, the merchant was not disappointed.

Because, he explained, SCA members not only attempt to re-create the Middle Ages as they were, but also "as they should have been."

Ballistics expert testifies at trial

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An FBI ballistics expert testified today that the bullet that killed U.S. District Judge John. H. Wood Jr. is the same kind of ammunition used in high-powered Weatherby Mark V hunting rifles.

Special agent Robert Sibert told the jury in the trial of three people charged in connection with Wood's death that he concluded from examining seven copper fragments and 11 lead fragments, that the bullet that tore into Wood's back was a .243-caliber, or a 6 mm, the kind used by sportsmen.

He said the fragments were consistent with a 100-grain "mushrooming" bullet fired by the .243-caliber rifle.

Sibert said a tell-tale sign that the bullet was fired from a Weatherby Mark V was the 86-thousandths-inch grooves he found on one of the fragments that a medical examiner removed from the slain judge's body. Prosecutors earlier introduced evidence that Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, 41, bought a Weatherby Mark V rifle in Dallas 12 days before Wood was killed in San Antonio on May 29, 1979.

The barrel and firing mechanism of the alleged murder weapon have never been found, but prosecutors introduced into evidence the stock of a rifle found east of Dallas. They contend the stock was part of the weapon used to kill Wood.

Wright advocates putting stop to tax-cut program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., says the Reagan administration's three-year personal income tax reduction will survive the newly-elected Congress, but House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas says he supports eliminating the third year cut.

Kemp, a long-time advocate of supply-side economics predicted on CBS' "Face the Nation" on Sunday that most new members of Congress will oppose a rollback of the 10 percent tax cut scheduled for 1983.

In last week's election, the Democrats increased their majority by 26 seats, but Kemp said he believed Americans voted to "get this country moving again."

The economy will not be stimulated by canceling the third-year tax cut, he said.

He predicted President Reagan would veto any "tinkering," and cited the example of eliminating the tax break for those with annual incomes over $50,000.

In a separate interview, however, Wright said the tax-cut program favors the rich and should be stopped now.

"It isn't working," said Wright, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press."

He said last week's election has put Democrats "in a far better position to influence policy" and eliminate the tax cut.

Wright called for a "resurgence" of the spirit of cooperation that existed between the White House and Congress during the Eisenhower administration.

Local bands rated superior

ODESSA — Bands from Midland's two high schools and one of three junior highs received superior ratings during the University Interscholastic League marching contest at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa Saturday.

Also, the Robert E. Lee High School band, along with Permian High School band, were chosen as the two outstanding bands from the district and will compete in the State Marching Contest at Memorial Stadium in Austin next Monday and Tuesday.

LHS, Midland High School and San Jacinto Junior High School bands all received "1" ratings during Saturday's competition. Other bands participating from Midland were Lee Freshman High School, Midland Freshman High School, Alamo Junior High School and Goddard Junior High School, all of which received "2" ratings.

Saturday's marching contest precedes a UIL sight-reading and a concert competition which take place in the spring. Bands which receive "1" ratings in all three contests are designated UIL Sweepstakes Bands.

The boy suffered head injuries and remained in a coma at Midland Memorial Hospital until his death Oct. 30.

The suit was filed Friday by the law firm of Torres and Shackleford on behalf of the boy's parents, Mark and Sandy Qualls of Midland.

Bank credits Houston man's account with $1 billion

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Commerce Bank gave generously to E.M. Chelette: they made him a billionaire.

The 64-year-old newspaper employee had taken a check for $1,039.52 to his bank's drive-in window. But later he found that the receipt credited him with $1,039,521,039.52.

Chelette, who works in the composing room of the Houston Post, didn't waste time. He called the bank Saturday and told them about his instanteous elevation to the ranks of the ultra-rich.

Chelette said he figured the bank would have caught the error sooner or later anyway, "because they just don't take billion-dollar deposits to the drive-in window."

He said he noticed the mistake when he started to enter the figure in his checkbook.

Richard Garcia, head teller at the branch where Chelette banks, said the bank would be more than happy to lower the amount of the deposit.

"Obviously, we have to take back the deposit slip. We'll give him another one if he will come in," Garcia said.

Asked what he would do if he actually had a billion dollars, Chelette said: "There's no telling. It's hard to even imagine that kind of money."

Procter & Gamble being sued

DALLAS (AP) — Twenty-two families are suing Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. for a total of $19.8 million for injuries they say were caused by a cloud of sulfuric acid that was spewed into their neighborhood.

