Ask Us

Q—Will there be any teachers, aides, principals, secretaries or other personnel to lose their jobs under the school reorganization plan?

A—Administrators have said no regular employee will lose their job under the reorganization plan. A few who were hired as temporary help may lose their jobs. All other positions, including 13 teaching positions, will be phased out through resignation and retirement.

In Brief

Plant closing

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says it is closing its "factory of the future" in Saginaw, Mich., but it wasn't clear if the Vanguard plant is among 21 plants the automaker plans to shut down in a restructuring.

The plant employs 85 people, mostly skilled-trade workers who will be moved to an adjacent facility, GM spokesman Gerald Holmes said today.

The plant used a highly automated system to make front-end components for GM's Saturn cars made in Spring Hill, Tenn.

State of Union...

Bush speech to focus on economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will use tonight's State of the Union address to appeal to Congress to wage the economic equivalent of the Persian Gulf War. But the budget to help carry out the battle was snagged today in a dispute over health care.

The 8 p.m. CST speech, dubbed "Operation Domestic Storm" by some advisers, is sure to be the centerpiece of the president's reelection campaign. It comes with Bush's approval ratings at the lowest point of his presidency and the nation mired in a recession.

Chief of Staff Samuel Skinner unexpectedly halted printing of the budget after congressional Republicans objected to a section written by Budget Director Richard Darman that the lawmakers considered politically unpopular, administration officials said today.

The revision was not expected to amount to more than a several-hour delay in the $1.5 trillion spending plan to be released on Wednesday, but it reflected a high-level dispute within the White House over the budget, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In his State of the Union address tonight, Bush's third, the president was expected to deliver an election-year appeal to the Democratic-controlled Congress to act on his anti-recessionary package by early March.

"It will have a great deal of meat in it," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. One Bush campaign memo calls the speech the "defining event" of his presidency.

But Democrats — and GOP challenger Pat Buchanan — already are attacking the president's expected "growth package" for not going far enough.

Bush is proposing a blend of tax breaks and spending programs to prod the economy and help the economically disadvantaged. The proposals range from tax credits for new home buyers and larger exemptions for families to more money for health and food programs for poor children.

North parents note concern over SISD reorganization plan

A group of about 120 people — many of whom spoke out against a proposed elementary reorganization plan which calls for the closing of their school — filled the North Elementary auditorium Monday evening.

The sometimes-emotional but orderly meeting was called by the North Elementary School Parent Council. Those in attendance were briefed on the plan, by Brenda Hedges, president of the council.

Under the plan, prekindergarten, kindergarten and first grade students from North would attend West Elementary. The other five elementary campuses would retain kindergarten and first grade, and would contain one other grade level. All second graders throughout the district would attend school at Stanfield, all third graders at Central, fourth graders at East, fifth graders at Northeast and sixth graders at West.

Administrators have proposed the plan as a means to solve population and ethnic imbalance, make for more efficient curriculum alignment and materials distribution, and save an estimated $860,595 annually without cutting programs. In the proposal, the district would go back to full-day kindergarten instead of the current half-day system.

As those in attendance made their feelings heard, transportation and what many parents see as a unstable situation for family life, were the main concerns.

Addressing the audience were Principal Ray Courtney and parents Shannon Grantham and Roxanne Stoker.

"Some of the kids we have here have very, very insecure homes. About the only place they have is this school," noted Principal Ray Courtney.

Courtney questioned whether the transportation portion of the proposal is feasible.

"I have to tell you how it really is. About 90 percent of our students at North ride the bus and it's like a fire drill around here right now. If this (plan) happens, you bear with those people at the bus barn because they are going to be pulling their hair out," said Courtney, who added, "I'm not saying it can't be done." He also encouraged parents, "Keep a level head. This can get hot."

As class project...

Tech students take on Ritz

Representatives of the Texas Tech University department of architecture, members of the Ritz community theatre group and interested citizens met Monday to discuss plans for renovation of the theatre.

Dr. Michael Anthony Jones, associate dean for graduate studies and research, and eight graduate students met with members of the group to tour and discuss the development of the old movie theatre, located on south side of the square.

Members of the board for the Ritz Theatre project recently agreed to let the Tech students undertake the design as a class project. The theatre, when completed, will be used for the production of plays and musicals.

According to Chamber Manager Ricky Fritz, each student will be assigned an area of the theatre to research and will develop several possible designs.

Students are scheduled to return in mid-February with rough drawings and designs to present to committee members, and will return in March to make a final presentation and outline the project for the Ritz group.

"We are looking forward to a good project," said Jones. "I feel this theatre has a lot of potential."

Members of the Ritz community theatre board are scheduled to meet at 7 o'clock tonight in the chamber of commerce board room.

Dahmer trial...

Made-for-TV horror, but is it too much?

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The prospective jurors who will decide whether Jeffrey Dahmer is insane are being asked if they like horror movies. A macabre question, but fitting.

The trial, after all, will put real-life horror onto TV screens around the country. By all indications, it will be gruesome stuff.

"Judge, I just don't have the stomach for it," one prospective juror said Monday before she was excused from the case.

By the end of the trial, some television viewers may be saying the same thing.

Dahmer, a 31-year-old former chocolate factory worker, has confessed to 17 killings and pleaded guilty but mentally ill to the 15 with which he is charged in Wisconsin.

A jury will decide whether he was insane at the time of the slayings. The verdict will mean the difference between life in prison and an indefinite stay in a mental hospital.

One Milwaukee TV station plans gavel-to-gavel live coverage beginning Wednesday, and Court TV plans extensive live coverage on cable once the trial gets under way. CNN plans regular live reports but doesn't intend to broadcast live testimony at length, as it did at the William Kennedy Smith rape trial in Florida.

Like the Smith trial, however, the Dahmer case promises to push the boundaries of what is considered acceptable television.

Just as the Smith trial exposed viewers to unprecedented frankness in its testimony about sexual organs and functions, the Dahmer case will offer more than most people care to know about dismemberment, necrophilia and cannibalism.

Already broadcasters have agreed to limit their camera views of the many photographs that are expected to be shown to the jury.

WDJT, the Milwaukee station that plans live coverage, said it

Willow Park Inn...

Sale said on target despite injunction

An injunction sought by the Texas Water Commission will not adversely affect the impending sale of Snyder's Willow Park Inn.

Dennis Chisum, owner of Willow Park, said papers were signed Monday and that the transfer of ownership is "99 percent complete."

Chisum said this morning that all that is left was review of documents and transfer of funds. Funding, Chisum said, was expected prior to 2 p.m. today.

Chisum said the new owner is Bob Meyer of Lubbock, a veteran in the hotel business and current owner of Shadow Hills Golf Course in Lubbock.

Meyer, already at the motel Tuesday, said the sale is still pending and he would prefer to discuss the changeover after it is final.

Chisum said he would remain in Snyder for several weeks to assist with the changeover, but the Chisum family plans to move to South Carolina.

Rumors of a sale have circulated for several months. Willow Park was built in 1985 and is the newest overnight facility in Snyder.

Last week, the state attorney general's office — representing the Texas Water Commission — filed suit in 132nd District Court seeking a temporary and permanent injunction to prevent future water commission violations at Willow Park. The suit was filed against Ipollo Enterprises, Inc., which does business as Willow Park Inn and Handi-Mart. Chisum, as president, individually was also named in the suit.

The suit claims that Ipollo's permit for a wastewater treatment facility expired on May 15, 1989 and no action has been taken to renew it.

The suit further claims that Ipollo has not followed the permitted discharge route and instead has been discharging to an unlined construction pit.

On Dec. 1, 1989, Ipollo entered into an agreement with the Water Commission for violations and was assessed a fine of $3,255. Ipollo agreed to undertake a variety of measures to ensure future

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There's not much that is as good nor as bad as it first appears to be."

Commissioners have appointed a new coliseum board in hopes of having better utilization of a good community facility.

If the board wants to fill up the coliseum, they may want to consider bringing in a men's dance group from Albuquerque. They may be packed into court, however.

You may have heard of the troupe of male stippers known as the Chippendales. A guy in New Mexico has founded a larger version of the group known as the Chunkendales.

The main difference between the two male dance groups is a total of about 550 pounds. Now the hunks are threatening the chunks with legal action unless the beefy dancers stop the use of their name. The Chippendales call use of the Chunkendales name a violation of federal and state trademark laws.

It's not the first time the name has come into question by some copycat group. They have warded off attacks by group such as the Strippendales and the Ship n' Dales.

The heavy-weights have already changed their name, whose routine is said to be more modest, and they perform for the benefit of charity. Their motto: "We have guts."

A civic club bulletin suggested some things are hard to believe. Such lines are:

--One size fits all.

--Give me your number and the doctor will call you right back.

--I'll get back to you.

--Leave me your resume and we'll keep it on file.

--Your table will be ready in just a few minutes.

--Your luggage isn't lost, it's just misplaced.

--It's a sure thing, you can't lose.

--There's absolutely no obligation.

--It will make you look and feel younger.

--Haven't you lost a lot of weight.

--It's in your own best interest.

--Just give it a try, and we guarantee you'll like it.

--You were our first choice.

--I just need a minute of your time.

Bush's economy plan trashed by rivals

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — The men who hope to deliver next year's State of the Union message predict President Bush's address tonight will be designed to elicit applause and votes — but it won't contain the remedies to the economy.

Three Democratic presidential candidates and Republican challenger Patrick Buchanan stumped New Hampshire on the eve of the State of the Union speech, delivering their usual campaign themes.

