Farmers Developing Skill In Political Arena

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Agriculture, which has relied heavily on the politics of confrontation, is showing signs of developing political savvy of a traditional kind.

Although it still is loosely-knit and proclaims itself without formal leadership, some insiders admit privately that "we're catching on" to how things are done in Congress.

These involve a relative handful of group members who have remained in Washington to see how Congress, the Agriculture Department and the Carter administration react to its demands.

Some of the farmers admit that the incident involving a few of their fellows throwing snowballs and eggs at Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland when he was in Amarillo earlier this week has hurt their public image.

But as one farmer said Thursday, the group generally has refrained from physical violence in making itself felt in Washington. At House and Senate committee hearings on farm issues, farmers often are vocal, but they have not resorted to eggs or snowballs to make their points.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Rep. Jack E. Hightower, D-Texas, have introduced bills which would create a "flexible parity" plan to give farmers higher prices when they voluntarily reduce crop production.

Under this concept, for example, if a farmer opted to set aside 50 percent of his wheat land from production, he could get full parity — about $5 a bushel — for wheat that he did produce. The federal guarantee would be scaled down for farmers who set aside less of their acreage.

At a meeting here late Wednesday, the Washington crew of American Agriculture adopted a resolution giving support to "the concept of 100 percent parity for those producers reducing production in order to reach a fair price for their products."

But an American Agriculture spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the group stopped short of endorsing either Dole's or Hightower's bill.

One reason, he said, is that the group felt that a newly introduced bill is a long way from being law and there are many legislative hazards along the way.

"We haven't seen them out of committees and we don't know for sure that they won't be butchered up in committees," he said.

Further evidence that some in American Agriculture are doing their homework involves what the farmer described as the political realities of getting legislation through a Democratic-controlled Congress and accepted by a Democratic president.

"If Mr. Dole puts his name on a bill, he's on the minority side," the farmer said. "We'd probably prefer — and we hate to get into politics, but I guess we're going to have to get anything done — a Democrat to introduce something we really want."

The recognition by some in American Agriculture that political realities are involved is a step which Bergland urged the group from its beginning last fall to comprehend and use to its advantage.

There is no evidence, however, that American Agriculture will soon evolve into a slick lobbying institution. The group today still relies on visibility to attract attention by its tractor parades, solidarity at congressional hearings and — in the case of a minority faction — hoots, jeers, eggs and snowballs.

Judge Bars Bail Under New Law

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

District Judge Thomas L. Clinton today denied bail to elusive murder suspect Kenneth Owen Jaycon, one of six persons charged in connection with the bizarre Christmas Eve slaying of William Drew Young.

It marked the first instance here of a district court's denying bond for a defendant under auspices of a state constitutional amendment approved by voters last November.

Under terms of the constitutional amendment, bail can be denied by a district judge to a person who is charged with a felony committed while the person is free on bond for an alleged prior felony.

"We feel this is definitely the type of case where this sanction is called for," First Asst. Dist. Atty. Tom Cannon said.

Clinton approved the prosecution motion to deny bond after a brief hearing in which Asst. Dist. Atty. Jim Darnell presented evidence concerning prior accusations against Jaycon, 31.

Records showed the dark-haired suspect had been freed on bail after being indicted for alleged attempted murder in both 1976 and 1977.

Jaycon was indicted for attempted murder May 12, 1976, in connection with an April 25, 1976, shooting incident.

He was indicted for attempted murder again Oct. 4, 1977, in connection with a Sept. 14, 1977, incident.

The suspect, captured Saturday night in an apartment complex in the 4400-block of Avenue J, was the last of six suspects in Young's death to be arrested. Law enforcement officers had sought Jaycon for eight days.

The 28-year-old Young was found in the trunk of his burning car near FM 1585 and Avenue P about 10 p.m. Dec. 24.

Investigators had to wait more than five weeks before a cause of death could be proven to their satisfaction.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled homicide the night of the grisly discovery, originally said Young died from a stabbing, beating or suffocation. Officials had Young's body exhumed Jan. 23, and autopsy results indicated he had been shot.

Also charged with murder in the case are Tico Lowrance, 27; Homer Lowr-

Carter Hikes Pressure On Coal Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter intensified pressure to end the 81-day coal strike today by summoning the industry's top executives to the White House amid reports that a settlement was near.

The White House meeting came as optimism was expressed in the administration and Congress that the industry was on the verge of agreeing to terms sought by the striking miners.

Summoned to the meeting were executives of U.S. Steel Corp., Continental Oil, Bethlehem Steel Corp., National Steel Co. and Pittston Coal. The oil and steel firms or their coal-mining subsidiaries are major members of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the main industry bargaining arm.

Afterward, Edgar Speer, chairman of U.S. Steel, the country's sixth largest coal company, told reporters that Carter had asked for the meeting to "find out where negotiations were."

Asked if a settlement were likely by this weekend, Speer replied: "I would hope so."

George A. Stinson, chairman of National Steel, said: "The president asked us to do nothing except to do what we've been doing — which is press for a settlement."

Stinson said negotiations were "too fluid and sensitive" to say whether the two sides were getting closer.

However, he called it "a very constructive meeting with the president."

Asked whether there was any effort to split the industry, Stinson said: "There was no effort here whatsoever to press for that development."

The striking United Mine Workers, meanwhile, reached tentative agreements with two independent coal companies in Eastern Kentucky. The names of the companies were not immediately available. The terms were reportedly identical to a tentative agreement reached earlier this week with Pittsburg Midway Coal Mining Co.

Officials were hopeful the whole industry might be ready to give in to the union's "bottom line" contract demands.

"I think it's in the death rattle stage," said one official.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd and Jennings Randolph, both Democrats from coal-rich West Virginia, said they were hopeful that a settlement will be reached today or Saturday.

Bit by bit, the Carter administration has been sending the coal industry a message in recent days: Give in to UMW contract demands or be prepared for presidential intervention in the bitter strike.

Taft-Hartley Use Backed By Public

NEW YORK (AP) — By better than a 2-to-1 margin, Americans support invoking the Taft-Hartley Act to put at least a temporary end to the strike in the nation's coalfields, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

Obtaining a court injunction ordering miners back to work is one option under consideration by President Carter to end the strike by 160,000 members of the United Mineworkers Union.

In telephone interviews Tuesday and Wednesday, 65 percent said that Carter should seek the back-to-work injunction.

About 28 percent said that Carter should not seek the remedies allowed by the law. Seven percent said they were not certain what Carter should do.

The back-to-work thrust of the Taft-Hartley Act was described briefly to each of the 1,600 adults interviewed by telephone. They were then asked if they thought Carter should invoke the act.

Congressional and state leaders who met with Carter Thursday on the coal strike said that invoking the Taft-Hartley Act was one options Carter is still considering.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, Carter can establish a fact-finding panel to determine if the strike constitutes a national emergency. If the board finds there is a national emergency, Carter can order the Justice Department to seek an injunction from a U.S. District Court ordering the miners back to work for an 80-day cooling-off period.

The idea behind the "cooling-off" period is to get striking union members back to work while management and labor negotiators continue to try to reach a settlement.

Congressional leaders said other options under consideration by Carter include asking Congress for authority to order the miners back to work while an arbitration panel works out a contract and declaring an impasse in the negotiations, which would allow the the union to negotiate separately with individual coal companies, instead of seeking an agreement covering the more than 100 coal companies that make up the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Brezhnev Raps U.S. Foes Of Arms Pact

A-J News Services

MOSCOW — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, warning that "much is at stake," today accused "some in the United States" of trying to block a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Brezhnev spoke at a Kremlin meeting of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, which heard a report from a high-level delegation that recently visited Washington.

His remarks reflected heightened Soviet concern over the negotiations, which U.S. officials had expected to reach agreement within two months.

An exhaustive editorial in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda earlier this month indicated the talks remained stalled on the U.S. cruise missile, the Soviet Backfire bomber and modernization of weapons technology.

Brezhnev said "notable progress" has been reached in the SALT talks. "At the same time," he said, "it is clear that there are some in the U.S. who would like to retard these negotiations, to prevent their successful conclusion."

Brezhnev said the possibility of "a real breakthrough on the road towards a military relaxation," which could come with the stage of negotiations following the signing of SALT II, was in jeopardy.

"We would like to hope that responsible figures in the U.S. realize how much, as they say, is at stake," Brezhnev said.

The Soviet leader specifically cited Soviet objections to the proposed deployment of the U.S. neutron bomb in Europe, which he called "another negative circumstance" that would "substantially complicate the situation."

"There is only one alternative to rejecting the manufacture of this weapon," he said, "a new qualitative leap in the lethal arms race. It is impossible not to see this."

Brezhnev also raised the Soviets' long-simmering anger over the Jackson-Vanik amendment to the 1974 Trade Act, which bars credit to the Soviet Union as long as the Soviet Union places restriction on emigration of Soviet Jews.

This, Brezhnev said, "we justly regard as an attempt to interfere in our affairs."

Brezhnev spoke to the presidium of the Supreme Soviet as the parliamentary executive body formally endorsed an invitation to a U.S. congressional delegation led by Sen. Henry M. Jackson to visit the Soviet Union.

Russia's Military Role In Ethiopia Disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski today charged that a Soviet general is directing some Ethiopian troops battling Somalians in Africa's Ogaden Desert.

Brzezinski said the size of the Cuban military contingent assisting Ethiopia has risen to between 10,000 and 11,000 troops.

Speaking with reporters about President Carter's upcoming international trip, his national security adviser said talks with leaders in Africa will include efforts to end the fighting.

He said Cuban troop levels have jumped from 5,000 to 7,000, the last public U.S. estimate, to between 10,000 and 11,000.

Earlier, government sources disclosed that three Russian generals are directing Ethiopian combat operations from a headquarters near the front, in an Ogaden counteroffensive that is expected to resume soon.

The sources gave new details of the scope of Soviet efforts responsible for pumping up to $1 billion in arms, as well as more than 5,000 Cuban troops and thousands of tons of military supplies into Ethiopia on Russian ships and planes since last November.

There now are an estimated 1,000 Soviets in Ethiopia, but sources say they — unlike the Cubans — carefully have steered clear of a direct combat role.

Overall Russian operations are in the charge of a three-star Soviet general in the capital of Addis Ababa, the sources said. Three other senior Russian officers, each with two-star rank, work at a headquarters at the ancient walled city of Harar to control operations.

The sources said the counteroffensive in the fighting with Somalia, which has slowed down in recent days, is now expected to resume within days in a two-prong pincer movement. It also is expected to involve fresh units of Cuban troops which recently arrived in the country to push the total of Cubans in Ethiopia past the 5,000 mark.

About 1,000 of the new arrivals were unloaded Feb. 13 from a Soviet passenger ship at the Red Sea port of Assab, the sources said.

Cuba has denied that its troops, the presence of whom the United States has protested, are involved in a direct combat role.

But sources said there is evidence the Cubans have been flying bombing missions as well as being involved in ground combat roles. Weapons supplies from the Soviet Union have included about 40 MiG jet fighters.

In addition to arrivals in Ethiopia by Soviet ships, Cubans have arrived aboard Soviet aircraft, as well as being ferried by planes and smaller ships of various nationalities from Angola and the Marxist state of South Yemen on the southern coast of Saudi Arabia, sources said.

Some 31 Soviet cargo vessels of various types are known to have unloaded military cargo in Ethiopian ports since last November, the sources said. Airlift operations have involved about 65 Russian flights of high priority cargo and passengers.

Carter Sets Long Tour

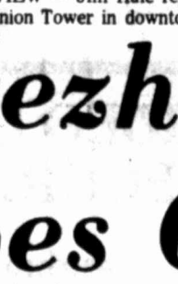

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will travel to Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria and Liberia during a week-long overseas trip starting March 28, the White House announced today.

During the trip, Carter will deliver two major speeches — one in Caracas, Venezuela, and the other in Lagos, Nigeria. He also will take a one-day relaxation break in Rio de Janeiro.

"The trip will provide the president an opportunity to reaffirm this administration's engagement and interest in the questions of economic development, North-South relation, human rights, energy matters, nuclear non-proliferation and regional security," the White House said.

The White House said the Latin American-African swing will run from March 28 through April 3.

LUBBOCK FORECAST

Fair weather is forecast tonight becoming partly cloudy Saturday. Lows tonight should be in mid-30s. Highs Saturday should be in mid-60s. Northerly winds at 10 to 15 mph are forecast tonight.

Snow, Rain May Follow New Front Into Plains

A-J News Services

Slight chances for rain or snow showers again threaten to claim center stage, but not until South Plains dwellers have been exposed to a weekend dose of springlike weather, with temperatures expected to reach the 70s today and the 60s Saturday.

The "not-as-warm" weather expected to move into the South Plains area Saturday afternoon will follow a broad and warm trough of low pressure over Northwestern Texas which is slowly rolling eastward, the National Weather Service reported this morning.

But the chance of snow is not due on the South Plains until Sunday or Monday, and temperatures ranging from the 60s to 70s are predicted for Saturday's high. That day's low reading should fall to the 20s, forecasters reported.

Early today National Weather Service spokesmen said it would be premature to set chances for precipitation early next week, but said possibilities for rain or snow were "real slim" on the South Plains.

Diminishing wind speeds tonight will follow a couple of direction shifts, from southwesterly at 15-20 mph to northwesterly, weathermen said.

Satellite photos revealed a a "small disturbance" centered south of Del Rio and producing high-altitude clouds in some South Texas areas. Fog was noted over the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Most of Texas, however, reported clear skies and warming temperatures, conditions expected to dominate the state weather picture through Saturday.

Before dawn today, most listings in the state were in the 30s and 40s, with statewide extremes ranging from 23 degrees at Marfa to 54 at Brownsville.

Early morning temperatures recorded elsewhere in the state included 31 degrees at Amarillo, 44 at Wichita Falls, 36 at Texarkana, 42 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 40 at Austin, 27 at Lufkin, 31 at Houston, 45 at Corpus Christi, 34 at McAllen, 42 at Del Rio and San Angelo, and 36 at El Paso. Lubbock's overnight low was 33.

Elizabeth Ray Endorses Wayne Hays

MISS RAY

"I would have to say that in my opinion, he is highly qualified and that I wish him success," Miss Ray said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Hays, 67, plans to enter the June Democratic primary for the 99th District seat now held by Rep. A.G. Lancione, who announced plans to retire at age 72. Lancione, however, says he may reconsider.

Miss Ray, who is studying acting in New York and preparing a nightclub act, said she had not talked to Hays "in a long time" but that "I heard that he might run."

Hays resigned from his 14th term in Congress after acknowledging he had an affair with Miss Ray.

She said at the time that she could not even type and was on Hays' House Administration Committee payroll only because she provided him sexual favors.

Hays denied he had hired her with public funds for sexual purposes.

Sinatra Has Flu

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Frank Sinatra's name can be added to the list of celebrities with the flu.

A spokesman for the singer said Sinatra had to cancel a five-day engagement that was to begin today at Harrah's Tahoe.

The Carpenters, who currently are appearing at the club, will fill in for the first day of Sinatra's scheduled appearance, the spokesman said. Sammy Davis Jr. will replace the 62-year-old singer Feb. 25-28.

Nixon Concerned With History

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard Nixon agreed to televised interviews last spring "to help nudge history, in a long, forlorn battle toward a balanced judgment of his presidency," says interviewer David Frost.

"Nixon may have thought at the time that he was in need of money," said Frost, who conducted the syndicated interviews and agreed to pay the former president $600,000 and 20 percent of total profits for the five-part series.

"But very soon thereafter his main concern became the historic impact of the thing ... I believe that his main concern was history," Frost said in an interview.

Frost said that as he worked with Nixon during the tapings, he was surprised at the former president's inability to make small talk.

"For example, when we were talking about (Soviet Premier Leonid) Brezhnev, the first thing he said was, 'I wouldn't want to be a Russian leader. They never know when they're being taped.' He said that absolutely straight."

Best Foot Forward

CHETOPA, Kan. (AP) — Chuck Bentley has left his footprints on this tiny Southeast Kansas community in a way residents won't quickly forget.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

The 20-year-old resident of nearby Oswego fashioned two plywood feet, 17 inches long and 10 inches wide, went bounding across the snowy countryside a week ago, and sparked a "Big Foot" monster hunt that drew some 5,000 participants.

The spooky case was abruptly solved two days after it began when Bentley, alias "Big Foot," appeared on a newscast of a Pittsburg, Kan., television station.

He said he was trying to add some excitement to life in Chetopa.

W.W. Lancaster Jr., Chetopa police chief, said it was possible that as many as 5,000 people — triple the population of Chetopa — had visited the area in the last two days.

Bentley said he created the large feet in the shop room at Chetopa High School last week and attached them to lace-up boots.

Bentley, who is 6-foot-6, walked briskly through the timber area, running and jumping to create the seven-foot strides. He said he would climb over fences to leave the impression his monster was jumping the high barriers with ease.

Demo Party Treasurer Quits Post

McCleary's decision, disclosed Thursday, comes in a continuing turnover involving political supporters and campaign workers placed in charge of the party machinery when President Carter entered the White House.

Although McCleary officially attributed his own resignation to a "need to do something else," party sources, who asked not to be named, said it stems from a longstanding tug of war between the Carter newcomers and the party's old guard over control of party affairs.

Former Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis, an early backer of Carter's presidential aspirations and the new president's first choice for party chairman, left that post last month after agreeing it was a "lousy job."

Paul Sullivan, Curtis' top aide as executive director of the DNC, has announced his resignation effective in early March, and press secretary Charlotte Scot already has left. Both were active in the Carter campaign.

Replacements have been selected by the White House, but generally people more acceptable to party regulars and less identified with the Carter campaign.

McCleary said he told White House political adviser Hamilton Jordan, a close friend, a month ago that he wanted out, but agreed to stay at Jordan's insistance.

McCleary said he had no immediate prospects, but sources said he is likely to be offered an administration job or begin groundwork for Carter's 1980 campaign.

Considered in political circles to be an effective fund-raiser, McCleary had exceeded the DNC's budget anticipations by $300,000 last year.

Farmers Plan Bridge Block

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Georgia farmers plan to block a bridge on the United States-Mexican border and then return home to barricade state highways as they adopt a more militant policy to draw attention to their crusade for higher farm prices, strike leaders say.

"We're going to have some disruptions now. We're going to make an international incident," state strike leader Tommy Kersey said Thursday.

"We're going to hold the Mexican border as long as we can. We think we can hold it at least a day."

Kersey said 50 farmers plan to be on a bridge over the Rio Grande March 1. A spokesman for striking Texas farmers said they had no plans to join in the border demonstration.

When Georgia farmers return from Texas, they will begin demonstrations to block traffic on state highways, Kersey told 150 striking farmers who gathered in the lobby of the Georgia Farm Bureau building to demand the resignation of its president, Emmett Reynolds.

The farm bureau board voted in a closed meeting not to ask Reynolds to resign and refused to call a special meeting of the bureau's voting members to consider ousting him.

Strike leaders have accused Reynolds of being unsympathetic to the protesting farmers. Reynolds said in an interview Thursday such accusations were "being made solely without basic justification."

The farm bureau president also told reporters in Macon that he had been threatened because of the strike controversy.

"My wife was told earlier that if I didn't cooperate, I would pay, the farm bureau would pay or my family would pay," he said.

"My wife was called five times in one night by an anonymous caller which says we can't get to Emmett, but we can get to you and we are going to," Reynolds added.

Reynolds, who vowed he does not intend to resign, said one of the farmers at Thursday's meeting told him he would "spend a lot of sleepless nights between now and November" if he stayed in office.

Kersey told the picketing farmers, who greeted the board's vote with a splattering of eggs, that meat and vegetables being brought across the Mexican border are hurting the American Agriculture movement, which is sponsoring a nationwide farmers' strike.

He said shutting down the border would draw attention to the strike.

Kersey, the southeastern coordinator for the strike effort, said possible brushes with the law would not dissuade farmers from blocking the U.S.-Mexican border.

He said he expects to "run into some trouble with the law" over the planned border demonstration. But he said farmers would take advantage of jurisdictional problems on the border to avoid arrest.

"I think we've learned how to leave just before they arrest us," he said.

However Kersey, a Unadilla farmer, refused to be specific about demonstrations in Georgia "because it might give them (authorities) too much time to think about it and be ready."

Test Affects Buildings

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Tall buildings swayed slightly as a much-postponed nuclear test rumbled beneath the desert north of here.

Department of Energy spokesman Dave Jackson said, "Most people felt some small ground motion. People on upper floors of buildings nine stories and above tended to feel more than people at ground level because the buildings tend to act as an upside-down pendulum," he said. The actual movement of the buildings Thursday was about one centimeter, Jackson said.

Extensive monitoring of the site disclosed no radiation leakage, Jackson said. "We haven't had any leakage detected since a test in 1971," he said. Thursday's explosion had the effective yield of 20,000 to 150,000 tons of TNT, Jackson said.

Chicago Builds 'Deep Tunnel'

By MARK K. METZGER

CHICAGO (AP) — Gnawing their way through limestone bedrock 200 feet below the streets of Chicago, giant machines are carving a mammoth sewer system called "Deep Tunnel."

Above ground, critics from here to Washington, D.C., are saying the project digs too deeply into tax coffers, and may cause more harm than good.

The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago, which is building Deep Tunnel, describes it as an innovative solution to two big problems: water pollution and lowland flooding. The project has attracted interest of other municipalities and officials in Milwaukee and San Francisco have begun studying it.

Deep Tunnel is actually a network of 132 miles of tunnels, ranging from 11½ feet in diameter to 35 feet, big enough for three railroad locomotives to drive side-by-side.

The system would take sewage and storm water from Chicago and 52 suburbs and channel it to underground reservoirs. The water would be hauled up and treated before being released into streams and rivers.

The system is being cut out of the layer of dolomite limestone that lies deep beneath Chicago. Moles, $5 million to $7 million machines that bore through the rock, leave behind corridors with smooth, almost polished walls.

Chicago always has been plagued by water problems because its land is low and flat, making it difficult to get rid of sewage and prone to flooding. The current sewer system periodically backs up during rainstorms, sending a mix of stormwater and sewage into residential basements and, occasionally, into Lake Michigan, which the city and many suburbs depend on for drinking water.

Critics charge that Deep Tunnel will not clean the 75-mile stretch of the Illinois River now polluted with Chicago's waste. They fear sewage might leak through the tunnel walls to pollute groundwater, and that blasting for the tunnel might rock the foundations of downtown skyscrapers.

They also charge that the tunnel is just too expensive. The sanitary district acknowledges that the estimated cost has risen from $1.6 billion in 1972 to $2.6 billion. But a study by the congressional General Accounting Office says the true cost will be closer to $7.3 billion by the time the tunnel is completed in 1983. If financing were to continue, the reservoirs would be built after 1983.

A GAO draft report recommended a halt in federal financing of the project. Federal money accounts for 75 percent of the current work.

The Better Government Association, a watchdog group, and an ad hoc coalition of civic groups have also called for a halt in construction. They urge the sanitary district to consider other, cheaper solutions that they say were ignored.

The coalition has proposed an alternative plan that would include creation of water retention ponds on flat roofs, redesigned storm sewers to slow the water flow and increased water rates to cut consumption. The coalition estimates that this plan would create more jobs than Deep Tunnel, at no more than $3.7 billion.

Architect Harry Weese, who designed the Washington, D.C., subway, claims the tunnel was designed by "people who are very good at getting every cent of federal money possible for the most useless thing in the world."

DEEP TUNNEL WORK — Work continued in the 200-foot deep Metropolitan Sanitary District's Deep Tunnel project under Chicago and surrounding communities. A citizen's group has asked for a halt on the project, which is being constructed to control pollution and flooding. Cost of the project has risen from the original estimate of $1.6 billion to $7.3 billion. (AP Laserphoto)

Auto Firms' Credibility Questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's chief auto safety official believes American consumers have a low opinion of automobile manufacturers, in part because Detroit has tried for years to sell style and color but not safety.

Joan Claybrook, who was a consumer lobbyist for Ralph Nader before she took over the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said almost every American knows someone who experienced a crash injury but the car makers continue to believe safety won't sell cars.

"I don't think the automobile industry has much credibility with the American public from what I can tell," she said in an interview. "And I know that's frustrating to the auto manufacturers. But I think it has a lot to do with their crying wolf a number of times ... and their generally negative posture toward doing things which the public really cares about.

"I would like to see them discuss something other than style and whiz-bang and color," she added. "The manufacturers have said for years that safety doesn't sell. But they've never tried it, eally."

She said manufacturers fear that they'll remind potential customers of the car's dangers rather than strong points, but "the fact is that every family in this country has had something to do with an auto crash. So they do care about safety."

Miss Claybrook said the agency is trying to develop general car safety standards covering such things as the ability of a car to survive a crash. If such standards do come out, she said, there could be a rating system and "I would hope that the companies who do the best might try to sell that."

"I think they well might," she said. "I think they shortcut the American public by not selling the advantage if they have it in the safety end."

She said the agency would issue in the next two weeks or so a long-delayed proposal for uniform tire quality grading, which she said could also be the basis of more informative advertising.

Rules requiring manufacturers to try their tires against a standardized government test, she said, would let the public know "not only what they cost but what kind of good traction, tread wear and heat resistance they have."

Some tire manufacturers already have complained that the test would not be an aid to comparison shopping because so many variables are involved.

Miss Claybrook said she sat in recently on the administration's "hot line" — a toll free telephone number on which consumers can report safety or defect complaints. She said it was just after the agency had complained to Chrysler Corp. about stalling problems in the Aspens and Volares.

Miss Claybrook said she has instructed all of her top staff to take a turn at the complaint hot line. The number is (800) 4249393.

Armored Car Firms Offer Settlements

ATLANTA (AP) — Brinks, Inc., Wells Fargo Armored Service Corp. and Purolator Courier Corp., the nation's three largest armored car companies, have offered to settle antitrust lawsuits against them for $11.8 million in damages payable to their customers.

The proposed settlement was presented Thursday to U.S. District Court Judge Richard Freeman and is subject to his approval.

The lawsuits were consolidated after two of the firms, Brinks and Wells Fargo, were indicted last June on charges of price fixing and customer allocation. An out-of-court settlement would eliminate the necessity of a trial in the consolidated case.

Under the proposal, Chicago-based Brinks would pay $5.65 million, Purolator, of Piscataway, N.J., would pay $3.8 million, and Wells Fargo, a subsidiary of Baker Industries, Inc., of Parsippany, N.J., would pay $2.35 million.

Hugh Flaherty, a spokesman for Brinks in Greenwich, Conn., said the original indictment, which names only Brinks and Wells Fargo, "alleges the companies conspired to allocate customers and submit collusive bids. The criminal indictment charged each company with a felony violation of antitrust laws."

If Freeman approves the settlement, the court would be required to give notice of the agreement to thousands of firms and governmental units. A hearing would follow that notice to allow objections to the agreement.

Detroit Gets Advice On Selling Cars

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese Ministry of International Trade and Industry advised Detroit today on how to sell more cars in Japan.

Recommendations included building cars to meet Japanese specfications, pricing them competitively and expanding local sales and service facilities.

Of the 4.1 million new cars registered in Japan in 1976, only 40,000 were imported, and only about 15,000 of those were American. Japan has been accused abroad of erecting tariff barriers to keep out imported cars. A ministry official said the report was aimed at correcting "misunderstandings."

It said the Japanese still regard imported cars as a status symbol, but Japan essentially "is a market for compact cars."

U.S. automakers should find markets for their compacts in Japan because the demand is steadily shifting to larger models, the report continued. It pointed out that most American sales efforts focus on the big cities and advised that sales and service networks be improved outside these centers.

The report said a recent U.S. magazine article reported: "The Japanese consumer has to pay out $12,000 to buy an American car which can be bought for $3,500 in the U.S., and such secondary duties which jack up the retail price of imported cars must be removed."

The report said profits for the Japanese importers and dealers account for 20 to 30 percent of the retail price.

Divorce Awarded To Abused Wife

LONDON (AP) — Iris Pizzuto endured as many as five beatings a week for six years from husband Salvatore because she thought it was all part of married life, a woman judge said in awarding her a divorce decree.

After their marriage in 1970, Pizzuto knocked his wife unconscious with a karate blow to the neck, stood on her when she was pregnant, threw her across a room in their London home, banged her head against a cupboard, and kicked and punched her, Judge Rose Heilbron said Thursday in the High Court.

Judge Heilbron said Mrs. Pizzuto, who is now 37, finally left her husband in 1976. Pizzuto, 43, denied his marriage had broken down. He told the court he wanted a reconciliation for the sake of their five children.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Keeping Heat On Energy

ENERGY IS just about the favorite topic of conversation—though not conservation—in Washington these days. And next week, even more words will be added to the volumes that have emerged since 1973.

Nineteen-seventy-three, you'll recall, was when the Arabs made us acutely conscious that our civilization rests upon oil under foreign sands.

The latest verbal assault on the energy problem is the 5th Energy Technology Conference and Exposition to be conducted Monday through Wednesday.

Sponsors include the U.S. Department of Energy, the American Gas Association, the Electrical Power Research Institute, and the National Coal Association.

GOVERNMENT INSTITUTES, Inc., the conference manager, says that more than 100 speakers and 1,500 leading energy experts from government, industry and the scientific community will be on hand.

In addition, a long list of business organizations and institutions have rented booths to display their wares.

Although GII is a nonprofit organization, these sorts of conferences have become good income sources. With 1,000 paying $155 each to attend (not including what they will pay for hotel accommodations), and 100 exhibitors paying $450 for each booth, the conference can expect to gross close to $200,000. Most of the speakers, meanwhile, receive at most a modest honorarium and many perform for free.

ENERGY SEC. James R. Schlesinger has been invited to address the meeting, but the conference managers probably won't know whether he can attend until after it begins.

Other speakers include Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., chairman of the House science and technology committee's subcommittee on advanced energy technologies and conservation. Former CIA Director William Colby, now an energy lawyer in Washington, also will be there.

Insiders say energy law is a new and growing specialty on and near The Hill.

The conference is the fifth in a series that began in 1973 at the peak of the Arab oil embargo. Each year the conferees meet and exchange views on how we can resolve our growing dependence on foreign oil. Each year the dependence grows.

Eggs Ample Example

SECRETARY of Agriculture Bob Bergland easily could have misinterpreted the actions of a few farmers who tossed eggs and snowballs in his direction and let the air out of tires in Amarillo this week.

Shucks, they were just trying to deflate inflationary pressures, reduce the nation's egg surplus and give themselves a snowball's chance to survive.

City folks ought to be thankful, though, that the American Agriculture Movement's demonstrations are featuring air conditioned tractors instead of horses and mules.

At least when the tractors go home, they don't leave much evidence behind.

Sudden Thought: When a demonstration gets out of hand, like it did in Amarillo, which comes first—the chicken or the egg?

DO YOU KNOW anyone who is past 90 and who has lived in Lubbock County for more than 70 years?

If so, Claude S. Denham of 3202 20th St. would like to hear from you—fast.

Reason: Mrs. Lula Lavinia Caldwell of Slaton will celebrate her 90th birthday on March 6. Her friends are planning a birthday party on March 5 and they think she can lay claim to the combination title of oldest and longest resident of Lubbock County.

She moved here April 1, 1908.

If you know of anyone who can challenge that record, Denham asks that you call either him or Mrs. Bishop Matthews of Slaton.

JOYCE B. WILLIAMS, who signs herself as a student teacher at Monterey High School, has responded to my recent comments about lack of discipline in the schools.

Those comments were triggered by Supt. Ed Irons' rejection of an MHS request for a student smoking area based on the plea that it is impossible for teachers and staff to enforce a no-smoking rule on campus.

Two points in her letter need clarification: (1) I said that lack of discipline, not smoking, leads to crime and (2) failure of discipline in the home does not excuse the schools from exercising it.

"WE FOUND YOUR column concerning teenage lawlessness enlightening. If smoking and littering lead to 'rampant crime' in Lubbock, then the nation is heading for an outbreak of middle-aged criminals.

"Isn't it mom and dad that light up that first cigaret in front of their children as a token of adult morality (or, maybe, it's the neighbor or the mailman)?

"Isn't it dad or Uncle Fred that carelessly tosses that Coke bottle out the window exclaiming, 'We're out in the country so it doesn't really matter and, besides, everyone else does it'.?

"MONTEREY HIGH School does have its problems but tell us one school that doesn't. The question is, 'Where do you, John Q. Citizen, draw the line on the school's role in the community?

"Are we teachers? Policemen? Parents? Or all of the above? Potty patrols, paddles and tossing students out on their ears isn't going to keep students from breaking rules.

"Principal B.J. Randles was at least being realistic. If the students don't smoke in the bathrooms, they'll find some place else. Drive down 47th Street some morning at 8.

"Students will run their cars for half an hour—just for a cigaret. Do you want us to go out and tap on the windows of mommy's and daddy's car? How about issuing us whips and chains?

"THE SCHOOL cannot be responsible for policing students' actions 24 hours a day and it is almost impossible to control them for the 8 hours they are at school.

"Teachers are educated to teach and not trained in the art of raising and disciplining the community's problems. Schools cannot be burdened with the responsibility of enforcing rules and laws which parents fail to enforce at home.

"It is tragic that the neighborhood has to suffer because a few students litter yards and break rules but, remember, these children are not the school's; they are your children.

"Why throw stones at the schools when you probably should be aiming a little closer to the homes?"

'King' Makes Pawn Of FBI

WASHINGTON—As U.S. Judge William Webster takes over as the new director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation this week, he inherits several existing internal security problems plus an emerging major new one.

Most urgent of these is the carefully orchestrated campaign to discredit the FBI and cripple the agency's effectiveness against the growing threat of communist espionage and subversion in the U.S.

With fallout from the FBI's aggressive activities in protecting the nation's security during the Vietnam war casting a cloud over the agency, an atmosphere has been created where almost any type of charge can be publicly leveled against the G-men with immunity.

A graphic illustration of the latest of these anti-FBI attacks was contained in the $5 million, made-for-television movie "King", portraying the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the slain civil rights leader.

AIRED DURING prime viewing time, the three-part, six hour series attacked the FBI on two fronts.

First, the show tried to discredit the FBI's investigation of communist influence on King and his movement during the 1960s by inferring that the agency found none.

Second, the final part in the King series created the notion of conspiracy, with possible FBI involvement, in the assassination of the civil rights leader without actually saying so.

With the special house committee, set up to probe King's death, moving in the same anti-FBI direction, veteran G-men believe it is vital for Webster to become fully acquainted with the campaign and its objectives because of the national security implications.

THE CAREFULLY PLACED references in the "King" series to the emerging black power and problems in South Africa—designed to create a linkage of the black African and U.S. movements in the mind of viewers—is considered highly significant by security experts because of the timing.

This attempt at mass attitude creation comes as a number of militant black groups, under the banner of the Coalition for Human Rights in South Africa, are preparing for their first large-scale demonstrations in the U.S. against that country's racial policies.

Using next month's (March 17-19) Davis Cup matches with South Africa at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., as the stage for worldwide TV coverage, this coalition is seeking to turn out 40,000 demonstrators.

Their objective is to create the "needed motion" for building the new alliance of blacks in Africa and the U.S.

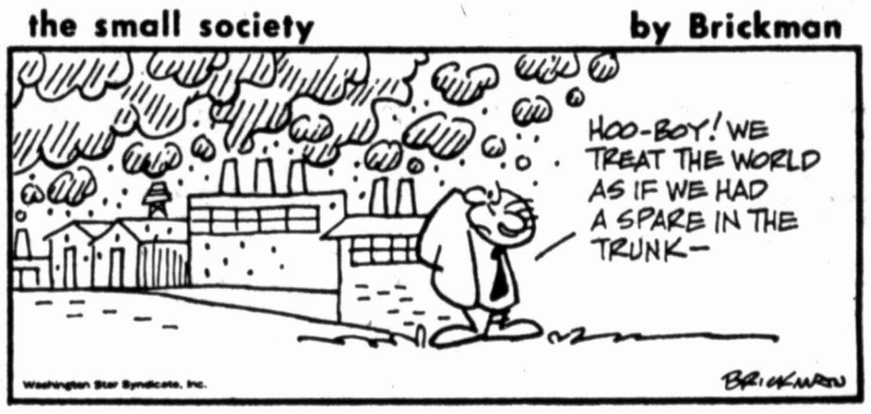

Organizers of the demonstrations have been trying to create support for the Vanderbilt protest by publicly inferring that the South African government must somehow be involved in the mysterious beating of Richard E. Lancheck, a professor at Virginia Wesleyan College and activist against present South African government.

The former New Yorker was assaulted after spending four days last week in Nashville helping to organize the coming demonstrations. Local police say there is no evidence of any involvement by the South African government in the beating.

Because of the tight restrictions placed on the FBI and their methods of surveillance in recent months, the agency has had to rely almost entirely on public source material for their assessment of the internal security threat that could arise from the start of the new massive demonstrations.

Veteran FBI officials say privately even this limited information points to an emerging internal security problem for the nation that could rival that created by the massive demonstrations of the 1960s and early 1970s.

World Wise Students Getting CLEP Start

YOU CAN EARN credit toward a regular college degree by taking exams to test the knowledge you've gained way outside the traditional classroom or traditional education system.

You can save substantial amounts of money and slash the time it takes you to earn a college degree, can qualify for job advancement, can benefit in many other ways simply by demonstrating through a series of exams that you have the knowledge to warrant your getting a head start.

You can show your qualifications by taking the College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) exams during the third week of every month at more than 1,000 test centers located on college campuses from coast to coast. One exam costs $20; two, $30; three to five, $40.

AFTER A FULL decade of trial and experimentation, the concept of credit by examination has become widely accepted at about 1,800 U.S. colleges and universities.

Since its introduction in 1967, about 50,000 individuals have taken CLEP tests, because for many, CLEP offers greater flexibility in choosing courses and provides a form of financial aid based on ability rather than need.

In addition to civilians involved in CLEP, more than 800,000 exams have been administered to the armed forces without cost to them as part of the DANTES program (Defense Activity for Non-traditional Education Support).

Military or civilian personnel may apply to take CLEP tests through your military base education officer.

General exams test your knowledge in five basic liberal arts areas—English composition, math, humanities, natural sciences and social sciences-history.

ANOTHER 47 EXAMS measure your knowledge of specific subjects such as American history, American literature, introductory accounting, computers and data processing biology and fundamentals of nursing.

New exams in the field of dentistry were added in 1977.

Starting next fall, the general exams will be lengthened from 60 to 90 minutes and the English composition exam will be offered in two forms:

One 45 minutes of objective questions plus a 45-minute essay, the other entirely objective.

If you think you're a good writer, take the essay form, which will be offered twice a year—for the first time this June, then again in October.

In three Northeastern states—New York, New Jersey, Connecticut—you can get external degree programs enabling you to earn degrees by passing exams, including CLEP tests, and by showing in other ways that you have satisfied the educational requirements.

IF YOU'VE BEEN out of school and are worried about how you'll make out, you can have your test scores sent only to yourself.

If you need help in preparing, some colleges and universities will help you.

Ernest Mackey of Michigan, who received 12 semester hours of credit at Macomb County Community College and has been out of school for 25 years, prepared for CLEP at Warren Public Library.

He has been promoted by Chrysler since taking CLEP.

At Illinois State University, for instance, studies of nearly 4,000 students concluded that CLEP students did as well as or better than students of similar academic ability.

"THE CLEP BATTERY is the best thing we have right now," says Dr. Paul Parker, director of instructional systems for the Florida state universities.

"The CLEP makers have done a fantastic job of getting it across that we should give credit for prior learning in higher education and in spurring reforms."

Before you decide to take CLEP tests for college credit or job advancement, check with the college or your firm on its CLEP policy.

Turning Tide Upon The Hill

WASHINGTON—Pride goeth before destruction, says the Proverb, and an haughty spirit before a fall. We saw the Proverb working in the House on the evening of Feb. 8, when a bill to create an Office of Consumer Representation went down to defeat.

When the first such bill appeared a few years ago, it was the pride and joy of Ralph Nader. In its final unrecognizable form, the bill was an embarrassment all around.

One of the forces that contributed significantly to its defeat was Nader himself.

Once he was "Mr. Consumer," and his name struck terror among political figures. Today his name inspires animosity instead.

In the judgment of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., Nader's support of the consumer bill cost the administration at least eight votes in the final rollcall. Other members might put the number still higher.

BUT NADER'S haughty spirit was not the main force working against the bill. Neither should business lobbyists claim too much credit for killing the measure.

My guess is that something curious is happening on Capitol Hill—something curious, and unexpected, and wonderfully encouraging.

It is barely possible that the vote two weeks ago against the Nader bill marked the turning of an ideological tide.

There is not a wiser old pol in the House than its speaker. Toward the end of the debate, O'Neill took the floor in eloquent mystification.

In the 93d Congress, the vote was 293 to 94 in favor.

Now, plainly, even a watered-down bill was in terrible trouble.

"WHY, ALL OF a sudden," asked O'Neill, "is there this tremendous change in the feeling of this body? I do not understand it."

Well, I am not sure I understand it, either, but when the roll was called up yonder, the bill crashed down to defeat by 227 to 189. President Carter had urged its enactment. O'Neill had begged his colleagues to go along.

The sponsors had accepted a dozen amendments in the desperate hope of sending a bill—any bill!—to conference. Consumer groups had lobbied for the bill just as vigorously as business groups had lobbied against it.

In its final, threadbare, patched-up form, the bill was not a terrible bill. Yet down it went.

O'Neill's "tremendous change" is a dramatic move away from the legislative prospects that seemed so clear after the congressional elections of 1974 and 1976.

It was in 1974 that the Democrats picked up 52 seats in the House. Far from bouncing back, the Republicans lost one seat more in 1976.

THERE WAS EVERY reason to believe that in 1977 the House would whoop it up for every bill that liberals, laborites, and a Democratic President might desire.

What else was to be expected with Democrats in command?

We were fooled by the labels. Democrats have not been behaving as Democrats should.

On the vote the other night, no fewer than 101 Democrats deserted their President and their speaker.

They cast solidly conservative votes against the further expansion of a paper-shuffling federal bureaucracy.

If this were the first time for such a phenomenon, the vote might be dismissed as an anti-Nader backlash.

But in the past year we have seen the House reject a common site picketing bill much sought by labor.

WE HAVE SEEN the Senate balk on the tax-and-tax provisions of an energy package.

No experienced observer sees any immediate prospect of a national health insurance program or a new Department of Education.

The so-called labor reform bill, passed by the House last October, is running into trouble in the Senate.

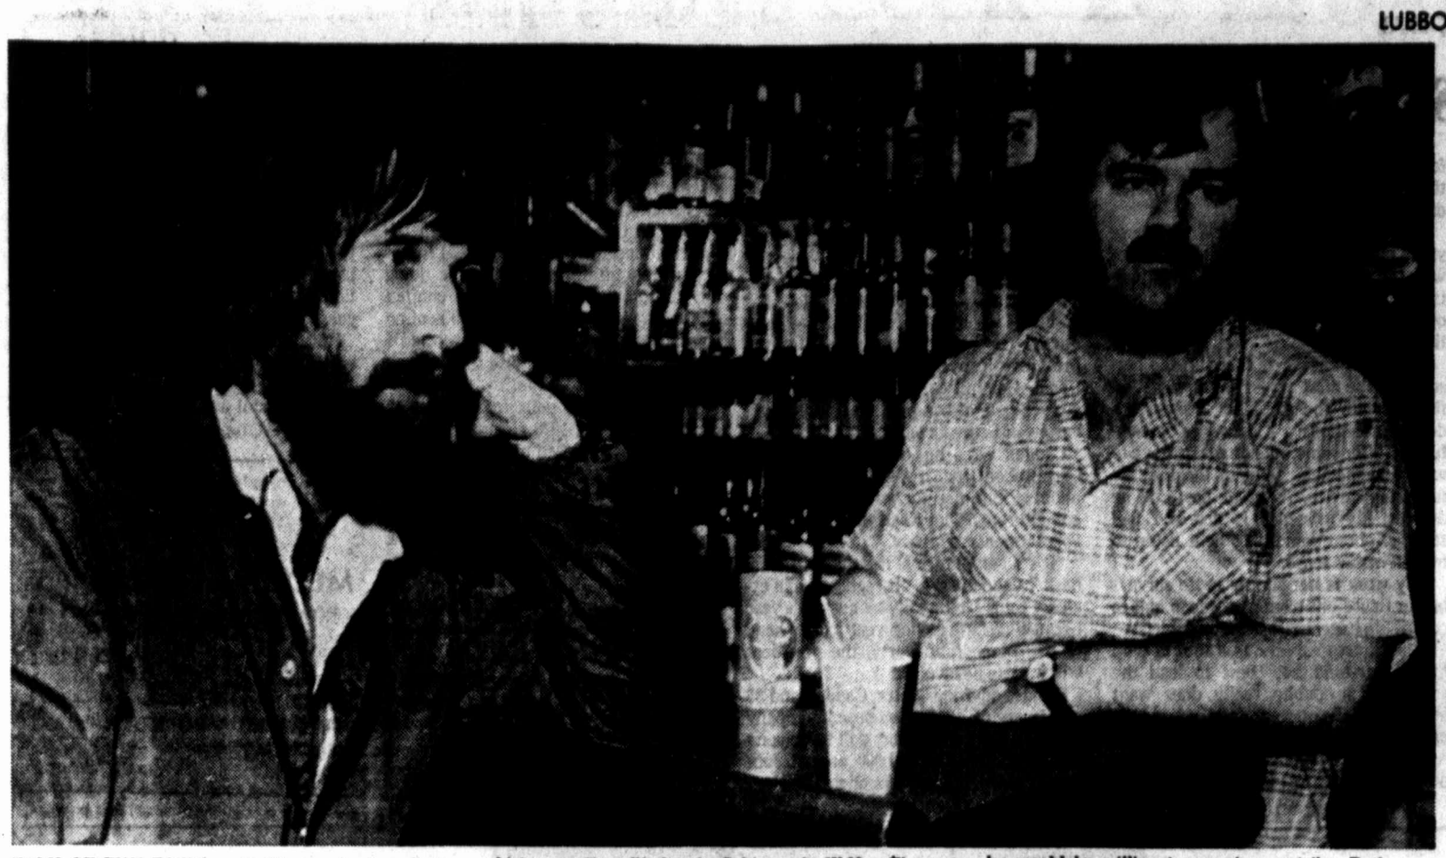

The misbegotten bill to create an Office of Consumer Representation was not a vitally important or monumentally costly bill. It was little more than a bill to make a big bureaucracy bigger.

