Pennzoil, Snyder Gas Plant reach agreement

Averts shutdown of SACROC unit

By Wade Warren
Staff Writer

An agreement finalized in Houston this week by Pennzoil and the Snyder Gas Plant will result in $22 million being spent at the SACROC unit by Pennzoil and the drilling of 15 new wells beginning in July.

A number of workover programs will also be implemented at the unit.

The agreement will also ensure that Pennzoil will continue to operate the unit — a fact that was beginning to look shaky as negotiations between Pennzoil and the gas plant operators have lingered on for a couple of years.

Pete Hagist, Pennzoil's unit supervisor, said the agreement directly impacts 90 Pennzoil employees, 90 more at the gas plant, and 200 others with service companies.

"If this agreement had not been reached, our full intention was to stop delivering gas to the plant. This left us with two options. One was to re-inject the gas, and the other was to abandon the project.

"The unit has been in the red for the past 13 months and Pennzoil was not going to invest any more money at all if they could not see that the unit was going to be profitable," said Hagist.

"I believe Pennzoil would have shut the unit down if the agreement had not have been reached."

Hagist said such a move would have shut Cynara down completley and probably the gas plant as well.

"The gas plant depends on Pennzoil for 95 percent of its volume. I don't know if it could have remained functional with only five percent or not," said Hagist. "This leaves the gas plant and the jobs in place."

Hagist said the agreement to continue to send gas to the plant ends a 24-month turnaround process that began in March, 1995.

"We had been successful in meeting the declining volume, and in some areas, costs also. But our gas processing costs were not cost-effective."

Hagist said the unit reached an all-time low in production in October, 1995 when it produced 7,700 barrels per day.

"At that time, I think the unit had a year-and-a-half of life left. Production was declining at about 20 percent per year."

Currently, the unit produces about 9,300 barrels per day.

"This is not a silver bullet that solves all our problems, but it helps."

A significant amount of work will be done at the gas plant, including the removal of the Pennzoil-owned "Hot-Pot" C02 removal system. The gas plant will continue to operate the liquids recovery system.

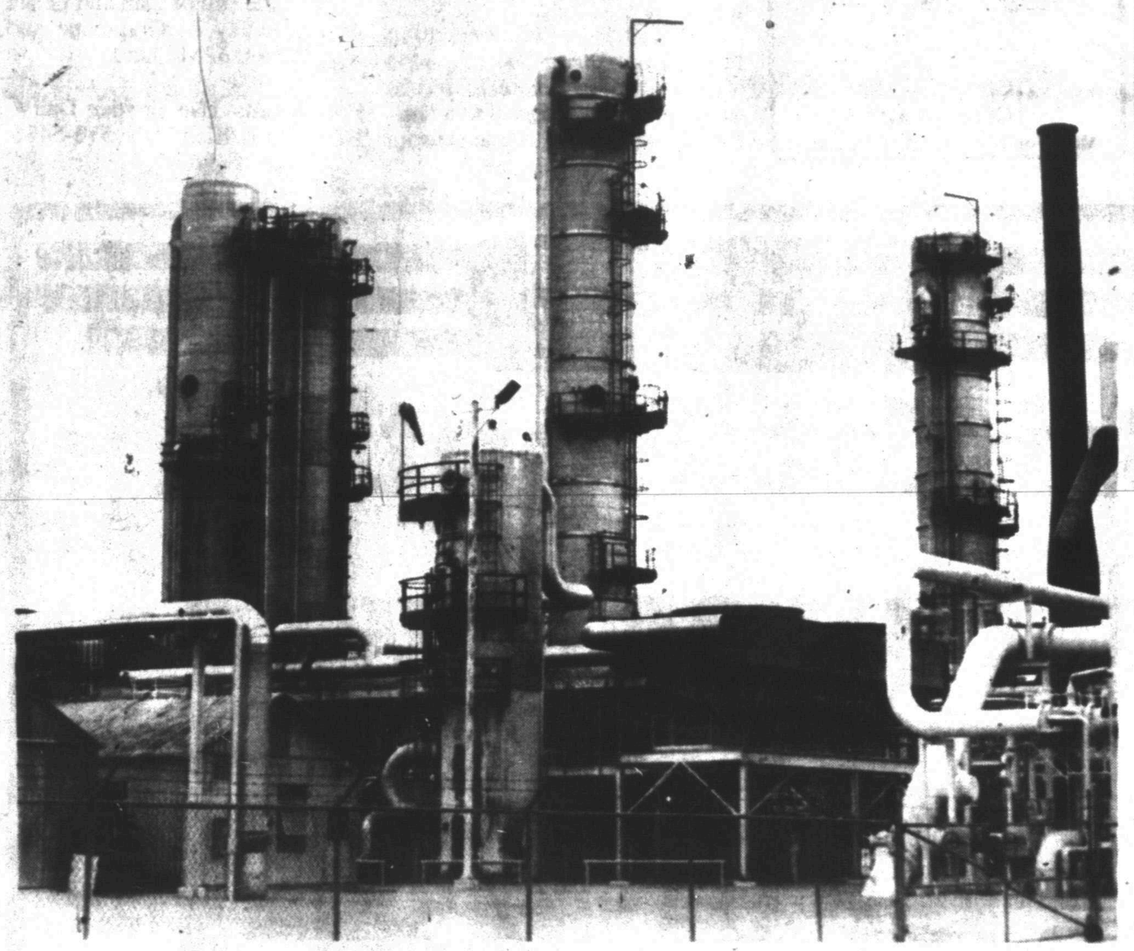

Modifications to the gas plant and to the Cynara facility will cost about $3 million. Plans are to have the units operating in their new capacities by Aug. 31.

Hagist said the negotiations were made complicated by the fact that some parties had interest in both the SACROC unit and the gas plant.

"I'm personally relieved that this agreement was reached," Hagist said Friday from Pennzoil's corporate headquarters in Houston.

"I can't overemphasize the point that Pennzoil here (Houston) was adamant that we reach our targets at SACROC or they were no longer interested in continuing the project."

Hagist said the agreement is expected to extend the life of the unit 10 to 20 years.

SKYLINE TO CHANGE — The skyline of the Snyder Gas Plant will undergo some major changes in the near future as the Pennzoil-owned "Hot Pot" CO2 removal system will be dismantled at the plant. A major portion of the system are these four large insulated vessels. (SDN Staff Photo)

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A guy who makes only mental bets should be careful not to lose his mind."

It turned out to be a good gag. But Stanley Noah, with the help of wife, Francene, refused to be bested.

For a couple of years, Stanley Noah has been vocal about the operations of the water district. His lecture about water issues had become lengendary at the afternoon coffee crowd at the Dairy Queen.

One day Stanley made a dire prediction: "The water district will be bankrupt within two years." He repeated that prophecy on numerous occasions.

After several days of goading, Stanley offered to bet a thousand dollars. We took him up on the offer, quickly explaining we didn't have $1,000, but would within two years.

Jack Denman wrote down the terms of the wager in his official black book. A few days later, water district board member Rod Waller stumbled in and was pushed into the same bet. The fatal bankruptcy deadline was to be June 1, 1997.

Last Saturday, exactly one day early, a check for a $1,000 arrived in the mail. Monday, Stanley inquired if we had received it. The coffee crowd was helpful, explaining to Stanley that a "check's in the mail" is a well-worn excuse.

Last Thursday, the coffee drinkers and their spouses enjoyed a steak dinner at Billy Ray's Rusty Spur — courtesy of Stanley. Some 30 attended, including Stanley who was brought there with the help of Francene.

The $1,000 check was presented for payment of the meal, and Billy Ray Browning, after gratuity, gave Stanley his change back.

Retired minister Miller Robinson, told a little-known Bible story about "Noah and the Queen of McSheeba. It had to do with the evils of gambling.

But it was Stanley — or Francene — who had the last word. She had clipped a $Saver coupon, good for $1 off for up to five meals per visit, and presented it to Billy Ray when payment was made.

Sharp files for Lt. Governor

Had been touted as a frontrunner in bid for governor

AUSTIN (AP) — One day after Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock announced he wouldn't seek re-election, State Comptroller John Sharp stepped up to the plate.

Sharp filed formal papers Friday with the Texas Ethics Commission, a step necessary to begin his campaign.

The featured speaker at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce annual banquet this year, Sharp is a longtime state lawmaker, having served as a legislator, state senator and Railroad Commission member.

The Democrat had been touted as a frontrunner in the bid for governor in 1998, but Sharp told his staff he'd be running for the No. 2 job after Bullock made his announcement Thursday.