The south Dallas residents say they suffered upper respiratory damage, nausea, gagging, breathing difficulty and burning eyes and throats when a Procter & Gamble plant released the cloud in November 1980.

Some said their symptoms worsened in the following weeks. The residents say company officials promised Procter & Gamble would pay their medical bills.

Lawyer Shirley Levin, who represents the families, says the company did not take care of the bills. Each of the lawsuits seeks up to $900,000 in damages.

Not your typical convention...

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
AP Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — They twirl in the living room and kick in the kitchen. They are housewives, insurance agents, truck dispatchers and civil servants with a little Cleopatra inside them, yearning to be free.

They are belly dancers.

"In America today, it's all jeans and T-shirts, but that doesn't do anything for the peacock in everybody," says Helen Noreen Mehan, a Denton, Texas, "oriental dance artist."

She recently attended a belly dance convention in Seattle called "Fantasia" with about 200 women from as far away as Alaska and Colombia, South America. They came to step out, dress up and talk shop.

They danced with veils and balanced swords and baskets on their heads. They used exotic names like "Delilah" and "Jareeda."

They shopped and they swapped business cards and broadsheets. "Belly-dancerobics ... Bellygram-matics ... notary services," read one.

Ms. Mehan danced "urban Cairo" style, popular in nightclubs and cabarets. On the side, she sold shimmer lotions, arm and leg glitter, facial rhinestones and false eyelashes.

"This isn't dress-for-success-at-the-office makeup," she said, adjusting her veil. "I try to have things you can't get at the drugstore, like this purple fingernail polish.

She started practicing belly dancing poise seven years ago, she said, by balancing a soup can on her head when she walked to the store. Now she balances a heavy brass candelabra, with candles ablaze.

Denton — a town more accustomed to mechanical bull bars than casbahs — is accustomed to Ms. Mehan by now.

Sharel Dover set up shop at the convention with headscarves, makeup kits and tassles. "Tassles cheaper by the dozen. Put 'em on your hip and give 'em a flick. Happy twirling," she told customers.

Thirty-six-year-old Kathleen "Katiyja" Gamble of Juneau, Alaska, who dispatches long-haul trucks up and down the West Coast, said: "I do a man's job all day. It's nice to be a woman by night.

"This kind of dance is what it's all about to be a woman, about being strong and being free."

Jo "Jaleila" Siangco, a 38-year-old personnel analyst for the state of Alaska in Juneau, shook her necklace. Her flowing black and orange skirt followed with a ripple. "My normal wear is business suits. I dance because I get a kick out of being somebody I'm normally not," she said.

Diane "Zanuba" Rorvick, a Seattle insurance company policy analyst who wore a snap-on nose ring, said she loved to dress up.

Su "Hamadryad" Hendrix of Juneau agreed: "Yes, it's a chance to dress up ... I've also got a bad back and it's cheaper than a chiropractor."

Maria "Marja" Bellows, a 46-year-old grandmother who teaches English at the Instituto de Meyer in Bogota, Colombia, said the belly dance confab was worth the flight to Seattle.

"I'm the only belly dancer in Bogota, and sometimes I get lonesome for my belly dancer sisters," she said.

Togged in shimmering red skirt and gold coins, Julie "Kalish" Paige, a 60-year-old Seattle housewife with five children and three grandchildren, said she lacks the discipline to do routine exercies for 10 minutes a day.

But time flies when she belly dances for an hour. "When I'm through, I feel really hepped up, peppy and ready to go," she said.

'Thin' is 'in' once again

By BARBARA SCHULER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — New York's fashion establishment seems to have decided that the best accessory a woman can have for spring, 1983, is a slender, wasp-waisted figure.

The emphasis on the body is the latest manifestation of the general paring down that started with the fall collections and is being continued with a vengeance into spring. There hasn't been so much attention paid to the waist since they laced Scarlett O'Hara into that gown, what with all the wide, wide belts on the runways.

And if designers aren't cinching you in at the middle, they'll undoubtedly figure another way to show off the body perfect — slim, hip-skimming skirts and jackets, perhaps, or bare, strapless dresses in everything from cotton pique to silk. It all adds up to another six months on the best-seller list for "Jane Fonda's Workout Book." At least.

