Diplomats redouble efforts to avert ground war in gulf

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Diplomatic efforts redoubled today in a bid to avert a land war, but the pace of combat north of the Saudi border also accelerated. In one clash, U.S. forces said they smashed an Iraqi bunker complex and captured hundreds of prisoners of war.

Italy, which is part of the allied coalition confronting Iraq, endorsed a Soviet peace proposal today and disclosed some of its details.

The Soviets asked that the plan remain private until Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz delivered his government's response. President Bush has indicated the Soviet plan is unacceptable.

While the diplomatic wheels spun, preparations for a major ground offensive continued with some of the heaviest border skirmishes of the Gulf War.

In one such clash this morning, one American soldier was killed and seven wounded, according to a U.S. command spokesman in Riyadh, Marine Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal. U.S. forces took seven Iraqi prisoners in that fight, Neal said.

Elsewhere north of the Saudi border, Neal said, U.S. helicopters attacked an Iraqi bunker complex at about 2 p.m. today, destroying 13 to 15 bunkers and capturing 450 to 500 prisoners of war. Neal said huge Chinook transport helicopters were sent in to pick up the POWs. Neal refused to say where either ground engagement occurred. He said he had no information on Iraqi casualties.

Iraq fired one Scud missile into Israel on Tuesday night, but Israeli officials said it was intercepted by Patriot missiles and destroyed. Neal said a U.S. F-15 fighter jet happened to be flying above the launch site at the time, and the pilot reported seeing the Scud blast through the clouds.

Later, Neal said, B-52 bombers were sent to attack the site and crew members reported seeing a large secondary explosion, indicating they hit one or more missiles.

The allied air war also went on without letup. Baghdad was bombed for more than four hours beginning Tuesday night and lasting into the morning.

"Panicked Baghdad residents rushed to the streets to escape to the nearby villages by car, cart or on foot," said a spokesman for the News Agency reported. It was the capital's second straight night of heavy bombing.

An Iraqi military communique carried by the Iraqi News Agency at midday today reported scores of allied air strikes on military and civilian targets over the previous 24 hours. It gave few details, but said a mosque and two schools were hit.

Aziz had been expected to return to Moscow late today after consulting with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Baghdad on the peace plan Mikhail S. Gorbachev proposed in a Kremlin meeting on Monday. Soviet officials later said they didn't expect Aziz today, and added that he didn't necessarily have to come at all.

"Another visit of an Iraqi representative need not necessarily take place for Iraq to inform the Soviet Union about its response," Foreign Ministry spokesman Vitaly Churkin told reporters.

Valentin Falin, the head of the Communist Party's international department and former ambassador to West Germany, told reporters the Soviets were "waiting hour to hour" for a reply from Saddam.

Aziz, who returned to Baghdad on Tuesday, has been traveling by car between Iraq and Iran, and by plane between Iran and Moscow. He hasn't flown in Iraq because the allies have refused to guarantee him safe passage.

A senior Italian official said the plan calls for Iraq to begin withdrawing a day after a ceasefire goes into effect. It also pledges Iraqi troops would not be attacked while leaving Kuwait, said the official, Nino Cristofori, a top aide to Italy's prime minister.

The proposal has been widely reported to include a guarantee of

Moss lake position up in air

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

After the resignation of its caretaker, concessionaire and "jack-of-all-trades," Moss Creek Lake may undergo some changes.

After more than 11 years total in two stints as lake operator, Ron Robey has announced his resignation. An area native, Robey said he plans to spend time caring for an ill family member.

Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said today that the lake caretaker job might be made temporary and part time until needed structural improvements can be completed.

"There are some serious structural problems (with lake facilities), and we're trying to make some improvements out there," Decell explained. "I plan to propose (to the Parks and Recreation Board) that we have someone go out there from daylight to dark, not full-time, to take care of things for a while."

The cut, Decell said, "would allow us to take some of (the funds used for) salary and benefits that we provide to the full-time custodian to be diverted to improvements."

The custodian is responsible for maintaining the lake facilities, including repairs. Decell said the currently-used house and store building has become a "maintenance nightmare."

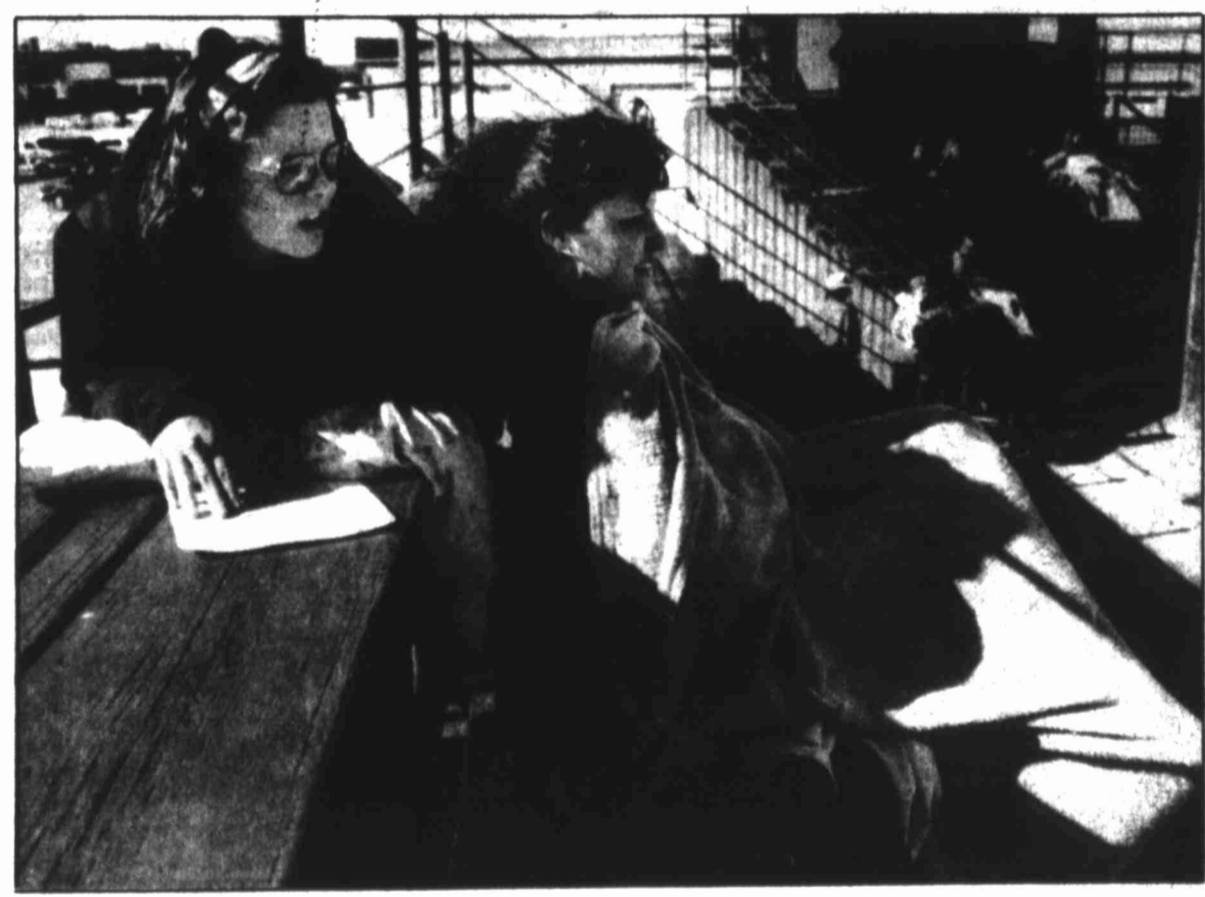

"If we really want (the lake) to have some utility, we've got to find alternate means of funding," Decell said, noting the ever-increasing strain that basic needs have placed on the city budget.

Robey said in his estimation, the job would require the efforts of a family. Decell agreed, saying he would consider a couple or family, but added that the job's status is still uncertain.

Personnel Director Emma Bogard said the office has received 24 applications. Decell said he would screen applications after the closing date, Feb. 28.

"We're going to have to work out some kind of temporary (caretaker) as it is," Decell said.

War-torn families share fears, concerns

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Families with sons, daughters, husbands and wives in the gulf are finding comfort in sharing their fears and concerns with others. From 60 to 100 people have been meeting weekly to encourage each other and to share information.

The support group, which meets every Tuesday at the First Methodist Church, is coordinated by social workers Dan Wise and John Webb. Wise is a social worker with Scenic Mountain Medical Center, and Webb is in charge of social work for the V.A. Medical Center.

As all the members seat themselves in a large circle, Wise and Webb pass out hot coffee and cookies. People who were strangers a few weeks ago pass the time with smiles, greetings and small talk before the session begins.

Wise always makes it a point to keep up with details of the lives of others in the group. He will ask if anyone has gotten a letter or phone call since the last meeting. People readily share this information, and group members listen carefully, gleaming comfort from the news that someone else's loved one is unharmed and doing well.

Besides the camaraderie, the meeting also provides a forum for expressing fears, complaints and problems in dealing with the military. The sponsors and weekly guest speakers provide a useful, accessible knowledge base to help solve these problems. Generally, if speakers cannot answer a question they know someone who can.

Tuesday's guest speaker was Dr.

Darrell Powell. A retired Army physician, Powell gave an in-depth look at the medical system set in place to care for the troops. He explained the varying echelons of care for the wounded, beginning with the company corpsman and including air evacuation, treatment of minor wounds and the two enormous Navy hospital ships in the gulf. If necessary, explained Powell, casualties can receive immediate life-saving measures in the field, and can be in an emergency surgical suite within one hour of injury.

Also speaking at the meeting was Sarah Higgins, of Operation Spirit Lift. Higgins explained that Operation Spirit Lift is a group of local people putting together a tape of humor, music and readings to be sent to the troops in the war.

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County commissioners will be asked again to rescind a host agreement for a proposed hazardous waste disposal facility in the wake of the governor's call for a two-year moratorium on permits.

Mitchell County Judge Ray Mayo, who took office last month, said he plans to ask the commissioners to reconsider the agreement. The moratorium is to allow for proposed changes in state laws to take affect and to consider other alternatives to waste problems, such as source reduction.

Commissioners could not be reached for comments. Three of the commissioners signed the agreement in March and a request in October to rescind the agreement failed. But one commissioner running for reelection said he will

Rapper owes fine to Dallas County

DALLAS (AP) — Rapper Vanilla Ice will present a Grammy to the Best Pop Female Artist on the stage in New York City tonight while Dallas police would like to present the performer with an arrest warrant.

Dallas police say Ice, 20 and known as Robby VanWinkle of Dallas, served a one-year probation term for a Class A misdemeanor assault charge. But he still owes a $516.50 fine on the August 1988 conviction. A warrant was issued for his arrest Feb. 7.

Officers said VanWinkle sprayed a chemical into the eyes of Richard Mathers, 18, then beat him over the head and chased him and another teen-age boy across the parking lot of a Dallas grocery store.

A court official said the rapper cannot be arrested outside Texas. But the official said he will be in San Antonio on Thursday, in Houston on Saturday and in Austin on Sunday.

Byron Mino, the star's former stepfather, said the family has been "overwhelmed" by his sudden success. "Some details from the past have been overlooked," he said.

Texas trucker hurt in shootout

JESSUP, Md. (AP) — The condition of a Texas trucker who was wounded during a shooting that killed another trucker is improving, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

William Wilson, 38, of Pasadena, Texas, was in fair condition early today at the University of Maryland Shock Trauma Center in Baltimore with a gunshot wound to the chest. He had been listed in critical condition Tuesday night.

The Monday night's shooting stemmed from a dispute between a third truck driver and his girlfriend at a crowded bar at a truck stop near Interstate 95.

The man tried to force the woman to leave the lounge, and the two truckers intervened, police said Tuesday.

Tommy Ray Robinson, 42, of Fort Collins, Colo., was arrested after his truck overturned on a ramp of Interstate 95 as he fled, police said. He has been charged with first-degree murder, attempted murder, kidnapping and handgun charges, Howard County police said. He appeared before a court commissioner Tuesday morning and was being held without bail at the county jail. A bond hearing was scheduled for this morning in District court.

City refusing to pay massage bill

AUSTIN (AP) — For a city that spends nearly a billion dollars a year, $2,790 doesn't sound like a great deal of money.

But the city says they won't pay the itemized bill submitted by three massage parlors for 27 nude massages given to under Austin police officers in 1988 and 1989.

Police Chief Jim Everett said Tuesday an investigation of prostitution allegations prompted the massage parlor visits. He says the visits ended in arrests and, therefore, the city doesn't owe anything.

Laird Palmer, a lawyer who represents Buscho Inc., owner of the three parlors, disagrees.

"In each case, an officer would pay for a massage, get a massage, and then, after he arrested the employee, he would take the money back," Palmer said. "Our position is that the officer asked for a massage and got a massage, so he owes us."

The $2,790 bill submitted by James Buschman of Buscho Inc. lists each massage and charges ranging from $60 to $130.

Lottery supporters counting votes as deadline approaches

AUSTIN (AP) — Forces battling over a state lottery proposal are counting noses and watching the clock as next week's deadline for action nears.

The House probably will wait until next week to vote on the lottery, Speaker Gib Lewis said Tuesday, while voicing doubts that the numbers game could raise as much money for the state as quickly as its supporters contend.

Lawmakers must complete action on the proposed constitutional amendment by March 1 if the lottery question is to be put before voters on the May 4 election ballot.

Gov. Ann Richards repeatedly has urged lawmakers to put lottery on that ballot so the state could begin making money off the games by January 1992 if voters approve.

"Lottery will probably be on the calendar sometime next week," Lewis said Tuesday, adding that lottery backers still haven't assured him they have lined up the needed 100 votes to approve the proposal.

"I think it's picking up maybe a little bit. You've still got, maybe, 10 or 15 people that don't know for sure how they are going to vote at this time," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Because starting a lottery requires a constitutional amendment, two-thirds of the 150-member House and 31-member Senate must approve putting the question on the ballot.

Lottery opponents have said they believe more than 51 House members will vote against the proposal, thus killing it.

Lewis said he wasn't worried that a delay in taking the issue before the full House would keep the Legislature from meeting the March 1 ballot deadline set by the secretary of state.

He said two-thirds of senators are ready to approve a lottery if the House agrees first.

"The Senate is in a position where they can move on it a lot quicker than we can. I think they'll probably be able to act on it very quickly," Lewis said.

At the same time, Lewis questioned estimates that a Texas lottery would generate more than $700 million for the state Treasury during 1992-93 if it starts operating next January.

"I think it's going to be a while before you ever get to that level," the speaker said. "I think you're talking about two or three years."

Lottery opponents also are questioning why the Legislature now is considering only a constitutional amendment to legalize lottery — not a specific bill spelling out how such games would be operated and how the money would be used.

"No one in the public knows what they're being asked to vote on," said David Hudson, a former House member battling the lottery for the Baptist Christian Life Commission.

Defense attempts to discredit informant

HOUSTON (AP) — A defense lawyer for a woman who is accused of trying to hire a hit man to help get her daughter out of a cheerleading squad is expected to attempt to discredit the informant who alerted police to the alleged plot.

Wanda Webb Holloway, 36, of Channelview, was indicted by a Harris County grand jury Tuesday on a charge accusing her of offering a set of $1,500 diamond earrings as a "down payment" to kill Verna Heath. Officers allege another $1,000 would have been paid after Mrs. Heath was killed.

Mrs. Holloway faces up to life in prison if she is convicted.

Authorities say Mrs. Holloway tried extraordinary ways over a five-year period to get her daughter, Shanna Harper, on the cheerleading squad but the girl had lost out to Amber Heath, 13, daughter of the intended victim.

A probable-cause affidavit filed in court records says that county narcotics agent George Helton was alerted to the plot by Holloway's former brother-in-law, Terry Lynn Harper, described as "a credible person with no known criminal history."

But the Houston Chronicle reported today that county records show that Harper has a criminal record dating back to 1981 when he was granted probation for delivery of methaqualone.

The charges say Holloway hoped that by getting Mrs. Heath killed, Amber Heath might be so overcome with grief at her mother's death that she'd drop out of cheerleader competition.

Pregnant women are drinking less

CHICAGO (AP) — The drinking rate among pregnant women has declined overall, but not significantly for mothers-to-be who are young, less educated or who smoke, researchers say.

Interviews with 1,712 pregnant women in 21 states showed that overall, alcohol consumption fell from 32 percent to 20 percent between 1985 and 1988, according to a report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Of all subgroups, only three did not show a statistically significant decline in alcohol use during pregnancy: those aged 18 to 24 years, those with a high school education or less, and those who smoked."

Among pregnant women ages 18 to 24, the drinking rate was 23 percent in 1985, compared with 22 percent in 1988. The rate also declined from 23 percent to 22 percent among women with less than a high school education, while it fell from 42 percent to 37 percent among smokers.

The researchers said the pregnant women most likely to drink were smokers, those who were unmarried and those ages 35 to 45; however significant declines were posted in the latter two groups.