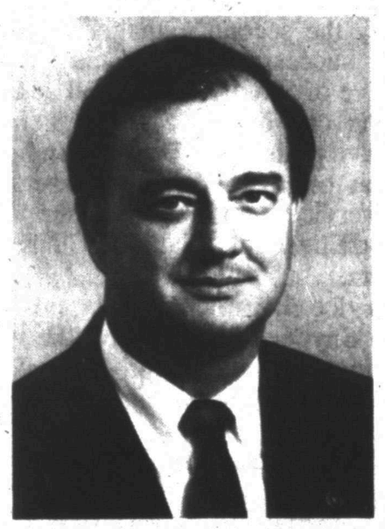

Sharp, who was sworn in as Texas comptroller in 1991 and has since been responsible for numerous welfare reforms, is expected to officially announce his candidacy in the next few days, spokesman Ross Ramsey said.

Republican Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry also said Thursday he is strongly considering a run to succeed Bullock. Perry and Sharp were college friends at Texas A&M in the late 1960s.

As comptroller, Sharp has overseen the beginning of the Texas Lottery and he was responsible for the introduction of the Lone Star Card, which allows welfare recipients to receive their benefits electronically.

The Lone Star Card program, which began in 1995, was introduced in an effort to cut down on food-stamp fraud. Seven other states have copied the idea and the Clinton Administration has talked of using the cards nationwide.

Bullock's departure marks the end of a 40-year political career during which the Democrat made his mark on major state policy from managing water resources to funding education to preserving Texas history.

School bells to ring again here Monday

School's out!

Well, not for everyone. Summer school begins Monday for students who need additional help and remedial instruction.

Snyder ISD's summer session will be held on the junior high school campus and includes grades K through 12.

While most students have pre-registered, new students can register Monday. The class day will be from 8 until noon for kindergarten through the sixth grade and for junior high students.

There will be two sessions for high school students. The first will begin Monday and end July 1. The second session will start July 2 and conclude July 24. The class period will be 7:15 a.m. until 12:45 p.m. for each.

Bilingual classes for kindergarten and first grade students will be from 7:45 a.m. until 12:45 p.m.

School bus routes will run during the summer school sessions. Students will be picked up from their home campus and taken to the junior high. After the classes are over, the students will be delivered back to their home campus.

Trial set Tuesday in indecency case

A 19-year-old Snyder man, charged with indecency with a child, goes on trial Tuesday in Judge Ernie Armstrong's 132nd District Court.

David Leon Wagner, 2102 Ave. I, is charged in a case involving a girl less than 17 years of age. The alleged offense occurred Oct. 27, 1996 and the high school senior was indicted by a Scurry County grand jury in December. He has been free on a $10,000 bond.

Some 150 prospective jurors have been called to report at 9 a.m. Tuesday. District Attorney Dana Cooley will prosecute and defense attorney is Donald McPhail of Abilene.

Float prizes planned for 4th of July parade

"Let Freedom Ring" is the theme for the Fourth of July Celebration parade in Towle Park and this year, a small cash prize will be given for the top floats.

A $25 prize will be given for the most patriotic float, the most original float and the best all-around float.

Pre-registration for the parade is not required. Line-up will begin at 9:30 a.m. on July 4 in the west end of the park. Judging will be held at 9:45 and the parade will start at 10 o'clock.

Those entering floats are asked to bring a 5 by 7-inch index card with a brief description, including the name of a participant or organization.

The annual bicycle decorating contest will also be held at that time, with first through third place winners recognized in four age categories: 5 and under, 6-8, 9-11 and 12 and older. Prizes will be awarded.

No roller blades will be allowed in the parade and go-carts must be driven or accompanied by an adult.

For more information, call parade organizer Cindy Sharp at 573-3822 or the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

Special happenings set Sunday at local museum

There's lots going on Sunday at Scurry County Museum but visitors will have to see it in a hurry. The museum will be open only from 1:30 to 3 p.m.

The museum is featuring a book-signing and two new exhibits. The exhibits will be up through mid-August but the book-signing is a one-time event.

Dorothy Dennis will be signing her book, "In Pursuit of Happiness." The recently-published work is a journal of her life from birth to the present.

She reflects on her life during the Depression and droughts of the 1930s and 1950s, as well as the age of technology. Stories of her marriage to Bert Dennis and their life together are presented with humor and admiration.

"Quilt Images," 50 objects made from old and new quilts, will be one new display. Clothes, toys, placemats, pillows and other decorative objects show the array of uses for quilts and quilt squares.

"Brazos Images," a group of 36 paintings by Diane O'Leary, also opens Sunday at the museum.

O'Leary utilized Native American legends as her subject matter, as well as plants often found in the Southest.

Scurry County Museum is located on the Western Texas College campus.

Escapee nabbed after foiled abduction

MAYFLOWER, Ark. (AP) — An escaped kidnapper with Army special forces training was captured amid a huge manhunt mounted after he allegedly tried to abduct a millionaire friend of his first victim.

James Slack, 44, climbed a fence to escape from a state prison May 18. He was not seen again until Thursday, when police say kidnapped trailer home magnate Johnny Allison at gunpoint from his Conway office.

Slack asked Allison for $1 million ransom, police said. But after driving around for 90 minutes, Allison intentionally crashed his Mercedes and fled. Slack limped away.

Allison recognized Slack as the man convicted for the 1993 kidnapping of Jo Ann Lieblong, the wife of his friend, Alex Lieblong. She was freed after Lieblong paid a $1 million ransom.

"Allison said he did a double-take," Detective Shad Overman said. "He said he thought, 'I don't know who this is.' Then he realized who it was."

In 1993, Slack eluded authorities for 20 hours before surrendering.

"He was bragging to police that we were standing right on top of him while he was laying in the woods motionless with leaves on top of him," Detective Jim Barrett recalled.

"He told us that even some of the dogs were standing on top of him and when he didn't make a move, they just left."

Slack, a former infantry platoon leader in South Korea and Vietnam, eluded more than 100 officers, tracking dogs and a helicopter equipped with heat sensors Friday. He was found by a state trooper in undergrowth in a field near Mayflower, about 20 miles north of Little Rock.

He had a hunting knife, a bottle of water and two apples with him.

Leslie McMillon

Former resident familiar with ebonics debate

Leslie McMillon, daughter of Leslie and Maxine Riggins of Snyder, is the supervisor of speech, language and hearing programs in Omaha, Neb.

As such, she is familiar with the debate over ebonics. She knows that misunderstandings occur when teachers, speaking standard English, try to communicate with their African-American students who speak Black dialect.

Although no school districts in the Midwest have adopted an ebonics policy, many districts have been dealing with this issue for years.

In Omaha, for example, the district attempts to equip its teachers to instruct students of all language backgrounds to become proficient in standard English.

In a recent interview in "Horizons," published winter, 1997, McMillon said 70 percent of Nebraska's African-Americans live in Omaha. Nearly 30 percent of Omaha's students are African-American and many speak what she calls "Black dialect."

McMillion, who grew up speaking Black dialect and has been lecturing and teaching on the subject for years, doesn't see the dialect as a separate language.

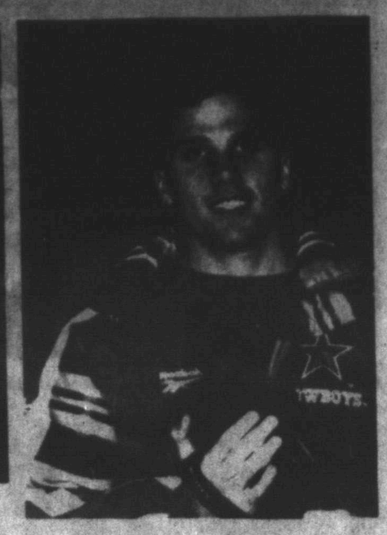

She describes it as a social dialect with specific rules which are engrained and followed by Black dialect speakers. For example, Black dialect speakers do not conjugate the verb "to be" (as in "Susie be hitting me").

"Language is a part of who you are and a part of what you are," McMillon said. "With some students there is a difference in the way they use the language... When that happens, the potential for miscommunication is great."

The Omaha School District trains its teachers to better communicate with students who speak Black dialect, as well as with those who use other languages, so these students can learn standard American English, she said.

Teachers should not lower their expectations for second-language or dialect students, McMillion

Golden Terrace Village

She been described as "kind, efficient and dedicated." One board member summed it all up by calling her "invaluable."

Snyder National Bank's June recipient of the Hometown Spirit Award is Alisa Cain, cheerful manager of the two Golden Terrace Village complexes in Snyder.

Alisa is only the second manager of the senior citizen housing complex, doing the impossible by successfully replacing the popular "Doc" Griffin after his death.

Alisa, a native of Snyder, does it all at Golden Terrace. While management is her job description, she can often be found helping a resident do a difficult chore.

Residents have praised her patience in helping them cut through the red tape and other regulations that often confront seniors. Another called her "an angel."

