McGovern launches campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former South Dakota Sen. George S. McGovern launched another long-shot bid for another Democratic presidential nomination today, laying out a liberal course that includes arms control talks with the Soviets, an end to U.S. military involvement in Central America and a program of government-backed education and other aid.

George McGovern

"I do not advocate unilateral disarmament," said McGovern, 61, who won the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination on a platform of ending the Vietnam War but then lost a landslide election to Richard M. Nixon.

"But I have no doubt that as president I could work out a realistic agreement with the Russian leaders that would stop the arms race and safely reduce arms spending."

McGovern's announcement made him the seventh Democrat to seek the nomination, and he begins well behind the field in organizational strength and financing.

He has other handicaps as well. His wife, Eleanor, says she won't campaign with him this time. Many former aides are involved in other campaigns; still others have urged him not to run.

"I'm not enthusiastic," said Eleanor McGovern in a telephone interview. "I have said, 'No, I won't campaign.'" She added, however, that she may change her mind.

McGovern himself assessed his own chances modestly, telling an audience at George Washington University, "I do not know if I can win this campaign, but I do know that with all my heart and strength I am going to try."

He said he would base his campaign on three "common sense" themes, including the need for what former President Eisenhower called "peaceful coexistence" with the Soviet Union.

He called for an end to "big power intervention" overseas, and said he would order an immediate end to the Reagan administration's covert war against Nicaragua.

"Not one drop of American blood would be shed" in Central America, he said. He also called for diplomacy and trade relations with Cuba.

Marines in Beirut can seek support from Navy fliers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has decided to let Marine commanders in Lebanon ask for air strikes from Navy fliers if the action is needed to defend U.S. troops in Beirut, his spokesman said today.

Spokesman Larry Speakes said Marines in Beirut could request air strikes from the carrier-based fighters off shore and the request, if granted, would be approved locally rather than in Washington.

In addition, said Speakes, such support could be sought if other troops in the multinational peacekeeping force are threatened or if threats to the Lebanese Army could endanger the Marines.

But Speakes would not say who would make the local decision whether to call in air strikes.

It was not clear whether today's announcement amounted to a change in policy. Nonetheless, the administration has never announced that local commanders had the authority to order in air strikes.

Speakes said, "The Marines have always been authorized to defend themselves. They have done so and will continue to do so. With the existing MNF (multinational force) mandate, the Marine contingent in Beirut and the supporting elements off shore may take appropriate measures in defense of the MNF, specifically, if there is a threat to the safety of the MNF, other U.S. military personnel, and the U.S. diplomatic presence. The Marines or the supporting units off shore may take appropriate counter-action against the attack units."

The United States has 1,200 Marines in Beirut. Another 2,000 are being moved into position off shore. Speakes said there was no plan to increase the number of troops in Beirut.

While he would not discuss the chain of command, or say at what level a decision would be made — other than to say it would be made in Beirut and not in Washington — Speakes said in response to a question about the use of air strikes that a local Marine commander "can ask for it."

He said the strikes could be used to help the Lebanese Army, under attack from Druse Moslem militia units that have also fired on U.S. positions, if the Lebanese units "experience difficulty that may pose a threat to the Marines."

The firing on the U.S. positions has resulted in the deaths of four Marines in recent weeks.

"In each specific instance, the threat to the Marines will be evaluated," he said.

Midland man shot

The sheriff's department is investigating the early morning shooting death of a rural Midland man.

Deputies were called to the Sandy Acres Mobile Home Park in south Midland County shortly after 12:30 a.m. and found 28-year-old Robert Lynn Duffey dead of a gunshot wound to the head.

A revolver was recovered at the scene and Justice of the Peace Robert Sprayberry has ordered an autospy. Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Soviet action will affect congressional decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, just back from a five-week recess, is preparing to make foreign policy and defense decisions that leaders say will likely have a hawkish cast because of the Soviet attack on a Korean airliner.

Senate Democratic and Republican leaders introduced a resolution Monday condemning the Soviet Union for its "cold-blooded attack" Sept. 1 on the civilian jumbo jet and the death of the 269 passengers and crew members.

The non-binding measure, which will probably receive unanimous support when it is voted upon Wednesday, calls for further international sanctions against the Soviets unless Moscow apologizes for the incident and pays damages to the victims' families.

A group of conservative senators, meanwhile, blocked plans for quick consideration of the resolution and indicated they would attempt to toughen its wording.

Sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., and others want specific sanctions against the Soviet Union included in the resolution.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he expected a similar resolution to be introduced in the House soon. President Reagan had requested the resolution in a nationwide speech last week.

Several measures calling for specific sanctions — such as suspending the recently negotiated grain-sale agreement with Moscow — were introduced in the House Monday.

O'Neill said any sanctions should be international in character. "Unless, you get cooperation with these things, they don't work," he said. "This isn't the United States against the Russians. It is the Russians against the world."

O'Neill, however, did take a swipe at the Republican administration's relatively minor sanctions, contrasting them with the stiffer action taken by then-President Jimmy Carter after Soviet troops occupied Afghanistan in 1979. Carter, for example, banned grain sales to the Soviet Union.

Candidate Reagan "kind of poohpoohed everything Jimmy did," O'Neill said, but Carter showed "a lot of guts and courage in the campaign" of 1980.

Meanwhile, the State Department officially demanded compensation from the Soviet Union for the U.S. and South Korean citizens killed in the attack.

Department spokesman Alan Romberg said a high-ranking Soviet diplomat, Oleg Sokolov, was summoned to the State Department, but refused to accept the diplomatic notes demanding compensation.

Romberg said the notes would be "re-presented" to the Soviets but declined to say when and under what circumstances this would be done. The amount of compensation being demanded wasn't specified in the note but would be forthcoming at a later date, Romberg said.

In the House, nearly two dozen members made brief speeches condemning the Soviets for their attack and their refusal to permit other nations to enter the crash area to search for bodies and wreckage.

The incident "demonstrates that we are fighting an enemy that is even more nefarious than most can comprehend," said Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo. "This Stalinistic act may be the most vivid demonstration of the Soviet mentality which rules the nation and which has designs on subjugating the rest of the world."

Rep. Larry McDonald, a five-term Democrat from Georgia, was among those killed when the jet went down Sept. 1.

Although Skelton's strong rhetoric was echoed by other speakers, several lawmakers, however, urged Congress not to lose sight of the need for arms control in the wake of the attack.

Pope pays homage at Hungarian cardinal's tomb

Pope John Paul

MARIAZELL, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II was welcomed by thousands of residents in Alpine costumes as he arrived in this mountain village today to pay homage at the tomb of a Hungarian cardinal who became a symbol of anti-communism in the 1950s.

Also greeting the pope were about 5,000 members of religious orders, twice the number of inhabitants in the picturesque town. The nuns, priests and friars turned the central square into a sea of brown, white and black habits as John Paul exhorted them to remember their vows of chastity and their dedication to Christianity.

An estimated 40,000 people lined the roads, many in traditional green, white and red Alpine clothing, to see the pope, who had spent the first three days of his four-day visit in Vienna, 60 miles to the northeast.

The pope knelt for a short time before a statue of the Virgin Mary and Child, lavishly adorned in gold and silver, in a basilica revered by Catholics since the 14th century.

No previous pope had visited the shrine. The basilica was built in 1377 by Louis I of Hungary to celebrate a major victory over the Turks, and nearly 1.5 million pilgrims each year visit the shrine, which also houses Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty's tomb.

Mindszenty's imprisonment by the Hungarian Communists in the 1950s after a sensational trial and later 15-year refuge in the U.S. diplomatic legation in Budapest captured the world's attention.

The cardinal fled to the U.S. mission after Soviet tanks rolled into the city to crush the Hungarian uprising in 1956. He left for the Vatican in 1971 and then resettled in Vienna, where he died in 1975.

John Paul began the final day of his Austrian trip with a celebration of the 300th anniversary of a Christian victory over Turkish invaders at Vienna.

Bareheaded and squinting slightly in the morning sunshine, the pope spoke to an audience of about 7,000 people atop the Kahlenberg, a mountain overlooking Vienna and the Danube River.

Many in the crowd were Polish immigrants who have taken refuge in Austria because of economic and political troubles at home. Red-and-white banners of the outlawed Polish union Solidarity dotted the crowd.

The pope spoke of the bonds between Austria and his native Poland created in 1683 when badly outnumbered Christian allies — under the leadership of Polish King Jan Sobieski — beat back armies of the Ottoman Empire who threatened to seize Vienna and move into the heart of Europe.

The pope also consecrated a new chapel which houses a copy of the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, Poland's most revered relic.

Simple tombstone marks grave

MARIAZELL, Austria (AP) — A simple marble tombstone marking Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty's grave at this Roman Catholic shrine gives little hint of the Hungarian churchman's turbulent life.

Pope John Paul II planned to pray today at the tombstone, fashioned of red Hungarian marble and placed over Mindszenty's grave in the basilica's Hungarian Chapel.

Organizers of the pope's four-day visit to Austria have sought to play down its political overtones in regard to Eastern Europe, but John Paul's decision to make a pilgrimage to the tomb is a clear signal of solidarity with the Roman Catholic Church in the Soviet bloc.

The Latin inscription reads simply: "Jozsef Cardinal Mindszenty, 1892-1975. He lived and long may he live for his holy Hungary."

Marines report no new fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese army said today its soldiers beat back four armored assaults staged overnight by Syrian-backed Druse militiamen on a strategic mountain town.

In Beirut, police said the fighting at Souk el-Gharb and elsewhere in the area raised the casualty toll since civil warfare broke out Sept. 4 to 647 dead and 1,469 wounded.

No new fighting was reported today near the U.S. Marine position at the Beirut international airport, where three Marines were wounded Monday by mortar shells during an hour-long barrage.

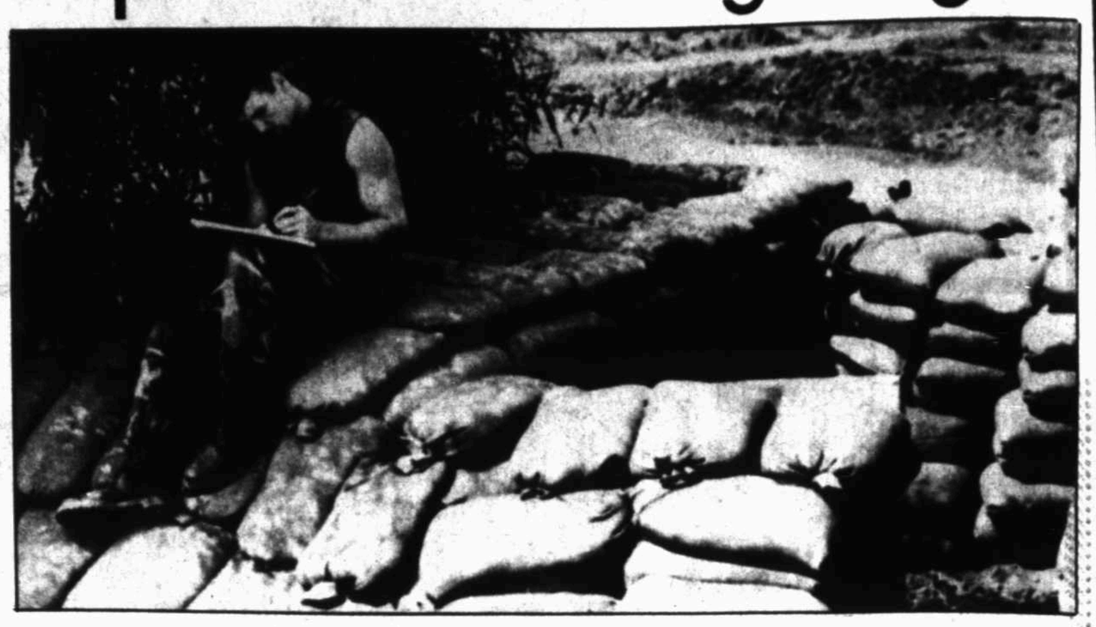

But a U.S. Navy task force remained off the Lebanese coast with an additional 2,000 Marines on board the 14 ships, and Beirut newspapers said the United States was poised for military action to deter further attacks on its troops and pressure the Druse into negotiating a truce.

President Reagan dispatched the task force after two Marines were killed last month. Two more Marines have been killed since then.

A Lebanese army communique said the U.S.-trained 8th Brigade was locked in artillery and rocket duels with surrounding Druse forces after repulsing the four ground attacks on Souk el-Gharb, about nine miles southeast of the capital.

Druse militiamen have been attacking the town for three days, apparently trying to clear the way for a link-up with sympathetic Shiite Moslem militiamen in control of Beirut's southern neighborhoods near the U.S. Marine zone.

Souk el-Gharb is a Christian town which controls the major route from the mountains to Beirut. It is the Lebanese army's only stronghold on the ridge overlooking Beirut, and if the Druse took it they would command the area and the Beirut-Damascus highway.

AP Laserphoto

U.S. Marine Sgt. Terry W. Loftis of Upland, Ind., writes a letter home from his bunker near Beirut International Airport. Shells aimed betweem leftist Druse and rightist Christians have hit the Marine compound several times killing four Marines in the past two weeks.

The latest group of Marines on shipboard brings to 3,200 the number of Marines in the Middle East, but Pentagon officials say none of the new American arrivals would go ashore.

White House officials said Reagan has decided to let Marine commanders in Lebanon ask for aerial support from Navy fliers if it is needed to defend U.S. troops. But it was understood that the Marines could not expect air strikes without higher approval.

The Druse claim their forces have overrun about 80 percent of the Chouf and Aley mountain regions since the latest round of fighting between leftist Druse and rightist Christian militias began Sept. 4, when Israeli forces withdrew from the area.

Police said today the updated casualty toll included 77 killed and 144 wounded in the previous 24 hours. But many villages are cut off by the fighting and the casualties there may not have been accurately tallied.

The radio quoted government sources as saying they were concerned that Israel's four-month-old troop withdrawal agreement with Lebanon could be nullified if the PLO returned to Beirut.

Marines can seek support from Navy fliers

Meanwhile, Speakes said that Robert C. McFarlane, the president's special Middle East envoy, "is literally working around the clock in discussions with the Lebanese" and, through third parties, with the Syrians, who are supporting the Druse.

The White House spokesman also said that the administration was "actively reviewing our legal position" under the War Powers Act.

Key White House aides, including Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, were expected to consult with congressional leaders on that issue today.

"Anything that would tie the president's hands would have serious ramifications on the Marines," said Speakes, referring to proposals to limit the use of the troops without congressional approval.

The latest development in the role of the 1,200 U.S. Marines in the international peacekeeping force in Beirut and the 2,000 reinforcements offshore underscored the dilemma facing the president in Beirut crisis.

With the Marines coming under greater fire from the Druse-Moslem militia, which is battling the Lebanese army, there is pressure to step up the role of U.S. troops.

At the same time, Congress has returned from its August recess with renewed interest in determining whether Reagan should invoke a section of the 1973 War Powers Act, which would give lawmakers a greater say in how long the troops could remain.

At issue is a provision that requires the president to withdraw troops from hostilities or threatened hostilities in 60 days, with a possible 30-day extension, unless Congress authorizes a longer stay.

Secretary of State George Shultz has said this provision does not apply, because the Marines in Lebanon are not the target of hostilities but are merely caught in the middle of fighting between Lebanese factions.

McGovern launches presidential campaign

Appearing this morning on the NBC-TV "Today" show, McGovern said his first act as president would be to "terminate American military involvement in Central America" and to rely instead on diplomacy, trade and limited military assistance short of direct involvement to achieve desired aims in the region.

He also said that, in Lebanon, the United States seems "to be moving step by step into another military involvement without any official declaration of war by the Congress."

On domestic issues, McGovern's announcement rejected Reaganomics, including a "wasteful binge" on military spending.

He called for a simplified system of taxation, as well as federal programs extending educational aid to all people, public and private works jobs and a one-time government-backed mortgage loan below 10 percent for every American family.

For McGovern, it will be the third try for the White House.

He ran for the nomination but lost in 1968. Four years later he started out far behind the field, but captured the nomination. He was buried beneath Nixon's landslide, winning only Massachusetts and the District of Columbia in the worst Democratic defeat in presidential politics.

McGovern and his aides have said he intends to campaign strongly against President Reagan's foreign policy and the "unfairness" of his economic policies.

He is expected to come out for a variety of steps to promote full employment, curb the arms race and trim defense spending — all delivered with what one adviser called a "sharper edge" than he feels the other Democrats have wielded.

One longtime adviser, Henry L. Kimelman, noted that McGovern won his national reputation by opposing the Vietnam War.

He believes "we have no alternative but to live peacefully and to coexist with the Russians," said Kimelman. "He will project himself as the kind of man who will sit down with them."

A spokesman, Mark Kaminsky, conceded the campaign starts out months behind the field, including former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, the frontrunner; former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and Sens. Alan Cranston of California, John Glenn of Ohio, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and Gary Hart of Colorado.

Hart served as McGovern's campaign manager in 1972, and sources said the two men corresponded briefly early this year. McGovern wrote Hart at one point saying he didn't believe this year's contenders were saying "what needed to be said," according to one source, who asked not to be identified.

Hart responded by shipping off copies of some of his speeches and position papers. This source said McGovern read the Hart material, then boned up on what the other contenders were saying.

Sources said McGovern does have a list of about 200,000 proven donors who have contributed to him in the past.

To establish his credibility as a candidate, McGovern is considering putting whatever money he can raise into an early media blitz in Iowa, where the first delegates to the 1984 Democratic convention will be selected next year, as well as New Hampshire, which will hold the first primary election.

The race will be McGovern's first since he was defeated in 1980 in his bid for a fourth Senate term from South Dakota. After his defeat, he established a political organization, Americans for Common Sense, designed to counteract New Right conservative groups.

Pope pays homage to cardinal

John Paul, who was shot and seriously wounded by Turkish gunman Mehmet Ali Agca in May 1981, arrived in Austria on Saturday and shortly afterwards hailed the 1683 victory against "the onslaught of the Turks."

He said Vienna's defenders were fighting not only for their homes but also "for Europe and Christendom."

The pope's participation in the commemoration raised a storm of protest in Turkey. The conservative daily newspaper Tercuman on Monday denounced it as "an international show of Christian strength."

In a speech Monday night in Vienna to about 20,000 people, many of them Polish emigres, the pontiff urged his countrymen to preserve their culture and religion, saying, "I can understand your disappointment and your bitterness which is connected with emigration."

In an earlier speech Monday, John Paul told some 15,000 Austrian and foreign workers and their families that "work is of fundamental importance to man." He warned of economic crisis and technological developments which threaten jobs.

The pontiff denounced job discrimination against women and defended the rights of minorities, young people and the handicapped to equal work opportunities.

After the ceremonies in Mariazell, the pontiff was to return to the Vienna airport to fly back to Rome, where he is scheduled to go to the papal retreat at Castel Gandolfo outside the Italian capital.

CRWMD appropriates funds for water reserves

BIG SPRING — Directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District appropriated $500,000 last week to fortify west-end ground water reserves and then turned to deal with the specter of drought on the east end.

As a quality-quantity hedge, the board ordered a cut-off of deliveries of water from Lake Thomas for secondary recovery no later than Nov. 1 in the absence of at least 5,000 acre-feet inflow into the reservoir. By doing this, said General Manager O.H. Ivie, the lake still would have 18,000 acre feet in reserve June 1, 1984, to blend with Lake Spence water.

During the past 14 months, Lake Thomas has received less than 1,500 acre-feet inflow, which has caused the content to drop to 35,000 acre feet today, and at any moment the district may begin pump-back operations to recover the remaining contents of the lake. Conservation of this supply is critical because Lake Thomas water is used to upgrade Lake Spence water, which is high in chlorides.

The board approved exchanging 2,400 acres out of the west part of the district's Ward County well field lease with the University of Texas System for 2,600 acres on the east side. This is calculated to improve both quantity and quality of water from the field after drilling at least five new wells, installing pumps and collecting lines at a cost of $450,000 approved by the directors.

Also appropriated was $60,000 to cover the cost of test holes in the Winkler County field, plus those on two tracts of a prospective well field in Winkler County. If the latter tests are satisfactory, this might involve another $500,000 up-front money for water rights, and $60,000 for development of at least one well to verify production. Development of a field there could call for $4.5 million for pipelines and pump stations as a minimum, said Ivie.

This level of investment would be considered in light of developments of long-range supplies, including the Stacy reservoir permit which is to be argued before the Texas Supreme Court Oct. 26. The court last week granted two points of error from a 3rd Court of Appeals judgment upholding the CRMWD permit to build the project to supply 113,000 acre feet annually for upper Colorado River basin and Permian Basin needs.

An application for renewing a four-year weather modification permit was approved by the board. The present permit expires at the end of November. Ivie told the directors he was encouraged that additional federal and state funds may be obtained to intensify research over the next five years to evaluate the economic feasibility of increasing precipitation. The district has been seeding clouds since 1971.

Sealing the interior of the 1 million gallon steel storage tank at the Spade Pump Station in southern Mitchell County at a cost of $55,000 was approved. The sealant will be a fiberglass material, and the tank's exterior will be repainted. The storage on the line from Lake Spence was installed in 1969. During the 30 days required for the work, Lake Spence deliveries will be halted and Moss Creek Lake will take up the slack.

Replacement of an old structure with a new resident at Lake E.V. Spence at a cost of $50,000 was approved. Ivie also told the board that delivery of a computer system, estimated to cost about $80,000 for hardware and software, will be before Jan. 1. He said engineering reports from Freese and Nichols, consultants, are due soon on replacement of an outdated microwave system, for pump station controls and for modification of the Martin County pump station to increase efficiency.

Before the end of October, consultants also are due to make recommendations on additional diversion works as a means of raising quality of Lake Spence water. Part of this would be on Beals Creek below Big Spring and part near the present diversion, and the cost could be at least $1.5 million, Ivie reported. He also said San Angelo may begin pumping from Lake Spence by Nov. 1.

In 1948, Mindszenty, appointed to the primacy with the assent of the Communist government, was inexplicably arrested as an enemy of the state. Following a humiliating show trial, he was sentenced to life in prison under trumped-up charges of high treason.

He was freed during the rebellion of 1956, when he took refuge in the U.S. legation in Budapest.

In 1975, four years after leaving the legation, Mindszenty died in self-exile in Vienna, an unrepentant opponent of Communism in his homeland.

Pope Paul VI's decision officially to remove Mindszenty from the primacy of Hungary on Feb. 5, 1974, was followed by a marked improvement in relations between the Vatican and Hungary.

The cardinal regarded himself as a sacrifice to a thaw in the cold war, writing in his memoirs that he had become an unwelcome guest in the U.S. legation "because I stood in the way of the policy of detente."

He was allowed to come to the West under an arrangement between the Hungarian government and the Vatican. In his will, Mindszenty asked to be buried in the Hungarian chapel.

The chapel, built in 1685, symbolizes the close ties Austria had with Hungary until the breakup of the Dual Monarchy at the end of World War I.

Soviet action will affect foreign policy

"We don't punish the Soviets by continuing the nuclear arms race. We only punish ourselves," said Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chief House sponsor of the nuclear freeze resolution. "And we certainly don't punish the Soviets by wasting money on defense," such as by proceeding with production of the MX missile, he said.

Despite Markey's sentiment, several lawmakers indicated the MX and other elements of Reagan's rearmament program have been given a boost because of the Soviet's actions.

As Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., put it, the incident will "deepen concern about the dangers of Soviet conduct in the world and will strengthen the president's request for a stronger military."

In its budget blueprint and compromise defense authorization bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, Congress had cut some $10.5 billion from Reagan's $198 billion military request.

But the appropriations bills providing the actual dollars for the programs are likely to be closer to Reagan's original request in the wake of the Korean airliner tragedy.

The House defense appropriations subcommittee was beginning several days of closed-door work on its version of the bill, while the counterpart panel in the Senate tentatively planned to draft its measure next week, aides said.

In a related matter, the pilot of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 gave no indication of navigational problems or that he might be off course in the last radio contact with U.S. air traffic control, a transcript of the communications showed Monday.

In the last exchange between the plane and U.S. officials in Anchorage, Alaska, the pilot made a routine radio check by short wave, was acknowledged and responded with "thank you."

The exchange at 1:23 a.m. Tokyo time came, according to Japanese officials, as the Boeing 747 already had crossed into Soviet air space and was flying over the militarily sensitive Kamchatka Peninsula.

The transcript was released by the Federal Aviation Administration.

TV host in the thick of things with program's debut

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alan Thicke, whose new late-night television show was ballyhooed as the competition's answer to Johnny Carson but was largely panned as it debuted last week, says the program will undergo some changes before it resumes taping.

Thicke, the soft-spoken host of "Thicke of the Night," said in an interview the first order of business was to calm down the show's frenetic energy level.

"We've got to bend the format of the show to suit me, not bend me to suit the format," he said.

The syndicated talk show, which opened last Monday, was produced by Fred Silverman, Carson's ex-boss and former star of network programming at CBS and ABC.

Peter Bunzel of The Los Angeles Herald Examiner called one of Thicke's interviews on the show "dreary" and another 'pointless" and said the program "has a long way to go before we start humming its host's name."

Daily Variety's Dave Kaufman wrote, "Thicke has a nice style, but was mired down in some inane shticks which engulfed him."

Washington Post reviewer Tom Shales saw a tape of the first show and informed his readers, "The 'e' in Thicke is silent; Thicke should be, too."

The show opened with an average 3.1 Nielsen rating in the country's top six TV markets.

A 3.0 rating is considered necessary to survive in late night, but the curiosity factor in Thicke's first-night audience must be considered as an inflationary influence on that night's ratings. The show's producers refused to give the ratings for successive nights. Carson, meanwhile, got a 5.4 rating last Monday night.

"I'll tell you what happened to me last night," Thicke said during a break in his cluttered office Thursday. "I was watching the show at home and after 25 minutes I had to get some fresh air. I walked into the kitchen and literally fainted from anxiety over what I was seeing.

"I saw me do a couple of things I just hated. I tried to analyze them. I think we collectively seduced ourselves into some activity on the show that is neither appropriate to the time period nor suitable to my own skills."

Thicke said more emphasis should be placed on personalities, rather than the high-energy variety and comedy routines of the show's premiere week.

"Thicke of the Night" was introduced with a promotional blitzkrieg seldom seen in television. Billboards were everywhere. Newspaper advertisements said Thicke would soon be a household name.

