House OKs bill that would compensate owners of environmentally sensitive land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Property owners could seek billions of dollars for losses caused by restrictions on the use of environmentally sensitive land under a bill passed by the House on Friday.

The property rights bill, which passed by a 277-148 vote, was hailed by supporters as long-awaited relief for landowners who have property devalued because of wetlands protection or rules sheltering endangered species.

The bill will rein in "a bureaucracy out of control and running amok," declared Rep. Richard Pombo, R-Calif. "We want to restore the power of the people having to live under this."

The measure was the last of a string of anti-regulation bills passed this week by the House under the GOP's "Contract With America" banner.

The other bills include measures that would require the federal government to pay more attention to costs and compare risks against benefits when issuing regulations, especially those dealing with the environment, and make it easier — especially for small businesses — to challenge federal regulations.

It was unclear how the bills will fare in the Senate, where it is easier for a small group of lawmakers to block legislation. More modest property rights and risks assessment bills have been introduced in the Senate, but have yet to be debated.

"We hope they will not weaken (the House-passed measures). This is a strong anti-regulation package," House Republican Whip Tom DeLay of Texas said at a news conference.

Environmentalists predicted that if the House bill survives in the Senate it could amount to destroying wetlands and endangered species protection laws because agencies would be reluctant to press enforcement, fearing com-

President Clinton gestures during a news conference in the Old Executive Office building next to the White House, Friday. He said he has "a pretty good record" and would be glad to match it against GOP's.

Clinton touts record, draws political lines

■ At first full-blown news conference, president fields wide range of questions for 45 minutes.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Republicans lining up to run against him, President Clinton asserted Friday his administration has built a safer world and stronger economy while the GOP has been trying to cut money for the needy to give tax breaks to the rich.

At his first full-blown news conference of the year, Clinton drew sharp political lines, saying he has "a pretty good record and I'll be glad to put it up against all that kind of name-calling and all the stuff that they want to do."

Fielding a wide range of questions for 45 minutes, Clinton expressed frustration with ethics investigations of him and three members of his Cabinet, emphasizing that no wrongdoing has been proven.

He said it's easy under the law to trigger a probe, adding, "What I think we should all ask ourselves is: Is this really the way we should be running a democracy, the way this operates?"

Clinton himself faces investigation over his Arkansas land dealings and the financing of his campaigns for governor there. "I've told the American people that I didn't do anything wrong, and I've told them the truth," he said.

If there is to be a cleanup in Washington, Clinton said, it should start with reform of lobbying laws.

Even while attacking Republicans, Clinton insisted it's too early to worry about the next presidential race. "I want everybody to relax, take a deep breath and go back to work."

Three Republicans already have declared their candidacy, and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole will soon join the field. Clinton said he did not expect a challenge from any Democrat, adding that "it would be a mistake."

On a crucial foreign policy issue, Clinton expressed strong confidence in Russian President Boris Yeltsin despite strains caused by the bloody crackdown in Chechnya and Moscow's nuclear technology deal with Iran.

Rejecting criticism from Dole, Clinton said, "I don't think it's fair to say the United States or that our administration

By Ed Todd

Carrying on with Hollywood film-making on World War II's movie-front at home and in post-war years had its trying and tempting moments.

"It wasn't easy in those days," wartime movie actor Van Johnson confessed Friday night, "having to kiss Elizabeth Taylor, swim with Ester Williams and cry with June Allyson."

Johnson, now 78, starred with Spencer Tracy in the 1944 film, "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," which dramatized the April 18, 1942, raid over Tokyo by B-25s under the command of Gen. Jimmy Doolittle.

The raid, which heightened the morale and resolve of the United States and its Allies to defeat the Axis powers, proved that the Japanese homeland was vulnerable to bomber attack.

But Johnson, who was a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer leading actor, focused more on his association with film stars and stardom-relat-

East Texas meningitis outbreak hasn't spread to Permian Basin

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A meningitis epidemic that has afflicted East Texas since September has not reached West Texas, despite rumors that an area resident died of the disease.

According to a recent report in the Dallas Morning News, 34 cases of meningitis — including seven that have resulted in death — have been confirmed in East Texas by Texas Department of Health officials.

One of the fatalities included a 4-year-old Mesquite girl who died at Children's Medical Center in Dallas recently, only 10 hours after she began feeling sick.

The epidemic has East Texas residents lining up for vaccinations. Health officials said about 650 people were vaccinated in Jonesboro in January. That number nearly doubled Feb. 19 and 20, with 10,000 Kilgore and Longview residents reported being vaccinated.

The Morning News reported that about 900 people in Woden received vaccinations on Feb. 23,

Officials arrest 90-year-old couple's minister in their slaying

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. John Canning delivered the eulogy after Leo and Hazel Gleese were slain, telling mourners that he had been so close to the couple that he could call them Mom and Dad.

On Friday, six weeks later, Canning was led off to jail in handcuffs, charged with beating and strangling the 90-year-old couple.

Police say the Gleeses were killed in their home Jan. 2 after they discovered Canning had abused the power of attorney they gave him and was stealing their savings.

"It's the most despicable thing I've ever heard of," said Phil Ramer, a Florida Department of Law Enforcement agent. "Of all people in the world you should be able to trust, it's your pastor. They couldn't do it in this case, and he wound up killing them."

Canning, the 58-year-old pastor of the multidenominational Fountain of Life Church, was a suspect from the start because he had waited a day to report finding the couple dead in their home.

The minister passed the time before reporting the deaths by spending a day at the beach and dining out with friends, Police Chief Robert Glick said.

"When it takes somebody a day to report two dead bodies, it doesn't take a rocket scientist to say who the suspect is," Ramer said.

Investigators searched a trash pile near the construction site for the church's new sanctuary and found several items that a lab analysis linked to the crime scene. One item was a piece of foam material from Gleese's easy chair.

"The discovery of the dump site for the church, I believe more than anything else, has expedited the case," the police chief said.

Canning probably stole tens of thousands of dollars from the couple, Glick said.

Investigators are reviewing documents that show the Gleeses and other parishioners who had become increasingly housebound gave him authority over

Officials charge former Army Ranger in death of soldier at Goodfellow base

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A former Army Ranger was charged Friday in the death of a soldier who disappeared while on guard duty at Goodfellow Air Force Base.

Louis Jones, who turns 45 today, could face the possibility of execution if convicted of the federal charge of kidnapping with death resulting.

Jones already had faced the state charge of aggravated kidnapping. He also faces a state charge of aggravated sexual assault on a different victim, said Evan Jones, Tom Green County assistant district attorney.

The prosecutor declined to elaborate on the second case.

The body of Army Pvt. Tracie McBride was discovered early Thursday under a Coke County bridge about 27 miles north of San Angelo.

The 19-year-old soldier had been in Texas just nine days when she disappeared Feb. 18 from a base laundry room.

A civilian employee at Goodfellow, Jones also was charged with the aggravated sexual assault of another female soldier Feb. 16.

He was held in the custody of U.S. marshals at Tom Green County Jail in lieu of bail bonds totaling $200,000 after an appearance before a peace justice, said Evan Jones.

He said Miss McBride's body was taken to San Antonio for an autopsy by the Bexar County medical examiner's office.

The prosecutor declined to provide information on a possible motive for the slaying of Miss McBride.

"She was fully clothed at the time she was found," he said.

The San Angelo Standard-Times reported Friday that Louis Jones retired from the Army as first sergeant of a Ranger unit at Fort Bliss in El Paso, the highest ranking noncommissioned officer in his company.

Calvin Jones of Vancouver, Wash., said his brother "wanted to be in the military since he was 6 years old. That's all he ever aspired to be — a good soldier."

Lillie Jones was shocked by the accusations against her son.

"I wish I could see him and ask him, 'What happened? What's wrong? What happened? Did you do something?' " the Memphis, Tenn., woman was quoted in the Standard-Times.

Documents show that Jones told investigators he abducted Miss McBride, put her in a closet at his home and then killed her in Coke County.

Officials said Jones led them to Miss McBride's body. They declined to discuss how she was killed.

"I can tell you she was not shot, but I can't tell you how" she was killed, said Tom Green County Justice of the Peace Eddie Howard. "It's too sensitive right now."

Former co-workers said Jones planned to go to college and become a teacher.

Miss McBride also wanted to become a teacher. News of her death devastated her hometown of Centerville, Minn., a Minneapolis suburb.

"She had a smile that wouldn't quit," said Gary Korpela, associate principal at the high school where the woman graduated in 1993.

"There's nothing you can say about it. It's absolutely ... ," Korpela said, then went quiet. "The sadness is tremendous."

Judge listens to arguments over implant verdict for Dow

HOUSTON (AP) — Dow Corning Corp. and parent Dow Chemical on Friday asked a judge to throw out a mixed $5.2 million verdict against them because jurors failed to find them guilty of negligence.

"The jury found no criminal conduct," said Richard Sheehy, attorney for Dow Corning Corp., during a hearing on the verdict before state Judge Michael Schneider.

At issue is whether Dow Chemical's "assistance and encouragement" in the early testing of silicone, which was later used in Dow Corning implants, resulted in health problems suffered by 59-year-old Gladys Laas.

The woman had implants in the 1970s.

The Feb. 15 verdict in Mrs. Laas' favor marked the first time Dow Chemical was found liable for breast implants made by its corporate child Dow Corning. The same jury awarded nothing to El Paso cardiologist and co-plaintiff, Jennifer Ladner.

Both Midland, Mich.-based companies were ordered to share Mrs. Laas' award. Dow Chemical must pay 20 percent of the award and Dow Corning must contribute 80 percent.

Dow Chemical has asked for a directed verdict in their favor because their attorneys say evidence does not support the aiding and abetting finding.

A ruling, which was expected to issued Friday, was delayed until at least March 14. Richard Mithoff, attorney for Jennifer Ladner, asked state Judge Michael Schneider to delay the ruling after his father was hospitalized late Thursday.

"The way the questions about aiding and abetting was written with Dow Chemical it related to (the) negligence of Dow Corning. And the jury found Dow Corning wasn't negligent, so Dow Chemical wasn't negligent," said Richard Josephson, attorney for Dow Chemical.

"To put it very simple, if Dow Corning didn't do anything wrong in terms of being negligent or improperly marketing its product, then how can Dow Chemical do anything wrong?," Josephson said.

John O'Quinn, Mrs. Laas' attorney, blasted the Dow companies' reasoning. "This is the new Dow spin. The jury found that Dow (Chemical) with knowledge, with actual knowledge gave substantial encouragement and assistance to Dow Corning to market silicone breast implants that had not been adequately tested," said O'Quinn.

"It's a fact, they found it, they cannot run and hide from it," O'Quinn said. "Their Mickey Mouse argument is that the jury answered no to certain other questions."

Mild weather return to Midland

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies by mid-morning, a high in the mid-70s and west winds 15 to 25 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low near 40.

Sunday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 26, Friday's high was 47 compared with the record high for that date of 89 in 1974. The record low for today's date is 15 set in 1971.

STATE

Parts of North and West Texas began thawing out Friday from freezing and icy conditions of the past couple of days.

Light rain and drizzle covered much of South Texas. Patchy light fog persisted in North Texas as a weakening high pressure ridge across the region kept winds light and variable across most of the area.

A warm front, stretching north to south just east of El Paso, was moving slowly into West Texas with precipitation ending in the area.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the upper 30s in the Panhandle to 60s in South Texas and 73 degrees in El Paso behind the front.

A high pressure ridge across North Texas began to shift winds out of the south to southwest at 5 to 10 mph across extreme western sections.

Elsewhere, winds were generally from the north to northeast at 10 to 20 mph.

The weekend forecast called for windy and warmer conditions, with morning fog and drizzle and a chance of showers and thunderstorms through Sunday.

Overnight lows should range from the 20s in the Panhandle to 30s to mid-50s, with highs in the mid-50s to lower 70s.

NATION

Heavy rain and snow fell in parts of the West on Friday, piling snow a foot deep in the Sierra Nevada, and rain was scattered across much of the South.

The wet storm system centered along the West Coast had spread heavy rain across lower elevations of Northern California.

In a 24-hour period, about 2.5 inches of rain fell along the coast at Ventana Cone in Monterey County and at Corte Madera in Marin County. During the same period, 3.6 inches fell at Blue Canyon in the Sierra east of Sacramento, and 3.9 inches fell at Lakeshore near Shasta Lake.

A foot of snow fell in the higher Sierra at Sugarbowl and at Yuba Pass. Wind gusted to 60 mph atop Nevada's Slide Mountain, near Lake Tahoe.

The low pressure system carried its rain and snow on a path from California and southern Oregon into Idaho, Utah, Nevada, western Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico.

Ahead of that weather system, snow fell steadily in parts of Wyoming, with 6 inches by midday at Jackson. More than a foot of snow was possible in places by Sunday morning.

An area of rain, snow and freezing drizzle extended from central Texas across the South into the mid-Atlantic states.

Ice made road travel dangerous in areas stretching from Oklahoma and northern Texas to Tennessee and northern Alabama.

Precipitation amounts in the South were generally light, with most areas reporting less than a quarter of an inch from rain or melted ice and snow. Shreveport, La., was an exception with a half-inch of rain.

Light snow fell along the northern edge of the area of rain, with totals of 1 to 2 inches in parts of Kentucky, northern Tennessee and the western Virginias.

Cold air continued to dominate the northern tier of states from Montana to Maine. Early morning temperatures dipped to the minus-20s in northern Minnesota and Maine, with wind chills in the minus-30s in upper New York.

TOUTS: Clinton says he'll match his record against GOP's has a Yeltsin-centered policy, or that it is time for the United States to determine to deal with someone else."

Clinton's meeting with reporters came one day after Republicans suffered a bitter defeat on a centerpiece of their agenda, the failure of a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

The president brushed off a GOP challenge to produce a seven-year plan for a balanced budget, saying he'll stand by the budget he sent to Congress last month and wait to see what plan the Republicans produce.

"The Republicans now have proposed to cut education, nutritional health for mothers and school children, antidrug efforts in our schools and other things which, to me, appear to target children in order to pay for tax cuts for upper-income Americans," Clinton said.

He lashed back at Dole's claim that Clinton has abdicated responsibility to cut the deficit. Clinton said Dole has been part of the political establishment for 30 years, including 12 years of Republican control of the White House when the national debt quadrupled to $4 trillion.

"And since I've been president," Clinton said, "we've got a lower deficit, a lower unemployment rate, a lower inflation rate, a higher growth rate."

On other points, Clinton said:

■ The administration is ready to safeguard U.N. peacekeepers in the former Yugoslavia should they be forced to withdraw, but he is determined to avoid "a long-term commitment of American ground troops" in that region.

■ He wished that Democratic Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell of Colorado had not switched to the Republican side. He said he hopes Campbell will continue to vote in favor of the Democratic social programs he has backed in the past.

■ He has not decided whether changes are needed in affirmative action programs, which are under Republican assault. Clinton has ordered a review of such requirements. But he questioned the effectiveness of rules that set aside some federal contracts for minority-led companies. "It's difficult to draw a conclusion that they even do what they were intended to do in the first place," he said.

■ Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo is "moving in the right direction" to deal with an economic crisis that "turned out to be more difficult and more thorny than originally had been thought." Clinton has committed U.S. backing for loans to shore up the Mexican peso.

LAND: House passes property-owner compensation bill

pensation claims they could not afford to pay.

Called the "Private Property Protection Act," the House-passed measure would broaden substantially the definition courts traditionally have given to a "regulatory taking" of property.

It would require a federal agency to compensate landowners if a federal action to preserve ecologically sensitive lands — such as wetlands or endangered species rules — reduces the land's value by 20 percent. Courts have generally ruled that a government "taking" occurs when all value of a property is lost.

Originally designed to cover all regulations, supporters during two days of floor debate agreed to narrow it to cover only federal actions taken to protect wetlands and endangered species, and rules involving federal water rights.

The water provision was included to gain support of many lawmakers from the West, where water rights are crucial and considered property. A rancher could seek compensation if the Interior Department takes water away from him and shifts it for urban use.

Over the two days of debate, lawmakers supporting the bill produced a litany of "horror stories" in which small landowners were deprived of maximum use of their land by federal agencies because the land was declared a wetland or habitat for an endangered species.

The examples demonstrate an "arrogance" by federal agencies such as the Army Corps of Engineers, which administers wetlands regulations, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which declares endangered species, the lawmakers argued.

"People believe government no longer is their servant — it's their master," said Rep. Billy Tauzin, D-La., one of the most vocal advocates for property rights legislation in the House.

While failing to get a hearing on the matter last year, Tauzin found plenty of allies in the new Republican-led House. Only 23 Republicans voted against the measure, while the GOP majority was joined by 72 Democrats.

The 277-148 vote was 13 shy of the two-thirds needed to overcome a presidential veto, however. President Clinton has hinted he might veto the anti-regulation bills if they emerged as approved by the House.

While the bill's supporters framed the debate in constitutional terms, arguing that property owners had a basic right of compensation for loss of property, critics argued that the real goal was to stifle species and wetland protection.

"Stop the environmental laws ... that's what this is really all about," declared Rep. Bruce Vento, D-Minn.

Many Democrats also argued that claims could cost the government billions of dollars and force agencies to cut back needed programs since payments must come out of their budgets — and not the U.S. Treasury. No one could provide an estimate of cost, however.

"It's a blank check," Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., argued. Vento called it possibly "the biggest taxpayer bailout ever."

ARREST: Police link minister to Florida couple's killing their finances. They want to know whether Canning has victimized other church members.

Canning was held without bail on two charges of murder. Prosecutors would not say whether they will seek the death penalty.

"I'm absolutely shocked," said Maria Seitz, who knew the couple and sometimes accompanied them to church in this retirement community dotted with orange groves about 80 miles from Tampa. Canning "was one of the few people who looked after them."

Two weeks after the bodies were found, Canning delivered a half-hour eulogy over their ashes at Pinecrest Cemetery.

"I'm proud they asked me to be their son," the minister said, clutching a Bible. "I'm proud I could call them Mom and Dad."

Canning explained to two dozen mourners how he had officiated at the couple's wedding seven years ago. Shortly after the wedding, he said, the childless couple asked to "adopt" the pastor and his wife.

"Some of you today have been longtime friends of Mom and Dad for many months or many years," Canning said at the service. "But I doubt if any one of you has been any closer than my wife and I have."

Mrs. Gleese was a retired hairstylist who moved to Sebring in 1974 from Tolley, N.D. Gleese was a retired draftsman who moved from Warren, Pa., in 1969.

The couple were founding members of the 8-year-old Fountain of Life Church, which had a congregation of about 50 mostly elderly people who met in a temporary warehouse sanctuary.

Although they spent most of their time inside their house in the months before their deaths, the couple had regularly ministered at the Avon Park state prison nearby.

Mrs. Gleese taught a Bible study class at a condominium, and her husband delivered hot meals to shut-ins for a Christian group.

"They loved their fellow man," Canning said in his eulogy. "They cared about others, perhaps too much."

TALK: Johnson focuses on film stars, war anecdotes

ed anecdotes than he did on the home-front's war effort and the war itself.

His appearance in Midland was part of the World War II symposium, "Pilots & Poster Girls," on the 50th anniversary of the end of the war.

The three-day symposium is being sponsored by the Confederate Air Force's American Airpower Heritage Museum and Midland College.

What perhaps was Johnson's most poignant moment was his recalling his visit to France last year on the 50th anniversary of the D-Day Invasion and surveying the thousands of "white crosses" that mark the graves of young warriors.

With him in that solemn moment was pre-war and wartime actress Marlene Dietrich, who sang sadly about warring and dying: "Where have all the flowers gone, long time passing? Where have all the young men gone ...? When will they ever learn?"

In his program, Johnson presented a compilation of film clips of many of his 125-plus movies, including "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," "Command Decision" with Clark Gable and "The Caine Mutiny" with Humphrey Bogart.

In "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," Johnson played the role of Ted Lawson, a B-25 pilot who wrote the book on which the film was based. Tracy played Doolittle's role.

In a land-based romantic scene before the raid, Johnson, the aviator, is wooing actress Phyllis Thaxter, whom he compares to the Army Air Corps' two-boom Lightning pursuit aircraft: "You're prettier than the P-38."

At noon on Friday, before a panel discussion on "Women at War" in the Midland Hilton, World War II "Poster Girl" Margie Stewart Johnson recalled her home-front role in the war effort and, at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's request, of her paying a morale-boosting visit to American military servicemen in Europe in 1945. She entered Germany, much to the delight of the troops, in a gingham dress.

In introducing Mrs. Johnson, Midland College's Deana L. Lusk spoke of Mrs. Johnson's wit and her enduring beauty that is " wonderfully short of perfection."

In today's "Pilots & Poster Girls" sessions in the CAF Hangar, World War II American aces in the Army Air Corps, Navy and Marine Corps will review their wartime experiences in the war's European Theatre and Pacific Theatre. The sessions begin at 9 a.m.

In a noon luncheon, British World War II Spitfire pilot Jeremy Howard-Williams is to talk on his wartime recollections. His lecture subjects include "The Spitfire," "The Battle of Britain," "Swordfish V.C.," "D-Day," "The German V-Weapons" and the German Luftwaffe Heinkel bombers "On the Deck."

OUTBREAK: Basin sees no cases

and another vaccination clinic was planned in Longview for Tuesday.

While the disease has worried East Texas health officials, it has yet to make an appearance in the Permian Basin.

"It has not turned up in the area so far," said Monette Burke, Midland Health Department administrator. "We had one death that was thought to have been caused by meningitis, but after an investigation, we found out that was not the case."

Ms. Burke said the disease has shown up "pretty rarely" in West Texas and no cases have been reported in the past several years.

Meningitis is a bacterial infection that afflicts the brain and spinal cord and is typically transmitted through close physical contact, such as sneezing and coughing, according to health officials. The best known treatments involve antibiotics.

Between 10 and 20 percent of people who contract the disease will die, officials said.

Meningitis usually strikes children and the elderly; however, many East Texas cases involved residents in their 20s and 30s. One woman who got the disease was 49.

Last year, the state recorded 230 cases of meningitis; in 1993, the caseload totaled 157.

The all-time state record was 327 cases in 1981.

Some 'healthy' frozen entrees may not be so, research group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of those low-calorie frozen dinners are more like snacks than square meals. And, not only that — you're not getting enough veggies!

So says the research group that took some of the fun out of going to the movies when it reported last fall that a medium-sized bucket of theater buttered popcorn contains 43 grams of fat.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest says low-calorie, frozen dinners are not an acceptable nutritional substitute for a well-balanced meal. And some of the portions are simply too stingy, the center said.

Many dieters who enroll in weight-loss programs purchase dieter-friendly frozen food entrees to ensure they're adhering to their program's daily vegetable, protein, bread and fat intake.

The frozen entrees are low-fat low-salt and low-cal, because they're low-size, says the center. "Some of the portions are so small that they might better be described as snacks than meals or entrees."

Federal funds are second largest source for state, comptroller says

AUSTIN (AP) — Funds from the federal government were the second-largest source of money for Texas state government last year, the state comptroller's office reported Friday.

State taxes brought in the most money, $19.2 billion. That was 56.5 percent of total 1994 revenues, according to the state's latest Comprehensive Annual Financial Report.

The federal government gave Texas $9.1 billion last year, 6.3 percent more than the $8.5 billion received in 1993, the report said.

Federal money accounted for almost as much as the state's biggest tax, the sales tax, which generated $9.8 billion for the Treasury in the fiscal year that ended Aug. 31, 1994.

State taxes and federal money increased by nearly the same percentage from 1993. Taxes were up 6.2 percent; federal revenues were up 6.3 percent.

The comptroller's office said the additional federal money largely was due to an increase in receipts for health and human services programs.

"The state collected $33.9 billion in total revenues, an increase of 7 percent compared to 1993," said Comptroller John Sharp. The 1993 total was $31.7 billion.

"The state spent 33.1 billion in 1994, an 8.1 percent increase over 1993," Sharp added.

Sharp said the key reason for the spending increase was construction of new prisons.

Texas is in the process of doubling its prison system to about 145,000 beds. Spending on public safety and corrections programs rose by 21.3 percent, to $2.49 billion last year.

"Texas' largest expenditure is for health and human services," the report said. In 1994, that totaled $13.9 billion, or 41.8 percent of total spending. It was an increase of $1.1 billion, or 9 percent, over 1993.