Such an objection has not deterred Democratic majorities in recent years. But Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey, a key sponsor, had it right. "This is not the spring season for the blooming of bureaucracies."

On the contrary, this is the season of the deep freeze. Politically speaking, this welcome chill could last all year.

TALK OF THE TOWN — Striking coal miner Justin Howell, left, and tavern owner Chuch Ferrell talked about the longest coal strike in United Mine Workers' history at Ferrell's bar in Cabincreek, W.Va., Thursday. Howell, who works at Carbon Fuel Co., said, "I can make it as long as it takes," when asked how long he would be willing to remain on strike. Both men feared possible violence if the mines are taken over by the government. (AP Laserphoto)

Yantis Rejects Public Hearing

AUSTIN (UPI) — State Insurance Board chairman Hugh C. Yantis has changed his mind about proposed public meetings to allow Texs homeowners an opportunity to express their opinions on an insurance industry request for a $105 million increase in property insurance rates.

The State Insurance Board Thursday rejected the proposal for the public meetings on new rates for fire, extended coverage and homeowner insurance coverage.

On Wednesday, Yantis had proposed the public hearings. But Thursday Yantis said the procedures for conducting such hearings would be too complicated under the state Administrative Procedures Act.

Board member Durwood Manford agreed with Yantis, and the rate hearing was adjourned without hearing any public testimony. The third board member, Ned Price, was not present when the vote was taken.

An insurance board representative said Yantis had determined it would not be practical to have further hearings on property insurance rate proposals.

"Mr. Yantis still plans to have public hearings on insurance in general from time to time and place to place," said Bill Berger, research director for the agency.

Yantis also asked actuaries for the board, who initially had recommended a 11.4 percent average statewide increase that would cost policyholders about $92 million annually, to determine if theere were other alternatives which would permit the board to approve a smaller rate increase.

"They really have only two options, now, what the industry wanted — a $105 million increase — and what the staff recommended," Berger said.

"Mr. Yantis asked the staff to determine if there is any chance of getting it any lower."

Former board chairman Joe Christis, now a candidate for the U.S. Senate, in a statement Wednesday said the board should indefinitely postpone the rate hearings.

Christie said the increase requested by the industry is three times the rate of inflation,

Brown Berets Plan Big Spring March

Brown Beret leader Gilbert Herrera announced this morning plans for a "last march" Saturday in Big Spring to protest the death of Juan Galaviz in that city.

Herrera said the Brown Berets want to see an investigation from some department other than the Big Spring office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Galaviz was shot by a law enforcement officer in December.

The marchers will carry picket signs, Herrera said.

Herrera also stated the march would be the last one by the Brown Berets, and intimated that if the march is not successful the organization may turn to more "militant" means.

Hill Cites State Spending Hike

By FRANK E. GRIFFIS
United Press International Writer

Attorney General John Hill says Gov. Dolph Briscoe's abministration does not deserve the fiscally conservative image Briscoe tries to portray.

"State spending has doubled in the last five years under Briscoe," Hill, who is running against Briscoe in the Democratic primary, told Dallas supporters Thursday. "What we have in Austin is not conservative government. It is not carefully managed government. It is not economical government. It is government running itself.

"Efficient government is less expensive, and efficient government is what we need. The record is clear that four more years of Briscoe will not provide efficient government any more than the previous five years."

In other political developments Thursday Republican gubernatorial candidate Ray Hutchison said his GOP primary opponent, Dallas oil executive Bill Clements, is trying to divert voters' attention from his political qualifications.

The former Dallas legislator and former chairman of the Texas Republican Party criticized Clements for allegedly seeking the endorsement of 1976 GOP presidential contender Ronald Reagan. The former California governor Thursday completed a two-day tour of Texas during which he campaigned for Republican congressional candidates.

Hutchison said it would be a "horrible mistake" to ask a presidential contender in the 1980 elections to endorse anyone in a state race. He said he has not sought Reagan's support in the governor's race.

"It's also a tremendous disservice for Bill Clements to continue to try to bring them into the primary because it's an attempt to divert the people from the issue of whether he's qualified to be governor of the state of Texas," he said.

"Governor Reagan has not endorsed Bill Clements and he's not going to endorse Bill Clements."

Hutchison said the state had suffered because leading lawmakers, advocating a system of zero-base budgeting, did not maintain control of state finances. He said he would institute a budgeting procedure requiring state agencies to set priorities for budget items within their offices.

"It's a question of getting at this problem of spending," Hutchison said.

Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, U.S. candidate, said a poll conducted this month by an Austin firm shows he is leading Democratic primary opponent Joe Christie by 7 percentage points in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and by 11 points statewide. Krueger announced the poll results at the opening of his Dallas campaign headquarters.

Krueger said Henson-Hopkins Associates of Austin contacted 140 persons in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and 620 persons statewide in the poll.

Candidate for agriculture commissioner, Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, announced he will testify before a congressional committee in Washington on March 1. Hubenak, chairman of the Texas House Committee on Agriculture and Livestock, said it will be the second time he has testified in Congress concerning the plight of Texas farmers.

White Says Carter May Visit Texas

DALLAS (UPI) — The Democratic Party attaches so much emphasis to Texas congressional races this year that President Carter may be involved in the campaigning for the November election, says Democratic Party Chairman John C. White.

"People say Texas doesn't have any influence in Washington. That's ridiculous," said White, a former Texas agriculture commissioner. "Texas will be in the spotlight this year.

"President Carter will be campaigning this year and I am assuming he will come to Texas. It's a key party state."

Several veteran members of Texas' House delegation have announced they will not seek re-election this year.

White castigated the Republican Party and described the Democratic Party as progressive and representative of the people.

"The Republicans haven't had a progressive thought since Calvin Coolidge refused to run again,' White said at a Dallas Democratic Forum.

White praised Carter as courageous and a strong leader during his first year as president.

"He's got the kind of administration you've fought for all your life," White said. "This may be our last shot and we've got the best equipped man in the country. Carter has done more in his first year than any other president in the last 25 years."

White said Carter "took on the Panama Canal when every president before him knew it was a problem. He bit the bullet and saved the social security system. He's helped us recover from the most severe depression since the 30s and he has appointed more women and ethnic minorities to more executive positions than any other president in history."

Knorpp Awaits Theft Trial

AMARILLO (AP) — Suspended Potter County Attorney Kerry Knorpp, who faces felony theft charges, has returned to work while the location of his upcoming theft trial remains uncertain.

State District Judge Arthur Tipps of Wichita Falls recessed a change of venue hearing Wednesday and said he hoped to hear today from State District Judge John McFall of Lubbock on whether the trial could be held there.

Knorpp was reinstated in his job Thursday following a four-month suspension with pay. The reinstatement came after Tipps denied a motion here Wednesday for a new trial of a civil suit to remove Knorpp.

A civil jury here cleared Knorpp in January of 24 allegations of misapplication of county money. But he still faces criminal trial in connection with similar allegations.

The prosecution has been attempting to get the trial moved to another town. Tipps said he would resume the hearing here if no Lubbock judge would agree to hold the trial.

Knorpp does not want a change of venue, but his lawyers, who live in Lubbock, said they would not oppose a move if it is to Lubbock.

Limelight Shines On Carter's Pollster, Adviser

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Pat Caddell isn't officially on the White House staff, but he has Carter's ear. At 27, he's the president's pollster and adviser on how he might please the public. Some say if it hadn't been for Caddell, Carter might still be in Plains.

By JURATE KAZICKAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the russet suede walls of his office, two blocks from the White House, Pat Caddell has an Andy Warhol silk-screen print of Jimmy Carter.

It's a souvenir of the man he helped get elected, of the man he continues to advise. It also reminds Carter's 27-year-old pollster of a Warhol comment that he finds appropriate: Everybody is famous for 15 minutes.

Caddell has had his 15 minutes of fame, and more, and he's trying to keep a perspective on all that.

"My favorite saying to everybody in this administration is that but for 10,000 votes in Ohio and Hawaii, where would any of us be?"

Yet he's had to answer that question as much as anyone, coping with accusations that he's profiteering from his Carter connection. His polling business expanded into "seven figures" by his own account in the last year with such corporate giant clients as Exxon and Citicorp.

And he's had to deal with his celebrity status as the whiz kid, the bachelor about town, the Carter confidant.

The limelight was especially bright last May when a 51-page memo Caddell prepared in December 1976 was made public. There he warned Carter that "too many good people have been defeated because they tried to substitute substance for style." The memo helped launch the substance vs. style debate about Carter, still continuing.

Caddell handled the ensuing press uproar with his usual self-deprecation and humor. He appeared at parties wearing a T-shirt emblazoned with his picture and the slogan "There's no substance here" and reported with amusement that Pravda had described him as a "manipulator."

Caddell says the quotation was "taken out of context and distorted. All I was saying was that the presidency had been battered so badly that one of the problems Carter had coming into office was how best to restore the credibility of the presidency and build up the kind of confidence in his leadership he needed to lead on important issues."

Caddell was the mastermind behind suggestions like the use of fireside chats, town meetings, frequent press conferences and fewer "imperial frills" of the presidency, like limousines, to maintain public favor.

Besides, Caddell adds, "In that memo a lot of those ideas were Carter's and I was just putting them into context."

Caddell's climb to the White House inner circle started when he was 17 and working for the Speaker of the House in Jacksonville, Fla. He made a model projection on how to predict election returns, called the results correctly and launched his reputation as a political Wunderkind.

While at Harvard from 1968 to 1972, where he wrote his thesis on the changes in southern politics, Caddell and some friends formed Cambridge Survey Research Inc.

Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern signed Caddell, then 21, as his pollster. It was during that campaign that Caddell met Jimmy Carter in an Atlanta kitchen.

"We just hit it off," says Caddell. Before long he was analyzing the mood of the nation for another long-shot candidate.

Caddell isn't on the offical White House staff, but his relationship and influence with the president is a source of continuing interest in a town still trying to figure out who really matters in this administration.

"My stock answer is that I'm the person with the most access and the least influence with the president," says Caddell. "But seriously, I just try to be helpful and offer some outside perspective to what's happening. A lot of the time he takes my advice. A lot of the time he doesn't. My influence is that if I feel strongly about something he'll listen to me if it makes sense.

"My work is not simply to do surveys but to figure out what they mean and to contribute to general advice on subjects.

"Carter uses surveys as a tool to help him understand how best to lead the country. The public really does want leadership. If coherent, real arguments are presented to them, they will follow. And it is not an anomaly that people who do things that are quote unpopular unquote are themselves very popular."

Although Carter's ratings in the polls have been dropping, Caddell says his own rating in the Oval Office seems secure.

"Carter seems to still have the same confidence in me as ever. I have not misled him, and I have not been wrong."

Since last January, Caddell has conducted nearly a dozen surveys for the president through the Democratic National Committee, including a recent year-end survey on public attitudes on a variety of issues like energy.

Caddell says he communicates with Carter about once a week, either by telephoning him directly, writing memos or going through Tim Kraft, the president's appointments secretary.

"It's a very informal relationship these days," Caddell says. "It really goes in cycles. I think we'll really be busy this year because it's an election year and as head of the Democratic Party, the president will want to be involved."

Besides advising Carter, Caddell and 35 employees of his Boston-based company put out a quarterly survey poll for anyone willing to pay the $20,000 annual subscription fee. Among his clients are Atlantic Richfield, Westinghouse, Arco, Atena, raising questions of possible conflict of interest.

Counters Caddell: "I have an independent relationship with my clients. I'm not trading on inside information or doing any of those things that make conflict questions real. Most of what I do is of no consequence to the White House, and I don't want the White House to make my business decisions for me."

Caddell is doing polls for at least 12 candidates in the 1978 elections, including Sen. Floyd Haskell of Colorado, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts and Sen. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota.

He's also involved in the movie business, working with director Francis Ford Coppola on the Vietnam film, "Apocalypse Now."

His partner in that venture and many other business deals is 43-year-old Jerry Rafshoon, who planned Carter's advertising campaign.

Caddell lives in fashionable Georgetown, drives a Mercedes 280SE and as a bachelor with administration connections is frequently sought as a dinner guest at Washington parties.

But he's mindful of what Warhol said of fleeting fame.

"I know that today you are important and successful and powerful and tomorrow you just might be nothing at all."

Controllers Say Radar Unreliable

WASHINGTON (AP) — An air traffic controllers' committee charged today that the ground radar at Dulles International Airport is unreliable in wet weather and that it nearly caused a collision between two planes on a fog-bound runway last month.

The controllers contended that the Federal Aviation Administration will not make corrections because it does not want to mar the beauty of the modern airport in the Virginia countryside near Washington.

"We are going public on this issue because it is the only way we seem to be able to get attention," said Robert C. Sturgill of the Professional Air Traffic Controller's Organization regional safety committee.

James T. Murphy, director of the FAA organization that runs Dulles, said there are plans to move a new radar dome from nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md. He emphasized that "safety will be our first consideration" in carrying out changes designed to improve the ground radar operation.

Sturgill said the problem at Dulles is with an inflatable, film-like shield that protects the ground radar antenna. When it is wet, he said, there are blind spots on the radar screen and vehicles and airplanes that are moving around on the field often fail to show up.

On Jan. 17, he said, a Soviet Aeroflot jetliner had taxied to the wrong runway but failed to appear on the radar screen in the airport tower that monitors planes on the ground. Because of the fog, controllers could not see the aircraft.

The Aeroflot captain radioed he was ready for takeoff, but the controller thought his his transmission came too soon, Sturgill said.

The unidentified controller ordered an inbound United Airlines flight that was a less than a mile from the end of that runway to abort the landing. The controller did not file an official report but told his superviser about the incident, Sturgill said.

The controllers' organization said a new radar antenna shield has been developed that would solve the problem. But it looks like an upside-down cup and saucer, and Sturgill said the FAA does not want to put it on top of the architecturally renowned Dulles tower.

Agencies For Aging Receive 19 Grants

AUSTIN (AP) — The Governor's Committee on Aging awarded 19 grants totaling $5.6 million in federal funds Wednesday.

Three grants went for new meal programs:

— $192,679 to the Alamo Area Council of Governments for a nutrition project in Atascosa, Bandera, Frio, Gillespie, Karnes, Kendall, Kerr, Medina and Wilson Counties.

— $57,110 to the South Plains Area Agency on Aging for a rural meal program serving Hale, Hockley and Garza Counties.

— $25,000 to Killeen, the Killeen Independent School District and Killeen Senior Citizens Association for a model project.

Power Companies Seek To Broaden Fuel Bases

By MARTIN MERZER

NEW YORK (AP) — The crisis now facing electric utilities in a 10-state area centering on Ohio illustrates the vulnerability of power companies largely dependent on one fuel.

And, with most of the power companies in the country still relying on a single fuel source for much of their electricity, millions of Americans could find themselves without reliable power if supplies of oil, natural gas or Western coal were interrupted or if there were another Western drought.

To avoid serious electricity shortages, power companies are trying to broaden their fuel bases — primarily through the use of more nuclear generators and, in some areas, more coal-burning plants. But they say environmental and regulatory considerations often block those moves.

The 10-state region currently enduring actual and threatened electricity curtailments depends on Appalachian coal for almost 90 percent of its power. Deliveries of coal to utilities serving Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky, West Virginia and parts of Virginia, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Maryland have been rare since the United Mine Workers union went on strike Dec. 6.

That 90 percent figure represents the largest dependence on a single source of fuel for any area in the country, according to an analysis of fuel-source statistics reported by the National Electric Reliability Council, an industry group that keeps statistics on power reliability.

But Texas — the nation's third most populous state — is not far behind depending on natural gas for 82 percent of its power. And with natural gas supplies dwindling and prices increasing, officials there are moving toward increased use of coal for generating electricity.

Coal now provides only 16 percent of the state's power, but by 1985 it is expected to provide 43 percent. The percentage of power produced from gas, meanwhile, will fall to 20 percent. Nuclear power and increased use of oil will bridge the gap in 1985, officials hope.

The Southwest also relies heavily on gas and is trying to offset some of that reliance by planning more coal-burning units by 1985. Much of the coal that will be used in new plants in Texas and the Southwest will be lignite, a low-quality fuel abundant in Texas.

The Northeast still depends on oil, most of it imported, for half of its electricity.

"In a place like the East Coast, something along the lines of another oil embargo would be devastating," said Paul Wagner, a spokesman for the Edison Electric Institute, another industry group.

In recognition of that, Northeast utilities hope to balance fuel needs by reducing their dependence on oil and boosting the percentage of power produced by nuclear generators from the current 26 percent to 33 percent by 1985.

But Walter Brown, a reliability council official, said there "is serious concern" whether environmental and regulatory obstacles to nuclear power will be hurdled in time.

Southeast utilities use coal for 59 percent of their power, but are trying to reduce that to 45 percent by 1985 by doubling nuclear-generated power to 38 percent of the total.

In the West, a two-year drought brought widespread power curtailments last summer. Hydroelectric power provides 37 percent of the West's total now, but is expected to supply only 27 percent of the electricity needed in 1985.

"The recent drought showed exactly what can happen when there is an imbalance and a heavy reliance on one source of power," said Wagner.

Western utilities hope to triple their use of nuclear power by 1985, using that source for 18 percent of their electricity. The use of coal also would increase to offset the loss of hydroelectric power and electricity now produced from oil and gas.

Federal regulations, as well as simple common sense, are pushing utilities to broaden their supplies of fuel, Brown said.

"Congress is legislating that you can't build any more gas boilers," he said. "The last gas unit has been built and just a couple of oil units are still under construction.

"We once had the flexibility of five energy sources," Brown said. "But all the good hydroelectric sites are used up, gas can't be burned any more and oil is becoming too valuable to burn. So we're down to nuclear and coal and a lot of people don't like those options."

LDCs Trim Debts Owed To America

Analysis

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Just months ago some of the country's largest banks were worried about some of their biggest loans to what they conceded privately were some of their least creditworthy customers.

They did not come out and say so. Some embarked on publicity campaigns to disprove their own fears; the loans, amounting at one point in 1975 to $40 billion, were as secure as the locks on their vaults, they said.

The customers were the so-called less developed countries, the LDCs, whose weak financial structures were made weaker still by rising energy prices and fiscal management as poor as that in the United States.

If the LDCs defaulted, it was feared, the American banking system would be seriously hurt. Confidence would be diminished. So would earnings on which shareholders depended for dividends.

This was great grist for alarmists, and they wasted no time in ringing the alarms. The regulatory agencies became concerned, so did Congress, and of course, so did bank customers.

Apparently they need not have, because one of the most encouraging and constructive developments in international finance over the past year has been the determined effort by LDCs to prove their worthiness.

By 1976, that $40 billion debt to U.S. banks — fully five times what it was a year earlier — was reduced to $26 billion. And still incomplete data for 1977 suggests the figure was further reduced to $22 billion.

Remarkably, the LDCs were repaying their loans ahead of time, to the consternation of bankers, who consider early repayers nearly as distressing as tardy payers. The tables were reversed.

At the very time that worries were reaching a crescendo, Chase Manhattan Bank observes, many countries already had taken steps to reduce their deficits, and others were laying plans to do so.

Mexico and Brazil showed marked improvement last year, and progress in correcting international payments imbalances were made by Korea, Taiwan and Argentina in both 1976 and 1977.

While the repayment pace is unlikely to show improvement this year and more likely will build up again by several billions of dollars, the extreme fear has been stilled.

In its place is another fear, that those early repayments of high cost loans could hurt bank earnings — which you will recognize as precisely the same fear that was expressed about late payment or default.

Business Week magazine reports that some U.S. bankers are actually suggesting they deserve a form of reparation for interest lost because of prepayment by LDCs refinancing at lower rates.

"Suddenly," it says, "the bankers face trouble from another direction as a wave of international loan prepayments and refinancings at lower interest rates by the LDCs pose a threat to the bottom-line earnings of major U.S. banks."

True, but nobody more so than a banker recognizes and respects the proud, healthy, responsible, constructive impulse that directs a borrower to get his financial house in order.

For the present it might hurt the bottom line, but if banks did not have customers who pinched pennies like they do, then the bottom line might be the end of the line for all, borrower and lender alike.

FBI, Costa Rica Make Vesco Feel Unwelcome

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has launched an investigation to find out whether fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco once again has been secretly visiting his New Jersey home. An agent in the bureau's Newark office confirmed to us that Vesco, who is wanted on four federal criminal warrants, has been reported seen in this country and that an investigation is under way.

If Vesco has been making the risky trip home, it would not be the first time. In September 1976 we reported that he had made at least one, and possibly two, middle-of-the-night visits to see a son who had been injured in an auto accident. Our sources told us then that Vesco flew, via Canada, into a private airfield less than a mile from his 80-acre estate in Boonton Township, N.J.

That strip has been closed since the middle of last month because of the heavy snowstorms that have blanketed the Northeast, but Vesco could have flown into nearby Morristown airport without being spotted.

From other sources we've learned that former Vesco associates, who frequent a restaurant near his home, have said on several occasions that — "Bob has been in town." Both the FBI and our own sources, however, say they know of no special development in the tight-knit Vesco family that might have prompted him to chance the journey.

Meanwhile, Vesco is running into some unaccustomed problems in Costa Rica, where he has found haven from U.S. authorities. Earlier this month, that country's highest court ordered enforcement of a judgment against Vesco that had been handed down in a New York federal court three years ago. The Costa Rican court said Vesco must pay $2.4 million (including interest) to International Controls Corp., the company he formerly ran and used as the vehicle for the takeover of the one-time mutual fund colossus, Investors Overseas Services. That action marks the first time any court in Costa Rica has taken action against Vesco, who reportedly has made huge investments in that country's economy.

A potentially more serious blow fell on Feb. 5, when Rodrigo Carazo was elected president of Costa Rica. Carazo's victory over the favorite, Luis Alberto Monge, meant the ouster from office of the National Liberation Party, with which Vesco had ties through h friendship with former president Jose Figuers.

After the election, Caraxo was quoted as saying that Vesco will be "kicked out" of Costa Rica as soon as possible. Carazo's actual words weren't quite so strong, but he left no doubt that he wants Vesco to leave.

During the year-long campaign, Carazo told a newspaper in San Jose that — "when Vesco sees the results of the election on Feb. 5, he will leave Costa Rica of his own accord because he will know we will not permit him to influence, either openly or covertly, the government or the country the way he has in the past."

But Vesco-watchers in this country doubt that he is in any immediate danger of expulsion. For one thing, he is being sued in Costa Rica by a former shareholder in the IOS mutual funds, and a court has ordered him not to leave until the case is settled. What's more, he has made big investment in Costa Rica — many of them untraceable because of Costa Rican securities laws and practices — and it's unlikely the government would take any precipitous action against such a large factor in the country's economy.

Meanwhile, there are no indications so far that the U.S. government is moving to follow up on the change of administrations in Costa Rica with another try at extraditing Vesco. The U.S. has tried to extradite him, both from Costa Rica and from the Bahama Islands, his previous haven, but failed both times.

Vesco is wanted here to answer a civil charge by the Securities and Exchange Commission that he masterminded the looting of $224 million from the IOS-run mutual funds. The federal warrants stem from that case, mostly charging intereste fraud.

Vesco, of course, has steadfastly denied he took any money and charged that the U.S. is presecuting him because of what he knows about ex-president Richard Nixon (to whom he secretly contributed $200,000 in cash in 1972). Recently, he even submitted to a lie detector test for showing on U.S. television, in which he denied taking the money. One source who has followed the case closely said, though, that "he's told that story so many times, there probably isn't lie detector in the world that could trip him up."

Fifth Murder Of Year Reported In Lubbock

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For the second time in less than a week, a bullet-riddled body has been found within a one-block area of East Lubbock.

The latest victim was 30-year-old Rafael Herrera Jr., whose address was not immediately determined.

Herrera's body, which reportedly had sustained several gunshot wounds, was found shortly after 3 a.m. today in the 1100-block of Teak Avenue.

Lubbock's fifth murder victim of the year was found within a block of the site of the grisly discovery of a 25-year-old man who had been shot and stuffed into the trunk of his car in the 1100-block of Ute Street.

Police found Thomas Solis Jr. of 1809 14th St., No. 227, barely alive in the trunk of his 1969 Plymouth about 4:15 p.m. Tuesday. His family had reported him missing after he left home shortly before midnight Sunday. The victim of two gunshot wounds died at 1 a.m. Wednesday in Methodist Hospital.

After receiving several calls within a few minutes early today, police arrived at the intersection of E. Broadway and Teak Avenue to find Herrera lying on the pavement outside a lounge.

Reports indicated two shotgun wounds in his chest were visible. After the body was taken to Sanders Funeral Home, further investigation revealed six additional bullet holes, some of which reportedly were exit wounds.

Police said Herrera was shot twice with a shotgun and three times with a .38-caliber revolver.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, who ruled homicide at the scene, ordered an autopsy to be performed later today to retrieve the bullets.

Detectives said they theorized that because of the appearance of the body, Herrera probably was killed at the scene. Even though no one yet has reported hearing gunshots, police seem to be discounting the possibility that he was shot elsewhere and dumped at the site outside the club.

Initial identification of the victim was made by a birth certificate and Social Security card in a wallet that Herrera was clutching in his hand. The billfold reportedly contained no money.

A white 1965 Chevrolet, reportedly owned by the victim, was ticketed for blocking a lane of traffic and impounded.

Detectives today still were faced with the investigation of the earlier homicide in the same E. Broadway area.

Investigators found dried blood on the front dash and on the inside of the auto's windshield. Outside the car, behind the left rear wheel, blood was dripping from the fender well.

As pictures were being taken of the car, detectives removed the back seat and discovered Solis in the trunk. Using a crowbar, police opened the trunk and detected a faint pulse on the victim.

Solis was admitted to Methodist in critical condition, and, according to a hospital spokesman, died before surgery could be performed.

After the victim was taken from the area Tuesday, officers went to the east-side lounge where Solis reportedly had been headed late Sunday. However, no suspected murder weapon or other evidence connected with his disappearance or death was found.

Con Artist's Ploy Costs Lubbockite

A 54-year-old Lubbock man fell victim to the old "pigeon drop" Thursday and wound up $5,700 poorer.

The 13th Street resident told police he had gotten a call about 11 a.m. Thursday from a "Mr. Johnson" who said he was the assistant to a local bank president. The caller reportedly said that a bank employee was taking money from the victim's account, and they needed his help to catch the suspect.

The caller then asked the victim how much money he had in his account, and when he was told $12,000, the man said bank records showed only slightly more than $5,000 was there.

The victim was told he would be paid $400 for his help.

According to reports, the victim was told to go to the bank, and withdraw $5,700 from his account. It was explained that the check would bounce, and the employee then would be caught.

The victim reportedly did as he was told and returned home.

After two more calls, the victim was told a "special policeman would be coming to his house and seal the envelope containing the money "so it could be used as evidence."

A short time later, a man in his 50s showed up with a shield-type badge with "special agent" written on it.

After the victim gave him the cash the stranger put it in another envelope and asked for some scotch tape. When the resident returned after looking for tape, the man said he had found some, and had already sealed the envelope.

The con artist then gave an envelope to his victim.

The victim put the envelope in a safety deposit box at another bank as he had been directed. When he later became suspicious and called the first bank's president, he was told "Mr. Johnson" did not work there.

When the man and police later opened the envelope supposedly containing the $5,700, they found only shreaded newspaper.

In recently reported break-ins, Rose Hill of 2805 Teak Ave. told officers someone broke through a window at her home Thursday and made off with a television and jewelry, altogether valued at $1,800.

According to Alberto Ortiz, whoever kicked open a front door at his 2909 Emory St. home recently made off with a stereo, television set and sofa. The take was valued at $650.

Complaining of stolen televisions Thursday were Juan Galicia of 307 44th St. and Joe Montoya Morin of 3308 Jarvis St.

Meanwhile, L. V. Drake of 5513 16th St. said someone took a trailer from the 2300-block of Oberlin Street Tuesday or Wednesday. Drake said the trailer was valued at $1,890.

Car burglars victimized yet another out-of-town guest Wednesday or Thursday when they broke into Eddie Fuller's vehicle while it was parked at a motel in the 4400-block of Avenue Q. The Decatur man said a briefcase, clothing and a Bible were stolen, items he valued together at nearly $380.

Business burglars dropped in on Clark's Drug Store, 1702 Broadway, Wednesday or Thursday, according to J. M. Ransom.

Ransom said the intruders entered the store through an air-conditioning vent after climbing atop the roof. Police speculated that the burglars dropped to the floor with a rope. The burglars left with a $250 typewriter and an estimated $100 worth of pills.

Carl Tewallen of 1507 Ave. S, No. 107, said someone stole his son's bicycle Saturday. The bike, taken from the 400 block of Avenue Q, was valued at $100, he said.

Reporting a stolen CB radio Thursday was Walter Nobles of Arlington.

Officers Arrest Rape Suspect

A 23-year-old Lubbock man remained in Lubbock County Jail at noon today following his early morning arrest on suspicion of having raped three women here this year.

Police arrested the suspect about midnight after they received information allegedly connecting him with the incidents.

In the first reported rape on Jan. 9, a 23-year-old housewife told police a man stopped to offer assistance after she had car trouble in the 1400-block of Avenue S. After taking her and her two small children home, the stranger asked to use the phone and the bathroom. Once inside the home, he went into the kitchen, got a knife and subsequently forced the woman into a bedroom, where he raped her.

On Feb. 1, a Lubbock woman said she got home about 2 a.m. and discovered a man inside her apartment. After she asked him to leave several times, the intruder reportedly hit her several times, knocked her onto a bed and raped her.

In the latest reported incident, a Lubbock sales clerk told police she was nearing her apartment Monday morning when a stranger approached and asked for a match. When she said no, he reportedly asked to use the phone, and again she refused.

At that, she stated, he pushed her into her apartment, threw her on the floor, told her not to scream and removed her clothing.

During the assault, the attacker reportedly kept telling the woman not to scream or he would hit her harder.

Navy, Marines Reduce Training

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boot camp, the bane of millions of new Marines and sailors, may be less of an ordeal beginning next year. At least, it'll be shorter.

The Marine Corps will reduce its basic training course from 11 to nine weeks — still the longest in any of the armed services.

Navy recruit training will be cut by nine days from the present eight weeks.

Meanwhile, the Army will shave two days from its seven-week rookie training schedule, while the Air Force will keep its present six-week basic course for new airmen.

It's part of the Defense Department's drive to trim training costs and free thousands of instructors for other duty, including service in combat units.

"We believe that it is possible to reduce the length of initial recruit training without cutting its effectiveness," Pentagon manpower chief John P. White has told Congress.

The services reportedly grumbled when the issue of training cutbacks was raised. But the move has the backing of President Carter who, as a candidate, criticized "the amount of time spent in the armed forces in training programs."

Senior defense officials contend training courses need to be tightened and limited to essentials.

"Since a large portion of military training costs are attributable to student pay and allowances and other student support costs, course lengths should be no longer than can be justified by valid learning objectives," White said.

Manpower officials were unable to say immediately how much money they expect to save from a range of actions designed to streamline training. This is still being calculated, they said.

In addition to basic training curtailments, Pentagon leaders have decided to reduce the amount of specialized skill training.

White said this will be done by shortening courses and "doing more on the job training, which has the advantage of putting more manpower in units and giving new recruits earlier practical experience."

He estimated that the number of instructors and staff can be pared by 7,400 uniformed men and women as a result of the cutbacks in basic and specialized training.

Personality Can Alter One's Face

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — If you notice that your face has altered over the years, don't blame age — it could be your personality that has changed.

So say personologists who study the relationships between physical characteristics and personality traits.

"It sounds corny, but its true," says Nancy Ross. "Life makes its mark."

Personology teaches that people have "dominion" over their facial traits, that although people are subject to genetic inheritance and environmental influence, those traits can be changed.

But Earl Hunt, chairman of the University of Washington's psychology department, is skeptical about the claims personologists make.

"Taking physical traits ... and asking people what a person with those traits is like is nothing more than trying to find a statistical validation for racial and ethnic stereotypes," said Hunt.

"It's equivalent to asking white South Africans if dark skin is indicative of lower intelligence. You'd statistically validate that it is, but all you're really proving is that white South Africans think it is."

Ms. Ross conducts seminars in personology for real estate brokers and other business persons, has advised attorneys on how to select sympathetic jurors and how to handle witnesses, and does personality analyses in a beauty salon here.

Personology, as Ms. Ross practices it, was developed in 1957 by Robert Whiteside, who founded the Interstate College of Personology near San Francisco.

Personologists say that persons with close-set eyes tend to be more analytical than those with wide-set eyes. Persons with high foreheads are more reserved than those with low foreheads. There are 66 other physical traits used in personology analysis.

"We believe the body and the person are one. That they are linked," Ms. Ross said. "Most psychologists — especially Freudians — seem to believe they are entirely separate."

Canadian Killed In Ditched Plane

MIAMI (AP) — A Canadian died when a plane piloted by his son ditched in the Atlantic Ocean a few miles offshore, the Coast Guard said.

The pilot, Ray Steinke, 35, escaped safely in the ditching Wednesday but Robert Steinke, 70, died, the Coast Guard said. Two other passengers, Ken Yencey, 42, of Jacksonville, and Mary Elliott, 25, of Orlando, were unharmed. The Steinkes were identified only as coming from British Columbia.

Coast Guard spokesman Lance Jones said Wednesday that the plane was en route to Fort Lauderdale from Andros Island in the Bahamas when it broadcast a Mayday message.

Jim Perks of the Bahamas Tourist Bureau, flying nearby about the time the plane ditched, said the plane radioed that its one engine had failed.

Research On Ultraviolet Light Shows Hazards To Plant Life

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to learn more about the hazards of ultraviolet light leaking through the atmosphere, government scientists are subjecting plants and aquatic life to extreme ultraviolet dosages to see what happens.

The Environmental Protection Agency results so far are only preliminary, but staff scientist Edward DeFabo said the health of the plants seems to have been hurt by the light, showing signs of stunting, bleaching, curling and inhibited photosynthesis (necessary for growth).

Small animals basic to the food chain such as the larvae of anchovy, mackerel and shrimp also have been injured and some killed by exposure to extra doses of harmful types of ultraviolet light, according to DeFabo.

But he said no conclusions can yet be drawn, because there is little way of knowing if the dosage of ultraviolet particles produced by a special lamp approach the amount to which life on Earth may ever be exposed.

The EPA is investigating ultraviolet effects because of concern that fluorocarbon gases released by spray cans and leaky refrigeration units are eroding the layer of ozone in the upper atmosphere. The ozone shields Earth from harmful amounts of ultraviolet sunlight.

The EPA study, which began more than a year ago, analyzes the effect of the invisible the form of ultraviolet light, known as UV-B, that is largely responsible for sunburn, skin cancer and other biological effects.

DeFabo said it affects the most basic biological chemical tools —proteins and genetic material — of plants and small animals.

Science Today

But aside from the link with sunburn and skin cancer, little is known about what effect a higher incidence may have on human life.

DeFabo said the study, which received $4 million last year from the EPA, was hampered from the start because there were no instruments built which could measure light radiation at the UV-B levels.

The instruments have now been built and DeFabo estimated that within three to five years conclusive data could be gathered to measure the effect of various levels of UV-B incidence resulting from ozone depletion.

"It is no small task," said DeFabo. "First of all, although it is hard to believe, we do not know what is the normal incidence of UV-B particles to reach Earth. That's because it is hard to judge because it fluctuates daily."

Scientists first postulated in the early 1970s that the ozone layer of the stratosphere was being depleted by the release of fluorocarbon gases such as Freon from aerosol spray cans and refrigeration units.

The Trail Boss Took on the Competition... And Beat 'Em!

There's never been a showdown like it!

In over 100 Asgrow Sorghum Trail roundups in 1977 through Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska, the Asgrow Trail Boss corralled top Asgrow sorghum varieties and major competitive hybrids for the area. Side-by-side. Growing under typical cultural practices. And, in large blocks for harvest with yields adjusted to 14% moisture.

Time after time Asgrow proved to have the fastest draw on higher yields compared to the other big sorghum guns in the territory. In fact, Asgrow Bug-Off outyielded E59+ in 19 locations by an average of 5.9 bushels per acre.

You can profit from this competitive yield shoot-out by corralling your Asgrow dealer and taking sharp aim on higher and more profitable sorghum yields in 1978. Your dealer has all the information on Sorghum Trail yields and knows the hybrids that will do the best for you.

French Actor Yves Montand Keeping Commitments Open

By FRANK T. CSONGOS

NEW YORK (UPI) — French actor Yves Montand puffed on his cigarette and stretched his arms overhead to emphasize a point.

"For the first time in my life I feel completely free," he said. "Just being a tourist in New York, going to Broadway musicals and walking the streets. I want to keep — how you say it in English — my commitments open. If I like a film role, fine. I'll do it and tell the producer, 'OK, pay me if it is a success.' Money is not that important to me."

Although his hair is graying, it is hard to believe Montand is 56. Trim, tanned and ruggedly handsome, the movie star is visiting the United States with his stepdaughter and grandson. He plans to visit Los Angeles, San Francisco and Las Vegas and also the Bahamas and Canada during a month-long vacation.

Montand said he is looking for artistically challenging roles, like his movie "Z" that dealt with political oppression in Greece under the now defunct military junta.

He is not afraid to speak up for political causes he believes in. He condemns the current regime in Chile as "fascists" because "the military there raped the constitution" when it overthrew the Allende government.

"I've stopped dreaming. No more illusions in politics. You know, I was never a (Communist) party member. I was what you call a fellow traveler." He became disillusioned with the party line when Russian tanks crushed the Hungarian revolt in 1956.

Montand follows French politics intensely and plans to vote in the March 12 elections by absentee ballot.

"The question is not who is going to win in France, left or right," he said. "It is more complicated than that. I don't think anything will change, whoever wins. We know there is going to be austerity. What does France have? We got oil? No. We, the French people, have to pay the bills. With what? We are in the hole. France has lost its primacy. It no longer has colonies. It has to pay for what it buys. And politicians who make easy promises are lying.

"I wouldn't mind paying 90 percent or 95 percent in income taxes to improve things. But, naturally, I don't want to do it alone."

The conversation turned to the United States.

"There are some good things. Blue jeans are good and T-shirts, although they are becoming like a uniform in Europe among young people. Hamburgers, pop music, country music — good. But let us sell our good French wine, our good French cheese, our good French champagne. I know this country has some problems. But if someone wants to do something in America, he can do it."

Montand said one of his most traumatic experiences was the Nazi occupation of France.

"Americans can thank God for they do not know what occupation is," he said.

Report Cites Change In Finance Tabulating

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee report says many banks are changing the methods of tabulting finance charges on credit cards, perhaps costing consumers an estimated $580 million a year in extra charges.

A report by the staff of the House banking subcommittee on consumers, says many banks have begun calculating credit card finance charges from the time of purchase rather than after the customary 25-day grace period.

The report was outlined in a memorandum to Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill, chairman of the subcommittee. A copy of the memo was obtained by The Associated Press.

The memo also said that banks are purposely making disclosure statements confusing to the average consumer.

"Numerous pieces of evidence are now available that indicate that bankers have not only purposely begun using methods which would be difficult to understand, but they have taken pride in designing disclosure statements that will confuse," said the staff memo.

Bill Moroney, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said that any confusion resulting from the disclosure statements result from the Truth-in-Lending Act and government regulations that enforce it.

The subcommittee staff memo cited as an example of confusing language in disclosure statements, the following section of one such statement involving credit card finance charges:

"The Finance Charge at periodic rate for purchases is computed by (1) multiplying each portion of the Purchases Finance Charge Balance shown on the face of the statement by the Number of Days in Billing Cycle, (2) applying to the resulting product the applicable daily periodic rate of .04109 percent, (3) adding these products together."

The memo said the statement means that the finance charge is based on the purchaser's average daily balance starting from the day he makes his purchase.

The memo did not say how many banks have adopted the new method of calculating finance charges, but a subcommittee source said about half of the banks that issue credit cards have made the change.

The memo quoted an unnamed accounting firm as estimating that the change in calculating finance charges could cost users of credit cards $580 million a year in extra charges.

The charge "will not only be costly to the consumer, but unless a massive consumer education campaign is begun, the consumer will go on paying those extra costs without really understanding why the bills are greater," the memo added.

The Mexican port city of Mazatlan lies 15 miles south of the Tropic of Cancer at the same latitude as the Hawaiian Islands. The port sits at the edge of the Sea of Cortez, one of the world's largest fish traps.

If you grow sorghum on sandy soils, it's time you tried Igran.

Because Igran® is the sorghum herbicide that really fits the sandy soil conditions in the South High Plains and South Rolling Plains.

And because it fits, Igran is easier to use. There's no guesswork or experimenting with rates. Just follow the label directions.

Then watch your sorghum come through clean and healthy. Because Igran controls those tough broadleaf weeds like carelessweed and annual morningglory. Controls them early, before they have a chance to rob your crop of vital soil moisture and nutrients.

Igran. Once you try it, you'll keep on using it. Because now you've got a sorghum herbicide that really fits your sandy soil conditions.

COTTON LOAN COMPUTER — Jamie Evans is shown operating an experimental cotton loan computer in the Lubbock County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office. Lubbock County is the only county on the South Plains in which the loan rate is calculated on each individual bale in a given lot of cotton. Elsewhere, cotton entering the loan is assigned an average loan rate for the mixed lot. The computer hookup speeds the processing of loan cotton for farmers. (Staff Photo by Norm Tindell)

Computer Use Aids In Recording Cotton Placed In Loan Program

By KETH HENLEY
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

The Lubbock County office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service used a "mini-computer" to figure cotton loans this season and it couldn't have come at a better time, officials say.

A total of 93,381 bales have been placed into the Commodity Credit Corp. loan program in Lubbock County from the 1977 crop, according to Walter Wells, county executive director. More than half were processed at the Lubbock office and the balance at gins across the county.

This is the largest volume of cotton to be placed into the government loan program in years by the county's producers, Wells pointed out.

Use of the computer unit cut sharply the amount of time that would have been required to process the increased volume and helped to reduce by about 15 the number of workers that would have had to have been hired to handle the larger work load, he estimated.

The unit is composed of a memory bank within the computer-keyboard and a typewriter printer.

Wells said the primary attributes are speed and accuracy in figuring cotton loans.

"In one operation it computes the loan rate, calculates the amount for each bale, and deducts the receiving charge and the storage fee, if applicable," he explained.

The cotton checkoff from the 1964 research and promotion act also is deducted at a rate of $1 per bale plus fourtenths of 1 percent of the gross value of the lint, added the ASCS official.

About nine different inputs are required for the computer to figure the grower loans, said Wells.