"It was difficult living up to the hype," he said. "People were expecting a combination of Robin Williams and Bruce Springsteen.

The show goes into its next phase of production Thursday, and will tape five shows.

Emergency rooms unable to treat seriously injured

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of lives are needlessly lost each year because people with serious injuries are taken to hospital emergency rooms that are unable to care for them, says the chief of surgery at San Francisco General Hospital.

"I don't think the public understands that the great majority of emergency rooms cannot take care of the severely injured patient," said Dr. Donald Trunkey, who specializes in emergency room surgery.

"That's not because it's a bad hospital. It's because they don't have the surgeons and anesthesiologists there to greet the patient," he said.

San Francisco General is what's known as a trauma center — a hospital specially prepared to begin care for dying patients in a matter of minutes. Trauma is the medical term for injuries and wounds.

"In a good trauma center, if somebody came in dead or dying they should be in the operating room in 10 or 15 minutes," Trunkey said in a telephone interview.

In cities with trauma centers, an astounding 20 percent of people found on the street seemingly dead after accidents will leave the hospital alive without brain damage, he said.

In the typical hospital emergency room, such patients would not survive.

If regional trauma centers were established nationwide, Trunkey estimates that 24,000 lives would be saved each year.

One study in Portland, Ore. — where there is no trauma center — found that it takes surgeons an average of an hour and 15 minutes to get to the hospital. For many patients, that is too late, Trunkey said.

Trunkey refers to trauma as a "disease," and calls it "the number one medical and social problem in the United States today." It's a disease of the young — the number one killer of people between the ages of one and 38.

More years of life are lost to trauma than to all other diseases combined, Trunkey said. Diseases kill more people than trauma, but because trauma strikes the young, it robs its victims of more years of their lives.

In 1982, 165,000 people lost their lives to trauma; twice as many as that were permanently disabled.

The principal difference between a trauma center and an ordinary emergency room is that surgeons and anesthesiologists are in the emergency room around the clock.

"It's not an equipment problem; it's a people problem," Trunkey said. This does not mean, however, that all hospitals should have doctors continually present, ready for emergencies. The costs of those specialists is too high for that.

But regional centers could be established in every locality simply by re-organizing resources. It could be done with little or no cost to the taxpayer, Trunkey said, and with no more surgeons and anesthesiologists than we have now.

Amazon now a route for cocaine traffic

TABATINGA, Brazil (AP) — An increasing amount of cocaine now is making its way to the United States and Europe through the wilderness of Brazil's Amazon jungles and waterways. It is loaded onto small planes at clandestine airstrips, shipped along rivers or carried by commercial airline passengers.

U.S and Brazilian drug enforcement officers say Brazil's coca-leaf growing neighbors — Colombia, Peru and Bolivia — are taking advantage of the huge wilderness to smuggle cocaine into Brazil and off to such cities as Miami, New York, Paris or Rome.

Much of it passes through this small Amazon River town on the borders of Colombia and Peru.

The United States has taken an interest in Brazil's use as a transshipment point and producer of a jungle variety of coca called ipadu. The U.S. government this year gave Brazil four patrol boats to be used along the Amazon River and its tributaries and 10 trucks for finding traffickers leaving and entering along the rugged southwestern borders with Argentina and Paraguay.

Federal police figures show that 800 pounds of cocaine were seized in Brazil in 1982. Three hundred pounds of that total were confiscated in the Amazon. In all of 1981, 330 pounds of the illegal drug were found by police.

Several years ago Brazilian officials discovered that local Indians were cultivating and selling ipadu, the Amazon variety of the coca leaf, from which cocaine is processed.

"It has been growing there for 2,000 years and is exactly the same as the coca they have in the Andes," said a drug enforcement officer in Brazil's capital, Brasilia.

"The Colombians came over and showed the Indians how to cultivate the leaves," said the drug enforcement officer who asked to remain anonymous because of the nature of his work. "Funai (the government-run Indian agency) discovered it because the Indians started wearing jeans and carrying radios."

During raids in July and August in the jungle, federal police patrols pulled out and burned 5,000 ipadu plants, said Renato Surette, head of the federal police in Amazonas state.

"In Tabatinga, Leticia (Colombia) and in other river towns, the people live on drugs," Surette added in an interview at his office in Manaus, the Amazonas state capital.

"There is no real industry on these border towns, and suddenly these people become rich. The miracle is drugs."

Production shuts down for computer

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — When Adam Osborne came up with a bargain-priced microcomputer that fit under an airline seat, executives began swapping briefcases for Osbornes at the rate of 10,000 a month.

Alone and omnipotent in a field it created 2½ years ago, the fledgling company quickly boasted annual revenues of $100 million.

It planned to go public this past spring, selling shares observers predicted could match the popularity of Apple's first offering.

But by late spring, those plans were quietly shelved. The company had slipped from its pinnacle into a field crowded with rivals bent on outsmarting Osborne.

The company announced Friday it was shutting down its production lines and furloughing almost all its workers, including some executives. Osborne himself will no longer draw a salary.

Yet the company insisted Friday that it will continue to pursue development of its new products.

"We have adequate finished product to deal with our current needs," said Donald Waite, vice president for finance. "We have structured ourselves to attempt to get through a very difficult period."

Osborne is searching for a strategy — and the private financing — to regain its laurels.

"We intend to remain at the forefront of the market that we created," Osborne said recently.

Industry analysts haven't been optimistic.

"Adam Osborne always felt he knew best. And sometimes he did," said Kenneth G. Bosomworth, president of International Resource Development Inc. in Norwalk, Conn. "But he has been lulled into getting out of step with fast-moving trends. ... (The company's) problems are severe ones."

It was the "tricky problem" of going from an old product to a new one that dethroned Osborne, said Gil Juliussen, chairman of Future Computing, a market research company in Richardson, Texas.

The old product was the Osborne 1, a 26-pound machine featuring a 5-inch video display screen. The new one is the Executive, with more memory and a 7-inch screen.

The Executive was intended to hit the market in mid-April. But word leaked out early and sales of the Osborne 1 collapsed as customers decided to wait for the new model.

The cash crunch led to drastic changes: Osborne's production facility in Monmouth Junction, N.J., was closed and its 89 workers were furloughed, followed by 200 layoffs at company headquarters in this east San Francisco Bay community, leaving 400 workers.

Processor use costs $1 an hour

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The staccato sound of students' typewriters will be replaced by the gentle clack of computer keyboards at Harvard this fall. The school is installing coin-operated word processors in an experiment in pay-as-you-go technology.

The university is placing 40 Digital Equipment Corp. DECmate I word processors with printers in dormitories, classroom buildings and libraries and even the student union.

Students will be able to use the machines for $1 an hour to print out term papers and thesis materials. The price will rise to $2 an hour in November.

"This is just a trial balloon to see if the kids use it," says Margery Heffron, a spokeswoman at Harvard.

Word processors combine an electronic keyboard and computer with a video display screen. Material typed into the computer is displayed on the screen and can be corrected or revised before being committed to paper on the printer.

Harvard and Digital are planning an orientation and seminars to prepare students for the machines after they return to classes Sept. 19.

Ms. Heffron said the experiment grew out of conversations between Digital and Howard Resnikoff, Harvard's former associate vice president for information technology who has since left the school.

She says Digital joined the project to see if there is a market for coin-operated word processors and computers.

While other colleges have experimented in providing computer access for students, Ms. Heffron said this is the first test of a "pay as you go," system. If it works, the school will install more word processors and add coin-operated computers.

"Harvard is so big that you could never have enough to have around," says Ms. Heffron. "If it pays for itself, they'll get more installed. If there is a lot of demand, they can keep the price down."

Insurance rises

Life insurance per insured U.S. family rose from $13,500 in 1961 to $53,200 in 1981, the American Council of Life Insurance reports.

A hooded skeleton waving a model airplane is joined by protesters from the American Legion and the Asian-American Alliance Monday outside the gates of the Manchester Terminal at the Port of Houston. Longshoremen were entering to unload the Soviet freighter, Novovolynsk. The ship is the second Soviet freighter to dock at the port since a Korean jetliner was shot down in Soviet airspace.

Protesters urge longshoremen to refuse to unload freighters

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Soviet freighters docked at the Port of Houston — one the target of protestors waving red-stained model airplanes and singing "God Bless America" — are expected to set sail Wednesday, officials said.

About 150 protesters chanted slogans and waved signs Monday as they urged members of the International Longshoremen's Association to refuse to unload the Novovolynsk, which had arrived earlier in the day.

The protest came in response to a Soviet fighter shooting down Korean Air Line Flight 007 on Sept. 1, killing all 269 people on board.

Local ILA President Millard Barrington said his union had no choice but to try to send longshoremen to unload the boat. The union recently lost a multimillion-dollar lawsuit stemming from its refusal to load Russian grain ships following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan nearly four years ago.

Barrington said "many" longshoremen refused to hire into the unloading crew.

Although two 16-member work gangs were ordered by the ship's local representative, West Gulf Maritime Association, the ILA could only get enough volunteers for one, said George Sanders, executive vice president of the local ILA.

The Novovolynsk is scheduled to leave Wednesday, said Coast Guard officer Wayne Thompson.

The General Kravtsov, which arrived in Houston Friday, now also is set to leave Wednesday, Thompson said.

West Texas ranchers reject federal drought-relief program

FORT WORTH (AP) — West Texas ranchers battling one of the worst droughts in decades say a government relief program supposed to help them weather their losses won't do them any good.

Agriculture Secretary John Block announced in mid-August that low-interest loans would be available to ranchers in 23 counties of Southwest Texas suffering from the drought.

But three weeks later, not a single rancher had applied for one of the Farmers Home Administration loans.

Veteran West Texas cattlemen told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the ranchers who will seek the federal disaster aid are those who engaged in unwise ranching practices or tried to walk a financial tightrope.

The more successful a rancher has been, the less likely he is to qualify for the current FmHA disaster loans. A proven loss alone will not qualify an applicant. And producers who can qualify for loans elsewhere are not eligible for the low-interest disaster loans.

So many cattlemen say they would rather see Block provide a feed subsidy program than loans for the 23-county area west of a line from San Angelo to Abilene and southwest from Lamesa to the Rio Grande.

"The initial disaster program won't help anybody," said Michael A. Harrison, who manages two ranches for his family in the Pecos area. "I can borrow more money now than I can pay back."

But the ranchers, Block and state politicians disagree over whether enough corn remains in the bins to help.

A spokesman for Block said that with the drought spreading across the nation's Corn Belt, the secretary would "be opening a door in Texas and not be able to close it" if he approved the feed subsidies.

Meanwhile, ranchers in the area, where the average annual rainfall has dropped from about 10 inches to 3 inches, are taking their own advice and culling herds by as much as 50 percent.

In the Pecos-Fort Stockton area, a few operators have opted to let some cattle die rather than spend more money to feed them and sell them at a loss. Internal Revenue Service agents say these producers have only a slim chance at a tax break by abandoning their cattle.

"This is no place for anyone who can't survive a six- to eight-month setback," said Pecos rancher Herschel Cox.

Many ranchers believe that federal aid raises "a moral question," said Gene West of Marfa, who manages three operations in the Big Bend region.

"If I can't make it, is it right to take your money and keep me in business?" West asked. "We're a conservative people out here. I don't want any loan from the Farmers Home Administration."

He said that during the 1970s, "a lot of people out here got a bunch of money" they didn't need through the federal loan and feed subsidy programs. Some producers channeled their disaster aid into certificates of deposit or used it for purposes other than paying bills, he said.

Bill Prewit, a Pecos rancher and oil and gas broker, said some farmers borrowed huge amounts from FmHA and operated until they were foreclosed upon.

Some FmHA officials say the disaster declaration was inspired more by political pressure than by a real need for the minimal help the loans give.

"The holler at the federal government to 'come help us,' and we can't say, 'We're broke too,'" said one unidentified official. "A lot of it (help from the declaration) is psychological."

Tortilla factories in San Antonio flattened by increased corn prices

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Consumers probably will end up shelling out more for tortillas because of an area shortage of white corn, the raw material used to make tortillas and other related Mexican foods, one industry official says.

The shortage could spark a brief price war among San Antonio's 44 tortilla factories, but the higher cost of the white corn ultimately will be passed on to the consumer, said John Beltran, general manager for the Sanitary Tortilla Factory.

The corn shortage has been caused by a lack of rain in the area surrounding San Antonio, he said.

Commercial tortilla manufacturers believe the cost of each tortilla soon might be upped from 2.2 cents to 2.7 cents or more, he said.

"A price increase of half a cent per tortilla doesn't seem to be much, but when you buy 50 tortillas for the family, it means 25 cents more than what you paid last time," Beltran said.

"This hurts middle-income families," he said. "It's an item that is usually purchased every morning from the tortilla plant nearby."

Local grain elevators are holding onto their white corn supplies as long as possible, waiting for the price to inch up, Beltran said.

"The price of corn has been increasing slowly since January," he said. "Corn suppliers have been looking for bargains all over this section of Texas, but no one has revealed if he found a bonanza in some small town."

Beltran said the Sanitary Tortilla Factory currently is getting white corn from an area between Castroville and Helotes, some 25 miles away.

"I don't know how long the supply from that section of Texas will continue," he said.

Meanwhile, he said, he is considering upping the price of his tortillas from 2.2 cents each to 3 cents each.

Drought lowers Texas crop yields

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas cotton production is forecast at 2.35 million bales, down 13 percent from last year despite increased yield over a year ago, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday.

The harvest includes 3.5 million acres, 19 below last year but the average statewide yield is 322 pounds per acre, compared with 301 pounds in 1982.

State Statistician Dennis Findley said the hot, dry summer hurt many dryland fields but irrigated stands benefitted from the high temperatures.

Sorghum production was forecast at 87.8 million hundredweight, 49 percent down. The statewide yield is forecast at 2,744 pounds per acre, 336 pounds below last year.

The Texas corn crop is down 4 percent to 115 million bushels with a field of 100 bushels per acre, off five bushels.

Rice production is forecast at 17.1 million hundredweight, a decrease of 23 percent.

Mother gets 'two for price of one'

A 36-year-old woman identified as Kay proudly holds her twin sons, Blake Carroll, left, and Brice Purcell Monday at Hermann Hospital in Houston. They were born Friday.

HOUSTON (AP) — A mother of newborn twin boys who thought she would never be able to have children says "women everywhere" who can't conceive by normal methods should try in vitro fertilization.

"There's nothing to it. And the babies come out perfectly normal," said Kay, a 36-year-old Houston woman who agreed to a news conference on condition she be identified only by her first name.

Kay "got two for the price of one" last Friday when she gave birth by Caesarian section to Brice Purcell, at 5 pounds and 6 ounces, and Blake Carroll, at 5 pounds and 2 ounces.

Kay, who had a diseased ovary removed when she was 16, has suffered from an illness that blocked her remaining fallopian tube, making normal conception impossible.

Earlier this year Kay and her husband enrolled in the in vitro fertilization program at the University of Texas Medical School at Houston.

Using the so-called test tube baby technique, doctors made a small incision in Kay's abdominal wall and removed eggs from her ovary. These were placed in a laboratory dish and united with sperm from her husband. Four embryos formed and then were implanted in Kay's uterus.

Three weeks later, an ultrasound examination determined that two of the embryos were developing.

"At that point, we knew we were going to have twins," Kay said.

"We were very, very lucky," she added.

The boys were the eighth and ninth babies born in the in vitro fertilization program at the University of Texas. Most of the other parents chose to remain anonymous, but Kay requested the Monday news conference.

"I feel very strongly about this," she said. "I wanted to encourage other women everywhere to try it."

Kay said she is keeping a scrapbook, beginning with news reports of the first test tube baby born, and plans to one day show the book to her twins and explain to them how they were conceived.

"We will tell them that as soon as they are able to understand it," she said. "There's nothing shameful about it. It's something to be proud about."

The twins were the first born in the University of Texas program, but at least two other sets were born in the U.S. this year and several multiple births have been reported from programs in Austalia and Canada.

Dr. Martin M. Quigley said the so-called test tube baby techniques are now being widely used and offer hope to 500,000 to 1 million couples who otherwise would remain childless.

"It has come out of the lunatic fringe to a point where it is becoming a very accepted thing," he said.

The technique was first used for women who were able to bear children except for blocked fallopian tubes that prevented the migration of the egg from the ovaries. Quigley said the technique is now being used also for couples who are childless because of a low sperm count on the part of the husband.

Quigley said twins occur naturally in about one out of 100 births. In the test tube baby program, he said, the ratio may be five to 10 percent of the pregnancies.

At the University of Texas, the technique costs $2,500 to $3,000 per attempt and there is a success rate of 15 to 20 percent per treatment cycle.

PUBLIC NOTICE

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

SPECIAL ELECTION
NOVEMBER 8, 1983

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 91 proposes a constitutional amendment which requires a county with a population of 30,000 or more to be divided into not less than four nor more than eight justice of the peace precincts. A county with a population of 18,000 or more but less than than 30,000 shall be divided into not less than two nor more than five justice of the peace precincts. A county with a population of less than 18,000 shall be designated as a single justice of the peace precinct or, upon a finding of necessity by the commissioners court, shall be divided into more than one justice of the peace precinct but not more than four. The amendment provides further, that in any precinct in which there is a city with a population of 18,000 or more, two justices of the peace shall be elected. The amendment allows a justice of the peace, constable or commissioner to continue in office until the expiration of his term, although a change in precinct boundaries results in the officer no longer being a resident of the precinct for which he was elected or appointed and allows a justice of the peace or constable to continue in office until the expiration of his term even though a change in precinct boundaries results in the abolishment of the precinct or more than one justice of the peace or constable serving the precinct. Vacancies in the office of justice of the peace or constable that result from a precinct boundary change shall be filled by the commissioners court until the next general election. The amendment would take effect on January 1, 1984, and counties with populations of less than 30,000 and with more than four justice of the peace and constable precincts would have until January 1, 1987 to comply with the amendment.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing fewer justice of the peace and constable precincts in counties with a population of less than 30,000 and providing for continuous service by justices of the peace, constables, and county commissioners when precinct boundaries are changed."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 105 proposes a constitutional amendment which would limit a homestead in a city, town or village to a lot or lots amounting to not more than one acre of land, together with any improvements on the land. The constitutional requirement that, at the time of designation, an urban homestead not exceed ten thousand dollars in value without reference to the value of any improvements on the land would be eliminated.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment replacing the limitation on the value of an urban homestead with a limitation based on size."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Legislature to enact legislation that permits representative associations of agricultural producers to collect refundable assessments on their product sales to be used solely to finance programs of marketing, promotion, research and education relating to those products. It provides, further, that adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment will bring into effect Senate Bill 607, Acts of the 68th Legislature, Regular Session, 1983, with rejection of the amendment resulting in Senate Bill 607 having no effect.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment providing for the advancement of food and fiber production and marketing in this state through research, education, and promotion financed by the producers of agricultural products."

PROPOSITION NO. 4 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 30 proposes a constitutional amendment which authorizes the Legislature to enact laws to provide for the succession of members of the Legislature in the event of enemy attack and allows the suspension of procedural rules imposed by the Constitution in the event of, or immediate threat of, enemy attack. The amendment empowers the Governor, after consultation with the Speaker of the House and the Lieutenant Governor, to suspend the constitutional requirement that the Legislature hold its sessions in Austin and allows the suspension of procedural rules by the Governor issuing a proclamation in which the House of Representatives and Senate concur by resolution approved by a majority of the members present. Suspension of the constitutional rules may not exceed a period of two years under a single proclamation; however, the Governor may renew the suspension by issuing a new proclamation concurred in by the House of Representatives and the Senate through a resolution approved by a majority of the members present.

The amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing statutory provisions for succession of public office during disasters caused by enemy attack, and authorizing the suspension of certain constitutional rules relating to legislative procedure during those disasters or during immediate threat of enemy attack."

PROPOSITION NO. 5 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 12 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Legislature to enact legislation providing for the use of the permanent school fund and income from the permanent school fund to guarantee bonds issued by school districts. The amendment provides, further, that the Legislature may appropriate part of the available school fund for administration of the permanent school fund or of a bond guarantee program established pursuant to the amendment.

The constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing use of the permanent school fund to guarantee bonds issued by school districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 6 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment which would permit the Legislature to provide for the garnishment of wages to enforce court-ordered child support payments. The garnishment remedy would not be available for other purposes.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to provide for additional remedies to enforce court-ordered child support payments."

PROPOSITION NO. 7 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 14 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Veterans' Land Board to provide for, issue, and sell general obligation bonds of the State of Texas in an amount not to exceed $800 million to provide financing to veterans of the state. The amendment requires that three hundred million dollars of the state bonds be dedicated to the Veterans' Land Fund. The Fund is to be used to purchase land to be sold to veterans under such terms, rules and regulations as may be authorized by law. The amendment creates the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund and requires that $500 million of the state bonds authorized by the amendment be dedicated to the Fund. The Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund will be utilized by the Veterans' Land Board for the purpose of making home mortgage loans to veterans for housing within the state and for the administrative costs of administering the fund and issuing the bonds. The amendment provides, further, that if there is not money in either the Veterans' Land Fund or the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund available for payment of principal and interest on the general obligation bonds issued pursuant to the amendment, then money coming into the Treasury in each fiscal year is appropriated in an amount sufficient for payment of principal and interest due in that fiscal year.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment for financial assistance to veterans and to authorize the issuance of $800 million in bonds of the state to finance the Veterans' Land Program and the Veterans' Housing Assistance Program."

PROPOSITION NO. 8 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes political subdivisions to exempt veterans' organizations from ad valorem taxation on their property. The amendment requires that the veterans' organizations be chartered by the United States Congress, be composed of members or former members of the United States Armed Forces and be organized for patriotic and public service purposes. The amendment provides, further, that political subdivisions may exempt fraternal organizations from ad valorem taxation on their property. The amendment requires that the fraternal organizations be organized to perform and be primarily engaged in charitable or benevolent functions. The Legislature would be authorized to enact laws that prescribe eligibility requirements for fraternal organizations to benefit from the exemption and to pass legislation limiting the types or amount of property owned by a fraternal organization which may be exempted from ad valorem taxation.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to authorize taxing units to exempt from taxation property of certain veterans' and fraternal organizations."

PROPOSITION NO. 9 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 70 proposes a constitutional amendment to authorize the Legislature to provide, by local or general law, a method by which judges of statutory courts with probate jurisdiction may be assigned to any other statutory court with probate jurisdiction and to any constitutional county court in any county in the state.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment providing for assignment of judges of statutory probate courts to other statutory county courts with probate jurisdiction and to county courts."

PROPOSITION NO. 10 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 17 proposes a constitutional amendment that authorizes the Legislature to enact laws which would allow a city or town to expend public funds to relocate or replace sanitation sewage laterals on private property if done in conjunction with the replacement or relocation of sanitation sewer mains serving the property. The amendment requires that the law authorize the city or town to affix a lien on the private property, with the consent of the owner, to cover the costs of the replacement or relocation of the sewer laterals on the property. The lien may not be enforced until five years have expired since the date the lien was affixed. The amendment provides, further, that the law require that the costs of the replacement or relocation of the sewer laterals on the private property be assessed against the property with repayment to be amortized over a period not to exceed five years and at an interest rate provided by law.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to permit a city or town to expend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of sanitation sewer laterals on private property."

PROPOSITION NO. 11 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 13 proposes a constitutional amendment that would change the Board of Pardons and Paroles from a constitutional agency to a statutory agency and would eliminate the Governor's power to revoke paroles. The Legislature would be authorized to establish the Board of Pardons and Paroles and to require it to maintain records of its actions and the reasons for its actions. The amendment would empower the Legislature to enact parole laws. Constitutional language specifying the qualifications and terms of office for members of the Board of Pardons and Paroles is eliminated. The constitutional language governing the composition of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and the manner of filling vacancies on the Board is eliminated.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to change the Board of Pardons and Paroles from a constitutional agency to a statutory agency and to give the board power to revoke paroles."

Estos son los informes explanatorios sobre las enmiendas propuestas a la constitución que aparecerán en la boleta el día 8 de noviembre de 1983. Futile argument

We'll be the first to admit that more than once we've found reasons to complain about Odessa. Now we get a chance to come to the defense of the city to the west; we aren't going to pass it up.

The National Coalition to Ban Handguns recently said Odessa was the "most dangerous metropolitan area" in the nation in 1982. The dubious claim to fame was awarded on crime statistics which revealed that city had a homicide rate of 29.8 per 100,000 residents, putting it above even Miami, Fla., the perennial winner of the Most Dangerous City award. Midland, incidentally, was ranked 13th.

While it's true that nearly 30 homicides is a few more than any city would wish for (about 30 more, in fact), we have a sneaking suspicion that the National Coalition to Ban Handguns intends to use Odessa's questionable honor to push its own cause, which is the disarming of the American public on the belief that an unarmed public is much less dangerous than an armed one.

The fallacy in that line of thinking is that if criminals cannot obtain guns, everyone will be much safer. Want to bet your life on it? Does this "national coalition" believe it can hold a gun recall one day and all the criminals will dutifully show up to turn in their pieces? That they will never manufacture or steal another weapon? No, what will happen if the American public is ever unarmed is criminals will be given free reign to run rampant over the public with no defense in sight.

Of course 30 homicides a year isn't an acceptable number. But you don't protect the public by taking away its primary means of personal defense. That just turns people into ducks — sitting ducks!

Window dressing

Considering their track record for justice, it is not suprising that the law enforcement authorities of Communist Poland already are preparing for a whitewash of the killers of 19-year-old Grzegorz Przemyk.

Przemyk, the son of Barbara Sadowska, a popular poet and supporter of the Solidarity movement, was beaten to death by police and ambulance attendants in the aftermath of a schoolboy celebration which came at the close of term examinations. His funeral developed into a rally by 20,000 persons for the cause of Solidarity.

It was an event that could not be ignored so the Warsaw prosecutor went through the motions of investigating the circumstances of the youth's death. In his report, the prosecutor admits that the purpose of the investigation was to satisfy society there would be no cover-up in the case and remove all suspicion that the young man was slain in revenge for his mother's political activity.

The strange document accomplishes the exact reverse. While it blames the cops and the ambulance attendants for the fatal beating and even accuses two physicians of negligence in the case, the report goes on to a description of the youth's provocative behavior preceding the incident. It implies that the overreaction of the law enforcement officers was understandable — even advisable.