The second-largest item of state spending was education, which totaled $9.4 billion, or 28.3 percent of the total. Education received an increase of $298 million, or 3.3 percent, over the previous year.

Mourners gather, pay their respects to slain journalist

MOSCOW (AP) — Mourners waited in a mile-long line Friday to pay their last respects to a slain journalist, in a huge outpouring of grief reminiscent of farewells to Kremlin leaders.

The killing of Vladislav Listyev, a program host who recently was named executive director of state-run TV, has shaken Russians and renewed criticism of the government for its inability to combat mounting crime.

The Interior Ministry released sketches of two men suspected of shooting Listyev on Wednesday night outside his apartment building in central Moscow. The sketches were broadcast Friday on all television stations.

Tens of thousands of mourners lined up outside Ostankino headquarters, where his open casket was on view inside a television studio decorated with dozens of wreaths.

"I'll never be able to look at this room the same way again," said fellow Ostankino executive Oleg Kharpov as he watched people streaming past.

"No one else in this country would attract such a crowd, not even (Boris) Yeltsin," said Irina Stepanova, a pensioner waiting outside in the cold wind.

Newspapers honored Listyev by devoting entire, black-bordered front pages to his death, a practice once reserved for Soviet leaders.

The death is widely assumed to be a contract killing. The motive is still unclear.

Police investigator Nikolai Kulikov told the ITAR-Tass news agency that the killing clearly resulted from financial conflicts, although full details weren't yet known.

Many speculated that the killing was linked to the battle over Ostankino's lucrative advertising. Listyev was to be in charge of reorganizing Ostankino's advertising, and had supported a controversial ban on all ads on state-run television announced last week.

The daily Komsomolskaya Pravda estimated advertising income this year at $170 million, saying "the first blood has spilled" in the fight over that money.

But a leading advertising agency manager played down the advertising connection, calling it a political murder.

Salinas suspends his hunger strike protest

Salinas has said he did not attempt to impede the investigation, but many Mexicans suspect him of involvement anyhow.

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — Former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari on Friday canceled a hunger strike he called the day before in a bid to counter implications that he had somehow blocked probes into a political assassination last year.

The Mexican attorney general's office issued a statement Friday saying it had no evidence that Salinas was involved in any cover-up of the March 23 slaying of Luis Donaldo Colosio, the presidential candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

"Any information (to the) contrary is baseless and distracts from the correct path of the investigations," the brief statement said.

Salinas, who hand-picked Colosio as the PRI candidate, has said he did not attempt to impede the investigation, but many Mexicans suspect him of involvement anyhow.

Trying to rescue his reputation, Salinas, 46, declared Thursday night that he would starve to death if necessary, unless the government cleared him in the Colosio case and quit blaming him solely for Mexico's current economic crisis.

"It's a question of personal honor," Salinas told an interviewer with the Azteca television network late Thursday. "Every day the judgments against me grow.

"The most valuable thing I possess is my life," he said. "And I am ready to give it in exchange for the truth."

By suspending his hunger strike, Salinas saved President Ernesto Zedillo, who replaced him as president Dec. 1, the embarrassment of having his mentor starve in a public protest against the government. Salinas named Zedillo the PRI's presidential candidate after Colosio's death.

However, the attorney general's statement apparently absolving Salinas of involvement in an alleged cover-up of the Colosio killing is certain to anger many Mexicans who, according to polls, rallied to support Zedillo following the arrest of Salinas' brother, Raul, this week.

Although Carlos Salinas isn't going hungry today, he has had a bad week: On Sunday, more than 96 percent of nearly 700,000 people who voted in an unofficial nationwide referendum agreed with the statement that Salinas should be put on trial for various alleged crimes.

On Tuesday, Raul Salinas was arrested on charges of masterminding the Sept. 28 assassination of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, a former brother-in-law and the No.2 politician in the ruling party.

On Wednesday, Carlos Salinas withdrew from a three-way race to head the World Trade Organization after Clinton administration officials publicly expressed doubts about him.

On Thursday, a poll published in the Mexico City newspaper Reforma indicated that more than two-thirds of those surveyed thought Carlos Salinas had something to do with the Ruiz Massieu assassination and the Colosio murder.

On Friday, while the attorney general's office said it had uncovered no evidence against Carlos Salinas in the Colosio killing, it said the evidence against Raul Salinas was "overwhelming." The statement said there was "personal animosity" between Raul Salinas and Ruiz Massieu and added that Raul Salinas had close links with another man accused of planning the assassination.

Taken together, the week's events have proved a major downsizing for the man Newsweek magazine called "The Giant Killer" in a 1989 cover story and who once was praised the world over as a bold economic reformer who had single-handedly carried Mexico to the doorstep of the developed world.

The World in brief

■ Jail overcrowding critical, officials say

GENEVA — Overcrowding in Rwandan jails is killing an estimated 250 to 300 prisoners a month, U.N. human rights officials said Friday.

People are dying from lack of food, disease and mistreatment by prison guards, the rights workers said.

"Prisons are our worst area of concern in Rwanda," said Georg Mautner-Markhof of the Center for Human Rights. "People cannot even lie down overnight because they are crammed into cells."

Mass arrests in Rwanda following last year's massacres have increased the prison population to about 25,000.

■ Court acquits man of beating charge

OSLO, Norway — A man who admitted regularly beating his girlfriend was acquitted because a court ruled the woman deserved it, newspapers reported Friday.

Angry women's groups called the ruling a setback for Norway, which prides itself on being a model of sexual equality.

"I can't imagine that this ruling would be allowed to stand... It would be a step back to a bygone era," said Ase Klundelien, head of the Norwegian Equal Rights Council.

A panel of judges in the western city of Bergen ruled this week, "The beatings must be seen in light of N.N. (the woman) more or less making a lifestyle out of provoking and irritating the accused so that he lost control."

Two lay judges said she "did not get more than she had to expect based on her behavior," according to the Oslo newspaper Dagbladet. The panel's professional judge dissented.

■ Four receive death sentence in China

BEIJING — A court sentenced four people to death in the kidnapping of five women and 80 children, most of them babies, an official report said Friday.

The court also sentenced 31 others to prison in China's largest kidnapping case since the Communists came to power in 1949.

A court in the southwestern city of Chongqing passed sentencing on Feb. 24, the China Youth News reported.

Chinese authorities have been battling the growing illicit trade in women and children for several years with little success.

Women are bought by bachelors in poor villages, where many of the young women have left to work in the cities. Childless couples will buy a child, and trade in male children is particularly brisk because of the traditional preference for boys to carry on the family name.

British trader to fight extradition, lawyer says

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The trader accused of bringing down Britain's oldest investment bank by betting the wrong way on the Tokyo market will fight extradition by citing Singapore's human rights record, his lawyer said Friday.

About $1 billion in trading losses rung up by Nicholas Leeson, 28, drove Baring Brothers and Co. into receivership last week.

Leeson was ordered by a Frankfurt court to remain in pre-extradition custody. He and his 23-year-old wife, Lisa Simms, were arrested Thursday morning at Frankfurt's airport following a flight from Malaysia. His wife has since been released and gone to Britain.

The ruling by the Frankfurt court came after three Singapore officials delivered an arrest warrant and extradition request for Leeson, who disappeared last week when the Barings losses became known.

The warrant, based on a complaint by the bank, charges Leeson with "forgery for the purpose of fraud," and carries a maximum sentence of seven years in prison, a Singapore official said.

In the warrant, Singapore authorities allege that Leeson forged a document, confirming a payment of $81 million by a nonexistent client, German television reported.

The alleged forged document indicated a U.S. client paid a large sum worth millions of dollars into an account with Citibank in the name of Baring Futures, according to a report Friday in the London Evening Standard.

Neither prosecution nor defense attorneys commented on the reports Friday.

Frankfurt prosecutor Hans-Hermann Eckert said the extradition process could take four months or more to resolve.

Leeson reportedly made losing wrong bets on which way the Tokyo stock market would go, costing the bank $1 billion and forcing its collapse Sunday.

A Dutch bank, the ING Group, is believed first in line to take over the banking institution that includes Queen Elizabeth among its clients by assuming all its liabilities — for 1 pound, or $1.60

British fraud investigators meanwhile opened their own probe Friday into Leeson's activities. A British police official was in Frankfurt. Leeson also hired a British lawyer.

Leeson's German lawyer, Eberhard Kempf, said Leeson would be willing to return home to Britain even if he faced charges there, rather than be extradited to Singapore.

Leeson did not want to go to Singapore "because of the judicial and human rights situation in Singapore," Kempf said.

Hussein's throat surgery for cyst is successful

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein underwent successful throat surgery Friday to remove a cyst that had caused recurring nasal and ear infections and forced the monarch to curtail his favorite hobby — flying.

An official announcement said Hussein, 59, was in excellent condition and recuperating well at the Hussein Medical Center, one of the most sophisticated hospitals in the Mideast.

His personal physician, Dr. Samir Farraj, said an Austrian doctor assisted in the surgery, performed under local anesthesia, but would not identify the doctor.

Southwestern Bell Is Offering "21st Century" Technology... AGAIN!

BEWARE OF MONOPOLIES BEARING GIFTS!

Southwestern Bell Telephone
Is Making Big Promises To Keep Its Monopoly.

Five years ago, Southwestern Bell made a deal with the Texas Public Utility Commission: the PUC would postpone rate hearings and loosen regulation if Bell would upgrade telecommunications technology around the state. This deal did not work! Southwestern Bell's profits are close to tops in the nation...but Texas ranks close to the bottom in advanced telephone technology. Now Bell is at the Texas Legislature with yet another deal: to invest $1 billion in overdue improvements, but only if its earnings are kept under wraps, competition stalled, and regulation further diluted. It's time to give the Bell monopoly a wake-up call; it's time to give consumers and businesses alike a choice in local telephone service; and it's time to open the information superhighway in Texas to fair competition. If you own a phone, use a computer, subscribe to a newspaper or watch television, the telecommunications debate in the Texas Legislature will dramatically affect you and your family. Make your voice heard in Austin above the promises of Southwestern Bell's powerful monopoly.

Send Your State Legislators A Message–Now!

Event 'springs' into fashion for PBCBWTC

Among the fashions presented by Robbie Casey's Thursday at the "Into a New Light" forum, luncheon and fashion show at Midland Country Club were this light and swingy short skirt and jacket, above; and pants separates in teal, below. Hats were a favorite accessory, and many of the styles shown included head gear.

Staff Writer

March came in like a polar bear, but that didn't stop almost 250 men and women from braving the arctic blast of winter to attend "Into a New Light" forum, luncheon and fashion show. The event, which benefited Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, took place Thursday at Midland Country Club.

Included in the $25 per person event was a luncheon catered by Midland Country Club, and a fashion show presented by Robbie Casey's.

Mary Ann Brock, president of the board of directors for the PBCBWTC, said the event wasn't strictly a fund-raiser. "It's a consciousness-raising session. We ... have a speaker who will speak on the issues of family violence. It's (family violence) certainly nothing new here."

Nor is family violence new on a national level. "Our rate of calls went up since the O.J. thing broke," Ms. Brock said, referring to sports hero O.J. Simpson, who is currently on trial for allegedly murdering his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and Ron Goldman. Simpson and his ex-wife are reported to have had a volatile relationship.

THE PERMIAN Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children was founded so women and their children could have a safe place to stay if needed to remove themselves from an abusive home situation. "The Center houses up to 64 women and children at one time, and it stays well-housed all the time," said Ms. Brock. The phone number at the Center is 683-1300.

Although, "It would be wonderful if we raised some money," Ms. Brock said, Thursday's event was not "designed for any fund raising." In fact, the main fund-raiser for the Center is the annual Walk-A-Thon and Family Fun Fair, scheduled this year for April 22 at Windlands Park, she said.

In her opening remarks, Eleanor Josting, executive director of PBCBWTC, told the crowd that "in our 16-year history we've never had an event quite like this."

She said women and children can live at the Center for up to 90 days. PBCBWTC, in addition to providing housing for women and children who need a place of refuge from abusive living arrangements, the Center provides counseling and support for the women, for the children and also for the abusers, to help stop the cycle of abuse in the family throughout the generations, Ms. Josting added.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Marlene Bruce, program director for Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, was featured speaker at the "Into a New Light" forum, luncheon and fashion show presented Thursday at Midland Country Club.

"NEVER HAS awareness (of family violence) been as high as it is now," Ms. Josting said.

Marlene Bruce, program director at the Center, spoke on the reason why the Center was founded and about the women who seek shelter there. "Family violence has been a subject of darkness ... a secret" in women's lives for years, she said. Often, women who are victims of family violence are allowed to have no opinions of their own, are given no space "even in their own homes," are forced to turn over their own money to the abuser, "are hit, kicked, punched, usually in places that don't show, are threatened with weapons and even sometimes killed by the person who vowed to love and cherish them."

Half of all women in this country will be abused, at some time in their lives, 'by an intimate partner, and ... every 15 seconds in the United States a woman is abused by her intimate partner.'

—Marlene Bruce,
program director, PBCBWTC

Ms. Bruce quoted statistics that show half of all women in this country will be abused, at some point in their lives, "by an intimate partner, and that every 15 seconds in the United States a woman is abused by her intimate partner."

Some of these women are able to leave their abusive relationships, but "many return time and time again because of (societal) pressure to do so."

THE CENTER was founded to give these women and their children a place of refuge and a time to begin making changes in their lives. The Center provides "a positive atmosphere, a sense of renewal," Ms. Josting said.

After Ms. Bruce's and Ms. Josting's remarks, the audience was served a luncheon of salad, chicken breast, twice-baked potatoes, seasoned beans and chocolate cake with fudge frosting.

The weather outside was frosty, but the fashions shown were strictly springtime. Casual wear included lots of red and denim; baseball-inspired designs, complete with "baseball" hats; knit tops in stripes, including navy and white, green and white, red and white, yellow and white; animal prints; swingy short skirts; day wear and office wear; cocktail dresses, including the classic "little black dress;" and evening wear with glitter and lace.

Committee members for the event, introduced by Ms. Josting, were Cindi Benson, Cheri Hill, Ann Reed and Claire Woodcock.

SPONSORS WERE Lynda Beal, Susan Brown, Lynn Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Craig Jr., Mary Frances Driscoll, Rhonda Durham, Rosalind Redfern Grover, Sam Guyton, Vicki Hailey-Southwestern Bell, Kathryn Hardwick, Joan Holt, Susan Horton, Elizabeth Locker, Sherry O'Kelley, Jean Pittman, Linda Powell, Ms. Reed, Vee K. Hot soup made low-fat way

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Packaged mixes save time when you're trimming the fat from your diet. They're also handy for creating a meal at a moment's notice. The recipe below transforms a fiber-rich lentil pilaf mix into a chunky, low-fat soup that contains only 2 grams of fat per bowlful.

CURRIED LENTIL AND BEAN SOUP

3 cups water
14½-ounce can lower-sodium chicken broth (about 1¾ cups)
6¾-ounce package lentil pilaf mix
1 tablespoon curry powder
½ cup frozen peas
16-ounce can lower-sodium tomatoes, cut up
15-ounce can great Northern beans, rinsed and drained

In a 4-quart Dutch oven combine water, broth, dry lentil mix and seasonings from packet, and curry powder. Bring mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes. Add peas; cook, uncovered, for 5 to 10 minutes more or until lentils are tender. Stir in undrained tomatoes and beans; heat through.

Astronomers battle nature for best viewing spot at frigid South Pole

By Malcolm W. Browne
N.Y. Times News Service

The hostile polar environment reaches even into the warmest nooks of this sprawling station to wreck computers, distort data and complicate the pursuit of knowledge.

AMUNDSEN-SCOTT SOUTH POLE STATION, Antarctica — The South Pole lies in the coldest, driest, highest desert in the world, above most of the earth's turbulent atmosphere, and with a continuous unpolluted nighttime view of the heavens during nearly five months of winter darkness. It is an astronomer's paradise.

But the South Pole is not yielding its favors to science without a struggle.

Scientists, engineers and construction experts have labored hard during the past several years to make the Pole a world-class astronomy center, and their efforts have begun to bear fruit.

Large optical and radio telescopes are sprouting across the featureless white landscape, lasers are probing the stratosphere high over the polar plateau and sensors buried a half mile deep under the icecap are recording the arrival of neutrinos from the outer reaches of the universe.

South Pole Station is now home to some 140 scientists and support technicians during the peak of the summer research season — most of them living in canvas huts — and many more would come if there were facilities for them.

But despite the boom in observatory-building at the South Pole, technological progress has not entirely voided the assessment recorded 83 years ago by Capt. Robert F. Scott, the doomed leader of the first British expedition to reach the Pole: "Great God! this is an awful place..."

The Pole is 9,301 feet above sea level, and its air pressure is frequently equivalent to elevations of more than 10,000 feet in other parts of the world. Physical discomfort — frost-bitten noses in temperatures that drop below minus 110 degrees Fahrenheit and strenuous exertion in air so thin that it saps strength and endurance — are only part of the challenge. The hostile polar environment reaches even into the warmest nooks of this sprawling station to wreck computers, distort data and complicate the pursuit of knowledge. With the humidity level of the air close to zero, static electrical charges build up everywhere, snapping destructive sparks through the electronic vitals of sensitive apparatus whenever they find a chance.

Even with electrically grounded floors, desk tops, scientific instruments, fuel lines and the like, experts like Drew Logan are on call around the clock to repair the havoc wrought by stray electrical discharges and other polar menaces. Buildings and laboratories at South Pole Station are as dry and flammable as tinder, and a practice fire alarm is treated with the vigor of a wartime call to battle stations.

Conditions at the South Pole are unlike those anywhere else on earth, sometimes benefiting science, sometimes thwarting it and often springing surprises. The ambivalent effects of the polar environment are typified by the fortunes of a project called AMANDA, an acronym for Antarctic Muon and Neutrino Detector Array.

The object of AMANDA, like that of DUMAND (for Deep Underwater Muon and Neutrino Detector), a somewhat similar system sited in the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Hawaii, is to detect and measure traces of the neutrinos that bombard the earth from a variety of celestial sources.

Neutrinos are among the most elusive subnuclear particles because they have no electric charge and little or no mass; the likelihood of any speeding neutrino colliding with an atom along its course through the universe is so remote that nearly all the neutrinos reaching the earth pass right through it, unimpeded by almost 8,000 miles of solid matter.

But once in a great while a particularly unlucky neutrino bangs into an atom, spawning a negatively-charged particle called a muon. Some of the speeding muon's energy is drained away into a kind of shock wave of light called Cherenkov radiation. This light, observable as a brief blue flash, passes through transparent mediums like water and ice, and can be detected by light sensors.

Neutrinos interest astrophysicists because these particles, emitted at differing energy levels by stars like the sun and by supernova explosions, offer a novel means of studying objects and events that are otherwise concealed from the earth.

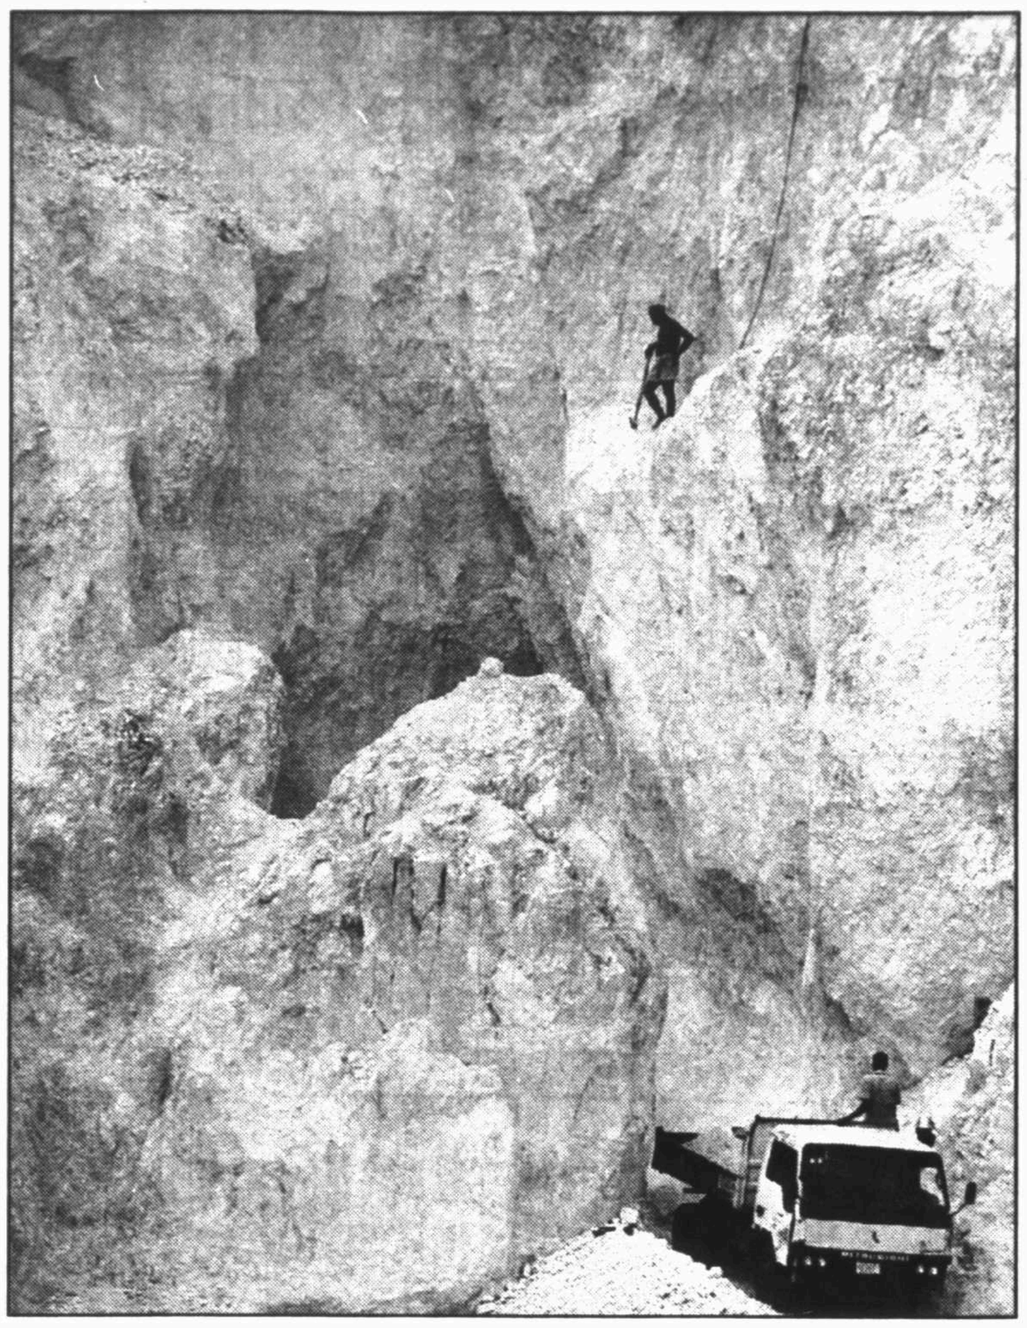

Since neutrinos carry clues about their origins and can pass almost unobstructed through any kind of matter, they potentially endow astronomers with the equivalent of X-ray eyes capable of peering into the depths of thermonuclear processes and other cosmic events.

Moreover, if it turns out that neutrinos have some slight mass — and recent experiments have produced evidence that some of them may — their combined mass could account for a substantial fraction of the entire mass of the universe. This proposition would have profound implications for the science of cosmology, which seeks to decipher the structure, origin and fate of the universe.

Problems with three underwater neutrino experiments (in waters off Hawaii and Greece and in Siberia's Lake Baikal) left the South Pole's AMANDA as the best short-term hope for looking for high-energy cosmic neutrinos.

During the 1993-94 summer season, scientists here used hot water jets to drill four deep holes in the polar icecap, in which they embedded four detector "strings," each one a long cable fitted with 20 Cherenkov light detectors spaced at intervals of about 33 feet.

The detectors, encased in thick glass capsules capable of withstanding gigantic pressures, were placed at depths of between 2,625 and 3,281 feet in the ice, and scientists led by Dr. Robert M. Morse of the University of Wisconsin in Madison hoped that the ice at that depth would be sufficiently transparent to transmit undeflected Cherenkov flashes over reasonably long distances.