Democrat Bill Clinton made several stops in the South, but his day was taken up with denouncing unproven allegations that he had an extramarital affair. He turned to Texas today, campaigning in three cities where he also planned to respond to the State of the Union.

Bush's speech, dubbed "Operation Domestic Storm" by some advisers, was expected to contain a challenge to Congress to approve by early March his program to fight the recession.

"It will have a great deal of meat in it," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. One Bush campaign memo calls the speech the "defining event" of his presidency.

Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, at an auto supply plant Bush visited two weeks ago, said the speech to a joint session of Congress would be full of good feelings but little substance.

"He's going to have a laundry list, I suppose, of things designed to win him a round of applause ... and he hopes that will be enough to get him re-elected," Kerrey said.

"But if you're going to really move the American economy, you've got to move the American government and the American bureaucracy and you've got to move our competition to open their markets."

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin said he expects Bush's speech to be full of campaign promises that won't fool the American public.

"Oh, I'm sure that he'll lay it on heavy," Harkin said. "He'll tell everyone that he's going to do great things this year, but people know it's just electionary.

"I think the people of New Hampshire were fooled once by Bush. They read his lips once. He had his chance and he blew it. Now it's time for him to get out and let me do it."

The Iowa senator met with teachers and administrators at the Kingston Children's Center to hail the new American Disabilities Act, which he sponsored and which went into effect Sunday.

Buchanan, campaigning in Manchester, said the voters should refuse to accept any "anemic, pathetic little tax cuts — make them across the board." He said taxes on investments, savings, income and capital gains should all be cut.

"I will agree with the Democrats: we need a middle-class tax cut in one of two ways — Social Security or a tax credit for families with children" added Buchanan, a conservative commentator. "As a third option, a return to the suggestion of (President) Jack Kennedy, an investment tax credit for manufacturing as an incentive to modernize."

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, at the University of New Hampshire in Durham, noted that when he says Bush is the "environmental president, it's a laugh line."

Wind shear blamed for deaths of pelicans

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The same problem that has caused some plane crashes is also killing endangered pelicans, according to a report by university researchers who studied the birds' deaths at a highway bridge.

The Texas Transportation Institute study found that wind shear caused some brown pelicans, known more for their large wingspans than their flying ability, to land disoriented on a coastal highway bridge where they are struck by automobiles.

During a five-year period, two dozen pelicans died on the bridge that links South Padre Island with Port Isabel, said Ray James, who conducted the study with two researchers from Texas A&M University's Wildlife and Fisheries Science Department.

"In bad weather, the brown pelicans almost always try to fly over the bridge instead of going under it," James said. "They are poor flyers to begin with, and they apparently can't handle the unexpected aerodynamic downwash and turbulence created by the bridge structure during northers."

Texas A&M said Dr. Karolee Owens and Dr. Doug Slack conducted wind tunnel tests with two scale models constructed by James to determine how wind flows around the bridge. The two-year study was released this month.

Most pelican deaths between 1984 and 1989 occurred as the birds, with wingspans averaging 61/2 feet, returned to their roost sites after foraging south of the bridge, James said.

The report recommends reducing the bridge's speed limit during winter storms, along with improved lighting and better warning signs.

Macy, succumbing to debt, picks Chapter 11 status

NEW YORK (AP) — Unable to pull off another miracle on 34th Street, Macy's has taken shelter in bankruptcy court.

R.H. Macy & Co., the world-famous department store chain, filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy law Monday, yet another victim of the recession and the buy-now, pay-later 1980s.

With 144 department stores and 107 specialty stores nationwide, Macy thus began a reorganization from which the 134-year-old retailer is expected to emerge smaller.

"We have known for some time that Macy's had more debt than is desirable in such a weak economy," chairman Edward S. Finkelstein said in a statement. "We worked night and day to find a suitable solution and ultimately came to the conclusion that filing for Chapter 11 was best for Macy's future."

In becoming the latest retail giant to enter bankruptcy court, Macy — sponsor of a Thanksgiving parade of cartoon-character floats and the setting of the movie "Miracle on 34th Street," about a department-store Santa Claus — listed liabilities of $5.32 billion against assets of $4.94 billion as of Nov. 2.

Much of the debt was left from Macy's $3.48 billion leveraged buyout by management in 1986 and $1.1 billion purchase of the Bullock's and I. Magnin chains from Federated Department Stores Inc. in 1988.

In addition, a disastrous 1991 Christmas season left the company without enough cash to pay suppliers.

Chapter 11 allows a company to hold off its creditors and continue to operate while it puts its finances in order.

During a reorganization estimated to take two years, Macy is expected to close or sell the weakest of its stores. How its 69,500 employees will be affected was unclear. But Macy creditors could end up owning the company.

The move stood as another example of how the weak economy has undermined the retail industry. It was also seen as an indictment of the debt-financed takeovers of the 1980s.

Macy entered bankruptcy court as Federated and its affiliated Allied Stores Corp. prepared to emerge from Chapter 11. Federated and Allied, like Department Stores Inc. and Revco D.S. Inc., were crushed by debt from takeovers.

Loews Corp. chairman Laurence Tisch, a Macy stockholder, had offered a $1 billion rescue in exchange for easier terms from creditors. But the plan collapsed Friday after a major creditor, Prudential Insurance Co. of America, balked.

Macy was founded in 1858 by Rowland Hussey Macy. It was taken over by the Straus family, who moved what is now Macy's flagship branch to Herald Square at 34th Street. With 49 acres of selling space on 10 levels, it is the world's largest store.

Former attorney general critcizes new JFK movie

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Oliver Stone's new movie about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy "misleads the people who see it and does a disservice to the country," former Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr said.

Carr, who was asked by President Lyndon B. Johnson to conduct a court of inquiry into the assassination, said Monday he believes it is "morally and ethically wrong" for movie makers to distort the facts to make money.

He is disturbed that the movie will leave false impressions with the younger generation of a conspiracy involving Johnson, the Warren Commission, the CIA and FBI.

At the very least, Carr said, the movie should have had a disclaimer at the beginning instead of just making direct allegations of a conspiracy.

"We are a paranoid nation on conspiracies," Carr said.

Carr, who was attorney general when Kennedy was murdered in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963, said he participated in the investigation conducted by the Warren Commission and believes it was "very thorough."

Carr also said the commission reached an "appropriate" conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone.

The former attorney general told the Tyler Morning Telegraph that President Johnson asked him to conduct a court of inquiry "to look into and try to investigate the assassination.

"I agreed to do that," he said.

Before Carr could begin his court of inquiry, the Warren Commission was appointed. Carr also said other investigations had been launched by local and federal officials.

"So it was turning into a four- or five-ring circus," Carr said. He agreed to work with the Warren Commission.

Carr had asked Houston lawyer Leon Jaworski, who later gained prominence during the Watergate hearings, and Robert Story, dean of the Southern Methodist University law school, to work with him in the court of inquiry.

All three worked with the Warren Commission for 18 months, Carr said.

"We agreed that Oswald was the guilty party and had fired all the shots," Carr said.

During the investigation, Carr said, he and other members of the commission went to the sixth floor of the Texas Schoolbook Depository and sat on the same boxes Oswald sat on and used the same rifle at the same angle to determine whether he could have fired all three shots himself.

"It was not a real tough shot. It was a slow-moving target," Carr said. "I could not pull the trigger and reload in the time Oswald did to fire his three shots," but he said several members of the commission could.

Carr said Johnson never tried to interfere with the investigation or "suggest" that it be conducted a certain way.

Your Birthday

Jan. 28, 1992

Interesting, positive changes could be in the offing in the year ahead where your social life is concerned. However, these could be eclipsed by developments in the commercial world.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Should your paths cross today, either deliberately or accidentally, you'll be treated with respect and consideration by those who have authority and clout. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although you might not be aware of it, there is a concerned friend operating on your behalf behind the scenes who is trying to help you in a matter of extreme importance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your thoughts and suggestions will have a strong impact on others today, especially your close friends. What you say can be beneficial, so speak up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An undesirable situation you have led yourself to believe is locked in is much more movable than you think. As of today, start changing it to something more rewarding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Balance can be restored today in an arrangement that has been a bit unsettling recently. You'll now get the cooperation you've needed from another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your probabilities for opening a second channel of earnings look very good at this time. It's in an area that has generated income for you previously.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have a marvelous faculty today for making people you share time with feel that they are extremely important. No wonder you're so popular with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Tasks you haven't been able to successfully accomplish can be easily managed today. Make them your priorities and finish them once and for all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be rather fortunate today in situations that have both an element of chance and that require taking a calculated risk. However, be doubly sure the risk you take is carefully calculated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conditions are brightening a bit where your material interests are concerned. You are presently in a stabilizing trend that could make you feel more secure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll think fast on your feet today and be able to express yourself in a rather eloquent fashion. If there's something you want to sell or promote, this is a good day to do it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Personal gains are indicated today, but they're likely to come to you in a rather roundabout way. Be sure to keep all your windows of opportunity open.

Cancer Society sets crusade activities

The American Cancer Society of Scurry County held its monthly meeting in the board room of Cogdell Memorial Hospital at 5 p.m. last Monday.

Crusade chairmen George and Shirley Stewart announced that a golf tournament, set for May 2, will kick off the local crusade events.

Nancy Wilson and Martha Schiebel will head the public education campaign.