If the matter ever goes to trial, the tribunal will be dealing with the farcical situation of an indictment which supplies exonerating alibis for the accused.

Another View:

'Enemy of humanity'

The official hymn of the Sandinista communist government in Nicaragua proclaims, "We fight against the Yankqui, enemy of humanity." Even the Internationale, the Soviet anthem, doesn't label Americans as humanity's mortal foes.

The Sandinistas consider disloyal any expression not completely supporting it. The Catholic Church, as represented by Archbishop Miguel Obando y Bravo of Managua, has been called counterrevoluntionary for criticizing the absence of freedom of speech.

The "disloyal" newspaper, La Prensa, is not permitted to publish critical editorials nor report on what goes on in Nicaragua. It prints foreign agency news dispatches and those must first be submitted to censors.

The only reason La Prensa is allowed to publish at all, says Robert Vardenal, one of its editors, is because "we're good for the Sandinistas' public relations with America and with Western Europe."

Among foreign agency stories La Prensa could not publish was a dispatch about a Soviet defector in Japan, and a story from Paris quoting a French Socialist Party official saying he knew nothing of Socialist International pressure on the Sandinistas.

In fact, the Socialist International, a worldwide body of socialist parties, wrote the Sandinista leadership expressing concern over the absence of elections and other deprivation of rights in Nicaragua.

People's tribunals, an old communist tool, have replaced the courts. Under present emergency law, four people sitting together can be characterized as an illegal political gathering. This gives the Sandinistas a monopoly on all political discussion.

The Sandinistas claim that some 60 percent of the economy is still in private hands is misleading because the government controls the banks and thus controls all access to foreign currency, has jurisdiction over imports, sets production quotas and designates economic priorities. Businessmen are reduced to titular managers of government-controlled property.

An example of Nicaragua's "private enterprise" is Almesa, a feed-meal company into which private investors sank $2.5 million in May. In June the government declared Almesa a public utility.

Dr. Clemente Guido, national secretary of the Democratic Christian Party, which opposed the late dictator Anastasio Somoza, says the Sandinistas have confiscated the revolution which four years ago was a really broad-based movement.

Even as they saddle their countrymen with a pervasive communist despotism, Sandinistas have the gall to call the United States the enemy of humanity. Yet, inexplicable as it is, there are people in this country who have been and remain apologists for the Sandinistas.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Philippines trip risky for Reagan

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will be risking his life if he insists on going ahead with his scheduled November visit to the Philippines, State Department insiders warn.

Jack Anderson

The U.S. Embassy in Manila has received several death threats against Reagan. Though many of these threats have come in anonymous telephone calls to the embassy, top State Department officials are not shrugging them off as mere crank calls.

My associate Lucette Lagnado has learned that the death threats began filtering into the embassy after the assassination of Philippine opposition leader Benigno Aquino on Aug. 21. In addition to the anonymous phone calls, opposition leaders have warned privately that radical factions may be forming "suicide squads" to kill Reagan if he visits the Philippines.

Besides the physical danger to Reagan, several State Department experts offer another reason they believe the president should cancel his November visit: They are convinced that Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos was ultimately responsible for the assassination of Aquino.

If this is indeed the case — and the State Department has not made public its judgment on the matter yet — diplomats feel it would be politically unwise for Reagan to visit the Philippines. The spectacle of Reagan literally embracing Marcos would outrage those who blame the Philippine dictator for the murder of his foremost political rival.

Marcos is not only unpopular but in poor health, they point out, and sooner or later he will pass from the scene.

If the opposition eventually succeeds in gaining power, Reagan's support for Marcos following the Aquino assassination will be likely to produce a backlash against the United States. The situation, some State Department officials fear, would be like that in Iran after the overthrow of the shah, who was for years the darling of Washington.

Even if the Marcos regime was not directly responsible for the Aquino murder, the incident points up the risk of a Reagan visit. If the Marcos regime was unable to safeguard Aquino, advisers ask, will it be any more effective in protecting Reagan, particularly from fanatical suicide squads?

WATCH ON THE PENTAGON: The Army is rushing development of some amazing new anti-aircraft weapons for its combat troops in Europe. It already has a man-carried, surface-to-air missile system in operation that's better than the heat-seeking Redeye. The Patriot and the Sergeant York will be even more sophisticated. The Patriot, which will be deployed in Europe next year, "can engage nine targets simultaneously," according to a secret Pentagon report. The Sergeant York will come on line in 1985, giving longer-range, higher-kill, all-weather protection for ground troops against enemy planes.

— Passing-the-buck is an old military tradition, but the Navy has given it a new twist: It passes the buck down the chain of command, instead of up. Consider this recent explanation by the director of Naval Weapons Engineering Support Activity for how the system should work: "Completed staff work is the study of a problem and the presentation of a solution in such form that all that remains to be done on the part of the supervisor, Division Head, Department Head, Technical Director and Director is to indicate approval or disapproval of the completed action. ... Higher authority, except for exceptional cases (!), should not be consulted in determining details, no matter how perplexing they may be." So whatever happens, it's the subordinates' fault.

— Some Air Force brass obviously don't have enough to do: They're worrying about high fashion instead of high flying. Result: mandatory new dress uniforms for all officers, including summer whites and a snazzy blue-and-white ensemble for winter. Some junior officers are quietly griping, not only about the $300 per uniform they have to shell out, but about the shocking break with wild-blue-yonder tradition. As one put it, "If I wanted to wear white uniforms, I would have joined the Navy."

OUT IN THE COLD: Proxy votes are a widely used time-saving device in Congress. But Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., gave his proxy to the wrong man: Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho. Andrews didn't realize that McClure's Interior subcommittee was going to take action on a bill providing $100 million more for federal aid to low-income families who insulate their homes — a program dear to the hearts of Andrews and his constituents. McClure used Andrews' proxy to vote against the increase. The North Dakotan will have to wait for a floor vote to rectify the situation.

INSIDE REPORT:

Regan: Fed policy needs changed

WASHINGTON — Just before the administration adjourned to California for its summer vacation, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan briefed President Reagan on the economy and delivered this warning: Continuation of present Federal Reserve Board policy threatens significant weakening of the economy.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The political implications are obvious and ominous. More than U.S.-Soviet relations and far more than belated efforts at wooing blacks, Hispanics and feminists, Reagan's re-election prospects depend on the state of the economy in 1984. The Treasury's economic analysis, on which the secretary based his briefing, strongly suggests that state will be sour indeed unless newly-reappointed Chairman Paul Volcker changes policy at the Fed.

The government went on automatic pilot soon after that mid-August briefing, and has been preoccupied by the KAL 007 crisis since its shortened vacation. But the time is coming when the president must face up to what he wants to do about monetary policy, with far-ranging political implications for his and the Republican Party's future.

The dour view of the Wall Street bond trader abhorring too rapid an economic recovery has its advocates in the administration. Chief economic adviser Martin Feldstein and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige make no secret of their desire for a gentler growth rate. That surely is not the view of White House chief of staff James Baker, much less most working Republican politicians.

But the point man so far in warning Reagan of the peril to him of slow growth has been Don Regan. The August economic briefing of the president by the longtime head of Merill Lynch was based on professional staff analysis markedly different from Wall Street's present conventional wisdom.

What the secretary told the president stems from this Treasury economic assessment as of early August: Because of the Fed's springtime decisions to tighten up, the monetary base — bank reserves and currency — did not grow at all during June and July. That raised what Treasury economists consider "serious consequences" if nothing is changed.

Regan's briefing of the president pointed out that the Fed's restraint of the monetary base was disturbingly similar to the central banks's performance in 1981, which Treasury analysts believe triggered the disastrous recession. This, not the budget deficits as Feldstein claims, is blamed by Regan for the recovery-thwarting rise of interest rates. Continuation of this policy, the Treasury warns, will so weaken the economy that Reagan could not point with pride to economic revival in the fall of 1984.

In blaming rising interest rates on the Fed, the Treasury analysis breaks sharply with Wall Street's deficitphobia. It dismisses the notion that federal deficits combine with rapid economic recovery to build a demand for money that pushes up interest rates, arguing instead that recovery reduces the need for corporate borrowing.

Since the president's briefing, there has been no sign of Federal Reserve relaxation. Indeed, some Treasury economists believe a serious economic slowdown — beginning in the fourth quarter of '83 or first quarter of '84 — is now inescapable. That may be desirable to Feldstein, Baldrige and much of Wall Street, but it guarantees an unemployment rate close to 10 percent right up to Election Day.

Quite apart from its human cost, the political consequences of chronically-high unemployment are profound for Reagan. If the Treasury warnings prove correct, he will be forced to base his 1984 campaign not on economic growth but on the virtues of economic austerity (lower inflation at the Phillips Curve price of high unemployment). That proved a winning formula for Margaret Thatcher in Britain, but it could be fatal for Reagan.

Beyond the 1984 election, chronic high unemployment means irresistible congressional demands for open-ended unemployment benefits on the British style. Such a work disincentive runs exactly opposite to the original goals of the Reagan Revolution.

That Volcker and the Fed are expected to loosen money this autumn — perhaps making that decision during the September Open Market Committee meeting — is only slightly reassuring. The inability of the central bank to fine-tune the economy has been amply demonstrated. If the worried Treasury analysts are correct, it cannot prevent a slowdown in the recovery.

The good news is that Don Regan warned the president about it just before he left on vacation. The bad news is that the warning probably has been submerged in the rush of events since then that have compounded the summer's normal inattention to economics.

LETTERS

Disgusting behavior

To The Editor:
Please publish this open letter to the four "gentlemen" my friends and I encountered on the afternoon of August 25.

Dear "Gentlemen,"
You know who you are (but I don't.) It was about 6:45 p.m., my husband and a friend and I were riding bicycles on the side of the road when you drove past us, shouting and horns blaring. You pulled off the road and got out of the car to pick a fight. We pedalled by as fast as we could to avoid trouble. You drove by us again and this time one of you threw a full beer bottle at us. It whizzed past my head and broke about two feet from me. Again, you four brave men pulled off to "have it out" with my two campanions and myself. This time we got your license tag number before we sped by.

Next, you clever fellows got out and collected rocks from the side of the road to throw so that you wouldn't have to waste any more of your beer on us. Since you cowards didn't stick around to see if you'd killed anyone, I'll tell you the results. You'll be disappointed to know that no one was hurt. One rock hit my friend in the head, but luckily he was wearing his helmet. One rock grazed my back and another hit the frame of my bicycle, leaving a small scratch. In any case, your actions could have resulted in serious injury or death to anyone of us.

As you may already know, we stopped at the Warfield Truck Terminal and phoned the Highway Patrol. They accepted our complaint and advised us not to press charges. They would not reveal to us the name of the person driving the car.

So why am I writing this? Since your outrageous deeds must go by unpunnished, I can at least make this attempt to expose you to your families and friends as the contemptable bullies that you are. I'd like you to know that in addition to the fear, anger and frustration that I feel, I also feel pity for you and for all the people who are exposed to your sick behavior everyday. And I'd like for you to imagine what your life would be like if you were up on criminal homicide charges right now.

School funds

To The Editor:
How can a school district lose $450,000? That's exactly what the school board of Greenwood schools would like to have us taxpayers believe.

Recently the board decided to raise our taxes at Greenwood again. Year before last, our taxes were less than $40. Last year they were over $500. This year they were to raise them 20 cents more per $100 valuation.

Several people met to discuss this with the board and one brave soul decided to do a little investigating. Seems a lot of money was unaccounted for. When this was brought to the attention of the board, they just happened to come up with $450,000 that they had forgotten about. Seems as if a certificate of deposit had been bought and misplaced.

Just how stupid do these people think we are? I would like a complete audit made on school funds for the past several years.

P.S. Instead of our taxes being raised, they are being lowered.

VDS praise

To The Editor:
Midland should be indeed proud of being home for the VDS Racing Team. Not many people in Midland are aware of the incredible accomplishments of VDS this year and the phenomenal success they have had on the major racing circuits.

VDS built six of the engines in this year's Indianapolis 500 and of those six, none had engine failure. The VDS car sponsored by the Uno Corp. finished fourth in the race. That is a fine accomplishment for any racing team but is almost unheard of for one in its first year of racing. They finished third in the Atlanta 500 and did quite well in the Cleveland 500 and won the Michigan 500. Just last week, they again scored high in the ranks with a third place in the Los Angeles Times Budweiser 500.

Count Rudy VonDerStraton, Franz Weis and the VDS team have done a remarkable job over this last year and certainly should have the congratulations of all Midlanders.

Sworn in by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., right, is Dan Evans, former governor of Washington. Evans Monday assumed the seat of Sen. Henry Jackson, who died recently. Evans is accompanied by his wife, Nancy.

Evans takes Jackson's seat as families watch

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Former governor Daniel J. Evans took the oath of office in the Senate chamber yesterday while his family and that of the man he replaces, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, watched solemnly from the gallery.

The brief ceremony came on the heels of 40 minutes of tributes for Jackson from his colleagues in the Senate, who praised Jackson as an uncommon politician and compassionate human being.

Republican Sen. Slade Gorton, recounting Jackson's "fierce" loyalty to the senator Gorton defeated, Democrat Warren G. Mangnuson, told the senators that nevertheless, Jackson within an hour of Gorton's victory announcement offered his assistance to Gorton.

"We never exchanged a harsh word," Gorton said. "The blood of friendship and respect was thicker than the water of partisanship."

Minority leader Robert C. Byrd said, "He realized that Western civilization itself was at stake in this age of totalitarianism."

Jackson learned by viewing the victims in the Nazi Buchenwald concentration camp "how thin the veneer of culture and civilization can be," Byrd said. "He was never afraid to point an accusing finger at Soviet tyranny.'

Majority leader Howard Baker praised Jackson as a man "who knew who he was" and as one who could change the course of debate and national policy. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, credited Jackson with getting early statehood for Alaska and Hawaii.

At a press conference following the ceremony, Evans, who described himself as "awed" at joining the Senate, carefully stepped around questions regarding his view of President Reagan's domestic policies. He is scheduled to meet with the president this morning and said Reagan had called a few days ago to advise him "to land with your feet runnng."

When they were both governors, Evans said, their relationship had been friendly. "We didn't always agree on issues. I don't always agree with my wife, either," he quipped, flashing a grin. He added that he would have been supportive of most of the administration's policies had he been in the Senate and said he believes the budget "must come closer to balance."

"I've always thought it was enough to be called a Republican," Evans said in response to a question about whether his brand of Republicanism is similar to that of Democrat Jackson, who voted in support of Reagan 73 percent of the time.

"My full name is Daniel Jackson Evans. That gives you some clue," he joked.

Reagan courting Hispanic voters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buoyed by indications that his support among Hispanics is growing, President Reagan is cramming six separate events into his schedule this week to mark Hispanic Heritage Week.

Since he began making a broad pitch for the Hispanic vote in the last several months, Republican political strategists say Reagan's popularity among Hispanics has been increasing steadily.

The president received about 30 percent of the Hispanic vote in 1980, when he got less than 10 percent of the black vote.

In preparation for a probable re-election bid, Reagan has been trying to strengthen his political base among all his constituent groups, including Hispanics.

"There's probably not been as good communication with them (Hispanics) as there should have been and the president is making up for lost time," said one Republican political strategist who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name.

But this strategist said the White House considers Hispanics — the fastest-growing minority — to be natural Reagan constituents, which isn't true of blacks.

"Hispanics have the same values that Republicans do for the most part in terms of the big issues: family, education, religion, national defense," said the official.

The president began the week Monday with an appearance before some 400 Hispanics invited to the East Room. He took the occasion to announce his intention to nominate Katherine D. Ortega, 49, a former bank president, to be treasurer of the United States.

AP Laserphoto

Announcing the nomination of Katherine D. Ortega as treasurer of the United States is President Reagan.

"She was the first woman president of a California bank, so you can see that she's being nominated not just because she is Hispanic, but because she is highly qualified," the president said.

If confirmed by the Senate, Ms. Ortega, 49, will succeed Angela M. Buchanan, who is expected to become treasurer of Reagan's re-election campaign.

Today, Reagan was meeting with Hispanic educators. On Wednesday, he is holding a ceremony for his Caribbean Basin plan to provide aid to that troubled region. Later Wednesday, the president meets with the Hispanic labor press and in the evening he addresses the Republican National Hispanic Assembly dinner. On Friday, Reagan commemorates Hispanic service in America's defense.

Aides point out that Reagan's Hispanic support, as measured by public polls, has been increasing for the past two months. One recent poll said his support had risen from the teens to about 30 percent.

There are large numbers of Hispanics in Florida, Texas and California — three important states for the 1984 presidential sweepstakes.

Reagan, who has been courting Hispanics throughout the summer, said Monday he was "delighted by the increased participation of Hispanic Americans in all phases of the political process."

He added there are about 125 Hispanics in government positions "and another 20 or 25 who soon will be. We've appointed them to positions that are not just traditionally Hispanic positions ... And I look forward to the Hispanic community's sound values influencing the course of government and our nation."

It looks like Reagan's campaigning

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is providing the nation with a preview these days of what he will sound like on the 1984 campaign trail, if he seeks re-election.

In 1980, Reagan ran against a firmly entrenched federal bureaucracy.

The hint for 1984? Once Reagan officially announces for reelection he will again be running against the bureaucracy and giving virtually the same speeches he delivered during his successful 1980 bid.

On Monday, the president renewed his call for less federal interference in the average American's life and pledged that the United States will never again "go back to the policies of tax, spend and inflate that brought our country to disaster."

Sounding a familiar theme from his 1980 campaign that Americans had "lost control" of the past 20 years to the rapidly expanding federal government, the president promised that his administrtation's "utmost goal" will be decentralization of the federal establishment.

The president also on Monday kicked off four days wooing Hispanic voters by appointing a Hispanic woman, Katherine Ortega, the first woman president of a California bank, to be the next treasurer of the United States.

Reagan, who says he has no idea why he is having problems with women voters but has been making an all-out effort to court them, made the announcement during an East Room ceremony marking the start of Hispanic Heritage Week which he will observe with a series of appearances.

Reagan also met with the leaders of the National Governors' Association to hear their pleas for additional federal aid to the states and expressions of concern over large federal deficits, some $200 billion this fiscal year alone.

Reagan's speech to the Association of Towns and Townships, a group of some 13,000 towne United States, was viewed as a preview of a standard speech he will deliver if he decides to seek reelection in 1984.

That would include a recitation of the administrations accomplishments in throttling inflation, reducing federal spending and cutting taxes along with a pledge to do more of the same in his second term.

The announcement of Reagan's decision to seek a second term is reportedly slated for late December after he returns from a three week trip to Southeast Asia.

Speaking to the association, Reagan also appealed to the organization to lobby Congress on behalf of his Enterprise Zone program which would offer a package of economic incentives to the business community to locate in disadvantged areas.

Twenty five of the 75 proposed zones for the first three years would be located in rural areas.

In his speech, the president claimed that many of the problems faced by the country today are "results of drifting away from principles that kept our country on a sound footing through most of its history."

"The American system, decentralized and based on guaranteed individual rights, served our country well, yet, in the last two decades or more, something went haywire," he said"

"In the end," the president told members of the associaton, "the growth of federal power complicated our problems and threatened our freedom."

The president said the "biggest resistance to our efforts has been from politicians who simply do not believe that local government is competent to do the job" and that their opposition is based on the notion that the federal bureaucracy has a "monopoly on compassion and efficiency."

As he did in the 1980 campaign, Reagan again called for "a substantial transfer of power from Washington to the local level," even though his primary vehicle for the change — a new federalism proposal — has been scaled back sharply in the face of opposition.

"Decentralization remains one of our utmost goals," the president added.

Conservative group may withdraw support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan may lose the multimillion-dollar backing of a New Right group in the 1984 elections because it is upset he has not taken stronger action against the Soviet Union for the destruction of a Korean airliner.

The National Conservative Political Action Committee is threatening to drop its $5 million campaign in support of Reagan's re-election. The president has not yet formally announced that he will run for re-election next year.

"We are considering withdrawing the independent expenditures on behalf of Reagan...because of our displeasure with Reagan's lack of response to the Soviets," NCPAC spokesman Craig Shirley said.

NCPAC is the first New Right group to threaten specific action to protest Reagan's reaction to the plane attack.

Conservative groups have held rallies over the past 10 days to vent their anger at the Soviets' downing of the Korean airliner in which 269 people, including conservative Rep. Larry P. McDonald, D-Ga., were killed. They have also criticized Reagan, claiming none of the White House's sanctions are strong enough.

The NCPAC governing council will meet in early October to decide whether to abandon its plans for the massive independent expenditures backing Reagan, Shirley said.

Shirley said it was the inclination of NCPAC chief John Dolan to cut off money for Reagan.

St. Louis teachers agree to return; Others striking

By CYNTHIA GREEN
Associated Press Writer

Teacher strikes in five states disrupted classes for 109,000 students today, but the nation's largest walkout came to an end in St. Louis where instructors threatened with mass firings agreed to return to their classrooms.

More than 6,400 teachers were on strike in 21 school districts in Michigan, Illinois, Rhode Island, Washington and Pennsylvania.

In Los Angeles, where classes for 550,000 students were to begin today, the teachers union filed an unfair labor practices action against the city school board Monday.

Judy Solkovits, president of United Teachers of Los Angeles, called the board's approval of a 7.8 percent salary hike for teachers a "union-busting tactic."

The 16,000-member teachers' union, without a contract since July 1982, has demanded a 9.4 percent increase and did not agree to accept the raise granted by the school board.

More than 2,700 teachers in St. Louis agreed Monday to go back to work while negotiations between their union and school officials resume after a week-long break.

The four-day walkout by American Federation of Teachers Local 420 collapsed as school officials threatened to dismiss all 2,700 striking instructors and hire replacements to teach the district's 56,500 students.

St. Louis Superintendent Jerome B. Jones promised "there will be no reprisals" taken against teachers who struck over wages and class sizes.

Classes also were resuming today for 2,735 students in South Kingstown, R.I., after women clerks and aides, who had struck claiming their pay was discriminatory, ratified a new contract. The district's 190 teachers had refused to cross picket lines.

School officials in Pawtucket, R.I., where 8,700 students have been idled, were scheduled to appear in court today to seek an injunction forcing 640 teachers back to work. And a similar session was set for Warwick, R.I., officials, seeking an injunction against 1,000 teachers whose walkout has affected 12,400 pupils.

Strikes by 3,200 teachers in 12 Michigan school districts continued today, affecting 60,050 students. But schools were opening in several areas as settlements were reached in some districts and judges ordered strikers back to work in others.

Among those returning to work in Michigan today or Wednesday because of contract settlements were teachers in Dowagiac, Willow Run, Columbia and Menominee's County North Central district. Strikers in East Detroit, Beecher and Howell faced dismissal if they refuse to return to their jobs.

Two northern Illinois school districts, Grayslake District 127 and Blue Island District 130, were hit by strikes Monday, joining Crete-Monee District 201-U in wage-related walkouts. The three job actions by 550 teachers disrupted classes for 9,000 students.

Rev. Jesse Jackson (left), black civil rights leader and a contender for the Democratic presidential election, meets shopkeeper Oakland Foster at 'Foster's Bakery' in Brixton during his tour of the London area on Monday. Foster opened the bakery six months ago after the building was burned out during the riots two years ago.

Jackson opposes deployment

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson criticized the planned deployment of new U.S-built nuclear missiles in Western Europe as he arrived today in the Netherlands, one of the five NATO countries scheduled to house the missiles.

The civil rights leader is touring several Western European countries to increase his understanding of foreign affairs and mobilize support of U.S. servicemen for his possible candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president.

Jackson told reporters at Amsterdam's Schiphol airport that if NATO nations begin the scheduled deployment in December, "it will not stimulate (arms control) negotiations, it will in fact stimulate the use of the automatic (nuclear) response by the USSR."

KAL gets $26.8 million for jetliner

LONDON (AP) — Lloyd's of London and other insurers paid Korean Air Lines $26.8 million today for the jumbo jet shot down by the Soviets.

Stewart Wrightson Aviation Ltd., Lloyd's brokers, said the payment represented 76.64 percent of the $35 million insured value of the plane.

The remaining 23.36 percent is held by the Oriental Fire and Marine Company of Seoul, South Korea.

The $26,824,000 payment was made against Korean Air Lines' war risk insurance, a statement from the brokers said.

The Boeing 747, its passengers, crew, cargo and baggage were insured for a maximum of $400 million, including $35 million for the plane alone, a Lloyd's spokesman said.

The plane was insured by Oriental Fire and Marine, and under normal practice the South Korean firm had insured itself with eight foreign reinsurance companies.

Relations strained by France's refusal to join agreement

Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — France, as so often in the past, has again chosen to be odd man out of the united front formed by the major Western powers over the shooting down of the South Korean jumbo jet.

To the consternation of American diplomats, President Francois Mitterrand refused to join in a NATO agreement to ban flights by Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, for two weeks as a symbol of protest and repugnance.

The gesture has minimal importance in itself, but France's refusal to act in concert with its allies seems sure to produce new strains with the U.S. at an especially inopportune moment.

U.S. officials are acutely disappointed because Mitterrand's performance seems to them to point to a reversion by the French to their standard attitude of bygone years when they could almost always be counted on to be uncooperative. Under Mitterrand, a previously firm champion of allied strength and unity against the Soviet military threat, this appeared to have changed. But the French actions since the destruction of the Boeing airliner have revived some of the old doubts.

"The moral of this particular tale," said a U.S. diplomat, "is don't rely on the French."

Mitterrand and his foreign minister, Claude Cheysson, have been verbally hard on the Soviets. But their words have in no way matched their deeds.

When the Soviet foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, visited Paris last week, he was treated to a sharp dressing down by both men. But the fact that Gromyko's visit was allowed to take place at all was a sign of France's equivocation.

"Gromyko could stand the tongue-lashing," an American official here pointed out. "The Russians would have been a lot more impressed if his visit had been cancelled. Instead, the French just put it off for 72 hours. That's a tap on the wrist."

Ostensibly, Mitterrand refused to join in the Aeroflot ban because France, alone of the NATO governments, has a special bilateral agreement with Moscow governing civil aviation. It is also their longstanding principle, the French say, not to take "diplomatic initiatives" within the framework of the North Atlantic alliance.

Allied observers regard these as pallid excuses camouflaging more complex motives.

