...best actor...

One-act second at state

AUSTIN — Snyder's one-act play was chosen first runnerup and student actor John Hamlett was named "best actor" at the State UIL Class AAAA One-Act Play Contest here Friday evening.

Critic-judge Pam McDaniel of Tarrant County Junior College chose the comedy "The Desk Set" presented by Gregory-Portland High School as the AAAA Champion of 1986.

Snyder's production of Robert Bolt's "A Man for All Seasons" was chosen second in state.

SHS theatre director Jerry Worsham said Saturday morning the contest was "very very close."

Worsham said, "it boiled down to if (the judge) preferred light

Sunday honors also local 'foster moms'

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

Even though Joy Caswell and her husband Rex have no children of their own, she won't lack for Mother's Day attention Sunday.

They have been foster parents since November of 1984.

Since that time, eight foster children have lived with them. They are also in the process of adopting two of their foster children, a girl who is four and a boy aged eight.

"We read the foster parent brochures at the fair and decided to get involved," Joy added. "I feel great. I wonder what I used to do with my time before the children."

They are now members of the Oilpatch Foster Parent organization which they say "offers a lot of support." Joy is the current treasurer.

In the beginning the couple went through a seven session Nova training program to prepare them for their roles as foster parents. Soon, they will become Nova trainers.

"You have to have a lot of love and understanding," Joy said. "Most of these kids come from problem homes. The home you provide for them is temporary because the Department of Human Resources tries to reunite the family," Joy said, adding that "it is not for everyone."

Her husband noted some of the children they have cared for

Contested will names WTC, church

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Legal documents have been filed here contesting the will of a Scurry County woman who has bequested one-fourth of her estate to Western Texas College and one-quarter to the First Presbyterian Church of Snyder.

The estate in question and the will which dictates how it would be divided were left by Edith Whatley McKanna, a member of a pioneer Scurry County family.

She died March 26 at the age of 86.

The legal claim contesting Mrs. McKanna's will has been filed by her granddaughter, Betty Massey of La Porte.

According to court documents, the last will and testament was placed on record 14 months ago on Jan. 26, 1985.

In it, Mrs. McKanna specifies her estate be divided into four quarters, leaving 25 percent to the WTC Scholarship Foundation and 25 percent to the First Presbyterian Church, of which she was a member.

Mrs. McKanna was an active supporter of WTC and its related Scurry County Museum during her lifetime. Among her donations was the Japanese water garden which surrounds the campus museum.

Of the remaining half, she left 25 percent to the Ranching Heritage Association at Texas Tech, an organization which she helped establish as a charter member; and 25 percent to the Texas Tech Medical Foundation.

In documents filed in county court here protesting the probate of the will, the contestants claim "the deceased lacked...capacity...to make valid her last will and testament," claiming also she, "lacked the ability to know and understand the business in which she was engaged."

FM 1611 question before court again

Individuals both for and against the proposed extension of FM 1611 — a project aimed at creating a western truck route around Snyder — are expected Monday morning at a meeting of Scurry County Commissioners.

W.R. Walker, an Abilene-based representative of the Texas Highway Department, will discuss the plan during the regular Monday session. It begins at 10 a.m.

Commissioners received notification from the department in March 3 that the project had been approved as part of a $40 million program by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Court members must approve the project by May 26 or the county will be excluded from the program.

Commissioners expect representatives from the Snyder Chamber of Commerce and from the city to attend also. Interested citizens, both those opposing and those favoring the proposal, are also expected to appear.

Among those opposed to the project are a group of local residents calling themselves Concerned Taxpayers of Scurry County. The group cites the county's current economic situation as the basis for turning down the proposal.

Opposition to the plan has been voiced also by the affected property owners, descendants of Wade and Leclaire Winston, Harrie B. Winston and J. Scott Casey.

Sam Joyce, Florentz Joyce and Dorothy Casey of Snyder and Sam Casey of Florida, owners of the land in question, object to the road because the proposed route will divide pasture currently in use and will "cut the barns off from the rest of the property."

As proposed, the 3.7-mile extension will complete a southwest loop around Snyder stretching from the Lubbock Highway (U.S. Hwy. 84) to the Big Spring Highway (State Hwy. 350) and across to the Colorado City Highway (State Hwy. 208).

The project has received endorsements from both the city and chamber. They have pointed to the elimination of truck and oil field traffic through the downtown square area.

If the project is pursued, the next action would require the county to make an offer to the affected property owners for right-of-way across their land.

If they refuse, condemnation proceedings to secure the land would be required. This procedure would include the naming of a board to set a "fair price" for the right-of-way property.

123 given AA degree from WTC

For the second year in a row, rainfall postponed the proceedings as 123 students received associate degrees from Western Texas College in commencement exercises held Friday night.

The ceremonies were originally slated for 7:30 p.m. in the central courtyard on campus. Rain flurries forced the event indoors as college officials, graduates and guests moved to Worsham Auditorium at the high school.

Last year, the commencement had to be split between the Fine Arts Theatre on campus and the science lecture hall as stormy weather also prevailed on graduation night.

The diplomas were presented by R.C. Patton, college board president, and Dr. Harry Krenek, acting chief executive officer at WTC.

Forty-four were graduated with honors Friday.

Students graduating summa cum laude were Jerry Don Byrd, Tonya Neblett, Debby Cawthron and Hermilo Castilo of Snyder; Georgia Chacona of Ira; Michele Chiang and Janet Lee of Singapore; Christy Dockrey of Colorado City; Tony Hecksher of Australia; James Johnson of Fort Worth; Tammy Miller of Fluvanna; Nicki Moist of Star,

Reserve program begins 2nd signup

A second signup is now underway and will continue through Friday for the Conservation Reserve Program which will pay Scurry County farmers to sow highly erodible land in grasses for a 10-year period.

During the first signup, some 1,432 acres in the county were accepted into the program.

Land owners offer bids quoting the price per acre they will accept to take their land out of farming — to include the grazing of animals — for the 10-year period.

During the first signup, only bids of $35 or less were accepted.

According to Joe Hefner, county director for ASCS, this represented 10 bids of the 50 submitted from Scurry County.

The second signup period began Monday. Farmers who apply will have the option of bidding on a 1986 or a 1987 program contract.

Hefner said annual rental payments will be made beginning next Oct. 1 on contracts which are effective immediately.

"Producers cannot harvest any 1986 crop planted on land placed in the program. Any who had or will have crops harvested from the designated area during 1986 are ineligible for a contract this year."

Those whose contracts will become effective after Oct. 1 will be allowed to harvest 1986 crops. No annual payments will be made on these until Oct. 1, 1987.

He added that for the current

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Sometimes when you put two and two together you wish you'd kept them apart."

Lee Iacocca is probably one of the best know persons in America. As chairman of Chrysler Corp., he brought the auto dealer out of the depths of financial ruin.

He put together a giant fund-raiser for restoration of the Statue of Liberty, then got fired from the job to prevent any appearance of a conflict of interest.

Now, Lee Iacocca's own book on success makes him one of America's best-read authors. Now the car compay head is being mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate for president.

Iacocca has again been in the news with the marriage to a new wife--several years his junior. One punster said, "Lee Iacocca's new and young wife won't have to worry about his age. He comes with a five-year guarantee."

Another columnist said, when Lee Iacocca and Peggy Johnson got married, Lee promised "to love, honor or obey--for five years or 50,000 miles, which ever comes first."

Stanley Noah, retired tire dealer who starts the day at Louise's Coffee Shop, got in a comment on the marriage to the young wife. "Lee will need a new transmission."

It reminds us of a story that was told over at the Senior Citizens Center.

A couple, both having recently lost their mates, decided to go out on the town. The next day, some friends were asking the woman about her date the night before.

"I had to slap him three times."

"You mean he tried to get fresh with you?" the friend asked.

"Naw, he fell asleep three times."

We noticed that body builder Arnold Schwarzenegger married into the Kennedy family last week. It's just what the Kennedy family needs--more muscle.

Q — Have local school officials been informed if any Snyder teachers failed the TECAT?

A — No. Assuming there were failures locally, the district is to receive a report regarding the percentage of teachers but no individual names. Local officials note the state school board is to get the report by individual districts prior to the districts themselves, so they speculated such a report would not be received until after the next meeting of the state board.

Two to meet

The Western Texas College board and trustees for Snyder ISD have slated May meetings this week.

The college board session will include an executive session related to the hiring of a college president. The board is to meet at 5:45 p.m. Monday on campus.

The school board meeting will be Tuesday beginning at 7 p.m.

Registration

Parents who feel their child is eligible for the limited English proficient program should bring the child to North Elementary on Tuesday, May 13, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Parents will need to bring their child's birth certificate, immunization record and proof of income. Parents who receive food stamps should bring their number with them.

Grad account

Parents and friends of the 1986 Senior Class may now make contributions toward the class steak supper at American State Bank.

The supper — which honors all seniors and is sponsored by the senior parents — will be May 28, the day before graduation.

Experts : lawsuit is religious threat

NEW YORK (AP) — Church-state experts on Friday saw a threat to religious liberty in a lawsuit attempting to revoke tax exemption of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops and their social action agency because of their actions against abortion.

But abortion-rights groups said Catholic bishops had gone too far in promoting political candidates who agree with their stand against abortion.

Dean Kelly, church-state affairs officer of the National Council of Churches, said the lawsuit attempts "an unconstitutional restriction on the free exercise of religion, a tragic reversal of our tradition of religious liberty."

Kelly, whose organization embraces most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches, said religious bodies have not only a right but a duty to try to implement moral ideals in society.

"That's what churches are supposed to do, whether you agree with them or not," he said. "If anybody should lose their tax exemption, it ought to be churches that don't do it."

On the other hand, Emily Tyne, communications officer of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said, "We don't believe that not being able to be involved in political campaigns would infringe on religious liberty."

She said churches may speak out on moral issues, "but where we draw the line is against systematic involvement in political campaigns."

In its federal suit, Abortion Rights Mobilization Inc. contends the Internal Revenue Service should revoke the tax-exempt status of Catholic organizations on grounds that they violated the IRS code by supporting political candidates who oppose abortion.

U.S. District Judge Robert L. Carter held the U.S. Catholic bishops and their social action arm, the U.S. Catholic Conference, in contempt for refusing to turn over internal documents sought in the suit.

On Friday, he delayed until May 16 levying of a fine of $100,000 a day until the material is provided.

Michael J., Woodruff, director of the Center for Law and Religious Liberty in Washington, said the suit sought "an unprecedented restraint on American churches" and involved a "legal contest between two competing public philosophies."

He said one holds that churches have a part to play in society, the other that they must keep silent on moral-political issues or lose their tax exemption.

"The intent of the First Amendment was never to raise a wall between religion and public life," he said.

The Rev. Robert Maddox, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State in Washington, said Catholic bishops and some fundamentalist groups "may have become too overtly political" on abortion.

To keep tax exemption, he said, "you have to put a lid on and moderate political activity," refraining from opposing or supporting specific candidates.

However, he also said religious institutions have an obligation to address moral-social issues, and added, "We're uncomfortable with the court's demand" for church records.

Most major church bodies, including the Catholic bishops, Protestant denominations and the National Council of Churches, have long-time policies against opposing or supporting specific candidates.

William P. Thompson of Princeton, N.J., a Presbyterian church-state lawyer, said mainline churches have deliberately avoided taking positions on specific candidates as "a matter of sound policy rather than principle."

In the lawsuit, the plaintiffs claim that some Catholic pastors and publications targeted specific candidates, despite the national policies.

JANNA TATE

Tate is picked leader

Snyder High School junior Janna Tate was elected chairman of South Plains District 2 of the Texas 4-H at the district convention in Lubbock last Saturday.

She will serve in that capacity from Sept. 1, 1986 through Sept. 1, 1987.

As district chairman, she will preside over district meetings as well as serving on the district camp staff and district banquet committe.

In addition to the district responsibilities, the chairman serves as the district's representative on the state 4-H council and will participate in state 4-H activities in conjunction with the State Fair of Texas.

Ira residents to be guests at Senior Center

Senior citizens from the Ira community will be special guests in the Senior Center on Monday, Ira Day. They will be introduced before the noon meal.

Musical entertainment will be provided by the Browning Band at 11 a.m. on Tuesday and by the center's own Sunshine Choir at 11:30 a.m. Thursday.

The local chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons will meet in the center at 1 p.m. on Tuesday. The Golden K Kiwanis Club holds its weekly meeting in the center at noon Tuesday and invites new members to attend next Tuesday's meeting.

Plans for the May Day fundraiser on Saturday in the coliseum are nearing completion. Senior citizens will be providing baked goods and arts and crafts to sell during the afternoon. The coliseum will be open at 2 p.m. for the benefit of persons who want to shop the booths and look over the quilts and other items to be sold in the auction starting at 6:30 p.m. Tickets for the barbecue to be served between 4:30-6:30 p.m. are $5 each and must be purchased by Thursday. All proceeds from May Day go into the operating fund for the Senior Center.

Recall vote slated

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Three city council members face a recall election Saturday because of a $1.5 million judgment that some residents think could have been cut by two-thirds if the city had settled the case out of court.

Mayor Frank Selfridge, Mayor Pro-Tem Judy Flanders and councilman Bill Slaybaugh face possible recall by the voters. The three have been re-elected to the council a total of eight times in the past.

The recall vote was forced by a petition circulated in February by Citizens for Honest City Government, a group formed by three Borger women to unseat the council members.

Group members claim the three council members have cost taxpayers and the city over a million dollars by mishandling an offer to settle a controversial suit involving city police officers.

The suit involves a high-speed chase law enforcement officers made in Hutchinson County in August 1981. The fugitive was believed to be near the home of 6666 Ranch Foreman James Grandstaff. Officers accidentally shot and killed Grandstaff during the pursuit.

Grandstaff's family took the city of Borger to court and was awarded $1.4 million in damages by U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson in Amarillo.

NASA gives in

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apparently bowing to a demand by the presidential Challenger commission, NASA announced Friday it is asking independent experts to oversee the redesign of the solid booster rocket joint that is thought to have caused the space shuttle to explode.

The space agency said also that while a redesign team has begun to consider a number of design options, it will not make a final selection until the commission has issued its report and recommendations, expected early next month.

NASA's announcement was made as the commission prepared, for the first time, to release the transcript of a session on May 2 that was closed to the public. At that hearing, agency officials as well as engineers from rocket booster builder Morton-Thiokol testified.

Fire out but radiation is still leaking

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials of the U.N. atomic energy agency said Friday that the Chernobyl disaster is by far the worst nuclear accident in history, but Soviet experts are getting it under control.

They said radiation still leaks slowly from the nuclear power plant's stricken No. 4 reactor, but the fire in its graphite core has been stopped and the Soviets will "entomb" it in concrete for a years-long cooling process.

Based on their observations and Soviet data, "It's clear ... that the radioactive consequences of this accident are far more serious than in any accident so far, also that the radioactive releases to the environment are much more serious," Hans Blix, chief of the International Atomic Energy Agency, told a news conference.

Blix and his deputies said temperatures in the graphite core were dropping and uncontrolled downward burning of the nuclear fuel, commonly called the "China syndrome," is not an immediate threat.

An explosion and fire in the reactor at the Ukranian plant April 26 spewed an invisible radioactive cloud over Europe that gradually has been working its way around the world.

No other governments reported health-threatening levels of radiation Friday.

About 84,000 residents within an 18-mile radius of the plant were evacuated beginning 36 hours after the disaster. About 250,000 children are being let out of school early so they can leave Kiev, the Ukrainian capital of 2.4 million people 80 miles south of Chernobyl.

Journalists from Eastern Europe said a Soviet official told them a third person had died as a result of the accident. Official reports have said two people were killed and 204 hospitalized, 18 in serious condition.

An American bone-marrow specialist leads a team of doctors performing marrow transplants in Moscow on victims of severe radiation exposure.

The Kremlin made its sixth official statement on the disaster Friday evening, which consisted of three paragraphs and gave no new information.

Blix and his associates spoke to reporters after five days of meetings with Soviet officials and then flew back to the agency's headquarters in Vienna, Austria, following the news conference.

Asked if he was satisfied with information the Soviets provided, Blix replied: "Emphatically, yes."

Morris Rosen, an American who is the U.N. agency's nuclear safety director, described the Soviets coordinating the cleanup as "competent and well-qualified."

