Not so 'good time'

Local law enforcement officials are among those who are not happy with "good time" laws permitting convicted felons to serve only part of their sentences before being paroled from the Texas Department of Corrections. Read about it in Sunday's Local section.

Head-on collision

The top two ranked college football teams in the country meet in a head-on collision in the Orange Bowl Saturday: Ground-pounding Oklahoma against Air Testaverde and of Miami. See Sunday's Sports section.

Mum's the word

Homecoming season is upon us, and with it the demand for elaborate corsages made with mums festooned with teddy bears, musical instruments and festooned with flower. Read about this phenomenon in the Sunday Lifestyle section.

Threat to security

Rising oil import levels, the highest since 1980, prompt a new round of warnings from industry and Congressional leaders on the threat foreign oil poses to U.S. national security. See Sunday's Business section.

Suit filed in wake of shigellosis outbreak

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

In the wake of the shigellosis outbreak in Midland and Odessa which affected some 250 people, a lawsuit was filed this morning in Ector County by Sherman Cox and Gary Cox against Creative Food n' Fun Co. and Comark, 70th District Court records show.

Sherman and Gary Cox, father and son respectively, own and operate a Taco Villa franchise operation in Big Spring and Snyder, as well as Texas Burger restaurants in both Midland and Big Spring.

Creative Food n' Fun Co. is a Delaware corporation operating in Texas through the ownership of Comark and "a great many Taco Villa restaurants and franchises," the plaintiff's original petition states.

While the Coxes own the Texas Burgers outright, the Taco Villas are operated by the Coxes as franchises which are owned instead by Creative Food n' Fun Co.

A Comark spokesperson in Odessa, who wished to remain anonymous, said, "actually we don't know anything about a lawsuit."

Sherman Cox was out of town and Gary Cox could not be reached for comment at his home or at his Big Spring or Snyder businesses at presstime.

"This is a very grave situation. Let's face it — the whole area has been impacted. A hysteria has been created and magnified by what could be a failure (on the part of Comark) to uncover information," Gary Riley, the Coxes' attorney said this morning.

"A double problem exists here.

"Comark was either not helping or concealing information. I find it odd that none of the Comark lettuce tested positive for the bacteria (though health officials claim it was the Comark lettuce that led to the shigellosis outbreak)," Riley said.

The second part of the problem, Riley said, is that the health department officials were forced prematurely into going public with the names of several of the restaurants who were being investigated.

Riley contended that had Comark promptly presented the lettuce and shredding machinery to the health department, it would not have been forced into making premature decisions.

Former banker's fate rests in hands of federal jury

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The fate of ex-banker William "Hoyle" McCright has been placed in the hands of six-man, six-woman jury today after attorneys from both sides presented final arguments in Federal District Court in Midland.

McCright, the 61-year-old retired bank officer, former member of the bank's board of directors and president of the Midland College Board of Trustees, was charged by federal grand jurors with embezzling and misapplying $1.925 million in the form of a 1981 loan to Midland West Corporation, of which, the indictment alleged McCright, was an owner. Further, he was charged with sharing and receiving $330,000 through the $1.925 million loan.

In addition, he was charged with two counts of making false entries.

During testimony Thursday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship tried to show that that McCright provided an inaccurate listing of his affiliated and related interests in his executive officer-director questionnaire forms for the bank's 1982 proxy.

He also tried to prove that the information did not note that McCright held 6.25 percent working interest in the Atkins prospect oil field; did not include his reversionary interests in oil field properties managed by Wood and Locker Inc. of Midland; and did not list his one-sixth right to collateral — commonly known as the H.G. Bedford Ranch — which secured an FNB loan of $2.444 million to Pen-Dee Corp.

Ed Stroz, special agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, testified Thursday that McCright acknowledged during a June 25 interview that he was a shareholder in the Midland West Corp., but did not actually receive a shareholder's certificate.

"Mr. McCright said he told Charles Frazier (former FNB president, chairman of the board and chief executive officer) that he was interested in building another country club (now Greentree Country Club) in Midland and that he was going to invest in it," Stroz said.

Stroz testified that McCright said "Frazier asked him if he was going to handle the financing" and "McCright said he told him he felt it would not be a good idea to do so."

Tax overhaul bill expected to sail through Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate supporters of landmark tax-overhaul legislation confidently predicted today that the package will easily pass its final congressional test, clearing the way for the most thorough revision of the tax code in a generation.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said he hoped to begin debate later in the day on the measure, which sailed through the House on a bipartisan 292-136 vote Thursday. Dole added that it might be possible to complete action on the legislation late tonight.

"I hope we can do as well as the House," Dole said.

He added, "Probably the easiest vote would be 'no'...But looking at tax policy for the future, the only vote is a 'yes' vote."

After the House vote on Thursday, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a prime author of the measure, said the Senate would approve the package by "a margin equally as impressive."

He repeated the comments today in an appearance on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," saying, "We ought to pass it by a margin of 75-25, 80-20, something in that nature."

President Reagan's signature on the legislation, which he has declared to be his No. 1 domestic priority, is certain. A ceremonial signing is likely the week of Oct. 5.

The bill would cut individual and corporate tax rates and eliminate or reduce several deductions and exclusions, including those for Individual Retirement Accounts, consumer interest and sales taxes. On the average, individual taxes would be cut about 6.1 percent and more than 6 million working poor would be dropped from the tax rolls.

Nonetheless, several million couples and individuals would face tax increases.

The reduction in individual taxes is being financed by increasing the overall burden on business by $120 billion over the next five years, a move that concerns opponents of the legislation and some economists.

Much of the upcoming Senate debate, expected to stretch over two days or more, was expected to focus on that concern.

General provisions

Standard deductions: Increased in two stages: For 1987, $2,540 (single), $3,760 (couples), $1,880 (married, filing separately), $2,540 (head of household); in 1988, $3,000 (single), $5,000 (couples), $2,500 (married, filing separately), $4,400 (head of household). Extra $750 (single) or $600 (married) for blind and elderly.

Exemptions: For most taxpayers, raised to $1,900 (1987), $1,950 (1988), $2,000 (1989); indexed to inflation from 1990 on. Reduced for high-income taxpayers. Extra exemptions for the blind, elderly eliminated.

Two-earner couple deduction repealed.

Earned-income credit: Benefit increased to maximum of $800; cut-off threshold raised to $17,000.

Unemployment income made fully taxable.

Income averaging repealed.

Oil & gas: Generally exempt from new rules against tax shelters; depletion allowances and faster drilling cost writeoffs mainly retained.

House panel approves temporary tax increase

By STEVE LEVINE
and DAVID PLESA
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With Speaker Gib Lewis ordering "drastic changes from normal procedures," the House State Affairs Committee Thursday approved a temporary, $872 million tax increase.

The move sets the stage for the summer's second special session to end early next week.

Lewis predicted the House, which has opposed taxes since the session started, would go along with the bill. Even if it passes, however, the Legislature will have eliminated only about 80 percent of the state's $2.8 billion deficit.

The full House is scheduled to vote on the bill Saturday. It imposes a 1.125-percent sales tax increase and a 5-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase and offers small- and mid-sized cities and counties an opportunity to reduce their property tax rates or create new transit systems.

The higher taxes would take effect Jan. 1, 1987 and expire Aug. 31.

The ultraconservative House Ways and Means Committee, which traditionally handles all revenue measures, refused to bend to pressure to report a tax bill back to the full House. Lewis said he had no choice Thursday but to try State Affairs.

"That's just one of those things that happens every once in a while," Lewis said. "The job of the speaker is to make decision that he has to make some drastic changes from normal procedures from time to time."

"You have to move, and time is of the essence at this time, and that's the only choice I had," he added.

Firefighters tested in emergency drill

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland Fire Department officers Thursday responded to a traffic accident near a local apartment complex involving a tanker truck, and once on the scene they had to respond correctly when faced with the possibility that hazardous materials could be present.

The scenario, created by a fire training specialist from the Texas A&M Fire Extension Service, led the officers through a situation similar to one that could develop in the Midland area, or any populated area, at anytime.

GOP vote counters: Reagan lacks votes to win sanctions showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hours before President Reagan's expected veto of new economic sanctions against South Africa, Republican vote counters said today that he had picked up some votes — but not enough yet — to win an override fight in the Senate.

"The veto situation is one which could go either way. I believe that there are the votes in the Senate to override the veto but I say that very reluctantly," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who has broken ranks with the White House on this key foreign policy fight.

Reagan has until midnight tonight to veto the legislation or it would become law without his signature. The White House was holding up announcement of the veto until after the House adjourned, expected at mid-afternoon, thus preventing a quick vote to override.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said a four-page message outlining Reagan's views would accompany the veto announcement "very late this afternoon." He said that Reagan's involvement in the battle to sustain the veto would depend "on what the possibilities are for success."

Lugar, appearing on the "CBS Morning News," said Reagan appears to have 25 to 30 of the 34 votes he would need to sustain a veto if all senators voted. Only 14 senators voted with Reagan in the Senate when the legislation was debated.

A veto, Lugar said, "will send a mixed signal to the world and to South Africa and we ought to not have that mixed signal."

The legislation, which was approved by huge margins in both the House and Senate, includes a ban on all new American investment and bank loans in South Africa.

The White House is resigned to seeing the Democratic-controlled House override the veto, leaving it up to the Republican-ruled Senate to decide whether Reagan wins or loses.

It's unclear how hard Reagan will fight to have his veto sustained. Lugar said Reagan would try to get senators to switch position by signing an executive order that embraces "nearly everything we did in the Senate." The Senate version was accepted by the House, which earlier had voted for a much tougher bill.

Canadian official blasts Barbie Doll sticker album

TORONTO (AP) — A Barbie Doll sticker album in which Barbie visits Canada to prevent white-furred baby seals from being clubbed to death has drawn angry protests from the fisheries minister in Newfoundland.

"It's factually incorrect and intellectually dishonest," the minister, Tom Rideout, told The Associated Press on Thursday. "No white-coated seals have been killed here for four years.

"It's almost incredible that someone would publish such material, directed to the emotions of children," he said.

Rideout said he has sent a protest letter to Barbie's creator, Mattel Inc., asking the company to withdraw the album from the market. Stores in St. John's, Newfoundland's capital, have done so voluntarily, he said.

At Mattel headquarters in Hawthorne, Calif., company spokesman Spencer Boise said the album is produced by Edizione Panini of Modena, Italy, under license from Mattel.

"We did clear this," he acknowledged. He said the company would consider any protests.

Boise said the album has been on the international market since 1983. He said he did not have sales figures for the album in Canada.

The album came to Rideout's attention when it reached stores in St. John's, a city of 600,000, after having been marketed in mainland Canada, the United States, Britain and Australia.

British newsman kicks to freedom in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A British journalist abducted today in west Beirut said he ignored a gunman's threat to shoot him if he did not submit and kicked his way to freedom from his kidnappers' car.

Correspondent David Hirst of The Guardian newspaper, the longest-serving Western correspondent in Beirut, said he was seized by three gunmen on the Moslem side of the Mreijeh crossing on the Lebanese capital's dividing Green Line at 6:45 a.m.

He said the taxi he was riding in got a flat tire and that the driver and an escort of three Druse militiamen were changing it when the gunmen approached the vehicle. They asked him who he was, then pulled him from the car.

He said he resisted, but that the gunmen shoved him into the back seat of a BMW automobile, blindfolded him and sped off. He said a gun was pressed against his left temple.

"I shouted. I tried to make as much noise as I could, especially when the car stopped or slowed down at traffic jams," said the silver-haired 48-year-old Hirst at the office of a Western news agency in west Beirut after his hour-long ordeal.

SUIT

These decisions resulted in economic losses for the Coxes, the petition stated.

The petition claimed that a Comark employee advised 19 Taco Villa restaurants to destroy the shredded lettuce supplied to them by Comark because it was infected with the shigella bacteria.

In the petition, the Coxes claimed negligence on the part of Comark for not notifying them regarding the shigellosis outbreak while emergency phone calls concerning the outbreak were made to 19 other area Taco Villas in Odessa, Midland, San Angelo, Lamesa, Monahans, Andrews, Levelland and Fort Stockton.

The petition continued "suits are imminent, or at least forseeable, against a Comark employee, individually, at least one member of the area broadcast media and potentially against an area county government official due to the actions of an elected offficial."

In the petition, the Coxes said they were named in early and rash releases forced upon Health Department officials in Odessa and Midland by one and, possibly more elected county officials and the broadcast media which was at best, "unprofessional and at worst, libelous, slanderous and defamatory."

The plaintiffs haven't determined the amount of money they wish to receive from the suit if won, but reserved the right to "amend, as evidence is produced, to allege very, very substantial damages for what is pleaded..."

TAXES

Some Ways and Means members bristled over the move. "It should have stayed in Ways and Means, that's the appropriate place for it," said Rep. John Willy, R-Angleton, an opponent of any special session tax increase. "But it's the privilege of the chair to make changes."

Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, and sponsor of the new tax bill, would not criticize Lewis' action.

"The speaker did what the speaker had to do to get a bill out," Schlueter said. "I'm carrying the bill, it doesn't make any difference what committee it comes out of."

The tax bill would:

— Temporarily increase the state sales tax rate from 4.125 percent to 5.25 percent, raising $582.4 million. Gov. Mark White suggested that increase when the first special session began Aug. 6.

— Temporarily increase motor fuels taxes by 5 cents a gallon, boosting the gasoline tax to 15 cents per gallon and raising $289.9 million.

— Allow counties that have no cities with metropolitan transportation authorities to offer voters the chance to impose a 0.5-percent sales tax in exchange for an equivalent reduction in county property tax rates. This would give sales tax authority to counties for the first time.

— Allow cities that have no transportation authorities to offer voters the same sales-for-property-tax swap.

— Allow cities with populations greater than 56,000 to collect an additional 0.5-percent sales tax to create public transportation departments. Cities that choose this option could not use the property-tax-reduction plan.

The committee approved the bill on a 7-4, mostly partisan vote. Committee Chairman Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, predicted "a lot of debate and a lot of amendments" on the House floor Saturday.

The tax bill does not take effect unless both the House and Senate approve the compromise $510 million plan on budget cuts. Nine of the 10 House-Senate budget negotiators signed that plan Thursday.

Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, refused to sign, saying "there was less than $300 million in real cuts." Toomey complained that the negotiators simply used accounting tricks to make up the remainder.

If the House passes it, the Senate plans to pick up the tax bill Monday. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said they were pleased with the committee's action.

Farabee said senators might question "some technical aspects" of the city-county sales tax options but probably would go along with most of the bill. Hobby and the Senate have pushed for tax increases since the first session began.

Beaumont Rep. Mark Stiles was the only Democrat on the committee to vote against the bill. Stiles said Comptroller Bob Bullock told him earlier in the day that lawmakers could delay action on a tax bill until the regular session begins in January.

"I just don't feel like being broken down and intimidated by the Senate to vote for a tax bill that I don't think we have to have," Stiles said.

TRIAL

Stroz went on to say that McCright told him "he never paid for the stock" and "never made any loans to Midland West Corp. through the First National Bank."

When the Midland West Corp. loans came up for review by the bank's board of directors, Stroz said McCright told him he remained silent.

Stroz testified that McCright said he did not abstain from voting because "It would have been a clear indication to the board that he had an interest in the corporation."

Stroz told the jurors that McCright sold the shares of stock in 1981 to John Wood and received $330,000 from the sale as did his alleged associates, Sam Conner and J.W. "Pete" Estep.

"Mr. McCright said he did not know who bought the stock," Stroz testified.

Stroz testified that McCright, Estep and Conner were involved in a three-way partnership known as CEK Co., but added that McCright did not reveal his interests in the company on the 1982 FNB Executive Officers's and Directors' Questionnaire.

The company, Stroz said, invested in working oil field assignments and real estate.

Stroz also testified that McCright bought a share of the H.G. Bedford Ranch, located in Midland, Ector and Andrews Counties, in 1980 or 1981.

Stroz testified that McCright said at least a few of the bank's board of directors knew he had an interest in the property, which he bought for $600 an acre and later sold to Wood for $1,800 an acre.

However, Stroz added that accounting records "did not necessarily show that he (McCright) was an owner" and that McCright did not disclose his one-sixth right to the ranch which secured a $2.444 million FNB loan to Pen-Dee Corp.

"I think it's going to help the economy," Packwood said today, "but there is not an economist in this country who can tell you for sure, for sure, whether the tax bill is going to help or hurt the economy."

Despite the strong showing in the House — 176 Democrats and 116 Republicans voted yes while 74 Democrats and 62 Republicans voted no — legislators had mixed feelings about the bill, which was evident from the House debate.

Rep. Tommy F. Robinson, D-Ark., opposed the legislation, saying, "There's nothing in this bill for middle class America...This bill is not pro-growth, it's not pro-family, it's going to wreck our economy."

In the end, it was simple election-year politics, not economics, that determined the House vote and will assure Senate approval.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, summed up the argument for his colleagues: "Do we want to give this country tax reform or don't we?

"Do we want to give back to middle-income taxpayers the fairness they don't believe will ever come, or do we want to stand for the status quo which goes hard on the poor and easy on the rich?"

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., put it another way: "I, personally, would give my right arm to run against an incumbent who voted no on this bill."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., closing the debate, called the bill "the most sweeping tax-reform legislation in the history of this nation. If we pass this bill, the 99th Congress will assume a special place in the history of this country."

BARBIE

Two pages of the 36-page booklet show Barbie "amid snow and ice" and three pictures show her saving 1,000 baby harp seals from hunters by spraying the pups with a colored dye, spoiling their white coats.

"Barbie is particularly concerned for the pretty seal pups. She has come to help protect them from the ruthless hunters that slaughter the young seals for their soft white skins," the caption reads.

Baby harp seals on Arctic ice floes pass by Newfoundland and the Gulf of St. Lawrence every spring. Hunters club the animals to death, but international protests have helped curtail the practice in recent years.

French actress Brigitte Bardot and the international environmental group Greenpeace were among those outraged by the bloody ritual, and photographs of the wide-eyed cubs aroused sympathies around the world.

The market for seal pelts, meat and oil dwindled following import bans imposed by the United States and the 12-nation European Common Market.

"This course is used to help set up the initial attack on the emergency," said Elvin Campbell, A&M fire specialist. "When on the scene, the officers have to use the DOT (Department of Transportation) emergency response guide to try and identify the hazards of what they are dealing with."

Campbell said all carriers of hazardous materials are required to display a diamond-shaped placard mounted for easy visibility; the placards display a number that firefighters can refer to in the DOT guide.

A city asphalt truck was used in the practice drill, held at the fire training center on Cloverdale Road. The fire tower was designated as the apartment complex.

Once firefighters arrived near the scene, they determined that there was no fire, but they did find a chemical spill that produced some type of fumes. Three chemicals were identified, and water was sprayed near the spill to try and dilute the fumes with water vapor.

A leak from the truck was identified as the cause of the spill, and a propane tank nearby was also identified and sprayed to keep it cool.

Campbell, who has been in Midland the past two weeks teaching the course to three shifts of officers, was pleased with their performance.

"I think it's been very successful," he said. "The students have interjected a lot of their own experience and they have been very enthusiastic.

"The point of this type of exercise is that it is a learning experience - they learn from the mistakes they make. And they are the ones who will know what they did wrong, because they were there."

Capt. Don Baker, Midland fire training specialist, said he was also pleased with the training. He said the volume of hazardous materials in transit at any given time in the area necessitates the department know how to respond.

"We are aware that this stuff is going around — it has become a daily part of life, especially, of course, with the interstate and the railroad tank cars that go through," Baker said.

He said Midland does have a designated hazardous materials route, but he said it does not apply to all carriers, such as gasoline tankers.

"And you can't find anything with much more potential for disaster than gasoline," he said.

Baker said the fire department is looking closely at the possibility of developing a hazardous response team that can be called out at anytime. He said training like Thursday's will help the department determine it such a team of specialists is necessary.

VETO

Lugar said he would not be swayed by such an order because the leaders of the white-minority government of South Africa "see that simply as winking at what they're doing now. We have to say something decisively at this point. We have to be on the right side of history."

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan had not decided to issue an executive order that would expand the limited sanctions already in place. One official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, hinted Reagan would not take any additional action if it appeared certain he would lose anyway.

The House likely will vote on the veto override next week. Simpson indicated that a vote in the Senate might not come until late in the session, slated to end Oct. 3.

The president has argued that punitive sanctions would hurt countries bordering South Africa as well as the country's 24 million blacks.

WORLD

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz held a third and lengthy meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, but failed to pin down an agreement to free reporter Nicholas Daniloff from Moscow.

"The Daniloff case is still not resolved, that is the bottom line," State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said after the 1¾-hour session Thursday night at the U.S. mission to the United Nations.

Shultz was flying back to Washington today and planned to return to New York Sunday. U.S. officials left open the possibility of another session with Shevardnadze before the foreign minister's scheduled departure for Canada Tuesday.

Apart from Daniloff's confinement, a U.S. order expelling 25 Soviet diplomats from the United Nations is an obstacle to a settlement — and to a superpower summit meeting.

"In your eyes, Daniloff is the obstacle," Gennady Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said Thursday. "In our eyes the order is an obstacle."

Kalb declined to provide any details of Shultz' meeting with Shevardnadze. Like their two meetings on Tuesday it was not announced in advance.

Shevardnadze drove off without making a statement. Shultz left a few minutes later and waved off reporters' questions.

"We would like to get the case resolved on a satisfactory basis," he said earlier at a news conference in his hotel suite across the street. "So we are working hard to see that this is done."

He said Shevaradnadze also apparently "is trying to get it done," and there was "a genuine effort on both sides."

But, Shultz cautioned, "that doesn't mean we are going to succeed."

He declined to discuss details of the protracted negotiations or to predict when Daniloff might be liberated. "I don't know," Shultz said. "The sooner the better."

The negotiations are over a two-stage, private U.S. proposal that is centered on the immediate release of Daniloff, a 51-year-old correspondent for U.S. News & World Report. He was arrested Aug. 30 in Moscow on espionage charges and released after 13 days in prison to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. He remains confined to the Soviet capital.

A Soviet U.N. employee, Gennadiy Zakharov, charged here with spying, would be sent home after trial, but in exchange for an undetermined number of dissidents.

Gerasimov, the Soviet spokesman, said Shevardnadze's departure for Ottawa was an informal deadline to complete the negotiations.

But Shultz said, "I don't think it's good to put yourself up against a deadline just to meet travel schedules."

He said, however, he had developed a good relationship with Shevardnadze and called him "a man of proven ability."

Shultz and Shevardnadze were in New York this week also to hold separate rounds of talks with foreign ministers attending the special session of the 41st U.N. General Assembly.

Gerasimov said the Soviets had "a strong case" against Daniloff and could proceed with trial. "But we don't want to aggravate our relations anymore," he said.

Therefore, he said, the Soviets had taken up "other options" with the Reagan administration and were willing to settle the Daniloff case without resolving the dispute over the Soviet diplomatic corps at the United Nations.

Gerasmiov did not describe the "options," although he said Daniloff could "take the next flight home" from Moscow if an agreement is reached.

The Soviet official again denounced the U.S. expulsion as illegal under U.N. rules. "You cannot order us around," he said.

He called the dispute and also the Zakharov arrest "bumps on the road to a summit."

GI brides who crossed Atlantic 40 years ago tearfully reunited

By EDITH M. LEDERER

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) — There were chocolates and nylon stockings, World War II jeeps and generals and even a white wedding dress for anyone who wanted to try again.

It was the first European reunion for the GI brides who crossed the Atlantic 40 years ago, and 250 showed up Thursday night for a poignant trip down memory lane.

The English girls who stole the hearts of American and Canadian soldiers during the war were back on home soil — dining on Spam and fish and chips, dancing in long chains and belting out old favorites like "We'll Meet Again."

If you ignored the gray hair and occasional wrinkle, it might well have been wartime England. An air raid siren wailed to start the reunion and GIs in World War II uniforms masquerading as famous generals mingled in Southampton's Guildhall — handing out the soldiers' old standbys of chocolates and stockings to a few lucky ladies.

In the parking lot, Emily and Dudley Fenn of Kissimmee, Fla., cuddled up in a World War II jeep.

Had she ever been coaxed into a jeep during the war?

"A weapons carrier — it's bigger than a jeep — and he didn't coax me! I was looking for a ride," Mrs. Fenn retorted with a grin.

In the lobby of the Guildhall, a popular wartime dance spot, Betty Arrieta of Moreno Valley, Calif., put on a long white wedding gown and posed for pictures with her husband Mark, a former B-17 pilot.

"I didn't have a white wedding and I'm thrilled at last to have a white dress. Who could afford a white dress in the war?" she said. "I'm going to send the pictures to my three children and five grandchildren."

For many of the brides, there were teary eyes when they joined in singing "There'll Always Be An England" and the British national anthem, "God Save The Queen."

Southampton city authorities arranged the reunion. The women who returned for the four-day event are only a fraction of the 70,000 war brides who sailed to the United States and 40,000 who went to Canada in 1946.

"I know some of them had bad experiences, some of them died and some of them were not lucky like me to get a gift of a free trip — but it makes you wonder what happened to them," said Phyllis Barthels of Gonzales, Texas.

While most paid their own way to England, Mrs. Barthels' way was paid by her local church. Others were assisted by civic groups.

For virtually all the brides, leaving Britain was a wrenching and degrading experience.

During processing by American authorities before departure, every woman had to strip and have a light shined over her by a doctor looking for lice — a practice the women still speak of with loathing.

"They talked to us like dogs. They thought we were part of the military. It was vile," said Sonia Faye of Pembroke Pines, Fla.

"It took me 35 years to get over being homesick," Mrs. Barthels said. "You're busy, your husband is good, your kids are good. But there's always a pull and I defy anybody to say anything different."

Joyce Sharp of Johnston, Iowa, said when she stood on the deck of the Queen Mary watching Southampton fade in the distance, she cried and thought, "I'm never coming home again."

For Margaret Couch of Redmond, Wash., this was her first trip home to Southampton in 41 years.

"It was difficult with three children and then money wasn't plentiful," she said.

"But it's just a thrill to be back here. When I looked up and saw the civic center and the clock and the tower a lump came into my throat. I said I can't believe it — it's still like it was 40 years ago. But the pubs are different, no dart boards and no separate room for the men."

Mrs. Couch and Mrs. Sharp said if they had to do it over again, they would move to the United States with the same husbands.

But Monica Uckemann of Sayville, N.Y., said she still feels Americans don't understand the British and that she would think twice about leaving England if she had another life to live.

"I feel it was too great a price to pay, giving up your country and your family. They say that you give it up for love, but we could have loved over here, too," Mrs. Uckemann said.

WORLD in brief

Mount Etna erupted in eastern Sicily Wednesday

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CATANIA, Sicily (DPA) — Mount Etna erupted late Wednesday, belching smoke and lava over areas of eastern Sicily, police said Thursday.

The eruption was accompanied by a loud explosion that left a carpet of ash eight inches deep in villages closest to the volcano.

In the coastal town of Catania, 17 miles away, traffic came to a standstill and the airport was closed temporarily because of poor visibility.

"It was like a mushroom cloud from an atomic bomb," one witness said.

The 1,075-feet-high Mount Etna has been active since Sept. 14, releasing a steady trickle of lava that has so far been restricted to unihabited areas.

Civil defense services were placed on alert following Wednesday night's outbreak, officials said the volcano had quieted down by Thursday.

Man acquitted in hijacking

PRATO, Italy (AP) — A Lebanese man was acquitted Thursday of stealing passports found in the possession of four Palestinians who hijacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro last October.

However, Prato criminal court found 23-year-old Hammade Malek guilty of using false documents to check into Hotel Central in Prato, 11 miles north of Florence, and sentenced him to six months in prison.

Three Moroccan and two U.S. passports were stolen from the hotel on May 17, 1985, the same day Malek checked in. He was arrested in West Germany last January and extradited to Italy in July.

Some of the passports were found in the possession of the four Palestinians when they were arrested after the hijacking last October.

In a July trial in Genoa, 11 people were convicted in connection with the hijacking. Three were sentenced to life in prison, including Mohammed Abbas, allegedly the mastermind, who is a fugitive.

Abbas, also known as Abul Abbas, is a leader of the Palestine Liberation Front, a faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Gallery to be largest

LONDON (AP) — The Tate Gallery, Britain's state museum of British and modern Western art, unveiled plans Thursday to turn itself into one of the world's largest museum complexes.

The gallery at Millbank on the Thames River in London was opened in 1897 with funds from Sir Henry Tate, a sugar merchant.

East Texan proof that old-fashioned cowboy still exists

By KELLEY SHANNON

LATEXO, Texas (AP) — With his lasso, spurs and herd dogs, C.D. Langham is proof that the old-fashioned cowboy is still around.

He roams the pastures and thicket in this part of East Texas, herding cattle and roping stubborn bulls that have wandered off into the woods.

Modern technology has crept into ranch life, but Langham says his services are still in demand.

"There ain't nothing to replace the cowboy and horse in the brush," he says. "I catch lots of bulls and wild cattle in the brush."

Langham has had a good many adventures roping difficult animals. In the process, he's been bruised, cut and had bones broken.

Recently one of his fingers was nearly severed when it was squeezed by a rope as he was chasing a stubborn 1,600-pound Brahma bull.

Once last fall he and another man were trying to capture two bulls in the thicket. He had roped one when it took off into the brush.

"He drug me and the horse on into the woods a pretty good way," Langham says. "(Then) I noticed the bull was dragging mighty easy."

Suddenly, the bull charged at Langham's horse and threw the animal end over end.