Grade, staple and micronaire are entered from the greencard, while the warehouse receipt number, date of delivery and bale weight are taken from the warehouse receipt. Monthly storage fee, warehouse receiving charge and date of disbursement are the final items to complete computation.

Storage is charged at a rate of 85 cents per bale a month after 60 days.

"The computer calculates the number of days from the date of the warehouse receipt to the date we are computing the loan," said Wells. "So long as it isn't more than 60 days, no storage is charged to the farmer.

"Commodity Credit Corp. pays the first 60 days," he explained.

"Then, when all the bales for one loan are in the machine, the computer gives the total amount of the loan, the numbers of bales and weight, total amount of county office fee, research and promotion fee, and net amount due the farmer," Wells said.

All this is printed out on the Form A1 loan sheet automatically with the touch of a button. The computer also divides the net amount due into one-fourth and three-fourths figures, the traditional split between landlord and tenant, respectively, on cotton land.

With a purchase price of about $7,000, the computer unit probably will not be placed in every cotton producing county across the belt in the near future, said Wells, although the largest counties in terms of cotton output stand a chance.

OSHA Proposes Near-Record Penalty In Wake Of Galveston Grain Blast

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Farmers Export Company of Galveston was issued citations and proposed penalties totaling $116,000 Thursday by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) for alleged violations of job safety and health standards in connection with a grain elevator explosion that killed 18 workers and injured 21 others.

The $116,000 total is the second-largest proposed penalty in OSHA history ranking behind the $215,900 penalty assessed to U.S. Steel in Chicago on Wednesday.

Thursday's action followed OSHA's investigation of the Dec. 27, 1977, blast. OSHA is still investigating several other grain elevator explosions that occurred during December.

The OSHA report did not list a cause of the blast but the citations focused on alleged accumulations of grain dust and the presence of spark-emitting equipment.

Farmers Export Company has 15 working days to contest OSHA's findings,said OSHA spokesman James Foster. "If they don't contest it, then it's fact," he added.

A secretary for Sy Bickler, the general manager of the Galveston-based company, said he was not available Thursday. She said the company was aware of the citations and would have no immediate comment.

The OSHA law also prescribes criminal sanctions for a willful violation of a standard resulting in the death of an employee, OSHA noted Thursday in a written release that added the Department of Labor is "determining whether to recommend criminal action to the Department of Justice in this case."

INCOME TAX SAVINGS MAY BE AVAILABLE to Texas farmers and ranchers who suffered losses due to summer heat and drought.

"Normally, the sale or trade of livestock — if held primarily for sale — produces ordinary farm income that should be reported in the year it is received," points out Dr. Richard Trimble, extension economist in management.

"However, a rancher may be able to elect to defer reporting income from the sale of certain livestock because of drought conditions which occurred during 1977."

To qualify for this option, the rancher must use the cash method of accounting and the livestock must be held primarily for sale. Another condition is that the area or county must have been designated as eligible for assistance by the federal government due to drought conditions.

THIS SPECIAL TREATMENT IS LIMITED to income from livestock which are sold or exchanged in excess of the usual sales. The income can be deferred for only one year.

Trimble cites an example. Rancher Smith normally sells 50 head of feeder cattle a year. In 1977, because of drought, he sold 70 head of feeders which averaged $200 each. Smith may elect to defer reporting the income on 20 head of the feeder cattle sold ($4,000) and report it on his 1978 income tax return. He must use the cash method of accounting, live in an eligible area, and depend on farming or ranching as his principal occupation.

Special provisions also apply to drought-forced sales of breeding livestock. When livestock held for draft, breeding or dairy purposes are sold or exchanged solely because of drought, their disposition is considered an involuntary conversion. Only livestock sold in excess of the number normally sold under usual business practices in the absence of drought will be considered involuntarily converted. The gain on livestock involuntarily converted into money will not be taxed in the year of the sale if the converted property is replaced within two years.

FARMERS MAY BE ABLE TO ELECT to defer for one year the reporting of crop insurance payments from the tax year the crops were destroyed or damaged by drought.

"A farmer can defer reporting such income if he can establish that, under normal practice, the crop destroyed would have been sold in the following tax year," Trimble says. "This provision should help to provide a normal income flow for the individual farmer who qualifies."

There may be some drought-related losses which are not deductible, Trimble points out. The loss of growing crops for a farmer using the cash method of accounting is not a deductible income tax loss. This is because the costs of the productive inputs such as seed, fertilizer and insecticide are deducted as farm expenses. The same rule applies to the loss of raised livestock where the cost of raising has been deducted as farm expense.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Strength in soybean oil futures dictated a 4-cent advance in soybean futures on the Chicago Board of Trade today, but wheat contracts declined sharply.

Analysts attributed some of the buying in soybean oil futures, which gained an average of ½ cent a pound, to weakness of the dollar. Soybean oil futures are considered especially sensitive to economic conditions.

But wheat futures lost nearly 5 cents a bushel, despite heavy buying by a major grain exporter. Indications that the Carter administration might not give special consideation to Communist nations in government export programs was a major depressing factor, traders said.

The Agriculture Department's announcement of corn and wheat sales to Soviet Union was mostly discounted by traders, who felt the purchases already had been covered in the futures market. Specifically, sales of 100,000 metric tons of wheat and 300,000 tons of corn were announced after the preceding session's close.

At the close, soybeans were 3¼ to 6 cents higher, with March contracts quoted at $5.80 a bushel; wheat was 4¼ to 5 cents lower, March $2.58¾; corn was unchanged to ¼ cent lower, March $2.26½ and oats were ¼ to 2½ cents lower, March $1.23½.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow to moderate on Thursday.

Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was good.

Live Cattle Close Down After Selloff

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures closed at the day's lows for most contracts on Thursday, off 37 to 60 points led by June and August on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Sales climbed to 24,480 contracts. Distant April fell 80 points for a time.

The abrupt turnaround came after outset gains of 77 points helped lift all contracts to new season's highs and highest in a year.

Weakness in carcass beef brought on aggressive profit-taking and other selling with spillover from the pork pits also noted.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 71 1/2 to 72 1/2 cents per pound, a one-week low. Cash cattle were mixed with the top at $47.50 per hundredweight.

The six markets expect 5,400 head to arrive today. Thursday's slaughter was estimated at 151,000 head.

Hog futures finished 50 to 132 points lower led by April which was only a tick away from a 150-point limit loss for a time.

Volume was estimated at 14,428 contracts. The market was up 90 points early, and August set a new season's high before retreating.

Weakness in cash hogs and the collapse in belly futures brought pressure which some analysts termed a key reversal. Early short covering was prompted by light hog runs and strength in belly futures.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 82 to 89 cents per pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the best top at $50.50 at St. Paul, Minn.

The day's kill was estimated at 294,000 head. Today, the major terminals expect receipts of 21,100 head.

Pork belly futures (bacon) tumbled the 200-point limit in nearby contracts before ending 95 to 185 lower led by May. Turnover was 8,429 cars.

Initially, all contracts were up the limit the second consecutive day to new season's highs and highest since October 1976. The reversal was triggered by weak cash hogs in the face of light runs after buying on reduced storage stocks.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up two cents at 62 to 68 cents per pound.

Group Names Swisher Man

TULIA (Special)–Otis Harman, a Swisher County wheat and feed-grain producer and cattle feeder, was named president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association at an executive board meeting in Amarillo this week.

The announcement was made by Winston Wilson of Quanah, out-going, three-term president who submitted his resignation at the meeting. Wilson, who was elected vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers at its annual convention in Wichita, Kan., in January, said that removing himself from the dual organizational roles should give Texas a stronger position in the national organization as future programs and policies are developed.

Harman, of Tulia, operates both dryland and irrigated farms. He has been a member of hte nine-man farmer-elected Texas Wheat Producers Board since its inception. He is a director of the Tulia Feed Yard and of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

Harman indicated that a series of area meetings with county directors of the association is planned for early March in order to give Wilson, the out-going president, an opportunity to report on past and current activities and the new president a chance to seek local direction for future programs.

Other officers of the organization are C.L. Edwards of Panhandle, secretary-treasury and Bill Nelson of Amarillo, executive vice president.

"THE NET PROFIT CROP OF 1977"

Unlike their neighbor, some producers wanted higher prices than the $.11 Cent Per Lb. Contract being offered by "The Sunflower People of West Texas" in their Joint-Venture Contract.

Now when harvest time finally arrived and the crop developed to be the largest in the history of the United States, the farmer who wanted MORE actually got LESS.

Friends, don't get caught again holding the short end of the stick: The "Sunflower People of West Texas" now have contracts available for the 1978 Crop Year.

Long before anyone else establishes a market, "The Sunflower People of West Texas" offer you a Sunflower Production Contract that will give you, the farmer, a price for your product that allows you a Net Profit.

When you consider that it take less cash per acre to grow Sunflowers than any other crop, one must appreciate the fact that it will greatly reduce cash flow requirements for farming operations.

Each year "The Sunflower People of West Texas" offer new opportunities to the producer who wants to help himself. The "Plant Now-Pay Later" program for Sunflower Planting Seed has allowed many producers to stay in business in hard pressed financial times. The same people again offer this same program to those who would like it.

Results of last year's Sunflower Crop show a need for another service to be added: This year you can again contract to have your spraying for Insect Control included and pay for it in the fall when you harvet your crop, should you desire to do so.

So ... if it is Profit You Want, SUNFLOWERS ARE THE ANSWER. CONTRACT WITH "THE SUNFLOWER PEOPLE". For full details about planting seed,contracts, spraying and fall terms on the complete program, contact —

Probe Of Marston's Ouster Draws Blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Benjamin R. Civiletti, head of the Justice Department's criminal division, testified today that affidavits he and an aide submitted about the firing of Philadelphia U.S. Attorney David Marston involved no substantive inconsistency.

The affidavits were taken by the Justice Department in an in-house investigation of the ouster last month of Marston, who was directing a grand jury probe in which a Democratic congressman figured.

The department's investigation cleared President Carter and Attorney General Griffin B. Bell of any attempt to obstruct justice by removing Marston, a Republican.

At a hearing today by the Senate Judiciary Committee on Civiletti's nomination to be deputy attorney general, Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said the department's investigation of Marston's firing appeared to be "a superficial probe."

However, neither Wallop nor any other member of the committee asked Civiletti in detail about the Marston case before the hearings were recessed until Saturday morning.

Civiletti said in an opening statement that before Marston's removal he had no information that Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., was the target or subject of an investigation by the prosecutor.

Eilberg called Carter last Nov. 4 to urge that the replacement of Marston be expedited, and the president told a news conference on Jan. 12 that after talking with Eilberg, he urged Bell to speed the appointment of a new U.S. attorney in Philadelphia.

Both Carter and Bell have said that at the time they were unaware of any investigation by Marston involving Eilberg.

Civiletti, in his testimony before the Senate panel, dealt with affidavits he and Russell T. Baker, Jr., a deputy assistant attorney general in the criminal division, had given in the Justice Department's investigation of Marston's removal.

Baker said in his affidavit that his notes indicated that about Nov. 25 he had told Civiletti that Marston had an investigation underway that might involve Eilberg. He said his best recollection was that Civiletti had told him to so advise Michael Egan, the associate attorney general.

Civiletti's affidavit made no mention of this, and in his testimony before the Judiciary Committee he reiterated earlier statements that he had no recollection of it.

He said some have looked on this as an inconsistency between his and Baker's affidavits, but he testified it was "an inconsistency without real substance or meaning."

Civiletti said if Baker's recollection was correct, his deputy had told him not that Eilberg was the target of an investigation, but that there was some possibility he might be in the future. In any event, he said, Baker did not report it to Egan for "whatever reason," possibly because he did not think it was significant enough.

On the other hand, Civiletti said, if his recollection was correct, Baker may have intended to tell him about his conversation with Marston but didn't.

In any event, Civiletti said, neither he nor Baker discussed the possibility that Eilberg might be the subject or target of a Marston probe with Egan or Bell or anyone else in the Justice Department.

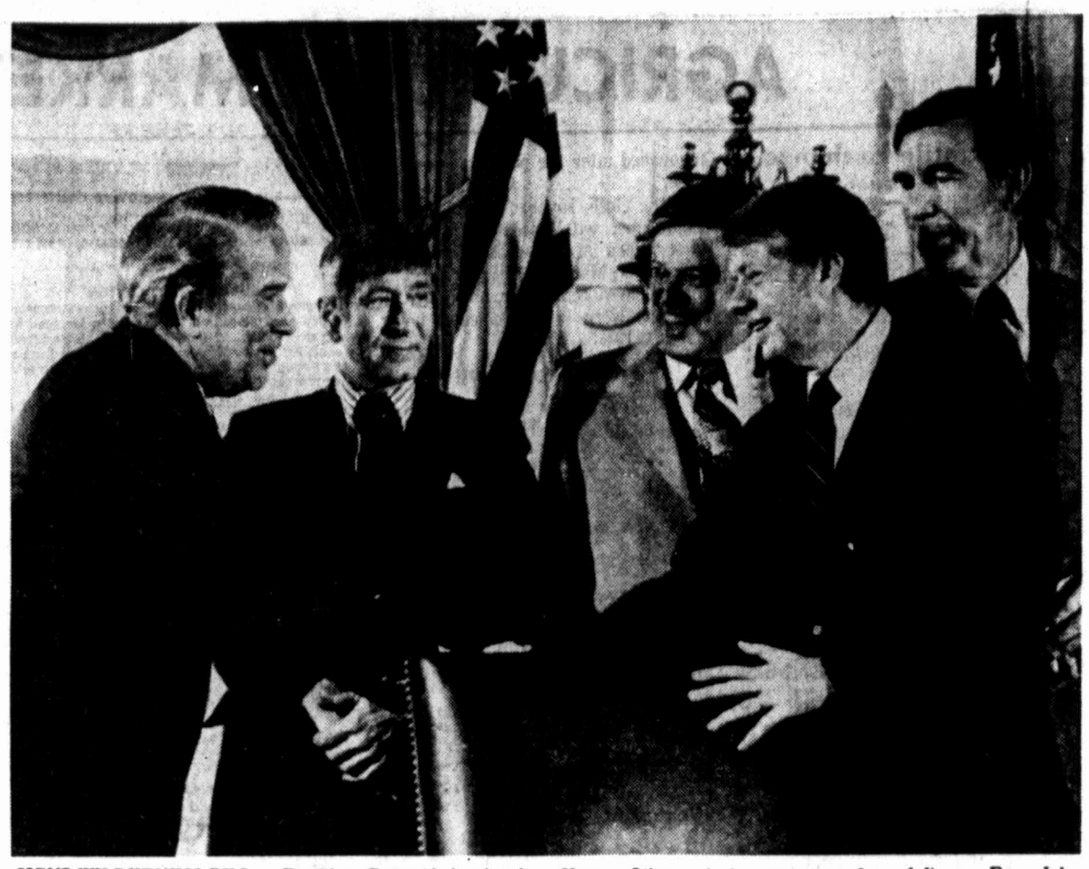

The committee started its hearings on Civiletti's nomination Tuesday, with GOP members indicating they intend to look at other operations of the Justice Department during the Carter administration as well.

Baker is among the witnesses Republicans on the committee have requested be called for questioning later. Others include White House aides Hamilton Jordan, Carter's closest political adviser, and Frank Moore, the president's congressional liason chief.

Bell appeared at the initial hearing to urge Civiletti's confirmation. He said the committee would find Civiletti knew very little about the Marston matter.

City Nurse Seventh On Jury Panel

Abbe Rodgers Hamilton, 19, was found in the bedroom of her Panhandle home May 3, 1977. She had been tied hand and foot and stabbed about 10 times.

The trial, being conducted in 99th District Court here, was transferred to Lubbock on a change of venue from Hutchinson County.

If convicted of the capital charge, Hawkins will face either death or life imprisonment, the only options under Texas' capital murder statute.

Through noon today, attorneys had questioned 72 prospective jurors in the selection process which began Feb. 13.

Each side is allotted 15 peremptory challenges, or strikes of prospective jurors for no stated reason. At midday, the defense had used 10 such strikes, and the state, four.

Route Decision Upheld By CAB

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Spokane will have its first through service to the Southwest when Frontier Airlines implements a non-stop Spokane-to-Denver route approved recently by the Civil Aeronautics Board, says an airline official.

The CAB upheld an administrative law decision last fall awarding Frontier new air routes between Denver and three Montana cities, spokesman Robert Schulman of Denver said Thursday.

Administrative Law Judge Frank Whiting ordered last September that Frontier should have the routes over competing airlines.

The round-trip flight to Denver will have an extension to Dallas-Fort Worth, Schulman said.

He said the airline also will fly daily to Denver and back with stops at Billings, Mont., on one route and stops in Missoula and Bozeman, Mont., on the other.

Pressure Hiked On Coal Firms

nounced Thursday, the White House stepped up the pressure on the BCOA to end the walkout.

Carter met with three coal-state governors, all of whom emerged from the White House urging the industry to accept the miners' latest offer — which one governor called "the only game in town."

The Senate, taking time out from its debate on the proposed Panama Canal treaties, set aside an hour today to discuss the strike.

And White House special trade negotiator Robert S. Strauss reportedly was meeting with major steel companies owning captive coal mines, trying to persuade them to break with the BCOA and accept a contract reached independently by the UMW and one company.

Administration officials said the idea for the Senate session originated with the chamber's leadership. They said they were hopeful it would increase pressure for a negotiated settlement.

"We hope that out of this debate there will be a strong showing of solidarity ... that a negotiated settlement is, by far, infinitely better" than a government-imposed end to the strike, said one official, who asked not to be named.

In meetings with congressional leaders and the coal-state governors, Carter won support for intervention.

Aides said Carter would act by the weekend if no contract agreement were reached. One congressional leader, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said Carter's decision was "relatively imminent."

"We are talking about a small amount of time left before drastic action will be taken," said West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller.

The only way for the strike to be resolved short of presidential intervention, Rockefeller said, is "for the operators to say yes to the PM contract."

The UMW reached a tentative contract accord on Monday with the Pittsburg Midway Coal Mining Co., a major independent producer. The union's bargaining council, which must approve any contract, voted Wednesday to make the terms of the accord its "bottom line" for an industrywide settlement.

The industry earlier this week rejected the contract as unacceptable, but a spokesman had no comment Thursday following the governors' statement.

Among Carter's options for government intervention are a declaration of a bargaining impasse, which officials believe would end industrywide bargaining and facilitate company-by-company agreements, and seeking legislation to impose binding arbitration on the parties.

Garter also is considering invoking the strike-halting provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act and seeking legislation authorizing a temporary federal seizure of the mines.

Meanwhile, Energy Department statistics released Thursday show that at current consumption, electric utility coal stockpiles in Maryland, Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Virginia could run out by the end of April.

The department did not forecast how long the coal stockpiles would actually last. That depends on a variety of factors, including the weather, conservation measures and non-union coal availability.

The effects of the strike continued to emerge in the Midwest on Thursday. Two General Motors plants in Indiana announced one-day furloughs for 8,300 workers, and GM said power cutbacks in Ohio threaten the jobs of 300,000 workers across the country.

More power cutbacks were expected in Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee, Maryland and Virginia. The Tennessee Valley Authority said coal shortages threaten power cutbacks in its seven-state service area.

About 300 National Guardsmen armed with unloaded M-16s, but carrying ammunition, remained on duty in Indiana to protect coal shipments. Another 300 were deactivated because there has been no significant violence.

Atherton Hears Sadat Proposal

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton met with President Anwar Sadat today on Egypt's counter-proposals for a joint declaration of Middle East peace principles and returned to Israel.

Egyptian officials said the future of the Palestinians and the extent of an Israeli troop withdrawal from occupied Arab lands are still the main points of contention between Israel and Egypt.

The Assistant Secretary of State, accompanied by U.S. Ambassador Hermann F. Eilts, met Sadat at the Suez Canal city of Ismailia, where Sadat has been resting from a case of the flu.

The officials said Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel Thursday night presented Atherton with Egypt's counter-proposals to Israeli suggestions for a proposed joint statement of principles, which would then become the basis of future peace talks.

The officials said Egypt sees the aim of Atherton's mission as not only securing agreement on a declaration of principles, but also ensuring that the two sides interpret these principles exactly the same way.

Only thus can Jordan be persuaded to join in the peace talks as Egypt and the United States hope, they said. Atherton plans to visit Jordan and Saudi Arabia on his current Middle East swing.

Differences over the Palestinian and withdrawal issues brought face-to-face political talks between Egypt and Israel in Jerusalem to a standstill Jan. 18. Since then the United States has been talking to the two sides separately in an effort to bridge the gap.

Sadat said Thursday that Egypt will continue to champion Palestinian rights despite feelings among many Egyptians they were betrayed by the Cypriots and Palestinians in the "bloody weekend" in Cyprus.

The "bloody weekend" started Saturday when two Palestinian terrorists gunned down an influential Egyptian editor at the Nicosia Hilton. The following day, 15 Egyptian commandos were killed by Greek Cypriot guardsmen when they attempted to free hostages held by the two gunmen.

Egyptians demonstrators believed the Palestine Liberation Organization had a hand in the violence and called for their government to abandon its demand for a Palestinian homeland.

But Sadat met with Kamel in the Suez Canal City of Ismailia and said Egypt was "determined to give a push to efforts which aim at realizing a just peace in the region."

He said the Egyptian position still included the "restoration of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, in accordance with the resolutions of Arab summit conferences."

Those Arab summit conferences have recognized the PLO as the "sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people" and Sadat's statement indicated Egypt's bargaining position had not changed.

Two state-controlled newspapers, Al Ahram and Al Gomhouria, today played up reports of Sadat's statements.

"Sadat is acting in accordance with principles from which Egypt cannot deviate," commented Al Ahram. "We have faith in the common Arab destiny, and nobody can force us to alter our course or to renounce our Arab character, despite this foolishness which was committed against our people."

The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said Kamel gave Atherton "specific Egyptian ideas demanding Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands and recognition of the rights of the Palestinians."

Police Offer Reward For Kidnap Clues

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Police have posted a $2,500 reward for clues to the kidnappers of Dieter Huber, aide to conservative political leader Franz Josef Strauss.

Police sources expressed some skepticism when Huber, 30, turned up Feb. 15 after a two-day disappearance and said he was abducted. The announcement of the reward indicated that the police now accept Huber's story.

The complaint says investigators have a sworn statement from a former waitress at a local bar in which the waitress says she opened a side door to the club about 7:30 p.m. Dec. 24 to see two men standing behind Young.

According to the complaint, the witness states Homer and Tico Lowrance, Gordon, Miss Payne and the two men took Young into the back office of the bar. The witness said she heard a gunshot from the office a few minutes later, the complaint says.

Complainant Ed Barclay, a deputy sheriff, said he had personally observed what appeared to be blood in the office as well as an apparent bullet hole.

The complaint says reports from the Department of Public Safety confirm the hole was caused by a bullet. Blood samples found on a sidewalk outside the club, according to the complaint, were confirmed as being the blood type of the victim.

A short time after passers-by found the body stuffed into the car trunk, state trooper Max Gunn said he observed a car stopped about a quarter mile east of the intersection of Quirt Avenue and FM 1585. Gunn said there was a fire burning on the roadside near the car.

The complaint says the car was driven by Herndon and that Jaycon was a passenger.

Business Prizes Single Person

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In a major shift of values, big business is removing divorce as an impediment to executive advancement, and has even begun viewing it as a prized asset in ascending the corporate pyramid.

Analysis

The shift is marked. In the 1960s, the efforts of some executives to win the top job were permanently derailed because of divorce. Some who already had won the job were forced to resign after marital splits.

"If a top qualifier became divorced it was considered proof he could not manage his personal affairs and therefore couldn't be expected to manage corporate matters," is the explanation of one authority.

Now, explains Eugene Jennings, a confidential adviser to chief executives of giant corporations, and author of that viewpoint, the situation has almost become reversed, or is tending in that direction.

"The divorced and single person is prized because he or she is capable of giving unrelenting effort at a time when so many executives are forced to give greater priority to their families," said Jennings.

"In many respects," he continued, "corporate life is a single person's world, and the divorced person has already proved by divorce that he or she has chosen the company."

In one large corporation there is even an organization of VOSPs — those who informally and perhaps even facetiously have taken what they call "vows of single people."

Jennings, a management professor at Michigan State University and creator three decades ago of the first computer model to monitor corporate personnel movements, backgrounds the change in this manner:

As recently as the 1960s the corporate executive was viewed as the success model of a whole lifestyle. The system wanted him to be a model of the conservative virtues, including having a stable marriage.

It was a time when corporate life was much less demanding, and marriages were founded on the traditional roles of man and woman as breadwinner and homemaker. The marriage could withstand sacrifices made for the good of the company.

Today, however, the pressure of travel and of staying on top of the job have become terribly magnified. The executive often finds himself faced with a decision: marriage and family, or job.

Measuring the change from listening posts in more than 40 Fortune 500 companies, Jennings estimates that about 20 percent of those who are now nearing the top of the largest corporations have been divorced.

Of these, three out of four have remarried, but often their new relationship is that of a VOSP — two people who have decided to pursue careers without interference from traditional marital obligations.

"It has always been one or the other," says Jennings. "Every week the top executive is making tradeoffs in favor of his career and at the expense of the marriage."

Many of these singles-oriented executives are now surfacing in the top ranks at the very time family-oriented executives are seeking to lessen their workload in order to spend more time with their families.

Jennings projects that by 1985 "at least one-third and maybe as high as 50 percent of chief executive officers of the 500 largest companies will be divorced." Six chief executive officers were divorced last year alone.

The professor, whose own marriage to the same woman has endured since his student days, comments that in making these estimates he is not prescribing but merely describing and reporting.

He offers some possibility that the trend might not continue indefinitely. Some time in the 1980s, he says, the corporate world could settle down and make fewer demands on its executives.

Meanwhile, the stigma of divorce has been removed from the corporate suite, which has come to appreciate officers who are willing to seek their achievements in unremitting devotion to the company.

Progress Cited In Transplants

HOUSTON (AP) — Hospital officials said today doctors are encouraged by the progress of a 21-year-old double transplant recipient who received the heart and one kidney from a 38-year-old woman a week ago.

Officials at the Texas Heart Institute of St. Luke's Episcopal hospital said the patient is in critical though stable condition.

The patient, identified only as an oil field worker by the Texas Heart Institute, underwent the surgery the night of Feb. 14. The donor was a housewife who died of severe brain damage.

There has been no official confirmation from the hospital that the patient is Kirk Martin of Bay City.

However, one hospital source confirmed a Kirk Martin was a patient in the intensive care unit. Hospital officials said the patient's family has asked that the name not be released.

Patient Refuses Treatment

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — An old man who has been a "house guest" at St. Joseph's Hospital since New Year's Eve refuses treatment and refuses to leave "because of the service he gets."

The patient, Alvin Doebler, 75, is suffering from gangrene in both legs. Doctors have advised him he should have parts of both legs amputated, but he has refused. Even a trip to court Wednesday for a hearing failed to convince him.

"What we have here is a house guest who refuses to go home," said hospital spokesman Donald Borkowski. He said the hospital doesn't want to evict Doebler because it wants to treat him.

"But he has refused to allow our doctors to give him the treatment they feel necessary," Borkowski said.

Doebler was carried on a stretcher into the courtroom of Judge William J. Shaughnessy for a hearing on the hospital's request that the operation be performed. Shaughnessy referred the case to the county welfare department.

2:00-5:00 P.M. Sunday, Feb. 26
9:00 A.M. — 4:00 P.M. Feb. 27 — Mar. 3

First Federal Savings & Loan Association cordially invites you to view the art work of well-known artists, Jim Eppler and Paul Milosevich at First Federal Plaza. The exhibit will open with a "meet the artists" reception Sunday and run through next week.

Although Eppler was born in California, he came to Texas at the age of two and grew up in the Caprock area. He considers the State "an artistic gold-mine". His commercial clients include MCA and Mercury Records, Chappell Music and the Nashville Songwriter's Hall of Fame. Paul Milosevich, a Colorado native, maintains a studio home in Lubbock. His work includes down-to-earth subjects against their natural backgrounds. He has been highly acclaimed for portraits he has done of country/western performers Kris Kristofferson, Waylon Jennings, Jessie Colter, Tom T. Hall, Willie Nelson and others.

This is a fine opportunity to become acquainted with the work of these two outstanding artists as they present their work featuring the people, places and things familiar to the citizens of West Texas.

Taxes Cause Growth In Underground Economy

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The six percent drop in crime reported by the FBI in 1977 may mean some kinds of crime have become respectable and now are part of the nation's "subterranean economy."

This underground economy employs from 800,000 to 1.6 million persons who are not officially recorded as working and may add some $200 billion a year to the reported Gross National Product.

A portion of it — much less than half — is based on outright crime, says Dr. Peter Gutmann of the City University of New York's Baruch College.

Most of the rest of the income is involved in cash business transactions that arise from "the public's growing contempt for the tax system and government regulation," Professor Gutmann says.

Gutmann has published a short article in the Financial Analysts Journal that appears to be the first research report on the U. S. underground economy. He finds it a somewhat frightening phenomenon caused by ever-rising tax rates and a ..ushing burden of government regulation.

If the reality of the subterranean economy is not recognized, he concludes, an ever-increasing part of the nation's economy will go underground "with a resulting loss of confidence in the government and its controls and statistics plus huge losses in tax revenues.

The FBI report on the decline in reported crime bears on the rise in the subterranean economy in that it arouses the suspicion that professional criminals simply have turned more and more to activities that go unreported.

Dr. Gutmann does not claim precise accuracy for his measurement of the subterranean economy. There is no way to measure it precisely. He arrives at his estimates by calculating the amount of currency in circulation, the use of which cannot be accounted for by "legal" and conventional business operations. He discovered that there is a vast surplus of currency in circulation in the country in comparison with the legitimate needs of officially recorded businesses.

He reduced this surplus to a barometer figure, the amount of currency in circulation in proportion to each $1,000 of demand bank deposits. He made a historical comparison of this barometer figure going back to 1892 and discovered that it has fluctuated greatly over the years with changing times. It dropped, for example, from $352 in 1892 to $219 in 1941, surged to $363 in 1945 as a result of wartime inflation and black market underground cash business operations, fell again to $249 by 1961, then rose steadily to $344 in 1976 and may still be rising.

This surplus currency in circulation is what lubricates the underground economy.

The underground economy is not all illegal or even necessarily unethical. Teenagers who mow lawns are paid in cash and rarely report their earnings for tax purposes, so they are part of the underground economy but they are not motivated by contempt for the law. Lots of other payments for part time work, even some full-time work and payments for products sold in small quantities likewise are quite innocent parts of the subterranean economy.

But Dr. Gutmann says an astonishing number of retail and service businesses lend themselves to the "classic illegal and quasi-legal" operations of the subterranean economy. He lists restaurants, car washing establishments, garages, bars and many retail sales and service businesses that deal mainly in cash as being particularly able to engage in tax evasion. He says their sales volume and employment figures tend to be grossly underreported in the standard statistical measurements of the economy.

Dr. Gutmann actually arrived at an annual gross product of $176 billion for the underground economy but he concluded that this probably was too conservative because his barometer figure was distorted somewhat after World War II by the growing use of non-interest bearing demand deposits by business as compensating balances for bank loans.

This tended to narrow rather sharply increase the ratio between demand deposits and currency in circulation.

He said that his best guess is that of about $77.8 billion in money in circulation outside banks in 1976, about $28.7 billion was being used to finance illegal and extra-legal activities. That's more than 37 percent.

But this $28.7 billion of money in underground circulation apparently produced an underground national product of at least $176 billion, perhaps nearer $200 billion.

Most of the persons who are participating in the underground income also are employed in regular jobs, professions or businesses. If this were not the case, Dr. Gutman said, the $176 billion annuul national product of the underground economy would be enough to support at least 8.2 million additional jobs in the country.

He told United Press International that while a few people heavily engaged in the illegal part of the subterranean economy may make very large sums — the criminal bosses, some black market dealers, crooked politicians and crooked business and professional men for example — the per capita average profit of all persons participating in the subterranean economy probably is quite small.

But the subterranean economy provides all their income for many illegal aliens without residence status, for many fugitives from justice and many social dropouts. Retired persons may also earn underground income and not report it in order to avoid taxes and avoid having their social security payments cut.

"We must take a long and hard look at the rules, regulations, restrictions and taxes that spawned the subterranean economy," Dr. Gutmann says.

WHITE DEATH

Avalanches of dry snow usually strike so swiftly that even when someone sees the slide coming, there is no chance to get out of its way. but some victims buried alive have been able to breathe in air pockets — like trapped miners — until rescue workers dug them out. The "white death" avalanche, however, makes escape impossible.

Stokes Urges Positivism

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A man who rose from life in the slums of Cleveland to become the first black mayor of that city says that his people must maintain a positive attitude in their continuing struggle for equality in this country.

"You can't ignore the impact and progress that blacks have made in this country," Carl Stokes said Thursday night in a speech keynoting the observance of Black Heritage Week at Reese Air Force Base. "If you ignore it, if you think negative, obviously you will have no motivation to keep on working for a Democratic country."

"As for blacks, I've seen a steady rate of progress. It would be extremely difficult today to go to any institution that you don't find black women and men functioning at all levels," Stokes said.

"Sure, there is still widespread poverty, neighborhoods are still segregated and jobs are difficult to find. But, at the same time, we can't ignore the impact and progress that we have made," the former mayor told the gathering.

Stokes said it was extremely easy for blacks to be bitter and pessimistic about their situation because there is a lot of bad in this country, but he cautioned them to keep living and striving for the future.

"I'm of the belief that if you go to the people with your case, they have the capacity to respond to you. During the height of the civil rights movement, where would we have been without the support of the white media or white Americans? And I think the capacity of white Americans to respond is still there," he said.

However, Stokes, now a commentator-reporter for NBC, feels that generally Americans are permitting themselves to be pessimistic. "We've gone to a pre-60s attitude. I'm afraid we've gotten away from the movement we were all involved in," he said.

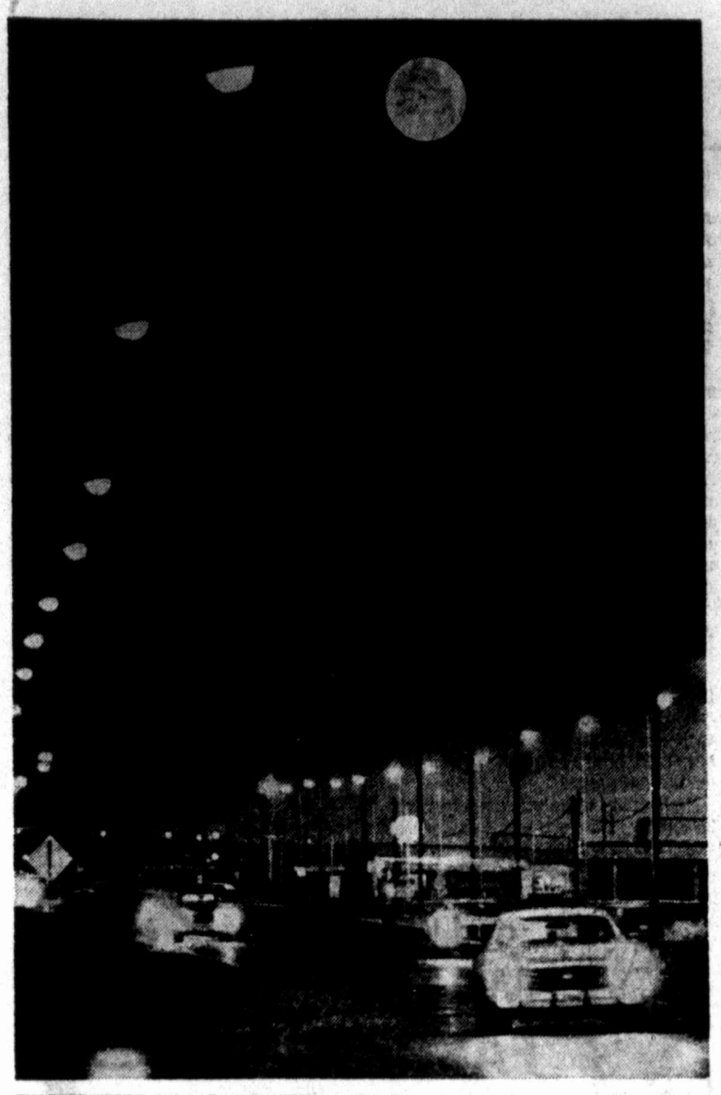

But, Stokes feels that another movement is coming. "I think the steady rate of progress that we're seeing now is keeping us motivated for the next mass phase. There is still a further need for reforms that were left out in the 60s."

Stokes highlighted his talk with the story of a black man whose abilities spanned all areas but who, he said, was made a non-person by his nation and his own brothers. The man was Paul Robeson.

"He was a scholar, terrific sports player, singer-actor and political activist and probably the most widely known man in the world during the 20s and 40s. But, to the ire of the United States, he became friendly with the Russians and was branded as a Communist. Here was a man stripped of the right to make a living in his own country," Stokes said.

But it was never proved that Robeson was a Communist, he added. "In 1959, Robeson finally got his passport back,

Parlor Rules Draw Fire

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock's soon-to-be-adopted massage parlor regulations draw mixed reactions from city masseuses, several of whom question the high licensing fee and the requirement that an appointment book be open to police inspection.

Although many of the massage parlors contacted by The Avalanche-Journal declined to comment, several masseuses scorned parts of the regulations and displayed indifference to others.

"If it's a drive to stop prostitution, I don't think it will work. They haven't been able to do so since the days of Jesus," said one woman, who had been present Thursday when the council passed the ordinance on first reading. Second and final reading will be March 9.

The woman said she agrees with some parts of the ordinance, explaining that she believes "the City of Lubbock should know names of riffraff and scum and things like that."

But, she continued, she strongly objects to the requirement that a patron's name, the date and type of service given be listed in an appointment book that is open to police review at all times.

"I feel it's no one's business" who enters the establishment, she explained. "Do they go to Dunlap's (department store) and take down the name of everyone who goes there to shop?"

She answered her query with a firm no and added she believes the same policy should be extended to parlor patrons.

The masseuse also objected to the license fee, which is $500 annually for operators and $100 annually for each employee. Those figures were proposed by Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan, who said she believes the industry should pay the cost of ordinance enforcement.

The $500 fee "is a little bit on the ridiculous side," said the masseuse. "They (council members) didn't stop to think of the places that run legitimate business. When one place does wrong, does everyone have to pay for it?"

The ordinance's other major requirement — at least 70 hours of training at an accredited massage school — also is "ridiculous," said the woman, who added that several of her employees already have received formal training, although not as much as required.

"It doesn't take that long to learn how to massage," she said. "You just have to know the muscles and what not to rub."

Other masseuses echoed her beliefs. One who called the ordinance "dumb, really dumb," put it this way:

"These places have been in business a long time. Without us, there'd be a lot more rapists on the streets."

Although the licensing is not bad, she added, the fees are too high. "I don't think they'll drive any of us out of business, though," she said. "The money goes right to government, anyway, and it'll come right back here."

She also agreed that while formal training is not bad, 70 hours is too much. She

Major Banks Blamed For Farm Problems

By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Blaming the economic condition in the United States on major commercial East Coast banks, a national legislative lobbyist Thursday told about 2,000 area farmers their fight is really against "the money creators" instead of any particular farm program or administration.

Dr. Arnold "Red" Paulson, president of the National Organization for Raw Materials, told the South Plains strikers in Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium they could blame their price problems on profit strategies of major lending institutions that, he said, lock the average American in a cellar of debt.

Paulson gave the farmers a historical perspective of farm policy in the United States, leading to his conclusion that 100 percent parity prices on all raw materials is the only solution that "will save America" from destroying itself.

Speaking much like a pulpit-pounding preacher throughout his 90-minute talk, Paulson said the farmers' problems began after World War II, when bankers forced through Congress an amendment that mandated 100 percent parity prices. When that amendment lapsed, however, Paulson said, American farmers were forced to borrow as were most American residents in order to keep pace with an economy moving still at the inflated rate.

Paulson said the multiplier effect — a situation where one dollar produced generates several dollars of income through sales — resulted where farmers were receiving payments from the government because of the price drops after the amendment lapsed. Only then, the effect was working backwards. "A farmer's dollar generates $1 of income for the producer, $1 of income for the industry for labor and $1 for the whole system through the sales, through this multiplier effect,"

El Paso Sheriff Indicted

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso County Sheriff Mike Sullivan and his chief aide face official misconduct indictments returned against them by an El Paso County grand jury.

The charges against Sullivan, who has been sheriff here for 13 years, and the charges against Chief Deputy Stuart Palos stemmed from a three-month grand jury investigation spurred by a series of articles in the El Paso Times concerning a federally funded job training program.

Both were named in two counts accusing them of official misconduct. A third sheriff's department official, Capt. Everette Riley was named in four counts accusing him of theft over $200.

Also indicted by the same grand jury were two corporations, one naming Industrial Hardware and Supply and another against Thomas Paints of El Paso. They are accused of theft over $200.

Sheriff Sullivan, Palos and Riley were released by State District Court Judge Jerry Woodard after they posted $5,000 bond on each count.

The indictments against the corporations were not delivered Thursday, according to Capt. Mac Stout, chief of the sheriff's criminal division.

Although the specifics of the indictments against Sullivan and his employees were not immediately made public, the El Paso newspaper earlier alleged in a series of stories that trainees from a federally funded job training program performed work on homes owned by the law enforcement officers.

Stubborn Fern Teaches Hope

ISABEL CHAMP
Mulino, Ore.

There were hundreds of other ferns in the area, each rooted and nourished by the rich forest loam. But I noticed only one. Not because it was lace-like and exquisite and freshly-green and trim — although it was all of these.

But because it was clinging to a bare, craggy rock that stubbornly jutted a frowning and sullen face at the wooded area around it.

I suppose I noticed this particular tender little fern because I'd been thinking about Lillian and it reminded me of her. "Such a sweet little lady. I can't understand how she puts up with husband of hers. And Bill is just like that rock — stubborn and frowning and sullen."

And just as hard...I'd said to her once, "Lillian, why don't you accept the fact that bill will never be interested in spiritual things. Wouldn't it be easier if you gave up that dream of yours that he'll sometime sit beside you in the pew?"

"No.," she answered. "I think quietly loving — like God does with me — will eventually win him over. Now don't worry about me. I'll just 'hang in there' in the meantime."

"'Hang in there' is a good way to put it," I said to myself. "Bill's giving her about as much nourishment as that rock is giving that lovely fern."

While I rested on a moss-covered log nearby, I kept thinking about the woodland plant with its new tendrils uncurling like fiddle necks.

"It's so tender, I could bruise it with a touch. I just hope Bill's attitude doens't bruise Lillian and leave her scarred. But she and the fern are alike...they're both getting strength from an unseen source."

I wasn't the only one who had such feelings about Bill. Hundreds of others, rooted and nourished by rich church fellowship, often said of him, "He's the hardest man we know."

Before continuing my woodsy walk, I took a last look at that hard, jagged rock. It wasn't until then that I noticed....

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

A male reader wishes to be heard.

"I wish to comment on a column you had a few weeks ago where you accused husbands of apathy toward a wife's problem of what to fix for dinner. Your exact words were: "I don't know of a woman alive who has not begged her husband for suggestions for dinner. I don't know of a husband alive who has not constantly ordered, 'I don't care.'"

He continues, "Perhaps the main reason 'I don't care' is consistently ordered may be seen in the following exchange:

Husband: I don't care.

Wife: Please don't say that. Help me decide what to fix.

Husband: All right...how about spaghetti?

Wife: No, I'm really not in the mood for spaghetti. I'd rather have something more meaty.

Husband: Okay, how about a pot roast?

Wife: We can't. I'm saving our last roast for day after tomorrow. It's too big for the two of us and we'll have someone in.

Husband: Well then, why don't you just fry up some chicken?

Wife: We don't have any. I took those last two fryers to the church potluck last Sunday.

Husband: If we don't have anything, let's just go out for dinner.

Wife: You know we can't afford it. We've gone out too much lately. Besides, my hair is a mess and I don't have a thing to wear.

Husband: What do we have then?

Wife: I could thaw out some hamburger and fix your favorite casserole. Would you like that?

Husband: I don't care."

Author's Postcript: If the writer had taken his vignette one step farther, we would have the wife thawing the hamburger and serving his favorite casserole. He would look at it and observe, "Is this the casserole with the imported eagle eggs, $35 worth of shrimp and clams, the secret sauce that takes 12 hours to prepare and marinate and can only be served during a full moon?" (His wife nods enthusiastically.) I had it for lunch."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

Tech Club Sets Work Days

The Texas Tech Park and Recreation Klub (PARK) will sponsor a work day from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday to raise money for a student Texas Recreation and Park Society conference on the Tech campus at Junction April 21-23.