Blix, Rosen and the U.N. agency's Soviet deputy director, Leonard Konstantinov, flew half a mile from the damaged reactor Thursday.

"There are relatively little radioactivity releases now and the temperatures (in the No. 4 reactor) are decreasing. The situation appears to be stabilizing," Rosen said.

He said there had been no meltdown in the reactor's core, which contradicts the view of many American nuclear authorities.

Robert Avery, a senior scientist at Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois, said in an interview Friday: "It would be unreasonable to imagine a huge amount of (radioactive) material getting out — as it apparently did — without there being a meltdown."

Rosen said his view that a meltdown had not occurred was based in part on an analysis of the radioactive materials released.

He said the conclusion that the core fire was out was based in part on declining temperatures reported by Soviets after infrared measurements.

During the flight Thursday, he said, they saw a small amount of light grey smoke coming from the tons of sand, boron, lead and dolomite now covering the reactor.

A Soviet videotape of the plant made a few days after the accident showed dense, black smoke coming from the graphite fire, Rosen said, and the lighter smoke appeared to come from smoldering material in the "shield" dumped by helicopters.

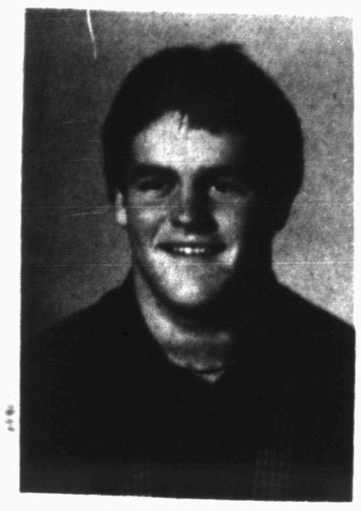

Soviet engineers are working under the reactor, pouring concrete that "eventually will form a foundation to entomb the structure," he said.

Rosen said the engineers could get under the reactor by tunneling or entering through the building housing the adjacent No. 3 reactor, which he said was not damaged and is shut down like the other two at the plant.

Rosen called the concrete encasement "probably a reasonable approach" that will allow the reactor to cool "as the years go by, and eventually to a level which should cause no concern."

The agency's safety director was asked repeatedly whether there was danger of a meltdown or uncontrolled downward burning.

"As a matter of physics, it is not completely excluded," he said. "However, the chain reaction (in the reactor) stopped immediately after the accident.

Chinese photos slated at Diamond M Museum

"Peking Diary 1910-1912," a photographic exhibit from the Minnesota Museum of Art, is now on display in the Diamond M Museum.

The photographs were taken by Lucy Calhoun, wife of William J. Calhoun, U. S. minister to China. Mrs. Calhoun's photos capture the last months of Imperial China, which was to change forever after the Republican Revolution in 1911. The exhibit is funded by the Minnesota State Arts Board and by a grant from the National endowment for the Arts.

Hours in the museum are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is free.

IN EXHIBIT–This study of Chinese women is part of a photographic exhibit now on display in the Diamond M Museum. The photographs were made in China between 1910-1912 and show the markets, homes and special occasions typical of that country before the major changes brought by the Republican Revolution in 1911. Briscoe said calling for unity

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas businessman Andrew Briscoe, runner-up in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Friday called for party unity and left open the prospect that he will seek public office again.

"Keep those 'Briscoe for Texas' bumper stickers on so we can get more good years of advertising, just in case we get serious in 1988 or 1990," Briscoe said in a statement.

Briscoe, who received 22.6 percent of the vote in a six-way race, stopped short of formally endorsing Gov. Mark White. But he said he looks forward to helping the party win in the fall.

In a written statement distributed personally by Briscoe, the former candidate said:

"In an effort to unite all energies, Briscoe clarified that even though he disagrees with Mark White on several policies, he looks forward to the opportunity to work with the Democratic Party to achieve victories in the months and years ahead."

Briscoe declined to answer questions. "Read the press release," was his only response when asked if he would endorse White.

"I will extend an invitation to Gov. White to utilize my services and what knowledge I have gained over the last several years," the statement said.

Briscoe said that since Saturday's election, he has talked with Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk, Texas party chairman Bob Slagle and White's office "to review alternatives for helping the Democratic Party cause."

In other political news Friday, Democratic Railroad Commission candidate John Sharp accused his runoff opponent of trying to deceive Texans by adopting a nickname that reminded some voters of a former U.S. senator.

Sharp received 45.2 percent of the primary vote May 3. Second place went to a Dallas oil and gas consultant who listed himself on the ballot as P.S. "Sam" Ervin. His real name is Percy Sprother Ervin.

"We were concerned when we found out a few weeks ago that his name's not Sam ... that he's never been known by Sam prior to the time he ran," Sharp said.

Montague sheriff does not post bond on fed charges

DALLAS (AP) — Montague County Sheriff Harry Walker did not post bond Friday on federal charges filed against him for allegedly mailing obscene photographs and magazines, officials said.

Walker had until Friday to post $10,000 of a $50,000 bond, or remain in custody until his trial date is set, U.S. Magistrate William F. Sanderson Jr. said.

Nancy Smith, Sanderson's secretary, said Walker did not post bond Friday and the judge has entered a detention order.

A sexual assault charge was filed against Walker Thursday by local authorities after Dallas police identified a boy whose nude photograph was among the photos, books, magazines and letters seized from Walker's home on May 1, officials said.

The assault charge against Walker — who has been held in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center since May 1 — is a state violation carrying a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

Police investigator David MacDonald said in Walker's bond hearing Thursday, that the boy, now 15, chose Walker's photo from a lineup late Wednesday and identified the sheriff as the man who picked him up at a Dallas bus station in August 1984.

The boy said the man paid him $50 to perform a sex act and pose for nude photographs at a Dallas motel, MacDonald said.

A $100,000 bond was set Thursday on the sexual assault charge.

In the federal bond hearing, Sanderson said he could not find that Walker would be a danger to people in the community.

4th space failure in 1986 disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A NASA research rocket that had flown successfully 120 consecutive times misfired over the New Mexico desert two weeks ago — the fourth U.S. space launch vehicle to fail this year.

The government, whose space program is under pressure because of the explosions of recent explosions of the much larger Titan and Delta rockets and the space shuttle, did not announce the April 25 failure of a Nike Orion rocket carrying a pollution-sampling device.

In response to questions from The Associated Press on Friday, the malfunction was described by Debbie Bingham, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Army Missile Range in White Sands, N.M., and by Dr. Edward C. Zipf, a geophysicist of the University of Pittsburgh, who was conducting the experiment for NASA.

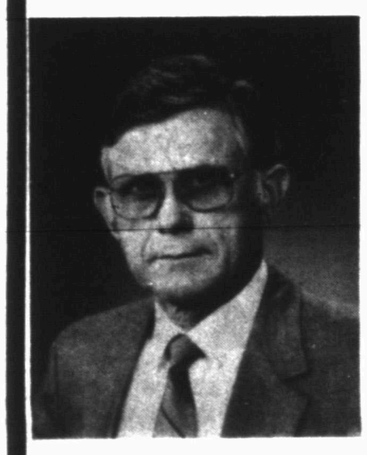

"This was very rare. I think this particular series of rockets, the so-called Orion family, had flown 120 times and this was the first failure," Zipf said in a telephone interview. "This system of rockets has been flying for about six or seven years."

The Nike rocket dates back to the early 1950s when it was developed as a ground-based missile against aircraft. It was used in different military versions until the last one was retired last year from Nike Hercules batteries in Europe.

NASA has been using the surplus, solid-fuel Nike booster in combination with another solid-fuel, military surplus rocket, the Orion. In the configuration that failed last month, the rocket and payload combination was 30 feet long.

The rocket was supposed to deliver Zipf's experiment to an altitude of 50 miles, but he said it got no higher than 6,000-7,000 feet — a little more than one mile. There, the burned-out Nike first stage failed to separate before the second stage Orion ignited.

Meat study results revealed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hamburgers that are broiled or fried well-done contain six chemicals that cause mutations, chromosome damage and possibly cancer in rodents, scientists said Friday.

The $2 million, six-year study at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory found the well-done ground beef contains three newly discovered mutagens and three known mutagens. Two other mutagens also were found, but they have not been identified or tested in animals.

Two of the three previously known mutagens are known to cause malignant tumors in mice and rats, said senior biomedical scientist James S. Felton.

The risk to humans from any of them remains unknown, the scientists said.

Mutagens are compounds that change genetic material in cells and sometimes can cause cancer in animals, said Felton, who presented his findings here at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research.

Sperm and egg cell mutations and damage to chromosomes, which determine inherited traits, can cause birth defects.

Arthur J. Miller, head scientist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture research laboratory in Philadelphia, said previous studies have found traces of unidentified mutagens in other well-done muscle meats, including other beef cuts, pork, chicken and fish with spines, although not in shellfish or organ meats like liver.

Felton said the compounds "could be a factor in the high colon cancer rates in this country, because of the high amounts of meat we eat. But we really need to do more work to understand how potent as carcinogens these might be."

"If people want to hedge their bets, just don't cook the meat to shoe leather," he added. "Don't cook it well-done."

Lawrence Garfinkel, the American Cancer Society's vice president of epidemiology and statistics in New York, said eating well-done meat "may increase the risk of (human) cancer, but so far we have no evidence that it does."

"Overcooking has not been implicated in any human health problem at this point," said George Wilson, vice president for science at the American Meat Institute, a trade group in Arlington, Va.

Wilson said avoiding well-done muscle meat "seems to be good advice, both from a safety standpoint and a palatability standpoint." But he warned that eating undercooked meat can result in meat-borne diseases such as trichinosis and salmonellosis.

"We're talking about frying and broiling. If you cook your meat at lower temperatures and make it well-done, like stewing, braising, microwaving or baking, you don't seem to get the degree of mutagens you do when you cook with a hot flame or hot surface like a frying pan," Felton said.

He said the chemicals are formed by frying or broiling hamburger until well-done with the temperatures of the pan surface above 300 degrees Fahrenheit, a medium-high stove setting.

Felton's 15-member research team detected eight mutagens in well-done broiled or fried hamburger, and identified six as aromatic amines, including three never seen before. All were present at parts-per-billion levels.

Mrs. Aquino tells G. Shultz Filipinos will solve problems

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino on Friday told Secretary of State George P. Shultz that the Philippines' crippled economy needs more than the proposed $150 million boost in U.S. aid.

Mrs. Aquino, in comments released by her spokesman Teodoro Locsin, also promised that she will not go along with Cabinet members seeking "selective repudiation" of the nation's $26 billion debt to foreign banks.

But the president urged an easier payment schedule, Locsin said in a news conference following Shultz's 45-minute meeting with Mrs. Aquino, who assumed power in late February when former President Ferdinand E. Marcos fled during a military-civilian revolt.

Locsin quoted Mrs. Aquino as saying the $150 million in additional Philippines aid for which Reagan has asked Congress, as well as other foreign assistance, would "fall far short of what was needed."

"In the first and last analysis, she said, our problems will be solved, as in the recent past, by the Filipino people," Locsin said, describing Mrs. Aquino's discussion with Shultz.

"They have dislodged an entrenched dictatorship. No mean task. Now they will lift this country to the progress it has long looked for," Locsin said.

The Philippines is due to receive $180 million in U.S. aid this year as part of a five-year agreement linked with a lease for two huge U.S. bases on Luzon island. The $150 million would be on top of that.

Shultz, winding up a 26-hour visit to the Philippines, told reporters in a news conference before leaving that Mrs. Aquino left him confident that the island nation will emerge strong from its economic problems.

He also said Marcos probably will remain in exile in Hawaii despite pressure from President Reagan and Marcos himself for Mrs. Aquino to renew his passport. She revoked Marcos' and his family's passports when they fled Feb. 25.

The Aquino government has accused Marcos of plundering up to $10 billion of the country's assets.

Hundreds of protesters demonstrated at Shultz's stops during the visit, which was marked by tight security.

Police held back more than 200 Marcos loyalists who shouted, "We want Marcos back," when Shultz stopped to lay a wreath at the foot of a monument to Philippine national hero Jose Rizal.

The Boeing 747, the first of the jumbo jets, made its first flight Feb. 9, 1969.

Tot's death is 'worst case of child abuse'

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston authorities are calling the choking death of a 2-year-old boy, who police say was forced to swallow finely ground pepper by his mother's boyfriend, one of the worst child abuse cases they have ever seen.

Patty Ann Kalmbach, 20, and her boyfriend of two months, Raymond Edward Coffey, 26, were being held Friday in the Harris County Jail on murder charges, a jail spokeswoman said.

Coffey's bond was set at $200,000, while Ms. Kalmbach, charged with murder by omission, was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond. If convicted, each would face up to life in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Ms. Kalmbach was charged because "she was there when it happened and she didn't try to stop it," said Harris County prosecutor Jim Larkin.

Ms. Kalmbach and Coffey took the child, Christopher Kalmbach, to a hospital near their Houston trailer home Wednesday evening when he lost consciousness, police records show. He died at the hospital.

Remedial programs sought

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education got a proposal Friday from one of its committees to require local districts to take action in schools where students consistently fail.

"Each board shall establish a procedure to reteach nonmastering students," said the proposed rule approved 2-1 by the Students Committee.

The full 15-member board will consider the rule change on Saturday.

Jack Strong of Longview, chairman of the committee, said if the rule is adopted Saturday, he will call a public hearing on the issue before the board considers it on a second reading in June.

"I think it would be better to hold the hearing first," said member Katherine Raines of Cleburne, who voted against the measure. "I don't want to see this passed in such a rushed way."

Strong and Volly Bastine of Houston voted for the rule change. Two members were absent.

Deputy Education Commissioner Victoria Bergin said the change, recommended by the Texas Education Agency staff, would judge the quality of Texas elementary schools on a campus by campus basis, not district by district.

"There are probably a thousand schools where, year after year, no one really gets above the fifth grade level," said Ms. Bergin. "We have to go in there and find out why the valedictorian last year failed her (minimum skills) tests."

A 1904 fire virtually destroyed downtown Baltimore.

Students perform own play

East fifth grade students in Becky Cottrell's and La Nell Rambin's classes presented a play Friday entitled "A Sesquicentennial Tour of Texas."

The students researched Texas history, economy and famous people and the teachers wrote the play.

Neika Porter named the play. The students made most of the props and created an Indian dance to perform. The students had fun doing it and learned a lot about Texas, according to their teachers.

Upswing predicted in future

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Buoyed by signs of new growth and low interest rates, top business experts said Friday the U.S. economy should be on the upswing for the next two years.

But while executives of the country's leading corporations predicted a "rosy" time ahead, they also voiced a "sense of uneasiness" on several fronts.

The main worry was over the future of the tax overhaul bill in Congress. Most executives favored the Senate Finance Committee's draft but felt the ultimate outcome in a conference with the House might not be as beneficial to business interests.

The analysis was made at the spring meeting of the Business Council, made up of 200 executives from the nation's largest corporations. The advisory council's membership comes from about 60 major U.S. corporations.

The forecast made by business leaders was based on several key assumptions, one of them that Congress would fail to approve a new tax bill this year.

James D. Robinson III, council vice chairman, acknowledged that the speed at which the tax bill moved through Congress has surprised business leaders. He said the report on the economy, written in April, should have an asterisk by the tax reform section, with "whoops" in a footnote at the end.

Nonetheless, he said a new tax plan should not affect the economy this year. And depending on the final congressional language, he said a tax bill could conceivably stimulate consumer spending in 1987.

In an overview of the economy, the economic experts were "decidedly optimistic" about the economy in 1986 and 1987.

The 20 corporate economists who put together the upbeat report believe "the power that is driving this economic scenario basically is lower interest rates, lower oil and energy prices, and the lower dollar," said Robinson, chairman of the American Express Co.

He said the major components of anticipated growth include housing, improved net exports, increased inventory investment and reasonably strong consumer spending.

"The weak spots are capital goods spending and commercial construction," Robinson told reporters.

He said the business economists are unanimous in their views that interest rates will be low through most of 1987.

Mall shooting hero to become police officer

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Jack Laufer isn't haunted by nightmares of the October day he stopped a woman's shooting rampage that left three people dead and seven injured in a suburban shopping mall.