The study was conducted by researchers led by Dr. Mary Serdula from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

PHILADELPHIA — An unhappy Nicole Cook, 4, is held by her mother Theresa, right, as Ellen DiFlorio, R.N., left, gives her a measles vaccination at a district health center in Philadelphia Tuesday. As of Tuesday, hundreds of children were diagnosed with measles and five children had lost their lives in the epidemic.

Airlines seeking federal bailout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline executives are seeking an infusion of government cash to help carriers cope with the high fuel prices and sharply reduced passenger traffic brought about by war and recession.

Continental Airlines President Hollis A. Harris, whose company has filed for bankruptcy protection, said Tuesday that the government should use the revenue generated by the 10 percent federal passenger ticket tax to bail the industry out of its financial squeeze.

Revenue from the tax is now earmarked for airport expansion and improvement and reduction of the federal budget deficit.

Harris, contending that many airlines could fail unless "extraordinary relief for an extraordinary situation is found," said that over a 12-month period, ticket tax collections could bring in $4 billion to offset the present gap between operating expenses and revenue.

Harris, in a speech to the International Aviation Club here, said the money would be a loan to be paid back "with interest after a reasonable period of time set by Congress."

Hispanic woman wins board seat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A city councilwoman won a seat on the county Board of Supervisors in a special election ordered to undo systematic discrimination against 3 million Hispanics.

The election Tuesday of Gloria Molina to the five-member, previously all-white board gives the 42-year-old liberal Democrat one of the most visible Hispanic leadership positions in the country.

The election was ordered by U.S. District Judge David V. Kennedy after he ruled in June that supervisors drew district lines to dilute Hispanic voting strength and thereby preserve their incumbencies.

Yeltsin accused of seeking more power

MOSCOW (AP) — Fellow lawmakers accused Russian President Boris Yeltsin today of declaring a civil war and seeking more power for himself by calling for Mikhail Gorbachev's resignation.

But the official Tass news agency said Supreme Soviet Chairman Anatoly Lukyanov did not allow everyone to speak, including deputies who planned to defend Yeltsin.

Yeltsin's appeal in a nationally televised interview Tuesday was the first time he publicly called for the Soviet president to step down. He said Gorbachev was sacrificing reform to gain personal power and establish a dictatorship.

"Such a statement as Boris Nikolayevich made yesterday is practically an announcement of a civil war," said Anatoly Chekhoyev, a member of the hard-line parliamentary group Soyuz. He repeated the group's demand that Gorbachev impose a nationwide state of emergency to curb unrest.

Erkin Yusupov, a deputy from the Central Asian republic of Uzbekistan, called Yeltsin's call "a blatant manifestation of sick ambitions and claims to power."

Neither Yeltsin nor Gorbachev attended today's legislative session. The Supreme Soviet decided to draft a formal response to Yeltsin's remarks later today.

Other harsh reaction came from the main Communist Party newspaper. Pravda accused Yeltsin in a front-page editorial of worsening the Soviet Union's political crisis by calling for Gorbachev's resignation.

Yeltsin — who leads the largest, richest and most populous republic — has frequently clashed with Gorbachev over the pace and method of political and economic reform.

Yeltsin, ousted from Gorbachev's Politburo in 1988, urges a faster transition to a market economy and the transfer of more power from the central government to the 15 republics.

"I warned in 1987 that Gorbachev has in his character a tendency to absolute personal power," Yeltsin said in his interview Tuesday. "He has done all that and has led the country to a dictatorship, giving it a pretty name: presidential rule."

Aid to Soviet Union may be freed

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The European Community is considering freeing more than $1.5 billion in blocked aid to the Soviet Union following assurances Moscow seeks a negotiated settlement with the Baltic republics, officials said.

"We are looking at a de-escalation, an easing" of tensions with the Kremlin, Belgian Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens said Tuesday.

Soviet military action against Latvia and Lithuania in January left 22 people dead, prompting the EC ministers last month to freeze talks on a technical aid program worth about $540 million.

The European Parliament — the EC's legislative body — froze $1 billion in food aid to the Soviet Union.

In Strasbourg, France the budget committee of the European Parliament voted to release the suspended Soviet food aid program.

The 12 EC foreign ministers will review the situation in the Baltics during a March 4 meeting, before agreeing to restore normal relations. Talks on technical aid could resume following the meeting.

Luxembourg Foreign Minister Jacques Poos said the ministers had asked the EC's executive commission to review the status of aid to the Kremlin.

El Salvador reaches crossroads

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's 12-year-old civil war has lost the limelight to the far-off conflict in the Persian Gulf, but in recent weeks the country has quietly reached a critical point of reckoning.

On March 10, voters will choose 84 legislators for the single-chamber parliament and mayors for the 262 municipalities, and, unlike previous elections, rebel leaders have said they won't call for a boycott.

Government and guerrilla peace negotiators meeting secretly, meanwhile, are reported closer than ever to a cease-fire formula. Another three-day round began Tuesday in San Jose, Costa Rica.

But there are still fears the tentative steps toward democracy may be too few to prevent a slide back to the terror that Salvadorans hoped was a thing of the past.

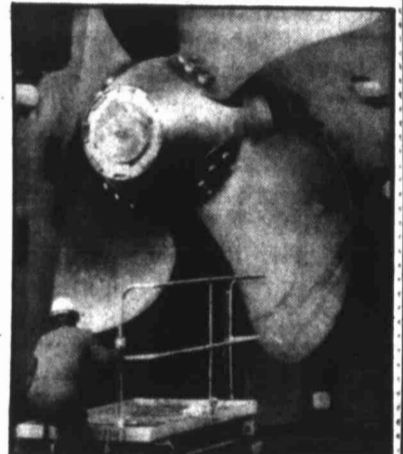

One night a month ago, masked uniformed men pounded on the doors of six bamboo-and-mud houses in El Zapote, a hamlet six miles north of the capital. They ransacked the homes and used bayonets to stab to death 12 adults, according to children who survived the attack.

Cutbacks motivate warning strikes

ROSTOCK, Germany (AP) — Workers today staged warning strikes in what once was East Germany's vibrant shipbuilding region, as officials debated whether to shut down money-losing companies.

Neptun already has cut 1,000 of its 6,300 workers. With 28,000 shipbuilding and related jobs likely to be cut in former East Germany, workers in northern cities of the region staged warning strikes today to demand better treatment.

Germany's ZDF television network said the strikes hit all the key shipbuilding centers, including Schwerin, Rostock and Stralsund.

Sentences commuted for women who attacked abusers

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The governor commuted the prison terms of eight women sentenced for killing or assaulting abusive men, allowing some to be released as early as today.

Gov. William Donald Schaefer on Tuesday ordered the releases, saying he was convinced the women acted in self-defense.

All the women should be free by Friday, prison officials said. The eight women, all but one convicted of killing her abuser, are serving from three years to life on convictions ranging from battery to first-degree murder.

Last month, Schaefer visited several of 25 inmates serving time at the women's prison in Jessup for killing husbands or companions who repeatedly abused them.

"Some of these stories are hard to believe, ... difficult, horrible stories," Schaefer said Tuesday. "It's not an easy decision (to commute prison sentences). We gave a lot of thought to it. We think that after a thorough review, it's the right thing to do, and they have served enough time."

"The one that was thrown into a refrigerator and was being used as an exhibit for her husband, or boyfriend, to batter her ... to show that he was a man, I don't think she had any choice. She would have been dead. She would have been dead."

Gov. Richard Celeste of Ohio granted clemency to 26 women just before he left office Jan. 14. All had been convicted of killing or assaulting husbands or companions.

Schaefer's decision was hailed by U.S. Rep. Connie Morella, R-Md., who had urged the governor to visit the women in prison.

Morella has led a drive in Congress to strengthen laws against domestic violence.

Schaefer administration officials said the eight inmates fit the psychological pattern known as "battered spouse syndrome," in which a woman believes she cannot leave her mate but will be killed if she remains.

The Schaefer administration began lobbying on Tuesday for legislation to permit evidence of the syndrome to be raised in Maryland courts.

The Maryland legislature repeatedly has rejected proposals to allow abuse as a defense.

Herald opinion

Agency should strike balance

The Environmental Protection Agency is trying to set some priorities for itself because EPA administrator William Reilly rightly thinks that that would be better than lurching from one crisis to another, as in the past. The problem is that the issues Reilly wants to pursue aren't necessarily the ones that the public and Congress think are most important.

Reilly told a Senate committee the other day that his own scientific advisers think that EPA's top priority ought to be global warming, a controversial theory that Reilly has endorsed far more vigorously than either the White House or the scientific evidence would support.

Public opinion surveys, however, reveal that most people ascribe little urgency to the problem of global warming. They are more concerned with the risk of oil spills, hazardous wastes, radiation leakage and poisoned groundwater — all problems that Reilly's advisers assign the lowest priority of all.

It's easy to understand the disparity. Many of the pollution problems that worry the public are recurrent, inevitable and often dismissed by theoretical scientists as the sort of thing that should be solved by engineers. Certainly they don't lend themselves to the kind of speculative debate — or the lucrative research grants and book contracts — that global warming does.

Then, too, the way Reilly posed the question may have skewed the results. He didn't ask his advisers to rank problems on the basis of how much damage they actually do or even whether they are likely to occur at all. Instead, the panel was told to set priorities on the basis of how many people and how broad a geographic area might theoretically be affected. Those criteria virtually guaranteed that global warming, as the most sweeping doomsday scenario around at the moment, would head the list.

But while the United States has an important role to play in reducing the kind of pollution on which the global warming theory has been postulated, Reilly's approach makes poor public policy. It would divert EPA's attention from the domestic environmental issues that the agency was created to address and where it has considerable regulatory authority. And it would focus the agency's efforts instead on an international front in which it has no real powers other than those of persuasion.

Worse, Reilly's priorities invite the kind of exaggeration that has often marred the advocacy of global warming, nuclear winter and other doomsday theories in the past. Governing by catastrophe scenarios may be no better a guide than running from crisis to crisis, especially if it means that some of the immediate problems of disease, contamination and public safety get short shrift. The trick is to strike a balance.

Getting citizen input to our elected officials

By BILL AYRES
City Editor

I don't know about everyone else, but I am getting a little tired of our elected officials.

True, we elected them and we can vote against them. But what do we do about them while they are in office?

I'm tired of these people taking it upon themselves to act as if everything they do will be accepted by those they represent.

I'm talking about state and federal officials in particular.

When this country was founded, it was small enough to allow communication between elected officials and their constituents. As the country has grown so have the responsibilities facing those who represent us.

In defense of those officials, some make trips back to their districts once or twice a year to stay in touch.

So, how do we solve this problem of communication?

During his second term, former President Richard Nixon was experiencing a considerable amount of trouble with Congress. He found himself fighting for support on programs and legislation.

To solve the problem, he recommended that Bell Telephone establish a national phone number. This would be toll-free to the public and tied to a computer system.

It was Nixon's plan to go before the nation, present his case and then have the public dial one number for "yes" or the other for "no." Seemed like a workable idea.

The only problem was the phone company was unable to handle the traffic such a system would create. The technology wasn't up to the task.

That was 20 years ago. But the technology still hasn't reached a point to handle such a task. One of the major sponsors of the Super Bowl had planned to have a phone contest using three numbers. Millions were spent promoting the event, only to have it canceled at the last minute because the phone company could not handle it.

So, what can we do? Why not assign each state a couple of phone numbers? These would be 1-900 numbers, with the revenue received from each call used to help pay for the service. These numbers could be used by either the federal or state legislators. In the more populous states, like Texas, more numbers would have to be assigned.

For what it's worth

So, now we have a link between the voters and those we voted for. If there is any doubt about the feelings of the nation, it would be simple to come before the public and ask their opinion.

Of course, this is an oversimplification. A project of this size would require considerable amounts of money and coordination.

But think of the possibilities. Our legislators in Austin have been considering a state income tax. Using a system like the one described, the legislature could publicize the advantages and disadvantages of proposed legislation and then await public input.

If the majority of calls indicated disapproval, then there would be no reason to progress with the issue. Of course, there would have to be a good response from the public to have an accurate indicator.

If the last few elections are any indication, even this system would have its shortcomings. The public would have to want to be involved; otherwise those few taking the time to call would be speaking for the rest.

Sounds vaguely familiar. We have the same problem getting voters to go to the polls.

Here we are, a nation built on technological achievement that can't devise a high tech system, besides elections, to put the voice of the people back into government. But wouldn't it be nice — democracy in action?

And that's for what it's worth!

Making an error in parking

I drove up to the Orlando airport to pick up a passenger. I was in my new car I had driven down from Atlanta.

My passenger wasn't at the curbside. I parked my new car and went inside to look for her. "The plane's late," the man at Delta said.

So I went back out to the curb to sit in my car and wait. I had been gone for five minutes, tops.

Two Orlando policemen and two airport security guards and one guy in a tow truck were there to greet me.

"This your car?" one of the policemen asked me.

I said it was.

"Can't you read?" he asked.

"University of Georgia, ABJ," I answered.

"I said, 'Can't you read?'" the policeman asked again.

Obviously I was dealing with a Florida man here. But he had a badge and a gun, so I didn't push it.

The policeman went on, "The sign says you can't leave your car unattended. We were about to have you towed away."

The other policeman and the two security guards were standing behind my new car.

"Where's your tag?" the other policeman asked me.

"I just got the car yesterday," I said, "and drove it down from Atlanta. I don't have a tag yet."

He asked for my driver's license and proof I had just bought the car yesterday. The driver's license, I had. The proof, I couldn't find amongst all the documents in the glove compartment of my new car.

"You're in violation of Florida law," the second policeman said. "I'm going to run a check on you."

There I stood.

"Why are you wearing those sunglasses?" one of the airport security people asked me. "It's eight o'clock at night. Most people don't wear their sunglasses at night."

I explained I had driven from the golf course — then it hit me. "This got to do with the war?" I asked.

"We're under strict orders," said the security person. "You can't be too careful at an airport in these times."

I had heard about it on Orlando television. Because of Disney World and all those tourists baits, the area had been deemed a possible target for terrorists in the wake of the war with Iraq.

"My God," I said to the security person, "you don't think I'm a terrorist, do you?"

He squinted at me and didn't answer. "Can I call a lawyer?" I asked next.

Before he could answer the policeman running the check came back.

"What we could do," he said, "is impound your car for no proof of ownership and no tag and give you a citation. But we're not going to do that. You check out. I'm giving you a traffic ticket and you'd better get a tag on that thing. You copy?"

"I do," I said, "and I promise you nobody from the University of Georgia is planning any terrorist acts in Florida until next year's game."

The policeman looked at me funny. The airport security man was still squinting. I took off my glasses, got back in my new car and drove away. A free man again. My passenger could take a cab.

Praise Allah and Herschel Walker.

Making unreasonable searches

WASHINGTON — Terence Bostick was just sitting in the back of a Greyhound bus, taking it easy, minding his own business, and now he's about to have his name engraved in the annals of the U.S. Supreme Court. Trouble is, according to the cops, Bostick's business was cocaine.

This is another in a series of Fourth Amendment cases that have bedeviled the court in recent years. The Fourth protects us from "unreasonable" searches and seizures. The recurring problem is to decide which searches are reasonable, and which searches are unreasonable, for a search that seems reasonable to the cops may seem unreasonable to a judge. And the judge has the last word on whether evidence may be admitted or must be excluded.

The facts were not in dispute. On Aug. 27, 1985, Officers Joseph Nutt and Steven Rubino were on narcotics duty for the Broward County (Fla.) sheriff's office. They were in plain clothes, though they were wearing windbreakers bearing the patch insignia of the sheriff's office. Their sidearms were not visible. They were working the bus station in Fort Lauderdale. They boarded a bus that was about to depart and noticed a man on the very back row, lying on a red bag.

Nutt made casual conversation and then identified himself as a police officer. He asked the passenger if he could see his ticket and some identification. Bostick complied. Nutt then asked if the red bag were his. Bostick nodded. Would he consent to having the bag searched?

"OK, go ahead," said Bostick. Nutt searched the bag. It was clean. Meanwhile, Rubino had noticed a blue bag on an overhead rack above Bostick's seat. Was this also his? Again, the defendant nodded. Could it be searched? Again, "OK, go ahead." The blue bag contained a quantity of cocaine. The officers arrested Bostick and read him his Miranda rights.

In the familiar course of events, Bostick was indicted and brought on for trial. The defense moved to exclude the seized cocaine on the ground that the officers' search was an "unreasonable" search in violation of the Fourth Amendment. The trial court, relying on what is known as the Mendenhall case, found no violation. Bostick had consented voluntarily to the search. But Florida's Supreme Court reversed the ruling and the state appealed. The case will be argued before the U.S. Supreme Court on Feb. 26.

What about it? The Mendenhall case of 1960 is as weak as Hezekiah's reed. It involved a woman, Sylvia Mendenhall, who was arrested at Detroit's airport by two narcotics agents. She fitted their "drug courier profile." After asking to see her ticket and identification, the officers asked if she would consent to a body search. They told her she was free to refuse. Nevertheless she agreed. A woman agent found contraband in Mendenhall's underclothes.

