'Everything OK' in arms negotiations

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — "Everything is OK," said the chief Soviet representative after the first bargaining session in the U.S.-Soviet negotiations to reduce medium-range nuclear missiles deployed in Europe.

The negotiators announced they would meet twice a week, on Tuesday and Friday. But after the two delegations met for two hours and 40 minutes Tuesday, chief delegates Paul H. Nitze of the United States and Yuli A. Kvitsinsky of the Soviet Union adhered to their agreement to maintain a news blackout around the substance of their discussions.

The early sessions were expected to be devoted to resolving differences about the terminology, numbers, range and destructive characteristics of the medium-range missiles, or theater nuclear forces, that are the subject of the negotiations.

The resolution of such preliminary technical issues took considerable time at the start of the negotiations for the SALT II treaty to limit long-range nuclear missiles.

One of the biggest disputes and the one on which the outcome of the negotiations will probably hinge will be over the comparative nuclear strength in Europe of the North Atlantic Alliance and the Soviet Union.

President Reagan has claimed that the multiple-warhead SS-20 and SS-4 and SS-5 Soviet rockets stationed in Western Russia give the Soviet Union "an overwhelming advantage...on the order of 6-to-1" over West European defenses. To match this, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is planning to deploy 572 American Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands, beginning in 1983.

The Soviet Union claims that Reagan's calculations do not include the British and French nuclear arsenals or nuclear missiles aboard U.S. submarines in European waters. It contends that when these are taken into account, nuclear parity exists, and the planned NATO deployment is an attempt to regain superiority for the West.

Assistant U.S. Defense Secretary Richard N. Perle told the Senate Armed Forces Committee in Washington Tuesday that Nitze did not have ready an alternative if the Soviets reject the opening U.S. proposal for dismantlement of all medium-range missiles in Western Russia in exchange for cancellation of the planned deployment of American missiles.

"We have learned from bitter experience that nothing would so dash our hopes for the successful negotiation of our proposal as a briefcase full of positions to which we are ready to fall back," Perle said.

NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said he thinks "there is a fair chance that some agreement might be reached...although that agreement might not be what we all hoped for."

"Any agreement is better than no agreement," Luns said in Oslo, Norway.

In Moscow, Soviet news analyst Vitaly Kobysh repeated what Soviet Presidnet Leonid Brezhnev said last week during his visit to West Germany, that "the U.S.S.R. is ready for compromises, for a search for balanced, just decisions acceptable to both sides."

"We would like the negotiations to be successful," Kobysh wrote in the Literary Gazette. "The Soviet Union will do and has, to a considerable extent, done everything for that."

Funds hang in balance as HUD deadline passes

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland's application for $1.094 million in federal funds still hangs in mid-air while the Tuesday deadline passed for resolving some unsettled questions concerning the city's three-year Housing Assistance Plan.

The city had received tentative approval from the Department of Housing and Urban Development last July that the $1 million-plus in Community Development Block Grant funds would be coming into the city to be used for housing rehabilitation and street paving in the south and east parts of the city. But the approval was contingent on the city changing its designated areas for new constructed rental assisted housing for low-income families, senior citizens and elderly persons.

The city had asked for and received an extension to Dec. 1 to untangle the differences between the local and federal governments.

By Tuesday afternoon, reports from various officials involved as to the status of the application brought conflicting stories.

Mayor G. Thane Akins was out of town attending a mayor's conference.

City Manager James Brown said it was the City Council directly involved and he hadn't received a status report.

Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, whose department pulled together the Housing Assistance Plan, also was unaware of the application's status.

"We've haven't gotten instructions from the council on amending it," he said of the plan. "I assume the next step is HUD would take steps to reduce the funding to $0."

The city had been warned by HUD that if the plan wasn't amended to meet the federal specifications or if the city didn't prove that its HAP plan was following the guidelines, the $1 million would be withdrawn.

It was a different report from Mayor Pro Tem Tom Sloan, who said the mayor had been talking with HUD officials in Washington, D.C.

"They indicated to us that we'll get another extension. We're negotiating to get our original plan with some small changes in it accepted.

"We talked to them yesterday (Monday) and they told us to hang loose until we find out the extension. We haven't lost the money yet," he added.

But the Dallas HUD office was unaware of the situation.

William Rotert, program manager, said he also had talked with the Washington people on Monday and wasn't told about the extension.

"They (HUD in Washington) said they were discussing the matter with Midland," Rotert related. "But the matter of an extension would have to be taken up with our office in Dallas and we haven't heard from Midland."

To gain an extension, he explained, the city would have to prove the need.

At issue is the geographic area which Midland designated as the area for 240 units of housing for low-income residents. Midland wants it placed on the east, southeast and southwest sides of the city.

HUD, however, has said there aren't enough lots in those areas to accommodate the city's goals of 240 units over a three-year period. Rotert had explained it as a situation of the city proving that HUD was wrong and the area would be adequate for the housing units, or to amend the plan so that it would meet HUD's guidelines.

Reagan administration may end efforts to exclude air controllers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking to thaw relations with big labor, is considering whether to lift a three-year freeze on federal employment for air traffic controllers who were fired after striking against the government.

President Reagan broached that possibility in a meeting with leaders of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, White House aides confirmed late Tuesday. But chief spokesman David Gergen emphasized that Reagan "was not considering" returning the 11,500 controllers to the flight towers.

Reagan was meeting today with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and members of the federation's executive council in a major administration peace-making offensive aimed at rebuilding ties to labor leaders.

In a break with tradition, the AFL-CIO denied the chief executive an invitation to its biennial convention in New York last month. And it demanded that Reagan end his "demeaning vendetta" by rehiring the controllers, whose union, the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, has been decertified by the government and has filed for reorganization under the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Speculation about an administration show of mercy toward the dismissed air controllers has surfaced several times since the president fired controllers who ignored his back-to-work order in early August.

Despite repeated administration denials of any plans for a general amnesty, Reagan told the Teamster leaders that he was "considering the question of whether or not the controllers who have been fired should continue to be barred from any employment (with the federal government) for a three-year period, as is currently the case," Gergen said.

But the spokesman also quoted Reagan as saying, "Our first responsibility is to the controllers who stayed on the job, working long hours to keep the planes flying safely."

Gergen suggested, however, that because Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis is out of town, Reagan could not make a decision in time to announce it to the AFL-CIO leaders. Lewis is in Japan for talks with auto industry executives and isn't expected to return to Washington until Tuesday.

Administration officials maintain that federal laws bar for three years the employment by the government of any federal employee participating in a strike — a position that organized labor contends has never been tested in the courts.

Meantime, J. Lynn Helms, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, was urging a congressional panel today to approve $57.5 million in special pay and benefits for air controllers and other agency employees.

New passenger air service takes off

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Emerald Airlines took off at noon Tuesday from Midland Regional Airport with no passengers boarding the craft. But it left its mark as the airport's newest service and one which should fill a void in service not provided by the other four airlines — American, Braniff, Continental and Texas International.

Approval for service to Midland, Dallas-Fort Worth, San Angelo and Wichita Falls came Nov. 24 from the Texas Aeronautics Commission. The Austin-based commuter line currently serves that city, Brownsville, Houston Hobby, Laredo, McAllen and San Antonio.

Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city of Midland, said he had first informed the carrier's representatives that service could begin Dec. 15. But he obtained tentative approval from city officials for an earlier start-up date prior to the Dec. 15 City Council meeting. However, he said, he was unaware the airline had picked Dec. 1.

"I was eating lunch in the airport restaurant when I heard an announcement over the P.A. system" that Emerald Airlines had landed, Banks said.

Plans call for two flights a day Monday through Friday from Midland to San Antonio and Austin. At San Antonio, passengers can change planes and continue on to Brownsville or McAllen, according to Sally Arens-

Pipeyard worker on trial for murder

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 26-year-old Midlander who apparently was incensed after failing to get his wife to fix him supper and whose mother-in-law was "lipping" him and whose wife allegedly bore the child of a another man fired a round or two into the ground with a stolen pistol and then peeled off another shot, which struck and killed Eddie "Water Gator" Tealer Jr., 33, in Blaylock & Son Garage at 1104 E. Illinois Ave. last Aug. 15.

On trial in 142nd State District Court is Willie Charles Jackson, a pipeyard worker, who is charged with murdering Tealer minutes after he inquired about buying a .357-caliber mangum nickel-plated Colt revolver from B&B Trading Post five blocks from the garage at 1104 E. Illinois Ave., allegedly ran off with the pistol and hollow-point bullets, and sought out Tealer, who was his wife's alleged lover.

An account of the incident was revealed to the four-man, eight-woman jury in Judge Pat Baskin's court when Midland Police Detective Lt. Ron Aaron read a 1½-page statement which was given by Jackson about two hours after the shooting.

According to the typewritten confession, Jackson had gotten off of work that Saturday afternoon, and went from his house to his brother-in-law's house and, finally, to the Blaylock garage in search of his wife, Linda.

" 'I told her that I wanted us to go home,' " read the statement by Jackson. " 'I told her that I was hungry and wanted some supper.' "

But, according to Jackson's statement, his wife's mother, Lurrell Freeman, who was at the garage, " 'started talking a bunch of — to me, telling me that Linda didn't have to go nowhere. Her mama was telling

GMW hearing to resume Tuesday

DALLAS — A federal judge has ordered participants in the proposed sale of various oil properties held as collateral by The First National Bank of Midland to return to court next week after agreement could not be reached on the issue here Tuesday.

Judge John C. Ford recessed the hearing until 5 p.m. Dec. 8. The GMW Corp. of Midland has been offered $16 million for a two-thirds share of the producing property, which is part of a collateral package used by the Midland oil firm to secure a $22.7 million loan from the bank last spring.

Proceeds of the sale would go toward retiring the note. While both GMW and the bank are agreeable to that arrangement, GMW's other creditors don't know how it would affect the company's financial obligations to them and have argued against those terms.

GMW lawyers contend the sale is the "centerpiece" of a bankruptcy proceeding filed Oct. 9 after FNB foreclosed on the note and appropriated several of the firm's accounts at the bank.

GMW also filed a $150 million damage suit against the bank and obtained an injunction reinstating the accounts and stopping action on the foreclosure, which FNB says was justified because the company failed to make certain payments on the loan.

GMW, however, claims it was led to believe the payments would not be necessary until loan renegotiation talks last summer were completed. Issues involved in the suit itself are expected to be taken up as soon as the sale issue is disposed of.

Soldier of fortune Michael "Mad Mike" Hoare, right, leads the way into court Wednesday in Pretoria, South Africa, where he and four others were charged with kidnapping and released on bail. The group of mercenaries highjacked an airliner to South Africa last week after attempting a coup in Seychelles. With Hoare are Peter Duffy, center and Kenneth Dalglies, two of the others charged.

South African government frees 39 hijackers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The South African government has freed 39 of the 44 white mercenaries who hijacked an Indian airliner last week when their attempt to overthrow the Seychelles government failed, a police spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman, Lt. Col. Leon Millett, said the other five men would appear in a magistrate's court in Pretoria, the capital, later Wednesday morning. The newspaper Beeld reported one of the five still held is Michael "Mad Mike" Hoare, the veteran mercenary who was reported to be the leader of the attempt to oust the leftist government in the Indian Ocean island republic.

Millet said the government would give no reason for the release of the 39 men, their names would not be announced, and the five still held would not be identified at present.

President France Albert Rene of the Seychelles in a radio broadcast Tuesday called on South Africa to turn over all 44 men for trial by an international court appointed by the United Nations. But Beeld, an Afrikaans-language paper that is close to the government, said officials told it "under no circumstances" would the 39 freed men be deported or turned over to another country.

Posing as a rugby team, the 44 mercenaries flew to the Seychelles Nov. 24 aboard an airliner from Swaziland and took over the airport when one of their guns was discovered by a customs man.

After the Seychelles armed forces pinned them down in the airport, they commandeered an Air India jetliner that landed during the fighting and forced the pilot to fly them to South Africa.

After landing in Durban, the hijackers freed the 79 passengers and crewmen of the plane and surrendered peacefully. They were reported to include South Africans, Americans, Britons, New Zealanders and former Rhodesians.

The South African government said it knew nothing about the attempted coup. Rene said he would accept that if the mercenaries were turned over for trial.

A spokesman for the Seychelles Resistance Movement in London claimed responsibility for the attempted coup and said it was financed by wealthy exiles from the islands opposed to Rene's socialist policies. The spokesman said another attempt would be made.

Rene accused ex-President James Mancham, whom he ousted in 1977, of being involved in the plot. Mancham, an exile in London, said the Resistance Movement approached him but he had never heard of it and held back.

Argument is too strong a word

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Contrary to a coroner's report, nothing indicated Robert Wagner and another actor had argued aboard Wagner's yacht the night actress Natalie Wood fell into the water and drowned, a detective says.

"I don't know where the coroner got that information," Roy Hamilton, one of the sheriff's homicide detectives working on the case, said Tuesday. "We talked to Wagner and (actor Christopher) Walken and there was no indication that there was any argument."

Miss Wood, who was married to Wagner, was on the yacht with her husband and Walken and fell into the water after trying to step into a rubber dinghy early Sunday.

Los Angeles County Coroner Thomas Noguchi had speculated Monday that Wagner and Walken had a "heated argument" aboard the yacht, which was anchored off Santa Catalina Island.

"I think he (Noguchi) was juicing it up a little bit," Hamilton said.

The coroner's office also appeared on Tuesday to be stepping back from saying that an "argument" between the men prompted Miss Wood to leave the yacht.

"We think 'argument' might be too strong a word," said Assistant Coroner Richard Wilson.

Captain is sole survivor of capsized fishing boat

By JIM KLAHN
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Two days after a fishing trawler carrying five men overturned in mountainous seas 12 miles from Cape Disappointment, the skipper crawled out of the surf alone, apparently the only survivor.

Skipper George McMurrick said he and another crewman, clinging to a small raft in the icy water, had watched helplessly as two shipmates perished while trying to reach the dinghy. After clinging to the raft for two days, the pair approached shore, but McCurrick said the crewman apparently drowned while trying to swim through the surf.

Another man was trapped below decks when the ship capsized Sunday morning, McMurrick said in a telephone interview Tuesday from his bed at Ocean Beach Hospital in Ilwaco, where he was listed in stable condition.

The 86-foot Midnight Express was loading a large net of rock cod in 20-foot seas when "something shifted in the weight load," said McMurrick, who owned the vessel. "We lost stability and the boat immediately capsized," he said.

"It was a five-second deal, 10 seconds. Really quick...It just went over. It was a very spooky situation."

McMurrick and another crewman reached a life raft, but McMurrick was at the point of exhaustion and could do little to help his partner to try to reach two other men still in the water.

For a few minutes, the two men in the water and the two men in the life raft struggled toward each other in the freezing wind. But the waves slowly pulled them apart, and McMurrick and the other man on the raft caught their last glimpse of the two in the water after 10 or 15 minutes of struggle.

"We weren't far apart to begin with, but the waves were too strong," McMurrick said.

"One had a float vest on. They stayed together. They were unable to get to the raft and we were unable to get the raft to them," he said. "It was very unfortunate."

After that the seas grew worse.

"The ocean, there were 30-foot and 40-foot seas," McMurrick said. "At the time of the capsizing, it was 20-foot seas, and it got worse. There were gale warnings, and it sure was a gale for us, in the raft."

McMurrick and crewman Jerry Morris, 35, spent two days clinging to the raft, but he said Morris apparently drowned as the two tried to swim through the surf to land.

McMurrick reached the beach 20 miles north of Long Beach early Tuesday, broke into an empty house and called the sheriff's office.

"He didn't know where he was, but he gave the box number and a deputy knew pretty well where the house was," said Gay Nell Bare, a Pacific County sheriff's spokeswoman.

In addition to Morris, the victims were identified by Coast Guard spokesman Jim Gilman as James Brewer, 39, of Eugene, Ore.; Pat Atkins, 35; and Norman Gieser, 34. McMurrick said Atkins, Morris and Gieser were from the Long Beach area.

Company doesn't hire CIA agents

By WILLIAM J. EATON
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A new company providing global-information service to business said Tuesday that it would not hire former intelligence agents as its overseas correspondents, but that news reporters and scholars would be recruited for overseas work, according to a company spokesman.

The spokesman, David Kingsley, also said that former CIA analysts may be retained to work at the company's headquarters in Arlington, Va., on a high-speed computer rivaling the one used by the CIA.

The founder of the company, Washington publisher Anthony Stout, bristled at any comparison between his company, International Reporting Information Systems, and the U.S. intelligence agency.

"We have no connection with the CIA," Stout said in an interview. "The last time I saw a spy was in the movies. My credentials speak for themselves."

Kingsley said that the company would hire news reporters and scholars for 96 correspondents' posts overseas.

Stout said he would hire "the best, most reliable and most proven political reporters currently in the business" on a part-time basis to file reports on developments of interest to business executives.

"Intelligence is the secret collection of information for secret purposes," Stout said. "This will be the open collection of information for public purposes."

Anyone who wants to pay for the service, he said, at an average charge of $25,000 a year, will be able to subscribe and obtain the information in the computer from a terminal in their office.

Redistricting hurts minorities, Dean says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas minorities will suffer if new state House and Senate redistricting plans are approved in their present form, says Secretary of State David Dean.

As the state's chief elections officer, Dean forwarded to the U.S. Department of Justice the legislative redistricting plans drawn up by the Texas Legislative Redistrict Board.

Dean said both plans, in his opinion, violate the federal Voting Rights Act.

"They appear to compromise a basic right of persons who have been systematically disfranchised in the past," he said. "Peoples' voting rights are entirely too important to be manipulated or bargained away in the political power-brokering process."

DEAN, A REPUBLICAN, pointed out several "problem area" in the board's plan, saying he was joined in the protest by Gov. Bill Clements, also a Republican.

He urged the Justice Department to expedite its review because he said later court challenges could reduce the time Texas counties will have to make voting precinct plans for the 1982 primaries.

The new state Senate and House districts were drawn by the five-member board after Clements vetoed the Senate plan passed by the Legislature and state courts voided the House plan. Mmembers of the redistricting board were Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Bill Clayton, Comptroller Bob Bullock, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, and Attorney General Mark White.

The Legislature's congressional redistricting plan is currently under challenge in an Austin federal court.

Dean's comments on specific areas included:

— Dallas County: The board drew three House districts with a population of more than 60 percent black but could have drawn four such black districts. The board broke county lines in forming Senate Dist. 23 to make a majority white district, fragmenting a black community i offshore Wednesday. Fair skies.

— HARRIS COUNTY: The board made five black House districts and one Hispanic when it could have made six black and two Hispanic districts. Minority groups in the north-central part of the county were fragmented and a new conservative Anglo voting block formed in the eastern part of the county in forming Senate districts.

— Jefferson and Orange counties: The board's creation of new House Districts 22 and 23 produced "a retrogression of black voting strength." Neither of the districts has a black majority.

— Bexar County: Under old redistricting plans there were six minority House districts in the county but only five under the board's plan, with Hispanics losing one district. Under board plans for new Senate Districts 19 and 26, Hispanic voting strengh was decreased.

— South Texas: The board packed Hispanics in House District 44. New Senate District 21 maintains an Anglo majority, a dilution of Hispanic voting strength.

— El Paso County: The Hispanic community should have been given another state representative. The board's plan has only two districts with Hispanics the registered votger majority.

— Lubbock County: House District 83 created a lower Hispanic population district than was possible

Warmer temperatures to continue

Although the decorations are coming out of storage and the Christmas shoppers are getting down to business, the temperatures for the next few afternoons may remind Midlanders more of autumn than winter.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, today's warmer temperatures will continue to climb a little higher through Thursday. The low tonight will be in the lower 30s with the high on Thursday reaching into the upper 60s.

Winds will be westerly and northwesterly 10-15 mph through Thursday.

Even though the overnight low of 29 was cold, it wasn't as miserable as the record low of 20 set in 1979. Tuesday's high of 54 missed the record high of 79 set for that date in 1950 by 25 degrees.

Midland woman injured in car wreck

A Midland woman injured in a traffic accident late Tuesday afternoon has been admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital for treatment of multiple cuts and bruises.

Syble D. Cook, 56, of Route 3, Midland, was listed in satisfactory condition this morning. She was injured when her car and one driven by Joseph C. Weaver Jr. of 1505 McDonald Drive collided at the intersection of Marienfeld Street and New York Avenue about 5:10 p.m. Tuesday. Weaver was not injured, according to police reports.

In a theft complaint to city police Tuesday, Mike Jackson of Route 1, Midland, said a bank bag containing $677 in cash and checks was taken from his van while it was parked in the 100 block of West Florida.

Shooting death apparent suicide

ODESSA — The shooting death of a young Odessa man during a police chase near here Monday afternoon is being handled as an apparent suicide, pending the outcome of a grand jury inquiry, a spokesman for the Ector County Sheriff's Department said this morning.

Lab tests disclosed that 17-year-old Thomas Sandoval died from a .22-caliber gunshot wound to the head. He was found in his car on an oil lease road three miles from where officers said he ran a Department of Public Safety roadblock near Loop 338 and U.S. Highway 80 about 2:30 p.m. Monday.

A DPS trooper and two Ector County deputies were involved in the chase and several shots were fired. Officers said they fired at Sandoval's vehicle after he refused to stop and displayed a pistol during the chase. The officers said they used shotguns and not handguns in their attempt to stop him.

Sandoval, originally from New Mexico, was under local parole supervision and a "directive" had been issued on him by the Midland juvenile parole office because of a parole violation, according to a Midland law enforcement official Tuesday.

Sandoval also was an Odessa burglary suspect, according to deputies, who said a .22-caliber semi-automatic pistol was recovered from his car. Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes said this morning the grand jury is expected to hear the case Monday.

man with the Austin ticket office.

Rates will be $35 one way from Midland to Austin or San Antonio and $70 to Brownsville and McAllen. Departure times from Midland are noon and 5:40 p.m.

At this point, she said, weekend flights aren't on the schedule.

Emerald will be using F-27s, which is a Fairchild aircraft. Banks said it has "been a passenger carrying aircraft for several years; it's a good, stable plane." He added that it carries 44 passengers and cruises at 240 to 250 mph at 18,000 feet.

The commuter line is purchasing six DC-9-15Es from Air Florida, which can seat 86, according to a release by the Texas Aeronautics Commission. These should be in operation in January, said Banks.

According to the TAC order, four of the planes will be used for passenger service while the other two will be retained for cargo flights.

Emerald has made an agreement with Continental Airlines to use its counter space and for Continental employees temporarily to write up the tickets, said Banks. Instead of using the jetways, passengers will board from the ground level.

"I'm hopeful it will work out," the aviation director said of Emerald's future at the airport. "It's filling a void. We just haven't had good service between here and San Antonio — you had to go through Dallas."

Time schedule calls for the plane to leave Austin at 9:45 a.m., arrive in San Antonio at 10:15 a.m.; leave San Antonio at 10:30 a.m.; arrive in Midland at 11:40 a.m.; leave at noon and arrive in San Antonio at 1:10 p.m., leave there at 1:40 p.m. and arrive in Austin at 2:10.

The second round calls for the plane to start at McAllen and arrive at San Antonio at 2:50 p.m.; leave at 3:20 p.m. and arrive in Austin at 3:50 p.m.; leave Austin at 4:10 p.m. and arrive in Midland at 5:20 p.m.; leave Midland at 5:40 p.m. and arrive in San Antonio at 6:50 p.m., leave there at 7:10 p.m. and arrive in Austin at 7:40 p.m.

CP Center one of two serving Texas

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Cerebral palsy, a crippling disease due to brain injury, is one of those "umbrella" terms that includes not only cerebral palsy victims, but also persons handicapped by multiple sclerosis, stroke, strangulation and genetic- or accidental-related brain damage, said Jim Crawford, director and physical therapist at the Midland Cerebal Palsy Center.

To help Midland's handicapped children, the CP Center has grown with the population, Crawford explained to members of the Optimist Club of Midland Tuesday. A guest speaker at the club's weekly meeting, Crawford discussed the center's past, present and future.

The CP Center began in 1960 housed in an old brick building behind Midland Memorial Hospital, Crawford said. The facility, sponsored through the fundraising efforts of Children's Service League and local contributions, grew out of its facility by the mid-1960s. The present site at 802 Ventura on three and a half acres, accommodated up to 150 persons in 1978, but the center was running out of space, with 250 patients at that time, Crawford said.

Additions were completed and now the center accommodates 260 children and is still growing.

"As long as Midland continues to grow, so will we," Crawford said.

MIDLAND'S CP CENTER is one of two in Texas serving not only Midland, but also 19 other Texas counties, New Mexico and Mexico, he said.

Plans call for an additional 6,000 feet to be added to the center which will allow additional children to be mainstreamed into school and eventually society.

"We keep the children until they are ready to be with their peers," Crawford said, adding "normal children can be very cruel to the handicapped child."

Crawford pointed out that some of the handicapped children cannot and probably will not ever sit or talk.

"If we don't do anything but help the mothers and fathers of these children, we feel we have helped," he said, adding that the facility is free to the families who use it.

THE CENTER, OPEN FROM 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., takes the children on an out-patient basis. Crawford said the staff brings experiences to the children through programs that will make them well-rounded.

These programs include teaching the child communication, physical therapy to help them get around on their own or with the assistance of a wheelchair or walker, personal self care and the feeling of equality.

Programs are not limited to the center. Working with Midland Independent School District, Crawford noted that teachers are assigned to work with these children.

After the ninth grade, the children graduate from the center. Crawford said many of the children go to college, citing children who have gone to law and medical school and five who are attending Midland College.

Crawford said by taking the children out of a dependent environment through education and physical therapy, they can become productive citizens.

But, this can be an expensive process. Crawford said a walker can cost up to $500, braces up to $1200 and surgery could be as high as $3200.

However, two contributing factors, a new pediatric neurologist who has recently come to Midland and the fact that people don't mind supporting this kind of service, helps these children, Crawford noted.

"We are supported by local money. We are not a member of any health agency, state or federal," Crawford said, adding that Midland is in for a "big change" with a neurologist who will be able to detect a child's handicap at seven or eight months. The center has been receiving children at 3 or 4 years old.

CHILDREN CAN BECOME handicapped in the pre-, para- and post-natal periods, Crawford said.

"It is the pre-natal area where most of the children sustain damage, but it can happen anytime," he said, referring to those children handicapped by an accident or disease.

"These children are physically handicapped, but they love the same things as any other child," Crawford said, adding that through supportive fundraising activities the children can be helped.

The Optimist Club of Midland will be selling Christmas trees in Midland at 1100 Andrews Highway to support the center.

Luis Garcia, 8, left, joined Jim Crawford, director and physical therapist at Midland's Cerebral Palsy Center, at the Optimist Club of Midland's meeting Tuesday. At the age of 4, Luis could only crawl, but with the help of the CP Center, he can walk with the assistance of a walker and can go short distances on his own.

Major battle building over housing, urban aid cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major battle is building within the Reagan administration over proposals by budget director David A. Stockman to slash federal housing aid for the poor and end urban development grants for the natiot the Department of Housing and Urban Development say Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. is prepared to appeal to President Reagan if Stockman sticks to the plan.

"He (Stockman) is talking about major changes in the direction of this department that we just can't accept," said one HUD official, who asked not to be identi'6have a feeling a lot will change" before the president gives his final approval to a new budget program.

Administration sources said Stockman is proposing that federal subsidies for low-income housing construction be discontinued as soon as possible and that new financing for the government's two principal urban development grant programs be stopped by late 1983.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said Stockman is seeking a 75 percent reduction in the nearly $18 billion subsidized housing program for 1982 and even deeper cuts for 1983.

This would slash the number of additional low-income families that could obtain housing asxrom about 142,000 as initially planned for 1982 to 44,000 in 1983, the sources said.

Under Stockman's plan, money to help finance the construction or rehabilitation of low-income housingx; cut off entirely during the current fiscal year, which began Oct. 1. The only housing assistance left would be rent subs"existing housing.

Stockman's proposed elimination of federally assisted construction, coming in the midst of the worst home-building slump since World War II, would mark a radical departure from the past five years, when as many as 200,000 new low-income units were financed in one year.

The 1982 budget now contains money for about 65,000 more housing units.

The statement suggested that Jackson was further incited by accusations that Tealer had fathered a child by his (Jackson's) wife and by an alleged threat by Tealer that "he was going to kill me (Jackson)" by stabbing him with a knife.

At that juncture in the squabble and after Jackson had drunk a beer, Jackson allegedly went to the trading post, where he looked at a nickel-plated Colt Python revolver. According to the statement, he took it and some bullets without paying for the firearm.

Wesley Blanscett, owner of the post, said a shop clerk waited on the man who took the Colt revolver.

"I really didn't pay much attention to the man," said Blanscett, who said he was waiting another customer. "They're buying guns all the time."

After the shooting at the pool hall-garage, Jackson fled to the house of his brother-in-law, Prentiss Jackson, at 110 N. Lee St.

"I said, 'Look, man, I don't want to have anything to do with it,' " Prentiss Jackson said he told his brother-in-law.

He said Willie Jackson pointed the pistol at him and threatened him.

" 'I done shot one nigger; I can shoot another,' " Prentiss Jackson said the accused told him.

Afterward, Willie Charles Jackson allegedly held his wife and family hostage for awhile before giving himself up to police.

Prosecuting the case are Assistant District Attorneys David Joers and Mary Ann Oakley. Defending Jackson in the trial, which is expected to conclude today, is David Lashford.

U.S. envoy meets with Syrian leader

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib met with President Hafez Assad today to continue his efforts to reduce Arab-Israeli tensions. Syria complains the United States can no longer act as a mediator in the conflict.

No details of the meeting at the presidential palace were released. It came as hundreds of thousands of angry Syrians marched through the streets of this capital city to protest Sunday's bombing that killed 64 people and wounded 135.

The state-run media accused the Moslem Brotherhood of setting off the blast of a car packed with explosives and hinted that the fundamentalist insurgents were agents of the United States and Israel.

Al-Baath, the newspaper of Assad's ruling Baath Party, said, "The American demands from their agents (the Brotherhood) consisted of exercising new pressures on Syria especially putting the country in a state of shock."

Syrian sources said Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam on Tuesday told Habib in Damascus that the new military agreement signed by Israel and the United States on Monday made the U.S. government "a direct party in this conflict."

There was no indication of Habib's response. In Washington, the State Department had no immediate comment.

Habib is now on his fourth trip to the Middle East trying to prevent an explosion between Syria and Israel over Syrian missiles in Lebanon. He also is trying to shore up the uncertain cease-fire in southern Lebanon between Israel and the Palestinian guerrillas.

In Israel, opponents of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's coalition governmentattacked the new agreement with the United States and introduced a no-confidence motion in the Knesset, the Israeli Parliament. Four Cabinet members hurried home from the United States, Canada and Brazil for the vote, which was expected today.

Some of the critics said the agreement was weak and unnecessary. Others charged it aligned Israel against the Soviet Union in other parts of the world. Mordechai Gur, a former military chief of staff who is a Labor member of the Knesset, said: "We have no interest in positioning ourselves between the two superpowers."

The pact calls for joint military maneuvers and planning, exchange of military assistance and establishment of a coordinating council between the two governments.

Begin's spokesman, Uri Porat, said the no-confidence motion would fail. Begin's coalition controls 61 of the 120 seats in Parliament.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, who signed the agreement in Washington, cut short his visit to return for the vote.

VW recalling cars for emission checks

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen of America says not all of the 450,000 Rabbits and Sciroccos being recalled for checks of nitrogen oxide and hydrocarbon emission levels will need engine repairs.

"Not all cars have the high levels," VW spokesman Thomas McDonald said Tuesday after the recall was announced. "It depends on what kind of condition they're in, for instance, and how many miles they've been driven."

The Environmental Protection Agency began proceedings last year against the company to force correction of the emissions problem. In return for VW's voluntary recall program, the EPA has agreed to drop its proceedings, McDonald said.

Owners of 1977 through 1979 Rabbits and Sciroccos with gasoline engines will be notified by mail in February that they may take their cars to dealers for emissions tests, the company said. If the emission levels are too high, repairs will be made at no cost to car owners.

Under the program, dealers will adjust the ignition and exhaust gas recirculation systems to reduce nitrogen oxide, McDonald said. In cars with excessive oil consumption, dealers also will install a new type of valve stem seals.

