Global accord hurdle jumped

GENEVA (AP) — The last major obstacle to a far-reaching global accord on lowering trade barriers fell today when the United States and European Community put aside a bitter fight over films and TV shows.

The decision to leave movies out of the trade-liberalization package was seen as a victory for the French and a defeat for Hollywood, but it also meant the world's two largest traders had cleared up all disagreements.

U.S-EC disputes had been blocking the overall talks among 116 nations to complete a seven-year struggle to rewrite the rules of world trade by cutting tarrifs and lowering other barriers.

The United States is "on the verge of an historic victory in our efforts to open foreign markets to American products," President Clinton said in Washington.

While it failed to resolve the film fight, the United States won a concession from the European Community to cut subsidies to the European aircraft manufacturer Airbus Industrie.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said he and the EC's trade chief, Sir Leon Brittan, had "agreed to disagree" on the contentious issue of barriers to American entertainment programs and subsidies paid to European filmmakers.

They predicted there was enough momentum to ensure that the worldwide trade talks, being conducted under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, would be able to conclude by the midnight Wednesday deadline.

"I believe that today has been a milestone in the history of world trade," said Brittan.

The talks are aimed at lowering customs duties, opening markets and revamping outdated global trade rules. Economists predict an accord eventually would expand the world economy by more than $200 billion a year.

The Wednesday deadline was set in U.S. legislation that grants President Clinton the power to send Congress a trade package that can only be approved on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. Otherwise, amendments and revisions by lawmakers could delay or even block passage.

Pro-Yeltsin victory now seems bleak

MOSCOW (AP) — The Clinton administration today all but abandoned hopes that reformers would win a majority in Russia's parliament and voiced worries that a communist-nationalist alliance could slow President Boris Yeltsin's pro-West policies.

The retreat from early public optimism about the Russian elections came as Vice President Al Gore arrived in Moscow to help prepare for next month's summit here between Yeltsin and President Clinton.

After being updated on election returns that showed pro-Yeltsin reformers running a distant second to nationalists and just barely ahead of communists, Gore backpedaled from his prediction Monday that Yeltsin would win a narrow but working parliament majority.

"Of course, the big question is whether (Yeltsin) will have a working majority or not," Gore told reporters aboard Air Force Two. Once in Moscow, Gore received another briefing on the results and refused to talk about the parliament elections altogether.

Instead, he applauded passage of a new Russian constitution giving Yeltsin broader powers and said the parliament results were too incomplete to discuss.

"I'll refrain from expressing any reaction on behalf of my country or any personal reaction," Gore said before visiting Russia's space control center to talk with cosmonauts aboard the Russian space station.

But it was clear from interviews with senior Russia experts traveling with Gore that the administration was reassessing not only its line on the election results but also what effect the strong showing of anti-Yeltsin forces would have on U.S.-Russia relations.

On Monday, Clinton said he did not anticipate any change in U.S. policy toward Russia and said the new constitution, "lays a foundation for a long-term legitimacy for democracy."

Clinton said he was "not particularly surprised by the showing of the ultranationalist party because the Russian people have suffered a lot in recent years."

Pro player apparently shoots self after wreck

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers defensive tackle Jeff Alm apparently killed himself with a shotgun early today moments after wrecking his car and killing a passenger, authorities said.

Alm and Sean P. Lynch, both 25, were found dead at the scene of the early morning wreck along Interstate 610 in Houston, said Cecil Wingo, chief investigator with the Harris County medical examiner's office.

Alm apparently died of a gunshot wound to the head, Wingo said. He added that Lynch apparently died from injuries in the crash. Both men were from Orland Park, Ill.

Police spokesman Alvin Wright said the accident occurred about 2:45 a.m. today. He said the vehicle apparently was speeding and went out of control on a freeway exit ramp.

The car struck both guardrails, ejecting and killing Lynch, Wright said.

"The driver of the vehicle apparently was despondent and shot himself," Wright said. A shotgun was found near the body, he said.

"We're all very shocked," said Oilers spokesman Chip Namias. "Right now the main thing is Jeff's family, who are obviously feeling a very tremendous sense of grief. We're just all shocked. Jeff was a great guy."

Added teammate Bo Orlando, "It made me sick a little bit. It's just unbelievable."

Alm, a second team All-American at Notre Dame, was the Oilers' second-round draft pick in 1990. He missed the early part of this season during a contract dispute and broke his leg shortly after returning to the lineup. Namias said he had recovered from the injury and was preparing to return.

Alm played in 14 games last season and had 35 tackles, one sack and two forced fumbles. He had 133 tackles and four interceptions in four years at Notre Dame, including 74 tackles as a senior.

Lawyers file motions wanting speedy trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A former chief judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has been chosen to preside over the criminal trial of U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison.

The senator's attorneys Monday also filed legal motions seeking a speedy trial for Mrs. Hutchison, who has been charged with ethics violations.

John F. Onion Jr., a former chief judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals, was appointed Monday after state District Judge Bob Perkins, who had been overseeing Mrs. Hutchison's court proceedings, excused himself from the case.

Perkins said he stepped down due to campaign contributions he made to Democrat Bob Krueger, who opposed Mrs. Hutchison in a special election in June.