But Alisa's service is not limited to her paid position at Golden Terrace. She's a teacher of religion at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church and has been a member of the Parish Council for many years.

Alisa is also vice chairman of the board of directors of Snyder Day Care Center and is a director of the Snyder Rotary Club. She is also a member of the Snyder Wheels Club.

A 1981 graduate of Snyder High School, she attended Western Texas College. Alisa is married to David Cain, purchasing agent for Patterson Drilling Co. Their 11-year-old son, Zach, is a sixth grader.

Both Alisa and David are qualified foster parents. She also serves as "room mom" at her son's school.

She is the daughter of Bill and Anita Wilson of Snyder, and her in-laws are W.O. and Pat Cain, also of Snyder.

Snyder National Bank is proud to recognize Alisa Cain, a bright spot in our hometown.

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

Antibiotic may not be strong enough

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 82-year-old diabetic with bad veins in my legs. Associated with these varicose veins is an area of scaly, raw skin that recently became infected. My doctor diagnosed the problem as "cellulitis" and gave me erythromycin pills. That was a month ago. I am still experiencing pain and swelling. How do I get rid of this infection?

DEAR READER: Cellulitis is diffuse infection — unlike a boil — that affects the skin and underlying tissues, causing pain, redness and swelling. In your case, the bacteria probably gained entry through the raw area on your leg and the infection has been present much too long.

In my experience, the antibiotic erythromycin is not a particularly effective treatment for this condition, because the drug is not a good antidote to deep strep infection, a common cause of cellulitis.

I believe that your doctor should perform a culture of the wound. Once the offending bacteria have been identified, they can be tested against various antibiotics in the laboratory. In this way, the physician can determine which antibiotic would be most appropriate. For example, Floxin, Augmentin or Ceftin might be more effective.

If the cellulitis fails to improve on oral therapy, you and your doctor should consider a course of intravenous antibiotics to eradicate the infection.

Unfortunately, you have three risk factors that predispose you to such infection: your age, the diabetes and your varicose veins.

Therefore, as part of the treatment program, you must make a special effort to keep your blood sugars under control. In addition, ancillary therapy — such as hot compresses and leg elevation — would aid your recovery.

Finally, you may have to treat the varicose veins more aggressively — perhaps with surgery, certainly with elastic support hose — to prevent future bouts of cellulitis.

In summary, you and your physician have to meet the challenge of cellulitis by altering the methods of treatment and combating the condition before it spreads to cause more serious consequences, such as bloodstream infection.

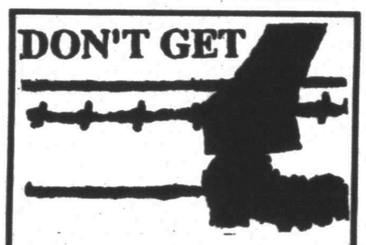

DEAR DR. GOTT: As we age, calcium builds up in our arterial walls, yet many post-menopausal women take calcium supplements. Aren't these pills merely worsening the arterial problem?

DEAR READER: No, they're not. In fact, recent studies have shown that supplemental calcium — especially in the form of low-fat milk products — may even reduce arterial-calcium buildup (arteriosclerotic plaque) and help prevent kidney stones.

Furthermore, post-menopausal women need this calcium to maintain bone strength. Therefore, such supplements are not only harmless but provide great benefit.

FEMA denies disaster declaration request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas isn't getting the presidential disaster declaration Gov. George W. Bush requested to deal with the aftermath of the killer tornadoes that hit Central Texas with a vengeance last week.

But that doesn't mean federal help of one sort or another won't be forthcoming.

As residents of Jarrell and Cedar Park work to rebuild lives, homes and businesses, they may be eligible for low-interest loans and other relief from the Small Business Administration, the Agriculture Department, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Nonetheless, Bush and other state officials expressed disappointment Friday that they were denied a major disaster declaration and its promise of greater federal bounty.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency notified Bush that the property devastation from the May 27 twisters, which claimed 28 lives, didn't meet the threshold required to trigger the help.

"Based upon a review of all available information, we have concluded that the impact of this event is not of the severity and magnitude that warrants a major disaster declaration," FEMA chief James Lee Witt wrote in a letter Friday to Bush. "Recovery costs for this event seem well within the combined capabilities of the state and local governments."

Some 239 homes and businesses were destroyed or damaged when the twisters hit May 27, striking Jarrell with the greatest violence. Total damages are estimated at $20 million.

Bush, who had voiced concern that his disaster request would be denied, expressed disappointment at the rejection.

But, he said: "Texas will continue to do everything possible at the state level to assist the people of Central Texas whose lives were impacted by the tornadoes."

SBA will provide low-interest loans for eligible homeowners and businesses not fully covered by private insurance in Williamson, Bell, Travis, Milam, Bastrop, Burnet and Lee counties.

Despite the agency's name, a good bit of SBA's disaster help actually is directed at homeowners rather than business owners.

And, farmers will be eligible for low-interest Agriculture Department emergency loans to rebuild farm structures, replace lost livestock and compensate for production losses.

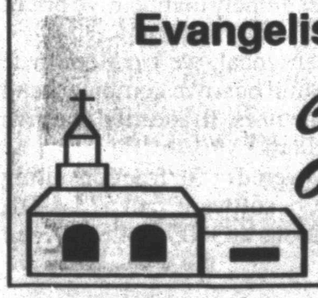

HUD is allowing Texas to shift nearly $1 million in Community Development Block Grants to rebuilding efforts in the recovering areas. Another $1 million will be available for housing replacement and repair under the HOME program.

"No relief program can ever replace the terrible loss of life caused by the storms," Rep. Chet Edwards, D-Waco, said in announcing the aid. "It is my hope that this assistance will be of economic help to families."

Under federal law, a major disaster declaration is given only when the scope of the damage exceeds a state's ability to handle, said FEMA spokesman Morrie Goodman. Federal officials also examine whether there is adequate private insurance coverage and eligibility for SBA help.

Cogdell Memorial Hospital is Proud To Salute

RODNEY MANN
Maintenance Tech
Employee Of The Month
May, 1997

Rodney has worked at Cogdell Memorial Hospital for 11 months, where his duties include repair and maintenance of hospital equipment, and working in the day-to-day operation of plant services. Prior to joining the staff of CMH, Rodney worked for several electrical companies in this area.

He and his wife Penni, who is employed with the Texas Department of Human Services, have two children; a son, Micah, 9 years old, and a daughter, Aspen, 8 years old.

He was selected for this honor following nominations by co-workers. Comments on nomination ballots for Rodney included: completes assigned tasks in a timely manner...is pleasant to be around and has a big smile for everyone...puts forth whatever effort is needed to get the job done...a dependable and conscientious employee.

Central students liked 'riding' on AR Train

Central Elementary students really read up a storm this past school year, thanks in part to the Accelerated Reader Program implemented three years ago.

They earned a total of 14,509 points.

Students were highly motivated and many have earned prizes throughout the school year. An AR Train bulletin board display charted their progress since it was introduced mid-term.

Students who read books on AR's approved list and made at least 70 percent on the accompanying computer test earned so many points per book, depending on the degree of reading difficulty.

Each student's name was written on a puff of white smoke which floated above the train on a bulletin board in the main hall of the school.

The train's track was marked by various junctions which represented the prizes each student could receive for earning a certain number of points.

As they accumulated points, the students traveled on the train, trying to reach additional points and prizes.

Reaching the T Shirt Tower meant they could choose an Accelerated Reader T-Shirt. Caps Cow Pasture allowed students to choose a cap.

A miniature boom box awaited students with 135 total points for the year as they arrived at Boom Box City. That's was the top prize the AR train offered.

Another paper train was also located in the library, advertising each prize the students could win. Sun glasses were the most popular with the students, Jim Rosson, principal, said.

Food prizes were also popular, courtesy of Burger King, Central's Adopt-A-School partner.

Every nine weeks, the two top AR students in each class was treated to a free meal at the fast-food restaurant located at Rip Griffin's.

"They loved it," Rosson said. Students were eligible to win this treat only once this year in an effort to allow more students to participate.

Students could also earn free food items from Burger King as they reached certain reading goals.

Rosson said Burger King has been very good to Central students throughout the school year.

The AR Program is an excellent complement to the school's regular reading program, Rosson said. AR books are arranged in a special section in the library. Each is also labeled according to its reading level.

To take the computerized test, students could use either a computer in the computer lab or one in the back of their classroom. The tests helped to gauge their mastery of the book's content.

Teachers checked out AR books for their class, based on students' interests and reading ability.

TAPPS (Targeting All Primary Parents and Students) grant funds which the school received this past school year allowed the school to purchase AR materials.

Next school year, the school will receive additional computers through Academics 2000 which will enhance the AR assessment procedure.