Students will be available to do general house and yard work during these hours at a rate of $2 per hour. Help may be obtained by calling 744-0890.

PARK is a student organization made up of park administration and recreation students. The club, while relatively new on the Tech campus, has been recognized as a leading university club in the state organization.

The club members promote awareness of the environment and the part that open space and recreation play in urban areas.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: After being married for 19 years to the only woman I ever loved, God took her from me. We had always wanted a child, but she couldn't have any.

A year later I married a girl to give her child a name. Goldie was 18 and I was 41. She never tried to fool me. She told me right away she was carrying another man's child. She was sweet, very shy and beautiful in my eyes, and I learned to love her.

I was looking forward to being a father but God didn't will it because the baby was born dead.

To make a long story short, I found out that the baby I had wanted so much belonged to her own father! That's not all, Abby. That was the SECOND baby she had had by him. (She gave the first one away.)

Here's the problem. Goldie and I now have a healthy baby boy of our own who means the world to me, but since I found out about the two babies she had by her own father I can't stand the sight of her!

If I kick her out, she'll take my son with her, and I'd rather see him dead than raised by a slut like her.

Please tell me what to do. I'm too ashamed to talk to my priest.

BROKENHEARTED

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: It's unfair to blame Goldie for having been impregnated by her father. She was the victim, not the guilty party. Talk to your priest and get some professinal counseling. You need to sort out your thoughts in order to view the situation fairly and objectively.

There is no reason to give up your son or your marriage. I recommend counseling for Goldie, too. The poor woman has obviously suffered a great deal. She needs compassion-not condemnation. Please try to save your marrige. And write again to let me know your decision. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Should a teen-age girl accept a blind date with a fellow who calls her up and says he has "seen her somewhere," but she doesn't know anything about him? How about when someone she knows calls and asks her to accept a date with a third party? He could be real neat, but he could also be a creep. Is there some rule a girl can go by?

TROUBLED TEEN

DEAR TEEN: If a boy calls and says he has "seen" you, unless you can check him out with a mutual friend, skip him. If someone you know calls, wanting to arrange a blind date, consider the go-between. If he's a solid citizen, say yes. (It's only a date, not a year's contract.) Don't put him through the third degree asking, "How tall is he, and what color eyes does he have?" Chances are the guy is standing right by the phone listening to every word you say, so play it cool and you'll make points for being a good sport.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: We want very much to get married. He's 70 and I an 68. We each have property in our own names and we don't want to change the ownership. We also don't want to change property deeds.

I want everything I leave after I die to go to my children, and he wants everything he has to go to his. We are both financially well off, so there is no problem there.

If we have to go to a nursing home, each wants to be responsible for his own keep there or at a hospital. We each have our own insurance.

Each wants to keep the interest from his money, and each wants to keep his own Social Security?

If this possible if we marry? If so, how? There is too much red tape to make the unusual name changes on property, deeds, insurance, etc.

Our children agree with us. Can you help us?

IOWA PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: Retain a lawyer and explain exactly what you want-and don't want-and let him (or her) handle it.

YWCA Offers New Schedule Of Classes

New monthly sessions of fitness classes will begin Monday and Tuesday at the YWCA, 3101 35th.

Each of the exercise classes is structured, led by qualified instructors, and tailored to meet the individual needs of each woman enrolled.

Exercise and swim, a body-conditioning calesthenic exercise class followed by non-instructed recreational swim, meets Tuesday and Thursday at 9 a.m.

Noon exercise is offered for the working woman to fit into her lunch hour from 12:15 — 12:45 p.m. New students or those wishing to progress more slowly meet Tuesday and Thursdays. Continuing students meet Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Calesthenic exercise is offered Tuesday and Thursday at 6:00 p.m. and Monday and Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. Some classes incorporate the use of some aerobics in their routines, while others use jumping rope to stimulate the cardio-vascular system for an overall feeling of well-being, as well as the exercise to firm and tone the body.

Another favorite form of exercise is jazz exercise. Exercises which are effective in strengthening and stretching are danced to jazz music and a dance combination to popular music is perfected. These classes meet Tuesday and Thursday at 9:30 a.m. and Tuesday and Thursday at 6:15 p.m.

Ballet for exercise meets Tuesday and Thursday at 7:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Classical ballet exercises are used for a difficult approach to physical fitness.

Yoga classes incorporate exercise, breath control, and deep relaxation. Classes meet Monday and Friday at 10 a.m. and on Tuesday and Thursday at 6:45 p.m.

For people looking for creative outlets, macrame is offered Tuesday at 9 a.m.; stained glass on Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. beginning March 6, and bridge for beginners on Monday and Wednesday at 9:30 a.m., also beginning March 6.

A parenting class taught by Dr. Jim Jenkins will be offered Thursday evenings March 9 — March 30. The class will offer parents insights and techniques in developing more effectual communications with their children and others.

The Outreach Program will also offer classes beginning Tuesday at Alderson Junior High. Women's Exercise will be held on Tuesday and Thursday from 7 — 7:45 p.m. A parenting program, "Understanding Your Child", will meet on Tuesday from 7-9 p.m.; and a money management class on Thursday from 7-8:30 p.m.

New preschool classes beginning this spring will include: Wonderland and the Rabbit Habit. The Wonderland class will feature different aspects of dramatics and imagery. The Rabbit Habit brings a case of spring fever and Easter crafts to young preschoolers. These classes meet on Monday and Wednesday for one hour periods each.

Teen women can look forward to the start of the Total Teen. This class looks into the interests of teens in the areas of hair, clothes, makeup, and figure analysis.

Dog Obedience, a class designed to make you a better parent for your pet, will begin April 8 and meets on Saturday afternoons.

Gymnastic classes for children 6-17 years old will be offered Monday through Saturday at different times. Open gym will be available to YWCA gymnastic students at no extra charge on Friday from 3:30-5:30 p.m.

The following Red Cross swimming courses will be offered at the YWCA pool. Advanced Lifesaving, a course designed to teach the swimmer skills in order that he may save his own life or the life of another in the event of an emergency, Feb. 27 — March 13, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 8-11 p.m. This course is required by most pools for summer time employment as a lifeguard. A Water Safety Instructors course will teach the swimmer how to teach swimming. This course starts March 29 and runs through April 19 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights.

Persons interested in learning how to swim before summer are urged to enroll in the following classes. Adult classes are arranged for different skill levels. Those levels are Beginning: for those with little or no swimming knowledge; Advanced Beginning: for those who already have some degree of skill; and Intermediate Swimmers: for those with advanced skills but desire to learn several new strokes. Adult classes are offered in the mornings on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday and evenings on Tuesday and Thursday. Classes for children ages 6-14 are held on Monday and Wednesday evenings. These classes are also divided according to groups listed under adults. A new session of classes begins February 27 and runs through March 19.

For eager swimmers age 1-3, the YWCA offers a Mommy and Me class. This class allows the mother or father to work with the child with the aid of an instructor. The course covers basic water adjustment and propulsion skills. For children, 4-5 years, Tadpoles is offered. This course starts the child on the actual stroke, learning to swim on both the front and back.

Opening lead: King of ◇.

South, declarer at four hearts, made good use of the information he had gleaned from the auction to execute a most unusual end play.

North's decision to bid four hearts was overly aggressive since his queen of diamonds was of doubtful value. However, he knew that South's double followed by his bid of three hearts showed a strong hand with long hearts, so North felt that his trump support warranted a raise to game.

West led the king of diamonds, and when dummy appeared, declarer realized that he would have to work hard to make his contract. However, he had one useful piece of information to guide him—West had to have almost every missing high card for his no trump opening bid.

Declarer put this bit of knowledge to good use at trick one. He allowed West to hold the king of diamonds, discarding a spade from his hand! West did not enjoy having the lead because he was end played. Since a diamond continuation would set up dummy's queen, West tried to mislead declarer by shifting to the jack of hearts, but declarer was not taken in.

He won the king of hearts, cashed the ace of clubs and led the ten of hearts. West played low and so did dummy. East discarded a diamond. A heart to the ace drew the last trump, and a club to the nine lost to West's ten.

Now West could safely exit with the ace of diamonds, but his ease was short-lived. Declarer ruffed, cashed the king of clubs in an attempt to drop the queen, and when the lady did not drop, West was presented with a club trick—the defenders' third trick and, as it turned out, their last.

West was left with a choice of evils. He could either lead a spade into declarer's ace-queen or a diamond to the queen in dummy, allowing declarer to discard the queen of spades. Either way, declarer could only lose two clubs and one diamond.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

If you have to cut down on salt as well as calories, you'll want to meet this month's winning Slim Gourmet cook: Anne O'Brien of North Hollywood, Calif. Her winning entry is series of low-calorie, low-fat, low-salt sauces she developed to jazz up the main courses she prepared for her husband's anti-hypertension diet. For sharing her prize-winning ideas, we're sending Anne a copy of "The Slim Gourmet Cookbook" ($12.95, Harper & Row).

Anne's husband has been on a special diet for the past 10 years due to high blood pressure: low-sodium as well as strict portion control. "At first it was difficult," Anne writes, "he said everything was like dishwater. Then I went on the same diet and we started experimenting.

"Today it is a joy to eat. We would never return to our old way of preparing food. Today he is off all medication, and is slim and healthy again."

Anne is an inspiration to all cooks who have to prepare meals for family members on "special" diets. It's important to be willing to cook "special" foods, but what helps even more is to cook special foods you'd be willing to eat ourself.

After all, if they don't taste good to you, why would anyone else like them?

ANNE O'BRIEN'S BASIC LOW-CAL LOW-SALT SAUCE

2 tbsp. cake flour or rice flour
4 tbsp. non-fat milk crystals (dry)
½ tsp. paprika
¼ tsp. salt substitute
2 cups water
¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese

Combine all ingredients except cheese in blender. Cover and blend on high speed 1 minute. Empty into top of double boiler over simmering water. Cook and stir until smooth and thick. Stir in cheese until melted (Anne likes to add a few drops of yellow food coloring). Makes eight servings, about 40 calories each.

Serve the sauce over broiled chicken or fish. Good on crisp, steamed vegetables, too. Leftover sauce can be refrigerated and reheated in a double boiler. Or, pack the sauce in a heavy jar. To reheat, remove the jar lid and put the jar in a pan of water, and reheat as you would baby food. Or, use one cupful of prepared sauce to make these variations:

MOCK MORNAY SAUCE

To 1 cup hot basic sauce, add:
2 tbsp. shredded Parmesan cheese
½ tsp. Dijon-style mustard
1 drop liquid hot pepper (or more, to taste)
Serves four, 55 calories each.

BEARNAISE SAUCE

To one cup hot basic sauce add:
1 tsp. tarragon vinegar
1 tsp. Dijon-style mustard
a pinch of dry tarragon
1 tbsp. lemon juice
Serves four, 40 calories each.

CREAM CURRY SAUCE

1 clove garlic, mashed
1 tsp. chopped shallots or onion
1 tsp. green pepper, finely chopped
1 tsp. curry powder
a dash each: turmeric, ground clove, cinnamon
1 tsp. margarine

Combine ingredients in a sauce pan. Cook and stir over low heat 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in one cup of basic sauce. Serve over seafood. Serves four, 50 calories each.

Writer Suggests Tax On Cliche Signposts

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

PUNTA GORDA, Fla. — Towns and villages at their wits' end over where to find more revenues might consider a cliche tax on retirement cottages named "Wits End" or "Dun Roaming" and holiday homes called "Lost Weekend" and "Second Mortgage."

Mulligan's Stew

Pople who assault the public patience with custie-pie sign posts should be made to pay for their insipidity. The town assessor might levy a $20-a-year tax bite for a moderately unclever house sign like "Hell's Quarter Acre" and up to $50 for a clinker like "Paradise Refinanced."

The yachting crowd is ripe for plucking by the tax man empowered to make them cough up for their nautical clinchers. A visit to any boatyard at this time of year will turn up endless $50 possibilities like "Sea Daze," "Stormy Petrol" (sic), "Miss Fortune," "Star Boarder," "Rumme Runner" and "Laz-E-Daze." Lawyers who have "Legal Eagle" or "Bar Sinister" scrawled on the stern of their sloops should receive a special assessment, along with physicians who roil us with "Doctor's Dilemma" in their wake or surgeons who sail under the ensign of "Cut Up" and "Sid the Knife."

Restaurant owners who insist on identifying their toilet facilities with precious titles are both a menace to public morals and an affront to the sensibilities of their patrons. A $100 minimum might be in order here.

In a country inn or hunting lodge, I am often at a loss to determine in a jiffy whether I am a "Pointer" or a "Setter," a "Doe" or a "Roe," or a "Hind" or a "Hart." At a seafood place, one is confronted with the doorknob decision of "Gulls" or "Buoys," while nightclubs take delight in disguising their plumbing arrangements behind such frivolities as "Guys" and "Dolls," "Laddies" nd "Lassies," "Daphnis" and "Chloe" and "Romeo" and "Juliet."

There was a joint down in Greenwich Village that had "Damon" and "Pythias" marked on the alternate doors, and I'm still not sure what that was all about. Eateries that identify their rest rooms with caricature figures differentiating the sexes can be the cause of embarrassing choices like the Greek restaurant in Nicosia, Cyprus, where the male figure is adorned in a skirt. I understand one could have the same problem in Edinburgh.

If I were making out a tax schedule for cliche sign boards that cry out for public vengence, I'd go the limit on road houses called "Dew Drop Inn" or "Snack Shack" or "Gnosh and Gnibble" or "Steak Out" or any cloying combinations like "Keg and Kutlet," "Brew and Brisket" or "Beef 'n' Bottlem." There was a roast beef emporium in London called "Rump and Roister" that went bankrupt but made a comeback as "Saddle and Sirloin," which should have put the proprietor in double jeopardy of the tax man.

In the depression days, according to John Steinbeck, the rule of the road used to be never eat at a place called "Mom's," buy a used car from a guy named "Doc" or frequent a pawn shop called "Trader Sam's" or "Honest Looie's."

In these inflationary times, I'd call down a pox, or at least a nuisance tax, on all houses promising 'Kwick Kredit," "E-Z-Terms" and a "Price Panic," as well as shopping center retail establishments doing business under the sign of "Discount-o-rama" or "Cut Rate Jamboree."

Shops that insist on calling themselves shoppes and any variant of ye olde (as in "Ye Olde Crumpet Shoppee" and "Ye Olde Grog House") would be penalized to the fullest extent of the tax man's powers, and no mercy would be shown to merchants caught in a flagrant mugging of Middle English, as in "Ye Antique and Junque Shoppee."

Milk companies advertising from "Moo to You" would have to pay for their bad cases of the cutes, along with diaper services that make any reference to the eternal triangle or take out Chinese restaurants that play around with the likes of "Chop Suey Chop Chop" and "Quikie Takee Outee." The tax assessor might consider a rebate or at least a lowered assessment for the Japanese restaurant on the outskirts of Miami that calls itself "Colonel Samurai's Fried Shrimp" in gratitude for its put down of a competitor. And maybe some exception to the cutsie tax should be granted to the Reno bar that calls itself "Los Alimonies," on the grounds of aptness and originality.

But like the federal tax jungle that Jimmy Carter is trying to hack his way through, once you start granting exceptions and writeoffs, town halls all over the country will be clogd with tax accountants and tax lawyers pleading the merits of the "Leaning Tower of Pizza" and the dude ranch in the Catskills calld "The Bar-Mitz-Var."

Solon Suggests Chinese Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry Jackson suggests the United States consider buying Chinese oil and allowing U.S. petroleum firms to do contract work in China.

Jackson said Chinese officials told him that petroleum reserves there are greater than previously estimated and may surpass those in the United States.

The Washington Democrat, who just returned from a week-long visit to China, told a news conference on Wednesday: "The Chinese appear to be convinced that American petroleum technology is superior to that available anywhere else in the world.

He said they are interested in devices and information on energy exploration and production.

"They want to pay cash," he added.

GROWING OLDER

Moving Question Faces Retirees

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

A former colleague of mine is about to face that day of reckoning. In a few months he will take his mandatory retirement. He has come to me for advice because I had to face many of the same problems when I retired a few years ago.

Retirement can be traumatic when we realize there won't be that daily job to go to anymore. We realize we're not all that essential to keeping the wheels of industry rolling along.

Retirement is also a financial shock. Unless a person is well-heeled with a reserve of cash, the loss of a weekly paycheck means a downward adjustment in his or her standard of living.

I was no different that most people contemplating the plus and minus factors of retirement. I could no longer pay the rent for my New York apartment, which today would be three times more than the maintenence fee I pay for my Florida condominium.

Except for rare occasions, I had to cut out those frequent "business" lunches with professional and social friends. I couldn't afford taxi fares nor the Broadway theater tickets.

What I consider normal expenditures in my new home would be luxury items had I continued living in New York. But even after making those cutbacks, I still had to pull in my belt.

To adjust my living expenses while still enjoying life, I decided to move out of the expensive city into the Sun Belt. There living can be cheaper — and better in many other ways. Within a few months, it was quite easy not to miss many asspects of city life I had feared I couldn't live without.

Of course, my new lifestyle did require some sacrifices and adjustments. My chief problem — greater even than my new financial situation — was leaving behind a daughter, a son-in-law, two grandchildren and many old friends.

I wondered with dismay what it would be like not to see our family regularly and watch the two boys during their most interesting and formative years. That also seens to be a major problem for my close friends who must now come to grips with retirement.

We had to look at some distressing but real facts. Younger generations have their own lives to lead. If my son-in-law were offered a better job in another city, he and the family would undoubtedly pack up and move. And the boys would soon enter new phases of their lives in which grandparents play only a minor role.

Yes, we moved away. Sure we miss them, but we've made the adjustment

Our family visits us at least once a year and we budget part of our limited income for an annual trip back to New York. Our phone bills now may be higher, but in the long run it's a small expense.

In addition to the phone calls, we carry on a lively correspondence with our children and grandchildren by mail. The postal service and the phone company also do a good job of keeping up our contacts with other relatives and old friends we left behind. And we have a constant stream of visitors who want to escape from the chilly weather up north.

Moving was a difficult decision, but we managed to adjust to the uprooting from family, friends and familiar surroundings. Would it work out for others? May be yes, maybe no. It all comes down to evaluating how best you can enjoy retirement life with fewest financial and emotional tension.

Scared Clerk Quitting

By MICHAEL HOLMES

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The clerk of an adult book store said she was quitting, fearful after four book-store related killings and subsequent telephone threats on two other shops.

"I'm quitting today," said the female clerk working at the downtown Denmark Book Store. "I got better things to do than sit here being a sitting duck."

On Sunday, Jeff Beavers, 14, Geoffrey Hoffman, 14, and his brother Gerald Hoffman Jr., 15, were lined up side-by-side, shot in the heads and killed as they worked on a remodeling project in a building that had previously housed the Blue Nude book store.

Six hours later, William Baldwin, 30, was found dead behind the counter of the Adult Center book store four blocks away. He, too, had been shot in the head.

Police have not linked the slayings but have confirmed that at least two "adult entertainment centers" received telephone threats following the weekend slayings.

"We have to view them as important, serious, of concern," said Assistant Police Chief Billie B. Wallace. "It's dangerous to discount them."

Earlier in the week, Police Chief Wendell Nichols speculated that the "execution-style" killings may have been caused by "someone who appointed himself a one-man health department to clean out these book stores."

But police officials declined to comment this week on reports that officers had placed some adult book stores and movie theaters under surveillance in the wake of the threats.

Meanwhile, at least 30 Des Moines police officers, joined by 15 special agents of the Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation, were assigned to full-time investigation of the four slayings.

Medieval Tapestry Revives Chaucer

With a touch of crewel embroidery, you'll be on your way to the Canterbury Tales wall hangings pictured here. Three lively and bustling scenes commemorate Chaucer's great yarns with a look of medieval tapestry that's just right for showing off samples of some of your favorite needlework. The color designs have already been printed on pieces of homespun, that you can embellish in couching, French knot, loop, outline, satin, single, and weave stitches. And you'll be dipping into your favorite paint box colors with flosses in coral, lilac, violet, orange, and even metallic gold. April gets you closer to springtime when you add a splash of your own talent to these celebrated pilgrimage scenes.

Chaucer penned his Canterbury Tales in the latter half of the fourteenth century during England's Hundred Years War with France. He held many public offices during his lifetime — including the position of Controller of the Customs on Wool, Hides, and Sheepskins — so that he was very much in tune with the everyday doings of the British public.

Order Canterbury Tale No. 00402 (on the far left), Tale No. 00403 (in the middle), or Tale No. 00404 (on the far right) for $6.99 plus $1.35 postage and handling each, or all three for $19.99 plus $1.75 postage and handling. Order Frame No. 06051 for $7.99 plus $1.35 postage and handling each, or three for $22.99 plus $1.75 postage and handling.

Photographer Defines Terms

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

Straight-talking Casey Allen sounded off some months ago at the Visual Communications Conference at the University of Maryland and some of his provocative ideas bear repeating. To back up his words, Casey has an impressive background: a professional photographer himself, he has been teaching all phases of photography at New York University for 23 years; at New York's Central YWCA for 14 years; and has interviewed hundreds of people prominent in photography as host of a weekly program for WNYC-TV for eight years.

"Let me tack up a few labels as I see them. Photography is roughly divided into three groups: the pictorialists; the realists, or straight photographers; and the image-makers who are subdivided into three other groups — technicians, tailors and teachers.

"Pictorialists form the largest group. Berenice Abbott once defined the group: 'Pictorialism,' she wrote, 'means chiefly the making of pretty, artificial pictures in the superficial spirit of certain minor painters. Photography can never grow up if it imitates some other medium. It has to walk alone ... and it has to be itself.'

"There are several major organizations and societies in photography today which are still the strongholds of this pictorialist attitude.

"The second group, the realists or straight photographers, includes almost all of the classic artists in photography: Kertesz, Strand, Weston, Gene Smith, Steichen, Walker Evans. These photographers are aware of the unique qualities of photography, the believability of the photographic image and the captured split second of time. These artists are never interested in 'making pretty, artificial pictures in the superficial spirit of minor painters.' Their life-long challenge is making 'a picture or likeness obtained by photography.'

"The third group, the image-makers, all seem dedicated to make the photographic image not look like a photographic image. Unfortunately, they often succeed. I've divided this group into three categories: the technicians, the tailors and the teachers.

"The technicians usually substitute technical effects for their lack of talent. Masking, reduction, intensification, diffusion, distortion, texture screens, combination printing, toning, high contrast paper and negatives, infrared film, reticulation, solarization, posterization and tone separation, gum bichromate, photo silk screen, zoom and fisheye lenses, special effects filters and attachments — small wonder that the poor, defenseless negative disappears in the darkroom. The medium becomes the message.

"I don't object to these techniques when they enhance the original picture, but too often they obscure it. It's easy to dazzle people with your darkroom pinwheel. It also takes less time to learn the darkroom tricks than to become a good photographer. Many would-be photographers use special effects and tricks to gain instant recognition and perhaps fame and fortune. Some do well in commercial and fashion photography while others get their images hung in galleries. As Lincoln said, you can fool some of the people all of the time.

"The tailors are image-makers derived from the fable of 'The Emperor's New Clothes' — made from invisible cloth. When the emperor parades in his new finery, people ooh and aah in appreciation — except for a child who says, 'The emperor is naked!' But the honest child is hushed up, because if the emperor believes the tailors, all loyal subjects must also believe the tailors in spite of what they see.

"The images of photographic tailors are fairly straightforward and simple because, to them, photography is not even an art form. They say they are photographing reality and show us the banality and emptiness of our world. A gallery owner who exhibits many of the tailors' images, told me it's easier to sell their work because the public doesn't understand them. That makes it easier for the gallery to do a good selling job.

"The third group of image-makers is the teachers, particularly at the university and college level. I believe all that anyone needs to know about photography can be taught in two years or less unless the student wants to study optics, camera design or photo chemistry. But to get a B.A., B.S. or B.F.A. degree requires four years. So deans and faculty must justify their salary, rank and tenure as worthy of a four-year degree program and two years of teaching must be stretched to four years. The teachers turn to the technicians' tricks and the tailors' rhetoric: they now have endless material to justify any degree-granting program.

"Teachers must also face the publish-or-perish syndrome. They often have exhibitions of their work and they write learned papers. They also often resort to the gimmicks of technicians and the verbal gymnastics of tailors to obscure the fact that the work may have little vitality or substance. I will also grant that there are exceptions, of course, among teachers and photographic schools to whom the general remarks don't apply.

"The most important requirement, I believe, to improve the quality of photographic instruction in colleges and universities is that the majority of teachers should be working professionals. Professional expertise will often more than make up for possible academic deficiencies. Just remember that the overwhelming majority of our top photographers today never attended a photography school of any kind. I believe that the first two years of a four-year degree program should heavily emphasize a broad liberal arts program with some photography courses to maintain interest and continuity. The main photographic thrust would be left for the last two years.

"Let me wrap it up by saying that the pictorialists, the realists, the technicians, the tailors and the teachers are ALL important in photography. Photography is better because of ALL of them. However, photography will also survive all of them."

There, I told you Casey Allen aired some controversial thoughts. What he said is a mouthful — but it is food for thought. There's a lot to think abouand met to digest. This forum is open to any cogent rebuttal. Address: Irving Desfor, AP Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Insulation Seals Out Moisture

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — Our house is on a concrete slab. Moisture sometimes forms around the edges. We have been told that this is because the slab was not properly insulated when constructed. We also have received contradictory advice on how to correct it. One party says we can add insulation to the slab edge outside the foundation. Another says that the moisture will disappear if we install heating elements near the outside walls. Which is correct?

A. — Either measure will end the condensation, but the placement of the insulation is a cure. Heat merely will correct the symptom, not solve the problem.

Q. — We have a vacation home which we rent out for a considerable part of the year. It is our understanding that when we make out our income tax this spring, we can no longer write off maintenance costs and depreciation. If this is so, does it also apply to mortgage interest and property taxes?

A. — The new law has nothing to do with mortgage interest and taxes. Both can be deducted whether it is your principal residence or a vacation house. In the matter of a part-time home, you can still write off maintenance costs, depreciation and other expenses if your house is rented and you do not live there more than 14 days during year or 10 percent of the total number of days it is rented out, whichever is greater.

• • •

Q. — There is a leak in the center of our living room ceiling. Directly above that area is the second-floor bathroom, so there must be a leak there. I have used tub grout, but that had no effect. Is there some kind of paint that could be used to seal the ceiling area so that neither it nor the bathroom floor or wall has to be ripped out?

A. — You appear to be more interested in hiding the leak so that you don't see it than in correcting the cause of it, which is a bad practice in anything in life. If the leak could be hidden with paint or anything else, it would only be a question of time before you would have a lot more trouble. There simply is no way to repair a leaky pipe or fitting without first finding it.

• • •

Q. — I have a table that was varnished a few years ago with regular varnish. Now I would like to refinish it with a synthetic varnish. Can it be applied right over the old finish?

A. — Yes, but be sure the surface is clean, and smooth any remaining gloss by sanding or light steel wooling.

Rare American Quilt Featured On Group Of 13-Cent Stamps

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Collectors of U.S. stamps will now have a "quilting party" to go with their hobby of philately.

Segments from a rare American quilt will be featured on a block of four 13-cent stamps to be issued in Charleston, W.Va., on March 8. The four stamps, each in a square format, portray designs from a quilt made in 1875.

The block of four stamps is part of the American Folk Art Series, which began in 1977 with the issuance of the Pueblo Indian Pottery block of four.

The quilted basket design depicted on each stamp is positioned diagonally with its handle pointed toward the center of the block. According to the U.S. Postal Service, the four stamps will be attractive on envelopes whether affixed in the conventional manner or rotated 45 degrees to the diamond shape of the 1974 Mineral Heritage commemorative.

You may purchase your own stamps at the local post office and affix them to your own envelopes. All the envelopes must be addressed, and peelable return address labels are recommended. Place the stamp in the upper right corner, one-quarter inch from the top and a quarter of an inch from the right edge. The return address should be on the right side of the envelope near the bottom. Send the envelope no later than March 23 to: First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Charleston, W.Va. 25301. No remittance is required.

If you prefer the old system of having the Postal Service affix the stamps, send your self-addressed envelopes together with the remittance of 52 cents (13 cents per stamp) to "Quilt Stamps, Postmaster, Charleston, W.Va. 25301." Orders must be postmarked no later than March 23.

Israel has issued two new sets of stamps, according to the Israel Philatelic Agency in America. One set of four is dedicated to "Railways in the Holy Land." Shown are The Jaffa-Jerusalem R.R. 1890-93, the Emek R.R. of 1899, the Turkish R.R. of 1935, and the new electric diesel on Israel Railways. A second set of four stamps features Red Sea Shells. Further information is expected on these and other Israeli stamps soon to be issued.

This year is called "The Year of the Horse" in the Orient. Japan honors the event with a 20-yen stamp showing a toy horse manufactured in Kyoto. Also issued by Japan were a pair of 50-yen stamps hailing the 50th anniversary of the Tokyo subway, the first subway in the Orient.

Nugent Named To House Post

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville, has been appointed speaker pro tempore or assistant speaker of the House during 1978.

Nugent succeeds Rep. Dick Slack, D-Pecos, who served for 1977.

Speaker Billy Clayton said Wednesday the position is filled by appointment one year at a time.

Nugent has been a member of the House since 1960.

Duties of the speaker pro tem include serving in the absence of the speaker in calling the house to order, performing all other duties of the chair, presiding over deliberations of the House and exercising other responsibilities as may be assigned by the speaker.

Former Cleveland Mayor Cites Blacks' Progress

but by that time, he was an old man," Stokes said. Robeson died of a massive stroke in 1976.

Stokes recalled that one time he waited to hear bitterness from the old man because of his treatment by this country. "But, I heard none. Here was a man who didn't reflect on the past and what it had cost him.

"He only told me of the need for people to keep fighting for equality and freedom.

"And I wanted to cry because what do you have to do to bring about basic human decency. Why should this man have been sacrificed on the altar of racism and bigotry? His is truly an extraordinary story," Stokes said.

However, Stokes said that with all its imperfections, he still believes in this country. "This country works, and I had a mother who believed that if you got an education and worked hard enough, you could be anything you wanted to be.

"I've had my doubts about this country, but she never did."

Masseuses Question License Fee

said she will get the training even though she is "not thrilled about it."

One masseuse took a different attitude about the training demand. "I think it's kind of silly, myself," she said, tongue in cheek. "Why do we have to go to school when we already know how to massage?

She, too, considered the appointment-book requirement an "invasion of privacy" and the licensing fee "too high."

One of her colleagues said she would be willing to pay a $250 filing fee. But, she said, a fee that is "half of $1,000 is too much" and smacks of an attempt to close a business through financial pressure.

All of the masseuses contacted adopted the attitude that because the ordinance's passage was inevitable, they had to make the best of it. But they said the very inevitableness aroused their greatest fear — police enforcement without an adequate "grace period."

If the ordinance is passed on final reading, it must be published in a local newspaper twice in consecutive weeks, according to the city attorney's office. The ordinance then becomes effective 10 days after the last publication.

All the masseuses contacted questioned whether that schedule will give them enough time to meet the ordinance requirements. The 70-hour training course especially will be difficult to comply with, they said.

All indicated they will wait until the council approves the final version of the ordinance before deciding a course of action.

Other parts of the ordinance that the masseuses said they do not mind include a ban on patrons or employees under 18 and a dress code that says masseuses must be "suitably clothed" when giving massages.

The ordinance also prohibits alcoholic beverages from being on parlor premises and requires that permits be prominently displayed.

Applications for operators permits must include details such as description, names and residences of all employees, owner's proof of age, fingerprints, photograph, two previous addresses and all criminal convictions other than for traffic offenses.

Masseuses told the A-J that they did not mind the detailed application, saying that they had nothing to hide.

When the council considers the ordinance again in March, several other factors will be weighed.

One will be a staff cost estimate of administration and enforcement the ordinance would require annually.

If the amount is less than the license fees, council members indicated, they will adjust them accordingly.

That decision was made after City Atty. Fred Senter warned that unreasonably high fees could be construed by some as an attempt to force business closures. And that, he indicated, would be illegal.

Senter also will give his opinion on the constitutionality of Councilman Alan Henry's proposal that masseuses be barred from giving massages to members of the opposite sex.

Although he indicated he believes such a restriction to be unconstitutional, Senter said he will research the matter.

That restriction appeared to the masseuses contacted to be the one intolerable regulation. They said it would drive them out of business.

Economist Says Banks Make Massive Profits

Paulson said. But it goes backwards, and for every $1 we pay the producer, he loses $5 in buying power and we end up with surpluses like we have now."

Banks "force everybody to borrow, and borrow and borrow, Paulson said. "If we get parity prices, we'll have people prosperity, and with people prosperity they're not going to be making the same massive profits they've been making off miserable people. That's why we're fighting the money creators — the people who can make money and loan it out for interest, and then require the farmer to pay it back in real wealth, in real dollars."

Paulson said banks pushed for the present situation because of low loan rates and a money shortage during parity price stages. For instance, he said, just after World War II, banks could only lend about 17 cents of each $1 deposited because people were not forced to borrow and, as such, money did not change hands enough to create the money demand. At the end of 1952, banks had 34 cents of each $1 to loan.

The economist said foreign trade markets being developed as encouraged by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland would not have any effect for the American farmer unless foreign countries were forced to trade at American prices and imports were paid for with the exchange of American commodities.

Gas Reserves Claimed Down

TYLER (UPI) — The state's reserves of crude oil and natural gas have been on the decline for years, says Texas Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace.

Wallace Thursday addressed the opening session of a seminar on energy sponsored by the Texas Energy Advisory Council. He said Texas' reserves of crude oil have been steadily declining since 1963, and natural gas reserves have been declining since 1970.

He said the United States now imports 48 percent of its crude oil needs.

"Imported crude tripled in price from $4.27 per barrel in 1973 to $14 per barrel in 1977. This compared to domestic crude prives in 1977 of $9.10 per barrel."

Wallace said oil and gas account for only about 12 percent of known energy reserves, while coal accounts for 77 percent.

"With almost 80 percent of our energy reserves in solid fuel and 75 percent of our annual consumption in liquid and gaseous fuels, we are headed for trouble with no simple solution," Wallace said.

He said lignite mining is on the increase in Texas. Five permits to surface mine lignite have been issued by the Railroad Commission since it assumed jurisdiction over surface mining operations in 1975, Wallace said.

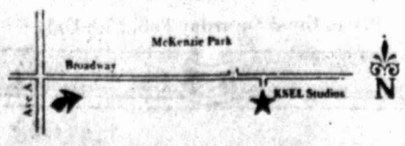

The Railroad Commission chairman predicted lignite production in Texas will triple by 1985.

Colleges Wage Statistics War

By CHRIS CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's dispute with three Southern states over college desegregation is set on the battlefield of statistics — a maze of numbers about race, enrollment and resources.

As that kind of argument frequently goes, the dispute centers on an inability to agree on the method of calculating the figures at issue.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare's civil rights office believes there is a 17 percent disparity between the proportion of Virginia's black high school graduates going on to college — 36.9 percent — and the number of whites — 53.9 percent.

But Virginia, using its own calculations, insists the difference is less than 6 percent — 42 percent for whites, 36.2 percent for blacks.

The HEW Office for Civil Rights, using statistics from its survey of the nation's schools and colleges, also has found a 16 percent disparity in Georgia and 12 percent variation in North Carolina. Those states, along with Virginia, were under orders by a federal court to draw up college desegregation plans. HEW rejected their efforts three weeks ago.

At the same time, HEW accepted plans submitted by Arkansas, Florida and Oklahoma, all now showing equal or nearly equal percentages of black and white high school graduates going to college.

Years ago, the six states ran segregated state colleges. They all still have at least one college that is predominantly black and historically less well-financed than the formerly all white colleges and universities.

HEW continues to negotiate with Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia. On March 15, after a 45-day response period ends, HEW will begin a long administrative procedure that eventually could mean those states may lose some federal funds for colleges.

Under a court order, HEW last summer published specific criteria for the states to follow in eliminating remaining segregation. Although HEW insists its numbers are only goals, not quotas, the criteria embrace some hard directives, including:

—Parity in the percentage of black and white high school graduates attending college.

—An increase of 150 percent over five years in the number of black students admitted to predominantly white colleges.

—A percentage equality between the number of non-doctorate black faculty and staff members and blacks leaving the school with a master's degree.

—An increased number of blacks on governing boards.

—Enhanced programs offered at the traditionally black institutions to attract students for reasons other than race.

The plan Georgia submitted last September was conciliatory. The plans by both Virginia and North Carolina attacked HEW's criteria.

The two-part North Carolina plan outlined separate standards for universities and community colleges. HEW approved the latter which included a commitment "to add approximately 171 black students each year for the next five years."

But for its universities, North Carolina called HEW's criteria "legally unnecessary or educationally impracticable or defective."

Virginia said they were "illegal and unconstitutional," and "would eventually diminish the value of higher education for all persons regardless of race."

NEW FBI DIRECTOR—Chief Justice Warren Burger, left, administered the oath of office to William M. Webster, the new director of the FBI, Thursday in Washington as Mrs. Webster looked on. Webster was sworn in at the new FBI building on Pennsylvania Avenue, which was the first time this had been done. President Carter and Attorney General Griffin B. Bell also attended the ceremony. Webster Takes Charge Of Battered FBI

By ED ROGERS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William H. Webster has taken charge of the FBI until 1988 with a vow to steer the legendary law enforcement agency on a course that heeds the Constitution and expectations of the American people.

"My pledge to you is that 10 years from now this badge will be just as bright and shiny as it is today," the 53-year-old former federal appeals judge told President Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale during a swearing-in ceremony rich in rhetoric.

"We will do the work that the American people expect of us in the way that the constitution demands of us," said Webster, a Republican named to the federal bench by Richard Nixon.

Webster takes over the $57,500-a-year post that has been held by five men since J. Edgar Hoover's death during the Nixon years.

Webster leads an FBI with a dented public image and low morale among agents. The agency has been buffeted in recent years from disclosures that agents conducted improper and allegedly illegal surveillance, buggings and break-ins, and harassed political dissidents of all types during the reign of Hoover, an autocrat who had FBI personnel do personal chores around his house.

Chief Justice Warren Burger administered Webster's oath in an auditorium in the J. Edgar Hoover Building, the FBI's national headquaters.

The president emphasized the task ahead for Webster.

"I am deeply aware of the importance of the leadership of the FBI," the president said. "I can't think of any position that has more influence on the attitude of our people toward their government ... than the leadership of the FBI.

"This agency has set a standard of integrity, competence and for preserving the safety of lives and property and protecting the basic rights of the American people."

Carter, who has been criticized for removing a Republican U.S. attorney at Philadelphia, quipped during the ceremonies, "He's (Webster's) a Republican, which proves his credibility."

Carter also praised retired FBI Director Clarence Kelley, a Nixon appointee who delayed retirement to give the White House more time to find a replacement. The administration's first choice, federal Judge Frank Johnson of Alabama, withdrew from consideration last fall because of health problems.

Kelley "has done a superb job ... through strong leadership, good management and personal integrity," said Carter, who had called for the removal of Kelley during the presidential campaign for having FBI personnel make valances for his home.

Webster was chosen after a year-long search by Carter and Attorney General Griffin Bell for a man with legal knowledge and administrative skill.

Webster served on the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. He was confirmed by the Senate Feb. 9 but delayed taking office to complete several cases pending before him.

Carter Offers Plan To Boost Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says his reorganization of agencies that enforce job discrimination laws will change a system that has meant "confusion and ineffective enforcement."

Carter presented the reorganization plan to Congress on Thursday. If not rejected by either the House or Senate within 60 working days, it will give the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission much broader authority.

The president called the plan "the single most important action to improve civil rights in the last decade."

The plan would consolidate the enforcement activities of 15 agencies into three agencies.

The EEOC, in addition to its current responsibilities, would take over from the Labor Department the enforcement of equal pay and age discrimination laws, and from the Civil Service Commission enforcement of anti-discrimination guidelines involving federal hiring.

The EEOC already enforces laws governing employment discrimination because of race or sex.

Under a separate executive order the Labor Department is assuming sole responsibility for enforcing anti-discrimination laws involving federal contractors.

Gen. Rogers Seen As Top JCS Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may be faced with choosing a new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff sooner than he had planned if Gen. George S. Brown is forced to retire early because he has cancer.

The Pentagon announced Thursday that Brown is suffering from prostate cancer. The announcement raises the possibility that he might retire earlier than late June, when his four-year term expires.

Even before Brown fell ill, Pentagon speculation made Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, the Army's highly-regarded chief of staff, the betting favorite to become JCS chairman, the nation's highest ranking military officer.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown will make his recommendation to Carter, but the Pentagon civilian chief has given no public indications of his leaning, if any.

Rogers is considered a leading possibility in part because the Army has gained increased importance with the administration's stress on U.S. forces assigned to help defend Western Europe. Also, the Air Force and Navy have had their turn in the JCS chairmanship since 1970.

A former Rhodes scholar, the quiet Rogers has maintained a low public profile while working to shape the all-volunteer army into a quality force.

Adm. Stansfield Turner, CIA director and an Annapolis classmate of Carter, appears to have slipped as a contender for the joint chiefs chairmanship since he found himself out of step with other senior administration officials over the sale of a sophisticated new airborne warning and control plane to Iran.

In any event, this summer will bring the first extensive change in the makeup of the five-member JCS since 1974.

In addition to Brown, Adm. James L. Holloway will retire as chief of naval operations and Gen. David Jones will end his term as Air Force chief of staff.

Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, commander of the Pacific fleet, is considered the leading candidate to become the Navy's new uniformed chief. Secretary Brown had an opportunity to size up Hayward last week when Brown met in Honolulu with senior Pacific area commanders.

Gen. Richard H. Ellis, commander of the Strategic Air Command, and Gen. Robert E. Huyser, deputy U.S. commander in Europe, are prime possibilities to become Air Force chief of staff.

Unless he moves up to JCS chairman, Rogers has about 2½ years yet to serve as Army staff chief.

Gen. Louis Wilson, the fifth member of the joint chiefs, will serve as Marine Corps commandant until mid-1979.

Tax Credit Bill Faces Battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — An election year battle awaits a proposal by the Senate Finance Committee to give a direct tax credit to parents of college and private school students.

The committee on Thursday approved the measure to aid middle-income parents and those with children in parochial schools. But the Carter administration instead wants expanded government grants based on need.

The Senate panel acted only hours after the Senate Human Resources subcommittee on education approved the expanded grant program much as President Carter had proposed.

The two plans have three major differences:

—The tax credits would be available to rich, poor and middle-income groups alike; the grants would go only to families earning $25,000 or less.

—The tax credits would require no special application; the grants would require an application and a show of need.

—The tax credits could be used to offset tuition costs at the college, high school or grammar school level; the grants would cover only college costs.

Two sponsors of the tax credit, Sens. William V. Roth, R-Del., and Bob Packwood, R-Ore., hailed the finance committee vote as a message to Carter and the House that the credit is the proper way to provide low-and middle-income Americans some relief from rising education costs.

Under the tax credit bill, a self-supporting, full-time vocational or college undergraduate student could reduce his 1978 federal income tax by 50 percent of the first $500 of tuition and fees paid for the 1978-1979 school year. The credit would go to the parents if they support the student.

On Aug. 1, 1980, the credit would rise to half the first $1,000 of tuition and fees and become available to offset tuition payments to elementary and secondary schools. On Aug. 1, 1981, the credit would be extended to graduate and part-time students.

The credit also would be available to those students or families who are so poor that they owe no income tax.

Because it seeks to aid parents of parochial school pupils, the proposed tax credit almost certainly would face a court test should it become law.

Past efforts to enact a tuition tax credit have been blocked by House Democrats viewing the system as complicated and wasteful because it is not based on need. Those same arguments are used by the Carter administration.

Carter's alternative, as approved in subcommittee, would tailor grants more closely to need. For example, the student from a typical four-member $15,000 family would get $1,020 while a student from a $25,000 family would get only $250.

Russian Flu Immunization Campaign To Be Launched

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is launching a new immunization campaign to fight an expected outbreak next fall and winter of the generally mild Russian flu, which has been seen so far this year in 21 states and the District of Columbia.

Congress will be asked to provide $15 million immediately for grants to state health departments to gear up for 9.3 million flu shots to 8.4 million people a year. Two shots will be necessary for those under age 25.

