Hijackers fire shots to scare reporters

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hijackers of TWA Flight 847 fired shots across the airport terminal today to scare reporters after some journalists were allowed to talk to the captive pilot. With a gunman brandishing a pistol behind him, Capt. John Testrake said, "We would all be dead men" if a rescue was attempted.

Gunman hijacked the Athens-to-Rome flight with 153 passengers and crew last Friday. One passenger, 23-year-old U.S. Navy Petty Officer Robert Dean Stethem of Waldorf, Md., was killed by the hijackers.

Officials of Amal, the Shiite Moslem militia, said most of the remaining 40 American hostages were being held in Shiite-controlled western and southern Beirut, to press the hijackers' demands that Israel release more than 700 Shiite prisoners accused of planning or carrying out attacks on the Israeli army in southern Lebanon.

Tom Goodman, an ABC spokesman in New York, said correspondents Charles Glass, Julie Flint and Derwin Johnson were permitted to approach the plane and stand under the cockpit for eight minutes to interview pilot John L. Testrake, who was described as looking "very tired."

Testrake told the reporters, "Not very much is happening to us now, since Sunday night, because they removed the other passengers and took them away, and the three of us have been on the aircraft since then. It's just a case of wait and see what happens, so we've just been taking up quiet housekeeping on the aircraft."

Reagan reiterates policy of not giving in to terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he has no choice but to wait out the terrorists holding about 40 Americans from a hijacked airliner because to retaliate "would probably be sentencing a number of Americans to death."

Openly expressing his own frustration as the hostage crisis in Beirut entered its sixth day, Reagan nonetheless reiterated his policy of refusing to give in to terrorists' demands while holding his own fire to avoid injuring innocent victims.

At his first nationally broadcast news conference in nearly three months, Reagan acknowledged Tuesday his long-announced policy of "swift and effective retribution" against terrorists has been stymied by the United States' inability to locate and identify the instigators of attacks against Americans.

"Retaliation in some peoples' minds might just entail striking a blow in a general direction," Reagan said. But he added, "If you just aim in the general direction and kill some people, well then, you're a terrorist too."

Later, he added: "I could get mad enough now to think of a couple of things we could do to retaliate, but I would probably be sentencing a number of Americans to death if I did it."

Energy crunch predicted unless deductions allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil producers are predicting an energy crunch twice as severe as the 1979 version unless Congress follows President Reagan's lead by preserving $32 billion in tax deductions for drilling costs.

"It will make make 1973 and 1979 look like a cakewalk," Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, warned Tuesday as House tax writers focused on Reagan's overhaul plan.

Several oil executives who appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee conceded the industry image is one of sizeable profits and low taxes. But the executives maintained the reality is otherwise.

Reagan's proposed phaseout of the oil depletion allowance — a perennial target of would-be reformers — came in for less criticism as the industry leveled its guns at any move to tamper with "intangible drilling costs."

Ending drilling-cost deductions, the oil executives maintained, would discourage exploration by making it too expensive. The resulting erosion of supplies would force huge, new imports.

The same argument was used for decades in rearguard actions by producers against cuts in the depletion allowance.

Under current law, producers may deduct immediately as intangible drilling costs any expenses for unsalvageable items, such as labor and fuel.

A 1984 Treasury Department plan provided for spreading such deductions evenly over each well's operating life and ending the deductability of dry-hole drilling expenses. It would produce an estimated $32.11 billion in revenue, primarily from corporations.

MC board OKs preliminary budget

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A 5.5 percent average increase in faculty and staff salaries, a tuition increase from $4 to $8 per semester hour and a preliminary budget for the fiscal year ending August 1986 were approved Tuesday during a regular meeting of the Midland College Board of Trustees.

The preliminary budget was based on a tax rate of 8.91 cents per $100 valuation, compared to last year's 8.72 cents with revenues estimated to increase from $ 4.2 million to $4.36 million. A tax base increase from $4.8 billion in 1984-85 to $4.9 billion in 1985-86 also is expected.

The total $9.6 million preliminary budget is a 6 percent increase over last year, said MC President Dr. Jess Parrish. "The overall budget is a conservative budget. It's a good one and I think we can live with it."

Salaries, which were raised an average of 5.5 percent, accounted for most of the budget increase. Parrish estimated wages make up about 70 percent of the total budget.

Of the tuition increase, Parrish said the doubling "still is not a prohibitive amount. It's a bargain compared to other states."

The tuition increase includes a $40 minimum and a 100 maximum per semester; meaning a student enrolled in a one credit course would be required to pay $40 for that course per semester. A student enrolled in more than 12 credit hours would pay only $100 per semester.

"We've been sitting here all year talking about how bad things are and things are bad. I'm not taking it lightly raising tuition and fees at a community college. I think this is an adequate budget that still meets the needs of the staff, faculty and students," Parrish said.

Proposed increases in salaries and benefits in 1985-86 amount to $4,031,350, or an increase of 5.5 percent over 1984-85. The increase includes a 4 percent jump in the annual automatic pay raises for professors and teaching staff and the college's newly adopted sick leave policy and other benefits, said Parrish.

When asked about prospective state funding, Parrish replied that the college will receive about 97 percent of what it received in 1984-85. "It's not as bad as it could've been. We've been blessed with a growth of 10 percent in contact hours during the recent biennium while other community colleges across the state are experiencing losses."

Texas' economic future bright, report says

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' economy is expected to have considerable gains in industrial production, employment, retail sales and international commerce, according to a statistical annual report.

The state can look towards a bright economic future partly because of its low tax rates and interest in research and development, according to Texas Facts and Figures, a report released Tuesday by Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc.

"The longterm outlook for Texas looks exceptionally promising. Texas is still the most attractive state in the nation for new industrial activity," said Carol Bennett, vice president and economist for Texas Commerce.

Texas' retail sales of $95 billion in 1984, ranked second in the country to Calfornia which had sales of $155.6 billion, according to the Houston-based bank's report.

Ms. Bennett said the retail outlook in Texas continues to be bright, with sales expected to exceed $100 billion this year for the first time ever and rising to more than $150 billion by 1990.

Industrial production in Texas rose 10 percent last year and should increase 6 percent this year and 4 percent in 1986, she said.

CRMWD to OK contracts for Stacy Dam water

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland and two other West Texas cities will be taking one step closer to the eventual realization of a long-term water supply for this arid area when the Colorado River Municipal Water District meets at 10 a.m. Thursday in Big Spring.

At that time, the CRMWD directors are to approve contracts with Midland, San Angelo and Abilene for each city to take 15,000 acre feet per year, or 16.4 percent, of the available water from Stacy Dam. That dam project was rejected by the State Supreme Court, but was put back on the drawing board after a compromise was worked out with the Lower Colorado River Authority last spring.

As soon as the compromise was approved by both sides, CRMWD directors began the paperwork — finding out what cities want how much water, estimating cost of construction and preliminary drawings on pipelines to participating cities.

Joe Pickle, spokesman for CRMWD, said the board will take formal action Thursday on the contracts with the three cities. "They will share in the percentage cost of building Stacy Reservoir. The pipeline cost is not included in these contracts," he said.

Each city is planning to hold an election Aug. 10 to obtain the approval of their voters for the long-term contract. Utilities Director John Lowe said Midland City Council's agenda next Tuesday will include an item calling for the election.

Because the Stacy Dam commitment will involve an increase in water rates to pay for its construction, Lowe said it's possible the voters might reject the contract. "I certainly hope not. They need to understand if they turn it down what the longterm consequences are. This (Stacy Dam) will take us well into the next century for our water supply. It's a renewable resource and will be there."

Midland citizens will be drawing 12,759 acre feet of water out of CRMWD's Lake Spence and Lake Thomas this year, or about 11.39 million gallons per day, according to Lowe. The 15,000 acre feet Stacy Dam would add 13.4 million gallons per day.

The current contract for Lake Spence and Thomas water was written in 1966 and started in 1970, Lowe said. That contract, which will expire in 2029, allows Midland to draw a little more water each year. "There were provisions for expansion and growth in the city with the 60-year contract."

Other than CRMWD water, Midland draws from its Paul Davis Well Field, which is being expanded to handle the growing requirements. Also, the city owns land in Winkler County and that T-Bar Well Field is being evaluated for its potential.

But Lowe has pointed out previously the city would have to install a pipeline to that field about 70 miles from Midland, and it isn't a renewable source of water, like Stacy Dam.

The Abilene contract will be written through the West Central Texas Municipal Water District and authorization will be asked to file a trans-basin diversion amendment on the Stacy permit.

Abilene is located in the Brazos Basin wheras Stacy is situated in the Colorado Basin, about 25 miles southeast of Ballinger. Under Texas law, water can't be interchanged without a permit. This diversion was made a part of the agreement when the CRMWD and LCRA settled their difference over the Stacy project.

Birthday girl Elizabeth Ann, the first "test-tube" baby born in Louisiana, sits on mother Debbie's lap while her father Richard looks on. Richard, 34, and Debbie, 32, have agreed to interviews and photographs but won't release their last name.

Happy first birthday for state's first test-tube baby

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It took six years of tests and operations to let Richard and Debbie celebrate their first Father's Day with a daughter who looks like Richard but has his wife's gray-green eyes.

"Can you believe it? People still come up to us and ask, 'Was it all really worth it?'" says Debra, looking proudly at Elizabeth Ann — the first "test-tube" baby conceived in Louisiana.

Elizabeth Ann turned one year old Tuesday. She was to celebrate at a party attended by four of the other five babies born so far — and a dozen or more expectant mothers — in the "in vitro" fertilization program here.

"You've got to say 'test-tube' or people won't understand you," gripes Debra, who much prefers the scientific term.

That term means "in glass" and refers to the lab dish in which the mother's egg is joined with the father's sperm.

"I'll tell people she was an in vitro baby and they think I'm talking about artificial insemination," Debra said.

Richard, a 34-year-old attorney, and Debra, 32, have agreed to interviews and photographs since before Elizabeth Ann's birth but don't want their last name publicized.

Richard really had hoped for a Father's Day baby — the holiday was June 17 last year, but Elizabeth Ann was born on the 18th, Debra recalled.

"He held out last year until midnight — 'It's not over yet, it's not over yet.' She held out, too."

Now, Elizabeth Ann is a typical 1-year-old, although Debra proudly points out that she's taller and heavier than 99 percent of the children her age.

"And according to all our relatives, she's a genius."

Elizabeth Ann's first birthday also honorsthe second in vitro baby conceived at The Fertility Institute of New Orleans.

Louisiana has at least one in vitro baby born before Elizabeth Ann, but he was conceived at a Houston clinic.

Nathan, born July 26, and Elizabeth Ann are the only toddlers in what promises soon to be a small crowd of babies conceived in laboratories of the New Orleans clinic.

Four have been born since Feb. 27, and there may be as many as 20 more in the next nine months.

Illegal-alien smuggling to U.S. becoming big business

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mexican nationals are paying about $800 and other foreigners are forking over up to $30,000 to gain illegal entry into the United States, immigration officials say.

Immigration and Naturalization Service chief investigator Gary Renick said smuggling illegal aliens has become big business.

The people that run the illegal operations are ruthless, he said.

"Some just don't care and that's why you see aliens dying, locked in the trunk of a car somewhere," Renick said.

"The price for Mexican nationals to get here still starts at $600 to $800, but there are now some nationalities paying up to $30,000 a head to get into this country," Renick said.

He said most smuggling of illegal aliens is handled through Mexico.

Alien-transportation charge overturned

HARLINGEN (AP) — A religious worker greeted her appeals-court victory "with glee and delight" and is hoping her remaining conviction on an alien-smuggling charge will meet the same fate, her attorney says.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday overturned the convictions of Stacey Lynn Merkt, who had been found guilty of immigration law violations for transporting undocumented aliens.

A three-judge panel found errors in the jury instruction at her May 1984 trial, reversed her conviction on three counts and sent the case back to a Brownsville federal court for retrial.

"I can't say strongly enough that I feel real excited to hear that the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled on this conviction," she said. "Real excited to say the least."

Dennis Riordan, the attorney who handled her appeal, said "she reacted with glee and delight" when she learned of the court's decision. "It's safe to say she felt the conviction was deeply unfair.

Ms. Merkt, 30, was a volunteer at the Casa Oscar Romero in the Texas border town of San Benito when she was arrested in February 1984 with two Salvadoran refugees in her car.

A jury convicted her on two counts of transporting illegal aliens and one count of conspiracy, and sentenced her to probation.

Her probation was revoked and she was sentenced to six months in prison after her arrest last fall on charges of conspiring to transport illegal aliens in another case. Ms. Merkt was convicted in Houston in February, and has also appealed that verdict to the 5th Circuit Court.

"We are optimistic about getting the later one overturned," said Steve Cooper, another of her attorneys. "That conviction had numerous serious errors."

In the Houston case, jurors also convicted Jack Elder, 41, on two conspiracy counts, two charges of helping Salvadorans enter the United States illegally and two counts of transporting the aliens. Elder was then director of the Casa Oscar Romero.

Ms. Merkt has said she considers it her religious obligation to transport aliens — sanctuary activists say they are helping refugees on the premise that international and U.S. laws grant legal asylum to refugees who are fleeing political persecution and violence.

In the case overturned Tuesday, Ms. Merkt argued she was merely taking the pair of Salvadorans to an immigration office to apply for political asylum.

But prosecutors challenged her motives because she skirted a nearby office and said she was headed toward one 290 miles away in San Antonio, where officials had a reputation of being more sympathetic.

The 5th Circuit, which did not address potential conflicts between church and state, said U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela's reversible error occurred when Vela told the jury it was indefensible for Ms. Merkt to have taken the aliens to somewhere other than the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service office.

The appeals court said Vela's charge to the jury "amounts to an instruction that, if Merkt intended to take the aliens to any INS office other than the nearest one, they were to find that she had acted with the requisite intent to support a conviction."

The judges also dealt with the question of the "nearest immigration office," noting the law does not prohibit an alien from applying for asylum at some other center.

The judges rejected arguments from prosecutors, who had told the court that no one should be allowed to pick which immigration office they preferred. Such a ruling would allow anyone caught transporting aliens to defend themselves by saying they were headed to another center, the government argued.

Released hostages Irma Garza, left, her daughter Irma Trautmann, and her grandaughter Adriana Garza, tell reporters in Laredo about Mrs. Garza's husband, Vicente Garza Jr., and Mrs. Trautman's husband, Robert Trautmann Jr., who are still being held by Shiite Moslems in Beirut.

Family prays for release

LAREDO (AP) — Family members of two men still being held by Shiite Moslem terrorists say President Reagan's speech to the nation lacked "muscle" and are urging him to negotiate directly for their release.

"We just want everybody to pray and call to the White House," Irma Trautmann, whose husband and father are somewhere in west Beirut, told reporters Tuesday before losing her composure and going inside her mother's home.

In a televised speech Tuesday night, Reagan repeated his stand that he would not give in to terrorists nor ask any government to do so.

But "overall, thinking about the speech, it was a letdown," family spokesman Javier Santos said."But maybe they can't say everything in the news media. We have to be hopeful as possible."

Santos said the family had "high hopes" of a possible breakthrough in negotiations or that "more muscle" might be used to gain the release of Vicente Garza Jr., 53, and Robert Trautmann Jr., 37.

Choking back tears, Mrs. Trautmann said she believes the pair is fine, but she and other family members urged Reagan to negotiate directly with the terrorists.

White House officials have said they don't negotiage with terrorists and don't urge other countries to do so.

Mrs. Trautmann, 31, her mother, Irma Garza, 48, and Mrs. Trautmann's three daughters, Adriana, 13, Ashley, 4, and Katherine, 3, also were aboard that jet when it was hijacked in Athens on Friday and taken on shuttle rides between Algiers, Algeria, and Beirut.

The five, however, were freed over the weekend and arrived home Monday night.

Mrs. Garza and Mrs. Trautmann said they believe their husbands are holding up well. The two men have been held since Friday and are believed to have been taken off the aircraft in Beirut.

"I think Vicente...is strong," Mrs. Garza said. "But, you know, in these cases you can only hold so much. It's hard for him. Bob is strong. Vicente is strong and I think they will come up all right."

Slain hostage's body flown back to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert D. Stethem, the young Navy diver killed aboard TWA Flight 847, is back in the United States — carried home in a flag-draped coffin and eulogized as "an innocent victim" singled out because he was a U.S. serviceman.

An Air Force C-141 transport carried Stethem's body across the Atlantic Ocean on Tuesday to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington where it was taken to a nearby funeral home. The family plans private services after which he will be buried Thursday at Arlington National Cemetery.

His family fought back tears — some unsuccessfully — as eight Navy pallbearers carried the coffin from the transport. A band played the Navy Hymn and 24 honor guards, wearing dress whites, snapped to attention.

At his parents' side was Vice President George Bush, who called Stethem "an innocent victim" of "criminals who singled him out for death" when they discovered he was a member of the U.S. military.

"We will not forget him and we will not forget those who took him from us," promised Bush, calling Stethem "an innocent victim of a cruelty that knows no boundaries and a barbarism that selects the blameless for punishment."

"We cannot and will not tolerate this evil," the vice president declared.

Earlier, President Reagan telephoned Mrs. Stethem and said her son's "courage and pride are an inspiring example for us all." He said he and Mrs. Reagan have been "deeply impressed by your family's strength."

Stethem died Saturday when shot in the back of the head by one of the terrorists who had hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 847. Flight attendants aboard the plane said he first had been bound and gagged and severely beaten. His body was thrown onto the tarmac of the Beirut airport.

A Navy steelworker 2nd class based in Norfolk, Va., Stethem was returning to the United States after completing work on a routine sewer repair job at a U.S. military installation in Greece when he became caught up in the hijack drama.

His father, Richard, said he last heard from his son several weeks ago when he had telephoned from Kennedy International Airport in New York to tell his family he was flying to Athens. "He just told us he loved us very much," said his father, adding that he was "very proud of being in the service."

Richard Stethem, 49, a retired Navy man, stood stoically as his son was carried from the blue and gray Air Force jet. His wife, also in the Navy, fought to hold back tears. The young Stethem's sister and his two brothers were not as successful.

Asked about the remaining hostages, Testrake said: "...We've been told that they've been taken to a safe place, that they are comfortable and being well taken care of."

In Washington, a State Department official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Testrake's remarks confirmed for the first time that three crewmen remain on the plane and the passengers have been removed.

Asked by Glass about a possible rescue attempt, Testrake replied: "I think we would all be dead men if they did because we are continually surrounded by many, many guards."

Testrake and his two remaining crewmen appeared frequently in the cockpit and occasionally peered out of an open window.

Testrake said: "I'd like for my wife and my family and all of my friends back in Missouri to know the Lord has taken very good care of us so far and he has seen us through some very trying times, and he will see us through to the end."

First Officer Philip G. Maresca, 42, of Salt Lake City, Utah, told the ABC reporters: "I'm fine, and the message to my family is they can worry a little bit, (but) not too much. Our treatment has been tolerable." Flight Attendant Benjamin Zimmermann of Cascade, Idaho said: "Everything is OK. We're surviving."

A gunman with a rifle fired six or seven times over the terminal, where dozens of reporters and photographers watched the plane from balconies.

"Many reporters below you to the right," the gunman told the control tower. "They're popping up from everyway like thieves. I will begin shooting."

The hijacked Boeing 727's air conditioning broke down, and repairmen drove a jeep to the plane to restart the system. Hijackers inside the plane asked for ice, but were told stores were closed for the feast of Fitr, which ends the Moslem holy month of fasting today.

In Washington, President Reagan said at a news conference Tuesday night that the United States would not make concessions to the hijackers to win the release of the American hostages. He called for their release "without condition."

Late Tuesday one gunman on the plane told the Beirut control tower that if there was no progress on the hijackers' demand for release of the Shiite prisoners held in Israel, he would order the plane refueled, fly the explosive-rigged Boeing 727 to Israel and blow it up over Tel Aviv, an air traffic controller said.

However, the Beirut control tower intercepted a radio communication from the headquarters of the Shiite militia Amal shortly thereafter in which the gunman was sternly ordered to "stop this nonsense and childish games. You are not to make any such threats."

Air traffic controllers at the Beirut airport said the hijackers had been getting in and out of plane freely, especially at night, possibly getting food from adjacent Shiite neighborhoods.

The hijackers freed three passengers Tuesday, and Nabih Berri, head of the Amal militia, said the remaining hostages could be freed within 24 hours if Israel frees the Shiite prisoners it is holding in Israel.

In addition to the 700 Shiites held by Israel, the Shiites also want two Shiites released in Spain. However, the Spanish have rejected the demand and the two went on trial today on charges of shooting a Libyan diplomat.

REAGAN

Although he refused to go into detail, Reagan said, "We have used our utmost capacity and intelligence gathering to try and find these people and these places...I can only say that we have gathered a considerable body of evidence, but I'm not going beyond that."

"I'm as frustrated as anyone," Reagan said. "I've pounded a few walls myself...but as I say, you have to be able to pinpoint the enemy. You can't just start shooting without having someone in your gunsights."

While acknowledging that the hijackers "hold all the cards once they have these people in their power," the president resisted suggestions that he was caught in the same bind in which his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, found himself during the 444-day Iranian hostage crisis that ended the day Reagan took office in 1981.

As a presidential candidate in 1980, Reagan said the 52 American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran "shouldn't have been there six days, let alone six months." He charged that the Carter administration's foreign policy "helped create the entire situation that made their kidnap possible."

"The fact that they've been there that long is a humiliation and a disgrace to this country," he said at the time. Candidate Reagan said he didn't know how he would win the hostages' freedom, "but I certainly wouldn't stand by and do nothing."

On Tuesday night, however, President Reagan said, "I have to wait it out as long as those peole are there and threatened and alive and we have a possibility of bringing them home."

Asked what he would do if his wife or children had been aboard the hijacked jetliner, Reagan said, "It would be a horrible situation" but no more so "than it is for those people that are presently waiting for some reply. But you cannot...give in to the terrorists without knowing that you are then sentencing someone else to go through the same agony and other people to also be victimized."

Saying that prior to Friday's hijacking the Israeli government had been planning to free more than 600 Shiite Moslem prisoners whose release is being demanded by the hijackers, Reagan claimed the terrorists' linking of their hostages' fate to that of the prisoners "makes it impossible" for both the Israelis and the United States.

"Such a movement would be, in effect, giving in to the terrorists," the president said.

Nabih Berri, the Shiite Moslem leader who has been playing a key role in the drama, said earlier Tuesday that if Israel released the Shiites it is holding, the hostage crisis would be resolved within 24 hours.

But Reagan said the United States has not dealt with the Israelis on that issue: "We have not interfered."

The White House, however, has said it is asking the International Red Cross to contact the Israeli government to determine the status of its plans for releasing the Shiite prisoners.

Reagan was asked if he would hold Berri responsible if he turned the hostages back to their original captors. "Yes, I would," he replied.

Blaming lax security at the international airport in Athens for letting the armed hijackers get aboard the Rome-bound Boeing 727, Reagan advised Americans not to use the airport and suggested that American air carriers stop using the airport unless steps are taken to make it safe.

He also directed his Cabinet to consider putting armed sky marshals on international flights of U.S. carriers.

Greece's ambassador to the United States, George D. Papoulias, objected to his nation "being used as a scapegoat" because of American frustration in dealing with the hijacking.

Asked if he would accept a solution to the current crisis that did not include freedom for seven other Americans kidnapped earlier in Lebanon, Reagan responded: "We cannot give up on them...It is an extremely difficult, seemingly impossible task...No, we haven't given up on them."

Murchison's health deteriorates with fortune

Murchison

DALLAS (AP) — In a state that prides itself as a land of giants, Clint Murchison Jr. was among the tallest. He created the Dallas Cowboys football team, invested in oil and land and built a massive fortune on groundwork laid by his father.

But today, severely handicapped by an illness that has left him barely able to speak, Murchison is involved in what officials say is one of the largest personal bankruptcies in Texas history.

On paper he owes about $397 million, but his once-hefty holdings are worth only about $70 million, associates say.

Murchison's financial woes may appear more severe than they really are because more than half his debts outlined in court filings this week are loan guarantees, said Richard Holmes, a Dallas partner with the New York accounting firm Oppenheim, Appel, Dixon & Co.

Some of the debts are for loans personally guaranteed on assets that aren't in Murchison's name, said Holmes, who has been working on the case since three creditors pushed Murchison into filing in February for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Act.

Those assets are not reported among Murchison's holdings but may eventually be sold to pay off the debt levied against him, Holmes said.

Asked about Murchison's attitude toward the breaking up of his empire, he said, "I would not say it's pleasant at all. But he's an honorable man and wants to pay his debts."

Among the assets that will have to be sold is Murchison's 43,000-square-foot Dallas home.

Deteriorating along with his financial fortune is Murchison's health. One friend says the millionaire, who suffers from an ailment that has been likened to Lou Gehrig's disease, has become more ill in recent weeks.

Murchison has to be lifted from his wheelchair, can't write and can hardly talk, said a close friend who asked not to be named.

The friend said he had lunch with Murchison recently and noted that he has trouble raising food to his lips. The few words Murchison got out at lunch indicated a still-sharp mind, however, the friend said.

Associates say his difficulty in communicating compounded the trouble in sorting out Murchison's tangled and debt-ridden holdings, which were known only to himself.

Associates have blamed Murchison's change in fortunes on his dependence on borrowing, a decline in real estate and oil prices and finally his failing health.

Louis A. Farris, a friend and business associate, said Murchison's health began to decline about the same time some expensive real estate deals began to sour.

"I think the real estate issue is probably the largest single problem. (Interest) rates were 20 percent and held that way for five years. You've got a lot of great banks...that fell in that same trap," Farris said.

Longtime friend Frank Crossen, chairman of Centex Corp., believes reports of the 61-year-old tycoon's declining health struck a chord of fear in many Murchison creditors, causing them to call their loans.

The reports of his poor health surfaced at the time he sold the Dallas Cowboys last year, creating the final catalyst for the stampede of banks and other Murchison creditors.

Like his father, Clinton Murchison Sr., who laid the foundation for the family fortune, the junior Murchison loved to borrow, friends say. As long as inflation soared, he made money.

During his heyday, Murchison could be glib about his business dealings and was known for his sense of humor.

Crossen recalls the time Murchison had a building torn down in the 1960s on a prime piece of downtown Dallas property he owned.

The bank that held the mortgage wrote Murchison a letter scolding him for destroying their collateral.

"Picky, picky, picky," he wrote back.

Bomb explodes in airport terminal

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A bomb exploded in a busy passenger terminal at Frankfurt International Airport today, killing three people and wounding 24, a police spokesman said.

Spokesman Karl-Heinz Wagner said four of the injured were seriously hurt, while 20 others received lesser injuries.

He said one of those killed was a child.

"It was a bomb," Wagner told The Associated Press. "How big and what type, those are things we're still trying to figure out."

Eyewitnesses said the blast in Departure Hall B destroyed ticket counters and ripped through a walkway to a visitors' observation terrace at the airport, the busiest in continental Europe. The blast gutted the floor.