Central has an AR Committee which regularly meets before school begins to evaluate and improve the program. Members include Rosson, teachers and other support staff.

For 1997-1998, Rosson said they will work up a Pocohantas display that will keep tracks of the students' points using the woods as the major theme.

That will also be changed mid-term in an effort to keep the AR promotions fresh and stimulating.

Rosson said Central will also sponsor a one-day seminar on Creating a World-Class Reader, tentatively set for July.

This program correlates with the AR Program and is designed to introduce participants to the Reading Renissance Techniques.

Rosson said they hope to be able to invite other school district personnel to attend as well.

The five top AR readers at Central include Celina Wilson, 488.4; Glyn Wright, 305; Christi Williams, 300.3; Seth Cooper, 266.3; Emily Jones, 222.5.

Other top AR readers include Austin Brunson, 151.1; Blake Seale, 92.3; Ashley Flores, 51.6; Sirena Medrano, 72.7; Christopher Smith, 69; Samantha Pena, 89; Kimberly Rodriguez, 102.9; Eric Martinez, 68.6; Yuliana Arellano, 52.4.

Others are Austin Lyle, 72,4; Cassi Hernandez, 18; Ernesto Arellano, 4; Gina Hermasillo, 5; Zackery Rivera, 5.

Third graders had read throughout the school year but kindergarten and first grade students started during the second semester.

For the just-completed school year, Kathy Brooks, Central's reading specialist, helped coordinate the school's various programs. Each month, the school also sponsored a workshop designed to help parents learn how they can help their child/children become better readers.

Memo: loan forgiveness tied to China deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Then-GOP Chairman Haley Barbour discussed assisting a Hong Kong businessman with deals in China two years ago if the businessman would absorb a $2.2 million loan to Barbour's nonprofit group, a lobbyist's letter alleges.

"Forgiveness (of the loan) was always contingent upon Mr. (Ambrous) Young getting something in return that would justify this kind of generous gift," Richard Richards, a lobbyist and business partner of Young, wrote in a Sept. 17, 1996, letter to Barbour.

Shortly after the late 1994 loan, Young, Barbour and Richards made plans to travel to China "for the purpose of seeing if we could facilitate some business in China that Mr. Young had in mind," Richards wrote in the letter.

Barbour said Richards' letter was wrong.

"Neither the Youngs, Richards, nor anyone else ever asked me to help them 'facilitate' any business or even told me about any business or deal in which they were involved," Barbour said in a statement.

"I never tried to help them with any business in China, the U.S. or anywhere else," he said.

He noted that at the time Richards' letter was written, Richards was upset because Barbour's group ended up defaulting on $500,000 of the bank loan, leaving Young to cover the rest.

The letter was among 400 pages from Barbour's National Policy Forum turned over to Senate investigators Friday as part of the probe into illegal foreign political donations and other campaign finance abuses.

Richards was out of town and unavailable for comment, his Utah office said. He did not immediately return a call to his Washington office.

Investigators are trying to determine whether Barbour's National Policy Forum wrongly claimed tax-exempt status, whether it was misused to assist the Republican Party and whether the bank loan guaranteed by Young's company amounted to an illegally disguised foreign donation to the GOP.

The IRS recently concluded that NPF's activities were "too Republican" and did not deserve tax-exempt status, officials have said. The group has closed its door.

The documents show that in the minds of Young and Richards, the line between the policy forum and the Republican National Committee was blurred.

When the forum missed payments on the bank loan, Richards wrote to Barbour at his Republican National Committee office in June 1996, saying Young "expects the committee to make payments on this note when due."

A letter from an RNC attorney a month later indicated that the committee might consider taking over as guarantor of the loan, which would have relieved Young of financial risk.

Internet growing strong at Bullard's Computer Solutions

Bullard's Computer Solutions, Inc. has reached customer 220 on its Internet service.

"This aspect of our business has really taken off in the last few months," said Drew Bullard, president of the company. "We are providing busy free, fast, reliable service at an affordable price and this seems to have struck a chord with our customers."

Bullard's Computer Solutions, Inc. also offers web page design for Internet advertising. Numerous businesses are enjoying increased sales leads from web sites designed by Computer Solutions.

Bullard's Computer Solutions, Inc. is a local company whose primary customer base is Scurry County. As a computer store, it is ideally equipped to help customers with their Internet or hardware related questions and as a local merchant, Computer Solutions has a strong incentive to keep its customer base satisfied.

Bullard's Computer Solutions has extremely competitive prices on new computers and upgrades.

"Some people think because we are local, we can't compete with the big discount stores. But we build our own computers and generally come in lower than our competitors. In addition, we give you a high level of support," said Bullard.

To have your Internet questions answered or for free consulting about web site advertising, hardware, or software, call 573-4801, or come by Bullard's Computer Solutions at 3405 College Ave.

Bardot wants ex-husband to pay $51,000

PARIS (AP) — Brigitte Bardot has raised the stakes in a battle over kiss-and-tell books, asking a French court to order her ex-husband to pay her $51,000.

The request for the privacy and copyright damages over Jacques Charrier's book "My Answer to BB" came Friday. The former film star also wants the court to ban the book, which details the couple's three-year marriage.

Clooney enjoyed playing Batman

NEW YORK (AP) — George Clooney seems to have it made as a TV doctor. He says Batman's life is pretty cool, too.

Clooney, who will make his debut as the Caped Crusader in this summer's film "Batman and Robin," got a kick out of the role.

"Playing Batman is really fun, and fun is how I like to work because I'm not that deep an actor," the "ER" co-star said in the June 9 issue of react magazine.

Senior Center News

Senior citizens will be honoring fathers and saluting the American flag at a special program for Fathers Day and Flag Day on Friday, starting at 11 a.m.

Recognition will be extended to the youngest and oldest father and to others as well. The Sunshine Choir will lead a singalong of patriotic songs. Participants are encouraged to wear red, white and blue that day.

A 42 "trash" tournament will begin at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday. The Social Security Administration will be at the center Tuesday from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1-2 p.m.

The Kitchen Band will perform at Snyder Oaks at 10 a.m. Wednesday. The AARP Executive Board will meet in the conference room at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday.

A program honoring veterans of the Korean War is planned for June 27 beginning at 10 a.m. All Korean War veterans are encouraged to share memories of that era, June, 1950 through July, 1953, which will be typed and distributed to participants at the observance.

Veterans are encouraged to call Norma Laywell, director, at 573-4035, and to make plans to attend this special tribute.

Volunteers are needed to help deliver meals to homebound persons. Meals leave the center at 11 a.m. and volunteers are back by noon.

Both drivers and "hoppers" who take meals from the van to the house, are needed. Volunteers do not have to be senior citizens, and older students who have time on their hands would be most welcome. Please call the office if you can help.

The center, located at 2603 Ave. M, is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Nutritious meals are served daily at noon, and transportation to the building is available.

Jazz take advantage of Bulls on home court

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Karl Malone slipped on a sleeveless black T-shirt, jumped on one of his Harley motorcycles and took the long route to the Delta Center.

He wanted to feel the wind whoosh past his 6-foot-9, 256-pound body and clear his mind of all the negative thoughts that had been building through two games of the NBA Finals.

When he got to the arena Friday night, Malone was ready to demonstrate why he was chosen the league's MVP.

He took the ball aggressively to the basket, hit jumpers, scattered bodies under the boards and even made clutch free throws as he led the Utah Jazz to a 104-93 victory over the Chicago Bulls.

Inspired by an adoring — and ear-splitting — crowd, Malone had 37 points, 10 rebounds, four steals and three assists as the Jazz officially turned the NBA Finals into an event.

Utah now trails only 2-1 in the best-of-7 series, and has Games 4 and 5 Sunday and Wednesday at home, where it is 47-3 this season.

"We have to pick it up another notch on Sunday," said Malone, who averaged only 21.5 points on 38 percent shooting in the first two games and missed two crucial free throws in the opener. "Well, maybe not higher, but the same. It's going to be tough — those guys were world champions."

Malone, who appeared at his postgame press conference in his black T-shirt, knows one thing that definitely won't change for Game 4.

"I needed that Harley ride, and I guarantee you I'm going to take it again Sunday," he said. "I took the long way here. I normally get here at 4:15. I got here today at 5 minutes to 5. It's just one of those things.

"Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen were laughing at me. They were wearing $5,000 suits and I came with this right here."

Criticized to the point where some even said he simply should hand his MVP trophy to a supposedly more-deserving Jordan, Malone didn't want all of his critics to suddenly be his friends again.

"Down 0-2, people didn't want to talk to you. People wanted to kick you in the rear end," he said. "Now, all of a sudden, you won a game and they want to pat you on the back.