Ever since last spring's Williamsburg summit, Mitterrand has come under attack from left-wing critics, both in his own Socialist party and among his Communist coalition partners, for being too compliant with the views of President Ronald Reagan. Franco-American friction over Chad was interpreted in many quarters as an indication that Mitterrand, heeding his critics, had determined to display his "independence" vis-a-vis Washington.

Soviet seeks British help

LONDON (AP) — The British Foreign Office says a prominent Soviet director who has led the dissident theater movement in his country has sought its help, but refused to say if he had applied for political asylum.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Yuri Lyubimov "has sought assistance and we are in contact with him," but declined to give any other details Monday night. The spokesman declined to be named accordance with British practice.

The Daily Mail newspaper said Lyubimov, 65, was being protected by armed Special Branch police officers from Scotland Yard to foil any attempt by the Soviet KGB secret police to abduct him.

Chargers find defense; nip Chiefs 17-14

AP Laserphoto

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Don Coryell finally discovered a defense capable of clipping the wings of San Diego's high-flying passing game — his own.

And so the Chargers ran for 191 yards on a surprised Kansas City Monday night before finally emerging — thanks to a patented Dan Fouts-led drive — with a 17-14 National Football League victory.

Almost as satisfying as the final score to Coryell was the fact that the Chiefs ran off just 51 plays on offense.

"We just couldn't have our defense on the field for 82 plays like we did last week against the New York Jets," Coryell said.

Despite rolling up almost 500 yards in total offense against the Jets the week before in the season opener, the Chargers came up on the short end of a 41-29 count because their defense was unable to keep up with the break-neck pace.

"As we've been saying, our defense is young and inexperienced, but they're talented and aggressive and they're just going to get better and better and better," Coryell said. "We just decided we had to keep the defense off the field, so we decided we were going to have to run more. If we hadn't been able to run, we naturally would have gone back to the pass."

But the Chargers ran with abandon. James Brooks carried 23 times for 86 yards and Chuck Muncie picked up 110 yards on 27 carries.

Fittingly, the game was decided when Fouts unsheathed his passing arm on a five-play, 80-yard drive capped by a 12-yard touchdown pass to Wes Chandler with 1:45 to play.

"At that point, I didn't care how quickly we scored," Coryell said. "I just wanted to score."

It was a bitter loss for the Chiefs, who were sky-high with their first Monday night national TV appearance in six years and encouraged by a season-opening victory the week before against Seattle.

"We held them to 17 points, and that's not a lot for San Diego," said cornerback Gary Green. "But we just let them run right at us in the second half. They live and die with the pass. We'd shut off any run they've attempted in the past, but today was different. That's what's so disappointing."

Two great defensive stands by the Chiefs were quickly followed by two touchdowns. After Rolf Benirschke kicked a 51-yard first quarter field goal, the Chiefs stopped Brooks for no gain on fourth-and-inches from the Chiefs' 3-yard line. Bill Kenney then went to work moving the Chiefs downfield, and put Kansas City on top 7-3 with a 45-yard touchdown strike to Anthony Hancock.

Muncie's 10-yard run restored the Chargers to a 10-7 lead with 8:26 elapsed in the third period and the Chargers were driving for what figured to be the clincing touchdown when Muncie fumbled and Green recovered in the end zone.

Moments later, Kenney laterelled to wide receiver Carlos Carson, who threw a 48-yard touchdown pass to Henry Marshall, dragging safety Tim Fox the final five yards into the end zone.

All the talk about the Chargers' weak defense had not set well with Fox and his teammates, said the veteran safety.

"If not for two plays, we would have had a shutout," he said. Coryell's plan to keep the defense off the field made sense, he added.

"Obviously, it helped a lot," he said. "When we get in shootout matches we have trouble stopping teams because it's like one long two-minute drill. Some teams will go up and down the field for four quarters til they get in that last two minutes, and that will be the only time they move the ball. And when teams play us and we put so many points on the board, that's what happens to us a lot. It's just the nature of the game. But today, we ran the ball a lot. In turn, they ran the ball a lot. So it wasn't one of those shootouts and our defense played like any other defense. And we played pretty well."

Benirschke's field goal was the 100th of his career, qualifying him for ranking among NFL career kickers and shot him to the top of the list. He missed a field goal later in the game, but his career percentage of 72.9 jumped him ahead of Toni Fritsch's 67.97.

Area schools mull starts

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The early part of a football season is kind of like the early returns in a political race.

It isn't how you start, it's how you finish.

This strategem is being applied by some area coaches for various reasons. In places like Greenwood and Reagan County, the early losses and struggles are part of the overall plan. Owl coach Richard Davis in Big Lake and the Ranger's Joe Longley love a schedule full of heavyweights.

"By playing good teams, we'll develop consistency and the kids get confidence," said Longley after last Friday's 26-6 setback to Wink. "They are getting better and they know it.

"Besides," asks Longley, "What good would it do us to play a bunch of patsies? We're getting ready for district this way."

A wise plan, but tough on the win-loss column in the early going. Both Longley and Davis are looking to bloom in district play, and the Owls were headed in the right direction Friday after beating Sanderson 27-6.

(Area standings, 2B)

Reagan County lost their opener to a very good Crane team, 12-7. But that was with super soph quarterback Bobby Gunnels hurting. Gunnels is feeling just fine, thank you, and because of that Davis is smiling. And he should be, as Gunnels directed the Owls to an uncharacteristic ground wrecking of the Eagles.

Gunnels is noted for his arm, but the Owls ran the ball for their win last week. The Owls now have the unenviable task of taking on Iraan, a pre-season favorite that has stumbled to 0-2 in 1983.

Other coaches are taking the low road in notoriety for other reasons. Slow starts either indicate long seasons are around the corner or that the team is building for a late rush.

Rankin coach Dwayne Turner is hoping for the latter. The Red Devils have been mostly green this year, and have yet to score. After an opening week blowout, the Devils were embarrassed in their home opener by Sterling City, 29-0.

McCamey is taking kindly to the new regime of Buster Leaf. Leaf, coaching last year at New Deal, surprised most of West Texas by leading the Badgers past a stunned Iraan team, 32-12. That game was at Iraan. Last Friday the Badgers feasted on Midland High's Junior Varsity, and the results were convincing. McCamey and MHS were scoreless after one, but the backfield duo of quarterback Ray Zarate and fullback Robert Day erupted in the second quarter when the Badgers scored 23 points. MHS' junior 'Dogs threw six interceptions and lost 36-0.

McCamey hosts Rankin Friday in the Upton County Championship.

Stanton's Battlin Buffs were rebuffed by a rugged Coahoma team last week, 13-11. The Buffs fell behind 13-3, then rallied to cut the gap close. But Coahoma held off the rally. Stanton's record leveled at 1-1.

Lamesa made some happiness in the drought-ridden lands north of Midland. The Tornadoes, winners only once in the last 21 games, totally dominated Brownfield, 34-0. The Tors new head coach Clyde Noonkester nabbed his first win at the helm in Lamesa, but faces a tough challenge Friday when Andrews visits.

The Mustangs are fresh from a 25-20 victory over Midland High. Andrews' new head man is David Visentine, and he will face the Tors twice this year. Andrews hosts Lamesa Nov. 11 in a rare home-and-home football series.

One other team is off to a fast start. Crane is now 2-0 after a solid performance in Marfa, besting the Shorthorns 28-6.

Huskers, OU top AP poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas remained 1-2-3 today in the Associated Press college football poll, while Notre Dame moved into fourth place and Penn State's winless defending national champions dropped out of the Top Twenty for the first time since 1979.

In addition, Arizona climbed from 11th place to seventh, its highest ranking ever and only the second time the Wildcats have cracked the Top Ten since the AP poll began in 1936. Arizona did not appear in the Top Twenty from 1976 through last season.

Nebraska, which crushed Wyoming 56-20, received 51 of 56 first-place votes and 1,114 of a possible 1,120 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Oklahoma, which opened its season with a 27-14 victory over Stanford, received two first-place votes and 1,034 points, while Texas, which gets under way this Saturday at Auburn, received two first-place ballots and 964 points.

Notre Dame's 52-6 rout of Purdue enabled the Irish to move up from fifth to fourth with 909 points. They passed Auburn, which slipped from fourth to fifth with 903 points despite a 24-3 triumph over Southern Mississippi. The Tigers also received the remaining first-place vote.

Ohio State, a 31-6 winner over Oregon, moved up from seventh to sixth with 756 points, followed by Arizona with 667 points. The Wildcats trounced Utah 38-0.

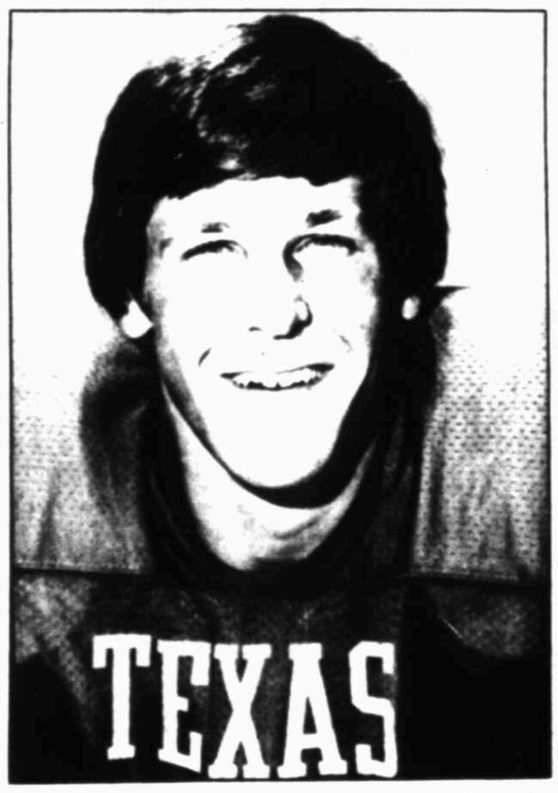

Michigan, which was hard-pressed to beat Washington State 20-17, slipped from sixth to eighth with 624 points. Rounding out the Top Ten are Florida State with 623 points and North Carolina with 622. Florida State jumped from 12th to ninth with a 40-35 victory over LSU, while North Carolina, which defeated Memphis State 24-10, fell from eighth to 10th.

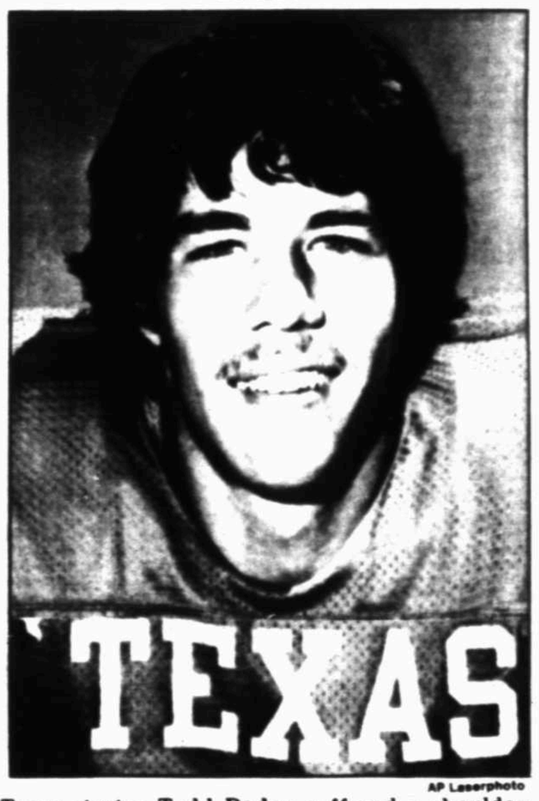

The Second Ten consists of Georgia, Alabama, Iowa, Southern Cal, Florida, Washington, Maryland, Southern Methodist, Pittsburgh and West Virginia.

Last week, it was Arizona, Florida State, LSU, Alabama, Southern Methodist, Iowa, Maryland, Florida, Washington and Penn State.

LSU's loss to Florida State dropped the Tigers out of the Top Twenty, while Penn State suffered its second straight setback, losing to Cincinnati 14-3.

Pitt and West Virginia, both 2-0, moved into the rankings for the first time this season. Pitt walloped Temple 35-0 and West Virginia pounded Pacific 48-7.

America's Cup questions begin settlement today

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Is Australia II the breakthrough boat that will seize the America's Cup that has been U.S. property since before the Civil War?

Does the more traditional Liberty have enough all-around strengths to stave off one of the strongest challenges to America's 132-year dominance?

After a summer filled with competition and controversy, the first few moments of today's opening race of the best-of-seven final series may answer those questions.

"It would be interesting for the first 10 minutes" to see which boat has the edge, says Liberty skipper Dennis Conner.

"Give us 20 to 30 minutes with average wind and you'll know pretty quickly if someone is getting blown out of the water," says Warren Jones, executive director of the Australia II syndicate.

Since trials to determine the two finalists began June 18, Liberty raced 50 times, compiling a 34-16 record, and Australia II, in 54 races, amassed a 48-6 mark.

But they've never measured their relative strengths in the same race, making the beginning of today's battle especially revealing.

Australia II, an exceptionally maneuverable boat skippered by John Bertrand, won most of its starts during the foreign trials and excelled on the first, fourth and sixth legs, which go upwind. Its crew was happy to stay even going downwind on the second, third and fifth legs of the six legs of the races over a triangular 24.3-mile course on Rhode Island Sound.

Moderate northeast winds of about 15 knots and scattered showers were predicted for Rhode Island Sound today. The winds were expected to pick up Wednesday.

Australia II, a light 12-meter yacht with a radical winged keel, performs best in moderate winds. A stronger breeze would favor the longer and heavier Liberty.

Both sides contend, however, that they can do well in all winds.

"We are born and bred in 25 knots," Jones said Monday. "As kids we all learn to bail boats out because we spend most of our time upside down."

Liberty sail trimmer John Marshall said that boat was chosen over stablemate Freedom because while Freedom may be "the best 12-meter in the world in strong winds," Liberty does better over a wide range of wind speeds.

He said that in recent practices in heavy winds, Liberty beat Freedom, the 1980 Cup winner under Conner's helmsmanship.

The two finalists spent the past week practicing. Liberty was chosen Sept. 2 over Courageous to defend the Cup. Defender was eliminated earlier.

U.S. vessels have won the previous 25 matches in the series.

Australia II got the nod Sept. 5 with a 4-1 triumph over Victory '83 of Great Britain in a best-of-seven series that capped foreign trials that began with seven boats.

Neither finalist practiced Monday. Instead, crews sanded hulls, prepared sails and went over final details. Conner played golf.

Conner planned to use the instruments and at least two sails from Courageous.

"We have not been really happy with the instruments" Liberty used in the trials, Marshall said. "So we're using Courageous' instrument package. That's been a big improvement for us."

Several thousand spectator boats were expected to ring the course and could kick up a swell that would tend to hurt Australia II more than Liberty.

"I'm sure their keel is going to work very well in certain conditions," Liberty designer Johan Valentijn said Monday. "It's going to limit them very much downwind and in any kind of a chop."

He said that after seeing the keel Friday night during Australia II's required reinspection he became more confident of his boat's chances.

Akers undecided on Texas QB

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas coach Fred Akers, guarding his quarterback plans for the Auburn game on Saturday, says, "If you're asking me if I'm capable of lying about my quarterback situation — yes."

Akers responded that way Monday when asked if he already knew who would replace starter Todd Dodge, who suffered a shoulder separation in practice Friday.

Akers acknowledged Monday that he had decided to start Dodge before he was hurt although he had not announced a decision.

"Anyone watching our practices saw he was always with our No. 1 unit. ... There was not much question," Akers told a news conference.

Dodge's replacement apparently will be Rick McIvor, who was injured last year and missed spring training with grade problems, or two-year punt returner Rob Moerschell.

Akers said four or five quarterbacks might make the trip to Auburn, Ala., for the regionally televised game between the two top 10 teams.

"Rick has had the biggest adjustment after not playing for a year, and he had a setback about two weeks ago when he had to take a week off because an infection he had in his wrist and elbow and that hurt him," Akers said. "Rob has been in tune with the things we've been doing last year, last spring and all fall.

"They're both working hard, and both have done some good things, but neither one has been as consistent as Todd Dodge."

"What we've got now is a real scramble," Akers said.

He said, however, he would not shuttle quarterbacks, and when he was asked if he might alternate quarterbacks in any manner, he said, "I'm not planning on it, and I'm not planning on not doing it. I'm not telling you my plans."

Akers also disclosed Monday that starting middle linebacker Jeff Leiding had cut his lower leg on a rock tubing in the Guadalupe River on Saturday, and 16 stitches were required to close the wound, making him doubtful for the Auburn game.

Leiding's injury was news to most — if not all — of the reporters, but Akers said when he talked by telephone Monday to a quarterback club in Alabama the first question asked was how was Leiding's injury.

"They probably know which leg (was hurt), and I don't," said Akers. "They probably know (whether the quarterback will be) Moerschell or McIvor.

"I think either one of those guys would welcome the opportunity. We're going to work them out and judge them and make a decision about which one it ought to be."

Akers said doctors had told him Dodge would be out from three to five weeks, but "I've just got a gut feeling he'll be back before too long."

However, he said, there is "no glimmering hope" he will play against Auburn.

Other starters out of the Auburn game with injuries are tight end Bobby Micho and wide receiver Ronnie Mullins.

Martina thinking big after easy U.S. Open victory

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the U.S. Open singles championship is hers, Martina Navratilova admits there are more mountains to climb.

"The Grand Slam is definitely in my mind," she said Monday, basking in the glory of her first singles title at America's premier tennis tournament. "The Australian Open is the next big stepping stone."

Then there's the biggest mountain of all, one even she feels she cannot climb.

"One goal would be to go the entire year without losing," she said, a big grin spreading across her face from just the thought of the challenge. "I probably would retire if I had a year like that. It's a good thing Kathy (Horvath) won at Paris or I might be retiring after this year."

Horvath upset Navratilova in the French Open in May, handing the left-hander her only loss of 1983. Since January 1982, she has won every tournament she has entered except four, and has reached the final in those, with the exception of this year's French Open, while posting a phenomenal 156-4 record.

Her victory last Saturday in the women's singles, when she demolished Chris Evert Lloyd 6-1, 6-3, plus her victory in the women's doubles with Pam Shriver and a $500,000 bonus from Playtex boosted her career earnings to more than $6.1 million, the most of any tennis player, male or female.

In the men's singles final Sunday, Jimmy Connors overcame a sore toe, an upset stomach and a big-serving foe to grab his fifth singles crown and collect $120,000, the same as Navratilova. His 100th career victory — a 6-3, 6-7, 7-5, 6-0 decision over Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia — increased his career earnings to $5,002,612, tops among the men.

"Technically I am a better player" than she was when she lost to Tracy Austin in her only other trip to the final at the National Tennis Center, in 1981, Navratilova said. "Those forehand volleys I missed were because I had terrible style — that swing was out of the East Bronx."

Then began the hard work, she said, with her first coach, Renee Richards, and her present coach, Mike Estep, and the conditioning program set up by her closest friend, Nancy Lieberman, former All-American basketball player at Old Dominion University.

"It's a full-day regime. I begin each day by stretching," she said. "Then I am on the court practicing for 4-5 hours. Then I have a two-hour lunch break.

"I lift weights for 2-2½ hours and run for two or three miles before dinner."

It's an arduous regime, but one that has carried her to the top, making her the first left-hander to win the U.S. women's title since Evelyn Sears in 1907.

"Everything I do, everyone else can do," Navratilova said. "They can get stronger if they work at it."

Combining grace, quickness and power, Navratilova even has impressed her victims.

"She's a better athlete," Lloyd was quick to admit after suffering her worst-ever defeat in a U.S. Open tournament, an event she has won six times and has reached at least the semifinals in each of her 13 appearances. "She's very quick with her hands and she's got a versatile game."

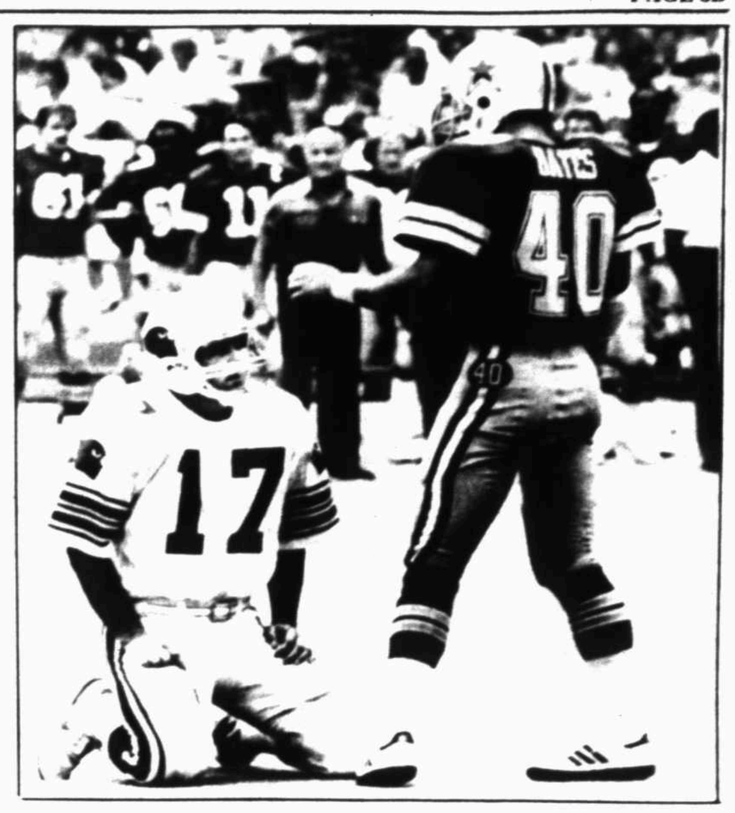

After capturing her fourth U.S. Open doubles crown — her first with Shriver — Navratilova watched Connors grab his second consecutive men's singles title with his typical gritty, street-fighter style over an opponent who appeared to have the bigger weapons.

Connors, however, had the bigger heart.

In swirling winds and sweltering 100-degree heat, Lendl appeared in control of the match, although Connors had won the opening set. Then, with the first two sets split and the Czechoslovakian right-hander serving for the third set, he double-faulted at set point.

It was the opening Connors needed, and he pounced on it.

Lendl didn't win another game, as Connors ripped off 10 consecutive games for the title.

Cauthen, British jocks suspended by Jockey Club

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

LONDON (AP) — British jockeys Lester Piggott, Willie Carson, Greville Starkey and Paul Cook, and America's Steve Cauthen, have two things in common.

All five are top-class riders and all five have been suspended for a variety of knocks and bumps during a rough-and-tumble British flat-race season.

So far this year, the Jockey Club, which runs horse racing in Britain, has imposed more than 30 suspensions, compared with 21 last year and just seven in 1978.

"There is no doubt that jockeys are getting picked up this season for things they would have gotten away with before," said Geoffrey Summers, secretary of the Jockeys Association.

"Jockeys have been suspended in some cases for what can only be described as minor infringements like brushing or holding the whip in the wrong hand."

Summers, whose organization represents some 140 flat-race jockeys and 200 steeplechase riders, said many of his members were increasingly concerned at the severity of sentence.

"At the height of the season, a jockey can earn almost 200 pounds ($300) a day. If he is suspended for 10 days, that means he has lost 2,000 pounds ($3,000) without taking into account any prize money he might have won," said Summers.

He said the apparent clamp-down by the Jockey Club has sent a wave of fear running through the sport.

"It has got to the stage where a jockey, for fear of being suspended ahead of a major meet, will decide not to go through a gap in the field to win a race for fear of being banned."

Carson and Cauthen each have been banned twice this season, losing a total of 14 and 20 days' riding, respectively.

After his first suspension in June, when he got 12 days for reckless riding, Cauthen failed to get the punishment reduced on appeal despite stressing his previously good record both here and in the United States.

"The stewards have been very harsh this year, especially with the length of suspensions," said Cauthen, of Walton, Ky.

"I feel I was ridiculously treated both times. It's very easy to judge what is bad riding from the sidelines, but we ride the horses and circumstances cause a lot of the problems. With 20 horses in a race, there's bound to be some bumping and bruising."

Cauthen said a meeting had already taken place between his association and Jockey Club officials to discuss the situation.

"They say they are only going by the rule book. But we have to get together and create a set of rules we can all live by and try to understand what is expected of one another."

Jockey Club spokeswoman Monica Dixon denied there had been a deliberate get-tough campaign or that any specific instructions had been issued to stewards at British race courses.

She added: "The introduction of new video patrol units has greatly improved the stewards' view of a race. They can now spot infringements that might hitherto have gone undetected.

"But that's the only difference."

In the latest suspension imposed in early September, Greville Starkey was banned for 13 days for reckless riding. First penalized in 1957, Starkey has since lost 91 days in the saddle, 80 of them in the past four years.

"The Jockey Club has a duty to protect lives in a very dangerous sport," said racing broadcaster and journalist John McCririck.

"But the jockeys are getting very worried. The dividing line between winning and not transgressing the rules is getting thinner. Jockeys wonder these days whether they can win and still get past the stewards."

McCririck also questioned the justice in disqualifying the horse — or relegating it to last place — after an infringement by the rider.

"There is a considerable lobby of opinion which says the horse first past the post should always win.

"When Lester (Piggott) was banned for five days for careless riding on Vacarme in July, the interference was minimal and the horse won on merit," he said.

Billy Cannon, a former All-American and Heisman Trophy winner at LSU, leaves a van to enter the Federal Correctional Institution in Texarkana.

Sad day in sports: Cannon enters prison

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Billy Cannon, a former Louisiana State University football hero, has begun serving a five-year sentence in federal prison for plotting a $6 million counterfeiting operation.

Cannon, a Baton Rouge, La., orthodontist, arrived at the minimum-security prison in Texarkana on Monday.

U.S. marshals said because Cannon cooperated with authorities, he was allowed to travel unescorted to the prison.

Cannon, 46, received the maximum punishment after pleading guilty to charges he masterminded a scheme to print and distribute $6 million in counterfeit $100 bills — which the government called one of the largest fake money schemes in U.S. history.

He will have to serve almost two years before becoming eligible for parole.

Cannon won the Heisman Trophy at LSU in 1958. After a pro football career, returned to Baton Rouge to become a dentist.