"I saw flame, a loud bang, and then the whole place was filled with smoke," said Ralph Kugler of San Francisco, Calif. Kugler said he was about 50 yards away from the blast site, sheltered by a booth.

Arrests expected in guard's murder

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff Department investigators are close to making some arrests in the Sunday-night murder of a security guard, according to Sheriff Gary Painter.

"We do have some solid leads on some suspects and have been working it down," he said this morning.

"We expect to have warrants issued by the end of the week" and possibly sooner, said Sheriff's Sgt. Jim Newsom, who is conducting the investigation.

James Belis, 25, of Odessa, was shot to death about 8:30 p.m. Sunday at a racetrack southeast of Midland near county roads 1140 and 120, apparently after intervening in an argument over a bet.

Still listed in serious condition this morning, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman, was 33-year-old Ruben Bujanda, who was shot five times in the same incident.

"We haven't been able to talk to him at all," Newsom said, but Charlie Coleman Jr., another security guard who was stabbed five times but is now listed in fair condition, has recovered enought to discuss the case with investigators.

FUTURE

Texas has somewhat suffered along with the energy industry in recent years, but still can expect a favorable future because of increased demands in developing countries and the rising need abroad for engineering and energy-related equipment, according to the report.

Among the Texas cities hurt by the energy industry's woes is Houston.

"The city of Houston has received some adverse publicity in the past three years," said Texas Commerce President Charles Beall. "Reports out of East Coast cities would have you believe that grass is growing in the streets of Houston."

But Beall predicted that Houston will recover from the energy industry woes.

"Houston has both the will and the wherewithal to recognize opportunities and convert them into accomplishments," he said.

Houston's economic outlook is particularly good because of the city's link with the space program, Beall said, adding that commercialization of the space industry will play an important role in economic growth.

Contributing to the city's recovery are an increase of new plants and manufacturers in the area, growing international commerce and commercialization of space.

Beall said he expects the glut of unleased office space in Houston to be eliminated within three years.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth area, construction is the only industry that is not expected to grow significantly in 1985, according to the bank study. Sales in the area will increase to $35 billion this year, compared to $23 billion in 1984.

Wholesale trade will continue to be important to growth in Dallas, where 25,000 manufacturers do business and buyers spend $7 billion each year.

San Antonio also can expect to grow over the next several years because of land availablity, a low cost of living and a productive labor force, Texas Commerce predicts.

The medical industry will be San Antonio's primary source of growth, according to the report. The University of Texas last year announced plans to set up an Institute of Biotechnology in the city and the Texas Research and Technology Foundation, a private agency, was established there last year.

Austin will continue to attract new industries, especially in advanced technological fields such as computers. The Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., a group of electronics firms, announced plans in 1983 to employ about 400 scientists and engineers for its software headquarters.

MC

The preliminary budget also called for additions of staff members in the college's radiologic technology program and its newly constructed day care center. "We've had to keep it at a no-growth level," said Parrish. "There will be additions with the opening of the new Health Sciences Center."

Trustees will consider final approval of the annual budget in August.

In other action, trustees voted to hire Dr. Julia Flaherty, instructor of history and government, to replace Dr. Geraldine Box.

Trustees also voted on a depository contract with Republic Bank First National of Midland for the biennium; and to hire Main Hurdman to conduct the college's 1985-86 audit.

TAX

Reagan's overhaul plan, a reworking of the Treasury proposal, would preserve the drilling-cost deduction. But industry critics have been eyeing it as a something that could be jettisoned if more revenue were needed.

DiBona said, however, that taxing drilling costs would cut domestic oil production by 900,000 barrels a day by 1990 and 1.6 million by 1995. He said that would be "twice the shortfall we suffered in 1979 and, even without a supply crisis, would raise prices by $4 a barrel and add $35 billion to the U.S. import bill."

"If an oil crisis occurred in 1992, this step alone would increase oil prices by $9 a barrel," he said. He said it also would cut industrial production, worsen unemployment and enlarge the budget deficit.

Besides higher prices and the potential of lines at the pump, producers raised the specter of new U.S. dependence on overseas suppliers.

"It would demonstrate to foreign countries that we are at their mercy," declared William R. Goff, chairman of the Dallas-based Sabine Corp.

"We strongly urge you to allow this aspect of the proposal to remain as it is," Goff said.

The oil industry's percentage depletion allowance is 15 percent of the first 1,000 barrels produced, down from 27.5 percent after decades of whittling. Major companies lost the preference in 1976, but it still applies to independents and royalty owners.

Reagan's plan calls for a five-year phaseout at a rate of 20 percent annually. Exempted would be "stripper" wells, which yield fewer than 10 barrels a day and account for 15 percent of the nation's production.

DiBona said the phaseout would "reduce an important incentive for indpendents." Sharper opposition came from the Oklahoma-based National Association of Royalty Owners Inc., which says most of its members are taxpayers of modest means, not well-heeled oil barons.

"There is nothing fair," James L. Stafford, association executive director, said, "about singling out the poorest element of one industry to prove that everyone will have to pay their share."

Industry officials drew mixed reactions when they repeatedly insisted their companies are already paying their fair share of taxes.

Rep. Fortney H. Stark, D-Calif., cited a report titled "Corporate Income Taxes in the Reagan Years: A Study of Three Years of Legalized Tax Avoidance." Prepared by the Washington-based Citizens for Tax Justice, the report said Tenneco, Texaco, Ashland Oil and Superior Oil earned substantial profits in the 1981-83 period while paying no taxes. It cited a number of other energy companies that paid at a rate of 12 percent or lower.

"That doesn't sound fair to me," Stark said.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., replied with figures from another report showing that the average tax rate for oil companies overall was well above that for U.S. industry as a whole.

Reagan says he'll 'seriously' consider reduced MX program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, suffering another MX missile setback in Congress, says he'll "very seriously" consider a reduced MX program if lawmakers speed up research on a successor to the giant nuclear weapon.

The House on Tuesday gave 233-184 approval to a total force of only 40 of the 10-warhead weapons, 10 less than the Senate approved two weeks ago and 60 fewer than Reagan wanted as the centerpiece of his nuclear buildup.

An hour after the vote, Reagan was asked at his news conference if he would accept a force of 40 MXs if Congress gave him an extra $200 million for the single-warhead Midgetman and accelerated the development of that weapon, which is designed to succeed MX.

"We'd have to look at that very seriously to see whether there was an advantage in that or not or whether even their giving that money could accelerate the Midgetman program," Reagan said. "I don't know that it could."

"But I do know that the debates that are going on about the MX, I think are a lot of wasted rhetoric and we ought to get on with it," he said. "It is most vital to us that we modernize our land-based missiles and that is the missile that is on hand and available now."

The MX has been a focus of Capitol Hill fights on defense spending for three years, with critics saying it would be vulnerable to a Soviet nuclear strike.

The latest MX vote came as the House tried to pass a bill authorizing most of a proposed $292 billion 1986 defense program. That would freeze Pentagon spending at current levels with no provision for inflation.

The Democratic-run House is expected to approve the overall budget level in the huge bill. The measure then would have to be squared with the $302 billion Pentagon budget already approved by the Republican-controlled Senate.

The Senate measure includes an increase expected to cover the rate of inflation and has been approved reluctantly by Reagan, who first sought a 5.9 percent hike beyond inflation.

One amendment pending on the House bill would add $150 million to speed up the Midgetman program, which is designed to develop a smaller, more mobile missile that could be moved around to hide it from Soviet attack.

Still pending are a number of other controversial issues in the bill, including resumption of chemical weapons production for the first time since 1969 and spending for Reagan's "Star Wars" research program.

Tuesday's approval of a 40-missile cap was the key tally in a series of MX votes.

That vote came after the House rejected, 230-185, a move to simply kill the weapon and a 234-182 vote against another proposal to write the Senate's 50-missile limit into the measure.

Attorneys: Reynolds used racial slurs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Justice Department civil rights attorneys say their boss, William Bradford Reynolds, used derogatory language to describe black parents who sought to intervene in a Charleston, S.C., school busing case.

The lawyers' written statements to the Senate Judiciary Committee conflicted with testimony of Reynolds, the associate attorney general-designate who told the panel Tuesday, "I have no recall of that."

Such disagreements between Reynolds' statements and those of others dominated the committee's confirmation hearing for the current assistant attorney general for civil rights.

During 10 grueling hours, interrupted only by a lunch break, Reynolds' second appearance this month was punctuated with hostile questions from senators opposing his nomination for the Justice Department's No. 3 job.

A committee vote, in the form of a recommendation to the full Senate, is expected Thursday following Tuesday's concluding testimony. The outcome is in doubt, since a number of uncommitted senators have stated they are troubled by the conflicts in Reynolds' testimony.

Reynolds' statements under oath have not agreed, on a variety of issues, with those of civil rights groups, former Justice Department lawyers and the two attorneys currently working for the nominee.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., asked Reynolds about the Charleston case, in which black parents sought to intervene in the school desegregation suit filed by the Justice Department in the waning days of the Carter administration.

Jay P. Heubert, a trial attorney in the Reynolds-led civil rights division, wrote the committee that he recalled Reynolds saying, "Those bastards just want to bring in the busing issue...They're probably entitled to intervene, but let's make them jump through every hoop."

Released hostages: Captors treated them 'quite well'

WORLD

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Greek singer Demis Roussos and two Americans released by hijackers of a TWA jetliner said today their captors made them as comfortable as possible and became "emotionally attached" to their hostages. Roussos, who marked his 39th birthday in captivity, said: "We have been treated quite well. They gave me a birthday cake and they gave me a guitar, to sing. They have been very polite and very nice with us."

Roussos, his secretary Pamela Smith, and college student Arthur Targontsidis arrived on the Mediterranean island of Cyprus today after a boat trip from Beirut. They were released by their Shiite Moslem captors on Tuesday.

All three said they were treated well by the hijackers who commandeered TWA Flight 847 last Friday and forced it to fly between Algeria and Beirut before ordering it to land for a third time in Beirut on Sunday.

They said they were taken off the Boeing 727 on the second stop in Beirut, along with other passengers.

Targontsidis, 18, of Brockton, Mass., described his captors as "very emotional people." He added: "They were very understanding. They were very emotionally attached to us."

Ms. Smith, an American who lives in London, told reporters at a news conference that the hijackers "made us as comfortable, I think, as they possibly could."

"They were probably very poor people and they went far beyond their means to see to it that we were comfortable," she said.

About 40 of the original 153 passengers and crew of the Athens-to-Rome flight remain in captivity in Beirut. The hijackers say they will hold them until Israel releases more than 700 Shiite prisoners.

Ms. Smith was born in Los Angeles and grew up in St. Petersburg, Fla.

All three of the released hostages said they were taken to a house after being removed from the plane, but that they then became separated.

"They separated us, and Pamela and I, we were put together in a flat where we stayed, I think, about three days," Roussos said.

All three said they had lost track of time during the incident.

Greek singer Demis Roussos, flanked by his American fiancee Pamela Smith, and Shiite Moselm leader Nabih Berri, holds a news conference after he and Ms. Smith were released from the TWA airliner held by terrorists. Standing next to Ms. Smith are Arthur Targontsidis, 18, from Brockton, Mass., and the Greek ambassador to Lebanon, Avangelos Georgion.

Roussos had a drop of blood on his pant leg and was asked if he had been hurt. He said he had hit his head on a "short ceiling" while in captivity.

There were reports the passengers were beaten aboard the airplane, but Roussos said they had been forced to keep their heads down much of the time, making it difficult to see what was going on.

Targontsidis, who was a student at Deree Pierce American College in Athens, said that after being taken to the house, he was then put in a "much safer place" with four other passengers. Asked if he was threatened, he replied: "Not at all."

He said he asked the hijackers why he was being released, but they would not answer. He said he told the hijackers, when asked his nationality, that he was of Greek origin.

In the United States, David Linde, a spokesman for Targontsidis' family, said another friend of the family had made a telephone plea for the young man's release to Nabih Berri, the Lebanese Shiite Moslem leader who has been mediating with the hijackers to gain freedom for the hostages.

Roussos, asked why he was released, replied: "This is politics. I really don't know."

The Greek government met the hijackers' demand to release a Lebanese who was arrested in Athens in connection with the hijacking.

The hijackers had threatened to kill all Greeks aboard the plane unless Greece released the man, who authorities said described how the hijackers smuggled their weapons onto the plane.

Ms. Smith described the hijacking as "unfortunate and unnecessary." Asked if she was worried about those still held captive, she said: "I think under these situations, one worried a great deal about everyone ...I hope it all ends in a peaceful ending."

U.S. unlikely to charge those aware of spying

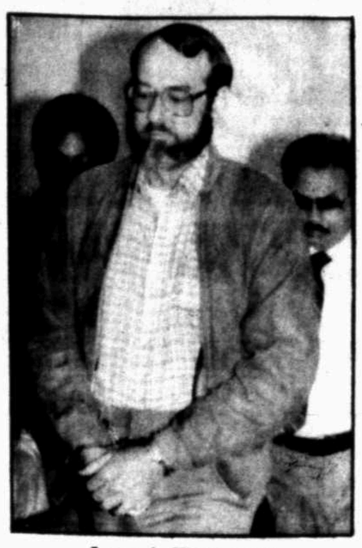

WASHINGTON (AP) — While John A. Walker Jr.'s career as an alleged Soviet spy may have been suspected for years by more than a handful of family and friends, a government official says they aren't likely to be charged with failing to turn him in.

The official familiar with the case, who spoke Tuesday only on condition he not be identified, acknowledged that a number of people apparently were aware or may have been aware of Walker's alleged spying long before he was reported to the FBI last November by ex-wife Barbara and daughter Laura Walker Snyder.

The FBI contends Walker had been spying for as many as 20 years before his arrest last month. By recent accounts, family friends of Barbara's in Maine, Laura's estranged husband, other daughters of Walker's, and perhaps even some business associates of Walker may have known or suspected that Walker was spying or may have heard him brag about it for a number of years.

Laura said this week that her mother learned of her father's activities in 1968 or 1969. "Somehow we had a lot of money we shouldn't have, and she began to question him," Mrs. Snyder said. "It didn't take my father long to start bragging about it. He was very proud of himself."

The official said: "There's a chance of charges against some of the people who knew." Failing to report a felony like espionage is itself a felony and in some cases amounts to aiding and abetting the original crime, which carries a penalty equal to the original crime.

But this official said: "How do you prove someone knew he was spying? It's not enough to have heard him bragging. There's got to be a lot more than that."

And the official almost completely ruled out charging the wife and daughter who reported Walker to the FBI, even though they did not act when their suspicions first developed. "Charging them would send the wrong message to other people out there who might be debating whether to turn someone in," the official said.

Innocent pleas were entered in separate arraignments Tuesday in Norfolk, Va., and San Francisco by two of the accused spies, Navy veterans Arthur J. Walker and Jerry A. Whitworth. Both are accused of selling military secrets to the Soviet Union through John Walker.

John Walker and his son, Navy seaman Michael L. Walker, pleaded innocent to espionage charges earlier.

San Francisco defense attorney Jim Larson said Whitworth's prospects for gaining a fair trial may be damaged by "rather hysterical statements that have been made about serious breaches of military security" by government officials. He did not name them.

"The more hysterical the atmosphere, the higher the stakes, and the more difficult it will be to pick a fair-minded jury," Larson said.

Arthur Walker's lawyer, Samuel Meekins, said in Norfolk that his client "has never done anything to intentionally injure the United States or aid a foreign country."

"We're going to have to start separating Arthur Walker from John Walker," Meekins said. "I don't know what John did, but Arthur is a different ball game."

Whitworth, 45, of Davis, Calif., who retired as a Navy radioman in 1983, was indicted Monday on a single count of conspiracy to commit espionage. The government says he received $328,000 for his efforts over more than seven years.

The government official said no more major arrests are expected: "Oh sure, the continuing investigation might turn up someone who worked with the ring in years past and not recently. But we think we've got those who worked for it recently."

John Walker, arrested May 20, is a Norfolk, Va., detective and retired Navy communications expert. Arthur Walker is a retired submarine officer who worked for a Navy contractor in Virginia. Michael was arrested while serving aboard the aircraft carrier Nimitz in the Mediterranean.

The grand jury's indictment of Whitworth revealed a great deal about the progress of the investigation, including the most detailed account yet of transactions involving money — which prosecutors contend was a major motive.

It said that the amount of payments allegedly received by Whitworth rose sharply after he announced in late 1979 his intention to retire from the Navy and then retracted it in June 1980. The indictment shows 12 payments to Whitworth by John Walker from 1975 through Aug. 13, 1979. During this period of four and two-thirds years, the payments, which ranged from a low of $4,000 to a high of $24,000, allegedly totaled $118,000.

On Oct. 1, 1979, Whitworth asked to be transferred from his "top secret" communications post at the Naval Air Station in Alameda, Calif., to fleet reserve in preparation for his resignation from the Navy to be effective Sept. 30, 1980.

GAO: Comparable worth report contains errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Civil Rights Commission report rejecting the doctrine of comparable worth in the workplace defines the concept differently than its advocates do and contains inconsistencies and errors in presenting their views, a congressional auditing agency says.

The General Accounting Office says the commission report states that comparable worth — or equal pay for jobs of similar value — requires that pay be set without regard to such factors as merit, seniority or supply and demand.

However, comparable worth advocates believe such factors can be incorporated into equitable compensation plans, the GAO said.

"We believe the report does not accurately characterize the positions of many comparable worth advocates and contains inconsistencies and errors in presenting the positions of participants in the consultation," the GAO study concluded.

The study was released Tuesday by Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, during a hearing of the House Post Office and Civil Service compensation subcommittee.

Ms. Oakar, who had requested the GAO report, has introduced legislation that would require a study of the federal government's job classification system to determine if any wage discrimination exists.

"I am appalled by the misuse of statistical data and the deliberate distortion of individuals' views who participated in 'consultation' conducted by the commission last year," Ms. Oakar said. "Worst of all, the commission report presents an erroneous view of 'comparable worth' which guarantees that it will be rejected by the commission and the American public."

The commission report acknowledges that some sex-based discrimination does exist and "strongly endorses the right of women and men" to assert their claims through the Equal Pay Act of 1963 and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Police find remains of sixth person near cabin hideaway

WEST POINT, Calif. (AP) — The decomposing remains of a sixth person have been found near a survivalist's cabin hideaway that has yielded 45 pounds of charred human bones and clues to the fate of 22 missing people.

Meanwhile, the San Francisco Chronicle reported today that three people missing from an apartment building in that city's Haight-Ashbury section may be among the victims. It identified them as Maurice Wock, 38; Cheryl Okaro, 26; and Randy Jacobson, 35.

Police last week contacted Jacobson's girlfriend, who asked not to be identified, the Chronicle said. "They told me they were 99 percent sure he was dead," she told the newspaper.

The Chronicle said Leonard Lake was carrying Jacobson's bank card when he was arrested. Lake, 39, killed himself in custody June 6 by swallowing a cyanide capsule.

The sixth body was uncovered Tuesday by searchers at Lake's cabin 100 miles east of San Francisco. Authorities say 22 missing people may be linked to Lake and his friend, Charles C. Ng, 24, for whom a worldwide manhunt is under way.

The body, sprinkled with lime, was buried under about two feet of dirt.

Calaveras County Coroner Terry Parker said it could have been buried there for up to a year and that lime "keeps the body intact."

More bones, stained clothes and a license plate were picked Tuesday from a pile of rubbish on the property where authorities already have collected the remains of five victims and 45 pounds of charred human bone fragments.

More than 700 pieces of evidence have been removed from the property where investigators believe Lake and Ng took some of the missing people.

Among the evidence were photographs of 21 women, some nude or semi-nude; videotapes; a videotape player owned by one of the missing families; a computer and floppy discs.

Some of the women in the photographs are being interviewed, said Chuck Jones of the attorney general's bureau of investigations. "We're trying to find out their relationship to Lake...and if they had suspicions."

Missing girl's body found

SOMONAUK, Ill. (AP) — The search for a little girl and her abductor has become what residents in this stunned village had hoped it would not — a search for the girl's killer.

A pall fell over Somonauk's 1,100 residents after the body of Melissa Ackerman, still wearing a necklace inscribed with her nickname "Missy," was found in a crude grave near a grove of trees on a farmer's field.

"There is no way that Somonauk will ever be the same after this," said Harry Ploger, a friend of Melissa's family who had helped manage a rescue effort after the 7-year-old was snatched from her bicycle June 2.

The girl's body, buried beneath rocks and leaves and partially submerged in a creek, was found Monday night by a sheriff's deputy about 20 miles west of here, authorities said.

Author acquitted of fraud

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Psychologist and author Peter G. Cranford, who once conceived a quiz show idea that was turned into the television program "The $64,000 Question," was acquitted Tuesday of mail fraud charges.

The federal court jury took only two hours to find Cranford, 76, innocent of 42 counts of mail fraud and related charges. He had been accused of defrauding a federal program that pays for medical services for military dependents.

Prosecutors accused Cranford of billing the government for psychotherapy sessions that either never took place or were disallowed under regulations for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, or CHAMPUS.

Landlord must live in slum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The landlord of apartment complexes found to be filthy and infested with rats has been ordered to live in one of his units for 30 days after serving a 30-day jail term for violating health, building and safety codes.

The landlord, Dr. Milton Avol, a neurosurgeon who lives in Beverly Hills, was sentenced by Municipal Judge Veronica Simmons McBeth, who said, "Maybe it would make him come in contact with some sense of human decency."

Mixed family works together

SAN ANGELO (AP) — When Karen and Philip Holly were married in March 1983, they knew their marriage would be a challenge. Holly was bringing six children into the marriage and his bride had two. That was before little Philip Jr. came into the picture.

Now they relax in their comfortable living room and speak with optimism and experience about what it's like juggling a family that includes nine children, ages eight months to 26 years.

Mrs. Holly found the book, "Living in Step," one of her most useful tools when starting the marriage.

"It told us what we would face," she said. One of the biggest lessons was "his children and my children cannot be treated equally."

Her husband agreed. Mrs. Holly thought if she spent a given amount on each of her two daughters, who live with the couple, the same amount should be spent on each of Holly's children, who are grown and living away from home. They soon learned this was not wise nor economically feasible.

Holly has two married children, one living in Idaho and one in Chicago, a son in the military, and three adult children living in San Angelo.

While they do not live at their South Park address, Mrs. Holly said the children living here frequently drop in for a meal and to do the laundry.

"They all want their own lives, which is great," she said. This summer her oldest daughter, Melissa, who was graduated in May from high school, is going to live with her father. Her other daughter, Glenna, is 13.

"One of these days, we're going to wake up and be you, me and him," she said to her husband while bouncing 8-month-old Philip Jr. on her knee.

"This one was quite a surprise. We thought we were through with the baby business," said Mrs. Holly, who was 40 when the baby was born. Her husband is 54.

"He's going to be the first American pope," Holly said with a grin, looking at his laughing red-haired son. "He's just about the right age, you know. I'll be 72 at his graduation. I told her I'll need an electric wheelchair by then."

Mrs. Holly said the adjustment to a new baby in the home hasn't been as much of a transition for her as opting to give up her job.

"This is the first time I have not worked outside the home since I went to college," she said.

"This is plenty of work right here taking care of us," her husband said.

Holly said the most difficult part of their stepfamily situation is dealing with the interpersonal relationships. He said he and his wife, both previously divorced, are determined not to let any relationship with the children come between them.

"We make decisions together," Mrs. Holly said. "We have a good relationship. He helps me deal with the teen-agers. All of his are more or less through that."

She and her husband agreed that counseling and group therapy have played an important role in helping them deal with their stepfamily situations.

"It (group therapy) is a place to ventilate," Holly said. "You sit there and identify with other people, all with the same problems."

The Hollys are active in the Catholic church. Mrs. Holly is a recent convert.

They met through Parents Without Partners and said they arrange time alone as often as possible.

"We try to keep a little romance in this relationship," Mrs. Holly said. "It's essential."

She said the children seem to get along well with each other and not hold any resentment for the baby.

"They all seem to love him to death. If they were younger, we may have had some problems," she added.

While they do not plan to have more children, "adoption is not out of the question for us," Mrs. Holly said.

Dowser finds more than water

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Using nothing but a marble on a thread or two bent coat hangers, Robert Humphris says he can find water. Or the winner of a football game. Or whether his wife is home from work yet.

In fact, Humphris, an amateur dowser, says he can find the answer to just about any question he wants to ask.

"The imagination is the limit as to what you can do with dowsing," said Humphris, an engineering professor at the University of Virginia here.

The traditional notion of dowsing, or divining, is a man using a forked tree branch to locate underground streams. That notion, Humphris said, is incomplete.

"Dowsing is the gift or the art of obtaining information with the help of a device," is his definition.

With his array of divining devices, Humphris has searched for — among other things — graves, Zachary Taylor's birthplace and a buried culvert. Using a dowsing rod the way some people use an Ouija board, Humphris has answered questions ranging from "Will it rain here today?" to "Will the Steelers beat the Colts?"

And, of course, he has searched for water. By his count, he's searched for locations for some 350 wells. Only 10 have come up dry, he said.

It is that success rate that has erased Humphris' scientific misgivings about dowsing. Fifteen years after he first lifted a divining rod, he is still not sure why it works. But he knows it works.

"I sure was a skeptic at first," the gray-haired 56-year-old Humphris said while sipping iced coffee at a local seafood restaurant. "I keep having feelings of — 'Here I am a scientist, what am I doing in this area? It just can't work.'

"But just what I have seen has convinced me that there's something there," he said. "I'm convinced now."

Humphris' interest in divining began when his son was taught the art by a plumber for whom he was working. The son introduced dowsing to his father, who was skeptical but intrigued.

Ten years later, Humphris was taking a course in parapsychology when he chose dowsing as the subject of his term paper. His research fascinated him.

"That really got me hooked, because here it was well documented," Humphris said.

Now, he is an amateur dowser, clearly fascinated by the art and anxious to share his enthusiasm. He teaches classes in dowsing. He teaches dowsing to people who hire him, so that they can do the job themselves next time. He has taught dowsing to his family, and they can all dowse — except for his brother and brother-in-law, geologists who remain cynical about dowsing.

Humphris said the key to dowsing is in the mind. Anyone who believes he can dowse can learn to dowse.

"Most anybody can do it," said Humphris. "Eight of 10 people can do it right off the bat. If you work at it, you gain confidence."

While dowsers in Texas rake in thousands of dollars for locating oil, Humphris makes little profit from his dowsing. He charges only 20 cents a mile and $35 if the well is successful — enough to cover his costs for attending the yearly American Society of Dowsers convention in Danville, Vt.

His work at the university has nothing to do with dowsing and, although he said he would love to research the subject, he said he doubts he could obtain funding.

"The scientific community as a whole is not receptive to dowsing," he said.

That may be because there is no scientific explanation for dowsing.

One theory is that dowsing is linked to what Carl Jung called the collective subconscious, where all knowledge resides. The theory holds that everyone knows the answer to everything but most people are unable to tap into the information because it is locked away in the subconscious. Dowsing is a way to unlock it.