He says he never dreams about the screams and the bullets and the blood.

Maybe, he says, he hasn't had time.

For six months, the 25-year-old construction worker has been bombarded with awards and honors from law enforcement agencies across the country — sometimes four or five per week.

"I don't think I deserve all this," says the part-time ambulance crew member. "I don't feel like a hero."

Now, Laufer's days of glory are numbered, and he couldn't be happier: Jack Laufer, hero, is about to become Cadet John Laufer III of the Pennsylvania State Police.

"I have a strong sense of right and wrong," said Laufer. "I'm confident it will carry through as a police officer."

The trial of Sylvia Seegrist, 25, the Crum Lynne woman accused of the shootings, is to begin July 2. She is charged with three counts of murder, seven of aggravated assault and one of recklessly endangering.

Police said the death and injury toll would have been higher had Laufer not acted. Among the dead was a 2-year-old boy.

It was the day before Halloween when Laufer and his girlfriend were strolling through Springfield Mall. They heard shots and saw shoppers ducking for cover.

Then Laufer spotted a woman in combat gear firing a semiautomatic rifle.

Laufer thought the whole event was a Halloween prank that got a little carried away. He overpowered the woman, who he thought was firing blanks.

"If I had realized she was shooting live ammunition, I possibly would have taken her from behind instead of taking her from the front," Laufer said.

Slight rise noted in market prices

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward Friday, rallying near the close of a drifting session.

Retailing stocks and a smattering of computer issues were among the beneficiaries of the late upswing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.22 to 1,789.43, finishing the week with a net gain of 14.75 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 137.40 million shares, against 136.03 million in the previous session.

Early in the session, stock prices fell as rising interest rates in the credit markets pushed prices of long-term government bonds down as much as $10 for every $1,000 in face value.

But the bond market steadied at that level, and stocks rebounded in the last hour of trading.

Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said he believed the chances were good for further declines in interest rates if efforts to restrain inflation continue to be successful.

Analysts said investors were proceeding cautiously as they studied the prospective impact on the economy and the markets of the new tax-revision plan approved this week by the Senate Finance Committee.

Rains still hampering Tarleton State Rodeo; Hecksher leads WTC

STEPHENVILLE – Rain continued to be the star performer at the Tarleton State University NIRA Rodeo, being held here this weekend.

Only Thursday night's performance - which had to be moved to Friday afternoon - had been held as of Saturday morning. Rodeo officials had to postpone Friday evening's show because of more rain, and have scheduled a full day Saturday.

Because the order must be kept intact, officials were planning to run Friday's evening show at 12:30 today (Saturday), followed by the Friday after-show slack, followed by the regular Saturday morning slack and the regular Saturday evening show.

"If we're lucky, we'll finish the slack about an hour before the (Saturday night) show is supposed to start," said Western Texas College Coach Bob Doty.

Doty said if the rains continue, the rodeo will have to go on.

"It can't be extended because finals start at Howard and Eastern (Eastern New Mexico University) on Monday. I look for us just to go ahead and have it, no matter what."

The rodeo, which is the final Southwest Region rodeo of the 1985-86 season, is scheduled to hold its finals Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

In the only performance held, Western's Tony Hecksher took an early lead in the bareback with a 72. He was the only designated WTC team member to compete.

Western Texas student Heath Sims is leading the calf roping with an 11.6, however.

The rest of WTC's competitors weren't so fortunate. Adam Brewster bucked off in the bull riding and Tana Whatley and Paul Ivey took no-times in the breakaway and calf roping, respectively.

In other action, Odessa's Jim Sharp scored a 73 in the bull riding and a 62 in the bronc riding to lead both events. Odessa is chasing Western Texas for second place in the men's division. Tarleton State currently leads the race. First and second place teams advance to the College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont.

NY Mets win sixth straight; Astros hold on, trip Pirates

by The Associated Press

For a moment, it looked like one swing could reverse the Cincinnati Reds' losing ways and bring an end to the New York Mets' winning streak.

The Mets led 2-1 and Dave Concepcion was on first in the eighth inning when Dave Parker, the Reds' most feared hitter, reached out for a Bob Ojeda changeup and lofted a long fly to right-center field. Five-foot-10 center fielder Len Dykstra leaped at the 396-foot sign and caught the ball to save the victory.

The triumph was the sixth straight for the Mets and their 13th in 14 games, giving them a 19-4 record, best in the majors. The Reds are 6-18, the worst in baseball.

In other NL games, it was Montreal 8, Los Angeles 4; San Diego 6, Chicago 2; Philadelphia 7, Atlanta 6; Houston 3, Pittsburgh 2; and San Francisco 2, St. Louis 1 in 10 innings.

Ojeda improved his record to 5-0, allowing six hits before getting last-inning relief help from Roger McDowell. He outdueled Mario Soto, 2-4, who gave up both New York runs in the sixth after shutting out the host Mets on one hit for five innings.

Astros 3, Pirates 2

Houston, which started the day in first place despite a four-game losing streak, beat Pittsburgh when pinch-runner Tony Walker scored in the ninth inning on reliever Jim Winn's wild pitch.

An infield hit by Glenn Davis and a single to right by Denny Walling set up the game-winning play. Winn bounced a 2-0 pitch in front of the plate that eluded catcher Junior Ortiz, allowing Walker to score standing up.

Houston's Charles Kerfeld, 3-0, pitched 1 1-3 innings in relief of Mike Scott to earn the victory. Dave Smith got the last two outs for his major league-leading ninth save.

Giants 2, Cardinals 1

Pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood singled through a drawn-in infield with one out in the 10th inning as San Francisco kept pace with the Astros with a victory in St. Louis.

Youngblood, pinch-hitting for Giants starter Mike LaCoss, 3-0, singled off reliever Todd Worrell, 2-2. Mark Davis set down the Cards in the bottom of the 10th for his second save.

Expos 8, Dodgers 4

Hubie Brooks hit a two-run double and Andres Galarraga followed with a two-run homer as Montreal extended its winning streak to six with a four-run eighth inning against Los Angeles at Olympic Stadium.

Brooks had three RBI with his double.

All eight Expos runs were charged to Fernando Valenzuela, 4-2. Jeff Reardon, 5-2, pitched the final two innings.

Padres 6, Cubs 2

At Wrigley Field, Kevin McReynolds broke a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer off Rick Sutcliffe in the seventh inning, and San Diego got a five-hitter against Chicago.

Terry Kennedy and Tim Flannery also homered off Sutcliffe, 1-5, while Hawkins, 2-2, went the distance for the first time this season.

Phillies 7, Braves 6

Philadelphia scored all of its runs in the first four innings, then held on to beat host Atlanta.

The Phillies scored four runs in the second inning on consecutive RBI singles by Darren Daulton, Juan Samuel, Mike Schmidt and Von Hayes. Schmidt also had a run-scoring single in the first and Hayes added an RBI double in the fourth after Rick Schu's solo homer in the third.

Schmidt left the game in the seventh inning when he felt pain in his left side after a defensive play.

"I'm worried about him," Philadelphia Manager John Fleske said.

Rebels 2, Oilers 1

The Rebels got 11-strikeout, one-hit pitching from Lee Fletcher to defeat the Oilers in a close ballgame Friday evening. The Oilers led 1-0 until the bottom of the fifth.

Toby Goodwin lashed a double, Fletcher two singles and David Tate one single for the Rebels, now 2-0, as Burt Otto of the Oilers allowed just four hits.

Getting the one single for the Oilers, now 0-2, was Lee Hamilton.

Chicago Sox decide against Billy Martin

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Billy Martin says he thought he would soon be the manager of the Chicago White Sox. Instead, Tony LaRussa still has the job and Martin is still part of the New York Yankees' television crew.

"Yeah, I did," Martin said Friday night when asked if he thought he would get the White Sox job. "I thought it was just a matter of Eddie (agent Sapir) getting up there."

Instead, the White Sox ended the rumors when Ken "Hawk" Harrelson, the team's chief of baseball operations, announced Friday that LaRussa would remain as manager.

Martin's name had been mentioned prominently this week as speculation grew that LaRussa and Seattle Mariners Manager Chuck Cottier would be fired.

Cottier was dismissed on Thursday, and replaced by Dick Williams.

Martin, who has managed the New York Yankees four times, met with Harrelson on Thursday about the White Sox post.

Dodds wants NCAA probe finished before '86 season

AUSTIN (AP) - Although no interviews have been done in more than a month, University of Texas men's athletic director DeLoss Dodds says he hopes the NCAA investigation into the Longhorn football program can be completed before next season starts.

"It's been pretty quiet," Dodds said. "I told (NCAA representative) Butch Worley I'd like to see it done by summer. I told him we'd like to have it out of the way before we have another season."

The NCAA and Houston lawyer Knox Nunnally, who was hired by UT, have conducted joint interviews with UT football players who were quoted in newspaper stories as saying they sold complimentary game tickets and received small cash payments, loans and free or discounted merchandise from two Longhorn assistants, boosters and sports agents.

In a separate incident, an Austin accountant who leased a 1984 BMW to Longhorn running back Edwin Simmons says head football coach Fred Akers first learned of the lease after he saw the former blue chip recruit driving the car.

Tee Bowman told the Austin American-Statesman the lease was a legitimate business transaction that developed after Simmons responded to a classified advertisement.

Akers contacted him in June to see the lease, he said.

"It was clear to me that he (Akers) had never heard" of Harry Wilson, an oil field contractor who, according to Bowman, sent in a $2,500 company check for the down payment on the car.

The American-Statesman said it had obtained a Sept. 19 letter from Bowman to Akers in which Bowman said Simmons also had received "additional non-traceable cash payments which he gave me for car payments. If these payments were made for services rendered, then Edwin's hourly rate is about $40 per hour."

Wilson has said the $2,500 check represented earnings Simmons asked him to keep until he could afford a car.

Bowman now says he has changed his mind, the newspaper said.

"Apparently, Harry Wilson was able to substantiate that was an arms-length arrangment," said Bowman.

From April to September 1985, Simmons paid more than $4,210 on a down payment, three monthly payments and insurance before he defaulted on his payments and the car was returned to Bowman, the newspaper said.

Wilson has said his Rockdale-based oil field service company paid Simmons more than $4,500 in wages for work performed during the summer and holidays in 1985.

UT officials announced March 11 that their investigation showed the lease purchase was an "arms-length" transaction in that Simmons received no preferential treatment from Bowman.

Officials also said Wilson is not a Texas graduate and did not attend as a student. He is not a member of any UT booster organization and did not assist with Simmons' recruitment, they said.

MARTIN

Friday night in Texas, said there were other matters to consider beside money.

"It's not the dollars so much," Martin said. "I want to know who I'm dealing with. Fifteen years ago, when I was young and eager to manage, maybe so. But I'm not so eager to manage."

Sapir said Harrelson had handled the situation poorly.

"No one handled anything worse than the Hawk," Sapir said. "It was so mishandled he (Harrelson) had to try to make it right."

Martin, who has managed Minnesota, Texas, Detroit, Oakland and the Yankees, said managing is "my true love." But he added "the one thing I've been looking for in baseball is security."

76ers lock series with Bucks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Two "old codgers" gave young Charles Barkley a helping hand to keep the Philadelphia 76ers kicking in the NBA playoffs.

Bobby Jones, 34, and Julius Erving, 35, reached back for the brilliance of their youth Friday night as the 76ers routed the Milwaukee Bucks, 126-108.

The victory evened the best of seven Eastern Conference semifinal series at three games apiece.

The 76ers and the Bucks will meet in the seventh game Sunday in Milwaukee to determine who advances to the conference final against the Boston Celtics.

Jones, who unofficially has announced his retirement after 13 years as a pro, scored 23 points, handed out four assists, took down four rebounds and blocked three shots.

He was seven for nine from the field and nine for 11 at the foul line in 28 minutes of action.

Erving, who has announced he'll play one more season before calling it a career, collected 18 points, six rebounds, three assists and two blocked shots.

Barkley, who has carried the Sixers on his broad shoulders throughout the series, hurt the Bucks again. He had 23 points and 21 rebounds.

Almost lost in the Jones-Erving-Barkley performances was point guard Maurice Cheeks who had a triple double - 16 points, 10 rebounds and 13 assists.

The 76ers led 35-28 after a quarter and 62-54 at halftime. They broke the game open with a 24-8 third period surge that gave them a 21-point lead at 90-69. The Bucks never got closer than 16 after that.

Match Play event slated May 20-21

4 guilty pleas heard in local district court

Four defendants entered guilty pleas to felony charges in 132nd District Court during the week with three sentenced to terms in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Drawing the only probated prison term was 17-year-old Ray Perez Jr. of Snyder.

Perez was placed on probation for seven years after entering a guilty plea to a charge of burglary of business.

He was arrested by police last weekend and charged with the April 19 burglary of McLeod's Jewelry in the Snyder Shopping Center.

Cynthia Blanton and Marvin Ray King, both of 803 19th St., each pleaded guilty to two counts of delivery of marijuana and both received two seven-year prison sentences.

Blanton and King were among the individuals indicted for various drug trafficking charges at the end of a four-month undercover investigation by the Scurry County sheriff's office and the Snyder PD in March.

Their sentences will be served concurrently.

Given a five-year prison sentence on a drug charge unrelated to the undercover investigation was 38-year-old Richard Lance Copeland of Dallas.

Copeland pleaded guilty to a single charge of possession of a controlled substance on Feb. 26.

He was alleged to have been in possession of a quantity of a drug known a pethidine when stopped by police on that date.

comedy or dark tragedy."

In all, Snyder students captured four individual awards at the state meet.

In addition to Hamlett's award, Shannon Lunsford and Brad Vincent were named to the state all-star cast and Kyle Hawes received honorable mention.

Snyder drama and forensics student Richard Lack also competed in the preliminaries of the prose interpretation contest Friday and was rated in the top six.

He was to compete in the finals for that event Saturday afternoon. Kirsten Miller from SHS was also an alternate for poetry interpretation at state, but she did not get to compete.

The Friday night performance marked the 18th appearance at the state meet for the Snyder drama department. They have won the competition for the past two years, part of 10 state wins in all.

Cast and crew of the one-act production were to return to Snyder Sunday afternoon.

Bus involved in minor wreck

Two minor traffic mishaps — one involving a Snyder Independent School District bus — were reported in the city Friday.

Involved in the bus mishap — in the 2400 Block of College Ave. at 3:48 p.m. — were the district-owned 1974 International bus driven by Carmen Denise Thielen of 2006 37th St. and a 1978 Ford pickup driven by Jerry Terrence Dennis of 2505 27th St.

Only minor damage was noted and no injuries to either drivers or passengers.

A hit-and-run mishap was reported at 11:05 a.m. Friday on the parking lot at T.G.&Y.

According to the report, a parked 1985 Ford pickup owned by Ronald Hillis of 409 32nd St. was apparently struck by an unidentified vehicle.

Fire damages company pickup

Units of the Snyder Fire Department were dispatched to a vehicle fire at 9:40 p.m. Friday in the 2200 Block of 42nd St.

According to reports, a 1985 Ford pickup owned by Leamco Bearing Services Inc. sustained minor damage from an electrical fire.

3 arrests noted

Police logged three misdemeanor arrests Friday evening.

One subject was jailed for driving while intoxicated, one for public intoxication and one for disorderly conduct.

have returned to their homes.

The length of time foster children remain in foster programs varies, but the Caswells agree that no matter how short a time a child stays with them "they hate to give them up."

"We get attached to all of them," Caswell said. "But you have to have it in your mind that you do the best you can for all of them."

Even though the state reimburses them for foster care, they both agree "it doesn't begin to cover all the expenses."

The Caswells have lived in Snyder four years, having moved from Clovis, N. M.

They say people stay in the program because "they really want to and they really care about the children."

Was U. S. behind expulsion?

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A high-ranking Libyan diplomat today said Spain acted on U.S. orders in expelling him and denied meeting with a right-wing Spanish officer jailed for allegedly seeking funds from Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

Saad Ismail told reporters at Madrid's Barajas airport shortly before his departure for Casablanca, Morocco en route to Tripoli, the accusations were part of a "campaign set up by the American imperialists."

He was accompanied by Libyan commercial attache Rammadan Ruheim who was ordered expelled two weeks ago. Four Libyan diplomats have been ordered out of Spain since December.