"Because of my contributions to Sen. Krueger in his race against Mrs. Hutchison, I feel that it might appear to some members of the public improper for me to judge Sen. Hutchison's case," Perkins told the Austin American-Statesman.

Perkins said he asked Onion to hear the case Monday, and Onion agreed.

Truck bids are rejected by court

Scurry County Commissioners Court unanimously rejected all bids for a tandem-axle truck in a 4 p.m. meeting Monday.

The court had sought bids for a truck to be used in Precinct 3. However, Precinct 1 commissioner Ralph Trevey said such a truck in his precinct is not being used and will be transferred to Precinct 3.

The budgeted funds will likely be used for tractor to be used in the county's mowing program.

Judge Bob Doolittle presided. Commissioners present were Trevey, C.D. Gray Jr., Jerry Gannaway and Roy Idom.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Success is not permanent and failure is not fatal."

When the preacher talked about getting things in order for that eventual day, we doubt that he had in mind having your own coffin ready.

However, a couple of inventors in North Carolina have designed a new piece of furniture that, when the time comes, can be used as a casket.

Kas-Kit, or collapsible coffin, can be used as a TV stand, a storage cabinet or a footstool. Made of birch, the adjustable casket has three sections that pull out from one side to reach a maximum length of seven feet.

Prices range from $450 for the no-frills model to $750 for the deluxe version. One of the inventors owns one for himself which he uses as a stand for his television.

The two inventors haven't sold enough of the collapsible coffins to quit their day jobs. But they claim to be comfy in this life while watching the tube.

There have been worse ideas.

Take for example the Winnipeg, Manitoba couple who opened a suburban restaurant. They named it "Outhouse" because it was built on the theme of toilets.

Toilet bowls were placed among the tables, and a toilet seat logo appeared on the menus.

Health inspectors then forced the restaurant to suspend operations because it lacked adequate restrooms.

Also there was the Maine company that introduced a new product called "I Hate Peas."

It was composed of smashed-up peas and spinach but disguised as french fries in order to entice kids to eat their vegetables.

The product sold well at first, but it became clear that the kids thought they still tasted like peas and spinach.

Rep. Andrews announces bid for seat in U.S. Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews says he wants to stay in Washington — but move to a different chamber.

Andrews, 49, launched his campaign Monday for the U.S. Senate. He so far faces former state attorney general Jim Mattox and Dallas financier Richard Fisher in the battle for the Democratic nod to unseat Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison.

"I have no doubt that I'm the underdog," said Andrews. A poll conducted for him of 1,000 likely Democratic Party primary voters showed Mattox with 36 percent, Andrews with 7 percent and Fisher with 6 percent. Fifty-one percent were undecided.

But Andrews said: "I'm going to win this race. ... I think my approach, a moderate approach that addresses some of the concerns of middle-class families, is the way to win this race. It's what I believe in."

Andrews acknowledged that his writing 121 overdraft checks to the now-closed House bank is likely to be a campaign issue, and the subject was immediately raised in a statement from Fisher.

But Andrews said he hopes voters will "put it in the context of all the other issues that I think are important in this campaign," such as crime control, equal pay for women who do the same work as men, and health care reform.

"I made a mistake by not questioning the privilege of the House bank. It was an overdraft protection policy, and it was wrong of me not to pay more attention to it," said Andrews, who first was elected to the U.S. House in 1982.

However, he stressed, "I didn't bounce any checks."

On controlling crime, Andrews said he would like to lobby Texas lawmakers to prevent early paroles of any violent criminals.

The federal government can play a larger role in prison construction, he said.

"We spend millions of dollars overseas in foreign aid. It makes sense to me that we spend some of that money right here at home, building and constructing more prisons," he said.

With his wife and two daughters beside him in front of the state Capitol, Andrews said more must be done to help working women, including giving them equal pay for doing the same work as men. He also stressed his support for a woman's right to abortion.

Andrews said he has worked with other moderate Democrats on health care reform, and he called for "dramatic changes" in the welfare system. He said he's proud of a bill he sponsored on mandatory wage withholding that will make sure "deadbeat parents pay their proper child support."

He also said he wants to expand the student loan program and expand job-training programs for inner-city youths.

Andrews announced in Dallas and Fort Worth before coming to Austin, and then headed for similar appearances in Pasadena and San Antonio.

Burnet businessman Stephen Hopkins has announced he will challenge Mrs. Hutchison for the GOP nomination.

Gov. Richards launches re-election bid

LACY LAKEVIEW (AP) — Back on the campaign trail, Gov. Ann Richards says her top priority in a second term would be winning a pay raise for school teachers.

Richards, a former teacher who formally began her re-election bid Monday, said failure to get that raise was the biggest disappointment in an achievement-laden first term.

"We will be fighting for that pay raise in January 1995 come hell or high water," she said.

"We cannot continue to pretend that we are going to have the best schools in Texas if we are not willing to pay the professionals that teach our children a professional wage."

Richards started her campaign from the front porch of the house where she was born.