The seals, which have been installed on all VW vehicles since 1980, reduce engine oil consumption and lower hydrocarbon emissions. Owners who already have replaced the valve stem seals in their cars' engines will be eligible for a refund from Volkswagen, McDonald said.

Volkswagen of America said it assembled 8,101 cars in November, a 48.5 percent drop from 15,734 produced in the same month a year ago.

Production for the first 11 months of 1981 totaled 5,909,345 cars for the five firms, a slight increase over 1980's 5,902,775.

AMC's year-to-date production of 104,285 showed the sharpest decline, down 33.4 percent from 1980's 156,499. Chrysler production for the period was 712,534, a 17.3 percent increase over 607,067 reported in the 1980 period. GM's year-to-date production was down 2.8 percent from 1980's 3,762,377 cars at 3,657,094.

Teen-ager who stole skulls handed jail sentence

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A teen-ager who said he stole human skulls from two crypts as a joke has been sentenced to up to 10 years in jail.

Oakland County Circuit Judge Frederick Ziem imposed a one- to 10-year sentence Tuesday on David A. Campbell, 18, of Pontiac.

Campbell said he took one of the skulls to his home and left the other next to a headstone at the Pontiac cemetery June 30.

"He stated that his intent was to play a practical joke, such as placing the skull in the refrigerator or on his sister's bed," Ziem said.

Hoping to receive a reward, Campbell called Pontiac police July 1, and reported he had found a skull, Ziem said.

He was arrested that day, and has already served 154 days in the Oakland County Jail since his arrest.

Theft suspect hit best stores

By T.J. STEPHENS
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Police in three Southern California cities said Monday that a man dubbed "Filthy Rich Al" by his young gang member recruits was the suspected mastermind of a multimillion-dollar theft ring that targeted exclusive stores in Texas and California.

The suspect, Arvey Haws Lyons, 30, has been linked to burglaries in Beverly Hills, Palm Springs, San Diego and the affluent Dallas, Tex., suburb of Highland Park, investigators said.

Lyons has been charged in Beverly Hills with theft by receiving items allegedly stolen in 40 burglaries over the last year at businesses specializing in fine furnishings and decorator items.

He is free on bond pending a Dec. 11 trial in Beverly Hills.

Lyons was arrested Nov. 10 by FBI agents here on federal charges of conspiring to steal and transport by interstate commerce more than $51,000 in clothing from Highland Park's Loretta Blume women's shop.

AND POLICE IN SAN DIEGO said they learned from "confidential sources" that Lyons could be linked to at least six burglaries in that area. However, no charges have yet been filed.

"We believe this to be one of the larger business burglary rings operating in Southern California," Los Angeles County Sheriff's Sgt. Mike Belger said. "From what we've learned, he (Lyons) recruited ring members from gangs in South L.A."

Authorities in various cities said Lyons was linked o burglaries by suspected members of the ring who had been arrested.

In Highland Park, Rodney Woolridge, 24, of Los Angeles told police he was recruited last October by a friend of Lyons. Woolridge said Lyons' wife, Vicki, later bought him and another man airplane tickets to Dallas where, the men scouted the area for burglary targets.

Woolridge was arrested Nov. 3 by Highland Park police after he and another man were spotted hauling $95,000 worth of furs from a Nieman Marcus store. He said later that Lyons watched from a nearby van.

Woolridge said he decided to reveal his boss' name to police because Lyons had failed to furnish him legal assistance.

Woolridge said Lyons, known as "Filthy Rich Al" in South Los Angeles because of his penchant for extravagance, offered him $1,500 to participate in the thefts and a share of money from the sale of stolen merchandise.

Commercial Bank's IRA:

saves tax dollars now ... provides retirement security later.

The New Individual Retirement Account

In 1982 everyone who works for a living is eligible for an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), even if they already are participating in a pension or profit sharing plan. You can save hundreds of tax dollars in 1982 by starting your own IRA. It would be a costly mistake to pass up this opportunity.

The amount each person can save in an IRA has been increased to $2,000 a year as long as earned income is $2,000 or more. Deduct $2,000 from your taxable income or $4,000 if both husband and wife are working.

Taxes on IRA interest are deferred until you begin withdrawing from your account. Most likely you will be in a lower tax bracket after retirement.

Face it, Social Security simply isn't going to be enough. Now Uncle Sam is giving us all a tax break that also means financial security later on. Contact Vi Evans for details about setting up your IRA. Call 683-5281.

Federal regulations require both a tax and interest penalty for withdrawal from an IRA before you attain age 59½. Transfers may be made from one IRA to another without penalty, in some cases.

Father charged with slaying son in 1978

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — The body of a little boy has been exhumed at the request of officials in Wisconsin, who are seeking evidence to support a first-degree murder charge against the child's father.

After a one-hour hearing Monday, Muskegon District Judge William C. Marietti ordered police to remove the body of Joseph C. Carroll Jr. from the Mona View Cemetery. The boy was 3 when he died.

The hearing was requested by the Door County District Attorney in Sturgeon Bay, Wis., after officials there became suspicious about the death of the boy, who died in September 1978. The exhumation was performed Monday night. An autopsy was conducted at a Muskegon funeral home Monday night by Robert Huntington, a forensic pathologist, and a structural anthropologist, both of the University of Wisconsin at Madison. After more X-rays were taken, the body was to be returned to the cemetery.

Muskegon police arrested the boy's father, Joseph C. Carroll, 25, in Muskegon on Sunday on a Wisconsin fugitive warrant and held in the Muskegon County Jail pending extradition to Wisconsin.

Carroll's estranged wife, Susan Pesch, testifed Monday that she and her son had been beaten and choked several times by her husband during family disputes at their home in Sturgeon Bay.

She said she left Carroll after her son's death "because I just don't want to be with him. I don't believe him. I just don't believe him."

Court records show that Carroll told Wisconsin authorities his son died of strangulation after his head became trapped between a metal box spring and the metal headboard of his bed.

After a brief investigation, in which no charges were filed, the boy's body was taken to Muskegon for burial. Police said Carroll apparently had been staying in the Muskegon area since then.

The boy's mother also moved to the Muskegon area, but has been separated from her husband.

Door County, Wis., officials reopened the investigation in August after determining that X-ray measurements of the boy's head showed the death could not have happened as alleged by the father.

Huntington testified Monday that it was his "working opinion" that the boy died of manual strangulation.

Dr. William Fowler, a Sturgeon Bay pathologist who initially concluded the boy died of asphyxiation after getting caught in the bed, did not order an autopsy at the time.

Two tax code opponents were large land owners

EDITOR'S NOTE — The new Property Tax Code probably will raise some Texans' taxes next year while reducing others. What about the two chief legislative antagonists over the code? This, the fourth and last article in a series, examines their situations.

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

Rep. Wayne Peveto fought like crazy to pass the state's new Property Tax Code while Rep. Lynn Nabers did his best to kill it.

Both are lawyers with large land holdings. Both are major taxpayers. And both wait somewhat apprehensively for 1982 when the code — or "Peveto Bill" — takes full effect and reappraisal notices hit the mails.

Nabers lives in Brownwood, where property appraisals have been few and far between and tend to lag behind market values. He and his mother own 2,734 acres of ranch land that are on the tax rolls of the county and one school district at an average of $25 an acre. He thinks the land is worth at least $300. Oil was discovered on the land, and Nabers pays taxes on the value of his leases.

PEVETO LIVES IN ORANGE, where there has been no reappraisal in seven years. He pays taxes on 880 acres of land where he runs cattle and raises soybeans. He saves money because the land is taxed on its agricultural productivity instead of its speculative real estate value.

The "ag value" provision, however, was not part of Peveto's program.

A look at the tax rolls in Brown County indicates Nabers' taxes are $19,804 this year, including those on the land jointly owned with his mother. He is the fourth largest taxpayer in the rural Brookesmith Independent School District.

Peveto's taxes this year amount to $4,742.

Nabers taxes jumped in 1980 and 1981, largely because he built over $300,000 worth of duplexes, which he describes as "the best in Brownwood," but also because of the Peveto Bill.

Neither the Brownwood Independent School District nor the city of Brownwood reduced their tax rates proportionately when they complied with the Peveto Bill by abandoning assessment ratios, and that meant a tax increase for Nabers.

Peveto, meanwhile, had a big drop in taxes in 1980 when the "ag value" exemptions took effect.

The reappraisals resulting from the Peveto Bill probably won't raise the taxes on Nabers' oil leases because they are revalued each year anyway.

NABERS FIGURES REAPPRAISAL might cut the taxes on his Brownwood property at the same time it probably will raise those on older properties in the city.

"On most of my property individually, the chances are it (the Peveto Bill) will reduce my taxes because most of it is pretty new and on the rolls at current values," he said in an interview in his office on the courthouse square.

But his ranch land is something else.

Nabers uttered a tight-lipped "yep" when asked if he thought reappraisals stemming from the Peveto Bill would raise the taxes on his rural acreage.

The land could get an agricultural value exemption, but taxable values have been so low that Nabers never applied.

Alvis Sewalt, chief appraiser of the Brown County Appraisal District, says land in the area where Nabers' property is located probably would have an "ag value" of $50 an acre — double its present taxable value. But Sewalt also said there was a strong chance Nabers' actual tax would not increase.

The Peveto Bill has met a mixed reaction in Nabers' home town, where the Brownwood school board tried to avoid paying its share of the appraisal district's budget. A district court commanded the school board to come up with its $126,194 overdue payment.

Rosemary McInnis, county tax assessor-collector, calls the Peveto Bill "the best thing that ever happened to us."

Asked if taxes in Brown County are fair, she shook her head "no."

Mrs. McInnis said it is easy to understand why Brown County has not had a countywide reappraisal since 1958.

"We had so much difficulty in 1958. The county judge had someone come up to him with a double-barreled shotgun and put it in his stomach and threatened to kill him. We had appraisers met with shotguns. ... All the county commissioners and the county judge were defeated in the next election," she said.

SEWALT SAID THERE HAD been no such incidents during the current reappraisal.

If Nabers is apprehensive about his taxes, Peveto's worries are mainly political.

"I really don't know whether my personal taxes will go up or down. I would expect them to stay near the same," Peveto said in a telephone interview.

He said he expects to hear about it from some of his constituents when appraisal notices go out in May.

He said he intends to help taxpayers obtain homestead exemptions to offset the expected shift in tax burden from industry to houses. He said he will review tax and expenditure records and compute the exemption that would compensate for the shift.

"I'm going to send that to taxpayers before they get their appraisal notices. I hope this will save my butt here in my district," Peveto said.

Orange County seems to be moving smoothly toward 1982 reappraisals, and one reason seems to be the selection of Orange's veteran tax assessor-collector, Fred Force, as chief appraiser.

Force's staff has fed data on 22,000 of the 38,000 parcels of real estate in the county into his computer. Like Peveto, he expects a shift in tax burden from industry to homes but expects taxing units to offset it with new homestead exemptions.

"We are going to have a lively spring, but we'll weather it," he said.

Business cutting back as recession deepens

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

Businesses are trimming their spending plans to compensate for sluggish sales and the prospect of a lengthy recession, new economic reports indicate.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that spending on new construction fell 1.7 percent in October, the eighth decline in the last nine months.

Spending on private projects was off 1.9 percent, led by a big decline in home building.

And in New York, a business research group said manufacturers' overall spending plans fell sharply in the third quarter. The Conference Board said spending by the nation's largest manufacturers on new plants and equipment jumped 10.4 percent in the third quarter, but authorizations to spend money in the future slipped 5.6 percent from the second quarter.

Most economists believe the economy is in a recession now, although the government's latest estimate of the gross national product for the third quarter showed a small increase in the total value of goods and services produced.

BERYL SPRINKEL, Treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs, told the National Association of Business Economists Tuesday the economy is in a "very deep recession." But he added during his address in Stamford, Conn., that a recovery would be quick and long-lasting.

A national study by Industry Week magazine said corporate chief executives expected the economy to improve slowly but steadily while inflation drops next year.

The magazine's survey of 762 executives of large- and medium-sized companies said 54 percent believed business will improve within the next six months. Eighty percent said they believed business would be better a year from now.

In other economic developments:

— Allis-Chalmers Corp., a major producer of farm equipment, said 1,300 production workers would be laid off beginning Monday at its combine plant in Independence, Mo. The company cited a slump in the agriculture implement business.

— Interest rates in the nation's credit markets were mostly higher, although many banks nationwide lowered their prime lending rates to 15.75 percent from 16 percent. The banks showed their caution about the future course of interest rates by failing to cut their prime rates to the 15.5 percent level established Monday by banks in San Francisco and Chicago.

— THE COMMERCE Department predicted U.S. automakers would lose $1.4 billion this year, noting that sales are down 31 percent from 1978, the last peak sales year. The report, presented to the Senate Finance subcommittee on international trade, foresaw "no prospect for a sharp turnaround in the immediate future" for the auto companies.

— U.S. Trade Representative William Brock said in Michigan the government must step in if American automakers are to compete with foreign companies after 1984.

Chinese have to be realistic about jobs

By MICHAEL PARKS
Los Angeles Times

SHANGHAI, China — A doughnut stand has brought peace to Gong He Xin Road in Shanghai's tough Zhabei district.

Three years ago, street gangs of unemployed youths roamed the neighorhood, fighting, gambling and stealing. As their number grew, Zhabei became a dangerous place.

Then Lu Chiangdi, chairman of a local residents committee, lent the equivalent of $6, her pocket money for the month, to two out-of-work youths to set up a fried bread stand in a side alley, a small enterprise she hoped would keep them out of trouble.

The fried bread, a Chinese version of the doughnut, sold well, and the stand moved onto the main street and then expanded into a small restaurant, hiring more and more of the neighborhood's unemployed youths. Gradually, its success encouraged other cooperative ventures, ranging from tailor shops to photo studios to laundries to odd-job companies, and they now line the main road and the side streets as well.

Several hundred out-of-work youths, some unemployed for eight or nine years, now have jobs, the street gangs have been broken up and the neighborhood has finally relaxed.

. "Without jobs, the young people felt they were at a dead end — so why obey any laws, why respect authority, why care about the rest of society?" Lu said, recalling the acute social tension of two or three years ago. "Our problem was quite serious and getting worse, but jobs, first at the fried bread stand and then in other ventures, gave young people a measure of hope, a feeling that they did belong to society and that society cared about them."

The story has been repeated through most of Shanghai, although not always as successfully as on Gong He Xin Road, as the city of 12 million has sought to deal with one of China's potentially most explosive problems: its alienated youth.

"Everything seemed ready to go boom in 1979," an American-educated engineer said. "Former Red Guards and other youths were returning from the countryside by the tens of thousands. There were demonstrations and wall posters and protests all the time. Crime soared, and street gangs actually turned some areas into no-go zones for the police. Rage was the predominant emotion."

The anger has subsided. A massive employment program has found jobs for 1.04 million youths in the last four years; only 30,000 are reported still out of work. Stern measures have been taken in repeated crackdowns on crime — 17 convicted murderers and rapists have been executed in the last four months — and relentless social pressure has been used to break up most of the street gangs. And over the last two years the Shanghai Communist Party leaders have sought to reduce the alienation.

"The situation is much better — jobs have made a big difference," Zhang Zhiang, deputy director of the municipal labor bureau, commented. He paused and then added: "But so much damage was done during the Cultural Revolution to the outlook of these young people and thus to the future core of society that we will have to work for years to repair it and may never succeed completely."

That is evident in the remarks of many of those who now have jobs but are still bitter.

"We know we are China's lost generation," said Hu Xuzhang, 27, who had aspired to become a biologist but is now a bricklayer. "Our brothers did not ask to be Red Guards, we did not demand to be sent down to the countryside, our families did not propose that our schools be closed. The party leadership did all that, and now we are made to bear the brunt of the leadership's mistakes. Of course, we are bitter."

At the Shanghai Cafe, a popular gathering spot for young people, a 24-year-old apprentice aviation mechanic was holding forth to a table of friends.

"Where will we be in 25 years?" he said. "I will tell you — still tightening screws, still driving buses, still steaming rice, still changing light bulbs, still sweeping streets. Society says it gave us jobs, but it really put us on the shelf in the closet and is now closing the door. We are men without a future."

Even at the Xin He restaurant, the former doughnut stand, which now has more than 1,000 customers a day, a staff of 38 and will probably do $100,000 in business this year, gratitude for a job is mingled with regret about what might have been.

"I am not resentful — I have a good job," said Wang Lijuan, 24, who had been unable to find work for several years before she was employed by the restaurant. "It is not as great a job as I would have had if I had been able to go to college, but it is better than the countryside, better than four more years of unemployment and even better than most factory jobs. We all have to be realistic."

Realistic — the word is used again and again as city officials, school principals, newspaper editors and neighborhood leaders discuss Shanghai's youth problems.

"We had to do a lot of educational work, exert a lot of persuasion to get the young people to have a realistic view of their prospects," Lu said at the headquarters of the Gong He Xin Road street committee. "They must be realistic about employment, they must be realistic in their demands on the resources of society, they must be realistic in planning their own lives."

At the Zhabei district reform school, Lu Chaochin, the principal, said the first lesson that students must learn in their one-year confinement is why they are there (gang fights, petty theft, truancy, hooliganism and sexual promiscuity are the usual reasons) and then they must correct their faults and fit into society.

"The basis of a boy or girl's rehabilitation," Lu said, "is a realistic understanding of society and of his or her own situation. About 80 percent of our students learn this. Unfortunately, the others do not."

A tour through the school finds the 263 youths confined there fully engaged in classroom lessons or at work in various shops. Asked what he wants to be on his release, one student after another invariably replied, "A worker." Nothing more ambitious? A carpenter, a printer, an auto mechanic, perhaps? No, comes the reply, just a worker.

Supreme Court tells lower courts to use restraint

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is telling lower federal courts to exercise more restraint and trimming their power to hear some tax-related civil rights cases.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court Tuesday, accused a federal appeals court of "inventing" a requirement that the Pentagon must disclose where it may be storing nuclear weapons and what impact such storage might have on nearby residents.

"In inventing the 'Hypothetical Environmental Impact Statement,' the court of appeals departed from the express intent of Congress manifested" in the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, Rehnquist wrote.

"The court of appeals in this case should have accepted the balance struck by Congress, rather than engrafting onto the statutory language concepts of its own making," he added.

REHNQUIST, generally regarded as the court's most conservative member, mustered all eight of his colleagues behind him in overturning the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The dispute stemmed from concern over the possible storage of nuclear weapons in a Navy ammunition facility on the Hawaiian island of Oahu.

In the second, unrelated case, Rehnquist's opinion virtually closed the federal courthouse to people who claim that state tax assessments violate their civil rights.

The decision evolved from a lawsuit over allegedly discriminatory real estate assessments in St. Louis County, Mo.

Rehnquist based his ruling on "the principle of comity," which says federal judges must respect the authority of state courts.

His opinion did not spell out exactly how far his notion of "comity" should reach or how far it should be applied outside of tax cases. But it did leave open the possibility that some tax disputes may still be heard in federal court.

Only four other court members agreed with Rehnquist in the tax case.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing a strong dissent, said federal courts should still hear such tax cases:

"The power to control the jurisdiction of the lower federal courts is assigned by the Constitution to Congress, not to this court. In its haste to rid federal courts of a class of cases that it thinks unfit for federal scrutiny, the court today departs from this fundamental precept."

Ironically, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who wrote an article earlier this year urging more deference to state courts, joined Brennan's dissent.

Rehnquist's opinions Tuesday are in line with the conservative trend the court has been taking.

In addition, President Reagan and other conservatives have long accused federal courts of "judicial activism" by expanding various rights.

As recently as Monday, Attorney General William French Smith was quoted in The Washington Post as saying:

"I think their independence and prestige is greatly enhanced when the (federal) courts through their own restraint stay within their institutional roles."

Month-long fast ends; One family will avoid 'electronic junk food'

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Motamed family emerged from its month-long fast from television determined that it will never again indulge in electronic junk food.

The Motameds, Mehrdad and Linda and their two daughters, were among 50 families who answered an English teacher's challenge and boycotted television for the month of November.

"The beginning of the month was a little bit difficult, especially for our youngest child," Mrs. Motamed said Tuesday.

Her family and others who accepted Peter Hufstader's challenge met at the private Wheeler School to discuss their experiences and celebrate a victory over what some called the pervasive influence of TV in their homes.

"I'm going to see if we can't set down on paper a schedule of what we're going to watch in the future," said Mrs. Motamed, who has two daughters, aged 8 and 13.

"We've seen that we can do other things without the TV," she said.

"God knows, we used to — and fun things too," interrupted Francis Dinneen, a first-grade teacher at the 540-student day school.

The teacher said she noticed that children of families boycotting television seemed more attentive during the month.

"Too much television does interfere with learning and with reading. The children, they come to school and that's all they talk about: what they saw on television last night," she said.

"It (the boycott) is a gimmick," said Hufstader, head of the school's English department. "A gimmick to point out that heavy, chronic television watchers do not make good readers."

Only one family hinted it might continue the boycott. In fact, said Marilyn Johnson, her family of four turned off the TV in September, after hearing about Hufstader's upcoming challenge.

"We've really made some pleasant discoveries in all this. Everybody is finding a little niche in the family room to curl up and read.

"Oh, we might watch a little television in the future," but very little, she said, adding that the family broke the boycott to watch news of the assassination in October of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and the launching and landing of the space shuttle Columbia.

"The month without television made everybody more conscious" of its interference in other family activities, said Dory Skemp, a single parent with two sons, aged 9 and 10.

Hufstader acknowledged that the families who accepted his challenge probably were the type who controlled TV viewing to begin with.

"There's no question about that," he said, adding that only about 10 percent of the families with children at the school took part.

Hufstader confessed he broke the boycott several times.

He explained that several television stations interviewed him about the challenge, and "I wanted to see how I did on TV. I couldn't miss that. That's a once in a lifetime thing."

Hate campaign confuses 'target'

KENILWORTH, Ill. (AP) — The owner of a tire company in this affluent community north of Chicago says he is mystified why he and his firm are target of an anti-Semitic campaign using Western Union Mailgrams.

American-born Victor Weiss, 63, who says many of his relatives died in Nazi concentration camps during World War II, said Tuesday he has copies of about 100 Mailgrams, many bearing anti-Semitic messages, sent in the name of his company in the last two months across the country.

Some bear the signature of Joseph Mengele, an infamous Nazi concentration camp doctor, and Gen. Alfred Jodl, a chief aide to Adolf Hitler.

"I can't imagine why anyone would do this. And I am mystified who it could be," said Weiss.

His son, Jerry, 36, said a typical Mailgram sent to a Chicago-area customer read:

"Weiss Tire Co. regrets to inform you that we must deny your request for credit after...it was determined you are classified 'Semitic.' "

Other Mailgrams in the last month have consisted of phony orders, including one for 10,000 swastikas that was sent to a California firm in the name of Weiss' company, the younger Weiss said.

"Not long ago a truck pulled up to deliver a five-ton air conditioner that we knew nothing about," he said. "And a classified ad in a Chicago newspaper said Weiss Tire Co. would pay $5 for used tires regardless of their condition. Our phones started ringing and trucks loaded with old tires started arriving.

"There are a lot of kooks out there. It's a disruptive and bothersome thing," he said. "It ties us up three or four hours answering phones. I haven't the slightest notion why this is being done. Dad has been in business here for 22 years."

Warren Bechtel, Western Union spokesman from corporate headquarters in New Jersey, said:

"We can't censor messages unless the material has been deemed obscene in the courts. Many Mailgrams are charged to a telephone number given by the sender, or they are billed directly to a sender's address."

House of Commons vote interrupts royal banquet

LONDON (AP) — A banquet for Prince Charles and Princess Diana was disrupted Tuesday night when senior politicians attending were summoned unexpectedly to vote in the nearby House of Commons.

The ringing of the "division" bell warning that a vote was about to take place in the lower house of Parliament created "general consternation" among the diners, the Times of London reported.

"Food and drink was dropped instantly from eager hands as Members of Parliament went to answer the call to arms," The Times said. "In seconds the banquet was deserted as the honorable and gallant gentlemen raced for the division lobbies."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, sitting next to the 33-year-old heir to the British throne and his 20-year-old wife, "was not amused" The Times said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Keeshan, who has educated and amused legions of little children for 26 years as CBS's "Captain Kangaroo," is a grandfather for the first time.

Britton Conroy Keeshan was born Tuesday in Greenwich, Conn., the son of Michael and Lynn Keeshan.

Bob Keeshan has two other children — both daughters.

Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — It's called the Jimmy Carter Committee for a Greater America — set up by Carter to support the causes he supports.

But the former president says his new political action committee isn't an instrument for his own political ambitions.

"This PAC in no way is for my own political career, for I do not seek office," Carter said in a letter to potential contributors.

"It is a legal instrument for you and me to speak and act forcefully to reach common goals, to rally the support of others and to help political candidates who are interested in the same issues," the letter said.

Carter spokesman Dan Lee said the committee will provide financial help to Democratic candidates and causes, such as human rights and Middle East peace.

The committee, similar to groups created by former presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon, was registered with the Federal Elections Commission last week, with Atlanta businessman William Schwartz as treasurer, Lee said.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Even though he had planned to give up personal appearances, humorist Russell Baker agreed to give a lecture in Pittsburgh, and give it for free, to make amends for a missed engagement last year.

The New York Times columnist said he was booked for the Town Hall-South Lecture series a year ago without his knowledge, despite notice to his booking agent that he was giving up making appearances.

When he failed to appear, he was deluged with mail.

Delegates vote on medfly

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Delegates to the Texas Farm Bureau convention this week support Texas officials' right to restrict produce coming into the state in an effort to control the destructive Mediterranean fruit fly.

The 1,160 farmers and ranchers attending the convention, which ends this afternoon, voted Tuesday to support the right of states to regulate the movement of commodities across their borders if officials deem such action is necessary "to protect agricultural products or people from a disease or insect."

Expert predicts cold winter for most of U.S.

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Expect winter to be colder than usual in the Northeast and West Coast but warmer than usual in the upper Rockies and Gulf states. And lots of precipitation in the Midwest and West.

The annual forecast of Dr. Jerome Namias, a weather expert at Scripps Institution of Oceanography, predicted below-normal rain and snowfall in New England, the Gulf Coast and Pacific Northwest.

Namias said it means a major change from the weather last winter when it was unusually dry over much of the nation and mild over the Western two-thirds.

In part, he said in an interview Tuesday, "indications point to a colder than normal winter over the northeastern quarter of the nation extending from the Midwest and Lake Region to New England and the Mid-Atlantic states."

Namias said it will colder than normal on the West Coast and adjacent states but that "slightly warmer than normal conditions are expected to prevail along the immediate Gulf Coast and in the northern Plains."

The Midwest, he said, will get above-normal precipitation including snow this winter. Along the Atlantic seaboard northward from Virginia, there will be occsional snowfall, "but these storms will quickly migrate out to sea," Namias said.

No excessive snow is expected in the Atlantic states but, Namias said, there will be above-normal precipation in the far Southwest, mostly as snow at higher elevations.

Namias, once chief of forecasts for the National Weather Service, is a research meteorologist with Scripps Climate Research Group. It is the nation's first Experimental Climate Forecast Center, financed by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the National Science Foundation.

In recent years, Namias predicted much of the nation's unusual winter.

The weather changes in the winter of 1981-82 are released partly to large deviations in upper level wind patterns, he said, adding that while last winter was "characterized by a strong northward bulge or ridge in the jet stream over the East, the coming winter is apt to show a trough over the West and a ridge to its east."

"This latter pattern is usually associated with frequent storms plunging into the Western Plateau from the Gulf of Alaska through California, then across the Midwest before rapidly moving off the East Coast or into eastern Canada," Namias said.

The Scripps forecasters take into account ocean water temper)tures and weather patterns over the north Pacific and western North Atlantic. Thousands of temperature readings are taken monthly from ships, planes and buoys and by remote sensing via satellite.

Bankers offering reward for robbers

DALLAS (AP) — A committee of bankers is offering a reward of up to $50,000 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of a man and woman believed responsible for seven bank robberies across the state, the FBI says.

The couple usually wears black cowboy hats, ski masks and gloves and has a rifle or shotgun.

The man is 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, weighs about 190 pounds, and is 40 to 45 years old, the FBI said Tuesday. The woman is described as 5-foot-3 to 5-foot-4, 150 pounds, and 30 to 40 years old. Both are white, officials said.

The reward being offered by the North Central Texas Bankers Security Committee is for information received after Dec. 1, 1981 and before Dec. 31, 1982.

Young progeria victims discover world of love

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — On the eve of a long-awaited trip to Disneyland, two boys turned into little old men by a rare disease got messages of love from fellow victims on both coasts — including one of the oldest sufferers, a 26-year-old artist.

"We are of a family — we all have the same characteristics," Meg Casey said Tuesday.

Miss Casey contacted The Associated Press from the home she shares with a roommate in Milford, Conn., to extend greetings to the two other progeria victims, Fransie Geringer, 8, of Orkney, South Africa, and Mickey Hays, 9, of Hallsville, Texas.

"I really wanted to see the kids," she said in the high-pitched voice characteristic of progeria, an illness that causes baldness, stunts growth and often results in death by the teen-age years.

"I don't know what to say to them except that I'm 26 years old and I'm still here," Miss Casey said.

She said she had never met another victim of the disease, a lament shared by Fransie and Mickey before they were brought together this week.

Fransie was to realize his life's dream today by meeting the storybook character Pinocchio at Disneyland.

Until this week when he met Mickey, Fransie found a unique identity with Pinocchio, the adventurous wooden puppet of the 19th-century Italian fable who won a struggle to become a normal boy.

"It's not nice to be the only one," Fransie once told his mother, Magda, 31.

Fransie is a bald dwarf with a pointy nose who at 3 feet 8 inches stands only a couple inches higher than the character portrayed in Carlo Collodi's fairy tale. His arthritic walk resembles a marionette's disjointed movement.

His father, Herman, 37, said that every day Fransie prays that God "will make him big and strong."

Fransie journeyed to the United States with his family after an Associated Press article in August told of his struggle against progeria and his dream of meeting Pinocchio. Hundreds of North Americans sent donations ranging from $1 to $400 to Fransie's family or contributed to various funds established in his behalf.

Texans, meanwhile, raised money to send Mickey to Disneyland at the same time so he could meet Fransie.

The boys have been almost inseparable since they met Sunday night.

As for who's more important — Pinocchio or Mickey — Fransie said, "I love Pinocchio, and I love Mickey."

Tiny Alicia Gowans, an 11-year-old sufferer of the affliction from San Jose, Calif., planned to visit Disneyland with her mother today and possibly meet Fransie. She said she was glad to know she was not alone in suffering the disease.

Miss Casey, who wears a blond wig, said, "I never felt ugly, and I was never treated ugly. It's the person's inside and not the outside that really matters."

She said she goes to bars and dances and has a normal social life. She depends on Social Security and sells her pen-and-ink drawings and water colors on commission and by word of mouth, she said.

Dr. Margaret Seashore, director of the genetics clinic at Yale-New Haven Hospital in New Haven, Conn., said in a telephone interview that she had treated Miss Casey for 15 years for progeria and "if she is not the oldest (victim) in the world, she certainly is very close to it."

Ms. Seashore said she said had cared for several such children and "it is very unusal to live as long as she has." She said Miss Casey is a "very plucky person, a young woman with enormous energy and drive, with a determination to stay here (alive)."

Senate Intelligence Committee critical of Casey's dealings

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee is cautiously criticizing William J. Casey's past business practices but concluding that he is "not unfit" to continue as CIA director.

One Democrat, however, said he disagreed with the conclusion and another Democrat refused to sign it.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the acting committee chairman, announced Tuesday that the panel had hammered out a short consensus report after two days of closed sessions. Sources on the committee said senators disagreed over how strongly to criticize Casey and the 5- to 10-page report on their four-month investigation avoids any ringing endorsement of him.

The report was to be released today.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., said, "Our basic conclusion is that he was not unfit to serve, but it's safe to say the whole situation is not flattering. There were omissions in his reports" to the Senate committee.

Schmitt said he was convinced that Casey inadvertently omitted some of his past business clients and other information from disclosure forms filed with the committee during the confirmation process last January. Casey amended the forms later.