He will return to Baton Rouge to testify at the Oct. 11 trial of four co-defendants who have pleaded innocent. Cannon also could be called to testify in the cases of two co-defendants who asked that their sentences be reduced.

At 39, Jim Hart creeps into NFL record books

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Jim Hart's name is sprinkled throughout the National Football League record books, usually in the company of Johnny Unitas and Fran Tarkenton, two other quarterbacks accorded deification by their legions of coast-to-coast fans.

But outside St. Louis, Hart is little more than another name on a roster, this despite 18 seasons in this business, more than 5,000 passes, more than 2,500 completions, more than 30,000 yards ...

"I don't put myself in their category," Hart said, "even though the numbers are there. It's obvious you need to win championships to get the national recognition, the exposure, and we've not done that. Or if you don't do that, then you've got to be at least a little controversial, and I'm not that. I don't lament my situation at all. It's been a fun time."

It wasn't fun Sunday. The Dallas Cowboys were in his face all day. Five sacks. Four interceptions. A 10-0 lead vanished before halftime and became a 34-17 loss. The locker room was a tomb.

"It's times like this that I wonder why I'm still around," Hart said, slouching at his locker. "This isn't any fun. No, let me temper that. It's fun out there. This atmosphere in here, it stinks."

Even getting buried in his own backfield has its enjoyable moments, he said. "You don't necessarily look at it that way at the time, but when you look back it later ..."

He paused. "It's fun. It's fun to get knocked down every once in a while. I'd just as soon the ball be gone when I'm hit. That's the fun of it, when you throw the ball and get knocked down and the guy looks at you and wonders where the ball is and you kind of smile and say, 'Gone,' and you hear him mutter an expletive. That's when you get a little smile on your face and say, 'This is fun.'"

It's been a while since Hart and the Cardinals were flying high. That was in the mid-1970s, when Don Coryell was the coach. But he became disenchanted with the mid-west and with the front-office meddling and quit after the 1977 season.

When he was the boss in St. Louis, Hart said, the team invariably found itself behind going into the fourth quarter — but absolutely certain that its was going to win. The players knew someone would come up with the Big Play.

"We need to become believers in ourselves again," he said. "We need to get that feeling we used to have, rather than the feeling that can develop — and I'm not saying it's prevalent now, but it can happen when you start losing too many games — where guys start worrying to themselves, 'What's going to go wrong next?'"

MHS Boosters meet; Broken Hills wins polo

The Midland High Booster Club will meet tonight at the school's old Library. Everyone involved in athletics at MHS is welcome to attend.

Parents of the varsity and junior varsity teams are especially encouraged to attend.

Midland Polo

Broken Hills edged Wilson Ranch 4-3 Sunday in polo action at the Four-Goal Tournament at Midland Polo Club.

Kelly Beal scored twice, Herb Haslem added another and Captain Ed Little got a tally to account for the Broken Hills scoring. Wilson's Byron Wilson scored twice, and Jesse Torres scored once.

For the losers, James Howell and Henry Musselman were shut out. Broken Hills' Tim Whalen could not score.

The Midland Polo Club will stage a six-goal tourney this Sunday at 2 p.m.

Yary: Viking-ex Tarkenton not a team player

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Former Minnesota Vikings quarterback Fran Tarkenton "threw the ball a lot to get into the record books at the expense of the team," says former teammate Ron Yary, a six-time all-pro offensive tackle.

Yary voiced his criticism of Tarkenton in interviews with Charley Walters, a St. Paul Pioneer Press sports writer.

Tarkenton, now in broadcasting, holds several National Football League records. He has the most passing yards, 47,003; most consecutive seasons passing for more than 1,000 yards, 18; most consecutive seasons of passing for more than 2,000 yards, 15; most passing attempts, 6,469; most completions, 3,686, and most passing touchdowns, 342.

But Yary, who blocked for Tarkenton seven seasons, was not impressed. In his opinion, Tarkenton was "a total disappointment as a football player."

Yary said he believed the Vikings would have won their 1976 Super Bowl game against Oakland if Coach Bud Grant had started Bob Lee, also a Minnesota quarterback. Tarkenton started and the Vikings lost 32-14.

Yary, a seven-year Pro Bowl player who started 13 seasons for the Vikings, was interviewed two years ago while playing his 14th and final season for Minnesota. His career ended last season with the Los Angeles Rams.

Yary said Tommy Kramer, who succeeded Tarkenton as the Vikings' top quarterback, was the best one Minnesota ever had.

Walters wrote that he tape recorded the interview but withheld the story at the time, at Yary's request. Yary said he'd go into details when his career ends. Recently, the reporter wrote, he telephoned Yary at his Cerritos, Calif., photography business, reminded him of the tape and Yary expanded on his views.

"This is not only Ron Yary speaking but many players who may not express themselves publicly," the former tackle was quoted as saying. "Privately they feel this way. To me, Francis was not a good team player; he was not interested in the outcome of the team."

"When he came to the team, division began," Yary said of Tarkenton. "Guys did not have the mutual respect for one another they had before, and it got worse."

With Joe Kapp quarterbacking the Vikings from 1967 through 1969, Yary said, the team had less talent "but the players played above their skills because they had so much respect for one another."

Walters reported that repeated attempts to reach Tarkenton at his Atlanta business office were unsuccessful.

Manic shocks NY Cosmos in NASL playoffs

MONTREAL (CP) — Whether there was pressure on them or not, Montreal Manic star goal scorer Dragan Vujovic and netminder Ed Gettemeier came through to lead their team to a 1-0 victory over the New York Cosmos.

It was one of the biggest upsets in North American Soccer League history as the Manic eliminated the defending Soccer Bowl champion Cosmos from playoff action.

"I have never been under so much pressure," said Gettemeier moments after Vujovic's goal in the second round of a shootout gave Montreal a sweep of the best-of-three quarterfinal series.

Gettemeier made several sparkling saves throughout the game and turned aside three penalty kicks to keep his team in the game.

"A loss in this game would have been very difficult to accept."

Vujovic, for his part, said he felt no pressure as he was getting set to score the goal. Each team had scored two goals in the shootout to that point after failing to score in regulation time and a 15-minute overtime period.

"Pressure doesn't bother me at all," Vujovic said. "Pressure bothers young players, but when you've been playing 15 years..."

Vujovic deked Cosmos' netminder Hubert Birkenmeier and fired into an empty net to the delight of 20,726 fans at Olympic Stadium.

"I saw that he was coming out quite a bit and I tested him with a couple of fakes and then I went around him," he added. "No problem."

New York Coach Julio Mazzei said his players stuck to their game plan, "but unfortunately we didn't take advantage of our opportunities."

Montreal didn't get a shot on goal until the 33rd minute of the game.

"But we didn't lose the series tonight, we lost it last week when the Manic came into New York and beat us," Mazzei said, referring to New York's 4-2 loss last Monday night.

He questioned whether the five seconds allowed players to shoot in a shootout had elapsed before Vujovic fired his winning goal.

"The clocks were doing strange things all night. I think the league should look into it.

"But I don't want to take anything away from the desire and effort of the Manic and I wish them all the best in the next series."

Cosmos' defenseman Bob Iarusci said the loss was difficult to accept.

"We played a heck of a season, 30 games to get the home advantage. But that's North American sports — effort is not always rewarded," said Iarusci.

Oil price increase possible, not likely

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington post News Service

The worldwide oil glut is vanishing, demand for petroleum products is strengthening and members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are overrunning their self-imposed 6-month-old oil production limit by about 5 percent.

And in Jidda last week, Qatar's oil minister told a Saudi newspaper that "There are indicators of an increase in oil demand which will create the likelihood of raising prices."

These developments are the kind of rumbling that often precedes a hike in OPEC crude oil prices. Yet, with a routine meeting of the cartel's market-monitoring committee a few days away and speculation growing that a meeting of all 13 ministers may soon follow, there is little apprehension among those who follow petroleum markets that six months of stability in OPEC's crude-oil prices is near an end.

"Right now, a price increase would not be in OPEC's self-interest," says Larry Goldstein, executive vice president of the New York-based Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, reflecting a common view. The consensus is that the near-collapse in crude-oil prices earlier this year impressed OPEC with its own vulnerability and rendered it much less willing to wield its dominance of the world oil market.

The experience may not have changed OPEC permanently, experts say, but it appears to have modified its near-term approach to world markets — a development that bodes well for the fledgling economic recovery. "They got pretty damned scared, and they learned a lesson," says Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., an economic and consulting firm in New York.

THE EVIDENCE of change is in the unexpected self-discipline the member countries have exhibited in sticking to the price levels and quotas agreed to in March. An earlier agreement reached in 1982 died within three months, a victim of widespread cheating by individual nations.

Although member countries now are believed to be producing perhaps 1 million barrels a day above the ceiling, industry officials attribute the overruns to genuine demand rather than to efforts to grab a bigger piece of the common pie, and add that even this deviation from the March agreement has occurred relatively recently.

Meanwhile, the neediest member nations are in better shape today than they were earlier this year, taking further pressure off the organization to raise prices.

If an alteration in the March pact comes, most experts believe it will be in the 17.5 million barrel quota, although there may be some discussion on changing the differentials between the prices of light and heavy crudes. The consensus is that OPEC will raise its ceiling to 18.5 million barrels (there are 42 gallons to a barrel) to reflect the actual production levels prevailing today.

The four-member market-monitoring committee that meets Thursday has no authority to change the quotas or prices, but it may recommend action to the full 13-member body. At least two industry publications have reported that a full meeting already is in the works, although an OPEC spokesman in Vienna denied that any preparations are under way.

Oxy selling Permian Corporation

From Staff and Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum Corp. announced Monday that it will sell The Permian Corporation, its wholly-owned crude oil purchasing subsidiary, to First City Financial Corp. of Canada for $325 million in cash and notes.

The sale is part of Oxy's continuing effort to reduce the debt it incurred when it acquired Cities Service Co. last year. The giant energy conglomerate is trimming its crude oil refining, marketing and transportation segments.

It recently sold those portions of Cities Service to Southland Corporation.

Company spokesmen said no significant changes will be made in the Permian Corporation's activities in Texas or Midland. They said First City Financial, based in Vancouver, plans to run Permian Corp. "just as it has been run."

"No change whatsoever in Permian's operations is anticipated," said W.D. Kleine, Permian's executive vice president in Midland. "Midland has always been an important part of Permian's operations and it will continue to be."

About 150 employees are located in Permian's Midland area out of 2,200 employees company-wide. The crude oil purchasing firm has offices throughout the Permian Basin, in Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Wyoming. Headquarters is in Houston.

Kleine said there would be no change in present management in Midland and no chnage in Permian's two local subsidiaries, Western Oil Transportation Co. and Permian Pipeline Co.

First City Financial, whose major shareholder is the wealthy Belzberg family, already owns an oil-and-gas company that operates out of Calgary, but the acquisition of Occidental's Houston-based Permian Corp. subsidiary will be its first U.S. energy venture, a spokesman in the firm's Vancouver, Canada, headquarters said.

First City will acquire substantially all the assets of Permian. Occidental will get $275 million in cash, a $50 million promissory note and an undetermined amount of cash from the sale of existing Permian crude oil inventory valued between $50 million and $60 million.

Two wholly owned Permian subsidiaries — Western Oil Transportation Co. and Permian Pipeline Co. — are included in the sale. Excluded are certain unspecified assets. The sale is expected to close in November.

Acquired by Los Angeles-based Occidental in 1966, Permian buys, transports and sells crude oil primarily in the southern, southwestern and northwestern areas of the United States. Its assets include about 5,200 miles of crude oil pipelines, a fleet of 600 tanker trucks, and sales station facilities that can store about 5.3 million barrels of crude oil.

In a company press release, Occidental Chairman Armand Hammer termed Permian a "top-notch company" but said it no longer fit into the independent oil company's long-term strategy of focusing on oil-and-gas exploration and production, coal, agribusiness and selected chemicals.

Occidental went heavily into debt last year to buy Cities Service Co. for $4 billion in order to acquire domestic oil and gas sources. It has been divesting itself of unwanted subsidiaries ever since in order to narrow its focus and reduce its debt, which already has been lowered by $1.7 billion, according to a company spokesman.

First City is an integrated financial services company with assets of more than $2.4 billion and equity of $220 million in subsidiaries in Canada and the United States. Recent U.S. acquisitions include New York Hanseatic Corp., a dealer in U.S. government securities. Belzberg family members separately own U.S. assets they valued between $300 million and $400 million in 1981.

Permian Corp. began modestly

Walter R. Davis moved to Midland in 1952. Working out of a pickup truck with a tank strapped on the back, he began Western Oil Transportation Company Inc. A few years later, Western was a subsidiary of Davis' new company, The Permian Corporation. No one thought much of the value of a company solely devoted to oil transport back then.

And yet, today Permian is selling 403,000 barrels of oil a month, five percent more than in 1982. The improvement was despite a generally depressed crude market. Its fleet of 600 tankers logged more than 45 million miles in '82.

It moves 268,000 barrels of oil by truck and and 164,000 barrels of oil by pipeline every day. Its profits have increased steadily over the years. The Permian Corp. had sales over $5.2 billion in 1981.

The Permian Corp. was acquired by Occidental Petroleum in 1966 in what would be called a 'friendly' takeover by today's standards. Davis stayed in management — remaining as Permian's chief executive and a senior vice president of Oxy until 1970.

The Permian Corp. subsidiary of Oxy is being sold as part of amajor asset sales program to stem debt from Oxy's acquisition of Cities Service Co.

The First City Financial Corp., Vancouver, which is buying Permian Corp., is a company with interests in Canadian oil — this is its first U.S. energy venture.

First City told the Wall Street Journal "As a result of this acquisition, we will have a very strong position in the U.S. (as) Permian is one of the nation's leading independent marketers and transporters of crude oil."

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said "No matter who owns it, The Permian Corporation will remain an important outlet for all of its consumers, especially independent oil operators."

Walter Davis, Thompson remembered, "Worked out of his truck, making a little money — then he got to a point where he could buy crude, competing with the major oil companies.

"His company was an avenue for the independent to sell his oil to someone else," Thompson said, and get it to the Gulf Coast and other refinery centers.

It still provides that service. Its current truck-terminal-pipeline system covers all the major production areas, with field offices in Hobbs, Brownfield, Big Lake, Lubbock, Monahans, Farmington, Rankin, and Casper, Wyo.

There are 150 people employed by the company in Midland.

MGF debt restructured

MGF Oil Corp., Midland, said Monday that it has completed restructuring of approximately $238.6 million in debt. Separately, the company said it has closed an exchange offer for its 14 1/2 percent senior subordinated debentures.

"We are now pretty much out of the tunnel," said executive vice president W. Phillip Marcum. "We are focusing more on our operations." Marcum said 31 wells are currently being drilled on MGF acreage; the company itself is operating five drilling rigs.

The old 14 1/2 percent debentures were due in the year 2001. An aggregate $54.118 million — 72.2 percent of the total principal amount — was tendered to the company in the $75 million issue.

MGF expects the issuance of new debentures, common stock, and warrants to take place in the next few days, for each 14 1/2 percent holder who exchanged.

The company also announced it has paid the accrued interest due Sept. 9 to holders of the debentures who chose not to exchange.

These debentures were the subject of a suit in August when MGF missed an interest payment. Three bond holders unsuccessfully petitioned the United States Bankruptcy Court in San Antonio to force MGF into bankruptcy.

The exchange offer for the 14 1/2 percent debentures became the cornerstone of MGF's successful effort to convince the court the company could stay in business without going through bankruptcy.

Holders of MGF's $15 million-principal 10 1/8 percent convertible notes due in 1991 have sold out to a third party, the company said. That party has agreed to the same exchange plan as the 14 1/2 percent holders.

The additional exchange offer by MGF includes a 6 percent debenture due in 1988 and 120 shares of common stock for each $1,000 in principal amount.

The holders tendered the 10 1/8 percent notes to MGF for exchange. Closing and issuance of the new securities is expected soon.

MGF has now completed arrangements to restructure its $238.6 million in debt. In addition, the company has agreements in principle, with closing pending in the next few weeks, on $23.1 million in other debt.

Debts are also being negotiated with creditors to whom $4.2 million is owed. MGF is planning to refinance about $34.8 million of its 8 1/4 percent convertible subordinated debentures, the terms of the deal as yet undetermined.

Marcum said the last debt to be restructured is $35 million in Eurobonds, the most junior of all the company's debt. That process can begin now that the rest of the company's debts have been re-tooled, he said.

Jerry's offers quality, efficiency with Payne

Although summer is almost gone, we are still experiencing the dying fury of the infamous West Texas heat. How has your summer been? If you have been "sweating it out," now is the time to do something drastic about the heat. Whether you are just living day to day, hoping that you can squeeze another month or two of life out of your old air conditioner, or whether you are building a new house, it is not too late to install cool, energy-efficient Payne air conditioning. Jerry's Sheet Metal, 700 N. Fort Worth in Midland, has a complete line of Payne air conditioners, combined with years of experience in helping Midlanders "beat the heat."

Payne has been manufacturing quality products since 1914, giving customer satisfaction priority over all other considerations. Caring for the customer has been the primary goal for Payne, and this goal has been adopted by Jerry Riel, owner of Jerry's Sheet Metal. Jerry has chosen Payne as his brand because of their concern for customer satisfaction and also because they believe that their products should be economical as well as efficient.

This dedication to economy and efficiency has resulted in the design and construction of high efficiency home comfort products which use less energy. This gives you the comfort of knowing that, with Payne air conditioning, your fuel bills will be kept within reasonable limits, even as energy costs spiral.

Besades efficient and economical, Payne air conditioners are quiet. In fact, Payne air conditioners are so quiet that you may not even know that they are running, except for the cool atmosphere in your home.

And even though the heat is still in full swing, winter is creeping up, and will arrive faster than you can say "Christmas." Jerry's Sheet Metal also carries the Payne heat pump for efficient heating of your home during the winter months ahead.

For more information on how you can join the list of cool, satisfied customers, call Jerry Riel at Jerry's Sheet Metal. Jerry's is open from 8am to 5pm, Monday through Friday. Jerry will make you a good deal and then stand behind his product with expert installation and with a fine staff of professional, factory-trained staff.

Jerry Riel, owner of Jerry's Sheet Metal, 700 N. Fort Worth, offers the best air conditioner available with a full line of Payne air conditioners. Call Jerry's for more information on Payne.

Cook's Pantry offers good home cooking at reasonable prices

The staff at Cook's Pantry is eagerly waiting to serve you a delicious, wholesome, home-cooked meal at a price you can afford. Why bother to cook your meals when Cook's Pantry can do it for you? Cook's Pantry is located at 2001 N. Big Spring in Midland. They are open 6am to 10am, and 11 am to 2pm, Monday through Friday, and 6am to 11am Saturdays. Call-in orders may be made at 683-1463.

If you have an appetite for a good, home-cooked meal, there are several things that you can do. One would be to take the time and effort to decide what sounds good, go to the grocery store if you do not already have that food at home, amd then you can begin to prepare your meal. By the time you do all of that, you're just not hungry anymore. A second alternative would be to either use your influences to get an invitation, or else just hope someone asks you over. But that is usually just a blind shot in the dark. Or you could make the intelligent choice and take a short drive to Cook's Pantry, 2001 N. Big Spring in Midland.

Cook's Pantry is now open under the original owners, Chester and Ysleta Stone. Cook's Pantry offers you good, home cooked meals at a reasonable price. Meals are served buffet style, and you are always welcome to come back for seconds. Most foods are made from scratch right in our kitchen, and our foods are so delicious, you would not expect to find them anywhere but in your own kitchen.

For example, most of our soups are made fresh from scratch. There are always at least three meat items on the lunch menu, one of which is alwayspressure-fried chicken. Our mashed potatos are not instant, they are made from real potatos. You will also find an excellent country style gravy every day at Cook's. And our lunch menu changes daily, so you can eat at Cook's Pantry every day without having to worry about eating the same old food day after day. The salad bar is not large, but it is adequate and probably very similar to the salads you make at home. Lunch at Cook's Pantry is served from 11:00 to 2:00, Monday through Friday.

Breakfast at Cook's Pantry is something you definitely won't want to miss. Breakfast includes fresh buttermilk biscuits, hash browns, grits, bacon, and both link and patty sausage. Country gravy is available at breakfast also, along with scrambled eggs, eggs fried to order, and evenpancakes are included with breakfast. Once again at breakfast, as always, second are welcome. And next time you come in, try our fresh home-made cinnamon rolls.Breakfast is served from 6:00 to 10:00, Monday through Friday, and 6:00 to 11:00 on Saturday.Cook's Pantry is closed on Sunday.

Cook's Pantry is conveniently located only a short drive from downtown. The quick buffet service makes it perfect for the businessman. It is extremely easy for you to get from downtown to Cook's Pantry, relax and eat, and make it back to work in less than an hour. Imagine, you can get a break from the fast food syndrome and eat a good, delicious, wholesome home-cooked meal for lunch and not be late getting back to work! They even have a convenient drive-in window for orders called in to go. You just can't beat the service, food, convenience, or price at Cook's Pantry.

Skiing season will be here soon, and those of you who snow ski will likely be heading up to Ruidoso this fall or winter. It is good to know that even when you are far away from home, you can still get a good home-cooked meal. The Whispering Pines Restaurant in Ruidoso is also owned and operated by the Stone family. Chet Stone, Richard Stone and his wife Ann, and Brian Stone, all take the same care in preparing your meals as Chester and Ysleta do in Midland. The quality and taste of the food is delicious in Ruidoso just as it is here. If you like Cook's Pantry in Midland, you'll love the Whispering Pines! And being able to enjoy a delicious home-cooked meal when you are that far away from home just makes it that much better. Relax and enjoy your vacation, and let Whispering Pines do the cooking for you. Tell all of your friends about Whispering Pines and remember us when you go to Ruidoso.

So next time you feel like a home-cooked meal, but don't feel like taking the time or effort to cook, come to Cook's Pantry. Cook's offers delicious home-cooked meals at a reasonable price. Louie Hernandez is the chef at Cook's Pantry, and many of you may already know the quality of food Louie prepares. Louie has worked at some of the better restaurants in Midland, and offers you only the best cooking available.

How could you get a home-cooked meal if you go somewhere that is not home-owned and operated? Of course, Cook's Pantry is home-owned and operated by Chester and Ysleta Stone. Save yourself the time and trouble of cooking, and let us worry about the cooking. We are open for breakfast from 6:00 to 10:00, Monday through Friday, and 6:00 to 11:00 on Saturday. Lunch is served from 11:00 to 2:00, Monday through Friday. Cook's Panty is closed on Sunday. Call-in orders may be made at 683-1463. Snow skiers, remember also the Whispering Pines Restaurant this fall or winter when you visit Ruidoso. Either place, you get a delicious, wholesome, home-cooked meal at a reasonable price.

state in brief

Economist: 1.9 million homes needed in Texas by 1990

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas will need 1.9 million more homes by 1990, if the state's population hits 17.8 million as experts are predicting, a Texas A&M University economist says.

"By 1990 almost 7.4 million housing units will be needed in Texas," Dr. Arthur L. Wright worte in the Texas Real Estate Research Center's Tierra Grande magazine.

"The housing stock in 1980 was approximately 5.5 million and the difference, almost 1.9 million, translates into a needed production level of almost 190,000 units per year for the 1980s."

Between 1970 and 1980, 1.67 million new homes were built in the state, a 44 percent increase. Wright is predicting that the number of new homes will increase by 34 percent from 1980 to 1990.

Will there be sushi in stockyards?

FORT WORTH (AP) — There may be sushi in the stockyards next year if Fort Worth and Miyazaki, Japan decide to join under the Sister Cities International program.

The Texas city already is planning for next spring's Japan Week 1984, an international festival that features a different nation each year. While committee members worked on that event, they stumbled across information about the Japanese city.

Miyazaki, a seaport on a southern Japanese island, has about 350,000 people, a mean temperature of 65 degrees — and cattle.

"You're known as Cowtown; Miyazaki is famous for beef cattle," said Toshi Sato, director of Japan's tourist information office in Dallas.

The two cities now are exchanging information, said Sue Winter, the city's liaison with Sister Cities International.

Students raise money for village

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Some Texas A&M University students are trying to raise $25,000 that could feed an entire South American village of starving children, officials said Monday.

The money will be used through the Christian Children's Fund to feed about 120 children in the Colombian village.

The idea for the project — the first large-scale adoption program undertaken by the charity — is the brainchild of Texas A&M English professor Robert Scott Kellner.

The students have raised $1,000 after one week of the drive and hope to have the $25,000 by Thanksgiving, Kellner said.

"If our project succeeds, it could encourage other groups to try it and hundreds of villages could be helped," said Kellner. "It is not inconceivable that about 1 million of the 7 million children suffering from starvation in the world could be saved by the end of the decade."

Justice speaks in McKinney

McKINNEY (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor said Monday that some states are hampering justice by sealing the criminal records of juvenile offenders so that judges can't use them in deciding punishment.

Mrs. O'Connor, who rarely makes public speeches, spoke Monday at the dedication of the $150,000 Collin County Juvenile Dentention Center.

Texas law allows a judge to consider a juvenile offender's record, but others have "a two-tier justice system," she said.

"Juveniles can't appear in lineups, and their records are sealed. In medicine, doctors look at the prior medical history of a patient. You have to ask if a judge who is proscribing an appropriate sentence should be deprived of a record of criminal behavior if it exists."

The justice said one of the best deterrents to juvenile crime is the certainty of swift, fair punishment.

Judge: Asbestos firm must pay

MARSHALL (AP) — A federal judge on Monday ordered a British asbestos supplier and its South African subsidiary to pay $12 million to 160 Tyler-area residents exposed to the mineral.

U.S. District Judge William M. Steger entered default judgments against the two foreign firms, who have refused to accept court papers served them, lawyers say.

The plaintiffs, some of whom are deceased, were each awarded $75,000.

Blake Bailey, an attorney for the plaintifs, said the U.S. Department of State has agreed to collect the judgments from the two companies, Cape Asbestos Co. of England and Egnep Proprietary Ltd. of South Africa.

Gonzalez: Premiums too high

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Owners of homes in flood-prone areas who are entitled by law to subsidized flood insurance are being pushed by Reagan policies into paying higher premiums than they can afford, charges Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio.

As chairman of the House of Representatives sub-committee on housing, Gonzalez will hold hearings on the flood insurance problem Thursday morning. Testimony will be taken from Jeffrey Bragg, administrator of the federal flood insurance program.