A government spokesman on Friday confirmed that Ismail, identified by the Foreign Ministry as Libya's consul general and the effective head of the Libyan People's Bureau in Madrid, had been ordered out of Spain.

The Spanish press today devoted extensive coverage to purported connections between Libya and Spain's extreme right-wing, which allegedly has been seeking to destablize the government of Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez through Libyan-financed terrorist activities.

The Spanish government said it expelled Ismail "for activities not in keeping with his diplomatic function," citing intelligence reports that the Libyan had met several times with Col. Carlos Meer de Rivera and accompanied him to Tripoli to meet with Khadafy to seek funds for an alleged plot against the government.

Socialist government spokesman Javier Solana on Friday told reporters Spain was considering breaking off relations with Tripoli over the incident, which was reportedly discovered by the Spanish secret service during an investigation of the activities of Meer de Rivera.

Contested will names college

The claims further contend the will was "executed as the result of undue influence exerted over the deceased by (persons) unknown at present by contestant."

The document says these individuals "will be identified" by the contestants "at or before this contest is set down for hearing."

Representing the contestant is a Friona attorney, Richard T. Collard.

The temporary administrator of Mrs. McKanna's estate is the First National Bank of Lubbock. The attorney representing the bank in the matter is A. Doyle Justice.

Regarding the overall value of the estate, Justice said Friday that the assets and liabilities are still in the process of being identified.

The final figure will be filed as part of ongoing legal documents involved in the will's probate and contest, he said.

Other than her granddaughter, no other survivors of Mrs. McKanna are mentioned in the will's contest. At the time of her death, other survivors listed were two grandsons, a great-great-granddaughter, two sisters and one brother.

Company started out small

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — In the 1920s, H.B. "Pat" Zachry saved half his paycheck for two years and parlayed his nest egg into a multi-million dollar construction company that today is one of the largest in Texas.

The H.B. Zachry Co., the second-largest privately held construction company in Texas and the 44th largest in the nation, now employs about 1,000 people in San Antonio and about 8,000 worldwide.

But there a few rough spots.

A Dallas County grand jury recently issued two sets of indictments against the firm and one of its officials, Paul Henson, for alleged tampering with government documents. The indictments were returned in the wake of an investigation into construction projects at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport in Grapevine.

The charges, denied by the company, are the first blemish on the complexion of the 62-year-old firm.

Begun in Laredo by Zachry in 1924, it started out building homes, small buildings and concrete structures. It prospered on government contracts for many years but now is busily engaged in more private sector projects. The company is considered a strong economic force in San Antonio.

Before he died in September 1984, Zachry told an Associated Press reporter how he started out.

After graduating from Texas A&M, he worked two years as engineer for Webb County. "I made $200 a month for two years and saved $100 a month and went into business for myself," he said

The firm grew rapidly in the 1930s, convincing Zachry to move to San Antonio. In the next decade, the company completed about $50 million in defense installations.

A favorite story in the Zachry history is of the company's construction of an air base in Hondo in 90 days.

Zachry engineered the rush job, and others like it for the nation's World War II defense buildup, by pulling work crews off highway and building work and reassigning them to military projects.

The company also built bases in Laredo, El Paso, Harlingen and Brownsville.

After the war effort, Zachry expanded into highways and bridges, airfields, dams, railroads, power plants, switchyards, industrial plants, chemical plants, pipelines, missile and anti-missile facilities and large buildings.

The company launched numerous overseas projects, including work in Saudi Arabia, Chile, Puerto Rico, Spain and Peru.

In 1968, Zachry was chairman and chief executive officer for San Antonio's HemisFair world's fair. As part of his economic contribution to the city at the time, he built a 500-room, 21-story prefabricated Hilton hotel in nine months.

Chernobyl disaster remains dominant

By Paul A. Driscoll
Associated Press Writer

The disaster at Chernobyl remains the dominant influence among traders of American agricultural futures.

There were no big price movements in most of these commodities on Friday, but that's the point.

With the news of the fire in the Chernobyl reactor being out, the expectation was that grain futures markets, supersensitive to worldwide supply and demand factors, would nose dive from Thursday's strong runup. The theory was that with the fire out, there was an end in sight to the spread of radioactive contamination on Eastern European farms.

But there was no nose dive. Prices for grains, soybeans, livestock and meat futures were mixed, leaning to the firm side.

Last week, after two days of strong advances on the first word of the Chernobyl accident, there was a broad retreat in prices on the theory that traders had overreacted.

This week it was different, and Thursday's gains, based mainly on a rumor that the Soviet Union is out to buy huge amounts of foodstuffs, held quite well.

"The demand potential for American food products is hopeful, if contamination is as widespread as it seems," said Philip Stanley, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc.

"The developments out of the Soviet Union cannot be ignored," he said. "There is a lot of interest to store pork products that wasn't there in the past."

If the Soviet Union needs large amounts of food because of Chernobyl, this will have a powerful impact on American supplies and prices, analysts said.

In addition, other nations that are importers of farm products must decide soon whether to make quick purchases ahead of any move by Russia to increase its imports.

"Even with the fire out, who knows what the final impact will be," said Bob Lekberg, a grains analyst in Chicago with Shearson Lehman Brothers.

Wheat settled 3¾ cents lower to 1½ cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $3.50½ a bushel; corn was ½ cent lower to 2 cents higher with May at $2.48¾ a bushel; oats were ¼ cent to 1½ cents higher with May at $1.18½ a bushel; and soybeans were ½ cent lower to 5½ cents higher with May at $5.41 a bushel.

In addition to the Chernobyl influence, livestock and meat futures did better because of expectations of improvements next week in boxed beef and cash cattle, Stanley said.

Live cattle settled .05 cent to .85 cent higher with the contract for delivery in June at 58.70 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .20 cent lower to .87 cent higher with May at 58.37 cents a pound; live hogs were .38 cent lower to .35 cent higher with June at 47.77 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were unchanged to 1.33 cents higher with May at 64.30 cents a pound.

Leaded gasoline futures advanced strongly on the New York Mercantile exchange.

Snake delaying acquisition for Stacy Dam, official says

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — The Colorado Municipal District won't be "in such a hurry" to acquire needed acreage for the Stacy Dam project while a water snake threatens to delay construction, a spokesman said.

Joe Pickle said the district has acquired 871 acres, but "we have estimated that Stacy Dam will need at least 19,200 acres."

With construction scheduled to start May 1987, Stacy Dam is proposed for the Colorado River about 25 miles downstream from Ballinger. The dam's reservoir would flood about half of the Concho Water Snake's primary habitat along the Colorado and Concho rivers in Runnels, Coleman and Concho counties.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is reviewing whether the snake should be designated a threatened species. Pickle said that the deadline for the determination is next January.

The proposed dam would supply water to Odessa, Big Spring, Snyder, Midland, San Angelo and Abilene.

A statement filed by attorney Roland Boyd of McKinney said environmental protests over a 12-year period added $100 million to the cost of the Cooper Reservoir in northeast Texas.

Boyd said costs for the project skyrocketed while the issue lingered in the courts.

"We take the position that mankind must be given dominion over the Earth in place of snake, snail darters and hickory nut trees," Boyd's statement said.

Land acquisition delays could add to the cost of the dam, but the amount can not yet be determined, Pickle said.

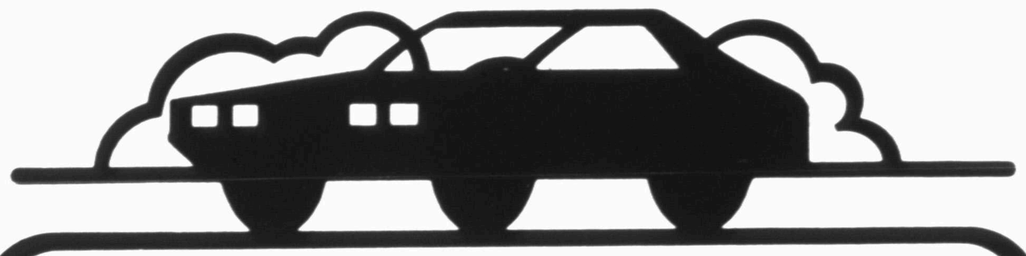

Pickle also said that for every month the project is delayed, the water district would be forced to pay interest on $53.5 million in bonds. He added that if the project were delayed as long as a year, the district would consider refinancing the bonds — costs that Pickle said would be passed along to water district customers.

District officials remain hopeful, however, that the federal government will follow the state's lead and issue the permit, Pickle said.

The legislation asks that the permit be issued by Nov. 30.

Forest fire causes evacuation

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — Up to 3,000 families were warned to flee, some for the second time in five days, from a two-mile-wide fire that continued its march along the coast today after charring 25,550 acres of forest, officials said.

The fire, which has burned since Monday, has been blamed for at least one death and one injury, officials said.

Weather forecasts held no hope of relief before Tuesday for crews fighting the fire, which Mary Ann George, Pender County dispatch supervisor, said was five miles northwest of Hampstead early today.

The evacuation of families, most from the Hampstead area in southeastern North Carolina, was urged Friday night, but the blaze abruptly switched course and the evacuees — some of whom had fled once before — were allowed to return.

"It wasn't mandatory, so it's hard to say how many stayed and how many did leave," said Ms. George. She estimated that 3,000 families live in the affected areas.

Sheriff's cars with public address systems blaring drove through the area Friday urging people to leave. In Hampstead, rescue squad vehicles and police cars with their lights flashing blocked roads to the evacuated areas to outsiders, but allowed residents to go to their homes.

"It (the fire) is going where it jolly well pleases," state Forest Resources Division spokesman Tom Hegele said Friday. "I have no idea on the size of this thing. It's got a two-mile-wide head.

"At one point this afternoon, we clocked the rate of spread at about 2 miles an hour."

"There are erratic winds so it's really hard to tell what it's going to do next," said Rebecca Richards, also with the agency

East Texans create Sesqui time capsule

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Citizens of this historic East Texas town are packing away some Sesquicentennial mementos they hope will be enjoyed by Texans who celebrate the state's 200th birthday in 2036.

Everything from serious history to a Sesquicentennial beer can are contained in the "Texas Time Capsule" that is the focal point of Saturday night's "Nacogdoches Celebrates Texas" event at the county exposition center.

"We wanted to do something for the community to get them involved — one day I came up with the idea, the next day it was built," said Brinson Dabney, designer of the solid steel time capsule, conceived only two weeks ago.

"There is so much difference in a dream and the reality of following through," said Dabney. But he found plenty of enthusiasm for the project.

The local Continental Flange Corp. was approached about donating materials for the capsule. General plant manager Mike Vanderbosch and plant manager Richard King not only agreed to that request but "pulled a man off the job the next day and did the whole thing," Dabney said.

King said the project was a new venture for the company. "We do fabricate pipe, but as far as the artwork — we never have.

"When I saw the print, I knew it'd be better to just go ahead and do all of it instead of piecing it out," he said.

The finishing of the capsule was done in nearby Lufkin at the Chromium Corporation of Texas. Dabney said Chromium plant manager Craig Hanriot also received the project with open arms.

Hanriot and Vanderbrosch have even written detailed descriptions of the creation of the time capsule that will go inside along with the other Sesquicentennial mementos.

The completed capsule is four and a half feet tall and eight inches in diameter, topped by a silhouette of the state of Texas and polished in a brush-satin finish.

Finding items to go inside was a project of Rebecca Boren of the Nacogdoches Chamber of Commerce. They are a mix of serious history and community perspective and other more light-hearted souvenirs of 1986.

Nacogdoches Mayor A.L. Mangham Jr. has written a letter to citizens for the capsule. the Daily Sentinel is providing a printed historical retrospective, and Dr. Leon Hallman is enclosing a profile compiled by the East Texas Business Institute. There also will be a tape and a list of 1986's top popular songs, an autographed copy of James A. Michener's "Texas," a Sesquicentennial button and a Sesquicentennial beer can. The city's elementary school children are donating other items and Nacogdoches High School's championship baseball team has autographed a ball for the capsule.

After Saturday's celebration, the Texas Time Capsule will be displayed at the Nacogdoches County Chamber of Commerce until the state's next big birthday.

Rancher battles golf area

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — A Denton County rancher is in the rough these days because part of the back nine of a golf course is in his back woods.

And, like the golfers, he's looking for the green.

R.A. Duncan, 64, is trying to get the city to pay him for 11 acres that were mistakenly included in a 412-acre parcel used in constructing the Indian Creek Municipal Golf Course.

Last month, District Judge John Narsutis ruled that the suburb north of Dallas had built the entire 13th hole and parts of the 11th, 12th and 14th holes on 11 acres owned by Duncan next to the Trinity River.

In addition to establishing Duncan's ownership, the judge awarded the rancher $32,000 to cover legal fees, lost rents and tree damage on the property.

Roaming the course in a weather-stained cowboy hat, boots, a denim shirt and blue jeans, Duncan looked out of place among the golfers as he pointed out flourescent orange stakes that mark his property line.

"I want to sell the land to the city," he said. "But I want a fair market price for my land and I haven't got one yet."

Golfers currently play the four holes on Duncan's land unaware of any controversy. But that may change, Duncan said.

"I went to the city offices on Tuesday and applied for a permit to build a fence on my land," he said. "The permit man was going to give me one until I told him who I was."

The application for the wire hazard is pending, Duncan said.

City officials acknowledged that someone made a mistake when Duncan's land was included in the $824,000 purchase of the golf course land from Bill Donald in 1979.

"There's little doubt that he owned the land or had title to a portion of it," City Manager Mike Eastland said. "But he originally claimed 19.5 acres, which was reduced to 11. We think his part is smaller than that, but that's for the court to decide."

City officials have joined with Chicago Title Co., which handled the sale, to appeal Narsutis' ruling, Eastland said.

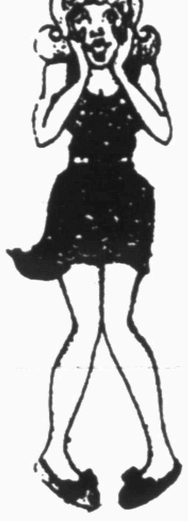

After an initial ruling against the city last October, the city offered to buy the disputed 11 acres from Duncan for $80,000, the city manager said. The city, the title company and the parcel seller were going to split the cost of the settlement, but Duncan rejected the payment.

"Their offer is a lot less than what the property to the north and south is worth," Duncan said.

Because of the litigation, Duncan declined to set a price for the parcel, but indicated it would be well over $100,000.

Duncan said he brought the situation to the attention of city officials in December 1983.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

A few years ago, women across the country discovered that by using manufacturers' cents-off coupons they could purchase items more cheaply.

Major manufacturers also began making rebate offers. By returning sufficient proofs of purchase, an individual could receive additional coupons, free gifts or cash.

Once the couponing craze caught on, grocery and department stores began to offer consumers double, sometimes even triple, the coupon's face value.

Over the past year, however, the fad has slowed somewhat. In many major Texas cities, stores will no longer double a coupon's limit. In Snyder, however, some outlets continue the practice, and at least one local woman is pleased.

"I really love doing this," Brenda Petty of 1912 Avenue L admits. "After spending so much money at the grocery store for so long, it makes me feel good to save. The more I save, the better I feel."

Brenda started using coupons when stores first began accepting them for double their value. "But I started tapering off until my sister-in-law in Post helped get me fired up again," she said.

About a year ago she began again in earnest. Six months later she discovered that she could save even more money by taking advantage of rebate offers. "When I finally realized that manufacturers would actually pay me to buy their product, I got excited about it," she added. "I finally realized I was losing money by not rebating. Now I don't buy stuff (with a coupon) unless I'm going to actually save money, make money or get the item free."

She estimates that she saves at least 50 percent each weekly trip to the grocery store. "Usually I don't have to buy toiletry items and cleaning products on a regular basis. If I had to buy those items every time or when I ran out, I'd probably be spending twice as much as I do now," she said.

Brenda carefully watches for sales on cleaning products and personal care items such as toothpaste, shampoo and hair spray. When a sale plus double value on her coupons provides the item either free or for just a fraction of its retail value, she buys as many as her coupons will allow. "I never have to pay full price for those items because I always have some on hand," she added.

She believes that her success comes from her shopping methods, particularly from watching grocery store advertisements closely. "Each week I check the sales papers and match coupons with the ads. If I catch something on sale and I also have a coupon, that will cut the price in half."