Area representative Wanda Braune said there had been some objection to silicone gel breast implants. She commented that it is based on the lack of proof of safety rather than on a specific determination that these implants are unsafe.

The Texas division of the ACS continues to support the continued use of silicone implants. According to Braune, the ACS does support continued research and quality assurance of implant devices to maintain their safety.

"We feel women should be well informed of risks and benefits of reconstructive surgery so that they may make an informed choice," she said.

Others attending the meeting were president Helen Hatter, Leona Wiggins, H.W. Cargile, Wayne Monroney, Nona Bunch, Deb McLarty and Lyn McLarty.

The next scheduled meeting of the local ACS will be Feb. 17. Mrs. Hatter asks anyone interested in serving on the board to contact her.

Memorial donations were reported up in December, and can be made to the American Cancer Society, Box 1396, Snyder.

Beta Sigma Phi plans annual Valentine dance

Xi Alpha Alpha Theta held its regular meeting at the Snyder Country Club with president Brenda Hedges conducting the meeting.

During the business session, Dena Ellis reported that international had acknowledged receipt of a poem written by Donna Fowler and submitted by the sorority for contest.

A report was heard from Mickey Baird concerning a box supper held Jan. 14 in the home of Wayne and Loretta Dodson. The theme was the '50s.

Dena Ellis distributed tickets for the annual Valentine dance to be held Feb. 14 at the Snyder Country Club. The band will be Lonesome Dove, with Kelly Kendrick. Tickets are $15 per couple and can be purchased from any member.

Donna Fowler, reporting for the service committee, gave an update on the family selected at Christmas for assistance from the sorority.

Prior to the business session, Edie Hopping presented a program, "Intimacy Is a Luxury; Privacy Is a Necessity." She discussed the importance of intimacy in a friendship, which everyone needs, but not everyone has. During the program, a pamphlet of poems regarding friendship was given to each member. She closed her program with "To A Friend," by Grace Stricker Dawson, and "New Friends and Old Friends," by Joseph Parry.

The sorority's next meeting will be on "Women Entertainers," by Patricia Warren.

MARGARET PASCUZZI AND LARRY McGEE

Marriage set for April 18

Margaret C. Pascuzzi of Fort Worth and Larry Jay McGee of Snyder announce their engagement and forthcoming marriage.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. H.J. Crosthwaite of Worthington, Ohio, and Larry McGee of Midland and Judy McGee of Snyder.

The ceremony will be held April 18 at Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

The future bride is a graduate of the University of Texas at Arlington with a BA in Sociology. She is working as teen intern coordinator at Amon Carter Jr. YMCA.

McGee, a native of Snyder, is working on a degree in mathematics and employed by Baker-Shiflett & Assoc. as an engineering technician.

Faulk's daughter sues for her education at Syracuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Columbo" star Peter Falk's daughter is suing her father, claiming he cut off money for her Syracuse University education to get her to come home for family counseling.

Catherine Falk, 21, contends in her lawsuit filed on Monday that her father is required to pay for her education under terms of her parents' 1976 divorce settlement.

The actor's attorney, Jerome Goldberg, refused to comment.

Ms. Falk's lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, said the woman's father and her mother, Alyce, went to New York this month and asked her to drop out.

"The only thing I could figure out is they want her to get closer to home and get involved in family counseling," the lawyer said.

Mitchelson would not say why the actor wants Ms. Falk in counseling.

Fanny Blankers-Koen of the Netherlands, a mother of two children, won four gold medals in women's track and field in the 1948 Olympics.

A book written during the event

By Phillip Alder

Most books about major bridge championships take time to appear. One world-championship book wasn't published until after the next championships had taken place. Terence Reese of Britain, however, wrote the book about the 1991 Generali European Championships in diary form while they were being played. And he resisted the temptation to change the text after the event.

The book, "Brilliancies and Blunders in the European Championships" (Maxwell Macmillan Bridge, $15, 212-866-5860), describes many good hands in an entertaining style, and some humorous incidents have been added. However, it helps if you like the following one, as it has been put in twice. "My husband is the chief librarian of the National Library of Scotland," said Liz McGowan (British women's team) during an interview, "but it's easy to overstate the excitement of that."

Today's hand features a great defensive play. To test yourself as West, cover the East and South cards. Against four spades, you lead the club king. Declarer wins in the dummy and plays a spade to his queen and your king. What do you do now?

The hand occurred in the Open Series match between Ireland and Poland. Pat Walshe found the only card to defeat the contract, given the actual distribution: the heart king.

The four defensive tricks had to be one spade, one diamond, one club and one heart ruff. If Walshe had cashed his club queen before switching to the heart king, he would have had no entry remaining in order to regain the lead to give his partner the ruff. The heart king left declarer with no riposte.

Market does brisk business in irradiated strawberries

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Shoppers came early Saturday to buy strawberries treated at the nation's first commercial irradiation plant, ignoring protesters' warnings that irradiating food may be dangerous.

Laurenzo's Italian Market began selling the berries 10 minutes ahead of schedule to meet the demand. Two protesters picketing outside the store made no effort to interfere.

By late afternoon, 500 of the $2 pints were sold, said store owner David Laurenzo, who bought an inaugural batch of 3,500 pints from Vindicator Inc., located in Mulberry.

"I think we did very well," he said. He described the fruit as "large, red, pretty good-tasting, sweet berries."

Federal officials say irradiation safely prevents food-borne illnesses from being harbored in fruits, vegetables, poultry and pork. Advocates laud the technique for extending shelf life by weeks.

But anti-nuclear activists and some scientists say exposing food to gamma radiation changes food's molecular structure, lowering nutritional value and possibly increasing the risk of cancer and birth defects.

Lunden, mate separate

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Lunden, co-host of ABC's "Good Morning America," says she and her husband have separated.

In a statement Monday, the 41-year-old Lunden said only that she and her husband of 13 years, TV producer Michael Krauss, would have joint custody of their three daughters.

Lady Dusters edge Clarendon College

CLARENDON — Winning felt so good Monday, that the Western Texas College Lady Dusters decided to do it again Thursday.

The Dusters rallied from a 17-point deficit to defeat Clarendon, 74-70, in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action for their second straight victory over a league opponent.

They tripped Frank Phillips, 55-44, on Monday for their first WJCAC win of the season.

With Thursday's other game, New Mexico Junior College's 72-61 whipping of Frank Phillips, the Lady Dusters vault from the league cellar into a fourth-place tie.

Frank Phillips, South Plains College and Western Texas all sport 2-4 Western Conference marks.

The Dusters trailed at the half, 34-32, before getting a fire lit under them at intermission that inspired them to put up 42 second-half points.

"We got down 17 points in the first half and came back and won the ballgame and that's awful hard to do on the road," said Coach Kelly Chadwick. "Mary Ann Isom had a very good ballgame. Our point goards hit 15 of 16 from the free throw line."

Isom, a Midland sophomore, led the WTC attack with 15 points. Isom hit only two field goals but provided an 11-of-12 night from the free-throw line.

As a team, WTC managed 24-of-32 freebies. Clarendon hit 19-of-26 to lose the game from the line after hitting one more field goal than the Dusters.

Freshman Allison Garcia also finished in double figures for the Dusters, banging home 12 points. Cinthia French, a first-year player, managed nine points, including one three-pointer, and sophomore standout La Shunta Jackson scored eight.

"The best thing was we never gave up. The girls fought and fought and fought. They did a great job," added Chadwick.

Clarendon's Tracey Blackshear scored 32 points to lead all scorers Monday. The Clarendon sophomore has averaged 13.2 points per game before her explosion against the Dusters.

The win puts WTC at 8-13 overall. Clarendon currently holds a 10-7 season record while just 1-5 within the WJCAC.

The Howard Lady Hawks are next up for WTC's women as they travel to Big Spring Thursday as the Western Conference race continues.

Over Baylor and Rice...

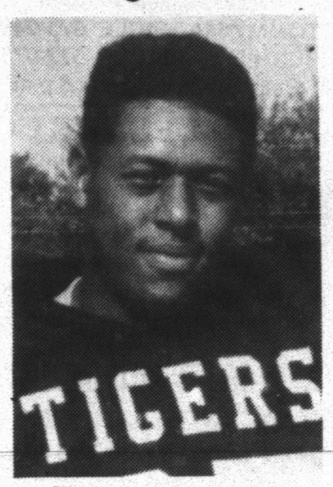

Snyder's Clay chooses A&M

Snyder two-way football standout Hayward Clay has announced his intentions to attend Texas A&M University and play football for coach R.C. Slocum's Aggies.

Clay, a 6-3, 225-pound senior at SHS, was starting tight end and defensive end for the Tigers. He was a three-time all-district selection, including a first-team nod on both offense and defense following the 1991 season.

He was a preseason All-South Plains pick by the Lubbock-Avalanche Journal, as well as being named the the A-J and Abilene Reporter-News All-area Class 5A-4A teams.

Clay was listed among the state's top 100 college prospects and was an honorable mention all-state from both his schoolboy positions.

HAYWARD CLAY

"I just liked the atmosphere and the people I met," Clay said after choosing A&M over Rice or Baylor.

Clay plans to major in engineering, which made him lean toward Texas A&M.

"They have a great engineering department," he said, "and a great football team. They definitely had the best combination of the two out of the schools I was looking at."

As a senior, Clay led the Tigers in receiving, catching 11 passes for 242 yards and three touchdowns from his tight end post. He was also credited with 43 drives, that is, pushing an oppnent at least five yards back on a block, and 28 pins.