On the first official day of work following a three-day carnival holiday, a worker takes a break before returning to his job of chipping small pieces of stone from a quarry in Kensoff, Haiti, a town in the mountains above Port-au-Prince, Thursday. The stone will be loaded into the truck below and used for construction.

War threatens future of foreign investment in Croatia

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Foreign investment is trickling into Croatia for the first time since it gained independence in the violent breakup of old Yugoslavia, but it may dry up quickly if spring brings more war.

A marbled three-level shopping mall stuffed with Western goods has just opened in downtown Zagreb, drawing thousands. McDonald's is advertising jobs in its first restaurant. Western industrial heavyweights are rumored to be moving in.

But the government's decision to evict the 12,000 U.N. peacekeepers separating Croat and rebel Serb forces beginning March 31 could plunge Croatia back into war.

"If the withdrawal ... signals a new war, then almost certainly we can count on a collapse of Croatian economy," said Ivo Jakovljevic, an economic writer at Zagreb's main Vjesnik newspaper. "Investments and the smell of gunpowder don't mix."

The six-month war which broke out after Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia in 1991 left at least 10,000 people dead, 270,000 homeless, and nearly a third of the country under control of rebel Serbs. More than 40 percent of Croatia's industry was badly damaged.

The government has estimated that war damage and the dispute over Serb-held territories have cost more than $16 billion.

Croatia has been largely peaceful since the U.N. soldiers arrived in early 1992. But President Franjo Tudjman's government fears the U.N. presence is freezing Serb gains rather than leading to reintegration of land they hold.

Croatian leaders insist they will be able to avoid a new war when the United Nations leaves.

"It is clear that a country with reform projects like Croatia's has no desire to go to war," said Premier Nikica Valentic.

Croatian officials indicated they do not want to jeopardize an economic agreement with the Serb rebels, which international mediators hoped would lead to peaceful reintegration of Serb-held territories.

It already has opened a stretch of Croatia's main highway that is under Serb control, and the main oil pipeline. The Serbs say they will stick to those points, but won't expand the agreement until Croatia rethinks the U.N. pullout.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Innovators will enjoy the greatest business success. New products that startle or amuse should not be ignored. Let loved ones know that your personal finances must have top priority. A regular savings and investment program is essential. As 1995 progresses, you feel better equipped to deal with sensitive subjects. Feuding family members bury the hatchet. Spouses who have complementary talents could make a good business team. Be sure to agree on who has the final say.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: anthropologist Dr. Jane Goodall, actress Paula Prentiss, Metallica bassist Jason Newsted, Supremes singer Mary Wilson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Love beckons from afar. Sail along with a spirit of achievement and you will soon ride a wave of prosperity. A shopping trip uncovers wonderful bargains.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You or a romantic partner could come up with a dreamy travel plan. Someone may suddenly decide to head for the marriage-license bureau. Buy real estate as soon as you can afford it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Household projects enjoy highly favorable influences. Seek loved ones' input before making major alterations. They may pitch in and help. News from someone at a distance has romantic implications.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is easier to handle small upsets when good cheer surrounds you. A close associate's success gives you the incentive to pursue a new course of action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your charm continues to mesmerize, bringing a pleasant replay of recent events. Tie up any loose ends related to a prior romantic commitment. A clean break is best. Keep a close eye on spending.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A change of scenery could be just what you need. Welcome a last-minute invitation. Although some family members applaud a romantic choice, others are critical.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your feet planted firmly on the ground or money and joint assets could slip through your fingers. A long engagement is advised for couples who have not known each other long. Be patient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It may be difficult to avoid a clash with someone who has wild spending ideas. Save your money. Income tax time is just around the corner. Not a good time to apply for more credit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A restless mood could muddle your usually excellent judgment. Avoid taking any unnecessary risks. Putting too much faith in strangers could cost you money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Joining forces with others is the best way to hasten progress on the financial front. Strive to develop greater rapport with a member of the opposite sex. Two can accomplish a lot more than one!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Halfway measures will not solve a business-related problem. Stand firm. Those who have been pressuring you lately will let up soon. Parents should try harder to understand the actions of their children.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day to shop for items that will add beauty to your home. A time-saving appliance also deserves a close look. Singles seeking a new love connection should get out and circulate!

Injured once, Dustin Hoffman likes to keep stunt work out of repertoire

LOS ANGELES — Stunt work is just not part of Dustin Hoffman's repertoire.

"I was really badly injured in my 20s and I was hospitalized for a month," he said. "I learned right then and there that I wasn't God's favorite, which is what we'd all like to think.

"So I stopped crossing the street at a red light from that moment on. I really think I can get taken out at any time."

But what about that scene in his latest movie, "Outbreak," where he jumps from a low-flying helicopter?

"Well, I did that jump from the helicopter onto a mattress on a sound stage. It was very dangerous," the actor joked during an "Entertainment Tonight" interview for broadcast Monday.

"Outbreak" opens nationwide on March 10.

NEW YORK — Miss America Heather Whitestone is under attack for speaking out.

Miss America defends her method of communication.

Whitestone, who is deaf, has been criticized by other deaf people for using her voice instead of sign language.

"A lot of us feel she shouldn't represent us to the mainstream world," said Teresa Ezzell, an official of Gallaudet University, the Washington school for the deaf.

The 22-year-old Whitestone said in USA Weekend magazine: "I've never advocated one communication method over another. It hurts me to be misunderstood."

"I want to feel comfortable with myself. I am comfortable speaking," she said.

LONDON — Rue McClanahan is going from TV's "Golden Girls" to the West End stage for a role alongside a big invisible bunny.

She and British comic actor Gordon Kaye will star in "Harvey," the play about an alcoholic who befriends a tall, unseen rabbit named Harvey.

The production opens on London's West End on May 18 for a 17-week run.

PLAINS, Ga. — The house that Jimmy and Rosalynn built is becoming public property.

Former President Carter and his wife have donated their house and about five surrounding acres to the National Park Service to become part of the Jimmy Carter National Historic Site. The Carters built the house in 1961.

"We decided shortly after leaving the White House that this is what we wanted to do, and we've checked with our four children and they all approve," Carter said.

The Carters will retain the use of the home during their lifetimes, under an agreement similar to those the Park Service had with the families of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Johnson.

The house and grounds eventually will be opened for guided tours.

A president's home is "a snapshot of that individual, but also it's reflective of the nation as a whole," Fred Boyles, Carter Historic Site superintendent, said Thursday.

PONTIAC, Mich. — The IRS is after the R-E-S-P-E-C-T woman.

Court records show IRS placed a lien on Franklin's house.

Court records show the IRS placed a $489,525 lien on Aretha Franklin's home in suburban Bloomfield Township on Feb. 14 because of unpaid taxes.

In 1993, the soul singer paid more than $225,000 in back taxes to the IRS.

Franklin's home is valued for property taxes at more then $1 million.

There was no comment from the singer Friday. Her telephone numbers are unlisted.

Earl Blackwell, a society impresario who made his fortune keeping track of celebrities, died Wednesday at Roosevelt Hospital in New York.

A Manhattan resident, he was 85 and also kept a home in Great Harbour Cay, the Bahamas.

He had suffered a long illness, said Vine Phoenix, his assistant for 40 years.

Blackwell came from Southern gentry and mingled easily with the international jet set, using his social connections to raise money for the less fortunate, particularly children in need.

Colorado senator defects to GOP camp over budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell abandoned the Democratic Party on Friday, saying his decision was sealed by sharp differences over the balanced-budget amendment. "I am very proud to be a Republican," Campbell said to the cheers of his new colleagues.

The announcement by the distinctive Coloradan, an American Indian with a ponytail who rides a motorcycle, capped months of discussions with Republicans and Democrats about a potential switch.

The timing gave Senate Republicans something to celebrate the day after Democrats blocked by one vote what the GOP had billed as its most important priority — the balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution.

"What a difference a day makes," said the jubilant Senate majority leader, Bob Dole of Kansas, at a festive news conference packed with Republican senators and aides.

Democrats quickly suggested that Campbell, 61, ought to quit and test the appeal of his new identity in a special election. They also asserted that his decision had more to do with friction among Colorado Democrats than with the direction of the national party.

"It was obvious to me there were some Colorado-specific factors at work," said President Clinton, who talked to Campbell at length in two Friday morning phone calls. "I wish he hadn't done it, but it's done. All I can do is hope he'll keep voting as he has for last two years."

Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., chairman of the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee, noted that 13 other Democrats voted for the balanced-budget amendment on Thursday "and felt just as strongly as Sen. Campbell," but the others are not bolting the party.

Campbell's defection boosts the GOP majority in the Senate to 54-46. His was the second switch since the November elections that put Republicans in charge; the first was by Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala.

Born in poverty, Campbell rose to become an Olympic athlete, businessman, rancher and maker of traditional Indian jewelry. He was the eighth American Indian elected to Congress, serving five years in the House before winning a Senate seat in 1992.

Campbell supports abortion rights and government nutrition programs now falling under the GOP budget-cutting knife. But he also favors term limits, a capital gains tax cut and the balanced-budget amendment — key elements of the Republican agenda.

"Five weeks on the balanced-budget debate has brought into focus that my personal beliefs and the Democratic Party are far apart," said Campbell, who has sponsored the amendment every time it has come up during his House and Senate tenure.

Democrats noted that Campbell votes with them 80 percent of the time and predicted he would be uncomfortable in his new party. Campbell himself said he would hold fast to some Democratic positions, such as the party's opposition to cuts in the federal school-lunch program.

That was "sometimes the only meal I got when I was a kid," Campbell said. "Everybody has to make their own decision. Mine is tempered by my own lifestyle. There are some things you just don't give up on."

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said Campbell should resign and let his constituents decide whether to send him back as a Republican.

Campbell refused, saying, "I don't think it's necessary to resign. I think the same people would still vote for me."

Kerrey conceded Campbell's conversion "unquestionably will help the Republicans in the short-term, politically." But he said the development reflects little more than "the shunning Sen. Campbell has felt from Colorado Democrats and the anger they felt toward him."

Lawyers leave alibi in shreds after Lopez's testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Staunchly insisting she was "100 percent" truthful, a Salvadoran maid finally escaped the witness stand at O.J. Simpson's murder trial Friday, her composure unshaken but her alibi story badly undermined.

As a tired Rosa Lopez started to leave the courtroom after three grueling days of testimony, the judge said, "All right. Good luck, Mrs. Lopez. Thank you."

"Thank you, sir," she said, bowing slightly. "You're very kind and I appreciate this."

Lopez is the only known defense witness who can place Simpson's Bronco outside his home at the time prosecutors contend he was killing his ex-wife and her friend two miles away. They say he drove the Bronco to and from the murder scene.

Lopez's determination to return to her native El Salvador disrupted the trial for a week and placed jurors on hold while attorneys argued about her and then questioned her extensively.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito refused a prosecution bid to order the troublesome witness back to court later, and with that, she was whisked away.

One point of contention between the legal teams was a taped interview with Lopez that Simpson's attorneys failed to turn over to prosecutors.

Moments after court recessed for the weekend, Ito slapped $950 fines on defense attorneys Johnnie Cochran Jr. and Carl Douglas for the late disclosure and falsely asserting the defense didn't have a tape of the interview.

In a strongly worded ruling, Ito also wrote that if the defense chooses to show jurors the videotape of Lopez's testimony, he would tell them the lawyers broke the law.

Lopez, pummeled one last time by prosecution cross-examination, insisted she had not been paid or promised anything for her testimony and was not expecting a financial windfall when she reaches El Salvador.

Lopez, pummeled one last time by prosecution cross-examination, insisted she had not been paid and was not expecting a financial windfall when she reaches El Salvador.

Despite having his key witness's testimony preserved on videotape, Cochran declined to say if he would play it for the jury. But he spoke to the importance of her alibi testimony: "This lady ... has said from Day 1 that she saw this Bronco out there after 10 o'clock. And if a jury believes that, if two jurors believe that, that's the end of this case for them."

Lopez, who said she grew weary on the witness stand, never changed her story — even when confronted with a tape recording of her own words, spoken in her own voice, that contradicted how she had described from the witness stand the hour she saw Simpson's Bronco.

"I said after 10," she adamantly declared again and again, speaking in Spanish translated by an interpreter.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden played back a tape of Lopez telling a Simpson private detective last July 29 that it was between 10:15 and 10:20 when she took her employer's golden retriever out for a walk.

At first, she casually agreed. "If that's what it says, 10:15 to 10:20, that's fine with me," she said.

Darden continued to grill her. Seizing on a pause in the taped interview, he suggesting the detective, William Pavelic, was perhaps feeding her information to provide a time frame that would help Simpson's case. She said that was not so.

"Let me say something," Lopez interjected. "When I heard my name on television with 10:15, 10:20 time, I called Mr. Johnnie Cochran's office and I said I have never given them a specific time."

Lopez's trial testimony, in its third day, was videotaped with the jury idle for the sixth consecutive court day. The defense may use the tape later if Lopez makes good on a threat to flee to her native El Salvador.

The defense, having assessed Lopez's vulnerabilities in this dress rehearsal, might also try to persuade her to return and appear in person when the defense begins its case.

Darden clearly implied that if Lopez does testify, the prosecution would call her friend Sylvia Guerra as a rebuttal witness. The prosecution asserts Guerra will say Lopez told her Simpson's lawyers were paying $5,000 for her testimony and that Guerra could collect the same amount if she, too, said she saw the Bronco that night.

"I never said that, sir," Lopez replied.

"Sylvia's lying?" Darden asked.

"100 percent, sir," Lopez said.

Darden then asked, "And you're telling the truth?"

"Yes," Lopez replied.

"100 percent?" he asked.

"100 percent," she answered in English.

Despite her dead-pan confidence, Lopez may be damaged goods as a defense witness. If she chooses to remain in El Salvador, legal experts say, the defense will have to decide whether the jurors should see her videotaped testimony at all.

"It's a difficult call, because Johnnie Cochran told the jury they would hear from her," said Erwin Chemerinsky, a law professor at the University of Southern California.

Head of Mormon Church, Howard Hunter, dies at 87

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Howard W. Hunter, already frail when he became president of the Mormon Church last spring, died Friday at age 87 after just nine months as "prophet, seer and revelator" of the 9 million-member faith.

The former corporate lawyer, who had suffered from prostate cancer, served the shortest tenure of any leader in the 165-year history of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

By tradition, Hunter will be succeeded by the church's senior apostle: 84-year-old Gordon B. Hinckley, a career church administrator. He will be ordained within a day or two of Hunter's funeral, which was not immediately set.

Hunter was the second-oldest man ever to become church president and the first born in this century.

During his ministry, Hunter eschewed the partisan politics of his ultraconservative predecessor, Ezra Taft Benson, a former U.S. agriculture secretary.

In his first public appearance as the church's 14th president in June, Hunter stressed the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. He also urged greater attendance at the church's 47 temples, which only faithful Mormons may enter.

"It would be the deepest desire of my heart to have every member of the church temple-worthy," he said.

Upon his death, President Clinton and Utah's all-Mormon congressional delegation and governor sent condolences.

Hunter was "everything we think of as good, honest, compassionate and loving," a man who "reached out to all, as did Christ, to reconcile people to the gospel," said Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch.

During nearly a quarter-century, Hunter was struck by a string of ailments that left him weak and unable to get around without an aluminum walker or motorized cart.

He underwent quadruple-bypass surgery in 1986, and in 1987 had operations for a bleeding ulcer and a painful lower-back condition. During gall bladder surgery in 1993 he had a bad reaction to medication and went into a three-week coma.

Before Hunter, the shortest presidency was that of Harold B. Lee, who died in 1973 after less than 17 months in office. The average presidency is 12 years; Mormon presidents serve for life.

In contrast to Hunter, Hinckley is vigorous and has no history of health problems. An apostle since 1961, he has worked in the church bureaucracy virtually his entire adult life and is widely considered an able administrator.

Hunter's survivors include his wife, Inis, and two sons, John and Richard, from a previous marriage, to Clair Jeffs, who died in 1983. A third son, Howard Jr., died in infancy in 1934.

The Nation in brief

■ Man is convicted for child's death

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A man was convicted Friday of throwing a bowling ball off an overpass and through a windshield, killing an 8-month-old girl.

Calvin Settle, 19, was found guilty of manslaughter in the 1994 death of Natalia Rivera of New York City and could get up to 10 years in prison April 7.

Settle had testified that the 16-pound ball had slipped out of his hands as he stood on the overpass. But two boys, ages 11 and 12, who were with Settle at the time said he heaved the ball onto the highway as a car passed underneath.

The ball bounced off a truck and hit Santos and Donna Rivera's car, killing their daughter in her car seat.

■ Handicapped can enjoy nude beach

MIAMI — No clothes, no tan lines, no obstacles: Dade County's only nude public beach has installed a wheelchair ramp that has handicapped sunbathers tickled pink all over.

"I'm really pleased that it's here, obviously," Fred Shotz, who has a joint disorder, said as he soaked up the sun in the buff. "It's a real benefit to people who are disabled who want to use this beach."

The county paid $18,500 for the 150-foot ramp, which stretches over the dunes to the half-mile "clothing-optional" strip of Haulover Beach.

The county also expects to spend up to $30,000 more on closer parking for disabled nudists.

Before the ramp was completed last month, Shotz had to call ahead to have a park employee wheel him over to the nude zone. Sometimes, several nudists would help out.

"People would come over the stairway and carry your stuff," Shotz said Thursday. "They even carried people in wheelchairs up the steps and down across the beach."

Haulover is Florida's only nude public beach with a ramp that makes it accessible to the disabled, said Shirley Mason, former president of South Florida Free Beaches, a nudist organization.

Activists demanded the ramp after Congress in 1990 passed the Americans With Disabilities Act, which requires that public accommodations be accessible to the handicapped.

■ Armed thief takes $60,000 in gems

BOSTON — In what seems to be an escalating jewelry crime spree in Boston's affluent Back Bay section, a New York diamond dealer has been robbed of $60,000 in gems at gunpoint in the Copley Place Garage.

Scott Cowan, president of Import Diamond Co. of New York City, was approached from behind as he walked to his parked car around 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

The gunman allegedly jammed a silver handgun into Cowan's back and demanded the black bag he was carrying. Police did not know where Cowan was coming from, or what jewelry stores he may have done business with during the day.

In the past month at least one Newbury Street jewelry store and Shreve Crump and Low have been targeted by robbers.

One Newbury Street jewelry dealer said he was surprised that a New York wholesaler was jumped.

"There's more to this than meets the eye. They're usually pretty streetwise," he said. "The guy must have been followed out of a jewelry store, and then maybe to dinner. They must have got him when his guard was down."

Astronauts have trouble aiming shuttle telescopes

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Endeavour's astronauts had trouble pointing the ultraviolet telescopes aboard the space shuttle Friday, just two days into their two-week astronomy mission.

"Boy, the (pointing system) is drifting all over the place," astronaut Ronald Parise grumbled.

Parise and Samuel Durrance, both astrophysicists, had to manually point one of the three telescopes, which are supposed to lock automatically on their targets via computer. The two scientists had to do the same thing in 1990 on the first, problem-plagued flight of the telescopes, which are called Astro.

The astronauts had to skip some stars Friday because of the pointing trouble. By evening, ground controllers had resolved most of that problem by having the crew change its procedures, said NASA's Dave Jacobson, chief engineer for the mission.

■ SHUTTLE UPDATE: Call Cityline 560-2400, enter 6204.

Charles Meegan, a NASA scientist on the ground, said there will be plenty of time to go back and focus on the lost targets: The 15 1/2-day mission is the longest shuttle flight planned by NASA.

Among the more than 600 possible targets are galaxies, quasars, the moon, Jupiter and Io, one of Jupiter's moons. Astronomers hope to observe a volcanic eruption on Io on Saturday.

As of Friday afternoon, the telescopes had focused — more or less — on several stars, as well as a remnant of an exploded star 1,500 light years away.

None of that was very useful to Arthur Davidsen, an astrophysicist at Johns Hopkins University. He is in charge of the telescope that needed manual pointing.

"We're not satisfied with what we've got so far," Davidsen said. "We're having some difficulty getting stable and precise pointing. But I think this can be overcome. This is very early still. I'm not worried — yet."

Dollar drops to new low despite rescue efforts by world's central bank

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dollar plunged to a record low against the Japanese yen and sank against most other currencies Friday, defying a rescue effort by the world's central banks and setting off alarms about a possible effect on stocks and interest rates.

The failure of the coordinated government dollar-buying intervention, which traders estimated at between $2 billion and $3 billion, left economists wondering just how far the U.S. currency might plunge.

"The dollar's new all-time lows are being generated by the U.S. ties to Mexico and the panic flight right now of funds away from weak-currency countries — Mexico, Canada and now the United States," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers in New York.

While a weaker dollar drives up inflation by making imports more expensive, analysts said the bigger threat to the U.S. economy was that currency turmoil could spill over into stock and bond markets if foreign investors start dumping their dollar-denominated assets.

A steep selloff in bonds could drive up interest rates for everything from home mortgages to business loans.

The bond market tumbled Friday with a sell-off in the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond, pushing its yield up to 7.53 percent, compared to a closing yield of 7.48 percent Thursday. The stock market, however, shook off the plunge in the dollar and the bond market, posting a 9.68 gain with the Dow Jones industrial average closing at 3,989.61.

The Clinton administration tried to calm market anxieties with a statement early Friday announcing it had authorized the Fed to intervene with other central banks to buy dollars, the first such coordinated intervention since June.

"A strong dollar is in our national interest," Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said in a prepared statement. "That is why we acted in the markets in concert with others."

President Clinton endorsed the Treasury's actions as appropriate but he declined further comment, saying he had learned as president "that anything I say on this subject is wrong."

The coordinated intervention began after the dollar sank to a postwar low against the Japanese yen during trading in Tokyo. The Bank of Japan began purchasing dollars and that was followed later in the day by purchases by the Federal Reserve and the central banks of Germany, Britain, Italy, France and nine other European countries.

Their effort followed a solo rescue attempt launched Thursday by the United States.

But in both cases, traders took advantage of the government buyers to dump dollars, sending the greenback even lower.

The dollar set a record low against the Japanese currency of 93.75 yen in trading in New York. It also fell during the trading day to a 28-month low against the German mark of 1.4255.

While the Germans participated in the international rescue effort, they could not resist a little boasting about the strength of their own currency.

"The D-mark is strong! It is now the international flight currency, in view of some uncertainty in world markets," German Finance Minister Theo Waigel said in a statement released in Bonn.

Economists blamed most of the dollar's weakness on America's huge trade merchandise trade deficit, which last year hit a record $166.3 billion, up 25 percent from the previous year.

The larger deficit means more dollars flowing into the hands of foreigners to pay for imports. The recent economic turmoil in Mexico increases pressure on the dollar, analysts said, because it threatens a further widening in the trade deficit due to the troubles in America's third largest export market.

Engineers can't prevent icing effects, officials say

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Engineers don't have the technology right now to prevent the icing suspected as the cause of a commuter plane crash in northern Indiana last October, an FAA official testified Friday.

The Federal Aviation Administration's ability to study the problem is hindered by lack of technology and the unpredictability of ice formations, said John Dow, an aviation safety engineer with the agency.

"I'm not sure if anybody in the world has numbers that can lead to an engineering solution to the problem," Dow said.

Dow testified at the National Transportation Safety Board's hearing into the Oct. 31 crash of an ATR-72 turboprop that killed all 68 aboard. The weeklong hearing concluded Friday.

American Eagle Flight 4184 was in a holding pattern in driving rain, waiting to land at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, when it crashed near Roselawn.

Officials have said the storm, which produced icy rain droplets at the plane's altitude of 10,000 feet, was not severe enough by itself to have caused the crash.

Investigators have said ice on the plane's wings may have disrupted their aerodynamic shape, reducing their lift.

Prop planes are believed to be more vulnerable to wing icing problems because they fly at lower altitudes where "super-cooled drizzle drops" form. Those are bits of moisture that remain liquid in below-freezing temperatures until they encounter a surface — such as an airplane wing — and crystallize.

After the Indiana crash, the ATR-72 was temporarily banned from flying in icing conditions.

Avions de Transport Regional, the plane's European manufacturer, defended its present de-icing system.

Company officials said an improved system with a larger boot, an inflatable rubber balloon that breaks ice off the top of the wings, should be installed on its planes by this summer.

FAA engineer Gary Lium testified Friday he believed the enhanced system would improve the plane's handling in icing conditions.