The subconscious then sends the message by electro-chemical impulse to the hands, which transfer it to the divining rod.

All this is done without conscious knowledge, said Humphris. Sometimes, even sophisticated scientific testing devices are unable to pick it up.

"The body doesn't lend itself to empirical testing," he said.

"You just have to have this faith, this belief."

Worth the cost

After the long years when the United States was bogged down in Southeast Asia, no one really can blame the House of Representatives for hesitating to vote aid for the Nicaraguan rebels. The situation is all too similar to the way in which this country was drawn deeper and deeper into Vietnam.

At first, of course, the House had chosen not to aid the rebels in Nicaragua but now has decided to reverse itself by a margin of 248 to 184 and approve $27 million in nonmilitary assistance for the contras who are fighting against the Sandinista regime in Managua. The Senate had already approved aid and currently the dollar amount is being worked out.

The vote sent another message to the world that the United States is opposed to letting Communists establish a beachhead in Central America and will aid forces in this hemisphere who are fighting for liberty and freedom.

Two men were largely responsible for this reversal of a previous position. One was President Reagan and, ironically, the other was the Soviet-backed president of Nicaragua, Daniel Ortega.

Since the House rejected in April the Reagan Administration's request for $14 million to help the anti-Sandinistas by a two-vote margin, Reagan has vigorously urged Congress to come to the aid of the contras. Apparently, after Ortega's trip to Moscow, ostensibly for assistance, Reagan's message began to sink in.

No one knows where the fighting in Central America will lead or whether a time will come when the United States must become involved to a greater degree. The important consideration, at this point, is to keep communist expansion at bay in this hemisphere and to preserve the flame of liberty burning.

The vote in the House should encourage the contras in the fight against Communism.

No American seeks war, but liberty is worth fighting for — and supporting — and if America does not carry that torch, who will?

Another View:

Bleeding Nicaragua

Some face has been saved and backsides have been protected, but those are not good enough reasons for the House's change of heart about supporting the undeclared war against Nicaragua. After narrowly opposing all forms of aid to the "contra" rebels in April, the House now favors $27 million in "nonmilitary" help over the next nine months. Since the Senate has voted $38 million for a longer period, President Reagan has won a major political battle. The likely result is that the real battle will drag on, inconclusively.

If they mean what they say, that may be what Reagan and his newfound Democratic allies really want. Keeping up the attacks means the president can damage and contain the Marxist regime without dignifying it in negotiation. And no Democrats get blamed for "losing" Nicaragua, whose leader had the effrontery to celebrate the April vote with a quick trip to Moscow.

Reagan secured the switch of enough Democratic votes by denying that he seeks the military overthrow of the Sandinistas. In perhaps his clearest statement of the war's objective, he said it would endanger United States interests in Central America "if we tolerate the consolidation of a surrogate state ... responsive to Cuba and the Soviet Union."

That points to protracted harassment by the "contras," who obviously lack a knockout punch. Their jabbing is meant to keep the Sandinistas off balance and preoccupied at home with a deteriorating economy and souring morale.

So what's wrong with that? The first objection ought to be human and moral: it is a policy bought with other people's blood. That "humanitarian" aid feeds a civil war in which the honor of the United States lies in the knapsack of hit-and-run terrorists.

A second objection is practical: as casualties rise, so do the risks that this war may develop its own momentum. The most likely "accident" — perhaps even favored by some of the sponsors of insurgency — would be cross-border raids by Nicaragua against "contra" sanctuaries in Honduras and Costa Rica. The administration contends the "contra" war is insurance against direct U.S. intervention. It could well have the opposite effect, provoking events that eventually impel the use of American forces.

An undeclared, low-level war for nebulous aims may be politically convenient to president and Congress. But it is baffling to American opinion and alarming to major allies in Latin America, not one of which supports the war. Bleeding Nicaragua is unlikely to produce plausible terms for a political settlement. It promises mainly misery for the combatants, discord at home and anti-Americanism abroad. The House's turnabout leaves the argument over Nicaragua stuck where it was, in a spongy bog.

Prayer ruling gets kids up!

Alabaster was furious as he came in the kitchen door.

"They've gone too far," he shouted, waving the newspaper in his hand. "The Supreme Court won't let my kids pray in school."

Art Buchwald

"I'm sorry to hear that," I said. "Why don't you let them pray before they leave home in the morning?"

"They don't have time," he said with fury. "They have to get dressed, eat breakfast and do their homework. The first chance they have to pray is when they get to their classroom."

I scanned the article. "The court isn't taking away the voluntary minute allotted to meditation. It just struck down the words 'voluntary prayer' at the end of it."

"Why should we let our kids have a minute of silence just to meditate? If they can't use it for prayer then I say forget about it."

"Maybe that's why the Supreme Court ruled against you. It's really a question of separation of church and state. I believe what the court was saying is that the government cannot force prayer on children in a public place."

"That isn't what they were saying at all," he retorted. "They are saying that God can't be in our classrooms and the secular humanists have taken over our schools, and communism has won again, and that this ruling is just what the Soviets have ordered."

"You read all of that into the decision?"

"That and a lot more."

"Why don't you admit it, Alabaster? You don't want voluntary silent prayer in the schools. You want voluntary spoken prayer, with a strong tilt toward the church of your choice."

"That's because we know the truth," he retorted.

"Religious truth lies in the church and the home. The minute you bring it into the classroom all hell breaks loose."

"How can you prevent tiny little kids from asking God's divine guidance every morning before class begins?"

"Why can't they do it on the way to class? It wouldn't hurt to pause one minute for a prayer. They wouldn't even have to keep it to a minute. They could pray as long as they liked, provided they are not late for classes."

"God doesn't listen unless they pray in their school," Alabaster shouted.

"Calm down. The ruling doesn't say that the minute allotted can't be used for prayer. It just says the state or government cannot specify it be used for that purpose."

"That's what we are yelling about. By not specifying what the minute is to be used for it bans prayer in the school."

"Alabaster, your problem is that you think every religion calls for prayer whilst standing up. This is not true. Some demand you kneel and bow your head forward. Others insist you sit straight up, and there are some that instruct you to prostrate yourself in a certain direction. Once you bring prayer into the schools you must allow those participating to do it their own way. And as soon as you permit that, you split up the children into religious factions until the classroom turns into Beirut."

I could tell Alabaster wasn't convinced. "The only way now to get God into the schools is through a constitutional amendment," he said. "He'll never get there as long as an atheistic bunch of old men sit on the bench."

"God is in the schools already. It may not be God according to you, and it isn't God according to me, and it isn't God according to Ronald Reagan. But it is God, and for the good of the country that's the way it should always be."

"You should be burned at the stake," Alabaster said.

I knew he was upset so I didn't get angry. "I'm sorry you lost this one, Alabaster. The only thing left to do is for your kids to get up a little earlier so they can pray at home. It will be good for the entire family."

Oman contract brings misgivings

WASHINGTON — Some of our recent columns have kicked up a sandstorm in the strategic sultanate of Oman, and the dust still hasn't settled.

Jack Anderson

We reported that the Air Force has been quietly negotiating an agreement to give a British firm the multi-million-dollar contract to operate three U.S.-built bases — and the super-secret equipment they will eventually contain — in Oman, near the approaches to the Persian Gulf.

Afterward, Gen. John Chain, chief of the State Department's bureau of politico-military affairs, flew to Oman to review Omani-U.S. affairs. An angry Omani foreign minister erroneously accused him of having been our source.

The Air Force, meanwhile, has used one excuse after another to stall the implementation of the contract, which was supposed to have been signed months ago.

Chain reportedly told the British they could "go to hell" before they'll get access to U.S. communications and other sensitive equipment at the Omani bases.

Pentagon sources say the Air Force has just asked for an additional 90-day delay in awarding the contract. But there seems little likelihood that the deal can be undone, since the sultan of Oman and his British advisers insist the British firm get the contract.

The concern inside the Pentagon is that sensitive military and intelligence information would necessarily come into the hands of the civilian contractor who maintains the base. For example, in the event of a U.S. decision to use the Omani bases for their intended purpose — as staging areas for U.S. rapid-deployment forces — the contractor would need to know in advance.

The British company that has been secretly tapped for the contract on an ostensibly competitive basis, Airwork Ltd., tried to defuse the objections by taking on an American company, Vinnell Corp., as a partner. But Vinnell was apparently signed on mainly as window dressing.

Here, meanwhile, is what our sources have told us about the situation:

— The driving force behind the award of the contract to Airwork-Vinnell is British Air Vice Marshal Erik Bennett, a tough-minded Ulsterman on leave from the RAF to serve as commander of the sultan's air force. He has had extensive Middle East experience, including a stint as adviser to the Jordanian air force.

"He can be totally charming or a bit of a bastard," one source said. "He is the single most influential figure on the Omani defense scene next to the ruler himself."

The same source wrote in a confidential paper that Bennett "is dedicated to the proposition that the Sultanate of Oman Air Force was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be British-equipped."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Paper reports children sacrificed for goddess

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Three schoolchildren were sacrificed at a temple in eastern India to please a Hindu goddess, the Indian Express newspaper reported today.

Quoting delayed official police reports, the paper said the two boys and one girl were beaten to death last Sunday at a hillside temple in Orissa state, southwest of Calcutta.

The bodies of the children, aged between 11 and 12, were found dumped in thick bushes, the report said.

The children were sacrificed before the temple of goddess Maninaga on the Hindu festival of Sankrant, the Express said.

Two bodies exhumed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Two bodies believed to be those of Americans who disappeared in January have been exhumed on the outskirts of Guadalajara, a spokesman for the Attorney General's office said.

Francisco Fonseca said Tuesday forensic experts were conducting tests to try to identify the bodies. But he said "it's almost certain" the bodies are those of John Walker of Minneapolis and Alberto Radelat of Fort Worth, Texas, who were last seen at a Guadalajara restaurant nearly five months ago.

Fonseca said five men had testified in separate depositions that Walker and Radelat had entered La Langosta restaurant on Jan. 30, were beaten severely and died of their wounds. That same night they were taken to the outskirts of Guadalajara and buried, according to the testimony.

All five men are imprisoned on various charges. Two of them, Rafael Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseca — alleged to be among the leading drug traffickers in Mexico — are charged with the February kidnapping and murder of U.S. drug enforcement agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and his Mexican pilot, Alfredo Zavala Avelar.

Youths sentenced in riots

PEKING (AP) — A court has convicted five youths accused of hooliganism and destroying property in last month's soccer riot and sentenced them to prison terms ranging from four months to 2½ years, the state-run television reported.

The May 19 riot occurred after China lost a World Cup regional qualifying match to Hong Kong 2-1. Rampaging Chinese fans hurled bottles at Hong Kong players, threw rocks at automobiles and spat on foreigners.

At the Peking Municipal Intermediate People's Court, Liu Guofang, a 25-year-old tree planter in a Peking cemetery, was sentenced to 2½ years in prison and fined the equivalent of $22; Hua Zeping, a 20-year-old government worker, was given a jail term of two years and fined the equivalent of $71.

Agca says there was third Turk involved

Agca

ROME (AP) — Papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca testified today that there was a third Turkish conspirator in St. Peter's Square the day Pope John Paul II was shot.

In previous testimony, Agca had insisted that his only other accomplice in the square on May 13, 1981, was Oral Celik, a fugitive Turk charged with also shooting the pope.

But under intense interrogation by Judge Severino Santiapichi, Agca suddenly changed his testimony and said there was a third man in the square with him and Celik.

Agca said the man's name was Akif and that he was supposed to set off some "panic bombs" to cover the escape of the two gunmen — Agca and Celik. In previous testimony, Agca had said Celik was carrying the small hand grenades in a handbag.

But today, he admitted he had lied about that.

When he was shown a photograph taken by a tourist at the time of the shooting, Agca pointed to a face in the crowd and identified him only as as "Akif." The man in the picture was looking toward the place where Agca said he and Celik were standing right before the shooting.

Everyone else in the photograph has their eyes to the front, toward the pope in his white car.

Agca said Akif had come to Rome with Celik, and all three Turks met in Rome three days before the shooting.

Agca, 27, who is serving a life sentence for his attempt to kill the pope, claimed that Akif was a noted terrorist who had carried out "noteworthy" attacks in Turkey.

The trial recessed until the afternoon session.

Prosecutor Antonio Marini told reporters during the recess, "Everything Agca says must be evaluated."

Marini said, "I don't have any feeling one way or another" about the identification of an alleged third accomplice. However, the prosecutor said it was the first time that Akif's name had come out in the investigation.

Agca is the chief prosecution witness against four Turks and three Bulgarians charged with conspiring and participating in the attempt to kill Pope John Paul II. Only two of the Turks and one Bulgarian are in custody. The others are being tried in their absence.

Slim chance of showers forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders who shivered at the record-breaking 56 degree low this morning will take comfort in the warmer temperatures expected in the Permian Basin area Thursday, as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport calls for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with a low in the lower 60s, becoming sunny Thursday with a high in the upper 80s. Winds will be from the southeast tonight at five to 10 mph increasing Thursday from the south to southeast at less than 20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 80 was 17 degrees below the record set in 1951.

STATE

Heavy rains drenched portions of South and Southeast Texas early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a flood and flash flood watch.

The flood and flash flood watch has been issued for a area of South Texas and Southeast Texas generally from east of Huntsville to Victoria to Laredo.

Rain, some heavy enough to produce flooding, was reported over the coastal plains, Southeast Texas and extreme South Texas.

Lighter rainfall was reported over portions of the Edwards Plateau and light showers dotted far West Texas and northwest portions of the Panhandle.

The showers and thunderstorms were being triggered by a weak cold front and an upper level trough of low pressure.

Elsewhere skies were clear to partly cloudy except at Lubbock and Abilene where skies are clear.

Forecasts called for scatttered to numerous thunderstorms over southern sections of the state. Forecasters say some of the thunderstorms are capable of producing heavy rain and flooding.

Highs were to be in the 80s and 90s. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s and highs Thursday will be slightly warmer, mostly in the upper 80s and 90s.

NATION

Texas faced flash floods today as heavy rains saturated the state's southeast and coastal areas, while the desert Southwest baked under a heat wave that shattered several high-temperature marks.

Houston got more than 3 inches of rain from 2 a.m. EDT Tuesday until 2 a.m. today. Victoria, Galveston and Hondo, Texas, each got 2 to 3 inches of rain.

Herbert Johnson, here stuffing in a basket for Tulsa, went to Midland High and was drafted Tuesday by the Cleveland Cavaliers of the NBA.

Johnson goes in third to Cleveland

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It didn't matter that the call didn't come until the third round.

It didn't even matter that the call came from Cleveland, traditionally one of the dregs of the Eastern Conference in the National Basketball Association.

For Herbert Johnson, ex-Midland High basketball star and University of Tulsa's fourth all-time leading scorer, just becoming the Tall City's first prep player ever drafted by the NBA in Tuesday's draft was a thrill.

"It really is an honor just to get drafted, to know that there was interest in me in the NBA," said Johnson who was the 55th player chosen overall. "It's a big sigh of relief, too, to know where I'll be going, and where I'm going to have a shot at playing."

"They (the Cavaliers) did show a lot of interest in me before the draft, and told me they'd give me a good chance to come down and play. They aren't the Lakers or the Celtics or anything. It's the kind of team that if you're young and ambitious enough, you're gonna' make the club."

JOHNSON HAS shown throughout his career at Tulsa that ambition is a big part of his game. His desire helped Tulsa attain shares of three Missouri Valley Conference titles and compile a 93-30 overall record in his four years with the Hurricanes under Nolan Richardson, former coach at West Texas Junior College in Snyder, and now the new head coach at Arkansas. The 123 consecutive games appeared is a UT record.

At 6-10, Johnson is more agile than most big men, and is an excellent shooter for his size. In four years at Tulsa, Johnson poured in 1,372 points, good for fourth on the all-time Golden Hurricane list, and snared 763 rebounds, good for second all-time.

But if there is a weakness in his game it is under the boards, bumping and grinding with the heavyweights of the game. Despite averaging 9.5 rebounds a game in his senior season, Johnson lacks the physique to intimidate underneath. Tulsa programs list him at 220 pounds, a figure that might be slightly inflated. His is a finesse game. Some scouts compare his style of play to Mike Mitchell of San Antonio or Keith Lee, the first-round pick of the Chicago Bulls, but later traded to Cleveland.

FINE COMPANY indeed, but according to Dallas Maverick scout Keith Grant, the situation must be right for a player like Johnson to fit into an NBA program. In Cleveland, the situation just may be right.

The Cavaliers, despite their reputation for bad deals and last-place finishes, were a surprise playoff team in 1985. First-year head coach George Karl put life into a team that had none.

There is also the proto-type of the bruising NBA center blossoming in the city by the lake, in 6-11 Melvin Turpin of Kentucky and strongman Chris Hinson, a surprisingly successful unknown. A smoothe-scoring young player like Johnson just may have a shot with the Cavaliers.

But Herbert has grown up since his days at MHS, he realizes the chance is a long one for third round draft picks. In fact, after the first round, only eight percent of all players drafted open the season on an NBA roster.

NBA draft could leave 'big' footprint

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave DeBusschere called it "a landmark day in the history of the New York Knicks," and with Patrick Ewing to make it so, no one was arguing with him.

Draft Day 1985, however, could have an impact even beyond the considerable expectations for the former Georgetown center, if just three or four of the seven centers drafted among the first 17 players become fixtures in the middle for their National Basketball Association teams.

Ewing's long-awaited selection by the Knicks was followed by five more big "impact" players before the first guard, Chris Mullin, was taken seventh by Golden State.

Forward Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma was picked by Indiana, 7-0 center Benoit Benjamin of Creighton by the Los Angeles Clippers, 6-7 forward Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State by Seattle, 7-0 center Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist by Atlanta and 6-11 center Joe Kleine of Arkansas by Sacramento.

"PRIOR TO the draft, we had pegged the top centers as Ewing, Benjamin, Koncak and Kleine, and that was the order they were selected in," said the NBA's scouting chief, Marty Blake. "There were no surprises. It was truly the 'Year of the Big Man.'"

"Every other team is going so big up front," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said of his plans to pair Ewing with 7-footer Bill Cartwright on New York's front line next season. "It becomes a league of match-ups. The size factor at all the positions is increasing."

After Mullin, five forwards were taken before another player ticketed for backcourt action, Alfredrick Hughes of Chicago Loyola, was picked 14th by San Antonio.

They were 6-9 Detlef Schrempf of Washington by Dallas, 6-9 Charles Oakley of Virginia Union by Cleveland and 6-9 Ed Pinckney of Villanova by Phoenix, 6-10 Keith Lee of Memphis State by Chicago, 6-7 Kenny Green of Wake Forest by Washington and 6-9 Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech by Utah.

LEE WAS later traded by the Bulls, along with guard Ennis Whatley, to Cleveland for Oakley and 6-3 guard Calvin Duncan of Virginia Commonwealth, a second-round pick of the Cavaliers.

Hughes was followed in order by three more 7-foot centers, Blair Rasmussen of Oregon by Denver and Bill Wennington of St. John's and Uwe Blab of Indiana, both by Dallas, which had three first-round picks.

Dallas is happy with its four mid-size players with all-star quality — Mark Aguirre, Sam Perkins, Rolando Blackman and Schrempf — but through the history of the franchise the Mavericks have always lacked a big, talented center.

"Dallas doesn't have big men right now and I knew they wanted to fill that void," Wennington said. "I think it was good (to draft two centers). In practice, when two big men play against each other, they can only improve and make each other better."

THE LOS Angeles Lakers proved again in the playoffs that running teams need to rebound to get a fast-break offense going, and that idea was not lost on the rest of the NBA.

"We would like to play running basketball," Utah Coach Frank Layden said after the Jazz took the rugged Malone, "and to play running basketball you've got to get the rebounds."

Of the six guards picked in the first round, four were among the last seven choices.

Diablos unmercifully conclude 1st half, drub Midland, 12-7

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

El Paso wiped out a 6-1 Midland lead after three innings to end the Texas League first half race with a 12-7 win over the Angels as only a scattered few Tuesday's Angel Stadium crown of 1,119 remained at the end.

A chilling wind out of the north made life miserable for those fans who showed up unprepared and 19 walks didn't do much for the game, unless you like to watch grass grow.

It was a totally unnecessary humiliation, since the Diablos had clinched the first half flag the night before and shouldn't have been all that serious about this one.

Instead the Diablos rubbed the Angels' noses in the dirt with the come-from-behind win and took the series 5-1 to lead the season's rivalry 11-5.

A five-run fourth tied it as Scott Cannon, who came in with the bases loaded and none out in the second and escaped by giving up only one run, loaded the bases with walks and Billy Joe Robidoux unloaded them with a double. Joey Meyer followed with a single and later tied the game on John Gibbons' single.

DOUBLES BY Matt Sferrazza and Robidoux touched off a three-run fifth to put the Diablos ahead for good. The four RBI night also gave Robidoux a league-leading 66 for the season.

The win went to lefthander Bob Schroeck, 2-0, and the loss to Midland's third of five pitchers, Scott Suehr, 1-1.

The Angels' not only lost, but starter Don Timberlake had to be lifted in the second when tightness developed in his right shoulder, another woeful chapter in a season of pitching miseries for the Angels.

The good news is that the first half is history, the Angels are 0-0 in the second half, same as everybody else and pitching help is on the way as Midland leaves for a 12-game road trip, beginning Thursday night in Beaumont.

RELIEF PITCHER Byron Kemmerling is joining the club from Redwood and Doug Banning will join the team after compiling a 7-3 rec-ord at Quad City. Lefthander Eddie Delzer, who has experienced his troubles in recent outings after a good start, is being farmed to Redwood.

"Kemmerling has an ERA under 2.00," said Midland Manager Joe Maddon, "He's a slider, sinker ball pitcher and the sinker is a good pitch for this park. Banning is a power pitcher and will join Bob Kipper, Doug McKenzie, Don Timberlake and Bryan Price in the starting rotation."

Kemmerling is a third year pro from Lamar University in Beaumont. Banning, a Denver native who attended Northern Colorado, was signed as an outfielder and has been pitching only two years.

Lefthander Ken Angulo will miss a turn because of tendonitis and third baseman Billie Merrifield also sat out Tuesday's game for the same reason. So the rash of injuries that nagged through the first half, continues to be a factor.

Practice round kicks off tourney

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Talk about eager, one of the contestants checked in Tuesday and paced off the distance of the 6,568-yard Ranchland Hills Country Club layout just to be sure the distances were accurate.

Many of the 125-entrants will test the distance with their clubs today in the lone day designated for the practice round and Thursday at 8 a.m., the 57th Men's West Texas tournament tees off for a four-day run.

Defending champion Ronald Salinas of Fort Worth heads the field, but he won't lack for challengers.

Tournament Director Donald Thompson refuses to stick his neck out by proclaiming a favorite, but veteran Bill Holstead of Wichita Falls has to be regarded as a sentimental choice. He is a three-time winner and one-time runnerup. He won his first tournament in 1967 at Midland Country Club, the last time the tournament was played in Midland and the return to the Tall City must evoke fond memories.

Men's West Texas

HOLSTEAD FOLLOWED with back-to-back titles in 1978-1979 at Fort Worth and Brownwood, these after a runnerup finish at Wichita Falls in 1977.

However, to win, Holstead must stave off the army of young, flat-bellied turks headed by a trio of former Abilene Cooper golfers, who, although all are in college now, established the Cougars as the reigning terrors of scholastic golfing circles.

Kyle Coody, son of former touring pro and Masters winner Charles Coody, and Bob Estes are playing at the University of Texas now while Cole Thompson, a third ex-Cougar, is playing at Stanford.

Any one of this trio could win.

It would make a good story if Kyle Coody won and duplicated his father's 1959 win at Fort Worth's Glen Garden.

Stephen Long, Lubbock, also represents a threat while several Midland golfers could make things interesting. They include Craig Adams, RHCC, brother of touring pro John Adams; Ronnie Broderick, Big Spring; Allen Williams, Green Tree; and Steve Whiteside, Midland CC. Whiteside, a former Midland City champion, has been on the winning team in the big spring partnerships at MCC and RHCC.

"A NEW irrigation system has been put in at Ranchland Hills and the course is in excellent shape for the west's best amateurs. The greens are putting well and the golfers should find them to their liking," Thompson said.

After an opening round, flights below championship will begin Thursday. Match play will determine consolation flight qualifiers. There also will be a Senior flight of stroke play, which will be 36 holes Saturday and Sunday.

Final round 18 holes of stroke play in the championship flight and all lower flight finals will be settled Sunday.

The competition is sponsored by the Men's West Texas Golf Association and competition is restricted to members of country clubs belonging to the WTGA.

Texas Ranger shortstop snares a grounder hit by Seattle's Dave Henderson in American League action Tuesday. The Rangers scored six times in the first inning and went on to win, 8-5.

Tiger's Parrish cools off Bosox

Associated Press

Somebody had to cool off the Boston Red Sox, and Detroit's Lance Parrish figured his chances were as good as anybody's — especially with Bruce Hurst on the mound.

Parrish was right, and his fifth career grand slam and sixth career homer off Hurst was enough to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 9-8 come-from-behind victory Tuesday night that halted a six-game Boston winning streak.

It led a 17-hit Tiger assault on a night when American League batters pounded out 145 hits, but would take back seat — historically, at least — to Reggie Jackson's 512th career homer.

Parrish's homer keyed a five-run Detroit sixth inning that handed Boston only its third loss in the last 20 games and moved the Tigers into second place in the AL East — two percentage points ahead of the Red Sox.

The Red Sox, who had 11 hits in a losing cause, were leading 7-5 on the strength of homers by Bill Buckner and Dwight Evans and two RBIs by Jim Rice when the Tigers rallied in the sixth against Bruce Kison.

Rangers 8, Mariners 5

Pete O'Brien doubled in Texas' six-run first inning and homered in the second, and Gary Ward and Larry Parrish had three hits apiece for the Rangers, who jumped on Bill Wilkinson.

Wilkinson was pitching because four Seattle starters — Mike Morgan, Mike Moore, Mark Langston and Jim Beattie — are on the disabled list.

Wilkinson, 0-2, lasted only one-third of an inning, giving up five runs on three hits. Texas totaled 12 hits on the night.

Angels 7, Indians 3

"It's hard to carry on about it verbally because you don't want to carry on about yourself, but when I think about only eight (actually nine) guys being ahead of me, it's awesome," Jackson said of the homer that tied him for 10th place on the all-time list with Ernie Banks and Eddie Mathews.

"When a ballplayer passes a Hall-of-Famer or another great ballplayer, it gives you a feeling of great pride," the 39-year-old slugger said.

Jackson, who also singled and doubled as the Angels pounded out 20 hits, surpassed Mel Ott's 511 home runs. Jackson's three RBIs give him 1,542 — moving him to 22nd place in front of Willie Stargell.

White Sox 4, A's 3

Chicago's Harold Baines hit a home run to lead off the bottom of the 13th inning off Keith Atherton and defeat Oakland.

Baines also singled to help build a run in the third and drove in another in the fifth to give the White Sox a 3-1 lead.