"I don't want to talk to anybody when I leave this room, and I don't want nobody patting me."

The Bulls weren't anxious to pat him on the back, but they did offer plenty of praise after the man known as the Mailman delivered.

"That's the Karl Malone we all know. You have to expect that he was going to come here and play that type of basketball," Jordan said. "Our defense never reacted well toward Karl's explosiveness."

Jordan scored 26 points, but was only 9-for-22 from the floor and attempted only one shot in the third quarter as Utah built a 77-53 lead.

He and Pippen, who finished with 27 points and tied an NBA Finals record with seven 3-pointers, led a furious fourth-quarter rally that brought the Bulls within seven points in the closing minutes.

But the Jazz withstood the charge by going 14-for-14 from the foul line in the final 2:10.

Malone, who has a reputation for choking at the free-throw line, made four of them. Greg Foster, who came off the bench to score a career-high 17 points, made the first two to stall the Bulls' comeback. And John Stockton capped his 17-point, 12-assist night by making the last six.

"We got very casual and didn't handle the ball well," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said. "When you have a big lead, you tend to get conservative. You play not to lose, instead of doing the things that got you the lead.

"Fortunately, we had enough of a lead that we were able to hang on and make our free throws."

Not only did the Bulls fail to take a 3-0 series lead — an advantage that has proven to be insurmountable over the years — they failed to win Game 3 of a series for the first time this postseason.

In each of their four title years (1991, 1992, 1993, 1996), they won their first road game in the finals.

But then again, the Delta Center is no normal road stop. And that's why Utah has won 22 consecutive home games, including nine straight in the playoffs.

Before the game, there were fireworks, balloons and loud music. All through the game, there were mascots, dancers and, of course, screaming fans.

"I was wondering if we were actually going to play the game or not after all that stuff they did," Chicago's Steve Kerr said.

"The Jazz are a good team, this is their building, they only lost a few games here all year. They feed off the crowd. They had a lot more energy than we did right off the bat."

One of Chicago's main energizers, Dennis Rodman, was a nonfactor. He played 24 scoreless minutes and had only three rebounds — 13 fewer than the regular-season average that allowed him to lead the league for the sixth successive year.

"He didn't bring what we need," Pippen said. "The toughness, the intensity, his energy."

Rodman did bring a new hairdo — a burst of colors including magenta, red, blue, yellow, green and orange in a series of splotches.

Big names in Kemper hunt

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — The Kemper Open is producing dream groupings that are a gallery's delight.

As if having Greg Norman and Nick Faldo together for the first two rounds wasn't enough, consider today's third round at the TPC at Avenel course, which included the following pairings:

—Greg Norman and Tom Lehman, both one stroke off the lead;

—Nick Faldo and Nick Price, both two shots out;

—U.S. Open champion Steve Jones and Paul Stankowski, each three strokes down;

—Curtis Strange and Jose Maria Olazabal, also three strokes back; and —John Daly and Paul Azinger, each four shots behind the leaders.

The leaders? Oh, yes, they're playing, too. The final pair of D.A. Wiebring and Mark Wiebe both started with 6-under-par 136s.

"Any time you have a strong field, you really want to play well," said Wiebe, referring to the all-star contingent using the Kemper as a warmup for next week's U.S. Open in nearby Bethesda. "Everybody's kind of jacked this week. It makes it a little bit sweeter."

Altogether, 29 players were within four strokes of the lead at the midway point. The one with the momentum, however, was Faldo.

Playing early Friday morning, before the greens began to sprout in patches of yellow, Faldo shot the round of the day, a bogey-free 6-under-par 65.

"It was very simple, play better and putt better," said Faldo, who opened with a 73 on Thursday.

Faldo needed only 26 putts to complete his round.

Baugh looks to first win

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Maybe, just maybe, after 24 years on the LPGA tour, this is Laura Baugh's year to finally win a tournament.

If she does take the trophy at this weekend's $600,000 Oldsmobile Classic, she won't be alone. Despite being seven months pregnant with her seventh child, Baugh is tied for second halfway through the event.

Leader Kelly Robbins fired an 8-under-par 64 in Friday's second round to take the lead at 9-under-par.

Baugh and Leta Lindley are two strokes behind Robbins. Lindley shot a 69 Friday at the Walnut Hills Country Club, while Baugh posted a 67.

While pregnancy might tire other golfers, Baugh played better as the day went on. She birdied four of the last six holes in the second round.

"I feel better, maybe because the weather is good," she said. "I didn't play well the last two weeks. I thought I was too pregnant."

The tournament is Baugh's third event this year. Baugh has finished second seven times, the last time in 1986.

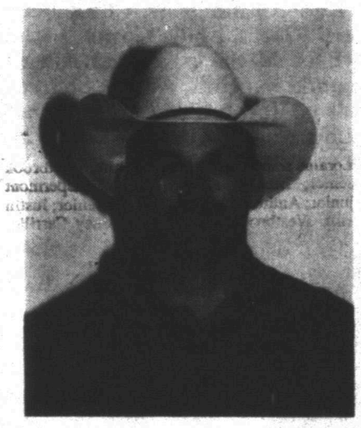

"It doesn't bother me," she said of playing while pregnant. "This is the first time I had a baby kick while I'm out there, though. I have finished in the top 10 when I was pregnant."

An eagle on the 460-yard, par-5 sixth hole got Robbins' round rolling.

WTC coach, team honored nationally

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Western Texas College rodeo team and its coach, Todd Danley, garnered national honors during the College National Finals Rodeo that concludes Sunday.

WTC was named Rawhide Team of the Year, an NIRA honor that recognizes a college program that promotes positive lifestyles, alcohol and drug abuse prevention, physical fitness, goal training and other criteria. WTC's special rodeo was one of the factors considered. The nation-wide competition is rewarded with a $2,000 scholarship.

Todd Danley

At a coaches breakfast Friday morning, Danley was named NIRA Coach of the Year. Danley has been WTC coach for three years and is a former student and rodeo standout.

"It's quite an honor," Danley said. "To be honored as the best in the nation is about as high an honor as you can get."

With two performances left, the men's team is ranked 8th. Danley said it appeared that four Westerners would make the short go.

In the average, Pete Ellis is winning second in saddle bronc riding after scoring a 72 in the third round. Ellis now has 215 points, just one point behind the leader, Rance Bray of Panhandle State University.

Teammate Jeff Decker is tied for third place in the same event with Travis Masters of the University of Tennessee-Martin, each with 202 points.

In other standings, Rusty Henard is sixth in team roping and Chad Maynard is in 10th place in bareback riding. The top ten advance to Sunday's finals.

Snyder teams eliminated from tourney

PLAINVIEW — All three Snyder teams were eliminated Friday from the National Little Dribblers basketball tournament.

The senior all-stars defeated Levelland No. 2, 44-27, before falling to Levelland No. 1, 30-24, Friday night.

In the first game, Ashley Delce led Snyder with nine points while Cameron Mackey tossed in eight and Whitney Webb seven. Against Levelland No. 1, Morgan Clements and Ashley Delce each canned eight.

In the major division, the Snyder all-stars were nipped by Pflugerville, 40-39. Hailey Putman led Snyder with 11 points and Chaelyn Robinson pitched in nine.

In the junior division, the Snyder 'stars were eliminated by Plainview No. 1, 37-13.

LOCALS' GRANDSON — Jason Tavarez led the Robert Lee golf team to a third place finish in the Class A state tournament. The son of Mario and Sheryl Tavarez of Robert Lee, the senior was medalist in district, runnerup in regional competition and fifth medalist at state. Grandparents are Bill and Merle Evans and Raymond and Luisa Tavarez, all of Snyder, and the late Cruse Tavarez.

Bagwell preserves Astros' win

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres almost caught up with the Houston Astros. Jeff Bagwell wouldn't let them.

San Diego scored six runs in the fifth inning, closing a seven-run deficit to 7-6, only to see Bagwell hit a solo homer in the sixth. The Padres added another run, then Bagwell made three great plays in the last two innings. The clincher was starting an odd, game-ending double play Friday night that preserved the Astros' 8-7 win.

"There's no question who was the player of the game," Houston manager Larry Dierker said of his first baseman.

"If you look at it, really, we probably should have lost that game," Bagwell said. "They had two great chances, in the eighth and ninth, and we were just very fortunate to come up with a win."

Actually, the Astros were just fortunate they have Bagwell on their side.