The New York shows, which started last month , also have been marked by some notable absences. Color, for one. Bright, primary color, with a few exceptions, has taken a hiatus in many collections. It's going to be a season of neutrals, with black and white leading the pack, beige and gray tones following close behind. The season's new neutral is pink — pink so pale it's called things like "blush" and "powder" — frequently used as an accent with black or gray. Leather, for another. Designers appear to have abandoned their recent love affair with leather. Where last year they were singing the praises of leather and assuring their customers that it was, indeed, a perfect thing to wear even when it hits 80 degrees in the shade, this year they seem to be sticking to cottons and linens.

—CINCHED WAISTS. The hourglass figure lives once more. Led by the likes of Perry Ellis and Adri, New York's designers have rediscovered the waist, the tiny, tiny waist that evokes iamges of southern belles and laced corsets.

In a free-spirited collection with a Spanish theme that was a definite about-face from the sophisticated city clothes he showed for fall, Ellis went mad for wid'zng from his long, almost ankle-brushing skirts, to his short double-breasted coatdresses. If he left the belt off a skirt or a pair of pants, you can be sure the garment had a five-inch waistband.

John Anthony, in his collection for Friedricks Sport, cinched almost everything he showed with wide bands of softly colored suede, while Bill Haire (who used to design for Friedricks before he went out on his own with the fall collection) favored wide black patent belts over his body-hugging sweaters and organza evening separates.

Adri, too, went in for wide belts, calling them "Merry Widows" and showing them in leather and canvas over all sorts of those familiar cotton and linen separates. (She maintains, by the way, that unlike Scarlett's corset, they are comfortable because of vertical seams that mold to the body without bruising the ribs.)

When designers weren't cinching the waist to show it off, they were accentuating it with flounced peplums. Bill Blass translated last spring's short bubble skirt to be a bubble-shaped peplum in his organza evening gowns. Geoffrey Beene showed them in his short evening dresses, further defining the waists with pretty satin ribbons and jeweled pins, and Gloria Sachs stuck peplums on what she called her "memsahib" jackets and vests in a segment of her show inspired by the days of British Empire rule in India. Calvin Klein used them liberally in his lavish satin evening designs, establishing beyond any shadow of a doubt that he no longer intends to restrict his designing to the comfortable, casual sportswear that made him famous.

—SLEEK HIPS. Girdle manufacturers may have torn up their bank notes and sent out for caviar and champagne — expensive champagne — when they got wind of what was happening for spring. A garment that doesn't call for an 18-inch waist is more than likely to call for 30-inch hips. A good many designers, among them Ralph Lauren and Donna Karan and Louis dell'Olio for Anne Klein, have based their collections on straight, body-skimming styles, minimal dressing at its best. Bill Blass presented a good many such slim styles, from his hip-hugging jackets and dresses in a brilliant checkerboard print (there's nothing neutral about this color scheme) to his black and beige velvet-trimmed suits with their nipped-in-at-the-waist jackets to his virtually cylindrical evening gowns.

Lauren, with his latest collection, has sent the cowboys and Indians back to the plains and the antique quilts back to the museums. In their stead, he offers his customers simple, straightforward clothes in black or white linen — basic wardrobe pieces lilke narrow trousers, blazers and simple dresses. Lest anyone doubt Lauren's seriousness in this matter, it should be noted that the designer, who generally works his shows in well-worn blue jeans and a blue work-shirt, appeared at this event in a navy pin-stripped suit.

Sleek and sophisticated in a somewhat softer way, the Anne Klein collection features slim skirts, jackets and sweaters in combinations of black and ivory, along with dresses and evening pajamas in silk jacquard prints. Catherine Hipp's more structured collection also emphasized the slim silhouette as did Diane Von Vurstenberg's, though in far more sensuous manifestations. And Norma Kamali, whose customers have gotten used to being able to hide their figure flaws in all those sweats, has also gotten body-conscious this season with a group of blue denim separates.

DEAR ABBY

Woman loses mind as husband loses hearing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Miserable," whose husband refuses to wear his hearing aid and says he hears "just fine," shows that you have no idea what it's like to live with someone who has a hearing problem. You said, "Quit nagging him. Maybe he's trying to tune you out. One of the most precious rights a person has is the right to be left alone."

My husband also claims he hears "just fine" — that everyone else mumbles. Meanwhile he turns the TV volume up so high, the rest of the family is forced to leave the room.

In social situations he asks me to repeat everything that's being said. Consequently, I miss half the conversation because I'm busy yelling in his ear. I could go on and on.