Clay expects to play on offense for the Southwest Conference champion Aggies.

National signing day for college prospects is Feb. 5.

Connecticut drops Villanova

by The Associated Press

Jim Calhoun sounded like a man who coaches a team with a 1-16 record and they just got the '1.'

"I don't feel relieved, I feel great," Calhoun said Monday night after Connecticut's 72-58 victory over Villanova. "We looked them eyeball to eyeball for 30 minutes and were able to put a little bit extra in the final 10 minutes. We did a lot of things tonight that can make us feel better about ourselves."

For the (won-loss) record, the sixth-ranked Huskies have the '1' on the other side, as in 16-1 overall and 7-1 in the Big East. In fact, the '1' came at the hands of Villanova 16 days ago.

Since then, there have been four victories for Connecticut, but the last two came in overtime and Calhoun had felt the Huskies had gotten away from what made them a Top Ten team.

"Connecticut basketball, the way we want it to be played, is based on enthusiasm, intensity and defense. That's what we're about," Calhoun said.

Villanova (7-9, 5-3) was able to shoot just 30.6 percent from the field and Connecticut had 11 blocked shots — seven by freshman Donyell Marshall — as the Huskies overcame some offensive problems of their own for the home victory.

No. 18 Oklahoma 79, Nebraska 76

The Sooners (13-3, 2-2) trailed by seven with 1:25 to play and stunned the crowd at Devaney Center with an 11-1 run to close the game.

Brent Price had 17 points for the Sooners, while Derrick Chandler had 16 points and 20 rebounds for the Cornhuskers (13-4, 1-3).

7th girls split with Tornadoes

LAMESA — Snyder seventh grade girls split in basketball games with Lamesa here Monday.

Snyder Black was defeated 43-17. Scoring for the young Lady Tigers were Erica Garza 7, Darla Blackwell 4, and Brandy Roberge, Norma Maldonado and Brandy Gill, 2 each.

Snyder Gold won, 25-15. Scoring for Snyder were Kelly Gonzales 14, Rachelle Wemken 6, Nicole Lyons 3 and Olivia Martinez 2. Gonzales was the most valuable player. Coaches cited Lyons, Shauna Huddleston and Chawn Purcell for outstanding play.

Tigers trade wins with Tors

LAMESA — Snyder eighth grade girls traded victories with Lamesa here Monday.

Snyder A team lost, 26-24. Scoring were Jodi White 15, Kayla Drain 2, Deana Clay 1, Mendy Winter 2, Kelly Clay 2, and Edwina Brooks 2.

Snyder B team won in overtime, 29-26/ Scoring were Jina Miller 10, Lockie Applin 2, Nikki Claborn 3, Sharon Gulseth 2, Monica Harbin 3, Denisha Ollison 8 and Tami Tucker 1.

Last weekend at the Snyder Tournament, the A team won third place and the B team lost in consolation.

Snyder tennis opener postponed

The Snyder-Colorado City tennis match, originally scheduled for today has been postponed until Thursday.

Coach Jerry Tucker's Tigers, District 2-4A team tennis champions will host the Wolves at 3:30 p.m. Thursday on the junior high courts in both teams' 1992 season opener.

SHS hosts Levelland in district showdown

The Snyder Tigers wind up their grueling two-game District 2-4A home stand today with an 8 p.m. battle against preseason playoff pick Levelland at Scurry County Coliseum.

The Tigers bring a 15-9 overall mark and a 1-2 loop slate into today's contest while the Lobos are 16-5 and 2-1.

Snyder will try to rebound after a 66-60 loss to Lamesa Friday while Levelland was upset by the speedy Estacado Matadors, 67-59.

Hayward Clay, Snyder senior post, hit 23 points to lead the Tigers, before fouling out in the fourth quarter in the loss to the Tornadoes. Barron Wesley added 12 for SHS while Jeff Wortham put in 10.

Wesley sprained his right ankle in the Lamesa game and was forced to the bench in the third period. He is listed as questionable for today's game according to SHS trainer Steve Krueger.

Snyder's Lady Tigers finished the first half of District 2-4A action Friday with a 72-34 loss to the Lady Tors.

Snyder junior Shalawn Smith canned 13 for the Lady Tigers. Sophomore Annie Ragland contributed eight.

The loss drops the SHS girls to 2-21 for the season. They are winless in five loop encounters.

Levelland, defending Class 4A state champion, is currently ranked fourth in Texas. The Loboettes pounded Estacado Friday, 55-37. Snyder fell to LHS in its 2-4A opener earlier in the season, 80-31.

The Levelland-Snyder girls' JV game begins at 5 p.m. at SHS. The boys' JV game tips off at 5 p.m. at Scurry County Coliseum followed by the girls' varsity game at 6:30 p.m. and the boys' varsity matchup at 8 p.m.

In other area action today, Hermleigh 3-14 and 1-4 in boys' games and 8-11 and 0-5 in girls' action, hosts Blackwell in District 28-A tilts.

The Ira Bulldogs, currently 16-5 and 2-2, and the Lady Bulldogs, 3-19, 1-3, will enjoy a Distrct 17-A open date today before returning to the court at Aspermont Friday.

Games at Hermleigh start with girls' action at 6:30 p.m. The boys contest begins at 8 p.m.

68-66 over Clarendon...

WTC claims come-back win

CLARENDON — The Western Texas College Westerners made it two in a row and three of their last four with a hard-fought 68-66 victory over a feisty Clarendon College team Monday night.

The Bulldogs grabbed a 42-29 halftime lead before the Westerners' offense kicked in.

The difference was in the number of times the Westerners got to the charity stripe. Western Texas, while shooting just slightly under 50 percent from the line, converted 18 free throws in 37 attempts on 25 fouls from the Bulldogs.

Clarendon, although hitting five more field goals than WTC, only managed a 10-of-20 night at the line.

Three WTC cagers wound up the night in double figures including leading scorer Brent Murphy, a freshman from Camden, Ark.,who managed 16 on seven field goals and two-of-three shooting from the free-throw line. Fellow freshman Jon Gaston drilled 14 points, making two of his four from the field from three-point range. Freshman post Ricardo Hamilton was good for 10 points.

In addition, sophomore Terrance Ross, who added a pair of three-pointers, scored nine on the night for Western Texas.

Covington Cormier and Bryce Rike tied for scoring honors for Clarendon with 13 each.

The win lifts the Westerners to 12-10 on the campaign and evens their Western Junior College Athletic Conference mark at 4-4.

Clarendon falls to 6-11 on the season and 1-7 in league action.

The Westerners will be on the road again Thursday when they travel to Big Spring to knock heads with Jeff Kidder's Howard College Hawks.

Baylor batters UT in key SWC battle

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor's Kelvin Chalmers could hardly wait for tipoff on the Bears' game with the Texas Longhorns.

"I wanted this one bad. I wish we could have played at noon, I was so hyped up," the 6-9, 230-pound forward from Dallas said after Baylor knocked off Texas, 84-68, Monday night.

It was the Bears' first basketball victory over Texas since 1988, before any of the present Baylor players arrived.

Chalmers had 19 points and 10 rebounds in a supporting role for David Wesley, who had his second straight 30-point night, leading the Bears with 33 points and 12 rebounds.

Wesley, a 6-0, 190-pound senior from Longview, said he wanted a victory badly.

"I got very tired of it. We were way overdue," Wesley said.

With the victory, Baylor improves to 10-7 for the season and 3-3 in Southwest Conference play. Texas fell to 11-8 and 4-2.

Baylor built a 38-28 halftime lead behind a 28-15 rebounding edge and the Longhorns' cool 28.9 percent shooting over the first 20 minutes.

Bears coach Gene Iba packed his defense in the middle and dared Texas to make the outside shots.

"It didn't take a genius to know we had to stop their penetrations," Iba said.

The strategy worked. The Longhorns shot just 30.1 percent for the night, while hitting just 2 of 22 three-point attempts.

"We made them shoot tough and off-balance shots. That was part of the game plan," Wesley said.

UT starters Benford Williams, B.J. Tyler and Terrence Rencher were a combined 18-for-60 for the night. The Longhorns didn't get their first three-pointer until 13:52 left in the game.

"We just couldn't shoot the basketball. That's the story of the game," UT coach Tom Penders said.

Texans say Bush needs to offer leadership

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas congressional delegation is split over who will set the tone for this year's session on Capitol Hill.

Will it be a productive session or a partisan free-for-all?

Republicans say the Hill's Democratic leadership will have to set aside petty bickering. But Texas Democrats say President Bush will set the pace in his State of the Union address tonight.

"It would be my hope that the president will lay out a program of economic revival that he and the Congress can work together to enact," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"There are reports the president is getting conflicting advice about his State of the Union address whether he should seek conciliation or confrontation with Congress," Bentsen said Monday.

"This is an election year and there is a temptation on both sides to highlight differences. But I think voters will have little patience with those who spend their time seeking partisan advantage instead of solutions to the problems that confront this country."

But Republican Rep. Lamar Smith said the burden will be on congressional Democrats to put aside partisan bickering.

"I think it's time for the Democratic leadership to climb aboard and not derail the train," said Smith, R-San Antonio.

"The president is going to take the initiative and I think the Democratic leadership in Congress will either be part of the problem or part of the solution," he said. "And that's their decision."

Members of both parties agree Bush's plan to revive an ailing economy probably will be the centerpiece of his message to the nation.

Bush has raised the stakes in recent months, telling audiences to "stay tuned" to the State of the Union for his prescriptions for health care, economic recovery and more.