"We just wish he was more meticulous in his private (business) life," Schmitt said.

But Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., said the report could be read two ways. Huddleston said Casey's errors could be viewed as ordinary mistakes or "you can take an attitude that there is a definite pattern of not being candid with the committee. There is enough in the report for the president to consider ... whether it is in the best interests (of the country for Casey) to continue as director."

One Democrat, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, said he would dissent from the committee's basic conclusion about Casey's fitness as CIA director. And a Senate source, requesting anonymity, said Democrat Patrick Leahy of Vermont signed the committee's investigative findings but not its conclusion about Casey's fitness, arguing that was for President Reagan to decide.

One senator, who asked not to be identified, said a draft report prepared by special Democratic counsel Irvin Nathan "questioned Casey's credibility." A committee source said senators with opposing views on Casey "fought like 900-pound gorillas over every word in the final report."

Moynihan said the report did not touch on Casey's decision not to put his stock portfolio in a blind trust while he heads the CIA because "that was not a subject assigned to this inquiry."

Nevertheless, two sources said some Democrats suggested that the panel comment on Casey's handling of his current stock holdings but met almost solid opposition from Republicans who argued that the law does not require a blind trust.

Casey, who has broad access to the government's secret data on international economic developments, broke with the practice of his two predecessors at the CIA in keeping control of his stocks. Casey and his wife own stock worth at least $1.8 million and perhaps more than $3.4 million in 27 corporations with major foreign operations whose value could rise or fall on the basis of developments that Casey might learn about before the general public.

"I think it's a troublesome thing because he does have access to a considerable amount of economic information, but you can't condemn a fellow for not violating the law," Huddleston said.

Biden said he had "a very different view from my colleagues" about Casey's overall fitness. "The issue is not whether Bill Casey committed crimes, but whether he has my confidence and the confidence of the committee."

Biden said he had no quarrel with the panel's investigative work or with its findings in specific cases but disagreed "with what conclusions you draw from that. It's not because I think there's a smoking gun or he committed any crime. It goes to confidence."

The committee started looking at Casey's business practices after it became public in July that two federal court decisions had criticized his role in Multiponics Inc., a failed New Orleans farming venture.

A federal appellate court ruled that Casey and other directors managed the firm in a pattern of self-interest, driving it deep into debt. A federal district judge ruled that Casey and other directors knowingly misled investors in the firm, but that judge has agreed to give Casey an opportunity to prove in court that he was not at fault.

The panel also examined Casey's appointment of Max Hugel, a New Hampshire sewing machine importer with no intelligence background, to head the agency's clandestine services. Hugel resigned last summer after denying charges of business improprieties leveled by two former partners.

The committee also is known to have looked into Casey's handling of a blind trust during his service in the Nixon and Ford administrations and his legal work on behalf of Indonesia after he left government.

At the start of the investigation, committee chairman Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Republican Sens. William Roth of Delaware and Ted Stevens of Alaska called on Casey to resign. Goldwater, who is in Arizona recovering from hip surgery, reversed his position early in the investigation.

Tommy Pollard, 17, a senior at Lee High School, has been named Lion of the Week by the Downtown Lions Club. Pollard, son of Bryan and George Ann Pollard of 3100 Shell Ave., is a member of National Honor Society, the Student Council President's Cabinet, JETS, German Club, the varsity basketball team and Medical Explorers. He also has two academic letters, two PTA academic awards, the Optimists Youth Appreciation Award and is a National Merit Commended Student.

Slayings boost Miami's homicide toll to 574

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla (AP) — The discovery of two slaying victims today in this resort community boosted the year's homicide toll in metropolitan Miami to 574, breaking the record set in 1980.

North Miami Beach police said they found the bodies of a man and a woman in a house, and that the killings were apparently drug-related. Both victims, whose identities were withheld pending notification of relatives, had been shot in the head and the man had been beaten, police said.

Police said both victims had been dead for more than 12 hours and that two suspects were in custody.

"It's drug-related, this whole thing," patrolman Alfred Sturtz said of the increase in killings. "It's crazy out there ... and still going strong."

Homicide records kept by the Dade County Medical Examiner's office on Tuesday listed the number of killings at 572 in 1981. Last year, 573 people were killed in the metropolitan Miami area.

Last year's toll included the killings during the Miami race riots in May, which left 18 people dead. The year also brought an influx of Cuban refugees who arrived in the so-called "Freedom Flotilla." Some of the refugees were taken from Cuban jails and put aboard boats for the United States.

Credit card scam could cost banks

HOUSTON (AP) — Unless credit card customers agree to pay for purchases they never made, banks must absorb losses from a scheme that taps into credit card accounts without using the bank cards, an investigator says.

Walter Cicack, a Houston investigator for Citibank of New York, said Tuesday the "white plastic card scheme" involves millions of dollars and is spreading rapidly from coast to coast. He notified Citibank they had been charged for purchases they never made.

A merchant then opens a credit card account with a local bank and operates legitimately for six to eight months, investigators said. Later fictitious purchase orders, each varying from $500 to $900, are drawn up and sent to the bank, they said.

Investigators still are trying to determine how the credit card account numbers are distributed.

Zoo may have erred

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Samson the gorilla was the chief attraction at Milwaukee County Zoo, but officials now say they may have erred in lowering a U.S. flag to half staff to mourn his death.

"Perhaps we were overzealous," zoo director Gilbert Boese said.

Boese said he ordered the flag hoisted to full staff after being telephoned by a protesting citizen. Members of the county's Board of Supervisors said they too received calls after the incident was publicized on television Saturday.

Samson, 32, died Friday. A pathologist said Tuesday an autopsy indicates the 531-pound lowland gorilla suffered a heart attack, having been born with a malformed coronary artery.

Reagan administration favors changing interest on bonds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on Series EE U.S. Savings Bonds — a popular way of investing for millions of small savers — should be allowed to rise in tandem with the yields paid on higher denomination government securities, the Reagan administration says.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan announced details of the proposal in a speech Tuesday in New York. Although the savings bond interest rate could rise, the plan also calls for a minimum interest rate, but that has not been determined.

The variable-rate bonds proposal is subject to approval by Congress. The earliest it could be acted on is February.

Under present circumstances, such a change would allow interest of about 10.8 percent on a savings bond held five years or longer, compared with the current maximum of 9 percent. The higher figure is 85 percent of the average 12.75 percent interest now paid on Treasury securities.

The guaranteed interest on bonds now outstanding would not fall below the current 9 percent level. But the Treasury Department said the floor on bonds sold after the new plan goes into effect would be determined "based on market conditions at the time the proposed program is introduced."

Variable-rate bonds "will provide needed improvement for the small saver who has been loyally participating in the program, for the non-saver who needs an incentive to start saving, and for the nation itself," Regan said in an address launching a savings bond drive in New York.

Savings bonds have been a popular investment since they were introduced in 1941 as defense bonds paying interest of 2.9 percent. They currently are owned by approximately 23 million families.

The interest rate has been increased 12 times, but not enough in recent months to keep many savers from cashing their bonds and putting the money into more lucrative investments.

Sales of savings bonds fell from a record $8 billion in 1978 to only about $2.5 billion in the first 10 months of 1981. The total of outstanding bonds dropped from $80.5 billion in 1978 to $68.4 billion last August.

The proposal outlined by Regan would affect only the familiar Series EE bonds and their predecessors, Series E. These bonds are sold in minimum denominations of $50 at a price one-half their face value. When held to the full eight-year maturity, they can be cashed in for face value.

The changes would apply to outstanding Series EE and E bonds as well as to those purchased in the future.

Pres. Reagan, in a surprise visit Tuesday, tells the White House Conference on Aging that he is frustrated at being portrayed as an enemy of his own generation and said he would not betray those entitled to Social Security benefits.

Reagan promises 'Social Security will be saved'

By DON IRWIN
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Reagan charged that critics of his Social Security proposals have "needlessly and cruelly frightened" elderly Americans, and then promised delegates to the White House Conference on Aging Tuesday that "Social Security can and will be saved."

Making an unscheduled appearance under heavy security at a luncheon meeting of the four-day conference, the president was warmly received by his audience of about 1,200, although some delegates seemed skeptical later about his commitment to the costly Social Security program.

Minutes before Reagan's arrival, the administration scored a tactical victory at the conference when a committee on economic well-being of the aged approved a resolution opposing use of general Treasury funds to finance any shortages in Social Security accounts.

Reagan proposed no solutions to Social Security's money problems during his 25-minute talk. He emphasized instead his expectation that a bipartisan task force that he said would be announced soon will "propose realistic long-term reforms to put Social Security back on a sound financial footing."

NOTING THAT leaders of Congress are to appoint 10 of the group's 15 members, he said he expected it to "forge a working, bipartisan consensus so that necessary reforms will be passed into law."

The 70-year-old president voiced "frustration" that, during the 1980 election campaign and since, he had been "portrayed as somehow an enemy of my own generation," primarily because of his advocacy of some Social Security reforms.

"There has been political demagoguery and outright falsehood, and as a result many who rely on Social Security for their livelihood have been needlessly and cruelly frightened," Reagan said.

"Those who did the frightening either didn't know what they were talking about or they were deliberately lying."

The president recalled that during the campaign he pledged to "try to restore the integrity of Social Security and do so without penalty to those dependent on that program.

"I HAVE kept that pledge, and intend to keep it — both parts of it. We will not betray those entitled to Social Security benefits, and we will — indeed we must — put Social Security on a sound financial basis."

To warm applause, Reagan said he agreed with Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, that "this country is big enough and able enough to provide for those who have served it."

But the nation cannot afford "supporting, as disabled, people who are not disabled or educating from Social Security funds young people of affluence and wealth," he added to more applause.

The audience responded again when Reagan said he wanted "the elderly needy...to know that they have a government and a citizenry that cares about them and will protect them." One of his administration's goals, he said, is to meet their basic needs "with compassion as well as efficiency."

The first clue most delegates had that the president would appear before the conference that was meeting in the Sheraton Washington Hotel came when a squad of security men accompanied by guard dogs trained to sniff out explosives began patrolling the hotel's crowded lobby late in the morning. All who entered the hotel dining room were required to pass through metal detectors and Secret Service men were scattered about the room.

THE BALANCE of the 2,200-delegate conference watched Reagan's talk on closed circuit television at the Washington Hilton Hotel, site of an attempted assassinination of Reagan last April.

Although presidential security has tightened considerably since that incident, it seemed tighter still on Tuesday, possibly because of reports that a Libyan assassination squad may be in the United States.

Delegates questioned at random seemed reassured by Reagan's affirmations of support for Social Security, but some were dubious. Among the latter was Dorothy Bingham, a retired production worker in the General Electric plant at Ontario, Calif., who said of Reagan's general economic program: "I hope it works, but I think it won't."

John W. Thomas, a retired carpenter from Anchorage, Alaska, and a Democrat who is one of the relatively few blacks among the 2,200 convention delegates, said he was "generally pleased" by the talk, but added: "The only thing that bothered me is: was the president sincere in saying he would do everything in his power to save Social Security?"

From the other side, Joanne Blankenship, a Tulsa, Okla., Republican, said she was pleased that Reagan spoke "as one of the elderly" and that his principal message was that "the administration and Congress will not let Social Security fall apart."

The administration's concern about the fiscal soundness of the program was challenged by former Social Security commissioner Robert M. Ball, who told the economic panel the system faces "no big disaster." He said Social Security faced possible short-term deficits from 1986 to 1989, but would be on sound ground thereafter until about 2025 when the World War II "baby boom" generation will be retired.

BALL PROPOSED use of general fund revenues to deal with the anticipated short-term deficit. His approach was challenged later by Bruce Nestande, an Orange County supervisor and former assemblyman who was an aide in Reagan's gubernatorial administration in California.

Nestande said the general fund approach "would jeopardize the fiscal integrity of the Social Security funds" and sponsored a resolution opposing it. The committee adopted his proposal 111-34.

Study on cancer deaths termed 'genocidal'

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cancer risk from radiation for survivors of a nuclear war could be reduced if only older people worked in the areas that received the most contamination, a study says.

The government-funded report, publicized Tuesday by those who oppose its conclusions, said people over age 40 would suffer fewer radiation-induced cancer deaths and could even eat more contaminated food.

Anti-war groups and an elderly rights organization said the study by two scientists at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee advocates exposing the elderly to excess post-war radiation to save the young.

"I find this study absolutely revolting — genocidal," Maggie Kuhn, head of the Gray Panthers organization, told a news briefing.

However, the authors of the study, Drs. Kathy S. Gant and Conrad V. Chester, denied that they are advocating the misuse of old people after a nuclear holocaust.

"We are not suggesting sacrificing the older people," Ms. Gant said in a telephone interview. "We are not advocating a policy, but simply making a statement about how to lower cancer deaths after a nuclear war."

The report, published in a recent issue of Health Physics, said older people could take a higher radiation dose because of the long latency period between exposure and the development of cancer — up to 30 years.

By the time many cancers would develop, the report said, most older people would have reached the end of their life expectancy and probably would die from other causes.

"We want to keep everybody's exposure (to radiation) as low as possible and are not suggesting that older people be sent out to take all the radiation doses," Ms. Gant said.

But those at the briefing called by the Gray Panthers and the Center For Defense Information, an arms control and anti-nuclear weapons group, said the study was another example of a trend in government to think that nuclear war is winnable and survivable.

Dr. Arjun Makhijani of the Hiroshima-Nagasaki National Committee of Washington said no one would survive a nuclear war. The only solution to the nuclear threat is to assume no survivors and to disarm, he said.

Richard Allen's lesson

National security adviser Richard V. Allen made a wise decision when he chose to go on administrative leave. The fact that controversy currently is swirling around Allen has compromised his position in the Reagan administration and was threatening to impair the overall effectiveness of the administration.

Now that the question has been all but divorced from the performance of the Reagan administration, questions can be answered openly with few if any repercussions.

The controversy, of course, centers on $1,000 Allen says was given him by two Japanese journalists in return for arranging an interview with Nancy Reagan. Allen further says he placed the money in a locked file and simply forgot about it for eight months.

That's where the Richard Allen story begins to take on some interesting aspects. Very simply stated, while the story may be completely true in every respect it's not a flattering admission. Politicians do not "forget" $1,000 payments from journalists, at least they certainly should not, even when a $1,000 payment would be viewed as insignificant. Allen's in such a position.

The Reagan administration has remained remarkably scandal-free throughout its first year. The notable exceptions have been Budget Director David Stockman's ominous Atlantic Monthly admissions and, now, the Allen controversy. Previous recent administrations have encountered more controversy, usually sooner and more crippling.

Allen has accepted full responsibility for what he has termed "important forgetfulness." It's obvious that he's going out of his way to try to salvage his position with the administration so that, if possible, he can remain an effective member of the Reagan team. That remains to be seen via future developments in this story.

But Allen, and all the members of Reagan's administration, should learn an important lesson from this little episode: Those who hold public offices or positions in government inherit a tremendous responsibility. That responsibility is to remain above any taint of impropriety, which includes the illusion of impropriety.

If Allen's impropriety was forgetfulness, as he says, it was a lesson that shouldn't have been necessary. We expect more of those in government.

Feeling the crunch

A vast cult of consultants, who congregate on the outskirts of the nation's capital and receive fat contracts from the government to conduct studies, is feeling the pinch of budget cuts.

According to a Wall Street Journal article, Uncle Sam, who has been a huge customer of consulting firms, all of a sudden is becoming a tough sell. "I think there's going to be an awful lot fewer consultants here a year from now," says Robert R. Nathan, a consultant, himself, in the field of economics.

The ax has fallen already. An example of cutbacks is Planning Research Corp., that contracts with the Department of Energy. Its staff of 200 has been reduced to 10. At two other firms, TRW Inc. dropped 158 people from its energy consulting work force and Booz, Allen & Hamilton Inc. reduced personnel in its Bethesda, Md., office by 50 percent.

All the troubles didn't start with the present administration. Former President Carter, in April 1980, ordered consultant spending slashed 15 percent. In his first week in office, President Reagan ordered another 5 percent cut. And finally, in the 1982 budget reconciliation bill, Congress called for a $500 million slash in consultant spending.

Of course, a lot of the consulting force brought expertise and sage advice to Washington projects. But, "There were an awful lot of parasites, phenomenal waste and mismanagement," says David Johnston, who consults on solar energy.

The situation shows that bureaucrats are getting the message — that people are tired of wasteful spending. Now, even Washington, itself, is feeling the crunch.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

My inside White House source (Ed Meese's barber's cousin's Avon lady) tells me that David Stockman was given a choice — either repent or give back his AFL-CIO Man of the Year Award.

●

Some have their doubts about Stockman's credibility as Reagan's budget spokesman. These are probably the same folks who poo-pooed Lee Marvin being asked to be Grand Marshal of San Francisco's Gay Pride Parade.

●

How can the Atlantic Monthly top itself in its next issue? Perhaps with an article by Jane Fonda saying, "Closing the Diablo plant was a mistake. Those nuclear engineers have families!"

Reagan on crash course with electric demand

By PETER NAVARRO
Special to the Los Angeles Times

If Reaganomics succeeds and through its supply-side magic pushes the American economy back onto a high growth path, will the supply of electricity required to support that growth be there? There are reasons to fear that the answer is no.

From 1950 to 1973, electricity use grew roughly twice as fast as gross national product. Since the Arab oil embargo, electricity demand has still grown an average of 1½ times faster than GNP. These statistics suggest a rough rule of thumb: GNP cannot grow substantially faster than the growth in electricity demand.

This raises two questions. Will the historical link between GNP and electricity be sustained? If so, is the utility industry building enough plants to support the Reaganomics growth path?

The answer to the first question is yes. As we move to a less oil-dependent electricity economy, the linkage should grow stronger. The price of electric power relative to that of oil has fallen substantially, encouraging fuel-switching. Thus, while higher prices have meant less energy use, higher oil prices have meant more electricity use. While electricity-intensive technologies such as the electric-arc furnace, automated rolling mills, and the electric car will all help conserve oil, such conservation occurs through an increase in electricity use. And, in the battle to boost productivity, such young technologies as microprocessors and robotics will raise electric power demands even as they save time, labor and overall energy.

What about the second question? If the Reagan economy grows at a 4 to 5 percent rate and electricity demand rises at the same or a faster pace, will electricity supply be sufficient? The answer appears to be no.

The North American Electric Reliability Council forecasts a 3 percent annual net increase in capacity in the 1980s. But it also reports considerable delays in that construction program. Moreover, some of the proposed plants have been, or are likely to be, canceled. Thus, the 3 percent projection is optimistic, and a more realistic forecast would be 2 percent or less — well below the requirements of Reaganomics.

This modest construction program does not mean that the power industry lacks confidence in Reaganomics. Rather, it indicates a severe financial deterioration constraining the industry's ability and desire to raise capital. This deterioration is evident in all its vital signs.

For example, the industry's average market-to-book ratio has plunged from a robust 1.43 in 1970 to an anemic 0.72 today. At the same time, overall bond ratings in the industry have sunk from the creditworthy range of AAA and AA into the quicksand of A and BBB. The result is an inability on the part of utility executives to raise capital for new power plants. Without enough power plants, there won't be the generating capacity to support economic growth.

The administration's best hope is to improve state public utility commission regulation, which has not provided the industry a fair rate of return on a fair rate base. However, the roots of this regulatory failure are deeply tangled in the political and institutional soil of the public utility commissions.

The political problem is painfully simple: Rate increases are unpopular. Thus, public utility commissioners hold rates down in the short run even if that portends shortages in the long run. Nor is the institutional problem mysterious; most public utility commissions are understaffed, underpaid and inexpert. The result is regulatory lag, which erodes the value of a rate increase should a utility be granted one.

Facing regulatory failure, the Reagan administration could exhort the public utility commissions to do better, but more direct intervention will likely be necessary.

The federal government could nationalize electric utility regulation. But such a Draconian step would hardly improve matters, since the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which regulates the wholesale sales of the private utilities, would likely be the body to assume the new responsibilities. The federal commission is guilty of many of the same failings as are the public utility commissions.

More constructively, the administration might regionalize regulation, merging the public utility commissions into multi-state organizations paralleling regional utility power pools. This would avoid considerable duplication of regulatory effort, eliminate some of the competition of the public utility commissions to palm rate increases off on other states, and allow for better regional planning.

The administration should quickly keep its promise to reduce costly licensing delays and excessive environmental regulations. But all other options present problems. For example, any financial assistance beyond the meager tax breaks already legislated would inflame conservatives wary of "bailouts" and enrage liberals smarting over cuts in social spending. Similarly, the federal government could simply build the additional power plants necessary, but any expansion of public power would be equally onerous to conservatives, and would be a budget drain.

Finally, there is simple deregulation. But deregulation poses problems of its own, and should be viewed as a long-run experiment rather than a panacea. As one member of the federal regulatory commission, Matthew Holden, has warned, the danger is that deregulation might become "a diversionary intellectual fad, while time is wasted in not dealing with the practical money problems we already know."

So Reaganomics is headed on a collision course with electricity shortages. Unfortunately, many of the policies open to a conservative administration are ideologically distasteful. But the twin ironies of a failure to act are clear. The prediction by some that no more new power plants are needed will be a self-fulfilling prophecy if the Reagan economy stagnates, and Reaganomics will be hoist on its own supply-side petard if electricity shortages cause that stagnation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 2, the 336th day of 1981. There are 29 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 2, 1804, Napoleon Bonaparte crowned himself Emperor Napoleon I of France.

On this date:

In 1942, a nuclear chain reaction was demonstrated for the first time by scientists working on a secret project in Chicago.

In 1956, Fidel Castro and his followers landed in Cuba to overthrow the Batista government.

In 1960, the Archbishop of Canterbury broke church precedent by visiting Pope John XXIII at the Vatican.

And in 1972, fire raged through a pop music festival in Seoul, South Korea, killing more than 50 people.

Ten years ago: A state of emergency was declared in Chile after a night of violence triggered by a demonstration against food shortages.

Five years ago: The Chinese government dismissed foreign minister Chiao Kuan-hua and named Huang Hua to replace him.

One year ago: Moscow denied reports of a Soviet military buildup along the border with Poland, where labor unrest threatened the Communist government's stability.

Today's birthdays: Actress Julie Harris is 56. Actress Maggie Smith is 47.

Thought for today: I enjoy convalescence; it is the part that makes illness worthwhile. — George Bernard Shaw, Irish-born playwright (1856-1950).

ART BUCHWALD

The losers are becoming the winners!

People keep insisting that I'm making it up, but under a tax law lobbied through last summer, companies who lost money in 1981 can sell their losses to firms who made money, so the latter will not have to pay any corporation taxes.

Art Buchwald

Whereas company losses were something no one liked to talk about in the past, they now have become a valuable commodity and are being traded on the open market.

This is how it works:

"Hello, John, Hal Lemster of International Pushbutton calling. I just read your financial report. I see you people lost $750 million this year. Congratulations."

"Thanks, Hal. I guess we were just lucky."

"Well, International Pushbutton had the best year ever. We made one billion-two, before taxes."

"Sorry to hear that, Hal."

"Everyone has an off year. I'm calling to buy your tax losses, John. If we can deduct your losses against our profits, and own the tax credits against new equipment, the government will owe us money."

"How much are you offering, Hal?"

"We'll give you $100 million in cash, retool your plant and lease the equipment back to you at a very favorable rate. Our accountants figure that with speeded-up depreciation, we'll pay less taxes this year than the kid who works in the mail room."

"Gosh, Hal, I'd like to help you out, but my accountants figure our tax losses are worth at least $200 million."

"You must be crazy. Just because you had a bad year, and we had a good year, there is no sense holding us up."

"This is strictly business, Hal. Our losses are our only assets. United Bull has offered us $150 million and I just had a call from Dimblebee Oil, which is willing to give us $170 million in preferred notes. We're sitting in the catbird seat."

"John, I'll be very honest with you. If I don't find a company with large tax losses, I'll be in serious trouble with my stockholders. I'll never be able to explain to them why we had to pay taxes to the government on our profits. They could sue me for mismanagement."

"I don't want to hear about your troubles, Hal. Who told you to make a lot of money in the first place?"

"Someday you'll have a good year, John, and then you're going to need help from a losing company."

"Look, Hal, if you can't find a way of avoiding taxes don't cry on my shoulder."

"All right, John, I've got my controller here and we're ready to deal. We'll make you the same offer we made the Montezuma Automobile Company. We'll pay $175 million in cash for your tax losses and lease back to you a completely new plant in Ohio."

"Now you're making sense. That means neither you nor I will have to pay any corporate taxes for the next five years."

"It's a sweetheart deal for both of us, John. Will you take it?"

"Sure, Hal. After all, what are friends for?"

"Great. How do you think Reagan's economic plan is going?"

"I think he's going to have to cut more fat out of the budget in order to get the deficit down. He's going to have to go after the welfare cheaters and the people who are always looking for a free lunch."

"You can say that again. When we were kids we worked for what we got. The only way Reagan is going to get this country back on its feet is to stop giving everyone with a hard-luck story a handout."

A CHANGING WORLD

President Reagan's nuclear statement reiterated policy

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

Whether we like it or not, leftists in Congress, the press, academia and those with other platforms for sounding off, continue to berate President Reagan for a remark stating that there is a scenario for limited battlefield nuclear exchanges in Europe.

John Pinkerman

The ranting and raving go on even after Mr. Reagan's subsequent speech offering the Soviets what amounts to total missile disarmament in Europe if they will do the same.

The president's critics behave, recklessly as usual, as if they were hearing his earlier analysis of military strategy for the first time ever. The truth is quite the contrary.

Anyone who has ever served in any uniformed military position of even middle-level responsibility has known of the possibility of limited nuclear combat, particularly in Europe, for at least 30 years.

If this option were not available, why in the world would both Warsaw Pact and North Atlantic Treaty Organization troops be equipped with nuclear weapons and why would U.S. forces have 98 A-weapons storage sites throughout Western Europe?

Critics of the president in most cases know the facts of limited nuclear war capability — but they choose to pound and pound on him for saying, in response to an editor's question, what is the truth.

These critics of Mr. Reagan — and of the United States — might learn something from what Britain's Yorkshire Post has said in an editorial entitled "Victim of Truth."

"It is now generally acknowledged that what President Reagan said about nuclear strategy in Europe was in no sense new. It was only made to seem new by the anti-American lobby which got its mischievous message amplified by a poorly informed, gullible or hasty news media....

"Even now some red-faced commentators insist that he revealed insensitivity in saying what he did. That is an extraordinary doctrine.

"The president was asked a question by an American editor at an on-the-record press luncheon. Should he have said no comment? Should he have answered an entirely different question as some politicians do? Should he have fudged? Should he have lied?

"President Reagan was reiterating the doctrine espoused over the years by NATO and his remarks were totally in line, with allied doctrine. There could have been no ambiguity except for those who were either determined to find it or were ill-informed on the subject."

What all this boils down to is that the free world's communist enemies are well-equipped for all kinds of warfare — conventional, nuclear, chemical and biological — and that the United States particularly must be prepared to reply in kind, at the same time limiting the scope of the reply as best we can.

Even Japan, the only victim of A-war and for 35 years a total foe of nuclear weapons, understands this fact of life. A Tokyo Mainichi newspaper poll has just developed the startling fact that 40 percent of Japanese adults now believe their country should have nuclear weapons.

The situation regarding chemical weapons runs in approximately the same vein as that concerning nukes. If, on some future date Mr. Reagan should announce or say in response to a question that the United States is upgrading its capability to respond in kind to a chemical or biological warfare attack, the cries of anguish from the leftists would be heard from here to kingdom come.

But, what have these same critics of U.S. survival efforts had to say about the totally convincing evidence that the communists have used trichothecene mycotoxins and other lethal chemical weapons in Laos and Cambodia?

Besides such attacks in Southeast Asia, there also is unconfirmed evidence that the Soviets have used chemical agents in their two-year unsuccessful effort to crush Afghanistan. Left-wing critics of Mr. Reagan are equally silent on these reports.

The facts are that the Soviet Union has at least equality with the United States in nuclear weapons and vast superiority in chemical agents — and has far less compunction about using them.

President Reagan was realistic and candid in stating what the possibilities are of a confrontation — along with restating what NATO hopes to do in limiting such an exchange.

The wishful thinkers and leftists do the president and the cause of peace no service whatsoever in their continued harping that gives great comfort to the men in Moscow's Kremlin.

This school is worth it because of the care

EDITOR'S NOTE — They come from broken homes, seeking love and the key to a better life. They work hard and play hard under discipline that still retains vestiges of the 19th century. But most students at the Milton Hershey School think it's worth it.
By JOHN DANISEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The words rang in the ears of the victorious athletes as they boarded the return bus.

"We have lost.

"And we are sad.

"But at least we have.

"A Mom and Dad."

THE TAUNT struck home because, indeed, none of the students at the Milton Hershey School was going back that night to a Mom and Dad.

The heavy silence that hung over the team after that remark stayed with it a long time, recalls Audrey DeMuth, a longtime teacher who is now enrollment director at the school. It even spread to other students.

"They can and they did get over it," she says. "They got over it after they got back within the caring fold of people." To her, the incident was another example of "what makes this school special."

"SPECIAL" is a word frequently used to describe the Milton Hershey School, a private, tuition-free boarding school for children who lack care from one or both natural parents — the children of divorces, of parents who have run off, "social orphans" in the jargon.

Its aim: "To show that a poor kid doesn't have to end up on the skids," says public information director Virgil Alexander.

ALTHOUGH school officials concede they can't make life perfect for a child who has lost a parent, they try every day with 1,250 youngsters from six through 18.

In an age when publicly financed programs are being slashed, school president John Aichele says the Milton Hershey School is "fairly well off," about as well endowed as a top-quality private school. It's supported by a trust that owns most of the Hershey Foods Corp. and its wealth sets it apart from other institutions for children.

With three campuses sprawling across 10,000 rolling green acres, the school resembles a private academy. But the grounds or the buildings aren't what make it special to Mrs. DeMuth.

"The overall thing about this school is caring," she says. "Every youngster who comes here has had some trauma in his or her life."

STUDENTS live comfortably in group homes that attempt to create a feeling of stability in rocky young lives.

"It's one big family," says John Murrain, a senior. "There may be things you don't like about it, but it's one big family."

Helping to create that feeling are couples like Doris and John Ebberts. He was a Baltimore firefighter before they retired here 13 years ago to be houseparents in one of the 95 group homes.

"We have a home, not a house," says Mrs. Ebberts, 56, a quiet-voiced woman who watches over her crew of teenaged boys with obvious affection.

"IF THEY need us in the evening or any time of the day, we're here. It's very rewarding, it really is, to know that you can help young people. And that's what we wanted to do."

Like a home, chores are required and youngsters receive more discipline than they might like. Students aren't allowed out without permission and must be in bed by 10 p.m. Violations mean less time in town or less time away from school in the summer.

ONE Philadelphia youth chides the school's early-to-bed, early-to-rise and worship-on-Sunday regimen. "There're people throwing their morals on you when you've already got your morals figured out." A teen-aged girl complains: "This is a place where lots of parents stick their kids when they don't want them. Some of them are left in here to rot."

But most of a dozen or so students interviewed speak warmly of the school — usually citing the education and the close friendships.

"IF YOU CAN take advantage of what they have here, the facilities are really good," says Paul Carrico, 17, of Towson, Md. "I have close friends here who are like brothers to me."

"The education is excellent. I've got about 20 periods a week that I can devote just to computers," says Neal Woodard Jr., a 16-year-old from Front Royal, Va.

Off campus, "you don't see the guy you got into a fight with yesterday. You see another Milton Hershey boy," says Alvin White, 18, referring to the tight bond among students.

THEY ALSO say their material needs are met very well, particularly if you believe what the kids from town say.

"They call us millionaires," White says. "We boast like we're rich."

Thanks to the school's chocolate company holdings, the chilren pay nothing for year-round housing, an education, a wardrobe, medical attention, a weekly allowance and most of life's little necessities: toothbrush, toothpaste, a year-round pass to Hersheypark amusement park.

THERE IS SO little opportunity for the students to spend money, in fact, that Alexander says many amass thousands of dollars in Social Security and Veterans Administration benefits.

He says that if a youth is entitled to such payments because a parent has died, the school asks that the money be signed over. It is put into a savings account, where it grows and accumulates interest until the student turns 18.