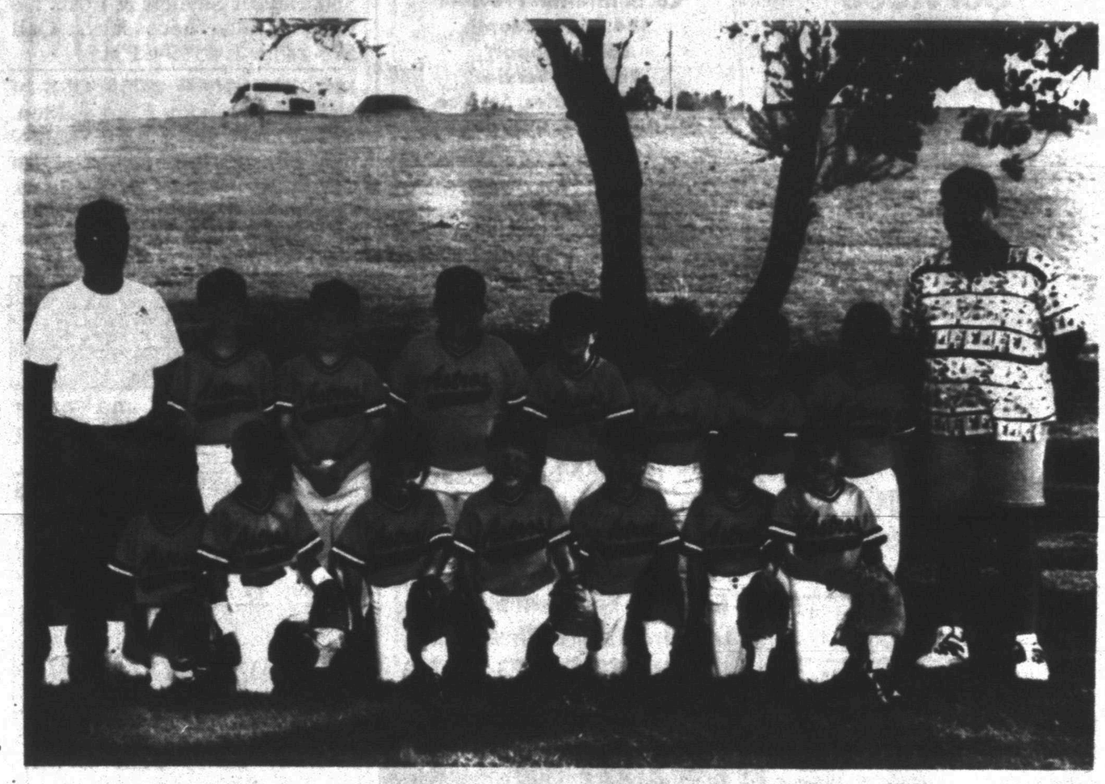

Bagwell made a nice diving grab of Steve Finley's liner in the eighth, when the Padres left the bases loaded. San Diego then put runners on first and third with one out in the ninth, with the first out coming when Bagwell forced Chris Gomez — representing the winning run — at second on Trey Beamon's bunt.

Quilvio Veras then hit a line drive to first base that Bagwell dropped, but he touched the bag and threw to catcher Brad Ausmus, trapping Archi Cianfrocco in a rundown. Ausmus threw to third baseman Tim Bogar, who tagged Cianfrocco for the final out.

Bagwell said the ball bounced off the heel of both hands.

Padres manager Bruce Bochy said Cianfrocco thought Bagwell was going to second, so he tried to score.

"That's what defense does, it wins games for you.

Five on all-district squads

Freshman infielder Jerek Brown was a first team pick. Named to the second team were freshman catcher Jenson Gainer, freshman outfielder Richard Wilkins, sophomore infielder Perry Jamison and senior designated hitter Thad Davis.

"With the strength and success of our district, I am excited that we had five young men represent Ira schools on the all-district squads," said Coach Joee Gainer.

"The Bulldogs have 12 lettermen, all underclassmen, returning and this should provide a great opportunity for out team," Gainer added.

Throw error fatal to Texas

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Texas Rangers have come to take Ivan Rodriguez's defensive brilliance for granted.

But the Gold Glove catcher's rare error cost Texas the go-ahead run Friday night in Kansas City's 2-1 victory over the Rangers.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fifth, Sal Fasano pounded Burkett's pitch into the ground in front of the plate and Rodriguez, the American League's Gold Glove catcher, snatched up the ball. He threw to first. But the ball sailed over Will Clark's head and Fasano wound up on second on the two-base error.

"It's the first mistake he's made this year," Texas starter John Burkett said of Rodriguez.

A few minutes later, Fasano took off from third when Jay Bell hit a slow roller toward third baseman Dean Palmer.

Palmer threw home and Fasano appeared to be doomed. But he slid under the tag of Rodriguez, scoring what turned out to be the winning run in a swiftly played and well pitched game.

"He was back anticipating for me to bowl into him," Fasano said. "But I happened to slither in there under him. I don't know how, but I did."

"He got under my legs," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez was making no excuses for the error.

LSU, Alabama to clash in College World Series finals

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Alabama beat Miami for the second straight day to set up an all-SEC College World Series championship game Saturday.

Matt Frick hit a three-run homer in the Crimson Tide's 8-2 victory on Friday.

Defending champion Louisiana State and Alabama, seeking its first NCAA baseball title, are each 56-13. The Tide won three of five games against the Tigers during the final two weeks of the season, including 28-2 on May 10, the worst loss in LSU history.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS: Scurry County Commissioners' Court will open bid proposals for the sale of a 1991 Ford Crown Victoria, 4 door Sedan with the police package, June 16, 1997, at 10:00 a.m., during Regular Session of the Commissioners' Court. The vehicle may be inspected at the Law Enforcement Center, Snyder, Texas.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will conduct an accreditation survey of D.M. Cogdell Memorial Hospital Long Term Care on July 24-25, 1997. The purpose of the survey will be to evaluate the organization's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards. The survey results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded the organization.

Joint Commission standards deal with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representatives at the time of the survey. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the Joint Commission no later than five working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. Such requests should be addressed to:

Division of Accreditation Operations
Organization Liaison
Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations
One Renaissance Boulevard
Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181

The Joint Commission will acknowledge such requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time, and place of the meeting.

This notice was posted in accordance with the Joint Commission's requirements.

Card Of Thanks

Thank You

Perhaps you sent a lovely card,
or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray.
If so we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
as any friend could say.
Perhaps you were not there at all,
Just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did say to console our hearts,
We Thank You so much whatever the part.

The Family of Douglas Vernon

Kevin McGlaun

McGlaun named national director

ARLINGTON — Faison-Stone, Inc, has named Kevin McGlaun, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Doug McGlaun, formerly of Snyder, to the post of national director of marketing.

McGlaun will be responsible for marketing Las Colinas, the 12,000 acre master-planned business and residential community in Irving.

Prior to joining Faison-Stone, McGlaun was a consulting senior manager with E&Y Kenneth Leventhan Real Estate Group, the real estate consulting arm of Ernst & Young. He has more than 14 years experience in the real estate industry, nine of which were spent providing real estate advisory services.

Since joining Faison-Stone, McGlaun has been named to the board of directors of The Greater Irving-Las Colinas Chamber of Commerce.

McGlaun, his wife, Nancy, and their two sons, Nicholas and Jacob, live in Arlington.

Three named to honor lists

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University has named its honor students for outstanding academic performance.

The Dean's Honor Roll recognizes students taking at least 15 semester hours who have maintained at least a 3.75 grade point ratio. Courtney Lynn Anderson of Snyder has been named to the Dean's List.

A second designation, "Distinguished Student," recognizes students who earned a 3.25 GPR while taking at least 15 hours. Among those recognized were: Shelley Leigh Anderson, senior math major; and Sarah Key Fisher, junior aero space engineering major.

Jones picked for project

PORTALES, N.M. — Twelve school teachers have been accepted into the 1997 High Plains Writing Project on the campus of Eastern New Mexico University in Portales.

The program is part of the National Writing Project, associated with the University of California-Berkely. Fellows in the High Plains Writing Project join teachers of all grade levels and subject areas who want to improve the quality of their students' writing.

Participants also get to meet and talk with professional authors about the writing/publishing process.

HERMLEIGH A-B HONOR ROLL — These Hermleigh students received A-B Honor Roll recognition for the 1996-1997 school year. Second grade: Kelvin Doggett, Nicholas Eaton, Kristi Jones, Brian Molina; third grade: Robby Anderson, Dylyn Richards, Georgiana Smith; fourth grade: James Coonrod, Shae Rinehart; fifth grade: Courtney Bridges, Toni Jackson, Dustin Williamson, Valerie West; seventh grade: Christina Arellano, Lacy Doggett, Kendra Nachlinger; ninth grade: Trina Chandler, Joey Garza; twelfth grade: Brandy Gill, TJ Wood. Doctors say radical process has treated 'incurable' lupus

CHICAGO (AP) — Six months ago, Heather Markel was dangerously ill with lupus, an incurable disease that had attacked her lungs and kidneys and forced her to rely on steroids for strength.