I think you owe that woman an apology, Abby. — ANOTHER MISERABLE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I owe her more than that. I owe her a more helpful answer, and here it is:

"Dear Miserable: Go right on nagging your husband until he consults an audiologist who will evaluate his hearing disorder and help him correct it medically, surgically or with a hearing aid."

Anyone who wants up-to-date information about hearing loss and available hearing help should write to: Hearing, Box 1840, Washington, D.C. 10013. The information is free, but please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: With Christmas coming soon, our problem must be faced, and we don't know how to handle it. To lay it right on the line, with the economy the way it is, my husband and I can't afford to send Christmas gifts this year. (To tell you the truth, we still owe for last year's Christmas gifts.)

We don't want anybody to give us gifts this year because we can't afford to give any. But how do you tell people that, Abby? — OVERDRAWN IN DETROIT

DEAR OVERDRAWN: Come Thanksgiving, write a note saying, "We are thankful for folks with whom we can be honest. We're not in a position to send Christmas gifts this year, nor do we expect gifts. Please accept our love and sincere good wishes for a joyous and blessed holiday."

DEAR ABBY: My cousin is getting married for the second time. At her bridal shower she passed around a box of envelopes and asked everyone to address an envelope to herself. She said they were for thank-you notes.

I've never heard of this before, have you? What do you think of my cousin's behavior? — APPALLED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR APPALLED: I am appalled, too. I'm all for doing things the easy way, but I think your cousin overdid it.

Former President Richard Nixon talks to a well-wisher upon his arrival at a Washington hotel Saturday evening where a reunion of his former associates was held. The affair was organized by Ronald Walker, Nixon's chief advance man during the White House era.

Nixon promotes new book, offers advice on foreign, domestic policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon, on the talk show circuit to promote a new book, has offered some pointers on foreign and domestic policy to the Reagan administration.

The 37th president of the United States, the nation's only chief executive to resign from office, aired his opinions in an interview broadcast over the weekend on the Cable News Network while discussing his latest book, "Leaders."

On the Middle East, Nixon sharply criticized Israel's decision to increase its settlements on the West Bank.

"Those settlements are inconsistent with (U.N.) Resolution 242," he said. "They're inconsistent with the whole spirit of the whole Camp David business...They cannot be tolerated...

"In the interest of Israel and their future, we've got to do something very positive and very direct with regard to Begin on this particular issue," said Nixon, although he did not say what steps he would take if he were still president.

"He's (Begin) either got to knock that off or he risks, in my view, the all-out support that the U.S. has always provided for them when they needed it," the former president said.

On Saturday night, Nixon also attended a party in honor of the 10th anniversary this week of Nixon's re-election, the biggest presidential electoral vote landslide in American history.

In attendance: Nixon's former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, former attorney general John Mitchell, former press secretary Ron Ziegler and counselor Charles Colson, among others.

The former president, who left office in disgrace eight years ago during the Watergate scandal, said Reagan should stick with the third year of the tax cut, scheduled for next summer.

But Nixon also urged Reagan to cut defense spending.

"You can cut a lot of fat off, you can save billions of dollars, and it should be done," said Nixon, "and (Defense Secretary Caspar) Weinberger should bite that bullet rather than having it forced on him."

However, Nixon cautioned that only "fat" should be trimmed from defense spending. "You cannot cut the muscle at a time that (Soviet President Leonoid) Brezhnev is taking a very belligerent tone," he said.

Turning to the election, Nixon downplayed Democratic gains scored last Tuesday.

"It was a defeat. We would have preferred that it had been better. But with 10 percent unemployment, the Democrats expected, and perhaps rightfully so, that they would be having a great victory. But instead of getting a knockout, all they got was a split decision."

And he predicted that Reagan will run and win re-election to a second term in 1984.

CT scan doesn't unravel death secret of mummy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 20th century X-ray machine costing $1.2 million couldn't unravel the death secret of Wenuhotep, a 2,500-year-old Egyptian mummy.

The corpse was placed in Methodist Hospital's temperature-controlled mobile scanner by officials of the Indianapolis Children's Museum who hoped to determine a cause of death for the woman wrapped in a linen shroud.

Wenuhotep is on loan from the Oriental Institute of Chicago.

"They treated her like she was worth a million dollars," said David L. Brown, a hospital radiologist who conduct the CT — computerized tomography scan.