When students graduate, the school awards them $100 each, a suitcase, and a new set of clothes. If a student is college bound — 74 of 126 1980 graduates went on to higher education — the school may lend or grant tuition money. If a youth's aim is a trade, the school helps find the first job.

THE $100 bequest is a holdover from the wishes of Milton Hershey, the candymaker who founded the school in 1909, soon after he launched his chocolate business here.

According to a school-published biography, Hershey had led an unhappy and financially insecure childhood and wanted to spare other boys the same fate.

"These orphans are our boys, whether we happen to be their parents or not," Hershey once said.

TODAY, HERSHEY is remembered with respect and reverence, says Aichele, himself a Milton Hershey graduate. He says Hershey was wiser than Henry Ford, Andrew Carnegie, or other successful businessmen of his day.

"He was smart enough to know what to do with his money, to make it do the greatest good," Aichele says. "It's a legacy which will probably go on for ever and ever."

ONE OF Hershey's less popular legacies to today's students is his notion that farm work builds wholesome character.

For that reason, the Milton Hershey School has always had a string of dairy barns, operated and maintained by students. Those on dairy duty are awakened at 5:45 a.m. to traipse out to the barn and milk the cows.

"Ugh, the aroma," says a giggling Diane Miller, a petite 16-year-old bemoaning her fate. "most people wake up in the morning to coffee."

THE FARM work also draws teasing from the "townies" on Friday nights, when the students are allowed off-campus and into the nearby town of Hershey.

"They call us cows — cows and orphans," Diane says.

The "orphan" tag is unfair, says Elizabeth Gilliam of Philadelphia. "We had parents once. Most of us still do."

Most of the students still have residual psychological scars from broken homes. But talking about them is against an unwritten code.

"IF YOU dwell on the problems you had, people really get angry," says Carol Gilmore. "They feel, hey, what are you feeling so angry about? We've all been through the same stuff. And we're all in the same place."

To qualify for the school, children must be receiving inadequate care at home from at least one natural parent, a term concocted by the school to allow it to take the children of divorced parents. They must be from a family of limited income, a decision left to the discretion of the school; be of good character and behavior and have no unusual disability.

MRS. DEMUTH says the school annually receives about 4,000 inquiries, interviews about 400 youngsters and accepts about 100 for admittance.

Blacks and girls used to be barred because that was what Hershey directed. But the school's later directors won court permission to drop the rule against blacks in the 1960s and against girls in 1976.

Still, Milton Hershey's presence is felt keenly, 36 years after his death. The school's hub is Founder's Hall, a towering limestone edifice set in a broad expanse of ponds and manicured lawns.

AND ON A pedestal in the building's marble-lined rotunda, Hershey is immortalized in a bronze statue — his arm draped benevolently over the shoulder of a young boy. The inscription: "His deeds are his monument; his life is our inspiration."

This year's cards are as good as gold

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Maybe it's like Fred Astaire and his top hat, black tie and tails in the depths of the '30s depression. Perhaps we're whistling as well as dancing in the dark. All that glitters is not gold, but at these interest rates you do the best you can.

ANYWAY, AT this time of the year, it's worth reading Christmas cards as though they were Tarot cards, to see what they say about how we're all bearing up under the strain of wars, rumors of wars, high interest rates, high unemployment, spiraling inflation and plummeting personal profits.

If your card doesn't look like it was printed in Fort Knox, it apparently is unique this year. The look, if not the reality, of opulence is in. The feeling is that if you can't afford to give a golden gift, you can at least send a card that gives the fantasy.

Even Ted Naos, Washington's own less-is-more Christmass card die-cut sculptor, has added silver foil cards (with colored envelopes to go completely giddy) to his pristine, purer-than-thou collection of all-white cards. The cards unfold to make a display. As usual, his are the best designs of the season.

IT'S COMFORTING, nonetheless, to report that his cards are still fine examples of paper sculpture, as much Christmas ornament as cards.

His newest are 5-by-5 inch snowcrystal ornaments, three-dimensional silver foil pieces that come assembled, ready to put on the tree. A variation is a snowflake tree card with interlocking pieces to make it a three-dimensional 5-by-7 inches. These can either stand on a table or windowsill or hang.

His Noel card has a snowflake interlocking with the "O" to become 3-D. In all three cases, the interlocking pieces are in red, green or blue to contrast with the silver foil.

AS USUAL, Naos "Graphicards" are romantic, with his continuing infatuation with hearts in different forms. And this year, a number of unicorns seem to have wandered in, searching for maidens.

Hallmark, probably the biggest greeter, has the golden touch this year. Contrasting with the gold-leaf look are some definitely art moderne colors, reminiscent of the '20s and '30s' boom and bust. One of its crown cards is coral flowers on a black background of silver, with a matching red envelope lined with gold. A stylized art deco card is designed of three green, gold-edged triangles pretending to be trees on a bright red background. The envelope is green.

A GOLD bird perches on a silver and gold pear tree on one Hallmark card, while a remarkable tree ornament of green, blue and red metallic squares festoons another.

"Our designers," says John Dinardo of Hallmark, "account for the more sophisticated trend by pointing out that the population is more mature and less child-oriented than in years past. The fine art look is preferred over the more whimsical Christmas designs.

Defendant pleads guilty in scheme

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty in connection with an arson-for-hire scheme told a federal court that he and another man would arrange to have rented buildings torched and then file insurance claims on property destroyed in the fires.

In a plea bargain agreement with prosecutors, Rodney L. Horne pleaded guilty Tuesday to mail fraud. He admitted during a hearing in U.S. District Court here that he used the postal service to defraud Lloyds of London, an insurance company, by filing claims on fire-damaged articles contained in buildings he arranged to have burned.

Sakharov and wife are 'OK' on hunger strike

By DUSKO DODER
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — Andrei Sakharov, the dissident Soviet physicist and Nobel Prize winner, reported Tuesday that he and his wife "are okay" on the 10th day of their hunger strike.

"We are holding on cheerfully, we are following our regime," the 60-year-old Sakharov sad in a telegram.

The cable sent from the industrial city of Gorki, where Sakharov was banished almost two years ago, was the first direct communication from him in five days. The physicist started the protest Nov. 22 to press the government to allow his stepson's fiancee to emigrate to the United States.

In two separate statements made available here, Sakharov denied reports that his condition has worsened and said this was based on disinformation spread by the KGB security police. He also vowed to continue his protest against the "irresponsible, cruel and illegal" act of the state's holding the young woman, Lisa Alexeyeva, "hostage."

"Now the only possibility of terminating our hunger strike is Lisa's exit "from the Soviet Union," he said. He also said that he has not been receiving telegrams from Alexeyeva, which she said she has been sending to Gorki each day.

"We are holding on, our mood is one of determination, and we are feeling so far quite fine, all the symptoms and indications correspond to those in the books," he said. His wife, Yelena Bonner, is a physician.

The physicist had said earlier that he would stage a hunger strike because he had exhausted all other ways to persuade authorities to let Alexeyeva join Bonner's son, Alexei Semenov, who is a graduate student at Brandeis University. Sakharov said the government was denying exit to Alexeyeva as a form of revenge and pressure on him to curb his dissident activities.

Sakharov is one of the most famous Soviet scientists. He was elected to the Soviet Academy of Sciences at age 32 for work in thermonuclear physics that led to the development of the Soviet hydrogen bomb.

The legal aspects of the case for which he has gone on hunger strike are somewhat murky. Semenov has been married previously and his wife and child had emigrated to the United States 18 months ago. They have since been divorced. He married Alexeyeva in a proxy ceremony in Montana last summer.

There has been considerable concern here in intellectual circles about the state of Sakharov's health. He is said to be suffering from a common form of heart disease in which the supply of freshly oxygenated blood to the heart is restricted. Bonner is also in poor condition, having become a partial invalid due to wounds suffered in World War II.

Well-informed sources said the physicist stopped taking medicine for his heart condition when he began the strike because fasting may cause the drugs to have an adverse effect. The Sakharovs are taking only mineral water.

In an earlier statement, Sakharov expressed his thanks for American statements of support, and voiced the hope for "analogous help" from European governments and European scientists.

In a reply to an appeal from the Federation of American Scientists to discontinue the hunger strike "while your supporters help you achieve your goal," the physicist said that "I cannot anymore believe any promises made by the authorities that are not supported by actions."

Soldiers recover black box from Yugolsav DC-9 airliner

AJACCIO, Corsica (AP) — Soldiers from the French Foreign Legion recovered the black box from a chartered Yugoslav DC-9 airliner that crashed into the side of a mountain, killing all 174 persons aboard, officials said Wednesday.

The bodies of some of the 168 passengers and six-member crew recovered from the wreckage 30 miles from this southwest city were taken to a church in the foothills of the 4,543-foot high Mt. San Pietro. They were due to be brought to Ajaccio later today where a temporary mortuary has been set up at the airport.

Authorities said examination of the tapes in the box may help French and Yugoslav investigators determine what caused the airliner to crash Tuesday morning seven minutes before it was due to land at Ajaccio's Campo Dell'Oro airport.

French officials speculated that heavy weather, including fog and high winds over much of the Mediterranean island may have caused the accident. The aircraft sent a distress message shortly before it was due to land.

However, the Yugoslav state news agency Tanjug said there were increasing "suppositions" that inadequate landing equipment contributed to the accident. It claimed the airport's equipment was "not the most up-to-date, at any rate not as up-to-date as surface features and whims of climate would require."

The International Federation of Airline Pilots, representing 64 member associations, had blacklisted the Ajaccio airport as unsafe, two British newspapers reported.

The London Times and London Daily Mail said air traffic controllers in Corsica have requested for years that radar be installed at the airport because of the difficulties of guiding planes down through the surrounding mountains. The French government refused on grounds not enough commercial jetliners use the airport to justify the necessary $9 million expense, the newspapers said.

Tuesday's air disaster was the first involving a Super 80, an elongated DC-9 that first went into production last year, the plane's manufacturer, McDonnell Douglas, said. The plane was owned by Inex-Adria, a Yugoslav charter company that had bought three Super 80s, a spokesman at McDonnell Douglas headquarters in St. Louis, Mo. said.

The crash was the second and largest major air disaster of the year. On Aug. 22, 104 passengers and six crew members were killed when a Boeing 737 Far East Air Transport plane exploded over northwest Taiwan and plunged to the ground.

The worst single airplane crash in history occurred in France on March 3, 1974, when a Turkish Airlines DC-10 crashed 26 miles northeast of Paris, killing 346 people.

Cuba reinforces forces in Angola

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Government officials disclosed Tuesday that Cuba has reinforced its expeditionary force in Angola during the last few weeks, underscoring the administration's view that the new U.S.-Israeli agreement to combat Soviet surrogates threatening the Middle East and Africa is needed.

The Cuban contingent was decreased from about 12,000 to 10,000 troops during South African raids into Angola in September, the officials said, but now is back up to between 12,000 and 15,000.

One U.S. theory as to why Cuban President Fidel Castro decreased his forces at the very time Angola was under attack was to underscore his warning that Cuban forces should not be taken for granted in host nations.

Also, sources said, Angola was behind in its payments to Cuba for military help. Angolan officials have told foreign diplomats that Cuba charges $40 per day per soldier.

Besides the Cubans in Angola, the U.S. intelligence community estimates that Castro still has about 12,000 troops in Ethiopia and 600 in South Yemen.

Pentagon spokesman Henry E. Catto Jr. said Tuesday that Cuba and East Germany were nations the United States and Israel had in mind when they pledged in a memorandum of understanding signed Monday to work together against threats from "Soviet-controlled forces from outside the region introduced into the region."

Other U.S. sources said Tuesday that hundreds of highly skilled East German military specialists are operating in Algeria, Libya, Mozambique, South Yemen and Zambia. "They're awfully good," said one official in crediting them with accomplishments larger than their small numbers would suggest.

Although the United States and Israel are plainly worried about these Soviet surrogates from Cuba and East Germany, military planners freely admit they have no fresh plans to deal with them directly. The more attractive option from a military viewpoint is to punish Cuba at home for trouble its troops cause abroad.

Although the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force is designed to respond to trouble i the Middle East, its contingency planning has focused on combatting Soviet thrusts against oil fields in Saudi Arabia and Iran, not internal subversion by Cubans or East Germans in the region.

The Israelis, sources said Tuesday, wanted to go much farther in military cooperation with the United States than the landmark memorandum of understanding provides.

Israel's suggestions, they said, ran to several pages and included elaborate joint logistical arrangements, not just such previously mentioned proposals as storing U.S. weaponry in Israel and repairing U.S. warplanes at bases there.

Cool-top stove won't ignite paper

A new type of cool-top cookstove uses magnetic induction. It has no visible coils, just a flat surface which, even while boiling water, won't set paper on fire.

In fact, it won't heat anything that's not in a metal pan that a magnet will stick to. On it, ceramic, glass and aluminum cookware are useless.

Worms used to test North Sea pollution

Scientists in Bremerhaven, Germany, are force-feeding laboratory worms a diet of cholorine compounds to test the effect of North Sea pollution on the food cycle. They hope to learn from the marine ringed worms more about the effect of chlorine compounds in sea water.

The southern reaches of the North Sea are among the most polluted in the world. Initial findings reveal that the worms retain up to 95 percent of the toxins fed to them in doses of a millionth of a gram in their food.

Shannon Smith of Midland admires a rare set of Madame Alexander First Lady dolls which she won in a drawing at Peyton's Toys recently. Doug Gordon of Peyton's said the set, which depicts the wives of the second six presidents of the United States, retails at $330, but has a much higher market value because they are so hard to get. Gordon said that because Peyton's has so many customers who collect dolls and were only able to obtain the one set, they decided the only fair way to handle the situation was to hold a drawing to give them away.

American style: Horseradish king has tiger by the tail

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Horseradish magnate Sol Tulkoff isn't shy about wearing his imitation tiger-skin blazer and matching tie to promote the tangy condiment he calls "Jewish Dristan."

"He who whispers in a well is not as apt to get the dollars, as he who climbs a tree and hollers," quips Tulkoff.

Sitting in his memento-cluttered office, the self-proclaimed Horseradish King is surrounded by plaques bearing slogans like "I'd rather live 50 years like a tiger than 100 years like a chicken."

The boxing gloves that hang behind Tulkoff's desk serve as "my little reminder to keep on fighting."

Tulkoff, president of the family business that bears his name, says the commercial value of the tiger-skin jacket became quickly apparent when he didn't wear it to a trade show in New York.

"Everybody asked, 'Where the hell is Sol Tulkoff? I don't see him.'

"It's difficult to attract people to the booth, everybody is going to see the suit," Tulkoff says. "They may not know Sol, but they know that."

Tulkoff travels to about 20 food industry trade shows each year to sell horseradish and "Tiger Sauce" — a creamier, less biting variation of the firm's staple product. To make sure he always has a clean tiger outfit, Tulkoff ordered several from a Galveston, Texas, tailor who designed Liberace's sequined jackets.

"If you're going to follow through, you might as well follow through all the way," the president and chief salesman of Tulkoff Horseradish Products Co. explains.

Founded 56 years ago in an East Baltimore storefront by Tulkoff's Russian immigrant parents, the company has become the nation's largest manufacturer of prepared horseradish.

"We like to think we have 75 percent of the market share," Tulkoff says. "Maybe a little bit more, maybe a little bit less, but pretty close, I believe."

Despite its success, the firm still is a family business that employs Tulkoff's brother, son, daughter and brother-in-law.

Tulkoff is the chief salesman while his brother, Martin, is in charge of production. A brother-in-law runs the print shop, and Tulkoff's son is a regional sales manager. His daughter works in the office along with Marty's wife. Less than 20 people work in the automated factory.

Tulkoff's may have a national market, but the firm isn't too big to fill orders from private customers. When he is in the office, Tulkoff talks on the telephone to his sales representatives and takes occaisional calls from private customers.

One man from Milwaukee called to order a case of four-ounce jars of horseradish. Tulkoff politely took the order, even though his product is readily available from a local distributor.

"I'm not going to affront the man, I'm not going to say, 'You dumbhead, go to a supermarket.' I'll send him a case, I won't scalp him, I'll charge the right price, plus the minimum UPS charge.

"What am I going to do? I get literally thousands of love letters," he adds.

The normally expansive Tulkoff suddenly becomes tight-lipped when asked about the company's sales figures. "I don't think numbers are that important. It's a whopper of a figure."

Ever the salesman, Tulkoff is more comfortable singing the praises of horseradish. "It's nature's condiment," he says. "Horseradish is really the spark that brings out the goodness of a lot of food."

Tulkoff also likes to regale visitors with historical lore surrounding horseradish, including tales of its medicinal value as a cure for any number of ailments, including dropsy, palsy and colic.

"I'd hate like hell to pawn off horseradish as a medicine, but I did read a few years ago that grated horseradish in closed bottle was the only substance known to man that could kill TB (tuberculosis) germs in less than a minute."

Because the pungent root is such an effective nasal decongestant, Tulkoff says "it's kind of a family joke that nobody that works in the company or the plant gets a cold."

DEAR ABBY

Piper must be paid if host wants a tune

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's some useful advice for the professional vocalist who is frequently asked to attend functions and sing for free.

When asked to perform, ask this question: "What is your budget for entertainment?" This implies that the performer expects a fee.

After all, no one would expect a plumber or an auto mechanic to donate his services, so why should entertainers be expected to?

I am reminded of the story about the wealthy socialite who asked Fritz Kreisler, the famous violinist, to "come dine with us" next Friday evening.

Kreisler was delighted and accepted readily. She then quickly added, "And please bring your violin."

"Madame," Kreisler responded, "my violin never dines." — FELIX DE COLA

DEAR FELIX: Beautiful! Kreisler should have gone and taken his violin — with no strings attached.

DEAR ABBY: Please, please warn parents about the danger of feeding their small children peanut butter! My beautiful 2 1/2-year-old grandson choked on peanut butter six weeks ago. The peanut butter lodged in his throat, cutting off his oxygen. His breathing and heart stopped and he was clinically dead for several minutes. He was revived by CPR, but there had been extensive damage to his brain.

The child is still in a coma, paralyzed from the neck down. How long this dear baby will live in this condition no one knows.

The baby's father said he doesn't want his boy to be lost in vain and has asked for help in getting the word to other parents that warning labels should be put on peanut butter jars so other children can be saved.

I thank you, and am sure parents everywhere will thank you for helping to spread this message and for the lives it may save. — HEARTBROKEN IN CALIF.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Your little grandson has my prayers, and his family has my sympathy. Be assured that millions of people will read this and, I hope, heed the warning. I agree, a warning label should be printed on every jar of peanut butter.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for your advice to someone else, which I borrowed and for which I am extremely grateful. For several years I'd been kicking around the idea of going to law school, but every year I'd think of the years needed for school and the required year of clerking in Canada, and I'd say, no, I'll be too old.

Then you printed a letter from a man who was 36 (the age I'll be when I finish) and wanted to go to medical school. He needed another two years of undergrad work, then med school and internship, a total of seven years.

"My God, Abby," he wrote, "in seven years I'll be 42!"

Your reply was simply, "And how old will you be in seven years if you DON'T go to med school?"

It hit me like a ton of bricks! I applied to and was accepted by the law school at the University of Victoria, just two miles from my home. We're now in the seventh week of classes and I still just shake my head and pinch myself because I'm having so much fun I can't believe it! The money is tight. My wife is working to clear the decks of everyday clutter so that I can concentrate on school. It's a lot of work, but I love it. How can I thank you? — TIM P. IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

DEAR TIM: You already have. Good luck and God bless.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

LIVING TODAY

Treat yourself to a power tool

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent — Home Economics

Wish you had a power tool for those do-it-yourself projects, but wonder if they're worth the money? They are — and so is your time, so treat yourself to a power tool.

Power tools, in fact, save money because they encourage you to do jobs that otherwise might be discouraging, so you save labor money.

Actually, if you have any real use for a certain power tool, you can hardly afford not to have it. Using such tools for jobs that would take many hours by hand let portable power tools prove their worth quickly. Some pay for themselves the first or second time you use them. A good tool lasts for years, saving more and more money.

These carpenter's or mechanic's helpers speed up everything you do, accomplishing jobs in seconds without strain. And, they boost your ability — you drill cleaner holes and make smoother, straighter cuts than you can do by hand.

A bonus feature of power tools is the time they save, leaving free time for other jobs or leisure.

In some cases, power tools take so much drudgery out of tasks that they become a form of leisure. They offer the do-it-yourselfer a welcome change of pace — a time of constructive relaxation with a lift from self-satisfaction.

If you're buying power tools for the first time, consider some basics to start with — an electric drill, jigsaw, portable saw and belt sander.

An electric drill and jigsaw take the hard labor out of working metal.

Such tools will cut, shape, drill and smooth wood, metal-composition boards, plastic tile, formica sinks and cabinet tops and plaster board.

With proper masonry bits, you can make holes in cement, brick or cinder blocks.

A portable saw will quickly cut a 4x8-feet plywood panel to the size you need, or if you need a board in some odd width, a portable saw will easily rip a slightly wider one exactly the size needed and save you a trip to the lumber yard.

Abrasive disks in a portable circular saw will cut slate, marble and ceramic tile.

Consider a belt sander, too. With this tool, you can bring even box lumber to a good surface, making this free material into useful and attactive items. Also, you can buy a less expensive grade of plywood paneling with small surface defects, fill them with spackle and power sand to a paint- or enamel-ready surface.

CREAM OF BROCCOLI SOUP

Start 12 cups chicken broth boiling. Add ¾ teasp. salt and ½ teasp. white pepper. To boiling broth, add 3 small onions, diced, and 2 medium potatoes, peeled and chopped. Return to boil and cook 15 minutes. Add 2 bunches chopped broccoli. Cook 15 minutes more. In bowl, blend 6 tblsp. flour plus 6 tblsp. cornstarch with 1 cup cold water until smooth. Add to broth along with 1 cup whipping cream and 3 cups half and half. Reheat and do not boil. Makes approximately 1½ gallons.
By AUDREY L. CURRY

SOMETHING SPECIAL

1 cup uncooked rice (preferably brown)
3½ cups water
2 medium onions, chopped
½ stalk celery, chopped
2 packages dehydrated beef noodle soup (1⅝-ounce size)
1 pound mild pork sausage
½ cup blanched almonds, slivered
1 cup beef broth (may use bouillon in boiling water)
Paprika

Fry sausage over medium-low heat until done, but not crisp and hard. Remove to papertowel to drain. Pour off all fat except about 1 tblsp. and lightly brown onion in this.

Cook rice in water for 15 minutes. Add celery, browned onion and dry soup mix. Cook 10 minutes, stirring frequently, adding a very small amount of water is mixture gets too thick.

Break sausage in small pieces and add to the above mixture. Stir in the broth and almonds. Pour into a 10x6x2-inch baking dish and sprinkle top lightly with paprika. Bake for 45 minutes at 350 F. Serves 8. This is good made ahead of time and also freezes well.

GLAZED SQUASH WITH ONIONS

3 medium acorn squash
⅓ cup water
2 cups drained, canned small onions
½ cup broken walnuts
½ cup margarine, melted
½ cup dark corn syrup
¼ tsp. each cinnamon and salt

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Halve squash lengthwise; remove seeds. Pour water into pan, add squash, cutside down. Cover and cook until almost tender (20 minutes).

Turn squash up; salt. Fill with onions and nuts. Combine remaining ingredients and spoon over squash. Cook 15 or 20 minutes.
By MRS. BERTRAND ROBERGE

EGGS AND THINGS

6 large eggs
4 slices of cooked bacon (ham or sausage can be substituted)
1 cup forzen hash brown potatoes
1 tblsp. chopped onion (if desired)
salt and pepper
½ cup milk

Brown hash brown potatoes in small amount of margarine. In a small bowl scramble the eggs with the milk. In a medium size skillet mix together the egg mixture, cooked bacon and onion. Cook until it reaches your desired doneness. Salt and pepper to taste.

Add some toast or biscuits and you have a very nutritious breakfast, lunch or even dinner. Serves four.
By MRS. MARGARET PRCIN

BAKED BEANS

1 tall can (53 ounces) and one regular can pork and beans
1 pound bacon, cut into pieces
1 onion, cut in pieces
1 bell pepper, cut in pieces
1 cup catsup
1 cup brown sugar, packed

Mix together and bake covered at 325 F. for 3 hours. Stir occasionally. Bake uncovered for the last 30 minutes.
By SUNNY BROWN

LASAGNA CHICKEN BAKE

¼ 16-oz. package lasagna noodles (approximately 6 noodles)
2 cups cooked chicken
1 16-oz. cottage cheese
1 10¾-oz. cream of chicken soup, condensed
1 10-oz. package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry.
Paprika

Prepare lasagna noodles as label directions; drain. In medium bowl combine cottage cheese and undiluted soup. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 12x8-inch baking dish. Into dish arrange half of noodles, then layer spinach, half of chicken, remaining noodles and remaining chicken; top with cottage cheese-soup mixture. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake 50 minutes or until heated through. Remove baking dish from oven; let stand 10 minutes. Six servings.

BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

Melt 1 tblsp. butter in a 13½x8½-inch baking dish. Sprinkle 1 cup crushed Ritz crackers over the melted butter. Stir together:
1 cup mayonnaise
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 medium onion, chopped
2 eggs

Add 2 10-ounce boxes frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and drained. Pour over crackers. Top with ¼-pound cheddar cheese, grated. Bake uncovered until firm, about 45 minutes, at 350 F.
By KATHY LAND

BEEF BAVARIAN

1½ pounds beef round steak, thinly sliced
2 tblsp. cornstarch
1 teasp. salt
¼ teasp. pepper
¼ teasp. garlic powder
2 tblsp. vegetable oil
1 large onion, sliced
2½ cups beef broth
¼ teasp. hot pepper sauce
1 tblsp. brown sugar
4 large carrots, sliced
1 can mushrooms
3 cups hot cooked rice

Have butcher tenderize steak or pound until thin. Cut steak into 1-inch wide strips. Blend cornstarch, salt, pepper and garlic powder. Coat meat with seasoned cornstarch. Brown in hot oil. Add onion and cook 2 to 3 minutes longer. Stir in broth, pepper sauce and brown sugar. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add carrots and drained mushrooms and cook 15 minutes longer or until meat is tender. Spoon over beds of fluffy rice. Serve with coleslaw, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

YAKISOBA

12 slices of bacon, diced
1 cup diced ham
½ head medium size cabbage, shredded
1 medium bell pepper, diced
1 medium onion, diced
1 medium package cooked fine egg noodles
Soy sauce

In large skillet, fry bacon until crisp. Set aside to drain. SAVE BACON DRIPPINGS. Fry ham until brown. Set aside to drain. Fry cabbage in approximately 4 tblsp. bacon drippings (add more if needed) until tender. Set aside to drain. Fry onions in approximately 4 tblsp. bacon drippings. Set aside to drain. Fry bell pepper same way as onions and cabbage.

Optional: Mushrooms, bean sprouts, bamboo shoots and water chestnuts are also good added to the original recipe. Cook same as other vegetables.

In same skillet combine and toss all ingredients over low flame with cooked noodles and season with salt, pepper and soy sauce to taste.

This is a classic dish from the Ryukyan Islands south of Japan (Okinawa).

BLACK MAGIC CHOCOLATE CAKE

2 cups sifted cake flour
¾ tsp. salt
4 squares unsweetened chocolate
4 tblsp. butter or shortening
2 cups sugar
1¾ cups milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. soda

Sift flour once; measure into sifter, add salt and set sifter aside. Melt chocolate and shortening over hot water. Turn into mixing bowl. Cool to room temperature. This is important. Then add sugar and mix well. Mix together egg yolks and 1 cup milk; add to chocolate mixture and blend. Sift in flour, mix util all flour is dampened, then beat 1 minute at low speed. Add vanilla and ½ cup more of milk, until smooth. Dissolve soda in the remaining ½ cup milk. Stir into batter quickly and thoroughly. Batter will be thin.

Turn into 2 9-inch layer pans (wax paper on bottom), then greased. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. 13x9x2-inch pan for 45 minutes.

5-MINUTE CHOCOLATE FROSTING

1 can sweetened condensed milk
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 tblsp. water

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add milk, stir over boiling water 5 minutes or until thickens. Add water. Cool, Spread on cake.

GRAHAM CRACKER CAKE

4 8-inch cake pans, lightly greased and floured.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In a large mixing bowl, usng electric mixer, beat:

½ pound real butter; gradually add 2 cups sugar and cream well on medium speed.

Add 5 large eggs, one at a time, and continue beating until mixture is well blended.

Add:

1 tsp. vanilla extract
⅔ cup milk

Beat on low speed now, until blended.

Remove bowl from mixer, and add:

1 pound graham cracker crumbs, finely crushed
1 tsp. baking powder
1 cup pecans, sliced thin

Stir until well blended and pour into the prepared pans, equally. Bake for 20 minutes or until a toothpick stuck into the center comes out clean. Cool on wire racks.

FILLING AND TOP FROSTING

Combine:

¼ pound butter, softened at room temperature 1 hour
1 box (1 pound) powdered confectioner's sugar
1 small can (15¼-oz.) crushed pineapple, drained, reserving juice

Mix until well blended. If mixture is too thick, use some of the reserved pineapple juice. Spread on top of each layer and top of cake. The sides of the cake do not have to have the frosting.

Note: Butter should be softened 30 minutes to 1 hour at room temperature.

SAUERKRAUT CAKE

In a large mixing bowl, cream ⅔ cup margarine, 1½ cups sugar.

Add 1 tsp. vanilla, 3 eggs.

In a separate bowl, sift together ½ cup cocoa, 2¼ cups flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt.

Measure out 1 cup water.

Add dry ingredients and water alternately to creamed mixture, beat well after each addition.

Fold in ⅔ cup drained, rinsed and chopped sauerkraut, 1 cup chopped nuts (if desired).

Turn into greased tube pan. Bake at 350 degrees 50-60 minutes, or until tested done. Cool for 15 minutes, invert on cake server and frost with fudge glaze.

FUDGE GLAZE

Mix together ¼ cup cocoa and ½ pound powdered sugar.

In separate pan, melt and add to above ¼ cup margarine and ¼ tsp. vanilla.

Measure out and add last ¼ cup evaporated milk.

Mix thoroughly and drizzle to cake that has had poles punched in it with toothpicks.

Note: This is a very moist cake and does not taste anything like sauerkraut.

PINEAPPLE CAKE

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

1 cup soft butter
2 cups sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. pineapple flavoring
1 tsp. butter flavoring
3½ cups flour
3 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. soda
1 cup buttermilk
½ cup chopped pecans
1 small can crushed pineapple, drain and save syrup for filling
6 egg whites
4 egg yolks

Beat butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in flavorings. Beat in egg whites and egg yolks, beating well after each addition. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and soda. Stir flour mixture into batter alternately with buttermilk. Add pecans and pineapple. Spoon into 3 greased and floured 8- or 9-inch pans. Bake 20-25 minutes. Cool in pans 10 minutes before turning out.

FILLING

Sift: 2 cups sugar, ½ cup corn starch and pinch of salt in saucepan. Add syrup from cake pineapple, 2 beaten egg yolks, 1 20 oz. can of crushed pineapple. Cook until thick. Remove from heat. Add 1 tsp butter flavoring, 2 tblsp. grated lemon rind, juice from 1 lemon, ½ cup pecans.

Fill and ice cake. Sprinkle sides and top with flaked coconut. Decorate with maraschino cherries, pineapple slices and pecans.

DEVIL'S RIVER MUD CAKE

1 cup soft margarine
2 cups granulated sugar
4 eggs
1 cup moist coconut, shredded
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
⅓ cup unsweetened cocoa
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1½ cups coarsely chopped pecans or walnuts
1 7-oz. jar marshmallow cream

In a large bowl, cream butter. Add slightly beaten eggs to butter and mix well. Add coconut, sugar, flour, cocoa, vanilla and pecans; mix together. Batter will be heavy. DO NOT BEAT. Spread in a greased 9x13x2-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees 45 to 50 minutes or until done.