The homer, his fifth of the season, on a 2-0 pitch, landed in the upper right-field seats at Comiskey Park, giving Chicago its eighth victory in 10 games.

Oakland's Dusty Baker had tied the game with his eighth homer, a two-run shot in the eighth.

Yankees 6, Orioles 4

Streaking Rickey Henderson had a double and two singles and stole three bases to increase his total for the season to 25 in 26 attempts. Henderson, who had five singles and a walk in Monday night's game and walked in his last plate appearance on Sunday, reached base 10 consecutive times before hitting into a force play in the sixth inning.

Ken Griffey got two hits and two RBIs for the Yankees, who reached four Baltimore pitchers for 13 hits.

Royals 10, Twins 1

"It's been kind of a struggle to get two good games in a row," said Mark Gubicza, who evened his record at 4-4 with his third straight victory.

Eight Royals drove in runs for Gubicza, who walked five while striking out only two. Frank White had three of Kansas City's 12 hits, drove in one run and scored twice. Lonnie Smith had a two-run triple for the Royals.

Brewers 4, Blue Jays 1

Ray Burris, 4-5, pitched a seven-hitter and Paul Molitor homered as Milwaukee handed slumping Toronto its sixth straight defeat.

"We don't like it," Toronto Manager Bobby Cox said of the Blue Jays' decline. "We show up and do as well as we can do."

Slumping Cubs now tackle Gooden

Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs have already lost seven straight games. And it doesn't get any easier tonight.

"We have too many good players for this to continue," Cubs right fielder Keith Moreland said after Tuesday night's 5-1 loss to the New York Mets extended their longest losing streak since they dropped 13 in a row in 1982.

A tall order faces the Cubs tonight as they try to stop the slide that has knocked them out of first place in the National League East — they face Mets right-hander Dwight Gooden, one of the league's premier pitchers.

"Gooden's not unbeatable," Moreland said. "If you get in a slump like this, you have to forget each loss and go at each game with a positive attitude. If not, you'll never get going."

Ed Lynch led the Mets with an eight-hitter and Gary Carter drove in two runs, including one with a single as New York scored twice with two out in the fifth inning.

LYNCH, 4-3, struck out three and walked just one e route to his third complete game this season. Before this year, he had only pitched one complete game.

Mookie Wilson and Kelvin Chapman, the No. 1 and 2 hitters in the Mets' lineup, each scored twice, and Wilson also had an RBI.

"I got lucky. They hit some balls hard right at people," Lynch said. "I just tried to do what I always do — don't walk anybody, move the ball around and throw strikes."

Carter said Lynch was "missing with some pitches" in the first inning, "but after that, he started to spot the ball. We've had great production out of Eddie this year. He threw another complete game, and what did he have before this year, one complete game? He's been a great plus."

Reds 6, Giants 1

Spot starter Frank Pastore pitched a four-hitter and Cincinnati took advantage of a pair of errors to score four unearned runs and beat San Francisco.

Pastore, 2-0, replaced John Stuper in the rotation and registered his first complete game since May 10, 1984. He struck out three in his second start of the season.

Loser Bill Laskey, 1-8, blanked the Reds on one hit until the sixth, when Gary Redus' one-out double triggered a three-run rally.

Eddie Milner, who had three hits, doubled to score Redus, and Dave Parker and Alan Knicely added run-scoring singles. Redus and Parker hit sacrifice flies in a three-run seventh.

Pirates 4, Expos 1

Larry McWilliams pitched a three-hitter and George Hendrick hit two doubles and drove in the winning run to lead Pittsburgh over Montreal.

McWilliams, 4-5, ended a personal four-game losing streak by going the distance for the second time this season. The Pirate left-hander struck out three and walked only one.

Hendrick's first double came in the third inning when he grounded a ball down the third-base line to score Johnny Ray and break a 1-1 tie.

"I didn't hardly strike out anybody tonight," said McWilliams, who fanned two. "But the guys in the infield made some really nice plays and the outfielders got to all the balls they had to."

Braves 3, Astros 2

Zane Smith hurled hitless ball for 5 2-3 innings and Glenn Hubbard provided the winning margin with a solo home run in the eighth inning as Atlanta defeated Houston. Smith lost his no-hit bid when Dickie Thon singled through the right side of the infield on a hit-and-run play with two out in the sixth. The left-hander allowed just two hits through seven innings, walking three and striking out one.

Bruce Sutter, 4-2, got the victory in relief after losing a lead for the fourth straight time.

Dale Murphy hit his NL-leading 16th homer in the bottom of the first inning, a bases-empty blast over the center-field fence, to give the Braves the early lead.

Cardinals 6, Phillies 2

Tom Lawless drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Vince Coleman singled three times, stole two bases to run his total for the season to 44 and scored twice, leading St. Louis over Philadelphia.

The victory was the fifth straight and ninth in the last 11 outings for the Cardinals, who moved into second place in the Eastern Division standings.

Winner John Tudor, 5-7, gave up six hits before leaving with none out in the ninth. Reliever Jeff Lahti shut the door on the Phillies after they scored a run on Bo Diaz' RBI groundout.

Steve Carlton, experiencing his worst season so far, lost his seventh game in eight decisions.

Padres 4, Dodgers 0

Dave Dravecky pitched a three-hitter and Tim Flannery collected a pair of run-scoring-singles to lead San Diego over Los Angeles.

Dravecky, 6-4, held the Dodgers hitless until Steve Yeager grounded a single up the middle with two outs in the bottom of the fifth inning. The only other Los Angeles hits were singles by Mariano Duncan in the sixth and in the ninth.

Dravecky walked two and struck out six in hurling his second complete game of the season and the fourth shutout of his big-league career.

Wiggins to report to AAA

SAN DIEGO — After a brief waiting period during which it appeared he might challenge the Padres' right to reassign him, Alan Wiggins Tuesday agreed to undergo a 20-day physical rehabilitation period in the minor leagues.

Wiggins was to report today (Wednesday) to Edmonton, Alberta, where the Las Vegas Stars, the Padres' Triple-A affiliate, are playing.

It was not until late Tuesday afternoon that Wiggins, 27, signed the papers that made official his reassignment. Under provisions of the major league joint drug agreement, the move could not have been made without the player's consent.

The Padres, under pressure from National League president Chub Feeney to take some action, had offered the rehabilitation assignment to Wiggins on Monday. His 24-hour delay before agreeing fueled speculation that the second baseman might arrive at Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles Tuesday night and request that he be reinstated to the Padres immediately.

TEAM PRESIDENT Ballard Smith has said repeatedly that Wiggins, who has twice undergone drug rehabilitation, will never again play for the Padres. He had warned Tuesday that Wiggins would be barred from the clubhouse if he showed up in Los Angeles.

Wiggins' decision to accept rehabilitation was made after a day of consultation with his agent, Tony Attanasio; his attorney, Sergio Feria; and Gene Orza, associate general counsel of the Major League Players Association.

"We just basically discussed the situation," Orza, who has been sharply critical of the Padres' handling of the Wiggins affair, said Tuesday via telephone from the MLPA office in New York. "The details were worked out between Alan, Sergio and Jack (McKeon, Padres general manager).

"Our concern was that he not be relegated to the boondocks, so to speak. We have assurances from the National League president that that will not happen."

Brown: testimony 'ridiculous'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-football Hall of Famer Jim Brown listened silently in court Tuesday as a young woman accused him of beating and raping her — a story which Brown told reporters was "ridiculous."

His attorney, Johnnie Cochran, said he would call witnesses to answer the allegations made at a preliminary hearing which will decide whether Brown, 49, must stand trial on charges of rape, sexual battery and assault.

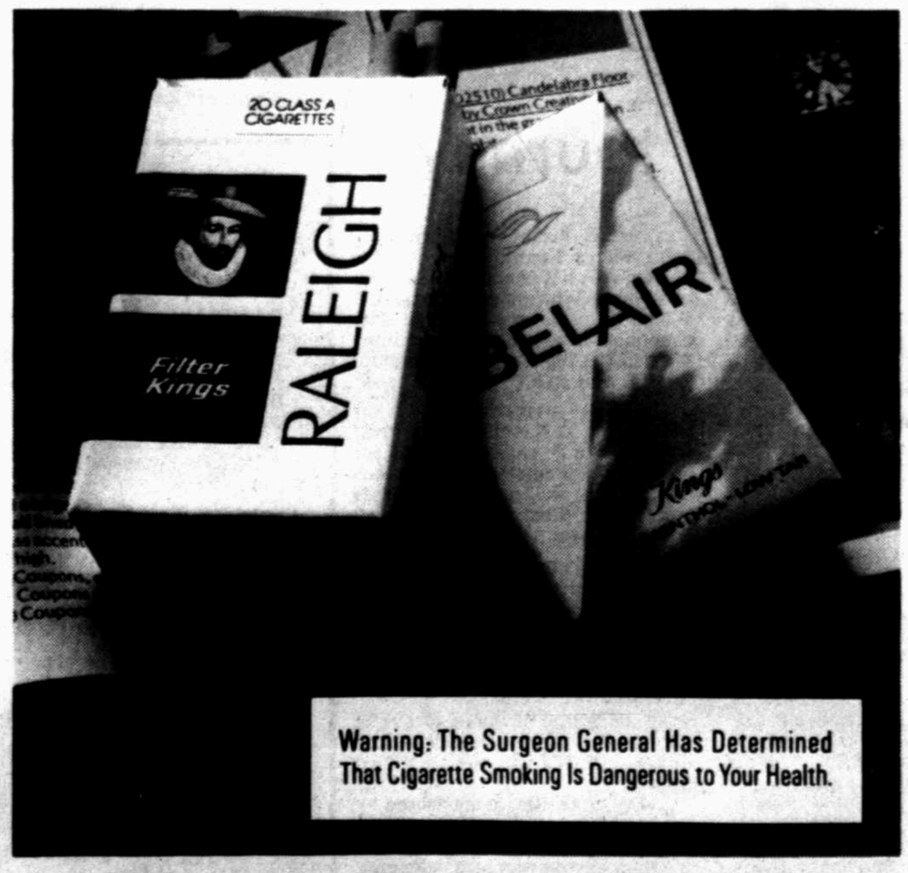

The 33-year-old former teacher, speaking in a calm voice, claimed Brown and his girlfriend, Carol Moses, 23, sexually assaulted her after a physical battle in which Brown blackened her eye, punched her in the stomach and perforated her ear drum.

Moses told a completely different story in grand jury testimony released several weeks ago. She said the witness made a lesbian advance toward her and that she punched the woman and brawled with her while Brown tried to break up the fight.

Moses also claimed there were two other people in the living room of Brown's house at the time, while the witness testified nobody else was around then.

During cross-examination, Cochran focused on apparent contradictions between what the witness said in court and what was in the police report.

Plummer finds new comedy a plum

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — On screen as Fitzroy Wynn, he's a vain theatrical genius whose matinee idol looks are about to take their final curtain. Off screen as Christopher Plummer, he's dapper and charming and handsome as ever.

Plummer, whose career has taken him from the impetuous young king in Shakespeare's "Henry V" to the baron of a singing brood in "The Sound of Music," is an utter delight in a little summer confection called "Lily in Love."

An update of Ferenc Molnar's classic romantic Broadway farce, "The Guardsman," the movie "Lily in Love" opens as Fitzroy Wynn's hit comedy closes. His playwright wife, Lily (Maggie Smith), has always written parts for him, but her latest script for a new film doesn't have a role for Fitzroy. The lead, she tells her egotistical husband, is for a young, aristocratic European.

With a smidgeon of putty, some makeup, a wig and a new wardrobe, Fitzroy disguises himself as Roberto Terranova, who of course seduces the charming Lily who of course doesn't know he's really her husband.

With Maggie Smith as his wife and charming foil, the 55-year-old Plummer gives a marvelous performance. Indeed, it is one of his best. It also is one of the few comedic parts he's done, having played such roles as the menacing Iago in "Othello" with James Earl Jones on Broadway, and the evil Israeli spy in the movie, "Eyewitness," with William Hurt and Sigourney Weaver.

"Always, the villain is more interesting to play than the hero. But I don't want to make a career out of it," Plummer said recently. "They usually have more substance and are easier to play. Villains always have deep, dark secrets."

Plummer wanted to do "Lily in Love" because he craved a comedy and longed to work with Miss Smith. "Perhaps I'm a little old-fashioned in my taste in films. I like films of fantasy and romance. I also like biographies of extraordinary people."

As for performing comedy, Plummer prefers doing it on stage. "Comedy on screen is very hard to do; it's hard to cut for the editors. It's easier to play comedy on stage — you're your own master and control your timing," he said.

"Lily in Love" was a movie the Toronto-born thespian especially wanted to do. However, there are roles he's accepted because he needed the money or because the location involved an exotic spot he wanted to visit. His current comedy was shot in Hungary and Plummer fell in love with the country.

Though born in Toronto, Plummer grew up in Quebec in what he has described as a very Edwardian upbringing: He read books. He wanted to be a pianist but "couldn't take the endless drudgery of that."

Plummer learned drama from the late Tyrone Guthrie, and began his stage career in Canadian repertory groups. He sealed his reputation as a Shakespearean actor in such highly acclaimed roles as Macbeth, Hamlet, Henry V and Mercutio. He made his Broadway debut in "The Constant Wife" in 1954.

In 1974, he won a Tony award for best actor in a musical for his work in "Cyrano." He was nominated for best actor in a play for "Othello" in 1982.

Besides "Eyewitness," movies have included "Inside Daisy Clover," "The Man Who Would Be King," "Somewhere in Time," "The Amateur" and "Stage Struck."

"I make a very good living at films and in television," Plummer said. "And then there's the theater, which is my life's blood."

And it runs through the veins of his family. His marriage to actress Tammy Grimes produced daughter Amanda Plummer, who won a Tony for her role as the emotionally distraught nun in "Agnes of God" in 1984.

Adventurers explore Venezuela

PERAITEPUI, Venezuela (AP) — Only Indians, missionaries and miners live out here in the vast stretch of grassland known as the Gran Sabana. But adventurous Venezuelans have discovered it as an affordable place to rough it when vacationtime comes.

The region in Venezuela's southeast corner was little touched by the oil boom of the 1970's, but as the country enters its third year of economic crisis, tourists who once went abroad are now seeking vacation spots closer to home.

Many come here to test their stamina and their four-wheel drive vehicles on the red dirt road known as the Gran Sabana Route.

Some ecologists worry about the effect of four-wheel drive vehicles on the environment, but some of the the Indians who live and farm in the area have benefited. Tourists are buying up their artifacts.

Beginning in the town of El Dorado, 450 miles southeast of Caracas, the Gran Sabana Route stretches 135 miles to Santa Elena de Uairen near the border with Brazil. Along the way, it traverses a landscape of stark natural beauty, marked by rolling hills, waterfalls and flat-topped mountains.

During the Easter Week exodus this year, more than 800 vehicles took to the road. Some were part of the regular contingent of truckers hauling timber north from Brazil, but most were tourists drawn by the scenery and the promise of adventure.

Accommodations are few, roads often impassable, and tourists must hazard long stretches where food and gasoline are unavailable.

Aymara Indians harvest their grain in the grasslands of South America. The high-protein grain cultivated for centuries by Inca tribes in the Andes may soon be marketed in Third World nations where it could help solve hunger problems.

Setting out from El Dorado — a town built during Venezuela's gold rush of 1849 — visitors must drive to the top of a rocky stretch called La Escalera, where the jungle foliage and the vastness of the savannah abruptly begin.

To the west are the first of the tepuis, the flat-topped, cloud-covered mountains found throughout southern Venezuela, remnants of a massive sandstone plateau.

"This is the lost world of all the neo-tropical biologists, these fabulous table-top mountains," says Stefan Gorzula, an ecologist with the regional electricity company Edelca.

One of the tepuis, the 9,216-foot Mount Roraima, forms Venezuela's border with Brazil and Guyana. It has a lunar landscape of pink sand, black rocks carved into eerie shapes by erosion and streams full of pink and white quartz crystals.

Another, Auyan-Tepui, features to the 3,212-foot Angel Falls, the world's highest uninterrupted waterfall, discovered in 1937 by American aviator Jimmy Angel.

The savannah itself harbors a variety of wildlife, including tapirs, pacas, jaguars, giant and anteaters.

Refugees get chance at farms

LUGH, Somalia (AP) — The soil is windblown, salty, gritty and dry — hardly suitable for farming — but refugee nomads have grown good crops of corn, sugar cane, beans and even a Chinese vegetable on it with the help of Japanese agronomists.

The experiment here may help feed Somalia's huge refugee population.

Volunteers from the Japanese Voluntary Center came here almost two years ago and set up a 124-acre collective farm to teach agriculture to the nomads who had come to Somalia as refugees of the Ogaden war with neighboring Ethiopia 1977-78.

"This land we cannot recommend for farming," said Yoshimi Saita, director of the 11-member Japanese team.

It takes year-round irrigation from the nearby Jubba River to keep the crops alive.

Under Japanese tutelage, 100 refugee families each were given an acre and a half to work.

Saita said the group produced 1,667 pounds of corn per hectare — 2.47 acres, not far off from the normal average listed in U.N. Food and Agriculture statistics of 1,764 pounds.

The 100 families in the farm project were chosen by the government, with help from the office in Somalia of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. They were given hand tools, seed and donkey carts to get started, but the aim is to help the farmers become self-reliant.

Renewed Kite set to defend Georgia-Pacific title

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Tom Kite is brimming with confidence going into Thursday's opening round of the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I really am playing pretty well right now," Kite said Tuesday after arriving at the Atlanta Country Club, where he will defend the championship he won a year ago.

"I definitely feel better about my game than I did this time last year," he said. "The question is whether one week from now I'll feel better."

Kite, who plays out of Midland's Green Tree Country Club, bogeyed the final two holes in last week's U.S. Open to plunge into 13th place and ranks among the favorites in the field of 156 seeking the $90,000 first prize in the $500,000 event over the hilly, 7,008-yard, par-72 layout.

"I haven't quite been able to get it all together, but at times I played tremendous at Westchester and the Open," Kite said.

"But, it's coming. At least I'm making some birdies. I'm driving the ball real well. I just need to eliminate a few of the bogeys."

ALTHOUGH KITE never got closer than three shots on the final day at the Open, he was angered by his bogey-bogey finish.

"I could have bitten nails in two," he said. "I just didn't particularly play well Sunday. I faltered around. I just couldn't quite make birdies. I just fought and fought and fought."

Kite has captured eight tour titles in his career, including the MONY-Tournament of Champions earlier this season.

He will be facing a strong field in Atlanta, including three of the year's top five money winners — Lanny Wadkins, Corey Pavin and Ray Floyd.

Wadkins, who won the Bob Hope and Los Angeles Open earlier this year, is No. 2 on the money list at $326,495.

PAVIN, WINNER of the Colonial National Invitation, is third on the money list at $390,408 and Floyd, winner of the Houston Open, is fifth at $288,525.

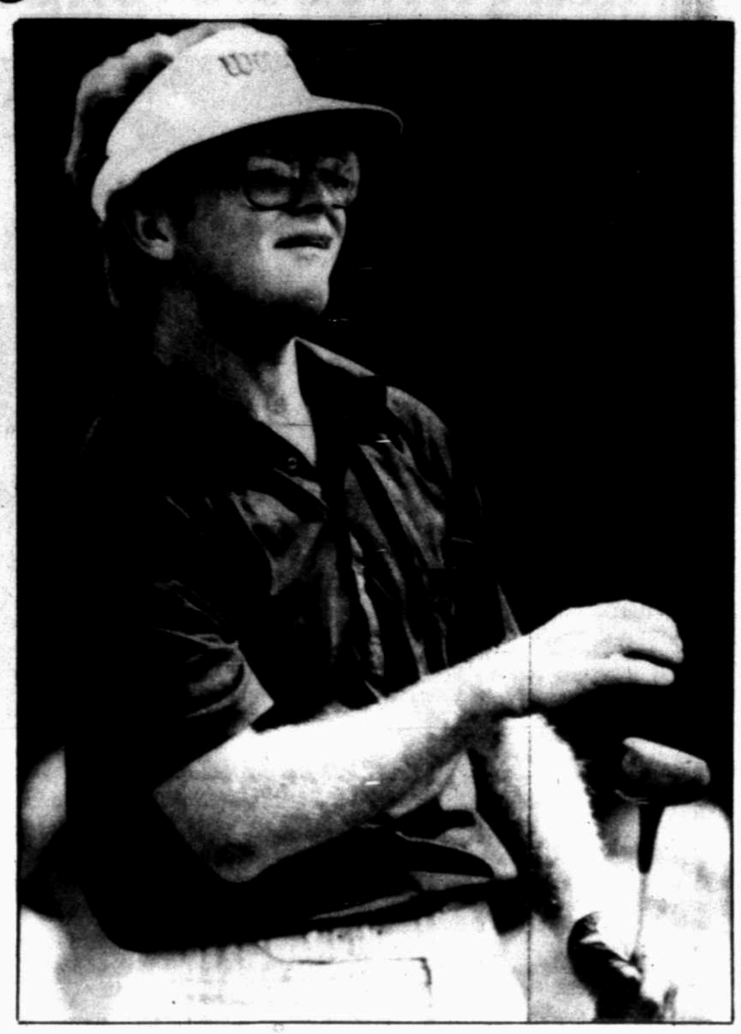

The trio of foreign players who shared second place in the Open are in the field — Tze-Chung Chen of Taiwan, Dave Barr of Canada and Denis Watson of South Africa.

Open champion Andy North is bypassing this event, as is leading money winner Curtis Strange, former Atlanta winner Cal Peete, who withdrew from the Open because of an ailing back, and Mark O'Meara, a two-time winner this year.

Also among the missing are Tom Watson, Masters champion Bernhard Langer and Craig Stadler, seventh on the money list.

FIVE OTHER 1985 winners are in the field — Memorial champion Hale Irwin; Fuzzy Zoeller, who won at Bay Hill; Doral-Eastern Open winner Mark McCumber; Byron Nelson Classic winner Bob Eastwood and Roger Maltbie, who won the Westchester Classic two weeks ago.

Other possible title contenders include Payne Stewart, who was second in the Byron Nelson; three-time Atlanta runner-up Don Pooley; Larry Mize, who has had six finishes in the top 10 this year; and Larry Nelson, the 1980 Atlanta winner who has a home on the Atlanta Country Club course.

Robin Blake gets title shot against Paul

From Staff Reports

West Texas' Robin Blake will finally get his shot at a world lightweight title when he meets IBF champion Jimmy Paul on national television (CBS) from the Tropicana Hotel in Las Vegas on June 30.

Blake, who was raised in Levelland and now resides in Fort Worth, used a powerful left hand to make him the No. 1 contender in the world just over a year ago. However, a stunning upset loss to Tyrone Crawley and a loss to eventual champ Harry Arroyo put Blake's once bright career on hold.

Just two months ago, Blake was to fight Arroyo for the title on national TV, but an old hand injury forced Blake to pull out and a late replacement named Jimmy Paul stepped in and took the title from Arroyo.

Blake re-injured the hand during a fight in Midland on national TV last February when he won a decision over Adolfo Medel at Chaparral Center. Blake's parents reside in Midland.

BLAKE, WHO owns a 27-2 pro record with 18 knockouts, has five consecutive victories under his belt and has again captured the imagination of the boxing world and Blake is now closer to his goal of bringing the world lightweight title back to West Texas.

"I'm not looking to lose this opportunity. I'm going to win the fight and I'm in the best shape of my life," said Blake. "My hands feel great. I hope they (Paul) feel my hands are injured because I want to surprise them with my power."

Both Blake and manager Dave Gorman believe that Robin would have beaten either Paul or Arroyo on the day the two fought for the title. Now they have a chance to prove it. Ring experts say the lightweight division is becoming the most competitive division in boxing and potential big money fights await the winner of this bout.

"Arroyo wasn't as busy against Paul as he was against me. It didn't seem to me that Paul fought the same guy I did. Arroyo was ready to be taken and give Paul credit for landing a lot of good punches to dominate the fight.

"I wasn't in a good frame of mind when I fought Arroyo. I was coming off the loss to Crawley, but that's all in the past. I have no excuses," said Blake.

BLAKE HAS been training with WBA champions Don Curry (welterweight) and Gene Hatcher (junior welterweight) in tiny Tolar, Tex., population 415. Tolar is 50 miles south of Fort Worth.

"I've already done over 80 rounds of natural sparring and over 200 miles of roadwork and I really feel the difference," says Blake of his training. "I expect to be standing and breathing well, if necessary, in the late rounds. If I get beat, it's not because I'm out of shape."

Paul, 22-1 in the ring, fights out of the Kronk Gym in Detroit and his stablemates include Thomas Hearns and Milton McCrory. Gorman and Curry are after McCrory to unify the welterweight title before Curry moves up to junior middleweight to challenge Hearns and then middleweight to challenge Marvin Hagler.

BUT FIRST is the Paul and Blake matchup. Blake figures he has the advantage with a little secret weapon.

"This is my 30th pro fight on June 30th. I remember my 18th pro fight was on my birthday and that was a win against Ruben Munoz that really got my career rolling. I guess it's deja vu, or something, but I'm excited about it and I'll win the title on June 30."

Paul's only loss came in October of 1983 when he dropped a decision to Jimmy Tyson of Atlantic City. Arroyo is the only common opponent between Paul and Blake with Paul winning and Blake losing.

Massimino to coach Nets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino is expected to sign a long-term contract with the New Jersey Nets either today or Thursday and become the National Basketball Association team's sixth coach since 1980, club President Bernie Mann said.

"I would imagine within the next 24 to 36 hours he should be signed," Mann said Tuesday in an interview at the Brendan Byrne Arena. "He wants to come back home to New Jersey. His wife is from Bayonne."

Massimino, who guided Villanova to the NCAA basketball title this past season, has denied receiving an offer from the Nets, but Mann said one has been extended.

The fiery Wildcat coach wasn't available Tuesday night for comment, but earlier Tuesday said, "I'm going to probably cry ... I swear I haven't made up my mind. They're very, very interested."

MASSIMINO WOULD replace Stan Albeck, who on Monday signed a three-year contract with the Chicago Bulls. The Nets let Albeck out of the final year of his contract so he could be closer to his parents, who live in Illinois.

The Newark Star Ledger reported in today's editions that Massimino would be given a 10-year contract, paying $375,000 the first four years. If he remained longer his salary would increase; if he left, he would be paid $100,000 annually as a consultant, the newspaper said.

A salary of $375,000 would make Massimino one of the highest-paid coaches in the NBA.

"It's how you look at it," said Mann, when asked whether the Nets were spending too much for a coach. "When we brought Larry Brown, they said it was gigantic, $225,000. At the time it was an awful lot of money. Today\ it's a lot. But three or four years down the road, where is the dollar going?"

MANN SAID he wanted a college coach to take over the Nets and there was talk that Bobby Knight of Indiana was among those considered.

However, Massimino was the acknowledged front-runner.

"Yes, he really was our first choice," said Mann. "I have always let it be known that I wanted a college coach and he is from New Jersey and that's what we're looking for."