"If a modification is approved, we believe it will solve the problem we set out to solve," he said.

Teen pleads guilty in pizza killing incident

MIAMI (AP) — A boy who prosecutors say bought a pizza for some homeless people, then shot and killed a man who had reached for an extra slice, pleaded guilty to murder in a deal that will keep him from having to go to prison.

Under the deal reached Thursday, Chaffee Suarez, 14, will spend at least a year in a psychiatric hospital, then will face 20 years' probation.

Suarez, originally charged with first-degree murder, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the 1993 slaying of Manuel Dominguez.

Suarez had brought pizza for some men who congregate to smoke crack under Miami's elevated train by the banks of the Miami River.

Authorities said Dominguez grabbed two slices. Suarez objected, the two argued and, according to some witnesses, Dominguez slapped Suarez. The boy walked home, got a gun, came back and shot Dominguez, prosecutors said.

A first-degree murder conviction in Florida has only two possible sentences: death or life in prison with parole after 25 years.

"We're doing it because we feel he's worthy of the chance, despite the gravity of his crime," said prosecutor David I. Gilbert.

Jones brings alive West Texas

Actor stars in, directs Elmer Kelton novel

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — If a feature guy like Tommy Lee Jones is doing a TV movie, it's probably not your typical disease-of-the-week flick or docudrama fiasco. And "The Good Old Boys" is surely none of the above.

The film, which premieres at 7 p.m. (and repeats at 10 p.m.) Sunday on TNT, is a gentle character-driven western that not only stars Jones but was also written, directed and co-produced by the Oscar winner.

"The Good Old Boys" is Jones' own personal ode to the Old West cowboy and his disappearance from the prairie amid 20th-century advancements. As an atmospheric, emotive piece of filmmaking, it's superb because it never tries to hit you over the head with messages but instead calmly, and slowly, ropes you in.

In other words, this Jones guy is a pretty good actor. But he also may have a future in directing. As if with nine films in the past three years, he doesn't already work enough.

■ 'The Good Old Boys' airs at 7 and 10 p.m. Sunday on TNT (Cable Ch. 17).

■ COMING SUNDAY: Local profiles of author Elmer Kelton and director-actor Tommy Lee Jones, both native West Texans.

Set in 1906 Texas, "The Good Old Boys" (which originated as a 1978 novel by Elmer Kelton) finds Jones playing Hewey Calloway, an old-style cowboy who has spent his life to this point wrangling and takin' it easy and just sorta moseying around the prairie. But he understands that this newfangled age of cars and phones and electricity has forced him to re-evaluate things — since man no

From 'Glory Days' to 'Better Days' and back

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

Bruce Springsteen has seen both Glory Days and Better Days, which, ironically, happen to be two of the songs included on his "Greatest Hits" collection released earlier this week.

Bruce Springsteen won four Grammys for "Streets of Philadelphia, which is included in his "Greatest Hits" collection.

These days, Springsteen is seeing both.

There are a handful of sanctimonious music critics who have found it necessary to beat on Springsteen about the timing of the release of his hits collection to coincide with Tuesday night's Grammy Awards.

The critics have bellowed that the release of the package was a crass attempt at capitalizing on a couple of days of expected Grammy fame for Springsteen. The timing reeked of commercialism, the critics said; a stunt that should be beneath a man formerly thought of as the future of rock 'n roll.

I frankly doubt if all that many people outside of L.A. care that much about the Grammy Awards. The ceremony doesn't seem to mean just a whole lot to anyone not connected with the music industry. If you work in an office that does not house a music agent, music critic, record executive or "pop star," and if that office building does not sway during a 4.5 tremor, the main topic around the water cooler Thursday morning very well may not have been the Grammys.

Secondly, if Springsteen saw an opportunity to win a few new fans then more

When does a lead role become a supporting role?

By John Horn
AP Entertainment Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Anthony Hopkins appeared in only one-fifth of "The Silence of the Lambs" and won the best actor Oscar. Timothy Hutton was in most of "Ordinary People" and was called an Academy Award supporting actor.

This year, Oscar category confusion persists with "Pulp Fiction" and its star. Is it John Travolta, as many believe? Or Samuel L. Jackson, as others say?

The actors branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences nominated Travolta for best actor and Jackson for best supporting actor, prompting the debate over the proper fit.

"Had it been fair and honest, they both should have gone for the lead role," said one person who worked closely on the film, adding that Travolta and Jackson's talent agents weighed the chances each client would have in the respective categories, and made an "economic" decision.

■ The Reel World

"Pulp Fiction" maker Miramax Films maintains Travolta has twice Jackson's screen time, and his Vincent Vega hit man character ties together the movie's three story lines. Travolta also appears in a long scene with Uma Thurman from which Jackson, who plays hired killer Jules Winnfield, is absent.

When Travolta and Jackson are together, however, it's Jackson who does most of the talking.

"What you may end up with is Travolta has more screen time and Jackson has more lines," says Los Angeles Times film critic Peter Rainer, chairman of the National Society of Film Critics. "It's one of those gray areas that creates problems."

Everything goes as planned at Grammys

By Fred Shuster
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — There were the usual petty jealousies, outlandish outfits, temper flare-ups, simmering crushes and hints of substance abuse.

But outside the press room, the Grammy Awards ceremony was notable above all for its good mood and political subtext. No speeches were suddenly cut short when they became rambling diatribes, nominees weren't caught by the camera gritting their teeth and mouthing unpleasantries about winners, and nobody rushed out in an embarrassed, tear-stained huff.

Could the music industry have grown up? Or has it just become more accepting?

It's certainly embracing of both a variety of musical styles and the belated realization that pop music can address pressing social concerns in a mainstream, mass-appeal way.

That's why Bruce Springsteen's moving AIDS-themed "Streets of Philadelphia" won four Grammys — Song of the Year, Best Rock Song, Best Song Written Specifically for a Motion Picture or for Television and Best Male Rock Vocal Performance — at the 37th annual awards presentation.

■ Analysis

It's a song with a proven track record, having already won an Oscar, a Golden Globe and an MTV Video Music Award. On Wednesday, the slow, haunting

Clooney swooners are way outta control

When the television season began several months ago, the hustle and the bustle centered around a little program called "ER."

Patterson

"ER" tracks a team of residents and interns who serve hard-time in the emergency room of a county hospital in Chicago. The fact that the medical drama's ensemble cast meshed so well was hailed as one of the program's strong suits -- in the beginning.

But that is no longer the case. For proof, all you need do is pick up a recent copy of "TV Guide" or "GQ," or tune in to a recent episode of the rancid "Saturday Night Live" to see that the story of "ER" is now something called a George Clooney.

Early in the program's wildly-successful first year, the cast of the program was seen on the covers of "Newsweek", "Entertainment Weekly" and "TV Guide."

Pick up a magazine these days and you're likely to see but one actor: the lonely, half-shaven, head-cocking, half-smirking face of Clooney, who plays kid doctor Doug Ross on the Thursday night program.

Being a guy, I'm no expert on why this Clooney person is found to be so appealing. But, there's no denying the man can work a camera. I'm told women would leave their husbands for this hard-drinking, kid-loving pediatrician.

Clooney is the nephew of singer Rosemary Clooney, who was on an early-season episode as a disoriented woman suffering from the early stages of Alzheimer's. Ms. Clooney now jokes that after a lifetime in show business, she is now known only as "George Clooney's aunt."

Mr. Clooney has grabbed hold of the women in this country and won't let go (or so all the women in the country apparently wish), and I'm afraid there's nothing we guys can do about it until he runs his course.

One woman who apparently has no hope of ever recovering from Dr. Doug Fever had a momentary loss of self-respect and admitted to a "TV Guide" reporter that when the guy tilts his little head "it curls my toes." I may be sick.

Fact is, Mr. Clooney is not a bad actor, and it looks as though based on his prime-time success, he can just about write his future. As long as he doesn't devote anymore time to hosting SNL, which is about his only mistake this year.

In the beginning, CBS pitted its own "Chicago Hope" against the mighty "ER," a stunt that didn't work so well. Soon, "Hope" was repositioned to precede "ER"

As promo for 'Pocahontas,' Disney's 'Man of the House' works well, but flops as film

By Eleanor Ringel
N.Y. Times News Service

This time, the formidable Disney marketing department has gone too far. They've mandated the creation of an entire movie for no other reason than to serve as a sort of subliminal prep for their hoped-for summer blockbuster, "Pocahontas."

Ostensibly, "Man of the House" is a Chevy Chase movie in which Chase — once the '80s answer to Bob Hope, now the Dean Jones of the '90s — plays a Seattle public prosecutor who wants to marry divorcee Farrah Fawcett.

Well, who wouldn't? The former Charlie's Angel still looks terrific; plus, she's a far better comedian than the recently resurrected Cybill Shepherd. Her poster-perfect mane has been slightly tamed, but the smile is as dazzling as ever. Too bad this movie gives her absolutely nothing to do.

Fawcett is in love with Chase, too. But there's this one little problem: her 11-year-old son (Jonathan Taylor Thomas from "Home Improvement"). When Chase moves in (sans wedding vows; possibly a Disney first), Thomas takes action. Determined to get rid of his stepfather-to- be, Thomas suggests they join a group called the Indian Guides, a father-son conclave heavily into tomahawks, nature lore and rain dances.

Here's where the "Pocahontas" push comes in. Thomas initially joins the Indian Guides as a ploy to get rid of Chase. In reality, he agrees with his African-American best pal (Nicholas Garrett) — I specify him as African-American only because I'm sickeningly sure the Disney folks did — who thinks the whole thing is nerdy to the max. But sure enough, by the finale, Garrett has donned his own warrior headband.

As the Guides' leader, George Wendt is as fat and friendly as he was in "Cheers." Cirque du Soleil alum David Shiner shines in the small part of another Guide dad — a guy who expresses himself in mime instead of words (let's hope this was a glorified screen test for this talented performer; he matches Jim Carrey's loose-limbed comic appeal).

One last thing: Thomas, who's all too convincing as an initially nasty kid, supplied the voice for the young Simba in "The Lion King." So if you start having flashbacks to the Serengeti, it's not acid in your popcorn.

GRAMMYS: Voting was at least imaginative

theme of the film "Philadelphia" reflected "music's powerful influence in our lives," as recording academy president Mike Greene put it in a speech that also expressed worry about the future of arts funding in Washington.

"Grammy voters are suckers for a song with an important social message," Greene added backstage. "You combine that with an artist of the stature of Bruce Springsteen and it's Grammy in the bank, if you know what I mean."

Springsteen, for his part, played down the import of his award-winning first-person narrative song, telling reporters the concept was "to get an audience to hopefully walk a mile in somebody else's shoes."

In that regard, the song works. Using lyrics that describe illness and the desire to "shed this skin," Springsteen effectively puts his message across. It's a message the 7,000 voting members of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences got.

On the other hand, pop music is also about lighter matters, as triple-Grammy winner Sheryl Crow's "All I Wanna Do" argues.

Crow, whose self-effacing thank-yous and honest nervousness on the podium brought smiles all around, deserved the Best New Artist honor, as well as Record of the Year and Best Female Pop Vocal Performance (for "All I Wanna Do"). Her down-to-earth blue-eyed soul singing style has the potential to be around for a while.

Although some categories showed imagination on the part of voters, business is business. So, when Tony Bennett took home the Album of the Year statuette for his "MTV Unplugged," few jaws dropped in disbelief. Veteran artists are often rewarded at the Grammys and, by the same token, the Rolling Stones' "Voodoo Lounge" disc won Best Rock Album over more relevant acts like Pearl Jam, R.E.M., Soundgarden and Neil Young.

Good vibes, however, ruled the roost, and even rocker Henry Rollins, heavily tattooed and fierce-looking, came off backstage like the most charming guy in the world.

"I'm about as metal as my mother," said the new user-friendly Rollins, who took home the statuette for Best Spoken Word Album for his reminiscences of life on the road with proto-punk band Black Flag.

He still got a dig in at the academy when he brought up one of Grammy's most notorious flubs.

"I knew the Grammys were suspect when Jethro Tull won a heavy-metal award," he said to laughs.

And when poor late Sam Kinison was named winner in the Best Spoken Comedy Album derby on Wednesday, many Grammy-watchers wryly recalled how the portly comedian used to turn up at the ceremony year after year, only to lose invariably to P.D.Q. Bach. Now that he's dead, he wins.

Despite the social import of the Song of the Year, tuneful ditties still turn Grammy's head. Elton John, All-4-One, Boyz II Men and Toni Braxton all took home awards for pop songs that were short, sweet and forgettable.

To be fair, though, no music fan could honestly disagree with the choice of Al Green and Lyle Lovett, winners of the Best Pop Vocal Collaboration race for their "Funny How Time Slips Away," or the decision to award Booker T. & the MG's the Best Pop Instrumental Performance statuette for the track "Cruisin'."

Green was so jazzed with his win that he came backstage and serenaded the gathering of scribes with a selection of soul hits.

It was also a Grammy ceremony that recognized women artists. Along with Crow and Braxton, winners included Bonnie Raitt, Melissa Etheridge, Queen Latifah, Salt-N-Pepa and Mary Chapin Carpenter. For several years, critics have moaned about the lack of diversity in rewarding female artists. In 1995, the time apparently has come.

Diversity was also expressed in certain other categories, where Etta James won for Best Jazz Vocal Performance for her excellent Billie Holiday tribute album, "Mystery Lady," and the great pianist McCoy Tyner took home the award for Best Large Jazz Ensemble Performance for his "Journey" disc.

The country category should have made country fans glad, too. There were good old boys Vince Gill and Chet Atkins grabbing separate honors, while the Aaron Neville/Trisha Yearwood collaboration won for the country standard "I Fall to Pieces," which was almost totally ignored by radio, incidentally.

Call the Grammys what you will, but from Springsteen's social concerns to a comedian who finally received major recognition after his death, they covered a few unexpected bases this year.

SPRINGSTEEN: Singer's contributions still important power to him. For 20 years, he has been among a handful of musical artists who sings from the heart. If it takes a little exposure to win over a few new followers in the musical black hole of the '90s then so be it.

If the album was intentionally timed to coincide with the Grammys then it shouldn't be considered in poor taste, but rather impeccable. Had Springsteen been a lesser artist who had planned the same thing, then that would be another story.

But Springsteen still has plenty to say. The final four songs on the album show that he has escaped the creative shackles that pulled him down on his sub-par dual 1991 releases "Human Touch" and "Lucky Town."

Included in the package is "Streets of Philadelphia", which earned Song of the Year and three other Grammys Wednesday, and is reason enough to spend the money needed to add this gem of a collection to your CD tower.

As with any hits collection, there are noticable absences. In this case, the omission of "Rosalita", "Prove it All Night" and "Independence Day" is sort of tough to swallow. Also missing is "Jersey Girl" the best song Springsteen ever recorded that he didn't write.

On the other hand, the inclusion of "Dancing in the Dark" (from the Disco Boss phase) was not needed, although there are those who will insist it was his most popular release. And, from a mass market standpoint, at least, it unfortunately was.

Not surprisingly, "Born to Run" and "Thunder Road" lead off the album whose other featured highlights are "Badlands", "The River", "My Hometown" and "Glory Days."

"Human Touch" and "Better Days", although the only two memorable tracks from Springsteen's dual release in 1991, would've been better left out, replaced by one of the previously mentioned songs.

The new songs, from the soft, sultry "Secret Garden" to the condemnation of senseless street violence in "Murder Incorporated" to the reminiscent mood of the Dylanesque "Blood Brothers" and the classic-style Springsteen melodies and poetry of the album's finale, "This Hard Land."

An extra added attraction is the regrouping of the E Street Band for the final four tracks. Most noticeable, of course, is Clarence Clemons' sax work on "Secret Garden" and "Blood Brothers."

These four new songs are all the proof one needs that Springsteen is again swinging a creative, meaningful pen.

Springsteen may no longer be the future of rock and roll; but he still has an important contribution to make, and for that we can be grateful.

'The Lion King' roars into video stores, supermarkets

N.Y. Times News Service

"The Lion King," 1994's biggest box office hit, roared into video stores this week with a $26.99 price tag and the expectation that it'll become the biggest video hit in history.

The merchandising tie-ins for the theatrical release hovered at the $1 billion mark. Disney is expecting to sell more "Lion King" cassettes than the 24 million sales racked up by "Aladdin." Some prognosticators are predicting that "The Lion King" will top 30 million.

NEW RELEASES: "Natural Born Killers" (Warner) — Oliver Stone's lunatic story of two crazed killers is a bombastic example of the medium being the message. Stone, never known for his subtlety, whacks viewers with every techno-move he can find. Eight-mm, video, animation, quick-cutting and dizzying camera moves cannot disguise the film's lack of centrifugal force. There's no there, there. Stone uses the media as an easy target for his simplistic sociological broadsides but he never gets below the surface. "The History of Rock 'N' Roll" (Time-Life) This 10-volume collection is the definitive series on an often overworked video topic — rock 'n' roll. Viewers are likely to prefer the volumes featuring their favorite performers but it's fascinating to watch rock's evolution, revolution or devolution depending on your point of view. My preference is for the first five volumes.

BOYS: Story unhurried, wise in its style longer can live by horses and ropes alone.

Hewey returns unannounced one day to the farm run by his brother (Terry Kinney) and his disapproving sister-in-law (Frances McDormand). What he finds, besides himself, is a spunky schoolteacher (Sissy Spacek, reunited with Jones for the first time since "Coal Miner's Daughter"). A romance blooms.

But the beauty of "The Good Old Boys" isn't in the story so much as in the way it's told: unhurriedly, with a wise, easygoing spirit that captivates.

Jones wears this role he long coveted like a glove, and Spacek is right there to provide the perfect counterpoint. The supporting cast, particularly McDormand, is superior, punctuating a classy production with uniformly excellent performances.

There are times when "The Good Old Boys" drags too slowly for its own good, when the tantalizingly languid pace turns downright slovenly. But as an old-style western in the dusty old tradition, it's a wonderful little gem.

PATTERSON: 'Hope', 'ER' equally worthy in the 8 p.m. timeslot on Thursdays. That didn't work either. But since early January, "Hope" has found a solid timeslot at 9 p.m. Mondays and has made significant gains in its audience.

Is one of these medical dramas show better than the other? It is, as the old saying goes, like comparing apples and oranges. Anyone who's a fan of both shows will tell you that both are far superior to virtually anything else on TV today.

"ER" is like an amusement park ride: It's fun while you're on, but once you get off, the thrill usually diminishes quickly. "Chicago Hope" is longer lasting in its appeal. The superb writing and production of David Kelly, and the excellent acting of Mandy Patinkin, Adam Arkin and Hector Elizondo stay with a viewer long after the program is over.

There are exceptions to the momentary thrill assertion associated with "ER." The program has had touching storylines dealing with the horrors of child abuse and the sadness of old age. In fact, along with the recurrent theme of the absurdity of violence, "ER" often greatly succeeds in driving home two socially relevent points: The sorrowful neglect of senior citizens and the tragedy of crimes against children.

One similarity in the two shows is that both feature characters that had to grow on the viewer: "Hope's" John Birch, the hospital's legal counsel, and "ER's" Peter Benton were both difficult to like at the beginning. In fact Benton, played by Eriq LaSalle, is still prety dispicable, but the hunch here is that the show's writers will soon pull viewers in and make them feel sorry for the man who snubs his mother on a weekly basis. Birch, on the other hand, was easy to dislike in the beginning, but is now one of "Hope's strongest points.

Both shows achieve with great success what they set out to accomplish: Providing quality television entertainment while teaching us all a little about human nature and society.

Jimmy Patterson writes about radio, television and music for the Reporter-Telegram.

REEL: Categories determined by committee

(From 1B)

Rainer's organization, like the New York Film Critics Circle, voted for Jackson in both the best actor and the best supporting actor categories in their awards balloting. The Independent Feature Project, whose annual awards are handed out March 25, nominated Jackson for best actor — and skipped Travolta entirely.

"The categories are determined by the nominating committee — and they determined that John Travolta and Samuel Jackson both had leading roles," says the IFP's Dawn Hudson. Says committee chair Geoff Gilmore: "You try to make decisions that are logical, rather than what somebody wants you to do."

Golden Globe voters and balloting in the new Screen Actors Awards mirrored the Academy selections. So, too, did nominations in Britain's Bafta awards.

Although the Academy's 1,400-member actors branch can put a performer in any category it chooses, Miramax asked it to consider Travolta for the lead and Jackson as a secondary player.

The fear was that if the two actors went head-to-head, their votes would be split and both would be shut out. (Morgan Freeman thus may have knocked Tim Robbins, his co-star in "The Shawshank Redemption," from this year's best actor race, where both were touted.)

In a letter sent to Academy voters, "Pulp Fiction" producer Lawrence Bender said, "I know that with an ensemble film such as 'Pulp Fiction,' it is often difficult to distinguish between lead and supporting performances." Bender suggested, having "discussed it at length with all the actors involved," that Travolta be considered for actor and Jackson and Bruce Willis for supporting actor.

Miramax's advertisements in Hollywood trade newspapers reiterated those suggestions.

Bruce Davis, the Academy's executive director, says the "Pulp Fiction" nominations are fitting, although a case could be made that Travolta and Jackson are both supporting players.

"John Travolta is in every scene — and then there's the Uma Thurman scenes," he says. "Those are not dramatically insignificant sequences." Davis added that the actors branch was not unduly influenced by Miramax, as some critics have suggested.

"The actors are strong-willed. As a group, they tend to make their own decisions," he said. "Are they really going to be more influenced by a trade advertisement than what they see on screen? They're not." Davis says when Susan Sarandon was offered as a best supporting actress candidate for 1980's "Atlantic City," the branch instead placed her in the best actress race.

The acting categories have been reworked significantly twice since the supporting categories were added in 1936. In 1944, Barry Fitzgerald was nominated for best actor and best supporting actor — for the same role of Father Fitzgibbon in "Going My Way."

The Academy subsequently blocked double nominations for the same role.

More recently, the studios were able to decide what category an actor was placed in. By the 1960s, they started to abuse the privilege: Obvious lead roles were shoehorned into the supporting ranks.

Terence Stamp played the title role in 1962's "Billy Budd," and yet was placed in the supporting category. Shelley Winters similarly was entered for supporting actress for a prominent role in the same year's "Lolita."

Soon thereafter, the decision-making was handed over to the actors branch. But even with the change, an occasional objection surfaced.

George Burns was in nearly every scene of 1976's "The Sunshine Boys," but won for best supporting actor. In the same awards, Louise Fletcher won best actress for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," even though she played a secondary role.

Timothy Hutton was a relative newcomer before "Ordinary People," and would have lost badly to Robert De Niro for "Raging Bull" if he had been in the lead category. Hopkins, on the other hand, was a huge presence in "The Silence of the Lambs" — even when he wasn't on screen.

Miramax is hoping, of course, that it has made the right "Pulp Fiction" choice. All the lobbying and suggesting might eventually backfire, though.

"I think most artists that I talk to are very uncomfortable about the attitudes of the studios — that it's very much about commerce," Davis says. "The Academy as a whole is not doing what the companies want it to do."

TRAILERS: Horror author Dean Koontz has demanded his name be taken off the upcoming Jeff Goldblum film "Hideaway." In a letter to TriStar, Koontz called the movie "astonishingly incoherent, filled with contradictions and moronic logic." News of the rift was published in The Hollywood Reporter.

Leno displays his usual calm amid late-night storm

By Ray Richmond
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Jay Leno sat in front of a computer screen last week, trying to be amusing for one of those increasingly popular on-line chats with America.

Instead of a roomful of nightclub patrons in varying states of inebriation, the audience for NBC's "Tonight Show" host was some 1,000 cybergeeks linked via America Online. Comedic timing was irrelevant. Inflection was nil. And forget about any real feedback.

"I'm really more of a slide-rule kinda guy," Leno said, sitting in a half-buttoned denim shirt and jeans inside NBC.

No, Jay Leno doesn't surf the Internet. Mention computers or even video games, and he'll tell you he played Pong once.

So why did Leno take on this assignment in the first place? Because NBC asked. And if there is one thing the lantern-jawed comedian is, it's cooperative.

This on-line stuff may not be Leno's cup o' java, but he feels obliged to drink it anyway. With cream and sugar — and a smile.

"Do you ever hear from Johnny?" came the first question in what would prove a dull, occasionally painful 45-minute discourse.