"He reached and scooped me up with his horns, and he just played volleyball with me a while. It lasted a pretty good while," Langham says.

His horse knows the hazards of the work as well. It's been gouged twice in the same place by bulls' horns.

When it happens, Langham takes out his needle and thread and sews up his horse's wound.

Langham also has been known to treat other animals who can't be caught to be taken to a veterinarian.

"If you've got a hold of something, you can carry it to the vet." But if the animal is running wild, Langham says, it must be treated on the spot.

Because he's been a professional cowboy nearly all of his 44 years, Langham has garnered a reputation unmatched by most others in his line of work.

Local ranchers know he's the one to call for the special project only a cowboy can do.

He says his occupation is different from that of ranch hands, who do chores for only one ranch. Langham works for ranchers throughout several counties.

Though now he doesn't trail cattle as far as he used to, Langham still is called upon to do that type of work.

Recently he was driving a herd of cattle on the outskirts of Crockett. With the help of his horse and dogs, Langham headed the cattle right down the middle of Loop 304 and across an overpass.

"Folks stopped and asked me, 'Is this part of the Sesquicentennial?' I said, 'No.' "

According to Langham, the most essential part of trailing cattle is a good pack of dogs.

He has six different-looking dogs that swiftly obey about five commands. A large white one is the leader of the pack.

"They're all straight cow dogs," Langham says. "You don't really train 'em — you break 'em. They're born knowing. ...You just break 'em from the habits you don't want 'em to do."

It takes about two years to properly break in a herd dog, Langham says. He starts when they are about six months old.

He first teaches them to help load and unload cows from a trailer. Then they learn to run with the horses.

To complement his somewhat rustic job, Langham and his wife, Dorothy, try to live off the land he was raised on near Latexo.

They eat deer and wild hog meat as well as the vegetables they grow in their three-acre garden. Mrs. Langham cans about 500 quarts of vegetables a year.

About once a year Langham turns a hog loose on his property so that it will get plump from eating persimmons and other natural foods. Then Langham captures the animal, and they eat its meat.

Mrs. Langham describes herself as a "city girl" and says she had to learn a lot when she first moved to Langham's country property.

"I had to learn a new way of talking, a new way of living — it was strange," she says.

Encompassing plan for drug testing favored by city, national officials

BEAUMONT (AP) — A plan to make drug tests mandatory for students, teachers and school administrators in this South Texas city is getting generally favorable reviews from area and national officials.

U.S. Department of Education officials say school Superintendent Mike Taylor's plan to test students in grades 6-12, teachers and administrators would be the first of its kind in the country if it's adopted.

Taylor has formally proposed the plan to Beaumont's school board, and it is pending school district attorney Tanner Hunt's review. No vote has been taken, and a report to the board with further details is expected in October.

"I called (Taylor) and commended him for having the courage to propose that kind of program," said Bob Wortham, U.S. attorney for the eastern district of Texas.

A U.S. Department of Justice spokesman said that early this week, the agency will direct U.S. attorneys to cooperate with local school officials in forming extensive anti-drug abuse programs similar to the one Taylor proposed.

The spokesman said Taylor's proposal "is the kind of thing we ought to help get off the ground not only in Texas, but across the nation."

John Walters, staff director at the U.S. Department of Education, said the department does not recommend voluntary or mandatory drug testing as a first step in attacking drug abuse problems.

"That isn't to say the department will not approve of a mandatory drug testing program," Walters said. "We feel that local school boards are in a much better position to address their own needs. If they decide it is necessary to adopt plans calling for drug testing, we would support that."

Teachers, however, were reluctant to comment on the plan immediately.

Ernestine Washington, president of the Beaumont Teachers Association, said BTA officials and members have not discussed Taylor's proposal.

"We're not going to take a stand one way or the other until we know all of the facts," she said.

Ms. Washington said the teachers group will abide by the decision of its parent organization, the Texas State Teachers Association. TSTA officials in Austin declined to comment on the proposal.

Some Beaumont teachers who asked to remain unidentified said mandatory drug testing would be an invasion of privacy and a violation of their constitutional rights.

Others, however, were more supportive.

"I have no problem with it whatsoever," said Louis Brown, director of Youth Employment and Training at the district's Chiles Education Center. "It's been needed for a long time."

Beaumont police Lt. Art Van Dorn, officer in charge of the department's narcotics investigations unit, also called the proposal long overdue.

"If you really want to put a stop to drug abuse in the schools, this is exactly the way," he said.

Taylor said mandatory testing is the only method he can think of which would effectively deal with the district's drug problem — a problem he said is not worse this year than in recent years nor any worse than that of comparable districts.

Taylor said students or employees testing positive for drugs would be placed in counseling programs. Those with serious problems would be helped to overcome their dependency.

The district has about 10,000 6th-through 12th-grade students and about 2,400 employees. If that many people are tested for drugs in a city of 118,000 residents, Taylor said, "this should have a significant impact on drug pushers and drug trafficking in our community."

Spending bill squeaks through House despite Reagan veto threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — With intense battles looming due to President Reagan's veto threat, the biggest spending bill in the nation's history heads to the Senate after winning House passage by the narrowest of margins.

The $562 billion measure passed in the House by 201-200, as disgruntled Republicans joined with Democrats upset over the loss of revenue sharing and other policies in the bill to nearly defeat it.

"The Republicans voted pretty solidly," said Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

"These other fellows are upset over revenue sharing," he said after Thursday's vote. Only 15 Republicans voted for the measure, while 43 Democrats voted against.

The huge measure, known as a continuing resolution, was created because Congress has failed to pass any of the 13 separate appropriations bills for the 1987 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

If federal agencies don't have spending authority by then, most will legally be required to shut down.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is expected to consider its own version of the package today, with full Senate action expected early next week.

Ensuing House-Senate negotiations could make the final language more to the president's liking, and the timing could make it a take-it-or-leave-it proposition if Reagan wants to avert a government crisis.

But Reagan already has told Congress, which plans to adjourn Oct. 3, that he's ready to put the padlocks on government agencies rather than sign an unacceptable bill. In a similar situation in 1981, he vetoed a continuing resolution and ordered the government shut down — including the Washington Monument.

"A lot of senators and congressmen out there don't believe the president would veto a CR (continuing resolution)," White House budget director James C. Miller III told reporters Thursday. "He's prepared to do it."

To forestall a crisis, Congress can pass and the president can sign a short-term, stopgap continuing resolution to keep the government operating at current levels while a compromise is worked out. House leaders were already considering the possibility.

"It doesn't take long to write one of those," House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said.

The Reagan administration strongly objects to the House approval of only $283.5 billion for the military, $33.7 billion less than the administration requested. Miller said the minimum the president would accept was the $292 billion pending in the Senate's version.

The House also wrapped into the omnibus package the list of arms control measures it had passed separately in its defense bill, all of which the administration opposes. They would:

— Freeze spending on "Star Wars" research.

— Continue a ban on final-stage tests of anti-satellite weapons.

— Ban for one year, starting Jan. 1, almost all U.S. nuclear weapons tests, as long as the Soviets continue to observe their self-imposed test ban.

— Block production of chemical weapons, which is scheduled to start in fiscal 1987 for the first time since 1969.

— Require continued adherence to the SALT II nuclear treaty by banning spending on any weapons which would put the U.S. over the numerical sublimits of various types of weapons in the treaty.

The administration also objected to dozens of domestic policy choices, ranging from a cutoff of money for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission to a buy-American provision for offshore oil rigs.

Robertson denies he pulled strings to get out of combat

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson, moving quickly against an allegation that could harm a presidential bid, is emphatically denying he sought his senator-father's help in avoiding combat in Korea.

The television evangelist's denial on Thursday came after a fellow Marine said he and Robertson had been pulled off a Korea-bound troop ship in Japan in 1951 after Robertson telephoned home asking help from his father.

That story from John Gearhart, published in The Los Angeles Times, was similar to an earlier version from another Marine who said he was on the ship — former Republican Rep. Paul McCloskey of California.

But the story just isn't so, Robertson said during questioning at a news conference.

During his service in the Marines, he said, "I went where I was told. I did what I was told. I served honorably and I came back home again.

"I did not make the call."

Robertson, who has been trying to raise support for a bid for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, was in Atlanta to attend a private GOP function Thursday night.

Gearhart was quoted as saying that when the ship stopped in Kobe, Japan, he and Robertson went ashore to telephone their parents. He said he expected to go on to Korea, but the next morning orders arrived assigning him, Robertson and several others to duties in Japan.

"It was generally understood that we were pulled off because of the good fortune of Pat's influence," Gearhart said. "More than anything else, it disappoints me that Pat denies ever making any phone calls. I wish he would just state that, sure, he made the phone call and let it go at that."

The story first came to light by syndicated columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, who quoted a letter written to Rep. Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., last month by McCloskey.

Supreme Court's 'Reagan era' officially begins today

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new era of the Supreme Court bearing President Reagan's stamp begins officially today with the swearing-in of William H. Rehnquist as the 16th chief justice of the United States and Antonin Scalia as an associate justice of the court.

Two ceremonies were scheduled three hours apart, one at the White House with Reagan attending and then a second at the Supreme Court.

At the White House, retiring Chief Justice Warren E. Burger was to administer an oath calling on both men to swear to uphold the Constitution. The oath is taken by all federal employees.

The second oath, the centerpiece of the later Supreme Court ceremony, calls upon both men to administer justice impartially. Burger was to give that oath to Rehnquist, his successor. Rehnquist, as the new chief justice, then was to administer it to Scalia, the 103rd person to sit on the court.

The splitting up of the oath-taking with Reagan attending only the first ceremony is unusual, according to Supreme Court records. In the past, new court members generally have taken both oaths at the same place.

Most Cabinet officers, many senior White House aides and top Justice Department officials were to be on hand for the White House ceremony.

All members of the Supreme Court planned to attend both ceremonies.

Presidents normally did not attend the investiture of justices until the 1940s.

But since then they generally have been in attendance, and in some cases have taken an active part in the ceremonies.

For example, President Richard M. Nixon — the man who appointed Rehnquist to the court 15 years ago — appeared before the Supreme Court as a member of its bar when Burger replaced Earl Warren as chief justice in 1969. Nixon gave a tribute to Warren.

Reagan attended the swearing-in of his only person he had appointed to the court up to then, Sandra Day O'Connor, at the court in 1981.

This year, Rehnquist survived a bruising Senate confirmation battle to win elevation to chief justice. The Senate voted, 65-33, in his favor as Rehnquist received the highest number of negative votes of any successful high court nominee in history.

By contrast, Scalia had smooth sailing and was confirmed 98-0.

Rehnquist, 61, has been the court's most politically and ideologically conservative member. Scalia, 50, is regarded as his kindred spirit politically and has shared the views of the administration on numerous key issues.

Beginning Monday, both men will take part in a weeklong conference to prepare for the start of the court's 1986-87 term on Oct. 6.

Nurse acquitted of murder, convicted of assault

Rachals

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — A jury that acquitted a nurse of charges that she killed six patients by injecting them with a heart-stopping drug felt some of the deaths may have been due to natural causes, the jury foreman said.

Terri Rachals was convicted Thursday on only one of 20 aggravated assault charges, but the jury said she was mentally ill.

"We all felt Mrs. Rachals had had an extremely stressful childhood," said foreman Warren E. Butler. "We felt that caused her mental problems."

The jurors, who deliberated for nine hours, decided some of the patients may have died from natural causes and that the evidence was insufficient to prove otherwise, Butler said.

Superior Court Judge Asa D. Kelley Jr. said he would sentence Mrs. Rachals next week after a psychological evaluation. She faces a maximum 20-year sentence.

Mrs. Rachals, 25, was charged after a number of mysterious cardiac arrests in the surgical intensive care unit at Phoebe Putney Memorial Hospital.

She was charged with six counts of murder and 20 counts of aggravated assault for allegedly injecting potassium chloride into the intravenous equipment of patients in October and November of 1985 and February of this year.

High potassium levels can cause cardiac arrest. Six patients died.

Psychiatrists described Mrs. Rachals as a compassionate person who suffered severe emotional problems because of childhood sexual abuse.

Two psychiatrists testified that stressful situations caused mental states in which she could not account for her actions and would not be able to distinguish right from wrong.

In a March interview with Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents, Mrs. Rachals confessed to injecting five patients, three fatally. At the nine-day trial, however, she denied having any memory of the injections.

Medical experts testified that her emotional problems made her vulnerable to suggestions and likely to confess to crimes she had not committed.

Her lawyer, George P. Donaldson, said he was unhappy with the verdict because he felt Mrs. Rachals should have been acquitted on all charges.

In his closing statement, District Attorney Hobart Hind told jurors Mrs. Rachals had disgraced her profession, calling her the "murderess of the century."

The hospital recorded 26 cardiac arrests in November in the surgical intensive care unit where Mrs. Rachals worked. When the hospital restricted access to potassium chloride, which previously had been available on nurses' carts, the number dropped to normal levels, witnesses tesitified.

The jury convicted Mrs. Rachals' of injecting Sam Bentley, 89, because she corrected GBI agents during the interview about how Bentley was injected, Butler said.

"That couldn't have been suggested to her," the jury foreman said. "It was hard for us to buy that Terri Rachals could have corrected the GBI agents if she were not guilty."

Senate pushes own drug bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate was ready today to begin fashioning its own anti-drug bill, a stripped-down, bipartisan compromise that omits some of the hotly disputed elements of a costlier approach approved by the House.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., brought the 250-page measure to the floor Thursday night, after nearly a week of negotiations with Democratic senators.

He called the compromise a "tough but fiscally responsible" measure compared with the "somewhat expensive and disjointed" drug bill approved two weeks ago by the House.

Dole's strategy is to deal with more controversial provisions as proposed amendments subject to a series of floor votes.

These include drug testing of certain federal employees, imposition of the death penalty for major drug dealers and easing of the exclusionary rule that prohibits courtroom use of illegally obtained evidence.

These proposals have drawn fire from moderate GOP senators, including Sens. Lowell P. Weicker of Connecticut, Charles Mathias Jr. of Maryland, Bob Packwood of Oregon, John Chafee of Rhode Island and Daniel J. Evans of Washington.

Search for gunman continues

WRIGHT CITY, Mo. (AP) — After three days of searching muddy creek beds and thick woods for a former mental patient suspected in three killings, Highway Patrolman Gene Lacy admitted it's harder to remain alert.

"Sometimes, this can get a bit boring, but you can't afford to get complacent," the 10-year state patrol veteran said Thursday during a break in the manhunt for Michael Wayne Jackson. "He might be hiding behind the next hill or the next tree."

Early today, officers called off a search seven miles west of Wright City after a truck driver said he lied when he said a hitchhiker assaulted him, stole his truck, drove the vehicle into a ditch, then fled on foot.

Lacy, one of about 100 officers still searching the area around this eastern Missouri farming community, is ready for the dragnet to end.

"Last night, my 5-year-old son, Justin, asked me, 'Daddy, if they catch the bad man, can we go bicycle riding today?'" he said.

The 41-year-old Jackson has not been seen since Monday night, when he allegedly wounded a Wright City police officer at the end of a day of crime that spanned three states and left three people dead.

Funerals for two of the victims were to be held today, and the other man was laid to rest Thursday.

Jackson, who is believed to be armed with a sawed-off shotgun, may have been wounded while exchanging gunfire with two Wright City police officers Monday night, authorities said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Glenn: Water contaminated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, releasing government findings that groundwater under many nuclear defense plants is highly contaminated, likens the environmental problem to a "creeping Chernobyl."

"We'd better wake up before it's too late and we find ourselves with an environmental disaster that could even rival Chernobyl," the Ohio Democrat said Thursday, referring to the nuclear disaster at the Soviet nuclear power plant last April.

According to the General Accounting Office report, the groundwater under many nuclear defense plants operated for the Department of Energy is contaminated at high levels with radioactive or chemical materials or both.

The report included a review of the Feed Materials Production Center in Fernald, Ohio, the Mound Laboratory in Miamisburg, Ohio, the Savannah River, S.C., fuel fabrication plant, the Savannah River reprocessing facility, the N-reactor in Richland, Wash., the reprocessing plant at Richland, the Rocky Flats fabrication plant in Colorado and the Y-12 plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

"Groundwater at eight of the nine facilities we reviewed is contaminated with various radioactive and-or chemical materials as a result of the facilities' operation," the GAO said.

Dope growers fight back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marijuana growers fighting to keep drug agents off their plantations are using weapons ranging from fish hooks dangling from trees to camouflaged pits studded with sharpened stakes, a federal official says.

Pipe bombs detonated by trip wires are being used by armed growers who at times launch sniper attacks on federal agents to keep them away, said Dale Robertson, deputy chief of the Forest Service, in an interview Thursday.

Confronted with rising crime in the nation's back country, brought on by huge marijuana profits, the U.S. Forest Service has gone so far as to warn the public off 946,000 acres of its 191-million acre domain.

Farm funds may be limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Worried over reports that some of America's largest agribusinesses are receiving multimillion-dollar subsidies, the House is imposing a limit of $250,000 per farmer in federal payments.

"This is going to prevent the great big, abusive payments," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., who forced a compromise on the issue with farm-state lawmakers. "This is a step in the right direction."

The subsidy cap was tacked onto a $562 billion spending bill which passed the House late Thursday, 201-200. But the measure still is subject to Senate action, and White House officials have warned it could be vetoed. So passage of the subsidy limit is far from assured.

But Conte's move was a sign that lawmakers have grown impatient with the high cost of farm programs. Some from farm states also shared that feeling, worrying that reports of huge payments will erode support for future farm bills.

Education bill passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — New financial and academic standards for college students who want federally guaranteed loans are contained in a higher education bill that Congress passed and sent to President Reagan.

Without debate, the Senate gave voice vote approval to the measure late Thursday. The action came a day after the House passed the measure, 385-25.

The $10.2 billion bill extends the current program, which expires next Tuesday, for five years. It also makes loans available to a growing segment of college enrollment — part-time students in their 30s and 40s who often have to attend classes while working to support families.

Highway Angel sure 'a way will come' for what you need

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN

GREEN RIVER, Utah (AP) — When the walking dead and the defeated road warriors wander in from the wasteland, the woman who people call the Highway Angel takes them under her wing.

In the unforgiving desert of southeastern Utah, heaven is where you find it. For more than 5,000 lost souls in six years, the pearly gates have been chain-link, and salvation has been waiting in seven aging trailers at the desolate intersection of Interstate 70 and U.S. Highway 6 just west of Green River.

The unlikely looking guardian angel at the door is a 65-year-old Chippewa Indian with sunken cheeks and wire-rimmed glasses, black hair streaked with gray and a heavy crucifix around her tanned neck.

A steady parade of life's castoffs have found with Helen Murray solace and a sandwich, a bed for weary bones, a cool drink for parched throats and a moment of acceptance in a world full of rejection.

"I call them the walking dead because their minds are gone," Murray said. "And when your mind is gone, why, the only thing that's left is your body, and you're putting one foot in front of the other."

Many of the wanderers are military veterans or mental patients released from institutions, people who don't know where they're going and don't know where they've been, who talk to themselves or punch holes in her walls.

Sometimes Murray cruises the highways, sharp eyes on the lookout for people who haven't had a ride all day. Sometimes, people with nowhere left to go walk down a hill to the trailers where she acts as a 24-hour security guard for two companies' abandoned buildings.

"At night, you can't see any lights down here, and I asked them, 'How did you know I was down here?' and they would tell me, 'There's a light at the top of the hill.' But there's no light up there," Murray said. "And I thought, well, if there's a light at the top of the hill, and I didn't put it there, and nobody else put it there, then God must have put it there, and there was a reason for it."

She used to have an arrangement with the Emery County sheriff's office, which would refer transients to her. This year, they stopped doing that, citing liability worries.

Emery County officials "tell me I cannot do the work God set in front of me," she fumed in an interview. "I can and I will. What I do in my own house is my own business. You still have the right to have who you want in your house, whether it's a bum or a millionaire."

Murray said she plans to move her trailers to property she owns in neighboring Grand County.

Tom Kuehne, unit supervisor of Grand County social services, said the county informally supported Murray's efforts but had the same liability concerns as Emery County.

"We were afraid somebody was going to knock her over the head," Kuehne said, adding that employees greatly admired her skill and good will. "She's got a huge heart. No question about it. She's helped a ton of people in her time."

Last year, Murray said, 1,072 people stayed in her trailers, sometimes as many as 16 in one night. The trailers have no electricity or running water, so she hauls water from town in five-gallon containers. Her charity is all at her own expense, exactly $22,727 last year. That left her just enough to live.

"Honey, you only have to have what you need to survive," she said. "When you have what you need, if you have a need for something more, a way will come."

A way always has come for Murray. On her own since she was 10, she said she'd lived in chicken coops and barns, and had chopped wood and cleared brush for a meal. Her brother nicknamed her Lucky, she said, to make her feel better because she wasn't. One day when she was 18 she had something of her own — 27 acres of bottom land in Kansas with a corn crop ready to come in — but she didn't hang onto it for long.

"These people came along, they didn't have a place to stay, no place to go," she said. "They had these two kids, and the kids were hungry. I bedded them down and I fed them and the next morning I got up and I took the deed to my property and signed it over to them. It was the first thing I ever gave away. They needed it worse than I did."

Murray has acquired a few more things since then: 12 children, the trailers, and three dogs, Princess, Rusty and Cheech, a pit bull terrier that's her pride and joy. Most everything else has passed into someone else's hands.

Eye disease has no cure

EDITOR'S NOTE — It steals people's eyesight, inexorably, bit by bit, with pinhole vision giving way to blindness. Retinitis pigmentosa is a hereditary disease, and it has no cure. But a national foundation begun 15 years ago this month, by the parents of two victims, has made headway in early detection and identification of the carrier.

BALTIMORE (AP) — As a teenager, Dan Freedman felt he had a secret too terrible to talk about.

"I never once would admit that something was wrong," he said. "I would go to pick up a date, and my heart was beating a thousand times a minute because I knew I was going to make a fool of myself when I would meet that girl's parents."

Freedman suffered from night blindness, an early manifestation of retinitis pigmentosa. Once he was unable to distinguish a date's relatives from one another. Groping in the dimness, he extended his hand and mistakenly greeted the uncle as the father.

He is one of an estimated 50,000 to 100,000 people in the United States who suffer from this little known hereditary eye disease, which causes loss of night and peripheral vision and, eventually, blindness.

Freedman, now a 53-year-old real estate broker, is all too familiar with the progression. Once he hit 40, his eyesight deteriorated quickly. First he couldn't drive, then he was unable to read the newspaper. Today he is blind, one of four brothers with retinitis pigmentosa.

"Sometimes you can stay at one plateau for four or five years and the next plateau may go away from you in six months," Freedman said. "It's psychologically damaging. There's very few people that I've talked to who have the disease who don't need psychiatric treatment."

RP has baffled researchers for more than 100 years. Neither the cause nor a cure is known. It frustrates victims and their families because it keeps no agenda. Some lose their sight before they reach 30; others are spared until they are past 60.

Its victims include millionaire businessman Gordon Gund, the 46-year-old co-owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers of the National Basketball Association and the Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League, and Moira Shea, 31, an economist with the U.S. Commerce Department.

Gund, who lives in Princeton, N.J., went blind in November 1970 at age 30, a month after his second son, Zach, was born.

"I only had a pinhole vision," Gund said. "I had to scan his face to see it all. I have a very vivid memory of that. It means a lot to him also."

More frustrating is the lack of a cure. Ben Berman, a 61-year-old real estate developer, can attest to that. Two of his three daughters were born with retinitis pigmentosa, which inspired Berman, a former medical student, to push for concentrated research.

A month after Berman and his wife, Beverly, learned their daughters had RP, Berman's brother introduced them to Freedman. The three, along with a Berman family friend, Sallie Cushner, founded the National Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation in 1971.

They began in a farmhouse on nine muddy acres outside Baltimore with no plumbing, no running water, an old sofa, a few benches, a couple of telephones and a promise to provide $675,000 in research money that they hadn't yet raised.

Gund contributed $100,000 of that initial $675,000 grant for a research center at the Massachusetts Eye & Ear Infirmary, affiliated with the Harvard Medical School. The center, named in honor of Berman and Gund, was the first of 13 such laboratories established by the foundation.

Dr. Eliot L. Berson, director of the Berman-Gund Laboratory, said advances had been made in early detection of RP through a test that flashes light signals off the retina at the back of the eye, sometimes finding the disease 10 years before symptoms develop or changes are visible in routine examinations.

But researchers still do not understand how the disease's most common form is transmitted or the chemical reactions that lead to degeneration of the retina.

Based on a survey of known cases of RP in Maine, Berson and his colleagues estimate that one child in 3,500 is born with RP.

The Bermans wept when a specialist told them that Mindy, then 9 and having trouble seeing in the dark, was going blind and no cure existed. An ophthalmologist then examined their youngest daughter, Joanne, and confirmed she also had retinitis pigmentosa.

Their oldest child, Gail, now 31, and her 10-month-old son have been tested for RP and show no symptoms.

Bigotry lives on

When one takes on the robes of the Ku Klux Klan, decides to wage a write-in campaign for governor of Texas on the platform of Klan philosophy and stations himself, complete with full KKK regalia, on Highway 80 in West Midland, one must assume that person is not averse to attention.

On the contrary, attention is what "candidate" Charles Lee of Pasadena is after and that's what he is getting.

Although Reporter-Telegram staff members were among representatives of the news media who covered his swing through this part of West Texas, we're sure the overwhelming majority of Permian Basin residents resent Lee's comparison of the KKK to the NAACP or LULAC or that it is the white person's answer to those organizations. Similarly, no doubt most would take exception to his claim that the KKK is a "Christian organization" dedicated to preserving the interests of the white race.

As pointed out by Dr. Daniel Vestal, current president of the Midland Ministerial Alliance, "The KKK is anti-Christian. It represents bigotry, prejudice and a narrow view of the Gospel."

Klan philosophy is, in fact, the antithesis of everything Christianity means and is.

No, racial bigotry and hatred are not yet dead in these United States. Charles Lee's visit was not only a reminder but living proof of that.

Mania for testing

Education Secretary William Bennett says the standstill in Scholastic Aptitude Test scores for the Class of 1986 should prompt public schools to redouble their efforts to implement classroom reforms. Although we agree with Bennett in principle, it would be a mistake for educators to become so caught up in the numbers game that they lose sight of the main objective, namely teaching students to think.

College-admission test scores became a major issue after their decline during the early 1960s became a barometer of deteriorating academic standards in primary and secondary schools. Indeed, from 1963 to 1980, average SAT scores plummeted from 478 to 424 on the verbal section and from 502 to 471 on the math section. Beginning in 1981, however, scores began to improve steadily, even though more students were taking the test.

The turnaround stems in part from the fact that students are taking more rigorous courses, which, of course, is a positive sign. We are less enthusiastic, however, about those school districts that spend an inordinate amount of time teaching students how to take standardized tests. Such preoccupation on results undermines the learning process by pressuring students to become performers instead of thinkers.

The greatest impetus to teach to the test is frequently found in low-income, minority districts where standardized test scores are particularly low. Unfortunately, the moral victory of raising the average test scores in such districts is often achieved at the expense of students who are denied the opportunity to develop their minds. That, of course, hurts society in general.

Testing truly is an integral part of the learning process. But it must not be viewed as an end in itself. Otherwise, students cannot help but learn the cynical lesson that knowing how to take a test takes precedence over intellectual discipline and problem solving.

LETTERS

Support for rights

In response to Mrs. Stengel's letter, I, too, was waiting to see just how many letters would come to show Mr. Kent that we support his stand against letting a small group of people that are trying to push their point of view on us by telling us what we can and can't read.

If we don't take a stand now against this group, how long will it be before they find something else that they don't like? It could be your place of business next.

I have stopped using 7-Eleven because if they let this group of people run their business, how long will it be before they take newspapers off the shelf because of the violence?

I support Mr. Kent's decision and will shop at his stores anytime I can. Thank you, Mr. Kent, for standing up for our rights.

Clements' new tune

Every time I see or hear Bill Clements, I am reminded of a little song we used to sing. I think it pretty well summarizes his message to the Texas voter! It goes like this:

"Oh Lord, it's hard to be humble,
When you're perfect in every way!
I can't wait to look in the mirror,
'Cause I get better looking each day!
To know me is to love me!
For all that's wrong I've a plan!
But please don't ask me for specifics,
'Cause I dodge them whenever I can!"
Please forgive me for the slight change in lyrics, folks. I just couldn't resist it!

Report brings complaint

I could not agree with anyone more than Bernard J. Mahoney Sr. (letter Sunday, Sept. 21). In my opinion, Big 2's night beat reporter made an EXCLUSIVE fool of himself and his employing media.

Under the terms of its license, a television station is supposed to be "programmed in the public interest". A truly public-spirited person would have made the other video media aware that a potential hazard existed which could affect the health and welfare of the community. Instead, they chose to ignore their responsibility to provide this information to the maximum viewing audience and restricted this information to the smallest number of people.

I, for one, shall remember the "Exclusive Shigellosis Epidemic" when Big 2's license comes up for renewal.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1777, British troops occupied Philadelphia in the American Revolution.

In 1820, pioneer Daniel Boone died in Missouri at age 85.

In 1888, poet T.S. Eliot was born.

In 1892, John Philip Sousa and his band performed in public for the first time, in Plainfield, N.J.

In 1896, composer George Gershwin was born.

In 1914, the Federal Trade Commission was established.

In 1918, the Meuse-Argonne offensive against the Germans began during World War I.

In 1950, United Nations troops in the Korean War recaptured the South Korean capital of Seoul from the North Koreans.