Rockets need guards, choose Tulsa's Harris

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets, looking to beef up their backcourt to complement the "Twin Tower" offense of Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon, took in four forwards and two guards during the National Basketball Association college draft.

The Rockets opted Tuesday for Tulsa guard Steve Harris, a 6-foot-5, 195-pounder from Blue Springs, Mo., as their first choice. Harris finished his four years at Tulsa as the school's all-time leading scorer with 2,272 points.

"I'm very happy, very excited about getting the opportunity to play," Harris said. "I didn't have any idea where I would be going."

Other forwards chosen by the Rockets include Sam Mitchell, 6-foot-7, 195-pounds, from Mercer; Michael Payne, 6-foot-11, 210-pounds, from Iowa; Sam Potter, 6-foot-8, 210-pounds, from Oral Roberts and Don Turney, 6-foot-8, 220-pounds, from Marshall. Oral Roberts' Michael Brooks, a 6-foot-2, 175-pound, guard was also picked.

HARRIS WAS the 19th player selected in the draft, a somewhat uncustomary position for the Rockets, who have had the first choice overall in each of the past two college player drafts.

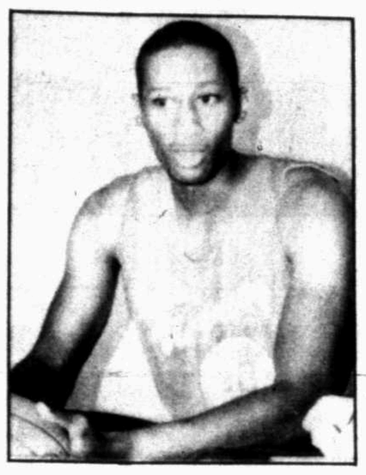

Two years ago, the Rockets picked Sampson out of the University of Virginia, along with Louisville forward Rodney McCray, another early first-round pick. Last year, it was Olajuwon, from the University of Houston, who topped the NBA draft order.

Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson said Harris was the man he was after this year.

"He's a terrific player, a good shooter," Patterson said.

Harris said he had never been to Houston and never played against any of the Rocket players in their collegiate days. But said he was familiar with the team.

HARRIS, WHO carries the nick name "Silk" because of his smooth play, also is a strong defensive player, winding up his college career as Tulsa's all-time leader in steals with 271.

Tulsa's Steve Harris is Houston's No. 1 pick...

He had a rough start at Tulsa, breaking his jaw in his first exhibition game as a freshman, then breaking his nose a week later. But he still scored 311 points in his first year, a school record for freshmen. He also set a school record for points by a sophomore, 574, and broke the all-time school record as a junior.

His 23.6 points per game this past season was second in the Missouri Valley Conference to Wichita State's Xavier McDaniel, Seattle's first-round choice and the fourth player picked overall.

The Rockets also announced Tuesday the signing of four-year University of Houston starter Michael Young, who was the Boston Celtics' top draft choice last year.

PATTERSON SAID the Rockets and Young had agreed on a two-year pact. Young was cut by the Celtics and played most of last season with the Detroit Spirits of the Continental Basketball Association.

Young will join former collegiate teammates Olajuwon and Larry Micheaux on the Rockets.

Eric Turner, a free agent from Michigan, also signed with the Rockets Tuesday.

Banks' trade reroutes Hughes to the Spurs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs' ability to trade Gene Banks for Chicago's Steve Johnson set the stage for their unexpected first-round NBA draft choice of Alfredrick Hughes, team General Manager Bob Bass says.

The Spurs announced hours before the draft began that the 6-foot-8 Banks would go to the Bulls for the 6-10 forward Johnson.

It looked like San Antonio would call on 7-0 Blair Rassmussen of Oregon at its No. 14 first-round position. But the Spurs instead opted for Loyola's Hughes, who at 6-5 can play at small forward.

"The Steve Johnson trade had a lot to do with our choice here," Bass said Tuesday.

"Why would we take Blair Rassmussen — a project — when we've got Steve Johnson?" he said.

HUGHES WAS second overall in the NCAA in scoring his senior year, averaging 24.3 points a game and 8.2 rebounds.

"He could come off the bench and score for you. He plays very physical and does his share of rebounds," said Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons.

Hughes, in a conference call to reporters at Spurs headquarters, said he was "very surprised" to go to San Antonio.

"They're going to need some scoring out of me," he said. "I want to be in a situation where I can help out on the team."

Bass said the Spurs scouted Hughes at the Aloha Classic and "got high on him but we dropped off until we got Steve Johnson."

JOHNSON WENT in the first round of the 1981 draft to Kansas City at the No. 7 spot. He was traded while Cotton Fitzsimmons was coach at Kansas City to Chicago.

Johnson, Bass said, is an adequate scorer and rebounder, averaging 10 points and almost six rebounds last season.

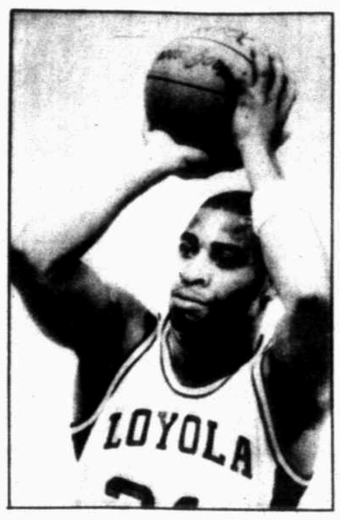

"Our size up front has completely changed," Bass said.

The Spurs also drew Mike Brittain, a 7-0 center from South Carolina, at No. 29, then selected forward Tyrone Corbin, 6-6, of DePaul at the No. 35 draft position in the second round.

Bass praised Banks, who averaged 9.5 points per game and 5.4 rebounds.

"He was a vital part of our running game and probably one of the best offensive rebounders in franchise history," he said.

BASS DESCRIBED Brittain as the best shot blocker at the Aloha Classic.

Schrempf, 7-footers, give Mavs new look

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks went into the National Basketball Association draft seeking a 7-foot center, and they came out with two.

Dallas used the eighth pick in Tuesday's draft to tap Washington's Detlef Schrempf, a play-making "poor man's Larry Bird," and then used its two other first-round choices for its own "twin towers."

The Mavericks drafted 7-foot Bill Wennington of St. John's and 7-foot-2 Uwe Blab of Indiana — a move Coach Dick Motta said should give the team the NBA-caliber center it has craved since its founding.

"If one touches and succeeds and carries his position, we can surround him now with quality players," Motta said. "If one of these two fellows can hit, we're going to have a very nice team."

Depite the longing for a center, Motta said the 6-foot-9 Schrempf was too good to pass up with the eighth pick of the draft.

"SCHREMPF IS the only player we did not interview, which is typical," Motta said. "We didn't think he'd be there."

"I just get tired of saying it, almost as much as you guys do of writing it or asking it — what are needs are," Motta told reporters, referring to Dallas' need for a center.

"I really believe it would have been foolish to pass up Schrempf to take Wennington — we felt Wennington was the next-best center in the draft."

When Wennington was still available at the 16th spot, Dallas was doubly delighted, Motta said.

One attraction of both Schrempf and Blab, both natives of West Germany, is that they began their basketball careers late and are likely to have more room for improvement than U.S.-bred athletes.

"They're on the upside of their potential," he said. "(Schrempf) has a flair for the game. ... He's a natural."

SCHREMPF HAS been called "the poor man's Larry Bird" because of his versatility, passing and scoring ability. Scouts say he can play either forward or guard in the NBA.

He averaged 15.8 points per game his senior year at Washington, with a shooting percentage of .558. In three NCAA playoff games, he averaged 23.7 points per game and 8.7 rebounds, and in Olympic competition with the West German team, he averaged 18.8 points and 8 rebounds per game.

"I'm very excited," Schrempf said by telephone from New York. "Dallas already has some small forwards and big guards, and I guess I'll just fill in where they have some needs. I just hope I can contribute."

Schrempf was the only Pac-10 player to rank in the top 10 in four different categories — scoring, rebounding, assists and field goal percentage.

WENNINGTON SAID he thinks he can start next fall for Dallas.

"I feel that I'm capable of doing that," he said. "I like it a lot more than going into a team where I'd have to sit on the bench a long time."

Wennington averaged 12.2 points and 6.4 rebounds per game for St. Johns, where he finished his collegiate career as the school's leader in blocked shots with 151 and field goal percentage at .579.

JOHNSON

So Johnson has other irons in the fire, just in case.

FIRST THERE is a chance of pro ball in Europe. Johnson has already been contacted by interested teams in Spain. Italy, too, is a well-known training ground for prospective NBA players. And after coming this far, Herbert wants to give pro ball every chance he can find before going on to other things. As he says, "a lot of foreign teams are interested in 6-10 players."

Playing in the minor league Continental Basketball Association or in the fledgling United States Basketball League is not, however, what Johnson has in mind. The travel grind and low pay make those options unappealing for Johnson.

Other plans are already in the works. Just 16 credits shy of a bachelor's degree in Physical Education, which he may complete as early as this fall, Johnson would like to pursue a career in coaching.

"You put this much time into something and it is hard to let go of. I've already got some promises to become a grad assistant coaching. I'd like to help motivate the younger players. Working with kids is part of me, too."

But that is all in the future. For now, Herbert Johnson is content to bask in thoughts of glory, and a chance in the NBA. If nothing else, he will be remembered as the first Midlander to make his mark in the NBA draft.

DRAFT

Detroit took 6-2 Joe Dumars of McNeese State, Houston grabbed 6-5 Steve Harris of Tulsa, Boston selected 6-2 Sam Vincent of Michigan State, Philadelphia took 6-8 forward Terry Catledge of South Alabama, Milwaukee picked 6-8 forward Jerry Reynolds of LSU, the Lakers selected 6-9 forward A.C. Green of Oregon State and Portland finished the first round with 6-3 Terry Porter of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

THE KNICKS, assured of getting the rights to Ewing on May 12 when they won the "Patrick Ewing Lottery," now must turn to the task of signing him, probably to a contract in excess of $1 million a year.

"We are going to enter into negotiations immediately with his representatives," DeBusschere said. "We are looking forward to an amicable and speedy negotiation. We don't anticipate any problems."

The Knicks hope Ewing can become a player in the mold of Bill Russell, who led the Celtics to 11 NBA championships.

"A lot of people say I remind them of Bill Russell," said Ewing, more noted for his defensive prowess than offensive skill. "It's an honor to be in his class, but I won't be out there copying anybody."

Bol, Tulane star among draftees

NEW YORK (AP) — Manute Bol, a 7-foot-6¾ center from the Sudan who is now playing in the United States Basketball League, was picked in the second round of the National Basketball Association draft by the Washington Bullets.

Bol, who left the University of Bridgeport after only one collegiate season, has impressed scouts by blocking 12.3 shots per game for the Rhode Island Gulls of the USBL.

Bol, however, weighs only 190 pounds and many question his ability to withstand the physical NBA game. But his potential was enough to induce Washington to take him with the 31st pick of the draft.

Ironically, he would join 6-11 Jeff Ruland, one of the most rugged players in the league, on the Bullets.

John Williams, a 6-foot-10 forward from Tulane indicted in connection with a gambling scandal at the New Orleans school, was selected in the second round of the National Basketball Association draft by the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The selection of Williams, once projected as a first-round player, came despite a warning from NBA Commissioner David Stern that he might be banned from the league if he is convicted.

Williams currently is playing professionally with Rhode Island in the United States Basketball League.

Draft Notes

Four foreign players with no American college experience, including a highly touted center from the Soviet Union, were taken in the National Basketball Association draft.

The first, selected by New Jersey in the second round, was 6-foot-8 Fernando Martin, considered the best player in Spain.

In the fourth round, Atlanta took 7-2 Arvidas Sabonis of the Soviet Union, who Olympic Coach Bob Knight once called potentially the best player in the world.

Cleveland grabbed Gunther Behnke, a 7-3 center from West Germany, in the fifth round. He once planned to play for the University of Kentucky, but left the campus before the season started.

Phoenix selected Georgi Glouckov, a forward from Bulgaria, in the seventh round.

Several trades were made before and during the National Basketball Association draft.

The most prominent swap sent the draft rights for Keith Lee of Memphis State along with guard Ennis Whatley to Cleveland for the draft rights to Cavaliers' picks Charles Oakley of Virginia Union and Calvin Duncan of Virginia Commonwealth.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A very promising relationship continues to grow. Get a business on a sound financial footing, and tension subsides. You work best when given a free hand. Creative projects prove especially rewarding. Romance is a source of deep satisfaction. Family members draw closer together. Encourage a younger person to live up to his or her potential. A hasty marriage or business alliance could cause great unhappiness. Choose a mate or partner who shares your interest in helping mankind. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: country music star Chet Atkins, singer Anne Murray, football's Dave Elmendorf, concert pianist Andre Watts, playwright Lillian Hellman, Errol Flynn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Adopting a more serious attitude toward work will help both your career and your finances. Looking for a new home is time-consuming but worth the effort! Call parents.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Loved ones find your criticism unnerving. Let up a bit. Refuse to be discouraged by someone's negative attitude. In time, you will emerge a winner! A clever idea attracts favorable notice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accepting a luncheon invitation brings unsuspected benefits. Follow up on a phone call. A relative could be changing his or her mind. Welcome an expert's offer to help.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Witnesses may be confused about what actually took place. Conduct your own investigation. A good friend's reputation could be at stake. A swift decision proves helpful. Choose your confidants with care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Reorganize office operations, and you will have a lot more time for new projects. Salespeople have a banner day! Be careful not to promise more than you can deliver.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Help someone who cannot get out and about. Travel is full of surprises. The mail brings good news -- perhaps even a check. Tend to routine business tasks before tackling something unusual.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A last-minute change could complicate your day but will also add extra dollars to your paycheck. A recent triumph has won you new allies. Be careful not to upset an older person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An aggressive approach brings you both extra cash and the attention of an attractive member of the opposite sex. Settle an account now to prevent trouble later on. Cash is better than credit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec 21): A temporary setback is just that -- temporary. Stop worrying about things you cannot control. Your reputation is safe. A chance encounter proves very lucky.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A period of meditation proves very helpful. Build savings if hoping to preserve a certain lifestyle. A close associate's loyalty works to your advantage time and time again. Show your appreciation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some weekend plans may have to be changed. Do not wait until the last minute to suggest alternatives. The reasons for a business decision may be unclear. Ask for an explanation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Refuse to let an outsider influence a decision that only you can make. Do your homework before going into a meeting. A carefully thought-out presentation could advance your career.

Bridge terminology is very colorful. The "Passion Coup" was so named by George S. Coffin because declarer "caresses" the defenders out of their low trumps until only the ace is left outstanding. The defenders must then ruff helplessly with their ace as declarer gets rid of a loser. Here's an example.

As is often the case when the distribution is wild, everyone had a "good" hand. However, North's jump to five diamonds silenced all competition, save for West's doubtful double. Although he did not know it, East's club bid did his side considerable harm—it steered West away from a heart lead, the only one that could defeat the contract.

Declarer ruffed the club lead in dummy and led a spade to the jack and ace. West found the heart shift, but it was already too late. Declarer rose with the ace from the table, cashed the king of spades and continued with the queen. To prevent declarer from sluffing his heart loser, East had to ruff—the first "caress." South overruffed, returned to the board with a club ruff and led the ten of spades.

East was again "caressed" into ruffing. Once more he was overruffed and declarer again entered dummy with a club ruff to lead the remaining high spade. By now the only trump outstanding was the ace, so declarer was able to discard his heart loser as West ruffed with the master trump. Even your writers could make the rest of the tricks at this point.

Country star Roy Acuff released from hospital

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Roy Acuff, 81, who has been singing and playing his fiddle on the Grand Ole Opry for 46 years, has been released from a hospital after treatment for a blood clot in the lung.

Opry spokesman Jerry Strobel said Tuesday that Acuff and his doctor would decide when he could perform again. He was hospitalized twice last July for chest pains and did not perform on the Opry for five months.

Acuff, best known for the songs "Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird," was released Tuesday from HCA-Edgefield Hospital. He was hospitalized June 9.

Nancy Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — First Lady Nancy Reagan took a break dancing lesson when she visited a home for runaway and homeless youngsters.

She joined with four members of the Covenant House break dancing group Tuesday to dance to the insistent beat of rap artist Grandmaster Flash's "Girls Like the Way You Spin" on a portable tape player.

"She did good," said Gus, one of Mrs. Reagan's partners. "I've been doing this for six years, and I've seen a lot of people who didn't do as good as Mrs. Reagan the first time."

Earlier, Mrs. Reagan discussed the perils of street life with nine young residents of Covenant House, a home for runaways near Times Square founded by the Rev. Bruce Ritter.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children are crying out for help about alcohol and drug abuse, says actor Bruce Weitz, who plays the seedy but sensitive detective Mick Belker on NBC television's "Hill Street Blues."

But too many parents, teachers and principals are turning their backs on the problem, he told the National PTA convention Tuesday.

Weitz, honorary chairman of the PTA's Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention Project, received more than 10,000 letters from Chicago-area children after the PTA and a television station there launched a campaign in January encouraging youngsters to "Write Bruce" about drugs and alcohol.

The PTA has published excerpts in a pamphlet, "If My Parents Only Knew..."

Donna Reed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Episode Two of Donna Reed's court battle over her ouster as Miss Ellie on the hit prime-time soap opera "Dallas" has ended with a victory for the producers.

Superior Court Judge John L. Cole denied a request Tuesday by Miss Reed for a preliminary injunction halting production indefinitely on "Dallas" episodes featuring her character. He had previously denied a temporary injunction.

Despite the two setbacks, attorney Michael Donaldson said he will proceed with Miss Reed's $7.5 million breach of contract lawsuit filed last month against Lorimar Productions, which makes the show.

"She's a 64-year-old Iowa farm girl who has certain principles and class...She intends to stand on them," Donaldson said of Miss Reed, who was dismissed from the show in April of favor of Barbara Bel Geddes, the former Miss Ellie who retired last year after heart surgery but now wants her job back.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As the saga of hijacked TWA Flight 847 began unfolding in Lebanon, a group of air travelers in the comic strip "Steve Canyon" found themselves facing armed terrorists shouting "Death to the U.S.A."

"It's a coincidence that this is happening right now," said veteran cartoonist Milton Caniff, who has written and illustrated the "Steve Canyon" strip since 1947 and has a reputation for forseeing world events. "I've had several of these things, when I happened to be right about it."

The TWA plane was hijacked Friday on a flight from Athens, Greece, to Rome. About 40 Americans remain prisoners somewhere in Beirut, Lebanon.

In a telephone interview from his New York studio Tuesday, Caniff said he wrote the comic strip 10 weeks ago and that a hijacking in the Middle East two years ago made him realize the same thing could happen to an American airline.

"I've been thinking about this for a long time," said the 78-year-old Caniff. "It's our most vulnerable spot. They'd like to sink the (aircraft carrier) Nimitz but they cannot.

"They're making the colossus (the United States) look helpless in the face of two or three clowns on the airplane, killing people. They've got us over the barrel, not just TWA, but all airlines."

The cartoon story began Sunday when passengers aboard the fictitious Great Circle Airlines found themselves delayed on the runway. The pilot is told the flight has received a bomb threat and that a bomb disposal crew has been dispatched to the plane.

But the crew are actually terrorists who board the plane wielding machine guns and carrying a bomb, yelling threats to the United States. But the hero of the comic strip, Steve Canyon, is not involved in the storyline.

"Milton Caniff is uncanny about that," said Bill Yates, comics editor for King Features. "He notices what's going on very carefully and predicts it ahead of time."

"Steve Canyon" is distributed to newspapers nationwide by New York-based King Features and News America Syndicate, located in Irvine, Calif.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcaster-entrepreneur Ted Turner, in a filing with the Federal Communications Commission, has responded to charges from CBS that his $5.4 billion takeover offer is financially shaky and could wreck the giant network.

The documents, which contains new details on Turner's hostile takeover bid, were delivered to the FCC on Tuesday in reply to CBS assertions that Turner Broadcasting System Inc. "is not financially qualified and its proposal seriously threatens the financial stability of the CBS network."

Because the papers were handed over to the FCC immediately prior to the close of business Tuesday, copies were not immediately made available to the public.

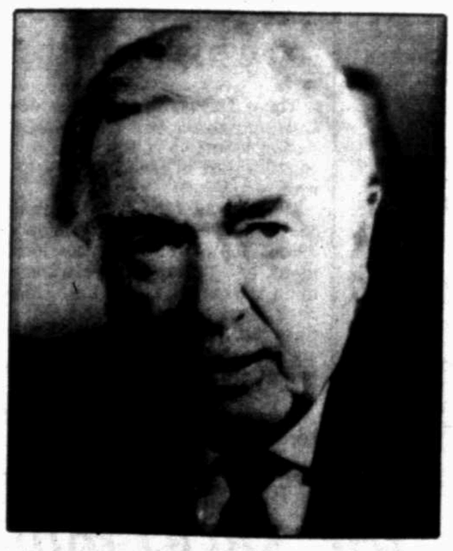

Turner's Washington attorney, former FCC Chairman Charles Ferris, promised to release the documents today.

DALLAS (AP) — William M. Taylor, 76, a U.S. district judge who presided over Dallas school desegregation for more than a decade, died Monday.

Taylor served as a state district court judge and in 1949 was appointed to the newly created 134th District Court in Dallas County. He resigned in 1953. President Lyndon Johnson appointed him to the federal bench in 1966. The Dallas desegregation lawsuit, filed Oct. 7, 1970, was the best-known of a series of controversial suits heard by Taylor. He excused himself from the desegregation case in 1981.

Dollar plummets

LONDON (AP) — A cut in interest rates charged by major U.S. banks sent the dollar into a nosedive on foreign exchange markets early today.

Gold gained more than $5.50 in Hong Kong but steadied in later European trading.

The dollar fell against all major foreign currencies, striking levels last seen in the summer and fall of 1984.

In early Frankfurt trading, the dollar tested the key barrier of 3.0 West German marks, dropping to 3.0095 marks from 3.0340 marks late Tuesday. The dollar last traded below the 3.0-mark level in Frankfurt in November 1984.

In London, the British pound rose to a 10-month high of $1.3132, up from $1.2972. Unlike other European currencies, the pound's value is quoted in dollars.

Other midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday included:

—2.51675 Swiss francs, dwon from 2.5507.

—9.1725 French francs, down from 9.2765.

—3.3860 Dutch guilders, down from 3.4275.

—1,920.50 Italian lire, down from 1,939.90.

—1.3620 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3678.

Lower U.S. interest rates make dollar-denominated investments less attractive, and commodities such as gold, which bear no interest, more attractive.

In Hong Kong, gold bullion rose to a bid of $325.32 an ounce from Tuesday's closing level of $319.74.

The precious metal opened strong in Europe, but steadied as the dollar's decline failed to gather momentum in Frankfurt.

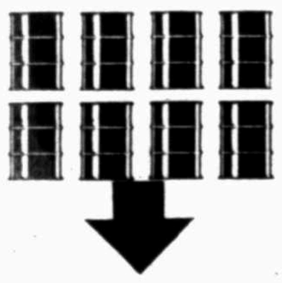

At midmorning, London's five biggest bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of 325.20 an ounce, up from $324.75 late Tuesday.

In Zurich, gold traded at a bid of $325.30, up from $323.50.

Gold had risen in New York late Tuesday to a bid of $327.50, its highest level in two months.

Silver bullion was bid in London early today at $6.42, up from $6.36.

Prime rate drops to 9.5 percent

New York Times News Service

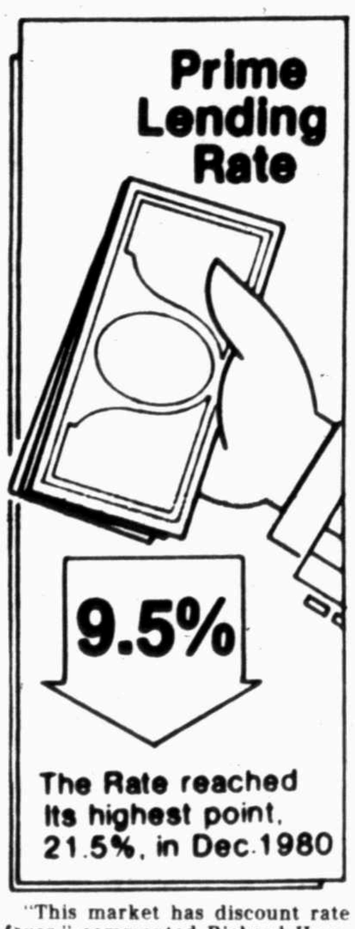

NEW YORK — Short-term interest rates slid sharply Tuesday, further bolstering the market's belief that the Federal Reserve is engineering lower interest rates to reinvigorate the economy.

In a move that confirmed the impact of these lower market interest rates on the cost of funds to banks, a number of major banks lowered their prime lending rates Tuesday to 9½ percent from 10 percent.

That is the prime's lowest level since the fall of 1978 and continues a steady decline that began last September, when it stood at 13 percent. Several economists said that funding had grown so cheap that a 9 percent prime would be justified.

The credit markets were paying closer attention to the rate on Fed funds — excess reserves that banks lend one another overnight. Fed funds traded below 6 percent late Tuesday, in spite of Fed activity early in the day to drain reserves from the system by arranging matched sales when Fed funds were quoted at 6⅞ percent. The average rate for Fed funds Tuesday was about 6.60 percent, compared with 7.25 percent on Monday.

With the Fed's discount rate, what it charges banks for overnight loans, at 7½ percent, the slide in the Fed funds rate was taken as a sign that the rate will be lowered this week. Such cuts are usually announced late Friday. The last cut took effect on May 20, when the Fed knocked one-half point from the rate.

"This market has discount rate fever," commented Richard Hoey, chief economist at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "We had round one last week, and round two was today," he said of the mounting expectations last week and this week that the cut was imminent.

In the market for Treasury securities, the decline was much more pronounced at the short-end. The three-month bill, which was auctioned on Monday at an average rate of 6.73 percent, traded late Tuesday at 6.62 percent bid. The six-month bill fell to 6.78 percent bid from 6.90 percent at Monday's auction.

Yields on longer-term issues fell only slightly. The price of the bellwether 11¼ percent, 30-year bond gained ⅛ point, to 109 11-32ds offered, for a yield of 10.24 percent. The 11¼ percent, 10-year notes gained 3-32ds, to 108 7-32ds, to yield 9.95 percent.

There was a feeling among some analysts that expectations may have raced ahead of appropriate market levels, and that a correction may be in the offing. "Basically, the market right now is tired," said Donald Maude, chief economist of Refco Partners. "A lot of people would welcome a correction. We've had a pretty good run here recently."

"Over the past couple of days," he added, "we're seeing a lot of people on the sidelines. There could be some more room for improvement for long-term yields, but in the short end it is already reflecting a 7 percent discount rate."

For its next major move, the market is watching the economy very closely, according to several analysts. It was reported Tuesday that housing starts declined 14 percent in May from April, a steeper than expected falloff in construction activity. A weaker economy would be likely to bring with it lower interest rates.