"I haven't heard from him in about a year," Leno responded verbally, his words quickly punched in by an aide on the computer. "It's been about a year. I guess it was at the American Teacher Awards. We had a nice chat."

"Do you sometimes get nervous while interviewing famous people?" another fan asked.

"No, I can't say that I do," Leno responded.

"Jay, do you really like Doritos, or do they just pay you to eat them?" someone else wanted to know.

"Well, since I haven't done one of the commercials in nearly six years, I'm not sure it really still applies," he said.

And so it went. The questions drizzled in from cyberspace, and Leno — accustomed to moving at 90 mph — had to continually catch himself to keep from flying off on monologue-style answers. That in itself grew comical.

"My... father... was... a... funny... guy," Leno said with exaggerated slowness.

Then, when one of the inevitable 30-second gaps between questions occurred, Leno quipped, "There has been a hydrogen storm on Venus, there will be a slight delay."

If Leno was experiencing some befuddlement with on-line communication, there has been no such frustration with "Tonight" since the host moved into his intimate new production studio five months ago.

Leno will tell you that since he had ascended to Carson's "Tonight Show" throne on May 25, 1992, it had felt too much like moving into someone else's house. Johnny moved out on Friday, Jay moved in on Monday.

Then last May, something magical happened for Leno when the show went to New York City for a week. He rediscovered what it felt like to operate in a more nightclub-style environment, where he could "reach down and slap" the guy in the front row without taking too many steps.

"Everyone was up close; there were no bad seats," Leno recalled. "I knew that was what I needed back in L.A."

Now, he has it. The show moved into the cozy new digs Sept. 27, and Leno believes it has "made a tremendous difference" in his attitude and in the show's creative energy.

"The show is 100 times better now than it was that first year," Leno said. "It's looser, it's funnier, we do a lot more interplay with the audience. People really want to come see us now. There's always a line out front."

Before, Leno said, he would struggle to put together a four-minute monologue. Now, going 10 or even 12 minutes is no sweat. It's turned into "more of a comedy-variety show" than a mere talk show. Sometimes, the first guest doesn't come out till after midnight.

The ratings have improved, too. Consistently, "Tonight" has closed the gap with "Late Show With David Letterman" to less than a full rating point. It still finishes third behind "Late Show" and "Nightline" most nights, but at least it's in the ball game.

Better still, critics aren't taking the shots at Leno as they were in the post-Carson and early-Letterman days at CBS.

"The difference I notice now is that people mention it's Jay and it's Dave at 11:35, and we're in one category, while the rest of the newcomers are in another," Leno said. "There's an acknowledgement that we're both here."

Not that everything has been honey and rose petals for Leno of late. The departure last month of bandleader Branford Marsalis hurt, as did his frankness with the media about how he wasn't able to play the kind of music he really wanted to play.

"Branford and I never had a problem," Leno said. "We all do things in our work that we're required to do but would probably rather do differently, and that was true of him as well. But that's OK."

And although Leno downplays it, it had to sting a bit that Carson has never returned to do a guest spot on "Tonight" while occasionally appearing with Letterman.

"Johnny and David were friends at NBC long before I came into the picture," Leno said. "Johnny did stuff with David because they're good friends, not as a slap to me. He's always been very gracious to me. I've never taken anything as a slight. You've got to be a grown-up. That's the way it is."

It's this same upbeat attitude that has help Leno remain sane through the difficult times, which he genuinely appears to have weathered. The cries of "Dump Jay!" are gone. NBC no longer has to crow in its advertising that "America is standing up for Jay!"

Leno has taken the proverbial licking and kept right on ticking. And frankly, he has a right to be a little proud of that.

"People see how many hits you can take, and if you cry and whine and make a big stink, you go down," he said. "I just hung in there and wrote the jokes, and it got me through. And besides, for this kinda dough, heck..."

Driving a cataract, and other techniques of sit-com writing

By Chuck Tatham
N.Y. Times News Service

One distinctive characteristic of our species, other than the fact that we are the only creatures prone to accidentally tucking our shirts into our underpants, is that everyone has a different opinion as to what's funny, although, in general, it would be safe to say that no one finds anything amusing about a run-on sentence, particularly at the beginning of a newspaper article.

It should also be remembered that different approaches suit different media. Thus, the witty Salinger allusion may be undeniably pithy in a review of John Irving's new novel, but in a sample script for "Empty Nest" a reference to Nell Carter's cellulite is certainly more appropriate.

And, with all due respect, such cellulite commentary might also lead to an annual income far surpassing that of most book critics. A funny sample script (referred to as a "spec" script) is Hollywood's calling card, and it can lead to employment as a disgustingly overpaid television scribe.

It may be impossible to teach someone to "write funny," but if you have some semblance of a sense of humor, and also possess the strength and motor skills to drag a pen across a piece of paper, there is no reason to believe that you can't come up with something mildly amusing or, failing that, worthy of a six-show commitment from CBS.

To determine whether you have what it takes to succeed in the competitive world of electronic mirth, consider this monologue joke and take careful note of your response:

"Today, Kraft announced that Cheez Whiz is now available in a squeeze bottle. According to a spokesman, to make it squeezable they're using the same amount of cheese as always, but now there's twice as much whiz."

If you responded to this in world-weary Hollywood fashion (you shrugged, you nodded, you muttered, "That's funny"), read on.

You obviously recognize what's funny enough for television, and that's a rare quality. (Not just anyone can spot the next Benny Hill.) Now all you need are the tools with which to craft your Emmy-winning script. Those tools include the following:

1. Questionable Integrity When it's very, very late at night and a deadline is fast approaching, don't be too proud to resort to the sorts of wretched, predictable techniques that entertain more than 50 million North Americans every prime-time evening.

(A) The "literal" joke. (Him: "What kind of an idiot do you think I am?" Her: "A cute one.")

(B) The "fasten your seat belt, here comes a 180-degree turn" routine. (Him: "There is no way I'm wearing high heels and a dress!" Cut to: Him wearing high heels and a dress.)

(C) One of the most irritating devices ever conceived, the "isn't it cute how the little kid doesn't understand" joke. (Dad: "Well, kids, the doctor says Grandma has a cataract." Kid: "A cataract! I thought she had a Lincoln Continental.")

2. The Rule of Three An infinitely more respected comedy convention than those discussed above, the "rule of three" is accomplished by placing two "regular" items in front of the "blow," or "joke" section, of the punch line. ("The anti-fur activists are at it again in Beverly Hills. They're protesting fur coats, mink stoles and that thing on William Shatner's head.")

3. Implication by Omission This is the kind of joke that requires the audience to actually listen. Hence it is extremely dangerous. Nevertheless, it can be effective, and the easiest way to explain it is to paraphrase John Candy's assertion (while portraying Johnny LaRue on SCTV): "People say I'm involved with the Mafia and that I'm gay. I am not gay."

4. The Call Back One of the most popular scene savers in Hollywood, the call back owes its popularity to the fact that by "calling back" something, the writer (a) appears to have spent time actually structuring the scene (utter bosh), and (b) has less work to do; the setup is already in place.

Example of a call back: At the beginning of a scene, a preteen-ager tells her father that she's going to make some money by taking a paper route. Father congratulates pre-teenager on her entrepreneurial spirit and the girl exits. Phone rings.

Father answers it and learns he has been fired from the factory. Girl innocently re-enters, newspaper bag in hand, and glum father facetiously asks her if there are any more paper routes available. It's fast, it's simple, and it's by no means the funniest thing in the world, so thank God for ...

5. The Laugh Track While it obviously has nothing to do with writing, in the grand scheme of things the laugh track is, disturbingly, at least as important as the script. Without it, as entertainment people invariably explain, "people don't know when to laugh."

Interesting, the words "laugh track" are rarely heard in Hollywood. The more genteel word "sweetening" is preferred, the implication being that the audiences' laughter is merely being fortified with canned guffaws.

The reality is that the mechanical hooting rarely fortifies anything other than coughing, groaning or the sounds of confused, cranky audience members asking the usher why a 22-minute show takes five hours to shoot.

Truly an art form, the proper application of sweetening can magically transform a shabby, unfunny scene into a shabby, unfunny scene with laughter.

This catalogue of techniques is nowhere near complete, but we must remember not to rely too heavily on these tired formulas.

Use this guide as you wish, certainly, but be motivated by the fact that the onus is on budding writers like you to concoct your own mindless creative devices so that when "Friends" and "Thunder Alley" are just so much dust in a network vault, your new "jokes" will provide mirth-hungry television viewers with laugh-out-loud comedy for generations to come.

Falk, Sweeney team up to make one very odd couple in 'Roommates'

N.Y. Times News Service

Peter Falk has all along been about as good as acting gets: A naturalistic, immersed-in-character approach helped him to begin earning Oscar nominations from the early years of his career, and his long identification with both escapist comedy and confrontational drama has made him both a highbrow favorite and a hit with the popcorn crowd.

Until "Roommates," the new arrival that many people are already showering with Oscar predictions, Falk's most incisive portrayal has been the doggedly jovial Lt. Columbo of the television crime-buster serial. But where the "Columbo" episodes have allowed Falk to flesh out a character over the course of a generation, "Roommates" allows him just one shot.

Many people will see "Roommates" as the present year's answer to "Forrest Gump" (1994), the Bob Zemeckis film whose mile-wide sentimental streak has proved good for both the box office and the Oscars. But "Roommates" has more going for it: a truer basis in fact, a greater dependence upon performance than upon special effects, and an absence of overt emotional manipulation.

Falk, who is going on 68, plays 107-year-old Rocky Holecezek, the oldest working baker in Pittsburgh or probably anywhere else for that matter. The role actually spans 30-some-odd years, but its point is the clash of wills that erupts when the centenarian and his 35-year-old grandson (played by D.B. Sweeney) wind up sharing living quarters.

The abiding constant and universal relevance lie in Rocky's refusal to relinquish care of his grandson until he has taught the "boy," a physician, all there is to know about the art of living. Here is one tough old geezer, whose stubbornness and opinionated state of being are validated by grace of his steadfast code of ethics.

Falk interprets Rocky pretty much as Max Apple originally wrote the character, a fictionalized version of Apple's own granddad past 100. Apple's take on the fellow was that as long as Rocky could work, he'd be happy.

So he does, even to the point of driving the grandson to long for freedom from this demanding oldster. Sweeney carries the demands of the grandson role ably, and bears up nicely under the variously grand and grim developments that constitute a life fully lived. He holds his own opposite Falk, whose every cantankerous scene is a show-stopper.

Elsewhere among the small basic cast, Julianne Moore contributes a pleasing tension as the woman who wins Sweeney's heart, and Ellen Burstyn is polite malice incarnate as the socialite mother-in-law who regards Rocky as something that crawled out of the servants' quarters.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Series begins

St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 W. Princeton Ave., will begin its Lenten Soup Supper speaker series at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Mary K. Friskies-Warren, daughter of church member Ava Jane Warren. She will speak on "Journaling During Lent."

Mrs. Friskies-Warren was baptized at St. Nicholas and is a graduate of Midland High School. She is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Texas Christian University and received her master's of divinity degree from Vanderbilt Divinity School, where she was a Brandon Scholar.

She is an ordained minister in the Christian Church, Disciples of Christ, and has served in parish ministry and as a prison chaplain. She is chaplain to Alive Hospice, Nashville, Tenn. She is married and the mother of a 3-year-old son.

The soup supper series, which concludes April 5, is titled "The St. Nicholas Connection." Most of the speakers have spent part of their formative years as part of the parish family, many of them have close family members still at the church and one is a current member.

Supper is at 6 p.m. The speaker begins at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend. Those needing a nursery are asked to call 694-8856.

■ Services continue

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., continues its observance of Lent with 7 p.m. services Wednesdays through the Lenten season.

These services will focus on the meaning of the Christian community using Dietrich Bonhoeffer's book "Life Together" as a resource. Interim pastor the Rev. Carol Spencer will be assisted by Deaconess Gretchen Shultz and Fred Behnken, congregational vice president.

A light supper is served for a nominal amount in the fellowship hall beginning at 6 p.m. for more information call the church office, 694-1373.

■ Study group meets

The Baptist Women's Missionary Group of Ranchland Heights Baptist Church meets at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

The topic for study and prayer will be "Win All." Canned goods and offerings are being collected. For information about the meeting place call 697-4471 or 683-1947.

■ Workshop offered

The Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely Ave., is offering a workshop by Robin Campbell from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 1.

Ms. Campbell is a licensed professional counselor with 15 years of experience in leading groups. The workshop will focus on different categories of dreams, how to recognize opposing themes in dreams and the meaning of different modes of transportation in dreams.

Ms. Campbell suggested those attending begin writing down their dreams and dream fragments. Also, she suggests participants sketch any symbols they have seen in their dreams.

All attending are asked to bring a sack lunch. Participants must be 16 or older. Cost is $20 a person.

There is no class limit. For more information call the church, 694-4308.

■ Bike benefit set

TEHUACANA — The second bike ride to benefit the First United Methodist Church here is set for 8:30 a.m. April 22.

The ride will be along 12, 25 and 60 mile routes on the country roads of three counties — Limestone, Freestone and Navarro. Cost of the ride is $15 a person for entries by April 8. A family rate of $12 is available for families of three or more residing at the same address, paying with one check and entering by April 8.

All early registrants will receive a T-shirt. All riders will participate in a drawing for a Cannondale Mountain Bike with a retail value of $599.95.

Riders and their families are encouraged to stay and attend the Bluebonnet Festival, sponsored by the Tehuacana Volunteer Fire department. The festival will have food booths, arts and crafts, live music and a parade.

For more information or to secure entry forms call Byron Riddle, 1-817-353-2280, or write Tour de Tehuacana, Box 205, Tehuacana, Texas, 76686.

■ Course offered

Memorial Christian Church, Andrews Highway at Cuthbert Avenue, will offer a six-session course during the Lenten season at 6 p.m. Sundays beginning Sunday.

The course, which will be offered in the church's library, will focus on "Biblical Interpretation from a Woman's Perspective." It will be led by Bill Bucy. The main source will be a book by Renita J. Weems entitled "Just a Sister Away."

■ Revival planned

A joint revival is planned Monday through Friday at Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, 303 E. Shandon St.

Preaching for the 7:30 p.m. services will be the Rev. Edward Jennings Tyson of New Hope Baptist Church, Vernon. Tyson, who is president and founder of the Texoma Mission Gospel Train and Vernon Mission Gospel Train Radio Ministries, and was the speaker for the 1994 Spring Revival.

■ Kickoff lunch set

Mike Ford, chairman of the 1995 Hearthstone Benefit Golf Marathon, has set the official kick-off luncheon for the marathon at noon Wednesday at Green Tree Country Club.

The luncheon will salute all golfers signed to play in the challenging 100-hole event slated for May 15 at Green Tree.

Registration for the marathon remains open and interested golfers may contact Ford at 683-2534.

The marathon features 39 golfers, underwritten with pledges, playing 100 holes of golf to meet their goal of raising $50,000 in support for the nine-year-old child care agency.

Hearthstone is an affiliate agency of Texas Baptist Children's Home in Round Rock.

■ Choir featured

The annual Lenten Luncheon Concert Series at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., this week features VocalPoint, the jazz choir from Midland College.

The choir is directed by and accompanied by Rob Hunt, incoming director of music for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale and director of Commercial Music at MC.

The 30-minute concerts, which begin at 12:05 p.m. Wednesdays, are free. Lunch is available for $4 in Lynn Hall a half-hour before and after each performance. Nursery care is available with advance reservations by calling 684-7821, Ext. 37.

All concerts in this series are free. For more information call Rebecca Sawyer, 684-7821.

■ Services begin

ODESSA — Vineyard Christian Fellowship will officially begin Sunday services at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

A "Times of Refreshing" seminar concludes today at AIM High School, Plaza Boulevard and J.B. Shepperd Parkway. Presenters are Dale and Sharon Walker, an area pastor for The Association of Vineyard Churches. Walker has pastored for 20 years in El Paso at Vineyard Christian Fellowship.

For more information call 550-4505.

■ Tape group meets

An Infinite Way Meeting featuring Joel Goldsmith on tapes is being held at 7:30 p.m. Mondays.

Those interested in attending the Joel Goldsmith Tape Group may call 699-0934 for more information.

■ Meditations held

Lenten meditations will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Grace Lutheran Church.

The meditations continue through April 5.

Holy Week services will include a Maundy Thursday communion service, a candlelight Good Friday service and Easter sunrise and festival services. All are invited to attend any of the services.

■ Missionaries speak

Robert and Sharon Gardner, missionaries from Kananga, Zaire, with the Worldwide Ministries Division of the Presbyterian Church will be visiting Midland churches this week.

Mrs. Gardner will speak at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 2800 W. Louisiana Ave., at 5 p.m. Sunday. She will show slides of her experiences in the mission field. She will speak again at Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St. at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. This talk will be followed by a lunch at 12:15 p.m. For reservations call 684-6542.

The Gardners will speak at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas ave., during the Wednesday dinner from 5:30 to 6:30 March 8. They will give a slide presentation on Zaire.

The couple is on home assignment after having spent 3 1/2 years in central Zaire, where he served as director of the dental clinic at the Good Shepherd Hospital and she taught at the mission school.

■ Visitors' class meets

The Inquirers Class at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., begins Sunday.

The class continues every Sunday in March during the 9:45 a.m. Sunday School hour. This class is for visitors and new members.

■ Evangelist to speak

Mack Lyon, producer and speaker for the weekly religious television program "In Search of the Lord's Way" will be the guest evangelist for a three-day series at the Westside Church of Christ Sunday through Tuesday.

Theme for the series is "The Gospel is Good News" with five lessons sharing the message of the Gospel for today.

Today, this 30-minute weekly program is seen in all 50 states on 41 television stations, 92 cable television stations, two satellite networks, and is heard on 19 radio programs and sent to nine foreign countries. The program ranks eighth among 38 leading national television religious programs.

Lyon will speak at services at 9 and 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. March 5 and at 7:30 p.m. March 6 and 7.

■ Groups to perform

The Jacksonville College Choir and Ensemble will perform at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Dellwood Baptist Church, 3225 W. Ohio St.

The choir and ensemble are on their spring tour. The public is invited to the concert. For more information call the Rev. Joel Swofford, pastor of Dellwood Baptist.

■ Services planned

Country Chapel, formerly Country Chapel Ministries, has been ministering to people throughout the Permian Basin for four years.

Now, the group is planning regular Sunday morning services. For more information call the Rev. Leonard Cotten, 561-8993.

■ Minister to speak

The Rev. Keith A. Loomans is to be guest minister at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, 5400 N. Big Spring St., Sunday where he will speak at the 9 a.m. service. His topic is "In God We Trust."

Loomans is the executive director of Parish Services for the Texas District of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod. The church is hosting Loomans in a pot luck dinner at 7 p.m. today. He will present a program entitled "Reaching Your Ministry Vision."

He served congregations in Cisco, Brownsville, Temple and Mercedes before moving to Austin in 1969 to become the director of Parish services. In this position he worked in education, youth, worship and social ministry. He has held his current position since January of 1992.

Lommans authored the pupil guide for "This is the Christian Faith," Concordia Catechism series, published in 1967 by Concordia Publishing House.

He servies on the steering committee for the National Youth Gathering, which is being hosted by the Texas District this July in San Antonio.

■ Special services set

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. Big Spring St., will observe the church season of Lent with special mid-week worship services from 6:30 to 7 p.m. each Wednesday for the next sic weeks.

A simple supper at 5:30 p.m. in the church's community room will precede the worship. The meditation emphasis of the services will be based on the petitions of the Lord's Prayer.

For more information call the church, 683-1936.

Don G. Jones, treasurer of the Messiah Presbyterian Church, talks to two of 54 elementary school children who received new athletic shoes from the church Jan. 30, in Lubbock, Texas.

Church offers expensive footwear to good students

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — Hillary Hutchinson wears proof of God's practical ways on his size 10 feet.

The sixth-grader picked out new zebra-striped Converses as part of a reward Messiah Presbyterian Church extended to 54 model elementary students.

"I was looking for some basketball shoes," Hillary said. "They're good on the court."

But the shoes go far beyond footwear.

At Iles Elementary — located in an impoverished neighborhood pockmarked by gangs and drug peddlers — the shoes inject a sense of confidence and pride.

"It makes me feel good," Hillary said.

That's what the 20 members of Messiah Presbyterian hoped to hear when they launched "P.S. — Go For It!." They hope teachers saying "P.S. — Go For It!" in their classrooms will entice students to behave and work hard.

The program grew last summer from an East Lubbock meeting in which an Iles teacher explained how hoodlums turn high-dollar shoes into both status symbols and recruitment tools.

Attending the meeting was the Rev. Pam Powell, known as "Pastor Pam," who had been praying for a way her church could deliver a unique and meaningful ministry to the nearby school.

It struck her that athletic shoes carried the clout necessary to get children's attention.

Powell said she figured Messiah Presbyterian could counter the gangs and drugs by buying the same shoes for children who excel.

"We are Christians who believe that God can do wonderful things through anybody willing to go through God's guidance," she said. "We were really willing to think new thoughts and trust God."

The program debuted last month by awarding 54 certificates for shoes — three in each of Iles' 18 classrooms — to outstanding students, athletes and citizens. Teachers selected the winners; the winners then went shopping at Foot Locker and Kids Foot Locker.

It was the first trip some of these students had ever made cross-town to South Plains Mall, school officials said.

Assistant Principal Judith Lampe said the program plays on the emphasis adolescents place on appearance and peer acceptance. And in addition, she said, shoes are symbolic.

"I just think it's real appropriate that it's shoes — that you're going someplace," Lampe said.

Fifty-four more pairs will be awarded next semester, with the total cost estimated at $11,000.

Christian sect accuses its neighbors of intolerance

By Arthur Allen
Associated Press

BIRNBACH, Germany — On the surface, it seems a quintessential tale of German intolerance: a Christian community, forced to flee Nazism in 1937, returns 50 years later, only to be driven out again by antagonistic neighbors.

Blocked from building a hilltop community by opponents who used words like "too many foreigners" to dissuade them, the Hutterian Brotherhood has decided to leave Birnbach after moving here seven years ago.

But the story behind the story is a bit more complex.

The 500 villagers of Birnbach were at first skeptical about the Hutterites, members of a small Protestant sect, pacifist and poor, who in 1988 bought a mansion previously used as a Catholic home for wayward boys.

The Hutterite men wore suspenders and long beards. The women wore headscarves, their legs covered behind long skirts. They were like nothing the tiny village in the Westerwald forest had ever seen. Two-thirds of the Hutterites were foreigners — mostly Britons and Americans.

But after much guilty self-reflection and determination to make friends, most of the village embraced the brotherhood.

In elections last June for the village council, the main political parties joined forces behind Mayor Manfred Walterschen and defeated an anti-Hutterite "Citizens' Initiative" 82 percent to 18 percent.

'We feel it is better to go where we are wanted, rather than continuing to run our heads up against hard rock.'
— Joerg Barth, leader of the Hutterian Brotherhood

Other than a handful of die-hard opponents who have skillfully pulled bureaucratic strings to prevent the sect from building a communal dining room, kindergarten and workshop, there is nothing keeping them from staying.

But the Hutterites, who dedicate their lives to the principle that men and women can live together in peace following Christ's teachings, are very sensitive to their surroundings.

In January, on the eve of breaking ground for the long-delayed building projects, Barth announced the Hutterites would move away, although he didn't say when.

Explaining the decision to a reporter, he pointed to a passage in Matthew from his battered New Testament: "And if anyone will not receive you or listen to your work, shake off the dust from your feet as you leave that house or town."

"In 6 1/2 years, we haven't exchanged a sentence with our opponents. When they pass us on the road, they look right through us as if we were air," said Barth, 66. "We feel it's better to go where we are wanted, rather than continuing to run our heads up against hard rock."

Direct confrontation over disagreements is a principle of Hutterite life, but Barth's opponents, led by a 70-year-old retired building engineer named Gerhard Schwalm, have refused from the start to talk with the community.

The opponents won't talk to reporters, either. But Schwalm, who lives down the lane, published a statement in the Rhein-Zeitung newspaper saying his group had every right to block the construction, which he contended would have been too noisy.

The 35,000 Hutterites scattered around the world — mostly in Canada, the United States and England — live in 350 small, largely self-sufficient communities.

The Hutterites do not proselytize, and welcome discussion with neighbors of other faiths. They largely stay out of politics, but sometimes protest against war or abortion. The Birnbach community earns much of the cash it needs producing wooden toys and equipment for the handicapped.