In 1955, after word that President Dwight D. Eisenhower had suffered a heart attack, the New York Stock Exchange saw its worst decline since 1929.

In 1960, the first of four televised debates between presidential candidates Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy took place in Chicago.

Vietnam vet trying to rescue POWs

WASHINGTON — Two American POWs were on their way to freedom from Laos in December 1984 when machine-gun fire from a Mekong River patrol boat forced them back, according to an affidavit given to us by a highly decorated American hero of the Vietnam War.

Jack Anderson

The sworn statement by retired Army Lt. Col. James (Bo) Gritz is a gripping account of his efforts — futile so far — to rescue prisoners of war he is convinced are still alive in communist-held Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam.

Gritz has won more than 60 medals for valor and achievement, including three Silver Stars, eight Bronze Stars, two Legions of Merit and 26 Air Medals. He is a licensed pilot, a sixth-degree black belt in karate, an underwater demolition expert and a master parachutist.

In his affidavit, Gritz "swears and affirms under penalty of perjury" that he has conducted cross-border operations in Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam to rescue American POWs. "I have crossed these borders on six different occasions as a part of intelligence-reconnaissance and guerrilla force operations designed to bring these Americans safely home who are without a doubt waiting for liberation," he declared.

The closest Gritz came to success, he said, was in December 1984. He began planning Operation Brokenwing in Thailand in the summer of 1983. His statement continued:

"This effort was designed to release three U.S. POWs being held at a prison location approximately 250 kilometers north of Vientiane, Laos. Through contacts within the Lao government we were successful in convincing the commander of the prison guard force to defect with the three POWs and a part of his force."

Gritz flew to Paris in February 1984 to confirm details of the plan with a former Laotian military commander, Gen. Kong Le, who had played a key role "in arranging the defection through officers still loyal to him," Gritz said, adding:

"I was told the guard force would be changed the second week in January 1985, and that just prior to that the Pathet Lao captain in charge of the guard would, with cooperation of a communist police official who had a truck which frequented the compound, bring the Americans to a prearranged location on the Mekong River separating Laos from Thailand."

Near Christmas 1984, Gritz and his men were on the Thai side of the river as arranged. The affidavit continues:

"As we waited on the Thai border two of the POWs were put into dugouts and started across the mile-wide river with several of my indigenous agents and the (Pathet Lao) guards. A patrol boat caught the first dugout halfway across the river and cut it in half with heavy machine-gun fire. The motorized craft then ran down the small boat. The second boat containing the two POWs turned around and safely made the Lao shore."

Gritz said he tried to rescue the two later, but word had been passed to Thai newspapers by the U.S. embassy in Bangkok that Gritz was active along the northern Thai border. "We had to withdraw," said Gritz, explaining that a previous disclosure had led to his temporary arrest in Thailand.

Gritz added in his statement: "I am positive there remain today in Laos 50 U.S. servicemen who put on the uniform of the United States and did what others feared to do and fled from doing."

Finally, he swore that a high-level Defense Intelligence Agency official "told me that he had briefed the President-elect (Ronald Reagan) and several members of his staff in the 'West Room of the White House' in January 1981, on 'a minimum of 100 POWs in Vietnam.'"

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: The United States and the Soviet Union are at odds on most things, but they agree on one item: cost-cutting at the United Nations. As another major contributor to the U.N. budget, the Soviet Union has actually been arguing for deeper budget cuts than the Reagan administration wanted. For example, at a recent meeting of an 18-nation committee assigned to study economy measures, the United States proposed a one-third cut in the number of top U.N. brass; the Soviets proposed a 75 percent cut. The U.S. suggestion carried.

SAUDI SYBARITES: The Saudi Arabian government has been firing foreign workers wholesale as the collapse of world oil prices forces a certain austerity on the desert kingdom. But now they have a new problem: trying to replace the foreigners with native workers to do everything from menial jobs in the oil fields to white-collar work in banks, offices and shops. It seems that years of living in the lap of luxury have made Saudi citizens unwilling to do an honest day's work. They demand top salaries for as little effort on the job as they can manage.

EVANS & NOVAK

Zschau wants to trade mush for Senate seat

SAN FRANCISCO — "Why is that man smiling?" a grinning Rep. Ed Zschau, 15 percentage points behind Senate Democratic whip Alan Cranston, asked about himself at a Republican luncheon here. "Because we know how we're going to win."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

How? By spending millions of dollars for TV ads depicting Cranston as soft on terrorism and drugs. The new ad campaign seems to be working. Only days later, Zschau's DMI pollsters showed Cranston's lead had been halved to 8 percentage points (as of Sept. 16-17). The strategy, laid out for high-tech millionaire Zschau on a computer printout, is intended to bring him even by Oct. 1.

That would be a triumph of technology over ideology. While bragging about his 75 percent support of Ronald Reagan as a two-term congressman, Zschau is in fact out of touch with the conservative movement that spawned and idolizes the president. But he is in tune with non-Reaganite campaigns waged by Republican candidates nationwide that give this mid-term election its mushy tone.

No liberal, Zschau is a business conservative who fights for low capital gains rates but is pro-choice on abortion, supports SALT II and tends to swing back and forth on issues where the dollar bottom line is not concerned. As to his gratuitous announcement of opposition to Daniel Manion's confirmation as a federal judge, he told us: "I never should have taken a position at all."

Zschau says he opposed Manion on grounds of "competence," missing the issue's ideological overtones. He cannot comprehend his problem with the right. "When people really get right down to it and look at the overall record and philosophy," he told us, "they say 'Zschau, you're not so bad as we've been told. We've been reading too much Evans and Novak.' A guy with a 100 percent record from the Chamber of Commerce is not exactly a flaming liberal."

True, but even truer is his trouble with party workers who gathered at Newport Beach in Republican Orange County the night before his San Francisco luncheon speech. These workers opposed him in the June primary, which they felt Zschau and his Silicon Valley pals sewed up with heavy television buys. They cannot vote for Cranston but they wish they could skip the race without worrying that a Zschau loss might hand Senate control the Democrats.

The mood at Newport Beach is not isolated. One state party leader concedes he was wrong in assuming resentment would fade away after Labor Day. Rather, he found deep hostility among activists attending the conservative California Republican Assembly convention. Few went as far as State Sen. H.L. Richardson, Cranston's second-term opponent 12 years ago who says he cannot vote for Zschau; but even fewer are eager to work for him.

Republican juices are supposed to be stirred by repeated presidential and vice presidential exhortations (including a George Bush visit to Orange County this week). But Zschau disregarded post-primary advice from national Republican strategists that he spend the summer placating conservatives. Nor did he woo the Orange County faithful even when faced by that 15-point deficit. One activist told us three requests by her women's group to meet with the candidate went unheeded.

The reason lies in Zschau's own polling data about Cranston's 15-point lead. Among self-styled Republican "conservatives," 67 percent supported Zschau, 18 percent Cranston. But among GOP "moderates," the percentages were 45 to 38. Thus, Zschau and his advisers believe his real problem lies with moderates accustomed to voting for Cranston in three campaigns against ineffective right-wingers.

The solution is to pound away at Cranston, another activity neglected by Zschau during his lost summer. His new, militant anti-Cranston stance was projected at his speech here to the Lincoln Club, whose predominantly business audience included some frequent Cranston voters now switching to their fellow Northern Californian. "Only Teddy Kennedy can stay a step ahead of (Cranston) in being anti-business," he declared.

Zschau's real message is a $5 million post-Labor Day television buy, two-thirds of which attacks Cranston. The first spot depicted Cranston voting wrong on terrorism, the second on drugs, and the third this week lambastes him for opposing the death penalty for drug dealers. A later commercial will assail him for enlarging the federal deficit. The appeal is on issues divorced from ideology — drugs and the deficit — decried by Democrat, Republican, liberal and conservative.

CHARLEY REESE

America needs real patriots, not 'groupies'

Americans who care about the future of the country are going to have to get together on their own and do something about it.

Charley Reese

I don't know of any existing organization — left, right or middle — that is not pursuing its own special goal. In some cases, it's ideological. In others it's economic or partisan. In a few cases, it's just the profit of the people who run the organization.

Patriots for pay are no more reliable than mercenaries. I believe the biblical truth that no man can serve two masters. Sooner or later, the interest of one is sacrificed for the interest of the other.

Every imaginable economic, social, political or ideological interest and cause, foreign or domestic, is well represented by functioning organizations. Whichever of those you are concerned about, you need not worry that it has no voice.

But what has no voice is the interest of the country as a whole and the American people as a whole. I do not mean to imply that all of the existing organizations care nothing about the country. Most of them do. But none of them are solely concerned with the country.

If your primary goal is to put conservatives in power, then that's what you are thinking about and when push comes to shove, no matter how you rationalize it, you're going to push your own goal instead of doing what's right for the country if there is a conflict. It may be nothing more than not supporting a sound idea, just because it comes from a liberal. It may be nothing more than making excuses for a scoundrel just because he is a conservative.

The same applies in the reverse. As a man whose desk is stacked high every day with mail from organizations, I'm disgusted with special pleadings, hidden agendas and self-serving schemes all masquerading as saintly patriotism. It's astounding how many people make a full-time living touting causes and issues.

All of this works to the advantage of the worst of our public officials. "Divide and conquer" is an ancient strategy and if people divide themselves, it works that much better for those who want to play one interest off another while pursuing their own welfare.

I would like to see Americans in every community get together on an informal basis and begin to discuss the welfare of the country. The first rule has to be that no one is going to make any money from the organization. The second rule has to be that no one can use the group for his own selfish interest. There is no need for yet another selfish interest group. People naturally come together when their selfish interests are threatened.

The third rule has to be that everyone agrees to disagree and to recognize that there is no one answer to social and political problems nor are there any human beings who are perfect in every respect.

The good that could come from such groups would be that people could study issues in a disinterested way. Paradoxically in this age of communication, it is more difficult, not less, to collect facts than it used to be. That's because much of the day's news consists of reports of what selfish interest groups or people are saying.

Secondly, when a consensus naturally arose on any one issue, then the people who wished to do so could move into the political arena and work for the solution. The main thing is to keep it on an ad hoc basis and not get caught in the trap of evolving into a rigid organization with a fixed agenda. The minute that happens you start permanently excluding everyone who doesn't agree with all the items on the agenda.

Better to do it this way. If we agree on A, we work together but next week we still get together to study and discuss B and C and D. We are there for learning and fellowship, not to become clones of each other or followers of a few.

America needs someone to look out for her interests. You can be that someone.

In South Texas, widely scattered to scattered thunderstorms through Saturday. Otherwise partly cloudy to cloudy with little change in temperatures. Highs Saturday in the 90s, except near 100 southwest and upper 80s coast. Lows in the 70s, except near 80 coast.

Slight chance of storm clouds Saturday forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The forecast for Saturday holds pleasant weather for Permian Basin-area residents, with the exception of a slight possibility of thunderstorms late in the evening. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting a high of near 90 with the possibility of widely scattered late evening thunderstorms. The chance of rain is less than 20 percent.

Partly cloudy skies will cover the Permian Basin tonight, according to the NWS forecast. A low in the middle 60s and southerly winds at five to 15 mph are expected. Southerly winds will continue on Saturday at 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high was 17 degrees below the record high of 102 set for the date in 1977. This morning's 64-degree low was 18 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1984.

NATION

The West had more rain today after a record-breaking drenching in Oregon and severe flooding in Montana, and mountain snow prompted travelers' advisories.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the southern Plains, the Great Lakes region and mid-Atlantic Coast.

A low pressure system over Nevada spread rain from the Rockies to the northern and central Pacific Coast. Rain changed to snow at higher elevations.

Travelers' advisories for snow and slippery roads were posted for the Cascades of Oregon, parts of the northern Sierra Nevada and in the Colorado mountains.

Heavy thunderstorms led to flash-flood watches in lower Michigan and a flood warning was in effect for the Milk River and its tributaries in northern Montana.

As much as 8 inches of snow covered Echo Summit and Mount Rose Summit in the Sierra Nevada, and strong winds whipped up to 6 inches of snow in the Colorado mountains.

Portland, Ore., had a 1.33 inch rainfall Thursday, shattering the record for the date of 0.43 inches set in 1958.

Eight inches of rain fell in 18 hours, washing out roads in the sparsely populated farming-ranching region of the Fort Belknap Reservation.

U.S. 2, the major route across northern Montana, was closed Thursday night after a detour around high water was washed out, authorities said.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 29 degrees at Yellowstone Park, Wyo., to 84 at Corpus Christi and Galveston, Texas, and Key West, Fla.

Midland Lee coach Earl Miller looked relaxed enough with feet propped up on his desk in a Lee Fieldhouse cubicle known as an office, but he admitted to being a bit nervous about tonight's shootout with cross town rival Midland High.

"I've been in a lot of big games as a coach, but I guess you're always a little nervous when you face your first big game as a head coach," said Miller. "But I think we will be ready to go."

And Midlanders are ready to go, too. There has never been a meeting between two undefeated teams from Lee and Midland High and the interest in this game is unmatched in the 25-year history of the series. A complete sellout is expected when the 8 p.m. kickoff starts Game No. 26.

Lee has won nine of the last 10 meetings between the two schools, but Miller doesn't place much stock in past glories.

"I've been around this game long enough that if you keep rolling the dice, you're going to get snake eyes every once in a while," said Miller.

"If you put these two teams through a computer, it would probably pick Midland High. We'd probably bust a computer if you put us in one. But we've worked hard and the last time I heard, these games weren't played by the computer."

Following Lee's 20-0 win over Eastwood in El Paso last week, Miller had little good to say about his Rebels. However, after a chance to review the game films, Miller is backtracking somewhat.

"I really thought we played a terrible game in El Paso, but when we got back and looked at the film, I felt like we did a pretty good job. The line blocked a lot better than I thought and the defense played a pretty good game," said Miller.

"Our quarterback (Rodney Johnson) didn't have a good game, but he knows that. He missed some wide open receivers, had a couple of fumbles and didn't pitch the ball when he should have. But Rodney is such a competitor that I expect him to come back with a great game. I think he learned a lot. He's not the type of kid you can keep down."

HEADING INTO tonight's showdown, Miller knows the formula for beating Midland High — score some points.

However they got there, three tied for lead at 66

ABILENE (AP) — Dan Pohl, D.A. Weibring and Morris Hatalsky had widely varying explanations for the 6-under-par 66s that put them in a tie for the first-round lead in the $400,000 Southwest Golf Classic.

"Fantastic putting," said Weibring, who on Thursday scored six birdies in a string of seven holes with his bizarre putter that he described as "ugly, but it works."

"I think the key was that I didn't expect a lot," said Pohl, who hadn't played since taking his second victory of the year four weeks ago in the World Series of Golf.

"I was really relaxed. It's just like it's been all year. I've been patient, very easy-going. If things happen, they happen. If they don't, I don't get ticked off. I just go about my business," Pohl said.

Hatalsky, who got around the Fairway Oaks Golf Club course without a bogey, could only shake his head in bewilderment.

"My wife's been telling me this is my time of the year," said Hatalsky, whose only two PGA Tour triumphs — the 1981 Hall of Fame Classic and the 1983 Milwaukee Open — came in the month of September.

"I don't understand it. I have no explanation for it," Hatalsky said.

Veteran Dave Eichelberger, in a deep slump for three full seasons, had a hopeful explanation for his eight-birdie round of 67 that put him a single shot off the pace in the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

"I think the good times are here again," Eichelberger said.

He was tied with South African David Frost and long-hitting Greg Twiggs, who played his back nine in 29 and needed only nine putts on that side.

MHS D faces toughest O test to date

The Midland High Bulldogs are unbeaten and looking for a good start to the 1986 District 4-5A football season.

So are the Midland Lee Rebels.

At 3-0, the two cross town rivals have a lot of high hopes for the future, hopes that a victory tonight at Memorial Stadium can give a head start toward. It's a big game before a packed house and nobody knows it better than MHS boss Doug McCutchen.

"This is a classic matchup," said McCutchen. "It's a cross town rivalry and the first district game, just a tremendous high school football game. We're looking forward to it. I'm sure our kids are ready and their kids are ready."

Ready or not, the game will be played and, once the two teams step on the field, Midlanders should see a great football game, one that features two different styles of attack.

The Houston Veer is the weapon the Bulldogs will throw at the run-happy wishbone Rebels while both teams will defend from the 4-3 alignment.

The way McCutchen sees the Rebel offense, which is third in the league with 1,022 total yards, the key for his team's success is Lee quarterback Rodney Johnson.

"The first thing we've got to do is stop their quarterback," said McCutchen. "Rodney Johnson is the catalyst of their offense. When he makes the big plays or executes them, they've been phenominal. Even though their running backs are great running backs, their game revolves around Rodney Johnson."

It also revolves around a good amount of speed which does wonders for a big play attack and could set up a speed vs. speed game.

"The thing they try to do with all their speed from their backs and wide receivers is try and get you into a one-on-one situation which puts you at a disadvantage. Lee is very good at the short passes and quick slants but they haven't thrown a lot of deep, complicated routes.

"In the backfield, we've got tremendous speed also but I think Lee is slightly quicker on the line, where we're slightly larger," said McCutchen.

Scott no-hits Giants to give Astros title

Associated Press

National League

When Roger Craig taught Mike Scott how to throw a split-fingered fastball, he never figured Scott would wind up using the pitch against him.

Craig figured wrong.

Scott pitched a no-hitter Thursday as the Houston Astros beat San Francisco 2-0 and clinched the National League West championship. Scott struck out 13, walked two and retired 19 straight batters in one stretch.

"That may have been the most dominating performance I've ever seen," said Craig, the Giants' manager. "I told one of my coaches in the fourth or fifth inning, 'We're not going to get a hit off of him.' It was unbelievable."

The victory gave Houston its second division title, the first since 1980. The Astros will open the best-of-seven NL playoffs at home on Oct. 8 against the New York Mets.

"I'm numb, I'm tired, but this is fantastic," Scott said. "Right now, I hope I don't fall down and pass out."

About a half-hour after the Houston game ended, Scott was carried back onto the field by his teammates as the Astrodome crowd of 32,808 shouted "We want Scott."

Scott, 18-10, leading the major leagues in earned run average and strikeouts, hit Dan Gladden with his first pitch of the game, and walked Chili Davis leading off the second inning.

But Scott never was in any trouble. The closest the Giants came to a hit was pinch-hitter Mike Aldrete's long fly ball to center field in the eighth inning, and a routine grounder to first base by Will Clark ended the game.

"I started thinking about the no-hitter in the seventh inning," Scott said. "I just wanted to keep throwing strikes for as long as I could. The split-fingered fast ball I had today was the best I had all year."

Scott learned how to throw the pitch from Craig after the 1984 season, after Scott went 5-11. At that time, Craig was the pitching coach for the Detroit Tigers.

"I thought there was no harm," Craig said Thursday. "He was in the other league."

After Scott's no-hitter — the first nine-inning NL no-hitter since Bob Forsch of St. Louis pitched one on Sept. 26, 1983 — Craig said his pupil had learned well.

Rangers hope losing skid ends tonight

From Staff Reports

The Greenwood Rangers are hoping tonight is the night.

The Rangers, heading into the fourth weekend of action, are still looking for their first win under first-year coach Maurice Hodges, but to do it, they'll have to stop undefeated Forsan in an 8 p.m. game.

Greenwood has one saving grace so far this season, it has until Oct. 10, the start of district season, to turn things around. And with the caliber of competition in District 4-3A, the Rangers will need the time to get themselves on the winning track.

In other highlighted area games, Lamesa, 0-1, 1-2, opens its home season with a District 2-4A contest with Lake View, 0-1, 2-1; Andrews, 1-0, 1-2, travels to Fort Stockton, 1-0, 3-0, in a battle of first place 2-4A teams; Stanton, 3-0, is at Plains; Reagan County, 2-0, travels to Sanderson; Rankin, 2-1, hosts Grandfalls; McCamey, 3-0, hosts Ozona, 2-1; Garden City, 0-3, travels to Robert Lee; Big Spring, 2-1, gets its 2-4A initiation against Sweetwater, 3-0; Pecos, 2-1, and Sndyer, 0-3, hook up; and Iraan, 2-1, is at Wink.

It's time for long-awaited Lee, MHS game

It's finally here. Sept. 26, 1986. Midland High vs. Midland Lee in a game that means something.

The waiting started back in February when District 4-5A unveiled its new football schedule. San Angelo wanted no part of a season ending open date and forced the league to drop its traditional season ending rivalries in Odessa, Abilene and Midland. With Big Spring out of the league, someone has an open date each week of the district season. It's very hard to get a non-conference game for weeks six through 10.

WHEN THE new draw came, Midland High and Lee drew each other the first rattle out of the 4-5A box. Back in February, league coaches weren't too pleased with giving up the sacred season ending finale with cross town rivals. They also didn't like the fact that teams would be able to schedule a 10-game season — like San Angelo — while others would be stuck with only nine.

Both Midland teams got stuck with the nine-game season, but tonight's game between MHS and Lee may prove to be an unexpected bonanza. Interest has never been higher.

Rarely, if ever, is the game a sellout. Things are usually decided by the 10th week of the season. Not this time. Both teams are meeting for the first time with unbeaten records. Both have playoff hopes — even though this is early.

Fans are hungry for a "big game" and this one has struck a cord with Midlanders from both sides of town. Fans flocked in droves Wednesday to the ticket office to insure a sellout for a cramped Memorial Stadium.

No longer is the Midland Lee-Odessa Permian shootout the only game in West Texas.

But I'm still not sure if I like the idea of this being the district opener. This space is reserved each week for picking the District 4-5A games and this forces me to make a pick between two undefeated teams who don't like to lose to each other.

The season picking record for 4-5A games is 18-3 and here goes Week No. 4 with eyes closed and the trusty dart board above my trusty computer terminal.

Midland Lee 15, Midland High 14: History says the Rebels have won nine of the last 10 outings. History also says that the series has produced so many close games that a punt here or a pass there could have left the Bulldogs with the same record. Still, Lee has proven that it can win the important games and that's something that MHS still must prove.

Odessa Permian 42, Abilene High 12: It was 7-7 a year ago in what turned out to be the shocker of the 4-5A season. That's exactly why it won't happen again. Mojo has a long memory.

Odessa High 24, Abilene Cooper 20: It's early in the season, but this could be an important game for these two teams. One of these teams will have to have broad shoulders to hold up the league basement.

San Angelo 55, Hobbs 7: The Bobkittles are undefeated and play the fourth of five straight home games. This one is a non-conference outing that doesn't exactly inspire interest across two states.

Reports say Harrelson tenders resignation

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox operations chief Ken Harrelson has resigned, a newspaper reported.

Harrelson met with owners Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf Thursday and turned down their offer to stay on the job if he fired minor league director Alvin Dark, according to unnamed sources quoted by the Chicago Sun-Times.

His resignation will be announced Friday, the newspaper said.

Harrelson, Reinsdorf and Einhorn were said to be out of their offices when called for a comment Thursday.

A long-time broadcaster and former baseball slugger, Harrelson is a flashy figure who often wears cowboy hats and colorful clothes.

Harrelson, whose official title is executive vice president-baseball operations, is the subject of growing dissatisfaction within the club, sources told the Chicago Tribune.

His contention that the club's minor league system is in excellent shape has been met with skepticism from others within the organization, who say some young players promoted to the major leagues are not being taught fundamentals, the newspaper said.

The White Sox are a half-game out of last place in the American League West after dropping a 4-2 decision Wednesday in Oakland for their fifth straight loss. They have a 66-86 record, just ahead of the Minnesota Twins.

They finished 85-77 last year.

Harrelson, who signed a one-year contract to replace Roland Hemond last October, has generated controversy during his rookie year as a baseball executive.

He dumped manager Tony La Russa in June and replaced him with current skipper Jim Fregosi.

He also created an early system of two pitching coaches and two hitting instructors that was dumped in May.

He also fired David Dombrowski, his top aide, on June 5.

But Harrelson has also been credited with reviving the White Sox pitching staff through his acquisitions of Neil Allen, Joe Cowley, Jose DeLeon and Bill Dawley. The team has an earned run average of 3.92, fourth in the American League.

Greenwood's running attack suffered a blow last week against Stanton when both halves of the brothers Popham backfield went down with injuries. Steve, the elder brother and tailback, bruised his sternum and is doubtful. Garry is likely despite a bruised thigh.

Forsan, which moved up into Class 2A this season, is 3-0 again this season with victories over Roscoe (20-6), Plains (22-6) and Coahoma (35-14).

Only gain for Ayala: Five years off sentence

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The conviction of former top-ranked boxer Tony Ayala Jr. for sexually assaulting a woman who lived in his West Paterson apartment complex and threatening to kill her roommate nearly four years ago has been upheld by a state appeals court.

The Appellate Division of Superior Court on Thursday cut five years off his 35-year prison sentence, but left intact the judge's order that he serve a minimum of 15 years before he could become eligible for parole.

"The evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming," the court said.

"Don't give me credit," Craig said. "He did it all on his own today."

Scott became the first pitcher to clinch a championship with a no-hitter. Allie Reynolds of the New York Yankees clinched a tie for the American League pennant with a no-hitter in the first game of a doubleheader on Sept. 28, 1951, and the Yankees then won the title by winning the second game.

Scott got the only run he needed when Denny Walling hit his 17th homer of the season in the fifth inning against Juan Berenguer, 2-3. Jose Cruz had an RBI single in the seventh.

Mets 6, Cubs 5

Keith Hernandez scored the tie-breaking run on Ray Knight's grounder in the ninth inning and Danny Heep hit a two-run double as New York tied a team record with its 100th victory.

The Mets matched the win total of the 1969 World Series champions.

With the score 3-3, Hernandez and Gary Carter singled in the ninth against Ed Lynch, 5-5. Hernandez beat shortstop Shawon Dunston's throw to the plate on Knight's ground ball and Heep doubled home a pair of insurance runs.

Jerry Mumphrey hit a two-run homer for host Chicago in the bottom of the ninth.

Kevin Mitchell's solo homer in the fifth inning gave New York a 3-2 lead. His 12th home run of the season was the Mets' 140th of the year, breaking the team record of 139 in 1962.

Reds 6, Braves 4

Eddie Milner drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Bill Gullickson ended his three-game losing streak as Cincinnati beat visiting Atlanta.

Gullickson, 14-11, gave up three runs and nine hits over 6 1-3 innings and Ron Robinson got his 12th save as the Reds won their third straight game.

Cincinnati scored four times in the first inning with just one hit. Charlie Puleo, 1-1, loaded the bases with one out on a hit by pitch and two walks. Right fielder Albert Hall dropped Tony Perez's sacrifice fly, allowing two runs to score, and Milner added an RBI single.

Expos 8, Pirates 4

Andre Dawson hit his 20th home run of the season and Bob Owchinko won his first major-league game in more than two years, leading Montreal to victory in Pittsburgh.

Dawson connected for a two-run shot in the first inning against Rick Rhoden, 15-11. Rhoden is 0-4 in five starts since Aug. 30.

Owchinko, 1-0, pitched into the sixth inning, allowing four hits on three hits. His last major-league victory came on June 13, 1984, when he beat Houston while with Cincinnati.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 4

Tito Landrum broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning with a solo home run and St. Louis went on to beat visiting Philadelphia.

Landrum connected for his second homer of the season, his first since April 11, against Dan Schatzeder, 4-5. Mike Laga drew a bases-loaded walk from Phillies reliever Kent Tekulve in the eighth, and Von Hayes hit his 17th homer for Philadelphia in the ninth.

Ronn Reynolds and Rick Schu also homered for the Phillies, and Mike LaValliere homered for St. Louis.

Ray Soff, 4-0, got the victory and Todd Worrell got his 35th save as the Cardinals won the season series from Philadelphia 12-6.

Dodgers 4, Padres 3
Padres 7, Dodgers 6

Kevin McReynolds hit a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning, giving San Diego its second-game victory and a split of the doubleheader in Los Angeles.

Rookie Jeff Hamilton's home run with one out in the 10th inning won the first game for the Dodgers.

McReynolds' 25th homer of the season came against Ken Howell, 6-11, who was the winner in the first game. Lance McCullers, 10-9, won the second game after losing the opener.

In the opener, Los Angeles starter Rick Honeycutt took a one-hitter and 3-0 lead in the ninth inning. But pinch-hitter Carmelo Martinez singled home one run and Steve Garvey's two-out, two-run double off Howell tied the score.

Len Matuszek hit a three-run home for the Dodgers.

Los Angeles' Steve Sax singled in both games and extended his hitting streak to 23 games, tying him with Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees for the longest in the majors this season.

LEE

"Our offense is going to have to put some points on the boards. Midland High has two shutouts and only six points scored against them, so it's pretty easy to reason that you've got to find a way to score some points. Our kids need to go out and have a burning desire to score.

"Defensively, we can't allow the Midland High speed to break the long play. We can't give up a lot of long runs and long passes. I think we have to play a lot like we did against Eastwood — bend, bend, bend, but not break."

Both MHS and Lee have had their share of kicking woes this year and that's an area of concern for Miller.

"We just haven't been very good in the kicking game, but we have confidence that it will improve," said Miller. "With Midland High's speed, the kicking game can ruin us. It'll be our death chant if we make critical mistakes in that area."

With all the attention this game is receiving, Miller isn't worried about his squad getting too pumped up.

"I just don't believe there is any way to get kids too emotionally involved. I believe in being emotional on the football field. You get ready for games like this by having good practices. If you don't have good practices, it doesn't matter how pumped up you get. Being sky high doesn't help you execute," said Miller.

So, what kind of practices has Lee had this week?