Some 30 million doses of the recommended trivalent vaccine could be produced by late August — when the flu shots would begin — to combat the Russian flu and strains known as A-Victoria flu and B-Hong Kong flu, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare estimated.

The new campaign will not be developed in time for the current flu season.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano announced the project Thursday and called it "a careful response to a potential epidemic that may not, according to present scientific estimates, be particularly severe, but which still threatens highrisk individuals with serious illness and death."

The flu shots will be aimed at an estimated 42 million people, including those under age 25 with such chronic illnesses as respiratory and heart disease and lacking natural immunity to the Russian flu; other chronically ill people over 25, and the elderly.

"We'll have to build public confidence," Califano said at a news conference Thursday. "There's no question the swine flu program has had an impact on public confidence in this area."

The reference was to the ill-fated plan conceived in the fall of 1976 when then President Ford promised that every American would be immunized against an expected swine flu outbreak that never materialized.

It was called off after 45 million people were immunized and it was discovered that there was a statistical association between the flu shots and a neurological disorder called the Guillain-Barre syndrome.

Califano mentioned the "small risk of injury" that can result from flu shots but said the risk of death from flu is more than 400 times greater than the risk of dying from the vaccination.

Flu and pneumonia this winter have caused 6,000 more deaths than are expected during a normal flu season, according to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Califano said the modest Russian flu program would be merged eventually into existing immunization programs operated by the states against other diseases.

The states are Arizona, California, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Praying Causes Man To Weep

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man attempting to hold up two women in a hotel room broke down and wept, saying he could not go through with it after his victims began praying for his soul, police said.

Robert G. Robinson, 23, was arrested Thursday and charged with two counts of armed robbery, officials said. He was held on $21,004 bond.

A person in an adjacent room heard the man's voice and the loud praying of Rhonda Wilder, 26, of Port Orange and Marilyn Pascoe, 25, of South Daytona, and summoned hotel security, police said.

The women were in Tampa attending a Christian Educators Association conference. Neither was injured.

According to police, the women answered a knock early Thursday, thinking it was a friend from down the hall.

A man entered, said he had a gun and ordered the women to lie on the floor. While he ransacked their purses and the room, the women began to pray and then the robber began to cry.

The women said they thought they had the intruder under control before a hotel security officer arrived.

Dummar Ends Five Days Of Testimony

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Melvin Dummar has ended five days on the witness stand, claiming that while he lied earlier about his involvement with a will attributed to the late Howard Hughes, he was telling the truth now.

Dummar, named to receive one-sixteenth of Hughes' estate in the contested will, repeatedly denied Thursday he ever had anything more than common knowledge of the eccentric muiti-millionaire.

But under intensive questioning from attorney Paul Freese, Dummar admitted he had looked at portions of two books about Hughes.

"I was just wondering what they were all about because there were so many people mentioning them to me," Dummar said.

Dummar claims to have picked up an older, disheveled man while driving across the Nevada desert in 1967 and dropping him off behind a Las Vegas Strip hotel. The man claimed he was Hughes, Dummar said.

He has admitted leaving the will — which leaves him one-sixteenth of Hughes' vast estate — at the headquarters of the Mormon church in Salt Lake City after the document was delivered to the his service station about three weeks after Hughes died in April 1976.

Freese, who represents Hughes relatives not named in the will, attempted to show that there was enough material available about Hughes that Dummar could have concocted his story.

But Dummar repeatedly denied any detailed knowledge of Hughes' often-eccentric behavior, and repeatedly answered, "I have heard that" or "I recall hearing someplace" in response to Freese's questions about some of the well-known Hughes stories.

During the cross-examination Wednesday, Dummar admitted that he had lied in an effort to cover his part in the delivery of the will to the Mormon church.

"I was trapped," he said. "I told everybody a lie that I hadn't seen it or had anything to do with it and I didn't know how to stop it."

Following the end of Dummar's testimony Thursday, attorney Harold Rhoden brought three witnesses who told the jury Dummar had related his story of picking up the old man in the desert at least two years before Hughes died.

Rhoden represents former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich, who is named executor in the contested will, and is seeking to have the document admitted to probate.

Restaurant Faces Disposal Problems

HONG KONG (AP) — When Hong Kong restaurant owners brought in pigs to dispose of their garbage they did not reckon with the problem of how to dispose of the waste left by the pigs themselves.

Ted Nichols, chief of the Agriculture and Fisheries Department, said in that more than 130,000 tons of restaurant wastes are being fed to pigs each year. Nichols said the idea was a sound one, but he called on pig farmers to work out their other disposal problem "without deterioration to the quality ... of the environment."

Purdue Researcher Grows Radishes Using Distilled Sea Water

By EARL ARONSON
Associate Press Writer

A Purdue researcher has grown a crop of radishes using only sea water transformed into fresh water through a solar distillation system.

Many uncropped areas of the world could be turned into lush vegetable gardens if sea water could be used to irrigate the arid lands.

The Purdue agronomist, Dr. A.J. Ohlrogge, said his research recognized that land in much of the world was reasonably fertile and possessed good physical properties but lacked a constant source of fresh water to grow crops efficiently.

Ohlrogge provided fresh water through a system using clear plastic micro "greenhouses." He explained the system was not new except that modern plastic was used. He explained the solar distillation principle:

"Solar energy passes through a clear polyethylene plastic sheet in the shape of a tent. Beneath the plastic sheet is a basin, lined with black plastic or butyl rubber and filled with salt water. As the solar energy heats the water in the basin, water molecules begin to evaporate. The resulting water vapor and air circulate inside the plastic tent. Water drops form by condensation when the warm vapors come in contact with the cooler plastic cover. When the water drops become large enough, they trickle into the collecting troughs as fresh water."

Ohlrogge used this water to grow the radishes. He said the major limiting factor was the temperature difference between the plastic cover and the salt water evaporting basin. A wider temperature difference provided the best distillate production.

"Where labor is cheap, food expensive, and land nearly worthless because of saline water, the system may already be economically feasible," the researcher said.

Constant Care Keeps Bike Running Well

By BOB CLAMPETT

You don't have to be a mechanic to ride a moped, but how your machine runs will ultimately depend on the routine care you give it.

Maintenance means more than engine repair and care. It means attention to all component parts of your moped — wheels, tires, control, steering, suspension, lights, horn, spokes, chain, even your helmet and riding clothes.

Fifth In A Series

Just like with your automobile, upon purchasing your moped you must break it in. Sure, your engine needs breaking in, but your steering and brakes do, as well.

During your break-in riding period, don't overtax you engine, whether it's electric or gasoline-powered. Ride smoothly and evenly. Give your moped every chance to "seat" itself properly.

There are basically two types of power plants found on motorized bicycles. One is electricity and the other is gasoline.

There are maintenance checks mentioned in you owner's manual. In effect, these checks are preventive maintenance, much like going to your dentist every six months to see if the old choppers are holding up.

After every check-up, give your moped a test ride. The proof is in the pedaling...and the riding.

Try to diagnose exactly what is wrong. Start by trying to remember what happened. First, check the fuel flow, since it's the easiest to check. Do you have gas in the tank? Remove your fuel line from the tank. Open the fuel valve and check for gas. If there is none, pull out the dirt trap attached to it and clean it. If the rest of the fuel line checks out all right, you'd better check the carburetor.

If everything seems to be functional with your fuel flow, move on to the electrical system. Check your spark plug first. Remove the plug and check it for deposits. If it's wet, oily, or burned, throw it away and replace it with a new plug. Start your engine. Odds are your bike will fire back to life and you're on you're way.

Checkpoints are the air-flow system (primarily a clogged or filthy air filter) and the oil system.

All you have to do is find out what's wrong. Then it's usually only a minor adjustment or replacement that is needed.

University Leader Shot At Oaxaca

OAXACA, Mexico (AP) — A politically active member of the Oaxaca State University board was shot to death at his home by three men dressed as peasants, officials said.

The victim, 33-year-old Carlos Ruben Hernandez y Chavarria, started a movement at the university that provoked the resignation of the governor of the state, Manuel Zarate Aquino, last year.

Jordan's Social Life President's Headache

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential aide Hamilton Jordan says he is afraid to look at a woman below the neck anymore.

And press secretary Jody Powell, his longtime friend, is urging him to "stay out of bars."

Those observations do not sum up all the White House problems by any stretch of the imagination, but the issue of Jordan's social life has become a headache for him and others in the president's inner circle.

Widespread publicity surrounding two incidents involving Jordan, who recently separated from his wife, have increased the volume of his mail. "And it's not fan mail," he assures reporters.

The 34-year-Carter assistant, who is considered closest to the president, has had his troubles recently. Some time ago, it was reported that Jordan pulled at the dress of the wife of Egyptian Ambassador Ashraf Gorbal and said, "I've always wanted to see the pyramids." He denied the allegations and so did Mrs. Gorbal.

Last Sunday, the Washington Post Magazine reported an unnamed woman had accused Jordan of spitting liquor down a woman's blouse at a singles bar last month, and she slapped him in return.

This time, press secretary Jody Powell went to great lengths to substantiate Jordan's denials by issuing a lengthy affidavit from the bartender, and statements from two friends who said that Jordan had not done anything improper.

After the first incident, the word was passed that Jordan's power and duties had increased at the White House and that the president had assigned him to preside at staff meetings. Whenever a major meeting has been announced on both domestic and foreign policy issues, Jordan's name has listed among the chief advisers.

In the face of adversity, it appeared that Jordan still had the backing of the man who counts, and that does not seem to have diminished. There is a loyalty among the Georgia clan that cannot be denied. The total support for former budget director Bert Lance, Carter's Georgia friend, who resigned under fire, is a case in point.

Carter is a man who believes in walking the straight and narrow. He does not appear to lower the boom on his aides. Essentially, they can live their own lives. But they are young and they are new to the relentless spotlight. And they are groping on how to handle their celebrity status.

Probably the pros in Washington would have advised Powell to grin and bear it. They would probably have told him it is almost impossible to answer allegations of such a nature without magnifying them.

When his defense of Jordan's reputation was brought up at a news briefing and was described as "Zieglerian," a reference to press secretary Ron Zieger of the Nixon era, Powell said:

"I am concerned about the situation because frankly I don't know how you deal with a situation in which a person in public life is subject to incorrect and vicious allegations as they appear in print.

"I am not sure what an overreaction is when you attack someone's character and integrity," he added. "It is possible to publish material of that sort and then if someone has the temerity to set the record straight then you are faced with allegations that you are attacking the First Amendment."

Remains Of Indians Causing Problem For Archaeologist

By JOANNE D'ALCOMO

BOSTON (AP) — The remains of five American Indians unearthed after being buried up to 400 years ago are being kept in an office because there is no state money to bury them again and no place to put them.

State Archaeologist Maurice Robbins says state law requires that anyone who unearths Indian remains on public land must turn the remains over to his office. After that, he said, he is supposed to find a mortician to bury them.

"I'd be happy to turn them over to Indians to bury them, but I can't do that under the law," Robbins said in an interview from his office in the Bronson Museum in Attleboro, about 40 miles from here. "And I have neither the funds to hire a mortician nor a place to bury them."

The status of the remains of the five Indians, found by accident during the last four years in Mashpee, Hyannis, Middleboro and Shrewsbury, is causing some concern in academic circles and among Indians.

Jake Thompson, executive director of the state Commission on Indian Affairs and a descendant of the Oneida tribe, has asked the state legislature for a two-year moratorium on the excavation of Indian burial sites so a formal procedure for handling remains can be developed.

But archaeologists say the burial sites, mostly uncovered by accident and frequently at construction sites, would be destroyed if such a moratorium is enforced. They add that Indian remains that have been uncovered, some of which date back 10,000 years, are vital in study of ancient cultures.

"It's a tragedy that archaeologists and Indian groups have reached a sore point. ... The real threat is from modern constructin which is destroying these remains without any emotional reaction," says professor Carol Barnes of Providence College, president of the Massachusetts Society of Archaeologists.

State law, though, does not protect Indian artifacts uncovered on private land, and many of the remains, often found by amateur archaeologists or treasure hunters, are displayed as collectors' items, Thompson says.

"It's a flagrant violation of the human rights of a deceased person of Indian descent," Thompson says.

Meanwhile, Michael Roberts of the Institute for Conservation Archaeology in Cambridge suggests that the remains should be studied for a limited time, and then returned to Indian leaders for burial.

Studying the remains, he said, "is one of the last ways for native Americans to regain their heritage."

Renovation Proposed At Historic Station

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says it wants to spend $52 million to complete construction of a combined train station-vistors center at historic Union Station.

The project has been dogged for a decade by financial problems, delays and architectural criticism.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams told a congressional panel this week that the situation at Union Station — where construction of a National Visitor's Center began some time ago — "is a mess."

"They started to take the station apart and never got it back together again," he told the House Public Works subcommittee on buildings and grounds.

Adams said the current center, planned but not finished in time for the Bicentennial celebration in 1976, does not attract many visitors.

The secretary's proposed completion of the center would undo much of the work that went into converting the train station, which was built in 1908, into a visitors' center.

A new, multimillion dollar train station was built behind the older structure, but passengers complained that they must walk one third of a mile between the tracks and the street entrance.

All construction on the project stopped when the $30 million federal appropriation and $16 million in private funds ran out.

Carter Shifting On U.S. Policy

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is shifting U.S. policy toward Africa away somewhat from the idealism that marked the administration's first year toward a more practical approach with some "cold war" echoes.

Carter seems to have come to the realization that the Soviet Union is playing hard ball in Africa.

Gradually the administration is moving toward accepting a transition to black rule in Rhodesia worked out between the white-minority government and moderate black elements.

Analysis

And the administration is little by little becoming convinced that in the troubled Horn of Africa the Russians intend to capitalize on the Ethiopia-Somalia conflict and cannot be counted on to support a peaceful settlement.

A year ago, Carter and his men were imbued with an idealism that led them, for example, to take a stand against white minority rule because it was the morally right thing to do.

But continued Russian and Cuban meddling and a muddled black lineup in breakaway Rhodesia have made the administration aware that, on the world scene, it often isn't enough just to be right.

The initial, upbeat mood was best exemplified by United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, to whom Carter gave special responsibility for Africa.

Communism, Young said, was not the threat to Africa it had seemed to be — but racism was.

"Don't get all paranoid about a few Communists, not even a few thousand Communists," Young advised.

In fact, he said, the Communists had brought Africa a certain measure of stability.

Young suggested "we are reacting to the Cubans in Africa the way we reacted to the Chinese in Zambia and Tanzania. They were building a railroad."

As the conflict deepened between Ethiopia and Somalia, the United States adopted a hands-off policy.

The administration hoped for a negotiated settlement through the Organization of African Unity and looked to Moscow to rein in Ethiopia, its new-found client.

Instead the Russians and the Cubans continued their buildup, providing Ethiopia with the military might to reverse a Somali invasion and to take the offensive. And it is yet to be seen whether the Russians will make good on their promise to keep the Ethiopians from crossing the border.

In Rhodesia, meanwhile, the administration is now hinting it is ready to join Britain in supporting an agreement reached by Prime Minister Ian Smith with Bishop Abel Muzorewa and other moderate black leaders, at least as a first step.

Negotiations with the radical Patriotic Front have not been productive and the Anglo-American plan to deal with the Front is in limbo.

While the administration still wants all black forces — including the Front — sharing in the settlement, the United States for the first time is publicly finding merit in the so-called internal approach.

Critics of former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger felt he was inclined to ignore Africa, enunciating U.S. support for black rule in Rhodesia and Namibia only after the Cubans had flexed their muscles in Angola.

But it has seen the Cubans transport thousands of troops with Soviet arms to Ethiopia, giving the marxist government a strength friendly Arabs could not provide Somalia.

Burned, the administration set the withdrawal of Cuban troops as the price for further progress on normalizing its relationship with Havana.

And using a tactic of Kissinger's, the administration slowed down negotiations with the Russians over demilitarizing the Indian Ocean to make a political point.

Suddenly, Jimmy Carter's African policy does not look all that different.

WOMEN ARMY RECRUITS — Women recruits of the Somali Army undergo physical training at Halane Camp near Mogadishu. On Wednesday, Somalia's president repeated his statements that regular Somalia forces were not fighting in Ethiopia's Ogaden Region. He said that U.S. calls for Somali forces to be withdrawn from the Ogaden were unfair and misinformed. (AP Laserphoto)

Countries Affected By Drop Of Dollar

By WILLIAM J. HOLDSTEIN
United Press International

Swiss bankers say the United States is conducting a "currency war." The Japanese say the dollar's low price is killing their export industries. And oil exporting nations like Iran are threatening to abandon the dollar.

The news about the dollar these days is bewildering, but what it adds up to is that virtually the entire world is upset about America's sagging currency.

What is happening? Does it affect the pocketbooks of Americans?

The dollar is hitting record post-war lows against the world's major currencies, principally the German mark, the Swiss franc and the Japanese yen.

The major reasons for the dollar's slide are the record U.S. trade deficit — fueled in large part by Americans' whopping oil importing bill — and the Carter administration's hesitant steps to support the sagging currency.

The dollar's fortunes have a profound impact on individual Americans, although so subtle that few recognize it. A cheap dollar, for example, has encouraged a near-flood of foreign investments and has helped spur some industries.

Some American policymakers are pleased that the dollar, long the backbone of the world's economic system, is declining against other major currencies because American exports will be cheaper and more competitive abroad.

This could help cut the American trade deficit two ways: by making U.S. goods cheaper to buy overseas and by making it harder to sell Japanese television sets and German cars in the United States.

"It's not being said publicly, but Washington is doing nothing less than conducting a currency war," said a top official of the Union Bank of Switzerland, the largest Swiss bank.

West Germany's economics minister, Count Otto Lambsdorff, told his Parliament Thursday: "The weak dollar has psychological results that are especially grave and affect the world economy and endanger the process of world economic recovery."

French Premier Raymond Barre said the dollar's problems are affecting the French economy as well.

"The currency which counts for us is the dollar," Barre said. "We pay for oil and raw materials in that currency. I don't believe it is good for the currency which in fact is the pivot of the international monetary system to be affected by such a profound weakness."

The Japanese, who fueled their post-war economic recovery on the strength of exports, say the dollar's slide is one reason for record high unemployment and a high rate of bankruptcies, particularly in export industries.

"Japan's export-oriented industries — textile, special steel and sundry good industries among others — are being forced to export at sacrifice prices," a spokesman for the Bank of Japan said.

In Tehran, Mohammed Yeganeh, Iran's minister of economic affairs and finance, said the dollar was "grossly undervalued. And this is hurting us, hurting the (oil) prices, the real value of our oil exports as well as our reserves."

He warned if the United States cannot remedy the situation members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would "find ways and means of safeguarding our interests."

This could include abandoning the dollar as the standard for oil prices.

International Issue Appears On Ballot

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — The voters in this Central Valley college town will have an international issue on their ballot next month.

The referendum calls for the City of Davis to "immediately move toward the phased withdrawal of investments from private banks and corporations doing business in South Africa."

It would also advise California state institutions to divest themselves of securities in firms doing business in South Africa.

The reason, says the referendum, is "the need ... to take positive steps toward assuring that human rights are obtained by all persons in South Africa."

Demonstrators In Nicaragua Hurl Explosives At Troops

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Anti-government demonstrators and National Guardsmen battled with bombs and automatic weapons for five hours in eastern Nicaragua Thursday, leaving at least eight dead, witnesses reported.

The firefight was the latest in a series of violent demonstrations against the authoritarian government of President Anastasio Somoza since the Jan. 10 assassination of opposition newspaper publisher Joaquin Chamorro.

Witnesses to the fighting in Masaya, about 20 miles east of the capital of Managua, said the National Guard used fragmentation bombs against the protesters, who hurled homemade explosives at the troops.

Both sides exchanged rifle and machine-gun fire and one of the demonstrators, identified only as "Carlos," said in a radio interview he saw soldiers carry eight corpses and "several" wounded from the scene.

Masaya was placed under military rule after the battle.

Student activists set fire to a bus outside the Central American University in Managua Thursday night, a frequent tactic since political unrest exploded in reaction to the ambush slaying of Chamorro, the most vocal opponent of the Somoza family's 30-year reign over Nicaragua.

Other students rallied against the government at the Autonomous University in the capital Thursday night while military units watched from outside the campus.

Nicaragua's six Roman Catholic bishops issued a new communique repeating their opposition to press censorship that has been in effect since a general strike earlier this month paralyzed nearly 80 percent of the nation's stores and factories.

"We cannot keep quiet when a valiant sector of our people, consisting of the youth in the classrooms and fields, are only searching for patriotic solutions," the bishops declared.

The fighting in Masaya was the outgrowth of a demonstration by several hundred people protesting Chamorro's death and commemorating the 44th anniversity of the death of nationalist guerrilla leader Cesar Agusto Sandino.

More than two dozen people have been killed in antigovernment protests and guerrilla raids since Chamorro's slaying.

LOUVRE LINEAGE

The Louvre Museum in Paris was first opened to the public on Nov. 8, 1793. The construction of the Louvre, originally intended as a royal residence, was started in 1204 by King Philippe Auguste. Its fine art collection was begun by Francis I in the 16th century.

Monaco, U.S. Rank High In Number Of TV Sets

PARIS (UPI) — The television habit is conquering the world but newspapers, books and the cinema still are thriving in some countries, the latest edition of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization Statistical Yearbook says.

The principality of Monaco in 1975 was first in TV watching with 640 sets per 1,000 population. The United States was second with 571, followed by Canada with 411, Sweden with 352, Britain with 320, Denmark with 308, East Germany with 307, and West Germany and Finland with 306 each.

Japan had a relatively modest 235 per thousand of population possibly because Japan is the world's second largest film producer, making 405 feature-length films in 1975, topped only by India with 475.

Singapore's citizens saw more films than anyone else, with 19 trips to cinema houses a year per person. Next were citizens of the Soviet Union who each saw an average of 18 films a year.

Despite its high rate of TV viewing, the United States was the biggest book producer in 1975 with 85,287 titles, followed by the Soviet Union with 78,697 and West Germany with 40,616.

Newspapers are surviving the threat of television, the UNESCO book said. United States newspapers in 1975 had increased by 61 over 1965 for a world record of 1,812.

However, in the number of people who actually buy newspapers, Sweden had the world's champion newspaper readers with 572 per 1,000 population, followed by Japan with 526 and East Germany with 472. The United States, despite its large number of newspaper titles, ranked low with 287 copies for every thousand population.

Education worldwide is growing, particularly among females, the UNESCO book said. Sixty-four per cent of girls from 6 to 11 years of age were enrolled in school in 1975, compared to 56 percent in 1960.

Finns Restore Donald Duck

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — Donald Duck is alive and well in Finland and, all previous reports to the contrary, the Finns love him.

Donald became a national issue in January when the Helsinki Youth Board voted to stop its 18 subscriptions to the Donald Duck weekly comic magazine.

The board said it thought Helsinki's youth should be reading other material and, besides, Donald was walking around naked and appeared to be living in sin with Daisy.

That decision produced an outpouring of letters to the nation's press — parents pointing out that it wasn't just children who liked to read about Donald.

University students this month campaigned to raise the $360 needed to restore the 18 subscriptions to the youth clubs and they did so well that excess funds have been given to a charity.

GETTING TO KNOW YOU

Some $28.3 billion was spent on advertising in 1975, up more than $1.5 billion from 1974. Newspapers continued to get the largest share of advertising dollars ($8.4 billion), followed by television ($5.3 billion), The Conference Board observes. Magazines, however, slipped last year; they received $39 million less than 1974.

Familiar Faces Take Grammys

By PETER J. BOYER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Last year was one of the biggest ever for Grammy Awards to newcomers in music, but it was mostly the familiar faces that picked up the top prizes in this year's show.

Debby Boone, who made her debut in 1977 with one of the biggest hits of all time, "You Light Up My Life," was swamped by pop music's mainstream regulars in Thursday night's presentation of the 20th annual show.

Barbra Streisand, who had not won a Grammy in a dozen years, was the surprise female pop singer of the year for her "Evergreen," the theme from "A Star is Born."

Miss Streisand also shared the songwriter's Grammy for song of the year for "Evergreen," with co-writer Paul Williams. In a tie vote, Joe Brooks also won a Grammy for song of the year for "You Light Up My Life"

In another surprise, the Eagles won record of the year for "Hotel California," again edging "You Light Up My Life." In a telephone interview, the Eagles' Don Henley admitted the group did not expect a Grammy.

"We thought the competition was too tough," he said. "We didn't expect to win it."

The Eagles also won a Grammy for the arrangement on their "New Kid in Town," which took the award for best arrangement for voices.

Miss Boone said she was disappointed that "You Light Up My Life" did not win record of the year, but there was consolation for the daughter of singer Pat Boone — she took a Grammy as the best new artist of the year.

The Grammys are voted on by members of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, including writers, performers and technicians nationwide. The surprises, one disgruntled loser said, suggest that the 4,000 voting members "are out of touch."

The salient feature of this year's Grammys was the absence of the pop industry's giant, Stevie Wonder, who usually takes home a batch of Grammys. He had no record last year, thus opening up the field, and there were none of the usual sweeps.

Another familar name, James Taylor, won his second Grammy, for best male pop artist with "Handy Man." Taylor's other Grammy came in 1971 for "You've Got a Friend."

There was one big winner that no one grumbled about — John Williams. Composer Williams took home three Grammys for his outer space opus, "Star Wars." The tune won best pop instrumental, best instrumental composition and best score written for a motion picture.

The Bee Gees, who have been practicing the art of pop since 1968, won their first Grammy, being named best pop group. The Bee Gees' little brother, Andy Gibb, entered pop in a big way last year with his huge debut, "I Just Want To Be Your Everything," but was passed over by the academy.

Fleetwood Mac, who had never won before, scored with "Rumours," named album of the year. There was no surprise here, because the LP spent most of the year atop the pop charts.

In rhythm and blues, Thelma Houston won the female award for "Don't Leave Me This Way," and honey-and-gravel voiced Lou Rawls added a third Grammy to his collection, being named best male RB artist for "Unmistakably Lou."

The best RB group Grammy went to the Emotions for "Best of My Love," and the RB song of the year was "You Make Me Feel Like Dancing," Leo Sayer's big hit, written with Vini Poncia. Best instrumental in the field was "Q" by the Brothers Johnson.

Kenny Rogers, who soared then flopped in pop in the late 1960s, turned to his first love, country, last year and scored big with "Lucille." The catchy tear-jerker earned Rogers his first Grammy.

"It's interesting," he said. "I had to become a country artist to buy a tuxedo."

The country song of the year was Crystal Gayle's hit "Don't it Make My Brown Eyes Blue," written by Richard Leigh. Miss Gayle, country superstar Loretta Lynn's little sister, took home a Grammy after being named best country female artist.

The best country group was the Kendalls, for their "Heaven's Just a Sin Away." For instrumentals in country, Hargis "Pig" Robbins won a statue.

The blockbuster classical recording, "Concert of the Century," won album of the year Grammys for Leonard Bernstein, Vladimir Horowitz, Isaac Stern, Mstislav Rostropovich, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Yehudi Menuhin and Lyndon Woodside. Thomas Frost produced the album.

In jazz, Count Basie scored his sixth Grammy, winning in a new category, best jazz performance by a big band. Best jazz soloist was Oscar Peterson for "The Giants," and the best jazz group was the Phil Woods Six for their "Live From the Showboat." Al Jarreau won a Grammy for best vocal performance for "Look to the Rainbow."

Judge Passes Hat For Hungry Man

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Clyde Pierce found a friend in a sympathetic New Orleans judge.

Pierce had pleaded innocent of taking several tamales from a vendor and trying to gobble them down without paying for them. Judge Gerald Hansen, suspecting Pierce stole the food because he couldn't buy a meal, asked him if he wanted to spend the night in jail to get a free dinner. Pierce said yes.

Then the judge had a better idea. He collected $9 from courtroom spectators, including the prosecuting attorney, and sent Pierce on his way. Pierce said he was going back to the tamale stand and buy them all.

Promotions At U.N. Raise 75 To Salaries Above $75,000

By SAMUEL KOO

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States doesn't like it, and neither does the Soviet Union, but soon 75 officials of the United Nations will be making more than $75,000 a year. That's more than the salaries of Vice President Walter Mondale or Chief Justice Warren Burger.

Ignoring demands for belt-tightening from the United States, which pays more of the U.N. costs than any other member, the world organization has promoted six assistant secretaries-general to the rank of undersecretary-general. Their new titles carry raises of $10,000, making their annual salaries about $86,000.

In addition, a new "super" undersecretary-general will be named in a few weeks to oversee all the economic problems of the world. His salary: $99,350. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim gets $110,650, not counting benefits and other allowances.

The latest round of "reclassifications" brings to 35 the number of U.N. officials making more than $85,000 a year and to 75 those making over $75,000. Among the 75 are nine Americans — five assistant secretaries-general, three undersecretaries-general and one head of a specialized agency.

The highest paid American is former Rep. Bradford Morse, a Massachusetts Republican, who draws $99,350 as administrator of the U.N. Development Program.

By contrast, U.S. cabinet chiefs make $60,000. But their stay in government is usually a temporary interlude and is often preceded and followed by much more lucrative employment in the business world.

Among the professional politicians, West German cabinet ministers are the highest paid in the world at $73,300 a year. France pays its government ministers $52,250, Sweden $36,000 and Japan $53,033.

The United States, which foots 25 percent of the U.N. budget, has consistently opposed enlargement of the upper echelons of the U.N. civil service. Rep. Lester L. Wolff of New York, a Democratic member of the House Committee on International Relations, has warned that the United States might consider voting against future U.N. budgets unless salaries are kept "in line."

Yury E. Fokine, a minister in charge of financial affairs in the Soviet Mission, agrees that U.N. salaries are "unjustifiably high."

"These reclassifications do not mean the high officials have acquired new functions or responsibilities," he said. "They are just promotions for the sake of promotions — higher positions and more money."

The Soviet Union is the second biggest U.N. contributor, paying 13.5 percent of the budget.

A principle inherited from the League of Nations states that to attract qualified people, U.N. officials should make as much as the highest paid civil servants in the world, the Americans.

A U.S. official said while salaries at the middle and lower level of U.N. officialdom correspond roughly to the U.S. goverment's scale, those at the upper levels are "way out of line."

A U.N. financial expert said U.N. salaries only seem high to Americans because U.S. salaries haven't kept pace. He contended that the U.S. government has put an "arbitrary, unfair" ceiling on the salaries of higher-ranking officials because of congressional pressure.

The U.S. official defended the American practice, saying: "These top jobs offer something money can't buy, whether it's prestige or the opportunity to serve the nation or the world, or both."

American officials say U.N. health and retirement benefits, pensions, vacations and sick leave are also much more generous than theirs. For example, the U.N. health plan covers psychiatric and dental care, which the U.S. government doesn't provide for its employees.

U.N. employees also pay no income tax. But they pay a staff assessment that goes back to the U.N. budget. U.N. sources say it is about equivalent to U.S. income taxes, but the U.S. official said it's "not quite that high."

Last December, economy-minded delegates to the General Assembly introduced a resolution to take away the privilege that top-level officials have of flying first class. After some debate, a watered-down version emerged allowing them to fly first class when flight time exceeds nine hours and in other "most exigent circumstances."

That, one diplomat said, was the first "people's revolt against high U.N. living."

Star Admits To Writing Bad Checks

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Suzanne Somers, the effervescent Chrissy on the hit ABC-TV series "Three's Company," says she was broke and desperate when she was arrested 10 years ago for writing bad checks.

The blonde Miss Somers said she wrote more than $100 in bad checks in San Francisco in anticipation of receiving pay for a modeling fee.

"I was arrested and booked, but not convicted," Miss Somers, 29, said. "I was given a warning and a period of time to make restitution, which I did."

She told her story Thursday in a visit to The Associated Press bureau here with a press aide because she said the National Enquirer planned to publish her police mug shots and information on her arrest next week. She said she wanted her side of the story told.

The Enquirer confirmed it would publish a story on Miss Somers, but declined to give any details.

"I was really just trying to take care of my life as best as I could at 19. I was ashamed of it. I never told my parents. I never told anybody," she said.

San Francisco police declined to release information on the case, saying state law prohibited releasing information from closed files.

"My husband had abandoned me; I wasn't working, had no money and my son had been in a car accident and spent three months in a hospital," said Miss Somers. Her son, Bruce Somers, 10, lives with her in Santa Monica, Calif. She was divorced from her husband, also named Bruce Somers, after about a year of marriage.

"I had worked as a model so I wasn't eligible for any pension or welfare or any kind of compensation from the state," she said. "I had about $20,000 worth of doctors' bills from the accident and was being evicted from my apartment and we didn't have enough food to eat."

Miss Somers said she wrote the checks because a modeling firm told her a check had been mailed to her, but that actually the company had gone out of business.

White Sands Considered As Abort Landing Site

LAS CRUCES (AP) — The nation's space shuttle program probably will use the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's White Sands facility as its abort landing site and top alternate site, a NASA official said.

Dr. Christopher Kraft Jr., who made the prediction Thursday, heads the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston, which administers the White Sands facility.

"NASA-White Sands is the logical place to land if a space shuttle mission is aborted," Kraft said. "It certainly would be easier to reach on the first orbit around than Edwards Air Force Base in California or back at Cape Kennedy in Florida."

Kraft was on his annual inspection tour of the facility, which is separate from the White Sands Missile Range. It is just north of Las Cruces and south of the missile range, and employs more than 600 persons from NASA and private companies.

He said White Sands is responsible for training astronauts for the space shuttle program, which also involves use of the NASA Northrup strip at Holloman Air Force Base near Alamogordo.

The facility also is testing reaction-control systems and engines for the space shuttle program, Kraft said, and a worldwide tracking system is under construction there.

The federal government already has approved money for four space shuttles, he said, and is expected to pay for a fifth. He said there eventually should be 12 shuttles as the program becomes operational.

Kraft, who has been with federal space programs since 1945, said he expects larger budgets for NASA beginning in 1980.

"We probably won't see a program as large as Project Apollo and the moon trips again until we are ready to start visiting the planets, however," he said.

"We will eventually go to Mars and other planets," he added, "but it will be easier than the moon flights because we are not going to go in until we have all the necessary tools and equipment."

In the colonial era, libraries in the United States were privately owned. Benjamin Franklin projected the first subscription library in Philadelphia.

ABC To Move Miss Walters

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC News confirmed today that it is considering moving Barbara Walters from behind her anchor desk to do more interviews, and that the network is negotiating for the services of Robert MacNeil of public television's "MacNeil-Lerhrer Report."

However, an ABC official, who asked that his name not be used, denied a published report in today's editions of The New York Daily News that Harry Reasoner would be leaving ABC for CBS.

"There are no plans for Harry Reasoner to be leaving ABC," the official said. "He will be staying with us."

The official also said Miss Walters will not be "pulled" from her anchor duties, as reported by The News. The official said Miss Walters has repeatedly expressed her desire to get away from her desk and do more interviews.

ABC hired Miss Walters from the NBC "Today" show for a much-publicized $1 million a year, but her presence on the ABC Evening News with co-anchor Reasoner has not boosted ratings.

The ABC Evening News has been experimenting with various formats recently, including the use of "sub-anchors" in Washington, London and other spots. Tom Jarriel was the sub-anchor Thursday from West Virginia with spot news on the coal strike.

Somali Insurgents Say International Peace Efforts Welcomed

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Ethnic Somali insurgents, hanging on in the war to wrest the Ogaden desert from Ethiopia, said Thursday they welcome international peace efforts and are ready to negotiate with Ethiopia directly.

The Western Somali Liberation Front, fighting the seven-month-war backed by Somalia, said in an official bulletin, however, they will settle for nothing short of self-determination for the Ogaden.

Ethiopia's military government, which last month mounted a broad counter-offensive backed by Soviet and Cuban arms and personnel, has said it will negotiate only with Somalia, which it accuses of waging the war.

(In a dispatch Thursday from the Ethiopian capital, Addis Ababa, the Soviet news agency Tass said the Somali army was "retreating in many directions, sustaining serious losses."

(The report, by Tass correspondent Yuri Ustimenko, quoted Ethiopian leader Lt.-Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam as saying peace negotiations can take place only after the last Somali soldier withdraws. There was no mention of the rebel forces.

(The report maintained that North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries and "reactionary" Arab states are arming the Somalis.

(It also said Arab states were backing Eritrean rebels in the north where Ethiopia is fighting a second sessessionist war involving its entire Red Sea coastline.)

The main rebel group, which with its subgroup, the Somali Abo Liberation Front, claimed 90 percent control of the Ogaden before the counter-offensive, said in the bulletin released in the Somali capital: "The leaders of the WSLF and the SALE are ready for direct talks with Ethiopia's regime that might lead to a peaceful solution of the problem."

Insisting that the Ogaden must have "self-determination" to stop further bloodshed in the Horn of Africa, the bulletin added: "It is advisable that mediators should realize that the issue is not a territorial dispute alone, but the issue of an ethnically Somali nation, who are struggling against Abyssinian (Ethiopian) colonialism."

The semi-arid Ogaden, comprising a fifth of Ethiopia, was ceded by the European colonial powers during the last century. Its ethnic Somali inhabitants maintain they are fighting against Ethiopian colonialism.

Ethiopian says regular Somali troops have fought alongside the rebels since the start of the war.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your nose will be right on the grindstone tomorrow. You have what it takes to get the job done. A major part of your efforts will go to help others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) When you're in the crowd tomorrow, things will move, move, move. You have the happy faculty of bringing harmony and tranquility to where you are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Survey the circle of your friends for someone who can assist you in getting a chore you've been neglecting off your back. There could be one who's happy to help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Translate your desire to congregate into something more profitable than just a social time. Get together with the pundits. Enhance your knowledge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Tomorrow will be a good day to shop for domestic items. You really have a knack for getting the most for a buck and could pick up things at a substantial savings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The tone of your voice will leave little doubt as to where you stand tomorrow. Those who hear you recognize its authority and respect your position.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't feel that someone who owes you an old obligation is going to automatically come forth with the cash tomorrow. Remind him discreetly. He's probably forgotten it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If an old pal's reputation is besmirched in your presence tomorrow, rise to his or her defense. You could expect the same if you were being maligned in absentia.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 20) You will enjoy being the one in the wings tomorrow, prompting the actors in the drama of life. You're more effective here than being on stage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't balk if asked by your peers to lead the action tomorrow. They really need you to get projects rolling or they wouldn't ask.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The thing you enjoy most tomorrow will be being called upon to salvage something others found too tough. Your enthusiasm can spell only success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Sometimes we ask for candid opinions and hear an appraisal we don't like or expect. If you call for truth tomorrow, that's just what you'll get.

Your Birthday

Feb. 24, 1978

This coming year you will be in the happy position to effect change rather than be subject to its affects. The alterations you can make will benefit you and others, too.

Study Reveals Black Businesses Growing

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Black power is indeed becoming green power, according to a University of Wisconsin-Madison business analyst who says black-owned business is rapidly expanding.

William Strang, director of the UW Bureau of Business Research, said his studies not only indicate rapid growth in black capitalism, but also favorable prospects for long term expansion.

He said his study deflates the warnings of pessimists who claim minority businesses are usually inefficient and in fields with slow economic growth.

For instance, he said, from 1969 to 1972 black wholesalers' receipts nationally jumped 98 percent while the gain for all U.S. wholesalers was estimated at 33 percent.

In addition, Strang said that during the same period black manufacturers showed a 77 percent gain while the overall increase was only 22 percent.

Despite those figures, Strang conceded that most black-owned enterprises are small firms whose slice of the whole pie is actually very small.

"Critics appear correct that the biggest obstacle facing black business is the size mix of firms," Strang said. "A disproportionate share of black firms are mom and pop operations with few or no employees."

As a result of being mostly small time, Strang said black-owned businesses were particularly hard hit by the 1975 recession and the raw material shortage of 1973.

On the other hand, he said, simple geography provides a favorable factor in the outlook for black business. Most black-owned businesses are in the Southeast and Southwest, areas of the U.S. expected to grow more rapidly than the rest of the country in the upcoming years.

Strang said another optimistic factor is that new black-owned firms are not confined to the traditional areas of retailing and services, areas expected to grow more slowly economically than other sectors.

"Black firms are appearing in all economic sectors," Strang said. "It does not appear that the expansion of minority businesses will stall due to investment in slow growth industries."

Zinc Producers Seek Emergency Tariff

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the 240 years since man learned to separate metallic zinc from its ores there have been periodic oversupplies of the metal.

The world is in the middle of such an oversupply right now. As a result, the Lead Zinc Producers Committee, representing top zinc mining and refining companies in the United States, is frantically petitioning the International Trade Commission to put an emergency tariff of 7 cents a pound on imported slab zinc.

The committee, headed by William Flaherty, an executive vice president of Gulf & Western Industries, Inc., argues that maintaining zinc production in the United States in times of slack demand is necessary to preserve employment and because zinc is ot strategic importance.

The committee, which also includes representatives of Anaconda, Asarco, Inc., Amax, Inc., Bunker Hill Co., Homestake Mining Co., New Jersey Zinc Co. and St. Joe Minerals Co., contends if U.S. mines and smelters are allowed to shut down, it will be difficult to reopen them when they are needed. They say domestic zinc smelting and refining already has declined by more than half in the past decade because of the global oversupply and the willingness of many countries to sell slab zinc at or below the true production cost in order to keep mining and smelter workers on the job.

Imported zinc supplied 60 percent of U.S. consumption in 1976 and imports were running about as high through the first 10 months of last year.

Major suppliers of imported zinc to the U.S. market are Canada, Japan, Australia and Belgium.

The global price of spot slab zinc usually reflects prices set in an international futures market in London.

Flaherty's committee is not trying to shut off zinc imports entirely. It would have ITC exempt the first 350,000 tons of imports from the 7-cents-a-pound emergency tax.

Zinc is regarded nowadays as the fourth most usable metal after iron, aluminum and copper. Its biggest use in the United States is for die-casting of many products, ranging from automobile carburetors to brass ornaments.

The biggest use of zinc globally is as an anticorrosion covering for iron and steel. This is called galvanizing. It is now done electrically but the older hot dip processes are superior although more expensive.

Large quantities of zinc compounds, particularly zinc oxides, are used in the paint industries and in various pharmaceutical and chemical processes.

Until the Romans invented brass, the ancients generally considered zinc just a bastard form of tin, which alloys with copper to make bronze, but they never could find a way to use zinc ores. That baffled western scientists for centuries although the Chinese learned how to produce some of zinc's useful salts.

The in 1738, an English smelter named William Champion tackled the job. By 1760, Champion was turning out 200 tons of pure zinc a year and a new global industry was on its way.

Children's Charity Fund Observes Anniversary

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

Dr. Verent C. Mills is justifiably a little animated and proud when he talks about the accomplishments of the Christian Children's Fund, he's been on both the giving and receiving end of fund's charitable activities.

Mills, now the executive director of CCF, was a missionary in China shortly after VJ day with some 700 children in orphanages who could not work for their support when he heard about the Christian Children's Fund.

"I wrote Dr. Clarke (Dr. J. Calvitt Clarke, the late Richmond, Va., Presbyterian minister who founded CCF) and told him of our problem," Mills recalled in an interview.

"He cabled back and took us on, lock, stock and barrel."

"I told the children that God had done more that I ever expected him to do," Mills said. "And one of the children answered me, 'but pastor, we prayed, didn't we.'"

That began Mills' more than 30 years association with the Christian Children's Fund — an association that has made the Fund the United States' largest international non-profit and non-denominational child assistance agency.

Originally known as the China Children's Fund, the agency began in 1938 under Clarke's leadership with a focus on the children of China who were being left orphans and homeless by the Japanese ravaging of that country.

"We are the largest child care agency in the world," Mills said. "We are now a family of some 170,000 in 13 countries, including the United States."

In a time when many non-profit charitable agencies are under fire for alleged fund-raising frauds and misuse of donations, Mills is proud of the openness and public access to the Fund's books.

It is listed by both the Better Business Bureau and the National Information Bureau — the two major charitable solicitation watchdogs — as meeting all auditing and disclosure standards.

"We thought that 10 years after World War II we would have solved the problem," Mills said. "But the needs today are greater than they were at the end of the war."

"While I don't think the United States has to carry the responsibility of feeding the world — we can't," he said. "But with all the technology that God has blessed our own country with we do have a debt, we are our brothers' keepers."

To Mills, who spent 29 years and China, the situation understandably recalled a Chinese proverb: "Give a man a fish and you feed him for one day; teach him to fish and you feed him for life."

CCF has thus instituted a new delivery system — one Mills believes is unique among child care organizations called the Family Helper Program and that relies on direct cash grants to those assisted.

