For Irrigation Gas

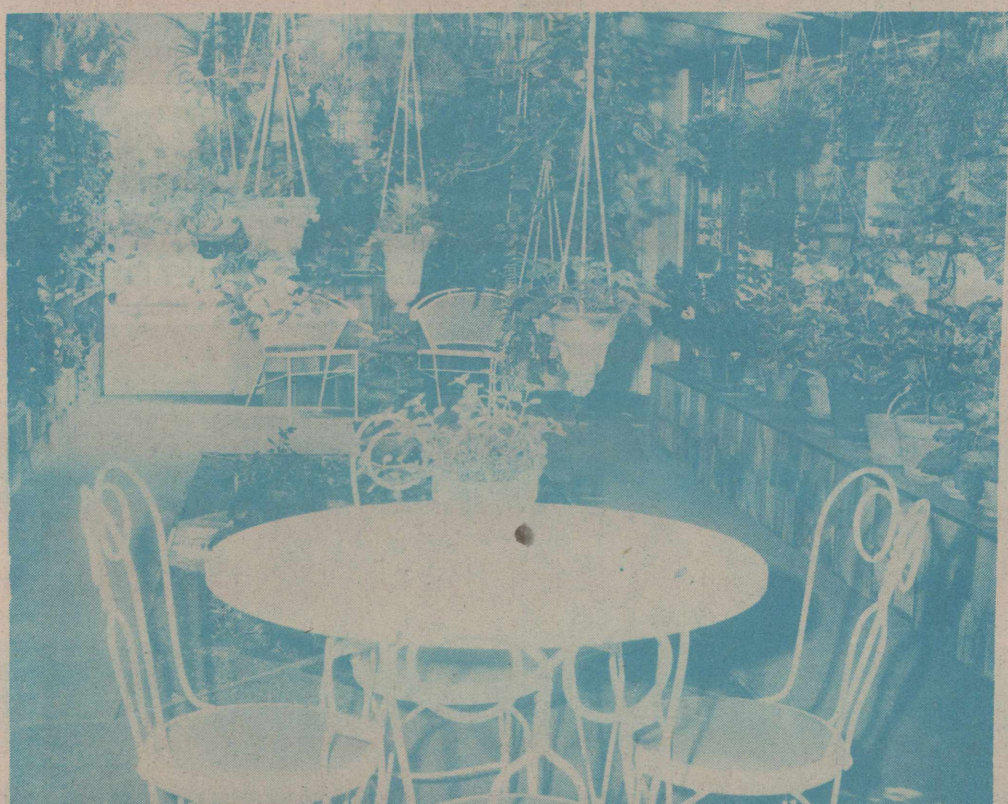

No. 2 Priority Advised By FPC

DOORWAY TO BEAUTY - Evelyn and H.B. Maxey stand at the doorway leading from their family room into their recently completed garden room. Framing the doorway steps are just a few of the more than 200 plants lovingly tended by the couple.

LIKE A TRICKLING BROOK, this rock fountain built by Maxey, enhances the beauty reflected throughout the garden room of the Maxey home.

ETERNAL SPRINGTIME is created by the abundance of green plants placed at windows, walls, ceiling and floor of the Maxey garden room.

Surprising moves developed recently in the controversial Federal Power Commission decision controlling agricultural use of natural gas. The staff counsel of the FPC recommended in Washington that natural gas for irrigation be given a No. 2 priority.

As the lengthy round of hearings drew to a close, attorneys for General Motors Corp. made a similar recommendation, greatly encouraging representatives of Plains Irrigation Gas Users Association.

The No. 2 priority has been avidly sought by agricultural groups, many of whom testified in hearings held last month in Lubbock, Phoenix and Albuquerque.

"We feel like we have really made a mile today," John Aiken of Hereford, representative of the agricultural groups, stated.

Aiken said chances have been "materially increased" to have irrigation classified as a process gas, and therefore have it placed in commercial priority No. 2, rather than in industry priority No. 3.

U.S. Rep. George Mahon, who has been contending for the agricultural argument, said, "I am highly pleased over the progress which has been made to date. It looks like things are moving in our direction and I hope they keep going that way. We must preserve this priority for natural gas for irrigation. Otherwise, we are in serious jeopardy."

The furor for farmers was raised last December when the FPC issued a ruling lowering the use of natural gas by farmer-customers of El Paso Natural Gas Co. from second to third priority. The order was viewed by agricultural groups as a possible precedent with broadening implications.

Mahon pointed out at a practical matter, there are no other fuels or fuel distribution systems available to run the 50,000 gas-powered irrigation wells of the high plains.

Without a dependable supply of natural gas, Mahon argued before the Commission again this week, there would be a widespread reversion to dry-land farming.