"The El Paso trip messed up our routine. We didn't get to review the game film on Saturday like we usually do and went over it on Monday with the team. We then went out to work and had an average practice. However, on Tuesday we came back with an excellent practice," noted Miller.

LEE IS pretty healthy for tonight's game. Defensive ends Jeff McHugh and Mark Breeding won't be starting, but have been given the green light to play. Linebacker Mike Acosta received a badly bruised arm against Eastwood, but will play.

"There are a lot of kids who couldn't play with the injury that Mike has, but he wants to be in there. He's one who can play with pain, but we'll have him padded up."

Offensively, Lee has generated 1,022 yards while MHS has 926, but the the league leading Bulldogs have given up only 108 yards per game on defense while Lee has yielded a game average of 210.7.

Johnson ranks third in District 4-5A in total offense with 251 yards rushing and 98 passing, averaging 116.3 yards in all-purpose offense per game.

However, Lee has a deep arsenal to call on with three other backs with more than 100 yards rushing in three games. Halfback Joe Woodard (177 yards), fullback Waymond Goodley (166) and halfback Dennis Sterling (143) have all had big games. Halfback Durian Jenkins is coming on strong and is a passing threat.

And now there isn't much left but for the teams to do the talking on the field. And Midlanders can't wait.

Bamberger's finale a win

Brewers' Higuera claims 20th, 9-3

Associated Press

George Bamberger always has been considered a pitcher's manager. So it was only fitting that Ted Higuera won his 20th victory of the season in Bamberger's final game as manager of the Milwaukee Brewers.

"Everything was great. We are out of last place, Teddy won his 20th game and we won our third in a row," said Bamberger, who earlier Thursday announced he was beginning his retirement immediately.

"I dedicated the game to him," the left-handed Higuera said. "Last year he gave me the chance to pitch, and this year he built up my confidence. He's going to be missed."

The hitting of Robin Yount and Paul Molitor backed Higuera's pitching as the Brewers moved out of the American League East basement with a 9-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

"It's an outstanding feat, especially when you're on a club that's battling to avoid last place. It doesn't come easy," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, who is retiring at the end of the season.

Higuera scattered eight hits as he became the first Milwaukee pitcher to win 20 games in a season since Mike Caldwell won 22 in 1978. He also is the American League's second 20-game winner this year behind Boston's Roger Clemens, who is scheduled to go for his 25th win tonight.

"I always wanted to reach that 20th win of the year," Higuera said. "I'm glad I didn't have to wait until my last start."

HIGUERA SCATTERED eight hits in going the distance.

"This kid knows what he's doing out there. And the best part is, he can do it. He's got a good head on him," Bamberger said of Higuera.

Before Bamberger's first stint as Milwaukee manager — he also managed the New York Mets before returning to the AL — he served as pitching coach for the Orioles under Weaver from 1968-1978.

"It's about time he retires, and I'm about past due," Weaver joked. "We've been talking about this since '75. We just wanted to sweat out 10 years for the pension."

Angels 6, Indians 3

A two-run homer by Reggie Jackson in the eighth inning erased a 3-2 deficit and powered California to its win over Cleveland.

The victory lowered the Angels' magic number to two for clinching the AL West title. A win tonight over second-place Texas will lock up the Angels' third division crown.

California right-hander Kirk McCaskill, 17-9, allowed just three hits in pitching eight innings, while Donnie Moore came on in the ninth to get his 21st save. But it was Jackson's 18th homer of the season — and his seventh this month — after Doug DeCinces doubled off reliever Frank Wills, 2-4, that began the winning rally.

Cory Snyder's solo homer in the seventh, his 23rd, gave the Indians a brief 3-2 lead. In the second inning, Dave Clark hit a two-run homer, his first in the majors.

Blue Jays 4, Tigers 2

Third-inning home runs by Jesse Barfield and Tony Fernandez were the key hits as Toronto defeated Detroit.

Joe Johnson, with help from reliever Tom Henke, boosted his record with Toronto to 7-2, winning his third straight decision. Henke collected his 25th save, his fifth in the last five games, by working the final two innings and giving up one run.

Fernandez hit a solo home run, his 10th, to begin the third inning against Detroit's Frank Tanana, 11-9. With two out, George Bell singled to center and scored on Barfield's 35th homer. Toronto made it 4-0 in the fifth on a Barfield single and an RBI double by Cecil Fielder.

Detroit scored single runs in the sixth and ninth on sacrifice flies.

Royals 8, Twins 1

Willie Wilson and Jim Sundberg hit home runs to spark Kansas City's 17-hit attack as the Royals breezed past Minnesota.

Bret Saberhagen, who won the 1985 American League Cy Young Award with a 20-6 record, won for the first time since since July 27.

Saberhagen, 7-11, was on the disabled list from Aug. 10 to Sept. 1 with a sore right shoulder.

MHS

The Rebel speed is provided by backs Joe Woodard, Durian Jenkins and Dennis Sterling while the Bulldogs counter with Tyrone Oliver and Anthony Adkison. Both quarterbacks are also mobile with Johnson's counterpart Jaime Madrid possessing more speed and quickness than any MHS quarterback in several years.

"The big thing we have to prevent is their breaking the big plays," said McCutchen, "either from their quarterbacks or running backs, that's the key.

"For us, offensively, I think the big thing is recognizing the different defenses they've get in and the offensive line has to get off the ball quick. We also have to put points on the board when opportunity presents itself. We can't make many mistakes.

"Lee is definately the best team we've faced this year."

WHILE MHS statistically owns the best defense in District 4-5A, it is one that hasn't been greatly tested, at least not like it will be tonight. All three Bulldog opponents have lacked offensive attacks.

"Still, if our defense wasn't playing well, we wouldn't have two shutouts regardless who we're playing," said McCutchen.

Along with the two shutouts — 14-0 against Lubbock Monterey and 36-0 against Lubbock Coronado — the Bulldogs have a six-point defensive effort with Andrews scoring the only touchdown in a 21-6 MHS victory.

Allowing only six points in three games is the best of any 4-5A defense, but Lee is a close third at 22 behind Odessa Permian's 20.

The same three teams are also one-two-three in fewest yards allowed this year with Midland High allowing only 324 for at an impressive 108.0 per game click. Permian is second with 496 yards (165.3) and Lee third at 632 (210.7).

Where the Bulldogs have been strongest this year is in pass coverage. In three games, an experienced Bulldog secondary has allowed only 60 yards.

Offensively, Midland High has the ability to both run and pass. The Bulldog backs have accounted for 608 yards led by Adkison with 217 and Oliver with 172. Through the air, MHS has compiled another 318 yards with Madrid hitting 19-of-40 passes for three touchdowns. His favorite receivers have been Adkison (four catches for 50 yards) and tight end Clyde Govan (three for 93).

If there are any dark clouds for the Bulldogs for this district opener, it would be a late-week knee injury to Oliver, who suffered a slight sprain in Wednesday's practice.

"It's one of those injuries where if it happend on Monday there is no question he'd be ready on Friday," said McCutchen. "Right now it's just a wait and see deal. Doc (MHS trainer James Dodson) just came in and said it's looking great."

Illness and injury from the previous week have pretty much disappeared with every player given a green light to play. And, play they will. The Bulldogs want this one badly.

Boston posts 26-23 win over Maine

BOSTON (AP) — Running back Randy Pettus rushed for 124 yards and one touchdown, defensive back Kevin Piggot returned an interception 30 yards for another score, and Dan Green booted three field goals as Boston University edged previously undefeated Maine 26-23 in a Yankee Conference upset Thursday night.

Maine quarterback Bob Wilder completed 21 of 38 passes for 232 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns in a vain rally.

The Terriers improved to 1-3, while Maine is now 3-1.

Flutie reaches agreement with Trump

BOSTON (AP) — Doug Flutie reportedly has reached a verbal agreement on a financial settlement with New Jersey Generals owner Donald Trump that will allow the Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback to pursue an NFL career.

Two years ago, Flutie, who broke records at Boston College, signed a six-year, $8 million contract with Trump, owner of the Generals of the United States Football League.

The agreement on a settlement was reached through Flutie's lawyer, Bob Woolf, according to USFL sources, The Boston Globe reported today.

Flutie played most of the 1985 season for the Generals, but suffered a separated shoulder and missed the playoffs.

The Los Angeles Rams drafted Flutie in 1985 and still hold his NFL rights, but would probably trade those rights if Flutie becomes available. The Rams signed former Purdue star Jim Everett Thursday, and head coach John Robinson described Everett as the team's franchise quarterback.

Flutie reportedly was paid $2 million for signing with the Generals and playing one year for them and had another $2 million guaranteed on his contract when the USFL stopped playing.

Most of the name players in the USFL signed large contracts with NFL teams, but there was no rush for Flutie because of the money still owed him and because he is only 5-feet-9. Some coaches are afraid he is too short to throw accurately in professional play.

The Globe said it is believed the settlement with Trump would be for about $1 million.

Trump could keep Flutie from signing with any team for another two years. Flutie is on a personal services contract to Trump, who could ask him to do something other than play football to earn the money, but hasn't.

Sources told the Globe that as soon as the Rams are notified that Flutie has reached a settlement with Trump, they will notify all NFL teams that he will be available in a trade.

"I want the opportunity to prove to people that I can play in the NFL and be successful," Flutie said recently.

He has tried to keep his throwing arm in shape by throwing to friends and working out with the Boston College footl ill team.

Rams, Everett come to terms

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Everett was both surprised and delighted that he was able to sign a contract and practice with the Los Angeles Rams on Thursday.

The Rams acquired the rights to Everett, the third player taken in last spring's NFL draft, in a trade with the Houston Oilers last week.

"This is a better situation for me than Houston would have been," Everett said. "I was hoping for a quick settlement, but I couldn't be sure. I'm very happy. Things couldn't have worked out better for me."

Everett signed a four-year contract with the Rams believed to be worth about $3 million.

The fact that Houston's Warren Moon is in his prime was a factor in his refusal to sign with the Oilers, Everett said, adding that the fact that Steve Bartkowski, the Rams' starting quarterback, is 33 also was a plus.

"If I had been able to hand-pick a team, it probably would have been the Rams," Everett said at a news conference, where he was presented jersey No. 11 by Rams' President Georgia Frontiere. "It look likes I won't have to wait too long to play and I'll be able to learn from a great veteran, Steve Bartkowski."

The Rams acquired the rights to Everett by giving Houston offensive guard Kent Hill, defensive end William Fuller, their No. 1 draft choices for the next two years and a fifth-round selection next year.

"I'd like to say I appreciate the efforts this program made to get me," Everett said. "I know there are great expecations, but that's no burden. Hopefully, I can live up to them."

Both Everett and Coach John Robinson of the Rams stressed that there is no timetable for when the 23-year-old signal-caller will see action. The Rams have a two-week exemption before they must place Everett on their 45-man roster.

"This is a brilliant stroke for the Rams," Robinson said. "Obviously, Jim will be on a crash course. We will try to do as much as we can, but there is no grand scenario. He will play when he's ready."

MONEY

Dollar mostly lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar posted modest losses against most major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion opened strong, but prices later fell back.

Currency traders said the weekend meeting of the Group of Five finance ministers continued to depress the market. They said few investors appeared willing to take up strong positions pending outcome of the talks.

The finance ministers of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain and France began talks in Washington today.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

—2.0475 West German marks, down from 2.0500.

—1.6540 Swiss francs, down from 1.6605.

—6.6975 French francs, down from 6.7100.

—2.3155 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3150.

—1,416.00 Italian lire, down from 1,417.45.

—1.39025 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3888.

The British pound fell to $1.4330 from $1.4385.

The dollar edged lower against Japan's currency, closing in Tokyo at 154.43 yen, down from Thursday's close of 154.55 yen. Later today, in London, the dollar fell further, to 154.15 yen.

Gold bullion shot up briefly in the opening hours of trading, hitting $438 in London, boosted by a buying surge from Switzerland. The rally evaporated and prices fell back, but remained slightly above levels reached in Europe late Thursday.

At midmorning, London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $434 a troy ounce, up from $432.50 late Thursday.

In Zurich, gold also was bid at $433.75, up from $432.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $433.01 dollars, up from $428.54.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.80 an ounce, down from $5.88 late Thursday.

Quaker bids for Houston firm

NEW YORK (UPI) — Quaker Oats Co., which played a supplemental role in a failed bid by two New York investment firms to buy Houston-based Anderson, Clayton & Co., Thursday said it wants to acquire the food company on its own.

Quaker said it had acquired 2.9 million Anderson, Clayton common shares Thursday — about 23 percent of the company's common stock — on the open market.

"Ultimately, we would like to acquire 100 percent of Anderson, Clayton," said Ronald G. Botrell, a Quaker spokesman. However, "at this point in time we are not sure how it would be accomplished."

Botrell would not disclose the company's next move.

Late Wednesday, Bear, Stearns & Co. and Gruss & Co., which had been offering $56 a share, or about $697 million, for Anderson, Clayton, said in a statement that their AC Aquisitions Corp. had terminated its offer and will return shares to stockholders who tendered them.

The two New York investment firms had been engaged in a lawsuit-filled battle with Anderson, Clayton management since May.

As part of the Bear, Stearns and Gruss takeover bid, Quaker had agreed to povide $250 million in financing. In return, Bear, Stearns and Gruss had agreed to turn over Anderson, Clayton's Gaines Food Inc. pet food subsidiary to Quaker.

Thursday afternoon, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. said in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it sold 636,200 shares of Anderson, Clayton on Tuesday and Wednesday at prices between $60.50 and $61 a share.

Merrill Lynch previously said that 5.2 percent stake in Anderson, Clayton was acquired as part of its risk-arbitrage business between Aug. 20 and Sept. 18 at prices ranging between $55 and $58 a share. Merrill Lynch did not give a reason for selling its holdings.

Bear, Stearns and Gruss had jointly owned about 7.28 percent of Anderson, Clayton's outstanding shares. A spokesman for Gruss said the company retains its 380,000-share, or 3.14 percent stake in Anderson, Clayton.

Sources said that Bear, Stearns has sold its holdings.

Last Friday, St. Louis-based Ralston Purina Co., a competitor of Quaker in the pet food business, announced it was negotiating with Anderson, Clayton and would seek to begin a $62-per-share, or $750 million, friendly bid for the company.

Anderson, Clayton's stock rose $2.25 to close at $65.50 a share in trading Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange. Quaker was unchanged at $72 a share and Ralston Purina fell $1.125 to $62.875 a share.

Venezuela considers selling oil to Israel

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — OPEC member Venezuela is considering selling petroleum to Israel but has not made a decision yet, Energy Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti said.

Hernandez Grisanti, who held discussions with Israeli Commerce and Industry Minister Ariel Sharon earlier this week, disclosed late Wednesday that Sharon proposed Israel buy oil from Venezuela. Sharon leaves Venezuela Friday after a four-day visit.

"The proposal is being analyzed by the appropriate departments in the oil industry," Hernandez Grisanti said. The oil industry is operated by Petroleos de Venezuela, a state-run monopoly.

"Once we receive the opinion of Petroleos de Venezuela about the commercial possibilities, the government will decide whether to sell oil to Israel," the minister said. "We have not ruled out the possibility, but at this point no decision has been made."

Diplomatic sources said Israel had not bought oil from Venezuela before. The Israeli embassy said the country receives its oil from the international spot market and from Egypt, Mexico and Norway, none of which belong to the Arab-dominated Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Richardson bank fails due to poor lending

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Comptroller of the Currency on Thursday declared Heritage National Bank in Richardson insolvent and appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as receiver.

The bank reopens today as Brookhollow National Bank, and its depositors will automatically become depositors of the new bank, subject to approval by the appropriate court, said Julie Amberson, spokeswoman for the FDIC in Washington.

It was the 19th bank failure in Texas and the 104th in the nation this year.

Ms. Amberson said the FDIC board approved the assumption of the deposits and liabilities of Heritage by Brookhollow, which is a newly chartered subsidiary of Brookhollow Bancshares Inc. of Dallas.

Dale Underwood, spokesman for the comptroller's office, said the bank's failure was primarily the result of inadequate supervision by the board of directors and speculative lending practices.

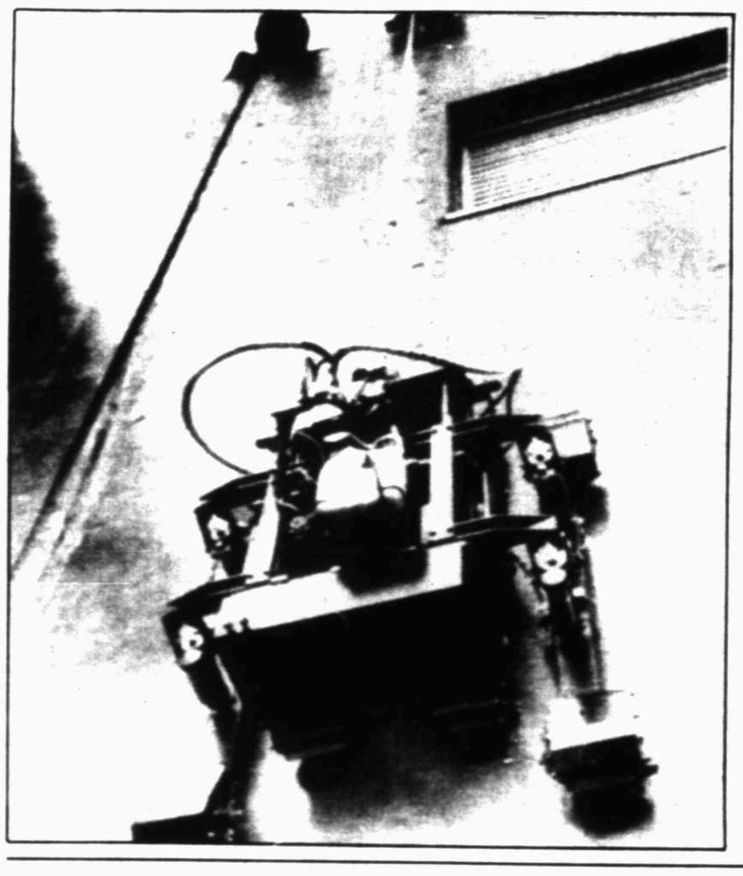
Approximately 36 percent of the loan portfolio consisted of loans to insiders and their interests, according to a statement issued by the comptroller's office.

Brookhollow National will assume about $30.1 milion in 3,500 deposit accounts and has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $290,000, Ms. Amberson said. It also will buy some of the failed bank's loans and other assets for $16.2 million.

To aid the transaction, the FDIC will advance $13.6 million to the assuming bank and will retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $17.7 million, Ms. Amberson said.

Heritage National Bank was chartered on Feb. 16, 1982. The bank had assets on June 30, 1986 of about $33 million, deposits of $30 million and primary capital of $3.7 million, Underwood said.

Heritage National was unable to remedy its problems and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency, he said.



Wall-crawling robot

A robot cralls up the surface of a building in Tsukuba, Japan in a recent demonstration by government engineers who developed the robot.

The "Spider-Mark III," developed by a Ministry of International Trade and Industry laboratory in cooperation with two Japanese companies, is equipped with a two-cylinder gasoline engine and its movement can be guided by remote control, said Takashi Imai, a ministry official.

The 77-pound robot is about 3 feet long and 2 feet wide and has eight sponge-and-rubber legs.

The $96,700 robot can inspect cracks or clean high-rise buildings, said Imai, who works at the ministry's Mechanical Engineering Laboratory.

Pickens give business students pointers on success

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Don't forget integrity and fair play when climbing the ladder of success, coporate activist and oil baron T. Boone Pickens told University of Tennessee graduate business students Thursday.

Pickens, the innovative chief executive of Mesa Oil, gave an audience of 500 people a 10-point plan to emulate the success he has found as head of the nation's largest independent oil and natural gas operation.

He earned a reputation as a corporate raider for unsuccessful takeover attempts of Gulf Oil, Phillips and Unocal, and he has formed a non-profit organization to lobby Congress for shareholders' rights.

The most important element of success for young executives is to learn to analyze the business scene, Pickens said.

"Assess the risks and rewards carefully. And when you've done that, don't let yourself get emotionally involved. In other words, don't fall in love with your deals," said Pickens, 58, of Amarillo, Texas.

He told the students seeking master's degrees in business adminstration that business deals are like streetcars: "Another one will be along in another 15 minutes."

Once a business deal has been analyzed, don't hesitate to act, said Pickens, who described three kinds of management: Those who make the changes, those nimble enough to follow the leaders and those left behind.

For people far down the corporate structure, Pickens said to learn about the business any way possible.

"If you're not included in board meetings, find ways to expand yourself. Take every opportunity to be around people who can help you understand what the company is doing," he said.

Pickens urged the students to be team players. "If anybody is going to sign your check every week, then you've got to be loyal," he said.

No chief executive should be allowed to run a company which doesn't comprise at least 75 percent of his net worth, Pickens said.

He urged all employees to become stockholders in their chosen occupation. "That way you know you have to deliver and the rest of the members of the organization do, too," Pickens said.

People in business should never have to apologize for making money, he said, but neither should they sacrifice their principles to get ahead.

"You don't have to cheat to win," Pickens said. "You don't even have to bend your principles. Think of business as a sporting event. Cheating robs you of the enjoyment."

Pickens, who instituted a fitness program at Mesa Oil in 1979, said rising executives need to stay physically fit and to learn moderation in their social lives.

He said Mesa executives will sometimes break for a racquetball game during heated board discussions.

Judge shortens time for Knudsen sale

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The sale of nearly half of struggling Knudsen Foods to Hughes Markets and Kraft Inc. for $68 million cleared a hurdle Thursday when a federal bankruptcy judge shortened the waiting period required before the sale is reviewed by the court.

But the proposed sale was criticized by an investor group that says it is willing to make a higher bid for the same assets that Hughes and Kraft are buying.

In a joint agreement announced Wednesday, Kraft and Hughes signed a letter of intent to buy three plants in Los Angeles as well as plants in Visalia, Modesto and Fresno, Calif., and Las Vegas, Nev. Hughes will own some of the plants while Kraft, a unit of Dart & Kraft, will own others and will contract with Hughes for some cultured products from one Hughes-owned plant in Los Angeles.

The proposed sale will save more than 1,500 jobs and will ensure the survival of the Knudsen and Foremost brands. Kraft and Hughes will pay $68 million and will buy the inventory of some of the plants, but no value was placed on the inventory in the letter of intent filed in bankruptcy court Thursday.

Knudsen Foods is still trying to sell the remainder of its business to various buyers, but has not reached any agreements. Knudsen has been operating under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code since Sept. 17. Under Chapter 11, a company continues in business but is protected from its creditors while it works out a plan to pay its debts.

Bankruptcy Judge William Lasarow approved Knudsen's request for a speedy hearing on the proposed sale, and set the hearing for Oct. 2. The U.S. Bankruptcy Code usually requires 20-day waiting period so that creditors can be notified of a sale.

J. Ronald Trost, a lawyer representing Kraft, said that Knudsen essentially held an "auction" of the company in the Los Angeles law offices of Irell & Manella from Saturday until Tuesday. Prospective buyers were housed in various rooms on three floors of the law offices, and lawyers shuttled among the buyers, he said.

But an investor group led by well-known New York bankruptcy lawyer Lewis Kruger complained that the process was not really an auction because his group was not allowed to make a bid even though members showed up at the law offices on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

"I was really stunned, I must tell you, that no one ever asked us how much we wanted to bid," Kruger said in an interview.

"We are prepared and will in court make a higher and better offer than they (Kraft and Hughes) have made," Kruger said. Kruger did not disclose the size of the offer.

Kruger's group also includes his company, AMA Management, and Adler & Shaykin, a New York investment banking firm that specializes in leveraged buyouts. J. Gary Shansby, former chairman and chief executive of Shaklee Corp., would run the business if the group's bid were successful.

Stephen Feldman, a lawyer representing Knudsen, said in court Thursday that new offers should not be received in court, in order to protect the integrity of the negotiating process. "We didn't enter into this transaction without negotiating with a number of other parties," he said.

Trost said that Kraft and Hughes might withdraw its $68 million offer and make a lower bid if the assets were reopened to competitive bidding.

AOI Coal ends buyout agreement

AOI Coal Co. announced that its annual meeting has been adjourned and will reconvene on October 23, 1986 to consider a proposal to acquire all the outstanding capital stock of Coal Associates, Inc. in exchange for 3,300,000 shares of AOI Common Stock.

AOI also announced that its agreement to acquire all the stock of Robert L. Herndon, Inc. has been terminated with no liability to either party. AOI's management believes that the long-term outlook for the marketability of its coal production is favorable; however, AOI's Board of Directors decided to terminate the agreement because of current uncertainties with respect to the short-term outlook with respect to prices and volumes.

The annual meeting was originally expected to consider both the CAI and the RLHI acquisitions. The adjourned annual meeting on October 23, 1986 will consider only the CAI acquisition. Loyd Whitley, Senior Vice President and Treasurer of AOI, noted that the CAI acquisition would integrate the coal marketing capabilities of CAI with the mining activities of AOI, and would eliminate substantial cash commissions payable by AOI to CAI on coal sales.

Prior to the adjournment of the annual meeting, the stockholders of AOI re-elected its existing slate of Directors, and ratified the selection of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. as auditors for the current year.

IADC chapter plans dance

The Permian Basin Chapter of the International Association of Drilling Contractors (IADC) will hold its annual Couples Party, Sept. 27 at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Cost is $50 per couple, and includes cocktails, dinner and dancing. Cocktails begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 and dancing at 9 p.m.

Entertainment will be provided by the Rex Thomas Country & Western Band. Chapter president Larry Adkins of Tri-Service Drilling said "every member is encouraged to attend."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Federal judge upholds Federal Reserve system

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has upheld the constitutionality of the way the Federal Reserve system regulates the nation's money supply.

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., had challenged the make-up of the policy-making Federal Open Market Committee because Congress does not vote on the appointment of five of its 12 members.

But U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene noted in a 19-page opinion released Thursday that the sale and purchase of government securities — the committee's primary tool for controlling the supply of money and credit in the economy — was done without direct governmental involvement for many years before the committee was established in 1935.

House working on $567 billion spending bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House moved toward approval of $567 billion in spending authority for federal agencies in the new budget year, the largest sum ever crammed into a single money bill.

Working under the threat of a veto by President Reagan, members of the House on Thursday wrapped virtually every facet of government spending for the new fiscal year starting Oct. 1 into a into a single, giant package.

Congress, with only a week to go before the current year runs out, has turned to a single, full-year package after failing to compete action on any of 13 regular appropriations bills needed for government operations.

Rate declines spur sales of existing homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declines in mortgage rates helped spur sales of exisiting homes in August to their fastest past this decade, a real estate trade group says.

Sales jumped 7 percent last month to an annual rate of 3.69 million units, the National Association of Realtors said Thursday. That compared with a smaller 1.8 percent increase in July.

The increases pushed the annual rate of sales to its highest level since October 1979, when a yearly pace of 3.77 million units was recorded.

FAA criticized for collision avoidance stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional critics charged the Federal Aviation Administration with "bureaucratic footdragging" and "turf-guarding" in failing to move quickly to require collision avoidance systems in commercial aircraft.

Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn. on Thursday opened hearings on the longstanding collision avoidance controversy.

The FAA and industry have for more than 20 years searched for ways to warn pilots of an impending collision.

FCC to decide question of CBS licenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A review of CBS Inc. board meeting records could resolve the question of whether Loews Corp. has illegally taken control of CBS's broadcast licenses, the Federal Communications Commission says.

Loews controls 24.9 percent of CBS stock, and the FCC said Thursday that it had opened an inquiry into whether Loews and its chairman, Laurence Tisch, have gained control of the CBS stations.

Although unlikely, a finding of an illegal transfer could trigger the forced sale of some or all of CBS owned-stations. CBS denies there has been a transfer of control.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Queen producer flows 322 barrels

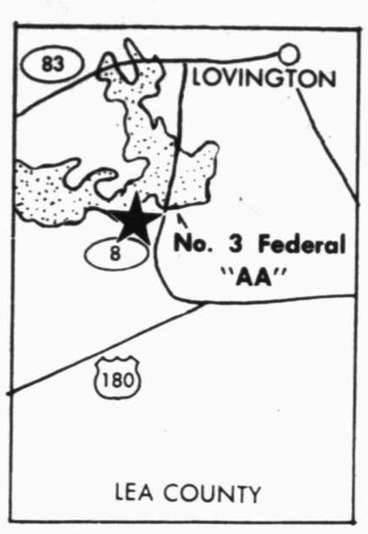
From Staff Reports

CITIES SERVICE OIL & GAS CORP. has completed a Queen producer in the Central Corbin field of Lea County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 3 Federal "AA" flowed 322 barrels of crude, 48 Mcfd and 55 barrels of load water. Production is from perforations 4,236 to 4,262 ft.

Total depth was 4,350 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 4,314 ft. Pay was topped at 4,236 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and east lies of Section 9, T18s, R33e.



Andrews field gains 197 barrel producer

EXXON CORP. has completed an additional producer in the Means field of Andrews County.

Exxon potentialed the No. 1954 Means San Andres Unit to pump 197 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 118.8 Mcfd and 252 barrels of water from perforations 4,367 to 4,573 ft. The interval was acidized with 882 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured 63,000 gallons of gel, 84,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 24,000 lbs. 10/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 603:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 4,655 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,649 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,155.8 ft., include the Redbeds at 1,655 ft., Queen at 4,132, Grayburg at 4,171, and the San Andres at 4,517 ft. Pay was topped at 4,367 ft.