"We don't want to put children into an institution," he said. "We can never make up for mother. We want to keep the child with the family in the community."

A caseworker and professional social worker aid each family in nutrition and child care help and in many instances centers have established vocational training as well.

"This gives people a sense of being someone," he said.

Mills, looking back at CCF's first 40 years mixes his pride with an anxiousness to get on with the work. "As long as there is a need and people are willing to respond," he said, "CCF will be there."

RELIGION ROUNDUP

By The Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — Officials of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the World Council of Churches have agreed to sponsor jointly an international conference of scientists and theologians about the human impact of modern technology.

To be held July 12-24, 1979, the "World Conference of Faith, Science and the Future," is to involve 500 scientists and theologians from around the world, the largest World Council meeting in North America in 25 years — since its assembly in Evanston, Ill., in 1956.

Aim of the conference was described as examining effects of science and technology on human justice and peace and looking for the meaning of faith in a world which science unleashes "transforming forces that both liberate and destroy human values."

NEW YORK — "We have anthropomorphized God into male and that is the ultimate put-down to women," the Rev. Dr. Kenneth Teegarden, president of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), is quoted in the current issue of Redbook magazine.

The article also includes a suggestion from the Rev. Dr. Frederick K. Wentz, head of the Chicago Cluster of Theological Schools, that terms such has "Creator" and "Lifegiver" be used in reference to the Almighty since "God is neither male nor female."

"The determlination whether or not your church is subject to the tax ... is the specific and individual responsibility of your church."

Seminary Plans To Sell Set Of Gutenberg Bible

NEW YORK (UPI) — A two-volume set of the Gutenberg Bible — believed to be one of only 13 rare first issues — will be sold at a public auction this spring by Christie's, the Park Avenue auctioneers.

The set, owned by the General Theological Seminary of New York, is expected to attract a minimum price of $1 million. That would be the highest known price ever paid for a book.

David Brathurst, president of Christie's, said Wednesday the school decided to sell the rare work to establish an endowment fund for its library, described as one of the finest theological libraries in the Episcopal Church and one of the best in the United States.

The printing of the Gutenberg Bible — the first known use of a movable type printing press in western culture — revolutionized publishing and had a profound impact on cultural, economic and political life.

Before it is auctioned on April 7, the Bible will be displayed at Christie's in London from March 13 to 17 and will go on display at Christie's in New York April 1, Brathurst said.

It will be the first public auction of a complete Gutenberg Bible in more than 50 years.

"The sale is not like one for paintings where some rich person may come to pick up some work that fancies his imagination," Brathurst said.

"The buyer most likely will be a museum, library or university. Any country that doesn't have such a bible will most likely put it in the national museum in the capital city."

Passion Play Omits Anti-Semitic Twist

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)-Ever since medieval times, Christians have been putting on "passion plays" — in churches, outdoor arenas, seminaries and public halls — about the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ, some of them sound, others simplistic, distorted and villifying Jews.

But that anti-Semitic twist has been removed, religious leaders say, from the biggest attraction of them all — the passion play produced in the little Bavarian village of Oberammergau, Germany. It has been a kind of world archetype of the genre.

Although drawing thousands from around the world, the play for years has been criticized by many Bible scholars and theologians, both Jews and Christians, as falsifying fact and doctrine by blaming Jews collectively for the crucifixion of Jesus, himself a Jew.

The substantial elimination of that element by the village's recent decision to substitute a different script was praised by U.S. Christian and Jewish representatives as a broadly influential step, setting a truer, fairer pattern for passion plays.

The newly chosen presentation "centers the responsibility for Christ's death where it should be — in the sin of all humanity," says Bible scholar Eugene Fisher, head of the U.S. Catholic Bishops' Office of Catholic-Jewish Relations.

He says the change gets rid of an internationally attended portrayal that for years has been a "purveyor of prejudice and injustice." He notes that the classic Christian concept is that believers share in Christ's redemption only as they acknowledge their part in his death.

The Oberammergau play has been presented every 10 years since 1634 when it first was performed to fulfill a vow made during a plague epidemic. Now a tourist attraction, it drew 500,000 from 113 countries in 1970.

Over the more than three centuries, at least five different versions have been used, but for the last 100 years, the script has been one written by a priest named Joseph Alois Daisenberger in 1860, attributing Jesus' death to the Jews.

After drawn-out controversy about it and considerable village ferment, the town council decided Feb. 8 to use for the 1980 production a 1750 text by a Benedictine monk, Ferdinand Rosner, ascribing Jesus' death to universal human sin.

U.S. Jewish, Catholic and Protestant representatives last week jointly hailed the decision as a "major step in consolidating the improved relationships between Christians and Jews."

Miles Jaffe of Detroit, chairman of the American Jewish Committee's Interreligious Affairs Commission, from which a delegation had twice in the last year conferred with village leaders about the problem, emphasized the change had been their decision.

Freedoms Foundation Honors Lowell Thomas

The citation to the to 86-year-old Thomas read:

"From early beginnings as a reporter in a Colorado mining town, he has become a patriarch of American broadcasting, a pioneer who effected changes in journalistic practice which have set standards of professionalism and service in his field."

Other award recipients were actress Helen Hayes and Gov. Dixie Lee Ray of the state of Washington. Neither attended the 29th annual awards dinner Wednesday night, but are expected to pick up their American Exemplar Medals later.

Clay Smothers, of Dallas, an educator and a member of the Texas legislature, was awarded the American Patriot's Medal for his work in developing an industrial school at Malokoff, Texas. The Freedom Leadership Award went to Douglas L. Bandow, of Escondido, Calif., for his "leadership of youth." He's a law student at Stanford University.

Also honored were Dr. Milton Friedman, economist and Nobel laureate, who was presented the Private Enterprise Exemplar Medal, and Robert Moses, veteran New York architect and builder, who received the National Recognition Award.

Farm Missionary Visits City

By TANNER LAINE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Ronald D. Preston, an agricultural missionary to Honduras, on a speaking tour in West Texas, and his Lubbock host, Dr. A.W. Young, confessed that their first question about cotton when arriving in the South Plains area, was a similar inquiry of "what are those crazy-looking stalks?"

The same question came 35 years apart, of course, since Dr. Young, former head of the agronomy department in the School of Agriculture at Texas Tech, came to Lubbock 35 years ago. Missionary Preston is on a current tour during a home assignment in the U.S. He will return to Honduras in June.

The visitor spoke Tuesday night at Lubbock's Grace Presbyterian Church. He was guest of Dr. and Mrs. Young here and Wednesday was given a whirlwind tour of Lubbock and the immediate South Plains by Dr. Young.

The missionary and host found out they had grown up in the same Midwest area in the U.S. Preston's home base is Southeastern Nebraska; and Dr. Young's home area in in Southwestern Iowa, only 90 miles from Preston's home town.

TALKING COTTON — Agricultural missionary Ronald D. Preston, left, confers with his Lubbock host Dr. A.W. Young, professor emeritus of the Department of Agronomy at Texas Tech University, about cotton. Preston, a Presbyterian, was in the city on a speaking tour of West Texas. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

Preston, a native of Burchard, Neb., comes from an an agricultural background and attended the University of Nebraska. He previously served as an agricultural missionary to Ethiopia for the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

What does an agricultural missionary do? Preston put it this way: "Our primary concern is to interest people in serving Jesus Christ. Along with that, we seek to teach the people how to improve their living conditions, which takes in the areas of literacy, health, and better food and fiber useage."

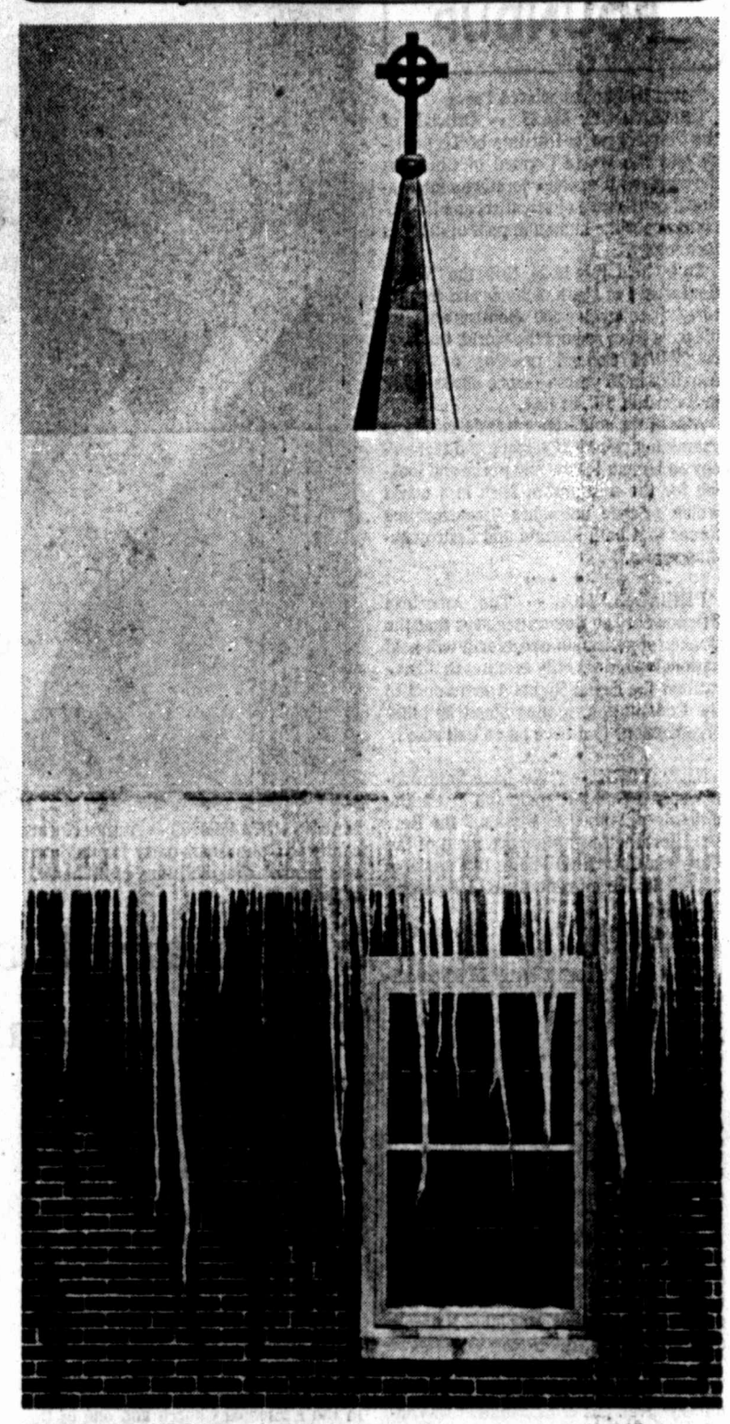

"Like a county agricultural agent here in the U.S., we get to feel the people's needs, where we serve," he added.

Although the missionary's background in America was in a dairy farm and hog raising, he exhibits a deep interest in agricultural problems even of a section where he is visiting, and of his American home and heritage. For example, his sole comment on the farmers' strike was, "Because I have been there myself, I have a deep sympathy for farmers. I can say this without rebuttal, I appreciate the farmers of this area and other sectors, for trying to do something about their existing problems."

Preston commented on an admiration for Texans. "I found out when I was stationed at Camp Wolters in World War II for training, Texas residents are the warmest and friendliest people to be found anywhere. They are open and honest and I admire that."

What would you think impressed a missionary most about about this state on this furlough tour? It was this: "The sign slogans I see 'Drive Friendly' are most impressive. It's a message to me and others who teach, preach and demonstrate the gospel anywhere that it would be a better world if we could 'Live Friendly,'" Preston commented.

Church Slates Holy Spirit Conference

A South Plains Holy Spirit Conference will be held today through Sunday at Lubbock's Oakwood United Methodist Church, located at 2215 58th St.

The conference is co-sponsored by Jack Gray Ministries and Oakwood United Methodist Church. Dr. Gray is a United Methodist evangelist.

Speakers will include: Dr. Jimmy Buskirk, Dr. Bill Thomas, the Rev. Bob Stamps, and his wife, Ellen, Dr. Jack Gray and his wife, Revis. Music leaders will be Gene and Bobbie Moore.

All speakers are from the Tulsa, Okla., area.

Rev. Stamps is chaplain at Oral Roberts University of Tulsa. Dr. Thomas is pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Tulsa, which has grown from a membership of 400 to more than 1,600, under his ministry. Dr. Buskirk is an evangelist, headquartering in the Tulsa area. Dr. Gray and his wife, a former Texas Tech beauty and South Plains Maid of Cotton, the former Revis Jordan, live at Tulsa.

Gene Moore is an ordained Methodist minister, as well as a music evangelist. He and his wife minister in the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Stamps is a former secretary to Corrie ten Boom, internationally-known author and Christian witness, who was confined to a concentration camp from Holland by the Germans in World War II.

"Bible Bowl" activities for children will be conducted in connection with the conference by Dr. Gray. The "Bible Bowl" was conducted here last year at Lubbock's Trinity Church and drew praise from leaders and members of that church. The "Bowl" is for youngsters (elementary school ages), grades 1-6.

Here is the time schedule for the three-day conference: opening session at 7:30 p.m. today with Dr. and Mrs. Gray leading; ministers prayer breakfast at 7 a.m. Saturday for ministers and their wives at the Villa Inn Gold Rom Room, 5401 Ave. Q; Dr. Thomas speaking on the Holy Spirt throughout the Bible, 9 a.m. Saturday; luncheon at noon in Bayless Elementary School for conference attendants, school cafeteria is located one block from Oakwood United Methodist Church; sessions separately for men and women at 1:30 p.m. at Oakwood, with Dr. Buskirk, Dr. Gray and Rev. Stamps speak speaking to men, and Ellen Stamps and Revis Gray speaking to women; 5:30 p.m. Saturday, banquet for all attendants at Bayless School; final Saturday session at 7 p.m. under direction of Bob and Ellen Stamps.

Sunday services will include: 9 a.m. Sunday School sermonette by Dr. Gray; 10 a.m. worship service at Oakwood with sermon by Dr. Buskirk; 11:15 a.m. service with sermon by the Rev. Stamps; 5 p.m., night worship service at Oakwood with sermon by Dr. Burkirk.

"Bible Bowl" activities for children will be at the same times of Friday and Saturday sessions but not on Sunday.

25th Anniversary Near

Vandelia Village Church of Christ, located at 2002 60th St., that will be celebrating its 25th anniversary March 12, has an interesting background.

Vandelia was started in March of 1953 when the Southside Church of Christ purposed to found a congregation in South Lubbock.

Sixty members of the Southside congregation joined with 60 other interested perons from all over Lubbock, and started the work.

The first elders were Glen Hunter and Clay Turner. There were five deacons serving under these men.

Vandelia now is led by four elders: Glenn Johnson, Les Perrin, Bill White and E.R. Williams. There are 24 deacons serving under these men.

From the humble beginning of 120 interested persons, the congregation of Vandelia Village Church of Christ today records 289 family units as members. Average Bible school attendance is 475.

The church staff now has four ministers: Tom Milholland, pulpit; Pete Gentry, personal work; Dangie Tabor, youth work; and Bob Mathews, educational.

In addition to the regular services of the congregation, there are other services offered including a bus ministry, tape ministry, children's Bible hour, visitation program; and others such as a far-reaching outreach program.

Foursquare Churches Begin Meet

LOS ANGELES (Special) — The 55th annual convention of Foursquare churches is underway here. Site is the parent church, Angelus Temple.

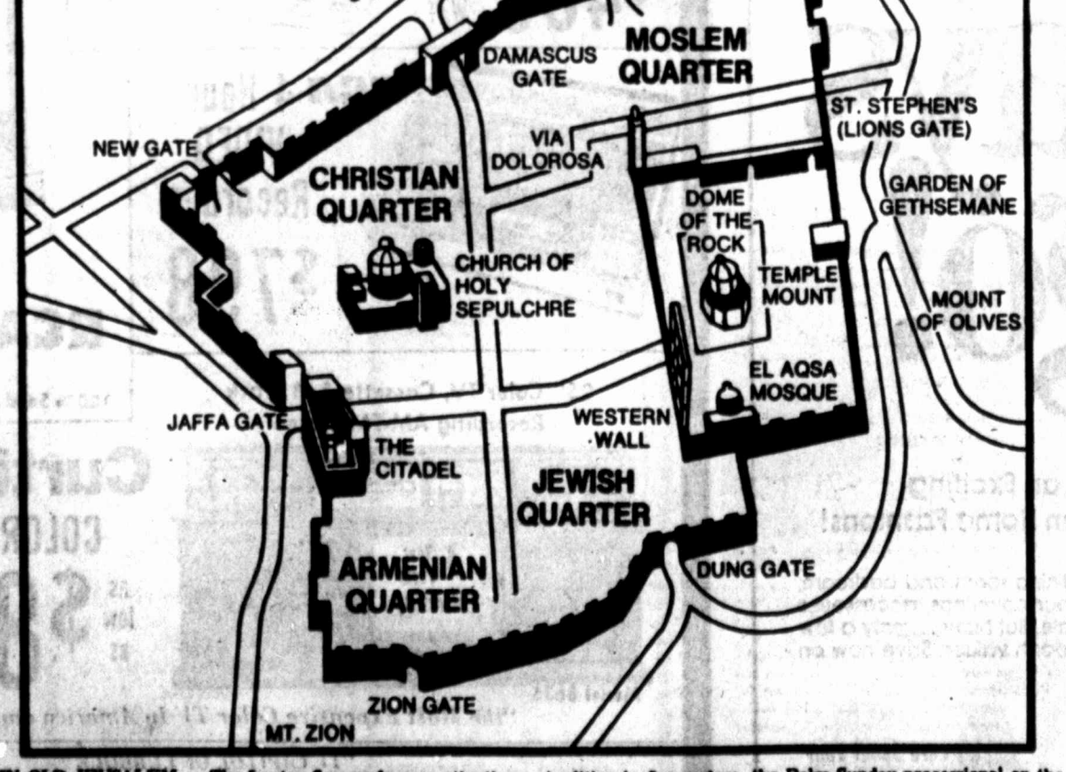

General chairman of the conclave, which will end with ordination rites Sunday, is the Rev. Sidney O. Westbrook of Dallas, Southwest supervisor of Foursquare churches. Theme is: "Living in God's Family."

The Rev. Phil Demetro, pastor of Lubbock's First Foursquare Gospel Church, is superintendent of the South Plains area of Foursquare churches.

A business session is scheduled Sunday with Dr. Rolf K. McPherson, president of the movement and son of the founder the late Aimee Semple McPherson, directing.

According to Rev. Demetro, highlight of the conclave will be the international premiere screening of a new Foursquare mission's film; dramatizing the organization's efforts in New Guinea. One day of fellowship for the entire family is scheduled before the parley closes.

Council of Foursquare Men and United Foursquare Women's laypersons groups will gather for luncheon meetings and a Bible college alumni breakfast is planned.

IN OLD JEUSALEM — The Lenten Season focuses attention on Jerusalem, the ancient city. Many pilgrimages to the Holy Land and Jerusalem in recent years have familiarized Israel and Jersusalem to many West Texans. The illustrated map shows the various gates to the Old City and quarters of the various faiths. The photograph above is a reminder of an annual tradition in Jersusalem, the Palm Sunday processional on the last Sunday before Easter. In this photo a procession makes its way into the Old City through the Lion's (St. Stephen's) Gate, leading to the Via Dolorosa.(Photos From the Israel Government Tourist Office)

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible®

Matt. 8:27-34, 9:1-12, The Living Bible

27 The disciples just sat there, awed! "Who is this," they asked themselves, "that even the winds and the sea obey Him?"

28 When they arrived on the other side of the lake, in the country of the Gadarenes, two men with demons in them met Him. They lived in a cemetery and were so dangerous that no one could go through that area.

29 They began screaming at Him, "What do You want with us, O Son of God? You have no right to torment us yet."

30 A herd of pigs was feeding in the distance,

31 So the demons begged, "If You cast us out, send us into that herd of pigs."

32 "All right," Jesus told them. "Begone." And they came out of the men and entered the pigs, and the whole herd rushed over a cliff and drowned in the water below.

33 The herdsmen fled to the nearest city with the story of what had happened,

34 And the entire population came rushing out to see Jesus, and begged Him to go away and leave them alone.

CHAPTER 9

1 So Jesus climbed into a boat and went across the lake to Capernaum, His home town.

2 Soon some men brought Him a paralyzed boy on a mat. When Jesus saw their faith, He said to the sick boy, "Cheer up, son! For I have forgiven your sins!"

3 "Blasphemy! This man is saying he is God!" exclaimed some of the religious leaders to themselves.

4 Jesus knew what they were thinking and asked them, "Why are you thinking such evil thoughts?

5 Is it any harder to forgive his sins than to heal him?

6 Consequently, to prove that I have authority here on earth to forgive sins"—turning to the paralyzed boy He said, "Get up, roll up your mat and walk home!"

8 A chill of fear swept through the crowd as they saw this happen right before their eyes. How they praised God for giving such authority to a man!

9 As Jesus was going on down the road, He saw a tax collector, Matthew, sitting at a tax collection booth. "Come and be My disciple," Jesus said to him, and Matthew jumped up and went along with Him.

10 Later, as Jesus and His disciples were eating dinner [at Matthew's house], there were many notorious swindlers there as guests!

11 The Pharisees were indignant. "Why does your teacher associate with men like that?"

12 "Because people who are well don't need a doctor! It's the sick people who do!" was Jesus' reply.

Not a Worry in the World

Yet is Penny really immune from anxiety in her infancy?

It is TRUST that softens anxiety during the tender years. Knowing you are loved . . . having those you can count on.

The Church's educational program is an extension of the Home in cultivating that sense of trust. Religious training awakens and cultivates a growing CONFIDENCE in God.

As Penny's spiritual growth continues, she and her family will see trust and confidence mature into FAITH.

Controversy Surrounds Nicaragua

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — One day, not long before his assassination in 1956, Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somozo startled an office visitor by taking a cattle prod from a desk drawer and casually applying it to the presidential elbow.

He winced briefly, then deadpanned: "Not too bad. Not too bad."

In those days, Somoza's secret police routinely used cattle prods against Nicaraguan dissidents, and the incident reflected Somoza's cavalier attitude toward such practices.

In the Cold War morality of the time, he knew, abuses of human rights were far less important to the United States, his chief benefactor, than preservation of anti-communist rule.

On the latter score, Somoza won high marks from Washington — and more than $300 million in U.S. aid flowed to Nicaragua in the years after World War II.

But now, more than 40 years of cozy relations between the United States and the Somoza dynasty are at an end.

Alone of all the countries in the world, Nicaragua has been dropped from the list of U.S. military aid recipients in next year's budget, except for a token amount for military training, because of human rights violations. Economic aid also has been slashed.

The decision to penalize Nicaragua, now ruled by the elder Somoza's son, Anastasio Jr., has touched off an intense policy dispute within the administration.

There is a sense of embarrassment among many influential Carter administration officials about all the years in which the United States helped buttress a succession of Somoza regimes.

But some State Department career professionals are incensed. They note that Somoza, anxious to preserve his close ties with Washington, moved quickly last year to ease political repression, mindful of President Carter's emphasis on human rights.

A State Department report on the human rights situation in 105 foreign countries, issued earlier this month, says reports of deaths and disappearances "markedly diminished" in Nicaragua after the Carter administration took office 13 months ago.

Two other officials said the State Department, despite repeated requests, refused to tell the Somoza regime what it must do to meet the administration's human rights standard.

They said the requests were submitted after Somoza lifted a long state of seige. His action resulted in public trials for most prisoners and a substantial easing of press censorship.

"The issue is not human rights," one official said bitterly. "The objective is the ouster of the Somoza regime."

One informant acknowledged that Somoza privately expressed bitterness about the Carter administration's hostile attitude.

But officials in the department's human rights office emphatically deny any attempt to oust Somoza, saying this would be contrary to government policy.

They also point out that Nicaragua continues to be eligible for military aid allocated earlier and that the administration has not ruled out the possibility of providing credits to Nicaragua with funds earmarked for the current fiscal year.

They also contend the cutoff for 1979 is not due entirely to anti-Somoza sentiment, but partly to new budgetary procedures which put less emphasis on nonstrategic countries like Nicaragua.

"When we got down to Nicaragua on the priority list, there was no money left," one official said.

How to implement an effective, evenhanded human rights policy has generated bitterness between the department's career professionals and the administation's human rights recruits, captained by Assistant Secretary Patricia Derian.

The human rights officials say that if career professionals have their way, American foreign policy would have no human rights component at all.

"The career people don't want to have anything to do with any proposal if it's controversial or will offend a particular country," one aide said. "It's a 'don't-rock-the-boat' attitude."

But some career diplomats contend the human rights policy has focused excessively on traditionally pro-American regimes such as Chile, Nicaragua and South Africa while generally ignoring abuses in such communist countries as China, Cuba and North Korea.

They also note that the administration's criticism of political repression in the Soviet Union has fallen off considerably from last year.

The weasel, a member of the mammal group which includes the polecat and stoat, can pursue its prey through holes, crevices and under dense herbage, as well as climb trees and swim in water with ease.

South Korea Defense Role Noted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — War between North and South Korea may not immediately involve Americans once U.S. ground troops are withdrawn, but Pentagon chief Harold Brown suggests U.S. forces might be quickly recommitted if war broke out.

"It seems to me overwhelmingly unlikely that our ground forces would become involved immediately" in case of attack after the withdrawal of about 30,000 ground troops is finished by the end of 1982, Brown told Congress.

But U.S. air and naval units remaining in South Korea or nearby would go into action at once and the administration would then have to "decide what additional forces were needed."

Brown appeared before the House International Relations Committee on behalf of a portion of a $2 billion military assistance package facing an uncertain fate because of the Korean bribery investigation.

"It is going to be difficult even for members of Congress, who have been guilty of nothing under heaven, to support," said Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala.

Hearing Brown's testimony on the proposed turnover of $800 million in military equipment to South Korea and the first of four yearly instalments of $275 million in credit sales, the panel's chairman, Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., said, "I doubt whether in the present climate such legislation could be approved."

Brown said quick U.S. reaction to a North Korean invasion after troop withdrawals could include Marine units on Okinawa, which could be in action within two days and additional troops from Hawaii and the United States in one week if sent by air.

The White House would have 60 days under the War Powers Act before congressional approval is required for committing forces, Brown said.

"I can't predict what the Congress would do because I can't define what the circumstances would be," said Brown. "We would be able to react ... We would take, I think, appropriate actions and they would be such that the North Koreans would be deterred."

South African Says Tennis Desegregated

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Racial segregation in South African tennis is dead, a government sports official said today, probably signaling the gradual end of three decades of strict apartheid in most sports in the white-ruled nation.

Sports Minister Dr. Piet Koornhof released a letter to the International Tennis Federation saying, "No permit or other legal permission is needed by any player to play on any court in South Africa and no permit or other legal permission is required to join any club."

Apartheid in athletics has made South Africa an international sports pariah, excluded from the Olympic Games and an outcast in traditional cricket and rugby contests with England and Australia.

The policy of separate racial facilities became strictly enforced after 1948 when the current ruling National Party gained power.

An official of the government Sports Department, who asked not to be named, said today, "Segregation in South African tennis is dead."

Asked if the new open policy in tennis applied to all sports in South Africa, Deputy Secretary for Sport Dr. Ben Keet said, "Since policy adaptations in sport in September 1976, there have been no restrictions on the participation in any sport by any member of any race."

However, club liquor laws and other regulations, including restrictions on mixed audiences, have hindered the lowering of racial barriers at the club level. International sporting events here have been multiracial for several years.

WAITING OUT THE WAR — Refugees and their youngsters sat in camp at Jijiga, in the part of Ethiopia held by Somali guerrillas, last week. The refugees fled to Jijiga, after Ethiopian air raids destroyed their villages, guerrilla spokesmen said. Refugee men are given military training at the camp. (AP Laserphoto)

Irish Blast Statement By Solon

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The office of Ireland's Prime Minister Jack Lynch has released a letter Lynch sent New York Congressman Mario Biaggi six days ago criticizing Biaggi for his "public identification" with supporters of violence in Northern Ireland.

The criticism followed a letter to Lynch from Biaggi, a Bronx Democrat and chairman of the Congressional Committee for Irish Affairs, saying he would ask Congress to call for a British declaration of intent to withdraw from Northern Ireland.

In his reply, Lynch said that in a recent interview he did not give his views on withdrawal. He had repeated, the letter said, his view that the British government should indicate its interest in bringing together all the people of Ireland.

"One of the obstacles to progress is violence which, though it has been time and again rejected by the overwhelming authority of the Irish people, eminates from extremists of both political traditions, and in both cases these derive support and encouragement from small groups outside the country," Lynch's letter said.

Lynch said that when in Ireland, Biaggi had been publicly identified with the Irish National Caucus, whom he called "supporters of violence."

"It has come to my attention," said Lynch in his letter, "that my government's policy on Northern Ireland has been seriously misrepresented to members of the (U.S.) Congress. In view of the extent of this confusion and of the seriousness with which I must view it, I am issuing copies of our correspondence to members of your ad hoc committee and other congressional leaders."

Biaggi, in a letter of Jan. 24, asked for Lynch's comments on the overall prospects for peace and on what his committee might do to help.

Biaggi had written as head of the 87-member committee to congratulate Lynch on his purported call for a declaration of intent from Britain to withdraw its troops from Northern Ireland, and said the committee was interested in seeing the declaration of intent become a reality. According to the letter exchange made public by Lynch's office, Biaggi said he intended to submit a resolution in Congress supporting that.

In his reply, Lynch claimed there had been misleading media coverage of the policy of his government on Northern Ireland.

U.S. Reduces Hostility To Rhodesian Efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of hostility toward white Rhodesia's efforts to find an internal solution to its racial problems, the United S4ates is edging closer to accepting Prime Minister Ian Smith's plan.

Rhodesia announced last week an agreement between Smith and three black moderate leaders on a formula for transferring power from Smith's white supremacist government to Rhodesia's black majority.

Britain, the former colonial power in Rhodesia, and the United States have been promoting a rival settlement plan under which Smith would surrender power to the British, who would then arrange for elections within six months.

But the administration on Wednesday called Smith's latest efforts a "step in the right direction," a sharp turnabout from more than six months of uninterrupted administration hostility.

The internal settlement plan announced by Rhodesia calls for a transition to black majority rule, with no British role and with whites retaining certain privileges for a temporary period.

In a move one U.S. official attributed to "incompetence," the State Department initially denounced the accord. But it then retreated to a position of neutrality.

On Wednesday, the department went still further by conceding that the agreement had some merit.

"The movement reported in Salisbury is a significant step in the right direction," department spokesman Hodding Carter III said.

The statement appeared to reflect the U.S. desire to reserve Anglo-AMerican unity on the Rhodesian issue.

The British government, under pressure from conservative elements sympathetic to Smith, also has indicated that the Salisbury agreement represents an important step forward.

The U.S. statement contradicted remarks by Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, who has denounced the agreement as a recipe for black civil war in Rhodesia.

Young is concerned that the Patriotic Front, which is waging an externally based guerrilla war against the Smith regime, will refuse to accept any solution acceptable to the Smith government.

DEAR BUDDY'S Advice to The Homehunter

MARK BARRON January Sales Leader

DEAR BUDDY: My kids need to walk to school, we need 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, we would love a fireplace but we can't pay more than $40,000. ...WORKING MOM WORKING MOM: As soon as you get off work, call us we've got a jewel (fireplace too) about a block from Wester school—We work late.

DEAR BUDDY: Every house I look at is the same. Isn't there a house with some personality that I can buy below $50,000.
...PERSONALITY QUEEN QUEEN: If you would like to see an "extravert" in a 3 bedroom, 2 bath home, let us show you our "sparkle plenty" at 4814 54th Street. Hurry, it won't last!!!

1978 MOTOR TREND MAGAZINE CAR OF THE YEAR

PLYMOUTH HORIZON

ECONOMY . . . 38 MPG HWY 25 MPG CITY 29 COMBINED

Fuel economy? You bet. Based on EPA estimates, Horizon equipped with manual transmission, is rated at 38 mpg, highway, 25 mpg, city. Your actual mileage may differ, depending on how and where you drive, the condition of your car and its optional equipment.

SPACE. COMFORT. LUXURY.

RAIN. SNOW. WIND.

CURVES. BUMPS. RUTS.

There's ample suspension travel to absorb bumps, rubber bushings to cushion them, coil springs to soak up road shocks. An anti-sway bar in the front suspension.

Changes In City Posts Proposed By Candidate

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 21-year-old Tech student who has filed as a mayoral candidate says he wants the council job in order to "make changes" on city boards and commissions.

Leland Kelly, a junior marketing and finance major, said his major concern is changing the makeup of the boards, which he said are filled with people who don't want to work.

If elected, Kelly said, he would appoint "people who really care about the work instead of those who just want the name."

He added that another major factor in his decision to run was that until he filed Thursday Dirk West was the only candidate.

"I hate to see someone go in and get it without a challenge," Kelly said. "I have nothing to lose."

West, who holds the Place 1 council seat, announced as a mayoral candidate last month. The filing deadline is midnight Wednesday.

Although West "is a nice man for a cartoonist," Kelly said, "you know as far as politics go, he could be better."

The student explained that West is "too liberal. I'm much more conservative."

Although Place 1 and 3 council spots also are up for grabs, Kelly said he prefers the mayorship because it is the "top of the council."

"I'd much rather be the head of something where I've got some control rather than just be one of the boys," he explained. "I feel I can express my views more if I'm mayor."

He rates lowering taxes as a top priority. He said he would "try to make it easier on small businessmen in Lubbock."

"People don't realize how hard it is to have a small business," Kelly said. "When taxes are so high, it's hard to make a profit."

Kelly is the sole owner of Downtown Vending and, he said, he has been involved in business since junior high school.

Kelly said that business experience makes him "as qualified as Dirk West" for the mayorship.

Age should be no disadvantage, he said, explaining that "age has nothing to do with it. It's ability that counts."

Noting that he "always has had to prove" he wasn't too young to accomplish things, Kelly added, "I figure I could do just as good as someone 50 or 60 years old. I may need some help, but I figure someone's always willing to help me."

He said he gives himself about a 30 percent chance of winning the election. "I will have to do a lot of hard work to do that," he said, adding that if he loses, at least his name will have been before the public.

"Maybe next year I'll have a much better chance," he explained.

And if he wins, Kelly said, "I probably would be a one-term person because I probably would get people mad at me."

His decision to enter the race was a well-thought one, Kelly said. "I want to do something instead of just sitting back and doing nothing," he said.

The April 1 municipal election probably will be just one of many such races for him, Kelly said, explaining that "I would like to go as far as possible" in politics.

"I wouldn't mind being president (of the United States)," he said, quipping that "I've always been ahead of my time."

New Owners Of Villa Inn Plan To Remodel, Add New Features

By RAY WESTBROOK
A-J Business Editor

The new owners of Villa Inn, 5401 Ave. Q, have traded the tropical climate of Zambia in South Africa for the vagaries of Lubbock's four-season environment.

While the move is primarily for business reasons, Arvind Patel, the new manager of Villa, mentions the unsettled political climate in Africa as another reason for the Patels' interest in the United States.

The purchase of the property was for an unspecified amount.

Preceded to this country by a sister, Usha and her husband Natoo Patel, and by a brother, Dinesh Patel, the new manager is enthusiastic about the facility the family has purchased.

"This property has been very well kept," Patel said.

The owners have leased to Terry Albracht, originally of Hereford, the restaurant and the Villa Club, which is holding its grand opening today.

Albracht said the club will be opened with a new format of live entertainment and easy-listening music designed to appeal to Lubbock businessmen.

Cal Garrett, a native of Lubbock, and Susie McGee, co-star with Garrett of a new album entitled "My Way," will furnish the opening entertainment.

The club will be open six days a week, Monday through Saturday. Another owner of the club operation with Albracht is James Wilson, originally of Borger.

Patel said his family has operated a retail-wholesale business in Kabwe, Zambia, for the past 11 years. His father still operates the business there.

Patel's parents migrated to Zambia from India.

While currently a citizen of Zambia, Patel said he was able to move to the United States under a rule allowing a relative to "sponsor" his residence here.

His sister, Usha, and her husband, Natoo Patel (a common name in India), have become citizens of the United States. He is a civil engineer and owns a motel in Berkely, Calif.

Dinesh Patel has been operating a motel facility in Amarillo for the past year. That operation has been sold, and he plans to move to Lubbock to assist in the Villa Inn.

Immediate plans for the facility call for a renovation and upgrading of the rooms to give the Villa a new look. Eventually, new features such as a gift shop, and perhaps a tennis court, may be added to the property. Artistic copperware items will be imported for the gift shop.

Two Suspects Face Charges Of Burglary

Two men were charged Thursday with burglary of a habitation in an unusual case in which part of the evidence consisted of about $23,000 stashed in two tobacco cans.

There was evidence that holes had been dug in the victim's backyard.

Charged were Jerry Don Ward, 28, of 1610 45th street, number three, and Mark Randall Corley, 26, of 5437 Ave B.

Police said they responded to a burglar alarm at the 4505 20th street residence of W.D. Wilkins, shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday.

According to police reports, officers noticed one of two garage doors raised about eight inches. Police said they also noticed several holes in the garage ceiling.

Officers said they found two men in the garage attic.

The two tobacco cans, containing a reported $23,380 were on the hood of the car parked inside the garage, officers said.

Several freshly dug holes were found in the backyard, according to police reports. Officers said two shovels, a pick, a garden fork and metal detector reportedly were found lying near one of the holes.

Reports indicated a police scanner and earplug were also found.

Karen Watson Gets Honor

Karen Watson, a Texas Tech electrical engineering graduate student, became the first woman Thursday to be chosen Student Engineer of the Year by the South Plains Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

Miss Watson is a former member of the Tech women's track team and was named outstanding athlete in 1976-77.

She was nominated for the engineering award by the student chapter of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers during her final semester as an undergraduate last fall.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Watson of Fort Worth, Miss Watson has been on the Dean's List for scholastic excellence and is a member of Eta Kappa Nu Association, the scholastic honorary in electrical engineering.

Runners-up in the award competition were Carie Goodman, a civil engineering student at Tech from El Paso, and Roger Dougal, an electrical engineering major from Austin.

Miss Watson was presented the award at the annual banquet of the South Plains chapter of the engineering society Thursday night at the Hillcrest Country Club.

Man Files Suit Against Firm

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — The brother of a man killed last May while working on a water project for the city of Nashville is seeking more than $1.3 million in damages from a company involved in the job.

David Lane of Keller, Texas, has filed suit against Hix Smith Jr. and Smith Ready Mix Inc. of Nashville in U.S. District Court here on behalf of the estate of Joel Lee Lane.

On May 12, 1977, Joel Lee Lane, 24, a Nashville city employee, was working on a water project on the Little Missouri River near Murfreesboro when workmen in a well shaft were overcome by carbon monoxide from a gasoline-powered water pump.

David Lane's suit contends his brother attempted to rescue the men, but that he, too, was overcome by carbon monoxide, and fell from a ladder to an 8-foot deep pool of water, where he drowned.

Lane alleges that Smith and his company agents were negligent in ordering employees into a confined space and failing to instruct them on the hazards involved, the precautions they needed to take and the use of protective equipment.

The firm also failed to provide instruments to test the atmosphere of the well shaft, the suit claims.

Auxiliary Schedules Meeting Saturday

The World War I Barracks and Auxiliary Hub of the Plains chapter No. 1489 will meet at 11:30 a.m. Saturday in the Adult Center at 26th St. and Ave. P.

A special program to honor America will be presented by auxiliary members before the pot luck lunch is served.

Bomb Explodes In Miami Hotel

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A bomb exploded in an outside air conditioning unit at the Marco Polo Hotel, blowing out about 100 windows on four floors and knocking a small hole in the wall of the neighboring Chateau Hotel, police said today.

All the damage was to the outside of the two hotels, and no injuries were reported, Dade County police officer Christine Echroll said.

The blast late Thursday also blew out some windows on two floors of the Chateau Hotel.

Police said they did not know how big the bomb was, what type of explosive was used or who may have planted it. Investigators said they believed whoever planted the bomb did not want to hurt anyone.

"If it was intended to kill, it would have been placed inside," Ms. Echroll said.

Doctors, Nurses Monitor Quadruplets' Condition

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The condition of the quadruplets born two months premature to an Albuquerque couple is being monitored closely by doctors and nurses at Bernalillo County Medical Center.

The three girls and one boy born Wednesday were listed in guarded condition, a spokeswoman for Bernalillo County Medical Center said.

BCMC public information officer Patricia Sussmann said the condition report is "normal in case of premature babies."

She said the babies ranged in weight from two pounds, six ounces to one pound, two ounces. The boy was the smallest.

Their mother, Elaine Gross Dyble, 29, was listed as "doing fine."

Their father, Thomas J. Dyble, 32, a chemical engineer at the Air Force Weapons Laboratory at Kirtland Air Force Base, said, "Almost from the beginning I was expecting twins."

He said later, however, tests indicated it might be triplets.

"That was quite a shock," Dyble said, but helped prepare him for another test done just before Christmas, which showed quadruplets.

"It wasn't as much of a shock to go from three to four as it was from two to three," he said.

The babies had not been named.

The hospital information officer said the first baby was born at 8:42 a.m., "and the others came very rapidly afterward."

Defense Minister Says Soviets Can Equal Western Technology

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has the economy and the technology to match any weapons the West develops, including the neutron bomb and the cruise missile, according to Soviet Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov.

Ustinov addressed a mass meeting of military leaders at the Kremlin on the eve of the celebration of the 60th anniversary of the birth of the Soviet army and navy.

He said the Soviet military supports total disarmament, but will not stand by if the United States and other Western countries continue developing new nuclear weapons, particularly the neutron bomb.

"The Soviet people have never rattled arms and are not going to do so," Ustinov said. "At the same time, let no one take our love of peace for weakness and let no one try to scare us with new types of lethal weapons — cruise missiles, neutron bombs or anything of this kind.

"It seems in place to recall here that to try and scare us is a senseless and hopeless thing. Our economy, science and technology can ensure the development of any arms on which our adversaries try to place reliance."

Ustinov was repeating earlier warnings from Soviet leaders — including President Leonid Brezhnev — that the Soviet Union would respond in kind if the United States continues to develop the neutron bomb.

Works Of Courbet On Display

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Art experts are using a new centenary show to give Gustave Courbet the credit — or the blame — for most of what we call modern art.

"Courbet," says critic Edward Mullins, "was the first artist to maintain in effect that art is what I do, what I see, what I feel."

How well Courbet's larger-than-life figure matches such claims can be seen at London's Royal Academy in the biggest Courbet exhibition since 1882.

Until March 19 it is showing 116 paintings and 7 drawings, mostly shown earlier in Paris, drawn from galleries great and small all over the world. This chance to survey a kind of grandfather of modern art is being treated as a major artistic event.

Yet Courbet is hardly a household name. Since his death Dec. 31, 1877, he has been obscured as "a painter's painter," an artist of enormous influence but little popular fame.

"For the past 10 years this extraordinary man has caused more of a sensation in Paris than 20 run-of-the-mill celebrities," wrote a critic in 1861.

"The polite world affects to despise him, critics tear him to pieces, artists make fun of him, vaudeville singers hold him up to the curiosity of idle audiences."

In Courbet's time art was vitally important. New paintings were subjected to intense debate. Painters were caricatured and lampooned, art theories passionately argued, artists themselves pop-star celebrities.

Courbet exploded upon this scene as a brash, self-trained provincial. He and his work aroused fierce feelings among everyone who was anyone in mid-19th-century Paris. Zola, Ingres, Delacroix, Baudelaire, Prosper Merimee, Theophile Gautier, Proudhon, all pronounced judgment and few minced words.

"Under what bell-glass, with what manure, with what mixture of wine, beer, corrosive mucus and flatulent oedema, can this hairy, loud-sounding pumpkin have been grown?"

They don't write art criticism like that any more.

Courbet deliberately courted such fury. He was a self-publicist of genius.

He battled noisily with the art establishment. He drank copiously. Holding court in a Left Bank cafe he trumpeted outrageous opinions, said a contemporary, "on all the arts, all the sciences, even those he knew nothing about."

"At the time he reached Paris an artist was expected to obey the conventions," Mullins said. "Art should be about history, or religion, or classical myth." Landscape and portraits were allowed, provided everything was "morally elevating and above the humdrum realities of daily life."

Courbet's response was to paint the world as he saw it, not as academic formulas required. He painted his grandfather's funeral, his sisters in humdrum scenes, landscapes without moral uplift, workmen sweating at physical labor.