As soon as cake is out of oven, spread marshmallow cream over the top. Let cool for 15 or 20 minutes. Spread with the following:

FROSTING FOR DEVIL'S RIVER MUD CAKE

½ cup margarine, softened
4 tblsp. milk
⅓ cup unsweetened cocoa
1 box (4 cups-1 pound) powdered sugar
1 tsp. each vanilla, almond extract, rum extract
1½ cups coarsely chopped pecans or walnuts

Mix all frosting ingredients except pecans using slow mixer speed. Increase speed as ingredients blend together. Stir in ¾ cup pecans. Frost the cake swirling through the marshmallow cream to simulate muddy water. Sprinkle with remaining ¾ cup pecans.

FRESH APPLE CAKE

3 cups grated apples
2 cups sugar
3 cups flour
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
3 eggs
1½ cups salad oil
¾ cup chopped pecans
1 tsp. vanilla extract

Peel and grate apples. Add 1 cup sugar and let stand while mixing the remaining ingredients. Stir in apples and sugar, add pecans last. Pour into prepared Bundt or tube pan. Bake at 325 degrees 1½ hours.

FROSTING

¼ cup margarine, softened
1½ cups powdered sugar, sifted
Dash of salt
2 tblsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. cinnamon

Combine ingredients and spread over cooked cake.

By LINDA FRYAR

CANDIED FRUITCAKE

2 cans sweetened condensed milk
2 7-ounce cans coconut
1 cup diced dates
1 quart pecans (may be chopped or halved)
8 ounces red and green candied whole cherries (halved)
8 ounces yellow, green and red diced candied pineapple

Mix all ingredients together. Reserve a few cherries, pineapple and pecans for cake top decorations.

Preheat over to 250F.

Carefully prepare a tube pan for baking by liberally greasing with shortening and lining with waxed paper. Don't forget to line bottom and center, as this is important.

Place pans of water above and below cake in oven while cooking. Cook 2 hours and 30 minutes. During first hour of cooking place foil sheet over cake.

Let cool 15-30 minutes, remove cake carefully from pan to be sure it doesn't fall apart. Peel off waxed paper while warm.

Cut in small pieces because there's no bread and it is very sweet. The cake candies together.

Wrap cake in foil and store in a tin box. The cake will last indefinitely. Also, be sure to decorate top of cake with pecans, cherries and pineapple before baking.

NEIMAN-MARCUS CAKE

First layer:

1 box yellow cake mix (dry)
1 stick margarine
2 eggs
1 cup pecans
1 cup coconut

Press mixture into a greased and floured oblong cake pan.

Second layer:

1 box powdered sugar
1 tblsp. vanilla
8 ounces cream cheese, softened

Mix all ingredients together and beat with a mixer for 1 minute. Spread on first layer. Bake at 350 F. for 30 minutes.

Serve cold and keep in refrigerator. Do not frost. This cake usually falls in the center and looks more like a bar cookie than a cake.

A crowd of angry protesters waves placards at a county budget hearing held Oct. 1 at War Memorial Auditorium in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. County commission meeting, usually sedate sessions attended by a few reporters and special interest representatives, have been packed recently with such protesters.

Florida residents voice their tax concerns

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — County commission meetings, usually sedate sessions attended by a handful of special interests and reporters, have been packed recently with thousands of Florida residents equipped with placards, petitions and vitriol.

"I'm fed up with all of you!" Anthony Podsobinski shouted at Palm Beach County commissioners during one such meeting on Florida's Gold Coast. "You don't have to be smart to get in office and raise taxes."

"We're sick and dadgum tired of supporting everything in this city and county," John Fain told Leon County commissioners in northern Florida.

"Hell hath no fury like an abused and overtaxed group of property owners," said Abe Azar in Pinellas County on the Gulf Coast.

Florida's diverse citizenry — the north Florida farmers, the Old Southerners, the Latins, the retirees from the Midwest and the transplanted New Yorkers — has been united by the spirit of the American Revolution.

"You drive us to the threshold of another Boston Tea Party," Azar said.

From Miami's Dade County, where some 4,000 taxpayers pressured commissioners into reducing a proposed tax hike, to quiet, sparsely populated Manatee County, where 1,000 protesters helped force a one-third cut in taxes, citizen pressure has forced local governments to order layoffs, cutbacks in social programs and scrapping of building projects.

"I don't think there is a county in this state that's not having the largest budget hearings they've ever had," said John Thomas, executive director of the State Association of County Commissioners.

Tax protest groups have been organized in neighborhoods as well as statewide, and petition drives are working to give Florida its own Proposition 13 next year.

Howard Jarvis, the tax-cut apostle behind California's 1978 passage of a 50 percent slash in property taxes, has been in Florida giving advice and holding rallies.

The reasons for the growing tax revolt are many: inflation and a booming population have driven up the cost of providing the most basic services, a sky-rocketing real estate market has driven up property values in many parts of the state, tax reforms enacted by the Legislature have taken effect, and Floridians are accustomed to some of the nation's lowest taxes.

The combination of larger assessments and higher tax rates this year has driven up homeowner property taxes by as much as 60 percent.

Politicians are doing a lot of finger-pointing. Administrators and department heads complain that county officials have caved in to taxpayer pressure and left them with impossible tasks.

In Volusia County, for example, County Manager Thomas Kelly noted that while slashing the budget by $4.1. million, the county commission left many services and plans intact.

"You're asking me to find $4 million," he told them.

In Broward County, administrator Graham Watt called himself a scapegoat when he was suspended because of a mixup on reporting the percentage of the tax hike. His suspension with pay came following two heated public hearings packed with thousands of protesters.

Many of Florida's Republicans, the state's minority party since Reconstruction, see the tax rebellion as a chance to make big gains in what they expect to be "throw-the-bums-out" 1982 elections.

"There could be a tremendous backlash against anyone with a "D" after his name," said state Sen. Van Poole, a Fort Lauderdale Republican.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

★ Just check the chart.

IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS:	YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS:	THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS
$50,000	50%	25%
$35,000	40%	20.83%
$25,000	30%	17.86%
$20,000	25%	16.67%

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

Gail Sheehy, author of "Passages," has written another book, "Pathfinders," in which she explains how different types of people deal with the passages they encounter in their lives.

'Pathfinding' makes 'passages' easier

By MARK MELADY
The Hartford Courant

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Gail Sheehy — the journiologist who led us into the dark corridors of mid-adult funk in "Passages," and in "Pathfinders" is now advising life's voyagers pausing at divergent paths to take the road less traveled by — was stuck in a traffic jam in New Haven.

IT WAS A SMALL irony, perhaps. The kind of little "life accident" (as Sheehy defines the unexpected) one encounters on a book promotion tour that had scheduled the author to be whisked from a country club luncheon to a crosstown book store autographing session without much consideration for path nor passage.

When she got to the bookstore, she rejected criticism that "Passages" was merely a chronicle of upper-middle-class angst brought on by too many self-indulgent choices or the idea that "Pathfinders" can be seen as a map for well-to-do middle-aged runaways.

Her research began with 60,000 questionaires. She eventually reduced that number to 200, whose "life cycles" over a four-year period she detailed in the 500-page book (William Morrow & Co. Inc, $15.95). Sheehy said she weeded out the " 'my-husband-doesn't-tingle-me-anymore' divorcees and the man who changes jobs every six months."

THERE ARE, SHE said, people in the book from humble experiences. One is a welfare mother of 20.

She, too, has a choice of divergent paths.

Sheehy explained: "Should she suffer a panic marriage, turn the baby over to her mother, or begin to abuse it?" In an interview upstairs at the Yale Co-Op bookstore, she explained the woman's eventual pathfinding. "She went to a mental health center and took the road back. She got a job that pays a baby sitter."

There is also Irene Novak, wife of Joe, a reformed alcoholic fireman in the Detroit area. She got a job with a Head Start program and started going to college, both moves that made her husband resentful and then envious. She was eventually offered a supervisory job, but turned it down on Joe's advice that those were the kind of jobs "they give the Jewish girls with the pieces of paper from the University of Chicago."

SHE HAD BEGUN DOWN the path, but stopped, wrote Sheehy, "because like most women she could not take credit for her own successes; all that had led up to the (job) offer must have been accident or luck."

Irene Novak has restarted down the path, deciding at age 40 to finish college and get her bachelor's degree.

Joe Novak meanwhile at 40 turned down an offer to run for the presidency of his union, telling Sheehy that "I was afraid I'd win. "I'm probably right now afraid to take the chance."

The key to successful pathfinding, said Sheehy, is the willingness to take risks. There are other elements, eight in all — timing; capacity for loving; strong support systems; accumulated wisdom; sense of purpose; a recognition of life's spiritual elements (not neccessarily religion); and true grit. The most important element, however, is chanciness.

"You can take the safe path if you don't care about well-being, if you are afraid of change," said Sheehy. "You can still find happiness taking the safe path, but it is limited, not nearly as creative. Pathfinding is very much like the creative process."

"PATHFINDERS" IS SHEEHY'S sixth book. Her first, the novel "Lovesounds," was a failure. "I didn't die from it," she said. Nor did she die from her divorce or the the agonizing mid-life problems that began to manifest themselves while she was covering a bloody riot in Ireland, as she described in the opening of "Passages."

"That was probably the most difficult time in my life," said Sheehy, her earnest blue eyes leveled at the reporter. "Time seemed so much shorter, life so much harder than it did afterwards."

Out of that experience came "Passages," a book, she said, that "left us all hanging" because it didn't offer any chart to negotiate the crisis channels.

"There was nothing about ordinary people engaged in ordinary struggles to explain how some of them turn life's obstacles into opportunities and why some of them become the living dead or try frantically to escape," she said.

BEING OLDER MAKES IT easier to be a pathfinder, she said, "perhaps because it's easier to take the fire and the flak." (Sheehy said she regretted not including crises after the age of 50 in "Passages." "I just didn't tune into them. But they are in this book. Everyone over 50 just doesn't fall off the end of the grand parking lot.")

Not all of the pathfinders were ordinary people.

One was Anwar Sadat, the assasinated president of Egypt, who rose from ordinary circumstances. "Sadat puts the perfect lie to the idea that you have to be of certain birth or advantage to be a pathfinder," Sheehy said. "Sadat couldn't have been more disadvantaged. He was a black man in a color-conscious society. I talked to Egyptians who thought it bizarre that Americans thought Sadat handsome.

"He came across total dead ends; in prison, during the revolution. At one point Nasser turned on him. But he didn't say, 'life has cheated me.' He became detached from his travail (an important step in self-realization, says Sheehy). He was ready when accident put him in charge."

SADAT, SHEEHY SAID, IS a great example of someone who "refused to be defined by his losses."

Over the four years that she followed her subjects, none of them "let her down," she said.

"I guess I expected that at least one of them would be arrested for indecent exposure or run off with their 22-year-old son to Aruba, but nothing like that happened.

"One had a stroke and another had a child in a terrible accident, but those people viewed these accidents as setbacks, not dead ends."

Pathfinders who have completed a passage tend to be less driven, have more fun, accept their own inconsistencies and have more friend, said Sheehy. Women pathfinders are not guilt-ridden by their successes.

Most everyone encounters more than one crossroads in their lifetime, Sheehy maintained, especially in this country in this time, because "we can recreate life's script two or three times."

SHEEHY HERSELF IS NOW re-running one of her old scripts — writing fiction.

"I'm working on an historical novel," she said.

CBS' '60 Minutes' in first place; 'Dallas' in second

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS and ABC swapped first place in the networks' prime-time ratings race for the fourth consecutive week, and "60 Minutes" displaced "Dallas" as the No. 1 program in the competition for the week ending Nov. 29, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

"Dallas" was runnerup, and CBS had eight of the 10 highest-rated programs in winning the weekly competition for the fourth time since the new TV season began eight weeks ago.

CBS' rating was 19.2 to 17.6 for ABC and 15 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 19.2 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to CBS.

In addition to the two highest-rated programs, CBS listed "Dukes of Hazzard" in third place. ABC's "Three's Company" was fourth and the only other program in the Top 10 not on CBS was another ABC show, "Too Close for Comfort," in 10th.

In placing third for the eighth consecutive week, NBC's top-rated show, "Little House on the Prairie," finished 19th.

It was the first time in a normal week's competition that "Dallas" was not No. 1. The show fell from the top position only during the two weeks of baseball's World Series in October.

The rating for "60 Minutes," the most-watched prime-time program two seasons ago, was 29.8. Nielsen says that means of all the country's homes with television, 29.8 percent saw at least part of the newsmagazine.

Once more, the season's new series were only moderately successful in the ratings. CBS' "Simon & Simon" finished 31st, and "Fall Guy" on ABC was 33rd. An ABC movie, "Sizzle," starring Lonnie Anderson from CBS' "WKRP in Cincinnati," did well — 11th.

Eleven of the 12 lowest-rated programs were episodes from new series or specials. The exception was "NBC Magazine," No. 63.

NBC's "Gimme a Break" finished 62nd, with "Making a Living" on ABC 64th. Then, in order, it was, "Darkroom," "Strike Force," "Code Red" and "Open All Night," all on ABC; CBS' "Jessica Novak," and four NBC programs, "The Osmond Family Special," "Nashville Palace," a movie, "Seal," and an NBC News special report, "The Spies Among Us."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"60 Minutes," with a rating of 29.8 representing 24.4 million homes, "Dallas," 28.8 or 23.6 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 24.3 or 19.9 million, all CBS; "Three's Company," 23.6 or 19.3 million, ABC; NFL football prime-time runover, 23.4 or 19.2 million, "The Jeffersons," 23.2 or 19 million, "One Day at a Time," 23.1 or 18.9 million, "Alice," 22.8 or 18.7 million, and "Archie Bunker's Place," 22.6 or 18.5 million, all CBS; and "Too Close for Comfort," 22.5 or 18.4 million, ABC.

The next 11 programs:

Movie-"Sizzle," ABC; "Love Boat," ABC, and "M-A-S-H," CBS, tie; "NFL Monday Night Football," Minnesota vs. Atlanta, and "Hart to Hart," both ABC; "Frosty the Snowman" and "Trapper John, M.D.," both CBS; "Laverne and Shirley," ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and Movie-"The Muppet Movie," CBS, and "That's Incredible," ABC, tie.

Four-year university might become community college

By HERBERT SPARROW
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — When the federal government ordered Kentucky to develop a plan to desegregate its public colleges, did it want to turn Kentucky State University, the state's only traditionally black school, into a two-year community college?

A decision this week on the school's status by Kentucky's Council on Higher Education could lead to a legal battle between the state on one side and civil rights groups and the federal government on the other.

The central issue is what to do with Kentucky State, a small (2,300 enrollment) four-year school where a majority of its full-time, day students are black.

Several proposals have been made since January when the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights ordered the state to develop a plan to fully desegregate its public university system.

All phases of the plan have been submitted to the OCR except the portion dealing with Kentucky State.

Want ads with a new twist

By CHRISTINE WISCHMANN
Deutsche Presse-Agentur

BERLIN — "Can't reach every point on my back when having a bath. For removal of film of dirt, M-33-175-78 seeks cheerful lady."

M-33-175-78 means man aged 33, 175 centimeters tall and wighing 78 kilos. The advertisement put in one of West Berlin's magazines catering mainly to the city's young "alternative" life-style population is light years away from traditional ads such as "well-situated gentleman seeks lady for acquaintance, prospect of marriage not excluded."

THE MEANS ARE different but the end is the same. Leaf through the pages of the Berlin "tip" magazine, and you may be amazed at the underlying seriousness of the ads, ranging in tone from the witty to the desperate.

Marriage, it seems, is "in" — at least, to judge from the number of lonely hearts who unabashedly say they have no "fear of ties" (although plenty express fears of the opposite sex "getting their claws in").

"Dracula seeks Draculina,' says one ad. "If inclination mutual, baby Dracula not excluded. Communal grave sought. Hurry and write, with picture and blood group."

SAYS ANOTHER: "Maybe tomorrow you'll run me over in your car, or we'll find ourselves swapping sandwiches in an atomic fall-out shelter, or maybe we'll meet collecting our old age pension. Better, though, if you write now."

The oft-vaunted fear of a third world war breaking out is currently combining with the pre-Christmas mood.

One ad with heavy irony seeks a partner "before the next atomic holocaust, and in any event before Christmas."

Another says: "It's already almost Christmas. Unwrap me and get to know me now, then at least by Christmas you'll know whether you want to keep me or swap me for something else."

STRANGELY ENOUGH, though, the ideal person sought by most people placing ads is not the freaky, highly individual type you would expect from the rest of the pages in such off-beat magazines.

One woman makes clear she wants no "crazies, chaotics or boozeheads."

"Greens (environmentalists), disco-pussycats and chaotics" are wasting the postage writing to one man, while another wants nothing to do with "flippies and super-emancies" (feminists).

In fact, there seem to be an awful lot of ads placed by men saying they are "feminist-damaged."

One dreams of a "femina" who has not succumbed to "bib-and-brace, ketchup and wholefood culture."

ANOTHER WANTS a woman "whom a well brought-up man would turn around and look at, not one of those funky-punkies who have lost all sense of the dignity of women."

However, the "still young, good-looking man in his mid-forties with no complexes" who seeks a "well-groomed female buddy" comes in for some stick from the magazine editors who pepper the pages with their own comments on the ads. "Snotty little runt," they say to this one.

Few escape the editor's withering comments. A "psycho-analyzed doctor" seeking "a Berlin woman with lip" — that is, with the gift for the sort of quick, stinging remarks the Berlin people are famous for — gets the comment: "How proletarian."

AND ALL THOSE softer souls with a declared hankering to get back to nature — giving themselves pseudonyms like "Faustian fossil" (indicating an older, tender-hearted type with the intellectual leanings of Goethe's hero) or "well-grown plant" (another euphemistic reference to advanced years and a gentle nature) stand to get lumped by the editors under the general heading of "domestic pets."

And who on earth, you may ask, will the "conservative avant-garde anachrostic anacreontic" find as a soul-mate?

Certainly not the "ugly as sin woman with loathsome, disgusting brats" in tow, showing a preference for brutal honesty or self-deprecation or both.

AND THE "SLIM, elegent W., not without independent means, but lonely and alone and moreover in debt" will hardly find her Mr. Right in the 35-year-old man who wrote from behind bars: "Have robbed bank because of financial difficulties."

However, the football fan calling himself "M," who warns "if you get caught offside, don't be surprised when the ref blows his whistle," may have found his match in the woman who writes: "Have swallowed a football and hope, in spite of this, to find a loving partner who will look forward with me to the final."

Geologic history is topic at UTPB

ODESSA — "Geologic History of Northern Nevada" will be the topic of discussion at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 9, in the UTPB Founders Building.

Sponsored by the UTPB Geological Society, the guest speaker will be Dr. Ralph J. Roberts, retired senior research geologist.

According to Robert G. Reeves, dean of the college of science and engineering at UTPB, Roberts worked for 30 years with the United States Geological Survey with a short interruption during World War II.

"During the war he studied the mineral resources of Guatemala, followed by administrative duty in Washington. In the mid 1960s, he went to Saudi Arabia where he studied the mineral deposits and supervised exploration that discovered a large copper-gold deposit," Reeves said.

He added that Roberts is credited with laying the groundwork for the discovery of the Carlin and Cortez gold mines. He recently was honored by the Newmont Mining Co., operators of the Carlin Mine, for his role in advancing the science of ore deposits.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

EPA's Gorsuch knows what she wants

EDITOR'S NOTE — Anne Gorsuch's friends say she's warm, caring and loyal, a no-nonsense administrator who's doing what had to be done with the Environmental Protection Agency. Her opponents call her abrasive, haughty, isolated from reality. Whatever she is, she's been the center of controversy and antagonism in her short tour at the EPA.

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anne McGill Gorsuch is, by all accounts, a habitual overachiever, an intelligent woman quick to catch on, and by her own account at least, "one who would never create antagonism knowingly."

NONE OF this has given her smooth sailing in seven months as the nation's chief environmental official — administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. She's been surrounded by a smog of controversy and antagonism almost from the start.

Two of her top aides quit — one blaming "irreconcilable differences of style" with the boss. Other employees complain that Mrs. Gorsuch ignores their expertise and hides behind young, inexperenced aides. A senior senator in Mrs. Gorsuch's own Republican Party called the EPA "an agency in agony, with its senior officials under siege."

MRS. GORSUCH is also in a budget battle with congressmen complaining that cuts outlined in a leaked document are too severe, and she herself is fighting even deeper cuts asked by administration budget officials.

Under Mrs. Gorsuch, the EPA's major moves have been to turn out "broad proposals" for amending the Clean Air Act and a list of 114 hazardous waste dumps that will lead to implementing the $1.6 billion Superfund intended to clean up the nation's worst dumps. Both actions aroused ire from environmental groups, and even some in industry — for whom Mrs. Gorsuch has promised to ease regulatory burdens — fear she may go too far in shrinking agency functions.

DESPITE the criticism, Mrs. Gorsuch hesitates not at all when asked if she would do anything differently if she could start over at EPA.

"No," says the 39-year-old former corporation lawyer.

The crisp reply would surprise few who watched Mrs. Gorsuch rise to power in the Colorado Legislature and — with support from conservatives like Interior Secretary James Watt and beer magnate Joseph Coors — become head of the agency that watches over the nation's air and water.

EVEN FRIENDS concede that Mrs. Gorsuch sometimes is brusque, but they ascribe this to her passion for efficiency and professionalism.

Katie Lewis, an aide to Republicans in the Colorado Legislature, says Mrs. Gorsuch "doesn't bat her eyelashes or giggle ... so they say she's icy."

Diane Rees, a lobbyist for the mining industry in Colorado when Mrs. Gorsuch was a state representative, recalls how they would often go out for a "long, gossipy lunch," then return to some hearing Mrs. Gorsuch was chairing on a bill being pushed by mine owners.

"ANNE would proceed to decimate the bill," Mrs. Rees says. "She was totally able, more than anyone I've ever seen, to separate friendship from her legislative duties."

The private and the public Anne Gorsuch: To friends, she is "warm ... caring ... loyal ... careful to remember everone's birthday." To opponents, "abrasive ... haughty ... isolated."

Mrs. Gorsuch is careful to separate her private and professional lives. She makes it clear she won't talk about her separation from her husband, but a possible hint of their differences slips out when she mentions the start of her political career. She recalls husband David, also a lawyer, turning down a Republican Party plea to run for office.

"I GUESS IT was a decision I always quarreled with," she says. "So a number of years later when the party asked me to run, I had all my arguments figured out, why it was a good idea."

One reason was "a real sense of public service" instilled by her father. Mrs. Gorsuch often mentions her father, a successful Denver surgeon who had started practice in Caspar, Wyo. — where Mrs. Gorsuch was born on April 21, 1942 — after first researching to find out "where the fewest doctors were and where the most money was."

DR. JOSEPH J. McGill thought education the "be-all and end-all" for his seven children, particularly the six daughters.

Dr. McGill's father died before he was born and his mother had to work to support the family. "I think he really suffered watching it," Mrs. Gorsuch says. "He said, 'Well look, I may have all these girls, by gosh, but they're going to have an insurance policy of the best education.'"

Since Dr. McGill believed every educated person should speak a foreign language, Anne was sent to Mexico for summers to learn Spanish from Roman Catholic nuns, the first time while still in grade school. At 13, she was taking courses at the National University in Mexico City.

HER SCHOOL record reflects her father's adage that "a busy child is a happy child": honor student, champion debater, class officer, college sorority girl, fraternity sweetheart, an editor of the law review, Fulbright scholar.

She got her bachelor's degree from the University of Colorado in two years and finished law school there at age 21. Anne was not a "bookworm student" though, says Lenabell Sloan Martin, her high school speech teacher. "It just came naturally to her."

School friend Thomas McGonigle also dismisses the idea of Anne as bookworm. He admired Mrs. Gorsuch's "clarity of mind" but remembers: "Anne appeared at the prom wearing these high-heeled shoes with flashing lights in them. She just took the place by storm."

Tracking may save whoopers

By LESLIE WILLIAMS
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The huge Slave and Peace rivers, Caribou Mountains, bogs, forests, and meadows stretch across Canada's Wood Buffalo National Park — 17,300 square miles across Alberta Province and the Northwest Territories.

North America's tallest birds nest in an area spotted with shallow bogs, separated by thin lines of grass, black spruce and willow trees.

Among the cranes were Mr. and Mrs. Nyarling, named after the Canadian river nearest their nest. In June, their rust-colored daughter — Miss Nyarling — emerged from its egg.

In November, Miss Nyarling made naturalist history.

The crane chick became the focus of a project that might help whooping cranes — already an endangered species — survive.

The project called for the young bird to migrate 2,600 miles from Canada to Aransas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas, with a radio transmitter strapped to its left leg. It was the first time that biologists tracked mile-by-mile the migration of the whooping crane. American and Canadian scientists monitored the October and November flight south.

SCIENTISTS PREPARED Miss Nyarling in August — two months after she abandoned her shell.

Canadian Wildlife Service biologist Ernie Kuyt and University of Idaho research biologist Rod Drewien came to the Wood Buffalo nesting site toting plastic bands and a 76-gram transmitter with an 8.5-inch flexible antenna.

She was "wired." The American and Canadian scientists were ready, but the chick had not matured enough for the hazardous journey to Texas.

The Nyarling family remained at the park during August, September and part of October. Finally, on Oct. 4, the three cranes lifted off, bound for the South Texas coast. Thirty days later, at 8 a.m. on Nov. 3, the trio landed at the Aransas refuge.

"Whoopee!" cried a welcoming party of whooper watchers as the cranes settled near the refuge's 35-foot high observation tower, about 70 miles northeast of Corpus Christi.

Tracking the Nyarling family — a joint effort of the American and Canadian governments — advanced knowledge of whooping cranes by 10 years, said Larry Thomas, the project coordinator in Arlington, Va.

"The project was necessary because nobody knows very much about the whooping crane's migration. We learned where they stopped along the route. How long they stayed in each area. And the special characteristics of places the whoopers like," said Steve Labuda, a staff biologist at Aransas National Wildlife Refuge.

Labuda worked on the ground crew that followed bird and parents during the 30-day southward migration. The 4- to 5-feet tall white-plumaged adult birds and their offspring also were trailed by an air crew monitoring the transmitter on the young whooper from airplanes.

THE TRACKING WAS financed by the Canadian Wildlife Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Thomas said. He estimated the cost for the 10-member staff of pilots, biologists and assistants from two countries will reach at least $40,000. Three chicks, including Miss Nyarling, took part.

A solar-energy powered transmitter, with a backup energy source from a conventional battery, was attached to a leg of each young crane at the Canadian park.

The first chick, a male who left the Canadian park several days before the Nyarling group, died Oct. 18 after hitting a power line in Canada's Midnight Lake area. Another male chick made an uneventful arrival in Texas on Nov. 9.

"Surprisingly, a duck hunting guide saw it land on San Jose Island Monday. The chick was with its parents and had the green band and transmitter on its left leg and a red and white band on its right leg," said Frank Johnson, manager of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge.

Thomas said the third chick left the Canadian park while the ground crew and air crew were busy trailing the Nyarling whoopers.

"And when we sent someone to follow the third bird it was too late. We were unable to find him," Thomas added.

The Whooping Crane Recovery Team recommended the tracking expedition to determine what habitat is essential for the endangered cranes, Thomas said.

The six-member team's task was to produce a recovery plan identifying what steps would bring the population up to a "healthy level" so the birds can be removed from the Endangered and Threatened Wildlife and Plants List compiled by the U.S. Department of the Interior.

About 120 whooping cranes can be found in the world today, according to a census compiled by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The population that migrates from Canada to Texas and back to Canada numbered 78 last year.

THE CRANES ARE expected to leave the refuge in April to migrate back to Canada.

"The two chicks at Aransas are the only young still living. They are the only possibility for increasing the Wood Bufallo-Aransas population," said Paul Goossen, a biologist with the Canadian Wildlife Service. Goossen was a member of the air crew that followed the Nyarling group.

"When a bird landed in a particular area, the ground crew made behavioral observations and examined the habitat. We measured the depth of water and described plant life and food sources," Labuda said.

He marveled at the inexperienced Nyarling chick's clumsy adjustment to the different foods at each new habitat. Attempting to imitate her parents eating grain in Kansas, Miss Nyarling temporarily choked and gagged on straw.

In Nebraska, the adult birds searched under dried cow chips to eat spiders, crickets and earthworms. The juvenile, said Labuda, tried to flip a fresh cow chip. In southern Oklahoma, the cranes fed on newly planted wheat.

The scientists said the tracking expeditions might identify which stopover sites — if any — frequently are visited by the cranes. The governments then can work to preserve the sites.

"After all, when the whoopers are gone there will be no more — ever," said Dave Blankenship, a research biologist with the National Audubon Society.

Some warrants reissued; Some cases dismissed

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutors say they plan to dismiss thousands of misdemeanor cases because a judge ruled that Dallas County's procedures for issuing misdemeanor arrest warrants are unconstitutional.

And in thousands of others cases, prosecutors plan to seek new warrants that will comply with the ruling by U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham.

Higginbotham said Monday that the warrant system was unconstitutional because it did not require that a "neutral magistrate," such as a judge or justice of the peace, decide whether there was probable cause for the warrants to be issued.

County officials say the system already has been corrected. Assistant District Attorney Leon Brotherton said that since Oct. 1, all applications for misdemeanor arrest warrants have been reviewed by a municipal judge or a justice of the peace.

Assistant District Attorney Sue LeGarde said Tuesday the district attorney's office plans to dismiss all misdemeanor cases filed before January 1980 in which the defendant has not been arrested.

In cases filed after that time, prosecutors will seek new warrants signed by judges rather than clerks, she said.

Ms. LeGarde said she could not estimate how many cases will be dismissed, but she added, "I don't think there's any question that it would be in the thousands."

District Attorney Henry Wade said Tuesday that most of the warrants affected by the judge's ruling will be rewritten and submitted to misdemeanor court judges for signing.

"This is going to be mostly a signing party for the judges," Wade said.

He said he expects most of the invalidated warrants to be re-issued by the end of the year.

Wade said Higginbotham's ruling is not expected to affect any misdemeanor warrant which has resulted in a conviction or which has already been served in a case pending in court.

"There's not anybody going free on it," Wade said. "It's just a change of paperwork."

The district attorney said Sheriff Don Byrd was asked Monday night not to make arrests on any of the invalidated warrants.

Ms. LeGarde emphasized that all of the cases being dismissed were misdemeanors. The county clerk's office issues misdemeanor arrest warrants in minor drug possession, theft and other cases. A warrant is required if the suspect is not arrested at the scene of the crime.

Higginbotham's ruling came in a lawsuit filed by Stephen Crane, a lawyer who was jailed for several hours in April 1980 because his name appeared on incorporation papers another lawyer had filed for an adult movie theater operation. An obscenity charge against Crane was dismissed later.

But Crane said the damage already had been done. His suit asks for $1.5 million in damages. A jury is to decide whether he is entitled to any money and if so, how much. A hearing is scheduled for Dec. 14.

"If the proper procedures had been in effect a year and a half ago, in April of 1980, the warrant I was arrested on would never have been issued," Crane said Tuesday.

The number of warrants issued under the invalidated system and still outstanding is unclear.

Lively Senate debate weighs defense secrecy

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate opponents of President Reagan's proposed B-1 bomber fleet failed today to win approval of increased spending for soldiers, airmen and ammunition that they argued are needed more than new long-range bombers.

The Senate rejected amendments that would have added $77 million for Army and Air Force manpower and $148 million for Army ammunition to a $208.5 billion military spending bill.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., speaking for the amendments, said the Reagan administration's strategic proposals would make the United States "overprepared for nuclear war" and "unprepared for conventional war."

Even in a nuclear war, Hollings said, "the most inefficient way to drop a piece of ordnance on Moscow would be by a manned penetrating bomber."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee, said Hollings and his supporters were trying to "increase all these other accounts and take the money away from the B-1."

The manpower amendment, which was killed by a vote of 54-36, would have provided funds for 6,000 additional soldiers and 6,000 additional airmen.

Hollings said the administration's decision to abandon its original request for the troop increases was "a reversal of a manpower policy and a defense posture that had been carefully considered as a minimum force necessary."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., contended that the Air Force and Army supported the amounts already in the bill, which would increase Air Force strength by 10,500 people and maintain Army strength at existing levels.

The ammunition amendment, rejected by a vote of 55-36, would have made the Senate's ammunition appropriation about $50 million more than the amount in the House-passed bill, rather than $98 million less.