"I know the address has gotten a lot of hype, but quite frankly I think it deserves it," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who met Monday with Bush to review details of the speech.

But the hype could be a double-edged sword, said Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth.

"If he does not live up to that standard, people will be disappointed."

Geren and other members of the Texas delegation said Bush will have to offer long-term specifics on how to cure the sickly economy.

"I hope the president will tomorrow night give a very strong and forceful speech that will lay out a plan that will get this country moving again," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs.

"What I hope we don't do is get a bunch of Band-Aid, quick-fix recommendations that would just increase the deficit and amount to little more than election year political rhetoric and a placebo that really doesn't solve our problems," he said.

"That's my fear that's what we're going to get."

But Rep. Dick Armey, R-Lewisville, said Bush will present a detailed blueprint to jump-start the economy.

"I'm very optimistic that we'll have a very strong pro-growth message that'll feature a lot of the growth recommendations that we Republicans have been making over a year," he said.

"What we want is a well-conceived, tightly-knit, strongly presented program of recommendations to Congress with rather assertive encouragement to Congress to get the job done quickly."

Chapman said he hopes Bush "will be honest with the American people and tell them to get this economy going in the right direction very likely will require some additional pain in the short run."

"It took us 12 years to get in this mess," he said.

"I'm hopeful that what we do is get government off people's backs," said Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock.

"It appears a lot of the things (Bush) wants to do are to enhance and to encourage and to put incentives to investment in business. That's what I think we should be doing," he said.

Said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, "What we need to be discussing is our priorities and how we intend to budget those issues domestically that we must deal with — health care, the homeless, education."

State of Union speech tonight...

Economic worries foremost as Texans wait on address

DALLAS (AP) — Rosa Maria Oaxaca struggles to protect her two teen-agers, to stretch her minimum wage garment factory job to provide the safe life she wants for them.

H. Ross Perot struggles too. The Dallas billionaire doesn't have to worry about making the rent payment, but he is concerned about what he sees as government incompetence robbing his children and grandchildren of a prosperous future.

Although at different ends of the economic ladder, both Ms. Oaxaca and Perot look to President Bush's State of the Union speech Tuesday for the same help: jobs.

"It all stems from the job," said Ms. Oaxaca, 45, in El Paso. "With a better paying job, I could have a better home," she said in Spanish.

As a single parent raising two teen-agers on a minimum wage salary, she said her $375-a-month rent is all she can afford, and it forces her to live in a neighborhood rife with gangs and drugs.

More money would mean better living, she said.

"Our priorities must be, number one, to protect the job base," says Perot. "Because only that way can we protect the tax base, and only with millions of people at work paying taxes can we hope to pay our bills."

"If I had an opportunity to talk to our elected officials, I would say: time is our enemy, the clock is running against us," Perot said. "We cannot lose a year while you provide Novocaine, aspirin and tranquilizers to the American people.

"We just have a group of people in Washington who don't understand business," said Perot, who himself has been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate.

Ms. Oaxaca and Perot were among two Texans asked their assessment of the country as Bush prepares his address to the nation.

The economy was on everyone's mind as they waited to hear from Bush, who has declined for months to offer his ideas on what — if anything — should be done to stimulate the economy. Wait until the State of the Union, he has said.

Not everyone called for action.

"My view is the politician needs to refrain from trying to fix something that is not yet broken," said Dan Leach, a 42-year-old veterinarian in Lubbock who said his business is improving.

"I don't think we need to get into any long-term jobless programs. ... If people find something to lean on, they will lean on it. Some are just looking for enough money to get by. They find it and they won't look any further."

Leach said he believes the recession is ending, "but it will take as much time to come out of it as it took to get into it."

Leach realizes he is better off than many others. "The people that don't have money to put food on the table and take care of their children have legitimate concerns, but there is no quick fix," he said.

Sheldan Perry, an accountant in Houston, says the economy has been good to him despite his layoff from Tenneco Inc.

He still does accounting work for Tenneco on a contract basis, and also sells real estate. He has bought a house, a $30,000 car and a $1,300 stereo in the past year.

Perry, 31, would advise Bush to encourage consumer spending.

In Mission, citrus farmer Ken Martin agreed the economy is on the upswing.

"I really think the recession is going to break. The interest rates are down, the stock markets are going up," he said.

"I think most people are bullish. On the news they talk about recession pretty heavy, but maybe that's because they don't have anything more interesting to talk about."

Police note tire slashings; work six traffic accidents

Snyder police took several complaints Monday from citizens reporting that someone had slashed the tires on their vehicles.

Class A criminal mischief reports were filed involving slashed tires on a 1969 GMC pickup at 308 20th St., a 1989 Lincoln at 1211 17th St. and on a vehicle at 1305 24th St.

In addition, a woman informed officers that someone had broken the back lense covers on her 1983 Oldsmobile at 1201 20th St. and a man reported the windshield of his vehicle had been damaged at 2401 Ave. Q.

Criminal mischief reports were filed in all cases.

Officers also worked six minor traffic accidents Monday. They included:

—A two-car accident at 9:38 a.m. in the 2700 block of Denison involving a 1979 Cadillac driven by Sterling Williams of 2700 Denison and a 1981 Ford truck driven by Jerry Echols of Rt. 2.

—A 12:19 p.m. accident at Gill's Fried Chicken involving a 1979 Plymouth driven by James Lewis of 1905 Coleman and a 1985 Nissan driven by James Griffin of 2801 Ave. W.

—A 1:20 p.m. wreck in the 1400 block of 28th Street involving a 1991 Chevrolet driven by Carolyn Reon of 4008 Austin and a 1977 Volkswagon driven by Randy Davis of 505 13th St.

—A 4:17 p.m. accident in the 4500 block of College Avenue involving a parked, unoccupied 1982 Ford owned by Marie Pacheco Contreraz of 506½ 27th St. and a "driverless moving vehicle," a 1980 Toyota, owned by Vernest Tippens of 810 33rd St.

—A 5:05 p.m. wreck in the 3700 block of College Avenue involving a 1986 Dodge driven by Ernest Flores Jr. of 2404 Ave. M and a 1984 Oldsmobile driven by Effie Beatrice Witte of 4749 Rose Circle.

—And, a 9:20 p.m. accident in the Kmart parking lot involving a parked, unoccupied 1986 Chevrolet owned by Gregorio Juarez of Ira and an unknown vehicle which left the scene.

Bush touts fall in use of drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush introduced his latest strategy to combat the war on drugs — a plan calling for $12.7 billion in federal funds — by touting the nation's reduced drug use.

In the front row as Bush spoke were the ambassadors of Latin American countries that produce most of the world's cocaine.

Bush, recalling the drug summit two years ago with the presidents of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia, said, "There was some doubt on the parts of those presidents as to what we were doing at home on the demand side. And I think now we have a good record with real progress to report to them."

The president reminded his White House audience of the second drug summit next month with the leaders of Colombia, Bolivia, Peru, Venezuela, Ecuador and Mexico, and said he would convince them "that we are tackling the demand side of the equation."

He pointed to recent surveys, including one released Monday of covered high school and college students, that indicate an overall decline in the use of drugs since 1988. Critics say the surveys miss many users.

Overall, Colombia, Peru and Bolivia would receive $478.7 million next year, up from $471.7 million this year. Colombia's aid would rise; Bolivia's would fall, and Peru's would stay about the same.

The relatively small changes in the allocations were reflective of the strategy in general, which reflected only minor shifts, such as an added emphasis on underage alcohol use.

"Prevention is the only answer in the long run," said Bob Martinez, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy. But in the short run, "increased interdiction, international and law enforcement efforts are necessary, as well as treatment for those currently using drugs."

The proposed budget represents a 6.5 percent increase.

It would devote $8.6 billion to reducing drug supplies — including $5.6 billion for domestic law enforcement and $3 billion for international efforts and interdiction — and $4.1 billion for cutting demand. The biggest proposed increases are 8.8 percent for demand reduction and 8.4 percent for domestic law enforcement.

Assertions by Bush and other administration officials that the country's drug war is headed in the right direction got swift, and negative, reactions from Capitol Hill.

"Unless there are some changes in direction, our nation's drug epidemic is going to continue to grow in the years ahead," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del. and the chairman of Senate Judiciary Committee.

"It is not a lack of will on the part of Congress that hampers our drug efforts, but a lack of a sound strategy, and a lack of effective leadership from the administration," Biden said.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich. and the chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said the president's strategy misses the "millions of people ... who live on the margins and are addicted to drugs."

People line up to apply for lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Many store owners at a lottery seminar said they were playing defense by applying for a license to sell lottery tickets.

"Selling lottery tickets might mean the difference if they go to our store or some place else," Beverly Allison, owner of a liquor store in Jarrell, said Monday.

About 200 people from across the state attended a comptroller's lottery seminar on the University of Texas campus.

Many said they wouldn't get rich on the 5 percent commission from lottery sales. But they also said that they needed to sell tickets if their competitors were, and added that they didn't mind the idea of more customers coming through the door.

"It's not going to be some revenue-producing venture," said Mike Beevers, whose family owns Ron's Convenience Stores in Bell County.

"But I think it can be a disadvantage without it, if your competitors have it," he said.

Toby Preston, owner of E-Z Way Convenience stores in Killeen, seemed more skeptical, although he said he was ready to apply for a lottery license.