Four packets in which body organs were embalmed were found by the X-ray Sunday and Brown also discovered that the brain and heart were missing.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, November 9, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Florida's Governor Donald Graham, golf's Tom Weiskopf, actor Lou (the "Hulk") Ferrigno, singer Mary Travers and former U.S. Ambassador and Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: St. Louis Cardinals manager "Whitey" Herzog and Hall of Fame pitcher-turned coach Bob Gibson. Be yourself in the coming year and you will find greater success. Love brings adventure, and perhaps even a trip to the altar. Those in science or medicine reap special rewards. Finding practical applications for clever ideas boosts your income. Be bold! The sky is the limit for those who can adapt to change.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take responsibility for your own mistakes, but stop covering up for someone who will never change. If others make false statements present the facts. Loyal employees come to your aid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your track record over many years wins you a surprise appointment. Your loved ones are delighted! Hedge on an investment until you have more information on the company or stock.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Relatives at a distance affect a decision you make today. Students should strive for excellence. Pay close attention to what a friends tells you about a ticklish situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not neglect your family and social responsibilities just to take on extra work assignments. A scholarship that once eluded a student could now become available.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find marriage requires greater effort than you anticipated. Give it your best! You like to have your cake and eat it too. Prove that you can make mature decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep the home fires burning for children who may be away for the first time. Check appointment times. Promptness is essential if you want that order or job.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A postponed meeting produces different participants, giving you an advantage. Do your homework and you save money. Changing jobs is not the answer for loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Salespeople have a big week! Ask for payment in advance if you are concerned about a customer's ability to pay. Tension is reduced when a couple talks things out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make a phone call before starting out for an appointment. Member of opposite sex provides a point of view you had not considered. Let him or her share in your success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The career planning you did early this year begins to pay off. Do not let someone rush you into a real estate venture. The risks may be too great.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speak your mind and a misunderstanding will be quickly cleared up. You need the cooperation of your coworkers. Someone may be trying to deceive you in business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A part-time job may be the answer for a homemaker who needs additional income. Avoid competing directly with mate lest romance suffer. Loved one needs your understanding.

What action do you take?
A.—Although partner has shown a maximum no trump with heart support, he has denied the ace of spades—with that card he would have cue-bid three spades rather than four clubs. But partner might have the king of spades, in which case a small slam is still possible. You can convey this to partner by bidding five hearts. That confirms that you have two fast spade losers, and allows him to make the next move.

1 ♡	4 ◇	?

What do you bid now?
A.—East's barrage has made a scientific auction impossible. You might ask for aces, but will it really help you to discover that partner has one ace—or, for that matter, two aces? We would simply bid six hearts—a contract that should depend on no more than a finesse, and could be cold. Sometimes you simply have to give up on a grand slam.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK873 ♡A5 ◇Q1073 ♣K9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Game is a distinct possibility, but showing your second suit is not the way to make your move. Since half of your strength is in your short suits, we feel that a raise to two no trump is the most descriptive game try.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ4 ♡AJ632 ◇85 ♣94
What is your opening bid?
A.—This is one of those rare occasions where you should make an unnatural bid. Open one spade. You want to show both suits, and if you choose one heart and partner bids one no trump or two of a minor, you are not strong enough to reverse into spades. Opening one spade will provide an easy rebid in hearts.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠72 ♡K83 ◇85 ♣AQ9764
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♡	2 ♠*	?

What do you bid now?
A.—We are going to ask you to do something that doesn't come easily to most bridge players—you must suppress your six-card suit. If you respond three clubs, you would almost surely catapult your side to game, and your hand isn't good enough for that. Bid three hearts. If partner has anything extra, you will hear from him again.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠62 ♡AJ8 ◇K10954 ♣KJ5
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Double. In the passout seat, you have adequate values for this action—in fact, you could have somewhat less. The double is superior to a balancing bid of two diamonds because it gives partner several options, including the possibility of passing for penalties should he have length and strength in the enemy suit.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Olivier thinks wife's mental illness came from identifying with character

NEW YORK (AP) — Lord Laurence Olivier thinks his former wife, Vivien Leigh, may have become mentally ill because she identified too strongly with the promiscuous Blanche Dubois, whom she portrayed in the film version of "A Streetcar Named Desire," Time magazine says.

L. Olivier

Vivien Leigh

In an interview in London appearing in the Nov. 15 issue of Time, Olivier discusses his life and his recently published autobiography, "Confessions of An Actor, Laurence Olivier."