Although she consistently saves when buying groceries, her greatest one-time shopping spree came last fall when a local department store offered four times the face value on coupons. Brenda purchased over $283 in cleansers, shampoo, conditioner, hair spray, paper goods and other items. "When I finished using my coupons, they had to pay me over $11," she said proudly. "From that, I also had some rebates and probably made about $20 more."

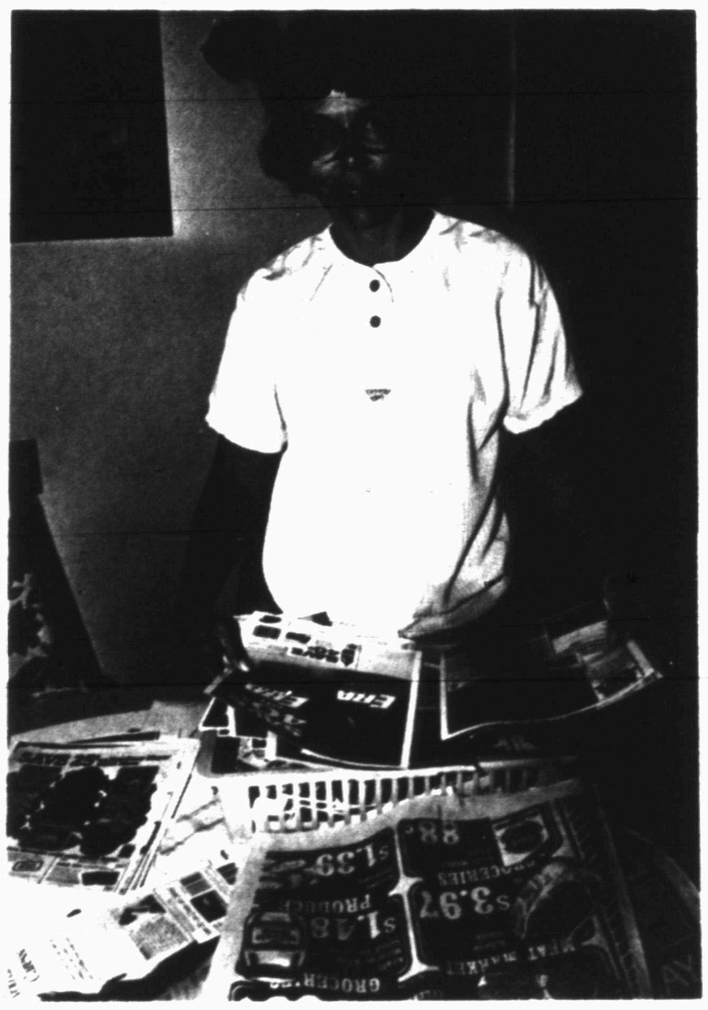

Brenda's rebating has also brought some admiration from her family. "My daughter told me one day that I was such a good mom because I'm always buying her things. I asked her what she meant because I rarely ever just go out and buy toys. Then she said, 'But all those toys come in the mail.' Things that are real nice I usually save to use as Christmas gifts and stocking stuffers."

A portion of her rebate cash also helped her son purchase a car.

Although she loves using coupons, she quickly pointed out that she doesn't purchase an item just because she has a coupon for it. Nor does she buy items just to take advantage of a rebate offer. "I don't save for those things that would require buying a product I don't use, like dog food for example, or if the coupon savings aren't that great," she noted.

She averages only about 30 minutes each day collecting the

At Faith Baptist Church...

Afternoon ceremony unites couple

Mary Lou Eubank and William Paul Favor were united in marriage April 16 in the Faith Baptist Church with Rev. L.W. (Buck) Hatfield officiating the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Dennis W. Eubank of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Favor of Nolan.

The afternoon ceremony was conducted before a brass candelabra. Brass containers placed at each side of the altar held rose and white carnations, rose and white variegated snapdragons and baby's breath.

Mary Nell Bullard, great aunt of the bride, played piano selections and the "Wedding March." Julie Jones, the bride's cousin, sang "The Wedding Song" and "He Is Now Among Us."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an off-shoulder, chiffon over satin gown chosen by her father. Venise lace outlined the sweetheart neckline and the satin and chiffon melon sleeves. Hundreds of seed pearls and rhinestones highlighted the lace design in the dress. The tightly fitted bodice was accented with a satin, tucked cummerbund. Chiffon over satin formed a circle skirt and cathedral train. Venise lace outlined the hem.

The shoulder-length pouf veil of bridal illusion attached to a satin crown accented with seed pearls was designed and made by the bride's mother.

She carried a bouquet of rose and white carnations accented with baby's breath and stephanotis. Wedding bands belonging to her maternal grandparents were attached to the bouquet by loveknots in rose and white satin ribbon. The rings, carried for good luck, represent a long and successful marriage.

In keeping with tradition, the bride's dress served as something new with a gold locket belonging to the groom's maternal grandmother, the late Pearl Woodward, as something old. She borrowed a ruby and diamond dinner ring from her mother and wore a blue garter given to her by the groom's mother. Bonnie Favor of Odessa, sister-in-law of the groom gave her a penny to wear in her shoe.

Dressed in a floor-length, rose satin dress with matching lace belt and white accessories, Bonnie Favor served as matron of honor. She carried a smaller version of the bridal bouquet.

Flower girl Casey Jones, cousin of the bride, wore a formal rose satin gown with a lace overskirt, sash belt and white accessories. She carried a white basket adorned with rose and white satin ribbon streamers and rose carnations attached to the handle. The bride's mother designed the basket.

For her daughter's wedding, the mother of the bride chose a two-piece, pink linen dress with matching accessories, while the groom's mother wore a two-piece pink suede suit with matching accessories. The couple's fathers chose steel grey suits.

John Favor of Odessa stood as best man for his brother. Ring bearer James Paul Favor, the groom's son, carried a white satin, heart-shaped pillow trimmed in Venise and valenciennes laces and seed pearls designed and made by the bride's mother. The men were attired in black tuxedoes and rose carnation and baby's breath boutonnieres.

A reception followed in the fellowship hall of the church.

Guests registered at a table covered with white embroidered broadcloth highlighted with a wedding treasure box created by Cloyce Holder of Noland. Guests came from Snyder, Colorado City, Odessa and New Mexico.

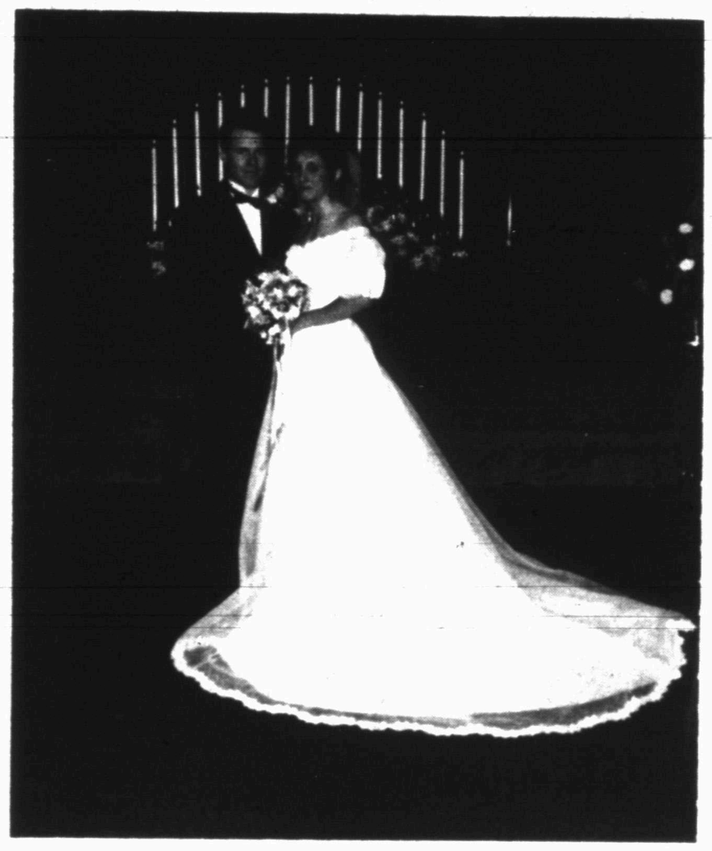

One table, covered with white embroidered broadcloth, served for both the bride and groom. The three-tiered cake, made by Tori Lyons, was topped by two white doves with a miniature bride and groom beneath five-inch white columns. A winding arrangement of pink and white carnation petals joined the three tiers. A silver tray holding heart and bell-shaped mints was placed next to the cake.

The groom's chocolate cake featured an "F" monogram. His mother made chocolate mints to complement the cake. Nadine White, cousin of the bride, served the cakes from silver and crystal plates used by the groom's parents in their wedding.

The bride's parents honored the couple with a barbeque in their home to finalize wedding activities.

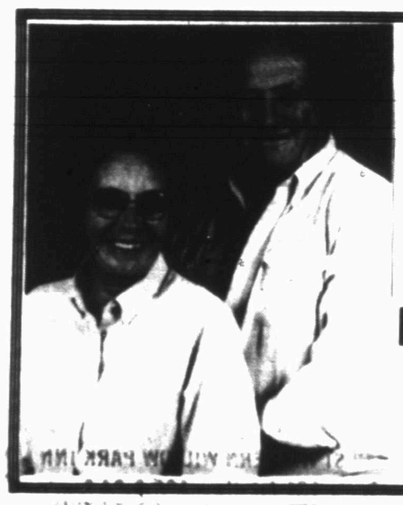

A 1986 graduate of Ballinger High School, the bride also attended Snyder High School.

The groom is a 1978 graduate of Permian High School in Odessa. The couple own and operate a convenience store in Winters.

"SUGARLESS" FOODS CAN HAVE SUGAR CALORIES

"Sugarless" and "sugar-free" food products may still contain calories from sweeteners, in spite of their label claims.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) defines "sugar" as sucrose, which is common table sugar.

However, other sugars such as glucose and fructose, and related natural sweeteners called "sugar alcohols", including xylitol, sorbitol and mannitol, can be used in food processing.

All these sugars and sugar alcohols contain as many calories as table sugar and break down in the body in a similar way.

But because of the narrow definition of sugar used by the FDA, a food can be labeled "sugar-free" and still be high in sugar-contributed calories.

Nutritionists point out that sugar alcohols do not contribute to the development of cavities in the teeth, which is why they are often used in "sugarless" gum and candy.

But a food will be lower in calories only if it is sweetened with the artificial sweetener saccharin, or the non-nutritive sweetener aspartame.

REMOVING SMOKE DAMAGE FROM FABRIC

Studies on the removal of smoke damage from washable clothing indicate the best procedure may be washing them at home.

Tests on cotton, polyester and cotton-polyester blend fabrics show that washing removes smoke damage more effectively than dry cleaning.

Both visible smoke damage and odor may be successfully removed from washable fabrics using the following laundry procedures:

—Use the normal or regular cycle with warm wash and warm rinse. Keep the load small so fabrics have room to move easily in the water.

—Use a liquid laundry detergent, following the manufacturer's recommendations for amount. If you don't have liquid laundry detergent available, use a powdered detergent containing phosphates and liquid chlorine bleach. Use the amounts recommended on the label. Be aware that the bleach may cause some fading or other damage to the fabrics.

—Repeat the washing from three to five times until all smoke odor is gone. Avoid drying the fabrics between launderings if possible. If the fabrics must be dried, use no heat in the drier since heat may inhibit the removal of smoke damage.

Guild sets auditions

Kathleen H. Fitzgerald of Bangs will act as judge during the National Guild of Piano Teachers local auditions slated Monday through Friday.

Students from the classes of Barbara Mott, Barbara Tune, Barbara Perkins, Judy Neill and Lynn Bethel will perform auditions in the parlor of First Baptist Church. Awards will be given according to the number of standard classic, romantic and modern pieces chosen from the masters of pianoforte literature each student can creditably perform.

An active Guild member, Fitzgerald is an approved music teacher of the American College of Musicians and a member of the Hall of Fame of Piano Guild USA. She is a life member of the National Federation of Music Clubs and now serves on the state board for the Texas affiliate.

An active member of the Schubert Music Club and the Brownwood District Music Teachers' Association, she is also a member of the Cross Timbers Music Teachers' Association at Tarleton State University.

Range Conservationist

Do you own native rangeland that you lease to others?

If so, it might be to your advantage to help your lessee plan and carry out grassland improvement measures.

Rangeland needs a periodic rest from grazing pressure to let the better plants gain vigor and reproduce. But resting rangeland in a planned sequence might require more cross fences or more livestock watering facilities.

Brushy plants may also invade your grassland unless protective measures are used.

Rangeland also needs to be stocked and managed in a way that will allow improvement of the more desirable plants.

Most grassland improvement measures cost money and you can't expect your lessee to pay for them unless you help or work out a long term conservation lease arrangement.

For information about grassland improvement, contact personnel at the Soil Conservation Service by calling 573-1268 or at the office at 3423 Avenue T.

Although not too easy...

Painting requires moderate skill

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Painting the outside of your house will save you money and give you a sense of self-accomplishment equaled by few other do-it-yourself achievements. That's probably because you see the results of your efforts every time you look at your house.

Make up your mind ahead of time, however, that the job is not too easy. It doesn't require more than a moderate amount of skill. It is not difficult if you follow the fundamentals enunciated in any home maintenance book or booklet. But it is a task which calls on you to take the time to prepare the surface of the house, to balance yourself on a ladder and to select a quality paint. Since you will be doing the work yourself — and it is the labor that is costly — it is poor economy to save a few dollars by buying a cheap paint. It not only won't have the durability of a good paint; it won't look as good right from the start.

In choosing a color, assuming you want a change from the present hue, remember that color can affect the way a house appears to be. If a house seems too big and bulky, a dark color will cut it down. A light one will make it seem larger. Even though you have seen the houses in your neighborhood many times, take a special walk for the sole purpose of seeing which ones seem most attractive and which do not. Even if it doesn't affect yur choice of color, you will be surprised at how many things you notice that escaped your attention in the past.

Preparing the surface is the single most important factor in getting a first-class result. Cracked and blistered paint must be scraped and the area primed. Loose dirt and grime should be brushed away. Sandpaper any remaining glossy paint, otherwise the new paint won't hold well. Remove loose rust, re-nail where necessary and caulk around doors, windows, utility pipes, etc.

If you are getting ready to paint the outside of your house, here are some tips that will help you to do a good job:

—If there is likely to be a problem with insects getting into the wet paint, buy an insect repellent that can be mixed with the paint before applying.

—The color of paint always appears lighter after it is applied than it did in the can.

—If you paint over stain, always apply a sealer first. Forget about putting a stain over paint.

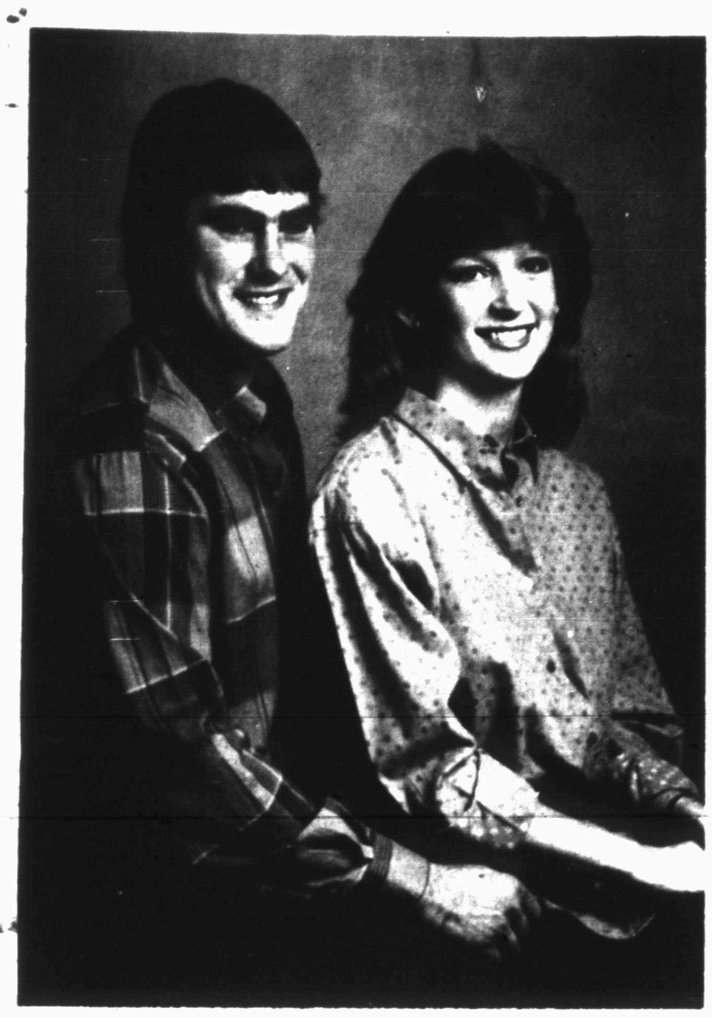

—Generally, it is best to put an oil paint over an oil paint, a latex over latex. If you want to put a latex over oil, as some people do, apply a primer between them, following the instructions on the container of latex as to the kind of primer it should be.