The votes on the amendments generally followed party lines, with most Democrats supporting them and Republicans opposing them.

An unsuccessful amendment that would have added $250 million for research on a radar-eluding Stealth bomber sparked a lively debate Tuesday on what is secret and what isn't.

It was no secret, however, that the amount for Stealth now in the bill was classified. Senators could see the figure only by going to a guarded room on an upper floor of the Capitol.

But supporters of the amendment, which was defeated 51-40, said it would make the Stealth appropriation in the Senate bill equal to that already approved by the House.

Meanwhile, Reagan signed a $130.7 billion defense authorization bill for fiscal 1982 that contains provisions for building the B-1 and MX missile. The legislation, separate from the actual spending bill being debated in the Senate, would permit spending $2.1 billion for the B-1 and $300 million for basing the MX.

The Stealth amendment in the Senate, sponsored by Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, was one of a series sponsored by Democrats in an attempt to shift money from the B-1 bomber to other military hardware and operations.

Byrd said he was "very concerned that, because the administration has also opted for the B-1 bomber, funding for Stealth will be inadequate."

In another attempt to thwart the B-1, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said he would offer an amendment today to eliminate $2 billion for the bomber, which he said isn't needed.

During Tuesday's debate, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, charged that Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., was giving away secrets by talking about how costly it would be for the Soviet Union to defend itself against Stealth.

Nunn had challenged Defense Department cost figures that he said were "designed to make the B-1 look like a good bargain."

Why Sadat not mourned by all

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Two months after the assassination of President Anwar Sadat, a clearer picture is emerging of why the Egyptian people failed to mourn him as his admirers in the West and Israel did.

Many Egyptians in random interviews in recent weeks cited reasons similar to those given immediately after the Oct. 6 assassination: the shock of the assassination itself and a fear that it was part of a larger plot.

BUT THEY ALSO said — privately and with anonymity — that the popularity of the man eulogized as "the hero of war and peace" had dropped sharply in the six months before the assassination, mainly because of his domestic policies. The fact that he brought peace to Egypt after 30 years of off-on war with Israel is, however, fondly remembered, and the courage and daring it needed is highly praised.

Yet, though deeply grieved by his death, they admit a new leader makes them hopeful that the economic disparity between the classes may be narrowed.

Some Egyptians said they believe Sadat had become increasingly isolated from the masses. His crackdown on political opponents last September and his bitter attacks on his critics were unpopular with many.

OTHERS COMPLAINED that peace had not brought the prosperity he promised, and his angry personal attacks on Arab critics of his peace with Israel had needlessly alienated Egypt's former benefactors.

Sadat began bitterly assailing domestic political opponents by name in a speech last May 14. His mass arrests of mainstream political critics and religious extremists in September — on the blanket charge of contributing to Moslem-Christian strife — was seen by many as an end to his "experiment with democracy."

"Sadat alienated virtually every class of society in the past year," said an Egyptian university professor. "The intellectuals didn't like the crackdown. The Moslem fundamentalists didn't like the repression he used against them. The Copts (Christians) resented his action against their pope. The new rich class didn't like the new controls on currency. The lot of the poor is not getting any better."

WELL-INFORMED EGYPTIAN sources also said Sadat increasingly surrounded himself with advisers who never contradicted him. They say he may never have known the extent of opposition to his moves. The advisers had "their antenna directed to him and not to society, as they should have been," one Socialist said.

Sadat's three to four-hour speeches, directed at "my sons and daughters," irritated many Egyptians because they seldom addressed the problems of the domestic economy, instead focusing mainly on foreign affairs.

An Egyptian journalist said his wife laughed when Sadat cited food prices in his speeches, since the prices invariably were wrong.

"He kept telling us things are getting better, but we all know we are being paid the same and prices are increasing," said an Egyptian office worker. "Next year, he always said next year."

SADAT ALSO LIVED royally, moving from one to another of Egypt's 12 lavish guest houses. He was renovating King Farouk's once-lavish Montazah Palace on the shore of the Mediterranean in Alexandria.

"He was always making fun of the 'effendis,'" said the journalist, referring to the Arabic word for "snobs." "But he seemed blind to the fact that he himself was living the life of an 'effendi', the biggest 'effendi.'"

Some Egyptians, mainly businessmen, expressed the belief that the conservative Persian Gulf states would not have contributed to the Arab boycott of Egypt over the Israeli peace treaty to the extent they did if Sadat had not viciously attacked their weak points.

Heart enlargement is natural adaptation to increased work

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

Long distance runners and weight lifters both develop "athletes heart," an enlarged heart from exercise, but the weight lifters' hearts are thicker.

"Enlargement is a useful, natural adaption to the increased workload on the heart produced by regular exercise," the American Heart Association says.

"The heart muscle gets larger, and thus stronger, like any other muscle in the body that is used often enough."

Twelve long-distance runners who had trained for an average of 6.4 years, averaging about 80 miles per week, were compared with 17 competitive weight lifters and seven amateurs, reports Dr. Jere H. Mitchell and colleagues at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas.

The runners' hearts were larger in volume while the weight lifters' hearts had thicker walls, Dr. Mitchell reports.

The thick hearts found in the weight lifters were similar to — but not as thick as — diseased hearts often found in patients with chronic high blood pressure, the report says. Obesity and congenital defects also cause the heart to work harder.

House Calls

For the doctor, not an apple a day, but a house call a week.

"The best public relations possible for the medical profession would be for every doctor to make at least one house call a week," the graduating class at Dartmouth Medical School was told recently.

The advice came from Dr. William A. Nolen, surgeon and author. Dr. Nolen, who wrote "Surgeon Under the Knife," is the only surgeon in Litchfield, Minn., pop. 5,200.

"Make some sacrifices," Dr. Nolen says. "Sometimes you have to go and see the patient. Sometimes you have to get up in the night."

And remember, he says, "Don't see your patients through a tunnel. Remember they're whole human beings and must be treated as such."

Calling on the Doctor

When you go to your physician's office, remember "You can't leave everything to the doctor."

Patients, as well as doctors, need certain skills, Dr. William B. Stason of the Harvard School of Public Health, offered a few tips to The Medical Forum, the Harvard Medical School health letter.

— "You should begin by clearly saying why you have come; otherwise there's no guarantee the doctor will catch on." Doctors and patients often have different outlooks and patients often aren't explicit in making their concerns known.

— "When you go to the doctor, have a list of questions in mind; indeed, there's no harm in writing them down and handing the paper to the doctor. And it doesn't hurt to bring a list of all the pills, prescribed or over-the-counter, that you take."

— "Once you understand what the doctor wants you to do, be explicit about your reactions. Many a patient leaves the doctor's office with reservations about the prescribed treatment, but the doctor knows nothing about them because the patient has smiled and said 'Thank you' without expressing these concerns."

— "If you have trouble remembering to take medication (but do intend to take it), certain tricks may help — say, by putting a pill bottle in the shoes you plan to wear the next morning, next to a toothbrush, or in some other conspicuous place. A word of warning: Don't make a sudden change in your pill-taking habits without letting your doctor know."

Cell Migration

Atherosclerosis may be a disorder involving the proliferation and migration of normal smooth muscle cells, much as cancer is a proliferation of abnormal cells, scientists at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston say.

The researchers — Robert Weinstein, Michael B. Stemerman and Thomas Maciag — identified in the laboratory the hormones required for growth of rat aortic smooth muscle cells. They also saw nodules similar to atherosclerotic plaque-like structures seen in humans.

When rat pituitary glands, which control hormone production, are removed, atherosclerosis does not develop, earlier studies showed. All this implicated hormones in the disease.

Their new model of cell growth allows the researchers to look at the precise role of cholesterol, low density fat proteins and other factors leading to atherosclerosis.

"If we find a way to control the growth of cells, we will be able to control the disease eventually," says Dr. Weinstein.

Campaigning, Mexican style

By MARK LIFSHER
Dallas Times Herald

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — No one in Mexico seriously doubts that Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado, the candidate of the official Institutional Revolutionary Party, will put on the red, green and white presidential sash as Mexico's next leader in 1982.

His party, known by its initials PRI, has not lost the presidency in 50 years.

SO WHY IS the 47-year-old lawyer, who has never held an elected office, subjecting himself to endless 18-hour days campaigning through all 31 Mexican states — an effort that would leave even a veteran U.S. politico reeling?

The answer lies in Mexico's unique form of democracy, which immerses the official candidate in the nation's problems and ensures he has heard every population sector's gripes and aspirations before settling in for a single six-year term at the presidential palace. Election day is July 4, 1982.

De la Madrid's recent swing through the border state of Chihuahua, his sixth campaign trip since receiving the party nomination Sept. 25, typified the mass enthusiasm so carefully worked up by PRI officials.

Thousands of party faithful and the merely curious braved Friday night's chilly drizzle to camp out along 10 miles of Pan American Highway between the airport and downtown of Juarez, Mexico's far-northern border city opposite El Paso.

HUNDREDS OF truck, bus, jitney and taxi owners lined their vehicles along the industrial highway dominated by automobile junkyards to salute the candidate with a cacophony of horn blowing as he sped through their column to a mass rally at the city center.

Carefully orchestrated airport arrival festivities quickly broke into an emotional pandemonium as soon as the informally dressed, distinguishedly graying candidate descended the steps of his chartered 737 to be engulfed in a throng of photographers and television cameramen that aggressively dogged him throughout the day's campaigning.

Downtown, de la Madrid threaded his way through a sea of banners representing the myriad initials of the party's base organizations — tranport workers, social security employees, peasants — as waves of red, white and green confetti snowed down on a wildly exhuberant but remarkabley wll-ordered crowd of at least 25,000.

THE CANDIDATE'S speech, his only major address of the day, echoed the party's National Development Plan, stressing industrial diversification, agricultural development, intelligent use of the country's oil riches and continuation of agrarian reform, a basic tenet of Mexico's turn-of-the-century revolution, fought to cries of "Land And Liberty!"

He praised Chihuahua, the home of revolutionary Pancho Villa, as the birthplace of the revolution. Gazing toward the El Paso skyline, he called Juarez "not only our geographic limit but the guardian of our nationalism."

During the speech, de la Madrid leaned down from the podium to receive a petition, one of the hundreds he would receive during the day, before shouting "Viva Chihuahua!" and hurrying on to the next campaign stop, a conference with the local chapter of PRI's think tank, the Institute of Political, Economic and Social Studies.

The conference marks the Juarez campaign's difference from U.S. campaigns. His speech over, de la Madrid started listening. He quietly sat for more than two hours as party leaders and representatives of peasant, youth, business and educational organizations frankly discussed the region's problems and needs in an almost academic symposium atmosphere.

AND THE CANDIDATE went on listening during the rest of the day's long activities of visits to worker housing, universities and public administration centers.

Listening is the key to PRI's half-centry grip on political power and the reason Mexico's seemingly non-democratic, for all intents one-party system is able to reflect the popular will.

Government under the PRI is an ongoing process of consensus gathering that culminates every six years with the selection of the next president.

Potential candidates, usually cabinet-level ministers, and their supporters began jockeying for attention as incumbent President Jose Lopez Portillo entered the last third of his single six-year term.

The candidates, proven party workers and administrators who have worked their way up the PRI ranks, never announce their interest in the presidency — such a move would be considered brash and bad form in the Mexican system. Instead, they vie for the incumbent's attention as their supporters float trial balloons in Mexico's aggressively free press.

CANDIDATE WATCHERS keep track of which minister made which speech in which city while the party's three organized sectors — labor, the party bureaucracy and think tank and the "populars" (everyone else including peasants, businessmen and youth groups) — consult among themselves and with the incumbent president about what kind of president the country needs.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Psychological probelms at heart of alcoholism

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son has been drinking since he was 14 years old. Now, at the age of 22, he's decided he better stop if he expects to live much longer. He goes for counseling sessions at a local family agency, where he sees a psychologist. He's having a pretty rough time, but so far is sticking it out. What I'd like to know is why they don't give him some pills to make it a little easier for him? Would you recommend I ask my doctor for a prescription for some medicine that will help calm him down? — Mr. S.F., Queens, N.Y.

Dear Mr. F.: I urge you, don't — I repeat, don't — interfere in your son's treatment. If he's being seen at a reputable agency, let the people there, together with your son, determine the course of treatment.

Moreover, I can't imagine a physician who would give you a prescription for medication for a person who is not a patient of his. Such action would be highly unethical, to say the least.

As for the specific issue you raise, some physicians and other health personnel who treat alcoholics do prescribe medication to help alleviate the symptoms of alcohol withdrawal. Others, however, believe that such medication hides the patient's underlying psychological problems, and that this interferes with treatment. Permanent recovery from alcoholism is more likely if these underlying problems are resolved.

I assume that the people responsible for treating your son subscribe to this point of view.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I seem to be reading a good deal lately about the aggressive type A personality who is supposed to be prone to heart attacks. I know as many meek and mild people who have had heart attacks as aggressive ones. What about that? Is my experiences the exception? — Don, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Don: Your observation has been confirmed by others. Dr. Robert Eliot, professor of medicine at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha notes that 65 percent of men fall into the type A category; yet half of all heart attacks occur in the type B's.

Apparently, the competitive type A man — or woman — is not more vulnerable to a heart attack. It seems that how a person responds to stress is the improper factor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that men sometimes show symptoms when their wives are pregnant? I'm not even married, but I was present at such a discussion. I find it hard to believe, for example, that I would ever become nauseous just because my wife was pregnant. — Henry, Newark, Del.

Dear Henry: It may be strange, but apparently is true. In one group of expectant fathers, 65 percent showed symptoms such as gastrointestinal upsets and backaches. In another study, fathers were found to have gained as much as 20 pounds during their wives' pregnancies.

While not all men are affected in this fashion, apparently quite a few are.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You sometimes write that sweets and junk foods have empty calories. I'm in the habit of having a couple of beers at night. Do you consider this empty calories, too? — Andy, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Andy: In general, beer would be included in the category of empty calories; however, this does not mean that it is completely lacking in nutrients.

On the average, a 12-ounce bottle of beer provides small percentages of the recommended daily allowances of riboflavin and niacin among other vitamins, as well as some of the trace metals zinc, copper, and manganese. Beer also contains some sodium, potassium, magnesium, calcium, and phosphorus among the minerals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I want my children to have cereal for breakfast, but all they eat is the kind with sugar added. How do you handle this? Isn't it better to have the cereal with the sugar, than not to have any cereal at all? — Mrs. T.G., Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Mrs. G.: There is, of course, another alternative — to have the unsweetened form of cereal. And it may not be as difficult to arrange this as you might think. After all, I assume that you are the one who does the shopping.

According to the Consumers Union, children will come to accept sugarless cereals if that is what their parents insist on serving. This conclusion was reached after a study of 300 children in the fourth, fifth, and sixth grades in New York City schools.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that patients who suffer burns can eat all they want? A friend of mine was hospitalized because of an automobile accident, and she says this is what the nurses told her. — Shirley, St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Shirley: Patients who suffer extensive burns have a tremendous metabolic response. For example, a woman with burns over 50 percent of her body, who ordinarily may have needed 1,200 calories and 30 grams of protein a day to maintain body functions, may require 3,000 calories and 160 grams of protein.

Because of this, badly burned patients are placed on a high calorie, high protein diet. If they cannot take all of the food orally, they may be fed through a tube or intravenously.

Consuming a large amount of calories may be difficult for some patients, particularly children, but hospital dieticians will try to provide any food that appeals to them, such as hot dogs or peanut butter sandwiches. Burn patients select foods from the same menu as do other patients, but they are given larger portions. They also are encouraged to snack during the day.

HUMOR IN UNIFORM

Word games

Special from Reader's Digest

An Air Force pilot was checking with the control tower for clearance to take off. Apparently feeling very pleased with himself, he cockily radioed, "Give me the word and I'll fly like a bird!"

Without a moment's hesitation, the controller replied, "You have my consent to leave the cement."

Our chaplain, Father Paul, told us one day that he could always tell a Catholic chaplain from a Protestant one, even though their uniforms' insignia are identical.

I was prepared for some deep religious revelation, until Father explained. "It's really quite simple," he said. "The Catholic's right shoe is creased from genuflecting."

On a joint military-services training exercise in Texas, an Air Force photographer was required to take pictures of an Army field headquarters. Approaching the rear of the tent, he noticed a white ribbon mounted on sticks surrounding the tent. The photographer had stepped over the ribbon and headed toward the front of the tent when a young military policeman accosted him and proceeded to chew him out. The ribbon was a simulated, 10-foot high cyclone fence, he was told, and he would have to go to the proper entry point.

The photographer stepped back over the ribbon, stood there a moment, moved his hand first to his chest, then to his mouth, and directed a throw toward the ribbon. Steppping back across it, he headed toward the front of the tent. "What in the world are you doing," the astounded military policeman asked.

Poker-faced, the photographer answered him. "Remember that simulated cyclone fence of yours? Well, I just blew it up with my simulated grenade!"

With that he proceeded to take all the pictures he needed.

Returning from a Mediterranean cruise, our ship ran into a terrible storm that knocked out the automatic navigational systems and compasses. Shortly after we left the stormy area, an announcement came over the loudpeaker: "This is the captain speaking. I have some good news and some bad news. First, the bad news is that we are lost. And the good news is that we are making pretty good time."

A few years ago when a West Point study group was doing an investigation of the Academy, it remarked that, in the members' opinion, cadets appeared to be too serious. The New York Times immediately picked up the comment and printed a story with the headline, "Study shows Cadets Lack Humor."

In retaliation some cadets strung between academic buildings a large banner bearing their sentiment: "How can a newspaper without funnies say we have no humor?"

We were hours into the flight of the Air Force C-47 when the flight engineer came back to warn us of turbulence ahead. Assured that all seat belts were tightly cinched, he returned to the cockpit. Almost immediately, the left wing dipped sharply, and those of us in the bucket seats along the right side of the cabin hung uncomfortably in our seat belts. Seconds later, the plane straightened out and we continued without further event.

After landing, the flight engineer explained. "It was a long day," he said, "and the pilot wanted a cup of coffee before landing. That's when I discovered that the latch securing the coffee urn to the bulkhead had jammed, making it possible to tilt the urn to get the last of the coffee."

"The easiest solution," he concluded with a shrug, "was to tip the airplane."

One of my responsibilities as a Navy lawyer is to proofread the records of courts-martial in which I am the prosecuting attorney. I found one transcript full of references to the "baliff." After correcting each misspelling, I sent a memorandum to the court reporter, in mock annoyance, saying simply, "There are two i's in bailiff." Within the hour the reply memo came back: "i, i, sir."

"We fight over it all the time, sir," was the response.

"Not exactly, sir," the private answered. "The loser has to eat it!"

El Paso has completed chore of reappraising taxable property

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — As most Texas counties brace for the tedious process of reappraising their taxable property, El Paso County is putting its feet up.

El Paso completed a countywide property revaluation in 1980 and already has its Central Appraisal District functioning. The growing pains associated with the reappraisal and the formation of a single appraising agency are over, said Mayor Jonathan Rogers.

"It was a hardship when it was put in," Rogers said. "It's working now."

The major problem was that the reappraisal, as expected, caused residential taxes to rise incredibly. El Paso had not had an area-wide appraisal since 1957, and a depreciation system used by the city had led to assessments at far less than market value, Rogers said.

"Houses were being taxed at nowhere near what they were worth," the mayor said. "It was a bit of a shock to everybody when they found out how much their taxes had increased."

The taxing entities in the county reduced their tax rates to allow for the higher values, but taxes still went up.

The backlash from that discovery has dwindled to a simmer, and there are few complaints about the appraisal district.

"We're very pleased with it. The idea of a Central Appraisal District, at least so far in El Paso, has worked farily well," said Superintendent Ron McLeod of the El Paso Independent School District.

City Tax Assessor-Collector James Hicks said the county had the jump on creating an appraisal district because its reappraisal was done by a private company and because many appraisal functions already were centralized.

Hicks said the city long had been responsible for appraising all of the property inside the city limits and sharing its assessments with the other 18 taxing entities.

The reappraisal was done by Professional Appraisal Corp. of Arlington, and a new computer system was installed by the Ebert Corp. to handle the new valuations. The price tag: nearly $2 million.

Hicks said the district now was "just doing a housekeeping function. They took a full-blown appraisal and just have to keep it up to date."

The district's chief appraiser, Cora Viescas, said she plans to revaluate all of the property every three years, with spot checks in the off years.

Because El Paso started more than a year before most counties, the system has become something of a showcase and recently was featured in a publication of the State Property Tax Board. Officials from several Texas cities have studied the system in preparation for their own reappraisals.

"People are coming down here constantly, looking to see what in the world we have done," Mrs. Viescas said. "I can see the problem they are going to be facing."

Chaps upset South Plains to open conference

Wilson, Smith combine to score 40 points in upset at home

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Dragging a 4-4 record into the Western Junior College Conference opener, Midland College looked like a champion that was ready to abdicate, and quickly. After all, South Plains College, the preseason favorite, was 10-1 and the only loss a forfeit in an Arizona tournament, which was obliquely blamed on the Chaparrals.

The Chaparrals apparently aren't ready to concede anything, yet, leading every step of the way in upsetting the Texans, 84-77, at the Chaparral Center Tuesday night as Puntus Wilson and Chester Smith pumped in 20 points apiece while Spud Webb, who scored 17 points, did a job on Scott Ferrell, SPC's play-making who leads the team in scoring.

"We've been on the road the last two weeks," Coach Jerry Stone attempted to explain the dramatic turnabout. "We learned a lot in the two tournaments at Kansas and Amarillo, but when you are getting beat like we were in Kansas, it's hard to keep your head up when everybody is rooting against you."

"THE FANS really helped tonight," Stone went on. "It's the first time we've had anybody pulling for us in three weeks."

MC jumped away 8-4 early and South Plains never got in front. The Chaps led by as many as 19, 57-38, in the second half and 66-53 with 8:10 to go and every time the Levelland bunch made a run at the Chaps, someone, Wilson, Smith, McCain, Reggie Boyd, Chuck Robinson, would supply the spark that kept MC ahead.

It was a sloppy game in missed shots and there were so many turnovers by both teams that it looked like they were being scored as Rouges, like in Canadian Football, but Stone pointed out, "Both teams were tired. We just got back from the Amarillo tournament and they just got back from a tournament in Dodge City, Kan." That's the reason both agreed to play Tuesday rather than on the customary Monday night.

THE CHAPS inside defense prevented bigger, brawnier Texans from going to the basket as they would have liked to and it was only when South Plains got MC in a fast-paced transition game that they looked as though they might catch up, but fortunately, the turnovers proved disasterous.

Wilson didn't start for the Chaps, "He's been sick all week," explained Stone, but whatever he's got, maybe they ought to spread it around. The 6-3 1/2 sophomore from Dallas hit seven of nine from the field. Smith, a 6-6 freshman from Dallas, converted nine of 15 field shots while Boyd supplied an 11-point kick in the last half.

ALTHOUGH HE made only eight points before fouling out with 7:41 left, McCain was part of that serpentine defense that frustrated SPC's efforts to go inside, blocking three shots.

However, Webb did it all, even missing two dunk attempts, in scoring 17 points and holding Ferrell to two baskets, the first coming 12:45 into the second half and the next coming 29 seconds later, both against the zone.

But before writing South Plains off, it should be noted that Coach Dennis Perryman had to play this one without 6-6 Anthony Ferguson, one of the team's top scorers, who is out with a "stress fracture" and 6-9 Darrell Lyons, a transfer student, won't be eligible until next semester.

SOUTH PLAINS made a a rush at the Chaps after Midland led 68-53 with 8:10 left. SPC closed to 66-62 in less than two minutes and the upset appeared to be slipping away. That's when Webb fed Boyd for two, a flying Robinson stuffed an alley-oop lob, Webb scored on a fast break and then drove for a solo basket that he turned into a three-pointer to make it 77-64 with just over four minutes left.

"Spud is concentrating on other things than scoring now. He's playing defense and making assists," said Stone, "And it's showing."

PERRYMAN, a native of Wyoming, who coached in Montana for 16 years and might still be there if it hadn't snowed. "I had just shoveled my walk after a four foot snow. The next morning, it looked like I'd never used a shovel. I told my wife, 'That's it.'"

Since coming to Levelland, Perryman has turned the program around from the 8-23 he took over to 18-12 last year and this year 10-2, so far. That loss to Eastern Arizona came in a tournament and may have been as a result of Eastern's trip to play in a Midland tournament last year. They didn't fare too well, "And as soon as they find out you are from Texas..." Perryman says.

South Plains College—Scott Ferrell 2-3-3-7; Keith Gilbert 4-3-5-13; Roger Dixon 0-0-1-0; Williams Jones 4-1-2-9; Jeff Cicon 8-1-1-17; Dick Winter 5-3-4-13; David Morgan 3-4-2-10; Jim Gross; Derrick Bailey 1-0-1-2; Byron Schreiber 2-2-2-6; Tranel Hawkins. Totals 30-64 17-33 20.

Midland College—Spud Webb 7-3-4-17; Lance McCain 4-0-5-8; Puntus Wilson 9-6-2-20; Chester Smith 9-2-2-20; Chuck Robinson 3-0-2-6; Robert Earl 0-0-2-0; Jerome Crowe 1-0-3-2; Bradley Richardson 0-0-3-0; Reggie Boyd 5-1-2-11; DAvid Thompson 0-0-1-0. Totals 36-71 12-19 26 84.

Walker, Carter, Sims head AP All-American grid team

NEW YORK (AP) — Georgia running back Herschel Walker, Michigan wide receiver Anthony Carter and Texas defensive tackle Kenneth Sims have been named to The Associated Press All-America college football team for the second year in a row, joining record-breakers Marcus Allen and Jim McMahon on the squad.

BRIGHAN YOUNG'S McMahon, who will wind up his career against Washington State in the Holiday Bowl, not only set a pass yardage mark of 9,535 regular-season yards but also led the nation this season in passing and total offense.

Despite missing two games with a knee injury, he completed 272 of 423 passes for 3,555 yards and 30 touchdowns and was intercepted only seven times.

Allen, of Southern California, the first runner ever to gain 2,000 yards in a season, rushed for more than 200 yards seven times in 11 games and finished with 2,342 yards, smashing the mark of 1,948 by Pitt's Tony Dorsett in 1976. His average of 212.9 yards per game set another record.

Allen, who led the nation in scoring with 23 touchdowns, will end his career against Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

WALKER, THE other first-team running back, has a regular-season game remaining against Georgia Tech Saturday. In 10 games he has rushed for 1,666 yards after setting a record of 1,616 for a freshman last year.

The AP All-America team will appear on Bob Hope's All-Star Comedy Christmas Special on Sunday, Dec.20, from 7-8 p.m., CST (NBC-TV).

Carter caught 44 passes for 825 yards and seven touchdowns and returned 15 kickoffs for 406 yards and 10 punts for 150. With one season left, he has averaged 16.9 yards every time he has touched the ball. The record is 13.8 by Nebraska's Johnny Rodgers.

THE REST of the offensive unit includes tight end Tim Wrightman of UCLA, wide receiver Julius Dawkins of Pitt — he led the nation with 15 touchdown receptions while catching 40 passes for 690 yards — tackles Ed Muransky of Michigan and Terry Tausch of Texas, guards Kurt Becker of Michigan and Sean Farrell of Penn State, center Dave Rimington of Nebraska and placekicker Gary Anderson of Syracuse. Anderson did not miss an extra point in his career and connected on 18 of 19 field goal attempts this season.

BESIDES SIMS, the defensive unit consists of ends Billy Ray Smith of Arkansas and Andre Tippett of Iowa, tackle Jeff Gaylord of Missouri — Big Eight Defensive Player of the Year — middle guard Tim Krumrie of Wisconsin, linebackers Johnie Cooks of Mississippi State, Bob Crable of Notre Dame and Pitt's Sal Sunseri, backs Terry Kinard of Clemson, Mike Richardson of Arizona State and Tommy Wilcox of Alabama and punter Reggie Roby of Iowa.

Roby missed a bid to become the first college punter to average 50 yards per kick but his 49.8 average bettered the mark of 49.3 by Kirk Wilson of UCLA in 1956.

Fernando NL Rookie of the Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the left-handed pitching star of the Los Angeles Dodgers, added the National League Rookie of the Year award today to the Cy Young honors he captured last month and became the first player to win those two trophies in one season.

THE CHUNKY hurler from Sonora, Mexico, who impressed the baseball world with poise belying his 20 years — he turned 21 last month — and a dancing screwball, received 17 1/2 first-place votes and 6 1/2 for second for 107 points. The balloting was done by a panel of two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America from each National League city.

He became the third straight Dodger pitcher to be named NL rookie of the year — Rick Sutcliffe and Steve Howe preceded Valenzuela.

Montreal outfielder Tim Raines, who led the league with 71 stolen bases in just 88 games, placed second to Valenzuela. Raines, a .304 hitter, captured the remaining first-place votes, 6 1/2, and second-place ballots, 17 1/2, for 85 points.

ONLY FIVE other players received votes, and those were for third place. New York Mets third baseman Hubie Brooks got 8 1/2 third place votes, followed by pitcher Bruce Berenyi of Cincinnati and second baseman Juan Bonilla of San Diego with five. Catcher Tony Pena of Pittsburgh received four third-place votes and Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson got 1 1/2.

Five points were awarded for each first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Valenzuela, whose 13-7 record with a 2.48 earned run average — and league-leading totals in innings pitched (192), shutouts (8), strikeouts (180), and complete games (11) — made him the first rookie ever to win the Cy Young Award, was Mr. Clutch for the World Champion Dodgers in 1981. In becoming the 10th Dodger to capture rookie honors, Valenzuela won three times in the team's post-season run to the championship.

HE BEAT the Houston Astros in the fourth game of the West Division playoff, then hurled the pennant-clincher against Montreal in Game 5 of the League Championship Series.

In the World Series, the man responsible for "Fernandomania" got the Dodgers started after they lost the first two games in New York. Pitching without his best stuff, Valenzuela held off the Yankees for a 5-4 victory that began Los Angeles' Series comeback. The Dodgers won the next three games and the title.

Green: Cubs were disaster

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dallas Green, the Chicago Cubs' new executive vice president and general manager, says many managerial employees blamed the team's ineptness for the organization's problems.

"From top to bottom, the Chicago Cub organization was a disaster area, even worse than I first thought when I took the job," Green told Philadelphia Phillies broadcaster and columnist Rich Ashburn in an interview published Tuesday in The Bulletin.

"Too few people had too much responsibility, and they couldn't accomplish anything," Green said of the Cubs. "I also found a very negative attitude throughout the organization, with everyone blaming the team on the field for all their problems.

"I could find absolutely no direction and very little organization. I got rid of some people, moved some people to other jobs and brought in some of my own people," Green said of the job he took six weeks ago after managing the Phillies two years plus part of the 1979 season.

Green said he has hired "those I thought did a good job building the Phillies organization. I think they can do the same thing here (in Chicago)."

Besides hiring Phillies coach Lee Elia to manage the Cubs, Green said Gordon Goldsberry will set up the Cubs minor-league system. Jim Snyder, Tom Harmon, Glen Gregson, Erskine Thomason and Brandy Davis will work with the minor leaguers, and Gary Nickels will help with scouting. Patti Cox and Bing Hampton of the Phillies' Oklahoma City farm team will work with marketing and ticketing in Chicago, Green said.

Green sent a letter to the players stressing "fundamentals, conditioning and especially attitude. It was the same type thing I kept hammering at the Phillies players all the time I was there," he said, adding he was angry the letter had been leaked to the press.

Clemson upset over ABC-TV report

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson University President Bill L. Atchley charges ABC-TV with unfairly implying during a nationwide report that allegations of football recruiting irregularities by top-ranked Clemson were true.

But the producer of ABC's report broadcast during halftime of Saturday's Penn State-Pittsburgh game said the network was careful to preserve objectivity.

The report "cast (Clemson) in a very unfavorable light," Atchley said in a letter Tuesday to ABC News and Sports President Roone Arledge.

It included interviews with two football players from Knoxville, Tenn., who said they were paid cash to sign letters-of-intent to play for Clemson and that Clemson Coach Danny Ford and a recruiter knew of the payments.

"It is no secret that these allegations have been made," wrote Atchley, referring to charges by James Cofer and Terry Minor, who later were released from their Clemson letters.