RRC'S Nugent says changes will help state's oil industry

Railroad Commission Chairman James E. Nugent told East Texas oil producers in Tyler recently that the Commission has been working in several areas to help the state's troubled oil and gas industry.

Addressing the annual meeting of the East Texas Producers and Royalty Owners Association, Nugent said recent rules changes made by the Commission reduce the regulatory burden on producers, save them money and help prevent the loss of thousands of marginal wells across the state.

The Railroad Commission chairman said Texas gas producers will save some $1.9 million a year as a result of rules changes which authorize less complicated well tests and exempt low-volume gas producing wells from testing requirements. Another rule change eliminates the requirement for producers to file a monthly report forecasting gas production from each well. Producer savings from this measure have been estimated at $1 million annually, Nugent said.

Nugent told the producers other rules changes are designed to ensure that gas producers get a fair opportunity to produce their wells to meet market demand. Beginning next March, pipeline companies and their affiliates and subsidiaries must take gas fairly from wells hooked to their systems without discriminating between wells in a field or between fields. Pipelines also can't favor production from their own wells.

Texas oil operators are already benefiting from changes to the Commission's well plugging rules, according to the RRC's chairman, who said plunging world crude oil prices have endangered many of the state's stripper wells — wells which can only produce 10 barrels of oil a day or less.

To help operators of these wells, Nugent said the Commission recently extended the deadline for plugging inactive wells from 90 days to one year. Instead of being forced into an expensive plugging decision, operators can delay marginally economic wells for up to a year and wait for higher crude prices.

This flexibility is important protection for state oil reserves, according to Nugent, who said Texas is becoming more of a stripper well state. Commission figures indicate more than 67 percent of the state's oil wells fall into the stripper well category. Such wells account for some 19 percent of all oil produced in Texas.

Nugent says the Commission is now tracking more than 4,500 wells which have been identified as active or possible polluters. The cost of plugging these wells is estimated to be $28.3 million.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

London-based Trafalgar names new chief

HOUSTON (SWN) — Tom King is taking up the new post of chief executive, oil and gas division, with Trafalgar House Oil & Gas Inc. in Houston. He recently joined the Trafalgar House Group in London from Burmah Oil Exploration, where he was deputy managing director.

King, a graduate of Imperial College's School of Mines, has extensive overseas experience of oil exploration and production. His new post will be his second time working in Houston. Between 1978 and 1980 he was manager, planning at Gulf Oil's International Exploration and Production Headquarters.

Enron subsidiaries will merge next month

HOUSTON — J.T. Richardson Rig & Construction, Inc., a subsidiary of Enron Oil Trading & Transportation Co. (EOTT), will merge with EOTT on Oct. 1, and will continue to provide a variety of services to oil and gas producers throughout the Texas panhandle and Western Oklahoma.

EOTT is one of the nation's largest purchasers of crude oil at the lease. Based in Houston, the company purchases, transports and markets crude oil, refined fuels and pipeline condensates in more than 30 states. It also trades crude oil and refined fuels.

Pennzoil moves oil & gas divisions

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co.'s board of directors approved a plan to transfer most of its oil and gas exploration and production activities to the parent company, officials said Thursday.

The board said it believed the inter-corporation restructuring will provide Pennzoil with "optimum flexibility under rapidly changing conditions," according to a company statement.

Directors approved the transfer of all oil and gas exploration and production activities except those of the eastern division to Pennzoil, spokesman Mickey Gentry said.

In addition, the board also approved formation of three wholly-owned subsidiaries: Pennzoil Sulphur Co., Pennzoil Products Co. and Richland Corp. Pennzoil Products will include the eastern exploration and products division, Gentry said.

Trading of Pennzoil stock on the New York Stock Exchange temporarily was halted Thursday because of the news.

© 1986 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Saturday, September 27, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Some unexpected news could change your priorities. Investigate real estate as a possible source of income. Taking a refresher course at a local college could help you stay ahead of the competition. You will love the praise that comes your way in January. Trust your intuition when making career-related decisions. Influential person admires your independence. March is the perfect time for a wedding.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Director Arthur Penn, actress Sada Thompson, Phillies slugger Mike Schmidt, Dodgers pinch hitter Len Matuszek, author Louis Auchincloss, actor William Conrad, actress Jayne Meadows, former Illinois Sen. Charles Percy, actress Kathy Nolan, actors Shaun Cassidy and Greg Morris, golf's Kathy Whitworth and American statesman-patriot Samuel Adams.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Social connections begin to pay off in business. Group gatherings prove more rewarding than one-on-one meetings. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Investments in oil, television and movies are favored. You tend to be too generous. Pull back a bit. Consolidate loans and try to reduce certain payments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Others may think you are spinning your wheels, but you know better. Follow your intuition and you will be able to overcome almost any barrier. A romantic dream can come true.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Happiness comes in a variety of forms today. Let romance simmer while you concentrate on work. This can be a very important period of growth. Hard work makes things happen.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Recent experiences have made you a stronger person. Someone tests the strength of a relationship. You enjoy a new stability in your personal life. Act prudently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If possible, wait until next week to make a decision! A period of recreation revives your spirits and opens the door to new social invitation. Children influence your actions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could catch the acting bug while attending a stage performance. Seek out people who share your interests and make you laugh. Romance gives you many choices.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This can be a romantic weekend if that is your desire. Relationships that build slowly will last a long time. Self-confidence returns when you accomplish a difficult task.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A message arrives that could cement alliance. Avoid discussing money at social gatherings. The ability to speak a second language comes in handy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People around you could draw the wrong conclusions, causing an annoying mix-up. Slow down and be more precise. Good news from those at a distance adds to your enjoyment tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seize a chance to put a financial idea into operation. You have fewer problems in getting others to see things your way. Welcome an opportunity to mix business with pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Not sticking to the facts could get you into hot water with a loved one. Staying home proves more enjoyable than going out.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡

You would be surprised how simple a game bridge would be if everyone counted his tricks properly. And learned to put that knowledge to correct use.

North-South reached three no trump on a straightforward power auction. Note that five clubs is an inferior contract despite the 5-5 fit.

West led his fourth-best heart and it was obvious to declarer that he had nine fast tricks if the club finesse was going to succeed. If it failed, however, there were only eight tricks, and a ninth would have to be developed. One way was to try a diamond finesse, but that offered only a 50 percent chance of success. The spade suit offered a sure way to set up the game-going trick.

Dummy's jack of hearts was played to the first trick, covered by the queen and ducked by declarer. He won the heart return and set about establishing his spade trick. Note that it would be wrong to play the ace-queen of spades. West would win and play a third spade, and when East got in with the king of clubs he could cash two more spade tricks to set the contract. Declarer correctly led the queen of spades from hand!

The defenders were helpless. West took the king and knocked out declarer's remaining heart stopper, but it availed him naught. (No other return would have been any better.) When East got in with the king of clubs he had no more hearts. Whatever he returned, declarer would win, clear the ace of spades and take his nine tricks—two spades, two hearts, one diamond and four clubs.

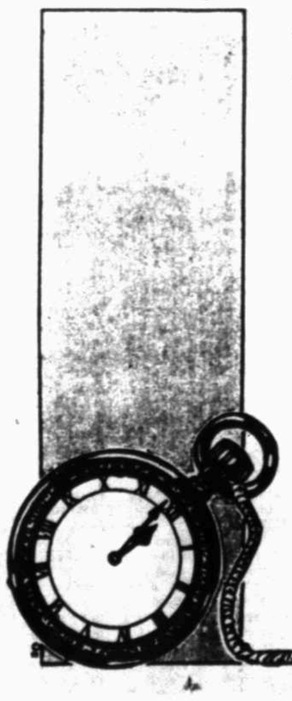
WATCHES



Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Jury selection under way in Vincent trial; Sean Penn awaiting arraignment

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Jury selection is under way in the battery trial of TV actor Jan-Michael Vincent, while movie actor Sean Penn still awaits arraignment on charges he beat a man who spoke to his wife, the singer Madonna.

Vincent, 41, who played a helicopter pilot in the canceled "Airwolf" series, is charged with one count of felony battery and two counts of violating probation.

He is accused of beating a friend, Chenoa Lee Ellis, 35, at his Malibu home last September. Ms. Ellis testified at a hearing that Vincent punched her after complaining that she was interfering in his love life. Jury selection began Thursday.

Penn, 25, received a continuance Thursday until Oct. 3 of his arraignment on misdemeanor battery charges, said Los Angeles city attorney's spokesman Ted Goldstein.

Penn is accused of pushing songwriter David Wolinski off a chair in a nightclub and kicking him. Wolinski, 37, said Penn accused him of trying to kiss Madonna on April 12.

NEW YORK (AP) — It was the shower heard 'round the world.

Now Bobby Ewing, who rose from the dead in May in the most famous shower scene since "Psycho," must account for his mysterious reappearance as "Dallas" begins its ninth season with a two-hour episode tonight night.

It's the biggest cliffhanger for "Dallas" since 1980, when a transfixed America — more than half the nation's homes with TVs — found out which J.R. Ewing-hater shot him.

"Bobby"

The new television season already has had a sitcom comeback by 75-year-old Lucille Ball and an invasion from a 229-year-old extra-terrestrial named "ALF," but TV executives and VCR manufacturers have had Sept. 26 circled for some time. It's the night two Top 10 series, CBS' "Dallas" and NBC's "Miami Vice," go head to head in the new season's version of the Friday Night Fights.

Oh, by the way, ABC has two new half-hour entries in the time period. "Sledge Hammer!," a spoof on macho cops, and "Sidekicks," about a cop and his partner, a black-belt karate expert.

"Miami Vice," starting its third season, was moved up one hour to help launch and make room for the literate "L.A. Law," which NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff said had to be a 10 p.m. show.

Another reason for the shift was NBC's so-called "wear-out study." According to NBC, "Dallas" was No. 2 in waning audience interest behind the now-canceled "Love Boat." But NBC's April questionnaire didn't mention Bobby's return.

"It was slipping, but that doesn't make it a weak program," said Al Ordover, NBC's vice president of broadcast research. "I think we'll split the audience at 9 and improve ourselves at 10 o'clock."

Starting an hour apart last season, "Dallas" ranked sixth in the ratings and "Miami Vice" was ninth. Only 10 percent of each show's viewers watched the other show, said Dave Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research.

"Miami Vice" has a new spiked hair-do for Don Johnson, fewer pastels and more dark colors in the scenery, and speculation that one subordinate character, Detective Larry Zito, will get killed early in the season.

That's minor league compared to the plot twist on "Dallas." If Donna Reed could replace Barbara Bel Geddes as Miss Ellie with nary a reaction from the "Dallas" matriarch's family two seasons ago, then, in the anything-goes world of soap opera, Bobby (Patrick Duffy) can find life after death.

The supermarket tabloids have had a field day forecasting the "Dallas" future. This week, People magazine published a story saying executive producer Leonard Katzman shot three explanation scenes, at a cost of $25,000, to keep everybody guessing.

In an ad in this week's TV Guide, CBS teased: "One of these is the right answer. He's a twin, he was revived at the last minute, it was all a dream, and he's an impostor. You've been guessing long enough! Tonight get a group of friends together and find out the truth!"

According to People, the most likely scenario is that Pam, Bobby's ex-wife, dreamed Bobby's death after the couple spent a romantic night together. That would mean last season's 31 episodes on "Dallas" never really existed. Poof.

But if it all was a bad dream on "Dallas," how does CBS explain its spinoff soap, "Knots Landing?" All last season, Gary Ewing was mourning his dead brother.

"We have great concerns about what the audience reaction is going to be," said Kim LeMasters, CBS' vice president for programming. "There's going to be happy people and sad people."

Despite the network hype for "Dallas" and "Miami Vice," their new-season premieres haven't caused unusual interest in Dallas or Miami.

"There's been no heavy-duty anticipation," said Ed Bark, TV critic of The Dallas Morning News. "'Who shot J.R.?' was like a religious experience compared to this. We had stories every day the week before. We covered that as a major news event."

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Actors George Hamilton and Lloyd Bridges have been named in a $700,000 lawsuit because they acted as spokesmen for a financial company accused of defrauding investors of millions of dollars.

The lawsuit refers to television ads made by Bridges urging people to invest in A.J. Obie & Associates and ads by Hamilton for its parent company, Diamond Mortgage Corp.

The lawsuit, filed by eight investors Wednesday, contends the actors were paid by Obie and Diamond to make "false representations." The lawsuit also names A.J. Obie and Diamond Mortgage, which are undergoing liquidation under Chapter 7 of federal bankruptcy law.

The actors would not comment on the suit.

Goldberg

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jane Fonda, Michael J. Fox, Whoopi Goldberg and other Hollywood activists will tour the state to promote California's clean water initiative.

"We didn't want to do another concert, but we wanted something rooted in Americana," said Neil Meron, who with fellow Tri Star producer Craig Zadan conceived the Hollywood Clean Water Caravan to support Proposition 65.

The three-day tour, which will take more than 40 celebrities to nine cities, was to begin today.

"They want to meet people and rally them to vote yes on 65," said Zadan. "Can you imagine being registered to vote by Chevy Chase?"

Proposition 65 would impose stringent standards to control the discharge of toxic chemicals that could contaminate drinking water.

Advertising company hopes to literally stand out with pop-up ads

By Jane Birnbaum
Hearst News and Feature Service

In today's advertising glut, Intervisual Communications Inc. wants to stand out. Literally.

The Los Angeles-based company produced the eye-catching paper pop-up Transamerica ad in Time magazine's Sept. 8 issue. And last week, 900,000 upscale Sports Illustrated subscribers received the Sept. 22 issue containing a pop-up ad for the new Dodge Dakota pickup truck. Intervisual produced it for ad agency BBDO/Detroit.

Although a pop-up might cost an advertiser five times as much as creating and placing a conventional ad in a comparable space, it pays off with initial impact as well as pass-along value, according to Intervisual chairman Waldo Hunt.

The incidence of people showing print ads to others is "almost nonexistent, unless it's Volkswagen ads from the '60s," says Hunt, a longtime ad man. But with pop-ups, people "keep them longer and save them as collectors' items. They even have play value."

The company is awaiting the results of a report it expects will back up these claims, giving commercial division director Gordon Hearne additional ammunition when he makes the rounds of advertising shops.

The company is the world's largest creator and producer of pop-up books, sending hand-assembled books in 17 languages to 37 countries. Intervisual's commercial business, active only for the last two years, now accounts for some 30 percent of its gross, expected to be over $13 million this year.

Adweek magazine has called Hunt "king of the pop-ups," with good reason. More than 20 years ago, Hunt saw an antique pop-up book and realized its application in advertising. After contracting with a printer in Japan for the labor-intensive hand work, Hunt started producing ads, direct-mail pieces and point-of-purchase displays. Pop-up books followed, and Hunt helped Hallmark develop its line of pop-up greeting cards.

But pop-up magazine ads collapsed. The U.S. Postal Service threatened in the late '60s to boost magazines containing such attachments into a new, more expensive postal category.

The 3-D magazine ads disappeared, but not forever. In the early '80s, the post office relaxed its policy on attachments, which include things like scratch-and-sniff fragrance strips. And in 1985, Intervisual was back with a pop-up Honeywell ad in Business Week magazine.

Then came the Transamerica ad, and now the Dodge Dakota, which happened when Hearne approached BBDO about the account. For more than two months, an Intervisual paper engineer worked on a prototype.

"Our key strength is a paper engineer, someone who can figure out how something can open and close a thousand times without breaking and produce the desired effect with a minimum of hand labor," Hunt explains.

Workers in Mexico and Colombia put the cardboard trucks together. Hunt also began using workers in Singapore when Japanese labor became too expensive.

The pop-up trucks have 44 glue points.

"If one doesn't work, the truck doesn't work," Hunt says. "And each truck has to be checked before it's shipped."

Dodge's objective was that everyone see the ad, and "this is the only way to do it," Hearne claims. Folded flat, the pop-up is so thick inside the magazine, "you can feel something going on inside, and when you flip the magazine, it opens to the ad."

Intervisual has more plans to break through the advertising clutter. It now inserts in children's books electronic units that produce melodies and lights. The post office currently bars from the mail magazines with ads containing the current design of battery-and-microchip units. But Intervisual is working on making them thinner, and "down the line, we think we'll have the clearance," Hunt says.

Bad loans lead to failure of 12th bank in Kansas

LACROSSE, Kan. (UPI) — The Home State Bank, buffeted by losses totaling nearly $3 million, Thursday became the 12th Kansas bank ordered closed in 1986 and LaCrosse's second bank failure in less than a year.

State banking regulators shut down the town's only other bank, Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Rush County, Nov. 21, 1985.

Michael Heitman, deputy banking commissioner, blamed Home State's problems on approximately $2.9 million in bad loans in energy, agriculture and real estate.

State Bank Commissioner Eugene T. Barrett Jr. declared the bank insolvent and named the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation receiver.

"The bank was found insolvent due to loan losses which exceeded the bank's capital and reseves," Heitman said.

Attempts by management and owners to restore capital failed, he said.

At least four parties expressed interest in acquiring the bank but no bids had been submitted by late Thursday morning, Heitman said. It was possible the facility could reopen as a new bank or as a branch of an existing bank.

"It looks very good that there will be a successful purchase," Heitman said.

The last Kansas bank ordered closed was United Bank of Minneapolis, shut down Aug. 21.

Thirteen Kansas banks were closed in 1985.

Geophysicists elect new officers

TULSA — The Society of Exploration Geophysicists has elected Robert J. Graebner, senior vice president of Geophysical Service, Inc., Dallas, president for the 1986-87 year.

Named president-elect was L.C. Lawyer, chief geophysicist for Chevron Corp., Houston.

Donald W. Frye, manager, geophysical data processing & acquisition, Tenneco Oil Co., Houston, was elected first vice-president and Stanley S. Johnson, chief geologist, Virginia Division of Mineral Resources, Charlottesville, is the new second vice-president.

SEG vice-president for the year is Arthur S. Cramer Jr., consulting exploration geophysicist for Texaco, Inc., New Orleans. C.O. Smith, vice president, Mid-Continent Region, Ladd Petroleum Corp. in Tulsa, was elected secretary-treasurer.

The new officers will assume their duties at the 56th Annual International Meeting and Exposition in Houston Nov. 2-6.

TI to test prospective employees for drugs

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Midland-Odessa Texas Instruments plant will begin testing prospective employees for drugs by the end of the year, said Hank Henry, personnel administration manager.

"The applicants will be the only people going through the routine medical exam. Their employment will be contingent on them passing," Henry said.

"As a general rule, we have a high quality thrust and drug usage is illegal. We want to keep up our high quality," Henry said.

The plant, about 10 miles west of Midland on Interstate-20, has about 1,200 employees who manufacture semiconductor parts for the military.

The Dallas-Fort Worth plant — the largest employer in the area — will begin testing job applicants for drug use Oct. 15.

Drug testing will begin at the north Texas plants and spread nationwide by year's end. The Midland-Odessa plant got official notification of the program Thursday, Henry said.

If applicants do not pass they may reapply and be reconsidered within six months, Henry said.

"The message is going to get out to the perspective employee, they (Texas Instruments) are against drug use. It's illegal."

— Hank Henry

Urine samples will become part of the routine physical given to all applicants after interviews, Henry said.

Samples will be sent for analysis to a North Carolina firm, that will handle most of testing for other company plants, he said.

Dallas Company spokesman Bob Bledsoe said, "We did it because of a growing trend of American industry to try to prevent drugs in the workplace," he said. "We didn't do it as a result of seeing a rise in drug-related problems."

A company survey showed 23 out of 24 large corporations nationwide have drug screening programs and Texas-Instruments decided to join in, Henry said.

"It's not that new. We're joining the ranks of other large companies," he said.

There are no future plans to test the current staff for drug use, Henry said.

Henry said he could not predict how successful the screening will be in ferreting out drug users, but he said, "The message is going to get out to the perspective employee, they (Texas Instruments) are against drug use. It's illegal."

Decency group to picket Kent stores

From Staff Reports

West Texans for Decency are planning Saturday to picket Kent Convenience stores in Odessa and Andrews as well as One-Stop Convenience stores in Andrews in accordance with a National Federation For Decency effort to picket all purveyors of "pornography," a spokesman said.

A similar picket of Kent Convenience Stores will take place Saturday Oct. 4, in Midland, Joe Seay, the West Texans for Decency spokesman in Odessa said.

Seay contends that "all pickets are prayerful, peaceful and non-confrontational."

The Odessa chapter of West Texans for Decency claimed the purpose of the pickets is "to make the public aware that these merchants are selling sexually explicit magazines (pornography)."

Bill Mintz, president and owner of the One-Stops in Andrews, said through the receptionist at his corporate headquarters in Andrews that he did not want to comment on the matter.

Bill Kent, who heads up the Kent Convenience Stores, said he realizes the decency groups feel very strongly about their cause.

"I support their freedom to picket as much as I support our freedom to distribute the magazines," Kent said.

Man jailed, charged in robbery at nightclub

From Staff Reports

A Midland man is being held in city jail after he was charged in the robbery of a man outside a local nightclub early Thursday morning, police said.

Richard Lawrence Duty, 22, 4405 N. Garfield, was charged with robbery Thursday. Bond for Duty was set at $7,500 by Judge James Brazell.

Duty was arrested early Thursday at an apartment complex near Garfield's, 4519 N. Garfield, after a 24-year-old Midland man was robbed of his wallet and assaulted by two men just after he left the club. Following interviews with witnesses at the scene, police questioned Duty and another man at the Warwick Apartments, located behind the club. Both men were arrested, but police have yet to charge the other suspect in the case.

Police Roundup

The man's wallet was recovered.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a local residence that netted burglars jewelry valued at more than $2,000.

The victim of the burglary, Sandra Edge, told police a yellow gold ladies watch valued at $1,500, a diamond pendant valued at $700, a yellow gold chain valued at $180, and a wedding set and earrings of unknown value were stolen from a residence in the 3300 block of Haynes. Reports said the items were taken Thursday sometime between 6:30 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Hospital hopeful of increase in surgeries

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The number of surgeries at Midland Memorial Hospital declined in August, but the administration said Thursday it expects September to show a comeback.

Ray Branson, MMH president, said at the monthly Board of Trustees meeting Wednesday that there were 583 surgeries performed during August. He said the normal monthly surgery rate is about 600 or 700.

Branson explained that due to summer vacations or perhaps the bad economy, surgeries are delayed during at least one summer month.

The drop in surgeries caused inpatient ancillary revenues — money coming in from costs indirectly related to surgeries — to fall $204,949 short of the budgeted $2,323,142 for the month of August, monthly financial statements showed.

Branson's good news was that the number of scheduled surgeries for September looks high and that Tuesday, the hospital was actually "scrambling for beds." Out of the 200 beds in actual use at MMH, he said about 170 were full and there were 20 babies in the nursery.

Ron Peterson, former chief financial officer at MMH, has moved to the position of corporate vice president at Shannon Hospital in San Angelo, Branson reported.

Branson said the hospital was interviewing three candidates for the job.

Dr. James Humphreys, a trustee, said the hospital has granted temporary practicing privileges to a thoracic surgeon — one who specializes in chest surgery — to complement services available at the Allison Cancer Center.

Trustees also reported that continuing emphasis is being placed on expanding the psychiatric services at the hospital and that four psychiatrists have been granted temporary practicing privileges.

Midlander tried on second degree murder in Florida

From Staff Reports

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — A Midland resident is on trial for second degree murder in the 8th District Circuit Court in Alacha County in Gainesville, Fla.

Billie Jean Mullins, 42, is accused of killing a Gainesville man in December 1985. Ms. Mullins, who was born in Gainesville, has lived in Midland for the last 10 years with her husband Donald Mullins.

Ms. Mullins was in Gainesville visiting her son when police say she killed Clifford Augustus, a Gainesville resident.

Her son, Harold "Rip" McCullars, 20, testified at her trial which began Thursday. Several times McCullars apologized for his shaky memory calling himself "just a dumb old country boy," as he recounted the event leading up to Augustus' death.

The assistant state attorney described feelings of "ill will" which he said were felt between the Mullins family and Augustus.

Augustus had worked for Ms. Mullins' mother, Tommie McCullars, until her death in 1982. When Ms. McCullars died, she left Augustus 40 percent of her estate valued at $200,000 while leaving Ms. Mullins with $10,000, according to testimony.

Augustus was also given "exclusive" use of Ms. McCullar's home after her death.

McCullars said that on Dec. 3, the day of Augustus' death, he, Ms. Mullins, Donald Mullins and two family friends were at Augustus' home.

The group arrived at the home while both Augustus and his wife were at work. The group loaded two pick-up trucks with furniture and left, McCullars said.

When Augustus' wife, Tammy, came home from work, she said the house, "looked like a tornado had been through (it)."

Ms. Augustus called the Alachua County Sheriff's Department and reported that her furniture was stolen. Deputy Joe Hayes testified that he responded to the call. He told jurors, "the place was ransacked."

Hayes said that when Augustus arrived, "he was more or less in shock." Augustus told Hayes he suspected McCullars had robbed him. Hayes warned Augustus not go over to McCullars' home.

Later in the night, Augustus and his wife discovered a quilt, made by Ms. Augustus' grandmother, had also been stolen. Augustus was determined to get the quilt back, Ms. Augustus said.

McCullars said Augustus arrived at his home where Ms. Mullins was staying in a mobile home near his house. McCullars said Augustus accused him of stealing the quilt.

While the two men were fighting, Ms. Mullins came in with a shotgun and killed Augustus, McCullars told police earlier.

Ms. Mullins told police that night she was afraid Augustus was going to kill her son. She said she closed her eyes and fired the gun and does not remember anything else.

When police arrived at the house that night, they were met outside by Ms. Mullins, who said, "I did it. I'm the one you want," court files show.

Under Florida sentencing guidelines, Ms. Mullins may be sentenced up to 17 years in prison for second degree murder.

The trial will continue hearing testimony today and Saturday.

Refugee shelter only way of life for many

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN BENITO (AP) — Casa Oscar Romero, a controversial shelter for Central American refugees, is quieter these days.

Children play tag on a gravel playground and women cook and iron inside the large, white wood-frame shelter, named after the slain archbishop of San Salvador.

Four miles away inside a sheet metal building normally used for livestock shows, Luis Alberto Chavarria Garay worries about his 28-year-old wife and four children.

The six journeyed far from El Salvador, only for Chavarria Garay to be placed on a bus and separated from his family after their arrival Monday.

Casa Oscar Romero, opened in December 1982 by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, has started separating the men, women and children in a relocation prompted by a neighborhood fight on Aug. 8.

Chavarria Garay, 42, a baker in El Salvador, has no money. He wants to go to California. Mostly, he wants to be with his family.

AP Laserphoto

About 300 Central American refugees now reside in the Cameron County Livestock Show grounds after being relocated here from Casa Oscar Romero sanctuary house Monday afternoon.

"I saw them yesterday, but I haven't seen them today," he said Thursday. "I don't have a way to get over there. They suffered a lot on the way over here, but at least here we have people who will protect us and give us food until we are able to leave."

City officials and neighbors around Casa Oscar Romero are pleased about the relocation. But church officials now say additional donations will be needed to keep the shelter operating off church property.

The Catholic Church has spent about $250,000 at Casa Oscar Romero in the past four years. More than 10,000 Central Americans have made it their first stop after crossing the Rio Grande on their way into the interior of the United States.

But after two years of legal fights with the U.S. Immmigration and Naturalization Service and complaints from neighbors in this south Texas community 10 miles from Mexico, the church has decided to move Casa Romero. No new site has been found.

Treasured documents preserved for state fair exhibits

AUSTIN (AP) — Time has been kind to the memory of Col. William Barret Travis since he took command of the besieged Alamo in February 1836 and promptly dashed off his defiant "Victory or Death" letter.

But the letter itself, addressed in Travis' florid style "To the People of Texas and All Americans in the World," did not fare so well.

Faded, stained, torn in half, crudely mended here and there with tape, the letter marked its 150th anniversary earlier this year as a sadly tattered reminder of the glory won by Travis and his men.

But that was before it went to the conservation laboratory at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, a rare book and manuscript depository at the University of Texas.

The HRC lab was asked by the Texas State Library to restore the letter as well as the badly deteriorated Texas Declaration of Independence for a Sesquicentennial exhibit this fall at the State Fair of Texas in Dallas.

Work on the documents, mostly undertaken by conservator James Stroud, went so well that "we hope they won't deteriorate any more," said Don Etherington, the HRC's assistant director and chief conservator.

The HRC also designed cases for the documents so they can be displayed without damage from light, and so the declaration, which was written on both sides of six sheets of paper, can be viewed in its entirety.

About $20,000 worth of work was involved, Etherington said.

"We're doing this sort of as our contribution to the Texas Sesquicentennial," he said. "It's our gift to the state."

Chris LaPlante, director of the archives division of the State Library, said, "We couldn't be more pleased" with the restoration.

"As with everything else that the HRC does, this was first-rate," LaPlante said. "We think now that if these documents are kept in a proper storage environment, as we have at the archives, they will last for many hundred more years."

The HRC was a natural choice for the restoration because "there is no other place in Texas that could have done the work, and few other places in the United States," Etherington said.

Etherington's staff fights a never-ending battle against deterioration of the 800,000 books, 9 million manuscripts and 4 million photographs in the HRC collection.

Preserving books printed before the mid-19th century "is a piece of cake," Etherington said, because of the high-quality paper that was made from rag and was low in acidity. The real problems come with later books and manuscripts that use paper made from wood pulp, he said. Without proper storage and treatment, they will fade, grow brittle and crumble away to dust.