In an emotional speech that mixed reminiscences with a list of achievements, Richards said she kept promises to streamline the state bureaucracy, fight for consumers on insurance issues, pass tougher sentencing laws, lower the crime rate, increase prison capacity, start a lottery and fund public schools.

"We held the line on taxes this last session and had the lowest rate of increase in the (state government) budget in 30 years," Richards said.

Among her biggest achievements, the governor said, was helping rejuvenate the Texas economy.

"We have moved from an economy that rose and fell with every price fluctuation in West Texas crude into an economy that is diversified, that's strong and that's leading this nation into recovery."

She said that "456,300 more Texans are working today than there were on the day that I took office."

Richards, 60, became the state's first woman governor in half a century by defeating Republican Clayton Williams in 1990.

She's not expected to face any serious opposition in the party's March 8 primary. George W. Bush, the former president's eldest son and managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, is seeking the Republican nomination to challenge her.

"I view this as a race between accepting the status quo and working for systematic change," Bush said in a statement Monday. "During the next 11 months, the people of Texas will get a chance to hear my solutions to ... the major issues facing us today: educating our children, crime and jobs."

Richards's speech, the only one she gave to kick off her re-election bid, didn't mention Bush.

Several hundred supporters, well-wishers and longtime friends gathered on the lawn of the small, white clapboard house where Richards was born in 1933 and where she lived until she was 13 and her family moved a few miles south to Waco.

"Welcome Home, Ann," read one of dozens of signs waved by the crowd. Others said, "Four More in '94" and "Waco's 1st Lady, Ann."

Joining the governor on the porch were her four children and her parents, Cecil and Ona Willis.

A daughter, Cecile, introduced the governor.

"When I watched my mother with the president of the United States or on the television news, I think — this is the same person who picked me up when I skinned my knees. ... And the more I think about it, the more I realize of course it's mother," she said.

"The values and the talents and the hard work that she showed us when she was raising us are exactly those that have made her the effective governor she is today."

Richards thanked the current occupants of her old house — Nancy Johnson and her 7-year-old daughter Krista — for allowing her to use it.

"It is really remarkable to think that the little girl who was born in this front room lives in the house now where Sam Houston once lived," Richards said.

"Our challenge today is to ensure that the little girl who lives here now will have the same opportunity to go wherever her ability and her determination will take her."

Trial begins Wednesday in husband's acid attack

FARWELL (AP) — A 42-year-old woman is scheduled to go on trial Wednesday on charges she poured sulfuric acid on her husband in a pre-Valentine's Day attack that she says was the end result of years of abuse.

Donna Hall is charged with the aggravated assault of her 36-year-old ex-husband in their rural Parmer County home, in the southwest corner of the Texas Panhandle.

Ms. Hall's attorney, Floyd Holder of Lubbock, says he will argue that she was acting in self defense against her former husband, Kevin Hall. They were divorced last August, ending an 11-year marriage.

Parmer County Sheriff Rex Williams said Donna Hall made no allegations of abuse against her husband when she was questioned by authorities following the incident. No charges have been filed against him.

Hall said his wife attacked him after a quarrel. He said he was lying in bed in his night clothes when she poured the acid on him. He said he rinsed himself off in the shower and drove himself to his parents' home.

His parents drove him to a hospital in Friona, in the northeast corner of Parmer County, and Hall was later transferred to University Medical Center in Lubbock. He spent several weeks in intensive care, receiving treatment for third-degree burns to his head, chest, arms, groin and upper legs.

Hall has undergone numerous skin grafts, the sheriff said.

"He'll be scarred the rest of his life," Williams said.

Ms. Hall also was burned because acid splashed on her legs during the incident. She was treated for several days at the Friona hospital and was arrested upon her release.

Lotto Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — The woman who won Saturday's $7.3 million lotto jackpot immediately called the Austin nursing home where she worked to tell them she wouldn't be back.

"They were jealous," said Elsia Justice, 51, now a retired licensed vocational nurse.

Three of Ms. Justice's five children accompanied her as she claimed the first installment of her prize — $375,772. She'll get a payment of $364,000 annually for the next 19 years.

Ms. Justice said she plans to buy a house and help her family.

Also Monday, a 21-year-old Corpus Christi man whose construction job ended this month claimed his first check in the lottery's "Win for Life" game.

Walter Gonzalez is the fourth person to win $1,000 a week for life, said lottery spokesman Keith Elkins. There are four big winners remaining in the scratch-off ticket game, which also includes lesser prizes.

Gonzalez said he wants to attend Texas A&M University in Kingsville and study business or medicine.

Farentino faces charges for harassing calls

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Farentino is accused of violating a restraining order by harassing Tina Sinatra with calls from his cellular and car phones.

The 55-year-old actor, who already faces charges that he stalked and harassed Frank Sinatra's daughter, made the calls during the summer after the two ended a five-year relationship, City Attorney Elizabeth Gertz said.

Farentino was charged Monday with violating an order that forbids him from calling Miss Sinatra. He could get more than 22 years in prison if convicted on all counts.

Farentino appeared in several TV shows, including "The Lawyers" from 1969 to 1972.

DOT CAMPBELL

Researching ancestors

Dot Campbell of Hermleigh was speaker at a recent meeting of the Scurry County Genealogical Society held at the county library.