Was the search unreasonable? The case went to the high court. It was not the court's finest hour. Five justices could not be found to agree on a majority opinion, but the five did agree that the strip search, under the totality of circumstances, did not violate the Constitution. Four justices sharply dissented.

Mendenhall was decided almost 11 years ago. In the intervening years, both state and federal courts around the country have viewed similar cases and gone off in all directions. There is a trend, albeit an uncertain trend, to hold that whenever a police officer stops a citizen and begins to ask questions, the citizen is not truly free to refuse to answer and to go on his way. Under this theory, the mere act of questioning is a seizure.

For my own part, I do not see how law enforcement could function if the trend is carried to an extreme. All the same, in the Bostick case, I believe the two officers pushed their luck. On the record, they had no probable cause to believe Bostick was carrying contraband. No informant had fingered him. They had nothing to go on, not even a "drug courier profile." Bostick was just a passenger on the bus to Atlanta, minding his own business.

To say that his consent was "willing" and "voluntary" is to turn words to rubber bands. I would not stretch them so far. True, there was no coercion, no guns displayed, no raised voices, no threat of what might happen to Bostick if he refused. But there was an implied threat of detention, and the implication worked. "OK, go ahead." Some things do not have to be spoken in order to be heard.

Giving support to J&D Garage

To the editor:

A few months ago I signed a petition for J&D Garage to stay in business at their present location, because the city is planning on closing them. I personally took a petition to friends and neighbors to sign. We have several hundred signatures on these petitions. I don't understand why the city is trying to close a good established business which has been in business at this location since 1965 or 1966, when they are trying to generate new businesses to come to Big Spring.

I know a permit was issued for the business to be built and it has always been my understanding that they fell under the grandfather clause, because he has done work for me since 1966. It seems that the city is trying to hide what is going on. I don't feel they should try to close a business that has been established for so long. J&D Garage is probably more legal than most businesses in this town. I know two years ago the district judge took himself off the case; that should have told the city to leave the business alone. There are a lot of people behind J&D Garage and its owners and I feel the city ought to stop and look at what they are doing. I for one will back Jimmy and Dottie all the way.

This issue will not help promote new businesses to establish in Big Spring.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Landing in Bismarck with clothes for the Bahamas? No problem. Dave Miller has a deal for you.

Miller, director of Bismarck's Municipal Airport, doesn't want people coming to North Dakota unprepared for cold weather, so he's offering to lend them coats.

"A lot of people show up in North Dakota and they're just not prepared for the type of weather we have up here," said Miller, who worked at airports in Flint, Mich. and Minot, N.D., before coming to Bismarck.

"I noticed — especially at the Minot airport where they didn't have loading bridges from planes — that a lot of times passengers would hit that cold air and almost keel over backward."

Miller has asked airport police and airline personnel to watch for people who might need warm clothing.

"They can discreetly pull them aside and explain the program to them," Miller said. "They can say, 'We can see you're not quite prepared, and we have a selection of coats you can choose from. Try to bring it back if you can; if it's not convenient, that's fine.'"

Fortune rejected to keep artifact home

LONDON (AP) — A former U.S. soldier who married a Briton and settled in her homeland turned down a $5.7 million offer for a rare Saxon artifact because he does not want the treasure to leave his "beloved England."

Bernard Yarosz, 71, discovered a nearly 1,200-year-old manuscript pointer belonging to King Alfred the Great under a rock while beachcombing near Weymouth, about 120 miles southwest of London.

In December, the government ruled that Yarosz could keep the pointer. Since then, he has been deluged by offers, including one for $5.7 million from a foreign antiques collector.

Yarosz has offered the piece to the British Museum, which is having it valued before making an offer.

Yarosz and his 66-year-old wife, Peggy, have a combined U.S. and British pensions of $133 a week.

"The money does not matter. What would I do with it at this time of my life?" Yarosz said.

Mannequin keeps an eye on traffic

GOLD BEACH, Ore. (AP) — Motorists heading north on the Coastal Highway customarily slow down when they see Officer Gregory — and his radar gun — sitting in his patrol car.

But he's never pulled anyone over and never will.

Officer Gregory is a dummy. The mannequin is not meant to be a trick, but Police Chief A.C. "Andy" Anderson just wants people traveling through Gold Beach to wonder: Is it live or is it Gregory?

"People laugh," Anderson says. "I laugh. I want people to laugh."

The department got Gregory three weeks on the premise that drivers invariably slow down when they see a cop with a radar gun.

"There's a lot of tourists passing through Gold Beach, and they don't always pay a lot of attention to local speed limits," Officer Kelly Sevey said.

"If Gregory prevents one accident or one person getting hit it's worth it," said Officer Graham Clark.

Fishy money that got away

MORRISTOWN, Tenn. (AP) — Kenneth Church and Clifford Hensley went fishing and thought they caught $50,000, but it got away. And that's no fish story.

The men were fishing on Douglas Lake when they spotted $50 and $20 bills floating in front of the boat, said Detective Capt. Bill Solomon of the Greene County Sheriff's Department.

"They stopped fishing and jumped in the water and started grabbing the money," Solomon said. Two other men, who weren't identified, helped, he said.

Then Church and Hensley noticed the bills didn't have serial numbers, Solomon said. The money was counterfeit. The sheriff's department picked up the bills and turned them over to the Secret Service.

Thousands of children are healed

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Six-year-old Beteley Redi of Ethiopia has thrown his first snowball, eaten his first pizza and made his first American friends since arriving here Nov. 19.

Because of successful surgery to correct a congenital heart problem Jan. 10, Beteley should have many more years left to enjoy such experiences. He and his mother return to their country Friday.

He came to the United States because even the simplest medical care is a luxury in his homeland.

"We don't have heart surgery at all in Ethiopia," says his mother, Beyelou Shawl, who works as a nurse in the capital of Addis Ababa.

They found help through Healing the Children, a charity which matches foreign children with American doctors and nurses who donate their skills and equipment.

Healing the Children has paid air fare for Beteley and his mother to Spokane and set them up in a foster home. The group also got him on a list of patients awaiting open heart surgery at Deaconess Medical Center.

In Spokane, her son quickly tired when he played in the first snowfall he had ever seen. He ran out of breath after he tried out the amusements at a pizza outlet for kids. He couldn't keep up with playmates at school.

Wes Allen, a Spokane pediatrician who learned of Beteley's condition on a medical mission to Ethiopia last year, says the boy's heart would have continually weakened without surgery.

But after surgery, Shirl Lewis, executive director of the Spokane chapter, said "He's doing wonderfully. Everything went really well."

In its 11-year history, Healing the Children has grown from a small group in Spokane to a national network with 13 regional chapters. It has treated more than 2,000 children from 45 countries. In 1989, donations totaled $317,975.

A few success stories:

- Four-year-old Yenersy Flores of the Dominican Republic, who suffered from club feet and hands as well as bowed legs. She underwent surgery and therapy at a Spokane hospital and can walk again.

- One-year-old Zulma Gonzales of Guatemala, who underwent surgery in Boston to separate fingers which were webbed at birth. She needs further surgery to correct facial deformities.

- Catalina Layedra, 13, of Ecuador, who had a cancerous spinal tumor removed and received follow-up physical therapy in New Mexico.

Healing the Children was founded in 1979 after a Spokane couple adopted a Korean girl, Lori Jo. She had a heart problem that had been untreated because doctors in her homeland lacked proper equipment. But her immigration was held up by red tape. By the time she arrive, Lori Jo was too sick to be helped. She died within days of meeting her new family.

Cris Embleton, the girl's adoptive mother, put her grief to work. No child, she believed, should die from conditions that could be cured. She found doctors, nurses and potential foster families who agreed.

Getting medical care is easier than finding the children and bringing them to this country, says Lewis.

Teams of volunteer doctors regularly go abroad to identify children who need care. Some are treated on the spot, while those with more serious problems become candidates for trips to U.S. hospitals.

Foreign contacts help Healing the Children find chaperones to accompany children on their trips.

Air fare accounts for about 90 percent of the charity's expenses, because all hospital and foster care is donated, Lewis says.

Residents who open up their homes, often for several months, can grow attached to their guests, and many keep in touch after the children return home.

Lewis, for example, has taken in 11 children in eight years. She says, "You can't have a child in your home for a long time without loving them."

Electronic sensors used to tag babies

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Retailers use them to keep shoplifters from walking off with their merchandise. Now hospitals are using electronic security devices to protect a more precious commodity: newborns.

Amid growing concern about infant abductions, more and more babies are wearing sensor bracelets until they go home. Some hospitals even sew or tape the sensors inside diapers to prevent kidnappings, hospital officials said Tuesday.

The security systems are almost identical to those in retail stores, where merchandise is tagged with electronic sensors that trigger an alarm when passed through a sensor system installed in exit doors.

"You have something to protect, so you put a sensor on it," said Sam Shirley of the Deerfield Beach, Fla.-based Sensormatic Electronic Corp. "In this case, it's the babies you want to protect."

Shirley said his company, which makes electronic surveillance devices for retailers, nuclear-power plants and corporations, began marketing the systems to hospitals about two years ago.

St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in Hartford quietly installed an electronic surveillance system after a woman kidnapped a 16-hour-old baby from a maternity ward two years ago. The girl was found unharmed 12 hours later.

Abington Memorial Hospital in Abington, Pa., has one of the more elaborate systems. There, the infant bracelets trigger an alarm and automatically turn on a video camera that records an abduction.

"We thought it was better to be safe than sorry," said the hospital's security director, Joseph Bacile. He said the system cost $40,000.

St. Joseph's Medical Center in Wichita, Kan., normally uses sensitized wrist bracelets, but has experimented with sensitized tags that are sewn into babies' clothing, and sometimes, their diapers.

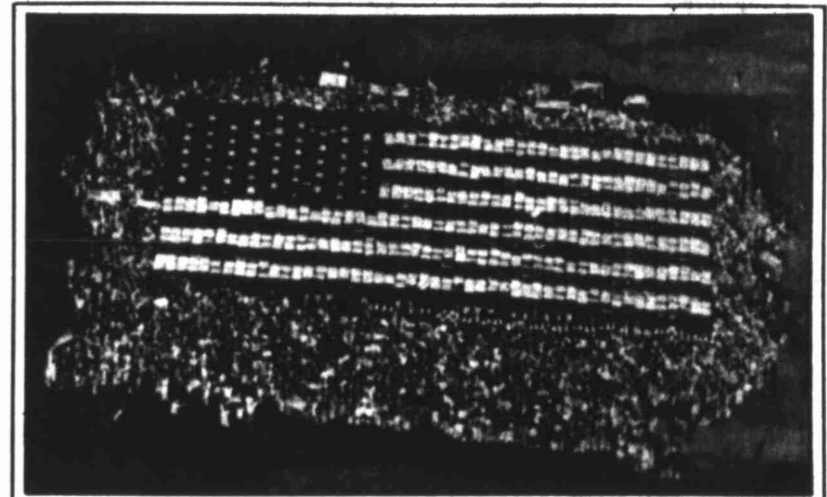

"It seemed to us like (baby kidnapping) was just increasing all the time and we wanted to make our maternity wards safer," said Kenneth J. Huelsman, director of security.

The costs of the systems vary, depending on how sophisticated a hospital wants to get. Some hospitals want a system that triggers an alarm, turns on a video camera and even locks the doors and elevators, Shirley said.

He charges about $1.50 for each bracelet, but $9,000 for every door or security gate that is wired.

Ninety-three infants were kidnapped from American hospitals from 1983 through October 1990, according to statistics compiled by the International Association for Health Care, Security and Safety, based outside Chicago.

Association President Fredrick G. Roll said the figure may be conservative because hospitals are reluctant to publicize kidnappings.

Traffic banned inside gate of Alhambra

GRANADA, Spain (AP) — Cars have been banned from the Alhambra, Spain's biggest tourist attraction, to keep out exhaust fumes that have damaged the Moorish fortress-palace's stone walls.

Cars had been able to drive up to the side of the 14th century Arab palace. Now, vehicles will get no closer than a large parking lot at the edge of the fortress.

The Alhambra is considered the greatest surviving work of Muslim architecture in Spain.

The surrender of the fortress to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella in 1492 marked the end of nearly eight centuries of Arab rule in parts of Spain.

After-school snacks any kid will enjoy

When that front door slams behind them after school, children are likely to reach for something to eat or drink — a pick-me-up before play, homework or TV. And if that "something" is healthful, so much the better. Here are three snacks made with protein-and-calcium-rich dairy foods that can be whipped up in the morning and left within a child's reach in the refrigerator or on the counter.

A Banana Chocolate Shake, which uses vanilla yogurt and milk as a base, makes a wonderful tasting pep-up drink. It's prepared in a blender, adding a cut-up banana and a bit of chocolate syrup. Refrigerate it in a covered container and give it a good "shake" before drinking.

A Tortilla Roll-up contains kids' favorite tastes: American cheese, peanut butter and honey spread on a tortilla. The tortilla is then rolled up like a jelly roll. Wrap in plastic wrap and refrigerate it up to 24 hours.

Cheddar Apple Muffins with a glass of milk is a great combination any time of day. The muffins are quickly prepared with a packaged mix, Dutch apple yogurt and cheddar cheese. Raisins are added for texture. The recipe makes 12 muffins, which will keep nicely in a covered container.

Delicious, dairy-rich after-school snacks for children are high in protein and calcium.

BANANA CHOCOLATE SHAKE

Yield: 3 2/3 cup servings

- 1 cup milk
- 1 container (8 ounces) vanilla yogurt
- 1 small or 1/2 large banana, cut in 2-inch chunks
- 1/4 cup chocolate syrup
- 1 tablespoon sugar (optional)

In the container of an electric blender combine milk, yogurt, banana, chocolate syrup and sugar if desired; blend until smooth, about 30 seconds. Serve immediately or refrigerate in a covered container; stir before serving.

Per portion: 231 mg calcium; 196 calories

AMERICAN CHEESE TORTILLA ROLL-UPS

Yield: 4 portions

- 2 (7-inch) flour tortillas, divided
- 4 tablespoons peanut butter, divided
- 4 teaspoons honey, divided
- 4 slices (2/3 ounce each) American cheese, divided
- 2 small lettuce leaves, flattened, divided

Place tortillas on a flat surface. Spread each tortilla with 2 tablespoons peanut butter; drizzle with 2 teaspoons honey; arrange cheese slices over honey; top with lettuce leaves. Roll up tightly jelly-roll style; secure with a toothpick. Cut rolls crosswise in halves then into 1-inch thick slices. Or, wrap uncut rolls in plastic wrap; refrigerate up to 24 hours; slice just before serving.

Per portion: 145 mg calcium; 224 calories

CHEDDAR APPLE MUFFINS

Yield: 12 portions

- 2 eggs
- 1 container (8 ounces) Dutch apple lowfat yogurt
- 1/4 cup firmly-packed light brown

Top-of-the-stove baked apples

TOP-OF-THE-STOVE BAKED APPLES

- One 6-ounce can unsweetened pineapple juice
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 4 small cooking apples

In a medium saucepan combine pineapple juice and cinnamon. Remove core and a strip of peel from the top of each apple. Place apples in juice mixture in saucepan. Stuff center of each apple with 1 pitted date. Bring mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 10 minutes or until apples are tender when tested with a fork. ## Add some variety to the basic potato

NEW YORK (AP) — Tired of the same old baked potato?

You can add variety to your meals by tossing riced potatoes with melted butter or margarine, serving pan-roasted potatoes with your favorite meat, or making your own french-fried potatoes.

The basic types of potatoes are: russet, round red, round white and long white. "New" potatoes are not a variety of potato; they are potatoes that have come to market directly from the field and are not placed in storage. They are generally harvested to be smaller in size with a unique skin texture, and are available all year in limited quantities.

The Potato Board has the following tips for buying, storing and cooking potatoes:

- Store potatoes in a cool, humid (but not wet) dark place that's well ventilated. The ideal temperatures are 45 degrees F to 50 degrees F.

- Don't refrigerate uncooked potatoes. Below 40 degrees F, potatoes will develop a sweet taste, the result of an accumulation of sugars in the tubers. This increased accumulation of sugar will cause the potato to darken when cooked.

- Avoid prolonged exposure to light, which causes potatoes to turn green.

- To prepare potatoes for cooking, gently scrub them with a vegetable brush or cellulose sponge to clean. Peeled potatoes turn dark if not cooked right away. To protect their whiteness, toss them with a little ascorbic acid or lemon juice. Prolonged soaking of potatoes in cold water is not recommended.

Responsibility gets very little praise

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I drive a school bus, and I wonder how many parents realize what this job is like. They expect the bus driver to pick their kids up at their door, and sometimes we have to sit and wait while they finish dressing them. We tie shoelaces, button buttons, zip up zippers and wipe noses. We also have to keep them from getting hurt when they won't stay seated.

We never get any thanks for getting the kids to school and home safely, yet we get all kinds of complaints if, for some reason, we are a few minutes late — and even if we are running a few minutes early.