The sect was created by Jakob Hutter, an Austrian, in 1533; thousands joined a new brotherhood founded in Germany in 1920. Fleeing Nazism, many of the Hutterites spent the war years in Paraguay.

Billy Graham Crusade uses new technology to go global

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Graham came to Christ in 1934 under a tin-roofed tabernacle built for a revival led by the fiery evangelist Mordecai Ham.

When he started out — before radio and later television became a standard part of a successful evangelist's ministry — Graham followed the same pattern, often having to construct tabernacles seating 10,000 to 20,000 people in cities such as Albuquerque, N.M., and Portland, Ore.

At age 76, he is no longer the dominant, physically imposing figure who could command a stadium's attention with his presence. But technology is giving the century's most famous evangelist the opportunity to preach to the world from the site of a single crusade.

It's called Global Mission, and it will be coming March 16-18 from the Greater Puerto Rico Billy Graham Crusade in San Juan.

Satellite uplinks will transmit Graham's services to local sites in 175 countries, reaching up to 8 million people nightly in what representatives of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association call the greatest Gospel outreach in history.

And this is just the beginning of a new phase of worldwide evangelism, the pioneer of modern radio and teleision ministries said in a recent interview.

"We're not going to reach the whole world, of course, in Global Mission, but we're going to be the early forerunners of how it can be done technologically," he said.

From the major population centers of Europe to Kobe, Japan and six sites in Togo, Global Mission plans to broadcast Graham's sermons to some 2,200 venues throughout the world, where 500,000 local "counselors" will distribute mission literature and meet with people who respond to the evangelist's call to commit their lives to Christ.

In San Juan, 12 production trucks will transmit non-stop to 29 time zones. The audio transmission will be translated into more than 40 languages.

The one major country that has not permitted Global Mission telecasts is China, but Graham said negotiations are continuing there. The United States is not part of Global Mission, but there will be later television broadcasts of the crusade in this country. The potential audience for television broadcasts in nearly 100 countries is estimated at up to 1 billion people.

For a man who saw his first television in 1939 in New York and never dreamed it would become a pervasive influence, the idea of a mission on this scale is still somewhat difficult to comprehend.

"I'm just sort of the old man looking back in wonderment because when we started out we didn't even have our own auditoriums. We had to build our own tabernacles," Graham said.

Bulldogs win two to reach tourney title game

Brian Adamcik/ Reporter-Telegram

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

It was a day of the unexpected on the opening day of the 1995 Tournament of Champions.

Who would have thought that...

Midland Lee would blow a seven-run lead as Odessa Permian scored eight runs to rally for a 10-9 victory.

Or that Lubbock MOnterey would allow two hits over two games on Friday.

Meanwhile at Christensen Stadium, Midland High was ruling its competition with strong pitching and sturdy defense in a 3-0 win over El Paso Ysleta to capture Pool A of the tournament and advance to the champions game at 6 p.m. today.

The Bulldog pitching duo of Keith Lant and Jason Rogers combined for a four-hit shutout in the nightcap of the day's play. Lant went the first three innings and Rogers capped off the final four innings, allowing just two hits, no walks and two strikeouts.

"I think that's the first time I have pitched without walking someone and that was big," said Rogers. "Our defense played well. I thought we played pretty well tonight and we needed it."

Midland scored all of its runs with a three-run outburst in the third inning off Indians' starter Osvaldo Eschiveste. Craig Coleman's bouncer to third was mishandled by Jesus Pinon and two runs scored to cap off the inning.

It was all that Rogers and Lant would need as they shutdown the Ysleta attack.

In other tournament action, Lubbock Monterey looked in strong form to capture its ninth T of C title with wins over Lee and El Paso Coronado.

Against Lee, left handed pitcher Mark Martinez struck out 14 and limited Lee to one-hit in the 7-2 win.

"My fastball was working well today," said Martinez, who took a no-hitter into the bottom of the seventh inning before a double by Dedrick Adams with one out spoiled the no-hitter. Martinez struck out at least one batter every inning while the Plainsmen wore down starter Britt Harper (1-1) over 5 2/3 innings with seven hits and seven runs, five earned.

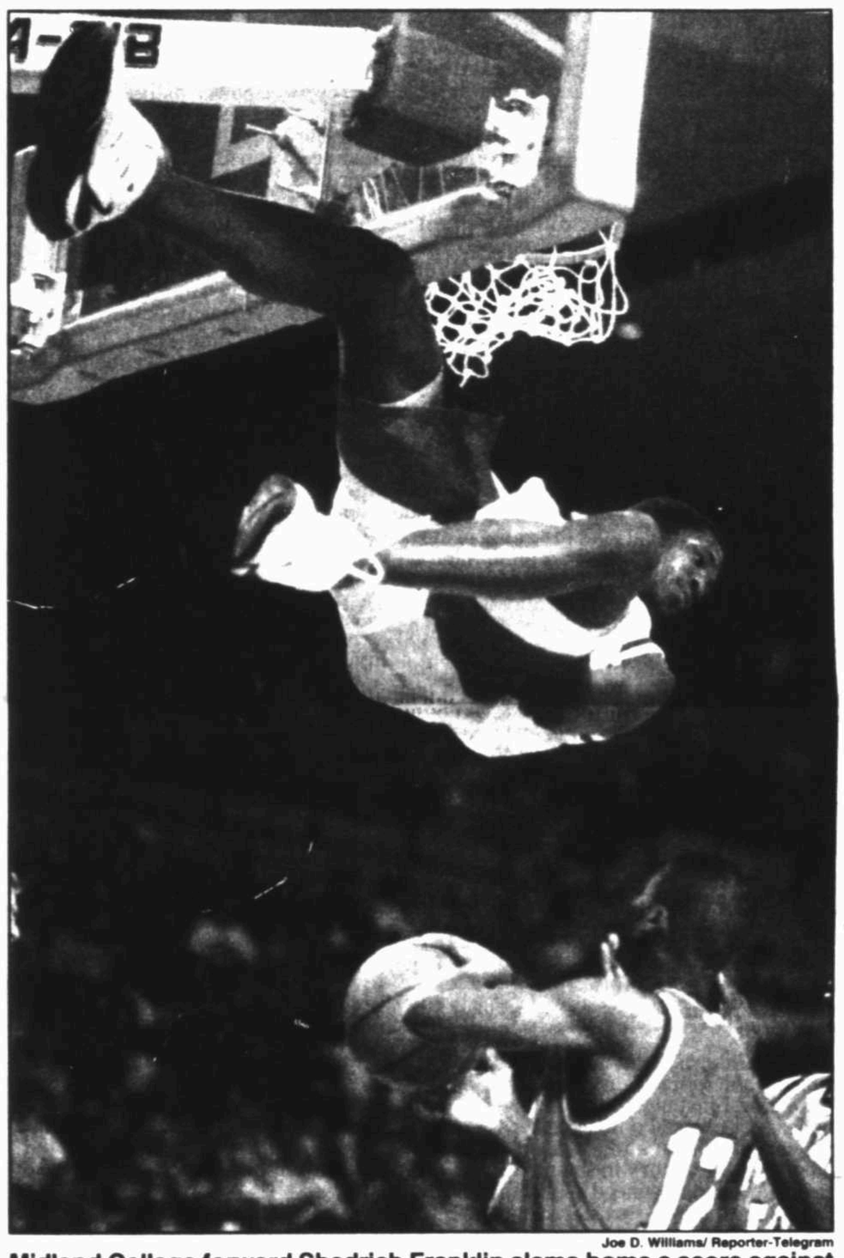

Monterey's pitching staff threw another one-hitter against El Paso Coronado. The tandem of Monty Ward and Jeff Horn tossed the one-hit jewel as Monterey jumped out to an 8-0 lead after three innings and coasted to the win.

Tournament of Champions Scores

Chaps' mission: to slow fast Cats

■ Midland College opens play in the state junior college playoffs against No. 2 ranked Temple today in Waco.

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

Midland College pulls out the road map back to Waco as they travel to the Ferrell Center to face Temple Junior College in the opening round of the Starburst Texas State Championship at 5 p.m. today.

The road to Hutchinson, Kan., and the 48th annual national tournament has several tough stretches in the three-day journey. But Midland coach Pat Rafferty is behind the wheel and is looking to return to the Land of Oz by winning three games in a 53-hour span.

Today's opponent, Temple, will be a test of the Chaps' speed. Can MC keep the game in a low gear or will it be a 0-100 mph in 40 minutes? Temple rolls into the first round game ranked second in the nation in scoring with a 107.8 points per game average while, Midland is scoring at a clip of 89.3 points per game.

Temple, much like South Plains College, which defeated the Chaps in two of three meetings this year, possesses a small, quick, guard-oriented attack led by sophomore point guard Duece Jones. Jones is averaging 15.0 points, 9.0 assist and 3.4 steals per game for the Leopards.

Four starters and two reserves are averaging in double figures for Temple. Guard Desmond Wesley (16.0) and Erick Kelley (17.0) round out the back court while reserve guards Pat Fisher (14.0) and Gene Overton (10.0) are also scoring in double figures.

Forward Aaron Williams is leading the inside attack with 10.9 points and 8.0 rebounds per game.

Plan B gets Cooper, EP Riverside to final

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

Sometimes the best-laid plans just get tossed out the window.

Both Abilene Cooper and El Paso Riverside resorted to plan B on Friday night at Chaparral Center and that versatility got them into the Region I-5A boys basketball tournament finals today at noon.

Riverside, in what was easily the more exciting of the two finals, ousted Fort Worth Dunbar 74-73 on a last-second three-point goal by Mike Ulloa that he wasn't even supposed to take.

Cooper, a team that averages 82 points a game on a run-and-gun offense, used its versatility to match up with Euless Trinity's inside game and beat the Trojans 55-45.

"I didn't have time to think," said Ulloa of Riverside's plan with four seconds to play while they were down 73-71. "The play was called for Romon (Diaz) but he couldn't get open so Ruben (Rodriguez) just penetrated and passed it out to me."

The win for Riverside was especially thrilling since the Rangers were up against the dominant power of Region I in the Wildcats of Dunbar. But for the second-straight year the District 7-5A champion Dunbar was ousted by a second-place team in the semifinals of a tournament it once owned. Last year Midland High, which was the runner-up of 4-5A, shocked Dunbar in the semis and went all the way to the state tournament.

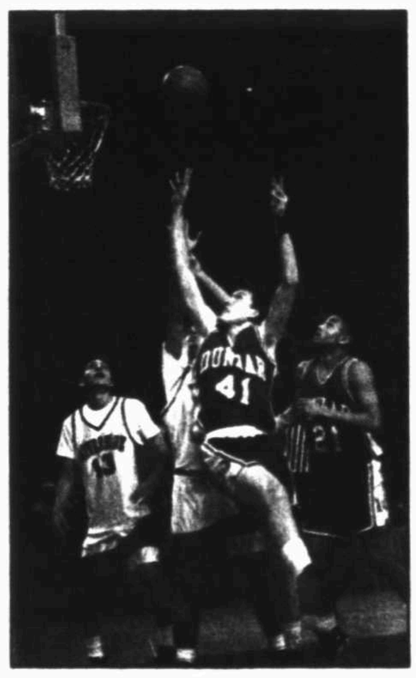

"There is no more mystique for Fort Worth Dunbar," said Ulloa. "It's just a name. People will have to begin to respect El Paso teams — especially us."

Dunbar, however, was without its head coach Robert Hughes, who spent his last game in 1995 serving a one-game suspension levied by the UIL after he scheduled too many regular-season games. Had the Wildcats won, Hughes would have been back on the bench today. Instead, Hughes' long-time assistant Leondas Rambo was called upon to lead the team.

But the man who had led Dunbar to victory every time he has had to fill in for Hughes over the years — Rambo estimated it to be 15 games — could not convince his players to play defense in the first half and that ultimately choked the Wildcats.

Riverside took a surprising 15-point lead (36-21) at halftime with their run-and-gun game, and the Wildcats used up their energy to pull ahead 54-52 at the end of the third quarter for the first time since early in the first quarter and missed crucial free throws down the stretch that

Lady Rebels one of 10 teams still in soccer playoff contention

By Mike Butts

The District 5-5A soccer season is forty-two days and 144 games old. But the league is not much closer to having the playoffs set than when play started Jan. 21.

Ten of 5-5A's 14 teams have made or are in contention for six playoff spots. Only two of those teams — Midland High's boys and Abilene Cooper's girls — have clinched the playoffs, both as district champions. Oilers pick up Mel Gray, NFL's career leader in kickoff returns

HOUSTON (AP) — Detroit Lion Mel Gray, the NFL's all-time kickoff return leader, has agreed to a two-year $2.4 million contract with the Houston Oilers.

Gray, 33, led the NFL in 1994 with a 28.4 yard average on kickoff returns and scored three touchdowns. He also averaged 11.1 yards on punt returns. He is expected to sign the contract today.

"He's a great return man, one of the best of all time," said Floyd Reese, the Oilers general manager. "He fills a need spot for us."

Gray's agent Jack Wirth said the Oilers won a tug of war with the Detroit Lions and the Carolina Panthers.

"The Oilers were very aggressive in their pursuit of Mel," Wirth said. "They wanted him very badly. We're very happy with the deal."

The 5-9, 162-pound Gray, who made $600,000 last season is the Oilers best return man since Billy "White Shoes" Johnson.

Gray, who won Pro Bowl recognition for the third time last season, gets a signing bonus of $700,000 and base salaries of $850,000 this year and $850,000 in 1996.

Defending state champ graces shortened Tall City Invitational

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

For the second straight year the Class 5A girls defending state golf champion will grace Green Tree Country Club as the Tall City Invitational girls golf tournament gets under way today at 8 a.m.

San Angelo Central, the current defending state champion, and Midland Lee, which won the title two years ago, will be back to battle for the tournament title. Lee won last year's tourney after surviving a furious Lady Bobcat rally which came up three strokes short.

Both San Angelo and Lee dominated Region I play and made for a strong District 4-5A contingency at the state tournament in Austin last year. The Lady Bobcats, however, repeated their district performance and dethroned the Lady Rebels for the state title. Lee finished third.

But because the Lady Bobcats did not lose a single player to graduation, they seem to be a strong favorite to stop the Lady Rebels on their home turf.

The real question, however, will be answered at about 7 a.m. when the tournament officials check out the greens and make sure the frost that forced the tournament to be played on only one day will not slow play today. The arctic front that swept through Texas on Thursday caused school cancellations and two tournament postponements in Midland. Midland High coach Bernie Hagins is still nervously watching the Weather Channel.

"We're disappointed that we had to make the tournament just one day but we have no control of the weather," said Hagins. "And it hurts us in making money. The booster club makes its money by selling hamburgers to the golfers and of course we'll have to reduce the entry fee.

"But we'll have to check the greens in the morning (today) and if they're too bad we may have to delay the tee time."

The weather also played havoc on the tournament field as nine teams pulled out of the original 24-team lineup. But 4-5A has already proven its strength in Region I so the teams who stayed home may not have impacted the tournament outcome very much anyway.

Both Midland and Lee will field two teams in the tournament and the rest of the field contains teams from Amarillo Caprock, Lamesa, Amarillo Palo Duro, Lubbock Monterey, Big Spring, Odessa Permian, Amarillo Tascosa, Plainview, Amarillo High, San Angelo and Snyder. The field will be split into two flights. One flight will tee off on the north course and turn to the east while the other will begin on the west course and turn to the north.

The Lady Rebels' first squad is made up of seniors Christin Sutton and Betsy Brinninstool and sophomores Adrienne Phillips, Sandi Talley and Kelly Feavel. The second squad is made up of senior Amanda Logan, junior Kristin Kennedy and sophomores Michelle Morren, Ashley Beck, Kara Martin and Sarah Leuhring.

But despite their youth and the loss of all five from last year's state tournament team, Lee coach Phyllis Sutton said no one has told her sophomores that they can't play.

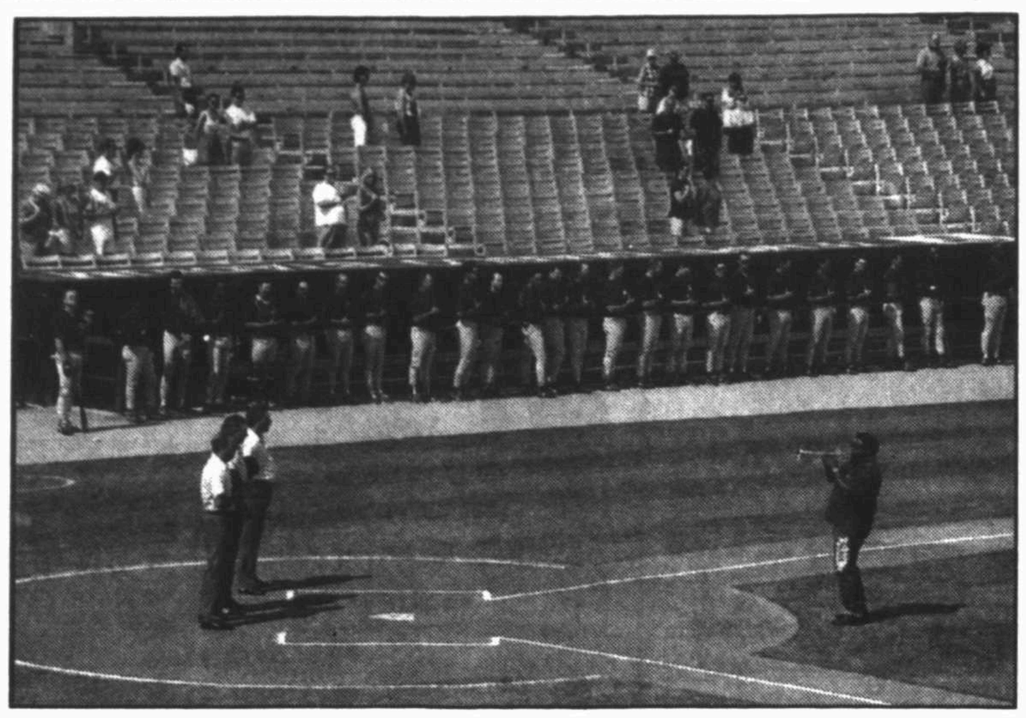

"When we went to our first tournament they didn't put us in a high group like they usually do because of our sophomores," Sutton said. "But at the end of the first day we were tied for second. And these were big-eyed sophomores playing in one of the toughest tournaments around. Every one of the teams were top teams."

A lot of the leadership comes from seniors Christin Sutton, coach Sutton's daughter, and Brinninstool, who spent two years behind a group of seniors who played on two state tournament teams.

"They could have played on any varsity anywhere in the state," said coach Sutton, "probably all three years."

The Midland High first squad is made up of seniors Robin Dameron and Rebecca Harper and juniors Jackye Soper, Ingrid Weaver and Emily Conine. Midland II includes seniors Kasie Culbert and Elizabeth Wade along with junior Melissa Gerhard and sophomores Shai Arnold and Mindy Winchell.

"My sophomores last year (this year's juniors) worked really hard this summer and played in a bunch of tournaments," said Hagins. "In district, Central will probably win it and Lee and Permian and Abilene High will probably fight out for second. We hope to fit in there somewhere. But if my kids keep improving like they have been, we might even improve on that."

Good weather overshadows Rangers in 7-6 exhibition-opening loss to Twins

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — It was a beautiful day for baseball and there was baseball. It was just different.

The first baseman used a borrowed glove and the announced crowd of 1,133 that looked more like 500 who didn't know the players even with a program as the Texas Rangers opened their exhibition season against Minnesota on Friday.

Minnesota victimized former Twins pitcher Jack Strong for four runs in the fourth inning and rallied in the ninth for a a 7-6 victory. But the game seemed secondary to a pleasant afternoon outdoors.

Before the game, singer Bob Dylan's voice boomed over the Charlotte County Stadium sound system asking "How does it feel?"

As the game progressed, everyone had an opinion on the feel of replacement baseball.

"The play is a little ragged but they show a lot of hustle," said Matthew Kimball of Baltimore. "It's clear it ain't the major leaguers but it was a nice day and I wanted to bring my son (Everett, 9) out to see a game."

Cathy Robertson, Barberton, Ohio, didn't care about the quality of play. She appreciated the effort.

"It's fun to watch because they are trying hard," she said. "Some of these kids are getting a chance to play and I think it's great they're getting the opportunity."

The passive Ranger crowd showed polite interest in the eighth inning when Greg Ritchie's 3-run double tied the game at 6-6 but Brian Brady's grounder in the ninth broke the deadlock.

Rangers general manager Doug Melvin felt smmpathy for the replacements, especially Miguel Sabino, an outfielder recruited to play first base for the Rangers replacements.

"You reach out to these guys who are trying so hard to succeed," Melvin said. "Sabino had to borrow a lefthanded first baseman's mitt to play. Some of them will be disapponted but they are so eager for instruction."

Jackie Davidson, the Chicago Cubs' No. 1 pick in 1983 but out of baseball since 1989, continued his comeback attempt as the Rangers starter. He struck out three and allowed one hit over two innings.

Bruce Dostal didn't last the first inning. He made a diving catch on a low fly ball by Chris Malinski and suffered a facial laceration when he fell on the catch.

"I wanted to get away from all the talk and just walk the walk," Davidson said. "I'm really honored the Rangers allowed me to be the opening-day starter.

Texas led 1-0 until the Twins got to Savage, who pitched for the Twins in 1990, for four runs in the fourth inning, two on a two-run double by Jason Baker.

There was no traffic backup on State Road 776 leading into Charlotte County Stadium. Fans could sit uncrowded in the stands.

Hank Nauts, who recently retired to nearby Englwood, worked the pitching machine beneath the stadium but he had few takers who wanted to pay $1 for three pithces against a speed gun.

"I think it's early," he said. "People may not know this game starts earlier than the rest."

About 300 fans showed up on Thursday to watch a free exhibition between the Rangers and the Pacific Dolphins of the Korean Professional Baseball League.

Nauts was among the spectators for the game with the Dolphins.

"Basically I had nothing else to do," Nauts said. "But like baseball so well, I'll watch any kind of baseball. When I was back home, I'd go watch semi-pro baseball."

Nauts won't take sides in the strike.

"That's their baby, I'm not taking sides, I just want it settled," Nauts said.

It seemed like a good way to spend an afternoon to Dave Richardson of Barberton, Ohio.

"Well, it's not crowded," he said. "There's a lot of enthusiasm and the play is decent. Why not?

And Nauts? He closed up early. Business was very slow.

CHAPS: Temple backcourt averages only 5-11

(From 1C)

Temple's backcourt is small with the average size of 5-11, but Temple coach Kirby Johnson feels his team uses its quickness to offset the size disadvantage.

"We have three guys who have over 75 steals this season and we have a lot of balance offensively. We are more of a finesse team than Midland. We like to run a more uptempo game with our three guards and we like to shoot the three."

Midland College coach Pat Rafferty recognizes the similarities between South Plains and Temple.

"I see those tendencies in terms of tempo and the pace they prefer to play. They try to make it as much of an up tempo and scatter to create as many possessions as possible. They play three guards, all shoot the ball a lot and people come of the bench," said Rafferty. "In terms of statistics, they have got a couple of kids down inside that can score if you don't guard them."

Midland will have a size advntage for one of the few times all year with Radford (6-7) and Shedrich Franklin (6-6) being slightly taller than Temple's front court of Jody McGarity and Ira Clark.

"I think the outcome depends on who can control the tempo," said Rafferty. "If it is a 3-on-2 fast break the whole time where you are in a transitional mode the physical style doesn't come into play."

That style has paid dividends for the WJCAC. The WJCAC has advanced to the naitonal tournament four of the past five years with Odessa, Midland and South Plains making the field of 16 in Hutchinson since 1990.

Midland will bring its own back court trio to the Ferrell Center with sophomore Kevin Rice leading the team. Rice will likely be matched up against Jones as Rafferty tries to slow down the Leopards.

Rice is ranked second in the conference in steals (3.2) and is fifth in assists (4.5 per game). The key for Midland will be the posie of freshman guards Devon Phillips and D'Juan Baker. Baker leads the team in scoring with 16.4 per game while Phillips (16.2), Rice (13.5) and Franklin (12.6) are averaging in double figures.