But more important to the market will be the "flash" estimate of gross national product growth in the second quarter. That figure will be reported Thursday and the market's near-term prospects are likely to turn on it, according to several analysts.

Unlike some others, Hoey of Drexel Burnham said that he expects the economy to show sharper growth in the second quarter than the weak first quarter, and continued strength in the second half of the year. This could mean higher interest rates.

"All of the conflicting economic data that we've had lately are the classic sign that we are at an inflection point, that the economy is about to change course," he said. "I think that the flash estimate will be about 3 percent, and that it will be revised upwards later."

He said that the Fed's aggressive easing since late last year had already started to stimulate the economy. "We're very near to the turning point, for the economy and interest rates," he commented.

In other news, the Treasury announced late Tuesday that at its mini-refunding next week it will sell $17 billion of notes and bonds. The figures were in line with expectations. The refunding will consist of $6.5 billion in 4-year notes, to be sold on June 25, $6 billion in 7-year notes, to be sold on June 26, and $4.5 billion of 20-year bonds, to be sold on June 27.

May home starts fell 14 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts plunged 14 percent last month, the sharpest drop since March 1984, the government reported today.

The decline to an annual rate of 1.66 million starts left housing starts last month 7 percent below the May 1984 level.

Starts in April had soared to an annual rate of 1.93 million units, a figure revised upward slightly in today's report, which was the highest in more than a year.

Falling mortgage interest rates have stimulated buying activity in both new and existing home sales and analysts expect housing starts to reflect that increased demand in the weeks ahead.

Building permits, for example, a statistic that is a general forerunner to housing starts, were up 3 percent in May to an annual rate of 1.76 million units. That compared with an upwardly revised April rate of 1.7 million units.

Starts declined in both single-family houses and buildings with five or more units. Single-family starts were down 10 percent from April's go-go pace. Buildings with two to four units were up slightly — from an annual rate of 110,000 units to 111,000.

Southwest may pull out of Muse merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for Southwest Airlines has accused Continental Airlines of trying to squelch a merger between Southwest and ailing Muse Air.

Continental has asked the federal Department of Transportation, where the merger awaits approval, to consider the implications for airline competition.

Paul Seligson, a Washington attorney representing Southwest, said the Continental filing is "obviously just a delaying tactic in order to stall the merger — and stalling the merger could kill Muse."

A DOT spokesman said Tuesday that the Continental filing has extended work on the merger and that it is "unlikely" it will be approved this week, a tentative deadline set by Southwest.

Southwest told DOT last week "we had to have a decision by this Friday or we were going to have to consider other actions," including possible withdrawal from the merger, Seligson said.

Muse has $7.1 million in obligations to creditors due by the end of the month, Seligson said. He said Southwest's officers have decided not to loan any more operating money to Muse.

Lamar Muse, chairman and founder of Muse Air, said Tuesday he believes the merger will be completed successfully.

"If we can get a final, favorable order out of the Department of Transportation within the next few days, the merger will go through," Muse said. "If we don't, the merger won't go through, and in that event we've got, like I said before, big problems."

But "we don't oppose the merger," Continental spokesman Mike Cinelli said in Houston.

He said Continental wants DOT to decide whether Continental can use Love Field, an in-town Dallas airport from which flights are restricted to destinations in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico.

The restriction forces larger airlines to use Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, located between Dallas and Fort Worth. Southwest had maintained a virtual lock on use of Love Field until Muse mounted its challenge to Southwest four years ago.

"Until the Love Field Amendment could be resolved, as far as whether or not Continental can fly out of there, we feel the merger betwen Muse and Southwest should be delayed," Cinelli said.

The DOT tentatively approved the merger with the understanding that it would not hurt competition, Cinelli said.

But Seligson said the Department of Justice told DOT last Friday that the issue of competition is moot because the Southwest-Muse merger qualifies for approval under the "failing-company doctrine."

In its merger agreement with Muse, Southwest agreed to stay with the merger plan at least until June 22, Seligson said. Muse stockholders vote on the merger on Thursday.

Consumers may pay leaking tank costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members who wield influence in the drafting of toxic waste cleanup legislation are gaining support for a ¼-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase to help pay the cost of replacing leaking underground petroleum storage tanks.

A foe of the tax hike, Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., says that because of oil industry pricing policies, motorists would end up paying 1 cent more a gallon, with the other ¾ cent becoming a "windfall for somebody."

The House is scheduled to begin considering a bill today that would renew and expand the "Superfund" toxic cleanup program.

The principal advocate of the gas tax, Rep. Billy Tauzin, D-La., acknowledged the proposal would force motorists to help pay the unknown cost of replacing leaking storage tanks at service stations across the nation.

He said — and Florio agreed — that he has the votes to win subcommittee approval of the plan, although he voiced doubt whether it would be accepted by the House's chief arbiter on taxes, the Ways and Means Committee.

The gas tax is contained in a draft Superfund bill being circulated by Tauzin, along with Reps. John Dingell, D-Mich., the chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, and James Broyhill, R-N.C., the committee's ranking Republican.

Underground fuel storage tanks, which the Environmental Protection Agency estimates number about 2 million, are not covered by the present Superfund law, which was enacted in 1980 and expires Sept. 30.

The proposal by Tauzin, whose state and district are economically dependent on the petroleum industry, would create a fund — estimated at $250 million a year from the ¼-cent levy — to clean up leaking tanks.

The money would be used by EPA for emergency cleanups or in cases in which a tank's owner or operator can't be located. Otherwise, EPA could force a tank's current owner or operator to pay the cost.

The Tauzin plan proposes a major departure from Superfund cleanup philosophy. In the case of toxic waste dumps, former owners can be forced to pay all or a share of abatement costs.

150 Odessa Gulf employees transferring to Midland soon

Three Odessa area offices of Gulf Oil Co. will close and 150 Odessa Gulf employees will begin transferring to Midland, July 1, in a consolidation effort to merge Gulf operations into Chevron U.S.A., following the purchase of Gulf by Chevron in 1984, according to a Chevron spokesman.

When transfers are complete Chevron will employ approximately 550 employees at two division offices at ClayDesta Plaza in Midland. About 150 Gulf employees locally are expected to take early retirement, and others will be transferred to Midland from outside the Permian Basin. Bill Edman, of Odessa, will head the Central Division and Jack Goolsby, of Bakersfield, will head the West Texas Division of Chevron. A third division will be formed in Hobbs. A total of 1,000 are expected to be employed at the three division offices, while field operations will remain essentially the same.

Chevron has announced that it will concentrate on exploration in California and Louisiana, while focusing on production and enhanced recovery in the Permian Basin.

Dallas millionaire could be liable for $400 million in debts

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Clint Murchison Jr. may be liable for as much as $400 million in debts and has assets of a little more than $70 million, according to papers filed with the federal bankruptcy court here.

In terms of debt size, Murchison, former co-owner of the Dallas Cowboys, has filed what observers said could be the largest personal bankruptcy case in the history of the North Texas judicial division, if not one of the largest in U.S. history.

Murchison's creditors number nearly 300 and range from individuals — including members of his family — to some of the nation's largest banks.

Richard Holmes, the Dallas partner for the New York-based accounting company of Oppenheim, Appel, Dixon & Co., said the case was the most complex ever handled by the company.

"We had our New York, Houston and Dallas offices all working on it," Holmes said. Preparation of the schedules required several months of full-time effort.

In February, Murchison filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code to forestall a forced liquidation of his assets that had been requested by a group of creditors. He had hoped to reorganize outside bankruptcy court, but his affairs proved too complex.

The document filed Monday is more than 200 pages in length. It was signed by Murchison secretary Ruth Woodard, who is listed as attorney-in-fact.

Murchison suffers from a degenerative nerve disorder that has made signing his name extremely difficult. The disease has left Murchison a physical invalid but reportedly has not affected his mental powers.

Of the $396.7 million in debt documented in the schedules, $114.5 million is secured by specific assets.

Included in the secured debt is an $8.1 million claim by Murchison's four children and their trusts. According to Murchison attorney Philip Palmer Jr., the claim — one of several listed as "disputed" — stems from the children allowing Murchison to use securities they owned as collateral for a loan.

Another $281 million of the total is listed as unsecured, most of it stemming from personal guarantees made by Murchison in the course of his complex business dealings. Personal guarantees account for more than $222 million.

Most of the guarantees were made on behalf of corporate and non-corporate entities in which Murchison had a substantial interest. One of his main conduits for such activity, Topcor, has more than 80 subsidiaries.

The schedules filed Monday list more than 430 partnerships and businesses with which Murchison has been involved during the past six years.

Also included in the unsecured portion are $21.4 million in notes payable and $34.3 million in court judgments against Murchison. A miscellaneous category includes about $51,000 in small debts, most of them personal.

Many of the debts, particularly those arising from Murchison's personal guarantees, are listed as being "contingent."

"They are contingent on other factors," Holmes said. "This is the maximum it could be. But if (the company whose debt Murchison guaranteed) is liquidated in excess of the loan, (Murchison's debt) would be nothing."

Similarly, in cases where Murchison was the co-guarantor of a debt, the full debt, not just his share, was counted as a liability. Holmes said this was done because Murchison could be held fully liable if the co-guarantor defaulted.

"There is a deficiency between Murchison's assets and liabilities," Holmes stressed, "but it's not as vast as the schedules indicate."

Palmer said he "hopes to get rid of $300 million or better" of the financier's debt through liquidation of assets controlled by his various corporate holdings.

Debt not covered by liquidation would, in many instances, become the personal responsibility of Murchison.

the Sweetest Treats of all.

A cookbook entitled "Give Us Your Hungry," with an illustration of the Statue of Liberty, is a culmination of a year-long project of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Spearheaded by cookbook chairman Margaret Abbott, the book is a collection of recipes, household hints and anecdotes from board and staff members, supporters, volunteers and residents of the Center, including efforts of children residents, who provided the sweetest of the book's recipes.

The youngsters' recipes are their versions of how to bake desserts include such things as: "You take a brownie and melt some chocolate over the brownie," and "squirt icing on the cake to make an Easter bunny."

A disclaimer is printed preceding the recipes: "Try at your own risk."

Also included in the book is a collection of recipes and household hints from more "seasoned" cooks.

Ron Hanna, PBCBWTC board member, writes a special note in the cookbook — a note that any single person has probably experienced:

"So, Spunky, you may be alone, but you've decided, nevertheless, to enjoy a fabulous, home-cooked dinner. Now, let's see, a fine roast, a full-bodied red wine, freshest vegetables, a splendid salad with every garnish ever heard of and your favorite dessert — GREAT! Two days later you're sick to death of the leftovers; what the dog doesn't eat, the trash will. How much was wasted, $20, $30, or more????

"Saving leftovers is sensible and prudent; for the bachelor/bachelorette, preparing reasonably sized portions that actually can be eaten with few leftovers is more sensible and more prudent."

The remainder of the note gives suggestions on how to buy, prepare and preserve food for the single person.

The book is a cumulation of 106 hours of work of nine people in a two-month period.

The 1985 cookbook will have its premier sale at the "Most Expensive Little Centennial Picnic in Texas," sponsored by the Center's board, from 7 p.m. to midnight on June 27 at the Midland Center.

The Levee Band and ethnic foods will be featured throughout the evening. Permian Basin artists, including potters, painters and jewelry craftsmen, will exhibit their work.

Each artist has contributed one piece of work for the evening's highlight, an auction which features Saga mink coat, gold, diamond and semi-precious jewelry, a three-wheeler motorcycle, an antique pin-ball machine circa 1940, pre-Courier and Yves Courier prints, antique quilts, 18th Century sterling silver spoons, autographed sports equipment, a woman's silk and linen suit. A silent auction will feature additional items.

The picnic benefits the center's efforts in expanding its facility to shelter families, victims of abuse. In 1984, the center served 161 women, 269 children and answered 608 hotline calls.

The center strives to provide a safe, temporary emergency shelter for women and their children who are victims of family violence, professional counselling to help clients understand their situation and determine their future, social assessment, psychological evaluation and individual treatment planning for all clients. A Children's Prevention Program to help children cope with family violence issues, promote healthy family life through community education on family violence and related problems, address needs of all clients through networking with and referral to other community resources.

After the picnic, the cookbook will be sold for $8.50 at Midland's Centennial on July 4 or from any of the center's volunteers, 683-1300.

DEAR ABBY

14-mile hike is stroll for country kids

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I thought that surely the school bus case was closed, but now I feel compelled to respond to "Saddened Psychologist," who took the parents to task for making their 9- and 11-year-old sons walk 14 miles a day to and from school after they had been kicked off the school bus for misconduct.

Obviously "Saddened" was city-born and never held a job that required physical labor or overtime. What difference is there in walking seven miles to school as punishment and getting up before dawn every day to do farm chores? I'm sure the farm kids of our country are still doing some of the same things I did while growing up on a farm — I fed the chickens (all 3,000 of them), milked cows and cut broccoli in the field for market before sunrise.

And how about the thousands of kids who are up before dawn delivering newspapers, then come home for breakfast before going to school?

"Saddened" felt that a 10-hour day was out of line. Many young people today are so involved in sports, they spend at least four hours outside their school day, either practicing or participating in one sport or another. This requires more energy than walking 14 miles a day — and it's not for only five days, it's for months and years.

I wonder how "Saddened" thinks high school and college students who also happen to hold down full-time jobs manage to make it? — NELL IN LOUISVILLE, KY.

DEAR NELL: If "Saddened" saw my mail, he'd be sadder still. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Saddened Psychologist," who sent you a telegram saying the parents who made their kids walk 14 miles to school and back were guilty of child abuse.

I'm 64, and when I was a kid, not only did I walk 12 miles to school and back, I grew up on a farm and had to milk the cows (by hand yet!) before I went to school. And when I got home I had to milk our cows again and do all sorts of chores before supper. (No TV in those days.)

America is the only country in the world where mothers will drive their kids to the YMCA so they can get some exercise. — JERRY Z. IN WEST BEND, WIS.

DEAR JERRY: Here's another letter from a kid who walked:

DEAR ABBY: I thought you might want to hear from someone on the side of the parents who made their kids walk to school.

I lived a mile from school. My mother drove, but she didn't drive me. She insisted that I walk. My friends' mothers drove them and I thought my mother was being mean by making me walk, so I asked her why she didn't drive me to school. She put her arms around me and said, "If I drive you, how will you learn, and have time to think? Walk, and learn, dear."

Well, I walked, and learned to love the smell of rain in the air and the feel of it on my face. I learned the feeling of snow crunching under my feet. I did a lot of thinking while I walked. It helped me to think things out instead of making quick decisions. I also met some nice people on the way. The lady who gave me a flower for my mother from her garden, the old man who was always waiting by his mailbox for a letter or a card from his children. (None came, but cards for every special occasion did come from me.)

I am 17 now, and I still walk whenever I can because I enjoy it. My mother was right. I learned a lot by walking. — GLAD I WALKED

New Mexico's Pueblo Indian village is one big bakery

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ISLETA PUEBLO, N.M. — As muffled voices echo through the dusty dirt streets of this adobe village, the crisp, daybreak air is alive with the delightful aroma of baking bread.

A centuries-old ritual is taking place in this tiny Indian pueblo — known as the village of the kleo-ron-tie-ba-who-pan (women who bake bread) in the Isleta Indians' native Tiwa tongue.

By time-honored tradition, nearly every household in New Mexico's 19 Pueblo Indian villages has a mud orno — a beehive-shaped oven that is used to produce the family's bread and occasional loaves for sale. But nowhere is bread produced and sold on the scale it is in Isleta.

For the village of Isleta, population 3,000, bread is the mainstay of the local economy.

The bread makers start a fire of cottonwood branches about 6 a.m. on the oven's lava-rock floor. After the fire burns for about an hour the coals are swept out.

Then the tins containing the loaves of bread are placed inside the oven with a long paddle. In less than an hour the bread is done. The steamy, hot bread is retrieved with the paddle.

Vegetable soup good all year

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

VEGETABLE AND BARLEY SOUP

2½ pounds (about) sliced lamb neck
2½ quarts water
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
½ cup pearl barley
1 large rib celery, thinly sliced
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
3 slender medium-size carrots, thinly sliced
Salt & pepper to taste

In a large saucepan bring to a boil the lamb, water and garlic; simmer, covered, for 1 hour. Add barley, celery and onion; simmer 1 hour longer. Add carrots. Continue simmering until carrots are tender — about 20 minutes. Remove lamb; cut meat from bones, dice and add to soup. Refrigerate covered until fat hardens on top. Remove fat; reheat, adding salt and pepper. Makes about 2 quarts.

'Light' beverages are heavily artifical

By VINOD CHHABRA
Hearst News Service

This "light" business has gone too far. From a sensible beginning it has swiftly degenerated to the ridiculous.

It all began with the fitness kick: Exercise more and watch what you eat. The message was simple and direct — too simple and direct to make sense.

So big business stepped in.

First, it was beer.

American beer was wimpish to begin with, and just when there were signs it would get better, some bozo decided the way to spur sagging sales was to water it down even more and call it "light."

Now, it has slipped even lower. Some enterprising chap figured if "light" beer was such a smash, a "lighter" beer would go down even better. So he knocked out all the alcohol — the very marrow of the beer — and is marketing it as the ultimate: the beerless-beer.

Wine has come in for even rougher handling. First, junk wine sold in jugs. Improve it? Heck, no. Just water it down and push it as "light" wine. From that phony level, "wine" branched out to the the putrid — the wine cooler: fruit-flavored soda pop with a drop of alcohol.

From there, we have arrived at — you guessed it — no-alcohol, non-wine "wine," the latest beverage.

Meanwhile, "light" veal cordon bleu, "light" taco dinners, "light" pancake syrup, "light" fast food, even "light" doughnuts began pouring out of our food factories.

What next? Phony cocktails. That's right, junk. They're called "Mocktails" — and they're worth mocking.

A flashy press release is informing food editors all over the nation that "Equal Mocktails — non-alcoholic, calorie-reduced drinks — are just as delicious as their traditional counterparts." The press release adds, these Mocktails are good for us "for health and fitness reasons."

But the underlying message is clear: Buy Nutrasweet, Equal Inc.'s artificial sweetener. Back in 1965, this substitute for sugar and saccharin was discovered quite by accident by a chemist working on a drug to treat peptic ulcers.

Its recommended "mocktails" come with cutesy names — Frozen Mockrita, Tommy Collins, Strawberry Not-A-Colada. And, in the opinion of the folks at Equal, these cocktails "look as good as they taste."

Here's an example:

To serve "British Pimms Cup," all you have to do is stir together ½-cup club soda, ½-teaspoon lemon juice, ½-teaspoon lime juice, ½-teaspoon brandy extract, one to two dashes bitters, one to two packets Equal, two slices each lime, orange, lemon and four slices of banana. Then plop two whole fresh strawberries on top and — oh, yes, don't forget to throw in a slice of cucumber.

Cucumber? That's right. "The cucumber," the recipe states, makes this dandy drink "truly British."

Sure. Next time give your whiskey sour the all-American touch by tossing in a hot dog. Want it to make it "truly" Irish or Italian? No problem: Substitute potatoes and garlic.

Twenty-eight such "luscious and creative drinks" are listed in the "Equal Mocktails" recipe booklet — and if you think nobody's fool enough to spring for it, ask the folks at Equal. They claim 500,000 consumers have shelled out $1 apiece on "Equal's" first two recipe booklets, and expect an even better response to the 20-page "Mocktails."

Don't get me wrong. Not everyone can handle liquor or, for that matter, sugar or salt, and the reduced consumption of all is heartening.

But in the name of moderation and excellence, we're increasingly being led to phony, expensive substitutes laden with chemicals.

Either you can handle the real thing or you can't. And if you can't, why feel compelled to settle for a phony?

Free adventures in food available through mail

By JUDITH HARLAN
Copley News Service

Some people will try anything — once. You'll see these people in restaurants ordering bizarre combinations of cream sauces and exotic sea animals — admirable and adventurous. But most of us are a little more discriminating. We like to try things out a nibble at a time, preferably in the privacy of our own home. And for us Freebies Magazine has located some unusual recipes and seasonings.

— If you're ready to try some new flavors, here's an offer that caters to you. It includes three seasonings, each of which comes in a little plastic packet.

The first, called "Spike" seasoning, is composed of 39 blended herbs, vegetables and non-irritating exotic spices with earth and sea salt crystals added. Among its varied ingredients are: Pacific sea greens, Indian curry, horseradish, summer savory, rosehips and saffron.

Second is "Vege-Sal," an all-natural blend that combines salt with 14 of California's choicest, fresh-dried leaf and root vegetables. Use in place of ordinary table salt to add fresh zest to your everyday meals.

For those who are watching their salt intake, the third packet contains "Vegit," a low-sodium vegetable seasoning. It's an original combination of natural herbs and vegetables and includes a special high-flavor yeast (grown on blackstrap molasses) and hydrolized protein from soya beans.

Directions: Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ask For: Samples of Spike, Vege-Sal and Vegit.

Mail To: Modern Products Inc., Department F, P.O. Box 09398, Milwaukee, WI 53209.

— Here's an unusual edible that could become a new favorite — the sunchoke. It's high in iron and vitamin B, low in calories and it's a tuber.

Uncle Andy's Sunchokes recipe flyer will provide you with some ideas to get you started, such as "Sour Cream Scalloped Sunchokes and Ham," "Slow Cook Pot Roast with Sunchokes" and "High Fiber Sunchoke Vegetable Soup." It will even tell you how to make "Sunchoke Chips" to serve as a delicious side dish or snack.

Directions: Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ask For: Sunchoke Booklet.

Mail To: Sampler Cookbook, Uncle Andy's Sunchokes, P.O. Box 717, Platte, SD 57369.

Microwave cools summer cooking

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

What do you do on those sultry summer nights when the thought of slaving over a hot stove is about as appealing as walking over hot coals?

Steer clear of the conventional oven, and shun the stove top. They'll only heat up the house, and you with it.

Instead, turn to that charmingly cool-cooking appliance on your countertop, and microwave an easy meal that won't leave you all steamed up.

For a tasty main dish, try Double Cheese Eggplant Bake, a savory blend of ground beef, eggplant, and Parmesan and mozzarella cheeses. Once assembled, you just pop it in the microwave to cool-cook for about 20 minutes while you toss a light salad and sip something tall and icy.

Elegant Chocolate Almond Mousse takes only minutes to put together. Prepare several hours ahead of time, or make it the night before and simply refrigerate until serving time.

Remember to put mixing bowl and beaters in the freezer to chill, so that whipped cream will beat high and fluffy.

This dessert is light in texture, but rich in calories, so serve in small portions and savor every cool, creamy bite.

DOUBLE CHEESE EGGPLANT BAKE

½ lb. lean ground beef
1 small onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 medium-size (1½ lb.) eggplant
1 (15 oz.) can tomato sauce
⅔ cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 tbsps. olive oil
½ tsp. ground oregano
½ tsp. leaf basil
¼ tsp. garlic salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese

Crumble beef into 1-quart glass casserole. Add onion and garlic. Cover and microwave 4 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes. Drain off fat, set aside.

Wash and peel eggplant, trim ends and cut in ¼-inch slices. Set aside.

Combine remaining ingredients, except mozzarella, in 1-quart glass mixing bowl, stirring to blend well. Spread ⅔-cup of mixture over bottom of 13x9x2-inch glass baking dish.

Sprinkle beef evenly over top, then make two more layers of eggplant, topping each with equal amounts of remaining tomato sauce.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND MOUSSE

½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup cocoa
1 cup powdered sugar
5 eggs, at room temperature, separated
1 tsp. vanilla extract
¼ tsp. almond extract
½ cup heavy cream
2 tbsps. powdered sugar
Several drops orange flower water (optional)
¼ cup slivered almonds

Place butter in small glass mixing bowl and microwave until melted. Stir in cocoa and beat until thoroughly blended and smooth.

Add powdered sugar and beat until creamy. Microwave 20 to 30 seconds, or until mixture is semi-runny. Then beat in egg yolks, one at a time. Set aside.

Beat egg whites until very stiff, then beat in vanilla and almond extracts. Gradually fold beaten egg whites into chocolate mixture, blending well.

Turn mixture into six small serving dishes and chill at least 2 hours, or overnight.

When almost ready to serve, beat heavy cream in chilled mixing bowl, with chilled beaters, adding powdered sugar and orange flower water, if desired.

Serve individual dishes topped with small dollops of whipped cream and sprinkling of slivered almonds.

Serves 6.

These recipes are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Experts assess Cabernet wines with 'flights of fancy'

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

The 1974 harvest in California's Napa and Sonoma counties was ideal for the growing of Cabernet Sauvignon, and when the wines were released, people used every sort of glowing adjective to describe them.

Now these wines are 10 years old, and it is time to assess them, so an event was held involving 12 experienced wine judges. The wines were served in four flights. Here are the results by vote (with alcohol content listed in parentheses):

— Flight 1:

1. Tie between Simi Reserve, Alexander Valley (13.0 percent) and Sterling Reserve, Napa Valley (12.0). The Simi was youthful, fresh and lively, though not very complex. The Sterling was impressive — rich, round, ripe flavors, but the high level of tannin remaining was bothersome. The judges felt both would improve for three to five years.

3. Burgess, Napa Valley (12.9): This tasted slightly older and ready to drink compared with the Burgess Vintage Selection tasted in flight 3. A minty quality was appealing. Drink now.

— Flight 2:

1. Freemark Abbey, Napa Valley, Bosche Vineyard (13.2): Lighter with simpler fruit tones, but youthful; shows potential to improve for a few years.

2. Robert Mondavi Reserve (magnum) (13.0): This is the same wine as the one that finished fifth in the first flight, but poured from a magnum. The cedary, leathery, olive tones were clearly more impressive here than the same wine from a 750-milliliter bottle. Elegant and well preserved. Consume within five years.

3. Tie between Clos du Val, Napa Valley (12.8) and Chateau Montelena, Sonoma (13.2): The Clos du Val was lighter than many of the wines here, but had ample fruit, and a slight cinnamon tone. Drink soon. The Chateau Montelena was my No. 1 wine of the flight, a lighter, classic, balanced wine with a silky finish.

— Flight 3:

1. Heitz, Napa Valley, Martha's Vineyard (13.0): An absolute classic. This minty-herbal gem is still youthful in aroma and taste, with cedar/vanilla hints and perfect fruit and structure in the mouth. A glorious experience, and clearly one of the finest wines of the vintage.

2. Pope Valley, Napa and Sonoma (12.0): An amazing find, since the wine originally sold for $3.75. Smooth, aromatic wine that reminded me of pipe tobacco, with a toasty vanilla/chocolate complexity. Not much acidity left, but an immensely pleasing wine.

— Flight 4:

1. Tie among Chateau St. Jean, Sonoma County (13.0), Sterling, Napa Valley (12.5), and Stag's Leap Wine Cellars, Stag's Leap Vineyards (13.0): The first red wine made by Chateau St. Jean was from grapes in the Laurel Glen vineyard. It is rich, full and complex. Very attractive. Sterling's "regular" bottling is the equal of the far more expensive Sterling Reserve.