Abby, I read in your column once that "the poor schoolteachers" get trinkets and coffee mugs and lots of stuff they don't know what to do with every Christmas. But drivers never get anything (not even respect). Keeping the kids quiet is a full-time job, but the biggest job is breaking up fights and making sure nobody gets hurt or loses anything on the bus. It's an awesome responsibility.

Every parent should drive a school bus for three days, then they would know what we drivers have to go through. Please print this, Abby, but don't tell where it came from. — GETS NO RESPECT

DEAR GETS NO RESPECT: Move over, Rodney Dangerfield, and make room for our unsung heroes and heroines — the school bus drivers.

Parents, circle Thanksgiving on your calendars, and add this memo: "Remember the school bus driver at Christmastime with an appropriate gift for hauling our most precious cargo, our children." Suggestions: brass knuckles, bulletproof vest, nose guard, knee guards, shin guards, teeth guards. Only kidding; pick up a good book on self-defense.

Dear Abby

next to me seems to feel that it is her right to chat with her companion whenever she feels inclined to make a remark. (The offender is usually a woman — but not always.)

One brief comment would not matter, but a fairly steady stream of chatter is hardly fair to others who come to listen. Can you suggest a way to effectively handle this rudeness? — ARIZONA CONCERTGOER

DEAR CONCERTGOER: I politely would inform the chatterer that I had paid to hear the entertainment, and would she — or he — kindly refrain from talking. And if that didn't work, I would complain to the management.

DEAR ABBY: This is from "Stuck in Irvine" — the mother with the "wedding vs. soccer" dilemma.

Thank you for answering my plea so promptly. I am happy to report that the whole family attended the wedding, and we all had a wonderful time!

My husband and I were so proud to see our son in his tuxedo, standing up as ring-bearer for the groom, and our son was elated to be a part of his uncle's wedding party. It was a beautiful ceremony.

When my letter hit the newspaper, you wouldn't believe how many people recognized the situation! Many of them said, "Now I know that Abby doesn't make up those letters!" Also, 99 percent of the people my husband and I discussed our dilemma with agreed with you and me, Abby.

Thanks for your support. Sign me... NOT STUCK ANYMORE IN IRVINE

Principal hulas, teacher kisses pig

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — The principal did a hula in a grass skirt, and one teacher puckered up to a porker. It was payback time at Valley View Elementary School.

Teachers and administrators at the school agreed to do goofy things if their students sold 300 magazine subscriptions, books, albums, cassettes or compact discs to raise funds for the PTA, said PTA treasurer Cheryl Kautz.

The students didn't let them down.

Principal Ed Elliott did the Hawaiian dance and fourth-grade teacher Danny Eaker kissed a pig at a PTA rally Wednesday.

Fifth-grader Michael Holstrun, 11, sold 13 subscriptions, the most in the school, and got to throw a cream pie in the face of Will Cavin, the physical education teacher.

The PTA raised about $1,200, which will be used to be pay for playground equipment, Elliott said.

Marine Pfc. John R. Letts, son of John R. Letts of 1001 E. 15th St., has completed recruit training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

TRTA president speaks to local club

Howard County Retired Teachers Association met in the Cactus Room at Howard College on Monday. A note of spring in the air and a festive mood added to a very interesting and excellent meeting.

Jewel Harris, president of the Texas Retired Teachers Association, brought greetings and up-to-date information from the state office.

Our leaders and people in the state office are very busy providing information and working with new legislators and other officials, on items for the new legislative session that concern retired school personnel, Harris told the group.

These items include insurance, prescribed drugs by mail order program, merging with other state retirement groups, our own retirement home, and above all increased annuity for each member, she said.

Our own investment program can provide funds for some increase. Our state legislature will need to keep its commitment to provide state funds at the same level on a continuing basis.

Growth is still a top priority item in our association, she added. We now have 210 units in operation and look forward to another increase next year.

Harris explained that all retirees need to know TRTA is the only organization that is working entirely for their benefit.

She also pointed out that our volunteer program provided local communities with over five million hours of service last year. This program provides a wonderful opportunity for retirees to render worthwhile service for the benefit of others.

Visitors to the meeting were Dora Mitchell and Wanda Rose Fox.

The state convention will be in Austin, April 8, 9, and 10, a good time to visit our capital. Officers for 91-92 will be elected at the March meeting.

Berlin Wall's fall topic of discussion

The program was presented by Mrs. Jay Cunningham. Her program topic was "Germany: When the Wall Came Down." In Oct. 1989, she took a trip to Germany to visit her daughter and family. Various weekends they went to Switzerland, France, and Austria. She was in Germany at the time the Berlin Wall came down.

After the program, refreshments were served. The next meeting will be March 5, in the home of Mrs. W. A. Moore, Jr.

Mexico reduces debt with conservation pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental group will pay off $4 million worth of Mexico's foreign debt in return for that nation's pledge to boost spending for conservation, according to an agreement signed Tuesday.

It was the first time Mexico had agreed to a so-called debt-for-nature swap, which many conservationists see as an important tool to help developing countries ease their economic burdens and devote more resources to the environment.

Mexico has more species of plants and animals than all but three other countries in the world, said Russell Mittermeier, president of Conservation International, a Washington environmental group that arranged the swap.

"Many people know Mexico as a mega-debtor, but too few realize that it is a mega-diversity country as well," said Mittermeier in a statement.

The 13 nations that Mittermeier calls "mega-diversity countries" contain 60 percent of the world's plant and animal species. They are therefore a particularly important target for conservation efforts, Mittermeier said.

Mexico's foreign debt of more than $100 billion is the world's third highest, after the United States and Brazil.

The crushing foreign debt burdens of many developing countries has made it difficult for them to devote substantial resources to conservation.

Debt-for-nature swaps have been negotiated in a variety of countries, but the arrangement with Mexico is the largest and most important of them, said Peter Seligmann, chairman of Conservation International.

"Mexico is a major international and national economy," he said. "It is very significant that a country as important as Mexico is looking at a debt-for-nature mechanism as important for addressing both economic and conservation issues."

Under the agreement, Conservation International said it will pay $2.6 million to pay off $4 million in Mexican debt, since banks have agreed to accept payment at a one-third discount.

In return, $2.6 million worth of pesos will be used to support several conservation research stations and conservation education campaigns in Mexico.

Money will also be given to the Mexican government's environmental agency and to the Institute for Natural History in Chiapas, the state containing some of Mexico's most important natural areas.

Less than 2 percent of Mexico's land is protected from development, and most of the protected area has already been damaged by logging and grazing, Conservation International said.

Conservation efforts by the Mexican government and Conservation International will focus in the Selva Lacandona rainforest in Chiapas, the last remaining tropical rain forest in North America, Mittermeier said.

More than 50 percent of the forest has already been destroyed by logging and the spread of farms. If the trend continues, the forest will be gone in 10 years, Mittermeier said.

The Bush administration has endorsed debt-for-nature swaps as part of the Latin American economic recovery plan known as the "Enterprise for the Americas" program.

House demolished

This house at 110 Goliad Street was demolished last week as part of the city's abatement project. Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said the board of adjustments and appeals was continuing its efforts to "eliminate visual pollutions in our environment." The board on Tuesday ordered abatement or demolition of 11 dilapidated city structures.

remain open-minded while Mayo and a commissioner who took office in January both said they will abide by the wishes of the majority of the people.

However, even if the host agreement is rescinded, National Waste and Energy Development, Pittsburgh, will continue with plans to build either a hazardous waste landfill, incinerator or both on about 1,200-acre eight miles west of Westbrook, a company official said. For their assistance, the county would collect fees which could amount to $1 million a year.

"It would save us money," NWED Vice President Jim Cronin said. "If the community doesn't want to support us then we'll just move forward as a commercial venture."

"This is the first I heard of that but it shouldn't affect anything that we're doing," he said of Mayo's intention.

NWED proposal, TAP members say.

TAP Chairwoman Peggy Maddox said they will attend the Commissioner's Court meeting to present evidence on why they think the agreement should be rescinded.

"We have our lawyer in place and we're still looking into the legality of the lease agreement," she said.

TAP members contend that leaks or spills from such a facility would be inevitable and the question of county liability in the event of accidents remains unanswered. Upon review of the agreement, an Environmental Protection Agency lawyer in the regional Dallas office said it would be inappropriate to comment on liability. But an attorney with the Austin law firm which drafted the document said the county would "probably not" be held liable.

TAP members also cite health hazards as a major issue. Long-term health affects cannot be determined by laboratory experiments, according to testimony from medical experts at a special state Senate-House subcommittee hearing in Sweetwater in November. The hearing, one of nine around the state, led to recommendations for changes in state hazardous waste law.

Bills filed last month by Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, calls for disclosure of experience in running hazardous waste facilities, certification by the governor's office of emergency response capabilities and reimbursement by companies to citizens who provide information to the Texas Water Commission, the agency granting hazardous waste permits.

Two more bills are expected to be filed by Carriker to require corporate disclosure and the correction of any previous violations in other states before a permit is issued, said an aide to Carriker.

A bill filed recently by Rep. Rob Junell would allow for non-binding referendums in counties under 125,000 population if a petition is signed by at least 10 percent of the voters. The results would be reported to the TWC.

Howard County Volunteers Organized to Implement Clean Environments Secretary Marilyn Read said they will request that Junell's bill be expanded to make referendums binding, automatic, and to include surrounding counties where water or land would be affected.

"If a company cannot convince citizens that they can operate a safe facility, Read said, "then he doesn't need to do business there."

Gov. Ann Richards, in her State of the State address earlier this month, called for a ban on the issuance of permits for two years to give legislation time to take effect. The TWC recently suspended permit activity until Sept. 1, putting 23 pending applications on hold.

Richards' office is reportedly drafting a bill to expand that suspension. In a Feb. 6 letter to TWC Chairman B.J. Wynne III, she said she will also ask legislators to restrict locating facilities near populations and to allow more public input in the permit process.

Evaluation requested for alleged assailant

Prosecutors for the man accused of stabbing a Big Spring VA Medical Center employee have asked that he undergo psychiatric evaluation.

According to a motion filed Friday in the office of the federal magistrate assigned to set bond for Bose Oliver Jones, 73, the U.S. Attorney's office has asked that he be transported to Springfield, Mo., for psychiatric evaluation.

Prosecutor Roger McRoberts said the circumstances surrounding the crime as well as the results of the FBI investigation contributed to his decision to file the motion.

However, defense attorney Jack Martin has asked that his client be allowed to undergo evaluation in Lubbock, if possible, citing health problems. He said traveling on order from the federal prison system is a "nightmare" and often takes much more time than necessary.

cited "nothing of substance" to support their claim that a competency hearing is needed. In order to request such evaluation, he said, they must cite "reasonable cause" for respecting that Jones is not mentally competent.

"I want him to be evaluated if he needs to be evaluated," Martin said. "But the suggestion that he's going to be sent around the prison system does not, in my opinion, constitute fairness. We're talking about a 73-year-old man."

Martin said Jones has difficulty breathing, a problem for which he was seeking treatment at the VA Medical Center when the stabbing occurred.

McRoberts said he is not aware of Jones' health problems. "All I would have to say is don't go around stabbing people if you don't want to get into the (federal prison) system."

The defense attorney's request will be considered at a hearing Thursday afternoon. Martin said he will ask that Jones be released on bond so he can return to his family.

"I don't want to agree with any type of bond until we get this evaluation done," McRoberts said. The federal facility would examine Jones for 30 days.

Jones is accused of stabbing a physician's assistant in the hospital cafeteria Monday, Feb. 11. He is being held in Tahoka, near Lubbock.

Although any "competent psychiatrist" could conduct the evaluation, McRoberts said, the federal facility in Springfield would be capable of "more comprehensive" examination.

Because of the nature of the crime, he added, it would be helpful to have a complete evaluation, including an examination of how Jones interacts with others.

Martin said the prosecutors have

Poll: Research leadership is shifting to the Japanese

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national poll of academic leaders and scientists shows the United States may be at risk of losing its world leadership in biomedical research to Japan, a drug makers trade group says.

The poll, conducted by the Gallup Organization and financed by the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association Foundation, found that 94 percent of academic researchers surveyed believe the United States is losing its dominance in biomedical research, with Japan as the most likely country to become the new leader.

The poll, released last week, said 90 percent of the academic leaders surveyed believe the Japanese secondary school system is better than that of the United States, and 41 percent said the quality of graduate students entering biomedical research in America has declined.

A large majority of those surveyed said the major problem facing the biomedical community is a shortage of research money.

non-interference in Iraq's internal affairs if Saddam relinquishes Kuwait. Some allied leaders have expressed concern that if Saddam were to pull out of Kuwait with his forces largely intact he would remain a potent threat.

Although Bush said he told Gorbachev the Soviet proposal "falls well short of what would be required," a spokesman for the Soviet leader said today that he didn't consider Bush's remarks to constitute rejection of the plan.

Peace efforts notwithstanding, the allies appeared unwilling to hold their fire unless Iraq were to commence the withdrawal from Kuwait demanded by the United Nations.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told Congress any pause in the war would allow Iraqi forces to regroup: "A cease-fire, a pause of some kind, would in fact be very dangerous from the standpoint of U.S. and allied force."

noting that Robey's last day on the job will be March 1.

"I think we have to look at long-term benefits," Decell said. Planned improvements include the construction of restrooms and a recreational vehicle park. The house and store structure will likely be replaced with pre-fabricated buildings, Decell added.

He said a local architect has offered to volunteer some time for design work on the improvements. A contractor has volunteered to build the restroom facilities as well.

"I think we want to approach (improvements) from a volunteer standpoint," he said. "We've got to cut our costs."

The planned construction will have no effect on Lake Fest 1991, the boat racing event planned for August.

The caretaker needs to be a "jack-of-all-trades," and a self-starter, Decell said. A stable work history and the ability to work with people would be important qualities as well, he added.

Rare New Zealand seal pups saved after spill

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Rescue workers say they have saved at least 20 rare New Zealand seal pups covered in oil spilled by a cargo ship that broke up off Australia's southwest coast.

Tugboats sprayed more dispersant on the oil today, and workers were to begin cleaning the beaches on Thursday.

The Sanko Harvest, with a load of phosphate fertilizer, ran aground last Thursday off Esperance, 450 miles south of Perth.

The Japanese-owned ship spilled thousands of gallons of fuel oil, which has polluted several miles of coastline, killed an undetermined number of birds and threatened a colony of fur seals.

Environmental Protection Authority officials were monitoring the sea around the wreck to check the effect of the fertilizer on local marine life.

The little men come through

Regardless of what happens to the Big Spring Steers basketball team I dub my hat to Steers Coach Tommy Washington for a job well done.

No the Steers won't win 20 games and they didn't win a district championship. But what they might have won is some respect from fellow district basketball teams, not to mention a berth in the state playoffs.

In his second year at the helm Washington has finally got it into his players' heads the idea of team concept. This year I've watch the Steers go from a every-man-for-himself concept, to a whatever it takes to win format.

The Steers' win over San Angelo Lake View Tuesday night in an "extra" game was impressive. Here you had all these short guys trying to contend with a big lineup. The Chiefs started a lineup of players 6-foot-5, 6-foot-4, 6-foot-3, 6-foot-1 and 5-foot-9. The Steers countered with a lineup that went 6-foot-4, 6-foot-1, 5-foot-8, 5-foot-8 and 5-foot 9. A lot of the time Big Spring would have just one player on the court taller the 6-foot.

Looking at the talent, there's no way Big Spring should've have won that game, even if Lake View had won the previous two. The Steers wanted it more, you could tell by the way they scrapped for loose ball and rebounds. You could tell by the way they initiated contact with the bigger Chiefs.

Another reason the Steers won that game is because of its bench. Washington went for long periods of time with four guards in the game. His reserves came through with flying colors, scoring 12 points and getting 11 rebounds. In contrast Lake View's bench contributed four points and one rebound.

"That's something that has really picked up later in the year," said Washington of the play of his reserves. "We've had really good spot play, it's all come together. Darrel Wrightsil, Lemont Jajola, Abel Hilario and Jason LeGrande had played well when we've needed it."

The Steers play Lamesa in area play. Lamesa has beaten Big Spring three times this year. Maybe the fourth time will be the charm.

***
The irony of it all. Howard College Lady Hawks Kim Robinson went down with a knee injury at the regional basketball tournament last year. Now Robinson is gone because of major knee damage from an injury she suffered last week.

It's hard losing an All-American and still be a top-caliber club. Howard did it last year and I think the Lady Hawks can do it again. South Plains beat the Lady Hawks by two last year in regional play without Robinson. South Plains finished sixth in the national tournament.

Last year's Howard team had a bevy of sophomores to add leadership. This year's Howard team has only two sophomores, but it has a talented group of freshmen who have proven their worth.

Don't start feeling sorry for Howard just yet. Coach Royce Chadwick is a good coach who has an uncanny way of molding his talent. One thing for sure, the Lady Hawks will get good test before regional. They'll play No. 14 Kilgore at a neutral site Friday in Weatherford, and close out the season against No. 5 South Plains Monday.