"In fact, the university has acknowledged that the NCAA is conducting a preliminary inquiry concerning these accusations. However, the disturbing aspect of ABC's report was that Clemson's failure to respond publicly to these allegations means they are true," he told Arledge.

Jeff Ruhe, the producer of ABC's report, said the network "certainly didn't say we believed these kids" or were taking their side. But, he said, "they were the only ones who would talk to us."

Cofer said Knoxville insurance agent T.C. Breazeale, a Clemson alumnus, paid him $1,000 to sign with the Tigers. Minor said he received a $500 from Breazeale.

Ruhe noted that, at the end of the segment, reporter Jim Lampley said, "Any evaluation of the credibility of these charges should, of course, take into account the fact that they were associated with Kofer and Minor's efforts to secure a release from their commitments to Clemson."

Added Ruhe: "We felt we should pursue the story and not allow Clemson's saying 'no comment' to not permit us to pursue the story as we saw fit. We were denied access to people who could refute the story. We specifically said that."

Atchley said official enforcement procedures of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, of which Clemson is a member, "require that any information developed during an investigation be kept confidential.

"It is obvious that the reason for confidentiality is so that an institution's reputation and integrity will not be impugned by the publication of uncorroborated allegations.

"Irreparable harm to a university's image and reputation can undoubtedly result from the mere publication of such allegations, even if these allegations are later proven false. This is especially true in an instance such as this where no formal charges have even been brought against Clemson," Atchley said.

Noting that the university was given a chance to respond to the players' charges, the Clemson president said it chose not to do so because of the NCAA procedures and because "any response ... would be contrary to the best interests not only of Clemson, but of the NCAA and all of its member institutions."

"It is unfortunate that a reporter in an effort to develop a story can destroy the very protection sought to be afforded by the rules of the NCAA," Atchley said.

He said Clemson hopes other NCAA institutions "will not condone the behavior of ABC in televising this uncorroborated report."

Over the weekend, Atchley said he thought the report might have been timed to affect this week's rankings, and an Orange Bowl official said he believed the story was an attempt to promote the rival Sugar Bowl, which ABC will televise. An ABC spokesman denied both charges.

Bulldogs roll over Cubs

Midland High got a 20-point effort from 6-3 senior Don Sharnowski and 14 Bulldogs got in on the scoring parade as the Bulldogs rolled over the 4A Brownfield Cubs, 87-56, at the MHS gym Tuesday night.

The victory lifted the Purple Pack to 6-1 on the season as they head for a 4:40 p.m. game with Amarillo Tascosa Thursday in the first round of the Odessa Invitational tournament.

Sharnowski got all 20 points on 10 shots from the field. Preston Robertson, a 6-4 senior, added 18 points, eight coming from the charity line, for the Bulldogs and 6-3 Raymond Parker hit for 14 points. Jonny Pannell just missed double figures with nine points.

"We played pretty good basketball," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said. "Brownfield is not a bad team. I was pleased with the results."

The Bulldogs jumped to a 19-5 advantage in the first quarter and led by 15 at the half. The Bulldogs have now won five games in a row.

Brownfield was paced by Jones and Fisher with 10 points each.

The MHS junior varsity ran its record to 5-3 with a 51-37 win over Brownfield as James Pitts hit for 12 points and Jerry Johnson for 10.

Snyder shocks Rebels, 65-60

SNYDER — The Midland Lee Rebels dropped a 65-60 basketball decision to the Snyder Tigers here Tuesday night, and Lee coach Paul Stueckler is still trying to figure out how it happened.

"I'm not disappointed in our team at all. They played very well," Stueckler said. "It was one of those games where if you didn't look at the scoreboard, you would think you were winning. We got some great outside shooting from Randy Pepper and good board play from Kenneth Brown and Alvin Dunson was sharp. Snyder beat us at the free throw line by a 25-8 margin. We had 26 field goals to their 20."

Lee is now 4-2 on the season and will host Lubbock Coronado Friday in an 8 p.m. contest at the Lee gym in their next outing.

Pepper's outside bombs accounted for 22 of Lee's points and Dunson hit for 12. Brown added 11 to the attack. James Caldwell led the Tigers with 18 points, but he had plenty of help as D.W. Lofton hit for 16 and Riley Kitchens for 14.

Lee led 15-10 after the first period and by one-point at the half. The third quarter was the difference as Snyder had an 18-8 advantage.

"I think we played good enough to win, but Snyder proved to me that they have a good team," Stueckler added.

The Lee junior varsity won against Snyder, but no score was available.

Midland Lee (60): Blackwell, 0-2-5-2; Pepper, 11-0-0-22; Dunson, 5-2-4-12; Van Buren, 4-2-3-10; Smith, 1-1-3-3; Brown, 5-1-2-11; Cherryholmes, 0-0-5-0; Pendleton, 0-0-1-0. Totals: 26-6-23—60.

Snyder (65): Robertson, 1-0-1-2; Wilson, 0-8-3-8; Caldwell, 9-0-4-18; Lofton, 6-4-2-16; Kitchens, 3-8-2-14; Gafford, 1-5-4-7. Totals: 20-25-16-65.

Joe Frazier to fight Thursday

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Frazier, back from a workout, wrapped and hooded and looking like a fighter, noticed a man he knew and said in a rasping cold-weather whisper: "The kids need shoes."

It was a joke about something a lot of people don't think Joe Frazier should be involved in.

Thursday night at the International Amphitheatre, Smokin' Joe, a fighter who most fight people thought was safely out to pasture a long time ago, will fight for the first time in almost 5½ years. In his last fight he was stopped in the fifth round June 15, 1976 by George Foreman, the man who had won the title from him with a second-round knockout Jan 22, 1973.

His opponent will be Jumbo Cummings.

The comeback for the former heavyweight champion of the world comes eight days before his old arch-rival Muhammad Ali is scheduled to try again against Trevor Berbick in Nassau, The Bahamas, Dec. 11.

Why? It's the question that makes both the Frazier and Ali fights news events.

Dressed in gun-metal-colored slacks and vest, but no shirt or jacket, with a marksman stare offset with occasional grins, Joe Frazier talked about the comeback in his hotel suite Thursday.

"I'm back in the fight game," said Frazier, who added he's never really been out of it because he has, since the last Foreman fight, continued to work out and because he has been involved in his 21-year-old son Marvis' fledgling pro career.

"I never left. I've been there all along. Just being myself," said Frazier who made a hard but unsuccessful charge at the singing business.

"I'm fighting because I can fight. I don't make believe to anybody. It never crossed my mind to be back in Manila, or 1971 never crossed my mind. But it happens I want to be able to do it again.

White is uncertain for Colts

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday he wasn't certain whether injured quarterback Danny White will play Sunday against the Baltimore Colts, terming it a "wait and see" situation.

"I have no idea whether he will play," Landry said at his weekly press conference. "It will be determined by his doctors. Then it is up to Danny White if he wants to play."

White received a painful injury to his right rib cage in a 10-9 National Football League victory over the Chicago Bears Thanksgiving Day.

It officially has been called a bruised rib, although suspicious shadows on the X-rays hint at a possible cracked rib.

"We should have a pretty good idea by Friday if Danny can play," said Landry. "If he can go, he will go ... the first day he can lift his arm he will throw."

Backup quarterback Glenn Carano, who rallied Dallas to a victory over the Bears and got the game ball, will start in White's absence.

Landry was asked if White can still handle the Dallas punting chores no matter what.

"Hopefully," he said. "We'll just see how much it hurts him. If he can't punt, then we'll make a decision on whether to go after a punter or use Rafel Septien."

Hobbs clips Rebs

HOBBS, N.M. — The Midland Lee girls basketball team fell to 3-2 on the year here Tuesday night with a 64-60 loss to the Hobbs Eagles.

Shelia Ford paced the Eagles with 19 points while Sharon Smith had 16 and Dretta Hopkins 13. Lee's Yshun King also had 19 points to tie for high point honors while Lurdus Duran and Rozena McCabe both chipped in with 12 points each for the Rebels.

Hobbs took a 20-7 lead in the first period and that proved to be too much of a burden to overcome. Hobbs led by only four at the half and that proved to be the final difference as both teams had five point advantages in the final two periods.

Faye Oudems hit for 15 points to lead the Lee JV to a 59-56 win over Hobbs. Kerry Minor had 13 and Deonde Rhodes 10 in the victory.

Lee's girls will be in the Amarillo tournament Thursday through Saturday.

Brewer to start Cotton

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers said Tuesday that Ron Brewer would be his starting quarterback against Alabama in the Cotton Bowl Classic New Year's Day.

"He is our starter unless something happens to him," said Akers. "He has been getting more and more comfortable in there and he should continue to get stronger. He has more confidence, is more sure of himself, and is aa tremendous competitor."

Brewer moved into the starting slot when Rick McIvor was injured in the 14-14 tie with Houston. McIvor is now available to play.

Asked about Alabama, Akers said "They deserve to be rated higher or higher than they are (No. 3). I am glad the Cotton Bowl was able to get a team as highly regarded and as highly rated as Alabama.

"As to the flack over who was invited, why take No. 10 or No. 11 when youo can have No. 3? I am not involved in TV ratings, but if you are talking about football teams I know who to pick. There are a lot of people who could care less what's happening in Phoenix (The Fiest Bowl between Southern Cal and Penn State. You are talking about a game inn Dallas that could have a bearing on the national championship."

Jabbar climbs to No. 2 on NBA all-time scoring list

By The Associated Press

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has moved within one notch of becoming the National Basketball Association's all-time leading scorer, and the Utah Jazz has come close to carving its own niche in the record book.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 14 points Tuesday night as the Los Angeles Lakers trounced the Jazz 117-86. But it was a left-handed hook in the first quarter that gave him seven points for the game and 26,711 points in his career, one more than Oscar Robertson.

Wilt Chamberlain is the all-time leader with 31,419.

After Abdul-Jabbar's heroics, the Jazz seemed star-struck, scoring five points in the second quarter as the Lakers took a 59-35 halftime lead. Although NBA records for futility are incomplete, it was believed to be the second-lowest scoring performance by any team since the NBA's 24-second shot clock rule started in 1954.

The Buffalo Sabres scored four points in a quarter of a game against Milwaukee in 1972.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, it was New York 112, Detroit 100; Philadelphia 107, Atlanta 98; Indiana 90, Boston 87; San Antonio 110, Washington 99; Milwaukee 126, Cleveland 110; Kansas City 106, Houston 104; Portland 121, Denver 113; Phoenix 117, San Diego 94 and Seattle 103, Chicago 87.

Magic Johnson led a balanced Los Angeles scoring attack with 19 points, whole Jamaal Wilkes added 18 and Mitch Kupchak 17.

76ers 107, Hawks 98

Julius Erving led a second-half surge as Philadelphia avenged its only loss of the season by beating Atlanta.

Erving scored 19 of his game-high 30 points in the second half, including 11 in the third quarter when the 76ers took the lead for good and went on to improve their record to 14-1, including 10 straight victories. The only loss was to the Hawks Nov.6.

Pacers 90, Celtics 87

Boston lost for only the third time in 16 games as Indiana's Johnny Davis scored 15 of his game-high 21 points in the second half, including six in a row late in the game.

Davis tied the game for the 14th and final time at 82-82 with about five minutes left, sank a layup to give the Pacers the lead and then completed the spurt with two free throws with 2:26 left.

Suns 117, Clippers 94

Phoenix won its fourth straight game and eighth in a row over San Diego as Truck Robinson scored 25 points and Kyle Macy 22.

The Clippers were still in the game entering the fourth quarter, but the Suns scored 39 points in the final period to win going away.

Blazers 121, Nuggets 113

Calvin Natt scored 30 points and led a solid Portland rebounding effort with 14 as the Blazers beat Denver.

The Trail Blazers outrebounded the Nuggets 33-13 in the first half and took a 62-46 lead at intermission. Denver came back to cut the lead to two points with 9:47 left, but Mychal Thompson led an 11-0 spurt with seven points as Portland pulled away.

Knicks 112, Pistons 100

Maurice Lucas scored a season-high 28 points and pulled in 19 rebounds to lead New York over Detroit.

A basket by Lucas, who scored 12 points in the first quarter, gave the Knicks an 11-10 lead, and they never trailed after that. Another basket by the 6-9 power forward gave them their largest lead at 67-51 midway through the third quarter.

Kings 106, Rockets 104

Cliff Robinson scored 24 points and Phil Ford's basket with seven seconds left gave Kansas City a four-point lead over Houston.

The Rockets led 97-92 midway through the final period, but the Kings outscored Houston 14-7 down the stretch.

Bucks 126, Cavaliers 110

Sidney Moncreif scored a career-high 39 points, hitting 16 of 19 shots, as Milwaukee coasted over Cleveland, which lost its sixth straight.

The Cavaliers, who got 29 points from Mike Mitchell, were outscored 19-5 early in the fourth quarter to break open a close game.

Spurs 110, Bullets 99

The NBA's leading scorer, George Gervin, scored 42 points, including 14 in the third quarter as San Antonio outscored Washington 33-17.

Washington, which got 27 points from Greg Ballard, cut the deficit from 83-68 to 89-81, but Mark Olberding scored 14 points in the fourth quarter to keep the Spurs ahead.

Sonics 103, Bulls 87

Gus Williams scored 25 points to lead Seattle to its fifth victory in six games and send Chicago to its fourth straight defeat.

Bowl madness hits NCAA

By MELVIN DURSLAG
Hearst Feature Service

In the absence of a national tournament that would bring the college football program to an orderly and satisfactory finish, the NCAA has entered into the greatest madness this time in the history of postseason.

It has allowed the bowl promoters and the networks, for reasons peculiarly to their advantage, to savage each other brutally at the expense of the football follower, who, indifferent to television ratings, money and politics, wants to enjoy this form of entertainment during the holiday period.

What he gets is electronic genocide in which the networks, in association with bowl promoters, pulverize each other with games in the same time slot.

They have arranged for the Orange Bowl and the Sugar Bowl to be played during the same hours. This would have meant a clear voyage for the Cotton Bowl, except that they shifted the Fiesta Bowl from Christmas Day to New Year's Day, starting it at 11:30 a.m. Arizona time so that it would clash with the presentation out of Dallas.

THE ROSE Bowl isn't challenged during its three hours, but it has lodged a protest in another area, claiming its exclusivity with the Pacific-10 and Big-10 has been shaken by events at the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Folks in Houston, you see, went out and signed Michigan and UCLA for their game, upsetting the Pasadena people who feel that teams from the Pacific-10 and Big-10 should play each other only in the Rose Bowl.

You talk about the tail wagging the canine. In postseason, the universities are sitting on a Kimberley Mine, on a mountain of power through the expediency of a tournament -- and members have to listen to a bowl promoter dictate who plays where.

Subtly, the Rose Bowl hinted that if the Pacific-10 and Big-10 persisted in allowing their non-champions to appear against each other elsewhere, a reexamination of the Rose Bowl contract could be in order.

The scheduling conflicts on New Year's Day, the dog fights among the promoters in search of participants and the general muscle they exercise in postseason leads you to wonder what kind of rustic the NCAA can be.

How much longer will it continue to be influenced by members who play footsie with bowl operators, prolonging the system that currently exists?

And how thoroughly does the great investigative body of the NCAA look into socal relationships between bowl committees and coaches and athletic directors?

If some poor kid being hustled by a college gets the use of an assistant coach's car, or gets an unauthorized meal, or gets a trip for his mother, the NCAA closes in like Scotland Yard.

But how much closing in does the NCAA do on university people entertained by bowl committees, solidifying beautiful relationships permitting perpetuation of today's postseason concept?

UNDER THE guise of overemphasis, or academic strain, or physical hardship on the children who play, tournament proposals keep dying.

So the farce goes on, and it calls this time for five games on New Year's Day -- four in conflict.

Next year, we may see nine games, running simultaneously in sets of three.

Most interesting decision confronting a promoter this time was that of the Cotton Bowl, which had to choose between Bear Bryant and Marcus Allen. In other words, would the Cotton Bowl invite Alabama or USC?

Bryant never gained 2,300 yards in a season, but then Allen never went to 22 bowl games in a row, either. It also is a fact that Allen will be gone next year and old Bear will be around, favoring bowl operators with his presence.

The Cotton Bowl people haven't been running in the best of luck. SMU and the Dallas Cowboys, who used to inhabit the Dallas stadium, have fled to the cultural precincts of nearby Irving, which isn't your most common Texas name. How often does a tall galoot, attired in boots and a 10-gallon hat, answer to "Irving"?

Then placed in the same time slot on New Year's afternoon as the Sugar Bowl, the Cotton Bowl game encountered a diluted TV audience, split between the two events.

Given a break with the shifting of the Sugar Bowl to New Year's night, the Cotton Bowl now picks up head-to-head competition from the Fiesta Bowl, meaning that if a viewer, all at once, wants to see Bear Bryant in his pork-pie hat and Marcus Allen, he must flip the dial, or drive himself crazy looking at two sets at the same time.

This is the treasure bowl operators leave us, and it will get worse until the NCAA gets smart.

Brock heads CFL All-Stars

TORONTO (AP) — Dieter Brock, the record-setting passer with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, led a near-sweep of the offensive team by Western Division players on the Canadian Football League All-Star team announced Tuesday.

Brock, named the CFL's most valuable player for the second straight year after setting single-season records in several categories, was one of three Blue Bombers named to the All-Star offense.

He was joined there by slotback Joe Poplawski and guard Larry Butler, who, like Brock, were selected Most Valuable Players in post-season balloting.

Brock set single-season records for most passes (566), most completions (354) and most yards (4,790).

Winnipeg kicker Trevor Kennerd was named to the specialty team after an outstanding sophomore season in which he led the CFL with 185 points, the second-highest, single-season total in league history.

Joining Brock and Poplawski in the offensive backfield were running backs Larry Key of B.C.Lions and Jim Germany of the Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos.

The only Eastern Division players to break Western domination of the offensive team were wide receiver James Scott of Montreal Alouettes and guard Val Belcher of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Meyer finds out he's not old enough to beat up on Dad

By The Associated Press

Even at age 37, Coach Tom Meyer of Illinois-Chicago Circle is finding out he's not old enough to beat up on Dad.

Tuesday Meyer put his team on the court against seventh-ranked DePaul, coached by his father Ray, and took a licking. The Blue Demons beat Chicago Circle 78-53 behind the game-high 20 points Terry Cummings and some timely baskets by reserve Bernard Randolph.

Dad is now 67 and the winningest active Division I coach with 651 victories in his 39-plus seasons. He congratulated Tom after their history-making meeting, the first between father and son head coaches in college basketball, then threw in some advice.

In other games involving ranked teams, 12th-ranked Indiana downed No. 19 Notre Dame 69-55, No. 16 Missouri clobbered Alcorn State 82-51 and 17th-ranked Alabama walloped Tennessee-Martin 94-64.

The Top Ten

Randolph, DePaul's sixth man, added 13 points, and the Demons led by as many as 19, 31-12, in the first half of their season opener. Cummings got three baskets in the first half on goaltending calls against 7-foot-2 Chicago Circle center Dave Williams.

Johnny Ellis scored 10 points to help pull Cin 12, 36-24, at the half.

Tim Anderson led Circle with 16 points.

The Second Ten

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight shuffled his lineup, starting four freshmen, but it was a pair of upperclassmen who rallied the 1981 national champion Hoosiers over the Fighting Irish.

Ted Kitchel, a junior, scored 14 of his 22 points in the first half, and Randy Wittman, a senior, scored all 15 of his points in the second half as Indiana, 2-0, built a lead x4' as 17 points.

KNIGHT INSERTED Kitchel and Wittman into the lineup early in the game but nearly sent the freshman back in before the Indiana offense began to click.

John Paxson had 24 points for Notre Dame, 1-1.

Jon Sundvold scored 19 points, 10 in a burst early in the second half, as Missouri romped over Alcorn State in its season opener. Sundvold's fast-break basket ignited a spree of qvf Missouri points during a four-minute span midway in the second half as the Tigers led 61-39.

Missouri center Steve Stipanovich scored 16 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. Albert Irving led Alcorn State with 10 points.

Freshman Bobby Lee Hurt scored 20 points to lead Alabama, which was ahead by as many as 20 points in the first half and finally built the lead to 30, the margin of victory.

Eddie Phillips added 14 points for the Crimson Tide, now 2-0, while Curtis High led Tennessee-Martin with 26 points.

SOME OTHER scrores:

Morehead State beat Cleveland State 62-60 to win the Eagle Classic; Georgia topped Florida State 70-67; Syracuse dropped Cornell 90-47; Villanova hit St. Francis, N.Y., 93-63; Seton Hall beat Fordham 71-64, Lewis upset Drake 41-40.

Player pool nets 4 million from Series

NEW YORK (AP) — The six-game 1981 World Series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Yankees resulted in a record player pool of more than $4 million, according to figures released Tuesday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

The four division champions — Los Angeles, New York, Montreal and Oakland — and the other first division teams based on full season's standings, divided a pool of $4,143,060.63. Net receipts for the World Series and League Championship Series came to $9,338,803.59. The players share in proceeds from the first three games of each League Championship Series and the first four games of the World Series.

THE DIVISION playoffs, introduced following the strike, generated an additional $2,365,216.59 to be distributed among the players on the eight teams involved in those series.

The Dodgers' total winning share totaled $1,787,-153.89 from the Division Playoffs, League Championship Series and World Series. The club voted 35 full shares, five partial shares and eight cash grants to uniformed personnel and 19 cash grants to non-uniformed personnel. Precise share figures were not released because of a special request from the Dodgers' players and the Major League Players Association asking that those details not be made public.

The Yankees voted 30 full World Series shares of $28,845.17 plus 12 partial shares and six cash grants to players and 20 cash grants to non-uniformed personnel. There also were 24 full shares of $10,764.03 for the Division Series, making the total $39,-609.20 for each Yankee receiving the full take.

The Yankees voted half shares of $14,422.59 to Managers Gene Michael, who handled the club until he was fired the first week in September, and to his successor, Bob Lemon.

Montreal's National League East champion Expos, voted 30 full World Series shares worth $12,377.27 apiece, and Oakland, winner of the American League West, handed out 31 full shares worth $14,349.16 each.

THE EXPOS handled their two managers the same way as the Yankees. Dick Williams, fired a few days after Michael, received a half share of $6,188.64, and his replacement, Jim Fanning, received the same amount.

Pitcher Jeff Reardon, acquired in a trade with the New York Mets in June, received a full Series share and the Expos voted a one-third share of $4,125.76 to outfielder Ellis Valentine, who went to the Mets in the deal. Reardon also collected a full Division Series share worth $10,209.06.

Other World Series—League Championship Series full share payoffs came to $2,914.86 for Cincinnati; $2,572.48 for Milwaukee; $2,705.49 for St. Louis; $2,566.89 for Texas; $757.87 for Baltimore; $720.96 for the Chicago White Sox; $672.57 for Houston, and $625.01 for Philadelphia.

For the Division Series, the full share payoffs were $10,465.56 for Houston; $11,444.59 for Kansas City; $10,194.90 for Milwaukee; $10,209.06 for Montreal; $10,764.03 for the New York Yankees; $10,654.13 for Oakland, and $11,371.23 for Philadelphia.

The Division Series shares were distributed to players only.

Baylor Bears win, Owls fall

By The Associated Press

Terry Teagle scored 28 points and Ozell Hall made two free throws with 36 seconds remaining to stop a Colorado rally and give Baylor a 64-59 victory in a non-conference basketball game Tuesday night.

COLORADO TRAILED 59 to 49 with 3:38 remaining but rallied to narrow the score to 60-55 before Hall hit both ends of his one-and-one.

Teagle followed up Hall's free throws with a pair of his own to ice the game with six seconds remaining.

Rob Gonzalez scored 15 points for Colorado. Hall was the only Baylor player besides Teagle in double figures with 12 points.

Baylor is now 2-0 on the season, while Colorado fell to 0-1.

FRESHMAN CENTER John Williams scored 14 of his game-high 20 points in the first half, but clutch free throw shooting by Paul Thompson in the closing moments Tuesday night salvaged Tulane's 69-60 basketball victory over Rice.

Dukes pick up honors

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The general manager of the Albuquerque Dukes Triple-A baseball club and one of the team's top players this past season have been honored by The Sporting News publication.

Dukes General Manager Pat McKernan was named Triple-A Executive of the Year by The Sporting News while first baseman Mike Marshall was tabbed the top minor league player for this past season.

Marshall won the triple crown in the Pacific Coast League as the Dukes captured the league title. He drove in 137 runs; batted .373 and slugged 34 homers.

Marshall, who is spending the winter in Venezuela, may be shifted to third base since the parent Los Angeles Dodgers have a solid veteran at first base in Steve Garvey.

Earlier this year, Marshall was named the PCL Player of the Year and McKernan was named the top general manager by the league.

Oilers stretch win streak to 10

Wayne Gretzky had nothing to complain about.

The super center for the Edmonton Oilers registered three assists Tuesday night as his team stretched its National Hockey League unbeaten streak to 10 games (7-0-3) with a 3-3 tie against the Montreal Canadiens.

"That was one of the fastest games we've been in in a long time," noted Gretzky, who continued his incredible scoring pace and now has 31 goals and 36 assists in 27 games. "It was a lot of fun. No dirty play, nothing physical, just a lot of good, hard skating."

AND LOTS of good goaltending, from Montreal's Richard Sevigny and Edmonton rookie Grant Fuhr, who is riding a 12-game undefeated string and is 8-1-4 this season.

"This is the first time I've played in the Montreal Forum," said Fuhr, 19, who made 35 saves. "It was a bit of a shock for me. I was nervous at the beginning but calmed down after a few minutes."

Fuhr was named the game's first star and robbed Montreal a half-dozen times with spectacular saves.

"Fuhr has so much confidence in his glove," noted Canadien defenseman Guy Lapointe, who was one of the players Fuhr stole a goal from with a sprawling glove save. "He gives you a big opening to shoot at because he knows he'll get over and get the puck. I think somewhere along the line he must have been a baseball player."

The teams traded a goal apiece in each period. Pierre Larouche knocked in a five-foot backhander to put Montreal ahead 1-0 before Gretzky slipped the puck to Dave Hunter — who had a goal and two assists — and Hunter beat Sevigny after splitting the Canadiens' defense, making it 1-1.

KEITH ACTON deflected in Rod Langway's long shot at 16:35 of the middle period, only to have Edmonton's Glenn Anderson reply at 19:07.

In the third period, Gretzky set up Dave Lumley at 6:57 as the Oilers moved ahead 3-2. But Mark Napier weaved past Edmonton defenseman Mike Forbes and put in his 14th goal of the season at 9:17 to produce the tie.

It was the first time the Oilers and Canadiens had met since Edmonton upset Montreal in three games in the opening round of last spring's playoffs. A crowd of 18,094, the biggest turnout at the Forum this season, was on hand.

Elsewhere in the NHL, it was Philadelphia 2, Winnipeg 1, and St. Louis 7, Detroit 5.

Flyers 2, Jets 1

Philadelphia rookies Greg Adams and Mark Botell set up the Flyer goals. Bobby Clarke took a pass from Adams and beat Jet goalie Ed Staniowski to give the Flyers a 1-0 lead three minutes into the game. Paul Holmgren scored 16:26 into the second period, slamming home a rebound of a shot by Botell. A minute later, on a power play, Winnipeg's Morris Lukowich scored his 14th goal of the season.

Blues 7, Red Wings 5

Larry Patey scored, twice, Brian Sutter had three assists and rookie defenseman Rik Wilson scored his first NHL goal to break a 5-5 tie midway through the third period for St. Louis.

Wilson's goal came on a rebound after he followed his own shot.

Mark Osborne scored three times and added an assist for Detroit, which lost its fifth straight and is winless in eight games, 0-7-1.

Time for picking stars

Prognosticators' necks to the block now

An AP Sports Analysis
By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

There is a seasonal urge — aberration, if you will — among prognosticators of college basketball. It becomes strongest after the Thanksgiving turkey already has surrendered his neck to the block.

Those who have withstood the urge that long usually succumb soon afterward.

It's called picking the All-Americans. It has a literary cousin dating back to the late 1800s when Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" chronicled the guillotining of the first of France's nobility. Thus, the baring of necks in a pursuit of foolhardiness was popularized.

WITH NO failsafe method at hand of forecasting the 1982 All-Americans, the tradition of neck-baring continues.

First Team: Ralph Sampson, 7-foot-4, junior, Virginia; James Worthy, 6-9, junior, North Carolina; Kevin Magee, 6-8, senior, UC-Irvine; Rob Williams, 6-2, junior, Houston; Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, 6-3, senior, Georgetown.

Second Team: Sam Bowie, 7-1, junior, Kentucky; Dominique Wilkins, 6-7, junior, Georgia; Cliff Levingston, 6-9, junior, Wichita State; Rod Foster, 6-1, junior, UCLA; Quintin Dailey, 6-3, junior, San Francisco.

Among these 10 names, Sampson probably is the only shoo-in. The Virginia center, Player of the Year last season and a first-team Associated Press All-American, averaged 17.7 points and 11.5 rebounds for the Cavaliers.

Despite a minor hip injury, Sampson has shown the rare ability already this season to turn the course of a game at his will. It was an ability that he was said to possess even as a freshman, but it was evident only occasionally. Now, Sampson will have to sit out several games with a broken finger, but when he returns, things may be different this season.

LIKE SAMPSON, Bowie also was injured before the season. Bowie, however, may not see action until January with a broken bone in his foot. When healthy, he, too, can be dominant. Bowie, a third-team All-American last season, averaged 17.4 points and 9.1 rebounds. He may be a little better outside shooter than Sampson — something that works both for and against him.

Also deserving consideration at center are Steve Stipanovich, a 6-11 junior from Missouri; Randy Breuer, a 7-2 junior from Minnesota, and Sam Perkins, a 6-9 sophomore from North Carolina.

Stipanovich, who accidentally shot himself and missed part of last season, averaged 12.7 points and 7.4 rebounds for Missouri. Breuer was a 15-point scorrer, but he averaged only 5.5 rebounds. As a freshman, Perkins broke into the Tar Heels' starting lineup midway durring the season, averaging 14.9 points with a field goal accuracy of 62.6 percent.

There are at least three freshmen centers — Patrick Ewing of Georgetown, Greg Dreiling of Wichita State and Stuart Gray of UCLA — who could figure into the All-America picture by the end of the season. It's much too early to give any of them better than an outside shot at present, however.

WORTHY PLAYED alongside second-team All-American Al Wood last season. Stronger and taller than Wood, Worthy's forte is the inside game. He averaged 14.2 points and 8.4 rebounds last season.

Overcoming the obscurity of playing at UC-Irvine, Magee was named a first-team All American last season. He averaged 27.5 points per game with a field goal accuracy of 67.1 percent, both figures among the nation's leaders.

Wilkins averaged 23.6 points and Levingston 18.5 last season. They are among at least a dozen other forwards who could make anyone's All-America list. Take your pick from just a few: Derek Smith of Louisville (15.5 ppg), Antoine Carr of Wichita State (15.8 ppg), Rory White of South Alabama (16.4 ppg), Mike Sanders of UCLA (15.4 ppg), Terry Cummings of DePaul (13 ppg), Greg Stewart of Tulsa (15.5 ppg), Howard Carter of Louisiana State (16 ppg) and Fred Roberts of Brigham Young (18.8 ppg).

Williams, who may not play until January with a knee injury, was a third-team All-American last season; Floyd was picked to the second team. Williams averaged 25 points per game with a field goal accuracy of 53.4 percent, and he should be healed in time to get those figures up again this season. Floyd averaged 19 points per game, and this season will be counted on to provide the majority of leadership for John Thompson's young Georgetown team. Floyd also showed some skill on the boards, averaging 4.2 rebounds per game.

Foster, nicknamed the Rocket, may be the quickest guard in the nation. He averaged 12.3 points per game for the Bruins last season, and his speed keyed one of the nation's best fast breaks. Dailey averaged 22.4 points, 5.5 rebounds and 3.0 assists per game for the Dons. And he's off to a great start this year, scoring 39 points in San Francisco's overtime victory over Georgia last Saturday.