Olivier told Time, "My late wife Vivien was too much affected by the parts she played and if she got ill, which she certainly did, dreadfully ill, it had a great deal to do with playing Blanche DuBois, being ill in the same way."

Part of the problem, he writes in his autobiography, might have been his failure to satisfy her sexual demands. Olivier says he finally told Miss Leigh that an athlete on stage cannot always be an athlete in bed.

The 75-year-old actor told the magazine, "I can't tell you why I stayed with her so many years. I did. I didn't know what else to do, but to stay along and suffer."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley presented a key to the city to Italy's Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini as the foreign leader wrapped up a four-day visit to Southern California.

Speaking to an Italian-American organization at a hotel here Sunday, Spadolini said there was a need for "fresh impetus to the solidarity between the two shores of the Atlantic."

He also stressed the industrial accomplishments of post-war Italy, saying:

"Rarely is the idea of Italy associated with the formidable progress this country has made since the war, going from an essentially agricultural to a highly industrialized economy."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roy Acuff, the "king of country music," says he's been so lonely since his wife died last year that he has decided to live at Opryland USA to be closer to his fans.

Roy Acuff

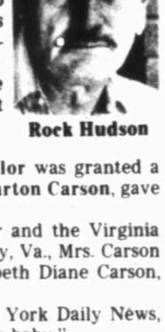

"I'm leading a very lonely life in a big house all by myself," Acuff, 79, said Saturday. "Now I'll be some place where there'll be people. I want to straighten out my life. It'll help to get me out of this loneliness I live in."

Acuff already spends much of his time greeting visitors to Opryland, the suburban Nashville entertainment complex where the Grand Ole Opry House is located. A small home is being built for him near the Roy Acuff Music Hall, a museum in the park that contains Acuff's extensive collection of instruments and memorabilia.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Rock Hudson says too much work, overindulgence and too little exercise made him "ripe for trouble" before he underwent coronary bypass surgery a year ago, but now he's back in shape.

Rock Hudson

In an interview in the Nov. 15 edition of People magazine, Hudson, 57, said, "I was being my usual compulsive self, too wrapped up in my work, worrying, overeating, smoking and drinking too much, not getting enough exercise. I was over 50 and ripe for trouble."

He said he started feeling chest pains and checked into Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, where tests revealed he had severe coronary artery blockage, prompting the surgery in November 1981.

Now, the 6-foot-4 actor says, he's back to 200 pounds, the same as when he was 30, "except I had a 29-inch waist then and now it's 34...Basically I just feel lots better."

NEW YORK (AP) — On the same day Elizabeth Taylor was granted a divorce from Sen. John Warner, her daughter, Maria Burton Carson, gave birth to the actress's third grandchild.

Just before midnight Friday, hours after Miss Taylor and the Virginia Republican were granted the divorce in Fauquier County, Va., Mrs. Carson gave birth to an 8-pound, 10½-ounce girl named Elizabeth Diane Carson, according to the father, talent agent Steve Carson.

Upon hearing of the birth, Miss Taylor told the New York Daily News, "That's wonderful. I'm very thrilled. I can't wait to see the baby."

Magazine says De Lorean investigated for tax fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maverick automaker John Z. De Lorean faces a widening investigation into possible tax fraud and allegedly used stock he did not own in an attempt to buy cocaine, according to published reports today.

The published reports also said De Lorean had been criticized by some company officials for what they considered to be attempts to use De Lorean Motor Co. for private investments. They also said some of De Lorean's co-workers did not believe he intended to use money from the drug deal to save his troubled company.

De Lorean, free on $10 million bond, is scheduled to be arraigned in Los Angeles today on a federal indictment charging him with cocaine trafficking and racketeering. Also being arraigned were the two other men indicted with De Lorean.

De Lorean's attorney, Joseph Ball, said his client would plead innocent to the charges. The defense lawyer is expected to argue that federal agents illegally entrapped De Lorean.

IN AN EFFORT to raise money, De Lorean turned over 100 percent of the stock in De Lorean to a federal agent posing as a crooked bank officer, even though he owned only 84 percent of the stock, The New York Times said.

"De Lorean was conning the con men," the newspaper quoted C. Richard Brown, a vice president of De Lorean's company before he was fired last March.

Automotive News, an auto industry trade journal, said today that the Internal Revenue Service, which had been conducting a routine audit of De Lorean's tax returns, has expanded its investigation to include possible tax fraud.

In its copyright story, Automotive News said the IRS has escalated its investigation of De Lorean's tax returns into what could result in a grand jury investigation.