CHAP NOTES: Midland College leads the series 2-1. Midland defeated Temple 93-82 in the opening round of the Region V Tournament in 1992. The Chaps have never lost an opening round game at the region tournament.

TOURNAMENT NOTES: On the opening day of the tournament New Mexico Junior College knocked Collin County out of the tournament with a 108-89 victory. In a first round rematch of last year, McLennan defated South Plains 108-86.

Midland game will be heard on KCRS (AM 550).

Russ Cochran drives from the eighth tee in Friday's Doral Open.

Love overcomes shaky back nine for Doral Open lead

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Despite some unhappy adventures on the back nine, Davis Love III took over sole control of the lead Friday at the halfway point of the Doral-Ryder Open.

And the man who needs a victory to make it into the Masters promises to improve on his 10-under-par 134 total during the next two rounds over Doral's Blue Monster course.

"I feel like I haven't scored well over the last two days," Love said after a second-round 69.

"I had an easy 65 the first day and then threw away a lot of shots today and still had a 69," Love said.

"But my confidence level is pretty high. I'm hitting the ball well and driving it almost as well as I can. I just need to capitalize on my chances, get focused a little better."

Coming off a non-winning season last year, Love needs a victory in the next five weeks to achieve his announced goal of making it into the Masters. But he shrugged away the possibility of added pressure due to the immediacy of that target.

"Everybody is playing for something every week: keeping your card, winning your first tournament, making the Masters, moving up to No. 1. There's something every week," Love said.

Lefty Russ Cochran is an example. After 18 months of frustrating struggles, he was simply looking for a chance to gain some respectability. And he achieved it with the best round of the tournament, an 8-under-par 64 that lifted him into second place at 135.

"I have no idea where that came from," Cochran said after scoring seven birdies and an eagle. "I've missed the last three or four cuts and haven't played good forever. This was from out of the blue."

It came on some magnificent iron play. Four of his birdies were on putts of one foot or less, and two others were from the 3-5 foot range.

"What's fun," he said, "is coming to a golf tournament like this, shooting a great round, getting involved in the lead — and not even caring. I'm just happy to be on the right track and playing good again."

Greg Norman had another 68 and led a group at 136 that included Jeff Sluman, young Justin Leonard, former Doral winner Billy Glasson and Joe Ozaki of Japan.

Jack Nicklaus, 55, improved 10 strokes from his opening 77, but only managed to get back to even par for the tournament. It took a score of one under to qualify for the final two rounds and Nicklaus was a casualty.

ATLANTA (AP) — Olympian Darnell Hall smashed his meet record in the men's 400-meter dash in the USA-Mobil Indoor Championships Friday, setting up a highly anticipated confrontation with world record-holder Michael Johnson.

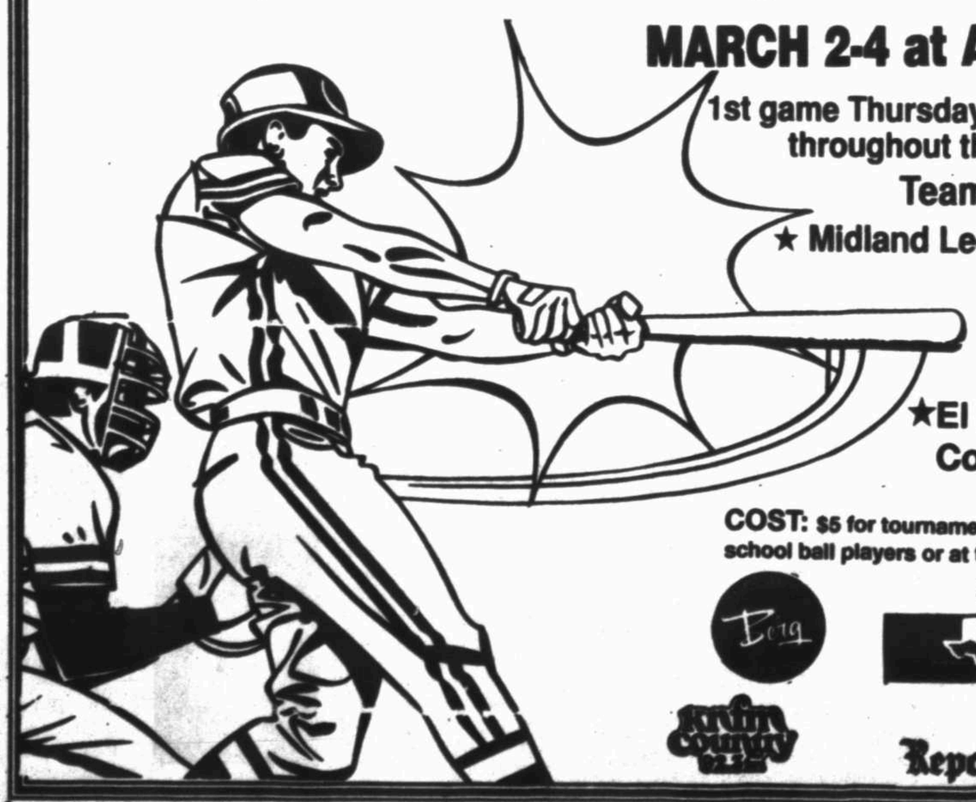

Hall's time of 45.77 seconds in the preliminaries broke the mark of 48.08 he set in winning last year's 400, but was far short of the world record of 44.97 established by Johnson last month at Reno, Nev. It also was .01 second short of Hall's indoor career-best of 45.76 at Lievin, France, last month.

Ozona crushes Poth to reach 2A title game

The Associated Press

■ UIL Girls Basketball

AUSTIN — Amber Tarr scored 22 and grabbed 11 rebounds as Ozona turned a close game into a rout in the third quarter, rolling over Poth 65-42 in the Class 2A semifinals of the girls' state basketball tournament Friday.

Ozona (33-2) is making its first appearance in the state tournament and will play in Saturday's championship game against Cooper (31-3), a 46-45 winner against Gunter in the other semifinal.

Poth, led by 12 points each from Leslie Kopecki and Jacqueline Jansky, finished the year 27-10 after making its second state tourney showing.

After trailing 28-27 at halftime, Ozona's Lady Lions went wild in the third quarter, outscoring Poth 21-2 in the period.

Shelly Sullivan scored six straight points on baseline jumpers. Bobbie Bryson ducked and slipped through traffic for five points, and Gloria Pena-Alfaro added two 3-pointers.

Cooper 46, Gunter 45

Stacy Little hit both ends of a one-and-one free throw attempt with 6.1 seconds left to help Cooper hold off Gunter 46-45 in a wild finish in the Class 2A semifinals of the girls' state basketball tournament.

Cooper (31-3), a three-time titlist, will face Ozona Saturday in the championship game. Gunter, led by Amy Sutton with 20 points, finished the year 32-3 after making its first tournament appearance.

Cooper appeared to be coasting to victory after taking a 43-31 lead with 4:05 left, but Gunter stepped up its defensive pressure and got a key 3-pointer by Jill Sutton and two pressure-packed free throws by Heather Spencer and another by Sarah Schaack to pull within 44-42 with 10.4 seconds left.

Class 5A Semifinals

Duncanville 54,

Arlington Sam Houston 44

Julie Lake scored 18 as perennial powerhouse Duncanville remained unbeaten and earned a shot at a record-tying fifth state title by beating Arlington Sam Houston 54-44 Friday in the Class 5A semifinals of the girls' state basketball tournament.

Flawless ball handling, precision passing and sheer hustle helped Duncanville overcome a size mismatch and reach its seventh state final.

Duncanville (37-0), which has four state titles, including a three-peat in 1988, 1989 and 1990, will play in Saturday's championship game against the winner of the Houston Madison-Austin Westlake semifinal.

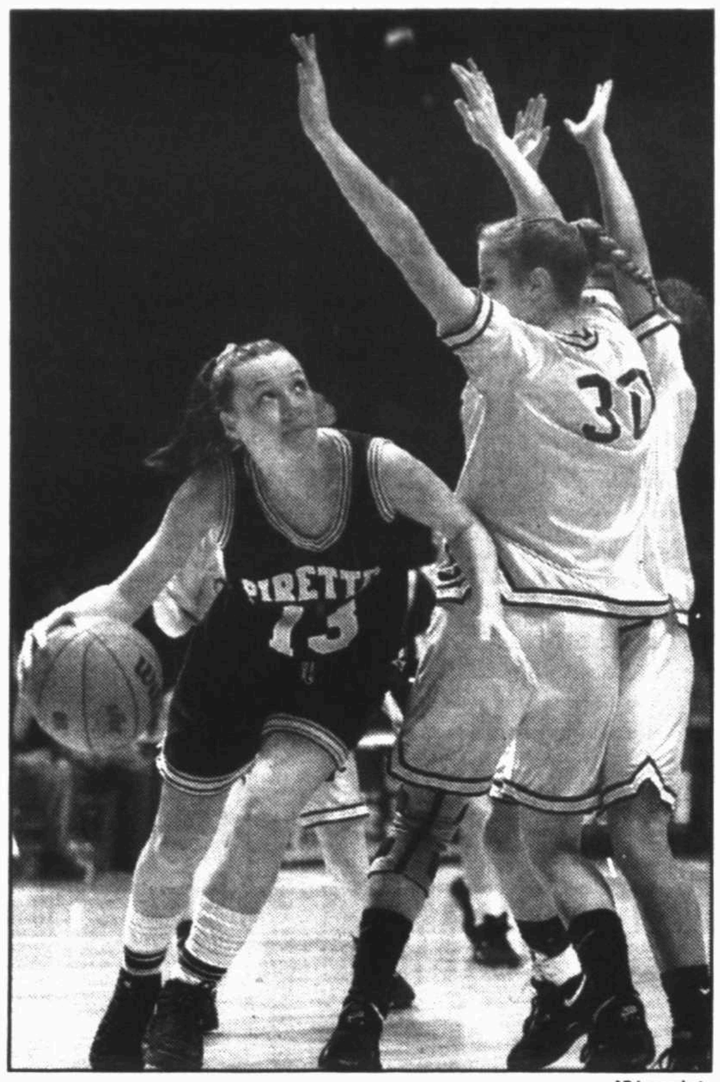

Sam Houston finished the season 29-7.

Austin Westlake 61,

Houston Madison 56

Sarah Howden scored 19 points and Austin Westlake applied relentless defensive pressure in knocking off high-powered Houston Madison 61-56 Friday in the Class 5A semifinals of the girls' state basketball tournament.

Westlake (35-4), winner of the 1993 Class 4A state title, will face Duncanville (37-0) in Saturday's championship game.0

Roster moves push 'Wolves over Rockets

The Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

MINNEAPOLIS — Two February roster moves are paying dividends for the Minnesota Timberwolves in March.

Trade acquisition Tom Gugliotta scored 12 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter and Darrick Martin, promoted from the CBA, keyed a third-quarter rally as the Wolves sent the Houston Rockets to their third straight loss, 108-105 Friday night.

With leading scorer Isaiah Rider sidelined by an injured ankle, the Wolves stopped Houston for their third victory in four games.

"He's just a good player," Wolves coach Bill Blair said of Gugliotta, who added seven rebounds and six assists. "The assists, looking for other people — — that can become infectious, and I think it has."

Spurs 112, Magic 111

SAN ANTONIO — Dennis Rodman's rebound shot with 3.7 seconds left Friday night gave the San Antonio Spurs a 112-111 victory over the Orlando Magic.

Rodman's rebound, his 20th of the game, was off an air-ball 3-point attempt by Doc Rivers as the shot clock was winding down, giving San Antonio its seventh consecutive victory and pulling it within 1 1/2 games of Midwest Division-leading Utah.

The Spurs have won 10 straight home games, 16 of their last 18 and 31 of 38 since Rodman returned to the team on Dec. 10.

Nuggets 100, Heat 98

DENVER — Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf had 22 points and hit 20-footer with less than two seconds left to lift the Denver Nuggets to a 100-98 win over the Miami Heat on Friday night.

Glen Rice, who had 24 points, tied the game by hitting one of two free throws with 16.9 seconds left. Following a timeout, Abdul-Rauf hit the game-winning shot with 1.6 seconds to play.

Miami had a chance to tie, but Reggie Williams blocked Rice's shot as time expired.

Dale Ellis had 19 points for Denver, Rodney Rogers 18 and Dikembe Mutombo 17 points to go with a game-high 14 blocks.

Suns 122, Sonics 118, OT

PHOENIX — Elliott Perry sent Phoenix ahead with a pair of free throws in overtime, then assisted on A.C. Green's big 3-pointer with 1:02 left as the Suns outlasted the Seattle SuperSonics 122-118 in overtime Friday night.

The Sonics went cold in the extra period, making just one of their first six shots while the Suns went ahead 121-116 lead on Green's shot.

Celtics 103, Bucks 91

BOSTON — Dino Radja scored 24 points and grabbed 11 rebounds and four other Celtics scored in double figures as Boston broke a three-game losing streak with a 103-91 win over the Milwaukee Bucks on Friday night.

Sherman Douglas scored a season-high 23 points and had nine assists, and Eric Montross added 15 points and 12 rebounds.

76ers 102, Nets 98

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dana Barros had 24 points and his 20-footer with 15.7 seconds left secured the Philadelphia 76ers' victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Clarence Weatherspoon added 21 as he and Barros scored the 7

Bullets 111, Pacers 106

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Don MacLean scored 11 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter as the Washington Bullets defeated the Indiana Pacers for their third victory in four games.

Hawks 94, Pistons 78

(AP) — Stacey Augmon scored 19 points and tied his career best by grabbing 12 rebounds as the Atlanta Hawks beat the Detroit Pistons, who went scoreless for six minutes of the final period.

Andrew Lang finished with 18 points and eight rebounds.

Lady Bulldogs play on despite debated loss

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

■ 6-5A Softball

Midland High softball coach Sherri Culwell still harbors ill feelings about her teams' controversial 14-13 loss at Abilene Cooper Tuesday. But she realizes her team must move on. And she knows it shouldn't have blown its eight-run lead in the first place.

The Lady Bulldogs try to get their first District 6-5A win today at the Bill Williams Softball Complex against Odessa Permian at 2 p.m. Midland Lee attempts to go into first place by itself today at Odessa High at 2 p.m.

Midland High had kept two books Tuesday that showed it scored 10 runs in the second inning Tuesday against Cooper. But Cooper's book showed MHS with only nine. Because the home team's book is official, the Lady Bulldogs eventually lost when Cooper scored in the final inning. Culwell called the district representative in Abilene this week to make sure the umpires who worked the game were UIL certified. They are, but the MHS coach believes they shouldn't be allowed to work any more league games.

"As it stands right now we have a loss to Cooper. I doubt that's going to be reversed," Culwell said. "We're not going to dwell on it. We should have never been in a position to lose by one run anyway. (But) I'm still doing everything I can to make sure those guys don't see game time anymore."

The Lady Bulldogs have a solid chance to move their 6-5A mark to 1-2 today. MHS (5-3 overall) beat the Lady Panthers (4-5, 1-0) twice in pre-district play, 7-6 and 13-12.

"With us being 0-2 this is a big game," Culwell said. "We need to get on the winning side."

MHS may be able to pitch sophomore pitcher Michelle Quintela, who has not started this year because of a bicep injury.

"Whoever I pitch I have confidence in them to keep the ball in a zone where it will be hit it on the ground and let our defense handle it," Culwell said.

Lee's Lady Rebels now stand tied for first in the district with Cooper at 2-0 (Lee is 9-0 overall). But the Lady Cougars are off Saturday, meaning Lee would be alone at the top with a win over OHS (4-5, 1-1).

Lee coach J.C. Gotcher expressed some dissatisfaction with his team after its 13-3 win over Abilene High in Tuesday's cold. But he's confident they will improve their play today.

"We didn't play all that bad but we didn't play as well as we could," Gotcher said. "But (we) always bounce back."

Lady Rebel ace Emily Hayes, 6-0 with three no-hitters, is Lee's probable starter.

Haskins not on sideline for record-setting 664

EL PASO (AP) — Don Haskins reached the latest milestone in his storied career far from the sidelines where he has made his mark among the greatest coaches in college basketball history.

The Texas-El Paso coach wasn't in Colorado to growl at referees and hurl his rolled-up program, as is customary, when his Miners downed Air Force 69-60 Thursday to move Haskins into a seventh-place tie on the career victory list.

He was in El Paso, watching the game on TV Thursday and nursing a bug that has plagued him and the team for weeks. But the coach was expressing no remorse Friday about missing the milestone moment of victory No. 664.

"I'm really not interested," said a very hoarse and weary-sounding Haskins. "I'm interested in the next game. It (the record) means very little to me."

Typical Haskins.

The 64-year-old coach does little to publicly celebrate the extraordinary events that have won him national acclaim during his 34 seasons at UTEP.

During the last two seasons, he has made a steady climb up the list of the top 10 winningest coaches, overtaking first Washington's Marv Harshman, then Oregon State's Ralph Miller. All were achieved without fanfare from Haskins.

Thursday's victory in Colorado put him in seventh place along with former UCLA great John Wooden, who retired in 1975 after winning the last of his 10 national titles.

Wooden was 664-162 in 29 seasons. Haskins has a 664-295 record in 34.

A victory Saturday at Fresno State would give Haskins sole possession of seventh place. Haskins said his illness may also force him to miss that game.

The coach is eager to see the Miners prevail again, but he's thinking more of staying in contention for the Western Athletic Conference crown and making the NCAA Tournament than of personal records.

Twenty-four days later, UMass finishing win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Marcus Camby, who wasn't even in the building when the first half was played, had 12 points in the second half Friday as No. 8 Massachusetts beat Rutgers 77-62 in the completion of a game suspended by a student protest 24 days ago.

The sophomore center missed three games earlier in the season with a strained right hamstring. The Feb. 7 game at Rutgers was one of them.

That game was suspended at halftime when about 150 Rutgers students took the floor in protest of racially inflammatory statements made by school president Francis Lawrence in a November speech.

In order for him to play in the completion at the Spectrum in front of about 400 people, Massachusetts (23-4, 13-3 Atlantic 10) had to be assessed a technical foul because Camby wasn't listed in the scorebook when the game started.

The two points Rutgers (12-14, 7-9) got on the technical with 16:53 to play seemed well worth it later for the Minutemen. They pulled away down the stretch, using a 17-0 run to take a 76-55 lead with 2:22 to play.

Rutgers held a 31-29 halftime lead for 3 1/2 weeks and lost it for good when Camby made two free throws with 13:45 left for a 45-44 lead.

Andrew Kolbasovsky hit a turnaround with 8:05 left to bring the Scarlet Knights to 59-55, but the Minutemen went on their big run with a monster dunk by Camby on a drive down the lane the big play.

Lou Roe added 11 points, only four on Friday, for the Minutemen, who won the conference regular-season title for the fourth straight year. Tyrone Weeks and Edgar Padilla each had 10 points — all of Padilla's coming in the second half.

Kolbasovsky had 18 points to lead the Scarlet Knights, who fell to seventh place in the league standings and will play George Washington in the quarterfinals on Sunday.

Abell Blue falls short of semis

Abell Blue lost to Odessa Bonham 28-27 in the Midland-Odessa eighth grade girls' basketball tournament Friday at Abell Junior High.

Laci Patterson had 13 for Bonham while Valeri Morgan had 12 for Abell.

In other action, Bonham defeated Alamo Red 40-31 Friday at Abell. Lauren Taylor had 16 for Bonham while Andi Cannon and Kristi West had six each for Alamo.

San Jacinto Green, 8-2, beat Goddard Black 30-26. Clarissa Leonard, Jody Faulkner, Maddie Coder and Niki Green each scored six points for Green.

Following the win, San Jacinto lost to Odessa Nimitz 51-38. Codder had 10 for S.J. Green. Teronda Edwards had 30 for Nimitz.

Alamo Gray defeated Goddard Black 25-17 . Debbie Yee had 10 for Gray while Tabia Todd had six for Goddard.

Gray would lose in the next round to Odessa Nimitz 36-30. Whitney King had nine points for Alamo, but that would not be enough as T. Edwards had 21 to eliminate Alamo.

Today's semi-finals will be a matchup of Odessa schools as Hood and Crockett will play in one semifinal while Bonham and Nimitz will play in the other at Abell. The finals will be at 2:30 p.m. The consolation game will also be at 2:30 p.m.

Games at Alamo were not available by press time.

Goddard win tops 7th-grade action

Goddard Black beat San Jacinto Green 20-18 to advance to the semi-finals of the seventh-grade girls' basketball tournament Friday.

Lindsey Leaverton hit a three-point field goal in the last moment to give Black, now 7-1, to win. Katie Gilmore had 11 for San Jacinto.

Abell remained undefeated at 8-0, beating Alamo Gray 26-12. Courtney Criswell and Leatrice Jackson had six each for Abell. Jennifer Paris had six for Alamo.

Abell White (8-1) used 11 points for Andra Cobb went to defeat San Jacinto Gold 33-16, Friday at San Jacinto.

Alamo Gray defeated San Jacinto 22-21 behind Tonya Meredith's 10 points. Alamo joins Abell as the other semifinalist.

place team from District 7 — currently Wichita Falls High (15-1-1) — on March 20 or 21.

• Midland Lee's boys, 4-7 in the league, have been eliminated from playoff contention along with Midland High's girls. The Lee boys end their season today at home against Abilene Cooper and the MHS girls host Abilene High, both at 2 p.m.

• Lee's girls can clinch at least a tie for a playoff spot with a win at Abilene Cooper today. But the Lady Rebels (7-4 and 10-5 overall) will not be out of the playoffs with a loss.

Midland High's boys (9-1, 11-2) round out the Midland teams' schedules at Abilene High today.

So the Lady Rebels have their most important game of the year today at the toughest place to win in the district. Cooper's girls have the only perfect league record in 5-5A at 10-0 (14-0 overall). They beat Lee in Midland 2-1 Feb. 7.

They are the only team the Lady Rebels have played and not beaten this year. Lee's girls have split with Brazoswood, Abilene High, San Angelo and Odessa Permian. They beat San Angelo and Permian in the last two games to avenge earlier-season losses and move to second place in the 5-5A standings.

"The last time we played Cooper we felt like we played them dead even in a game that could have gone either way," Lee girls' coach Van Gravitt said. "So just like the last two games we're looking forward to getting a second shot at them. We're playing better now than we were (Feb. 7)."

The Lady Rebs are also a different team. Lee will have six players in positions they were not in when Lee lost to Cooper the first time around. First-string goal keeper Jamie Calhoun is back, allowing reserve keeper Jennifer Connell to return to the midfield. Forward Stephanie Smith will try to return from a nagging knee injury. Christi Johnson plays forward now and Kristina Farmer and Lesley Keel are at fullback.

Gravitt feels his team must stop Cooper stopper Melissa Butz (20 goals, six assists) to have a chance at beating the Lady Cougars.

"Abilene High took them to a shootout and in talking to their coach what they focused on was shutting down Melissa Butz," Gravitt said.

Cooper has clinched an outright league title, so they may not have the incentive or use all the players they would if their playoff position was undetermined. Not unlike the Odessa High and Midland High boys situation Tuesday when MHS was upset 1-0 in a shootout.

"We're kind of looking at OHS in the boys as our inspiration," Gravitt said.

The Midland High girls (2-8, 4-8) are coming off their only winning streak of the season after beating Lubbock Monterey and Odessa High.

"This is probably the peak of our season," Lady Bulldogs coach Scott Hodkinson said. "Maybe we have something to build on (today)."

The MHS girls lost to Abilene High 2-1 Feb. 7.

"That was a real close game," Hodkinson said. "We had a couple of goals called back ... so I think my girls are looking forward to this one."

The Lady Eagles are right in the middle of the four-team chase for the playoffs at 6-4 and 10-5 overall.

Lee's boys have had a disappointing year, marked by injuries and disqualifications. The Rebels are 4-3 in district games played with forward Henrik Madsen, but 0-3 in the games he missed because of cards. He'll be back today.

"We're going to go out to win, but a lot of guys who haven't had a lot of playing time are going to get to play," Rebel coach John McCulloch said. Cooper's boys are 3-14 and 1-9 in district. McCulloch will start senior foreign exchange student Kai Behrmann in goal.

Midland High's Bulldogs may be more worried about injuries than their last two league opponents. Standout stopper Kiley Miller was hurt on his shootout try against OHS Tuesday and Midland High coach Tom Esikhati said he may not play today. Starting keeper Jared Richardson has played only about half the teams' league games this year because of a bad back and forward Tyler Berry, who led the team in scoring before pulling a hamstring in practice, has missed the last five game.