OTHER GUARDS worth consideration are John Paxson of Notre Dame (12.9 ppg), John Bagley of Boston College (20.4 ppg), Oliver Robinson of Alabama-Birmingham (15.9 ppg), Jerry Eaves of Louisville (13.9 ppg), Dirk Minniefield of Kentucky (10.4 ppg), Skip Dillard of DePaul (12.4 ppg), Kenny Arnold of Iowa (11.7 ppg), Randy Wittman of Indiana (10.4 ppg), Jeff Malone of Mississippi State (20.1 ppg) and Glenn Rivers of Marquette (14 ppg).

Somewhere among these names, there are All-Americans. Sincerest apologies to those players whose names were not mentioned, and also this piece of advice: read "Tale of Two Cities."

Oil operators schedule seven wildcats one re-entry for West Texas counties

Seven wildcats, plus one wildcat re-entry, have been scheduled in districts 8 and 8A.

COTTLE WILDCAT

The No. 1 Jones will be drilled by Petrotex Resources Inc., Paducah, three miles east of Chalk.

The scheduled 7,000-foot project is located 660 feet from the south, and east line of the W.Q. Richards subdivision No. 35 survey.

It is approximately 1/2 mile south of Grimm & Hunt's No. 1 Cate, a 6,920-foot dry and abandoned test. No other information was available.

KING VENTURES

M.A.M.C., Abilene, has scheduled an 8,000-foot wildcat 3 1/2 miles southeast of Dumont.

Designated the No. 1-14-1-A Swenson, the venture is located 741 feet from the north, and 1,112 feet from the east line of the H. Hughes survey No. 164.

It is in a little explored area.

****

Hale Oil & Gas Properties, Graham, will drill the No. 1 Springer, a 6,000-foot wildcat, 15 miles southwest of Guthrie.

The test is located 600 feet from the north, and 1,700 feet from the east line of section 177, block F, H&TC survey.

The site is approximately one mile southwest of Sparagins No. 1 Carothers, dry and abandoned in 1971, at 6,320 feet.

LUBBOCK SEARCHER

Texland-Rector & Schumacher, Fort Worth, has scheduled the No. 1 Blanche Ledbetter, a 5,700-foot wildcat, three miles north of Idalou.

The location is 660 feet from the north, and 1,980 feet from the west line of section 34, block D-7, EL&RR survey.

The shallower pool wildcat is in the vicinity of several deep dry and abandoned projects.

MARTIN PROJECT

The No. 1 Bauer has been scheduled by Jackson Exploration Inc., Midland, seven miles southwest of Ackerly.

The wildcat is located 1,980 feet from the south, and west line of section 16, block 35, T-3-N, T&P survey.

The site is in an area of very little exploration.

PECOS WILDCAT

Tenneco Oil Co., San Antonio, will drill the No. 1 J.A. Green, a 10,000-foot wildcat, 36 miles southeast of Fort Stockton.

The location is 3,700 feet from the south, and 2,300 feet from the west line of section 4, J.H. Sims survey.

It is in an essentially un-tested area.

SCURRY RE-ENTRY

C.E.R. Oil Company, Snyder, will wash down and deepen the No. 1 Rhodes to 7,500 feet, two miles north of Camp Springs.

The well, originally drilled by American Republic, was dry and abandoned Sept. 29, 1954 at 7,284 feet.

It is located 660 feet from the north, and west line of section 99, block 2, H&TC survey.

The project is also located 3,000 feet northwest of Union's No. 1 Simmons, dry and abandoned April 2, 1957 at 6,439 feet.

WINKLER TEST

Western States Energy Corp., Midland, has scheduled a 6,600-foot wildcat, seven miles southwest of Notrees.

The No. 117 Wheeler "1-17" is located 660 feet from the north, and east line of section 17, block B-7, Public School Lands survey.

It is approximately one mile west of production in the Wheeler (Wolfcamp) field, which produces from an average depth of 7,604 feet.

Angola blames S. Africa, rebels for oil refinery fire

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angola blames South African-backed rebel saboteurs for setting fire to its largest oil refinery, the official Angolan news agency Angop said Tuesday.

A statement by Angola's Marxist government carried by the agency termed the Monday blaze at the Petrangol refinery outside the capital of Luanda "a planned act of organized sabotage."

Explosives planted around the refinery complex storage tanks set off the fire, said the agency dispatch monitored in Lisbon.

"Evidence found at the scene of the fire leads to the conclusion this is yet another action planned by international imperialism through the racist South African regime against the Popular Republic of Angola," the government statement said.

Earlier, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported that Angola accused South Africa of sending commandos by submarine to blow up the refinery with magnetic mines.

In a report from Luanda, Tanjug reported that Oil Minister Pedro van Dunem showed the bodies of "two white commandos" to reporters, thought to be victims of a premature blast. Tanjug quoted van Dunem as saying Angola would have to import oil until the refinery is repaired.

Angop said the fire had been controlled and kept to the storage area and a minor branch of the adjoining refinery, but there were no reports late Tuesday that the fire had been extinguished.

Jonas Savimbi, leader of the pro-Western rebel group UNITA, said earlier that his group carried out the sabotage. Savimbi was in the United States for talks with Reagan administration officials.

UNITA, which stands for the National Union for the Total Indpendence of Angola, has been criticized by black African nations for accepting U.S. and South African military assistance.

The Luanda government has repeatedly accused UNITA troops of fighting alongside South African regulars during South Africa's anti-guerrilla raids through southern Angola in August and September.

Watt will not meet environmentalists

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt told top department officials Tuesday that he would prefer that they put themselves off limits to paid leaders of national environmental groups, a Watt aide said.

Douglas Baldwin, Watt's chief spokesman, said Watt told his top appointees at a meeting that he has stopped meeting with national employees of environmental group because they distorted his views and were only interested in using the meetings for their own politcal purposes.

Baldwin said Watt told the officials he would prefer that they follow his lead, but that he did not order them to cut off such contacts.

However, environmentalists disputed this account of the morning staff meeting. They said sources at the Interior Department told them Watt wanted not only his political appointees, but all employees of the Interior Department, to stop meeting with national environmental leaders.

William Turnage, executive director of the Wilderness Society, said Watt was apparently retreating from the more sweeping position because his staff was "trying to dampen what was obviously a very serious gaffe on his part."

Turnage said even if the directive was modified to cover only top officials, Watt was sending a clear signal to all department employees that he did not want them meeting with environmental groups.

"He is saying that a whole segment of America has no legitimacy. That we are somehow outcasts and that government officials cannot meet with legitimate public citizen groups," Turnage said.

But Baldwin said while Watt found it beneficial to meet with local volunteer environmentalists concerned about specific issues, his meetings with national leaders had not been productive.

"The meetings they have had with Watt have not reflected a knowledge of, or a concern for, resource issues," Baldwin said. "They are out to beat this department over the head for the purpose of raising money and membership."

Environmentalists said that since Watt has put no similar restrictions on meetings with representatives of oil, mining and timber companies, Watt will be making decisions reflecting only one viewpoint.

"The truth is that Watt is afraid to discuss the issues with anyone who opposes him," said Mike McCloskey, executive director of the Sierra Club. "The refusal to meet with the staff of any conservation organization represents a subversion of the democratic process and shows a lack of respect for the public who trust that, in America, government listens to all the people."

After the morning staff meeting, the National Park Service cancelled a scheduled Tuesday afternoon meeting it has been holding on a regular basis for the past seven years with a dozen environmental groups. When environmental groups asked about the cancellation, they found out about Watt's statement.

After press inquiries were made, Watt discussed the meeting with National Park Service Director Russell Dickinson and it was held as scheduled.

Baldwin said Watt's directive was not mean at prohibiting Interior officials from meetings "in which they perceive a value for the government."

In addition to meetings, Watt also told the officials that they should not appear as speakers at conventions put on by environmental groups, Baldwin said, where they could be used to draw a crowd and raise funds for the group.

Watt has in the past attacked the "hired guns" in the environmental community who he said were out to get him. In October, the Sierra Club presented 1.1 million signatures to Congress demanding Watt's ouster.

Sterling Fly elected chairman of University Lands board

AUSTIN — Dr. Sterling H. Fly Jr., Uvalde, has been elected chairman of the Board for Lease of University Lands.

The election was made at the board's November 6 meeting, and Fly's slection for the position marks the first time since 1947 that a member of the University of Texas System Board of Regents has held the chairmanship since U.T. Regent W. Scott Schrenier served as chairman of the Board for Lease, 1945 to 1947.

Fly succeeds Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, who was elected vice chairman for the Board for Lease at the recent meeting.

The Board for Lease is composed of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and two members of the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System. James L. Powell, who is chairman of the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System is the third member of the Board for Lease.

The Board for Lease is a state agency that issues oil and gas leases on the 2,104,772 acres of University land that are dedicated tot e Permanent University Fund.

At its meeting the Board for Lease also announced an oil and gas lease sale slae to be held Feb. 3, 1982, in Midland, when 225 tracts comprising a total of 80,056 acres will be offered for sale.

At its last University lease sale, March 11, 1980, the University leased 83,328 acres and received total bonuses of $52,882,000 for an average of $634 per acre. The March 1980 sale was a record for the University.

Fly was appointed to the University of Texas System Board of Regents by Gov. Dolph Briscoe in 1977 for a six year term on the board. He was elected vice chairman of the Board of Regents in January this year.

Mobil Corp. alleges "Sweetheart Deal"

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mobil Corp. is trying to fight the ban on its takeover attempt of Marathon Oil Co. by trying to prove that Marathon and U.S. Steel Corp. are working toward a merger in a "sweetheart deal."

Mobil filed an appeal in the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here Tuesday, seeking to overturn a U.S. District Court order in Cleveland barring it, on antitrust grounds, from purchasing more Marathon stock.

The 6th Circuit is in regular session with cases docketed through Dec. 18, but the court did not immediately indicate if it would fit an emergency Mobil hearing into its schedule. However, a court source said a ruling could come today.

Marathon is the nation's 17th largest oil company and its huge U.S. petroleum reserves, particularly in a single field in Texas, are making it the hottest property today on the merger block in the United States.

The court in Cleveland ruled a day earlier that a Mobil-Marathon merger would restrain trade. Mobil is the nation's second-largest corporation, ranking behind another oil giant, Exxon Corp.

Mobil filed two motions here. One asks an emergency hearing on its appeal of the Cleveland ruling and the other seeks to fend off the effects of a possible adverse ruling in U.S. District Court in Columbus. The battle is being waged in Ohio because Marathon is based in Findlay, Ohio.

The battle so far has Mobil offering $6.5 billion for Marathon with U.S. Steel waging $6.3 billion, according to industry analysts. Though smaller, Marathon has courted the U.S. Steel offer because the nation's largest steelmaker presumably would leave Marathon's management and operations largely intact.

Mobil on Oct. 30 offered $85 a share for up to two-thirds of the outstanding shares of Marathon. U.S. Steel offered $125 a share for 51 percent, and Mobil came back by offering $126 a share for controlling interest and IOUs worth about $90 million for the rest.

Mobil's petition alleges that "Marathon's incumbent management chose to oppose Mobil's offer and has induced a subsidiary of United States Steel to enter the fray as a 'white knight' to bid against Mobil."

It alleges the companies worked out a "sweetheart deal" in which U.S. Steel "and Marathon management grant one another reciprocal favors at the expense of Marathon shareholders."

U.S. District Judge John Manos in Cleveland issued the preliminary injunction Monday barring further acquistion of Marathon stock by Mobil until he hears an antitrust lawsuit filed by Marathon.

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Singer Andy Williams and New York Yankee rookie ace Gene Nelson celebrate birthdays today. In the coming year, count on your friends and professional associates to help advance your cause at work. Improved financial conditions relieve some of the pressures that have slowed you down in the past. Make the most of any new opportunities. Being choosy is the key to happy romance. You like to take chances, but should remember that a lasting relationship needs a strong foundation. Avoid self-deception! Knowing what you really want out of life is the first step toward getting it. Review your goals.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The ideas you come up with today should be real moneymakers. Close associates are willing to do almost anything to help now, but member of opposite sex shows an independent streak.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let others sort out their own problems in their own way. Employment opportunities are found by those who are actively looking. Check bank statements carefully.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The strain that has kept you and loved one apart can be eased today. Current events lead you to review the past. Spend the evening with those who share your interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to work at finalizing negotiations. Get contracts signed and sealed before the end of the year. Guard against wasting time. A personal problem begins to solve itself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your lively imagination will be working overtime. Channel it into useful pursuits! This is the right moment to contact someone with whom you have dealt successfully in the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Extra money can be made if you will seize an opportunity that loved one points out. Someone at place of employment may begin to play a romantic role in your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your personal life takes on a new air of excitement. You spur yourself on to fresh conquests in business and romance. Follow up employment leads if dissatisfied with current job.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentrate on artistic endeavors. An older relative is prepared to take a chance on you. A new alliance could strengthen family ties and propel you forward at work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Almost everyone is willing to go along with you now. Today is definitely the right time to get contracts signed. Enjoy a carefree, happy evening with loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Parents now find it easier to come up with the right solution to a child's problem. Work must come before pleasure; do not allow co-workers to pressure you to act otherwise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let boredom make you careless. Follow through on business plans, but postpone starting new projects. Romance will be prominently featured today. Put more cash into savings account.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who have interviews today will find success. You have no difficulty projecting your personality and making your point. If you are in love, you may find yourself feeling confused.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Several declarers at the recent World Team Championships in Port Chester, N.Y. had no problem with this technical position.

After an opening bid by West and an overcall by North, South showed strength with a cue-bid of the enemy suit and then bid no trump to show his club stoppers. North, in view of the vulnerability, boldly bid to game.

The lead was always the queen of clubs. Consider the problem from declarer's point of view. Even if he can bring in the spade suit and the diamond finesse wins, there are only eight tricks. The ninth will have to come from a long card in the diamond suit. The danger is that East might gain the lead to play hearts through declarer's queen—an unappetizing prospect. Therefore, East has to be kept off lead.

Declarer ducked the opening lead and won the club continuation as East sluffed a spade. A diamond to the queen won. Declarer would dearly have liked to be able to cross to his hand to lead another diamond toward the ace, but entries were inconvenient. If he risked a spade finesse now and it lost, the contract would surely have been defeated two tricks.

Several declarers found the right technical play. At trick four, they led a low diamond from the board. That would win whenever West started with a doubleton king. The chances for that were particularly good because West had already shown up with six clubs.

Now declarer had eight tricks, and he had only to find the queen of spades for a ninth. Since it was obvious that East had the longer spades, declarer took the percentage line by leading a spade to the ace and finessing on the way back, and a close contract rolled home.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Advent schedule

Good Shepherd Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod's mission congregation in Midland, has announced its schedule of special services for the Advent season in December.

Three special Wednesday night services are scheduled: the first tonight at 7:30 and Dec. 9 and 16, also at 7:30 p.m. The special services will be held at the church's temporary home, the Carpenters Union Hall, 2211 W. Florida Ave.

The congregation meets every Sunday with Sunday School and Bible class at 9:30 a.m. and worship hour at 10:45 a.m., also at the union hall.

Supreme Court joins the computer age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is spending $1 million to join the computer age.

And for the first time ever, the "law of the land" is being fashioned on word processors, committed to the printed page by a kind of computerized publishing house.

Law clerks, secretaries and even two of the nine justices have computerized their work habits as part of a move the court expects to help speed its considerable paper flow.

One of the nation's most tradition-bound institutions now features its own computer nerve center. Last summer, 65 word processing terminals seemingly sprouted like gleaming white toadstools throughout the justices' chambers and other offices within the marble temple on Capitol Hill.

The use of computers in courts is not new, but no court previously had combined word processing with electronic typesetting.

Supreme Court opinions — together with law clerk memoranda, opinion drafts, headnotes, speech texts and correspondence — now are composed on word processors. The opinions are published in final form by electronically transferring the information to typesetting computers.

"We know we are at the front edge of the technology here," said James Donovan, the court's director of data systems.

The decision to computerize was made in 1978. After money was appropriated by Congress, the court contracted with Atex Inc. of Bedford, Mass., to design the computer system it wanted.

Cub scouts open PTA meeting

A flag ceremony conducted by the Cub Scouts from Pack 154, Den 5, opened the regular monthly business meeting of the Emerson Elementary PTA recently.

President Kathryn Nichols gave a report from the delegates who attended the State PTA Convention recently in San Antonio. Emerson was represented by Mrs. Nichols, Sandy Moore and Georgiana Burnett. Kay Sowders, city council PTA president, and Molly Bedrich, volunteer coordinator for city council PTA, also attended the convention.

The third grade class presented a play entitled "Pinocchio Goes to School." The children's fantasy, written by Carlo Collodi nearly 100 years ago, was directed by third grade teachers Wanda Moore, Bettie Partin and Patricia Shehan.

Robots are the savior of Japanese industry

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

FUJIYOSHIDA, Japan (AP) — Fujitsu Fanuc does not yet have a robot that can do accounting or close a sales deal. Hence there is still a place for humans.

Long into the night, after the 100 people employed at this factory at the foot of Mt. Fuji are home in bed, the plant continues to hum with the sounds of robots in an unending, repetitive dance, working hand in hand with other robots to produce new robots.

Everything is automated, even down to the driverless shuttle truck that zips across the shop floor, loading and unloading parts.

Industrial robots with such fond nicknames as "Jiro" — second son — each equipped with a massive claw, gently lift metal clogs, swivel around, hand the the clogs to another device for machine tooling, retrieve them and then start the process again.

The offspring of this machinery- and robot-making plant will be the new generation of high-productivity workers who will spearhead this export-oriented nation's advance in the era of high technology.

Japan today far outpaces the rest of the world in the production and use of these gawky symbols of automation. Even the labor unions have embraced the robot as a savior, releasing them from assembly line tedium.

"Here robots have replaced humans. They work 24 hours a day, they don't have to think and they don't work in shifts," says Shimpei Kato, Fujitsu's director and manager of planning. "It makes common sense. We only employ humans for research, maintenance and supervisory work. As you can see, there's not much else to do.

"In the future, all assembly work will be done by robots.

"Warehouses will be totally automated; there will be no need for humans in factories," says Kato, whose company already is very close to achieving that aim.

Fujitsu says output is up 300-400 percent since robots were installed in January. About 60 new robots are made here each month. Researchers now are working on a new generation of "smart" robots with multiple functions. Fujitsu expects them to go on line from July.

Kato says it takes three years to train a human in the skills needed on an assembly line. A robot, with its built-in memory, takes 20 minutes.

An industrial robot costs about $44,000.

An average assembly line worker will earn $16,500 annually with bonuses.

Jeep-driving may be hazardous to health

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jeep Corp. agreed Monday to warn customers that sudden, sharp turns "may result in loss of control" of its CJ models and to mail warnings to the 335,000 registered owners of the vehicles.

Jeep, a subsidiary of American Motors Corp., signed the agreement after the Federal Trade Commission accused the company of using misleading advertising.

Jeep said it feels the allegations about its ads are "completely unfounded" and that it signed the agreement to avoid costly litigation.

The television ads showed the Jeep CJ used as an ordinary passenger car and failed to disclose that the four-wheel drive vehicle sometimes handles differently from ordinary cars, the FTC said. Sharp turns or abrupt maneuvers on pavement may result in an accident, the federal agency said.

The ads showed a Jeep being driven to a restaurant and claimed, "Today's Jeep CJ is taking more kids to school... more couples out on the town."

The agreement calls for warning stickers on the instrument panel or windshield frame of new Jeep CJs. The company already had been using stickers, but they did not mention possible loss of control.

In addition to the sticker, Jeep Corp. agreed to provide dealers with a revised supplement to the owner's manual called "Driving Your 4-Wheel Drive Vehicle." The statements will tell consumers that the Jeeps have a higher center of gravity and are "not designed for cornering at the same speeds as conventional 2-wheel drive vehicles."

The FTC said it was the first time it has obtained an agreement with an American car manufacturer to use warning stickers. However, Ford Motor Company has agreed with the Transportation Department to use stickers after allegations that the transmissions of some Ford products might slip from park into reverse.

Jeep also agreed to mail to current owners of Jeep CJ-5, CJ-6 and CJ-7 models a revised owner's manual supplement, the warning sticker and a letter advising them to attach the sticker to the vehicle. The company estimated that the cost of complying with the agreement at $30,000.

The commssion can make final the proposed consent order after a 90-day public comment period.

The FTC alleged that consumers' buying decisions and how they drive Jeeps likely would be affected by information about handling differences between Jeeps and standard automobiles.

Allen is star defender in media blitz

By ELISABETH BUMILLER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — On Thanksgiving, the Richard V. Allen family put two television sets on the buffet table in the dining room and then watched, as they had turkey and champagne, all three network evening news shows. "That was the emotional and psychological clincher," Allen said Tuesday at his home, minutes before the Justice Department announced no special prosecutor would investigate the famous $1,000. "Everyone was just sort of stunned...watching me being cut to pieces."

Earlier Thanksgiving Day there'd been the usual reporters on his lawn, Washington's hottest stakeout since it was first disclosed that the national security adviser had received $1,000 from Japanese journalists. "I thought," recalled Allen, " 'Well, it is Thanksgiving. I'll have the reporters in for a cup of coffee.' " CBS, NBC and ABC crew members warmed up around his table as he talked with them about how he wanted to clear the air. All three immediately offered their networks as a forum.

"'Meet the Press' is the oldest and most prestigious of the shows," Allen reasoned. "I liked the idea of me being on one side of the room, no breaking in, no arguing..."

The Richard Allen road show was born. Tuesday night, he and his wife watched themselves on television in the latest act, cheering as they listened to her tell reporters on ABC: "Next time, I hope you'll all think twice before you do this to someone else."

"You never cease to amaze me," Allen told her. "That was an unbelievable comment — the most accurate statement of this whole thing. You upstaged me."

From Sunday, when Allen announced on "Meet the Press" that he was taking an administrative leave, until Tuesday's Justice Department announcement, he has been the star defender in his own media blitz. Certainly, he has not had a stellar defense from the White House, which had no comment Tuesday on when — or whether — Allen would return to his job.

The public official besieged by scandal has become a familiar and peculiar Washington figure marked by microphones shoved in the direction of closed mouths. Allen has decided to take a much more combative stance, fighting back via the media he bitterly calls "wretched."

"As a friend said," Allen added, " 'Some of the problem with the writing community, Dick, is that they can't forgive you for having a business to sell.' Some people are very resentful that I won't meet with them, background them, discuss with them the inner workings of the NSC. I'm not providing regular care and feeding to the Washington press."

The conduct of the press, he complained, has been "abysmal. They climbed trees and looked in our bedroom window to see if we were here. But one nice thing is to use the flip side of the press attention to get a hearing."

Allen spoke in his family room as callers to a radio phone-in show debated the merits of his case. Allen turned it off, more interested in the flickering fire.

National Security Adviser Richard Allen and his wife, Patricia, talk to reporters outside their home in Arlington, Va., Tuesday to comment on the announcement by the Justice Department that it is closing its investigation into the acceptance by Allen of $1,000 from Japanese journalists without appointing a special prosecutor.

The room itself is a wall-to-wall hodgepodge of comfortable couches, skylights and a hardwood floor looking out on Arlington woods, but Allen has turned a corner of it into a temporary office. On a round table, covering up an "Are You a Preppette?" puzzle put together by his children, were folders of documents he had collected for his case. ("That's the 'fun' table," called out his wife, Pat, making lunch in the kitchen.) A spiral notebook held his handwritten log of the calls he'd received in the past days. On top was a letter from the White House. Allen turned it over, hiding its contents.

"This is a very interesting time," Allen said cryptically. "A time I'll never forget." He looked tired, having appeared until 1 a.m. Monday on ABC's "Nightline." He spoke more slowly and was testier than usual. Once, when asked to restate something he'd said, Allen shot back: "If you're not clever enough to get it the first time, then I'm not going to repeat it." Asked what bothered him about a particular broadcast, Allen replied: "I'm not going to do your homework for you."

Pat Allen is a shy woman who the family says is her husband's stabilizer. In public, she is perpetually quiet and pleasant. Tuesday, however, she showed signs of anger.

"Would you feel put upon every morning when you couldn't sleep because the car doors were banging outside and people were talking?" she asked, adding that she doesn't think the children — seven of them, aged 6 to 22 — are angry. At her son's school, for instance, the nuns are praying for his father. "I think," continued Pat Allen, "the kids just don't understand why this is happening."

"As soon as th s matter broke," Allen said, "I took them aside in groups and told them what the facts were, my prognosis of what would happen, and advised them on what to expect. We made up our minds on the first day of the stakeout that we weren't going to alter what we'd normally do."

Allen's only mistake was being human

By SUSAN PAGE
Newsday

WASHINGTON — The man in the gray pinstriped suit pushed away the plate of scrambled eggs and sausage, already grown cold, and drank cup after cup of black coffee as he answered questions about his honesty, his judgment, his competence.

He had done nothing wrong, Richard Allen said. He had not shown poor judgment, only human forgetfulness. It was even possible that someone (whom he never identified) might be trying to set him up (for reasons he never revealed).

Allen's media offensive to clear his name and save his job, which started Sunday when he announced on television that he had asked President Reagan for administrative leave, continued Tuesday at an 80-minute session with newspaper reporters. He was sometimes combative, sometimes subdued as the talk ranged from his receiving a $1,000 honorarium to his continued contact with former business clients to the terms of the sale of his consulting business.

The president's national security adviser was appearing before the same breakfast group that his boss, White House counselor Edwin Meese III, had used the morning before to indicate that Allen is not likely to return to his post. Meese said that even if Allen is cleared of criminal wrongdoing by the Department of Justice — as he was in part Tuesday — the White House will assess his judgment before welcoming him back. That made Allen's defense seem doomed.

He had only intercepted some papers to save the first lady time and trouble, Allen said, then not returned the envelope of cash he found to prevent embarrassment to her Japanese interviewers. He had simply accepted a gift of watches from long-time friends who happened to be Japanese go-betweens. He had just met socially with a Japanese businessman over lunch at the White House mess. He had made a few inadvertent mistakes while filling out a financial disclosure statement.

"You know, I simply cannot understand why it is when we're held to a specific standard in the federal government, the case of a lapse of memory or of sloppily filling in a financial disclosure ought to be something that would determine whether an individual should continue in office," he said toward the end of the interview. His jaw was set, and he stared into his coffee cup. "After all, we too...are human beings. I will not suggest there is a quota of such things that one is entitled to, but to err is human ...."

Allen went over his now-familiar version of events that began the day after the inauguration, when he attended a brief photo session of the Nancy Reagan with journalists from a Japanese homemakers' magazine. He has been telling the story — with some revisions and corrections — since it broke in a Japanese newspaper last month on Friday the 13th.

"What about journalists?" he snapped when pressed on questions of his integrity. "Journalists receive inside information.

Haig to speak out against Cuba at meeting of Latin American states

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Poland's continuing hand-to-mouth stretch to feed its people and preserve its precarious experiment in liberalizing Communist rule has brought a new plea to the Reagan administration for $200 million in emergency U.S. food credits.

Administration officials said Tuesday that the new request "will receive sympathetic consideration." They acknowledged, however, that they have not yet figured out how to satisfy the request in light of the "extremely difficult" budgetary snarl entangling the administration.

In October Poland submitted a request for $740 million worth of credits to buy agricultural products and feed grains from the United States during fiscal 1982. Because that shopping list requires prolonged consideration, Poland three weeks ago asked the United States to expedite $200 million of that sum on "an emergency basis."

Once again, as it was last summer, the most acute need now is literally "chicken feed" — grain to sustain Poland's poultry industry, the most effective supplier of quickly produced protein. With the winter approaching, tempers are rising in the long lines outside Poland's meagerly supplied food stores. Political observers agree that this makes Poland vulnerable to combustible interaction between food shortages, street demonstrations and the tense bargaining between the Communist Party and the leadership of Poland's Solidarity movement.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., an activist in stimulating support for the Reagan administration's decision last summer to supply Poland with 360,000 tons of poultry feed by extremely liberal interpretation of credit rules and legislation, expressed optimism Tuesday that the White House will follow a similar course again.

The $200 million emergency credits now sought will keep the same grain feed supply line from running out in January, while the overall request for $740 million in 1982 foodstuffs credits is being weighed.

"All my vibes are good," Derwinski said Tuesday. "There are no political backfires on this one so far as Congress is concerned — it's the administration that has to untangle its own processes." Derwinski said he plans to meet Wednesday with senior administration officials to explore formulas for expediting the aid.

So far as Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is concerned, Derwinski said, "he fully understands the problem." Haig has said that Poland is involved in "a historically unprecedented evolution in political change," and American responses to Poland's requirements must be considered in that light.

Administration officials were very wary Tuesday, however, about forecasting how the White House this time may thread a path through the more impenetrable budgetary thicket. President Reagan has registered his own interest in the Polish dilemma several times, most recently a week ago by authorizing $30 million more in dairy products from American surplus stockpiles to be distributed to Polish children, the aged, and others by U.S. organizations such as CARE and Catholic Relief.

Beyond food credits or grants to Poland, the United States and other nations are groping for formulas to deal with the problem of multibillion-dollar, long-term loan rescheduling to salvage the crippled Polish economy. This is a highly contentious subject inside the Reagan administration, facing great crossfire over its battered budgetary concepts.

Poland pleads with U.S. for food credits

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is expected to use the Organization of American States' annual general assembly opening today as a forum against Cuba.

The Reagan administration spokesman was flying to this Caribbean island nation of 120,000 people for private meetings with other foreign ministers of the hemisphere and a speech Thursday to the 27-nation assembly. He returns to Washington Friday.

Officials in Washington said Haig would sound out his Latin American colleagues on ways to deal with continuing Cuban "subversion, propaganda and adventurism" in Central America.

Newsweek magazine reported Haig was bringing with him a country-by-country intelligence report of Cuban-backed subversion and terrorism in Latin America. U.S. officials who asked not to be identified said Haig will try to persuade the OAS to unite against the alleged Cuban adventurism.

Cuba has been barred from participation in the 30-year-old OAS since 1962. However, Latin American governments generally oppose the use of U.S. military force in the region and are expected to ask Haig to use restraint against Cuba, delegates said.

The delegates are meeting at the La Toc resort complex, on a tranquil beach out of sight of the wood-shack slums of Castries, the main urban center on St. Lucia, a former British colony that got its independence in 1979.

Foreign Minister Peter Josie of St. Lucia, the host-president of the assembly, said the nine-day meeting will consider a report on economic and social problems in the hemisphere, a plan for improving health standards and land-locked Bolivia's century-old claim to access to the Pacific through land it lost to Chile in a war in 1879.

He told reporters Nicaragua's deteriorating relations with the United States was likely to come up in informal talks although it is not listed on the assembly's 18-item agenda.

Also missing from the agenda is the civil war in El Salvador and U.S. support for the junta there. But conference sources said that, too, was certain to be discussed privately and might be put before the assembly by the speeches of some of the foreign ministers.

The assembly will also get a report on the status of human rights in the hemisphere, but it was expected to get less attention than such reports did when the Carter administration was emphasizing human rights. Josie indicated some of the Latin American members were displeased at this, saying the Reagan administration's reduced emphasis on human rights was one of the "negative aspects" of its policy.

Reusable spaceship to be ready in June

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger, the second orbiter in a planned fleet of reusable spaceships, is scheduled for a June delivery, space agency officials said.

Challenger could be launched as early as September 1982, although it would be flying the sixth mission of the space shuttle program. The spaceship Columbia already has completed two missions, with a third planned in mid-March.

NASA officials said Challenger would fly four test flights, while the Columbia is returned to the Rockwell International assembly plant in Palmdale, Calif., for modifications.

Two other orbiters, Discovery and Atlantis, will be added to the fleet by 1986, NASA officials said Monday.

FRESH CHRISTMAS TREES AND WREATHS SHIPPED DIRECT FROM THE VIRGINIA PLANTATION

You can have (or send to your friends) a Christmas Tree so fresh that it caresses your face with its soft foliage. The fresh needles will stay on the tree. We have shipped trees and wreaths to Texas friends for years.

The tree will be a groomed white pine just under six feet tall. It will be cut, wrapped in a mat guaranteed to protect it and shipped by UPS on the date you specify. The beautiful wreaths are pine, with cones and a big red bow—approximately 19" in diameter.

Delivered prices: Trees $29.95 Wreaths $17.95

Send check or request information from: Chandler Smith, 3604 Hyde Park, Midland, Texas 79703, Phone 915-694-1514