She named many publications in the library which would be helpful to genealogists researching ancestors who served in the Civil War, both Union and Confederate armies.

"Most people believe that freedom for the slaves was the sole cause of the war," she said, "but other factors including economics and trade were prime reasons, also."

The society meets on the last Tuesday of each month, but will not meet in December. The next scheduled meeting will be Tuesday, Jan. 25 and visitors and prospective members are always welcome.

Every day is different

Every year at this time, most of us buy calendars. Maybe you get a simple one with 12 scenic pictures. Or you pick one with daily curmudgeon quotes, or baseball statistics, or cat photographs. Now, for the first time, you can buy the Daily Bridge Calendar (U.S.$12.95 from Copp Clark Inc., Dept. H, 2775 Matheson Blvd. E., Mississauga ON, Canada L4W 4P7).

Each day the calendar presents you with a problem. Some feature bidding and opening leads, but primarily they concentrate on declarer-play and defense. The solutions are on the reverse side. The problems have been supplied by six individual experts and one tandem, Dorothy and Alan Truscott. Today's is one of their deals. How would you plan the play in seven hearts, West leading the club queen?

Things look too easy, but after you win the club lead and cash the A-K of hearts, West's club discard postpones your claim. Now you have to work for the 13th trick.

The immediate reaction is to ruff your club loser in the dummy, but there is a risk that East has at most two clubs and will secure a fatal ruff or overruff. It is better to take a ruff in hand, which you know West cannot overruff. At trick four, play a diamond to dummy's ace and ruff a diamond with the heart six. Cash the heart queen and lead a spade to dummy's invaluable 10. Now you cash the heart jack, which draws East's last trump and allows you to discard your club five. You lead any black card from the dummy and claim as your hand is high.

Shoji Tabuchi will entertain a Japanese audience

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — A Japanese TV audience will get a little bit of country from fiddler Shoji Tabuchi, one of the most popular entertainers in this tourist town in the Ozarks.

The violinist and five fellow countrymen who have found success in America will be featured Jan. 20 in a 90-minute special on Japan's Nippon TV.

A TV crew spent several days in Branson with Tabuchi and his family and filmed parts of a show at Tabuchi's theater.

Tabuchi, 45, has performed in Branson since 1981. He credits a Roy Acuff concert he attended as a youth in Japan with inspiring his career in country music.

Steelers' defense keys Monday's 1-point win over Shula's Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers' defense gave up 348 yards to the Miami Dolphins and still looked great.

Five sacks, three takeaways and two key plays near the goal line helped Pittsburgh hold off a late Miami rally and post a 21-20 victory Monday night.

"For whatever reason, we have a bend-but-don't-break, big-play, opportunistic defense," Steelers coach Bill Cowher said. "It isn't something we've drawn up by design. There is a resiliency that typifies this team."

Rebounding from back-to-back losses, the Steelers have now won two in a row by a total of four points. They're 8-5 and trail AFC Central leader Houston by one game heading into a showdown at home against the Oilers on Sunday.

"We're in a do-die situation," quarterback Neil O'Donnell said. "We have to win every week. We dug ourselves a hole early, so we have to come out and play like we did tonight."

The Dolphins (9-4) fell into a first-place tie in the AFC East with Buffalo, which plays at Miami on Sunday. Coach Don Shula's team had the NFL's best record two weeks ago, but now has suffered back-to-back losses.

"We're still in it," Shula said, "and we've got to start turning it around."

The Dolphins rallied in the final 10:30 with two touchdowns, including rookie O.J. McDuffie's 72-yard punt return. But Rod Woodson's eighth interception of the season ended the Dolphins' final possession after they had reached their 44-yard line with 15 seconds left.

Earlier squandered chances hurt the Dolphins, who twice failed to score after penetrating Pittsburgh's 5-yard line. Woodson forced a fumble to end one threat and Chad Brown sacked DeBerg to spoil another.

Ranked No. 1 in the NFL in yards allowed, the Steelers frequently blitzed DeBerg. He completed 27 of 44 passes for 344 yards, but gave back 45 yards in sacks and threw two interceptions.

"That's the best defense in the NFL," DeBerg said. "They came with every kind of blitz. That's an outstanding scheme they have."

The Dolphins began to rally when Keith Jackson caught a 3-yard touchdown pass from DeBerg with 10:30 left to trim Pittsburgh's lead to 21-13.

The Dolphins failed to move on their next possession, but forced another punt, and McDuffie dodged and darted down the middle of the field untouched to score with 6:37 left.

Miami drove inside the Pittsburgh 20 two other times, but settled for field goals of 31 and 22 yards by Stoyanovich.

Dusters finish Arizona trip with 94-73 win at Scottsdale

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The Western Texas College Lady Dusters wound up a successful trip through Arizona with Monday's 94-73 shellacking of Scottsdale Community College in non-conference basketball action.

The Dusters won all three games in the desert, including an 86-65 hammering of Cochise College in Douglas on Friday, and an 85-57 blistering of Phoenix College Saturday.

"It was a really good road trip for the team and for the program," said WTC coach Ron Jones. "We got to see some pretty country and we won all three games.