Union Officials Disappointed By Politicians

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Some politicians with pro-labor labels have let organized labor down, so the AFL-CIO should be careful about who it supports in the 1978 congressional elections, union officials say.

"In a number of states our leadership ... having consulted the records of voting in 1977, (is) going to be very much more selective in their endorsements in the 1978 elections," said the labor organization's Committee on Political Education Director Alexander Barkan.

He told the council that state AFL-CIO organizations would no longer assume "that because somebody had the label 'Democrat' behind his name, or claimed that he or she was a liberal, that they were automatically a friend of labor."

AFL-CIO spokesman Al Zack said union members felt let down by some members of Congress the AFL-CIO supported in past elections.

AFL-CIO President George Meany told the closed COPE meeting that organized labor faces "a very difficult election year" because of conservative opposition but still will elect a "good, solid Congress," Zack said.

Jacob Clayman, head of a special AFL-CIO committee on "the right-wing-threat," told the union leaders that conservatives are massing millions of dollars for this year's political campaigns.

Zack said, "We see a very difficult campaign. We see a major campaign aimed at the very foundations of the trade union movement, at the concept of collective bargaining."

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Friday, Feb. 24, the 55th day of 1978 with 310 to follow.

The moon, is moving toward its last quarter.

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Venus, Jupiter, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Pisces.

On this day in history:

In 1920, a group of Germans organized the National Socialist party, forerunner of the Nazi party which was in power when World War II started.

In 1922, Henri Landru, better known as "Bluebeard," was executed in France, for murdering 10 of his sweethearts.

In 1966, President Nkrumah of Ghana was ousted from office.

• • •

A thought for the day: Author William Sydney Porter, better known as O. Henry, said, "A straw vote only shows which way the the hot air blows."

The Rio cost more than a grand.

In that year, the Gadsden Purchase further extended United States territory down the west bank of the mighty Rio Grande.

And established what today is the border between Mexico and the states of Arizona and New Mexico.

The cost: $10,000,000.

And Americans put up the money. By purchasing government securities.

You could bank on America back then. And you still can. By buying U.S. Savings Bonds at work. Through the Payroll Savings Plan.

That way, a little is set aside from each paycheck to buy Bonds. Automatically.

Take stock in America.

Series E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4½% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

DRINK FOR THE MOVIE — Patrons of the Dearborn Theater stopped at the bar in the lobby of the theater to purchase a cocktail before the movie. The owner of the theater claims this and another theater he owns are the only ones in the country where patrons can purchase cocktails and carry them to their seats. (AP Laserphoto)

Movie Theater Offers Cocktails

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Theater owner Martin Shafer has two criteria for judging movies — how they do at the box office and how they do at the bar.

Shafer, who owns a movie house here and one in nearby Westland, sells cocktails and allows patrons to take them to their seats at both theaters.

"To me, this is another way of making the theater outstanding," said the 54-year-old Shafer, whose customers are as likely to come to the refreshment stand for beer and martinis as for popcorn and candy.

Since April, when the first bar opened at Westland's Quo Vadis theater, "we've had no problem with people drinking too much," Shafer said. "That's because people don't come to the movies to drink, they come to watch the show. The cocktail is nothing except a little added pleasure."

Patrons agree.

"I like the idea," said insurance salesman Jim Desy, who sipped a beer while watching the movie "Coma" at the Dearborn Entertainment Center. 'When I'm home at night I have a drink and watch TV and this is basically the same."

Added bartender Bill Williamson: "I haven't heard any complaints. They're all surprised when they walk in the door, but then they slip up to the bar and have a drink."

Patrons tend to work up the biggest thirst during thrillers such as "Coma" and action-packed movies such as "The Gauntlet," Shafer said.

"If I could ever get a desert picture like 'Lawrence of Arabia' I'd have it made," joked Shafer, son of a former vaudeville performer.

Liquor sales are slower at movies such as "Saturday Night Fever" which attract younger adults who don't have as much money he said.

Shafer said the cocktail lounges haven't cut into regular concession sales — on the contrary, he said, "People like popcorn to go with their beer." Nor have there been any problems with clean up."

Critic Rips Script, Hails Actors In Movie For TV

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What Southerners call A Good Ole Boy has been best described by such writers as Paul Hemphill and Roy Blount. Tonight, a TV movie takes a stab at the type and winds up puncturing itself.

It's CBS' "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie." It co-stars Johnny Cash and Bo Hopkins as loyal, hard-drinking good ole Texans who've been pals for years. They have little money, but a lot of fun.

It all starts promisingly as Rose (Cash) and Eddie (Hopkins) sally forth Saturday night to what you'd call a fightin' and dancin' club for purposes of drinking and wenching. They pick up two ladies.

Cash gets the pretty one. He also gets to fight the house band, which gets mad when he gets mad at the band's handsome young singer and propels him at high speed through a door.

Seems the singer asked the lady friend of the middle-aged Cash: "You think your daddy'd mind if we have a dance?"

Hopkins joins the fight. Then he and Cash are propelled out the door, bowling over a justice of the peace (Noble Willingham) who'd come both to quell a riot and campaign for re-election.

"I thought you were going to be a lot of fun," Cash's lady grouses.

"I am a lot of fun," he insists.

"No, you ain't. You just an old fool," she says, and stomps off.

It's good, deadpan Southern humor, likewise an ensuing scene of remorse by Cash with his old flame, nicely played by Cash's wife, June. All of it indicates perhaps a nifty two hours is afoot.

Alas, William D. Witliff's script starts lurching from bad parody — of the justice of the peace — to improbable events to mid-life crises that drop on our two heroes with the subtlety of a ball peen hammer.

The Cash woe comes as a shady realtor, Alvin "I Sell Texas" Karns, cons him into swapping the beat-up ranch he loves for a distant Rio Grande citrus farm simply by showing him pictures of it.

Hopkins, distressed that his pal is leaving, berates him and is told: "I figure it's time I got serious about something in life, and I'm going to get serious about oranges and grapefruits."

She's been abandoned by some realtor — guess who? — who lured her to what she calls "this stupid Gene Autry country." She moves in with Hopkins, but warns: "I am a goer. I am not a stayer."

Cash's citrus empire proves weed-covered, water-short, run by a Mexican who only says "Si" and smiles. You might expect Cash to dash home and deliver "I Sell Texas" Karns a shot in the mouth.

But he doesn't. Improbable, yes, likewise Hopkins' bittersweet romance. All the woes are settled, though, backed by annoying flute and violin movements composed by Charles Bernstein.

The acting is good. It makes you wish Cash and Hopkins, who know good ole boy ways, had just chucked their uncertain script and ad-libbed the basic plot with their colleagues.

I suspect it would have made the show a whole lot more believeable.

BUBBLE BURTS

A large immigration to Louisiana occurred in the early 18th century after exaggerated stories of gold discoveries in the New World territory reached France. The stories were also responsible for the "Mississippi bubble" when the comptroller of finance issued paper currency without security to back commercial development of Lousisiana. The shares reached $4,000 before the scheme collapsed.

His first album on MCA Records is rivaled only by Emmy Lou Harris' "Luxury Liner" as the best country LP so far in '77 ... Ely could become the most important male singer to emerge in country music since the mid-60's crop of Waylon Jennings, Merle Haggard and Willie Nelson ... an arresting authenticity and lure that can be traced all the way back to such country music immortals as the late Jimmie Rodgers, Woody Guthrie, Lefty Frizzel and Hank Williams. Robert Hilburn, Los Angeles Times.
I've read that Joe Ely is a fledging superstar, leader of the best new country rock band in Texas, if not America and therefore the world. And it's been said too, that to see the Joe Ely Band in full cry is to hear the future of American Music — and some of its finest past. He's released one near faultless album and received reviews which bring back memories of the critical overkill which almost buried Springsteen in '75 ... Joe Ely is playing at the Wembley Country Festival next Easter. If he plays half as well as he did that night at the Cotton Club, he'll stop the show." David Sandison, Melody Maker Magazine, London, England.
Another local band, the Joe Ely Band, has a new album coming out on MCA. Watch for it. Bill Kerns, Lubbock Avalanche Journal.
Hot enough to stun the jade out of at least one critic's ears ... The record proves itself on the basis of the excellent songs written by Ely and two of his long time Lubbock compadres, Butch Hancock and Jimmie Dale Gilmore ... the freshest force to be reckoned with in Texas Music in too long a time. Album of the Month. Joe Nick Paleski, Country Music Magazine.
... a new artist with the artistic promise and commercial appeal of Joe Ely, proves once again that when the talent's there, there is always room for one more star. Hitting the Note, Atlanta.
There are spices of swing, blues, honkytonk, bluegrass, and pure rock and roll in the Ely band's sound ... It garnered praise in both serious rock and country circles and the whispers kept linking the same Ely with the word "star". Honky Tonk Masquerade, his second lp for MCA ... an album which brings country back home while taking it to the limits; a record which in my opinion, is destined to become a classic. Rob Patterson. Syndicated Columnist. 200 U.S. Newspapers.
... Ely's music is authentic. He's a very talented performer who deserves a wider audience. The Dallas Times Herald.
The all Lubbock Ely Band's next tour includes St. Louis, Chicao, Minniapolis, New York, England, Ireland, Holland, or Sweden. These are the last Texas Performances before the tour.

Capitol's Young Crowd Flocks To Sarsfield's

By JURATE KAZICKAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sarsfield's is one of the Carter crowd's favorite watering holes — or at least it used to be — because it's a place where Washington's young power elite can "really let loose."

"They don't have to worry about preserving an image that they have to maintain during office hours," said Rod Hayden, who was serving up drinks from behind an oak bar jammed with noisy patrons on a recent weekday night.

"They can come in here and let their hair down and act like regular guys," Hayden said. "It's good to be able to slide back into that ex-jock, ex-fraternity attitude now and then and have a good time."

Sarsfield's is the place were one regular, chief Carter aide Hamilton Jordan, allegedly spit his drink down the blouse of a young woman during a recent altercation.

Jordan has denied the account, published in The Washington Post, and the White House has released a 33-page refutation. On Tuesday, presidential press secretary Jody Powell denied a rumor that the FBI was investigating the incident at White House request.

Sarsfield's gained a reputation soon after Carter's election as a place where Georgians could get together and, as political consultant Terry O'Connell put it, "really get down and get crazy."

Just off Pennslyvania Avenue, about nine blocks from the White House and close to fashionable Georgetown, Sarsfield's is frequented by sophisticated-looking young men and women who mingle in a relaxed setting imitative of an English pub.

The owner, Carter advance man Richard Evans, catered a cut-rate party for members of the new administration in December 1976, and Carter aides like appointments secretary Tim Kraft, pollster Pat Caddell and special projects director Greg Schneiders kept returning.

Chip Carter, the president's son, used to drop by for some chug-a-lugging, and one night a feisty Jordan jokingly took over the job as doorman.

"We would go to Sarsfield's every night because you ... would see people you knew and have a good time and not be bothered," said Mark Weiner, who works in the scheduling office of the White House.

When the "oldies but goodies" begin to play, there are excited shrieks of recognition of a Beach Boys' hit, and the casual crowd begins to dance, first in the crowded aisles and then atop the bar.

"Dancing on the bar is in keeping with the free flow of the place," said bartender Hayden.

"We love to dance at all those places where it is inappropriate," said Schneiders.

In the last few months, though, the Carter crowd has been in Sarsfield's less and less.

"We've been in Washington longer and know about more places now," said Weiner.

But owner Evans figures it's because "once a place gets a reputation as an 'in' place, then the people who made it 'in' don't want to go there anymore."

"These people like to have fun," he said. "They're supposed to be on pedestals like some sort of gods but they're just human. Now they don't like to be watched by other people."

DIXIE

Several possible origins have been suggested for the name "Dixie," associated with the U.S. southern states. because of the French word for 10 "dix" — printed on $10 bills in early Louisiana, that state became known as "Dix's Land" or "Land of the dixies."

Mirrors Play Major Role In Solar Energy

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's really true that you can do almost anything with mirrors and the future of solar energy may depend largely on that fact, says Joseph Bezborodko.

Bezborodko is president of Mechanical Mirror Works, Inc., of New York, which has sales of about $20 million a year. It has a sister company in France also working on solar energy.

Bezborodko said mirror making still is an art with a strong element of magic in it. The secrets of how best to apply the silvered image on the back of the glass are handed down from father to son.

"The irony is that sometimes a cheap mirror is much better made than an expensive one," he added. In the United States, 80 percent of the business is in the hands of a dozen small companies whose combined sales run to perhaps $150 million at the manufacturing level.

"You don't have to be a magician, though, to make solar energy competitive with fossil fuels," Bezborodko said. "You can do it with mirrors."

By that he means that reflective systems for collecting the sun's rays by mirrors are vastly more efficient than the absorptive systems presently being used for the most part.

"Mirrors can be used to collect the sun's rays both to heat buildings and to generate electricity at efficiencies of 99 percent compared with 75 percent for absorptive systems and they will be far more compact and much cheaper," he told UPI.

He said water could be heated to 500 degrees in a single pipe in a trough of mirrors against a temperature of less than 150 degrees for an absorptive system. Absorptive systems collect the sun's rays through ordinary glass, then absorb them by means of a dark painted metallic surface.

"The secret of the mirrors is to arrange them to concentrate the sun's rays on a tiny area," he said. "For example, you can make a compact unit that would concentrate solar heat at a 1,000 to one ratio on a tiny photovoltaic cell and simultaneously produce heat and electricity for a home or even for a fairly large building."

He said several big companies, including McDonnell Douglas and Martin Marietta, are competing for a government contract to develop a 100-megawatt experimental plant of this type.

Bezborodko even believes the magic of mirrors in combination with photovoltaic cells someday will solve the problem of extracting hydrogen from water to produce a virtually unlimited supply of energy.

The idea of using the mirror to collect solar energy in a big way is not new. Many years ago, the Russians mounted huge mirrors on flat cars and moved them around a circular railway track to focus the heat on a steam boiler in the center of the circle. It worked but very badly.

But now, Bezborodko said, man has the technology in his grasp to achieve miracles in getting energy from the sun by means of mirrors.

One stumbling block for the solar energy scientists, he said, is that there is little wide knowledge of mirror technology. The companies guard their trade secrets jealously. "This has caused solar engineers to overspecify requirements when they order mirrors," he said, "and this fails to give the mirror a true test."

Ad Salesman Fired Amid Controversy

STAR CITY, Ark. (UPI) — A newspaper advertising salesman who wrote an editorial suggesting Anita Bryant "sit down and shut up" has been fired from the Lincoln Ledger.

Editor Thomas Roark Sr. said this week controversy about the editorial criticizing Miss Bryant's campaign against civil rights for homosexuals was "definitely not" the reason Ross W. Dennis was fired.

Roark said he fired Dennis because Dennis was not selling enough newspaper advertising.

Dennis, however, said he believed he was fired because his editorial put Roark in a "bad light. Because so many people said I was right and he was wrong."

After Dennis's editorial was published Jan. 5, Roark ran another editorial saying he disagreed with Dennis and asking for his readers' forgiveness in allowing Dennis' editorial to be printed.

Roark said Dennis was hired as an advertising salesman and was allowed to write occasionally for the Ledger.

"I had talked with him on several occasions even before the Bryant thing came up," Roark said. "He was not selling as much advertising as I thought he should."

After the Bryant editorial was printed, citizens complained about the article and talked about boycotting the paper.

But Dennis said he received 50 or 60 cards from people who agreed with his position and only one against it.

President Rejects Seafarer Antenna System

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has rejected an ambitious Navy plan to build a vast underground antenna system to communicate with missile-carrying Polaris and Trident submarines, an administration source said today.

As an alternative, the source said, the president favors a scaled-down antenna project that would require only five percent as much buried cable as the Navy had originally proposed.

The source, who asked not to be identified, reported that Project Seafarer, the blueprint scrapped by Carter, has been cut back so sharply that officials now refer to it officially as Project Elf.

Local opposition to the original proposal, which called for burying 2,400 miles of cable in a 4,000 square mile area, was strong in Wisconsin and Michigan. The Navy last December gave up on the original project and recommended construction in Upper Michigan of a relatively small buried antenna grid to cost $250 million to $300 million.

ITALIAN POET

The Italian lyric poet Carlo Alessandro Guidi was said to have died as an indirect result of his poetical version of the six homilies of Pope Clement XI. While en route to present a copy to the pope, he discovered a grave typographical error, after which he was seized by an apoplectic fit and died.

The president rejected Project Seafarer in a letter he wrote last Thursday to Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Carter instead gave tentative approval, the source said, to a much smaller system in Michigan and Wisconsin that would be linked electronically. At the same time, the informant said, Carter asked Brown to restudy alternate sites for the project.

In a final environmental impact statement last December, the Navy said the Michigan site is superior to any other location because of the conductivity of its underlying rock formations. It specifically rejected as unsuitable two other possible sites at White Sands, N.M., and Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada.

According to the source, the federal government already holds rights-of-way almost sufficient for the alternative Michigan plan. In addition, he said, there would be no future expansion of the grid should it be built.

In writing Brown, Carter was quoted as agreeing the Navy needs the capacity to make ultra low frequency radio transmissions to its submarines, the purpose of the projected system.

At present, the source said, administration officials are consulting about the alternate plan with Congress members and others from the states that could be directly affected. He said Carter will make a decision following these consultations and the completion of the ordered study of possible alternate sites.

ASTRAL MISUNDERSTANDING

Before scientists understood seasonal changes, astronomers believed that the sun, in its apparent "path across the heavens," paused over the tropic of Capricorn (on Dec. 21 or 22 by modern calenders) and again when it reached the Tropic of Cancer (about June 21). Ancient astronomers named each moment "solstice," from the Latin "sol," (sun) and "sistere," to stand still.

Raiders, Aggies Eye Trip To Houston

The Southwest Conference tournament opens Saturday, and for a change, tickets will be available for the game to be played here. Texas Tech, which finished fourth in the standings, will take on Texas A&M in a game which will be a psychologist's dream.

But, coaches Gerald Myers of Tech and Shelby Metcalf of the Aggies aren't concerned about psychology as much as victory as they prepare for the 3:10 p.m. tipoff.

Winner of the game gets a ticket to the SWC tournament at Houston, and the potential NCAA playoff berth which awaits the tourney champion.

The Raiders will be playing the Aggies for the second time this season with a regional TV audience as indirect witnesses. Earlier this season, Tech defeated the Aggies 71-58 here before the cameras. A 78-70 Tech win in College Station made it a two-game sweep of their series this season. And thus the psychological aspects.

Seldom is a team able to whip another three times in a season, and Metcalf will doubtless be using that to pump up his troops. And, the fact that Tech has been able to do that will be considered by Myers, on the theory that "if we can beat them twice..."

Tech brings in an 18-9 record. The Aggies, picked for second place in the league before any shots were fired, finished seventh with a 12-14 record. Thus, they could pull near or to the .500 mark with a win Saturday and in the upcoming tournament.

Tickets for the game here, priced at $4 for adults and $2 for Tech students, faculty and staff, will be on sale at the Tech athletic ticket office from 9 a.m. until noon Saturday. Then, at 1 p.m., the ticket booths will open at Lubbock Coliseum. The athletic ticket office will be open until 5 p.m. today.

Four games will be played Saturday, in Waco, Fayetteville, Houston and here, with the winners moving on to the glamour portion of the tournament — the part that will take place in the Summit Arena just west of downtown Houston.

"One of our big goals was to get to the Summit this year," said Baylor coach Jim Haller, whose Bears (14-12) will host SMU (9-17) at 3 p.m. "Our kids remember what a first class event that was last year and they want to go back."

Southwest Conference co-champion and fourth-ranked Arkansas (26-2) will be at home against TCU (4-21) at 7:30 p.m. and the Houston Cougars (21-7) will host Rice (4-21) at 8.

In the first two years of the tournament, only one visiting team has won a first-round game — that coming last year when Baylor upset Texas in Austin.

Arkansas will be heavily favored to work its way through the bracket (the Arkansas-TCU winner plays the Baylor-SMU winner in the opening game at the Summit next Thursday night) and meet the Houston Cougars in the semifinals Friday evening. Houston has beaten Tech twice this season.

The winner of that one will face the 12th-rated Longhorns (22-4), who won the bye to the finals because they had a better record against third-place Houston than did Arkansas. The Longhorns and Razorbacks finished tied for the conference championship with 14-2 records.

Although Tech finished fourth and A&M seventh, the Red Raiders and Aggies could be the closest contest of all because of the injury suffered by Tech's Kent Williams.

Williams, the Raiders' zone-breaking outside threat, was struck on the jaw by the elbow of A&M's Willie Foreman when those two teams played in College Station Feb. 11. Gerald Myers felt it was not "incidental contact" and has filed a formal protest with the SWC offiice in the case.

Williams returned to action in Tech's final regular season game against Arkansas last Saturday, a catcher's mask protecting his jaw. But he scored only 4 points and Arkansas — like most teams — used a sagging zone defense to limit the effectivness of Tech center Mike Russell.

"I think I will be ready for the Aggies," said Williams. "There is a revenge motive, but A&M brings out the best in us anyway. It always feels good to beat the Aggies."

Bits And Pieces

IN A COUPLE of weeks, SMU will go after its 22nd consecutive Southwest Conference Swimming and Diving championship. The odds are that the Mustangs will be successful in their bid . . . SWC basketball players have scored 50 or more points in a single game four times. Three of those performances have been against Texas—by SMU's Gene Phillips (51) in 1971, Dub Malaise of Texas Tech (50) in 1966 and Jim Krebs of SMU (50) in 1956. The most points ever scored by an SWC player in one game are 53 by Texas A&M's Bennie Lenox in 1964 versus Wyoming . . .

Fort Worth Dunbar, which finished second in the state Class AAAA basketball tournament last season, will face Amarillo High in the first round of the regionals today in Abilene. Dunbar, however, barely made it out of District 7-AAAA. In the league title game, Dunbar and Fort Worth Paschal were tied 39-39 at the end of regulation play and then played two scoreless overtime periods before Dunbar got a single free shot in the waning moments of the third overtime to win 40-39 . . .

Lubbock Dunbar star Billy Don Hardaway is featured in the cover photo of this month's issue of Texas Coach magazine . . . This year's state basketball tournaments will be held under one roof—UT's Super Drum—and in the same week. For years, the semifinals and finals of all classes of the boys tourney were held at Gregory Gym the same weekend, but the old gym's lack of size (7800 capacity) forced officials to split the affair into two tournaments. The girls and boys tournaments in the past have been held on different weekends . . .

LARRY STAVERMAN, THE interim head coach of the NBA's Kansas City Kings, was a witness to one of the more bizarre happenings in the old ABA. He was Indiana's head coach in 1967, the league's first year of operation, and the team appeared to have lost a game at Dallas when the Chaparrals' John Beasley scored a basket with four seconds left. However, the Pacers' Gerry Harkness took the inbound pass, heaved the ball as if he were throwing a baseball, and the ball caught nothing but net at the other end of the court 93 feet away. It was a three-point basket that meant a one-point Indiana victory . . .

Texas Tech football recruit Mike Jackson, a wide receiver from Houston Lee, was born in Lubbock . . . When Arkansas was ranked No. 1 in the nation for a week by The Associated Press, it was the first time an SWC basketball team had reached the top spot . . .

TECH IS THE only SWC team with an advantage in its series with Arkansas. The Red Raiders are 29-15 versus the Razorbacks and 28-13 in conference games. However, Hog coach Eddie Sutton is 5-3 against Tech, and his teams have won four straight contests over the Raiders . . .

Recruiting never ends. The day after national signing date, Tech recruiting coordinator Taylor McNeel was at work on next year's task. Already being printed were cards for high school coaches to fill out and questionaires for schoolboy prospects to answer. Tech sends cards to coaches, asking them to give the names of any of their players that they think might be college prospects. The Raiders contact 1500-1800 coaches in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and Oklahoma this way. McNeel figures that there are at least two to six players listed on each card, which greatly multiplies the number of questionaires that must be sent to players . . .

Remember Lanny Van Eman, the former Arkansas basketball coach? He's now an assistant coach at Western Kentucky, and he is reportedly among the final group of candidates for the head job at Evansville, which came open when coach Bobby Watson and his entire team died in a plane crash . . .

THE UNIVERSITY OF Tennessee is considering expanding the size of its football stadium to 106,000 seats by 1981, which would make it the largest college football stadium in the nation. Currently, Neyland Stadium has an official capacity of 80,250 seats and is the fourth-largest in the country. Bigger are Michigan's (101,001), Stanford's (86,532) and Ohio State's (81,000). Proof of the support (and pressure) Tennessee fans give the program is that, despite a 4-7 record in 1977, each of the team's seven home games was attended by capacity-plus crowds and 52,000 fans bought season tickets. Ninety seven per cent of those have already renewed for 1978 . . .

Against Tech last Saturday, Texas' Tyrone Branyan scored 16 points (although hitting just four of 11 shots from the field) and grabbed 13 rebounds. UT Coach Abe Lemons remarked, "I don't know what happened to him. Maybe we ought to send him up here for a couple of days before every game and let him get some fresh air."

DHS Faces Loboes In Regional Bout

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

SNYDER—It may be a case of the blind leading the blind—or rather playing the blind—when Dunbar meets the Monahans Loboes in the opening round of the regional basketball tournament here tonight.

Or so sayeth the two cage bosses, Joe McWilliams of Dunbar and L.J. Loafman of Monahans.

"We don't know anything about them, really," McWilliams said. "We scouted them last week (at a playoff game with Odessa Ector) but that's it."

Loafman says neither he nor any of his assistants has gotten a sneak shot at the District 3-AAA winning Dunbar.

"Everybody else got a chance to look at us the other night," Loafman said. "But we didn't get that luxury. We know that Dunbar is good, but that's it. Not much, is it?"

The Panthers tangle with the Loboes tonight following the Perryton-Mineral Wells in Snyder's Scurry Coliseum. The Rangers and Rams are set for a 7 p.m. tipoff, the Panthers to follow, about 8:45 p.m.

Tonight's winners will meet Saturday at 7 p.m. for the right to advance to the state basketball tournament in Austin next weekend.

The Loboes enter the two-day event with a respectable 25-4 season mark, while Dunbar boasts a 27-4 record. The Panthers are ranked No. 4 in the state by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches.

Loafman, head coach of Monahans for the past three seasons, perhaps deserves coach-of-the-year honors. Last year the Loboes posted a dismal 9-19 season record and an equally unimpressive 1-9 loop mark.

However, this year has been the turnover season.

Clifton Smith, a 20-point performer, and Lavall Moore, a part-time starter last year, are Monahans' big men at 6-3 who have helped turn things around. Smith was an all-district selectee last year.

But perhaps the biggest man on the court will be 5-6 Bobby Almanza, a regular fireball with the ball. Against Ector, Almanza, who enjoys driving through the "trees' on his way to a layup, collected 20 points.

Dunbar, which has won the 3-AAA title for the past three seasons (last year the Panthers lost in regional to Borger), will have a distinct advantage in the all-important height category.

Leading that entourage is 6-6 forward Billy Don Hardaway, an all-everything selection for the past three years, Hardaway, deadly from both under the basket as well as outside, has averaged 23 points per game as well as 12 rebounds.

Along with Hardaway, McWillians will send 5-10 Wayne Williams, who is expected to be matched against Almanza; 6-4 Greg Whitfield, the teams's top jumper and rebounder; 6-2 Dwight Brown, a strong threat from outside; and 6-1 Mike Baldwin, a trusty ballhandler.

The regional tournament format was approved by the four district champions at a meeting following the Monahans-Ector playoff game. In the past, the four schools have played bidistrict games with the winner advancing to regionals.

If records are any indication of the caliber of teams, then Mineral Wells should blow Perryton out of the tub.

Rams coach Warren Pruitt will start 6-6 David Reynold (19.5), 6-6 Kory Nowak (12.), 6-4 Matt Russell (17.0), 6-1 Darrell Milton (12), 5-8 Melvin Ray (15.5) and 5-11 DeArtis Nikerson (9.0). All but Milton started last year.

For Perryton, coach Allan Simpson will go with 6-6 David Reynolds (19.5), 6-6 Jeff Connor (11.5), 6-4 Dave Rima (12.0), 6-0 Tracy Gipson (9.1) and 6-0 Craig Johnson (6.0).

Mineral Wells' only two setbacks came against Abilene High and Fort Worth Paschal, a pair of Class AAAA schools.

Lorenzo Seeks A Upset

Gene Hudson recalls last year when Seagraves came to the Class A regional tournament, upset the favorite the first round and earned the trip to Austin.

Hudson feels that his Lorenzo Hornets have a chance to repeat that Seagraves upset this year as they take on favorite Crowell at 4:30 p. m. today in the opening game of the Class A regionals at Lubbock Coliseum.

The other game pits Memphis (24-5) against Van Horn (21-7) at 6 p.m.

"We just weren't ready to play aginst Farwell," the first-year Hornet boss said of the 57-55 bidistrict win, "and that's my fault.

"I thought we had them pumped up enough to realize that Farwell was a pretty good club. But we saw them play Vega in the finals of their district tournament and really weren't impressed with them.

"But let me tell you they were impressive last Tuesday. But I think if we can get up and play like we're capable, we can give Crowell a good game and probably win.

"I understand they like to play a man-to-man and if that's true, we'll try to go to Edmond (Turner, who sparked the fourth-quarter rally Tuesday) inside. I understand they like to jump a lot, so if we can get Edmond to fake before he puts the hall up, maybe we can get their big boys in foul touble early.

"They go 6-5, 6-2 on their posts, with 6-1 and 6-0 at wings and their guard is 5-11. We'll match up pretty well. The only difference is that they're averaging about 70 shots a game compared to our 50. And they're scoring about 80 points a game and we're only getting 62.

"That just means we're going to have to be more selective on our shots and if we do go inside we need to draw the foul and look for the 3-point play a lot more."

Lorenzo, led by Turner, Charles Burse and Darrell Lawsan, is 21-6 on the year and Crowell stands 27-4 and is ranked No. 7 in the state.

"Yeah, we're well aware of that state ranking," Hudson said, "but you never know when history might repeat itself."

Crowell is led by 6-5 Dwayne Dishman (15.8), 6-2 Marvin Coleman (17.0) and 6-0 Craig Gardner (14.4).

Memphis will have the tallest player in the meet, 6-8 Ricky Guy, who is averaging 17.3 points a game. He is aided by 6-3 Kirk Fields (18.1).

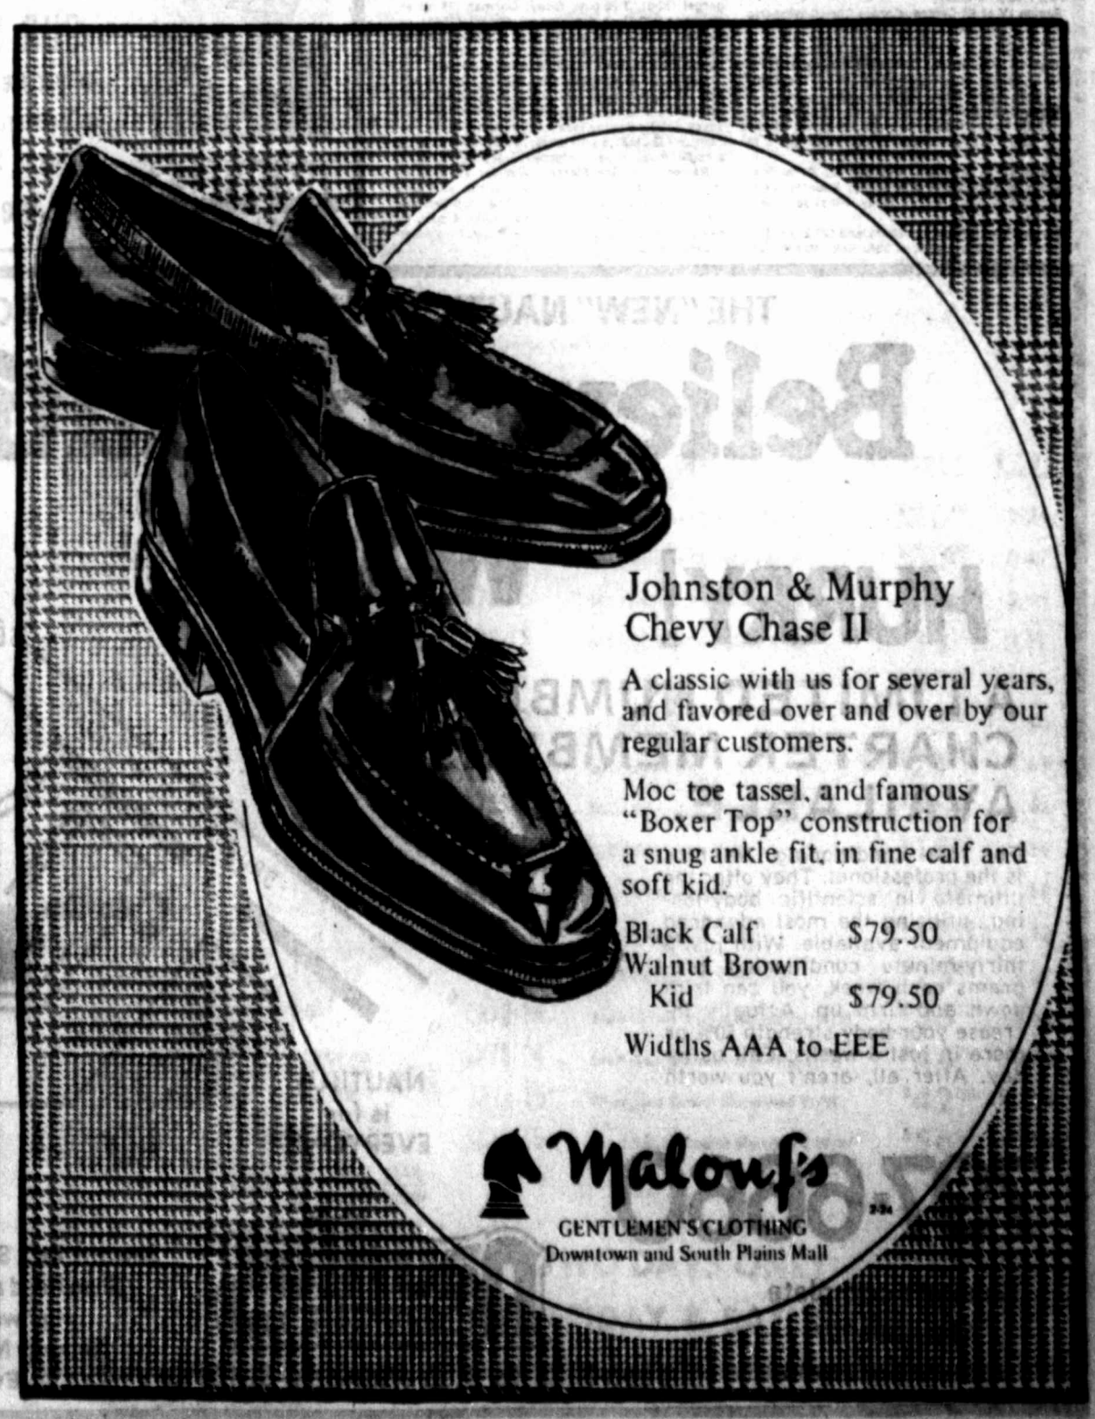

Class A's championship game will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Jones Inverrary Leader With 67

Jones shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday in the opening round of the $250,000 Gleason Classic to take a 2-stroke lead over a group of eight that included Fuzzy Zoeller, Bob Shearer, Danny Edwards, Andy Bean, Kermit Zarley, Hale Irwin, Gibby Gilbert and Steve Melnyk.

Nicklaus, who won the $50,000 first prize here last year, heads a group of 11 that were 3 strokes behind at 71. The others were Barry Jaeckel, Lynn Lott, Dave Eichelberger, Don January, Pat McGowan, Bob Gilder, Tom Jenkins, Gary Wintz and Tim Simpson.

"It's been cold and I haven't had much touch," said Jones, whose highest finish in five tournaments this year was a tie for sixth in the San Diego Open. "But I have been playing petty well."

"The last few years, I haven't gotten out of Kansas soon enough," he said, "When my children were real young, they traveled with us and I used to play real well in California. Now, Christmas time is tough for me to leave. The tournaments start the 4th or 5th of January and I've been a month and a half without playing at all.

"I just don't have much touch around the green," he continued. "I'm scoring well, like making a 72 but it should have been a 68. Or you shoot a 75 and it should have been a 72."

Nicklaus, who also won here in 1976 when Inverrary hosted the Tournament Players Championship, said he believes he now has become "tournament ready" after playing two tourneys in California — the Bing Crosby and the Los Angeles Open.

Nicklaus shot a 36-34—70 round and called it awful. "I never seemed to get the ball very close to the hole," he said. "I seemed to struggle most of the way. I played too many bad shots. I was fortunate to hole a couple of long putts to stay in the ballgame, you might say."

Nicklaus said, "The way I hit it, I think I am quite fortunate to be out in 70."

Silas Of Old Sparks Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Spurs' guard James Silas got his legs back Thursday night and for a moment it was as if the American Basketball Association had never died.

Silas, considered one of the ABA's best guards, shook off the persistent knee problems that have plagued him for two years and scored 15 points as San Antonio took a 118-105 National Basketball Association victory over Atlanta.

The 29-year-old Silas hit 11 of his points in the second period and played 17 minutes, his longest stint of the season. He had played a mere 78 minutes in 15 appearances this season, averaging only two points per game.

"Silas was the best guard in the ABA," said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown. "With him back, the Spurs have as good a material as anyone in this league."

"Silas was able to move well tonight," said Moe. "I can't get too optimistic until I see what he does over a longer period of time."

When asked his reaction to Brown's assessment of his ABA career, Silas just smiled and said, "I don't know if I was the best, but I think I was up there among the best.

"Before, I couldn't beat anyone. I had no legs," he added. "But I have confidence now and mentally I've got it in my head that I'm well."

Chaps Open Play With Twin Sweep

WACO (Special)—Lubbock Christian College, stymied in opening the season by foul weather, burst out with a doubleheader sweep Thursday to open a three-day invasion of Central Texas.

Following the 5-4 and 7-4 wins over Paul Quinn College Thursday, the Chaparrals will take on the University of Texas today and Saturday in doubleheaders.

Both days, the first games will start at 1 p.m. LCC coach Larry Hays plans to pitch a pair of ex-Coronado athletes, John Ross and Gary Swann, in today's games with Texas.

Darius Copley started a 2-run first inning with a walk, but went out on Steve Brigante's fielder's choice. But, Tommy Inman walked, and Tim Leslie singled home Brigante. Mark Lisle's fielder's choice allowed Inman to score.

A walk to freshman Charles Casiano and back-to-back singles by Copley and Inman brought in a run in the fourth. In the fifth, Lisle walked and came in on a double by Mark Morgan. Lisle and Clark Langdon doubled in a run in the seventh.

A 4-run outburst in the fifth inning of the second game boosted the Chaps into a lead they refused to lose. And again, the rally started with walks to Copley and Inman. Leslie's single brought in Copley, before Lisle and Brigante walked to force in Inman.

Westerners Bop Howard, Snare Another Title

A-J Services

Western Texas College roared away from Howard College in the second half and clinched the Western Junior College Conference cage title with a 115-84 victory Thursday night.

The victory lifted WTC to 13-5 in the league and 24-7 overall. Meanwhile, New Mexico Military and Odessa College tied for second in the league with 12-6 records. The loss dropped Howard to fifth with a 9-9 mark and 15-13 season slate.

WTC and Howard were tied at 47 at halftime but the winners of coach Joe Richardson busted loose for six straight points early in the second half. Then with 13 minutes left, Western reeled off eight unanswered points to pad the lead.

Adam Beadle of WTC paced all scorers with 25 while teammates Dwight Williams, Jon Morehead and Julio Gallardo followed with 17, 16 and 14 points respectively. Russell Sublet led Howard with 23 followed by Joe Cooper's 19 and Robert Randolph's 18 points.

NMMI 94, SPC 91

New Mexico Military Institute took a 94-91 win over South Plains College in Levelland behind Jerome Mobley's 30 points.

Tony Phillips added 18 points for the winners, while Lewis Lloyd had 15. Ricky Phillips topped SPC with 22 points, while Rusty Frontz had 17 and Tyrone Dixon 14.

NMMI is 23-7 for the season, and SPC closed its season with a 14-16 mark.

Bruins Cop 12th Straight Crown

By The Associated Press

In the Pacific-8 Conference, nobody does it better than the UCLA Bruins.

Since the early 1960s, the Bruins have been the evergreens of that Far West league and Thursday night, another Pac-8 basketball race came to the end of the trail with the inevitable conclusion.

A 96-58 rout of flu-stricken Oregon State provided the mighty Bruins with their 12th straight conference title and their 15th in the last 16 years. The only time they have missed was in the 1965-66 season.

"I'm very, very elated to win the Pac-8 title," said UCLA's Gary Cunningham, a protege of the legendary John Wooden and a winner in his first season as head coach. "We played an excellent game and had a lot of respect for OSU. I'm sure the flu hurt them."

David Greenwood's 23 points and a blinding fast break were obvious pluses for the Bruins, but Cunningham underscored defense as the key for his team.

"I felt our defense was outstanding, the major reason for our winning," said Cunningham. "Our fast break was keyed by our defense and built up the lead for us."

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller said of his Beavers: "I don't think we played this badly since we left the Carolinas the first week of the season. We gave them the gift of the long pass. We certainly weren't up physically."

Miller used 10 players and substituted 23 times in the first half, attempting to check the Bruins and offset the effects of a flu epidemic that hit most of his team recently.

Three upsets marked Thursday night's play as Utah edged fifth-ranked New Mexico 95-92; North Carolina State defeated eighth-ranked North Carolina 72-67 and Ohio State whipped No. 19 Minnesota 94-87 in overtime.

Elsewhere, No. 10 Michigan State trimmed Northwestern 66-56 and No. 20 Louisville battered Ball State 104-84.

Jeff Judkins and Buster Matheney combined for 53 points as Utah handed New Mexico its first Western Athletic Conference loss this season and stopped a 14-game winning streak for the Lobos. New Mexico still leads the WAC with a 10-1 record, while second-place Utah improved its mark to 10-2.

While Judkins' 28 points and Matheney's 25 were the tall figures for Utah, teammate Michael Gray clinched the game with a free throw with seven seconds remaining. New Mexico's Marvin Johnson led all scorers with 29 points.

Clyde Austin scored 14 points, including a driving layup with 20 seconds, to boost North Carolina State past North Carolina. Austin's basket gave the Wolfpack a 68-67 lead and its eventual winning points.

The injury-riddled Tar Heels, playing without regulars Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren and Rich Yonakor, dropped into a tie with Duke for first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tar Heels and Blue Devils, both with 8-3 conference records, will meet in Chapel Hill Saturday to decide the regular-season league title.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said he held Ford out of Thursday night's game in hopes that he would start Saturday. North Carolina's backcourt star injured his wrist in last week's Virginia game.

"We made a good run tonight," said Smith. "I thought we held our poise, except for two minutes in the first half when N.C. State scored 12 straight points. Other than that, we played good basketball."

Kevin Ransey scored seven straight points in the first two minutes of overtime to spark Ohio State over Minnesota. Ransey, a 6-1 sophomore guard, finished with 26 points to help the Buckeyes avenge their worst loss of the season, a 25-point beating at Minnesota.

Elsewhere, Dave Baxter's 33 points led Michigan to a 107-96 decision over Illinois; Ray Tolbert's layup with 29 seconds remaining boosted Indiana over Wisconsin 58-54; Purdue beat Iowa 82-69 as Eugene Parker had 19 points; Southern Illinois defeated Bradley 93-82 with the help of a 75 percent shooting average in the first half and Lynbert "Cheese" Johnson collected 26 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead Wichita State past Drake 68-59.

NCAA Enforcement Program Under Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty years ago, the National Collegiate Athletic Association adopted a "sanity code" in an effort to regulate the post-World War II sports explosion. Now, the NCAA enforcement program has come under Congressional attack.

The NCAA membership, at its 1948 convention, created a compliance committee which was a forerunner to its present Committee on Infractions. The action stemmed from concern over professional gambling on college games, new and different emphasis on financial aids, expanded air transportation which encouraged intersectional scheduling and transcontinental recruiting and the rapid increase in post-season football games.

"Athletic competition had become national in scope rather than local," Arthur Reynolds, dean of the graduate school at the Unversity of North Colorado, told last month's NCAA convention in Atlanta. "Traditional agreements and loosely written regulations which had controlled local rivalries and conference competition in the past were no longer sufficient."