Earlier this month the FPC postponed the rule change, previously scheduled to go into effect in September, until mid-June, 1976. This would presumably have assured farmers of a dependable supply of fuel through the growing season for the winter wheat crop. San Diego Gas and Electric Company is presently the only group opposing the placement of irrigation gas in the No. 2 priority.

Attorneys will have until July 14 to submit briefs, an opinion is expected to be rendered by July 27. There will then be a 30-day period of filing of any appeals.

Aiken stated he believes the commission's decision will not be appealed if the final ruling follows the recommendation filed by the staff counsel.

'Make It Happen' Slogan For July

'Make It Happen' is the new theme song of Olton Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture, adopted for the month of July.

Regardless of the direction a visitor faces when in the office of Mrs. George Redinger, chamber secretary, he is faced with the admonition to MAKE IT HAPPEN.

New ideas are being discussed. New plans are being laid. And things are beginning to happen. Beginning with the new flag and pole at ORC, Bicentennial plans are being accepted from young and old alike.

Frances says she keeps an open door and an open mind, and she invites anyone with ideas for civic improvement, or Bicentennial celebration plans to drop by and share them. She says, "Together, we can make it happen."

Donkey Baseball Game Funds To Aid City Park

Donkey baseball is coming to Olton. Laughs galore are in store for game-goers Tuesday, July 8 when members of the Senior Babe Ruth baseball teams meet local outsiders in an 8 p.m. game in Little League Park. Proceeds of the game, sponsored by Young Homemakers, will be used for park equipment. Advance tickets are selling for $1.75 for adults, 75 cents for children. Gate admission is $2 and $1.

Everyone is invited to come out for an evening of fun and help make the event a big success.

Garden Enhances Home

Pretty as a picture in a magazine is the recently completed garden room of Evelyn and H.B. Maxey Jr.

"It's a glorified back porch," says Mrs. Maxey of the attractive and inviting addition to the Maxey home which is the culmination of a dream and the handiwork of both Maxeys.

Pot plants have always had appeal for the OHS homemaking teacher but it was not until about five years ago that she began "collecting" plants. Lacking space where they might be displayed, Evelyn says H.B. promised to build her a greenhouse "when he retired."

Laughingly she adds, "But he began it last year while he still had the strength."

"He came home from work one day and said he had an idea for the room and I didn't know it would be something like this. I imagined a room with plants just sitting about the floor."

Instead, the 12'x36' room is "furnished" with shadow box type redwood shelves along the west wall, a bench built and faced with cedar shingles beneath the window wall on the east and small diamond plots surrounding a rock fountain in the floor.

Hanging baskets are suspended from the rough sawed cedar beams of the fiberglass roof. Large tropicals are placed effectively about the carpeted floor and at the steps leading into the den of the Maxey home.

The fountain, finished only recently, can flow continuously thanks to a small submersible pump. The rocks from which the fountain pours were gathered by Evelyn and H.B. on an outing near Quitaque at the base of Palo Duro canyons.

"I was surprised at the colors in the rocks when we got them cleaned up," H.B. says. At least two have strong rose tints. Most of the rocks were broken from much larger ones when heavy machinery plowed through a roadway.

Surrounding the fountain are flag stones which were given to the Maxeys by Benny Akin. Sitting in pretty groups on the flag stones are pots filled with ivies and other plants.

Seasonal flowers will probably be grown in the diamond plots by the fountain. Pansies and sweet alyssum have already grown and blossomed and been removed for other plants.

For her own curiosity, Evelyn has counted her plants. Of the more than 200 plants there are approximately 175 varieties. This number, she says, includes her different types of coleus as one but ivies were counted as separate varieties.

Family members now remember "special days" with green plant gifts to Evelyn. A Mother's Day gift from her husband was a beautiful Hawaiian schefflera.

Smilingly she relates the advice of a young friend who lived two years in Hawaii, "Every time you pass it (the schefflera), you're supposed to say something pretty to it."

Musing over the popular theory of talking to plants, H.B. adds, "There can't be too much to the idea that harsh words will wilt or kill plants. I've been bad talking dandelions for years and it hasn't helped!"

Evelyn discounts any special talent for growing things saying, "I'm just lucky they grow for me." She says she "doesn't know much about plants" but is learning and has bought several "how to" books to help identify plants and to care for them properly.

The garden room lends itself naturally to the architecture of the Maxey home. Windows of the kitchen, den and master bedroom look into the appealing space.

Against the kitchen wall are two comfortable wicker chairs, a table and overhanging lamp - the ideal spot for a leisure cup of coffee while reading the morning paper.

Sunday morning breakfasts are special treats when served at the white wrought iron ice cream parlor table and chairs. The table, designed by H.B., was made by H.B. and Henry Cowart. The chairs, genuine fixtures of an early day ice cream parlor, once belonged to Evelyn's granddad.

Meals in the attractive setting are not limited to leisure Sunday breakfasts. The Maxeys found special pleasure having any wintertime and springtime meal in the garden room, even though it was not yet completed.