I don't envy any team having to play the Howard College Hawks baseball team right now. Coach Bill Griffin's team is off to one of the hottest starts imaginable.

In eight games the Hawks have scored 101 runs in 41 innings. The team batting average is .425. Of their 90 hits, 50 have went for extra bases. That includes 26 doubles, five triples and 19 homers.

It all boils down to a pitcher's nightmare. Opposing pitcher's earned run averages are 14.17. That's what you call stroking the ball.

SWEETWATER — The wait continues for the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs because the third time was the charm for the Big Spring Steers.

The Steers battled their way into the state playoffs by taking a 70-61 victory over the Chiefs here Tuesday night. The Steers will go into the game as the district runnerup. Both Lake View and Big Spring tied in regular league play with 7-4 records.

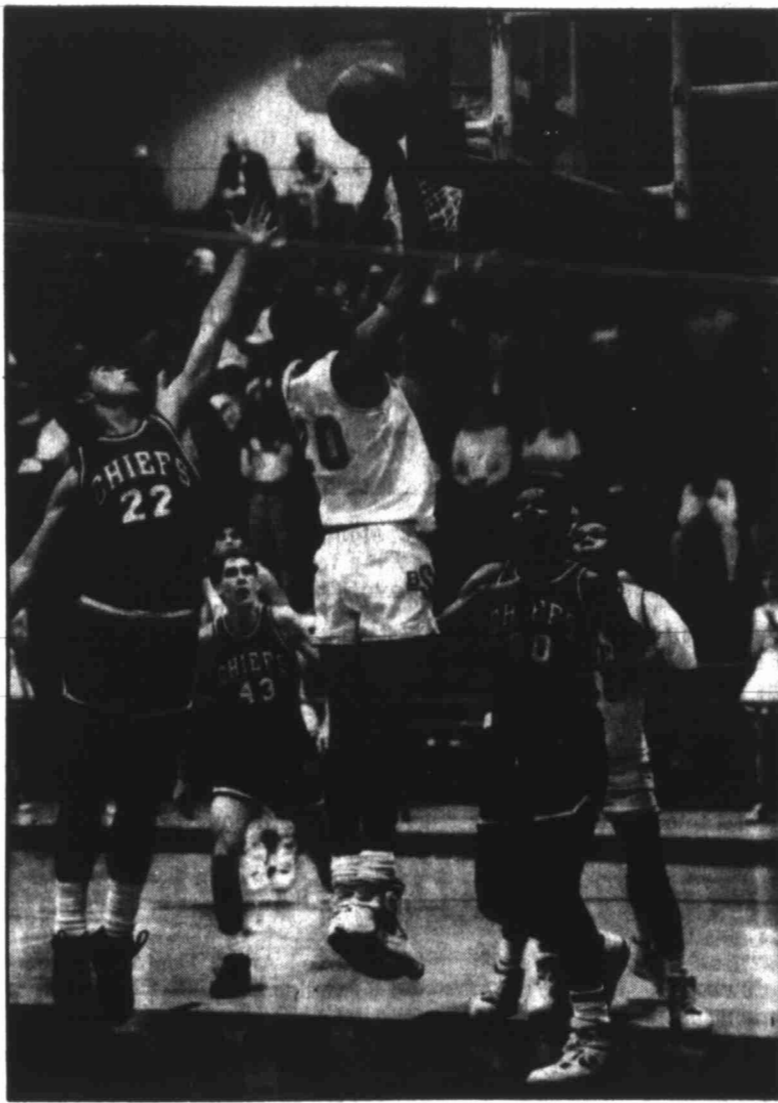

The Chiefs came into the contest hoping to break a 33-year drought, it was the last time a Lake View basketball team made it to the state playoffs. The Chiefs owned two previous victories in league play this season against the Steers.

But on this night it wasn't going to be three-in-a-row. The hustling, Big Spring squad kept it's relentless pressure defense going, and didn't back down from a taller Lake View team.

Big Spring coach Tommy Washington and Lake View coach Ray Hamm both agreed offensive rebounding was the key. "I think the key was offensive rebounding," said Washington. "I think we outlasted them on the rebounds."

Hamm said he felt Big Spring was a more relaxed squad on this night. "They were real relaxed, you could tell that by all the loose balls that went into their hands. When you're relaxed, things like that happen," said Hamm. "The key was all those offensive rebounds and easy second shots they got the whole game. We didn't play one of our better games and we didn't win."

The Steers battled the Chiefs on even terms on the boards, despite a dominating game from Lake View post player Randall Blue. The 6-foot-5 junior finished with 17 points and 23 rebounds. Blue got ample help from forward Kevin chipped in six points, four steals and nine assists.

Just like the previous two encounters, the game was played on even terms all the way. Big Spring started its decisive run at the end of the third quarter.

Hawks keep home mastery over Hill; hot-hitting Howard runs mark to 8-0

The Howard College Hawks kept their baseball record unblemished, sweeping a doubleheader from the Hill Junior College Hilltoppers here Tuesday afternoon.

With the win Howard goes to 8-0 for the season. Hill falls to 0-4. It also kept Howard's mastery at home over Hill going. Hill hasn't beaten Howard at home in the last four years.

The Hawks continue their homestand Saturday when host Paris College in a doubleheader at 1 p.m.

HOWARD 8, HILL 1
Frank Rodriguez made his first start on the mound for the Hawks and got the win. The hard-throwing right hander went five innings, striking out eight and walking five. Edwin Corps went the last two innings and fanned three.

"Frank Rodriguez pitched fairly well in his first start," said Howard coach Bill Griffin. "I pulled him after five innings because he had thrown close to 100 pitches."

Hill scored on Rodriguez in the first inning. He walked two batters and rendered a single.

Howard came back with four runs in the bottom of the first. David Snyder walked and Efrain Contreras reached base on an error by the shortstop. Jeff Schulz singled scoring Snyder. Contreras scored on a bad throw from the catcher to third base. Schulz scored on a wild pitch. The final run of the inning came when Willie Olivas tripped and scored on an infield hit by Franklyn Johnson.

Howard added a run in the third inning. Catcher Sean Teague singled. Olivas followed with a double, scoring designated runner, Keith Cosby.

Howard padded its lead with two more runs in the fifth inning. Rodriguez doubled and Olivas walked. They both scored on Jose Gomez's double. The final Howard run scored in the sixth. Contreras doubled, and eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by Rodriguez.

HOWARD 10, HILL 5
Steve Spencer recorded his second win of the season despite having early control problems. Spencer went the distance, scattering seven hits. James Baldrige took the loss for Hill.

"Spencer had some control problems early, he threw a lot of pitches," said Griffin. "He settled down in the last three innings though."

Spencer got a rude greeting from Hill. Leadoff man Melvin Roman hit a homer to give Hill a 1-0 lead.

Howard came back with three runs in the bottom of the first. Snyder was hit by a pitch and Contreras walked. Schulz doubled, scoring them both. Rodriguez singled, scoring Schulz.

Hill got a run back in the second. Catcher Jose Arguelles homered. But Howard blew the game open in the bottom of the inning scoring six runs to take a 9-2 advantage.

Daniel Pagan led off with a walk. He scored on Jesus Fraire's double. Fraire scored on Snyder's double and Snyder scored on Contreras' base hit.

Rodriguez continued the barrage with a base hit. New pitcher Angel Hernandez walked Olivas, loading the bases for Nelson Delphin. Delphin delivered a double, scoring Contreras and Rodriguez. Olivas scored the last run of the inning on a wild pitch.

Coahoma Bulldogettes advance to regional play

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

ROBERT LEE — The Coahoma Bulldogettes, short on height but long on determination, rode a relentless pressure defense and timely second-half shooting to a 52-46 win over the Hawley Lady Bearcats in Class 2A area playoff action here Tuesday night.

With the win, the Bulldogettes, now 22-9 for the season, advance to the Region I-2A tournament. Coahoma will play the number one team in the state, Abilene, at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Abilene. This marks the first time in more than five years that Coahoma has advanced to the regional stage of the playoffs.

Senior guard Kim Gee scored 18 points — 12 on three-pointers — and post player Kim Willborn added 13 points to lead Coahoma. The District 7-2A champion Lady Bearcats, who ended their season with a 25-8 record, were led by Denice Wilson with 14 points and Nickie DelaRosa with 10.

After falling behind by 11 points midway through the third period, the Bulldogettes — whose frontcourt was dwarfed by Hawley's 5-foot-11 pair of Jori Cooper and Maria Beasley — began their rally behind the play of Gee and forwards Willborn and Mandi Walling.

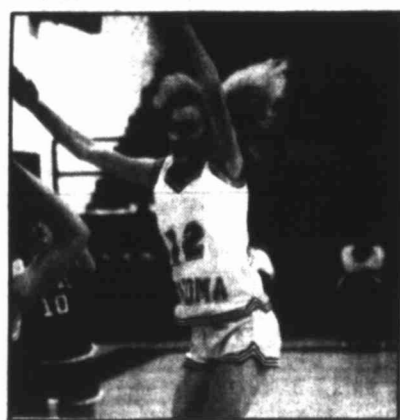

Willborn started things with a short jumper, then Gee followed a Hawley miss with a 10-footer to bring the Bulldogettes to within 30-23 with 3:54 left in the quarter.

Walling added a free throw to cut the lead to six, but DelaRosa and Wilson scored on consecutive possessions to put the lead back at 10. Gee responded, however, with a three-pointer and Walling added a score off an assist by LaTisha Anderson to cut the deficit to seven entering the final quarter.

"When they got that 11 point lead, I was sort of worried," Coahoma coach Truman Meissner said after the game. "But we stayed with our game plan. We wanted to stay close to them for three quarters, then wear them down in the fourth with our pressure defense. Our pressure finally started to bother them and the tide turned for us."

Willborn started the fourth by sinking two free throws on consecutive possessions, cutting the Hawley lead to 38-33. The teams then traded possessions for about three minutes until Gee nailed her fourth three-pointer of the night to bring the Bulldogettes to within 38-36 with 4:53 to go.

Wilson answered with a jumper for Hawley to put the Lady Bearcats back up by four, but Willborn scored inside off a feed from Gee at the 4:19 mark to make the score 40-38.

Anderson then made one of the key plays of the night by stealing a pass, then feeding Walling inside. Walling scored, was fouled and hit the free throw to put the Bulldogettes up, 41-40 with 3:46 remaining.

The Coahoma attack then went into overdrive. Sarah Hanks stole a pass on the ensuing possession and went coast-to-coast for an easy layup and a 43-40 lead. Two possessions later, Gee got into the theft act and converted on the other end, putting Coahoma up by five with 2:14 to go.

Wilson cut the Bulldogettes' lead to three a few seconds later, but Walling scored off an assist by Hanks with 1:43 to go, and Coahoma coasted in from there.

Meissner said the Bulldogettes began dominating the game in the fourth quarter.

"From that point, we pretty much took control," he said. "We were attacking offensively and defensively. We were getting the ball inside on offense and we started moving on defense."

Wall will play Crosbyton in Friday's first game at 6 p.m. in the regional tournament. The games will be played at Moody Coliseum on the campus of Abilene Christian University. COAHOMA (52) — Ty-

Star running back dies from accident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Memorial High School star running back Terry Stevenson died at a San Antonio hospital after breaking his neck in a diving accident at a lake.

Stevenson, 18, died Tuesday at Medical Center Hospital, where he was taken after the accident early Saturday at Woodlawn Lake.

He rushed for 1,572 yards and 15 touchdowns in 1990, when the Minutemen finished 5-4-1, the team's first winning season since 1973.

As a junior in 1989, Stevenson scored the game's only touchdown as Memorial snapped a 51-game losing streak with a 7-0 victory over Holy Cross.

Police said Stevenson suffered the neck injury by diving into a shallow part of the lake. When he didn't resurface, his friends called authorities. He was pulled from the lake about 20 minutes later.

Mets make Gooden an offer

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — The New York Mets today offered Dwight Gooden a three-year contract extension that would make him baseball's third-highest paid player behind Roger Clemens and Jose Canseco.

Jim Neader, Gooden's agent, said he had not seen the new offer, but those numbers would make it worth "less than $4.7 million and more than $4.1 million."

"That's a wide range and it is not acceptable," he said. "It's a start."

Clemens agreed to a four-year contract extension with the Boston Red Sox this month, pushing his average annual salary to $5,380,250. Canseco is earning an average of $4.7 million.

"I'm real pleased with our good start," said Griffin. "Hill is snakebit here though. They've never won a ballgame here. They've lost 13 consecutive games here in the last four years. Hill has a good ballclub."

Lady Cougars rout Fort Hancock

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ Staff Writer

PECOS - The Klondike Lady Cougars took another giant step towards the state tournament with a 60-41 rout over the Fort Hancock Lady Mustangs in area basketball playoff action here, Tuesday night.

The contest began with a tough Lady Mustang press that caused Klondike fits throughout the first four minutes of the ballgame. Tamara Gillis of Hancock found the handle on the tip-off and went all the way downcourt and scored the first basket of the night, and fouled in the process for the three-point play. The game continued going in Fort Hancock's direction as Hancock led 7-6 at the three minute mark.

With 2:36 left in the opening quarter, Channa Cope hit the front end of a one-and-one to tie the tilt at 7-7, teammate Pam Brooks added another free throw giving the Cougars the lead for the first time in the contest. From there, Klondike never looked back as Cheri Franklin found Cope at the post position for two with fine team passing. The duo of Franklin and Cope played produced six easy layups, catching the Lady Mustangs napping.

Another Cougar getting into the passing act was guard Shea Estes as she began to find cracks in the Hancock defense feeding the ball down under to Brooks. After the smoke cleared ending the opening quarter, Klondike rolled 12-3 run giving them a 18-10 lead. The Lady Cougar defense stymied Fort Hancock as they didn't allow the Mustangs a point for almost four minutes in the stanza.

The Mustangs came back in the second quarter as the Klondike five began to get into foul trouble causing Klondike coach Doug Franklin to go to his bench. "We started to get into foul trouble. Everytime we went downcourt we would slap at the ball and that's gets you into foul trouble everytime," Franklin said. "We've played in foul trouble before and came out alright. Our bench is very important to this team." Turnovers began to play an important part in the game as the Mustangs turned the ball over 11 times in the first half producing points for the Cougars. Jittery players on both sides began to settle down and play good ball. Both teams scored 12 points apiece to give the Cougars a 30-22 lead at halftime.

The third quarter proved to be the downfall for the Lady Mustangs as Klondike opened its guns and began to score with any combination. The first basket was a perfect setup as Estes found Cope under the basket. Next Brooks and Franklin added another dimension to confuse the Mustangs. The Lady Cougars outscored Hancock 19-10 in the quarter to set up the final eight minutes of basketball left.

In the final quarter, Klondike found itself in foul trouble and coach Franklin moved his squad to a 3-2 zone. "We moved to a 3-2 zone to keep from fouling out. We played it pretty good tonight," Franklin said.

Klondike will play Sunday at 7 p.m. Friday in Region I-A tournament play in Levelland at the Texas Dome.

Ex-Cowboys coach joins Broncos

DENVER (AP) — Ernie Stautner, former defensive coordinator of the Dallas Cowboys, has been named the defensive line coach of the Denver Broncos.

Stautner was the Cowboys' defensive line coach from 1966 to 1988 and was defensive coordinator for all but the first two seasons.

More recently, Stautner was head coach of the Dallas Texans of the Arena Football League last year. He was named Coach of the Year after leading the Texans to a 6-2 record and to the championship game of the indoor league.

At Denver, Stautner will be reunited with Dan Reeves, the Broncos' head coach who is also a former Cowboys assistant. The announcement of Stautner's appointment was made Tuesday.

Stautner was an all-NFL defensive end and tackle with the Pittsburgh Steelers, where he played from 1950 to 1964. He played in nine Pro Bowls and was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1969, the first year he was eligible.

"I'm very excited about coming back to the NFL. It just seemed there was something missing without it," Stautner told The Associated Press Tuesday in a telephone conversation from Dallas.

"I enjoyed Arena Football, and said I wouldn't leave it unless I could get a head coaching job in the NFL. But I talked to Danny and I really respect him. This is what I want to do. It sort of brings out the old war horse in me."

Stautner said he felt he learned a lot about defense in Arena Football.

"It's a fast passing game," he said. "It teaches you a lot about rushing the passer in a hurry."

Stautner said retirement from the NFL was hard on him.

"I enjoyed it for about two months," he said. "You get the itch to do things. I missed the excitement."

Grady whips Marathon

IMPERIAL — The Grady Wildcats advanced to the Region I-A basketball tournament by soundly whipping the Marathon Lady Mustangs 58-37 Tuesday night in area play.

The Lady Wildcats fielded a balanced scoring attack placing four players in double figures. Laurie Romine led the way with 16 points. Missy Romine and Sherrie McMorries scored 12 points each; Michelle Madison scored 10 and Cassie Roberson added eight.

Grady led from start to finish. Laurie Romine scored eight points in the first quarter and Grady led 16-6 after the first eight minutes. The Lady Wildcats led 27-18 at the half, and put the game away in the fourth quarter, outscoring Marathon 14-9.