"The deterioration is usually not gradual, but drops dramatically after a while," Etherington said. "There comes a point when it becomes so brittle that it is sort of like rust, so that if you touch it it will just fall apart. What we do is try to preserve it before it reaches that point, but we can only do so much. One could argue that we could use 100 conservators."

Instead of 100, Etherington has 14 conservators plus six other staff members. A committee that includes HRC curators meets annually to decide which parts of the collection have the highest priority for preservation treatment.

"No part of the collection is too brittle to be used, but perhaps a couple million out of the 9 million manuscripts couldn't be handled without some form of physical support," Etherington said.

Staff members are continually putting materials in transparent, protective sleeves that will prevent damage by researchers. "All the staff helps with this," Etherington said. "Even the receptionists, when they have free time, will be putting things in sleeves. We couldn't do it with only the conservator staff."

The long-range hope for saving information in many documents may be to use optical discs that preserve an image of a document electronically, Etherington said.

"It's a difficult balance, because people come here to see the originals, and basically we want to preserve the artifact, not just the information," he said.

One of the oldest artifacts Etherington's staff has worked on recently is the almost 700-year-old copy of the Magna Charta owned by Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot. The HRC repaired holes in the document written on animal skin, "relaxed" the vellum parchment so it would lie flat and designed a protective display case.

The Magna Charta will also be in the State Fair exhibit, which is being sponsored by the Dallas Historical Society.

The Texas documents — which had been made dirty and brittle by time, previous conservation attempts and the effects of acid in the paper — were washed by the HRC with calcium hydroxide to remove impurities and create an alkaline buffer against the acidity. The chemical treatment is expected to halt deterioration caused by the high acidic content of the paper, Etherington said.

Other work involved removing tape that a long-forgotten caretaker had used to mend tears in the Travis letter, and rips in both documents were meticulously filled in with paste and tiny slivers of new paper.

"We use very fine Japanese paper because it's very strong and has long fibers that are thin and flexible," Etherington said.

Part of the cleaning involved undoing the work of an earlier conservation attempt, in which someone in the late 1920s had applied a silk coating to the documents. That old-fashioned preservation technique did not work.

"The silk coating deteriorates and darkens, and they probably used an acidic paste, which also causes the paper to deteriorate," Etherington said. "Eventually all that restoration had to be re-done."

The poor condition of the documents was partly a result of the rough treatment they received before entering the state archives.

After being folded up and secreted out of the Alamo in a messenger's sweaty buckskin pocket, the Travis letter was handed on at Gonzales to another messenger, who carried it to a citizens committee in San Felipe.

Both messengers, Capt. Albert Martin and Lancelot Smither, added notes to the page on late-breaking war developments, and the letter must have been folded and unfolded many more times as it was passed from hand to hand by the San Felipe town leaders.

According to the state archives, copies of the letter were soon printed and widely distributed, but the original was returned after the war to Travis' family, who kept it until 1891, when Travis' great-grandson sold it to the state.

After some dickering over the price, the state Department of Agriculture, Insurance, Statistics and History finally bought the letter for $85. That agency was a predecessor of the Texas State Library.

The Declaration of Independence and other documents related to the Texas Revolution were sent to the State Department in Washington soon after the war, apparently to encourage U.S. recognition of Texas as an independent republic.

Pulitzer Prize winner's latest novel to be out in March

DENTON (AP) — Larry McMurtry's latest novel, which celebrates Texas' 150th birthday, should be published in March 1987, the Pulitzer Prize winning author said.

"It's called 'Texasville,' and because of that title alone, 'Texasville,' I was able to sell it in France before I sold it in New York City," McMurtry said Thursday.

The author was among writers at the Governor's Sesquicentennial Conference On the Literary Arts at North Texas State University. The subject was on how images of Texas influence the arts in the state and perceptions by those in the world at large.

McMurtry, who won the 1985 Pulitzer Prize for his novel "Lonesome Dove," said he is influenced by events in the state.

"I'm very conscious that we're in the midst of the Sesquicentennial. I did my best to write a novel to celebrate this fact," he said.

Texas writers are heirs to potent images forged by the gritty struggle to settle the land, creating a mystique that can conflict with reality but also provide a ready made audience, he said.

"I know that I've lived comfortably all my life because I'm a Texas writer and because my books have been set in Texas," McMurtry told an audience of about 800.

The conference was called to examine Texas' images such as range-roaming cowboys and hard-dealing oilmen and their impact on the state's literary arts.

Writers featured in Thursday's discussion of the contemporary Texas novel disagreed on the state's influence on their work.

Novelist C.W. Smith railed against the celluloid glitter of CBS' television show "Dallas" and said the state doesn't play a major role in his books.

But novelist Shelby Hearon disagreed, saying all good fiction begins with the setting.

Smith said people outside of the state want to think of Dallasites as real life versions of the Ewings, the family on "Dallas."

Smith said people outside of the state what to think of Dallasites as real life versions of the Ewings, the family on "Dallas."

He said some of the stories happening in the state don't make it into the high profile world of television.

Police deputy lives through agony with other victims of violent crime

By PATRICIA POIST

GRAHAM (AP) — Young County Chief Deputy Van Perryman has a better-than-average understanding of victims of violent crime.

He himself has lived through their agony. His first wife, Elizabeth, was fatally shot at the age of 26, on Sept. 28, 1971, after being abducted in a robbery of the Lubbock restaurant where she worked as a waitress.

"I took my wife to work and three months later her skeletal remains were sent to me," he said.

Perryman says he lives a good life now. He has remarried, to a "wonderful woman." He has a good job. But he says he will never forget the pain of his first wife's killing.

He can remember watching the television news in December 1971 when his wife's body was found, three months after she disappeared.

He remembers seeing a law officer on the television news place her skull on the hood of a police car parked at the Potter County field just outside of Amarillo where her body was found.

He also remembers his sorrow when his young daughter, seeing Elizabeth Taylor, whom his wife resembled, on the television screen, grasped at the screen and cried, "Mommy!"

He can remember being considered a suspect, as spouses of murder victims often are, being grilled and questioned until deemed innocent.

And today, Perryman said, he is trying to turn the tragedy around and fight for victims' rights through his job in law enforcement and by writing a book he started a year and a half ago with the help of Sherry Shields, wife of Young County Sheriff Ed Shields. "I couldn't do it without her," he said.

"It's coming along real well," he said of the book, now half-finished.

Perryman said the book is a catharsis, his only means of venting his frustrations and grief. He said the judicial system failed him, his children and continues to fail victims of crime.

He says he hopes the book will help other victims deal with their pain and make a few other people realize what crime victims go through.

"Right now, that's the only weapon I have, because the system is so out of balance," he said. "It is the criminal who gets the psychological counseling, and if a police officer doesn't offer (the criminal) a glass of water, (the officer's) in trouble. What do we do for victims?"

Though no one was indicted for Mrs. Perryman's murder, Perryman says he knows who killed her. Shortly after her body was found, the Amarillo Police Department told him the suspects were two men convicted in Colorado for the slaying of a young woman. The men are now serving life sentences in a California prison, Perryman said.

Two men are quoted about the slaying of Mrs. Perryman in a book published in 1979. Perryman's children brought it home from the library a few years ago after finding their mother's name in it. Perryman keeps his own copy.

Lubbock doctor to lead open heart surgery program at area hospital

Dr. Bricker

Donald L. Bricker M.D., of Lubbock, will be leading the open heart surgery program at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, 3201 Sage St., when it begins in less than a month.

The surgery program will cap a one-year planning and training period and the spending of almost $2 million in equipment and renovations, according to hospital officials.

Dr. Bricker is active on the staffs of Methodist Hospital and St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock and serves as clinical professor of surgery at Texas Tech University School of Medicine. He is director of the Hemodynamics Lab at St Mary's Hospital and president of the Heart Institute of the Southwest, Methodist Hospital.

A native of Denver, Colo., Dr. Bricker earned his bachelor of science degree from Colorado State University and his medical degree from Cornell University. He served his internship and residency at New York Hospital.

He entered the thoracic surgery program at Baylor University Affiliated Hospitals, Houston, in 1961 and later studied jointly with Dr. Michael DeBakey and Dr. Denton A. Cooley.

From 1968-70, Dr. Bricker served as acting chief of surgery at Ben Taub General Hospital in Houston and as assistant professor of surgery at Baylor College of Medicine.

He moved to Lubbock in 1970 and established his practice, Southwestern Cardiovascular Surgical Associates. In 1973, Dr. Bricker received the President's Award for the best scientific paper presented at the Southern Thoratic Surgical Association.

He served as president of the Denton A. Cooley International Cardiovascular Surgical Society from 1983-84, was certified for special qualifications in general vascular surgery from the American Board of Surgery in November 1984, and was selected a director of the Michael E. DeBakey International Cardiovascular Surgical Society from 1984-85.

EARNEST KIKER

Conservation program nets more than 1,127,000 farm acres

Texas farmers bid another 819,308 acres of highly erodible farmland into the government's Conservation Reserve Program during the latest sign-up. That puts more than 1,127,000 acres of Texas farmland into the program, which evolved from the 1985 farm bill as an effort to curb erosion losses on fragile farmland and at the same time reduce the production of already surplus crops.

Nationwide, 8,920,889 acres are now enrolled in the CRP. Some 45 million acres are targeted for the program over a five-year sign-up period, with 11.5 million of those being in Texas.

To participate in the CRP, a farmer or landowner must first determine if his land is highly erodible as classified by the Soil Conservation Service. Then he must submit a bid to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service on the amount of payment he feels is justified based on the land's production history.

The maximum bid price on land accepted into the CRP has varied across Texas, ranging from $40 per acre on the High Plains to $55 per acre in the Rio Grande Valley. During the most recent sign-up period, the average acceptable bid for Texas was $29.53 per acre.

Land accepted into the program must be kept out of production for 10 years and must be planted to grass or trees to control wind and water erosion. Costs of establishing conservation measures are split 50-50 with the government.

Additional rules are now being proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, relating to the management of highly erodible lands and wetlands and to conservation compliance that ties coservation efforts to commodity programs. This means that farmers cultivating highly erodible land or converting wetlands and not complying with locally approved conservation plans would be denied commodity program benefits such as price and income suports, disaster payments, crop insurance and related payments. In addition, cost-sharing funds for conservation practices would not be allowed on lands in violation.

Since these provisions have far-reaching implications, farmers and landowners are encouraged to submit comments to the Director of Cotton, Grain and Rice Suppirt Division, USDA/ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013, no later than Oct. 25.

• • •

Beginning with 1987 crops, farmers who are eligible for multi-peril crop insurance will not be able to obtain emergency low-interest loans.

This provision includes small grains — wheat, oats and barley — that producers will be planting in the near future.

This new and somewhat unpublicized cost-cutting feature of the 1985 farm bill could create a real problem for producers that have disasterously low yields. Remember, Sept. 30 is the deadline for signing up for multi-peril crop insurance for the 1987 small grain crop.

Recall that when the 1980 crop insurance act was passed, the objective was to replace the low-yield disaster program. Now, the 1985 farm bill has taken another step toward making multi-peril crop insurance the only production risk measure available.

Over the years, low-interest loans have been used as a stop-gap measure by growers who chose not to insure with multi-peril crop insurance. For 1987 crops, which include small grains currently being planted, the producer who is eligible for multi-peril crop insurance will not be eligible for emergency low-interest loans.

A new publication states: "Beginning with 1987, crop insurance replaces low-interest disaster loans and disaster payments."

So, don't farm without properly evaluating your strategy for handling the extremes of production risks.

New farm policies appear near elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — It has been less than a year since Congress, with a leap of faith and a sigh of relief, produced a new law to guide the nation's farm policy through 1990.

That policy would be expensive, the lawmakers warned, and would not produce results overnight. But it would, they said, return America's farmers to prosperity by the end of its five-year run by re-establishing their competitive edge among the world's commodity producers.

So why is Congress abuzz already with talk of a new farm bill?

"There is an election coming up," said Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, in response to a similar question last week.

In particular, there is an election coming up that will determine whether Republicans retain their slim control of the Senate, an election that hinges in large measure on the outcome of cliffhanger votes in several farm states.

The situation has produced a stampede to see who can do the most, or at least talk about doing the most, for farmers.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., is one of those most concerned. Dole has been searching for ways to help some of his most endangered troops — including Sens. James Abdnor of South Dakota, Mark Andrews of North Dakota, Mack Mattingly of Georgia and Bob Kasten of Wisconsin — win farmers' favor.

Nine months into the new farm law there has been little sign of an immediate turnaround in the agricultural economy, and Republicans are worried that in some close races that issue could determine the outcome. Any dissatisfaction among farm voters would tend to penalize incumbents.

Dole, together with other GOP lawmakers, has been putting together a farm package with an expanded export subsidy for wheat, soybeans and corn as its centerpiece.

The subsidy, similar to one already in effect for cotton and rice, would permit farmers to sell their grains at whatever the market would bring while guaranteeing them a higher price, with the difference made up from the Treasury. The new subsidy, if it follows the pattern of cotton and rice, would be exempt from the $50,000-per-farmer payment limit.

Dole hasn't formally introduced his package yet in part because of a snag. It would cost $5.5 billion. "I'm not going to just toss it out here without some way to pay for it," Dole said.

The bill would call for a referendum among farmers of the major crops on whether to cut their output enough to do away with surpluses and drive prices up.

Onset of Fall changing weather little

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The advent of the fall season brought little change to the Texas weather picture this week as warm conditions and scattered rains prevailed. The weather continued to give a boost to small grain crops and forage conditions but hampered harvesting operations.

Livestock and range conditions are excellent over most of the state, thanks to the recent rains, but farmers need open weather to harvest their crops, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

A lot of cotton still remains to be harvested in central areas, and sorghum harvesting is in progress in the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas. Also, corn harvesting has started in the South Plains, but rainy weather has slowed operations as well as cotton development. Sugar beet harvesting has started in Deaf Smith County in the Panhandle.

Harvesting of the state's pecan crop is under way in southern counties, with some early varieties being harvested in central areas. However, this year's crop will be shorter than normal due to numerous disease and insect problems and dry weather at critical stages of growth, Carpenter said.

Planting of small grains, wheat and oats, continues active over the state due to favorable soil moisture conditions. Early planted fields are off to a good start in many areas; however, armyworms are damaging some plantings in eastern counties. Armyworms also are infesting many pastures across the eastern part of the state.

Good small grain grazing should give a boost to the stocker cattle business in Texas, which is aimed at putting about 300 pounds of gain on calves during the fall and winter months, Carpenter pointed out. These stockers are sent to feedlots in the spring.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Cool evenings with scattered rains are continuing to slow cotton development. Some corn harvesting continues, and sorghum is maturing. Sugar beet harvesting is under way in Deaf Smith County. Wheat seeding is about 75 percent complete; early planted fields are off to a good start.

SOUTH PLAINS: Scattered rains are continuing to slow cotton development. Some cotton and sorghum were damaged by recent hail. Corn harvesting is active as weather conditions permit, and some early sorghum harvesting is under way. Wheat planting continues. Ranges are in excellent shape.

ROLLING PLAINS: Farmers are continuing to harvest sorghum and to plant small grains. A considerable acreage is being planted to rye for grazing in Hardemann County. Peanut harvesting is under way in several counties. Cotton continues to develop slowly due to cool, rainy weather; bollworms and boll weevils are heavy in some fields.

NORTH CENTRAL: Farmers are harvesting cotton and planting small grains as weather conditions permit. Producers are weaning calves at good weights due to excellent grazing conditions. Fall gardens are off to a good start.

NORTHEAST: Corn and sorghum harvesting is generally complete while cotton harvesting is under way. Pastures and early planted small grains are making good growth, but armyworms are a serious problem in some areas. Growers are continuing to harvest sweet potatoes along with okra, squash and peppers. Pecans are maturing; the crop will be below normal.

FAR WEST: Scattered rains continue to have adverse effects on cotton and sorghum crops. However, cattle and range conditions are excellent due to the favorable moisture situation. A good pecan crop is maturing.

WEST CENTRAL: Peanuts look good and harvesting is about to start. Cotton bolls are starting to open; bollworms are heavy in many fields. Farmers are continuing to harvest sorghum as weather conditions permit; early plantings had good yields but the late crop is short. Planting of wheat and oats is in full swing.

CENTRAL: Farmers are continuing to harvest cotton as weather conditions permit; yields are below normal. Peanut harvesting has started, with early grades and yields good. Small grain planting continues; armyworms are infesting early fields. Some early pecan varieties are being harvested; this year's crop will be short.

EAST: Producers are busy planting winter pastures, including wheat, oats and rye. Livestock are in good condition, with plenty of grazing. Fall vegetable gardening continues; grasshoppers and disease are problems in some locations. Pecans are starting to mature; a good harvest is expected.

UPPER COAST: Wet fields in some locations are hurting the soybean crop. Peanuts are about ready to harvest. Pastures are making good growth and cattle are in excellent condition. Fall gardening is active.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Farmers are continuing to have problems harvesting their cotton due to rain delays. Cotton harvesting ranges from 25 to 75 percent complete, and fiber quality is declining due to exposure to the rainy weather. Small grain planting continues. Livestock have good grazing.

SOUTHWEST: A good cotton harvest has been completed but ginning continues. Farmers are continuing to plant small grains, and spinach planting is under way. Harvesting of pickling cucumber continues, and the pecan harvest has started. Ranchers are gearing up for the upcoming hunting season.

COASTAL BEND: Dry conditions continue to prevail over much of the region and are affecting small grain planting. Also pastures and ranges remain short in most counties, causing ranchers to have to feed livestock. Pecans are dropping early; the crop generally will be short.

SOUTH: Northern parts of the region remain dry, with rain needed to boost grazing conditions. Fall vegetable planting continues in the Rio Grande Valley, with scattered rains causing some delays. Sugarcane and citrus crops continue to progress well.

RICHARD MINZENMAYER

German cockroach state's most prevalent

2nd in a series

Blatella germanica (Linnaeus), is the best known and probably the most widely distributed species of cockroach. It is a small species, native to Europe, measuring from one-half to five-eighths inches long and the adult cockroach is tan to light brown in color. The head shield is marked with two dark stripes which run lengthwise of the shield. Adults of both sexes are fully winged but rarely fly. Nymphal (immature) German roaches are smaller and darker than adults and are wingless.

The German cockroach is the most prevalent roach in Texas, and is more active than other domestic species. The female of this species carry their egg capsules protruding from the abdomen for about two weeks until they are nearly ready to hatch. The German cockroach produces more eggs per capsule than other species (37 eggs) and a female produces 1 to 7 or more capsules during her lifetime.

Developmental time for a German roach may be as short as 2 months and the approximate number of offspring per year from one female, under favorable conditions, is 35,300. Thus, troublesome infestations can develop rapidly after the introduction of a few individuals. The nymphs pass through seven molts in 6 to 8 weeks. There are generally two or three generations a year in the average home.

These roaches thrive in all types of buildings, but are found most often in homes and commercial food establishments. They usually enter tightly constructed homes with bottled drinks, potatoes, onions, dried pet foods, grocery sacks, corrugated cartons, and even furniture.

German roaches usually seek dark shelters near moisture and food in kitchens and bathrooms. They can be found in other parts of the home when populations become large and food scarce.

Equine embryo transfers like 'sci-fi'

By MELISSA FLETCHER
Hearst News and Feature Service

BLANCO, Texas — The big, sturdy mare, dirty white in color, has the coarse, square features of a work horse. Her small colt is caramel brown, with a delicate white patch on his chest, and as he stands up on his rickety legs you see he already has the fine, classic lines of an Arabian.

In an adjacent stall the sire moves about in all his haughty glory. Smoky white, with the arched neck, dainty features and exquisite shape of an Arabian champion, he almost seems aware of his status as a million-dollar stallion.

Looking on the twosome, Dr. James M. Travers rests his arm on the stall's railing. "She's his mama and he's her baby," he says. "That's all that matters to them."

How did this frumpy, homely old mare give birth to a prince? The answer: Embryo transfer.

It sounds like something out of a sci-fi novel: Early in the original mare's pregnancy, Travers carefully removed the fertilized ovum — our future prince — and transplanted it into the big white mare. The first mare, a high-quality, award-winning Arabian, was then able to go on winning money on the lucrative show horse circuit, circumventing the 11-month gestation period allotted by Mother Nature.

A practice which originated in the cattle industry in the late '70s, equine embryo transfers are done to carry on the gene line of top-quality show horses without putting a dent in owner profits, and to allow breeding in those top-dollar mares that, for any number of reasons, cannot carry their young. The "surrogate" mare is invariably a healthy but cheap horse.

Embryo transfers are Travers' expertise. As resident veterinarian and ranch manager at Ford Arabians, a commercial horse breeding operation, he watched two of his embryo transfers — or "ETs" — reach fruition last year. Three are currently "in the oven," with several more scheduled in for 1986.

ETS COST upwards of $6,000. The success rate hovers around 65 percent for horses of normal breeding age. Thus, they're typically reserved for only the most select animals.

Helen Harmon, wife of Travers and breeding manager of the ranch, is a thesis-shy of a master's degree in equine reproduction from the University of Missouri. She handles all artificial inseminations — the predominate form of breeding done at the ranch — and assists Travers in his ETs. The two met at the University of Missouri when Travers was in veterinary school.

The 817-acre ranch, which caters to horseowners from across the nation, houses approximately 180 horses, most of which belong to owner Kenneth Ford. The focus is on breeding horses, not on discovering new techniques.

Sitting down inside one of the several small laboratories which line the stable, Travers explains the art of palpating horses, a procedure which enables him to check for ovulation and gauge the progress of pregnancies. It's part of his daily morning routine. After slipping on a pair of rubber gloves, he will insert his arm into the horse's rectum, often all the way up to his shoulder, and with his hands feel the uterus, the ovaries, follicles.

Back outside, Travers goes to a central square in the middle of the stable, then motions to a long, cylindrical shape covered in bright blue nylon and resting on four wooden legs. "This is Sally, the girlfriend," he says. "Sally" is the make-believe mare upon which sexually stimulated stallions mount after visiting "the stocks," a wooden enclosure located in the same square. The stocks hold a low-cost horse that has had its ovaries removed and is kept, through hormone injections, in perpetual heat.

After being "teased up" to a precoital state, the stallions move to Sally, where they discharge semen into an artificial vagina maneuvered by Harmon and a technician.

Rest easy, animal activists. Travers explains that stock mares live a life of luxury. After arriving at Ford Arabians, they begin a complete health maintenance plan — vaccinations, diet, exercise. (This after a two-week quarantine period in which they are checked for what Travers calls "goobers" — parasites or diseases.) They receive regular pedicures and dental work. And the mares manipulated into heat — apparently a very pleasurable state — get the best deal of all.

"THEY GET to flirt and fall in love every day," says Travers. "When I die, I wouldn't mind coming back as one of these horses."

The semen is kept in special vials until it's time for artificial insemination. (Although semen is freezable, Arabian horse registries won't allow the practice.) After donning sterile gloves, Harmon draws semen into a pipette and inserts it into the mare's vagina. The cervix is rather loose at this stage in the estrus cycle, and the pipette is inserted directly into the uterus before semen is released.

After fertilization, the embryo floats around unattached for a week. On the seventh day, Travers "flushes" the mare. This is still the high-quality mare; the recipient mare is on the sidelines, being pumped with hormones to prepare her for pregnancy.

Everything is sterilized in an embryo transfer. Utensils are washed 15 times in three different solutions. The mare's genital region is disinfected with soap. She is mildly sedated, then put into the stocks. A catheter is inserted into the vagina and cervix, which is closed tight now and must be dilated with a finger. A balloon-type device on the end of the catheter inflates, creating a dam in the uterus. Another tube is inserted through the catheter, then three liters of fluid are flushed through the womb, one at a time.

If all goes well, the embryo flows out through the tube and is caught in a micro-mesh screen. It is studied under a microscope, washed for possible bacteria, then carefully inserted into the recipient mare via a special gun. The time pressure is intense: Travers doesn't like to keep embryos out for longer than half an hour.

The high-class mare then calls it a day, or she can be manipulated back into heat in four days, whereupon the whole cycle starts over again. (In Arabians, only one foal can be registered per year.) The recipient mare experiences a normal pregnancy, boosted by supplemental hormone shots and nutrients. In a little under a year, she gives birth to a technological marvel.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Economic picture two-sided

By JIM MAY

DEAR COPING: As a banker I have had to essentially remain silent in response to numerous articles, through countless conversations, and seemingly never-ending meetings with various attorneys concerning bankruptcy. I am proud of my profession and of the job we have done in general and my bank has done specifically. The numerous bank failures that we are presently experiencing would not be happening if people had repaid their loans. Granted some bankers did use bad judgment, but the fact remains that the banks loaned the money with the proper expectation of being repaid.

When debtors default on their loans and declare bankruptcy, they start a process in motion that is bad for us and bad for them. My experience has been that in most cases the debtor does not really understand the far-reaching short- and long-term effects of declaring personal bankruptcy. I think that a lot of people are getting some real short-signed advice. Just sign me, Frustrated Banker.

DEAR FRUSTRATED BANKER: I am pleased that you shared your views with us. As a general rule, we do only hear the debtor's side.

You make some good points, but I think at least another consideration would be the relative naivete that many shared when they entered into such loans. As a friend pointed out, he thought "joint and several" was the motto of the Three Musketeers.

I surely do agree with you that it is a more complex and far-reaching matter that many of us know and understand. I would like to hear from more readers on both sides of this issue and maybe we can have a special column on the points you have raised. READERS?

DEAR COPING: My husband recently told me that we were going to have to declare personal bankruptcy. He said everyone was doing it and it was no big deal. I don't believe that. I think that it is a big deal. I wasn't brought up that way. I was brought up believing that you pay your debts. He said that I must declare bankruptcy along with him. Do I? Hurry, I need an answer quick. EE M

DEAR EE: Contact an attorney if you need a quick answer. My counsel advises that this is a tricky issue that must be answered specificly, as Texas is a community property state.

He also asked if you and your husband had met with your creditors to try and work out some payment plan. Often in bankruptcy matters there is little left for the creditors once the attorneys' fees are paid. Consequently, creditors are interested in working something out if possible.

From a family perspective, I would strongly urge you and your husband to sit down and discuss this matter. As so often in money matters, the lines of communications break down and the "discussion" often turns into a "battle."

The guilt, anger and feelings of failure often experienced by the husband, combined with feelings of being betrayed often experienced by the wife, are deadly combination. It's often easier to sit down and talk about sex problems than financial problems. Somehow in our society money is more personal.

DEAR COPING: My response to J.B. who went back to teaching to help the family out financially and her response to friends who want to know "why," should be answered with the "quick response" of simply "Because it was necessary due to present economic conditions." It is our attitudes and false pride that keeps us from being honest and open with family and friends.

During the Great Depression of 1929, anyone who had "guts" to live and face the conditions of the "times" would have been glad to step down to any position of employment if any were available. Just remember in times like these, false pride can be your main downfall and destruction — not economics. Best Wishes, LM.

DEAR LM: We greatly appreciate the wisdom that you have shared with us. Please write us again, the mastery of the survivors helps us all.

Study: 'Blue Monday' real

By ROB STEIN
United Press Internaitonal

BOSTON — Feeling depressed when the weekend is over is a common phenomenon, but a new study indicates the Monday morning blues don't just affect people who dislike their jobs.

"Certainly job dissatisfaction has a lot to do with it, but it's not the whole story," said Dr. Ronald Pies, a psychiatrist at the New England Medical Center in Boston who conducted a study on "Monday morning blues."

While most of those responding to a survey who felt depressed on Sunday night or Monday morning were unhappy with their jobs, such feelings were also reported by retired people, workers who liked their jobs and even children.

"People who are retired or even people on their vacation may experience this," said Pies.

Pies speculated people who dislike their jobs become conditioned to feel depressed before their workweeks begin, and those feelings are sustained even after they retire or go to on vacation.

For children and people who like their jobs, the root of such feelings may be more complicated, Pies said.

Children may become upset before their parents workweeks begin if their mother and father dislike their jobs and express those feelings.

"A number of people told us their parents would tend to fight more on Sundays. The kids would grow up seeing their parents fighting every Sunday night. Every Sunday they would feel themselves getting anxious and depressed," said Pies.

About 76 percent of those responding to the survey reported some feelings of depression before work, ranging from mild feelings of let down to signs of severe depression — loss of appetite, fatigue, headaches and similar symptoms.

Most reported dissatisfaction with their jobs, especially the feeling they had no control over their work or their lives.

"It's definitely real. We have enough evidence to say it definitely exists," he said.

Since so many people get depressed when the weekend is over and they are facing a new week of work, society overall sends subtle signals that this period is an unhappy time, said Pies.

The phenomenon appears to be equally distributed among men and women, although women who report the Monday morning blues appear to suffer it more frequently and more severely than men, said Pies.

"It may be that women in general appear to suffer more depression than men. It may also be that perhaps women are experiencing more pressures than men, especially those who recently entered the areas of the job market."

People who suffer from extreme forms of the Monday blues should try to identify the cause of their depression and work to change that factor, said Pies.

Humor found different in men, women

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Among the panoply of senses — sense of touch, sense of sight, common sense — the sense of humor stands as a distinguishing feature between the sexes: men have one, women don't. Or so the stereotype goes.

"Women were supposed to listen to men's jokes and respond, laughing at everything pleasant," said Jacqueline D. Goodchilds, a social psychologist and professor at the University of California at Los Angeles who has studied humor. "But women were not supposed to have the 'rapier wit' to tell jokes or humorous stories."