The IRS is trying to "establish an audit trail" of $17 million paid to De Lorean Research Limited Partnership, a Swiss company that did development work on the De Lorean sports car, the journal reported.

DE LOREAN'S codefendants in the drug case, William Morgan Hetrick, owner of a Mojave, Calif., aviation firm, and Stephen Lee Arrington, an associate of Hetrick, are still in federal prison. Hetrick is being held on $20 million bond. Arrington's bail is set at $250,000.

The three men have been portrayed by government agents as conspirators in a plan to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine imported from South America.

De Lorean was the financial backer for the cocaine deal, which was infiltrated by federal agents, officials alleged.

The New York Times quoted a memo by former De Lorean executive William Haddad saying that De Lorean funds were being handled through "hidden Swiss bank accounts" and that at one point use of a home for company executives was being charged to the automobile project, which was being subsidized by the British government. The memo, written in 1980, warned that the purported expenditure, if discovered, could cause an uproar in Britain and lead to a personal attack on De Lorean by the Irish Republican Army, The Times said.

BROWN, ALONG with other De Lorean Motor Co. executives, said he did not believe De Lorean was trying to raise money to save his troubled auto company, The New York Times report said.

The Times reported that company officials said any money generated in the drug transaction would have been too easily traced by creditors and the British government to be used to bail out the auto company.

The Times also said the stock De Lorean put up to back the cocaine deal may not have been his to offer. Quoting official documents and former De Lorean executives, the paper said the automaker owned only 84 percent of the company's stock and there were legal restrictions against transferring the shares.

"There was no way he could do it — he knew that he couldn't do it," the paper quoted Brown as saying.

The Times also quoted former De Lorean senior accountant Harold DeWitt as saying that reports filed with the Securitis and Exchange Commission listed some private business expenditures of De Lorean's as company expenses.

MEANWHILE, THE Los Angeles Herald Examiner identified a government tipster as a prospective witness in the De Lorean case.

The newspaper said James Timothy Hoffman turned informant in 1981 while facing drug charges, and eventually was placed on probation after pleading guilty to one count of importing cocaine. Hoffman was a former employee of Hetrick's company.

The nine charges against De Lorean in the 11-count indictment include possession with intent to distribute cocaine, distribution of cocaine, unlawful use of a communication facility and interstate travel in aid of racketeering enterprises.

De Lorean was arrested Oct. 19 only hours after the British government announced it was shutting down his Belfast, Northern Ireland, manufacturing plant because of mounting debts. The company had been in receivership since February.

Clinic director says media glamorizes cocaine use

ATLANTA (AP) — The media ignores treatment of cocaine abuse and instead glamorizes it as the drug of the "beautiful rich," helping make a bad situation worse, contends a treatment expert.

And cocaine abuse is increasing faster than its use, said Dr. David E. Smith, founder and director of San Francisco's Haight Ashbury Free Medical Clinic.

The media only "glamorizes it. They never talk about recovery...it's a treatable illness."

In Atlanta last week for a symposium on psychiatry and chemical dependence, Smith said that in the 15 years of the Haight Ashbury clinic, he has seen cocaine go from taboo status to "the drug of abuse that is increasing the most."

"When we started in June 1967, we handled primarily bad acid (LSD) trips. No self-respecting person would touch cocaine. It was in the same class as heroin," he said.

And 90 percent of the middle-class professional patients come from families of alcoholics, indicating a "psycho-biological predisposition to addictive disease," Smith said.

The middle-class professionals that Smith's Cocaine Recovery Support Group sees include doctors, lawyers, psychologists and airline stewardesses.

In treating addicts, Smith finds "a lot of misinformation...Many people believe cocaine is not addicting because there's not a well-developed pattern of physical dependence.

"But cocaine addiction follows along the line of other addictive diseases," characterized by "compulsive use, loss of control or continued use despite adverse consequences."

Experts estimate that 20 million Americans have tried the drug, he said, adding that "the percentage of abuse is increasing faster than the percentage of use."

"A lot of people started off using, and now they're abusing. We see people who are able to handle snorting, but switch to freebasing" he said of the use of a concentrated form of the drug. "They get into difficulty, and they try to go back to controlled use. They can't do it.

"It's like they say about the alcoholic — one drink is too many, and 1,000 is not enough."

Smith said the clinic's program has a success rate of more than 50 percent.