But the Bulldogs (9-1, 11-2) have still managed to cruise through their 5-5A schedule. Dating back to a six-game winning streak to end the 1993 district season, MHS has won 26 of its last 28 district contests and has lost only seven total games in the last three seasons while going 49-7.

Rangers.

Rambo offered no excuses.

"It probably did (make a difference without Hughes)," said Rambo. "And maybe if I could have gotten them to play defense a little earlier than I did, things would have been different. But you always miss the head coach.

"They just outplayed us," continued Rambo. "You make it to the regional tournament and you have to be doing something right."

After Dunbar took a two-point lead into the fourth, the lead changed hands or was knotted up 10 times. Rodriguez kept Riverside in the game with three of his game-high five treys but he wasn't called upon to take the possible game-winning shot.

"The play was designed for Romon but it was in the kids hands," said Riverside coach Jim Forbes. "I told them before we broke the huddle that if it doesn't go like we planned to go to plan B."

In the other semifinal, Cooper became the second-straight 4-5A team to advance to the regional finals and in doing so, the Cougars may have proved something to themselves and anyone who thought they couldn't do it without all-everything post Andrae Patterson. With Patterson, who plays for Bob Knight's Indiana team, the Cougars fell short in last year's semifinal to The Colony.

"It does feel that way," said Cooper post Jason Pillion, who started side-by-side with Patterson and who has had to fill Paterson's shoes as the leading scorer this season. "But Andrae was such a good player and that's what motivated us this year. We knew the only way we were going to replace him was by playing better as a team."

Pillion was also intrigued by the all-West Texas matchup in the finals and the fact that 4-5A has a chance to win regionals for two straight years considering the Dallas-Fort Worth schools have dominated this region for so long.

"A lot of people say that basketball in West Texas doesn't compare with that in Dallas or Fort Worth," he said. "I think we've proved we can play with the best of them."

Pillion, however, and teammate John Hirsch — Cooper's two leading scorers — became role players when the Cougars went to plan B. That plan included 20 points from Eric Honeycutt and 10 from Bart Fehr.

"There are 13 guys that have been with us on the varsity all season long and all of them have tremendous heart and ability," said Cooper's first-year coach Greg Gober. "Normally, we don't want to slow down our game. We average 82 points and game and give up 62. But I think we've been pretty versatile. I hope that is one of our positives."

Dunbar ended its season with a 30-6 record while Trinity finished the season with a 25-6 mark. Cooper (27-8) and Riverside 8) play today at noon for the right to go to the state tournament next weekend.

Baseball union makes offer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Twenty-four hours after talks almost broke off, baseball negotiators swung back into positive moods Friday after the union finally made a new offer.

The union finally accepted the owners' Fort Lauderdale revenue-sharing agreement of January 1994 and proposed a 25 percent luxury tax on the portions of payrolls above an unspecified level.

Fehr said the union had told mediator W.J. Usery last month that it was prepared to propose a 25 percent tax on the portions of payrolls above 145 percent of the average, which was $59,008,991 in 1994 — more than $2.2 million above the highest payroll.

MHS: Bulldogs set for 6 p.m. game

(From 1C)

Monterey with its 2-0 pool record needs to defeat Permian today at 10 a.m. to move into the title game with Midland High. Monterey could still make the title game without a win, but based on the tiebreakers implemented on the tournament after the opening day was cancelled, a win would assure a championship showdonw with MHS.

For Lee, its was a day that left fans and player stunned as they walked quietly to the car and the locker room after Permian scored eight runs in the bottom of the seventh for the miraculous 10-9 win.

"You just never know what will happen in high school baseball," said Permian coach Steve Coleman. "Those kind of comebacks don't happen that often. In the seventh, Lee is rocking along and then we get some base on balls and a couple of key hits and the next you know we are back in the game.

"I guess Yogi was right when he said 'Its never over 'till is over'"

Eleven batters went ot the plate in the bottom of the seventh for Permian. Four walked, two reached base on an error, one was hit by a pitch and three collected singles — the last hit a shot to left field by Chris Roberson that brought home Heath Pipes and brought the Mojo players pouring out of the dugout.

Play continues today at 10 a.m. with Lee facing El Paso Coronado at Ernie Johnson Field and Odessa Permian and Monterey at Christensen Stadium.

The fifth place game is set for a 1 p.m. start followed by the third place game at 3:30 p.m. and the championship at 6 p.m.

land College coach Ron Jones. "She had a very good season here. After looking at the first-team I thought it went about like I thought it would."

Kailahi is joined by Lady Chap freshman Roslynn Dunn, from Plainview, who was named to the honorable mention squad after tying for first in the conference in steals with 2.9 per game and sixth on the team in assist with 3.6 per game despite playing the shooting guard position for much of the season.

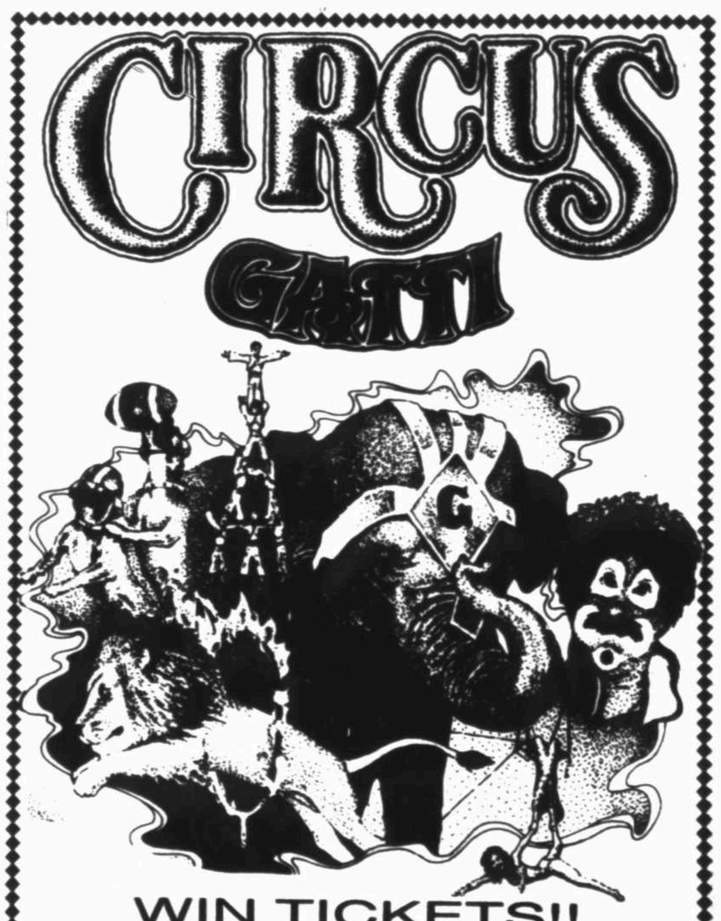

The remainder of the first team has Amber Lacy and Eureka Ray of Howard College, the inside combo of Kristi Allen and Anita Vuletic of New Mexico Junior College, Jackie Wright and Carrie Moss of Western Texas, Emily Fowler of South Plains and Brenda Owensby of Odessa.

The player of the year went to Tammy Yelton of Frank Phillips. She led the league in scoring with a 21.0 point per game average and finished sixth in the conference in rebounding at 8.1 per game.

FPC coach Johnna Pointer, in her first year with the Lady Plainsmen after a stellar career at the University of Texas and one year under the wing of Lady Longhorn coach Jody Conradt, was named the coach of the year.

The honorable mention list has Dunn, Kiki Baker and Monica Watts of South Plains, Tammy Stewart and Cheree Mondon of Frank Phillips, Tammy Wilson of Western Texas, Keisha Jones of New Mexico Junior College and Trenita Shields of Odessa.

Howard College, ranked seventh in the nation, captured its third straight national tournament berth with a 73-70 overtime win over fourth-ranked Grayson County College on Wednesday.

Dodge Avenger sport coupe adds flair plus leg space

BY BOB PLUNKETT

SPECIAL TO THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM

Dale Earnhardt, Rusty Wallace, Mark Martin, Mario Andretti, Al Unser Jr., plus other race drivers who had risked their necks and Dodge Avenger fenders all season in IROC contests, gathered in the winner's circle at Michigan International Speedway last July with Chrysler's president, Robert Lutz, to unveil a new Dodge compact sport coupe. The sleek Dodge also carried the Avenger label.

Unlike those angular Avenger stock cars — which were stripped to the bone for tight-fisted racing and rigged with awesome rear-wheel power statements spewing from heady Chrysler engines — this new consumer version of Avenger featured a cab-forward cockpit packed with passenger comforts and an economical powertrain which pumps its juice to the front wheels.

When those IROC racers finally pulled the wraps off, another fact became perfectly clear: Avenger, the street coupe, offered not a straight line in its new sheetmetal.

Smooth like the wind, it looked aggressive in front with a low nose and sharply canted windshield, strong and muscular on the sides with bold tires, and bulging in a butt which culminated at a high tail with racy spoiler attached.

Lutz, pointing out that this Avenger succeeds the aged Dodge Daytona, also noted that its compact size sandwiches in the 2-door line between subcompact Neon and Stealth.

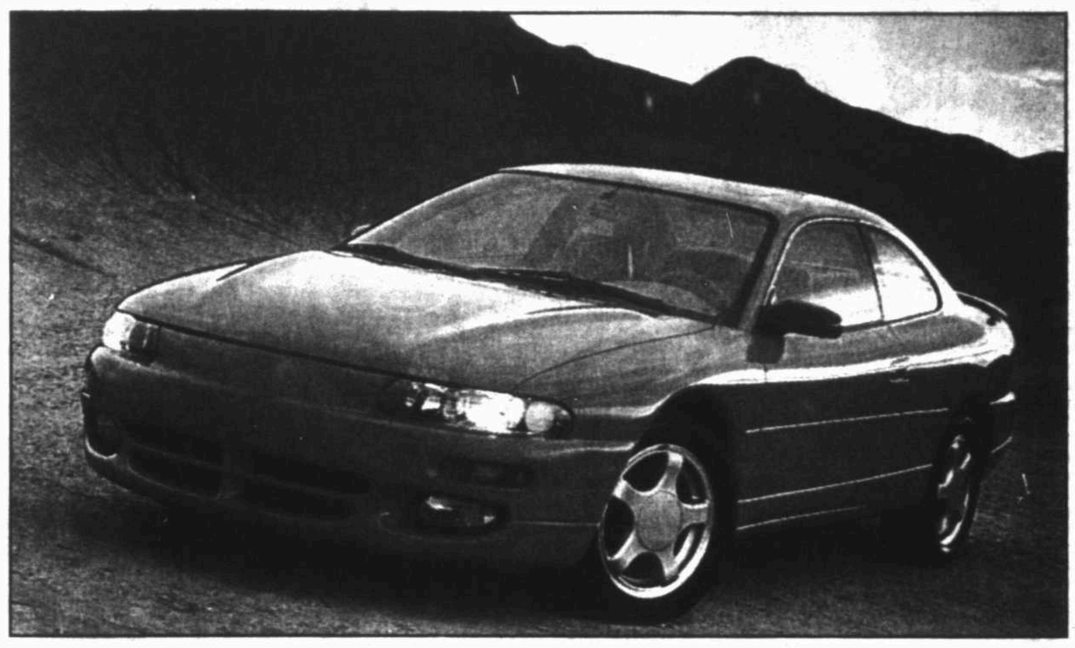

Unlike typical compact sport coupes, though, new Avenger rides on a chassis that's long enough to leave room in the rear seat for legs of adult riders.

To prove the point, I crawled into the back compartment following the presentation of Avenger and discovered my long legs fit neatly — even comfortably — behind the driver's front seatback. Further, I didn't need a hoist to haul myself out of that space, as the front seat slid forward enough to create sufficient space for my exit.

No rival of Avenger provides such rear seat leg space.

With a stiff chassis, 4-wheel double wishbone suspension, variable-speed power rack and pinion steering and 16-inch Goodyear Eagle GT+4 rubber stuck on blacktop, Avenger made me smile in the twisties.

When I powered it at speed-limit pace through my favorite downhill challenge, a mean slope for multiple blocks followed by hard-edged 300-degree random-radius right turn, Avenger didn't complain — in fact, tires never squealed. I can think of only five cars over the past ten years which could meet or beat that performance.

What's the background of this newest Dodge?

Avenger's chassis began with the lively new Eagle Talon, which like Avenger comes out of a Chrysler-Mitsubishi joint-venture plant in Illinois. Five inches were added to the wheelbase — producing that nice, smooth romp over rough spots — and the overall body length grew by 15 inches.

This chassis, plus suspension components and powertrain options Avenger and its Chrysler Sebring counterpart share with new 4-door Dodge Stratus and Chrysler Cirrus.

The exterior styling and cockpit configuration emanate from Chrysler's new design center north of Detroit, and, according to what Lutz said last summer at its unveiling, Avenger was developed exclusively for the American market.

Its appeal sights squarely on young adults, either married or single, who appreciate sensuous, sporty coupe designs but must pay attention to practical considerations like having to occasionally carry rear-seat passengers and also live within confines of affordability.

Avenger ES provides all the fancy features, but the entry-level Avenger, pared of air conditioning, power seat controls, electronic speed control and anti-lock brakes, becomes a bargain lure at $16,000.

For power, base Avenger puts a thrifty new 2.0-liter 4-in-line engine in place with dual cam and 140 hp rating. A firm 5-speed manual shifter comes with this base package, but you can add the 4-speed automatic optionally, along with those ES features stripped from the base model.

Bonuses stem from a spacious trunk, fold-down rear seatbacks to access that rear compartment, a long list of safety systems including dual airbags, plus satisfaction of steering a sporty car that carves a smile on your face.

A world-class personal luxury

FLINT, Mich. — Buick's all-new 1995 Riviera is described as a world-class personal luxury coupe featuring elegant styling, spirited performance, a spacious interior and excellent value.

"Riviera is a distinctly American car that combines the style and performance of a coupe with the comfort and roominess of a full-size sedan," said Buick General Manager Edward H. Mertz.

"Riviera's world-class structure sets a benchmark for structural integrity and strength," he said. "The structure improves the handling and safety of the Riviera, and gives it the quiet, solid, secure feeling that luxury-car buyers expect."

Riviera's all-new body features a graceful, well-balanced shape. Its spacious, comfortable interior provides room usually found only in large sedans.

Riviera buyers may choose from a pair of advanced V-6 engines. For maximum performance, Riviera offers a supercharged 3800 V-6, which is rated at 225 horsepower and 275 lb-ft of torque. The optional supercharged 3800 provides the power of a larger V-8 engine in a smaller, lighter, more efficient package. This helps give the Riviera a smooth, balanced feel that makes driving fun.

The standard engine is the new 3800 Series II, the latest evolution of the highly acclaimed 3800 V-6. Rated at 205 horsepower and 230 lb-ft of torque, the 3800 Series II provides excellent performance and quiet highway cruising. The 3800 Series II also gives the Riviera exceptional fuel economy for a full-size luxury coupe. Projected EPA ratings are 19 mpg city, 29 mpg highway.

An all-new four-wheel independent suspension, with MacPherson struts in the front and semi-trailing arms in the rear, provides both a comfortable ride and excellent control. Four-wheel anti-lock disc brakes are standard. Traction control, which helps improve acceleration and stability on slippery surfaces at all speeds, is optional.

ADVANCED STYLING

A brand new car from the tires up, Riviera offers a stylish new exterior, a spacious interior, and a body structure that is among the strongest in the world.

Buick designers chose to break new ground with the Riviera. The overall shape is made up from large elliptical forms. However, two sharp bevels run through the shape, forming the fender lines. The resulting shape changes, depending on the angle from which it's viewed, providing Riviera with a hint of mystery and intrigue.

Though highly styled, the Riviera is also a thoroughly practical vehicle. The spacious interior allows adults to sit comfortably in the back seat, and the trunk can easily hold luggage for an extended trip.

The beauty of the Riviera extends far beneath its skin. A rugged new body structure, one of the strongest and stiffest in the world, gives the Riviera a solid, vault-like feel. The doors close with a satisfying click, and the car feels rock-solid no matter how rough the road.

Riviera's body structure also contributes to the safety of the quality and durability of the Riviera.

TECHNICAL FEATURES

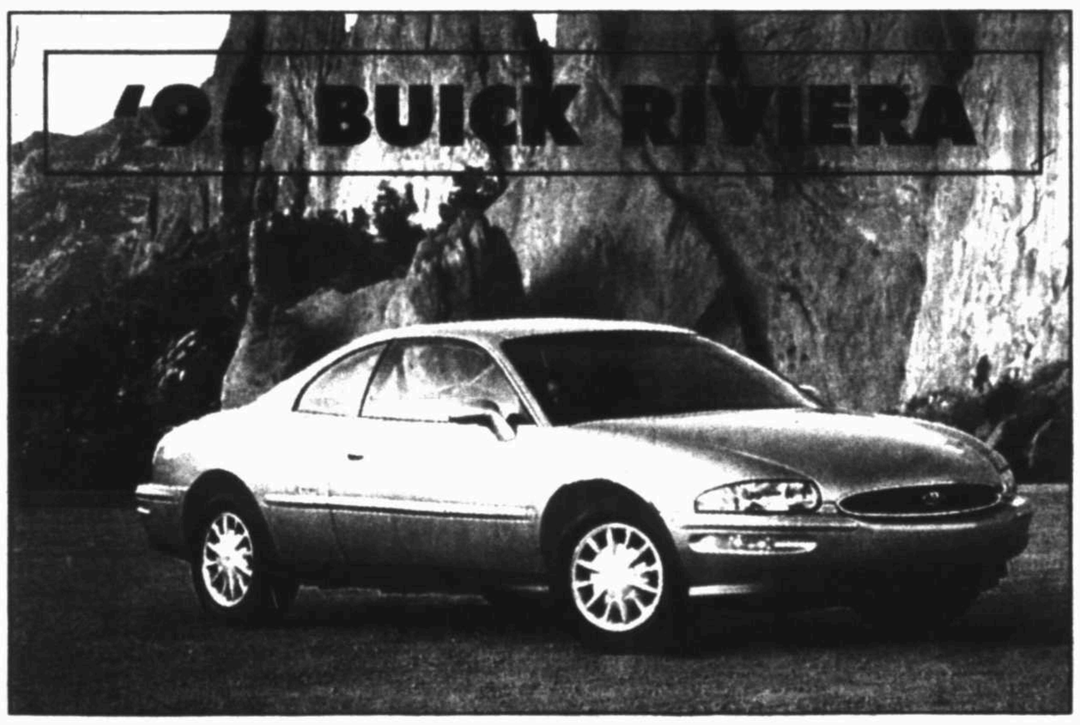

The engines, drivetrain, suspension and brakes of the 1995 Riviera are as advanced as its styling, providing a balance of performance, comfort, safety and efficiency.

The optional engine for the 1995 Riviera is the supercharged 3800 introduced on the 1994 Park Avenue Ultra. A Roots-type blower, mounted on a special intake manifold, provides extra air and fuel when needed, increasing power output of the engine.

The supercharged 3800 is rated at 225 horsepower and 275 lb-ft of torque, yet it is only slightly larger than the naturally aspirated 3800 V-6. This small size helped engineers 4. give the Riviera a finely balanced reducing the size and weight of the already compact engine. Cross-bolted main caps stiffen the bottom end, reducing noise and improving durability.

New cylinder heads with symmetrical combustion chambers provide a smoother idle and lower exhaust emissions. Larger valves and more efficient ports improve flow through the engine. The valves, springs and caps are lighter. Combined with a new camshaft and revised valvetrain parts, this helps extend the power band higher into the rev range.

Horsepower of the 3800 Series II is rated at 205 at 5200 rpm, a 35-horsepower increase over the 3800. Better still, this power increase was achieved without any loss of the low- and mid-range torque so important for stop-and-go driving. In fact, the Series II generates 230 lb-ft of torque, 5 lb-ft more than the 3800.

Though its rugged body structure, smooth engines, and sophisticated chassis give the Riviera a sense of quality and substance, Buick hasn't ignored the more obvious creature comforts.

car. Outer sections are designed to collapse progressively, absorbing the energy of a crash.

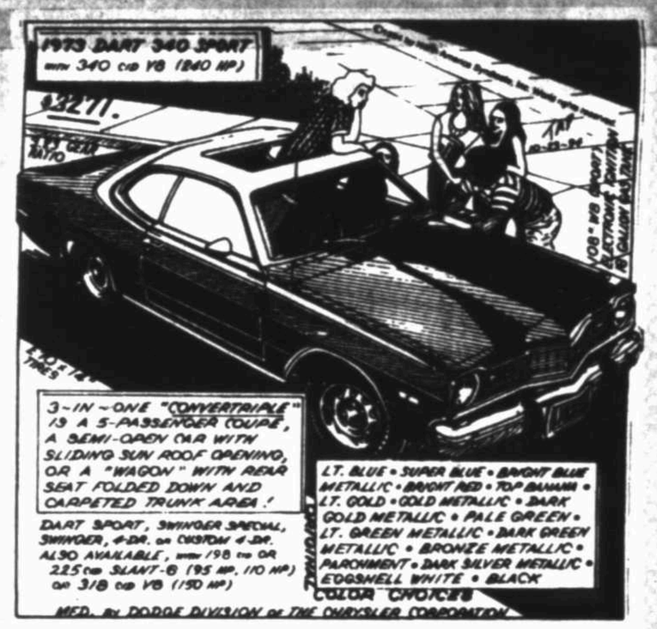

Also, a rigid body structure resists flexing when the car hits a bump. Because all the mounting points remain stable, this makes it easier for engineers to tune the suspension for both a smoother ride and more confident handling.

Because body flex eventually loosens welds and fasteners, a rigid body stays tighter far longer. This helps improve the feel. Yet performance is comparable to many V-8 powered luxury cars, with zero-to-60 times in the 8.5-second range.

The standard engine is the next generation of Buick's proven 3800 V-6, the 3800 Series II. Though it shares basic dimensions with the 3800, the Series II is essentially an all-new engine, with significant updates in almost every area.

A "convertriple." What was that?

It was Chrysler Corporation's specially coined name for its adaptable "three cars in one" coupes in the 1973 Dodge Dart line.

Convertibles were becoming scarce in 1973, as fewer and fewer manufacturers were building them. But the so-called convertriple had a sliding sun-roof to let in the fresh air and overhead light. It also had a stationwagon advantage of folding down the rear seats and utilizing the rear compartment and adjoining trunk space to carry long loads: skis, surfboards, ladders or what-have-you!

Stricter government safety standards had spawned many improvements in 1973 cars, particularly the large, recoiling bumpers that could absorb energy and reduce danger in a low-speed collision.

Other safety features (in the '73 Dart) included an energy-absorbing steering column and wheel, hazard warning system, anti-theft steering column lock, three-point safety belt system with locking retractors, "keyleft-in-ignition" warning buzzer, padded instrument panel and sun visors, dual braking system, parking brake and master cylinder warning light, Safety-Action" inside door handles, Cleaner Air system with vapor saver (gasoline evaporation control system), head restraints, Safety-Rim blowout-resistant wheels, breakaway front ashtray; and more. Some of these features were by no means new to Dodge Dart in 1973, but never before had so many been included in one brand of cars.

Dodge had first introduced the Dart series for 1960. It was a big car then, but in 1963 it shrank to a compact to replace the 1961-1962 Dodge Lancer. For many years to follow, Dodge's Dart and Plymouth's Valiant gained a reputation for amazing reliability and longevity, especially when equipped with the "slant 6" engine. During the 1976 season, the cars were replaced by Dodge's Aspen and Plymouth's Volare.

For 1981, when Chrysler Corp. introduced its totally new front-wheel-drive K-cars," the near-twins were replaced by the Dodge Aries and Plymouth Reliant, and in '87 these bowed to the Dodge Shadow and Plymouth Sundance. The latest economy twins from Chrysler Corp. are the Dodge Neon and Plymouth Neon, 1995 models that made their first appearance in the spring of 1994.

Even after all these many years and changes, the Darts and Valiants of the 1960s and 1970s are still sought as dependable basic-transportation cars. They are relatively trouble-free when given reasonable care. The older and harder to find they become, however, the higher their asking prices go. After two decades, most cars fall into the category of Collectible."