"Starting in ancient Greece, women have been considered pure, in a way, and not the kind to engage in the vulgarities of joke telling and humor," said Bernard I. Murstein, a psychology professor at Connecticut College who examined humor as a part of interpersonal attraction.

The reality, psychologists say, is quite different: it is not a matter of man the humorous and woman the humorless, but of what men and women find funny.

"Humor is an integral part of how people relate to each other," Goodchilds said. "And since women and men tend to relate to people differently, it is reasonable that they should react to humor differently."

Experts seem to agree that men and women have the same capacity for appreciating humor.

The experts acknowledge humor's shared qualities. "People are less likely to laugh aloud in an empty room than in a crowded room, since laughing announces 'I got it,' and in an empty room, they'd be announcing to nobody," said Dan C. Overlade, a clinical psychologist in Pensacola, Fla.

The experts also see humor's individualistic side. "We once found that a sense of humor correlated with the ability to understand proverbs and find simple geometric shapes within larger, more complicated shapes," Overlade said. Or as Marilyn Suzanne Miller, a writer for the original Saturday Night Live, said: "It's genetic. You're either born with it or you're not."

Still, psychologists repeatedly say — and a few videotape studies indicate — that men react more enthusiastically than women to "aggressive" humor, such as slapstick, while women react more enthusiastically than men to "soft" humor, involving puns, wordplay and relationships.

Competition is also involved.

"It's a kind of management tool, an effective way to put people down or to seize control of a situation by taking center stage," said Dale R. Burg, a journalist and script writer.

That approval is not always forthcoming. "It's a matter of social training," Goodchilds explained. "We're not supposed to laugh unless society has given us permission to laugh. In recent years, society has given women permission to laugh in more settings and about more kinds of humor. Studies suggest this is particularly true in single-sex groups."

It is not yet true when men and women are together. In this case, Goodchilds said, "both sexes tend to restrain whatever senses of humor they have."

Surviving snake

By ERMA BOMBECK

Jurgen Hergert of West Germany recently got a lot of press when he spent 100 days in a Florida zoo in a glass cage with two dozen vipers, rattlers and cobras.

Big deal!

Erma Bombeck of Phoenix just spent FOUR MONTHS with a 5½-foot bull snake in her spare bedroom, and I don't see any hats in the air over that!

Jurgen didn't sleep well.

I didn't sleep at all.

Jurgen was trying to get into the Guinness Book of Records.

I was trying to get one of my kids into an apartment.

Somehow I have always had this unreasonable fear of their dominance, slithering around scaring off your guests, appearing when you don't want them and making you live your life on the edge of a razor blade.

But I don't want to talk about kids. This is about the snake.

Let me begin at the beginning. My son said he was going to spend the summer at home and "Would it be all right if my bird lived here? And my rabbit? And my two piano cartons of single socks, and skis, scuba gear, snake and Bible?"

I asked him to back up to scuba gear and to take it slow.

He said, "Snake."

I told him, "You show me a boy who brings a snake home to his mother and I'll show you an orphan."

This is the point at which all boys tell you a snake is velvet to the touch, it is getting therapy for acute shyness, is blind and if he could see you he would run the other way. No one in their right mind would buy that.

I compromised by agreeing to have the snake stay in the garage with a bag of cement on top of the cage along with two 50-pound weights from the bench press. When the temperature reached 112 degrees, it was time for the guilt trip. I was killing the snake, and every time I saw a pair of pumps in I. Magnin I'd wonder if it was "my snake."

The snake moved into the spare bedroom and I added four phone books, an ice chest, a car battery and a stack of record albums to the top of the cage. The vigil began.

Every 15 minutes for the next three months, I was to cautiously peek into the guest room to see if the resident was still in residence. Every time I closed my eyes, I could see the little black tongue flipping in and out. One day in my closet, a belt slipped down off the hanger onto the floor and I nearly passed out.

The other night I climbed out of bed, staggered through the darkness and pushed open the door of the guest room. "He's gone!" I yelled to my husband.

He guided me back to bed. "They both moved out two months ago. Try to get some sleep."

Jurgen Hergert lost his girlfriend during his vigil. I lost my youth.

DEAR ABBY

Man stuck with bad debt calls seer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I saw an ad in a magazine that said this man could foretell your future, solve your love problems, business problems and bring you everlasting happiness. Well, I called the number in the magazine and talked to this man personally who said he was a psychic and could help me. Here is my problem: Some guy stuck me for $3,600. I told this psychic about it, and he said he could get my $3,600 back if I sent him $400 immediately.

Does this sound like it's on the up and up to you? I don't want to lose $400 on top of the $3,600 I am already stuck for, but if this psychic can get my $3,600 back, it would be a good deal. Please advise. — ANONYMOUS IN JERSEY

DEAR ANONYMOUS: If this so-called psychic could foretell the future, he would be making a fortune on the stock market and flying his private jet to Las Vegas on weekends to pick up a little extra cash to bet at the track. Don't throw good money after bad, my friend.

DEAR ABBY: My son, who just turned 21, was sent to the Philippines. (He's in the U.S. Navy.) He wrote and told me that his first week there he met a native girl in a bar (she works there). She is 17 years old and has a 2-year-old baby.

He says he loves her, but, Abby, he has never been in love before and I am afraid he has a lot of feelings and emotions confused. He wrote that some of his Navy friends have told him some very bad things about this girl, but she has had a hard life, and he wants to rescue her from the terrible life she has had.

He is leaving for San Diego soon and is considering filing some "fiancee" papers, then sending for her so they can get married. He has asked me what I think he should do.

He has always been a good boy. Do you have any words of wisdom that I can tell him? Like every mother, I want my son to be happy. — WORRIED IN KANSAS

DEAR WORRIED: Since he asked you what to do, it is apparent that he is as yet undecided.

Tell him that marriage is a lifelong commitment, and you think he should wait a while before making a commitment of that duration. Assure your son that if what he feels for this girl is really "love," it will survive a separation. And if it isn't, he is better off knowing now.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for nine years — no children, by choice. About a year ago I discovered that my husband enjoyed looking at pictures of nude males. He doesn't deny it. I'm an attractive woman. I am often paid compliments by men. Very few are from my husband.

I'm lucky if we make love once a month. Now I have an absolute "hunk" after me. I didn't start anything. He did. I feel as though my life is wasting away. An affair would be the only thing that would keep me a sane woman. Any advice? I'll keep watching the paper. — PLENTY OF NOTHIN'

DEAR PLENTY: There is no mention of how you feel about your husband and how he feels about you. Assuming you married because you love each other, don't look now, but your marriage is a shambles. First, you should decide (both of you) whether you want to save your marriage. If you do, your husband should quit looking at paper dolls and you should tell that "hunk" to get lost. Then you should both get some counseling. But, if you'd rather be free, admit it and quit wasting your young lives.

DEAR ABBY: I know that the best way to handle obscene phone calls is to hang up without showing any reaction. But I feel an overwhelming anger that needs to be expressed when one of those "sickies" lets go with his filthy spiel. Then one day it suddenly dawned on me: Why not let the Good Lord take over!

Now I interrupt the caller with some good old-fashioned fire and brimstone from Psalm 141 and Romans 18:32. A few callers became so startled that they actually listened to the whole thing! No one has ever called back.

So keep your Bibles by your phone, folks. It works. — A SERMON FOR THE VERMIN

DEAR SERMON: I'm not sure those who gave us the Good Book would approve, but I can't think of anyone more in need of a sermon than a creep who makes obscene phone calls.

Report on sugar debated

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a report that is sure to be controversial, a Food and Drug Administration task force says that, except for promoting tooth decay, sugar presents no significant public health hazards when consumed at current levels.

Dr. Allan Forbes, director of the FDA's office of nutrition and sciences, said that the report, which he called "the most comprehensive that has been put together by anybody," shows that "sugar is not an independent risk factor" in heart disease, obesity, hypertension, diabetes and a variety of other ills.

Although Forbes warned that sugar can be misused, he said that at today's moderate consumption levels sugar has no verifiable role in a wide range of maladies, including cancer and childhood behavior problems, that have been attributed to it by some critics.

The FDA examined sugar as part of its periodic review of food items on the list of those Generally Recognized As Safe. The report is an examination of all the nutritional research into sugar in the last 10 years. It took three years to complete.

The in-house task force found a wide discrepancy between the amount of sugar produced in the United States — 125 pounds per capita — and the amount consumed, Forbes said.

Much of the sugar added to food is wasted in food leftovers that are thrown away, and a significant amount is used in pet food, the task force found. To examine the sugar content in the foods people actually eat, the FDA relied upon surveys by the Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services. The FDA found that the average American consumes 80 grams of sugar daily, about 2.8 ounces, or about 64 pounds a year.

Sarah Setton, a spokeswoman for the Sugar Association, the sugar industry's trade group, hailed the report as good news and said, "It means that sugar in moderation is a safe and useful part of the diet. Yes, we'll probably use it in our advertising."

But Michael Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based nutrition activist group, fears that the report will be misunderstood. "Sugary foods are often high in fat, such as pies, cakes, candy bars and ice cream," Jacobson said. "But the way the draft report is written, it almost excuses those foods. People think of them as sweets, but they could be considered fats."

Another critic is Mark Hegsted, a former chief nutritionist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. "I think what they say is right and then they arrive at the wrong conclusion," said Hegsted. "I think it's true you cannot implicate sugar in any of those chronic diseases that they looked at, but then you turn the question around and say what are the advantages of eating a high-sugar diet, and there certainly aren't any."

Traditional foes of the sugar industry are sure to be infuriated by the FDA report, according to Stanley Gershoff, dean of nutrition at Tufts University. Gershoff recalls the outraged reception he got five years ago when he concluded that sugar was generally safe in a study for the Department of Agriculture.

"Everything's no good for you if you eat too much of it," Gershoff said. "That's just common sense. But you can find children who consume 10 cans of soda a day. The problem is that sugar has been charged with a whole variety of things. For people who are down on sugar, it's a demon incarnate."

The FDA's report is not expected to be publicly available for at least another month.

Contest 'cats' meow

By DICK WEST

WASHINGON (UPI) — Professional vocalists may have helped raise funds for Farm Aid, Live Aid and similar causes this year, but at the upcoming "Meow Off" all six singers will be amateur cats.

The one deemed most capable of hitting high C will be declared winner.

The finalists, randomly selected from more than 250,000 entries — bass, baritone, alto and soprano — will perform with a symphony orchestra at New York's Lincoln Center during an Oct. 30 rendition of a musical farce called "The Meow that Saved the Kingdom."

Opera star Robert Merrill and two other judges will select the feline with the best tonsils, and it will receive a $25,000 prize, plus a contract to star in a cat food commercial.

Will it be Blackie of California, Pidget of Arkansas, Detour of Minnesota, Puff of South Carolina, Spike of Ohio or Pumpkin of Massachusetts?

If the orchestra conductor, Joe Raposo, knows, he isn't saying. Raposo, by the way, is the composer of "Raggedy Ann," a Broadway-bound musical that opened in Washington this summer.

For what its worth, my money's on Puff, but I'm a notorious hunch player. Meanwhile, the do-re-meows of rehearsals are being heard coast to coast.

Some music patrons say the score of "The Meow that Saved the Kingdom," written by Raposo, "bears a schematic resemblance to much of Mozart's later work, especially 'The Magic Flute.'"

However flattering it may have been to Raposo to have his composition compared to Mozart, I have grave doubts about the ability of cats to sing Mozart's stuff, particularly his later work.

Cats seem to do better with Italian and Mozart's early operas —"The Marriage of Figaro," "Don Giovanni," etc. — were written in that language. But "The Magic Flute" has German words and we all know what a hash cats make of the Teutonic tongue.

Incidentally, the Germanic translation of the "Meow Off" fable is rendered by the sponsors as "Wie Ein Miauen das Koenigreich Rettete." According to my World War II phrasebook, "wie" means "how." But I'll let Merrill straighten that out.

I understand he and the other judges will be blindfolded and will be guided by the "uniqueness, distinctiveness and musical resonance" of the cats.

Ralston Purina, the "Meow Off" sponsors, also will donate 20 tons of food to organizations that shelter homeless cats. Groups that will divide the donation include ARF! of East Hampton, N.Y.

Frankly, I never heard a cat meow with an "ARF!" sound but I never heard one hit high C either. As long as the East Hampton agency takes in strays, I'll not quibble.

I once knew a cat that habitually meowed a couple of octaves above high C, but it never sounded very melodious to me. That cat, regardless of how resonant the vocal chords, wouldn't have stood a chance in a national competition if the judges had been blindfolded.

Let's hope for their sakes the blindfolds come down over the ears, as well.

Country music 'for the birds'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Marketing moguls at Opryland have found a different — and pleasing — way to satisfy the insatiable appetites of country music fans.

It's a menagerie of Polly Parton, Barbara Birdwell, Roy Afluff and Minnie Parrott the stars of "Birds of Paradise."

These in no way resemble Dolly Parton, Barbara Mandrell, Roy Acuff and Minnie Pearl.

Deborah Dorsey and Jennifer Lee are the trainers and emcee the show, featuring 10 performing parrots.

The brilliant-colored entertainers have been packing in audiences averaging 400 to 500 people per 20-minute show, five shows a day, six days a week.

Dorsey and Lee take turns fronting the act, but both acknowledge happily that they're upstaged by the unpredictable antics of their feathered friends.

"No two shows are ever the same; the birds have a mind of their own and you can't predict what they'll do," Dorsey said.

What's most unique about the show, Dorsey said, is it's country music theme.

As the story goes ... Charmin and her friends, who live in a far away jungle, dream of visiting their relatives in Nashville.

The birds get various jobs — fixing cars, acting, playing basketball, ringing school bells, firing cannons, etc., to earn enough money — which they tuck away in a piggy bank and eyeball often — to make their way to Music City.

Finally their dream comes true and the show comes to an end as they meet their famous cousins Barbara Birdrell, Polly Parton, Roy Afluff and Minnie Parrot — all decked out in country-style rhinestone finery.

Dorsey is Opryland's head zookeeper and still spends a lot of time working with the park's other exotic animals. Lee is the primary trainer.

The show's stars are Harvey, Ruby and Beaker, Green-Winged Macaws; George and Grace, Blue and Gold Macaws; Sam, a Medium Sulpher-Crested Cockatoo; and Charmin, Merlyn, Ginseng and Bingsing, Moluccan Cockatoos.

Whether it's Harvey and Ruby racing across stage on their bicycles or Sam performing his prowess with consecutive baskets through a hoop or Grace solving math problems posed by the audience, it's clear the birds love the attention.

"They were looking at us the first week, and then suddenly they realized there was an audience out there and they'd stop in the middle of a trick and just stare at the audience," Lee said recalling the act's first week.

Now, she said, the seasoned troopers actually seem to "psyche up" before a performance and are never above hamming it up for their audience.

Dorsey, a birdbreeder for the past 10 years and zookeeper for Opryland's mini-zoo for the past 15 years, conceived of the show last year after park manager Ben Moore, suggested she do something with the birds at the park, "'cause I'm always carting my baby birds back and forth from home," she said.

Opryland, intrigued by the idea, sent her to Florida where she filmed four bird shows, in different parts of the state, in three days.

Dorsey recalled her initial anxiety as the park show committee watched her video tape.

"They started out straight faced and very serious and when they began to laugh, I was elated," she said.

"My favorite part is training them. It's so neat when you've been working with 'em on a new trick and then they finally do it."

And although the women say they enjoy watching the birds entertain, their goals are more far reaching than just creating a "cute, corny show."

"This show helps people to learn things about birds they never knew before. Most people never knew you could hug a bird or how affectionate a bird is, Dorsey said.

'Real relationship' involves mutual caring

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I seem to be a sexually insatible woman. I am not in a real relationship with any guy, maybe because I haven't found the one who satisfies me. Would that be it?

A. I don't think you avoid relationships because you can't be satisfied. My hunch is that you can't be satisfied because you are not in a relationship.

You find some guy who has everything for you — one who offers companionship, mental stimulation, interest in your interests, conversation, give and take, one who seems like your dream man — and then you will suddenly find that sex is satisfying. You just can't be satisfied by butterfly studs.

Q. When we met he wasn't interested in a commitment. We had this thing going about three months and suddenly he was talking about our future together. Then he met another woman and he said she was just good company, a friend. A week after that they were lovers.

I asked, what about our future? And he said he just couldn't choose between us. As of this morning, he still couldn't. He has brains, charm, he's life-enhancing, he just can't make up his mind. Me, I'm a snarling, weeping mess. And in love.

A. Somebody has to make up his or her mind and I nominate you. Dump the charmer. Oh, I realize you can't because you don't want to lose him but in a few days you will. Why should he have the right to turn you into a snarling mess while he goes around being life-enhancing? This is not a productive relationship.

I know about being in love, but it isn't always productive. He talked about a future — look at your short past with him. In that short time he hooked up with another woman. Not the man for you. You are going to give him walking papers. Write to tell me when I prove right.

Q. I am about to be married and my ex-boyfriend keeps calling up. No matter what I tell him, he can't get it through his noggin that I am going to be a sweet, half-forgotten memory.

He is totally convinced that because he was my first he has to be my only. And I tell him and tell him don't phone, but there it goes!

My fiance is upset. He says even if we get married — if! The invitations have gone out — this maniac will be phoning up day and night.

A. This ex could spoil not only this present wedding plan but any future ones you try to make. You have to change your phone number. In the future a court order might be necessary, but for now just change the number. Usually a jilted suitor calms down after the knot is tied.

Q. I have never had an orgasm through intercourse. Direct clitoral stimulation is always needed. What causes it?

A. You should discuss this with a therapist or a relationship counselor, because no one can diagnose your problem without asking many questions.

It is possible that you expect an orgasm from intercourse and resent not having it. Your feelings about this may need adjustment, and that isn't done instantly by pushing any button that I know about.

Or you may have something against your partner, or against all partners, which has to be resolved.

Commission 'inefficient,' wins support for a kill

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawmaker who created the ambitiously named Texas Commission on Economy and Efficiency won House support Thursday for his push to kill the commission.

It has been inefficient, he said.

"Nothing has come out of it," said Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst.

In a voice vote, the House gave preliminary approval to Evans' bill to put the commission out of business in January. The 15-member commission was created in 1985 and given a four-year mission to find ways to save state money.

"I'm not upset," Evans said. "I just don't think they've done their job."

His bill faces another House vote before going to the Senate.

Evans said commission input was needed, but lacking, as lawmakers work on the projected $2.8 billion budget deficit.

The commission "has not made one iota of a statement, and they've had two years to look into it," he said.

Jess Irwin, commission executive director, said the agency is working on reports that should be ready in December. He said there is less state government fat to look for because of voluntary cuts made by state agencies earlier this year as a result of the budget crisis.

"I don't know why he's dissatisfied," Irwin said of Evans.

The commission had $185,000 to spend during the current biennium, and Irwin said the agency would have had to find private funds in order to continue operating beyond January.

The Legislature for the past two months has been grappling with the budget problems after Comptroller Bob Bullock forecast during the summer that the 1986-1987 deficit could reach $3.5 billion.

Senate approves gasohol bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved a gasohol bill Thursday that could eliminate Texas tax credits for gasohol produced out of state.

The original bill by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, would eliminate the transfer of gasohol credits from general revenue to the State Highway Fund, Available School Fund and Comptroller's Operating Fund.

The result would be a first-year savings of $10,850,000 to general revenue with a corresponding loss totaling that amount to the three funds.

Montford sponsored an amendment, however, that would make the change contingent upon passage of a gasoline tax increase, which could cover the loss.

Also, by a 11-10 vote, and over Montford's objection, the Senate placed a cap of $425,000 per quarter on gasohol tax credits.

Amendment sponsor Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, said it would save the state tax credits that have been going to gasohol plants outside of Texas.

Money for needy farmers blocked by federal judge

LUBBOCK (AP) — Plans to transfer money from healthy farm credit associations in Texas to financially strapped farmers elswhere in the country have been blocked temporarily by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward Thursday issued a temporary restraining order against the Farm Credit Administration and Farm Credit System Capital Corp.

Woodward set another hearing for Oct. 3, before he decides on the case brought by numerous Texas Federal Land Bank and Production Credit associations.

The Texas entities filed suit to block the Farm Credit System from using money from healthy Production Credit Associations to bolster weaker ones.

There are provisions in the Farm Credit System allowing such a transfer of money among the associations.

But several member associations in Texas claim that a transfer of millions from their coffers will sink them into the same financial straits being experienced by those that the funds are supposed to help.

In arguing against the transfer plan, Production Credit Association attorney Harlow Sprouse of Amarillo, said: "The action (transfer of funds) probably will help farmers somewhere else, but it will hurt us. How does that serve the public interest?"

Almost a year ago, Farm Credit System officials announced that monetary aid from outside the system could be necessary to recover $428 million in agricultural loan losses the previous year.

The Farm Credit System had set Monday as the day for starting the transfer of funds from healthy associations, including those in Texas, into troubled spots elsewhere.

But the transfer was halted by Woodward's action.

Boy's cocaine death proof drugs problem everywhere

HEREFORD (AP) — This rural Panhandle community with its towering feed mills and Old West-style main street may seem an unlikely setting for a 9-year-old to die a cocaine-related death.

But residents say it is proof that drugs are a problem everywhere.

Manuel Saucedo, who would have been in the fourth grade, died from an allergic reaction to cocaine on Aug. 17, an autopsy released this week revealed.

"It's so shocking that it happened here in Hereford," said Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentime. "And it's shocking that it happened to a 9-year-old. We need to send this (news) to Nancy Reagan to tell her that...this is happening in our small town."

Police who interviewed family members were uncertain how the boy obtained the cocaine that killed him. The case probably will be referred to a grand jury, investigators said.

The case is not the first involving drugs here over the past year. Last January, after a 10-month undercover operation, police arrested 70 adults and seven juveniles on a variety of drug charges.

More cooperation from the community is needed to target drug users and pushers, said Sgt. Sammy Sanchez.

STATE IN BRIEF

Last of three jail escapees finally arrested near Bonham

BONHAM (AP) — The last of three escapees from the Fannin County jail was arrested in Ector, about six miles west of here.

Sheriff Sam Patton said Freddie Wayne Brock, 22, charged with aggravated robbery, was discovered at a home Thursday after investigators were tipped that he was there.

Last Sunday, three inmates slipped away from the jail in Bonham with the help of a fire escape.

Billy Sangster, 23, who was jailed on an attempted murder charge, was captured Tuesday at the airport in Las Vegas, Nev., Patton said.

Frankie Worley, 23, of Bonham, charged with forgery, was captured shortly after noon Monday when he was spotted by officers on a routine patrol, authorities said.

Child testifyers unconstitutional

FORT WORTH (AP) — A state appeals court ruled it is unconstitutional to let children testify on videotape in sexual assault cases and threw out a Denton County sexual assaut conviction.

The 2nd Court of Appeals here ordered a new trial for Boyce Gene Romines, 38, even though he admitted fondling a 3-year-old girl.

Romines was sentenced to seven years in prison after a jury convicted him in December 1984 of assaulting the girl his wife was baby-sitting.

In an opinion issued Wednesday, the court ruled that letting the child testify on videotape denied Romines his constitutional right to confront his accuser.

"Although (Romines) admitted the crime, we cannot assume that the jury would not have believed (his) version and have assessed him a lighter sentence if it had not considered the videotape," Justice Harry Hopkins wrote in the majority opinion.

An appeals court in Dallas earlier ruled that the 1983 statute is unconstitutional, and that case is being considered by the state's highest appeals court.

Family sues to recover legal fees

IRVING (AP) — The Tatro family, who won a landmark Supreme Court decision against the school district their handicapped daughter attended, filed suit to recover more than $80,000 in legal fees.

The suit was decided in a 9-0 vote by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1984. The court ordered the Irving Independent School District to provide catheterization for Amber Tatro, who was born with spina bifida.

Catheterization is an artificial method of emptying the bladder.

At the time of the 1984 court ruling, the justices said the Tatros were not eligible to recover their court costs.

But an amendment passed by Congress Aug. 5 allows recovery of attorneys fees and was made retroactive to July 4, 1984, the day before the Tatros' case was tried.

Overcrowded jail could be shut

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tarrant County Jail could be shut down or face other drastic action if it doesn't reduce its inmate population by Dec. 3.

The state Commission on Jail Standards, meeting in Austin on Wednesday, ordered the jail to reduce the population to 1,244 or face punitive action by the state jail commission.

Dead family in search of 'better life'

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Friends say the Houston family of six who died of carbon monoxide poisoning had moved from Mississippi in a search for a better life, but were frustrated by economic and personal problems.

Houston police released results of a preliminary autopsy Thursday in the deaths of Thomas L. Robbins, 39; Jo Ann Robbins, 37; Astrid, 7; Drake, 5; Emma, 4, and Elizabeth, 2, whose bodies were found Wednesday. Police say that the family died in their home after a car was left idling in an attached garage.

Police said they were trying to determine if it was a suicide, murder, accident or some combination. Mrs. Robbins, who her ex-husband said had attempted suicide before, was sitting in the passenger seat of her car.

Friends, who described the Robbins couple as flower children, said Thursday that they were frustrated.

"Maybe it got to them. They were both very smart and they never had made it in their fields," said Rev. Gordon Gibson, a close friend of the couple when they lived in Jackson five years ago. "Both were intelligent and they were frustrated."

Thomas Robbins, a Jackson native and adopted son of former Missippi Highway Department director T.C. Robbins, was an artist who was working in a Houston convenience store.

Mrs. Robbins, who had a degree in German from Millsaps College here, was selling real estate in Houston's depressed housing market.

"They were like flower children from the 60's," said Lois Harger of Jackson. "They were intelligent and very sensitive people. They weren't monetarily oriented."

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for Street Sweeping Services will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 3:00 p.m. on the 8th day of October 1986 and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Street Sweeping Services".

Complete copies of specifications and contract documents may be examined and/or obtained at the office of Public Works, City Hall, Midland Texas.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid (on an annual basis) and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

Tri-Star Pictures and Rastar take great pleasure in congratulating Francis Coppola on the selection of "Peggy Sue Got Married" starring Kathleen Turner as the closing night presentation of the New York Film Festival.

It is rare that a movie with such universal appeal is so honored. "Peggy Sue Got Married" now joins a very select group that includes "The Big Chill", "Chariots of Fire" and "The Last Picture Show."

Starting October 10th you can see what has already become the most eagerly awaited movie of 1986.

Matlock Furniture, a family business, expands

Over 100 recliners in stock

By NANCY CLISE
Advertising Feature Writer

Matlock Furniture, a family business with over 45 years experience is proud to be able to serve the community of Midland with fine home furnishings.

Travis M. Matlock, president and founder and Gladys Matlock, secretary/treasurer, invite everyone to come by during the National Furniture Sale, Sept. 26 - Oct. 6, and see all the specials.

"We are a family business," Ann Matlock Hopkins stated proudly. "We know what Midland families need and want in furniture."

Other Matlock staffers include John Bob Hopkins, sales, Joe Inskeep, warehouse and Bryan Coats in delivery.

"Following a recent addition of 5,000 square feet and the subsequent remodeling we have nearly 20,000 square feet of display and storage space," Ann added.

Matlock is the oldest and largest distributor of Sealy Bedding in this area.

"We have over three hundred pieces of bedding in stock," Ann explained. "And we carry everything from the least expensive to the most expensive."

"We also have over 100 recliners in stock and three more shipments scheduled to come in before the holidays," she noted.

Sectionals with sleepers and built-in recliners, dinettes - both formal and casual, standard sectionals, Lane recliners for petite ladies and extra large men — it's all in stock at Matlock Furniture, 805 S. Big Spring.

Manager Donny Rains and wife Sharon announce that they have a huge inventory of recliners. Some swivel, some rock, others swivel and rock. You'll find any color recliner you could possibly want and many wall recliners. Lane recliners have heavy duty units which have a lifetime warranty.

While Dad and Mom are enjoying their new Lane recliners from Matlock Furniture, the rest of the family can relax on one of the beautiful sectionals. Some of the sectionals even include sleepers for holiday guests.

Donny points out that Matlock Furniture has a full selection of dinettes at close out prices. There are casual brass/glass sets by Stoneville and Imperial. Several of the brass and glass groups are being closed out. So now's the time for a real bargain.

Formal dining room suites with matching chinas by Universal and Broyhill are also in stock.

Travis M. and Gladys Matlock, who opened Matlock Furniture over 45 years ago, proudly invite you to browse through their newly expanded showroom at 805 S. Big Spring.

Would your mattress, springs pass a bed check?

The first step to finding the bed that's just right for you is to lie down on the one you're currently sleeping on. A quick bed check will help you assess whether you're getting the comfort and support you need. Keep in mind that if your mattress and foundation (boxspring) are more than 8-10 years old, you probably aren't.

You may have gotten used to the old bed and not really noticed that it's been losing its support and comfort little by little. Take a few minutes to re-sensitize yourself to the uneven areas, the ridges and valleys, the places that may dig into your shoulders and hip, or the ones that sink under you. Do you and your partner tend to roll together in the center? Does the sleep set sway, wobble or creak when you move?

Get up and take a good look at it. Is the mattress soiled or torn? How about the boxspring — uneven, sagging, frayed around the edges? Would you be embarrassed to show this sleep set to your neighbors?

If your bedding failed this simple bed check, you're ready to find out what you've been missing. Set aside some time for a shopping excursion to your local bedding retail store. Lying down on brand new, state of the art bedding is the next step in finding the bed that's just right for you.