Grady coach Randy Peel said it was a good win for his team. "I was real pleased for the team, they played well," said Peel. "Everybody shot the ball well. Missy (Romine) scored eight points in the first quarter."

Grady, 20-6 for the season, will play Anton, a 56-52 winner over Wellman, at 1:30 p.m. Friday in the Texas Dome in Levelland.

guard Abel Hilario who dribbled the ball to the top of the key and launched a three-point attempt that hit nothing but the bottom of the net. Big Spring led 49-46 going into the final quarter.

Chavarria started the fourth quarter with a jumper. A few moments later he made a "scoop" shot under the Lake View front line, and followed it with two foul shots on Big Spring's next trip down. The Steers led 58-50 with 6:20 left.

Lake View got as close as 62-58 with 2:51 left, but Big Spring answered with scores off offensive rebounds by Chavarria and White. Lake View pulled to within 66-60 on a basket by Blue, but the Steers hammered the final nail in the coffin when Cobos pulled up and hit a jumper, giving the Steers a 68-60 lead with 1:22 left.

Washington said he thought his team finally wore the Chiefs down.

"I think they got tired at the last," he said. "They came out and they put a tough man-to-man defense on us. We couldn't score easy but we hung close."

The Steers, 14-17 for the season, advance to area play Friday against Lamesa. The game will be played at Odessa Permian at 7:30 p.m.

Lake View, who hadn't been to the playoffs since 1958, finished at 19-12.

Star running back dies from accident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Memorial High School star running back Terry Stevenson died at a San Antonio hospital after breaking his neck in a diving accident at a lake.

Stevenson, 18, died Tuesday at Medical Center Hospital, where he was taken after the accident early Saturday at Woodlawn Lake.

He rushed for 1,572 yards and 15 touchdowns in 1990, when the Minutemen finished 5-4-1, the team's first winning season since 1973.

As a junior in 1989, Stevenson scored the game's only touchdown as Memorial snapped a 51-game losing streak with a 7-0 victory over Holy Cross.

Police said Stevenson suffered the neck injury by diving into a shallow part of the lake. When he didn't resurface, his friends called authorities. He was pulled from the lake about 20 minutes later.

Mets make Gooden an offer

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — The New York Mets today offered Dwight Gooden a three-year contract extension that would make him baseball's third-highest paid player behind Roger Clemens and Jose Canseco.

Jim Neader, Gooden's agent, said he had not seen the new offer, but those numbers would make it worth "less than $4.7 million and more than $4.1 million."

"That's a wide range and it is not acceptable," he said. "It's a start."

Clemens agreed to a four-year contract extension with the Boston Red Sox this month, pushing his average annual salary to $6,380,250. Canseco is earning an average of $4.7 million.

Jim Neader, Gooden's agent, said he had not seen the new offer, but those numbers would make it worth "less than $4.7 million and more than $4.1 million."

"I'm real pleased with our good start," said Griffin. "Hill is snakebit here though. They've never won a ballgame here. They've lost 13 consecutive games here in the last four years. Hill has a good ballclub."

Lady Cougars rout Fort Hancock

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ Staff Writer

PECOS - The Klondike Lady Cougars took another giant step towards the state tournament with a 60-41 rout over the Fort Hancock Lady Mustangs in area basketball playoff action here, Tuesday night.

The contest began with a tough Lady Mustang press that caused Klondike fits throughout the first four minutes of the ballgame. Tamara Gillis of Hancock found the handle on the tip-off and went all the way downcourt and scored the first basket of the night, and fouled in the process for the three-point play. The game continued going in Fort Hancock's direction as Hancock led 7-6 at the three minute mark.

With 2:36 left in the opening quarter, Channa Cope hit the front end of a one-and-one to tie the tilt at 7-7, teammate Pam Brooks added another free throw giving the Cougars the lead for the first time in the contest. From there, Klondike never looked back as Cheri Franklin found Cope at the post position for two with fine team passing. The duo of Franklin and Cope played produced six easy layups, catching the Lady Mustangs napping.

Another Cougar getting into the passing act was guard Shea Estes as she began to find cracks in the Hancock defense feeding the ball down under to Brooks. After the smoke cleared ending the opening quarter, Klondike rolled 12-3 run giving them a 18-10 lead. The Lady Cougar defense stymied Fort Hancock as they didn't allow the Mustangs a point for almost four minutes in the stanza.

The Mustangs came back in the second quarter as the Klondike five began to get into foul trouble causing Klondike coach Doug Franklin to go to his bench. "We started to get into foul trouble. Everytime we went downcourt we would slap at the ball and that's gets you into foul trouble everytime," Franklin said. "We've played in foul trouble before and came out alright. Our bench is very important to this team." Turnovers began to play an important part in the game as the Mustangs turned the ball over 11 times in the first half producing points for the Cougars. Jittery players on both sides began to settle down and play good ball. Both teams scored 12 points apiece to give the Cougars a 30-22 lead at halftime.

The third quarter proved to be the downfall for the Lady Mustangs as Klondike opened its guns and began to score with any combination. The first basket was a perfect setup as Estes found Cope under the basket. Next Brooks and Franklin added another dimension to confuse the Mustangs. The Lady Cougars outscored Hancock 19-10 in the quarter to set up the final eight minutes of basketball left.

In the final quarter, Klondike found itself in foul trouble and coach Franklin moved his squad to a 3-2 zone. "We moved to a 3-2 zone to keep from fouling out. We played it pretty good tonight," Franklin said.

Klondike will play Sunday at 7 p.m. Friday in Region I-A tournament play in Levelland at the Texas Dome.

Ex-Cowboys coach joins Broncos

DENVER (AP) — Ernie Stautner, former defensive coordinator of the Dallas Cowboys, has been named the defensive line coach of the Denver Broncos.

Stautner was an all-NFL defensive end and tackle with the Pittsburgh Steelers, where he played from 1950 to 1964. He played in nine Pro Bowls and was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1969, the first year he was eligible.

"I'm very excited about coming back to the NFL. It just seemed there was something missing without it," Stautner told The Associated Press Tuesday in a telephone conversation from Dallas.

"I'm very excited about coming back to the NFL. It just seemed there was something missing without it," Stautner told The Associated Press Tuesday in a telephone conversation from Dallas.

"I enjoyed Arena Football, and said I wouldn't leave it unless I could get a head coaching job in the NFL. But I talked to Danny and I really respect him. This is what I want to do. It sort of brings out the old war horse in me."

Stautner said he felt he learned a lot about defense in Arena Football.

"It's a fast passing game," he said. "It teaches you a lot about rushing the passer in a hurry."

Stautner said retirement from the NFL was hard on him.

"I enjoyed it for about two months," he said. "You get the itch to do things. I missed the excitement."

guard Abel Hilario who dribbled the ball to the top of the key and launched a three-point attempt that hit nothing but the bottom of the net. Big Spring led 49-46 going into the final quarter.

Chavarría started the fourth quarter with a jumper. A few moments later he made a "scoop" shot under the Lake View front line, and followed it with two foul shots on Big Spring's next trip down. The Steers led 58-50 with 6:20 left.

Lake View got as close as 62-58 with 4:51 left, but Big Spring answered with scores off offensive rebounds by Chavarría and White. Lake View pulled to within 66-60 a basket by Blue, but the Steers hammered the final nail in the coffin when Cobos pulled up and hit a jumper, giving the Steers a 68-60 lead with 1:22 left.

Washington said he thought his team finally wore the Chiefs down.

"I think they got tired at the last," he said. "They came out and they put a tough man-to-man defense on us. We couldn't score easy but we hung close."

Eastwood approved

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Steel-eyed Clint Eastwood put on a size 40 bra adorned with two American flags, and a crowd roared approval as he accepted the Man of the Year award from Harvard's Hasty Pudding Theatricals.

"I might not wear this too much in public," he said.

Eastwood, otherwise clad in a tuxedo, accepted the award Tuesday, joining past honorees such as Paul Newman, Dustin Hoffman and Kevin Costner.

The group, the oldest undergraduate dramatic organization in the country, presents the annual award and traditional brass pot to entertainers in a ceremony at the Hasty Pudding Theater.

Clint Eastwood Barbara Cartland

Eastwood, known for such movies as "Dirty Harry" and "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly," said that despite his success, he considers himself a Hollywood outsider.

Cartland honored

LONDON (AP) — Romance novelist Barbara Cartland was being honored at a ceremony at the Hasty Pudding Theater.

British Empire, and emerged to defend the royal family against newspaper attacks on its wartime performance.

Queen Elizabeth II presented the honor Tuesday to the 89-year-old doyenne of romantic fiction, who worked on her 533rd novel. Dame Barbara later accused the media of "asking too much" by demanding the royal family contribute more to the Persian Gulf War effort.

"The last thing you want if you have suffered an attack from poison gas, for instance, is to have a lot of royals puffing around wanting a lot of attention," she said.

A Sunday Times editorial two weeks ago accused members of the royal family of living it up while the nation waged war.

night. Stay home if you are not interested.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Diplomacy helps you avoid embarrassment. Perform more services for yourself to hold down family expenses. A professional relationship takes an interesting turn.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A positive attitude helps you get through difficult financial negotiations today. Do not suggest major changes. Romance will make an about-face if you become more attentive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not be afraid to speak your mind to those in authority today. You could find a romantic partner especially demanding this evening. Plan to spend some time alone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not expect too much from your co-workers now. An older person helps you cut through red tape. Show your gratitude! Write to or seek out friends who want to hear from you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Trouble may be brewing on the home front. Avoid a confrontation by exercising more diplomacy. An influential person appreciates your no-nonsense attitude. Financial speculation

Bush: Soviet plan unsatisfactory

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Diplomatic efforts redoubled today in a final bid to avert a land war's carnage, but the search for a settlement in the Persian Gulf War brought no break in allied preparations for a ground assault.

President Bush has indicated a Soviet peace plan put forth this week is unsatisfactory, but Italy, which is part of the allied coalition confronting Iraq, endorsed the proposal today and disclosed some of its details.

The Soviets asked that the plan remain private until Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq returned to Moscow later today with his government's response.

A senior Italian official said the plan calls for Iraq to begin withdrawing a day after a cease-fire goes into effect.

It also pledges Iraqi troops would not be attacked during their withdrawal from Kuwait, said the official, Nino Cristofori, who is a top aide to Premier Giulio Andreotti.

The proposal has not been made public, but it has been widely reported to include a guarantee of non-interference in Iraq's internal affairs if Saddam Hussein relinquishes Kuwait.

Some allied leaders have expressed concern if Saddam were to pull out of Kuwait with his forces largely intact he would remain a potent threat.

If a ground war is fought, U.S. military officials say Iraq's dug-in ground troops remain a mighty force despite continual allied air attacks.

"We haven't seen any white flags yet," one senior U.S. official in Saudi Arabia said today, speaking on condition of anonymity. "There's still a formidable force out there."

Even so, U.S. military leaders say they are poised to strike at any moment, if the order comes down from Bush, the commander-in-chief.

"We are ready now, if the leadership decides that's what they want to do," Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters in Washington on Tuesday.

Setting the stage for a land battle, the allied air war went on without letup. In a dispatch from Baghdad today, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency reported four hours of intense allied air raids lasting into the morning hours, and said bombs were going off every five minutes.

"Panicked Baghdad residents rushed to the streets to escape to the nearby villages by car, cart or carriage," the agency said. It was the capital's second straight night of heavy bombing.

An Iraqi military communique carried by the Iraqi News Agency at midday today reported scores of allied air strikes on military and civilian targets over the previous 24 hours. It gave few details, but said a mosque and two schools were hit.

The communique also claimed Iraqi troops near the Saudi Arabian border had repulsed a helicopter-backed assault by allied soldiers. It said the attackers suffered heavy losses in personnel and equipment, but gave no further details.

There was no immediate word from allied officials on such an incident.

Aziz was expected to return to the Soviet capital today after consulting with Saddam in Baghdad on the peace plan Mikhail S. Gorbachev proposed in a Kremlin

Shrine Circus planned March 2-3

The 37th Odessa Shrine Circus will be March 2-3. Performances are scheduled at 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday at the Ector County Coliseum, according to Steve Harry, advertising and promotional chairman.

"Our local Shrine Club has spent just under $109,000 in the past five years transporting crippled and burned children from the Permian Basin area to the Shriners Hospitals and Burns Institutes. The major fundraiser for our transportation fund is our annual Shrine Circus," Harry said.

For more information call 337-2781 or the coliseum box office.

Volunteers honored for their service

Martin County Historical Museum's "friends of the Museum" met Tuesday afternoon to honor volunteers for their services and time rendered to the preservation of the historical setting.

Volunteer accounted for over 1719 hours of service to the site, including time spent at the recently acquired Connell Home and former county jail, officials said.

Honored were:
Joni Lou Hazelwood and Nelda Hazelwood. Receiving pins were: 100 hours — Don Avery, Ruby Haggard, Ronnie Houston; 200 hours — Billie Flanagan; 400 hour — Colleen Holloway; 500 hours — Mary Prudie Brown, June Reidand Frances Biggs; 1000 hours — Lora Bell Tom and 1500 hours — Dorothy Deavenport.

Suspicious Origin for Fire Reported

VELMA, Okla. (AP) — Investigators say a fire that caused an estimated $200,000 damage to oil tank batteries and equipment in Velma was of a suspicious origin.

No cause for Sunday's fire had been determined by Tuesday.

Bill Ward, acting agent supervisor for the state fire marshal, said an investigator with his office has determined the valves on 12 tanks involved in the fire were open.

Six tanks and four transport trucks owned by Interstate Petroleum Corp. were destroyed in the fire.

Research funding increase proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tomatoes with inbred resistance to pests. Fruits less vulnerable to spoilage. Corn or soybeans with higher levels of specific nutrients.

These are the products of agricultural biotechnology, a science that should be considered for greater federal funding, the President's Council on Competitiveness said Tuesday.

The council's report is designed to guide Bush administration policy on biotechnology research and development.

Currently, agricultural interests get approximately 21 percent of the money spent on such research with the bulk — 69 percent — going to health concerns.

But the report said use of the techniques of this science can enormously improve the productivity of agriculture. The council did not go so far as to recommend increased funding for agricultural uses, saying "federal funding allocations ... should be examined and areas of opportunity identified for support."

"Assuring a rich science base that can nourish technological developments similar to the gains over the last two decades in the biomedical field will be critical to bringing U.S. agriculture into the next century," the report said.

Biotechnology is the use of various biological processes to make products and perform services from living organisms.

It dates back thousands of years to the first use of yeast in bread. But the revolution came in the last two decades when scientists learned to alter the genetic constitution of living organisms.

The United States leads the world in this technology, but the president's council said international competition is strong, so greater federal support is important.

Its said biotechnology will provide the potential to cure previously incurable genetic diseases.

"It also can give use better and healthier food products, including meats, dairy products, fruits and vegetables, greatly reduce reliance on toxic pesticides, and improve pesticides, herbicides and irrigation," the report said.

The council also noted nutrition, taste and appearance of plant, animal and other foods can be enhanced through biotechnology.

SHS students to tackle science/math at U.I.L.

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Three Stanton High School students will put their academic achievements on the line to represent their school at the U.I.L. meet. Senior Lance Hall, junior Grant Woodfin and sophomore Robin Barnes will be competing in Science and Math, said Ted Gates, U.I.L. Math/Science instructor.

Hall played varsity football and is president of the student council. He participates in U.I.L. Science

"because the field I plan to go into is related to engineering. I will need a great deal of math and science."

Hall placed third in science at the Midland meet. The test consisted of 20 questions covering biology, chemistry and physics.

"I have to expand my knowledge in science and math, and to do that I have to spend about two hours of studying per week at school and then come home and prepare for it some more. This comes after all my other work is done," Hall said. "We need to get more people involved in these types of competition so we can have a better chance to win the team competition and for us to use in the future."

Woodfin, who plays football, basketball and is active in student council, makes time to study mathematics and science. Woodfin placed fourteenth at Midland. The contest pitted individuals against students from area four and five A schools, according to Gates.

"It's really challenging intellectually, because if one does good, he or she might have a chance at a scholarship later for college,"

Woodfin said. "It also helps with National Honor Society requirements because one has to participate in at least one U.I.L. event per year."

Barnes is representing the high school for the first time. "I am participating in number sense and science. Mr. Gates suggested that I would be good for the program and the program would help me in the long run and he convinced me," he said.

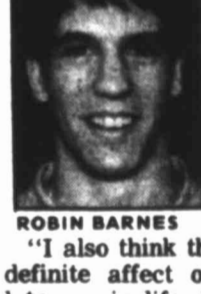

"I also think that it will have a definite affect on my education later on in life. It's fun, because you get to meet different kinds people and at the same time learn and keep your mind active. It helps me exercise my common sense," Barnes said.

Continued use of fluoride considered safe by scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists say that despite their confidence in fluoride as a safe and effective cavity-fighter, researchers need to determine how much is enough — and how much may be too much.