Last In A Series

Reynolds, chairman of the five-member NCAA enforcement committee, said the program expanded rapidly but "has not been devoid of agonizing birth pains nor halting transitional stages."

Among the problems, which Reynolds alluded to later, were the many lawsuits as a result of the enforcement program and the current probe by the House investigations subcommittee which will begin public hearings Monday.

After the 1954 convention, the policy-making NCAA Council appointed the first Committee on Infractions and charged it "to investigate alleged violations of NCAA rules, determine if violations had occurred, and propose penalties to be imposed on the involved institution."

At the same time, the association employed an assistant to the executive director whose duties were to include work in the field of enforcement, serving as an arm of the committee to conduct investigations.

Prior to 1973, the NCAA Council automatically received the committee's findings of violations and permitted an appearance by the institution which allegedly had violated NCAA rules. The council then made final the findings of violations, if any, and imposed an appropriate penalty.

Several amendments were adopted at the 1973 convention to change the enforcement procedures because the membership believed that the initial role of the committee on infractions in investigating, prosecuting and fact-finding was not fair.

The new procedures provided that the staff serve as the investigative arm and the administrative prosecutor of infractions cases. They also said the committee would provide general supervision over policies and procedures and shall, following an approriate appearance by the involved institution, be the initial fact-finder and imposer of penalties. The committee's finding and penalty can be appealed to the Council.

"Beginning at the 1973 annual convention," Reynolds said, "the membership demonstrated its desire to fully enforce NCAA rules and regulations by authorizing a major expansion in the investigative staff and by encouraging the imposition of penalties on the individual coaches, student-athletes and representatives of athletic interests who have violated NCAA rules and regulations.

"When the NCAA expanded its investigative staff and began to penalize guilty coaches, student-athletic and athletic representatives, it was inevitable that some of those individuals would employ attorneys and inaugurate a legal confrontation against the NCAA enforcement machinery," he said.

Nevertheless, Reynolds said: "In spite of verbal and legal attacks, the enforcement program over the past 30 years has been and is today dynamic and changing to protect the needs and interests of the association's membership. New rules are adopted, violations of old and new rules occur, new and different issues arise, enlarged meaning of procedural rights are promulgated, more and complex infractions cases are processed, and, therefore, the committee on infractions modifies its day-to-day operating procedure to meet the changing conditions."

A review of the past 30 years, he said, "fails to disclose a single instance in which the membership favored weakening the enforcement program; rather the membership has voted continuously to strengthen every phase of it, including ample financial support and adequate staff to assure that law and order within college athletics may prevail."

Golden Glover Dies In Ring At Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 16-year-old boxer in Memphis's Golden Gloves championships collapsed in the ring Thursday night and died while doctors worked to revive him.

Michael Flynn, an 11th grader at Hamilton High School, was in the final round of his three-round bout when his arms dropped to his sides and he fell over backwards, fight officials said.

"He was winning the fight," Rod Cardone, timekeeper of the fights at the Mid-South Fairgrounds, said.

"If the kid had any medical problem, he kept it to himself. If you've got the chance to fight for the Golden Gloves and it's what you've been training for, most of these kids wouldn't say a thing about being sick. He was a gutsy kid."

Fight officials at first believed Flynn, a 139-pound light welterweight fighting for the Memphis Fire Fighters, had been knocked down and the referee began to count him out, Cordone said.

But before the count reached three, officials noticed that Flynn was apparently having a seizure and ringside doctors were summoned. Two doctors and four medical technicians who were in the audience also rushed into the ring.

Flynn was taken to Methodist Hospital where he was pronounced dead. The cause of death was reported by doctors as cardiac arrest brought on by a type of seizure.

The bout was the 11th of 18 scheduled fights sponsored by the Memphis Amateur Boxing Association.

Arabian Death Bout Scheduled Tonight

The Sheik and Super Destroyer will battle in an Arabian Death Match at the weekly wrestling matches, which begin at 8 p.m. today at Fair Park Coliseum.

This will be a match to the finish with no stopping for any reason.

Also on the card will be the world junior heavyweight championship bout between champion Nelson Royal and challenger Johnny Starr.

Roger Kirby and J.J. Dillon will take on Ted DiBiase and Erwin Sith in a tag-team match, while Dennis Stamp will fight Don Kernodle and The Beast will battle Ricky Romero in preliminary bouts.

Comanche Runs Set

Preliminary events began this morning at 11 a.m. Finals start Saturday at 1 p.m. Tracksters will compete a three divisions, for Class AAAA, AAA, and AA-A-B.

The meet is one of the oldest in the state and draws teams from Abilene to Del Rio to El Paso.

Private Ali Very Different From Public One

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Special Correspondent

Muhammad Ali is one man on the public stage, another in the ring and still another when he closes the door and enters his own privacy, insists one of the deposed champion's closest aides.

"It's the private Ali I know best," says Gene Kilroy, who has been an advisor in the Ali camp since 1970. "It's the Ali few really know — shy, humble, sincere, a person who loves all people, black or white, rich or poor, especially the little people, the 'down-and-out' and the 'have-nots.'

"He has so much dignity. A man like this is not made; he is born." Kilroy said he has been disturbed by recurring rumors after Ali's recent loss to Leon Spinks that Ali was financially broke, had lost all his skills and never would dare fight again.

"He will fight again," Kilroy predicted. "He will fight Spinks, become the first heavyweight to win the title three times and then will retire. It is his destiny to retire as champion."

At the suggestion that Ali had let $25 to $40 million slip through his fingers and didn't know where his next nickel was coming from Kilroy scoffed:

"Broke? How ridiculous! How could he be broke? He's the only man I know who can pick up $5 million just like that by signing a piece of paper. He has made more millionaires than anybody who ever lived — promoters, fighters, managers. Every time he fights he stirs the country's economy."

Kilroy, a bushy-haired 35-year-old bachelor out of Mahanoy, Pa., once the marketing "boy genius" of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, met Ali in New York's Stage Deli when Ali was appearing on Broadway in "Good Time Buck White." Ali asked Gene to join him. Since then he has been sort of the ex-champion's choreographer — traveling the world with him, setting up public appearances and counseling on some ventures.

Kilroy is white. "People say Ali dislikes the white man," Kilroy says. "What about me?"

Kilroy quoted Shakespeare to say that, to Muhammad, "all the world is a stage and all the men and women merely players."

"When he attacks an opponent before a big fight, when he gets loud and bombastic, he is selling tickets," Kilroy said. "There's never been a better promoter.

"But notice how different he is after the fight. He is always humble. He always praises the other guy, win or lose. He shows he can lose with grace. There is no hate or arrogance in the real Ali."

Kilroy recalled that, after his demoralizing loss to Spinks, Ali's dressing room was in near-chaos with members of the entourage — including Ali's brother, Rahman — yelling the decision was a gyp.

"Shut up!" snapped Ali. "He whipped me clean."

"I've seen the Champ in so many situations where his true character comes to the front," Kilroy continued. "The times going into the ring he will stop to pick up a small child, the way he relates to the common people on the streets — here and in countries like Zaire and The Philippines.

"I remember once in New York he read in The New York Times that a Jewish old peoples' home was going under because it was bankrupt. Ali got in a cab, went over and wrote out a $100,000 check. The old people were so happy. There were tears in Ali's eyes when we drove back.

"We visited a senior citizens' home in Schuylkill Haven, Pa. Someone asked an old man if he knew who Ali was. 'Sure,' said the old man, 'Joe Louis.' People around Ali snickered. Ali rebuked them and went over and talked to the man as if he were Joe Louis.

"He is so sensitive about other people's feelings, even the fighters he has beaten. Another time, visiting a Shriners' Crippled Children's Home in Philadelphia, he picked up a little white kid with no chin and legs in braces. 'You can't quit,' he told the kid, and before he left he had the boy feeling like he could lick the world.

"That's the Ali I know. He told me once, 'Kindness to others is the rent we pay for our room here on earth.'"

Dimmitt, Ponies Tackle AA Cage Challenges

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

No, it's not North Carolina and Hobbs making appearances in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, it's just that Dimmitt boss Ken Cleveland and Denver City mentor Ken Smith made references to those two schools concerning their opponents in today's opening round of the Class AA regional tournament.

Dimmitt, ranked No. 2 in the state and boasting a 29-4 record, takes on Socorro at 7:30 p.m. and Denver City will take a 21-8 mark against Spearman (19-6) in the day's finale at 9 p.m. The tournament is being held in conjunction with the Class A playoffs scheduled for earlier starts today in the Coliseum.

Socorro operates out of the four-corners offense, and that has Cleveland concerned; Smith is worried because "from what I hear about Spearman they pick you up when you come out of the dressing room and never take the pressure off. And that sounds just like our neighbors to the west (Hobbs)."

Smith noted that Spearman scored 95 points while allowing Henrietta only 66 in bidistrict and quipped, "I'm not sure we could score that many if they cleared the floor and just left us out there by ourselves."

Dimmitt comes into this meet as the favorite, but that doesn't stop Cleveland from worrying. "Everyone out in El Paso has gone to the four corners, I understand. Since we don't play a man-to-man defense, we'll just have to push our zone out and make them do something to get the action going.

"I understand their point guard is a fine ball handler and dribbler. When Crane went after him, he'd drive the lane and either shoot or feed off to one of their two good corner shooters, and that's how they scored a lot.

"Crane had five men to foul out, so they know how to draw the fouls. We certainly don't need to get our big boys in foul trouble."

Smith said all five Mustangs need to have a good game against Spearman. "What's been hurting us is that we'll have one or two having good games, but the others with just be so-so. Our two seniors (Ricky Rodriquez and Bobby Burkhalter) are the keys. If they go, we usually go.

"But I've heard that Spearman is a hot-shooting team and when they're hitting, it's almost impossible to stop them, and they were hot the other night. We played probably our best game of the year against Colorado City (a 69-58 win). We really don't have that good a team, but we have kids who try hard and things seem to work out for us.

"We've had better support from the fans than in any of my previous 13 years here, so we're excited about this."

The AA finals will be at noon Saturday.

Finley Decision Due By Mid-Year

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley is hoping his string of disputes with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will give him another shot at winning a $3.5 million lawsuit against the baseball czar.

Neil Papiano, attorney for the Oakland A's owner, used the well-publicized conflicts between the two men Thursday as a cornerstone of his bid to win a new trial on the suit.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr March 17 dismissed the suit challenging Kuhn's authority to block Finley's sale of three star players. Oral arguments on Finley's appeal were heard Thursday by a three-judge panel of the U.S. Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

Papiano argued that McGarr should have allowed testimony about friction between Finley and Kuhn.

He told the judges that McGarr was wrong in ruling that "any sort of feud going on is not relevant to the issues of this case.

"It is well known through newspapers and otherwise that Mr. Kuhn and Mr. Finley had been enemies for some time," said Papiano. But, "again and again, in each instance, the trial court would not allow the plaintiff to introduce evidence of malice or bad faith."

Finley did testify Dec. 22, 1976, that he clashed with Kuhn in the spring of 1971 when Kuhn barred him from sending Reggie Jackson to the minors for 10 weeks and again in 1972 when Kuhn intervened in Finley's efforts to sign pitcher Vida Blue to a new contract.

"The plaintiff was not limited in any way on the question of malice," Peter K. Bleakley, attorney for Kuhn, argued Thursday. "The judge simply reached a point in the trial where he felt plaintiff failed to make a case for the question of malice."

Since Kuhn overturned the sales of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each on June 15, 1976, he has held hearings on two more Finley deals.

He allowed the sale of Paul Lindblad to Texas and blocked a recent deal which would have sent Blue to Cincinnati for minor leaguer Dave Revering and $1.75 million.

"The only hearings that have ever been held on assignments are on Mr. Finley's assignments," Papiano maintained.

He said he was satisfied that the appellate judges gave him a fair hearing, but Finley declined to guess at their decision, saying "All I can say is I'm hopeful."

Papiano estimated a decision would be announced in three or four months. The judges were unavailable for comment.

Papiano also argued that Finley did not get a fair hearing from Kuhn two days after the abortive deals and one day before he voided them.

"I think we did not have an unbiased, impartial decision," said Papiano. He said Kuhn frowned on the deals as soon as he heard about them and acted as judge and prosecutor at the hearing in which he asked just one question, if Blue had signed a contract. Shortly before the sales Blue signed a contract through 1979.

McGarr decided that the main issue was whether Kuhn had the right to block the sales. He said Kuhn had that right under a major league rule which allows him to act in "the best interests" of baseball.

Papiano said Finley could not have expected Kuhn's action because no commissioner had ever overturned deals in which rules violations were not involved.

Because the deals were made hours before the trading deadline, Kuhn's action after that deadline left Finley no choice but to keep the three players, Papiano said. Fingers and Rudi played out their options and signed with other teams after the season. Finley received no compensation for them.

But Bleakley said the selling of three players in mid-season for substantial sums of money to pennant contenders was unique and that the "best interests" clause was intended for the commissioner to handle such unforeseen circumstances.

Tech Baseball Squad Faces St. Mary's

SAN ANTONIO (Special)—Texas Tech, 1-3 for the season after opening its season with back-to-back doubleheaders against Hardin-Simmons earlier this week, will battle St. Mary's (1-3) in a baseball twin bill today and play a doubleheader with Trinity (2-4) Saturday. Action both days will begin at 1 p.m.

The Red Raiders divided a twin bill with H-SU Monday and then lost both ends of Tuesday's doubleheader.

Tech will play its first 13 games of this season on the road. Next Wednesday, it will play two games with Texas Lutheran in Seguin and then go to Houston for a conference-opening twin bill with Rice March 3-4.

Tech Fems Enter Zone Cage Tourney

ABILENE (Special)—The Texas Tech women's basketball team will join seven other clubs today, as the state AIAW zone tournament begins at Hunt Gymnasium on the McMurry College campus.

Action started at 9 a.m. today and the Red Raiders played Angelo State at 3 p.m. in their first-round game.

Tech, 29-6 for the season, is seeded second in the tournament behind Wayland Baptist, which has defeated the Raiders twice this season.

The top three teams in this tournament will advance to the state meet in San Angelo March 3-4. There is a good possibility that another team will be invited to the state tourney as an at-large entry.

Tech has played Angelo State twice this season and defeated it both times—by 69-58 and 85-67 counts—but Tech coach Gay Benson doesn't believe that this will adversely affect her team.

"Our kids are ready," she said. "They've been waiting for this tournament. Of course, I'm sure ASU will have an advantage mentally because we've beaten them twice, and it's tough to defeat a team three times in one season. Still, I think we'll be prepared."

Nor does she think her team will be concerned too much about the possibility of playing nationally fourth-ranked Wayland in the finals.

"I know our players want to play Wayland again, and they're anxious to play them because they think we can do better this time.

"But I don't think we'll look ahead too much to them. We've talked a lot about this the last few days, and I think they're aware that we have to win two games before we even get to the finals. They know we have our work cut out for us."

If Tech gets by ASU in its tourney opener today, it will most likely face Abilene Christian in the semifinals tonight at 8. ACU's initial opponent is a weak McMurry team, and ACU is expected to win that game easily.

Ropes Coach Confident As B Regional Starts

LEVELLAND (Special) — Don Parker admits his Ropes Eagles landed in the toughest end of the Class B regional bracket, but he remains optimistic about the two-day tournament which started at 2:30 p.m. today at South Plains College's Texan Dome.

Ropesville (22-7) will face Forsan (26-2) in the day's finale at 9 p.m. Channing (26-4) and Motley County (22-7) opened the meet at 2:30 p.m., with Silverton (21-11) meeting San Elizario (15-11) at 4 p.m. Tournament favorite Hedley (30-4) faces Christoval (20-4) at 7 p.m.

The Ropes-Forsan game will actually be a preview of a 5-A contest next year, as both teams are moving to that district. Forsan surprised the area's No. 1 team, Sands, by 11 points in bidistrict and that has left Parker impressed.

"Yes, I was very surprised at the margin. We knew what type of team Sands had. But I think our teams are similiar. They play the man defense primarily, but can move into the zone.

"Our offense depends a lot on our ball movement. If we can move the ball like we're capable, we'll have success against either the zone or the man.

"I'm optimistic about the tournament. I feel like the kids are ready to play and want to play. We were all disappointed we didn't get here last year and they've worked real hard for this.

"I personally believe we'll make a good showing, but you never know until you get there and start playing."

Silverton, which lost in the first round last year, has drawn the Cinderella team in San Elizario, which has won 14 straight after getting off to a 1-11 start.

"I think we'll be improved, just because we were here last year," explained Lyndel Norwood. "The only thing is that we lost seven boys off last year's bunch. But (Jackie) Vaughn and (Brent) Brannon both started last year and they kinda keep the younger kids going.

"San Elizario plays the same type game we do, a deliberate, set offense. They're not the run-and-gun type club and that should help us.

Winner of today's first two games will meet at 9:30 a.m. Saturday in the semifinals, with today's last two winners clashing at 11 a.m. Saturday's title game will be at 7 p.m.

Regional Swimmers Vie

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"This is the best group of divers in 10 years and the best swimmers for at least two years. I think as many as 12 of the 24 records will fall. This is a good high school group and they will really go after them," McNally said.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the state meet March 17-18 in Austin. Saturday's swimming and diving finals begin at 2 p.m. The top six qualifiers in each event perform Saturday after today's prelims narrow the field which includes approximately 32 schools. Today's diving began at 9 a.m. and continues at 7 p.m. The swimming prelims start at 2 p.m.

McNally takes a personal interest for a number of reasons. For one thing, the Tech coach would love to recruit some of these prepsters. For another, some of his old pupils are coaching the schools. One of McNally's favorites, Jesse Marsh, a former Tech diver in the mid-60's who hails from San Angelo Central, sports an outstanding crew of prep divers.

Marsh coaches a diving trio of Richie O'Neill, Pat White and Ricky Morton at Midland High. McNally is impressed with all three as well as Amarillo High diver Steve Elliott.

"Those are probably the four best divers in the state, not just the region," the Tech coach said.

McNally also will have an eye on Monterey's one-meter diver Beth Hanlon. Miss Hanlon and teammate Susie Parcells rate high among the favorites for girls sprinting honors.

In the boys sprints, McNally looks for Palo Duro's Mente Allwin to set a new regional record in the 100-yard freestyle. Allwin and Odessa Permian's Jeff Lambeth lead the list of entries in the 50 and 100 freestyle races.

In the distance races, Coronado's Robert Green and Midland High's Sid Glenn lead the hopefuls. Green owns the top times in the 200 breastroke and the 200 individual medley. Glenn should participate among the top favorites in the 200 IM, 200 and 500 freestyle events.

Craig Wilkinson coaches both MHS and CHS teams.

Chap Cagers End Year By Hosting DBC, TWC

Lubbock Christian College heads into the final week of the 1977-78 basketball season cast in the role of spoiler.

How the Chaparrals do against Dallas Baptist tonight and Texas Wesleyan Saturday—in what will be the final Texoma Conference games in history—could determine the playoff aspirations of three teams—DBC, TWC and Wayland Baptist. (WBC also plays the two Metroplex schools this weekend, alternating foes with LCC).

LCC brings a 3-21 record into this weekend and will be seeking its first Texoma and District VIII zone victories of the year after 11 and 6 futile attempts, respectively.

"These are sure not must games for us by any means," mused LCC coach Darrell Price, who will conclude his head coaching career at the school with the games.

"But it will be for both of them. TWC is ranked fourth in the latest ratings, DBC is fifth and Wayland sixth, so they could sneak in there (the District VIII tournament) if they win both of these games.

"This would have been the year to have a good club because the entire district is weak. TWC is rated fourth of 14 teams and its record is something like 9-18. And DBC is 10-21."

The top four teams in next week's Dunkel Ratings will get berths in the District VIII Tournament. Presently, Midwestern is ranked No. 1, Prairie View A&M second and Wiley third.

"We need to do as well as we can this weekend because anything positive we accomplish will help us to get into next year a little better.

"We were definitely headed in that direction until we lost Lamar (Sampy, who died Feb. 10). And that had a drastic affect on us. Realistically, I can't expect a lot out of them. They've been working hard, but it seems like there's always something that holds them back. Still, we haven't given up by any means."

Brian Fortner, who has hit 20 and 15 points in his last two games and is shooting 54 percent from the field for the year, will start for the third time this year against DBC tonight in the 7:30 p.m. LCC Fieldhouse contest.

The 6-3 LCHS product will serve as swing man, with 6-1 Edwin Miles and 6-2 Gary Norris handling the guard duties, and 6-7 Lowell Walker and 6-5 senior Mike Kahler (starting his 81st consecutive game as a Chaparral) playing inside.

Where Baseball Czar Concerned, Everyone Critic

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK — During Abraham Lincoln's presidency, an anguished group of senators and congressmen marched in on him at the White House one day demanding that he fire George McClellan, a top Union general in the Civil War.

Lincoln listened to them patiently and then had a question.

"But whom will I replace him with?" he said.

"Anyone will do," was the response from several of the legislators.

"No, gentlemen," said Lincoln, wearily. "Anyone will do for you, but I must have someone."

The major-league baseball owners are in pretty much the same situation today.

Some of them are extremely unhappy over the way Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is running their business and would like to see him out tomorrow, but none has been able to come up with a candidate to be replace him.

Kuhn has five more years to go on a seven-year contract that pays him $150,000 a year plus expenses. His contract could be bought up at any time, and there are those who would vote to buy it up immediately, like Charlie Finley of Oakland, Brad Corbett of Texas and Ray Kroc of San Diego. Basically, what Kuhn has to do now is hold them off and hope they don't suddenly come up with enough additional support to push him out.

If he can manage to hang on that long, Kuhn will come up for re-election in 1981, one year before his present term expires. He's serving his second term right now and his prospects of a third one are not especially bright.

He can point to the fact attendance in the major leagues is up, but that is due to expansion as much as anything else. Likewise, he also can cite the fact that TV and radio revenue also are way up, but overall, baseball's TV revenue doesn't nearly compare with football's.

It is easy to criticize Bowie Kuhn. No matter who the baseball commissioner is, he makes a perfect target and when it comes to that, suddenly everyone is a critic.

If I were asked to assess the kind of job Kuhn has done since becoming commissioner nine years ago, my first consideration would be the general state baseball was in when he took it over nine years ago as compared with what it is today.

Regardless of those increased attendance figures, I believe there isn't much question that baseball has deteriorated.

Bowie Kuhn can argue he is not to blame for the advent of free agency and the subsequent enormous increase in player salaries, yet I can remember instances where he could have made his weight felt as commissioner but backed off instead.

Speccfically, I think he could have used the authority of his office to help settle the contractual differences that arose between Finley and Catfish Hunter at the end of the 1974 season.

Instead, he stood aside, claiming the impusse between Finley and Hunter was outside his jurisdiction, and the result was that Hunter becume the first of the multimillcon-dollar free agents.

That opened the floodgates.

I'm not one who always harkens back to the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis because I distinctly recall some of the criticism leveled at him during his stewardship as commissioner, but I also remember the great promise for the future Kuhn conveyed upon taking office, the great promise which has been far from fulfilled.

Shortly after becoming commissioner, he was asked if he felt he had as much authority as Landis.

"Yes, I do," he said. "The authority is there. It is up to the commissioner to use it. The power emerges from his ability to lead people and guide men's thinking."

At times, when Kuhn should have exerted his authority more, he didn't. And at other times when he did show his authority, as in the cases of Vida Blue's sale first to the Yankees and then to the Reds, I think he overdid it.

I do know that somewhere along the line Bowie Kuhn gave up his right to control — or if you prefer, direct — the players.

The players were the first to realize it. Now the owners do also and that's why Bowie Kuhn is in trouble.

Tiger Owner Says Bowie's Job Safe

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bowie Kuhn's job as commissioner of baseball is safe because he has the support of the majority of team owners, according to John Fetzer, owner of the Detroit Tigers.

"The story concerning a move to oust Commissioner Kuhn is clearly a case of mistaken identity," Fetzer said. "The issue is not Kuhn, but whether baseball can show it has compassion for the other fellow and that honest integrity is the essence of our program of self-regulation."

"My position is such that I know for a certainty that the majority of the ownership in the game will continue to support Bowie Kuhn to the hilt as a matter of public interest," Fetzer, senior American League member of baseball's executive council, said Thursday from his winter home here.

At least nine of the 26 baseball club owners are reported in favor of firing Kuhn, but Fetzer said he believes there are no more than seven. The nine clubs are Texas, Baltimore, New York, Oakland, California, the Chicago White Sox, Cincinnati, San Diego and Atlanta.

Texas owner Brad Corbett is the ringleader of the anti-Kuhn move. Owners disagree what method would be used to oust Kuhn and how many owner votes it would take.

"Baseball simply has to break out of the traditional mold of private enterprise, not to destroy it, but to strengthen it by showing enlightened self interest and supporting strong powers to its commissioner," Fetzer said.

"The idea of an adversary relationship among baseball owners in off-the-field problems is altogether too prevalent and will destroy the game if this is allowed to multiply."

DR. LAMB

Ulcer Attacks Seasonal

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Ten years ago in the fall, I developed a bleeding ulcer in the duodenum, and after several blood transfusions and a bland diet, the ulcer healed. Last spring, I was hospitalized with another bleeding ulcer and, after six weeks, it also healed.

Is it true that ulcers flare up in the spring and the fall? Do doctors really know what causes them? And, having been cured, is it necessary to avoid certain foods and drinks and continue antacids?

Any suggestion you have would be greatly appreciated, as I certainly don't want to develop another bleeding ulcer if I can prevent it.

DEAR READER — As far as I am concerned, "once an ulcer patient, always an ulcer patient." That means you should adapt your life sytle to prevent recurrences as they tend to recur — and yes, they are apt to recur in the spring and fall. This is not an old wives' tale — or at least, if it is, it is a valid one.

You should avoid caffeine-containing drinks because caffeine stimulates the production of acid digestive juice. These include coffee, tea, colas and chocolate beverages. Chocolate in any form contains caffeine. You should avoid alcohol. Alcohol is a powerful stimulant to the production of acid digestive juice.

Otherwise, sensible eating habits are usually all that is required. I would avoid strong spices, but moderate spices or moderate amounts are all right. A heavily spiced Mexican meal might not be. The current thinking is that what an ulcer patient eats is not so important, but whenever complications arise, bland feedings are still used.

You may not need to take any antacids, but your doctor may want to test your production of stomach acid to see if it is high and would warrant some regular use of such a medicine.

I should add to the list of don't for your life style, DON'T SMOKE.

Stress is important as a factor in causing ulcers. If your life style includes too much stress, try to minimize it if you can. If a person has a stressful life style and doesn't change it, any form of treatment is not likely to be successful.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-5, Ulcers: Duodenal, Stomach, to give you more information on your problem and what you can do about it. Others who want information on ulcers can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, NY 10019. If you follow the suggestions about your life style included there, you can minimize your chances of having another bleeding ulcer.

I should add that you should avoid aspirin and all of the easily obtainable popular medicines that contain aspirin. With a history of two bleeding ulcers, you don't need to take anything that decreases the blood's natural ability to clot.

No, doctors do not know exactly what causes ulcers, but we do know the company ulcers keep — stress, coffee, cigarettes and alcohol. We know that once an ulcer occurs that unless the excess stomach acid that is usually part of the picture is adequately neutralized, the ulcer will not heal promptly. Change your life style, and hopefully you can watch spring and fall come without fear of a bleeding ulcer.

Crusader Teaches Young People Lost Art Of Harvesting Ice

By JULES LOH

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — The items spread before him were artifacts of Americana, mere curiosities of a more innocent age. The edge in his voice, though, betokened urgency, not nostalgia.

"These tools," Charles Clark said, "represent the highest form of their development. It took years for them to evolve. What a shame if we had to go through that process all over again."

Charles Clark's lonely crusade is to teach young Americans how to harvest ice, a long forgotten art. His reasons are practical.

"When we run out of oil — I do not say if we run out, but when — ice will be as necessary as it was before the days of the electric refrigerator. I'm one of the last remaining who knows how to harvest it, and I'm 75. There isn't much time left."

So Charles Clark, the other day, gathered about 200 people, mostly youngsters, to the Stamford museum and explained how to work ice plows, breakers, hand cutters, saws, grapples and other exotic and fast-disappearing ice tools he has scoured the New England countryside to collect.

"Did you know that ice was once a leading American export, second only to cotton? We shipped ice to 50 countries, as far away as India.

"Harvesting ice commercially was a big business up until 1925. We made do well enough with refrigeration before we had electricity, and I believe we will have to again."

As a teen-ager growing up in the nearby town of Old Greenwich, where he still lives, Clark earned Christmas money by working for the local ice house. It was a popular seasonal job, paying about 10 cents an hour.

"It wasn't easy work. We went at it from dawn to dark in bitter cold. The trick was to get two ice harvests a year, if possible, and we also had to cut it just at the right time.

"The ideal was a 12-inch-thick block. We started cutting when the ice was 10 inchs thick and had it harvested before it was 14 inches. Any thicker and it became too difficult to get."

Clark explained how the horse was hitched to the ice plow, how the plow cut all but the bottom two inches of the ice in a checkerboard pattern, how the plowed ice was rafted to the ice house, broken into the pre-cut squares, stacked in cubes so as to leave the least amount of surface exposed, insulated with marsh hay, and he explained how each tool had been refined to do a precise job.

The youngsters hung on every word, rapt. The adventure of it alone made it seem the absolute best way to get ice.

"I'm not interested in sentimentality, really. I want somebody around in the next generation who knows how to use these tools. Look at them. Look at the curve of the teeth in that plow, how each tooth is a different size. That design didn't develop overnight. If it is lost, it will have to be re-developed."

That was Clark's fear three years ago, at the height of the energy crunch, when he began searching for the ice tools he knew as a lad and couldn't find any.

Finally he discovered a few here and there in antique shops, but the search for a full set seemed futile.

"Last year I hit the jackpot. I located a 90-year-old man in Vermont who had been a commercial ice man and had inherited the business from his father. That put his knowledge of the business all the way back to the 1880s, the heyday of ice harvesting.

"We went out to his barn and found all the old tools. They had been stacked there, unused, for 52 years.

"Here they are. They are in as good condition as they ever were. Now someone has to learn to use them, someone who will be around after I'm gone to a warmer clime."

Third Victim Dies From Sydney Blast

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The bomb that exploded outside the Hilton Hotel shortly before the opening of a Commonwealth regional summit conference has taken its third victim.

Paul Burmistriw, a 31-year-old policeman, died early Wednesday in a Sydney hospital, nine days after the blast. He suffered head and body injuries and never regained consciousness.

The bomb had been put in a trash can, and two garbagemen were killed instantly when they emptied the can into their truck, touching off the explosion. Five other persons were injured, but persons attending the conference were not among them.

Canadians Skate To Downtown

By NIKKI FINKE

OTTAWA (AP) — When winter blows in the Canadian capital creating rush-hour havoc on snowbound roads, thousands of Ottawa commuters leave their cars home and go to work on ice skates.

Their thoroughfare is 4.8-mile section of the Rideau Canal that winds through the center of Ottawa and into the suburbs from the downtown National Arts Center south to Carleton University.

The frozen canal offers skaters four million square feet of natural ice, eight inches thick. That's about four trillion ice cubes, according to Ed Taylor, special project officer for the National Capital Commission. "Enough to fill every bar in Ottawa."

The canal rink — free to city residents and tourists — costs the city about $120,000 annually to keep it in skating shape from the first freeze in late December to the spring thaw in late March.

Members of Parliament and cabinet ministers can be seen skating to their offices on Parliament Hill. Students at the nearby University of Ottawa glide to class, their books strapped on their backs.

"When a snowstorm hits, the canal is the first road they plow," said a sporting goods salesman as he fitted a small pair of feet with new skates. "After all, the city fathers all skate to work."

Ice skating throughout Canada is more than a recreation. Young boys darting in and out of the weekend crowds, their hockey sticks in hand, dream of becoming the next Bobby Hull or Guy Lafleur. Pig-tailed girls practice figure-eights, envisioning Olympic medals.

But for most of the skaters, the canal is a fast, efficient way to get to where they're going. Why take a car, they ask, when such healthful transportation is at their doorstep?

Shacks for changing skates, concession stands, skate patrollers and more than 1,000 colored lights line the canal. On weekends, 50,000 to 100,000 skaters use the ice. Some come just for the fun of it from Montreal and Toronto or U.S. points like Syracuse and Buffalo.

Instead of piling snow on the edges of the ice which tends to weaken the skating surface, it is removed by snow blowers. This extends the width of the skating area to 200 feet in some parts, others can be about half that. Techniques also were developed to smooth the rough natural surface with ice shavers and ice-melting machines.

Early in the morning before the commuters are out of bed, hot water is sprayed over the canal to give the ice a glassy sheen. Small snowplows travel up and down the canal removing most of the debris.

The Rideau Canal, opened for navigation in 1832, runs 123.5 miles from Ottawa to Kingston, Ontario. It was built in the early 19th century as an alternate route from Kingston to Montreal in the event the St. Lawrence River fell into American hands at a time when the United States was at war with Great Britain.

Closed Archive Houses Nazi Party Documents

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

BERLIN (AP) — The U.S. State Department is still sitting on tons of Nazi records of millions of Germans stored behind barbed wire in an unmarked archive in a West Berlin suburb.

"There's nothing classified here, though a lot of it is sensitive, and contrary to what a lot of people think, we aren't protecting Nazis," says Dan Simon, the retired U.S. Army major in charge of the Berlin Document Center.

The center is closed to the general public. Simon says access is restricted to "friendly Western governments" and scholars with credentials from a university or a sponsoring professor.

"We don't answer private inquiries, and we try to keep the press out of here," he says.

The Americans have copied files they wanted and once set a date to transfer the center to the West German government. But the Germans backed off, although they have free access to it and pay its expenses.

Karl-Heinz Hansen, a Social Democratic member of parliament, says he suspects the West German government doesn't want to take the center over because it "wants to cover up for personalities of public life who are former Nazis."

In the center's files, captured by Allied forces as the Third Reich collapsed, are Nazi Party membership records and correspondence, records of the SS special police and the brown-shirted storm troopers of the SA, documents on Germans from abroad who resettled in Germany during the Nazi years and records of Nazi courts and cultural officials.

A shelf with bound lists of SS men and women who staffed the concentration camps is usually the first stop for Israeli officials.

"These people kept records of just incredible things," says Simon, thumbing through old Nazi court records. "They would send people to camps, obviously to be liquidated, and put down their names, when they arrived, and what the quota was for that day."

One file contains a witness's written statement approving the plans of SS man Karl Koch and his fiancee, Ilse, to marry. Later they ran the concentration camp at Buchenwald, and she had lampshades made of human skin.

Wooden filing cabinets hold records of 10.7 million Germans who joined the Nazi Party, all but a few hundred thousands in the party's last years. They were captured at a pulp mill near Munich, waiting to be destroyed. Also captured were loyalty files on teachers, doctors, policemen and others in special classifications.

There are records of some 600,000 SS officers, enlisted men and women. Some are singed from attempts at burning. Nearby are files of 250,000 SS members who had to prove there were no Jews in their lineage so they could marry and have children.

Records of the Reich Culture Chamber include 500,000 files on writers, musicians, filmmakers and other artists.

A force of 300 used to work at sorting the files. The job is still not finished, says Simon, but the staff is down to 34 and he is the only American.

The center handles 3,000 to 4,000 information requests a month. Simon says 70 percent come from West German officials.

The State Department took over the center from the Army in 1952, after the files had been used for Allied war crimes trials and de-Nazification proceedings. Fenced and guarded, it stands alongside a park and pond at the end of a quiet street named Water Beetle Path, in a wooded section of suburban Zehlendorf. Beneath the buildings are tunnels and underground chambers from which the SS once tapped Berliners' telephone lines.

The only sign visible outside is one telling visitors to show their passes at a guardhouse near the sidewalk.

U.S. May Resume Aid To Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration may be ready to resume military aid to Nicaragua if Congress agrees with its assessment that the political and human rights climate has improved in the Central American nation.

There are still problems regarding Nicaragua's rights record, but deputy assistant Secretary of State Sally Shelton said recently, "It is our opinion that marked progress has been manifested since early 1977."

Because of human rights concerns, the United States has not provided military aid to Nicaragua for over a year. Miss Shelton told a House subcommittee the administration will not sign the delayed military sales agreement until the appropriate Congressional committees and the State Department "agree that there has been improvement."

But she made clear the State Department feels that despite recent anti-government riots, Nicaragua's political and human rights situation has improved, particularly since a three-year state of siege was lifted Sept. 19.

In a related development, former Attorney General Ramsey Clark accused President Carter of being too selective in cutting military aid to nations violating human rights.

Clark urged a House International Relations subcommittee to halt military aid to Thailand and the Philippines because of human rights situations there, and said, "You can't make the world safe for hypocrisy."

French Parties Alliance Loses Voters' Support

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Support among French voters for the Socialist-Communist alliance dropped below 50 percent for the first time Thursday in one opinion poll and another showed the pro-American government would win next month's parliamentary elections.

The ruling coalition of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing stepped up its campaign to portray the left's economic program as poorly conceived and a potential disaster for France.

The Paris newspaper L'Aurore published a survey that gave the two leftist partners 49 percent of the votes compared with 46 percent for the center-right majority.

That was a loss of one point for the Communists and Socialists and a gain of one point for the government from a poll published Wednesday. The leftist alliance has been steadily losing support from a high of about 54 percent only a few weeks ago.

The findings were at variance with a second survey published in the magazine Paris Match, which gave the leftists 50 percent of the vote to the center-right's 46 percent, but predicted the ruling majority would retain control of Parliament with 243 seats to 222.

French election districts are weighted in favor of rural areas where the leftist vote is weaker.

The government, fighting to come from behind, renewed its blast against what it called the ruinous cost of the leftist program of higher wages and unemployment benefits, longer vacations, early retirement and increased government jobs.

Premier Raymond Barre said Wednesday, "it would be the poor, not the rich" who would wind up paying for the leftist program through higher taxes. Health Minister Simone Weil said the Socialist program would "lead France to disaster."

In the Aurore poll, 21 percent of those questioned said they were undecided. Political experts say these wavering voters could well decide the election.

In both polls, 5 percent of those queried said they would vote for ecologist and other small parties.

Drilling Rig Builder Fined $1 Million

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The world's largest builder of offshore oil rigs, pleaded guilty to fraud, racketeering and other charges and was fined $1 million. J. Ray McDermott Co. pleaded guilty Wednesday minutes after the charges were filed. U.S. District Judge Morey Sear accepted the guilty plea and imposed fines and penalties totaling $1 million.

Prosecutors charged that McDermott defrauded Tenneco Oil Co. of hundreds of thousands of dollars from 1971 to 1974 through a kickback scheme involving $506,000 in bribes to Schacht V. McCollum, a Tenneco vice president.

Mart Posts Gains In Late Rally

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 3.64 at 754.59, after a 1.90-point advance Thursday.

Analysts said the rally was set in motion by weekly Federal Reserve figures which showed a $1.2 billion decline in the basic measure of the money supply.

Brokers also cited improved mid-February sales figures from the auto industry, especially General Motors. GM shares climbed ⅜ to 58⅝ in active trading.

Ramada Inns, also active, picked up ¼ to 4⅝ in trading that included a 126,600-share block at 4½. On Thursday the company reported substantially higher earnings for 1977.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .29 to 49.02. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .59 at 123.61.

Volume on the Big Board came to 9.56 million shares by noontime, against 8.24 million at the same point Thursday.

Air Service Hearing Set March 15

AUSTIN (AP) — A full-scale hearing on the application of Tejas Airlines, Inc., San Antonio, to expand its air service will be held March 15, the Texas Aeronautics Commission said today.

A pre-hearing conference that had been scheduled today was cancelled.

The application from Tejas seeks authority to provide passenger and cargo service between the co-terminal points of McAllen and Brownsville the alternate intermediate points Laredo-Corpus Christi, the intermediate point San Antonio and the terminal point Austin.

A request for authority to operate between Laredo and San Antonio was withdrawn at Tejas' request.

The Aeronautics Commission said both Texas International Airlines, Houston, and Texicana Commuter Airlines, San Antonio, have protested the application.

The commission said the prehearing scheduled today was cancelled after Tejas and Texas International agreed to an exchange of information requests and responses.

Champions Named In Area Bees

By MONA HARVEY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Two weeks before the Lubbock County bee on March 11, champion spellers for county schools are being named in a flurry of activity.

Joey Hickox, seventh-grader and son of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Hickox of Shallowater, will represent his junior high school in the county event set at 9:30 a.m. in Smylie C. Wilson Junior High auditorium.

Of the three Shallowater contestants competing on a written bee, Jackie Whaley came in second. A seventh-grader, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Whaley of Shallowater. Jackie won the elementary school's contest last year.

"Jazz" and "jiffy" spelled the difference for fifth-grader Julie Peterson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arlin Peterson of 6903 Fremont, who earned Christ the King Elementary's title.

Seventh-grader Sallie Allen, daughter of Mrs. Anne Allen of 2313 17th St., wound up the Thompson Junior High bee with "cantata" and "carbohydrate."

Bobby Trimble, seventh-grader and son of Everylener Green of 1412 Ave. E, is the alternate, according to director Helen Goldsten.

Linda Stogner pronounced for the Thompson contest with Carol Hilton, Patty Jenkins and Jane Darnell as judges.

Last year's alternate at Iles Elementary, sixth-grader Elanda Johnson, succeeded in taking the top honor this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Johnson of 1026 E. 29th St., Apt. 187.

Runnerup Brian Jones, a fourth-grader and son of Mrs. Alberta Ford of 1001 E. 28th St., Apt. 16, was tripped by "assimilate," enabling Elanda to win with "associate."

Mahon Elementary's best speller is fifth-grader Carmen Perez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armando Perez of 2123 Cornell St.

Nora Lazo, a sixth-grader, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Moreno of 2118-B Emory St., placed second out of six youngsters in the Mahon competition.

Group Selects Chester Green For Honor

Chester A. Green was honored Thursday as "Engineer of the Year for 1978" by the South Plains chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

The organization announced the selection at the annual engineers banquet at the Hillcrest Country Club.

Green, a registered professional engineer, is the director of engineering and secretary-treasurer of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, Inc., a Lubbock engineering and architectural firm.

The Branson, Colo., native was graduated from Mobeetie High School and received his bachelor's in civil engineering from Texas Tech in 1947.

During his 22 years as a member of the local engineering community, he has been associated with a number of engineering projects, including the municipal water treatment plant and the wastewater reclamation plant, the water supply system for the Lubbock Canyon Lakes.

Green is a member of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, the American Society of Professional Engineers and the American Water Works Association. He is past president of the High Plains branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers and is a member of Tau Beta Pi, an honorary engineering organization.

Club Begins 'Fun Runs'

The newly formed Lubbock Running Club will begin Saturday Fun Runs starting at 11 a.m. Saturday at Mackenzie State Park.

A fun run is a race for the fun of it, running club member John Faulkner said. The emphasis is on the social activity of running and completing the course rather than running faster than everyone else, he said.

Everyone who runs will be given a time certificate, and the courses will vary from one-half mile to five miles.

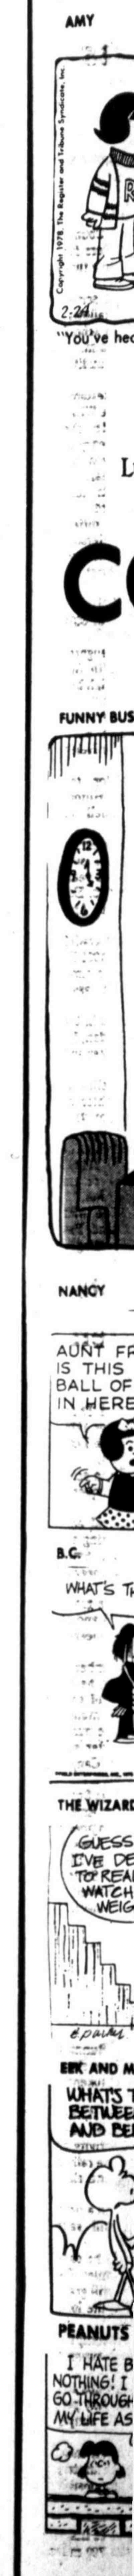

The courses this Saturday will be one-half mile, one mile and three miles. By the end of March the distances will gradually increase to five miles for the long run.

No entry fees, no advance sign-ups and no AAU cards will be required. Any person wanting to paricipate should simply come and run, Faulkner said.

All the courses will be accurately measured and the runners are accurately timed. Each runner will be responsible for hearing his or her time.