"Scottsdale was easily the best team we played," he continued. "Obviously, we're happy with the win, but more than that, we played really well. It was a good team effort and we had a lot of people contribute."

All areas of the Dusters' game were clicking Monday. The team combined for 10 3-point baskets, including four by freshman Shrae Johnson, Kim Keepers, playing in place of injured Paulita Murrell scored 10 points from the post position, and the squad shot almost 90 percent from the free-throw line, hitting 16 of 18 attempts.

The Dusters put the game away early, taking a 46-27 halftime lead, then gaining a 32-point advantage early in the second half.

Western Texas' offensive charge was led by Johnson, who accumulated 17 points against SCC. Sophomore LaMeshia Roland added 13, freshman Carri Moss drained a pair of treys on the way to a 12-point night, Tammy Wilson, also a freshman, scored 11, including a three, and Christy Cates and Keepers each finished with 10.

The Dusters wound up the first semester of competition with Monday's victory. Western Texas will carry an 11-5 mark into the second half of the season.

Their next outing will be at the WTC Classic, Jan. 4-5 at Scurry County Coliseum. Western Junior College Athletic Conference play will start when the Dusters travel to Odessa College Jan. 10.

The Lady Dusters' first home conference matchup will be Jan. 13 when New Mexico Junior College visits.

Malone leads Jazz past Spurs

by The Associated Press

Karl Malone scored 27 points. More importantly, he played center and held David Robinson in check as the Utah Jazz beat the San Antonio Spurs.

"We put Karl on Robinson and I thought he did a great job of keeping him away from the basket," said Utah coach Jerry Sloan, whose team on Monday won sole possession of second place in the Midwest Division. The Jazz (14-7) are 5½ games behind the 19-1 Houston Rockets.

Utah outscored the Spurs 15-6 in the first 9:06 of the fourth quarter. San Antonio coach John Lucas then was ejected for his second technical foul of the game and the Jazz took their largest lead at 99-82 with 30.5 seconds left.

In other games, Phoenix beat Milwaukee 112-104, New Jersey beat Miami 110-105 in double overtime, and Boston beat Philadelphia 112-107.

Malone held Robinson to 23 points — 5.3 below his average — and 11 rebounds. For Utah, John Stockton had 16 points and 13 assists, Tom Chambers had 16 points and Jeff Malone 15.

Dennis Rodman had 20 rebounds and no points for San Antonio. The Jazz held San Antonio to 11-for-37 shooting in the second half, and the Spurs had eight turnovers in the fourth quarter.

Suns 112, Bucks 104

At Phoenix, the Suns trailed by five points entering the fourth quarter, but tied it at 96 with 31/2 minutes left. Dan Majerle made a 3-pointer to break the tie and the Suns pulled away after that.

"Just because you have a poor record doesn't mean you get blown out every night," Charles Barkley said of the Bucks (4-16), who entered the game with a two-game road win streak and the worst record in the Eastern Conference.

Barkley had 28 points and 21 rebounds. Kevin Johnson had 32 points and Majerle 19. Milwaukee had nine more field goals (45) than the Suns and shot 59 percent. But Phoenix was 37-of-45 from the line to 10-of-17 for Milwaukee and won its sixth straight.

Nets 110, Bucks 105 (2 OT)

At East Rutherford, N.J., Kenny Anderson had 32 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds, and Kevin Edwards scored a season-high 28 against his former team.

Anderson was playing with a sore left wrist. It's the same wrist he broke last season when he missed the final 27 regular-season games and the playoffs.

"It hurt the whole game. It still hurts. But I just said 'later for this.' A little pain can't kill me," he said.

Anderson clinched the triple-double with an assist on a lane jumper by Armon Gilliam with 35 seconds remaining to make it 107-103. After Bimbo Coles scored for Miami, Anderson penetrated and drew the defense off Chris Morris, passed outside and watched Morris make a 3-pointer for his only points of the game.

Celtics 112, 76ers 107

At Boston, Dee Brown was 14-of-19 from the field and scored a career-high 35 points.

"He was in one of those zones," Philadelphia coach Fred Carter said. "When a guy doesn't shoot well for a couple of games, you know one like this is coming."

In four games since getting his previous career-high of 32, Brown made just 9 of 34 shots and scored 23 points.

He made three shots against the 76ers in just 77 seconds, erasing Philadelphia's only lead, 59-57, and putting Boston ahead 63-59 with 4:46 left in the third quarter. The Sixers got no closer the rest of the way.

Hurley improving following surgery

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The next few days may determine the extent of Bobby Hurley's recovery from a car accident that left him lying in a roadside ditch and requiring eight hours of surgery.

"The feeling is that over the next few days events may occur that could either result in dramatic improvements or he could have complications that necessitate further surgery or treatments," Dr. Richard Marder said Monday.

On Sunday night, a light truck driven by the 22-year-old rookie for the Sacramento Kings was struck by a station wagon near Arco Arena following a game with the Los Angeles Clippers.

Hurley was not wearing a seat belt and was tossed into a drainage ditch, police said. He sustained lung injuries, several broken ribs, a slight compression fracture in the back and wrist and knee injuries and was listed in serious condition at the University of California Medical Center.