A yearlong study by the U.S. Public Health Service, released Tuesday, found no evidence that fluoride causes cancer in humans. It recommended continued addition of the chemical to water supplies.

"Optimal fluoridation of drinking water does not pose a detectable cancer risk to humans," the report said.

And while fluoride in toothpaste, mouth rinses and dietary supplements also reduces dental decay, "fluoridation of water is the most cost-effective method. It provides the greatest benefit to those who can least afford preventive and restorative dentistry," the report said.

The study, described by officials as the most comprehensive ever focused by the federal government on fluorides, was requested a year ago after a National Toxicology Program study showed four male

"More is not necessarily better. Especially in those areas of the United States where fluorides are naturally present..."

test rats fed high doses of fluoride over their lifetimes developed osteosarcoma, a rare cancer.

Scientists from the Public Health Service, which includes the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and the Food and Drug Administration, reviewed the results of 50 human epidemiology studies as well as the toxicology program's study and one other animal study.

The study noted since fluoridation of drinking water began in the mid-1940s, many fluoride-containing oral care products have been introduced. Now, 90 percent of all toothpastes on the market contain fluoride.

While levels have been set for fluoride in water, the "optimal" level from all sources should be determined to achieve tooth-decay prevention and minimal occurrences of tooth discoloring, the reviewers said. When this is accomplished, the Environmental Protection Agency should review its regulations for naturally occurring fluoride in water, they said.

"More is not necessarily better," said Dr. James Mason, assistant secretary for health in the Health and Human Services Department.

"Especially in those areas of the United States where fluorides are naturally present at higher levels than recommended levels, kids do not need additional systemic fluoride and risk a discoloration, or mottling, of the teeth."

Mottling, which is called dental fluorosis and occurs during tooth development, has increased in some parts of the country but it does not affect tooth function or oral health, the report said.

The report did not satisfy opponents of fluoridation, who said its rosy conclusions were unfounded, inconsistent and do not justify continued water fluoridation.

"The government has the same information as we do about the

Chef carries on tradition

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Rodolfo Segovia has led a sweet life, but not in the sense most people think of when they hear that phrase. The 71-year-old Segovia is one of a disappearing breed — the maker of handmade Mexican candy.

A third-generation candy maker, he was raised learning the secrets of pumpkin, sweet potato and nut candies. Segovia learned from his father, Ignacio, who had learned from his father in the Mexican state of Aguascalientes.

Ignacio, who came in 1912 from Mexico, taught his 10 children the secrets of candy making, but San Antonio-born Segovia is the only one who made a lifetime business of it.

His exacting standards help account for the success he has had over the years. Segovia, who still dons an apron daily and works with the rest of his employees, said the family-operated company brings in about $800,000 a year versus $5,000 the first year it opened.

His eye for detail has helped him in other sweet ventures as well. About 10 years ago, he made a miniature replica of the San Fernando Cathedral and presented it to Archbishop Patrick Flores.

JASPER — Joe Tonahill poses outside his law office in the Lamborghini War Wagon he purchased. The vehicle is one of 15 built for military use in the Middle East, the other 14 have been sold to sheiks.

Outrageous desert vehicle finds home in East Texas

JASPER (AP) — A crowd gathered when the transport carrier arrived at the law office with Joe Tonahill's Lamborghini War Wagon.

Employees from nearby offices and the adjacent bank walked over to take a peek at the odd-looking bright red vehicle bearing the prestigious Italian raging bull emblem. That was Nov. 27, but the attention the all-terrain vehicle attracts in this small East Texas town, where a man's best buddy usually is his pickup truck, has not dimmed.

When Tonahill, a longtime lawyer, saw a picture of the vehicle he told his son, "I'm going to buy one."

Tonahill is best known for his defense of Jack Ruby, who was accused of shooting Lee Harvey Oswald, the alleged assassin of President John F. Kennedy.

Now Tonahill said he is probably the only person in the United States to own a War Wagon. Only 15 were made and 14 Middle East sheiks own the others, Tonahill said.

The 6-foot-4-inch Tonahill said he tools right over potholes in streets and along bumpy dirt roads because the "Lambo," as he calls it, has huge tires more than a foot wide with hook-like ribs on the sidewalls that serve as stabilizers in desert sand.

Diplomacy

 meeting on Monday. However, there was no word on if he had left Iraq.

On his previous trip to Moscow, Aziz traveled over land to Tehran to avoid flying in allied-controlled skies.

Cristofori, the Italian official, sidestepped a question about differences among the allies toward the Soviet plan, saying "there is no difference regarding the political commitments assumed by the United States and the other countries" regarding the U.N. resolutions demanding Iraq quit Kuwait.

Although Bush said he told Gorbachev the Soviet proposal "falls well short of what would be required," a Soviet lawmaker said today that did not necessarily constitute rejection of the plan.

"President Bush gave the impression he might have some additional desires," Valentin Falin, who is also head of the Communist Party's international department, told reporters.

The Soviets, longtime Iraqi patrons until the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, urged that the Baghdad government be given a chance to accept the Gorbachev plan and pull out of Kuwait.

China, too, called on Iraq to act swiftly. Iraq's deputy premier, Saadoun Hammadi, met today with Premier Li Peng during a surprise one-day visit to Beijing. The official Xinhua news agency said Li "urged Iraq to seize the opportunity and take immediate and concrete measures and actions to withdraw its troops from Kuwait."

China, one of five permanent U.N. Security Council members, backed all but one of the council's resolutions demanding Iraq relinquish Kuwait. It abstained in the vote that authorized using force to expel Iraqi forces from the emirate.

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd was quoted today as saying no peace plan can succeed without an unconditional Iraqi pullout from Kuwait. He also said Iraq should pay reparations to Saudi Arabia as well as Kuwait.

In remarks carried today by the official Saudi Press Agency, the king told Islamic scholars Tuesday night that Iraq's refusal to meet allied demands and pull out of Kuwait could be part of "God's will to end Saddam."

Peace efforts notwithstanding, the allies appeared unwilling to hold their fire unless Iraq were to commence the withdrawal from Kuwait demanded by the United Nations.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told Congress Tuesday that any pause in the war would allow Iraqi forces to regroup. "A cease-fire, a pause of some kind, would in fact be very dangerous from the standpoint of U.S. and allied force."

As the allied air war pressed on, pilots said the likely land battle was much on their minds.

"We've been taking out tanks, armored vehicles, artillery pieces, in some cases multiple rocket launchers — anything that could change the fate of the ground war right now," said an F-111 pilot, Lt. Dave Bristol. "That's what everybody's looking at right now — the ground war."

On the sand-strewn battle lines in northern Saudi Arabia, skirmishes intensified as tensions heightened.

U.S. Army forces captured an abandoned Iraqi observation post on the high ground that could have alerted rear enemy divisions to an allied attack into Kuwait, officials said Tuesday.

"It appears as though they have given up (that section of) the border," said Maj. Karl Horst, a battalion operations officer. "We were expecting to fight to cross it. It makes it easy for us when we roll across. It's one less fight we have to do."

Front-line allied troops grimly prepared for another fight: the possibility of an Iraqi chemical attack. Military officials in Washington said they anticipate Saddam's forces will send off an airborne or artillery-fired chemical barrage in the event of a ground assault.

"It will be his final dirty trick," one Pentagon strategist said Tuesday. "We firmly believe he'll use it against the allies, sooner or later." Amid the foreboding about the battle, there was one bit of good news.

Saudi officials said the oil slick fouling the Persian Gulf is much smaller than originally feared. It is now estimated at about 65 million gallons, rather than 460 million.

However, that would still mean the spill is five times larger than the 1989 Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska.

The officials said allied attacks were believed responsible for about a third of the slick, with the remainder deliberately dumped by Iraqi forces.

"Lamborghini pushed ahead and built 15 outrageous War Wagons especially for the Middle East, and it sold 14 to the sheiks. I have the other one."

Joe Tonahill

The War Wagon has two bench seats over the rear wheels for gun bearers or mounted infantry, but Tonahill said he is more likely to use his for hauling things to his ranch or office. Golf clubs are more likely to be found in his than machine guns.

"But I bet Saddam Hussein would like to have one of these," Tonahill said. "The knobby tires set up a tolerable howl, but nobody can object to the sound of that engine."

The outside may look like a terrain vehicle, but the dashboard looks like an airplane cockpit. The seats are leather and African rosewood lines the interior. "The Lambo laughs at such a mundane item as fuel economy," he said, adding his vehicle gets about 8 miles to a gallon.

"It's easy to drive at the speed limit, though," Tonahill said. "That's fast enough for me."

Electronic pollution spoiling night skies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The electronic age is spoiling the vista of the ancient universe by saturating the sky with light and radio pollution, astronomers said Monday.

The glare from street lights, sports fields and other sources already has erased the heavens from the nighttime view in many American cities, said David L. Crawford, an astronomer at the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona.

"The spectacular view of the night sky that our ancestors had above them on clear dark nights no longer exists," he said. "Most people in cities have not even seen the Milky Way, and it continues to get worse."

Paul A. Vanden Bout of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory said that radio astronomers, too, are being hampered by the proliferation of gadgetry emitting radio signals that overpower the faint pulses from distant stars and galaxies.

"Modern society carries with it an electronic buzz," from such things as electric motors, portable telephones, garage door openers, welding machines and microwave ovens, he noted.

Vanden Bout said all of these send up radio impulses that interfere with radio astronomers' efforts to collect and analyze the faint signals from the heavens.

Andrea K. Dupree of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics said light pollution from outdoor illumination, similarly, overpowers the faint light from very distant stars.

In a dark sky, she said, a large telescope is able to detect a tiny light source — equivalent to viewing a 40-watt light bulb placed by the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia from the Capitol in Washington.

But the burgeoning glow of outdoor lighting makes such detection impossible, she said.

Light from Southern California cities already has put Mount Wilson, a major observatory, virtually out of business, said Crawford. The sky glow around the observatory is twice as bright as the natural sky.

"It's as if the full moon was out all the time," said Crawford.

Most of the light pollution is the result of wasted illumination, mostly from street lights that shine into the sky almost as much as they shine on the ground.

"This is wasted light," he said.

David L. Crawford
Astronomer

"We spend well over a billion dollars a year on wasted light."

But properly designed street lights, said Crawford, could put more light on the ground, where it is needed, and less into the sky.

This has been proved in Tucson, Ariz., near the Kitt Peak observatory, he said. Inefficient light fixtures have been replaced in Tucson and the traffic illumination is better than it was. Yet, the sky is dark.

"In a town of 700,000," he said Crawford.

Switching out old lighting fixtures on street lamps costs from $80 to several hundred dollars each, he said, but the cost is paid back through savings in electricity in less than a year in most areas.

Vanden Bout said that the worse problem for radio astronomers comes from navigation satellites that constantly beep out information for ships and airplanes.

Frequency interference is being corrected on the U.S. Navstar satellite system, but the Soviet system, called Glonass, transmits at a frequency that matches the portion of the spectrum used for key radio astronomy studies.

Another problem is telephones on airplanes, though "It's just a bit of a nuisance now," Vanden Bout said. But he expects that to get worse, as more airlines provide phone service.

The astronomers discussed the problems at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a gathering of more than 4,000 scientists that ends on Tuesday.

Despite the promise biotechnology holds, many barriers exist to marketing the scientific breakthroughs.

The council recommended additional work be done to find ways to:

- Clarify which government agency has jurisdiction over regulating biotechnology and generally make the regulatory process more efficient.

- Streamline the process for getting to the public the products that have been developed, drugs for the desperately ill, for example.

- Preclude the need for state laws regulating biotechnology.

- Stop foreign governments from blocking U.S. trade in biotechnology. In Europe, for example, officials are considered subjecting products to "social and economic" needs testing that would include consideration of potential impact on farmers and the food supply industry in the local country or region.

The president's council advocates a free market approach.

risks of chronic fluoride ingestion, but they don't want the public to panic," said Susan Pare, president of the Center for Health Action, a clearing house for information on fluoride.

She pointed to the report's findings that high doses of fluoride may weaken bones, that dental fluorosis has increased in some areas and that fluoride can change cell structure in animals and in human cells in tissue culture.

"I consider any one of those risks enough to change the policy of water fluoridation," she said.

She also noted while touting the benefits of fluoride, the report recommends children avoid swallowing toothpaste to limit their total consumption of the chemical. Meanwhile, she said, people are ingesting fluoride from water in uncontrolled amounts.

"If they want to control the dose, the best way would be to stop putting fluoride in the water supply,"

Looking for the perfect gift?

Spring. A time for graduation parties and weddings. A time to look for those perfect gifts for a "first home" for which kitchen utensils, small appliances, cookware and bakeware are always welcome.

Kitchen space, or a lack of it, is a prime consideration in most "first kitchens." Find out what types of kitchen products are needed. If the gift is for a bridal couple, check local department store bridal registries. Ask the consultant for a list of the items that the couple wants. Then, follow these handy hints when choosing the perfect gift.

In cookware, bakeware and casseroles, look for versatility. Consider glass-ceramic items such as Corning Ware or Visions cookware. Some items, like the skillet shown here, now come with duPont's SilverStone non-stick surface for easy clean-up. And, glass-ceramic cookware and bakeware can be used in the microwave, conventional oven and the dishwasher. They're perfect for oven-to-tabletop convenience and to cut down on after meal clean-up.

If choosing items for high-temperature range-top cooking, consider stainless steel cookware. Every first kitchen can use a deep-sided chicken fryer and an appropriately sized stock pot. For the latter, Revere Ware makes stock pots in sizes ranging from 6 to 20 quarts.

Whatever the cookware, consider non-reactive cookware material. Glass, glass-ceramic or stainless steel provide ideal food contact surfaces. They won't react with or discolor foods and they clean up thoroughly with no food flavor or odor carryover from one meal to the next.

Small electric appliances make great gifts for a first home, too. Every starter kitchen needs the basics—a toaster, a coffeemaker, a blender and a can opener. Look for features that make a product special (a cool-touch toaster, or a thermal-carafe coffeemaker, for instance) and look for a combination of items designed to match one another—like Oster's new Designer Collection of small appliances. Don't forget important specialty appliances either. A waffle maker with a non-stick interior or an easy to use citrus juicer can make great gifts.

People who love to cook will need a stand mixer and a food processor. If time and space are a premium, consider a unit that features a heavy-duty motor base to power five important appliances such as Oster's Kitchen Center all-purpose appliance that combines a stand mixer, a doughmaker, a food processor, a blender and a slicer/shredder/saladmaker.

A complete set of cooking or serving utensils always makes a wonderful gift for the first kitchen. Good utensils should be stain and grease resistant, dishwasher safe, safe to use with all types of non-stick or coated cookware and be able to withstand high temperatures (400° F). Consider high-strength plastic utensils such as Ultratemp by Robinson Design Group. These handsome utensils come with a 50-year guarantee and are especially designed to match Corning's Visions cookware so they make a coordinated statement when they come to the table. Ultratemp will remain cool to the touch when used in microwave ovens. These tools are available in either amber or black.

Here are some handy kitchen checklists to help choose the right item for your next "first home" gift. Options abound when choosing products to outfit that first kitchen!

Refinishing tips for wooden floors

Floors often are overlooked when planning home decorating projects. Three cost-effective refinishing treatments, recommended by the National Paint and Coatings Association, are bleaching, whitewashing and staining.

Bleaching, as the name states, involves stripping the wood of its color. You can use an ordinary household bleach, but remember to work in a well-ventilated area, and wear protective goggles and gloves.

Leave bleach on for 10-15 minutes, rinse and let dry. Some bleach residue will remain, so you must neutralize the floor's surface by washing with a half-and-half solution of vinegar and water. Rinse with clear water, sand with sandpaper, brush off sanding residue, and apply a coat of polyurethane to ensure the floor's durability.

Whitewashing techniques

To whitewash wooden floors, bleach surface, and apply a white stain. Reapply stain until you achieve the desired effect, without losing the natural wood grain. Let dry overnight, sand, dust and damp-mop. Finish with a coat of polyurethane.

Semi-transparent, oil-based stains are recommended for staining wooden floors. Available in wood tones, oil-based stains allow the beauty of the natural wood grain to show through. All stains must be applied over clean, bare wood, which has been sanded and rubbed with paint thinner.

To achieve an enticing marquetry effect, stain entire floor in a light stain and dab a darker stain through the stencil holes with a rag (a brush will get too overloaded). Finish stenciling project with three to five coats of polyurethane.

You will see a dramatic transformation in your interior's appearance when bleaching, whitewashing or staining your wooden floors. In fact, the National Paint and Coatings Association suggests that refinishing floors be the starting point of all your interior decorating projects!

ACHIEVE THIS INTERESTING MARQUETRY EFFECT by staining your floor in a light color, and stenciling over in one or two darker stains, suggests the National Paint and Coatings Association. ## Lifestyle trends dictate home fashion trends

Cocooning. This term, coined by marketing experts, refers to a current trend toward making home and family life the priority and focal point of life—in part a result of recent economic and social uncertainties.