Flowers, Clinton accuse each other of telling lies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton, expressing exasperation over a woman's unproven accusations of a love affair, used a campaign stop in San Antonio this morning to put to rest questions about marital infidelity.

Clinton has emphatically denied Gennifer Flowers' description of a love affair, and an ABC News poll indicated that a wide majority of Americans didn't feel that Clinton's marriage was an issue in the presidential campaign.

"I've said all I'm going to say about it and their (American people) judgment will be the final arbitrator of this," Clinton told supporters and reporters in San Antonio today.

"If (the media are) going to cover cash-for-trash, there's a recession on, man. There's no end to the number of people who will say anything if the money is right."

At a New York news conference Monday sponsored by the tabloid Star, which paid Flowers for her story, the Arkansas state employee and singer said Clinton is "absolutely lying" in denying the 12-year affair.

The news conference was televised by Cable News Network and both Flowers remarks and the attention it drew was bluntly denounced by the chairman of the Democratic National Committee. "Enough is enough," Ronald H. Brown said in a statement. "We should pull the plug on trash journalism and titillation television."

Clinton reacted directly to Flowers' account, saying: "She didn't tell the truth."

Palestinians boycott talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Palestinians boycotted Middle East peace talks that opened today, rejecting the demand of U.S. and Russian sponsors that their delegation include only residents of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In all, foreign ministers and senior diplomats from more than 20 nations are attending the two-day talks on regional issues, an outgrowth of the U.S.-organized October conference in Madrid.

The broadest cross-section of the Arab world ever to sit at a negotiating table with Israel was in Moscow for the session.

Faisal Husseini, head of the eight-member Palestinian delegation, told The Associated Press at his hotel after the two-day talks opened that the Palestinians would not participate until his full delegation is accepted.

"We insist that Palestinians have the right to choose their representatives," said Husseini, a resident of Israeli-annexed east Jerusalem. His delegation includes three Palestinians from the West Bank, three from "exile" and another Jerusalem resident.

In an apparent concession to the Palestinians, however, a fifth working group was set up to deal with the problem of refugees. The other groups are to focus on arms control, water-sharing, the environment and economic development.

Government will not have to pay long overdue bill

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A merchant who lived next to Valley Forge when George Washington's bedraggled troops were camping there lent the Continental Congress $50,000 in gold and $400,000 in supplies.

But Jacob DeHaven was never paid back.

On Monday, the Supreme Court told his descendants, including one in Texas, to stop waiting for payment.

The descendants had sued the government for $100 billion (counting interest), but lost in U.S. Claims Court and U.S. Appeals Court. On Monday the Supreme Court refused to hear the case.

"I didn't expect the government to give any money back but I do think they should recognize (DeHaven) in some way," Ada Brown, 64, of Tabernacle, N.J., told The Philadelphia Inquirer. She is one of thousands of descendants.

"I think there should be a headstone on his grave, recognizing what he did. The family plans to do that — if the U.S. government isn't going to," she said.

The government said the statute of limitations ran out 123 years ago.

Descendant Brad Lunaas, 36, of Alvin, Texas, said the government "still owes us."

"The loan should have been paid years ago," he told the Inquirer. "I think people should know what Jacob DeHaven did. He helped when he was needed and it was put aside."

DeHaven and others responded to General Washington's plea for help in the winter of 1777-78. Congress offered to repay in Continental currency, which was widely considered worthless.

"So the government gave creditors another option of taking interest indefinitely," said Jo Beth Kloecker, the descendants' lawyer. She said the Constitution guarantees payment.

"It says that 'All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the Confederation,' " she said. "That's superior to the statute of limitations."

ministrator, who served 11 years as high school principal, suggested that redistricting might be a better answer to the solution of solving imbalance in the classroom.

Roxanne Stoker, who has three children attending North Elementary, outlined some pros and cons of the proposal.

She noted that she had been told that by combining the classes together the faculty would better be able to work together and it would alleviate the stress of one school excelling more than another. She noted that the plan would provide an ethnic and classroom balance.

"I feel if they can promise our kids a better education and keep our taxes from rising it may be worth a try. We all know economic stress is a factor," she said.

But she was also skeptical of the school board's motives, and voiced concerns about the proposal.

"We were left with a bad taste in our mouths after the last school board passed a change in our kindergarten program (to half-day). I can say I'm thankful for the reinactment of a full-day kindergarten program. Kindergarten is the foundation of our kids' education for years to come. I'm sorry that they (the trustees) didn't listen to the parents then, and grateful that they realize their mistake and are going to correct it," she said.

"After such stupidity on the part of our school board, it is truly hard for us as parents to see the benefits of such a major, upside-down, turn-around for the fear of failure again," she added. "We have been led to feelings of insecurity, not knowing what we can trust."

"I like the idea of my kids saying that they had an alma mater, North Elementary. This proposal will do away with this. Also, I feel they are taking our personal relationships away from us with our teachers and our principals."

Stoker went on to question how parents in her situation — with three school-aged children — could effectively support three parent councils and could handle the burden of after-school activities at three campuses.

"This will create instability that is hard enough with the economic strain that is already placed upon the parents. We live where it is easy for us to have a normal family."

She added, however, "If this reorganization means these personal and complicated and difficult changes are for a better education, then I have to say I can change my lifestyle, but I can't change the worth of my childrens' education."

Grantham said she had spoken with the director of transportation for the Pecos school district, which operates its elementary schools on a system similar to the proposed Snyder ISD reorganization plan. She indicated he could see problems with the plan, in part because of the number of buses operated by the Snyder school system.

A petition to continue the operation of North Elementary, to restructure district boundaries and to reinstitute full-day kindergarten was made available for those in attendance to sign following the meeting.

Stanfield Elementary Parent Council will meet at 7 p.m. today to address the proposed reorganization.

A public hearing has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 3, in the junior high auditorium.

may cut into some of the most gruesome testimony and have reporters provide toned-down descriptions.

"We don't want to homogenize this trial, but when it gets extremely graphic we're going to have to make a decision," said WDJT general manager, Bill LeMonds. "It's going to be extremely difficult."

WDJT and another local station, WITI, also plan to use a small symbol in the corner of the screen to warn viewers of potentially graphic testimony.

WITI decided not to provide gavel-to-gavel coverage but agreed to have its own reporters and camera crews feed full coverage to WDJT.

Court TV has no plans to delete any testimony but may reconsider once the trial gets under way, senior producer Andy Regal said.

He said he didn't anticipate any testimony so offensive that it couldn't be aired. Still, he added, "I wouldn't say I'm not concerned about it."

compliance.

The Water Commission further claims that Ipollo never altered its discharge route and thus full penalties are due, amounting to $15,850.

The TWC says Ipollo has operated daily without a permit since May 15, 1989. The Texas Water Code provides for a penalty of up to $10,000 for each day of violation. The suit claims that defendants are jointly and severally liable for $10,000 per day for unauthorized discharge to the unlined pit from Sept. 2, 1990.

Additionally, the state claims that defendants are jointly and severally liable for fines of $10,000 per day for operating without a permit since May 15, 1989.

The injuction would require immediate non-use of the unlined construction pit and require Ipollo to submit a new permit application.

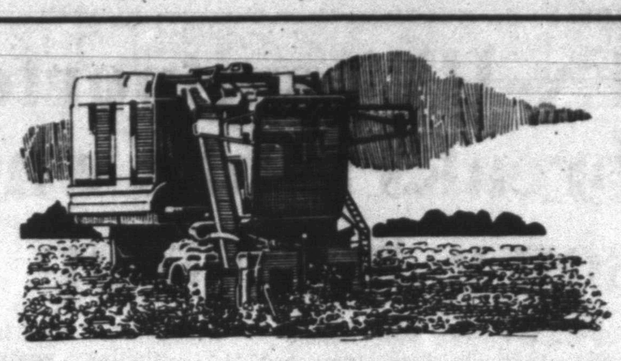

As one solution, Chisum has been working with the city of Snyder to tie onto city sewer services. The Snyder City Council is again expected to discuss Willow Park's request at its regular meeting next week.

Chisum said this morning that the new owners would be in full compliance since plans have been made to haul the facility's wastewater to the city treatment plant.

Chisum said he is confident that a plan would be worked out with the city council.

County Executive Director

Scurry County has funds available for producers needing cost share assistances on conservation practices. There is no set sign-up periods for taking applications however the county is limited to four approval periods during the fiscal year. The first approval period was Jan. 15, 1992. The next approval date is March 4, 1992 and the remaining dates are set for May 6, 1992 and Aug. 5, 1992.

Practices eligible for assistance in Scurry County include: Establishment of permanent grass on cropland, shrub control, livestock water facilities and pipelines, terrace construction, diversion construction, critical area shaping, water impoundment reservoirs, and waterway construction.

Applications for any practice may be made at any time however applications for aerial treatment of mesquite and other shrubs will be considered only during the May meeting. Cost-shares are paid on a 50% of cost level not to exceed the average cost of completing the practice. Applications are approved based on conservation needs and not on a first come basis. Practices started before committee approval are not eligible for cost share assistance. For more information on this program contact the local ASCS office.

At one time or another, everyone has had a stain that defied removal. No matter what products were used or which methods were tried, the stain remained stubbornly in the fabric.

Because of today's easy-care fibers and chemically active cleaning products, consumers sometimes forget that there are still some things that cannot be done.