Now doctors who destroyed Markel's immune system and then revived it say lupus may be vulnerable to a new procedure called a stem cell transplant.

Markel, a 24-year-old medical student from Millersburg, Ohio, shows no signs of lupus in her system two months after the treatment, said Dr. Richard Burt at Northwestern Memorial Hospital. She is the first patient to undergo the procedure.

Markel contracted lupus when she was 11. The disease attacked her blood and central nervous system, leaving her with failing kidneys and soaring blood pressure when she came to Northwestern in January. Thirteen years of treatment with steroids and chemotherapy had apparently failed.

But since the transplant in April, Markel's kidneys have returned to normal, her strength is back and she has sharply lowered the amount of steroids she is taking.

"I think about what it would be like to be normal, not to take medicines," Markel said Friday. "I don't know really what it's like to not go into the hospital every time you get sick."

Burt and others cautioned that it is still early for a definitive answer since the disease is characterized by active and inactive periods.

"We're just going to have to continue to follow her," Burt said. "But at least we have a short-term remission with no evidence of disease."

Lupus turns a victim's immune system against their body. The worst cases attack the joints, tissues and organs. Symptoms range from arthritis, skin lesions and fatigue to heart attacks, strokes and kidney failure.

Gunman shot co-workers over gay taunts, police say

SANTA FE SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Police say an inspector at a plastics factory opened fire on his co-workers because he believed they were taunting him about being gay.

"He was heard yelling 'I am not gay!' in a very angry manner, so that appears to be the motive for the shooting," police spokesman Chuck Drylie said.

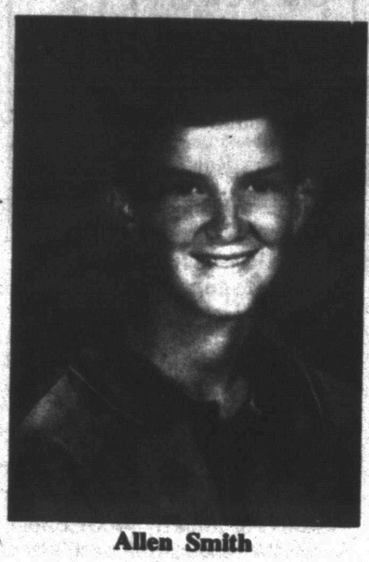

Daniel Marsden opened fire Thursday at Omni Plastics, killing two workers and wounding three employees and a visiting supplier. Marsden later shot himself.

After the shootings, employee Alfred Garcia said Marsden had told co-workers recently that he was gay. He had argued with at least two employees Thursday morning, but it was unclear who was involved and what was said.

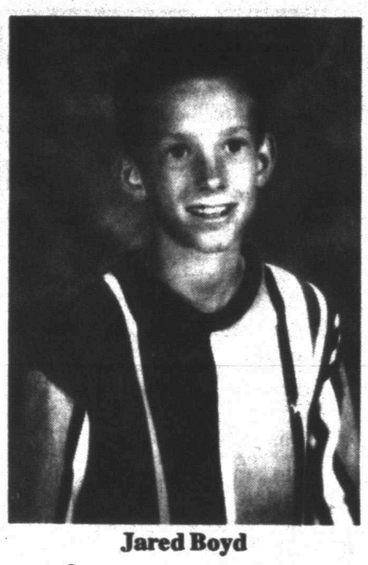

"He apparently interpreted it as if everybody were talking behind his back," said Joe Plourde, Omni vice president and general manager.

Ritz Diner now open in Snyder

The Ritz Diner, located at 1715 26th, is now open from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays. Owners are two couples from Colorado City, Carl and Mary Reeves and Morris and Sue Sewell.

The eating establishment was formerly B's Country Kitchen.

Breakfast will be served from 7 to 11 a.m. and lunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. In addition, they plan to accommodate private parties after regular hours, with reservations. "We also plan to be open following the Ritz Theatre productions," Mrs. Sewell said.

Their restaurant includes a salad bar, and Mrs. Reeves said take out orders are welcome by calling 573-9149.

Carl and Mary Reeves have been in the food service business since 1965, which includes managing Dairy Queen for 15 years and 13 years self-employed. Sewell is employed at Express Medical Care in Big Spring and has owned and managed convenience stores.

Felon jailed: burglary of habitation charge

A burglary reported at 10 o'clock Friday morning from a residence on FM 1606 resulted in a 33-year-old Snyder man being arrested a short time later.

Deputies arrested Rosalio Gutierrez, of 1406 20th St., at 3:15 p.m. He was charged with burglary of a habitation and possession of a firearm by a felon.

Bond was set at $17,500 for Gutierrez, who remained in jail Saturday morning.

At 1:41 a.m. Saturday, officers arrested an 18-year-old female at U.S. Highway 180 and 84 on seven Howard County warrants for the issuance of bad checks.

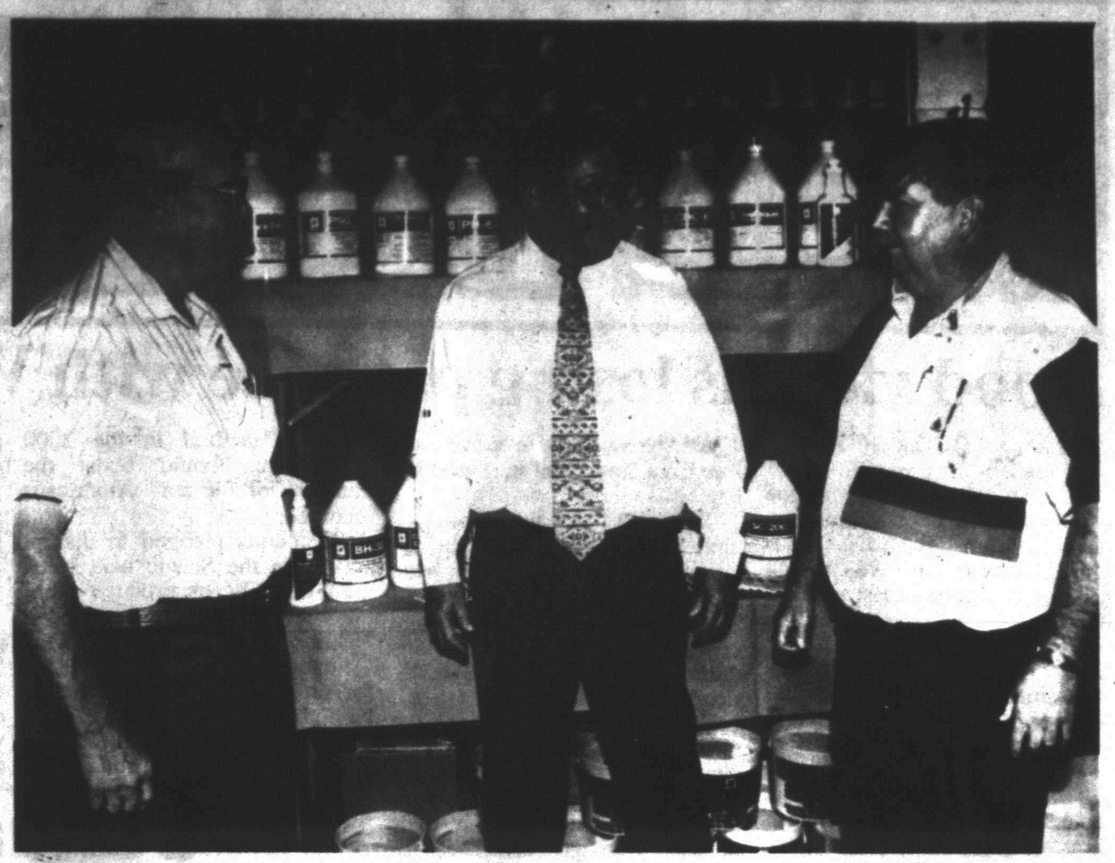

In activity Friday, Kenny Miller requested an officer at Snyder Signs at 2100 25th St. in reference to someone stealing a two-wheel trailer from the location. An offense report for Class A theft was submitted.

Joe Castilleja requested an officer at 12:39 p.m. at the Travel Inn parking lot in reference to someone damaging the vinyl top on his 1991 Camaro. An offense report for Class A criminal mischief was submitted.

An offense report for criminal mischief was submitted at 8:26 p.m. in reference to a window of a vehicle parked at Snyder Lanes being broken. An offense report for Class B criminal mischief was submitted.

An offense report for Class C assault/family violence was submitted at 5:15 Saturday morning.

Dairy industry sued over hardened arteries

SEATTLE (AP) — A self-described milk-a-holic is suing the dairy industry, claiming that a lifetime of drinking whole milk contributed to his clogged arteries and a minor stroke.