While homeowners are spending more time at home, they're also looking for ways to make their environment more comfortable, more traditional and, aesthetically, more beautiful.

The interior design industry is responding to this trend by creating soft, pleasing environments that are also practical solutions to home improvement problems.

This romantic bedroom is a case in point. The designer chose a soft, country decor using a floral motif throughout, yet answers the practical needs of the room as well.

Practical, attractive solution

For instance, the long narrow windows are covered in fabric vertical blinds by the Dixie Verticals division of Hunter Douglas. Windows such as these are often the source of too much light, hence, furniture fading, drafts in winter and extreme heat in summer.

Dixie Verticals provide light control, privacy control, insulation benefits and a solution to furniture fading, all with the turn of a wand. And, fabric verticals combined with a floral and lace swag overtreatment provide a soft touch and look.

Updating window treatments is one of the best ways to give your home a quick face lift for spring—an important step in making your home, your castle.

THE COMBINATION of fabric verticals and a swag overtreatment works well on the long narrow windows in this traditional romantic bedroom. The Dixie Verticals Division of Hunter Douglas offers the best of fashion and function in their fabric vertical blinds collection. SH894434

Today's kitchens have style, making them ideal places to spend time and entertain

Light the candles and turn out the lights; we're going to have a romantic dinner in the kitchen! If it's been a while since you felt dining in your kitchen could be special, maybe it's time to create a stylish new kitchen.

Years ago, all kitchens were created equal, places to cook. Not so today—people still cook in the kitchen, but they also dine there, meet with friends over coffee, entertain, relax, read, plan and spend precious time with family.

Why shouldn't it be just as stylish as the living room, or any other room, for that matter?

A beautiful way to create style in your kitchen is with new cabinets. And the fresh look of frosted oak is the latest style in kitchen cabinets.

Triangle Pacific, one of the nation's largest manufacturers of cabinets, has announced a new line of beautiful kitchen cabinets in the latest frosted finish. These high quality genuine oak cabinets feature a finish that is resistant to household spills and have a durable wood-grained laminated interior for easy "wipe-up" cleaning.

Three classic door styles are available to complement any decor: Panel-in-frame, square raised panel and arched raised panel.

Everyone loves the new frost finish because it goes beautifully with any decor, from contemporary to country, and complements any color scheme, from pastels to dark shades. After you've installed these beautiful frosted oak cabinets in your kitchen, get out the tux, light some candles, and have dinner in the fanciest room in the house—your new kitchen!

The new Frosted Series is available nationwide from the following Triangle Pacific Cabinet Division brands: TriPac, Del Mar, IXL and Bruce X-tra. For more information on what's new in kitchen cabinets, write: Mickey Kurzman, Triangle Pacific, 16803 Dallas Parkway, Dallas, TX 75248. SH894257

Zap pollutants with electronic air cleaner

For the best spring cleaning ever, zap 95 percent of the indoor air pollutants in your home with an electronic air cleaner.

Nearly 90 percent of our time is spent indoors, and more than half of this time is spent inside the home. Experts say the pollution level in homes is 10 to 20 times greater than that experienced outdoors.

Ordinary furnace filters trap only the largest particles. What they leave behind is unseen dust, smoke and grease particles, animal dander, mildew, pollen, bacteria and viruses floating in the air you breathe.

Honeywell's Electronic Air Cleaners (EAC) automatically clean the air of these unwanted invisible threats to your comfort and health, and protect the efficiency of heating and cooling equipment by keeping the indoor coils clean and like new. This can result in a 10 to 15 percent savings in the cost of your heating and cooling system operation costs.

The airborne particles of dirt, dust, smoke and pollen are charged electrically as they enter the electronic air cleaner and are collected on metal plates, also electrically charged, inside the air cleaner.

Air cleaners electronically filter 95 percent of airborne pollutants from inside air and are available in both room and central models to provide clean air throughout your home.

You can learn more about indoor air quality by writing to Honeywell Inc., MN12-4164, Honeywell Plaza, Minneapolis, MN 55408. SH894071

Revitalize Your Range With Efficient Replacement Parts

Since your range tends to age faster than any other item in the kitchen, after a few years you may need to replace some of its parts. And now, to help you avoid calling a repairman, Robertshaw Controls Company has made it easy to replace range parts all by yourself.

Serious Cooks Want Gourmet Gas Ranges

The increasing popularity of home entertaining and gourmet cooking has spurred consumer interest in restaurant or commercial gas ranges in home kitchens. As a result, several manufacturers now offer professional-type or "gourmet" ranges that are specifically designed for home use. These gas ranges feature the same large cooking capacity, versatility, speed and control of commercial gas ranges, but with important safety features added, such as extra insulation and child-proof knobs. Many of these ranges also have zero-clearance—the unit can be placed next to walls and cupboards without the 6-inch clearance or the fireproof materials required for commercial ranges. Because of the high heat output of these ranges, a vent hood is necessary, but a sprinkler system is not required as it would be with a strictly commercial unit. The American Gas Association, which certifies natural gas appliances

Gas Grill Cooking Tips

About 67 million American households own grills, and 21 million of those homes own two or more grills, according to the American Gas Association. A grill that uses natural gas is convenient, dependable and economical, A.G.A. says, and needs no storage for fuel. Today, consumers who own gas grills can have a "quick disconnect" outlet installed where ever they wish to use a grill. This proven technology means that a natural gas grill can be moved if its owner relocates, can be shifted from place to place depending on need, or can be disconnected and stored inside during bad weather. The gas association recommends these energy-saving ideas when using a gas grill:

- Limit preheating time.
- Use only one burner on a dual-burner grill, unless both burners are needed.
- Prepare slow cooking foods on the grill to keep heat out of the kitchen and to save on air conditioning.
- Cook with the grill cover closed to shorten cooking time and to enhance the smoked flavor.
- Cook several foods or an entire meal at one time.
- Use a thermometer or timer to eliminate guesswork and overcooking.
- Keep "burn-off" cleaning time to a minimum.
- Thaw frozen foods before grilling unless directed otherwise.
- Keep the grill clean and properly maintained by following instructions in the owner's manual.

Arrow Fastener Co., Inc. now have an attachment for their staple gun models T-50, T-50M and T-55 that make it a multi-purpose fastening tool. It shoots a tight gripping Xpando anchor fastener into wood, masonry, metal, hollow doors and drywalls. An Xpando anchor securely fastens almost anything using the same attachment. The attachment slips on the front of the staple gun and gives you a multipurpose fastening tool. Arrow's Xpando fasteners are made in two basic styles: one designed mainly for use in solid materials such as concrete, brick and wood (1/8", 1/4", 7/16", grip range) and the 3/4", 3/4" HD and 7/8" HD grip range mostly for use in the hollow walls like board where regular expansion type anchors would normally be used. ment items for gas and electric ranges. This makes it simple to restore your old range to a like-new appearance—and get it back in peak operating condition. The Do-It-Yourself Range Replacement Center offers a wide variety of replacement parts, including electric range top burners, bake and broil elements and even top burner and oven knobs.

Replacement electric top range burners are available in 6" and 8" diameters, come in various wattages and are designed to fit almost any electric range manufactured in the last 14 years. Electric top burner elements aren't difficult to replace, either. Most of them simply unplug from their receptacles, and the new replacement element plugs right in. Some ranges such as General Electric and Hot-point require detaching and re-attaching wiring for element replacement. But this job can be handled easily by the do-it-yourselfer. Complete instructions are included on the replacement element package. When replacing an electric burner element it's also advisable to replace the receptacle block the element plugs into. In many cases the element goes out because of a problem in the receptacle, which will also damage the new element. Receptacle block replacement involves some new wiring but, again, it can be easily handled by the average homeowner.

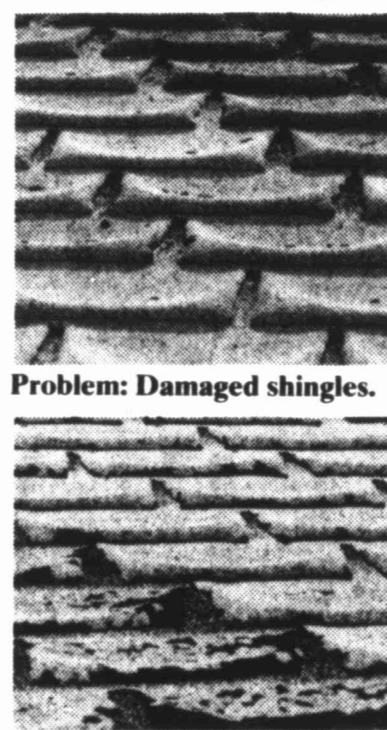

After just a few years of use, your bake and broil elements may not be nearly as efficient as they were when new—but now they're easy to replace. You only need to know the brand name of your stove and the part number of your element. If you can't find the part number, bring your old element and compare it to one of the 17 elements available. Robertshaw also provides "Take One" stuffer to help you determine how to find the correct replacement element. Exactly matching the shape, dimensions, voltage and wattage is not absolutely necessary as long as they're reasonably close. The oven thermostat will correct slight variations in wattage and voltage.

You can easily replace your top burner and oven knobs with Robertshaw knob replacements. They're available in black, white or chrome—and designed to fit most gas and electric ranges. With just these basic fix-ups (and maybe some new drip pans for under the burner elements), you'll be surprised at how new your old range looks—and even more surprised at how well it works. And every kit comes with easy-to-understand installation instructions.

Inspect Your Roof Shingles Before Leaks Cause Damage

Nothing causes more aggravation and expense than a leaking roof. Treasured possessions can be ruined, furniture and carpeting soaked, and family routine upset for days. Homeowners can help prevent leaks before they begin with regular spring and fall inspections of their shingle roofs. Some common danger signals to look for include damaged shingles, roof bare spots, loosened nails, deteriorated flashings, and granules washing off the roof. If some of these problems exist, the homeowner may want to consider re-roofing. Not only will damage from leaks be avoided, but also a new roof will add to the beauty and value of the home. To help make the job go smoothly, the makers of Manville fiber glass shingles have published an illustrated, pocket-size guide that provides quick, easy-to-follow steps for re-roofing, as well as putting a roof on a new home. The guide lists the tools and materials that will be needed, and how to prepare the roof before the shingles are applied. With simple sketches, it explains how to install the new shingles, types of fastening methods, and how to handle flashing, valleys and even dormers. You can obtain a free copy of "How to Apply Manville Fiber Glass Shingles," No. RF-270B, from your building supply dealer, or by writing to Manville Inquiry Dept., 1601 23rd St., Denver, CO 80216.

Vertical shutters enhance restored home

The enthusiasm for restoring older homes is a trend motivated both by economics and by a growing appreciation for the spaciousness, quality and character of the interior architecture of these homes.

While restoration is an adventure not to be undertaken lightly by the impatient and faint-hearted, it can offer enormous rewards aesthetically and in the living space attained, not to mention the abundant returns on investment value and satisfaction of achievement.

One of the first things that strikes your attention in the successfully restored early 20th century-style sitting room shown here is how one detail has been carefully added to the next to build the room's totally coordinated look.

The moldings, beams and fireplace have been painstakingly restored to their former glory by the new owner. A stenciled floral motif highlights the ceiling beams and adds a softening note. The soft and curving lines are reiterated in the rounded shapes of the upholstered pieces.

The window treatment, which emphasizes the height of the room, masks irregularly shaped windows. It combines Joanna vertical louver shutters with a "Finishing Touch" ruffled valance topper from Cameo, both CHF Companies.

The window styling ties the architectural and soft romantic themes together and gives the room its polished look, illustrating once again the important role windows play in decorating.

Two current fashions much favored by interior designers are illustrated in the window dressing: The return of shutters, now available in many new guises, and the softening of the look with over-treatments of various kinds.

Joanna's 2 1/2-inch vertical louvers offer the same light control as a standard vertical blind, but add the textural interest of wood. Now sold in 1 1/4 and 2 1/2-inch width louvers, the shutters come in a broad spectrum of stylish colors.

Easy to care for, they're as practical as they are pretty; combined with Cameo's soft valance toppers, they're one of today's most popular window treatments. SH893768

Proper lighting: Both beautiful and functional

Call it a living room, family room, great room or old-fashioned parlor, the "living room" requires lighting for entertaining guests and for the many family activities taking place in this area.

General and accent lighting
General lighting provides overall illumination. It enables you to see and walk about safely. It can be accomplished with ceiling or wall-mounted fixtures, recessed or track lights, table or floor lamps and, perhaps, a chandelier, especially if your living room features a dining area.

Accent lighting provides drama. It should be an intrinsic part of your decor. Spotlight paintings, sculpture, houseplants or other prized possessions. Ceiling-mounted lights, properly positioned, highlight the texture of walls and draperies.

Effective accent lighting requires at least three times as much light on the object as the general light surrounding it and is usually provided by track, recessed or wall-mounted fixtures.

In a living room with dramatic window expanse, landscape lighting provides a beautiful view from the inside outside. The inside lighting level must be kept low so as not to obscure the outdoor view. Install dimmers.

These devices are very effective at entertainment time, whether to highlight a garden-view in warm weather or an evergreen covered with snow in the dead of winter.

Task lighting also required

For tasks performed in living rooms, bright, glare-free, shadowless light is a must. If a table lamp alongside a chair or sofa is used for reading, the bottom of the shade should be at eye level positioned about 22 inches to the side of the book's center.

Hanging or pendant lamps are another choice; they save table space for accessories (75 to 100-watt incandescent bulbs minimum; higher wattages are required for reading fine print or for senior citizens.)

In living rooms and all home areas, effective lighting beautifies as it helps us work, play and relax.

For a copy of "Lighting Your Life," a 24-page illustrated guide to residential lighting, send $2.00 to: American Lighting Association, 435 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611. SH894283

CREATE lively, lovely living rooms with light.

English country style adds charming note

The renewed—and growing—affection for the softness and prettiness of so-called "English country" decoration is adding new embellishment to homes throughout America today, regardless of the architecture of the house.

Generally distinguished by a profusion of floral motifs, its charm is adaptable to and can be blended with many styles of traditional decor.

In this bathroom in a '30s house, the raised tub was encircled by a rod holding a romantic taffeta shower curtain, "Nosegay" from Jackson, a CHF Company, to create a cozy enclosure and to soften the lines of the old-fashioned footed tub.

The mid-scale bouquets scattered over the surface are in muted pastel tones. The lace-trimmed ruffle and double over-drape enhance the nostalgic character of the curtain.

Coordinating towels in white or ecru with the floral motif embroidered on them lend a decorator quality to the room.

The brass tub and French-style chair bring an eclectic, but elegant note into the bathroom, just proving that it doesn't take big bucks or big space to create a lavish effect.

DAY SURGERY INSTEAD OF HYSTERECTOMY

A new procedure called endometrial ablation is expected to replace the need for major surgery in 25% of women currently undergoing hysterectomy. For those patients with heavy or abnormal bleeding, a sample of the uterine lining is obtained in the office to rule out malignancy, and the patient is placed on one of several medications to thin the uterine lining.

Three weeks later, a Same Day Surgery procedure called endometrial ablation is performed through a fiberoptic scope placed inside the uterus. The uterine lining which causes bleeding is then destroyed using electric current. Minimal discomfort is experienced after surgery and the patient can return to work in one or two days. Sixty percent of the patients treated by this procedure will have no more bleeding, 20% will have some light spotting, and 20% will require hysterectomy in the future. In those patients with no bleeding, contraception is no longer required.

If you, or someone you love needs gyn surgery, ask about new techniques which eliminate the need for prolonged hospitalization and recovery. Our staff is available to answer your questions in writing or over the phone, without obligation.

Replacement windows—A brighter alternative

This year, will you again have to spend hours removing and cleaning old storm windows and repainting weather-beaten window frames? If so, you may be ready to throw in your paintbrush for a brighter alternative—replacement windows.

New windows can do more than improve the looks of your home. They can also save you money on fuel and raise your indoor comfort quotient.

There are some easy steps you should follow when you are ready to look into new windows.

Select window styles that fit your aesthetic and practical needs. Window styles are varied, from bay, bow and casement to double-hung and awning. Each style has qualities that make it unique. You should investigate to determine the windows that are right for you and your home.

Learn about window frame and sash materials. A window sash does more than hold glass. A well made window could make your home more comfortable and secure, decrease your utility bills and virtually eliminate the time you spend maintaining your windows.

Window frame materials include wood, aluminum and vinyl. Vinyl, the newest of frame materials, has many appealing qualities. Like wood, vinyl is a good insulator but, because the color is molded clear through, vinyl won't chip, peel, rot or splinter. And, it never needs painting.

Unlike aluminum, vinyl won't rust or corrode. A vinyl sash slides smoothly in its track, no matter what the season.

To help you make an informed decision about the kind of replacement windows that would be best for your home, CertainTeed Corporation, the nation's leading manufacturer of vinyl building products, offers a fact-filled, 24-page consumer guide.

For your copy of "What You Should Know About Selecting Replacement Windows," send $1 to The CertainTeed Home Institute (VBPD), P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482. SH894416

Drive safely. Don't wreck your life.