—Before you do any house painting, be sure in your own mind you feel comfortable on a ladder. If not, get a professional to handle it. If you do use a ladder, it should be placed so that its feet and the foundation of the house are separated by one-fourth the height of the ladder. And never go higher than the second rung from the top.

—When painting on a ladder, be sure no children are playing nearby.

—Whether you use a brush or a roller, always paint from a dry area into a wet one. Should you not be able to finish the job in one day, always stop after one side has been finished rather than in the middle of a side, no matter what you have been told about the paint leaving no brush or roller marks.

—Try to follow the sun as you move around the house. That is, paint where the sun has been, a procedure that will prevent the sun from drying out the paint too quickly.

Cloudy crystal ball

By James Jacoby

Although East and West might well make nine tricks in a heart contract, they lacked the clairvoyance to enter the auction. Despite his high-card values, West stayed out of the bidding over one spade because of his flat distribution. When the bidding ended at three diamonds, he hoped he had enough tricks to defeat that contract.

West cashed his three top diamonds and switched to the nine of hearts. Declarer won the ace and played a spade to the king. West took the ace and continued hearts. Declarer ruffed, threw a heart on his queen of spades and then relied on clubs splitting. When they did not, he had to go down a trick.

Declarer can play better. Let him play ace of clubs and a club to dummy's king. If that suit divides, he can come back to the queen and then force out the spade ace. But when clubs misbehave, he can change horses. He plays a spade to the 10, playing for the spade jack in the East hand and a reasonable spade division. He can then ruff the heart return, set up the spades by ruffing, and return to his hand with the club queen to enjoy the last good spade.

Of course none of this would work if West had simply made the opening lead of a club. Would that lead have needed some of the same clairvoyance that eluded East-West during the bidding?

FUNGICIDES PROTECT ORNAMENTALS FROM DISEASES

Homeowners who understand how fungicides work can produce healthier, more attractive ornamentals. Fungicides are almost always used as protectants rather than eradicants.

In other words, a fungicide prevents a disease-causing organism from penetrating so that spots or rots never appear. Generally it's too late to gain the highest level of benefit when disease development is obvious.

It's best to anticipate disease development and to use fungicides as a preventive. For example, roses almost always develop black spot if fungicides are not used. The fungus that causes this disease begins to build in population after leaf expansion in the spring and increases as the season progresses. Fungicides such as Funginex are effective in preventing infection when used on a regular schedule of about two weeks.

Fungicides are specific, so the right material must be selected to control a certain disease. This type of information is given on the product label along with rates and application procedures.

Most commonly used fungicides can be mixed with most commonly used insecticides. Such mixing can save time and effort by accomplishing two objectives at one time. Also, combination products are available that are already premixed.

Learning how to use fungicides effectively can be rewarding to the homeowner who is serious about keeping plants healthy. Being familiar with plant diseases and anticipating their occurrence will increase the satisfaction of using preventive fungicides.

Mexico's food imports were valued at an average of $1.72 billion a year in the period 1981-83, or 22.4 percent of the Latin American total for the period, according to the InterAmerican Development Bank. Brazil was second with yearly imports of $1.42 billion, or 18.5 percent of the region's total. Venezuela was third with imports of $1.2 billion, or 15.6 percent.

Phillips to celebrate wedding anniversary

Raymond and Bea Phillips celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Tuesday. The couple married on that date in 1936 in Robert Lee.

Although they lived most of their married life in Blackwell, the Phillips moved to Snyder after retiring as a farmer and rancher. Since her husband's retirement, Mrs. Phillips has worked part-time in the nurseries at First United Methodist and Trinity United Methodist churches.

The Phillips have five children, Vetta Underwood of Snyder, Kay Martin of Graham, Billie Jo Huffman of Spring, Bobby Ray of Nacogdoches and Esther Eoff of Blanket. They also have 11 grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Their children will host a family celebration for them in the Towle Park pavillion Saturday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Power chairs to take their place in homes

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Americans have eaten power lunches and worn power ties; now it's time for the power chair.

At the recent furniture market in North Carolina, chair makers plugged into the electronics age with all the enthusiasm of new converts. Besides motorized recliner chairs and modular seating, cabinetry fitted for home electronics components or storage was also viewed by retailers coming to buy new merchandise.

While furniture that moves is far from new (after all, sleep sofas and recliners have been popular for decades), a new variation is what the industry is calling motorized motion chairs. In place of the traditional side-mounted person-powered handle there is a small electronic button.

The advantages of the motorized chairs are said to include ease of operation and novelty. They cost about $200 more than a similar chair without the feature, on average. After an initial successful introduction of electric recliners in October by one manufacturer, virtually all the others were showing such chairs at this market.

This also appears to be the year recliners have become respectable. Although motion chair sales have grown faster than the industry as a whole, in the past their low-brow image as the favored seat of the beer and pretzel crowd kept some of the more status-conscious manufacturers from offering them. This year a number of these holdouts did include recliners in product lines.

Although originally the industry expected its major market for motion chairs to be the elderly and infirm, early sales figures indicate more gadgetoriented consumers in the 30-45 age group are so far proving to be the more likely purchasers, says Patrick Norton, vice president of La-Z-Boy Chair Co.

A market does already exist in hospitals and health care centers for the chairs, many of which offer an expensive additional feature, lifting an occupant up out of the seat, raising the price to $1,000 or more.

Most manufacturers added the electric feature to their best-selling styles, which they continue to produce in the old way, as well. The electric feature generally adds $200 to the price, which covers the costs associated with purchasing and installing the electric motors, according to Jack Hafkey, vice president of Barcalounger.

A wide range of chair types include some which fully recline and others which are known as "incliners" and have fewer positions but take up less room. A number of companies are offering two-year warranties on the motor, in addition to longer warranties on the reclining mechanisms.

Retailers are the ones who built the demand for the new electrified models, being offered rather unenthusiastically by most of the manufacturers who commented. They are concerned about servicing problems in an industry where "upholsterers are not equipped to repair electric motors."

. Also of interest to those consumers who own or contemplate buying a recliner, whether electrified or not, is an upcoming change in standards to correct a numerically infrequent but potentially catastrophic situation in which some children have gotten their heads caught while playing unattended with a recliner.

In the past five years, the Consumer Product Safety Commission found evidence of three deaths and two serious brain injuries to children who were trapped when their heads entered the opening between the chair seat and leg-rest as their own body weight forced the legrest down.

Besides urging parents to train children not to use recliners as toys and working with the CPSC, recliner makers are developing industry standards that would further reduce the likelihood of head entrapment.

Joe Ziolkowski, chairman of the Inter-Industry Committee on Recliners of the American Furniture Manufacturers Association, said new warning labeling would begin to be attached to recliners and retooling to further minimize any hazard.

ELLINGTON OPERA TO BE PREMIERED

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Queenie Pie," an opera by Duke Ellington, will have its first performances here during the American Music Theater Festival's Sept. 11-Oct. 12 season.

Ellington composed all the music for "Queenie Pie," which he had started as an opera for TV. His son, Mercer Ellington, completed music for Ellington's tone poem, "The Three Kings," after his father's death in 1974.

The story, with book and lyrics by Duke Ellington and George David Weiss, tells of a flamboyant Harlem beauty queen and her journey to an exotic island in search of ultimate happiness. The Ellington Band will be in the pit.

It will run Sept. 18-28 at the Zellerbach Theater.

Local shopper finds couponing pays off

coupons and saving proofs of purchase. With the time she must use to match coupons with each week's ads, she estimates she spends between eight and 10 hours each week with the enterprise. Currently she utilizes a corner of one room for about four or five boxes of coupons. Since she has only been saving labels and cartons for about six months, her proofs of purchase occupy about four more boxes.

Brenda advises persons interested in couponing and refunding to "try to buy when products are on sale and combine coupons with the sales. When a coupon is good for any size product, buy several little ones and use several coupons. You can come out with more product for less money. Sometimes you have to buy the next larger size because some stores will not double the coupon if it exceeds the purchase price."

Secondly, she said, "Ask everyone for coupons. People give me coupons often and my family helps out too." She added that she usually keeps even those coupons that she will never use until they reach their expiration date in order to "share them with anyone who wants them."

She also added, "Save all name brand items (labels and cartons) until you get the swing of it and know what you're saving for."

Brenda believes she is proof that couponing works and can save individuals more money than they can by buying store brands. "Almost all manufacturers of name brand products will offer a rebate of some type," she said.

This mother of three will continue the practice as long as those manufacturers offer coupons and rebates and "as long as the mailman keeps bringing those checks to my door."

Students studying history

Knights in shining armor, dragons and fair ladies hold a fascination for students of all ages. Fifth grade Project Excel students have been studying about the Middle Ages.

Research on topics such as castles, knighthood and chivalry, dress, including food, armor and weapons of this historic time were completed.

Other themes studied included the role of the church, the feudal system, role of peasants and medical practices during the Middle Ages.

Jack Gorman, assistant superintendent, presented a slide presentation to students about castles and other points of interest dealing with the Medieval period. Bill Lyon and the Madrigal Singers presented a program for some of the students, while others visited McCormick Glass co. for an introduction into the making of stained glass.

While acquiring a great deal of knowledge about this historic time period, the students also made use of research skills, improved organizational skills, practical problem solving skills, and were involved in creative expression.

VISITORS--This group of children from the Lollypop House Group Day Care Home visited the school administration building Thursday and each received a toothbrush and toothpaste. Children & Calcium

In a 3-year study of over 1100 public schools, the U.S Dept of Agriculture discovered that a large ratio of the students do not obtain the Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) of calcium Also, 30% of students get less than 2/3 of the RDA for calcium Long-term calcium deficiency may lead to chronic bone crippling disease later in life.

Town mourns teenager

HAWKINS, Texas (AP) — Still shocked and grieving, more than 800 Hawkins residents gathered to mourn the death of one of the city's brightest young people.

Suzanne Denise Harrison, an 18-year-old Hawkins senior, had been slain and two of her companions, Gena Turner and Bryan Boone, are still missing.

Somber relatives, classmates and friends filed quietly into Hawkins High School Auditorium Thursday afternoon to pay respects to Miss Harrison, a young woman whose bright smile left its mark on all who knew her.

"Even those who didn't really know Suzanne remembered her as the smiling girl at the drugstore or the smiling cheerleader on crutches," said the Rev. Bob Layman, pastor of Hawkins First Baptist Church. "They always identified Suzanne by her smile."

As mourners held hands and wept, Layman and the Rev. Dan Nuzum of Big Sandy's New Hope Baptist Church recalled Miss Harrison as a young woman who led by Christian example, and in doing so, touched the lives of those around her.

Opening Miss Harrison's Bible, Layman read underlined verses from Ephesians 4:31-32 that he said typified her life: "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

"As I read those verses," Layman said, "I knew how they had been pressed upon her heart."

Though Miss Harrison's life ended at a young age, "it was 18 full and packed years," he said. "She was that kind of person. It was a good one, the sermon this precious one preached. But it was a short one. Now she has passed it on to you to finish."

Nuzum told those gathered to take solace in the Scriptures and look to the Lord for guidance in times of tragedy.

The World War II Battle of Guadalcanal ended Feb. 9, 1943, with an American victory.

IRAs are subject of recent debate over income taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Individual Retirement Accounts, that new-found but widely used tax shelter for middle America, are becoming the focus of Senate debate on a plan for overhauling the income-tax system.

A full month before Senate floor action on the bill is likely, two Republican members have introduced a resolution that would put the lawmakers on record in favor of keeping fully deductible IRAs for everybody who can afford them.

It is no secret that President Reagan and Treasury Department officials are concerned about a provision in the overhaul bill that would allow the full IRA tax break only for workers who are not eligible for company pension plans.

Reagan telephoned Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chief author of the bill, on Thursday to congratulate him on the effort and said he is generally satisfied with the plan, White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters. Packwood chairs the Senate Finance Committee.

However, Speakes declined to say whether Reagan supports the anti-IRA part of the bill or another sensitive provision, which would repeal the preferential tax treatment of individual capital gains.

Reagan's own tax-overhaul plan would retain a fully deductible $2,000-a-year IRA for all workers and allow the same set-aside for spouses who earn no wages. Non-working spouses now are limited to a tax-deferred contribution of $250 a year.

And rather than repealing the tax break for capital gains, the president proposed to expand it so that inflation-caused increases in the value of stocks and other assets would not be taxed.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California attacked the Finance Committee bill Thursday on both issues and several others as well, as did Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont. Their complaints and the effort by Sens. Bill Roth, R-Del., and Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., to keep fully deductible IRAs marked a departure from what has been strong congressional support for the bill since it was approved by the committee on Wednesday.

"IRAs are absolutely essential for working middle-income families," D'Amato told colleagues.

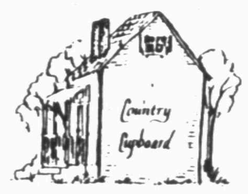

During World War I, the British ship Tuscania was torpedoed off Ireland and 213 persons were killed.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

May 11, 1986

Your desires to be more independent will be stronger in you in the year ahead. This could be good, provided you don't dissolve alliances that have been beneficial in the past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Continue to be financially prudent and practical. Don't base your spending on funds you hope to acquire. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Improvising last-minute changes in your plans will not gain you advantages today. Proceed with your original blueprint, minus the shortcuts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your workload could be a trifle heavier than usual today, so it's important to keep pace with your duties. Once you fall behind, you'll not catch up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you buck the will of the majority today, it could cause dissension within your group. Bite the bullet — smile and join in.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In competitive involvements today you're more apt to be tripped up by your own carelessness than by the opposition. Be sure to tie your shoestrings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's best not to talk about something prematurely toady that you are hoping to do. You could feel a bit foolish later if you don't pull it off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Analyze your present budget to determine if it is elastic enough to take on additional expenses. Put a damper on your spending if it isn't.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Respectfully listen to the suggestions of others today, but don't abdicate your own good judgment. The ideas they offer may be off track.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be better off in the long run today if you do things yourself rather than work with inept assistants. They're apt to hinder instead of help.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In situations that have elements of chance, you might not be as lucky as you think today. Should you win, it may be only temporary.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not make decisions today that will affect your family without consulting everyone first. They may have valid reasons for disapproving.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Think before you speak today or you might unintentionally offend a friend. Don't comment on anything until your mind is in proper gear.

May 12, 1986

In the year ahead, you will form a partnership that will prove beneficial. The profits you get will be of the type that can't be measured materially.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Promises you make today must be backed up with sincerity. If you renege on a pledge it could jeopardize a relationship. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. May $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Commercial deals can be hindered by fuzzy thinking today. Proceed cautiously, and ask questions if you're in doubt.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might have to contend with an associate today who you know is envious of your accomplishments. Don't tell this person more than you should.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Expecting things to fall into your lap without expending effort will lead to disappointment today. You must work for what you hope to gain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're straightforward in your conversations with intimate friends, but today you might try to camouflage the basic facts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You have what it takes to be successful in the business world today, provided you don't let your self-doubts cause you to believe otherwise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Have alternatives ready today in case someone throws a monkey wrench into your plans. If you get caught off guard, you might get confused.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something profitable could develop for you today from a joint venture. But to reap rewards, you're going to have to be clever.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) At a gathering with friends today someone you're not fond of may get more attention than you. You'll look bad if you react jealously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Little of value will be accomplished today if you divide your time equally between work and pleasure. Put your toys away, and get down to business.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let yourself be drawn into a conversation today with friends who are gossiping about a pal. Introduce a fresh topic.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Stand together as a family unit today if something occurs that involves outsiders. Togetherness will supply the strength to resolve the matter properly.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

See if this ad pitch makes you want to go out and buy the product. Imagine it is being delivered by some old geezer sitting on the front porch, talking in a flat, deadpan voice.