"The Reagan administration by its policies have raised premium rates three times," said Gonzalez. "This makes it very hard for the home owner to pay and it makes the government-subsidized program ineffective. It appears that the Reagan people are seeking to push people into having to take policies that would be on a comparable basis with private sector insurance."

Loss of business customers could raise home phone rates

AUSTIN (AP) — Almost 40 percent of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s largest customers have found they can do business without Ma Bell, according to an SWB consultant.

Joseph Kraemer of Washington, in prefiled testimony offered to the Public Utility Commission on Monday, said the loss of business could mean higher rates for residential telephone customers.

Kraemer's comments about big business "bypass" of traditional phone use came on the first day of a PUC hearing on the future of the telephone industry. A court-ordered breakup of American Telephone and Telegraph Co. on Jan. 1 has left uncertainty in the industry.

"Good Lord," said Jon Dee Lawrence, Southwestern Bell attorney, "if we know anything, we know the world is going to change come Jan. 1."

Assistant Attorney General Geoffery Gay, representing the State Purchasing and General Services Commission, told Hearing Examiner Mary McDonald that "every consumer in this state ought to be nervous and worried about what's going on."

Some of the contestants in the hearing called by the commission challenged Lawrence's prediction of change.

"Residential and business customers will not be getting any services on Jan. 1, 1984 that they are not getting today," said Martha Smiley, representing U.S. Telephone Inc.

Jim Boyle, the state public utility counsel, criticized the hearing — which could last a month — as "some sort of Star Wars approach" that "can't lead to very good ratemaking."

"This whole thing is without a rudder," he said of the attempt to gauge the changes forced by the breakup.

SWB, which has a $1.7 billion rate hike pending, claims the AT&T breakup will necessitate higher monthly bills for basic service because AT&T will keep most of the long distance business.

Kraemer's testimony was aimed at showing that SWB also is losing money to new technology that allows big companies to set up their own communications systems.

"In terms of future plans, approximately one in two either engage in bypass now or intend to do so within the next three years," said Kraemer.

Films show stunt pilot may have realized trouble

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Films of the flight in which an Arizona stunt pilot was killed show that he may have realized the plane was malfunctioning moments before its wings were torn off, a federal investigator said.

As 1,000 people watched 250 feet below him Sunday afternoon in Plainview, Wes Winter flew two level circles far away from the crowd before beginning his next maneuver, said Armond Edwards of the National Transportation Safety Board's office in Fort Worth.

"That wasn't part of his routine," Edwards said Monday. "He may have heard something or felt something."

Winter, 46, did not complete another stunt as a crowd, including his girlfriend, Mary Futrell, who was describing his maneuevers, watched the wings snap off almost simultaneously.

The fuselage, with Winter sealed in the cockpit, gyrated toward the ground and landed upside down, killing Winter instantly.

According to a preliminary investigation, the aluminum strips riveted together to bind the wings and fuselage failed just before the crash, Edwards said. It may be two weeks before metallurgists can confirm the findings, he said.

The plane, larger than most used for aerobatics, had room for seven people. It was a twin-engine, Italian-made Partenavia, designed for corporate travel.

In February, Edwards said, Winter obtained Federal Aviation Administration permission to use the plane for aerobatics.

Texan denounces dairy support plan

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's plan to assess dairy producers 50 cents for each 100 pounds of milk produced as a means of curtailing surplus milk supply was denounced Monday by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, a member of the House Agriculture committee.

"They have done this at a time when they knew that the Congress is about to enact a dairy bill to curtail production, possibly within a month," said Stenholm. "Such action will mean costly, time-taking, harassing bookkeeping. The dairy farmer who pays this will probably be able to fill out a form and get it back after we pass the bill, but it will mean worrisome paper work and annoyance."

Stenholm is an advocate of the curtailing legislation, but does not support the administration's attempt to reign in ballooning supplies.

DAIRY legislation presents one of the biggest headaches congressmen are suffering from at this point, he said.

"The national industry is widely divided on terms of the proposed new law to cut back production," says Steven McCoy, economist with the House Agriculture committee.

"Mostly, the coastal states such as Florida want a cut in price supports, whereas the big producers in Wisconsin and elewhere in the mid-continent area want what is called the paid diversion plan. This is why it is difficult to write igislation," he said.

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R—Fla., who is making a study of the dairy price support system a specialty, commented on the divisions in the industry by saying it is "unfortunate how one part of the country insists on what it wants for its producers regardless of whether that injures another region's producers."

BOTH House and Senate agriculture committees have been working hard to produce a bill. They were disappointed when the administration withdrew its endorsement of the paid diversion plan whereby producers would be paid $10 a hundred weight to cut production by 5 percent to 30 percent of their 1982 recorded output.

The administration used the dairy proposal as a bargaining point in an attempt to win further cutbacks in farm production by announcing that it would not endorse the dairy legislation unless farm-state legislators would agree to a freeze on target prices for wheat.

"This the House agriculture committee would not do," said Stenholm.

BEFORE leaving for the August recess, members adopted a law delaying the 50 cents a hundred weight cut in price supports, but Reagan vetoed that bill.

Then, by executive decision on Sept. 1, Reagan and Secretary of Agriculture John Block instituted the cutback by assessing the 50-cent requirement of producers.

Commissioners hire jail architect

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Architect Walter Pate was hired Monday to do the design and follow-through work on a $6.3 million Midland County jail to house up to 300 adult and eight juvenile inmates. What the commissioners quibbled over was how to pay him but they finally settled — tentatively — on a 7 percent fee.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court, voting 4-0, agreed to pay Pate the 7 percent fee, which would amount to $441,560, on the proposed design but retained the option of paying him a "fixed fee."

Commissioners C. DeWayne Davis, C. Wallace "Wally" Craig and Win Brown were quick to vote for the fee arrangement. County Judge Bill Ahders, who has backed the jail proposal, abstained from voting.

But 15-year veteran Commissioner Durward Wright cast a seemingly reluctant vote to retain Pate. Wright, who initially seemed inclined to abstain, said the proposed cost "is more than we can afford to build." He said his vote was conditional "until the dollar amount is determined and its relationship to the tax rate" is ascertained.

"You're willing to re-negotiate for another contract," Wright earlier had asked Pate, who was to be the architect on another jail project, which failed at the polls last April. "Essentially," said Pate, "when we know exactly what you want to build."

"Invariably," noted Wright, "you're going to have some changes when you get into construction."

Davis said the jail is "going to be built in the best interests" of the people — taxpayers — of Midland County.

"You've got to have some basis of mutual trust" between the architect and the commissioners, Pate said. He said he would not build in designs to raise the construction costs just to enhance his fee. Commissioners earlier Monday voted to increase the tax rate from 18.03 to 18.23 cents per $100 valuation.

"I want to be sure we're getting our money's worth, and nobody is being cheated," Davis said. "I'm so tired of this (jail) thing." Commissioners have been delving into stockade and jail proposals for about two years.

In past meetings, commissioners have indicated the jail, to be built just east of the Midland County Exhibit Building and about 2½ miles east of the downtown Midland County Courthouse, would be financed by certificates of obligation. Unless voters petition the court for an election to approve or disapprove the proposal, the commissioners could increase the tax rate to pay off the indebtedness incurred in the jail construction.

On April 23, the voters rejected by a 4-to-1 ratio an $11.69 million general obligation bond issue to renovate the 1930-vintage courthouse and to build a courthouse addition and jail.

In a presentation to the court, Pate submitted two basic jail designs. The primary differences in the two were about a half million dollars and the finished cell space for 45 inmates.

Pate's proposals on the 6.95-acre site were:

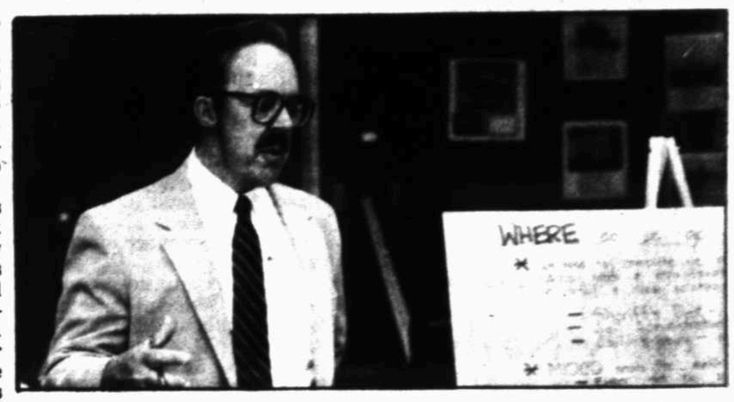

—No. 1 cost scheme: Sheriff's Department offices, $649,242. Jail cells completed for 180 inmates, $3.91 million. Shell for housing an additional 120 inmates, $1.95 million.

—No. 2 cost scheme: Sheriff's Department offices, $649,242. Jail cells completed for 225 inmates, $4.895 million. Shell for housing an additional 75 inmates, $763,680.

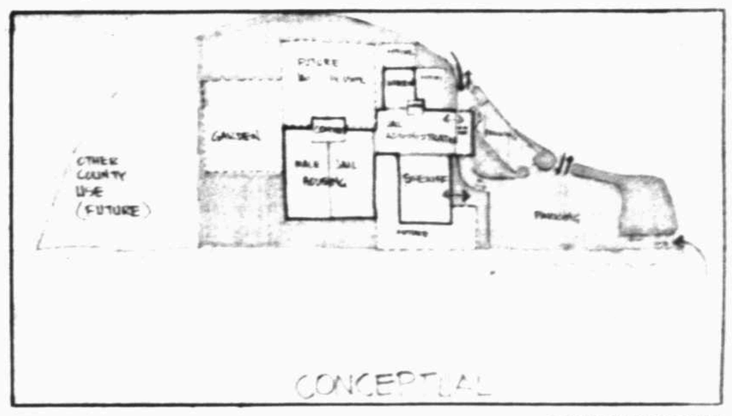

"I've never tried to give the court an artifically low figure on construction," said Pate, "because I don't think it's the ethical thing to do." He implied his cost estimates were on the high side.

Sheriff Dallas Smith opted for Pate's second scheme.

Otherwise, the sheriff said, "You're wasting your time."

Midland architect Walter Pate discusses proposals for a new Midland County Jail with the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday.

Architect Walter Pate's topside rough sketch of the proposed Midland County Jail depicts a site about 2½ miles east of the Midland County Courthouse and just east of the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

At present, the jail on the fifth floor of the Midland County Courthouse has more than 100 inmates, which exceeds the sheriff's preferances. He said by the time the proposed jail is built, the courts could easily fill up the 225-inmate jail. Today, said the sheriff, the courts do not have have all the "tools" — more jail space — they need in carrying out criminal justice.

County Commissioners raise tax rate slightly

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday slightly increased the tax rate from 18.03 to 18.23 cents per $100 valuation and barely hiked the 1984 budget.

The court approved the 1984 budget of $11.4 million and allowed a 4 percent pay increase for the 300 county employees and elected officials except for the four commissioners. The 1983 budget is estimated at $10.85 million.

The court went through the motions of approving the tax rate on Aug. 8. However, that action was invalid since one commissioner was absent in the voting. State law requires that all members of the court be present before formal action can be taken on the tax rate.

The county's tax base for the 1984 budget is $4.048 billion.

Governor tours stricken counties

By PATRICK DEAREN

UPTON/CRANE COUNTIES — He stood before 80 boney cattle on the Slash Hook Ranch in southern Crane County this morning, and the hay curled against his dusty boots said it all.

Supplement feed. Drought. Devastation.

"It's about as dry a place," sighed Texas Gov. Mark White, "as I've seen."

The occasion was a tour that carried White, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, Congressman Kent Hance, and State Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring through drought-ravaged pasture land in Upton, Crane and Pecos counties.

"I've seen some cattle in real tough shape," said White. "The ranchers operating right here are feeding all their cattle right now; they don't have any cattle out on the range. Things are about as bad as they can be...feed prices are about twice what they were last year and cattle prices are about half what they were last year."

White noted that Secretary of Agriculture John Block could provide West Texas ranchers with help "merely by nodding his head. There's a lot of grain stored up in the Panhandle that's deteriorating right now, and it's costing taxpayers about $500,000 a year to store it. And it would help ranchers get through the next few months and hopefully they'll have a better spring."

White said he tried to get Block to come along on the tour "to see what a real drought was," but was unsuccessful. "They've had over 16 inches of rain in Illinois (Block's home state), and everybody would think that's a flood down here."

Hightower also expressed his disappointment that Block did not accompany them. "The word we got from the Agriculture Department was that Secretary Block just can't go to every little drought in the country," he said. "What we're talking about here is not the corn wilting. We're talking about the whole ecology of the area literally being destroyed, where this ground is going to dry up and blow away. You lose those roots and that native grass and the whole deal's gone."

Hightower called the dry situation the worst drought since his office began keeping records in 1892.

The officials landed at McCamey Airport this morning and toured a ranch north of the city by vehicle before flying to Pecos County Airport in Fort Stockton. From there, they left for a helicopter examination of Pecos County rangeland.

Midland man pleads guilty to violating hunting act

Also, ex-banker admits embezzling $36,000 from First National

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland farmer Lee Milton Bell, who is accused of violating the United States Airborne Hunting Act, pleaded guilty to the offense on Monday — the day before he was to go to trial in federal court.

And an ex-banker admitted to embezzling $36,000 via loans at The First National Bank where he was a vice president.

The former banker, Stuart Ladd, 34, admitted to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton at noon Monday that he drew two checks on the bank and converted them to cash for his own personal and business interests. He pleaded guilty to drawing a $12,000 check last Nov. 5 and another for $24,000 on Dec. 31.

Ladd, who told that judge that he has a graduate degree in business administration, is to be sentenced at noon on Oct. 5 in the federal courtroom in the George Mahon Federal Building in Midland. He could be sentenced up to five years in federal prison and fined up to $5,000 for each offense.

The case was investigated by the Midland office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In a plea bargaining agreement, Bell, 29, pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor offense of shooting wildlife from an airborne helicopter on Jan. 21, 1982. He was charged by information — a formal complaint.

Bell, who could be imprisoned up to one year and fined up to $5,000, is to be sentenced by Bunton at noon on Oct. 4.

In exchange for his plea and his agreeing to testify for the government in a case against two former co-defendants, the felony indictment against Bell is to be dismissed by the government.

He had been indicted for conspiracy to violate the U.S. Airborne Hunting Act, for violating the Lacey Act in August 1981 by transporting, receiving, acquiring or selling wildlife killed in violation of the act and violating the Bald Eagle Protection Act. Each of the two first alleged offenses could have netted Bell up to five years in prison and $10,000 and $20,000 in fines. Violation of the Bald Eagle Protection Act is punishable by up to one-year imprisonment and a $5,000 fine.

The government charged Bell with killing by firearm an eagle, a mule deer and a javelina and with attempting to kill a Barbados sheep and an eagle.

In trial today were to be co-defendants James Clyde "J.C." Short Jr., 35, a Midland helicopter pilot, and Larry Weldon Todd, 31, owner of the Sportsman's Den businesses in Midland and Odessa.

Short is accused of flying the helicopter used in illegal airborne hunting. In addition to the conspiracy charge and violating the Lacey Act, Todd is charged by indictment with perjury before a grand jury.

In other courtroom proceedings Monday:

—Bryce Aldon Frazier, 29, of Odessa and formerly of California pleaded guilty to selling amphetamines to an undercover agent on May 12. He could be imprisoned up to five years and fined $15,000 on Oct. 4 when Bunton is to sentence him.

—Ronald Banks, a 35-year-old Santa Rosa, Fla., man who had pleaded guilty to hauling 119 pounds of marijuana, initially was sentenced to three years in prison for the offense. However, Bunton suspended the sentence, ordered Banks to serve six months in a jail-type federal facility and placed him on probation for five years.

"I realize the serious mistake I made," Banks told the judge prior to sentencing. His attorney, James Bates, noted that Banks' wife, father and mother were very "supportative" and were in the courtroom.

"That doesn't make my job any easier," Bunton said. "It's still a difficult task."

Banks was accused of flying from Florida to El Paso to pick up a shipment of marijuana and then was caught at a U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint at Sierra Blanca on April 21, as he was driving the load of marijuana to Florida.

"What you need to do is grow up," Bunton told Banks. The judge said that some people "think that dope is the easy way to make money. Many do, I guess."

Banks' deed "showed a lack of maturity on your part," the judge said.

"Perhaps this was the first time you were involved in a (dope) scheme like this," he told Banks. The judge said that Banks' allowed his "supposed friends" to use him in the scheme.

RICHARD ORR

Reporter finds glasses prescription for trouble

The CIA is after me.

More accurately, they're after my eyeglass prescription. They believe it's just what this country needs to build the long-sought, end-all ULTIMATE WEAPON.

They're right.

My glasses are a quarter-inch thick. They weigh more than a Big Mac. Entire cities could be incinerated faster than a speeding laser beam.

My CB handle is Cyclops. I refuse to wear my glasses when someone takes my picture. I'd look like Little Orphan Oreo.

Optometrists have been encouraging me to get lenses made of that lightweight plastic.

But I've resisted. Plastic scratches too easily. Besides, I've developed Mr. Universe neck muscles to keep my head from pitching forward every time I don my glasses.

I don't want to lose that. Muscles attract women. Even the feminist variety.

I started wearing glasses in fourth-grade. They came complete with a black patch for my good eye. The kids made fun of me until I told them I was a pirate. Then they wanted me to steal things for them.

High school was bad. It's hard to walk up and ask a girl for a date when a blinding sheet of glass is all she can see coming at her.

So I didn't wear my glasses much during adolescence. I got away with it because my vision wasn't really all that bad back then.

But it got worse.

Double vision hit when I was 21 — because I didn't wear my glasses. I distinctly remember the day it happened.

I was a truck driver at the time and had been on the road for two days and two nights without sleep. At dawn of the third day I was barreling down on this bridge when all of a sudden there were two bridges.

I had to close one eye to decide which one to cross.

From that point on it was wear glasses or go around with one eye taped shut.

The glasses were thicker than those in fourth-grade because they contained prisms to correct the double vision.

Fortunately, I was married by then and wasn't asking girls for dates.

I took to wearing clip-on shades. People think I'm trying to look like a movie star.

They're wrong. I need the shades to keep the sun from burning holes in my cheekbones.

Before long, furtive men in trenchcoats and sunglasses began following me.

One day this guy stepped out of a doorway and asked if I had a light.

I spotted him right away as CIA. But he said he and the agency would deny knowledge of his existence if I told anyone what he wanted: my prescription.

I was shocked. What did the government want with my prescription?

He wouldn't tell me.

So I asked the next logical question: How much would they pay for it?

I sneered when he offered a mere $1 million. After all, it had to be something pretty big. So I said I'd see what the Russians would offer.

He walked away with a sneer on his face and said I'd be sorry.

He was right.

All of a sudden everything went wrong. My wife left me. I lost my job. My dog died. The vet said he committed suicide.

That's when I realized how deep the conspiracy ran.

It turned out to be worse than I thought. The Russians refused to offer one single ruble. They said I was crazy.

The CIA had even gotten to the KGB.

Then it happened. One day about two years ago my vision began blurring and I couldn't read anymore.

An optometrist who hadn't examined me before whistled and clucked his tongue.

"This is a very interesting set of eyes you have, Mr. Orr," he said. "Do you mind if I call in my colleague to look at this?"

After a long whispered conference in the corner, they gave me the bad news: I needed bifocals, but the prescription was already too complex for the incorporation of bifocals. I'd have to wear two pairs of glasses.

"Simultaneously?" I gasped.

"Oh no — at least not for now," the older doctor said soothingly. "One for reading and one for distance."

Two months ago I started not being able to read again.

"We can fix it," the doctor assured me. "But let me warn you, Mr. Orr, you're straining the limits of modern optometry. Have you tried wearing gloves when you drive?"

Noting the look of bewilderment on my face, he put his arm around my shoulder and took me outside where no one could hear what he was about to say:

"I shouldn't be telling you this, but you seem like a nice chap. It's the CIA. They've been poisoning your steering wheel. Why don't you just give up and let them have what they want?"

I've placed a call to William Casey. If he doesn't return it in 48 hours, I'm taking this story straight to Jack Anderson.

Richard Orr is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

A press conference at Fort Stockton was slated to conclude the day.

Upton County Agriculture Extension Agent Kent Powell said Monday that if general rains are not received by the end of the week in the Rankin area, pastures will have no chance of producing grass the remainder of the year.

"You can almost say," he noted, "it's too late anyway."

Rankin, situated in the southeast portion of Upton County, has received only 0.80 inch of precipitation all year, and most of that came in the form of snow. Thunderstorms last week did dump ample amounts of rain along sections of Texas 349 north of Rankin, but surrounding pastures failed to receive appreciable amounts.

"It was very, very spotty," said Powell of the rainfall. "It was not a general rain. Somebody said it showered right down the road."

Confronted with such a lack of precipitation, ranchers are continuing to reduce their livestock herds.

"A rancher just sent 3-year-old ewes in (to market), another rancher four loads of cattle, and another rancher is shipping today and tomorrow," said Powell. "Most of the ranchers have moved their cattle off, and if they didn't sell them, th culled them (based) on age, or fou pasturage outside the drought ar for them."

The drought's severity, he note already has forced some liquidatio and resulted in four ranches bei put on the market.

The much-publicized Farme Home Administration loans after t federal government declared muc of West Texas a disaster area ha failed to alleviate problems, adde Powell.

"The loan information that wa presented to the public was slightl misleading," he noted, "in that th rancher must be almost destitut and turned down by lending institu tions. Then he can come to FmH for an 8 percent loan. If he hasn' been turned down, they'll loan a 14.25 percent."

Should necessary rains not fall i the next few days and grass fail t be generated, area ranchers will b faced with merely trying to survi over the winter.

"It's gonna leave us feeding tha genetic pool of sheep that we pr marily maintain in the count through the winter and hope tha they will breed," said Powell. "W just started putting bucks out an we hope the ranchers will get som sort of lamb crop out of it so they'l have something to sell next year."

Vocational education director to discuss MISD testing system

Dr. Charles Thompson, director of vocational education within the Midland Independent School District, will chair a panel discussion of the district's Total Guidance Testing System at Thursday's meeting of the Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women. The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in the Lee High School library.

The program, entitled "Help," is open to the public and aimed at parents of students who are interested in available testing programs which enable students to discover apptitude and career choices. Testing begins in seventh grade and continues through the 12th.

Billie Eiland, vocational counselor at Lee High School, and Peggy Callicoatte, vocational counselor at Midland High, will discuss types of testing used and will give an overview of the computerized Career Resource Center.

The computer can give the offerings, academic, vocational and entrance requirements, physical plant descriptions, costs, etc. of colleges, universities and vocational schools throughout the United States. Students can obtain the desired information by using the computer after testing.

Thompson stressed that in today's world everyone needs to learn "blue-collar" skills and college-bound students should give themselves the opportunity to take electives in the vocational course curriculum.

Midland ranks 13th in per capita homicides

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — Texas' wild and wooly image was sharpened this week with release of figures showing it contained eight of the nation's 25 most dangerous metropolitan areas in the country, as measured by their murder rates for last year.

Midland ranked 13th in the number of homicides per 100,000 population, while neighboring Odessa had the dubious distinction of coming in first.

The National Coalition to Ban Handguns sees the figures as a reflection of the traditional popularity of handguns in Texas, a tradition that has its roots in the stereotype of the tall, lanky Texan with the six-shooter strapped to his hip.

"We feel there's a definite correlation" between the Texas murder rate and the availability of handguns in the state, commented Paul Lavrakas, coalition field director.

"The tradition of handgun ownership appears to be very strong in Texas," said Lavrakas.

But Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon points out that during the past two or three years, Texas in general and Midland-Odessa in particular "were in a period of accelerated growth, with a lot of outside people coming in.

"The more people you have, obviously the more crime you're going to have."

The City of Midland recorded 16 homicides in 1982, 15 of which have been cleared, according to Gideon. Midland has averaged 11 homicides a year for the past for the past 10 years.

"We have only three unsolved homicides in the history of the department," said Det. Lt. Earl Luckey. "And in two of those cases we felt we knew who committed them, but one suspect died in a traffic accident and the other was killed in a shooting."

Both Gideon and Luckey said most homicides are "crimes of passion" that erupt on the spur of the moment and are virtually impossible for police to prevent. "About 90 percent develop and are over in 10 minutes," noted Luckey, the bulk of them stemming from domestic or barroom disturbances.

Odessa last year had the highest murder rate of any metropolitan area in the country with 29.8 murders per 100,000 population, according to FBI figures.

"This is probably true," said Odessa Police spokesman Lt. Rusty Baker. "We had quite a few murders."

Baker said he is not "bothered at all" by the report.

"It just means we had a bad year," he said Monday.

Other Texas metropolitan areas in the nation's top 25 were Houston, which ranked third with 28.2 murders per 100,000; Longview-Marshall, fifth with 21.6; San Antonio, 10th with 18.5; Waco, 14th with 17.9; Dallas-Fort Worth, 18th with 15.9 and Corpus Christi, 24th with 15.1.

Overall, the murder rate in Texas was 16.1 per 100,000 population, second among the states to Alaska's rate of 18.5, according to the FBI figures.

However, the District of Columbia had a murder rate higher than any state, with 30 murders per 100,000 residents, the figures showed.

The figures also include cases of non-negligent manslaughter, and were developed by the FBI for all metropolitan areas in the country. Rankings were assigned by the handgun coalition on the basis of the FBI figures.

Thirty-seven murders and cases of non-negligent manslaughter were reported for last year for the Odessa metropolitan area, which had a population of slightly over 124,000.

This was enough to earn the Odessa area the nation's highest per capita murder rate, even though the actual number of murders was much higher in Miami, which ranked No. 2 and Houston, which ranked No. 3.

"Miami and Houston, they're the ones where you've got the bodies really lying around," said Lavrakas.

The Miami area, with a population of 1.7 million, reported 508 murders last year and the Houston area, with a population of 3.1 million, reported 879, according to the FBI statistics.

Texas moved from number three to number two in its statewide murder rate despite the fact that that rate dropped slightly from 1981, when it stood at 16.6, Lavrakas said.

"We tend to assign (the state's high murder rate) to the availability of handguns in Texas," commented Lavrakas, who said that over the years handguns have been involved in up to half the murders nationwide.

"Texas is a casebook example," he said.