One of the stains that cannot be removed is benzol peroxide, an ingredient of acne medicine that causes rusty, yellowish stains. These are bleached spots in the fabric. Benzol peroxide is difficult to rinse off the body because it is very insoluble. To prevent visible damage when using products containing benzol peroxide, use white household textiles such as sheets and towels. White collars on garments prevent discoloration to necklines. Cover chair arms with clear plastic or small white towels for everyday use to prevent damage to upholstery. Protect carpets by keeping a small sheet or blanket on hand to lie on.

Brown age spots on fabrics are another stain that cannot be removed. These are often caused by carmelized sugar from food stains that were left in the fabric when it was stored. Sugar from soft drinks and some other foods are invisible when fresh, but turn brown as they age. The best way to prevent them is to be sure that all fabrics are clean before they are stored.

Often causes of age stains on fabrics are fumes from heating systems, usually found along fold lines, and discolorations caused by haircare products, perspiration or deodorants. These discolorations often do not show up for several weeks or months. Protect garments from sprays or drips of grooming products and launder them frequently to remove any accidental exposure. Refold textile products every four to six months if they will be stored for a long period of time.

A staining problem unique to carpets, even the new stain resistant ones, is hot food with a sauce. Almost every stain can be removed from stain resistant carpet except this kind.

The heat of the food melts the sauce into the fibers and the color actually becomes a part of the carpet. Use extra care when carrying such dishes as spaghetti sauce across the carpet to avoid this type of stain.

The most common non-removable stain is bleached spots. Bleached spots can be white, yellow, a lighter shade of any color or even a completely different color from the original fabric. Bleach spots can come from many different products including laundry bleach, tile cleaner, mildew remover, hair preparations and rust remover, to name a few. To prevent these stains, read and follow labels carefully.

If a product contains peroxide, hypochlorite or oxalic acid, be careful not to spill or spray it on fabrics because it will remove the color if the solution is strong enough. Always dilute liquid bleaches when adding them to laundry unless the machine has a bleach dispenser.

With some care and a little knowledge of today's chemicals, spots that cannot be removed can be avoided. Remember that for these stains, prevention is the best remedy.

Subsurface drainage systems have been installed on several farms during the last few years with good results. A subsurface drain is a conduit, such as a plastic pipe, installed below the ground surface. The purpose of the system is to improve the soil environment for vegetative growth, to reduce erosion, and/or to improve water quality. It accomplishes this by regulating the water table and ground water flows, by intercepting and preventing water movement into a wet area, by removing surface water, or by leaching saline soils.

The practice applies to areas having a high water table where the benefits of lowering the water table or controlling ground water or surface runoff justify installing such a system. The soil must have enough depth and permeability to permit installation of an effective and economically feasible system.

The depth, spacing and location of the subsurface drain is based on site conditions, including soils, topography, ground water conditions, crops, land use, outlets, and saline conditions.

Problems may occur where it is necessary to place drains close to perennial vegetation. Roots of some trees, such as willow, cottonwood, elm, and some shrubs and grasses growing near subsurface drains may enter and obstruct the flow. The first consideration is to use non-preferred tubing or closed joints through the root zone. Where this is not possible, water loving trees should be removed from a distance of at least 100 feet on either side of the drain. A distance of 50 feet should be maintained from other species of trees, except for fruit trees.

When a drainage system is installed for the primary purpose of maintaining a favorable salinity balance in the soil, the minimum depth of installation must be five feet.

All subsurface drains are installed with a suitable filter material to prevent excessive amounts of sediment from entering the pipe and to facilitate the collection of ground water and its passage into the drain. The systems installed usually require 4-6 inch perforated plastic pipe covered with a fiberglass filter material.

Subsurface drainage reduces soil and ground water salinity by removing excess dissolved salts. In some cases it may be difficult to find a discharge location for saline water to avoid polluting surface water. However, where there are high concentrations of salt deposits on the surface and the land is barren, the surface runoff may have a higher amount of salt than the drain outlet. Subsurface drainage can also help correct saline seep problems by intercepting infiltration in the recharge area prior to allowing salt deposition on the surface.

If you would like additional information about subsurface drainage systems, contact the local Soil Conservation Service office.

Low-interest emergency loans slated

AUSTIN—Low-interest emergency loans are available to eligible farmers and ranchers in eight West Texas counties declared disaster areas due to excessive rain, hail and freezing temperatures last October, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan declared Martin County a primary disaster area due to adverse weather conditions from Oct. 26-30, 1991. Also named contiguous disaster counties were Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard and Midland.

This declaration makes family-size farm operators in both primary and contiguous areas eligible for emergency assistance from the Farmers Home Administration.

To be designated as a primary disaster area, a certain percentage of the county's economic base must be lost. The seven counties were designated as contiguous disaster areas because they were adjacent to the primary disaster area, but did not have the same extent of losses.

Each loan application will be considered on its own merits, taking into account the extent of losses, security available, repayment ability and other requirements.

For more information about the loans contact your local FMHA county office.

Soybean crops yields record bushels in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. soybean crop yielded a record 34.3 bushels per acre and totaled 1,986 million bushels in 1991, according to the Agriculture Department's annual crop production summary.

"The Corn Belt led this strong yield performance, despite summer dryness that predicted subpar yields," the department said in a recent summary. "Production, plus a 329-million-bushel carrying stock, placed supplies over 2,300 million bushels.'

The soybean crush, to make oil, is projected at 1,235 million bushels, an all-time high, the summary said. Combined with a rebound in exports to 665 million bushels, it will put 1991-92 ending stocks at 325 million bushels, near the 1990-91 total. ' '

"The stronger soybean export performance stems from a drought-induced decline in South American soybean production," it said. "Thus, at least during the early part of 1991-92, U.S. supplies will fill the void. Season-average soybean prices are expected to range between $5.25 and $5.75 a bushel."

Soybean meal exports were forecast at 6 million tons and season-average prices at between $165 and $180 a ton.

The summary said domestic use of soybean oil "will be up marginally to 12.3 billion pounds, as substitute oils make inroads into traditional markets." It added that season-average prices for soybean oil probably will fall between 17.5 and 20.5 cents a pound.

All corn exported after Feb. 20 will be tested before it is shipped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's Federal Grain Inspection Service will require that all corn exported from the United States after Feb. 20 be tested for aflatoxin prior to shipment.

The only exception will be corn whose purchasing contract stipulates that testing is not necessary, the department said in a recent news release.

At the same time, the inspection service will begin providing aflatoxin testing services for all grains, including corn.

The actions are necessary to implement 1990 Farm Bill requirements, said FGIS Administrator John C. Foltz.

Aflatoxin is any of several toxic or carcinogenic substances produced by a fungus found on peanuts, corn or other grains.

Lime research and promotion agenda to be established

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has issued regulations to establish a lime research and promotion program.

The program will be funded by a mandatory assessment of up to one cent per pound on domestic or imported limes sold in the United States. Producers or importers of less than 35,000 pounds of limes per year will be exempt from paying the assessment.

The program will be administered by a board of seven lime producers, three lime importers and a member representing the public, said Daniel D. Haley, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Ex-IRA supporter breaks ranks when son is beaten up

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Maureen Morris grew up among the absolutes of Catholic west Belfast, a world of clear-cut tribal loyalty where "the Brits" were the undisputed enemy and the Provisional IRA was family.

Time and time again, British soldiers burst into her home in pursuit of her four brothers.

In the mid-1970s, she says each was a "volunteer" in the Irish Republican Army. All eventually landed in prison. In 1976 soldiers killed one brother, Danny, while he was on IRA "active service."

Sitting in a fire-lit living room, the 37-year-old woman held a finely cut crystal plate from the "1st Battalion Martyrs" given in "loving memory of Vol. Danny Lennon. ... His death shall not have been in vain."

"Danny died for his country," she said simply.

Few things seem so simple to Maureen Morris anymore. Not since eight masked IRA men surrounded her 18-year-old son, pinned him to the ground and beat him with iron bars and nail-spiked bats.

Danny Morris was "punished" for alleged criminal activity unrelated to politics.

With the mainly Protestant police force preoccupied with the IRA in staunchly republican areas like the Catholic west side, IRA vigilantes have stepped into the vacuum, becoming judge and jury to "ordinary" criminals.

Danny's punishment was a shattered right arm, broken legs, and the warning that worse would come if he did not cease his "anti-social activities" and quickly leave Northern Ireland.

He is now on crutches and lying low with relatives.

Danny's case reflects the rough justice of working-class Belfast.

Sinn Fein, the IRA's legal political wing, even operates a center where residents bring complaints about late-night hooliganism.

Police estimate the IRA carried out 77 punishment shootings or beatings in 1991. Its opponents in hard-line Protestant districts, the Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, carried out 62 such attacks.

Her son's beating pushed Mrs. Morris to take a rare public stand against the IRA. She turned to Families Against Intimidation and Terror (FAIT) — a pressure group despised by IRA sympathizers — which aided her effort to embarrass the Sinn Fein-IRA leadership into leaving her son alone.

A news conference she gave drew heavy interest from British and Irish media.

Her appeal caught the attention of Amnesty International, which recently took a tougher stance against paramilitary intimidation in Northern Ireland.

Unmoved, the IRA reiterated that Danny Morris is to be "expelled from Ireland for the period up to July 31, 1992."

Masked men first ordered Danny Morris "put out" in August after police arrested him for driving recklessly in a stolen car.

By his own account, Morris had been "joyriding" for months.

Poll: marital fidelity not campaign issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans don't believe Democratic presidential contender Bill Clinton's marital fidelity should be an issue in the campaign and want the media to drop the matter, according to an ABC News poll.