Sense of smell vital for food enjoyment

Asociated Press

What we smell may contribute more to enjoying foods than what we taste, according to Dr. Dee Graham of Del Monte. "Although taste sensations seem endless, we are limited to sweet, sour, bitter and salty flavors," he says.

Bar cookies are tasty snack

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SNACKTIME FARE
Bar Cookies & Milk

BAR COOKIES
14-ounce can condensed milk
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
2 tablespoons molasses
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup finely crushed honey-graham cracker crumbs
1 cup finely crushed ginger snap crumbs
1 cup chopped (medium fine) walnuts

Line a 9-inch square baking pan with wax paper; grease paper.

In a medium bowl stir together condensed milk, corn syrup, molasses and vanilla until blended. Add graham cracker crumbs, ginger snap crumbs and walnuts; stir well to distribute evenly.

Turn into prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 350-F. oven until edges leave sides of pan — 20 minutes. (A cake tester inserted in center will not come out clean.) Run a small metal spatula around sides of pan and turn out on a wire rack; strip off wax paper; with another rack, turn right side up.

Cool partly, but while still warm, place on cutting board and cut into bars.

Vegetable casserole perfect for summer entertaining

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE
4 medium potatoes (1¼ pounds), peeled and thinly sliced
2 medium (each 4 ounces) onions, peeled and thinly sliced
4 small yellow straight neck squash (1¼ pounds), unpeeled and thinly sliced
¼-pound stick butter, cut in thin pats
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup sour cream

In a buttered shallow 2½-quart oven-broiler-server layer half the potatoes, onions and squash, dotting each layer with butter and sprinkling with salt and pepper. Repeat layers. Cover tightly and bake in a preheated 350-F. oven until potatoes are tender — 1 hour and 45 minutes. Mix Parmesan and sour cream and spread over top. Broil 6 to 8 inches from high heat until partly browned — 3 to 5 minutes. When serving, spoon butter at bottom of dish over each portion. Makes 8 to 10 servings. (Repeated on request.)

Larry Hughes of Hearst's William Morrow & Co. had the creative idea to put together the team that's batting 1.000.

J. Lawrence Hughes
President, Hearst Trade Book Group

Richard Gelfman
Investigative Reporter, WBAL-TV, Baltimore

© 1985 Hearst Corporation

Dick Gelfman of Hearst's WBAL-TV in Baltimore had the creative idea to put together a news series that helped strike out illegal mortgage brokers.

The 13,000 people who work at The Hearst Corporation are all, of course, very different.

But, in one important respect, they're all the same.

They all think of themselves as creative people. People who know that it is their creative ideas that have made us one of the largest and, we think, one of the best communications companies in the world. A company that has more than tripled in size in the past ten years.

Larry Hughes' creative idea of assembling a unique team of book editors has resulted in at least one Morrow title, and sometimes many more, appearing on a New York Times Best Seller List every week for the past five years. Best-sellers like The Cider House Rules by John Irving, If Tomorrow Comes by Sidney Sheldon and The One Minute Manager.

Dick Gelfman's creative idea was to uncover illegal and deceptive lending practices of some mortgage brokers in Maryland. His three-month investigative news series "Between The Loans" encouraged the Maryland State Legislature to pass several new laws and saved dozens of homes from foreclosure.

We at Hearst know that, as long as our people keep thinking, our company will keep growing.

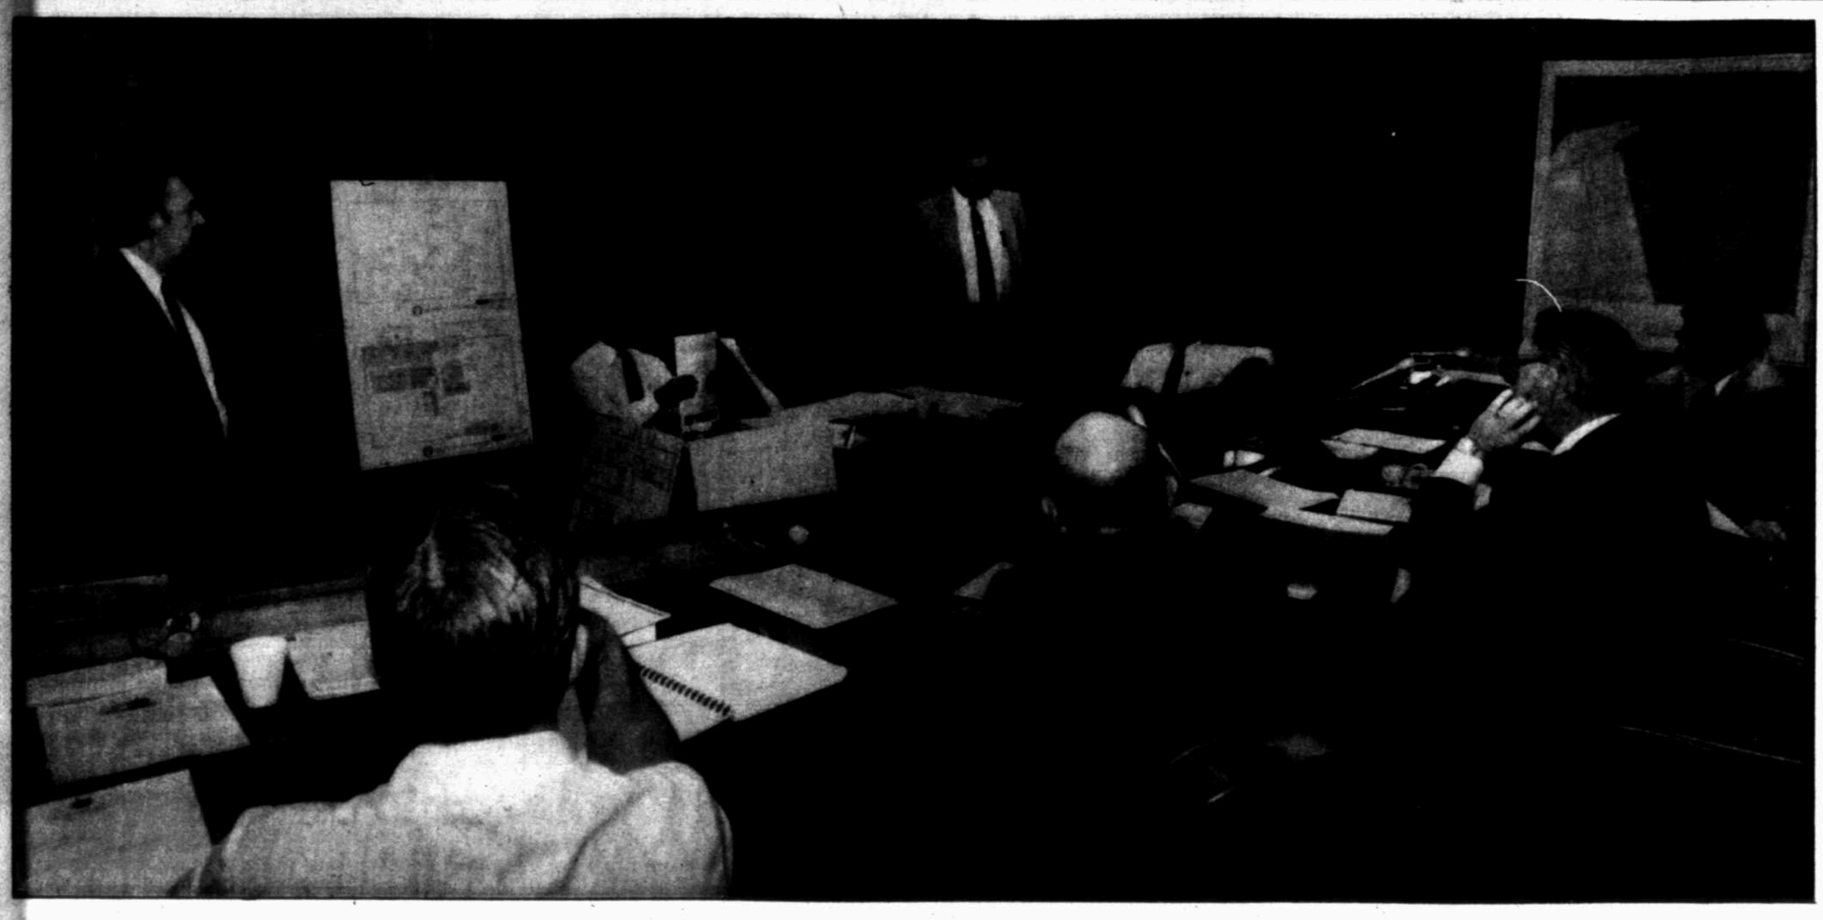

The Hearst Corporation

Good creative ideas that make good business sense.™

County commissioners accept joint jail-bond bid

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioners on Tuesday selected a joint jail-bond bid by ClayDesta National Bank of Midland and FinSer Investment Co. of San Antonio in finding buyers for $3 million in general obligation bonds.

Most of the funds, up to $2.4 million, will be used to revovate the Midland County Jail on the fifth floor of the downtown courthouse.

ClayDesta and FinSer submitted the lowest bid of 6.3778 percent, which will convert to $701,243.75 in interest which the county must pay ClayDesta and FinSer along with the principal over a five-year payback period.

Altogether, nine bidders, including banks, brokerage houses and investment companies, had submitted competitive bids for the Midland County bonds.

"We've got some extraordinary bids today," Joe Liberty, the county's financial adviser, told the commissioners on Tuesday. "Midland County has a very high quality credit."

The difference between the lowest bid and the highest bid was $34,506.25 or 0.3139 percent.

The second lowest bid and closest to edging out the ClayDesta-FinSer offering was by First City National Bank of Houston, which tendered an interest rate on the payback at 6.3933 percent or $702,940 in interest.

Other bidders and their bids were RepublicBank Dallas, 6.4052 percent or $704,258.75 in interest; M Bank Capital Markets, 6.4574 percent or $709,987.50; Howard Weil Labouisse Friedrichs Inc., 6.4674 percent or $711,089.40; Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc., 6.5221 percent or $717,106.55; InterFirst Bank Dallas, 6.5699 percent or $722,366.55; Clayton Brown Associates, 6.6420 percent or $730,290; and Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., 6.6917 percent or $735,750.

ClayDesta President David Jones said the bank was "tickled to death" over the winning bid submitted by ClayDesta and FinSer.

"Midland County, from our standpoint, is awfully good credit," Jones said. "And we're happy to have the bonds for our account...We need more loans; we're so liquid. But I guess in this day and time, that's not a bad situation...

"The market really is in good shape," he said. "We're tickled to death to have a clean, solid portfolio and able to look forward and not have to look back. That's an advantage."

ClayDesta is a registered municipal bond dealer.

FinSer President Richard Chafey in a telephone interview from his San Antonio office complimented the county commissioners for their "good judgment" in opting for the five-year payback rather than for the optional 15-year alternative.

"Since interest rates have fallen precipitously over the last six months," Chafey said, "investor demand for short-term fixed income securities has been extremely strong for quality issues such as Midland County.

"I believe the county commissioners showed extremely good judgment in opting for the five-year payback versus the 15-year alternative in determining the lowest possible financing cost for the taxpayers of Midland County."

The commissioners were unanimous in selecting ClayDesta and FinSer, which is an acronym for "financial services."

Commissioner Wally Craig noted that the Commissioners' Court can start preparing to fund projects within renovation, which is to be completed in late 1986.

Meanwhile, the commissioners are studying renovation plans submitted by jail architects Walter Pate and James Riggen. In addition, they are into a budget study for 1986.

Low response scraps AIDS screening

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A program to detect exposure to the Acquired Immuno-Deficiency Syndrome virus, will be scrapped prematurely, said Midland Health Department spokesman, Jim Davis, unless a "significant response is seen."

"Due to a lack of interest, the program will terminate the end of June instead of July 26 as originally scheduled," said Davis. "At $100 per test, I felt it was an unnecessary use of public money. I just can't see spending it."

Response to the program, offered in most major cities throughout the state, has been poor, he said.

"As of June 5, there were only 50 samples submitted statewide," said Davis. "In the West Texas area, which sends all its samples to El Paso for examination, Midland had five samples."

Davis stated that Midland comprised 50 percent of all AIDS samples sent to El Paso.

"It's public apathy and a lot of misunderstanding about what the test results mean," he said. "And a lot of it is fear. Let's face it. We're dealing with a disease that has a mortality rate of 50 percent. People don't want to know."

The biggest problem is misconceptions about a positive showing on the test, said Davis.

"People think that if they test positive, that they have AIDS," he said. "That's not true. If they find out early enough, they can take certain precautions to help prevent them from getting the disease."

"If you take 100 people who test positive, only one will develop AIDS," he said.

Davis suggested that the small turnout does not accurately reflect the true numbers of those who could be infected with the virus.

"I know there's gays, bisexuals and intravenous drug abusers out there," he said. "I'm really sorry about how the program is ending, because here we have a program with no charge that is confidential and that offers counseling for anyone who tests positive and no one is taking advantage of it."

Davis also suggested that just because someone is high-risk group member doesn't necessarily mean they will contract AIDS.

"The disease has been associated with repeated exposure and intake of body fluids," he said. "In the bath houses in larger cities like Dallas, Houston or New Orleans, it's not unusual for a gay individual to have sex with up to 10 other persons. But if they limit it to one person, their chances are better against getting the virus."

Ector County Health Department announced that they will also be shutting down their AIDS program earlier than scheduled.

"We just haven't had the response," said director Toby Cross. "Unless we get a significant response, we'll be ending the program June 26."

Ector County originally planned to run the AIDS program through July 24.

In Midland, the AIDS virus tests are given at the Midland Health Department, 501 Andrews Highway, 5:30 to 8:30 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays.

ECISD considers teacher appeals

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ector County School District Board of Trustees will meet Monday in special session to consider appeals from 12 employees regarding career ladder placements.

The special meeting was announced by board president Sam Gipson following a lengthy session in which several Austin Elementary School teachers and a teacher association representative from Houston, E. Rea Sealy, protested job evaluations that have prevented career ladder advancements.

Six Austin elementary teachers contended they had been arbitrarily and capriciously deprived of their rights by an evaluator at the school who, they claimed, violated ECISD evaluation procedures.

Sealy, a representative of the Texas State Teachers Association, who said he was representing a group of Austin Elementary teachers, claimed teachers at the school, through arbitrary, capricious, or bad faith procedures, had been denied rights extended to teachers at other ECISD schools.

He informed the board it could intervene and establish fair play or face the possibility of court action to resolve what he contended were inequities that have prevented career ladder advancement for some teachers.

Gipson, before allowing Sealy to address the board, said that as far as the board was concerned Sealy would be speaking only for himself and not any ECISD employees, since the board had not been notified he was officially representing anyone else.

John T. Duncan, an Austin fifth grade teacher, outlined teacher grievances in a letter dated June 10 to Superintendent Bill Holm.

Seeking to appear before board members as a faculty representative, Duncan stated, "The Ector County I.S.D. evaluation procedure was violated at Austin Elementary each school year, 1981-1984. It is the violation of procedure, not the content of individual personnel evaluations, that we are grieving," said Duncan.

Mary Jo Schultz, an Austin second grade teacher, told board members she has been advanced on the career ladder, as have several other teachers at the school, but that her present "position does not mitigate years of inequity."

Austin fifth grade teacher Sara Mazur told board members her evaluation had been "down rated" for what was described as a "hygiene" reason. When she asked the evaluator if that referred to her personally, she said the evaluator told her no, that there was "an odor in her classroom." In spite of her protest that she was maintaining an overcrowded classroom, she said, the Austin evaluator said she would have no opportunity for denial and her evaluation would not be changed.

Attempted-murder trial testimony continues

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Testimony continued this morning in the 244th District Court attempted capital murder trial of a 17-year-old former Permian High School student accused of raping and trying to kill the 60-year-old wife of a former Odessa police chief.

District Judge Joe Connally recessed the trial of Robert Earl Horton late Tuesday afternoon after District Attorney Eric Augesen had called eight witnesses to testify concerning the Nov. 2, 1984, attack on Marion L. Tomlin, which left her critically injured and hospitalized.

Longtime neighbor Boyce Allen, who lived next door to the Tomlins at 1632 Everglade, testified Mrs. Tomlin called just before 7 p.m. Nov. 2 and asked for help.

Allen said when he and his wife, Marsa, entered the Tomlin home "it looked kind of gruesome." There was blood on the floor, and a broken chair and furniture out of place, said Allen.

Allen testified that after finding Mrs. Tomlin "had been beat up pretty bad," he and his wife called for an ambulance.

Questioning other witnesses, Augesen attempted to place Horton in the vicinity of the Tomlin's 1634 Everglade home.

Three witnesses, two Permian High students and a young woman, testified they saw a young man wearing distinctively bleached blue jeans within a block of the Tomlin home in the early evening hours of Nov. 2.

Bryan Phillips, 17, a PHS junior, and sophomore Dusty Ray Hair each testified they had seen Horton in bleached jeans at school that day.

Sandra Connell, 3807 Walnut, said she was driving in the area and saw a youth with the word "Mojo" bleached into the front of the young man's blue jean legs.

Prosecutors Tuesday afternoon also called the fireman-paramedic who gave Mrs. Tomlin emergency treatment before she was transported to Medical Center Hospital.

Also called to testify were two Odessa police identification officers who gathered evidence and photographed Mrs. Tomlin's injuries.

Michael Corbin, 3208 Thomas, was holding a piece of plywood-like wood paneling when a gust of wind caught it and blew him out of the pickup bed about 12:30 p.m. in the 3900 block of Holiday Hill Road.

The Corbin boy had been staying with his uncle, Donald Cole, who was driving the pickup, police said. No charges have been filed against Cole.

A 5-year-old Midland boy injured Monday night while riding his bicycle was listed in serious condition this morning, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Polled Midlanders split on use of force in hostage crisis

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Americans can no longer speak of "the Hostage Crisis" as if there had only been one. For the second time in six years, fundamentalist Shiite Islamic terrorists have kidnapped a large group of U.S. citizens, and as before, the country is torn between its desire to punish the terrorists and its hopes of getting the hostages back alive.

The frustration was expressed Tuesday night by President Reagan, who told reporters he had "pounded a few walls" over the crisis, but that the only possible response is "to wait it out." Like President Carter during the Iranian hostage crisis, Reagan wants to take action, but doesn't want to risk the lives of the 40 hostages, and that ambivalence was reflected by a group of Midlanders polled Tuesday on the subject by the Reporter-Telegram.

Of the 13 polled, six thought force should be used to try to free the hostages, but seven urged restraint, at least until the hostages have been freed.

"I think they should have tried to do something," said Ina Friday, 3210 Park Lane, who owns a welding business with her husband.

"I think it's about time they used force," said Mike Taylor, 1902 Ward, a mail clerk. "We just keep taking it, it seems."

Ina Friday

Mike Taylor

Gene Norris

Josue Saldiva

Eventually the U.S. will have to use force, Taylor said, "So why not start now?"

But Gene Norris Sr., P.O. Box 90421, wants to stick with negotiations for a little while longer.

"We ought to work with it awhile," said the janitorial-service owner, and Josue Saldiva, 300 S. Baird, a minister, agreed that Reagan should wait until negotiations are over before considering the use of force.

"We don't want to start another war," he said. "We don't want to play the same game they are playing with us."

The theme of retaliation after negotiation was echoed by several Midlanders.

"There should be some retaliatory action," said Harry Morris, 2929 Morris, an accountant, who added that he wanted the hostages safely home first. And Pattee Hollgren, 4312 Trevino, a secretary, wanted to avoid "running the risk of more of them getting killed," but once the hostages are safe, "Then we should definitely take action."

Pablo Salas, a teacher who lives on County Road 1083 South, feels that using force would doom the hostages because the terrorists "don't have anything to lose (and) they don't mind killing people."

But Art Medrano, West Highway 80, thinks it's time to take a stand against the terrorists even at the risk of the hostages' lives.

"The longer we wait, the worse it's going to get," he said. Referring to the terrorists' demands that Israel release 700 prisoners, Medrano said that "will just multiply the danger seven-hundred-fold," because the released prisoners will go out and endanger more people. But Medrano admits it's a hard decision:

"If my dad was on that plane, I'd feel just like anybody else."

Second suspect sought in Pizza Inn robbery

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 19-year-old Odessa man remained in the Ector County jail today on a charge of aggravated robbery in lieu of $15,000 bond and a second suspect was still being sought by police in connection with the early Sunday robbery of the Pizza Inn, 2120 Andrews Highway.

William Joe Seaman, 4330 N. Grandview, Apt. 1108, was arraigned late Tuesday morning before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on the charge.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, 16-year-old Pizza Inn employee Cesar Raul Jacob told investigating officers he was counting money and another employee had been emptying trash behind the restaurant when a man grabbed the other employee by the hair of the head, placed a knife against his throat and demanded money. Jacob said he gave the man $837.

The robber was described as wearing a nylon stocking over his head and face. McAhon said detectives managed to identify two suspects and Seaman was arrested, while the second suspect was still being sought late Tuesday.

Animal Walk set

From Staff Reports

An entourage of exotic performing animal talent, bearing trunks, tusks, tails, hooves and humps will march through the streets of Midland on Monday, thus heralding the arrival of the Ringling Bros. Circus Centennial Edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which will present four performances at the Chaparral Center, Tuesday through Wednesday.

But before the Ringmaster can blow his whistle and welcome children of all ages to "The Greatest Show on Earth," all the elephants, llamas, horses, camels, and zebras must first get to the arena. Everyone in town is invited to see it happen, as the circus stages its traditional Animal Walk from the train depot on Front Street.

The subjects of all this human scrutiny will be aboard the silver-crisp 43-car Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus train when it pulls into the train station at the intersection of Front and Main at its scheduled arrival time of late afternoon (3-5 p.m.) on Monday. The animals will be unloaded at approximately 6 p.m., and will begin the Animal Walk at approximately 6:30, proceeding north on Main Street. The route then will proceed left on Wadley Ave. to the Chaparral Center.

The public is invited.

Plenty of circus tickets are available. The Chaparral Center will open every day 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday.

Esta Lee Lawrence, another Austin fifth grade teacher, said teachers at the school had been subjected to threats and intimidation regarding their evaluations. When they asked the evaluator about the possibility of transferring to another school, teachers were told they could seek transfers but would probably wind up unemployed.

Austin fourth grade teacher C. Voncile Strait, who told board members she was speaking for herself and "other colleagues," said the evaluator was once asked during a faculty meeting how teachers might achieve an excellent evaluation that would allow them to advance on the career ladder.

She quoted the evaluator as replying the teachers should "learn to walk on water."

Duncan, who later said the evaluator in question is no longer at Austin Elementary School and that teachers would not change their present evaluator for anyone else, told board members that 20 Austin teachers possess combined teaching experience of more than 400 years.

The Austin teachers are asking the board of trustees to disregard evaluations made between the years 1981 and 1984. Failing that, Duncan suggested, teachers may have no alternative but to seek equity through a class action lawsuit.

"All teachers want is to be treated fairly, as they have tried to be to students all these years," Duncan said.

ACCIDENTS

John Levi Squyres, 4502 Leddy, was riding his bicycle north on Leddy about 8 p.m. Monday when he apparently failed to yield the right of way at Midland Drive and was struck by a 1973 Chevy pickup driven by Lindell Scott Carson, 312 Willowood, reports said.

In other reports, a house at 1414½ Washington was damaged by a fire apparently caused by children playing with matches.

A living-room couch ignited about 2:40 p.m. Tuesday and caused heavy damage to the living room and heavy smoke damage throughout the home, according to fire reports. The owner of the house had not been identified by press time.

Ruben Garza, 1102 S. McKenzie, reported the loss of $1,062 worth of equipment and tools from a construction site at 125 Ridge Drive. Taken from a garage was a $580 air compressor; a $243 power saw and $240 worth of tools, reports said.

Twin Oaks Grocery on Cottonflat Road reported a Monday burglary in which $49 worth of beer and soft drinks were taken and $500 damage was done to a store window, according to reports.

The City of Midland Service Center, 500 N. Carver, reported the loss of a $300 telephone pager. It was taken from foreman Mel Coats' desk on Monday, reports said.

Mike Doan reported a burglary at his brother's home, 506 S. Bentwood, which apparently occurred sometime between Thursday and Tuesday. Taken were a $550 videotape recorder, a $280 television, and a $150 cassette-radio, reports said.

A $400 stereo was reported taken from a 1980 VW pickup parked at 407 W. Dengar. S. Daniel Chick told police the burglay occurred between 5 a.m. and 5:45 a.m. this morning.

Loitering law takes aim at prostitution

AUSTIN (AP) — It may soon become illegal for a prostitute to stand on an Austin street corner and wave at passing motorists.

A proposed law will be presented to the City Council Thursday aimed at stopping loitering in a public place, including a street, for the purpose of inducing, soliciting, or procuring prostitution.

The ordinance would give police another weapon against prostitution. A recent crackdown on prostitution has all but eliminated problems with prostitution on South Congress Avenue.

Officers made 40 arrests in the first two days of the crackdown last April, but had to resort to undercover police officers to obtain proof of solicitation.

"At present, an agreement to commit an act of prostitution must be reached before police officers can take action to remove prostitutes," City Manager Jorge Carrasco said.

> "This ordinance makes it an offense for a person to loiter in a public place for the purpose of inducing, enticing, soliciting, or procuring another to commit an act of prostitution or to patronize a prostitute."
> — Austin City Manager Jorge Carrasco

"This ordinance makes it an offense for a person to loiter in a public place for the purpose of inducing, enticing, soliciting, or procuring another to commit an act of prostitution or to patronize a prostitute," Carrasco said.

The law states that the conduct of a suspect, including waving of arms or other bodily gestures, may be used by police as proof of a person's intent to engage in prostitution.

Police may make an arrest if they observe a person repeatedly stopping or attempting to stop passers-by or motor vehicles or engaging in conversation with passers-by.

The ordinance is modeled after similar laws in Dallas, Fort Worth, Waco, and San Antonio, and has been found constitutional by courts in other states, said police legal adviser Glenn Williams.

"There has to be some showing that loitering was with the intent to engage in prostitution," Williams said. "Hailing down a car is not enough, but if a woman dresses suggestively and she is hailing down cars, I think that would be enough to convince a jury."

Violation of the law would be a Class C misdemeanor and punishable by a $200 fine.

The proposed law is a response to repeated complaints from residents about prostitutes operating openly on city streets, Williams said.

MURDER

During a pretrial hearing Monday, Connally refused to suppress a statement Horton gave police investigators following his arrest in the early morning hours of Nov. 6, 1984.

Horton allegedly forced his way into the Tomlin home while Jack Tomlin was out of town, sexually assaulted Mrs. Tomlin, demanded money and, when she told him she didn't have any, beat, kicked and stabbed her with a pair of scissors.

Horton is being represented by court-appointed attorneys Richard Alvarado and Allen Stroder.

Woman fined in prostitution case

From Staff Reports

A 57-year-old Odessa woman pleaded guilty to aggravated promotion of prostitution Tuesday and was sentenced to five years probation and a $5,000 fine.