You'll want to make your new bedding selection based on four essential criteria, suggests the Better Sleep Council:

Support. A quality mattress and foundation should gently support your body at all points, with a minimum of lateral bending of the spine. Ideally, the spine should be in the same shape as a person with good upright posture — chin, stomach and pelvis tucked in. Pay careful attention to your hips, shoulders and lower back since they are the heaviest parts. A too-soft mattress can cause lower back pain, but a too-hard surface may create painful pressure at the shoulders and hips. You want to find just the right combination of comfort and support for you.

Comfort. Only you know what's comfortable. It's a subjective assessment that certainly begins with proper support, but ends with you answer to the question: "Does it feel good?" When it feels right, it's easier to fall asleep and stay asleep.

Bedding manufacturers offer a full range of comfort choices, from the harder surfaces that some still prefer to the "soft tops" that are increasingly popular. For a real comfort treat, be sure to try out the ultra-plush mattresses that today's manufacturers consider their "top of the line" — they offer an excellent combination of surface luxury and deep down support.

Space. Cramped quarters can turn sleeping into a nighttime wrestling match. A healthy sleeper moves anywhere from 40 to 60 times a night.

Ample space is important for freedom of movement while you sleep and can be even more important for freedom of movement while you sleep and can be even more important in helping you get to sleep. If you need space for two, a full-size (double) only gives each sleeper the space of a baby's crib. Try out a queen-size or extra-spacious king — you'll find the added width gives you the needed stretch-out space. And today's taller men really appreciate that extra five inches in length.

Durability. The quality of the construction in both mattress and companion foundation — the materials used and how they're put together — determine how long a new set can be expected to provide the same support and comfort you experienced in the store. How long will that be? That depends on the original quality, how much it's used, and the weight of the sleepers. But when your bedding is 8-10 years old, chances are it should be retired.

To ensure that your new mattress will provide you with the best service over a good many years, purchase it with a matching foundation. The foundation acts as a giant shock absorber, taking some of the nightly wear and tear off of the mattress. Placing a new mattress on a worn out foundation can reduce its useful life. And keep in mind that the comfort and support you experienced in the store probably won't be what you experience at home if you put your brand new mattress on an old foundation.

It may look as smooth as silk, but when you lie down does your mattress fail the test? Support, comfort, space and durability are the factors you should check for when selecting bedding.

Kittiwake Furniture stresses quality, value

By NANCY CLISE

Advertising Feature Writer

Beautiful furniture for the home and the accent pieces needed to pull everything together are found at Kittiwake Furniture, 3209 N. Midkiff, corner of Wadley and Midkiff. A variety of styles, colors, fabrics, sizes and prices are on display in the store.

Leading the list of fine brands available are Century, American Drew, Lane, International Null, Bridlington and Young, American of Martinsville, Karpen, Benchcraft, Action, Blacksmith and Cochrane.

In addition, store manager Debbie Hastings has announced that "due to the economic difficulties we are all encountering here in the Permian Basin, we at Kittiwake are making an all out effort to do our part by keeping our prices down, our standards high and our customers happy. To do this we are maintaining our July Clearance sale prices until the economy of the Permian Basin has stabilized!"

Free delivery is available in the Midland area and financing terms are available. Kittiwake also accepts Visa, Mastercard and American Express. Store hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Jay Hart (seated), David Speaks (left) and Kenneth Lett of Kittiwake Furniture, corner of Midkiff and Wadley, are part of the team that is continuing to keep prices down and quality up during these hard economic times.

Round is beautiful

From the Many Moods collection by American drew this stylish round table with rattan charis marrisy American maple with Philippine rattan. This makes it compatible with contemporary and traditional decors. Two 16" leaves extend the table to a generous 76". The chairs featuare a neutral-tone, textured fabric that resists spills and stains.

Knowing the qualities of the best upholstery helps when shopping

Upholstered furniture is so often the focal point of a room it's a shame to end up with less than what you wanted.

To make a successful upholstered furniture buy, you should understand a little about how these pieces are made. While you don't have to buy the most expensive model in the world, you do have to know what the best construction has to offer. It's the only way you can reasonably evaluate the trade off--what you're giving up in the way of construction detail for the advantage of a lower price.

Better quality frames, for example, are made of seasoned, kiln-dried hardwood that is firmly constructed with screws and dowels (wood pegs that fit snugly into holes in the opposing piece of wood) as well as glued. The most lustrous finish in the world won't disguise the short-cut of glued-only construction, when the piece creaks or even cracks under use.

On the other hand, fastening with screws only isn't sufficient, either. Check the legs of the piece where they are attached. They should be glued and screwed firmly in place. If the piece you are considering has casters, look at how they're attached. They should be firmly screwed or bolted into the metal plate, which is itself secured firmly to the frame. Simple metal welds can snap apart under pressure.

Check the amount of padding on upholstered pieces where it is placed between the upholstery fabric and the underlying frame. Check arms, sofa fronts and other areas where frame presses fabric. Skimpy padding will allow the hard frame to wear through the upholstery more quickly.

On sofas, check seat cushioning by sitting in the middle of the sofa, then on each side, as far into each corner as possible. The springs should keep the cushions bouyant throughout, not just in the center of each cushion. Saggy corners may mean fewer-than-ideal springs.

Ask the salesperson about the quality and quantity of springs used. Better quality sofas have more springs than others, and they're hand-tied eight ways for even response to the pressure of someone sitting on the cushion.

Good quality upholstered pieces also have tightly woven bands of webbing underneath the springs. Look for them. Good quality upholstered pieces have dense cushions for long-term comfort. They should not be too easily pressed down, or be slow to spring back into shape when pressure is released. Also, corner should lift only slightly when you sit down. If the corners kick way up, cushioning is probably too skimpy.

Better quality sofas also have "strip decking," a matching fabric on the deck (the platform under the cushions). When you sit on the cushion and the corner lifts, does the fabric you can see on the decking match the outside upholstery fabric, or is it just low-cost gauze?

Other upholstery details you'll want to note are tight stitching, not just stapling of fabric to frame; careful matching of plaids and stripes, if any; and a uniform welting around edges of cushions. All these indicate a craftsmanly job -- one that will make your upholstered piece look good longer.

Watch details when buying wall systems

Wall units have gone beyond the old bookcases and etegeres of the past. With smaller rooms meaning fewer square feet for storage, furniture designers have had to do what architects have always done. When you run out of ground, build upwards.

You can select wall units that attractively store everything from liquor to video recorders. And you can find them teamed with open shelving that can show off decorative accessories and make books accessible. You can even find wall units that contain corner desks or dressing-table arrangements along with a variety of closed and open storage sections and compartments.

Wall units by many manufacturers are mix-and-matchable with dining room suites and beds as well as with other wall units, so you can move them from room to room as your needs change. Today's smaller dining rooms may demand wall units, not bulky china cabinets or credenzas. And, while bedrooms haven't shrunk as much, it's still easier to fit that king-size bed into the room when your other furniture pieces are tall wall units, not dressers, chests and nightstands. So check you units that are part of a large line of compatible units. Don't let yourself buy faddish units that will stand out jarringly from any pieces you add later.

Most manufacturers make wall units in French provincial, Early American, Traditional and Contemporary styles, so your choice can harmonize with the rest of your furniture, even if it doesn't exactly match.

If you're going to buy wall units that don't come from the same line as your old ones you can still keep the look compatible. Just stick to the same type of wood from one piece to the next, so that the finish and color blend.

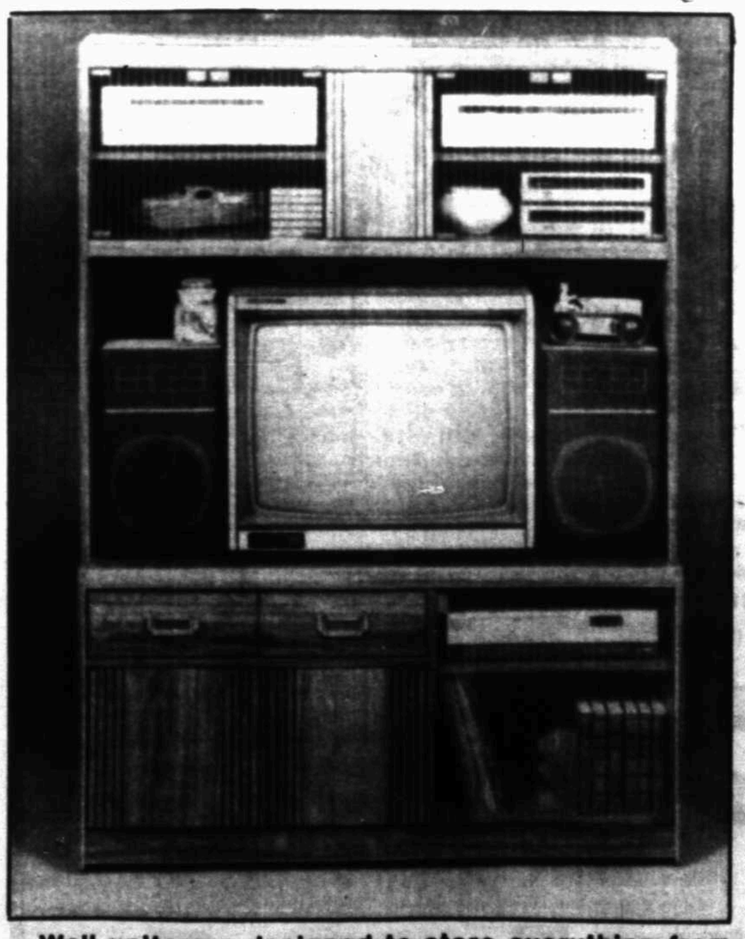
And check the hardware. If you've got colonial antiqued brass handles, drawer pulls, hinges and other hardware on you units now, don't fall for new pieces that feature shiny brass contemporary or rustic wrought-iron hardware. If you must change styles with the new purchase, buy new hardware for your old units so they'll be compatible with the new ones.

Minimal or no-hardware is also a choice you can make. Some of the best-made units are ready-to-assemble contemporary styles, often in oiled oak, with wooden hardware or none at all.

For the newest look, you can forget the wood altogether and go for a sleek row of lacquer-look wall units. Almond, black, white, mauve, burgundy and other high-fashion colors are yours for the asking in these glossy pieces. Do ask if the piece is real wood with lacquer paint on it, or one of the new lacquer-looks that's really a high-impact synthetic material -- it may make a difference in how you should take care of the piece. Whichever you choose; lacquer-look wall units may be just your style if you're in love with contemporary.

Check the practical as well as the style details. Are the pull-out and swivel shelves designed to hold TVs and other big equipment securely mounted? Will they hold the equipment you own now, and any you'll upgrade to in the foreseeable future? Are there enough shelves for the rest of your equipment? Are drawers doweled, not just glued? Are there enough holes in the backs of each piece for all your equipment?

For maximum good looks and maximum flexibility, check out wall systems in which all pieces have finished backs. If you take this option, you'll have attractive room dividers as well as wall units. Now, that's really a system!



Wall units are designed to store everything from liquor to video recorders and TVs.

Carter's slashes prices for National Furniture Sale

By NANCY CLISE
Advertising Feature Writer

Carter's Furniture, 501 E. Illinois, has participated every year in the National Furniture Sale.

"This year we will have Chromecraft dinettes, the Beautyrest bedding line and Laz E Boy recliners on sale," said Tim Carter. "In fact, you'll find tremendous values throughout the store for the 4th Annual National Furniture Sale."

An example of these sales is the low price of $599 for matching sofa and love seats, no matter what your tastes are, Carter's has a style and price that's right for you.

Carter's has ordered truckloads of merchandise to be ready for this year's sale. "We want to make sure our customers have a wide selection to choose from. We made sure we had a very good inventory for the holiday season." Smart shoppers will plan ahead for those family holiday dinners by checking out the dining room furniture at Carter's.

With 35 years in the furniture business, Carter's stocks everything from contemporary to traditional styles and their professional sales staff is waiting is serve you.

In addition, Carter's is giving away a free Laz E Boy recliner every month until December. No purchase is required to register for the drawing and you need not be in attendance to win.

"We realize that individuals have individual needs and tastes," Carter explained. "Most furniture is available in endless varieties and we are experienced in handling special orders."

Carter's store hours are Monday through Saturday, 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Go by today and register for your free Laz E Boy recliner.

This Oriental bedroom suite is just one of example of the fine furnishing on display at Carter's Furniture, 501 E. Illinois, during the big National Furniture Sale.

Motionless tube bed is on sale at Waterbeds De'Lite

By NANCY CLISE
Advertising Feature Writer

You say you want a water bed, but you don't want to float away? Waterbeds De'Lite, located in the Tierra Del Sol Shopping Center, has the solution — the Tube Bed.

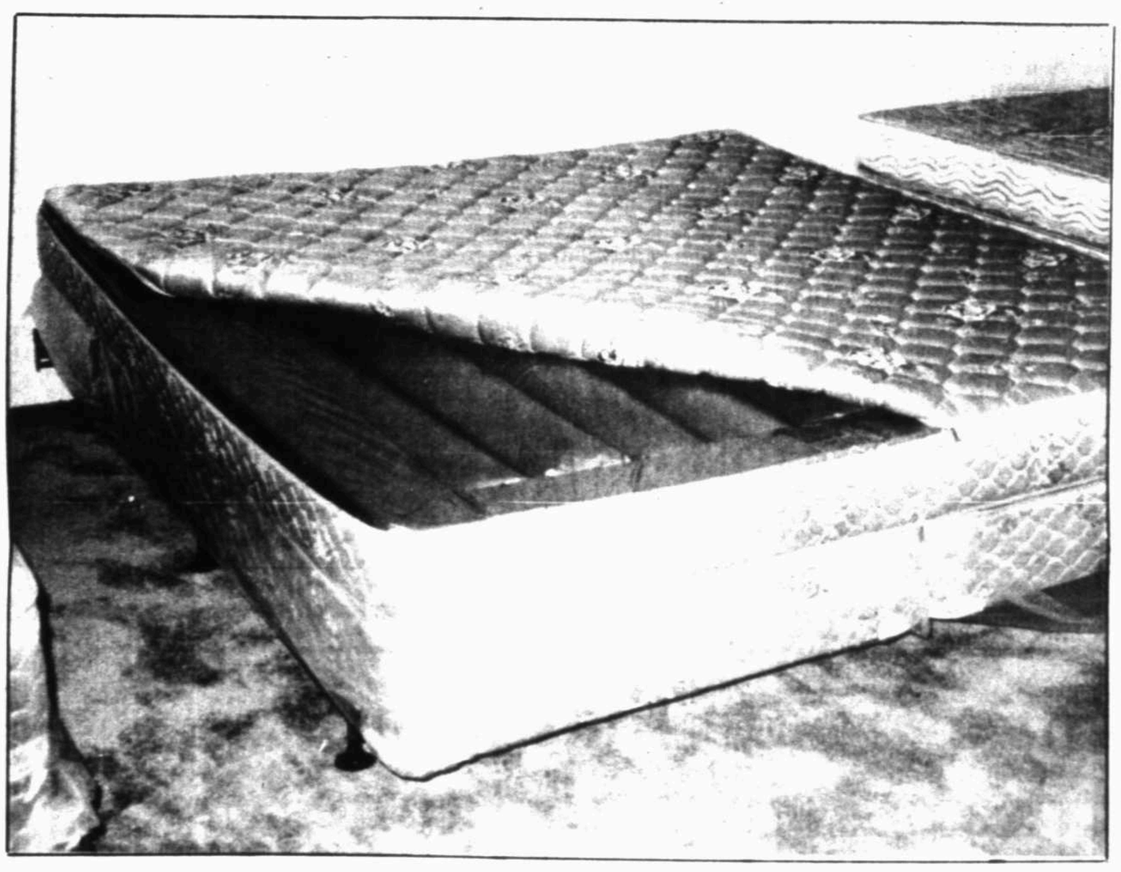
Manufactured by American National Company, one of the oldest manufacturers in the waterbed industry, the Tube Bed features 10 individual tubes, making the bed totally motionless, yet achieving the full benefit of body pressure point support, eliminating the pressure points of hips, elbows, shoulder blades and ankles.

No wonder flotation sleep is recommended by the medical profession for everything from serious injuries to insomnia. Many pregnant women also experience easier rest on a waterbed because of its weight-equalizing properties.

During the 4th Annual National Furniture Sale, Waterbeds De'Lite will offer the Tube Bed in king size for $749 (regularly $800) and queen size for $679 (regularly $725). This price includes the bed frame, heater, professional set-up and local delivery.

Waterbeds De'Lite stocks a complete line of waterbed accessories including sheets, matress covers and bed spreads.

Layaway now for the holidays with only a 10 percent down payment, to be picked up before Christmas. A large selection is on display in the store, located at the corner of Cuthbert and Midkiff.



The Tube Bed, now on sale at Waterbeds De'Lite in the Tierra Del Sol Shopping Center, features 10 individual tubes.

Sit pretty with fabulous furniture

By JANET GORDON
Copley News Service

Because furniture takes the largest chunk of a decorating budget, it deserves careful consideration.

With more than 5,000 furniture manufacturers in the United States alone, however, it's no easy task to evaluate all of the styles available, much less quality and price. Without preparation prior to a shopping spree, chances are slim you'll make a purchase that leaves you satisfied and sitting pretty in your home.

According to the editors of House Beautiful magazine, whether you're starting from scratch or just adding on, or whether you're decorating on your own or working with professional guidance, it helps to begin your search for furniture by sketching a plan on paper. This allows you to experiment with various furniture arrangements so that you can select one that best suits the room.

Once you know what pieces you need to fill the room, you'll need to focus in on the style of furniture you want. If you're uncertain, visiting a few furniture stores will help you decide what styles appeal to you, whether art deco, American country, neoclassic or Scandinavian.

Wood is far and away the most common material used in a variety of furniture styles. The American Furniture Manufacturers Association offers some advice that can help you make a wise choice of wood furniture.

First, realize that there are several types of wood furniture available — solid wood, veneered wood and other wood products. Solid wood means that all of the exposed parts must be made from a solid piece of wood. Solid wood furniture conveys an image of strenth and durability, but it has a tendency to warp, swell and crack if not properly cared for. It also usually is expensive.

More than three-quarters of the furniture manufactured today is of veneer construction with solid wood parts. A veneered panel is made up of three to seven layers, with a thin layer of a hardwood, such as cherry or walnut, on top. Its core is plywood, with all the layers bonded together in a high-pressure press.

Other wood products boast exceptional strength and durability and look much like natural wood at a fraction of the cost. Laminated wood, made of sheets of wood placed in one direction, is used for curved furniture surfaces. The bentwood chair is an example of furniture made entirely of laminated surfaces. Hardboard is made by bonding together tiny wood fibers and is used most often for doors, drawer dividers and back panels of cabinets. Particle board is made of wood particles and adhesives bonded together, and it may be covered with a hardwood veneer or can be lacquered, stained, varnished, painted or enameled.

The manufacturers' association recommends that consumers examine all wood furniture with the hand as well as the eye.

Leather is the look of the decade

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — Fabric is just as important as style when it comes to buying new furniture or reupholstering old pieces, according to fabric designer Lee Mills.

"While you may not have the extra money to alter your home's size or layout, you can change its looks drastically by selecting the right fabrics and colors," says Mills, who is director of design for Naugahyde brand fabric.

"Fabric is a powerful design expression. With a splash of sizzling color or an accent of soft tones, you can light up or soothe, shape or define a room."

When selecting fabric, Mills advises, ask yourself what makes you feel good.

"How a fabric feels is just as important as how it looks," he explains, citing the natural coarseness of wool, the luxury feel of silk and the free-and-easy mood of cotton. Chintz, he adds, is a surprisingly tough fabric that's enjoying renewed popularity.

While all these fabrics are clasics, leather is unquestionably this decade's most important look, evoking richness and prestige, luxury and sensuality, says Mills. He points out that a high price tag can discourage some buyers, however.

Mills says Naugahyde can be a good substitute for leather which can "duplicate the texture and color variations of fine leather so precisely that even experts can't tell the two apart."

The main difference, he says, is a price that allows a greater number of people to enjoy the leather look — "with improved performance, including a built-in spot and stain resistant surface that leather doesn't have."

Wood: it matters

Many factores influence the cost and appearance of furniture but one of those most overlooked is the type of wood used.

Wood is classified as "hard" or "soft." Among the hardwoods are maple, oak, walnut, mahogany and birch. The softwoods include pine, fir, spruce and hemlock.

Some of the characteristic of soft and hardwoods includ the special qualities of:
Chestnut-- a soft wood used as the core in veneered pieces. Its softness helps it resist warping and shrinking.
Oak-- possibly the most popular and commonly used wood in furniture construction in America. This wood has the strength, hardness and adaptability for many applications.
Mahogany-- Rich-colred and beautifully grained, this is a luxury wood used in better furniture. Mahogany substitutes includ birch and red gum.
Walnut-- Deep-toned and smooth-finished, walnut is popular in both solid wood pieces and as veneer wood.
Maple-- The favorite wood for colonial reproductions, warm-colored maple has a beautiful curly and wavy grain that makes it preferable for veneers as well as in solid wood pieces. Maple is often finished in a manner which makes it a good stand-in for cherry and other fruitwoods.

Get down to details with furniture

Do you feel at sea when you come across words like "finial," "dentil molding," or "volute" in home decorating magazines?

Do you think "broken pediments" are some kind of sports injury?

You're not alone. Many people who love the graceful curves and carvings on traditional furniture need help in picking up the vocabulary of decorative furniture details

Many of the looks we love today come from European styles of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. They, in turn, were inspired by styles from classical Greece and Rome, unearthed by 18th-century archeologits. kToday's passion for neo-classical looks includes an appreciation of these decorative details

Acanthus - a very popular leaf design that appears on furniture, vases and architectural detailing from ancient Greece to the Victorian period

Greek Key - a decorative border made up of interlocking square-shaped hook forms. Seen today on furniture, wallpaper borders and fabric fashions. On furniture, the Greek key border is often used to enclose an area of inlaid or other decorative wood which is different from the surrounding wood of the piece

Dentil Molding - a decorative border made up of small rectangular blocks, regularly spaced an connected by a line at the base of each block. The effect is somewhat like that of a row of baby teeth

Egg-and-Dart - a border made up of alternating oval-shapes (eggs) and arrow-shapes (darts)

Finials - the decorative end-pieces that top bedposts and other structural features in furniture pieces. Some finials are made to resemble animals, but the cartouche (shield-shaped) finial and the urn-shaped finial are most common and most associated with classical looks

Broken Pediment - appearing at the top of highboys and other traditionally styled pieces, is recognized by two opposite curved pieces that curl towards each other but do not meet in the middle. Sometimes the open space is left bare, other times it is filled with an urn or other finial for more elaborate decoration. Curved, gabled and scroll-topped are three common types of broken pediments

Volute - a classical scroll-shape, curls inward and is seen as the capital (top) of the Greek Ionic column which has regained great popularity today

Scallop Shell - the most popular of all sea-motif shapes from classical times, reached great popularity in the French Rococo era and appears today on everything from furniture to towels, stationery and dishes. The shell carving can be most often found on drawer fronts and on the fronts and tops of chests and highboys

Rice and Wheat - motifs carry out the ancient symbol of fertility still used in modern wedding celebrations. The traditional "rice bed" features an all-over pattern of rice grains on its tall bedposts.

Re-shading lamps will give decor special lift

By The Associated Press

When your home meets your overall satisfaction, but you feel something is needed to provide a decorative lift, perhaps it's time to put new shades on the lamps.

New shades may renew lamps you have ceased to notice. They contribute more to the style of a room than might be supposed, and over the years they tend to become dusty, dirty, frayed and shabby. Since they are small themselves, lamp shades tend to be ignored.

Another reason for re-shading is to change the style of a lamp, according to Hal Shapiro, director of design for Beth Weissman Lamps in New York.

He says that there is no such thing as "the" proper shade for a lamp. Make your selection according to personal taste and the proportions of the lamp. The same material may be traditional or contemporary depending on color and shape, he adds.

As a rule, the less variation between top and bottom, and the more neutral the color, the more traditional a shade will appear. By taking a traditional material, such as string or parchment, and making it up in an extreme shape and in an unusual color instead of white or beige, Shapiro changes the looks of lamps from traditional to trendy.

When selecting a new shade for a lamp, it's important to bring the lamp into the shade store and to try several different sizes and shapes before making a selection, says Shapiro.

According to Shapiro, you can expect a lamp shade to last at least five to six years without a problem. It's a good idea to vacuum because they do get dusty. However, he warns, don't wash a lamp shade. They may be labeled "hand sewn," but many also have some glued parts which may come loose in water.

Re-covering a shade is simpler than picking out a new shape. Many lamp outlets have a re-covering service, using the existing frameworks. Those who are handy can r-cover a shade themselves. Look in home sewing pattern books to find how-to information.

If you decide to change the shade, bear in mind these guidelines from lighting authority Jane Grosslight, author of the book, "Light." She says that shades should be deep enough to hide the bulb, wide enough to spread the light and dense enough to obscure the light bulb. Those lined with white will reflect the greatest amount of light.

Shades may be translucent or opaque; the wider the opening, the wider the beam of light will be. Light spread is more noticeable with opaque shades because of contrast.

If a lamp is providing reading or task lighting, make sure the shade is wide at the bottom. If a large area is to be illuminated by light that reflects into the room from the ceiling, choose a shade that is wide at the top.

A table lamp next to seating requires a shade whose bottom is at eye level. Plan on placing a table lamp with a shade above eye level behind the seating. Lamps with a shade above a person's head should have a light diffuser to avoid having light shining in the eyes.

When recovering, make sure to measure the height of the table on which the lamp will sit and the seating height of the seating which it will illuminate.

Incidentally, don't rely on lamps alone to illuminate a room, since they rarely put the light exactly where you need it and are limited by the length of their cords. Lamps do, however, supplement ceiling and built-in fixtures.

Knorr Furniture continues tradition of showcasing imports, antiques

By NANCY CLISE
Advertising Feature Writer

Knorr Furniture will be celebrating their 38th Anniversary in October by providing Midland with fine home furnishings.

"Just as we have for the past 38 years," added Rob McKelvy. "Knorr is a world showcase for imports and antiques and we are committed to continuing that tradition."

The Knorr store, located in the Plaza Center at the corners of Wadley and Garfield, was purchased approximately three years ago by the McKelvy furniture family of Lubbock.

"Since that time we have continued to search for and obtain the finest in home furnishings for our customers," McKelvy stated. "We are constantly on the look out for the newest in design and the best quality."

The McKelvy Trucking Line delivers every piece of furniture to and from the store, supplying protection from damage and giving added savings to customers.

"We are committed to the future of Midland," McKelvy explained. "As a family we believe in this area and I personally am actively involved in the community as a sign of that commitment." McKelvy is a member of the Downtown Lions Club and Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce M-Squad for 1986-87.

"We are strong believers in the Midland spirit," McKelvy said. "We love Midland more than ever."

Rob McKelvy of Knorr Furniture says he is a strong believer in the Midland spirit and is committed to offering the finest home furnishings.

Old styles stand the test of time

Today's hottest furniture influence -- Neo-Classical -- stretches all the way back, to ancient Greece and Rome.

The Neo-Classical look, however, is by no means the predominant look from past historical periods. Most of the traditional furniture styles that have enjoyed uninterrupted popularity were started in Europe during the 1600s and 1700s.

Today's period furniture from these eras is often scaled for modern living in smaller rooms, with major changes made to the padded and upholstered portions for the sake of modern comfort. While all-handmade furniture is outside the reach of most of us today, many wood carving details are still retained as they were executed by craftsmen hundreds of years ago.

William and Mary is the style prevalent from 1698 to 1702 (approximately). The royal couple, Mary Stuart of England and her Dutch husband, William III, fostered new ideas in cultural life during their reign.

Under William and Mary, prosperous middle-class English families as well as the English nobility were able to enjoy beautiful furniture for the first time.

Much of the credit for the charm of this style goes to the cabinet-making artisans imported by William from his native Holland to work in England during this era.

The most prominent piece of furniture introduced during the William and Mary period was the highboy, a tall, graceful chest. Floral, serpentine, C-scroll and wreath carvings also dominated. Beautiful marquetry -- elaborate patterns formed by the insertion of small pieces of contrasting wood, mother-of-pearl or ivory -- was perfected during this period. Veneers of various precious woods, often enlisted as part of surface pattern, also mark the William and Mary period. The legs of most pieces reflect "turnings" in the shape of bells, cups and balls, attached to straight pieces in octagonal shapes.

Queen Anne is the period spanning 1702 to 1715. Also English royalty, Queen Anne's craftsmen adapted the Baroque style of France to meet English tastes. The Baroque style, an elaborately carved and decorated look, was the courtly furniture of the reign of Louis XIV. In the Queen Anne adaptation, the elegant curves were retained and the excessively decorative details removed.

Queen Anne furniture is predominantly of walnut. The gracefully turned legs in the new "cabriole" style captured interest with embellishments of hoofs, pads, clubs, the familiar ball-and-claw foot, and the signature motif, the scallop shell.

During this period, the Windsor chair made its debut, as did the graceful wing chair.

Georgian is the style which reigned from about 1714 to 1795. For the first time, a style was named for its artisan-creators, not for the rulers of the day. Chippendale, Adam, Hepplewhite and Sheraton, a group of architect-designers and craftsmen, originated the styles that bear their names today.

Chippendale chairs are distinguished by cabriole (curvy) legs with scrolled claw-and-ball feet. A serpentine-shape rail outlines the back of the chair, with splats that are either fretted or carved. Carvings on larger Chippendale pieces such as the settee ranged from delicate florals to dominant lion's-heads.

Adam designs are distinguished by their general air of delicacy or refinement. Their lines are simple, slender and straight, most evident on tapering legs and flat surfaces.