Enjoying a wintertime meal in the spring-like atmosphere was particularly enjoyable when snow was falling outside their cosy garden room windows.

Mid-day and afternoons are beginning to be too warm for meals in the pretty garden room setting but, at other hours, its comfort and beauty makes it a difficult place to leave.

Sometimes mistakenly described as a "greenhouse," Evelyn Cites one particular difference. "In a greenhouse it's okay for leaves to fall on the floor. Here we have to vacuum them off the carpet." The pretty indoor-outdoor carpet looks very much like a plush green lawn.

Many of the plants in the garden room are growing in pretty pottery pieces made by the Maxeys' son, Topper. Topper became interested in the art of pottery while he was in the service in a spare time crafts course sponsored by the government.

A master potter now, he is presently studying art at the University of North Carolina but has his own pottery business, selling his craft to shops as far away as Washington, D.C.

A number of the hanging plants in the Maxey's garden room are beautifully framed in macrame hangings which are the work of Teresa Wilks.

The Maxeys' daughter, Bitsy (Mrs. Bobby Brown) also has a share in the loveliness of the room and is ever watchful for pretty plants to further enhance the wonderland of beauty.

It is, truly, pretty as a picture. Its reality is through labors of love.

There is a spirit which like the father of evil, is constantly "walking to and fro about the earth, seeking whom it may devour"; it is the spirit of false philanthropy.

With A Big Red Bow

Rex Boyles

"Happy Birthday to you. Happy Birthday to you. Happy Birthday dear Uncle Sam. Happy Birthday to you!" "Congrats Uncle on this almost 200th birthday!"

These almost Bicentennial birthdays are terrific, but we've got a problem. What are we going to give Uncle Sam? A pair of socks? Maybe a red white, and blue tie? What in the world do you give an almost 200 year old nation for a birthday?

This is a special kind of birthday, and socks, shorts, and ties just aren't going to do the job. So what do we give? I think we are headed down the right track. A few weeks ago we gave our Uncle Sam a special tribute called an American Heritage program. Last week we turned our town name into a bicentennial phrase to honor him, Offer Loyalty To Our Nation. This week, as a special gift, almost the entire 'Enterprise' is dedicated to his birthday celebration. HAPPY BIRTHDAY UNCLE SAM...

Now those are some pretty super gifts to give an Uncle that's a nation...but are they enough? Are they sufficient to express our thoughts concerning the good, exciting, and rewarding experiences of the past 200 years? The heritage program was impressive, but does a moment speak for centuries? The pages of this paper will herald our tributes, but do these few pages satisfy the demands of volumes of history? Our phrase will offer loyalty to our nation during this bicentennial year, but what about the tomorrows?

The programs, the phrases, and the pages all together, mark our tribute to our nation, but there is a better gift. How would you like to give your Uncle Sam a gift that will outlast centuries, will answer the question of tomorrow, and will write new volumes of history?

"Blessed is the nation whose God is Jehovah..." (Psalms 33:12). Would you really like to give this nation something worthwhile for its birthday? You can. You can give this nation "a blessing."

There is only one way to give this blessing.

There is only one way to give this blessing and that is by making Jehovah your God. Now most of us immediately respond that Jehovah is our God. As proof we offer our church attendance or our "Family" Bibles or our good deeds toward others or our restraint concerning certain social sins. But is Jehovah really our God?

Give yourself this little test. Ask yourself: Why do you do what you do. Do you work, play, rest, breathe, eat, or save for Jehovah? Dor do you work and earn and spend for the family, for a house, for a car, for the farm, or for the business without a thought of Jehovah? Why do you do what you do? Does your family or family or friends by their influence dictate your actions or does Jehovah? Do car, farm, or house payments dictate your life style or does Jehovah? Is your desire for "Things" the reason you work night and day or is Jehovah? Does your farm, business, hobby, or family receive the choice time of your day or does Jehovah? Who or what is our God?

Let's really give Uncle Sam a gift this year that is worthwhile. Let's commit ourselves this day to make Jehovah our God, and that's all the gift Uncle Sam needs.....Rex

Cheerleaders At Camp, Bring Home 'Spirit Stick'

Olton High School cheerleaders attended NCA cheerleading camp at Stephen F. Austin University, Nacogdoches, June 15-20.

Each morning, the cheerleaders attended classes in mass cheers, pom poms and tumbling. In afternoon classes, they were lectured by a staff member of the National Cheerleaders Association who served as instructor during the week.

Evaluation was held each night, with all squads participating. The OHS cheerleaders received two excellent and one outstanding rating. Highlight of the week came when they received the spirit stick, Wednesday night.

Olton cheerleaders are looking forward to a great year, filled with victories, according to a spokesman for the group, and they extend special "thanks" to Melinda Smith for providing transportation to and from camp.