Marder and Dr. James Castles said Hurley was showing signs of improving, but they added they will be watching for complications over the next four or five days.

"Basically the problem comes with ventilating the lungs," Marder said. "After a serious injury there is fluid that accumulates in the lungs sometimes, and it can be very difficult to ventilate a patient."

He said it was too early to speculate if Hurley would be able to play basketball again.

The driver of the other vehicle, Dan Wieland, 37, of Sacramento, was in fair condition with a broken leg, police and hospital officials said.

Police Detective Chuck Barham said officers were still trying to determine whether to file charges in connection with the collision.

Barham said officers were awaiting blood test results to determine if alcohol or drugs were involved in the crash.

He said Wieland was driving without headlights and with an expired license. Both are infractions, as is Hurley's failure to wear a seat belt.

Hurley, who set the NCAA record for career assists, has been averaging 7.1 points and 6.1 assists this season as the Kings' starting point guard. On Sunday, Hurley had seven assists but was 0-for-5 from the field in 19 minutes.

The Jersey City, N.J., native played on Duke's championship teams of 1991 and 1992.

FEC drops funds-raising investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former House Speaker Jim Wright says he is glad a "frivolous complaint," referring to investigations of the fund-raising activities of several Texans including himself, has been dismissed.

The Federal Election Commission on Monday dropped investigations into the fund-raising activities of independent presidential candidate Ross Perot, Reps. Gene Green and Henry Bonilla, Wright and former GOP congressional candidates Chip Taberski and David Hobbs.

"I welcome the long overdue dismissal of a frivolous complaint and the belated public acknowledgment that it never did have any merit," Wright said Monday in a prepared statement.

The FEC dropped 137 probes as part of a new strategy to concentrate limited agency resources on more significant and current cases.

"In trying to do a thorough job in all cases, we eventually ended up doing a slow job in all cases. And we found ourselves pursuing more and more matters that simply weren't worth anyone's time," FEC Chairman Scott Thomas said at a news conference announcing the enforcement changes.

Thomas said the FEC decided to drop most of the probes initiated before the 1990 election cycle, as well as investigations judged "relatively insignificant."

While acknowledging that in many of the dropped cases the FEC found it had reason to believe campaign violations occurred, Thomas said it was necessary for the agency to weed out marginal cases because of manpower shortages.

As a result of the FEC dropping a case against Wright, a conciliation agreement the former speaker signed last year is voided. The agreement, under which Wright agreed to pay $4,500, had brought to a close charges that he used bulk sales of his book to evade limits on outside income.

Some cases were scuttled because of parallel criminal proceedings, Thomas said.

Wisconsin wants to end welfare by 1999

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Promising to redefine how government should help the poor, Wisconsin has resolved to do what no state has done before and drop out of the federal welfare program by 1999.

The law signed Monday by Gov. Tommy G. Thompson to withdraw from the Aid to Families With Dependent Children program within six years leaves unanswered a major question: What will be adopted in its place?

"Sometimes you have to force change by declaring the status quo is over," said Rich Phelps, Dane County administrator.

No state has dropped out of the welfare program since it began during the Depression. Such a move would be subject to approval by the federal government, which pays 60 percent of the cost of AFDC.

The law signed on Monday also includes an experimental program to force welfare recipients to work and to restrict them to two years of cash benefits by 1995. The Clinton administration, which has encouraged new approaches to welfare, already has granted approval for the "Work, Not Welfare" idea.

Thompson, a Republican who has taken a leading role in overhauling welfare, said any replacement for AFDC should be "less about welfare, dependency and assistance and more about opportunity, responsibility and incentives."

Welfare "has been easy to get on, too easy to stay on, and harmful," he said. "For so many, it's been a trap. We're going to change that."

Wisconsin in 1991 ranked ninth in the nation in per capita spending on welfare. AFDC helps roughly 200,000 people a month in Wisconsin and pays out more than $400 million a year.

A comprehensive plan to replace AFDC must be proposed by 1996 for federal approval.

Democrats said the replacement program should guarantee medical care and other services for the needy who cannot work, and help find jobs for those who can.

Vanishing couple: suicide or sham?

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Hours after he was convicted of murder, Adam Emery and his wife vanished in what looked like a suicide leap into Narragansett Bay.

State police, unconvinced it was suicide, got a videotape of the trial and hired a lip reader to look at it.

"We will do what we originally said," Elena Emery was purportedly seen whispering to her husband immediately after the Nov. 10 verdict. "You promised me. We should have done this before."

While relatives say they are convinced the couple's final resting place is the dark, choppy waters that flow under the Claiborne Pell Bridge, investigators believe the Emerys faked their deaths and are now on the run.

Wanted posters have been distributed across the nation.

Emery, 31, was convicted of murder in the 1990 stabbing of 20-year-old Jason Bass. Emery thought Bass had clipped the rear of his car, breaking a taillight, as he and his wife sat in the vehicle eating a takeout dinner. Emery could have received 10 years to life in prison.

After the verdict, the Emerys' leased car was found on the bridge, the parking lights on and the engine still warm. Their clothes were in the car along with their credit cards and checks, which were cut into pieces.