"If you're in the market for a pair of blue jeans, go out and buy ours. They are made of denim so tough they will feel like a cow's tongue for the first two months you wear them.

"They also are sold 1½ times bigger than the size they will be after you wash them once. Because of this, we recommend you be careful in choosing your size.

"Also, we cannot take them back once they are washed. That's just the way it is. Sorry about that."

The product he would be referring to are Levis. Not those fancied up versions which began being released in the 1960s, but just plain old button Levis.

The first pair we ever owned cost Mom and Dad $4.95 and measured 27 inches in the waist. At that they were about one size too big around.

What we called old button Levis are now referred to in newer, slicker advertising as 501 Blues. They have become a status symbol again.

Trendy clothes are not our long suit. This because truly trendy clothes are never sold on sale — and most of our buys have a patch of red tags stuck to them.

Umpteen years of flare-legged blue jeans have started to grow a little old with us, however — walking around looking like Sonny Bono when he still had Cher. So we began to secretly pine for the straight-legged button Levis of our youth.

When they suddenly became "in fashion," it seemed a natural direction to head.

However, speaking from the standpoint of a new owner of a new pair of Levis, there are still a few bugs to be worked out.

First off, you should probably hire someone to wear your britches during the break-in phase. This would eliminate the chaffed thighs and raw knees which occur during the first 50,000 miles or so.

We also forgot that the design of Levis requires they be worn low on the hips. The jean maker did not waste a lot of material between where the legs begin and where you buckle your belt.

Consequently, a fellow who tries to hitch his pants too high can cause himself some great discomfort — particularly during the break-in phase.

Levis before they have been washed have been described as stiffer than a plowshare on a winter's morning.

Our new britches were bought last Christmas. This past week the first 100-degree reading on a bank time and temperature machine showed up. They are finally getting soft.

We have another problem, however, one which we are beginning to face up to. In true beginner form, we blew it on the waist size and our jeans are one size too tight.

Until last week, we just figured they would loosen up some.

Consequently, we have a nicely broken-in pair of 34 inch by 36 inch button Levis for sale or trade. We'll take anything that doesn't have fringe on the legs or a signature on the flank.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Dear Reader,

This is an open letter to all you chicken-hearted souls who think you are doing your unwanted dog or pet a favor by taking him (or, more likely, pregnant her) "someplace out in the country" to dump, in hopes that "some nice farm family will give him a home."

First of all, what makes you think we want your pet? We have plenty of our own. And secondly, let me tell you the reality of what happens to your dog or cat — we'll say dog — when he gets put out of the car on some highway or country road.

Remember that chances are you have had your dog long enough for him to become attached to you, and to depend on you for shelter and food. I have seen dogs on the side of the road, in the same spot, for days, even weeks, trotting back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, where he last picked up his owner's scent, until he eventually gets struck by a car and left to die.

Or until he finally gets so starved that he takes off across country, in search of something to eat. Of course, he's used to being fed dog food regularly, and he has no idea how to fend for himself. Eventually his fur becomes incrusted with cockleburrs and stickers, his pads split open and bleed, and so many ticks attach themselves to his skin that he grows weak and feverish. Not only does he slowly starve, but he may go days without water as well.

When he does come upon a farm or ranch house — so pitiful and eager for a friendly word and something to eat — he is usually attacked and often killed by the farm dog who already lives there. Dogs are extremely territorial, farm dogs even more so, and will almost never accept a strange dog.

But say, for example, your beloved pet is a female, and the male farm dog accepts her. What about the family? If it were you, and a stray dog came up to the place, a dog about whom you knew nothing, tick-infested, who may not even like children or who may have a penchant for chasing your cats — would YOU want it? Probably not.

So when your pet does find a "home," the first thing that generally happens is that the farmer takes him out and shoots him, showing more mercy in a quick death than you did in the first place.

One more thing. You may think your pet is gentle and good-natured. Chances are he is. As an individual. But put him in a pack with a group of stray dogs, and the pack mentality will take over every time. Packs of dogs running through the country kill sheep, chase down calves and mutilate children.

Let me tell you an alternative to dumping your dog or cat "out in the country." There is a fine dog pound, right here in Snyder, the Scurry County Veterinary Clinic, located on 37th Street and the Brick Plant Road, right at the junction of Highway 180. When you take your pet in there, the nice ladies who work there will have a gentle pat for his head and a kind word. They will take down all the information you have about him: his name, his shots, if he's good with children, and so on. All free of charge.

They will place him in a clean, spacious cage with a dog who is compatable and not threatening and will feed and water him regularly. If you ask, they will give your pet the hard sell to a prospective family and do all they can to place him in a good home. They say that every day, a dog is adopted. At your request, they will give you a chance to come back for him after three days if you change your mind. If not, they will put him to death quickly and mercifully.

One word to prospective adoptees: if you would like a pet and the classified offerings are slim, give the pound a try. One advantage of adopting a grown dog, for example, is that they won't chew up your garden hose! Often there are wonderful family pets at the pound, who had to be given up because a family was moving or couldn't keep pets where they are now living. You might be pleasantly surprised.

Anyone who has lived around animals for long, especially dogs, will tell you that a dog will grieve for his or her family just like a person. By taking him to the pound, you give him a real chance to find a new family, or at the very least, not to have to suffer any more than is absolutely necessary.

But taking your pet "out to the country" is an option none of us can afford.

Thanks,
Deanie Francis Mills

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
May 4

Sunday's election returns included an upset for incumbent County Judge Preston Wilson, who lost his bid for the Democratic nomination to three-time challenger Bobby Goodwin.

Goodwin won by a 318-vote margin, defeating Wilson 1,789 to 1,471.

For Pct. 1, incumbent Duaine Davis outpolled his two opponents, but apparently fell some 4 votes shy of an outright win. He will face Fred Cross in the runoff.

Results reported for the Republican primary Sunday indicated former deputy Troy Martin picked up 62 percent of the votes to earn the right to face Democratic incumbent Dan Callaway in the November General Election. Martin defeated Penny Clark 391 to 232.

MONDAY
May 5

Karlene Thompson, Mike McWilliams and Justin Webb were chosen as Snyder High School's top athletes for the 1985-86 school year during Monday night's All-Sports Banquet at Scurry County Coliseum.

In addition, the Bill J. Hood Scholar-Athlete award went to Don Osborn.

City council members tabled "for further study" Monday a request by local volunteer firemen who asked to alter their own department regulations regarding travel in personal vehicles to the scene of a fire or other emergency.

The council's action to table was also opposed by one council member, David Hines, who indicated he would approve the rule change immediately.

TUESDAY
May 6

Western Texas College trustees may make a decision regarding the school's next president as soon as next Monday night, board president R.C. Patton said Tuesday.

Patton's comments followed an interview Monday night with a local candidate for the post, Dr. Harry Krenek, former dean of instruction at WTC now acting as chief executive officer for the campus.

WEDNESDAY
May 7

Snyder High School's Top 10 scholastic students — to include the valedictorian and salutatorian for the 1986 Senior Class — were to be announced at Wednesday afternoon ceremonies at Worsham Auditorium.

This year's valedictorian is Lesa Barkowsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Barkowsky; and the salutatorian is Mandy Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Johnson.

Scurry County Democratic Party leaders Wednesday agreed that a poorly printed number on the tally sheet from Box 18 in Saturday's Democratic Primary was in fact an 8 — forcing a June 7 runoff in the Pct. 2 commissioner's race between Tommy Pate and Jerry House.

THURSDAY
May 8

A go-ahead for the appointment of two individuals to the Snyder city council has been received from U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock, it was reported Thursday.

Woodward has granted an agreed order which clears the way for the appointments.

Formal arraignment proceedings were conducted Thursday in 132nd District Court for the two capital murder suspects in the local shooting death of an Allsup's store clerk.

At Thursday's hearing, Dorsey Lee Johnson and Amanda Lynn Miles, both of Colorado City and both age 19, pleaded not guilty to the charges against them.

FRIDAY
May 9

Expected jumps in unemployment for Scurry County proved true in March, according to the lastest figures released by the Texas Employment Commissioner.

The estimates here rose from 5.6 percent in February to 8.7 percent in March,

Ray Robbins, professor of criminal justice at Western Texas College, has been named a Piper Professor for 1986 — a first for WTC, it was reported Friday.

The Piper Foundation selects 10 college teachers each year for Piper Professor Awards, choosing recipients from nominees throughout the state. An honorarium of $2,500 accompanies a gold pin and a certificate for each honoree.

Graduation ceremonies for Western Texas College were conducted Friday night.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I was so displeased with the inclusion of Mr. Doug Manning's remarks in your May 2nd column, that I felt I must write and set the record straight.

Mr. Manning obviously needs to review World History and find out that France has won an innumerable number of wars in its history. May I remind him, and your readers, that without the help of the French army in the Revolutionary war, America might have remained a British Colony much longer, further that the D-Day invasion in 1944 might have failed without the underground help of the French Resistance.

American People may decide to stop drinking French wines. Instead, they may drink the wines from California growers who depended for their beginning on the knowledge and help of the French vineyards.

The contribution of the French good food is obvious, as anyone can see by looking at the French names on the recipes in their cookbooks.

As to French made cars, I prefer relying on what the knowledgeable journalists in such magazines as "Road & Track" say about them. For example, the Peugeot 505 turbo: "When you're hot, you're hot..." (About the 1985 World Rally Champion — "Road & Track" April 1986 issue.)

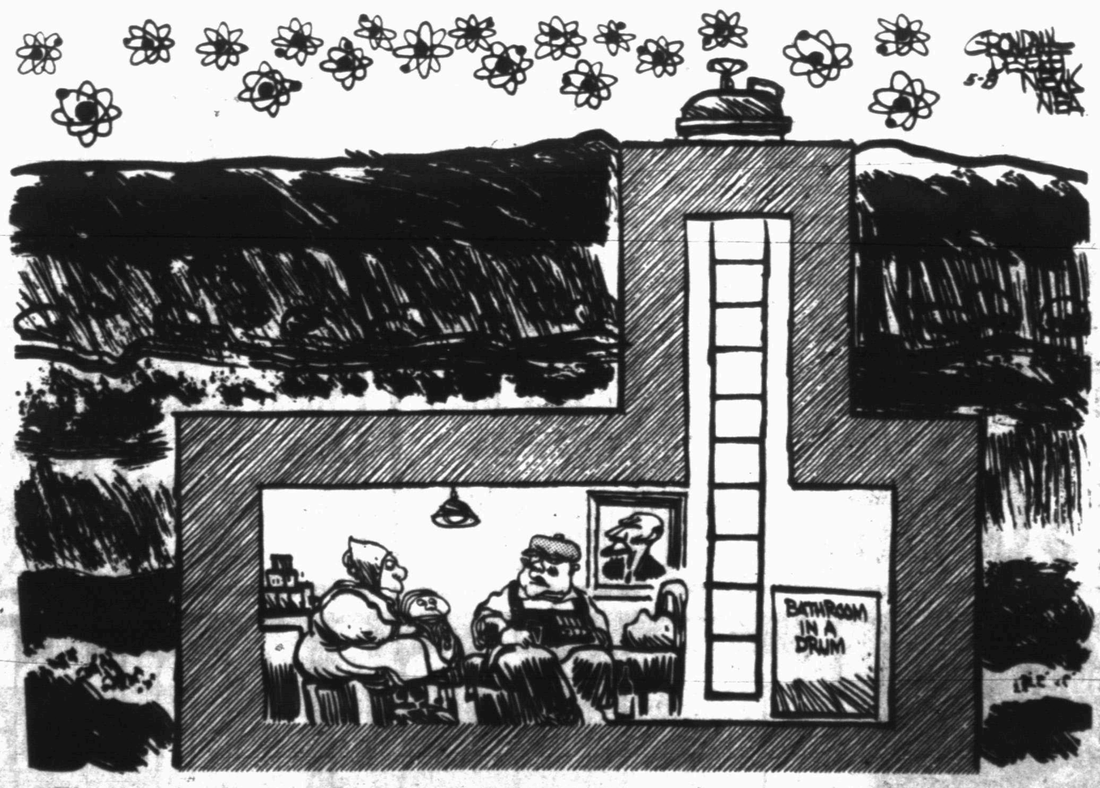

My family and I made a choice five years ago: to move to the United States and join the millions of immigrants who built America as it is today.

Like Mr. Manning and any sensible person, I strongly disagree with President Mitterand's decision not to allow American bombers to fly over France's air space. But it was Mr. Mitterand's decision, and all this is not a reason to insult France.

I was pleased to learn, through CNN news, that 61% of the French people approved President Reagan's decision to bomb Lybia.

Most French people know how

Memory loss merits an exam

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When I was a young girl, I became dehydrated and got slight brain damage. I went to special schools, but did graduate from high school. I am now 29 and find that I am slowly losing memory. My mother says I should eat fish. What foods and exercise are best?

DEAR READER — I think you should be seen by a neurologist. Brain damage does not necessarily produce memory loss, so you will want to make sure that some other treatable problem is not the cause of your problem. Fish is not brain food and exercises will not aid your failing memory.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is standing on your head good for your brain?

DEAR READER — Nope. In fact, there's some evidence that standing on your head will increase pressure in the brain's smaller blood vessels, thereby resulting in added risk of stroke (bleeding into the brain). Standing on one's head is acceptable behavior for youngsters and athletes who are involved in gymnastics, but for older patients, it is an activity best avoided.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've been on high blood pressure medicine for four years (I'm 47 and weigh 110). It ranges between 97-120/67-86. My pulse is 102 to 105. I'm tired all the time, no sex drive and my heart beats weird at times. Can you offer any suggestions?

DEAR READER — Your range of blood pressure is entirely normal. If your doctor agrees, I think it would be appropriate for you to reduce or omit your medicine for a trial period, during which your blood pressure is closely monitored. Many blood-pressure medicines cause fatigue and loss of sex drive; your symptoms may be due to a treatment that you could modify or discontinue.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What causes palpitations and what can be done to control this problem?

DEAR READER — Palpitations are irregularities in the heart's electrical activity. They can be seen as extra beats or cyclic runs of rapid pulse. Some palpitations are universal in healthy people and do not indicate disease. On the other hand, palpitations can be caused by a panoply of ailments, including hyperthyroidism and heart disease. Nicotine, caffeine, stress and tension can produce palpitations. To determine the cause of heart irregularity, people need thorough medical evaluations, including examinations, blood tests and cardiograms. I advise patients to see a doctor if they have more than an occasional bout of palpitations for which no obvious source is evident.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Every time I get water on my legs or arms, I get terribly itchy. I've been told it's an allergy, but no one can tell me to what.

DEAR READER — An allergy to water would be a truly unusual ailment. I'd be more tempted to blame your itchiness on sudden temperature changes that can cause the release of histamine in your system. Check with an allergist to clarify the issue.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME explains the symptoms and management of this common problem. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

Will machines do our dirty work?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Here is an anachronism: As medical technology improves, there seems to be an increasing proclivity to place the responsibility for health on machines, rather than on people.

For example, international scientists have developed a new blood-cleaning process that washes out substances believed to cause heart attacks. News releases have described how clinics in the United States, England, the Soviet Union, West Germany and Japan are using dialysis to remove low-density lipoproteins (LDLs) from the bloodstreams of patients who have massive accumulations of cholesterol that clog arteries.

The patient's blood is circulated through a machine that resembles an artificial kidney. Specific compounds can be leached from the blood as it travels through the machine. The purified blood is then returned to the donor. Tests have shown that as much as 82 percent of LDL can be extracted by this once-a-week ritual. As the disease-causing LDL is purged form the patient, the levels of high-density lipo-proteins (HDLs), the protective form of cholesterol, are raised, thereby causing an improvement in the LDL/HDL ratio.

If larger clinical programs confirm the promising results of early studies, huge numbers of people who are at risk of accelerated arteriosclerosis may someday undergo routine dialysis to prevent heart attacks.