Once recovery is under way, addicts must have "a positive alternative" to combat the short-term "cocaine hunger," he said.

"It's like a two-minute drill in football," he said. "You have to know what you're going to do before the situation arises."

New energy czar may have toughest job in capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald Hodel is the country's newest energy czar, but the way the Reagan administration views energy policy — energy corporal might be a more appropriate title.

Whatever the title, he may have the toughest job in Washington.

He has been picked to head an agency President Reagan has already trimmed substantially and wants to abolish altogether.

He will face a hostile Congress which delighted in raking his predecessor over the coals for perceived policy failures. The most unkind critics claim the administration doesn't even have an energy policy.

Both critics and supporters readily agree that energy policy has changed dramatically from the days when President Carter rallied the American people to conserve and develop solar and other renewable energy sources with his "moral equivalent of war" speech.

Gone is the multimillion-dollar program to ration gasoline during shortages.

Gone is the program under which the federal government regulated the thermostats in 2.8 million office buildings and stores.

Gone or trimmed substantially are government programs set up to nurture dozens of energy technologies ranging from windmills to ocean currents.

The Reagan administration has moved aggressively to get the government out of the energy business and let the marketplace work.

Departing Energy Secretary James Edwards counts that as his greatest achievement.

"We changed the crisis mentality of the American people over energy policy and redirected government's role," he said in an interview before leaving office.

To the administration, the signs of success are everywhere:

—Gasoline prices, which climbed to $1.40-a-gallon after Reagan's decision to remove the remaining price controls, dropped 18-cents-a-gallon in the next year.

—Oil imports this year are 16 percent below the 1981 level and 53 percent below the peak reached in 1977.

—The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is in disarray with members struggling to prop up a $34-a-barrel oil price in the face of increased cheating among some countries.

Despite the current rosy outlook, Hodel will have to deal with an increasingly restive Congress which has stymied many of the administration's initiatives of late.

One of the reasons Hodel was picked for the job was his record of strong support for nuclear power while serving as head of the Bonneville Power Administration.

The White House is counting on Hodel to shepherd through Congress bills to finally solve the problem of disposing of high-level nuclear wastes and streamline the current licensing procedure for nuclear plants.

Also on the administration's agenda is a renewed attempt to speed the decontrol of natural gas prices and get a reluctant Congress to buy Reagan's plan to abolish the Energy Department it created only five years ago and move most of its functions to the Commerce Department.

The administration is also under attack from outside experts who say the current supply surplus could evaporate quickly, plunging the country once more into gasoline lines.

"The substantial reason for the current fall in energy demand is not conservation but the effects of the worst recession since the Great Depression," says Harvard energy expert Dr. Daniel Yergin.

Report says environmental laws of 1970s haven't stopped construction of refineries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The landslide of environmental laws passed in the 1970s has not blocked construction of new oil refineries, steel mills and other industrial plants, according to a study released today.

The Conservation Foundation, after a three-year investigation, said it could find no credible evidence that U.S. environmental laws had created insurmountable obstacles or caused large numbers of companies to locate plants overseas.

"A significant number of industrial facilities in the United States are being built relatively quickly with few or no environmental problems," the study said. "These success stories are often overlooked in the clamor over celebrated siting battles."

The study also branded as a myth the belief that industries were playing one state off against another state by threatening to locate where environmental laws are weakest.

"We could unearth no evidence that environmental and land-use laws had caused a major movement of industry from states perceived to have strong environmental laws to those thought to be more permissive," the study said.

In the vast majority of cases, the study said, environmental regulations were of "very minor influence" in choosing a plant location.

"Traditional locational factors — access to markets, wage rates and transportation costs — are far more influential than environmental regulations in determining plant locations," the study said.

California, which has some of the strictist environmental laws in the country, "outstripped all other states in total gain in manufacturing employment during the 1970s," the study said.

"The final location of controversial projects was more likely to be a result of opposition pushing them away from a particular site, rather than weak laws luring them to another," the foundation said.

The foundation said it did find states with less stringent environmental and land-use regulations making slight gains in employment in high-pollution industries. These states, however, had made even bigger gains in manufacturing as a whole — a category which covers industries unaffected by environmental regulations, the foundation said.

Woman wrong

DETROIT (AP) — A woman who called state police to boast that they would not catch her when she drove more than 100 mph on the Ford Freeway was wrong. They did.

She tried it and was caught after she lost control of her car and it rolled three times on Interstate 94 near Romulus, state police said.