Police divers searched for the bodies for six days. Detective Capt. Frank Muzerall said the bodies should have washed ashore by now if they had been in the bay.

Brain disorder linked to disability

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother has been diagnosed with a basal ganglia calcification. I've watched her lose control of her right arm, her ability to speak, and it's now affecting her other extremities. My family is frustrated because our local medical people can tell us so little. In less than two years she's gone from independence to living in a wheelchair. She's unable to communicate effectively with others.

DEAR READER: The basal ganglia (special nerve tissue within the brain) are vital to normal coordination and movement. For unknown reasons, these nerves may calcify with age, causing progressive disability. This calcification can be seen on special X-rays.

I'm afraid that your mother's "medical people" can tell you so little because they have little to tell. This is a difficult predicament for which there is no answer because there is no consistently helpful therapy for basal ganglia calcifications.

Your mother should be under the care of a neurologist, who will order and supervise the many support services, such as home health care, that she needs.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Just what is interstitial pneumonia and how is it treated?

DEAR READER: Often a consequence of auto-immune diseases, such as Sjogren's syndrome, interstitial pneumonia isn't an infection at all. Rather, the lower portions of the lungs become inflamed, probably due to the body's over-active immune reaction.

The diagnosis is made by X-rays and biopsy. Cortisone sometimes reduces the inflammation but is not always effective.

Although some patients with the disorder appear to stabilize without serious handicap, interstitial pneumonia may progress to extensive scarring (fibrosis) in lung tissue, leading to difficulty breathing. Patients with this disorder should be under the care of pulmonologists, specialists in lung diseases.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

It's not easy telling people they are infected with AIDS

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Patricia Villegas has delivered sad news to many people, but she can't forget one 22-year-old woman. She was pregnant, and she was infected with the AIDS virus.

Villegas closes her eyes and pauses as the ache resurfaces.

"She was sitting there and when I told her she was HIV positive — I've never seen this since, either — I saw her break into a cold sweat," she said.

A year later, the woman was dead. Her baby was healthy.

"They're all very sad cases, but I think the ones that for me that are the most difficult are the women, and especially the women who are single parents, because they have so many decisions to make," Villegas said.

As a communicable disease field representative for the Ingham County Health Department, Villegas tells patients the results of their AIDS tests. If the results are positive, she helps patients inform those who they may have infected and urge them to be tested.

It can be dangerous work that takes Villegas to the fringe of the drug world, as well as into the homes of white collar workers.

It can be depressing work that forces her to adopt a professional detachment that protects her own emotions, while showing a caring manner.

It can be frustrating work when partners who desperately need to hear of their exposure to the deadly virus cannot be found.

"A lot of the time they may be individuals who say they've had sexual contact with in a very casual sense of the word. They don't know much about them; they had sexual contact while under the influence of alcohol or drugs," she said. "That's a majority of the cases I'm finding."

Sometimes, Villegas sets out to find patients' sexual partners knowing little more than their first names and the description of the house where they live.

Confidentiality is strictly protected. Neither threats nor bribes will induce her to reveal who listed the individual as a contact.

Villegas lets the news sink in before suggesting testing or offering information on safer sexual behavior.

"Sometimes they are angry. Fear, anger, guilt, shame. It may be verbal. It may be just behavioral in the sense that they may get very sad, very frightened, very quiet or they may try to inject a sense of humor into that." Those whose addresses are known are mailed information or contacted by phone asking them to come to the health department. The reason for the request is not revealed to protect their privacy.

All states have HIV partner notification programs of some kind, according to Janet Riessman, spokeswoman for the AIDS Action Council of Washington.

Some states counsel individuals to notify their partners on their own.

Teen's Drop-In Visit Gives Grandmother Quite a Scare

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 70-year-old widow who lives alone. About 11:15 one evening, I was awakened suddenly by the sound of someone tampering with my front doorknob. I went to the door very quietly and discovered that both locks were opened, so I quickly relocked them, ran to the phone and dialed 911.

The operator told me not to hang up. I went back to the door (a big mistake), and a tall figure entered and grabbed me!

Petrified with fear, I let out a scream, then a male voice said, "It's all right, Grandma ... it's me, Larry — your grandson!" I was so relieved. He knew where to find my outside house key, which I keep hidden in a special place in case I lock myself out. I immediately informed the 911 operator that I was safe, and after many questions, she was convinced.

Larry is 15. He's a fine boy and a talented athlete. He apologized for frightening me, and explained that he was in the neighborhood and wanted to pick up his duffle bag containing his sweat suit and gym suit. (He had spent the night with me the week before.)

Larry begged me not to tell his father, who is my son. So far, I haven't told. Maybe I should mention I am in not in the best of health and such a surprise could have given me a heart attack. Also, he could have telephoned me during the day — or even before he came over. Did I do the right thing in not telling his father?

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: Your grandson committed no crime; he thoughtlessly came to your home without calling first — at a very late hour.

Telling his father would serve no good purpose. Also, hiding a house key is not a very good idea. Most burglars know where to find house keys "hidden" outside.