Blood cleansing offers hope for other patients, too. Additional unwanted blood components can be removed. For instance, the technique has successfully been used in patients whose blood is overly thick from excess proteins, a condition called macroglobulinemia, as well as in patients with rheumatoid arthritis (to remove the "rheumatoid factor").

If thick blood can be thinned and fatty blood purged, why can't a whole host of blood-borne or blood-related diseases be treated in this way? In theory, they can. The scientific know-how is there; all that is needed is substantation of dialysis' beneficial effects ... and methods to market the process inexpensively.

To the average patient, blood cleansing certainly makes more sense than strict diets or chronic dependence on medications, which themselves have side effects and complications. Perhaps in 50 years or so, along with washing your windows twice a year and raking leaves in the fall, you will stop by your neighborhood Cleanso-Clinic and have your pipes flushed out. The units may be franchised like a chain of fast-food restaurants. As long as you rely on new and improved Hemo-Purge, you can gobble fatback, chain-smoke real unfiltered cigarettes until your teeth turn walnut, pop tranquilizers every hour and chug two six-packs a day. In other words, you can largely ignore being responsible for your own health. It's what we've all been waiting and hoping for.

I'm purposely exaggerating to make a point. However, the issue does raise some questions, particularly: Where does personal obligation end and machine responsibility begin? We appear to exhibit an almost blind confidence in (and reliance on) the miracles of medicine. Scientific advances have unquestionably improved our health, as well as enhancing and lengthening our lives. We eagerly grasp each new breakthrough — and we'd be crazy not to. However, when things don't work as well as we expected, we mercilessly blame treatments, machines, technicians and doctors — anything and anyone but ourselves. This attitude may not be in our best interests.

Naturally, the cynic might claim that machines are more reliable than human scientists, and I suppose there is truth in such skepticism. But, you must admit, the concept has something of a science-fiction ring to it. Long lines of overfed, underexercised, pasty, flabby clones, standing in line, paunch-to-paunch, waiting to have years of self-induced damage miraculously removed from their bloodstreams. Perhaps this new method will totally revolutionize the concept of human illness and finally put doctors in the role of fix-it people, rather than disease preventers.

Of course, I'm basically as enthusiastic about LDL dialysis as is any red-blooded American. The method has the real potential to save lives. On the other hand, I do worry about the issue of responsibility. We seem ever more inclined to rush headlong toward any system that assigns the accountability for human health on external forces, in preference to placing it on us, where it belongs. Maybe I'm just being old-fashioned. Nonetheless, I wonder what will happen to our collective psyche if we close our eyes, lie back and allow ourselves to be touched, caressed, fondled and seduced by machines. Will that sensuous captivation be another inexorable step toward the abrogation of self-control?

To the editor,

A bike-a-thon for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital was held on March 15. The day was windy and turnout was low. But, thanks to those who rode and those who sponsored, we were able to raise $248.

Our thanks to Charlotte McDorman and Margaret Beaver for their time and effort. For Well Tech Inc. which generously provided soft drinks and much more for our ride. Well Tech also helped us set up and clean up. To Kellye's School of Dance and Gymnastics for passing out sponsor forms to the classes; and to Everybody's Thriftway for kindly donating cups and ice.

A special thanks to all of those above. Let's hope St. Jude succeeds in its efforts to fight and someday cure cancer and other catastrophic childhood diseases.

To the editor,

It is an accepted fact that those of us who live in Snyder and Scurry County are accustomed to expecting a high standard of excellence in anything our people do in this community. That standard was certainly fulfilled for those who were present at Colonial Hill Baptist Church on Sunday evening, May 4, to witness the presentation of "How Great Thou Art," a musical arranged by David T. Clydesdale. It was a moving experience.

Jerald Garner, the minister of music at Colonial Hill, did a superb job, not only of directing, but also of arranging the drama which was presented as part of the program. It is the story of the Life of Christ during his last week on earth. Almost all the seats at the church were full, and the director and cast got a standing ovation when it was over.

More than 100 people were involved in this production. It was originally scheduled for the Easter season, but circumstances beyond the control of those involved caused it to be postponed twice. Surely it was worth the wait. The cast, including choir, orchestra, handbells, stage and production crews, makeup and drama were all Snyder people except six, and three of those were former Snyder residents.

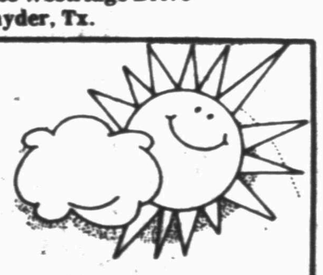

One person who witnessed the production told me, "My husband and I have seen "The Passion Play" in Arkansas twice, and I believe this was a more moving experience than it was." It was the best production I have ever seen in a church, and as good as I have seen anywhere. Had I not been recovering from a bout in the hospital, I would have been in the choir. Perhaps that was a break for me, for I had the privilege of seeing and hearing it as a part of the audience.

After it was over Sunday night I told Jerald that it was a shame to do that much work for just one presentation. He told me we would repeat it during the Easter season next year, and would present it at least twice. I hope the demand will be sufficient that we will do it three or four times. Perhaps then we can do it on as many week nights as necessary for those who attend their own churches on Sunday night to see it. I believe it was the most moving experience I have ever had. I think it caused me to realize more than I ever had before the agony Jesus Christ went through for me when he died on the cross.

I hope all who can will make plans to see and hear the musical production, "How Great Thou Art," at Colonial Hill Baptist Church during the Easter season, 1987. I assure you it will be an experience you will not soon forget.

REGARDING FM 1611 EXTENSION

Questions:

1) Since the economy of Scurry County has suffered greatly in the very recent past, and since the idea for this project was conceived and lobbied for prior to this present situation, do you still consider it wise to approve a plan requiring so much of the county taxpayers' dollars?

2) How do you feel about this so-called "by-pass" taking business away from local gasoline stations, restaurants, motels, and any of our other merchants?

3) Are enough of your constituents in favor of this issue? Have you considered their wishes?

4) Did you know that whenever this road was put into the master plan from work done by Southwest Planning of Bryan, Texas, that the projected population for the city of Snyder was 16,830 for 1985 and 18,780 for 1990?

5) If this road is being built as a truck route, do you think that it will be used as one? Or, do you think that the truck traffic will still use the "closer between two points" theory and go across the square?

6) Can you approve this project and retain a clear conscience knowing that a very hazardous intersection will be created where the Big Spring Highway and the proposed road would come together?

TO: The Citizens of Scurry County
FROM: Concerned Taxpayers of Scurry County

Questions:

1) If you oppose this proposal, have you signed one of the petitions that are being circulated?

2) Have you made it known to the Commissioners' Court if you are opposed to this subject?

If you would like to make your feelings known on this matter, please call the commissioners and judge before Monday morning at 10:00 a.m. At that time, the issue is on their agenda. It (the "Minute Order") must be accepted by this body by May 26, 1986, or the State of Texas will drop the project. To express your feelings about this subject, contact any or all of the following:

Mustangs, burros now for sale in Texas

DANBURY, Texas (AP) — Wanna buy a mustang for $150?

Step right up and get 'em at Mark and Tammy Wendel's Bureau of Land Management sale. They'll have burros for $80, mustangs for $150 and mustang mares with foals for $180.

The Wendels, of Danbury, adopted a burro named Jinny and two mustangs, Solo and Nevada, last November from the BLM. Danbury is a town of about 1,500 about 40 miles south of Houston.

Mrs. Wendel said the mustangs are more sure-footed than most horses, and that burros make great pets.

"We had our burro just two days before she started walking up to us instead of us walking up to her," she said. "It was a month before we could walk up to the mustangs and pet them. It just takes time and it depends on how much time you have to spend on them."

Because of their success with the burros and mustangs, the Wendels decided to hold the sale for the BLM at 8 a.m. Saturday in their pasture.

The Wendels expect 25 jennies (female burros) and 30 jacks (male burros), as well as four mares, two with foal.

"They came in all sizes and colors," Mrs. Wendel said. "There are times when you get a mare and she will be pregnant and not know it. You'll get two in one package for the same price. If you're lucky, you can get a (pregnant) mare with a foal on her side and you can three in one package."

The burros are coming from California, while the mustangs will be shipped from Nevada.

Sales are on a first-come, first-serve basis. Buyers put their name on a list. The buyers' names will be called when it's their turn to choose the animals.

WARNING! SOMEONE IN WASHINGTON WANTS TO KILL YOUR IRA.

As you read this, the U.S. Senate is considering a tax law change that could change your future.

The Senate is considering abolishing the Individual Retirement Account.

It began as a proposal to cripple the IRA...to cut back on IRAs for people covered by other retirement plans.

Now there's a new scheme.

To kill the IRA deduction altogether.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO YOU?

If it passes, it could mean no more IRA contributions. In fact, no more IRAs.

If it passes and you were planning to add to your IRA...forget it!

If it passes and you were counting on your IRA to supplement your Social Security...forget it!

WASHINGTON, ISN'T THERE A BETTER WAY?

All of us know the problem. We know Congress is in a crunch. We know our legislators are struggling to reform the tax system, to maintain revenues, to slash spending...and to do it all fairly.

They've got a lot of tough choices to make.

The question is: Why this choice?

WHY TAKE AWAY THE BEST INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLAN EVER?

By any measure, the universal IRA, enacted by Congress in 1981, has been a spectacular success. By now, over 28 million households have accumulated over $250 billion in IRAs. And more and more people are starting IRAs every year. With Social Security a worry, the IRA is vital to everyone...every family, every individual who can make modest, regular contributions toward retirement.

And all those long-term savings help America's economy grow.

But if Congress makes the wrong choice...if the tax bill includes any of those anti-IRA schemes...that remarkable plan would be crippled or killed outright.

LET'S TELL THEM NOT TO DO IT.

If you believe attacks on the IRA are ill-advised...if you believe the IRA program is working for you and your family...if you want to continue saving for retirement through your IRA...if you believe individual Americans should be encouraged to provide for their security...say so.

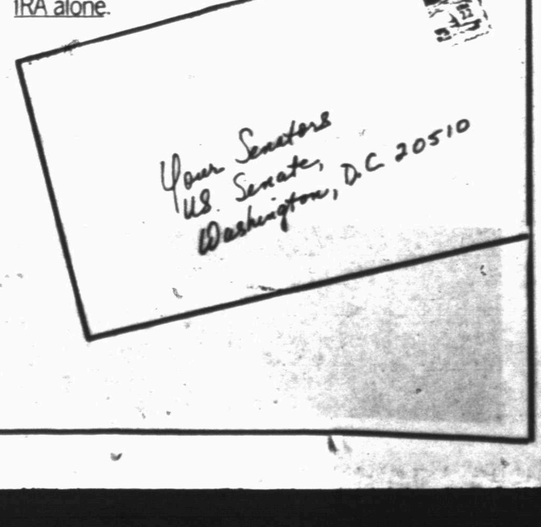

And say it this week.

NEXT WEEK MAY BE TOO LATE.

Write today to both Senators from your state. Tell them, in your own words, how important your IRA is to you, to your family, to your future.

Congress does listen. Your voice does count. Use it. Write today.

Tell them to leave your IRA alone.

Write Your Senators Today

Texas could face a recession

HOUSTON (AP) — Another voice has been added to the increasingly insistent chorus that Texans will one day soon have to swallow their pride and submit to an income tax.

"There will have to be a redistribution away from oil and gas," Jared F. Hazleton, president of the Texas Research League, said Thursday at a symposium his group sponsored on the state's economic outlook.

"There are only two real long-term options — a corporate and a personal income tax," he added. "It is clear to me that the tax system Texas has had is going to have to change. It's something we should prepare for."

Texas is one of only six states that have no corporate income tax, and one of four with neither a corporate nor personal income tax. Many legislators have insisted they will not even consider adopting those taxes, but economists at the symposium said that attitude may have to be discarded.

Hazleton said that if the price of oil stabilizes at $18 a barrel, Texas' economy won't be too disastrous, but the state could face a recession if the price continues at or under $15.

He said he expects the price of oil to peak at $18 by the end of the year and remain stagnant for two years.

"If you assume oil prices stabilize at $18 a barrel, you get no disaster in Texas, but a fairly moderate growth. If you assume $15 a barrel you get a real problem with the Texas economy continuing for a couple of years," he said. "If you assume prices lower than $15 you will see a very significant recession."

Texas is in for a period of sluggish growth, both in its economy and population, Hazleton said. And along with the stunted growth, the state is being affected by inflation, interest rates and the falling value of the dollar.

"This year, inflation is going to be as low as 1 percent" because the buying factors are not as strong as they used to be during the height of the oil boom, he said.

Hazleton said the lower value of the dollar is supposed to promote exports, but it hasn't. Yet he remains confident exports will pick up and stengthen the dollar.

He said many thought Texas was growing as a diversified state during the early 1980s when it actually was just becoming more dependent on oil.

Growth and income for the state was at its height at 14 percent during 1982. In the third quarter of 1984, the rate was 12 percent and has declined since then to less than 4 percent, he said.

The Texas Research League is a non-profit group funded by corporate contributions.

Man freed by mistake

DALLAS (AP) — A drunken driver mistakenly released from prison after serving 10 months of a 10-year sentence for killing a Grand Prairie police officer will be credited with the time he was not in prison, officials say.

That makes Dale Ross Looper, 33, of Hood County immediately eligible for parole.

Despite opposition from police, the Dallas County district attorney's office and the dead officer's family, parole officials said Thursday that Looper will get credit for the last 2½ years, while he has been free, toward his sentence for killing officer Lyndon King in 1982.

Bombing assessed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon for the first time acknowledged that some U.S. bombs hit civilian areas during last month's air raid on Libya, and added that it is seeking details on the Arab country's claim it has recovered the body of an American flier killed in the attack.

The Defense Department said Thursday that three bombs dropped by an F-111 bomber missed their targets, "and it seems likely they impacted in the vicinity of the French Embassy," a building in Tripoli that was damaged during the April 15 raid.

In addition, two other bombs aimed at a terrorist barracks compound in Benghazi were errant, the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department has never provided a detailed breakdown on the number of bombs dropped during the nighttime raid. Pentagon sources disclosed, however, that more than 225 bombs of various types — 500 pound, 750 pound and 2,000 pound — were used, totaling 100 tons worth of ordnance.

That would mean that about 2 percent of the bombs known to have been dropped during the raid hit civilian areas.

In 1950, the Soviet Union announced possession of the atomic bomb.

DEAR READERS: The following Mother's Day column has been requested for an annual rerun. I think it's worth repeating, and hope you agree.

DEAR ABBY: I am a long-time reader but have never written before. I am enclosing a part of your column that I have kept in my Bible for years. As you can see, it is yellowed and shredded, and half of it is missing. I don't know how many hundreds of times I have read it. It gave me such a feeling of peace and comfort. It was titled "A Prayer for Mama."

Will you please print it again? I would love to have another copy. Thank you.

DOROTHY L.

DEAR DOROTHY: With pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: My beloved mother passed away recently, so I called the minister and asked him for the wording of a prayer I could say for my mother. He said, "I'm too busy — and a lot of good prayer will do her now!" You see, Mama went to church long ago, but my father never liked to go, so Mama finally quit going. Abby, I can't believe that heaven is open only to church members.

I've called all the bookstores in town and they say there aren't any prayers for the dead in any of the prayer books they have. I've heard there are places where you send a few dollars and they pray for the dead, but I don't know their addresses.

Abby, I'd be so grateful if you would print a short prayer I could say for my mother before I go to sleep. Any faith is acceptable. I can't let you send it to my home because my father looks over the mail first and I'm sure I'd never get it. Please don't turn down my odd request. It means the world to me. Thank you, and God bless you, Abby. Sign me ...

A PRAYER FOR MAMA

DEAR PRAYER: I found this prayer in my Union Prayer Book. It is the one Jews recite on Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) to honor the memory of a deceased mother:

In Memory of a Mother

"I remember thee in this solemn hour, my dear mother. I remember the days when thou didst dwell on earth, and thy tender love watched over me like a guardian angel. Thou hast gone from me, but the bond which unites our souls can never be severed; thine image lives within my heart. May the merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou hast ever shown me; may he lift up the light of his countenance upon thee, and grant thee eternal peace! Amen."