Vonceil Briscoe Monahan was arrested Feb. 13 as she left the Relaxation Center, 9321 E. Highway 80, a massage parlor located near the county line. Also arrested that day on the same charge was 53-year-old Jessie Howk Burks, who was later granted immunity in return for her testimony against Ms. Monahan.

"She was the target," said Midland District Attorney Al Schorre of Ms. Monahan, who was also accused of running another "massage parlor" bordello in Odessa. The Ector County charges against her were dropped as part of the plea-bargain agreement, according to David Smith, her attorney.

"We agreed to this (probation) because of her age and because she's been in very poor health," Schorre said. Though his policy is to deny probation plea-bargain agreements with first-degree felony suspects, repeat offenders and those accused of trafficking in "hard" drugs, Schorre said Ms. Monahan didn't fit into those categories.

"We've restricted the use of plea negotiations," he said. "But obviously you've got to have plea bargains to make the system work. (In this case), we felt that was adequate protection for the public."

Ms. Monahan's arrest followed a lengthy undercover investigation by the Midland County Sheriff's Office, the DA's Office, the Midland Police Department and the Department of Public Safety. Putting her out of business eliminated the last known organized prostitution ring in Midland County, according to law-enforcement officials.

"It's the only known ring of prostitutes that was working in Midland County," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter this morning.

"As far as I know, we don't have anything like that in town," said Police Department Lt. Jim Colburn.

The charge against Ms. Monahan carried a penalty range of two to 10 years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine. Under deferred adjudication, 238th District Judge Vann Culp will withdraw her felony conviction if she successfully completes probation.

New TDC head takes charge

Curbing violence is top priority

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The new head of the Texas Department of Corrections says curbing violence within the nation's second-largest prison system is at the top of his priority list.

Lane McCotter, 44, who describes himself as "compulsive to get things done," replaced 61-year-old Raymond Procunier, who resigned Monday.

Procunier said he just "ran out of gas" after being at the helm of the prison system for 13 months of unprecedented violence.

"There will always be violence but there's no reason why we must accept this," McCotter said.

So far this year, there have been 13 homicides behind prison walls, running at a pace equal to a year ago, when 25 killings occurred. Nearly 400 stabbing incidents were reported in 1984.

Two weeks ago, a female prison guard was slain. On Sunday, an inmate died after being stabbed 58 times.

Procunier said the slaying of guard Minnie Houston contributed to his decision.

"You can only bear so many tragedies in life," Procunier said. "I had my last one."

During his term, Procunier dealt with the violence as well as the reorganizing of the 37,000-inmate system saddled with a federal court mandate for reform. The job, he said, was 100 times more difficult than he expected, even with extensive experience in the field.

Board of Corrections Chairman Robert Gunn, said the intensity of negotiations to resolve a 13-year-old civil rights lawsuit — and the reluctance of Gov. Mark White to go along with the settlement — prompted Procunier to offer his resignation several times. Gunn said it was necessary for Procunier to remain.

"I don't know if the courts would have approved the settlement if Procunier hadn't been there," Gunn said. "We had to have him on board when the signing took place.

"He was pretty upset that last week when we couldn't get the governor to go along," Gunn said.

White's criminal justice aide, Hershel Meriwether, denied there was a lack of support from the governor. And Procunier on Monday praised the cooperation he received at all levels of the state bureaucracy.

McCotter was White's choice to direct Texas prisons at the time the job went to Procunier, who had headed the nation's largest prison system in California, as well as the Virginia and Utah systems.

But the prison board selected Procunier instead and named McCotter to the No. 2 job.

McCotter came to Texas last July after a career in the military, retiring with the rank of colonel. In Vietnam, he was with headquarters of the 18th Military Police Brigade. He also served with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C. McCotter also was commander of the military's only maximum security prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

He inherits the system vastly changed.

Cheese may link five in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two elderly residents were in critical condition late Tuesday with listeriosis, the bacterial infection linked with certain Mexican-style cheeses and blamed for as many as 31 deaths in California.

Three other patients with the disease have been treated and released from Fort Worth hospitals in the last 2½ months, and one baby is listed in good condition at John Peter Smith Hospital, officials said.

Earlier, erroneous reports of two babies' deaths here were "very unfortunate," the result of health department officials misinterpreting information obtained from one hospital, said Dr. Nancy Bowen, assistant director of the Fort Worth Health Department.

The two babies had been transferred to Fort Worth Children's Hospital with early onset cases — present at birth or within a few hours of birth — but both were treated and have gone home, said Dr. Janet Squires, director of infectious disease control at the hospital.

The mix-up occurred when health department officials asked a hospital employee about the status of the two babies and misunderstood the employee, who was saying that they had gone home, Bowen said.

While at least two of the local patients ate cheese manufactured at the same plant as the one implicated in the California deaths, no cause-and-effect relationship has been established, public health officials said.

"We do feel that there is enough cause for alarm here that anyone with (Jalisco or Jimenez brand queso fresco or queso blanco) cheese still on their shelf should return it immediately," Bowen said.

All contaminated cheese apparently was produced at Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. in California. However, it has been distributed in at least 14 states under four brand names: Jalisco, Jimenez, La Vaquita and Guadalajara. Only the first two have been found in the Fort Worth area, Bowen said.

Patients diagnosed with the bacterial organism Listeria monocytegenes in Fort Worth include:

— Liz Romero, 83, critical condition, in a coma at St. Joseph Hospital since June 16. Leftover Jimenez brand queso fresco cheese was found in her refrigerator and taken to the health department for analysis by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

— A 77-year-old man, on a respirator in the intensive care unit at Fort Worth Osteopathic Medical Center. He ate food sprinkled with some type of soft white cheese in a Mexican restaurant a day before becoming ill.

STATE in brief

Three slain teen-agers received phone threats

ARLINGTON (AP) — Police say sexual assault may have been the motive for the stabbing death of two young sisters and that a male boarder may have been killed because he was a witness.

The girls had received threatening, sexual phone calls for weeks, and the 17-year-old boarder had received harassing phone calls before moving in with the girls' family, police said.

Investigators said Tuesday they are unsure whether the slayings were related to the phone calls or that they were sexually motivated. They said one girl was clothed and the other was partially clothed although initial police reports indicated that both girls were nude from the waist down.

Killed at a southwest Arlington home late Monday were Renee Lemieux, 12, and her sister, Danielle Lemieux, 14. The male victim was John Paul Bradley, 17.

All three had been bound and died after being stabbed at least a dozen times, said Bill Fabian, a spokesman for the Tarrant County medical examiner's office. Only Bradley had been gagged.

Charity claimed stolen

HOUSTON (AP) — Hermann Hospital Estate trustees have filed a sixth lawsuit in an effort to get back money they claim was stolen from the charitable trust.

The suit was filed Monday against former estate comptroller Ed Shimp, alleging he illegally charged trips and purchases to the estate that were not business expenses.

There were no specific damages sought in the suit, but estate officials claimed Shimp took about $40,000.

The suit alleged Shimp "misappropriated for his own use and benefit money, property and services that rightfully belonged to the Hermann Hospital Estate."

He charged the estate for trips he took on commercial airlines and chartered aircraft for his personal purposes, the suit said. Shimp also charged personal expenses to Hermann credit cards, the suit said.

Neither Shimp nor his attorney returned phone calls from The Associated Press on Tuesday.

Kamikaze bird stops

HOUSTON (AP) — A mockingbird whose kamikaze dives terrorized Houston mail carriers for two months has stopped her attacks since her babies left the nest, postal officials said.

"The baby birds have matured and left the nest, so the mail carrier no longer appears a threat to the mother," U.S. Postal Service spokesman Mike West said Monday.

The attacks began in late March as the mother mockingbird zoomed down or bombarded mail carriers with angry chirps as they walked down the 1600 block of Kipling in central Houston.

Letters carriers apparently were the mockingbird's only target, residents said.

Mail service was interrupted for three days. But postal officials refused to take drastic measures against the bird, hoping the attacks would stop when her babies left the nest.

Death penalty upheld

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge upheld the conviction of a 35-year-old Marine Corps deserter sentenced to death a decade ago for the slaying of a convenience store manager during a robbery.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda ruled Monday that the 1975 capital murder trial of Kenneth Albert Brock was conducted properly. Brock had argued that the conviction should be overturned because his constitutional rights were violated at the trial.

Brock, then 25, was sentenced to die by injection for the slaying of a convenience store manager he took hostage during a 1974 robbery.

But Brock argued that his rights were violated in jury selection and by comments made by prosecutors.

An appeal was filed in 1982, and Brock was granted a stay of execution while the case was being considered.

Owner of Scholz Garten asks $1.25 million for sale of tavern

AUSTIN (AP) — The owner of Scholz Garten, a popular tavern housed in a federal and state historical landmark, says it is for sale.

The historic Saengerrunde Hall, the building where Scholz Garten leases space, will be saved by strict language in a lease which preserves the name and the German atmosphere the founder of the tavern developed 119 years ago, tavern owner Larry Bales said.

"I am not sure I am going to sell," Bales said. "I just wanted to see what it might be worth." But he said that if he does not sell the tavern and restaurant, it will undergo some changes.

"If it doesn't sell, I am going to redo the menu, put new furniture in place and possibly put in new mixed drinks," Bales said.

The highest price item on his menu is $6.75, and "because of my low prices the dollar volume is not what I think it could be," Bales said.

The building is owned by the Austin Saengerrunde Club, whose president says the building is not for sale and questions whether Bales can sell the tavern.

"We have it in the contract he can't sublease it," said Rolf Meyer, president of Austin Saengerrunde. "He is just leasing the place. He is not the owner, so he cannot sell it."

"I am going to be careful about what changes are made. It should not be made into a plastic fern bar."
— Larry Bales, owner
Scholz Beer Garten

But Bales said his lawyer has told him he can sell the lease.

Bales said he is discussing selling his lease to an Austin real estate investor, a Houston investor of hospital properties, or a Dallas restaurant manager. He declined to identify them.

Bales has advertised the bar for sale in the Wall Street Journal with an asking price of $1.25 million. He said none of the three investors quarrelled with the price.

Any buyer would be required by the lease to retain the name of the restaurant and the German atmosphere, Bales said. He said he has five years left on the lease, plus the first right to lease the building for another five years.

"I am going to be careful about what changes are made," Bales said. "It should not be made into a plastic fern bar."

Bales said one reason he offered to sell the lease is that his son was not interested in running the tavern.

"I was there for 13 years, and I was anticipating my son was going to come back and run the place," Bales said.

Scholz Beer Garten was opened in 1860 by German immigrant August Scholz and at first was a log boarding house. In 1866, the boarding house was turned into a tavern. Scholz operated the prosperous tavern until his death in 1891.

His stepsons operated the place for two years before selling it to Lemp Brewery in 1893. The Saengerrunde Club, which had met at the tavern since 1908, brought the land and the structure in 1914.

The tavern became a Texas historical landmark in 1967 and was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

Reagan's limited steps could have powerful impact

President Ronald Reagan

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The limited steps taken by President Reagan in response to the TWA hijacking could have a powerful impact on American air travel abroad, particularly to Greece.

But they are measured, and they reflect presidential care not to inflame the situation while the lives of at least 40 Americans are at risk. Their impact on the captors and their prisoners is probably nil.

The once roaring debate between Secretary of State George Shultz and more cautious officials over how the United States should respond to terrorism has been stilled.

Shultz may still feel, as he said in a New York speech last October, that the United States "must be willing to use force" against certain terrorist actions.

But if he does, Shultz is not airing his views in public.

Similarly, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who emphasized the importance of prudence in a counter-speech in November, is saying nothing provocative.

Reagan, on the other hand, had several things to say about the ordeal during his nationally televised news conference Tuesday night.

An Analysis

They were mostly appeals to civilized nations to speak out, to the Lebanese to do what they can "in the name of the God they worship," and expressions of his own overwhelming frustration.

"I've pounded a few walls myself when I'm alone about this," Reagan said in an unusual revelation of presidential despair.

There were no threats of retaliation if the hostages were not released unharmed.

Reagan's leadership image and his repeated declarations last fall that "America is back and standing tall" were considered key ingredients in his landslide re-election by many political analysts.

At this delicate juncture, however, Reagan has decided to resist the terrorists' demands and to make none on an ally, Israel. He will not push Jerusalem to release some 700 Lebanese Shiites as the hijackers have demanded.

"You cannot give in to the terrorists without knowing that you are sentencing someone else to go through the same agony, and other people to also be victimized," Reagan said.

Beyond the display of firmness, there was no presidential finger-pointing at anyone beyond the terrorists themselves — no suggestions, as in the past, that Iran or Syria sponsored attacks on Americans.

In the past, Reagan himself has declared there should be limits to American patience in dealing with terrorists. But now, he said, "I have to wait it out as long as those people are there, and threatened and alive, and we have a possibility of bringing them home..."

Critical of former President Jimmy Carter's handling of the Iranian hostage crisis during the 1980 campaign, Reagan last night was almost gentle in referring to his predecessor.

He noted, mildly, that a government, Iran, was involved in that ordeal. "It just seems to me that you have a great many more opportunities then to find vulnerabilities in another government," Reagan said.

But in the car-bombing of Marine headquarters near Beirut in 1983, and now in the TWA hijacking, the United States faces terrorists whose connections are not clear.

"How do you establish a connection between them and someone else?" Reagan asked.

Moreover, his options are limited. How do you apply pressure, he suggested, on people "who think their ticket to heaven is to do this and to take some others with them?"

Reagan says Iranian hostage crisis not same as Beirut one

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the 1980 campaign, Ronald Reagan found it easy to criticize a president who allowed the nation to be held hostage by a band of thugs.

Now that he is president, Reagan says comparisons between his hostage crisis and Jimmy Carter's ordeal are not valid.

Reagan said during a nationally televised news conference Tuesday night that the 52 Americans held for 444 days in Iran were prisoners of a government, whereas the Americans now held somewhere in Beirut are the captives of lawless, "unidentified people."

Carter said in 1980 that his top priority was winning the safe release of the hostages and he had to act cautiously.

But that did not stop Reagan's criticism during the 1980 campaign.

Reagan, for example, told a banquet audience in Greensboro, N.C., on April 7, 1980, U.S. captives "shouldn't have been there (in Iran) six days, let alone six months."

During a face-to-face debate with then-President Carter on Oct. 28, 1980, Reagan spoke of the humiliation the nation suffered at the hands of Iran.

But during his news conference Tuesday night, Reagan muted talk about acting against those who seize Americans.

Reagan said: "I have to wait it out as long as those people are there and threatened.

"I did not openly criticize (Carter), and as a matter of fact, in the closing days of the campaign, when it appeared that we were getting them home, I didn't say any word or make any comment on the situation, because I didn't want to endanger what was going on," Reagan said.

Reagan warns Americans of flying to Athens airport

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusing the Greek government of lax airport security, President Reagan is warning Americans of the dangers of flying through Athens and encouraging U.S. airlines to stop flying there until the government beefs up anti-hijacking measures.

The Greek ambassador said he was "very saddened" by Reagan's statement Tuesday night. He said American tourists should pay no attention to the State Department advisory that "an above-average potential for terrorist activity exists" at the Athens airport.

Reagan, outraged that two Shiite Moslem gunmen apparently were allowed through security checks at Athens International Airport last Friday before hijacking TWA Flight 847, said the State Department travel warning "shall remain in effect until the Greek government has improved the security situation there."

The president said he was considering expanding the sky marshal program to international flights of U.S. carriers "for better protection of passengers."

The sky marshal program, beefed up during a wave of domestic hijackings a decade ago, has been largely dormant in recent years as the number of hijackings in the United States has dropped dramatically. The Transportation Department declined Tuesday night to say how many marshals its Federal Aviation Administration still has.

Reagan called on the Socialist government of Andreas Papandreou to demonstrate "a willingness to comply with the security provisions of the U.S.-Greek Civil Aviation Agreement."

"I've asked for a full explanation of the events surrounding the takeover of the aircraft in Athens," Reagan said at his nationally televised news conference Tuesday night. "I have appealed through the Department of Transportation and the Federal Aviation Administration for all U.S. air carriers to review the wisdom of continuing any flights into Athens until the security situation there improves."

Greece's ambassador to the United States, George D. Papoulias, said in a telephone interview following Reagan's news conference, "I was very saddened that we would have this kind of statement."

Plane's crew calls treatment by terrorists 'tolerable'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The three crew members aboard hijacked TWA Flight 847 said today that their treatment by gun-toting terrorists has not been bad and warned against a rescue attempt. A bearded man stood behind them with a pistol while they were interviewed.

"I think we would all be dead men if they did (try a rescue) because we are continually surrounded by many, many guards," said Flight Captain John L. Testrake, who spoke to ABC-TV while hanging out the cockpit of the plane on a Beirut airstrip.

Testrake, First Officer Philip G. Maresca and Flight Attendant Benjamin Zimmermann spoke with three ABC correspondents after the hijackers specifically requested the reporters be brought to the plane.

"I'm fine, and the message to my family is they can worry a little but not too much," said Maresca, of Salt Lake City, Utah. "Our treatment has been tolerable."

Zimmermann, 45, of Cascade, Idaho, agreed: "Everything is OK. We're surviving."

The three hostages were in their sixth day on the plane; passengers still in custody were removed to undisclosed locations.

Testrake, 57, of Richmond, Mo., said the crew did not know where the other hostages, including about 40 Americans, had been taken, but said they were told the others have "been taken to a safe place, that they are comfortable and being well taken care of."

Testrake spoke calmly, but looked tired with several days' growth of beard. It was the first time any member of the crew still aboard the plane had been interviewed by journalists.

As for his own treatment by the gunmen, Testrake said, "I'd like my wife and my family and all of my friends back in Missouri to know the Lord has taken very good care of us so far and he has seen us through some very trying times, and he will see us through to the end."

Julie Flint of ABC Radio, one of the three ABC reporters who walked out to the plane, described Testrake as "looking extremely tired, but smiling a little at the window."

The three ABC reporters — the other two were Charles Glass and Derwin Johnson — were allowed to speak with the three crewmen for about eight minutes before they were ordered off the tarmac at gunpoint.

Testrake told them things were fairly quiet on board the plane since the other hostages were removed.

"Not very much is happening to us now, since Sunday night, because they removed the other passengers and took them away, and the three of us have been on the aircraft since then," he said.

Reagan: U.S. officials haven't forgotten other kidnapped Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, discussing efforts to free the hostages from TWA Flight 847, said U.S. officials are pressing for release of seven Americans kidnapped in Beirut as well.

"We haven't given up on them," Reagan said at a news conference Tuesday night. "And we include them in all of our conversations about the present hijack victims."

Seven Americans remain in captivity after being kidnapped in Beirut in the past 15 months, including a U.S. embassy official, two clerics, a newsman and three academics.

It is not known where the seven abducted Americans are being held.

"It is an extremely difficult, seemingly impossible task in that area, with all the factions there, to know whether they are being moved about and what we can do," Reagan said.

"We have used every effort to see if we can locate who has them, where they are, whether they're together or separated and where they might be, because we cannot give up on them," he said. "And I hope they have confidence in that."

Asked if he would accept a solution to the hijack crisis that left any of the Americans in captivity, the president replied, "We certainly include those (others) in every conversation we have with regard to our people there."

Altogether, eight Americans have been kidnapped in Beirut since March 1984. Cable News Network reporter Jeremy Levin later escaped from his captors.

U.S. asks Red Cross to talk with hijackers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says the United States, refusing to negotiate with hijackers of a TWA jetliner holding American hostages, has asked the International Red Cross to contact Israel and determine the status of its plans for releasing more than 700 Lebanese Shiite prisoners.

Release of the prisoners, captured during the Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, is a key demand of the hijackers, who seized the airliner last Friday and still hold about 40 American passengers hostage.

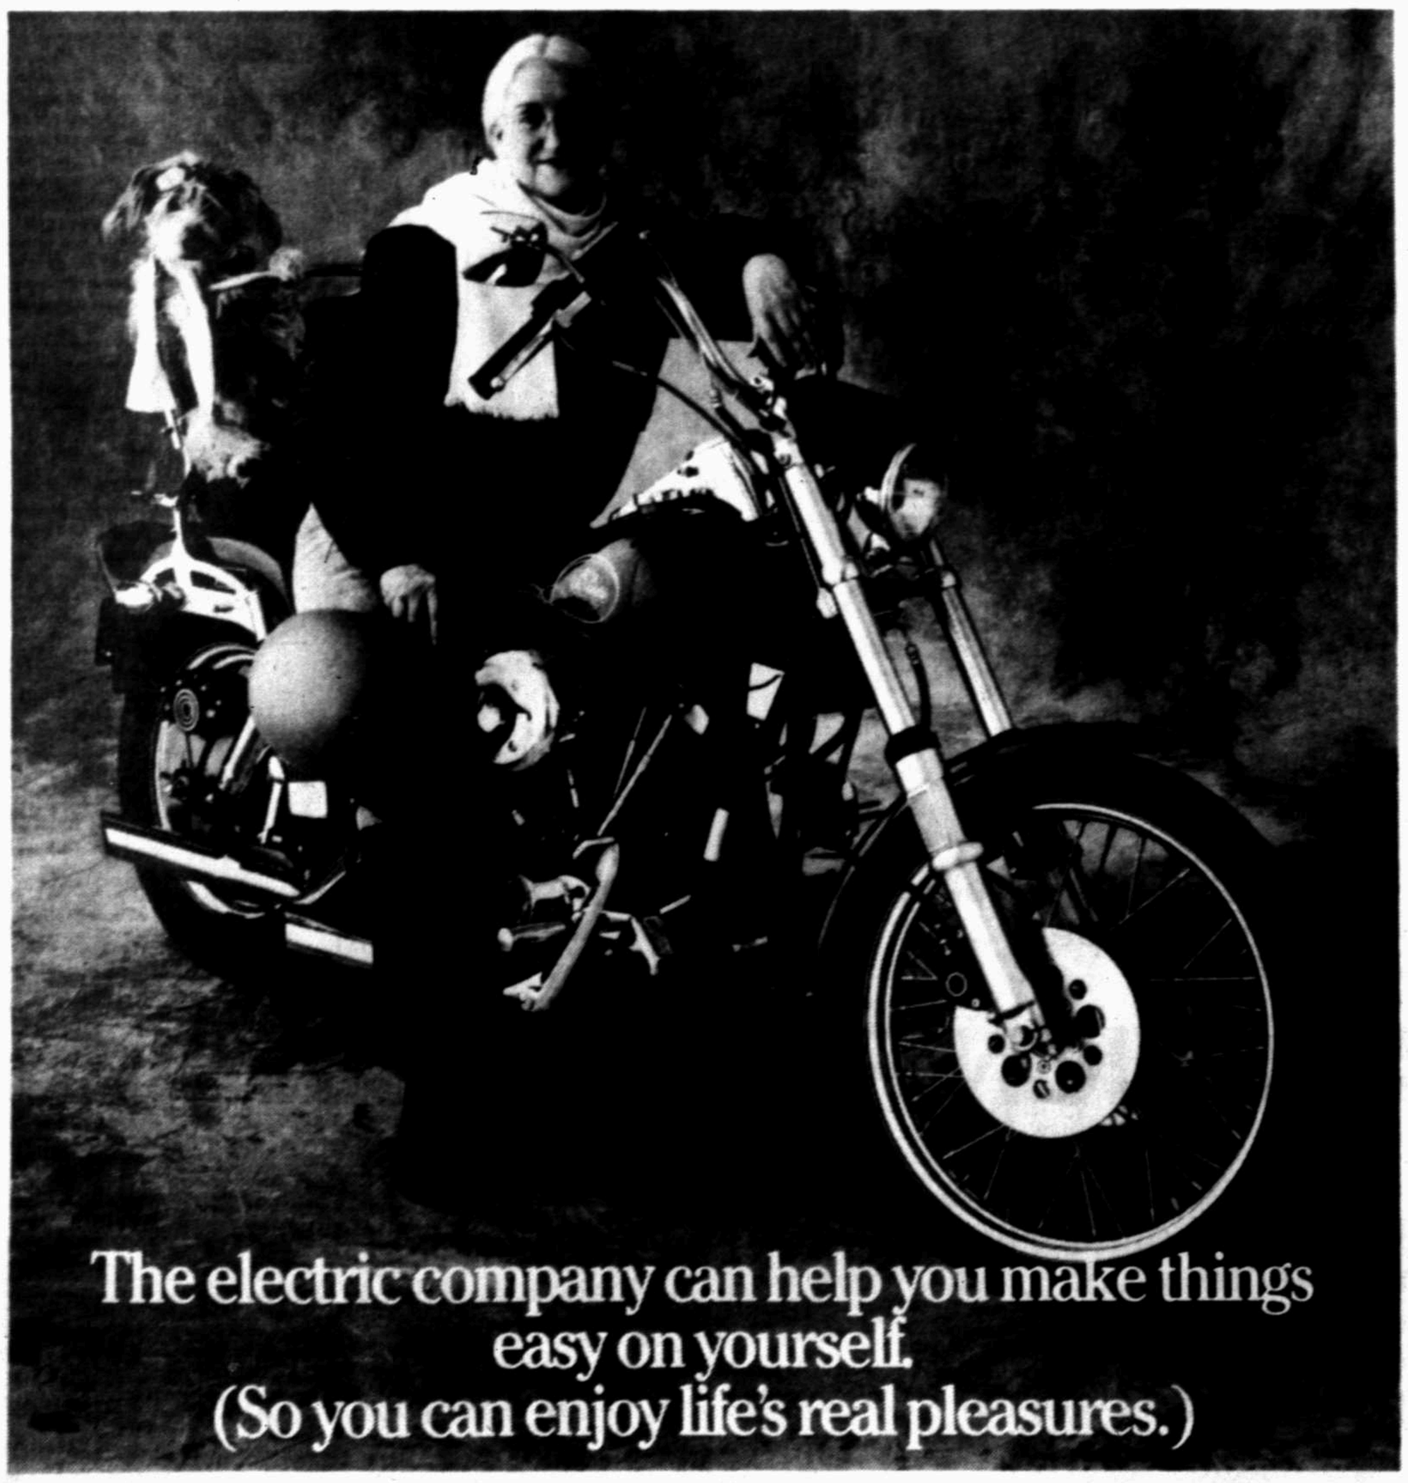

The New York Times in Wednesday editions quoted unidentified White House officials as saying that President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz would meet on Thursday and Friday with Alexander Hay, president of the International Red Cross, and his chief operations officer, Jean-Pierre Hocke.

White House spokeswoman Denny Brisley said Tuesday night, "I don't know if there are firm plans" for such a meeting.

In Geneva, spokesman Jean-Jacques Kurtz confirmed today that the International Committee of the Red Cross had received a U.S. request that it contact Israel to ask about its plans for releasing more than 700 Lebanese Shiite prisoners.

However, he said the Red Cross could not act in the matter until it was approached by Israel.

The U.S. officials said they hoped the Red Cross could help arrange the end of the hostage crisis without seeming to compromise the refusal of the United States or Israel to deal with terrorists, the Times reported.