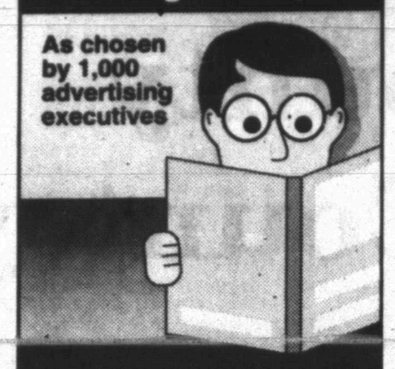

Eighty percent of 790 adults in the nationwide random survey released late Monday believed that Clinton should remain in the race whether or not he had an extramarital affair.

Fewer than 10 percent said they were significantly less likely to vote for Clinton as a result of the allegation, the poll showed.

The television network released its poll after Clinton and Flowers earlier in the day accused each other of lying about the matter.

Clinton denies having had a relationship with Gennifer Flowers, a singer and Arkansas state employee who made the accusations in a paid interview with the Star tabloid and in a news conference on Monday.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss vaginal yeast infections in your column. I've been fighting one for over six months with antibiotic cream, estrogen cream and Betadine suppositories to no avail.

DEAR READER: Like other surfaces in and on the body, the vaginal canal contains yeasts and bacteria. Ordinarily, these microorganisms are in a delicate balance: The yeasts inhibit bacterial overgrowth and vice-versa.

However, when the yeast/bacteria balance is upset, infection appears, causing a malodorous vaginal discharge, burning, swelling and pain.

There are many reasons for yeast infections, which are more common in diabetics and in women who must take antibiotics, for unrelated conditions. Antibiotics kill bacteria, not yeasts, thereby leading to yeast overgrowth that can be difficult to eradicate. Here are some suggestions to treat yeast vaginitis:

- Douche daily for five days with two tablespoons of white vinegar added to a quart of warm water, or
- douche on a similiar schedule with one packet of Lactinex granules (which contain harmless bacteria) added to a quart of warm water;
- carefully wash the external genitalia with non-alkaline soap (such as pHisoDerm) once a day, or more (after exercising);
- never wear pantyhose;
- sleep without underwear;
- do not use tampons;
- eat non-cultured yogurt (to replenish bacteria);
- reduce consumption of sugars, sweets and artificial sweeteners; and
- use over-the-counter anti-yeast vaginal creams, such as Monistat.

Remember that estrogen (including birth-control pills) may make matters worse by upsetting the acidity of the vagina. Also, antibiotic creams and anti-bacterial preparations (such as Betadine) are best avoided, for obvious reasons.

If these simple suggestions don't do the trick, see a gynecologist for further testing and prescription medicine.

I should mention that in women with bacterial vaginitis, vinegar douching is helpful but, in my experience, antibiotic creams or pills are more effective.

Any woman with severe vaginitis should seek medical help for a diagnosis, which can be made by a vaginal culture or smear. There are many causes of vaginitis, so unless a woman knows absolutely (by past experience) that she has yeast vaginitis, professional guidance is mandatory.

To provide more information on your condition, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Vaginal Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Ed McMahon will be replaced on talk show

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Edd Hall will take over the off-camera announcing duties performed by Ed McMahon and Doc Severinsen when Jay Leno succeeds Johnny Carson on "The Tonight Show" in May.

Hall has done similar work for Fox Broadcasting's "Married ... With Children" and "Get a Life."

McMahon and Severinsen are retiring when Carson steps down from the show after 30 years. Severinsen will be replaced by musician Branford Marsalis.

Honoring volunteers is big government business

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Points of Light business is booming — no sign of a slump there.

The line President Bush delivered but had trouble translating in 1988 has since become the calling card and slogan for a volunteer action movement that gets a daily push from the White House.

C. Gregg Petersmeyer, the presidential assistant in charge of it, says he envisions a volunteerism movement that will gather strength and momentum comparable to the civil rights and environmental protection movements.

This movement began with government backing, and money.

Petersmeyer runs the White House Office of National Service, with a roster of 14, set up promote and reward community service with a presidential push.

There's a separate Points of Light Foundation with a $7.5 million budget to spread the message of volunteerism, telling people what works and helping them learn to do it.

A new government commission will be awarding $73 million in federal grants this spring for pilot projects to mobilize volunteer efforts to deal with social problems. Congress approved that in a compromise package that includes Democratic proposals along with features Bush sought.

Another $120 million is authorized for the next budget year, although the actual appropriation may be short of that.

That spending ran into Republican complaints before it passed Congress in 1990 with Democratic backing, but Bush's Points of Light project has become a target for Democrats campaigning against him this year. They complain the call for volunteerism is a GOP distraction from the need for government action to cope with social problems.

The president says it will take both public and private efforts to solve social problems like drug abuse, poverty, illiteracy, even loneliness among the elderly.

Six days a week, the White House issues a statement in Bush's name recognizing an organization or individual as a Point of Light for volunteer service.

James Joseph, a welder from New Orleans, was today's Point of Light — the 679th — for 20 years of helping inner city youth learn boxing, as a way of developing skills and discipline. On Monday, it was an organization called Community Friends of Addison County, in Middlebury, Vt., for volunteer work with troubled children, senior citizens and people with mental disabilities.

AP analysis

Petersmeyer's office decides who gets the daily recognition, choosing among 200 to 250 nominees a week. The designations have gone to mainstream volunteers, not social radicals, but Petersmeyer said it has nothing to do with politics. "I don't know their politics and I don't care," he said. "And that is the president's feeling, too."

But in a presidential election year, politics is always at hand.

"I've spent more than 10 years trying to be what President Bush calls one of those thousand points of light," said Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, campaigning in New Hampshire. "But a thousand points of light still leaves you a lot of darkness if you have no national vision, no national strategy to get this country moving again."

And while Bush — or, more accurately, his 1988 campaign speechwriter, coined the phrase — Petersmeyer says the idea behind the points of light programs will outlast this administration and its successors as well.

And just because its voluntary doesn't mean its free.

The new Commission on National and Community Service was authorized about $250 million for grants over three years. That's a blend of Democratic and administration programs into a compromise plan that included funds to launch the foundation. Bush named the 21 commission members to award grants, most of them through state governments.

The bill also authorized funds for the Points of Light Foundation, which went into operation early this year with $5 million from the government and about $2.4 million in corporate and other contributions.

The foundation, with a staff of about 40, is the education and information branch of the movement. It seeks, for example, to create a computerized clearing house of projects and ideas that work in one community and can help solve the same problems elsewhere.

The phrase that became the title dates from Bush's address to the 1988 Republican convention; he spoke of volunteer organizations as "a brilliant diversity spread like stars, a thousand points of light in a broad and peaceful sky."

Later, he sometimes tripped over the words, and once acknowledged that he couldn't really define them.

Not now.

Jane Fonda undergoes surgery on her knee

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jane Fonda underwent knee surgery to repair cartilage torn in a skiing accident.

The actress' surgeon, Dr. James R. Andrews, said the 54-year-old exercise guru's "excellent physical condition" should speed her recovery from Monday's operation at the Alabama Sports Medicine and Orthopaedic Center.

Miss Fonda won Oscars for best actress in 1971 for "Klute" and in 1978 for "Coming Home."

Supervisor Can't Find Teens Who Are Dedicated to Work

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "A Teen, Centerville, Iowa" just sent me through the roof! (She complained because the fast-food place where she was employed also hired women in their 50s, thus depriving teens of jobs.)

This situation is symptomatic of why the Japanese are beating our brains out.

I supervise the work of many part-time workers and usually have a choice between using teens or older people. It's been my experience that older people have more dedication to the job and are more reliable than teen-agers. It's not fair to generalize, but the teens I've known seem more interested in the money, and my guess is that they will draw more from unemployment and welfare in the future than they will from gainful employment.

BILL FROM BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BILL: I hope you're wrong. The teen from Centerville does not speak for all teen-agers. There are some hard-working, responsible teens who earn their pay and appreciate their jobs. At least that's what I'm told by the managers of McDonald's, Carl's Jr., Denny's and Big Boy's.

DEAR ABBY: What does a wife do when she gets a really ugly gift from her husband? For example, an item of clothing — does she just grin and wear it?

What if it's an expensive piece of jewelry that is especially hideous? I don't want to hurt his feelings, but I hate to see him spend his hard-earned money on something I have to force myself to wear just to please him. Also, it's very difficult for me to pretend I'm thrilled with something when I'm not. What do other women do? Please help me, as my birthday is coming up soon.

GRINNING AND WEARING IT

DEAR GRINNING: Level with your husband and offer to go along and "help" him select the gift! (This will eliminate the agonizing and speculating most men go through when shopping for a gift for the wife or girlfriend.)

DEAR ABBY: I was so glad to see that letter in your column from "A Touchy Ticket Taker." I've been a ticket taker for 16 years — I'm a flight attendant, and you wouldn't believe how many people hold their tickets in their mouths, then hand them over to me! It's been a major pet peeve of mine for years. I was so glad to see it in print. Perhaps it will do some good, and the offenders will smarten up.

And while I'm on the subject of passing around germs, please, people, don't hand me your chewed-up apple cores, used Kleenex or disposable diapers. Yuk! Reach into your seat pocket, put them into an airsick bag, then I will be happy to dispose of them for you.

It's hard enough trying to stay healthy when you work in an enclosed environment with recirculated air and 135 people sneezing, coughing and heaven only knows what else!

Please, use some common sense. I don't want any more of your germs!