Lavrakas said that Texas law generally prohibits, with certain exceptions, the carrying of handguns in the state, but that no permits, registration or licensing are required to own a handgun.

"There literally is no control on purchases and possession of handguns," he said. "It is a wide open situation."

Despite the slight decrease in Texas' murder rate, the state's overall crime rate and its rate of violent crimes both climbed slightly last year, according to the FBI figures.

Total crimes recorded by the FBI in Texas rose from 6,050 per 100,000 population in 1981 to 6,302 last year. Violent crimes — murder, rape, robbery, and aggravated assault — rose from 532 per 100,000 population to 577. And property crimes — burglary, larceny-theft, motor vehicle theft — jumped from 5,517 to 5,725 per 100,000 persons.

Furniture disappears in Odessa

In theft and burglary complaints made to city police during the past 24 hours, the National Mortgage Co. of Odessa reported the disappearance of $1,285 worth of furniture from a mobile home at 1716 S. Colorado. The furniture was taken sometime in the past two weeks.

In a burglary complaint, Pat Godfrey of Arlington said camera equipment and other items valued at a total of $1,150 were taken from her van while it was parked Monday at the Holiday Inn West, 3904 W. Wall St.

Annie Chandler of 1405 S. Main told police her home was entered Monday morning and a purse containing a bank credit card and $200 in cash was stolen.

Pat Meurer of 2104 Brunson told officers a rifle, a spray gun and stereo equipment worth a total of $478 were removed from a pickup truck parked at his residence over the weekend.

And Bill McDonald of 501 N. A St. reported that tools valued at $323 were taken from a storage unit at 3100 W. Kentucky Ave.

Late registration ends Wednesday

Wednesday is the final day of late registration for Midland College's fall semester, which has already set another enrollment record.

By Friday the student count was 3,290, compared to 2,978 for the same time last fall. The final 1982 student count was 3,255.

Persons wishing to take from one to three credit courses should come to the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. no later than Wednesday. Information about classes which still have openings for late-registering students may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 166.

Census Bureau to conduct survey

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey in the area next week to determine the extent people have been immunized against selected diseases, according to John E. Reeder Jr., director of the bureau's regional office in Dallas.

The survey is conducted throughout the U.S. every year to provide information on immunization against measles, influenza, polio, diptheria, whooping cough, tetanus, rubella and mumps needed for administration of health programs geared to disease prevention.

The health questions are in addition to the usual ones asked in monthly surveys on employment and unemployment conducted nationwide by the bureau for the U.S. Department of Labor.

Personal information supplied in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Central Y offers 'Mom & Me'

"Mom & Me," a unique fitness class for mothers and their children ages 6 and older, is offered at 4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Central YMCA.

"Mom & Me" includes all the components of fitness that will help keep mothers in good physical condition while providing fitness games and fun activities which enable children to enjoy exercise. At the same time, children will be developing muscle coordination, motor skills and building self confidence.

More information may be obtained by calling the Central YMCA 682-2551.

Electrical cooperative elects three

STANTON — Three directors were elected at the 44th Annual Meeting of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., in Stanton Saturday.

Ray Walker, District 3; P.G. (Sammy) Yates, District 6; and Harold Henley, District 8, were elected to serve three-year terms.

Reports by President Bob Cox and General Manager Rodger Burch were given on operations of the cooperative. Farmer, rancher and humorist Stanley White, of Stephenville, also addressed the 2,075 people attending.

Alamo Y to offer dance lessons

Western Dance lessons will be offered Wednesday nights for four weeks at the Alamo YMCA, 901 N. Midland Drive.

Keith Petty, who has taught at the YMCA for more than a year, will provide instruction on the two-step, Cotton-eye Joe, Schottische and waltz. The last night of class, the group will visit a local country-and-western dance club.

More information may be obtained by calling the Alamo YMCA, 694-2528.

'Big kids' pedal memories of their first kiddie cars

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

This rare pedal car from Italy was modeled after a Ferrari racer of Juan Fangio. It has the added flair of outside exhaust pipes and racing mirrors.

LAT Photos

Although nothing moved on the painted dials of the 1927 Westcott pedal car, the kids of that era didn't seem to mind.

Jay Colin, left and Gary Wales, right, are going through "second childhoods" as they refurbish and sell pedal cars, including the 1927 Westcott antique, far right. In foreground is a pedal car sold to match a full-size Cadillac owned by a collector. Behind the Cadillac is the all-American favorite for three decades, the fire-truck, complete with bell and detachable ladders.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — They may have stopped speaking, understanding and thinking as children...but not all men put away childish things.

And certainly not their wagons and pedal cars. Nor memories of that first moment of self-propulsion in a Murray-Ohio "Ding Dong Everybody Stop: Fire Chief." With sneakers for brakes, parental traffic cops ("stay on the sidewalk...don't go any farther than the corner"), and every driveway an imagined on-ramp to the fantasies of Route 66.

Jay Colin, 47, easily recalls his baby wheels of four decades ago: "It was a blue Murray-Ohio pedal roadster and I remember it as well as my first car, which was a 1940 Opera Coupe in robin's egg blue and I want it back, please."

GARY WALES, 44, has not forgotten his first-grade knee-skinner: "A four-wheeler, more like a push cart with tiller steering and I'd have to work deals with the other kids to push me. And it was bright red with this huge eagle on front and I remember the time...."

So if they could feel such nostalgia for kindergarten cars, went their recent reasoning, other big kids must be looking back in identical hunger. That was when Colin and Wales began cornering the thrift shop, swap meet and garage-sale market in used and abused kiddie cars. Now they are repairing some and restoring others and suddenly are pedaling hard to keep up with formation and production of their Beverly Hills Pedal Car Co.

"We've collected about 100 cars manufactured from the '20s to the '60s and although we haven't actually tried to sell anything yet we have sold 10 of them with eight more under restoration," Colin said. His was a happy complaint. "One guy wanted a 1952 Kiddilac in his living room because he has a real 1952 Cadillac in his garage. A lady decorator bought two for a rather large Bel-Air home, one in the toy room and the other in the john, I think.

"THEY'RE BEING HUNG by wires on ceilings and we have had one man buy a restored tractor to give to his 3-year-old son....But that's about the only one we've sold for its original purpose. The rest are beng bought for adults."

Wales, however, would like to reverse that trend. "Then the kids can beat the hell out of them," he grinned, "and we'll get them back to restore again."

Pedal car restoration is a part-time departure yet a definite accomplice to Colin's full-time job. He is president of 18 State Oil service stations and car washes. This new, occasional occupation for Wales is a scaled-down companion of his adult profession. He sells new, used and reproduction parts for Rolls-Royces and Bentley cars, classic and modern.

Colin and Wales respect and collect fine automobiles, art, lead soldiers, hand-carved decoy ducks and anything that might become a collectible. They race historic cars. Both are dedicated to products of the past when quality and craftsmanship were transferred from the hand of man. They also agree that tradition stumbled in 1970 when production of steel pedal cars ended and a new generation of 5-year-olds was seduced by Big Wheels.

"METAL WENT OUT and plastic came in," wailed Wales.

"Now there's only one pedal car manufacturer left," groaned Colin, "and his cars are plastic, ugly, dinky-looking nothings without durability or styling."

But in those good old days....

The first pedal cars were Dutch and manufactured in 1905. Then came American models, Tin Lizzies for tots and the start of three power options — straight pedals, bicycle gearing and a system of push rods. By 1928, department store catalogues were advertising the Moon Racer at $7.98, a $5.89 Dodge and that Ding Dong Everybody Stop: Fire Chief. Its sticker price of $10.79 included bell, twin ladders and grab handles.

CAME THE '30s and Murray-Ohio was joined by Steelcraft and a half-dozen other manufacturers. Triang in England was making elaborate pedal cars with battery-powered headlights, spoke wheels, and close copies of the Daimler and Vauxhall. Star of the American scene was the Type 52 (based on the full-size Type 35) Bugatti racer of which only 90 were made. And as the Bugatti Royale is the ultimate classic among real cars, so the Type 52 Bugatti is the cream of the pedal-car crop.

"Briggs Cunningham (former race driver) has a Bugatti pedal car in his Costa Mesa (Calif.) automobile museum," Wales said. "I've seen another one under a piano at the home of (Los Angeles car dealer) Bob Estes and he's had it since new.

"How much? They're priceless. I can't see anyone selling a Bugatti pedal car for $10,000 unless he'd just fallen off a pumpkin truck."

Pedal cars of the '50s were highlighted by some highly detailed and limited editions. Italy produced a Ferrari grand prix car given a Fangio flair by outside exhaust pipes and racing mirrors. England dug deeper into its speed years and auto-racing heritage with a miniaturized supercharged Bentley of the Brooklands era. In America it was Cadillacs, police cars, dump trucks and always those fire chief cars.

"THEN CAME THE '60s and the industry's last hurrah, the 1959 Ford and the GTO Pontiacs," he added. "By 1970, it was all done and pedal cars became just flashy pieces of plastic."

As with all elderly vehicles, the new company's resale cars have appreciated from new and sell at around $300. Or less, with trade-in. Or more, if it happens to be a restoration of a 1927 Westcott that Colin purchased from an antique dealer for $1,200.

"That price is nothing," he emphasized. "This car has fenders and running boards, a leaf-spring suspension, hand brake, opening trunk, an ignition lever on the steering wheel and instruments. In good, unrestored condtion, it's worth $8,000 and a guy would cry for it."

High price tags would be attached to a baby Aston-Martin built in 1966 for the Shah of Iran's son. It is a copy, stuffed with tricky gadgets, of the car used in the James Bond movies. As children, Queen Elizabeth II of England and her sster, Princess Margaret, drove royally designed pedal cars. They were, naturally, Rolls-Royces.

Colin and Wales, if requested, will restore little red wagons. But they plan to pass on orders for gasoline- or electric-powered cars.

"THEY'RE TOO BIG, they're too heavy and like all cars they leak oil and drip grease," Wales said.

"But the pedal car," picked up Colin, "is something that is ready to go whenever the kid is ready to go."

The partners also are thinking of manufacturing special-order pedal cars for an unusual sales arena.

"Classic car auctions are always slow to start," Wales explained.

Self-concept key to kids' success

Hearst Feature Service

While school-age children are struggling to learn the alphabet or trying to unravel the mysteries of algebra, they're also facing the Big Questions adults wrestle with: Who am? What can I do? Who will I be?

And, says psychologist Steven Sobelman, kids face these problems without the experience adults can draw upon in their problem-solving.

How well children do in school, how successful they are at making friends and how willful they are in resisting temptations to cut school and abuse drugs or alcohol depends to a great extent on their developing self-image. But this evolving self-image also depends heavily upon their success -- both academically and socially - say experts.

"The key to it all is self-concept," Sobelman said. For example, he notes that only some teenagers get drawn into destructive behavior, because "a child who feels secure can say 'no.' A child who is insecure and needs acceptance goes beyond, because there is more benefit to be gained - acceptance - than to not do it.

"A kid who uses drugs, alcohol - does unhealthy things - is really saying: 'I don't really feel good about myself, that I would permit this to happen. They show us on the outside what is really going on inside."

From early childhood onward, nurturing parents who are authoritative, not authoritarian, help children develop a strong sense of identity. This identification later helps offspring relate well with others and identify with good role models. When the child is older, he'll be able to practice some of the values he's learned early on in life, according to Sobelman.

Abilities seen early

NEW YORK (AP) — An increasing number of Americans are starting their own businesses, according to the Gifted Children Newsletter, which reports that entrepreneurial tendencies are evident in children as early as 5 years of age.

"These youngsters are goal-oriented and independent in nature," says Arthur Lipper, chairman of the publication.

Christian-oriented goods popular commodities

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A few feet away from the gum and mints, a local supermarket displays a rack of "I love E.T." and "I love unicorns" bumper stickers. Hoping to attract the Christian consumer, "I love Jesus" and Gothic-lettered "Jesus loves me" stickers take their place alongside the popular slogans of the day.

Once considered too pious a subject to show up on grocery shelves, Christianity is now a hot commodity and cash registers throughout the country are ringing the joy of Jesus.

Biblical prophesies printed on an assortment of items from potholders and pencils to "Praise the Lord" plaques and Frisbees are being sold and bought in record numbers.

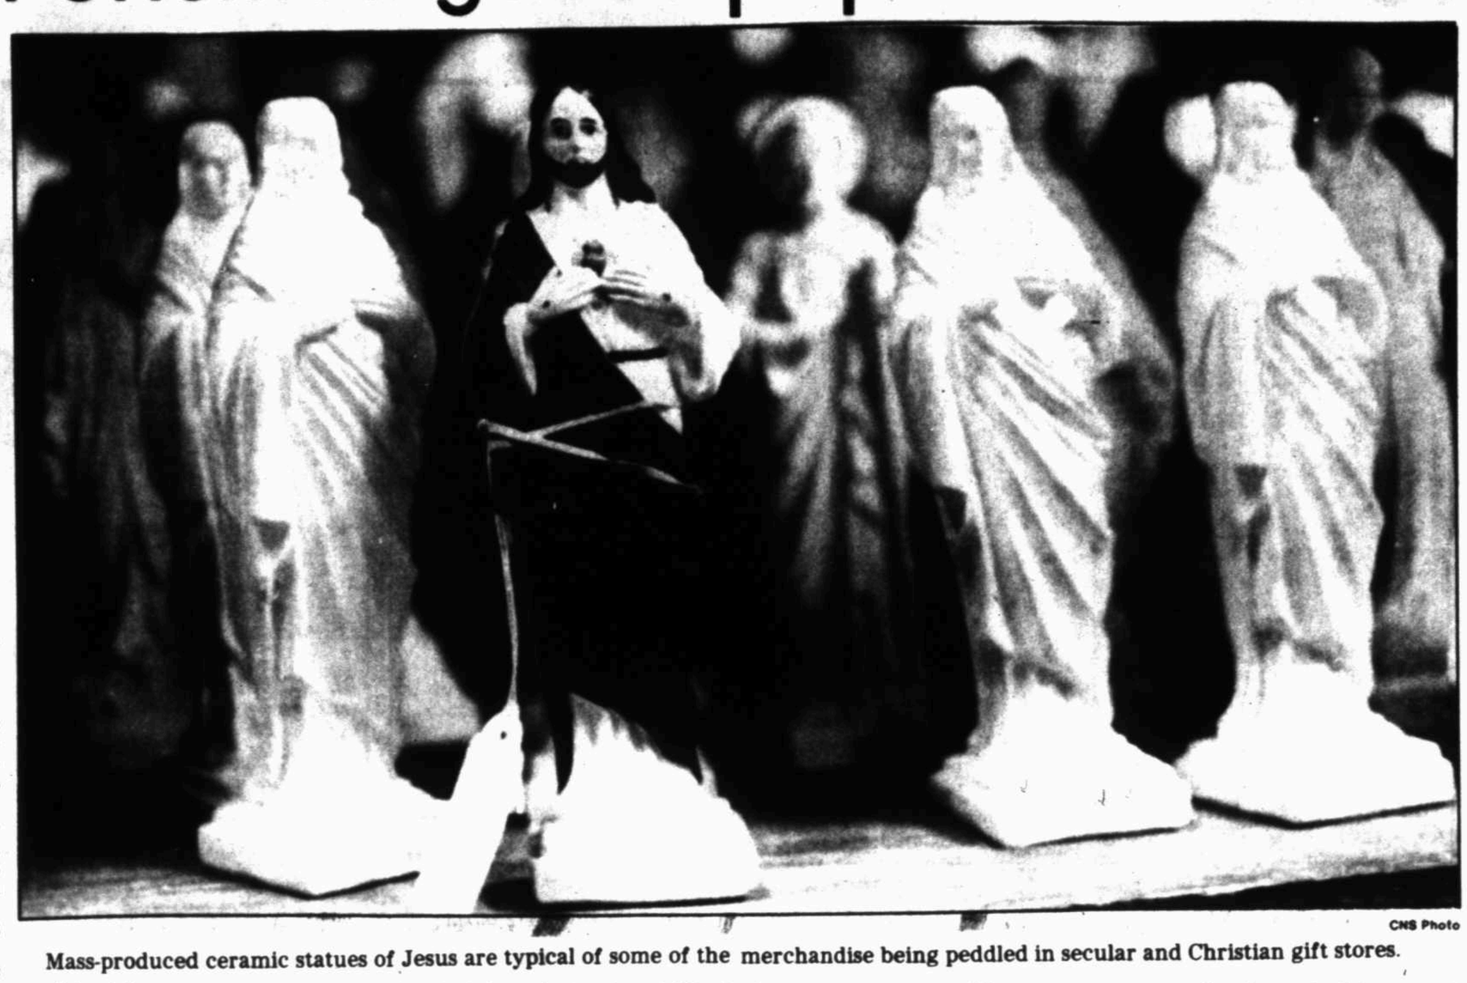

The demand for Christian mementos has grown 300 percent in the last 12 years, reports the Christian Booksellers Association.

During the height of the recession while other businesses were going broke, Christian book and gift stores were booming. John Bass, executive vice president of the association, said his 3,200-member organization earned a billion dollars last year.

Bass said in an interview from the association's convention headquarters in Washington, D.C., that the average store owner made a 6 percent net profit in 1982.

The nation's largest Spanish publishing house in El Paso, Texas, reports similar success. The Baptist Spanish Publishing House shipped $2.5 million worth of biblical bumper stickers and religious goods to about 40 countries last year.

"The increase of sales is indicative of the fact that people are reassessing their priorities. A lot of people are looking for some way to tell others they are a Christian," explained Bass.

CNS Photo

Mass-produced ceramic statues of Jesus are typical of some of the merchandise being peddled in secular and Christian gift stores.

For a long time, Christianity was supposed to be something confined to Sundays and not blatently thrashed about during the middle of the week.

That myth exploded when Christianity became in vogue during the Carter administration. Mass evangelism campaigns, such as Campus Crusade for Christ's "I found it" bumper stickers, proved the nation was ready. Jesus had become a lucrative business.

Christians with little or no business sense — those who got into business "because God told them to" — opened up Christian gift stores, often times sacrificing their life savings, Bass said.

While profits are high and motives appear to be sincere, all is not entirely rosy in the Christian bookseller business.

Bass admits that non-Christian swindlers — aware of Gallup Poll figures documenting the growth of Christianity in America — are taking advantage of the faithful by mass-producing "Jesus junk."

Salesclerks at bookstores report that cult members and atheist suppliers seeking a quick dollar try to pass of their items as "legitimately religious." Heart-shaped Mother's Day Bibles and satanic greeting cards are examples of "the more obvious con jobs," the clerks say.

"Yeah, we know there are rip-offs, but I'd rather risk the rip-offs and the accusation that we sell Jesus junk in order to get the real truth out," said Bruch Adolph, a Christian record salesclerk in nearby Lomita.

The race is on for what some call the "almighty dollar," and both the Christian and non-Christian gift suppliers are battling it out for the consumer's attention.

Hoping to capture the "born again" market, an increasing number of Christian bookstores have sprung up. Accordingly, competition between Christian businesses has gotten tough.

Big, better, best. In an effort to outsell one another, several stores in the Los Angeles area offer discount goods or "the largest selection" while others, like the Christian village in Santa Ana, advertise as being a "complete Christian shopping center," open seven days a week.

Don Steiner, a Lomita Christian bookstore manager, said he doesn't hide the fact that his store is in the business to make money.

'Secretary' title changes

Copley News Service

According to a monthly publication called "The Secretary's Friend," the word "secretary" is derived from the Latin word for secret and denotes "one who is entrusted with secrets."

Webster's New World Dictionary says a secretary is "a person whose work is keeping records, taking care of correspondence and other writing tasks, etc."

In recent years, those et cetera duties have tended to be the source of much controversy for some businesspeople who like to drink coffee but not brew or fetch it, particularly since women continue to hold most of the secretary jobs and men still have most of the boss positions.

Lately, "The Secretary's Friend" notes, there has been a trend toward dropping the word secretary from business titles.

The new titles apparently are considered more dignified, or a more accurate description of the duties of the job, or perhaps just more likely to encourage a hard worker to stay on the payroll for peanuts.

Some of the new titles are: administrative assistant, logistics coordinator, administrative coordinator, office administrator, administrative executive, regional director, administrative office aide, manager assistant, technical assistant and business assistant.

Other new titles replacing the more mundane tag of secretary are: administrative specialist, office coordinator, office manager, office services coordinator, receptionist communications coordinator, executive office staff assistant, professional assistant and marketing assistant.

Bob McLemore sent me another list recently which also bears on working women.

"So you think you're not sexist?" it says. "When he works and when she works, each may make different impressions."

Custody of dog disputed in divorce case

Hearst Feature Service

As in so many divorce cases, it wasn't the grown-ups who suffered. It was the child — sort of.

In this family split, parental acrimony centers around a "child substitute" — a 2-year-old cockapoo named Runaway whose (human) mom said the pooch was "traumatized and emotionally torn" by the yearlong bitter court proceeding.

Judi Wheatland left an Orange County courtroom in tears after Superior Court Judge John Wooley ordered her to share custody of the pampered female mutt (half poodle, half cocker spaniel) with the other warring parent, her ex-husband, Rex.

"I'm hanging in there," Wheatland, 31, said. "I guess I'll survive. But Runaway is still limping from surgery."

Attorney Les Jones described his client as "very upset" after the judge's ruling. The dog, he said, had been the primary bone of contention in the protracted divorce settlement between a childless husband and wife, married for five years, who both claimed they loved the dog like a daughter.

Wheatland, who refused an offer of $20,000 to give up the dog, claimed that Runaway returned from her last visit to Rex Wheatland suffering from torn ligaments and a damaged kneecap. "The judge ordered a temporary custody arrangement three months ago during our separation," she explained. "My husband gets her for 30 days and then I get her the next 30 days and so on. The last time he had her, she came home like this. I was never able to prove that Rex caused the injury, though," she said.

An orphan that was no stranger to troubles, Runaway was named by Judi Wheatland's sister's children after they found her wandering aimlessly two years ago. The dog seemed to have found loving parents in the Wheatlands. Before the couple's separation, Runaway was treated to sumptuous feasts of lobster, scallops, steaks and salad with Roquefort dressing.

Eschewing common dog food, Runaway was something of a gourmet. And the Wheatlands indulged her tastes. "I know she's a dog," Judi Wheatland said, "but I consider her my child."

Rex Wheatland, the 34-year-old president of a construction firm, offered his wife $20,000 if she would abandon her claims to Runaway, but Judi Wheatland told the court, "She's my baby. I wouldn't give her up for anything. Nothing could replace her. It's not negotiable."

Saying that her ex-husband "probably was honestly attached to the dog," she added, however, that she was convinced that he pressed the dog issue in court "to hurt me.

Meeting planned

Midland Health and Welfare Association will meet Wednesday, noon, at the Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. "A," for a panel discussion on "Affordable Child Health Care." Interested persons are invited to attend and bring a sack lunch. For more information call 687-2330.

Hotel cheaper than hospital

By ERMA BOMBECK

Isn't it time we all smartened up about hospital care?

Where else in the world do we check into a facility with a bed next to someone we have never seen before, put up with a steady stream of strangers who take our blood and our urine and are never seen again, and pay $200 a day for the privilege?

At those prices, you'd think we'd get to talk to the chef . . . instead of a nutritionist.

Most of the beds in hospitals are occupied by people recuperating. The crisis is over and they are just getting their strength back. My proposal is simple.

The best hotel in Los Angeles cost me $130 a day. For this, I get a room with a television and bathroom to myself. No one coughing in the middle of the night. No one watching the ballgame when I want to watch "Masterpiece Theatre." None of their relatives who come and spend the day and use "our" bathroom.

The hotel room comes with a continental breakfast and a newspaper. It also comes with a fluffy bathrobe that covers my ENTIRE body.

There is valet parking for people who come to visit me. (How many of you have had people visit you in the hospital who had to circle around until the new parking garage was finished?)

There are deck chairs and a swimming pool and when I don't eat everything on my plate, no one cares.

I can read until I go to sleep and no one wakes me out of a sound slumber in the middle of the night to ask if I need a sleeping pill.

If my vital signs are up to it, I could walk to Rodeo Drive and read price tags. Or, if I am lonely, I could sit in the lobby and watch people argue over their bill.

If I have a burning desire to see my doctor, there is a putting green nearby where we could meet and maybe have something cold to drink while I tell him what "Reader's Digest" says about my condition.

I've been thinking about this for a long time. It has a few bugs to work out, but by and large you have to admit if you're lucky enough to recuperate in the summer months, you could get some real bargains at Palm Springs or the ski slopes at Vail.

Not convinced? What if I told you that for the price of a ride in an ambulance you could fly first-class Pan Am from New York to London?

DEAR ABBY

Mother's thriftiness taxes daughter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is 85 years old, is failing in health and fast approaching the time when she can no longer live alone. She has over $100,000 in savings, but she refuses to spend a dime of it because she wants to leave an "inheritance."

I am willing to take her into my home, although it is too small to accommodate three people comfortably. My husband is opposed to giving up our privacy and thinks my mother should spend her money on the care she needs.

We have no designs on her savings, and I agree with my husband that no amount of money is worth sacrificing our privacy. But Abby, how can I turn my back on my mother if she insists on living with me? She regards all nursing facilities as "sties." I'm afraid if I recommend one she would interpret it as an act of abandonment. I am frustrated and upset worrying about this.

What is your advice? — TORN IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR TORN: Since you can't accommodate her in your home and she can well afford to pay for her own care, suggest that she employ a live-in attendant to look after her in her own home. And don't feel guilty. Every 85-year-old person should be so fortunate.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a very loving relationship almost every night (I think you know what I mean). If it matters, we're both in our late 20s.

Recently, my husband started a great paying job. Now the problem: Every two weeks he has to work swing shift, and he's exhausted when he gets home. I work from 7:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. and don't see him until he gets home around 2 a.m., so we don't have any time for lovemaking. We want to be more than just weekend lovers.

How do other couples manage their lives when they work overlapping shifts? — NOT SWINGING WITH THE SWING SHIFT

DEAR NOT SWINGING: They somehow make do. And when they can't make do, they don't.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 34, fairly attractive, have a good personality and a sense of humor. I've never been married, and that is my mother's problem. We went to a friend's wedding (her second) and Mom was depressed the whole next day. She said, "You're so attractive, I can't understand why you can't find someone." I happened to mention that a patron of mine met her husband on a cruise. Immediately Mom said, "Go on a cruise!"