DEAR ABBY: My mother told a friend that her son and his wife were expecting their first child. The friend said, "Oh, how nice — your first grandchild!" Innocent enough, except my parents already have a grandchild — he is my son, whom we adopted as an infant.

My mother was furious. She asked the person, politely, "Have you forgotten Alex?" (not his real name), to which he replied, "Well, no, but this one is a real grandchild — you know, a blood relative."

Abby, you would not believe the questions some people ask about adopted children. For the uninitiated, here are few tips:

1. Don't make remarks or ask questions about his "real" parents. His adopted family are his "real" parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, etc.

2. Don't ask why his parents didn't want him — especially not in front of the child. They may have wanted him very much, but allowed him to be adopted for very personal reasons.

3. Don't ask how much he "cost" us. (Believe it or not, I have been asked this several times.) He cost us nothing. We did, however, pay our attorney, his birth parent's attorney, some medical bills and the agency fees. But don't ask me how much — it's tacky.

4. If you are a schoolteacher, don't ask your students to do a "family tree." Chances are, there is an adopted child in your class — or ones from divorced or blended families.

5. Don't ask me who our son looks like. How should we know?

'A REAL MOTHER,'

Gulf War assault court martial ends with officer's guilty plea

FORT BLISS (AP) — Sgt. 1st Class David Martinez listened to the judge hand down his sentence and hung his head while his defense attorneys patted him consolingly on the back.

He wouldn't be going to jail. But his military career — begun because "it was in the blood in my family" — was apparently over. All because of an event in Saudi Arabia he said he now regrets.

Martinez, a reserve sergeant from Albuquerque, N.M., pleaded guilty Monday to one count of sodomy stemming from an alleged sexual assault of a female reservist during Operation Desert Storm.

He also pleaded guilty to two counts of making false official statements, admitting he lied to superior officers when he told them he hadn't had sexual contact with former Spc. Jacqueline Ortiz.

Trial judge Col. Herbert Green ordered that Martinez be given a bad conduct discharge, which means the sergeant will lose all pay and allowances from the Army and the Veterans Administration. He could have sentenced Martinez to 15 years' confinement, a reduction in rank, forfeiture of pay and allowances and a dishonorable discharge.

His case must still go through an appeals process. Meantime, he'll remain on inactive reserve status for several months and will no longer be drawing pay.

The end of his life in the military will also loom large, no matter how much he'd like to stay. "The military," he said, "has always been good to me."

Martinez, 43, enlisted in 1973 and served for about three years. He served a brief stint with the New Mexico National Guard in 1976, but moved to the reserves in 1977.

He told the court he entered the military because other members of his family had done so before him. "I just tried to stay with the trend," he said.

In 1990, he was called up for duty in Operation Desert Shield.

On Sept. 19, 1991, he summoned a subordinate, Ms. Ortiz, to his tent. Both were members of Company D of the 52nd Engineering Battalion stationed about 20 miles from the Iraqi border at the time.

He testified Monday that he wanted to discuss the possibility she would be moving to another unit in the area because of their commander's orders.

"She got a little upset, but I told her I would talk to the commander," Martinez said.

They embraced and she performed oral sex on him, but it was not forced, he testified. His plea to sodomy involves the oral sex.

Ms. Ortiz saw it otherwise.

She said she reported immediately that she had been assaulted but officers ignored her complaint — and even later reprimanded her when they concluded the sexual encounter was consentual.

In 1992, Ms. Ortiz told a U.S. Senate panel about her experience and the way the military handled it. "I would rather have been shot by a bullet and killed that way than this," Ms. Ortiz said then.

Youth crime keeps juvenile detention centers occupied

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County authorities have faced an all-time high juvenile detention center population of 137, forcing officials to find more temporary living space in the 96-bed facility.

Through most of last week, the Bexar County center had daily populations close to 120. But weekend arrests pushed the number of detained youths to 137 by Monday, said Jose Castillo, chief juvenile probation officer.

"We have peaking periods," Castillo said. "Unfortunately, we haven't had any lows lately. All we've had is record-setting highs."

Other large Texas cities also are struggling with overcrowding, a common condition these days in the juvenile justice system.

Increasingly violent crimes, which usually take longer to work their way through the justice system, have contributed to the large youth detention populations, said juvenile authorities throughout the state.

For instance, of Bexar County's 137 detainees Monday, 12 were accused of murder.

Another factor, say juvenile officials, is young people aren't as likely these days to return home to await the justice system.

"Right now, we see that the homes are real volatile places," Castillo said, adding, "The parents are afraid to take them back into the house."

A short-term explanation for the Bexar County crowding also may be the recent mild weather, said Castillo. During bad weather — like the freezing conditions earlier this fall — more young people stayed off the streets and out of trouble, he said.

Bexar County, which increased its juvenile detention capacity earlier this year from 72 to 96 beds, is planning another expansion to 144 beds with funding from a recently passed bond issue.

To handle the current overflow, authorities have converted a multipurpose section of the detention center into temporary sleeping quarters with floor mattresses.

Houston and Dallas have similar situations.

On Monday, the Harris County Juvenile Detention Center had 172 youths in custody. Each day the center is permitted to house 145 accused offenders plus another 20 percent, who sleep on the floor, for a total of 173.