One day I may marry, but I'm not desperate. I was engaged twice, and thank God I didn't marry either one! I don't need a man for security or support. I own my own business and I'm independent. I'm alone, but I'm not lonely.

I like children, but I really wasn't cut out for motherhood. I like men, but am I going to get married to show the world I can get a man — or to make my mother happy?

Abby, please tell parents to enjoy their grown children for the people they are — not for what they want them to be. — SINGLE BUT NOT ALONE

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

BEDWETTER

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Downed Korean plane thickens plot for filmmakers

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Relations between filmmakers in North America and the Soviet Union, distant and tentative at best, have worsened since the Soviets downed the Korean Air Lines' passenger plane.

The National Board of the Directors Guild of America voted to table a proposal for an exchange of directors with the Soviet Union in the wake of the incident, which left 269 people aboard the KAL plane presumed dead.

Neither the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences nor the American Film Institute plans any cultural exchange with the Soviets.

The Canadian Film Institute in Ottawa announced Monday it was cancelling planned screenings of three new Soviet films.

The institute said that "due to the current diplomatic crisis" screening the films "would be inappropriate." The films were to be replaced by movies of other nations, including South Korea.

Twice during the past dozen years, three top American directors have made official visits to film centers in the Soviet Union and three Soviet directors have visited New York and Hollywood, but on Saturday the Directors Guild voted to table a motion for another exchange.

Even before the plane disaster Sept. 1, there had been signs of rough times in the relationship between American filmmakers and their Soviet counterparts.

In July, the Writers Guild of America declined a proposal by the U.S.S.R. Film Association for an exchange of writers.

Guild president Frank Pierson observed in a letter that the film association "functions in accordance to the guidelines set forth by the U.S.S.R." and therefore "defines itself as a political entity."

Pierson said the guild's "only politics is the well-being of writers."

Writers Guild spokesman Allen Rivkin said two or three exchanges have taken place in recent years and one time the Soviet contingent "came here without any money to eat on."

Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association, said the jetliner tragedy probably would not affect export of American films to the Soviet Union "because our sales and licensing have been so meager over the years — two or three a year."

Valenti observed that "Russian films are free to enter this country, but American films are not free to enter Russia.... They claim they can't pay our price because one, they lack hard currency, and two, they don't make money on American movies. I find that hard to believe because whenever an American film opens, it's the hottest ticket in town."

He cited the recent release of "Tootsie." It was an entry in last summer's Moscow Film Festival "and would have won the prize if the people had voted."

American-Soviet co-productions have often been announced, but only one ever was completed: "The Bluebird," which starred Elizabeth Taylor and Jane Fonda in 1976. It was a box-office failure.

"Co-productions are very difficult," Valenti remarked. "In the first place, the Russians demand script approval. Another factor is the difference in filmmaking logistics. George Cukor, shortly before his death, told me about the terrifying frustrations he encountered on 'Bluebird.'"

One Hollywood producer appears willing to face the troubles.

Lawrence Schiller, who directed and produced "The Executioner's Song" for television, is planning a nine-hour TV movie for NBC based on Robert Massie's Pulitzer-winning biography, "Peter the Great."

"Ours would not be a co-production; we're willing to pay for services," Schiller said of the $15 million to $19 million project. "We've made several trips to Russia and have been overwhelmingly received."

Schiller said the Soviets termed the first three hours of the script "very good" but wanted to discuss certain aspects. The KAL incident may change the producer's plans.

"We certainly wouldn't do anything against our government's posture," said Schiller. "I myself consider the shootdown an act against humanitarian rights."

nation in brief

Brother, sister stay in jail

SPOTSYLVANIA, Va. (AP) — A brother and sister accused of digging up their slain father's body to get his gold teeth have chosen to stay in jail rather than post $5,000 bond apiece.

John Gavis, 28, and his sister Julia, 24, faced felony charges of disinterring a corpse.

Police said the pair cut the steel lid of their father's coffin and removed all but two of his teeth because they believed the gold crowns were etched with the number of a Swiss bank account.

"We'd just as soon stay in jail, your honor," Gavis told Spotsylvania County General District Judge Joseph Savage on Monday. The judge said he would appoint a lawyer for the two if they had not hired one by Thursday.

Their father, mother and brother were shot to death at the family's farmhouse in 1978, and a family friend said Gavis and his sister believed demons and spirits surrounded them inside the house.

The Windy Hill Farm property is to be auctioned Saturday at the request of their older sister, Edith Gavis.

Reagan covers his keister

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — President Reagan has apologized to a freshman congressman for using the word "keister" to describe the human posterior.

Rep. Tim Penny, a native of Kiester, Minn., said Monday he received a letter of apology last week in response to one he wrote in May about Reagan statements he deemed offensive to his hometown.

In one speech, Reagan had said he was fed up to his keister with news leaks. In another, the president said he wished bankers would get off their keisters and lower interest rates.

"I resolve to never use that honored name again in that context," Reagan wrote to Penny.

"In all these years I have never known it was a proper name. Please convey my regret and my apologies to your constituents and tell them I ask forgiveness."

Although the two words are pronounced the same, they are spelled differently. In Kiester, Minn., a little town of 681 people near the Iowa border, the "i" is before the "e."

Quote attributed to Flynt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An anti-American quote reported by the offical Soviet news agency as having appeared in a Los Angeles Times article actually was lifted from an advertisment placed by Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, the newspaper said today.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party daily, on Monday published a Tass dispatch saying the Times had printed an article saying "the incident with the South Korean airplane is not a tragic accident, but a pre-planned provocation, one of many such amoral actions which mark the history of the U.S.A."

There was no such article published in the news or editorial columns of the Times, the paper said. The Tass dispatch was based, it said, on a clearly labeled advertisement in Friday's Times — an ad paid for by Hustler magazine presenting the views of its publisher, Flynt.

Jetliner aborts its takeoff

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An American Airlines jet en route to Dallas from Washington aborted a takeoff when another jet was inadvertantly given permission to cross the runway at Nashville Metropolitan Airport, officials said.

One of the passengers was Rep. Carroll Hubbard Jr., D-Ky., who had been scheduled to fly to South Korea on the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet that was shot down by the Soviet Union on Sept. 1, The Dallas Morning News quoted another passenger as saying.

American Flight 271 was building speed for its takeoff Monday night when a Republic Airlines jet inadvertently was given permission by the control tower to cross the runway on its way to the terminal, passengers said.

The American pilot braked sharply and aborted the takeoff, said Lowell Duncan, a vice president of communications for American. He said it was unclear how close the two planes came to each other.

No injuries were reported among the 64 passengers and crew of seven aboard the Boeing 727, Duncan said.

Students shot as school starts

COMPTON, Calif. (AP) — Five high school students were shot on their first day of classes and two youths were arrested when rival gang members burst onto campus during lunch hour and fired into a crowd at random, officials and witnesses said.

The shootings Monday outside a classroom at the 1,200-student Manuel Dominguez High School apparently stemmed from rival gang activity, police said.

Astronaut would be forgotten

CLEVELAND (AP) — Franklin R. Chang-Diaz says he wishes people would forget that he is NASA's first Hispanic astronaut.

"I hope that someday nobody will pay attention to these things. Maybe then we'll have a truly integrated society," Chang-Diaz said Monday at the Lewis Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He spoke to launch National Hispanic Heritage Week in Cleveland.

"Maybe someday the deck of the (space) shuttle can be like the deck of the Enterprise in 'Star Trek,' with people of all nationalities working together," Chang-Diaz said.

Chang-Diaz, 33, a native of Costa Rica, described the shuttle program to about 300 Hispanic pupils from Cleveland and Lorain public schools who were bused to Lewis for the occasion.

Hunger striker losing sight

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A tired, weak and thin 52-year-old woman is beginning to lose her eyesight after 38 days of fasting along with three colleagues to protest nuclear weapons, but she vows to continue the effort despite warnings from her doctor.

"I made the decision before I entered this fast that I will be willing to sacrifice my life, and still am," said Dorothy Granada, who leaned on the arms of supporters at a news conference Monday.

Ms. Granada is suffering from increased signs of a form of eye muscle weakness called nystagmus, said Robin Knowlton, speaking for the international Fast for Life.

Soviets veto U.N. resolution

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union vetoed a resolution in the Security Council condemning its attack on a South Korean airliner after the United States and other nations mustered just enough votes to approve it.

Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky exercised his nation's veto power as a permanent member of the council after Western nations revised the resolution to gain the required nine votes for passage Monday in the 15-member council.

The resolution deplored "the destruction of the Korean airliner and the tragic loss of civilian life therein."

The motion was approved by the United States, France, Britain, the Netherlands, Malta, Jordan, Pakistan, Togo and Zaire. Poland and the Soviet Union cast the only votes against the resolution, while China, Guyana, Nicaragua and Zimbabwe abstained.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick promptly told the council that "in its determined defense of this indefensible act, the Soviet Union has taken an attitude that is as contemptuous of the truth as it is of human life."

She said the Soviet Union "instead of admitting errors, has insisted no error was made ... Instead of admitting responsibility for the action, it has lashed out with accusations."

Delegate Oleg A. Troyanovsky, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, vetoes a Security Council resolution deploring destruction of KAL Flight 007.

The head of South Korea's observer mission, Ambassador Kim Kyung-won, said before the council adjourned that Moscow's attitude about the downing of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 with 269 people aboard posed "troubling implications" for world peace.

"Despite its massive propaganda efforts, the Soviet Union has failed to gain the support of any state that has a single degree of independence," Kim said. "More than any other nation, the Soviet Union loudly talks of peace. But honest men and women know that peace is not shaped by propaganda."

Troyanovsky repeated Moscow's position that the airliner had been sent into Soviet air space by the United States on a spy mission. The flight "from the very outset involved mortal danger to its passengers," he said.

The Soviet Union has claimed its fighters shot down the plane Sept. 1 because it had entered Soviet airspace and they believed it was on a spy mission.

Troyanovsky called the flight "a shameless game with the lives of people in order to raise an international conflict."

U.S. action could start violent chapter in Beirut history

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The pressure on President Reagan for a military move in Lebanon comes from a shaded old mansion overlooking the sea that has fallen victim to the city's random terror.

"Dark Wednesday," Saeb Salam, with a wave to the disfiguring pockmarks around the hallway entrance, said. His home survived unscathed during an eight-year civil war and the Israeli bombardment last year. But last Wednesday the house was raked by gunfire during the surge of violence that marked the Israeli withdrawal from the surrounding Chouf Mountains.

Fighting continued Monday between President Amin Gemayel's Lebanese army and the Druse, a fierce and secretive Moslem sect being supplied with arms by Syria. Reports here and in Israel indicate that as many as 1,000 Palestinian guerrillas, under Syrian direction, joined Druse ranks in a battle at Souk el Gharb that could topple the Gemayel government. A spokesman for Walid Jumblatt, the Druse leader, said sect members from Syria and other countries had joined the fighting, but denied any involvement by Palestinians or Syrian army units.

Salam, a former prime minister of Lebanon and an elder Sunni Moslem statesman, was sent by Gemayel as a special emissary to the White House earlier this year. "President Reagan told me he had no reverse gear when it came to Lebanon," Salam said. Now, along with most of the Lebanese establishment, Salam wants the United States to silence the Druse guns in the Chouf.

"It would bring peace at a crucial time and even the Druse want peace," Salam said. "It could be done in a few hours. It would be simple."

Of course, it never is. By turning American firepower on the Chouf mountaintops, Reagan would be risking another step deeper into the Mideast conflict, where seemingly simple military solutions rarely produce peace and often result in war.

At the president's disposal are six 155-mm. guns at Beirut International Airport that already have devastated Druse emplacements firing on the Marines. Targets are selected by a new radar system using two beams aimed at incoming rounds. As the projectiles pass through the radar, the trajectory is analyzed by a digital computer that pinpoints their source.

Also available are Marine helicopter gunships as well as an array of jet fighters from off-shore carriers: the USS Eisenhower and France's Foch. The U.S. Navy F-14 Tomcats and French Super Etendards based on the carriers have been photographing the Druse positions for a week.

But use of such weapons would almost certainly risk killing Druse family members — women, children and other bystanders.

Two fuel trucks collide

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - Two 16,000-gallon fuel trucks, one of them fully loaded, collided at Bangkok's international airport today, igniting a huge fire that raged for three hours, airport officials reported..

They said trucks collided only 65 feet from the airport's main fuel storage tank.

King Hussein visits Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan arrived in Tokyo today for a nine-day private visit, according to a Jordanian Embassy official.

The king, accompanied by Queen Noor and two dozen aides, previously was in China and South Korea, and is scheduled to leave Japan for Singapore Sept. 21 before returning to Jordan, the official said.

Party leader trades quips

OTTAWA (AP) — Brian Mulroney, new leader of the opposition Progressive Conservatives, traded quips with Liberal Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau during his first appearance as a member of Parliament,

Mulroney, a 44-year-old businessman from Quebec, was chosen in June as party leader, thus becoming the Conservative candidate for prime minister in the next election, expected in 1984.

Since Mulroney was not then a member of the House of Commons, a Conservative member in a safe seat in Nova Scotia resigned to force a special election, which Mulroney won on Aug. 29.

Mulroney made joking reference to reports that some Liberal politicians are suggesting that Trudeau, 63, resign so a more popular leader could rebuild support for the Liberals.

Bus plunges from bridge

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — A bus plunged off a bridge into a mountain ravine, killing 52 people and injuring several more, police report.

They said the brakes apparently failed Monday while the bus was crossing the San Jose bridge after leaving Ambato, capital of the Andean state of Tungurahua, 75 miles south of Quito.

Police open fire on mob

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Police opened fire on a mob of more than 5,000 people attacking a police station, killing seven people and wounding about 35, witnesses reported.

A government statement said gunmen in the mob Monday opened fire on the police station and officers fired back in self defense.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Sept. 14, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of nurse and birth control advocate Margaret Sanger, physicist Karl Compton and physiologist Ivan Pavlov. Also sharing your birthday: singer-dancer Joey Heatherton, ABC newscaster Hughes Rudd, Hollywood producer Hal Wallis and long-time "Lone Ranger" Clayton Moore. Everything will come up roses this year if you concentrate on one or two key goals. Avoid scattering your forces. Family members need to reduce their spending. Keeping expenses down at work could earn you a bonus. A leadership position opens up. Let higher-ups know you are interested.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finish a creative project in time to bid on another one. Signing an agreement will bring you some peace of mind. Make the best of a decision over which you have no control.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have better luck juggling your bills and finances now. Romance becomes more intense. Someone who is steady will make you a good partner. You ponder a permanent commitment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Join your neighbors in organizing a response to a proposal that will affect your community. New alliances bring surprising developments. Write down your ideas so that they do not get forgotten.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You receive strong support from many quarters today. Go ahead and speak out! A joint financial venture brings a better return than you anticipated. Take steps to protect your valuables.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Resentment is growing. Try to disentangle yourself from family matters that are really none of your business. You have plenty of other things you can concentrate on. Be discreet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Move out from behind the scenes and take credit for your achievements. You may be asked to document your expenses. Keep careful records when traveling. Profits rise and so do your spirits!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Clean off your desk before starting work today. You could make a surprising discovery. Loans get approved. Silent suffering may hurt family relationships more than bringing everything out in the open.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Follow your intuition even if you must defy convention. You are a survivor! Working hard now will lessen financial pressures in the future. Retirees can look ahead to brighter days.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Complete assignments early and you can pick up some extra cash. Those in broadcasting, retailing and the arts enjoy good luck. Romantic partner may be getting ready to leave.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You deserve all the good things that happen now. A wish could be fulfilled. Self-discipline is the key to balancing the budget. A family dispute quiets down.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Harboring a grudge will drag you down. Accept an apology and get on with your life. A romantic separation ends. You meet someone at lunch who will be helpful in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Singles find romance through their old friends. Your intellectual powers are keen today. Put them to good use and your career will accelerate. Recognize a child's nervousness and put him at ease.

Sheen's son making progress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The actor's name is Emilio Estevez, but don't let that fool you. One look at those intense blue eyes and you can be sure that he is the son of Martin Sheen.

Estevez is the family name, changed by Sheen early in his career when ethnicity was uncommon for aspiring actors. Sheen's mother was Irish and his father was Spanish.

"I once thought of shortening my name to Emile," says the 21-year-old Estevez, "but that sounded too European. I never seriously considered changing Estevez. I wanted to make it on my own.

"Sure, being Martin Sheen's son is a help, but it can also be a hindrance. When I walk into an office for an audition, producers and directors expect a good performance. Having a famous actor as a father makes it harder to prove myself as an entity."

But Emilio is making fine progress. He drew good reviews in "Tex" and "The Outsiders" and can be seen this month in Universal's "Nightmares." It's a four-part scare movie, and Estevez's segment casts him as J.J. Cooney, a video-game freak who carries his skills to an ultimate and frightening climax.

"I really had played video games only three or four times," he said. "I spent $25-30 in an arcade and became slightly addicted. I discovered there are addicts who become completely obsessed with the games. It's almost a physical addiction, like cigarettes, and some kids steal quarters from their parents so they can play."

"Nightmares" had a curious history. Directed by Joseph Sargent ("MacArthur"), it had been scheduled as a two-hour pilot movie for NBC. The Universal brass figured the film would appeal to the youth market and bought back the rights. With a production cost of around $2 million, "Nightmares" should have no trouble turning a profit.

Estevez was born in New York and moved to California in 1969 when his father's career started to blossom after "Catch 22." He bused 60 miles round trip each day — from Malibu to Santa Monica and back — to go to high school.

He competed in soccer and track, but there was never any doubt about his ambitions. He started auditioning at 16, and after graduation tried acting fulltime.

After a few TV movies, Estevez convinced his father he could act, and they appeared together in "Mister Roberts," directed by Josh Logan at Burt Reynolds' theater in Florida. Father and son also appeared in the 1981 TV movie about juvenile justice, "In the Custody of Strangers."

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

If you are going to try for a scam at the bridge table, make the crucial play early. The less the opponents know about the hand, the better. Take this example from a side game at the recent Summer North American Championships in sunny New Orleans.

North's two diamond opening bid was the Flannery convention. It showed a minimum opening bid with five hearts and four spades. South's two no trump was forcing and North's three no trump showed a hand with two cards in each minor suit and honors in those suits. South chose to gamble on slam.

West's choice of a club opening lead is open to argument. The queen won in dummy and declarer did not fancy his chances — in fact, there was no legitimate way that the contract could be made. So declarer had to fall back on subterfuge.

At trick two, he led a low heart from dummy to his queen. East could not rise with the ace without giving declarer his contract, so the queen won. Now declarer exited with a low club.

West won the king and he had to return a heart to defeat the contract as the cards lie. But he was afraid that he would be helping declarer by leading any red suit, so he exited "safely" with a club.

Declarer needed no more. He cashed out all his winners, coming down to four diamonds in his hand and the king and another heart and two diamonds on the table. East had to hold onto the ace of hearts, so he was forced to discard a diamond. Declarer now scored all his diamonds to bring home the slam.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Thalidomide has legitimate uses

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am old enough to remember the tragedy of birth defects when thalidomide was given to pregnant women and I thought at the time that we had heard the last of it. Now I read that it is still being used. How stupid can people be? I think the government should put them all in jail and throw away the key. — Mrs. J.G., New Orleans, La.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. G.: I can understand your reaction, but I suggest that you slow down and take another look at what is actually happening. It is true that thalidomide is still being used, but it is being used under strictly controlled conditions and only on an experimental basis.

As you note, thalidomide was used about 25 years ago before people became aware that it could cause birth defects. It was never available commercially in the United States.

Today the drug is being used for some conditions where conventional forms of treatment have not proven effective. Dr. Joseph S. McGuire Jr., professor of dermatology at Yale University School of Medicine, reports that thalidomide has been found to help patients with severe inflammatory dermatologic disorders. But I would re-emphasize that the drug is not used for pregnant women and is only available experimentally for severe disorders that are not responsive to other forms of treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 58 years old and has started to see a psychoanalyst. It's his money and he's not asking my opinion, but what does a 58-year-old man expect to get out of psychoanalysis. — Dave, Atlanta

Dear Dave: I imagine your father hopes to get out of psychoanalysis whatever a younger person would hope to get out of it. It might help you to know that Dr. Earl J. Simburg, of the San Francisco Psychoanalytic Institute, does not consider age alone a criterion for whether or not to enter psychoanalysis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor recently prescribed tetracycline, which he said I should take on an empty stomach. But I'm not sure what is meant by an empty stomach. Can you explain this for me? — Ms. G.R., Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Ms. R.: There are two points I want to make: First never leave a physician's office when medication has been prescribed without being absolutely clear about how the medication is to be taken. Second, an empty stomach generally means one hour before meals or two hours after meals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard of acupuncture being used to relieve pain, but has it ever been used with cancer patients? If so, has it worked? — Ms. B.R., Salem, Oregon

Dear Ms. R.: The results of a study at Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, New York, show that acupuncture was effective in relieving pain in 68 percent of a group of patients with cancer.

Dear Gwen, Jackson, Miss.: Iron is used to transport oxygen to body cells and to help the cells use the oxygen. Deficiencies in iron are found more often among children and young women than among elderly individuals.

NOTICE
TO THE REAL AND TRUE OWNERS OF PROPERTY ABUTTING UPON THE HEREINAFTER DESCRIBED AND DEFINED PORTIONS OF STREETS, AVENUES, AND/OR ALLEYS IN THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS, AND TO ALL OWNING OR CLAIMING ANY SUCH ABUTTING PROPERTY, OR ANY INTEREST THEREIN, AND TO ALL INTEREST IN ANY OF THE PROCEEDINGS, CONTRACT OR OTHER MATTERS HEREINAFTER MENTIONED

Notice is hereby given to the real and true owners of property abutting upon the hereinafter named streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits defined, in the City of Midland, Texas, and to all persons owning or claiming any interest there-in, and to all railroads and all others claiming, or interested in, any of said property, or in any of the proceedings, contracts and matters herein mentioned, that:

The City of Midland, Texas, acting through its City Council by duly enacted Ordinance No. 6277 has determined the necessity for, and has ordered the permanent improvement of portions of various streets, avenues, and/or alleys in the City of Midland, described and defined in the City Engineer's schedule of cost estimates, hereinafter set out in this notice, by raising, grading, filling, widening, permanently paving, or repaving same by the construction, reconstruction, repairing or realigning concrete curbs and gutters in the manner and where the City Engineer determines that adequate curbs and gutters are not now installed on proper grade and line, and by construction of such drains and incidentals and appurtenances as deemed necessary by said Engineer, said permanent paving to consists of an adequate asphaltic wearing surface upon a substantial caliche base, both of such type, construction, materials and thickness as is deemed adequate and proper by said City Engineer, all of such improvements to be constructed according to such specifications and standards as the City Engineer deems adequate and suitable, and to be constructed in the manner and as provided for in plans and specifications and the contract agreement, covering the construction of said improvements, now on file in the office of the City Secretary.

That said City Council, by said ordinance, has further determined the necessity of levying assessments for a portion of the costs of the construction of said improvements against the properties abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits defined, and against the real and true owners thereof, and has adopted the proposed apportionment of costs hereinafter set out between the City and said abutting properties and their owners; that the portion of said costs proposed to be so assessed will be in accordance with the Front Foot Rule or Plan, and said City Council has further adopted the following proposed rates, and estimates of said costs in reference to each of said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits defined, and as set out in the following schedule to wit:

Each portion of said streets, avenues, and/or alleys as designated by unit number constitutes a separate and independent unit of said improvements and shall be improved, and the improvements constructed therein, separately and independent from each and every other improvement unit and assessments to be levied for said improvements in each unit shall be altogether separate, distinct and independent of and from the assessments to be levied in every other improvement unit; and, in making and levying assessments against property abutting upon one of said unit, no matter or circumstance in connection with any other of said units shall be considered, or have any effect upon the other, all as fully, and to the same extent, as if separate proceedings and contracts had been had and executed with reference to the improvements to be made in each of said units.

A hearing will be given and held by and before the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, in the Council Chamber of the City Hall in the City of Midland, Texas, on the 27th day of September, 1983, at 1:30 o'clock p.m., to the real and true owners, whether named or correctly named in the assessment proceedings or not, of all property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alley within the limits to be improved, and to all lien holders or other persons owning or claiming any such abutting property, or any interest therein, and to all railways occupying any portion of said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within any improvement unit as above defined, and to all others interested in any of the proceedings, contracts, or matters and things herein mentioned, or incident or relating thereto or the contract for the construction of improvements herein referred to.

At said time and place, all such persons, firms corporations railways, and estates, and their agents and attorneys, shall have the right at appear and to be heard and offer testimony as to the said assessments, and as to the amount thereof proposed to be assessed against abutting property and the real and true owners thereof, and as to the lien and charge of personal liability to secure payment of said assessment, the special benefits to accure to each such abutting property and the owner or owners there by virtue of said improvements, if any, or concerning any error, invalidity, irregularity or deficiency in any proceedings or contract in reference to said improvements and said proposed amendments, and concerning any other matters or thing as to which a hearing is constitutional prerequisite to the validity of said assessment, proceedings and improvements and on which the owner or owners are entitled to a hearing under the constitution and laws of the State of Texas and the proceedings of said City Council.

Following such hearing, such assessments will be levied against each and every parcel of property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits above defined, and the real and true owners thereof, for that portion of the cost of said improvements determined by said City Council to be assessed against such abutting properties, and the real and true owners thereof, and against railways occupying any portion of said units, and said assessments shall be and constitute first and prior liens upon said abutting properties, from the date said improvements were ordered by said City Council and a person liability and charge against the real and true owners thereof, as of said date, whether such property be described or correctly described, or such real and true owners be named, or correctly named, in such proceedings, or not and no error or mistake or descrepancy in the names of such owner or owners, or in describing said property in any of said proceedings with reference to said improvements, shall invalidate any assessment or certificate issued in evidence thereof; but, nevertheless, each parcel of property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys and the real and true owner or owners thereof and each railroad, shall be charged with and be liable for said assessment, which shall be valid whether or not such owner or owners be named or correctly named, or such property be described or correctly described, and as provided for under Article 1105-b of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, as amended, heretofore adopted by said City Council as the law under which such improvements, proceedings and assessments are being constructed, performed and levied.

DONE by order of the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, this 23rd day of August, 1983.