Norman Mayo, 61, believes he might have avoided his health problems if he had been warned on milk cartons about fat and cholesterol.

"I drank milk like some people drink beer or water," he said. "I've always loved a nice cold glass of milk, and I've drank a lot of it."

The federal lawsuit names Safeway and the Dairy Farmers of Washington as defendants. Mayo wants Safeway to put warning labels on all its dairy products, and he wants similar warnings on all dairy industry ads and commercials.

"If tobacco products can be required to have warning labels, why not dairy products?" said Mayo, a former smoker. "I think milk is just as dangerous as tobacco."

He's also seeking reimbursement of his medical expenses and unspecified compensation for personal injury.

"It's my opinion that the dairy industry's to blame," he said. "They push their dairy products without warning you of the hazards."

Since his stroke three years ago, Mayo drinks only nonfat or skim milk.

Neither Safeway nor the state dairy farmers has responded to the lawsuit.

"I'm pretty sure we would plead not guilty and suggest this is without merit," said Blair Thompson, a spokesman for the Washington Dairy Products Commission.

Flood victims losing patience with Washington

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Homeless for a month, out of work and bounced from one temporary shelter to another, Ranee Steffan has strong words for lawmakers in Washington bickering over a disaster relief bill.

"You are playing with our lives," she said Friday. "This isn't some game. ... You should come here and walk in my shoes for a day."

President Clinton has promised to veto a spending bill that includes $5.6 billion for victims of disasters in 35 states, including the flood-ravaged Dakotas and Minnesota. Clinton opposes unrelated, Republican-backed amendments to the bill.

Mrs. Steffan, her husband and two children are living in a sweltering, 35-foot trailer. She said legislators apparently think flood victims are "getting along just fine."

All she wants is to move back into a real home and start working again.

That isn't likely until Congress and Clinton work out their differences. While disaster victims have received some aid for housing and food, the federal relief package includes money for homes destroyed or heavily damaged by flooding.

For weeks in April and May, the swollen Red River swamped Grand Forks and nearby East Grand Forks, Minn., forcing more than 50,000 people from their homes. Damage estimates in Grand Forks run as high as $1 billion.

The aid package cleared Congress on Thursday. Clinton was expected to veto the bill because it includes provisions to prevent a government shutdown this fall even if spending bills aren't in place and to ban a sampling method in the 2000 census that could boost the number of urban Americans recorded.

Democrats pledged to disrupt actions in the Senate next week until Republicans produce a bill that is acceptable to the president.

The Republican National Committee has announced plans for radio ads in Minnesota and North Dakota this weekend urging Clinton to sign. The mayors of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks sent a letter to Clinton on Friday asking him to do the same.

Jack Carroll, chairman of the Grand Forks Chamber of Commerce, offered his idea to speed passage.

"If you don't think there's a problem ... then stand in line at the Salvation Army for your next change of clothes," he said. "And do that each and every day until you sign a bill, and then see if you think we have a problem."

Government denies dropping missile as possible crash cause

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal investigators denied a report that they have ruled out a missile as the cause of the TWA Flight 800 explosion off Long Island last year that killed 230 people.

FBI spokesman Joseph Valiquette said that a missile, bomb or mechanical problem all remain possible causes of the July 1996 disaster.

"It's as true today as it has been for the last 11 months," he said. "All three theories are still actively under investigation. Nothing has yet been eliminated."

Citing anonymous sources close to the investigation, CBS News reported Friday that officials had ruled out a missile as a cause.

Peter Goelz, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said investigators have not found evidence of a bomb or missile. But he said nothing had been ruled out.

Theories that the Paris-bound 747 was brought down by a missile fired by terrorists or accidentally by the U.S. military have circulated on the Internet and in news reports since the crash.

Investigators have insisted they have no proof to support such an explanation and have ridiculed the "friendly-fire" theory as bunk.

CBS also reported that a mysterious streak of light seen by dozens of witnesses just before the explosion may have been flaming jet fuel — not a missile.

CBS said investigators believe that after an explosion in the center fuel tank, part of the plane continued to climb. Trailing the jet was a stream of flaming jet fuel from a ruptured fuel tank on the plane's right wing.

Obituaries

Louis Alexander

1915-1997

Funeral service is set for 2 p.m. Sunday in the Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home Chapel for Louis E. Alexander, a retired employee of The Texas Pipeline Co.

The Rev. Greg Taylor of Big Spring will officiate and a Masonic graveside service will follow in the Snyder Cemetery.

Mr. Alexander, 82, died Thursday, June 5, in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Born March 17, 1915 in Teague, he married Rubie Williams on May 20, 1944 in London, England. Mr. Alexander, a long-time resident of Snyder, retired as area supervisor with The Texas Pipeline Co. after 50 years. He was preceded in death by a brother, Jack Alexander.

Survivors include his wife, Rubie Alexander of Snyder; two daughters, Ruth Lea Montgomery of Deer Park and Gail Dawn Duckworth of Hobbs, N.M.; two sons, Michael Wayne Alexander of Baytown and Pat Alexander of Snyder; two sisters, Jimmie Angel of Fort Worth and Louise Prater of McAllen; two brothers, Hardy Ray Alexander of Fruitvale and Mike Alexander of Pasadena; 11 grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Gladys Morgan

1903-1997

SAN ANGELO — Service for Gladys Eileen Morgan of San Angelo will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. She is the mother of Sue Dicky Griffin of Snyder. Burial will follow in the Lawnhaven Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Morgan, 93, died Thursday, June 5, at Baptist Memorial Nursing Center.

She was born Dec. 10, 1903 in Garfield County, Okla., on a farm won by her grandfather in the "Sooner" race for land in the Cherokee Strip. When she was eight, her family moved to Sapulpa and later to Bristow where she graduated from high school and was a student nurse for a short time.

She married Ernest Morgan on Sept. 25, 1922 and they lived numerous places in the Oklahoma and Texas oil fields before locating in El Paso. Later they lived in South Texas, Rangley, Colo., Boise, Idaho, returning to San Angelo to retire. She was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, holding many offices including a genealogy teacher.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1978.

Other survivors include a son, Jack Morgan of Christoval; one brother, Eugene Combs of California; nine grandchildren; 11 great-grandchildren; six great-great-grandchildren.

Billie Harrison

1924-1997

COLORADO CITY — Funeral service for Billie Margaret Harrison, the mother of Patti Palmer of Snyder, was set for 4 p.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Ted Spear, pastor of the church, was to officiate and burial was to follow in the Colorado City Cemetery under the direction of Kiker-Seale Funeral Home.

Mrs. Harrison, 73, died Thursday, June 5, in the Mitchell County Hospital.

Born April 25, 1924 in Colorado City, she was a lifetime resident and worked as a secretary for the Colorado City Independent School District. She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

She married Jimmy Harrison on Aug. 10, 1942 in Corpus Christi. She was preceded in death by her parents, Bronson and Ethel Gregory, and a brother, John Richard Gregory.

Survivors also include her husband, Jimmy Harrison of Colorado City; a son, James Harrison of Montrose, Colo.; eight grandchildren; and three great-granddaughters.

Carol Bullard enjoys teaching art

For the past two years, she has served as Snyder ISD's artist in education.

Her 28-week program for pre-kindergarten through fifth grade students is coordinated through the Texas Commission on the Arts, Arts in Education Visual Arts Program.

She is one of several art instructors working within the same program throughout the state. There is no set curriculum, rather each artist can create his or her own lesson plans.

Local school funds combined with TCA grant monies have made it possible for her to do what she loves.

For the past two years, she has coordinated special art classes at the five elementary schools.

Carol's lessons go way beyond just arts and crafts projects. She teaches visual learning and her sequential curriculum allows students to combine knowledge with imagination. And they love it.

So does Carol. Her students' artwork is so "creative and original" that it makes her smile every time she sees examples. She especially likes the open-ended projects.

Last school year, just thinking about the day's agenda was enough to put her in a "really good mood," she said.

She has received a lot of positive feedback from both parents and teachers.

Throughout the 1996-1997 school year, Carol rotated from one elementary campus to another, beginning with Northeast and continuing in descending order to East, Central and Stanfield. At each school, she spent six weeks working with one grade level and then devoted a week to pre-kindergarten through first grade students.

At West, Carol taught "Sherry's Kids," the self-contained students.

The art projects changed from the first year to this second year, and each lesson built on what was taught previously.

Carol said she was amazed by what the students had remembered. An example: the proper cutting technique demonstrated last school year.

She said students from pre-kindergarten through the fifth grade have been very attentive and some have already begun to apply something they learned in art to another subject or classroom project.

Prior to teaching at each school, Carol has conferences with teachers to get their ideas on what they would like to see their students learn.

"I like to choose projects that teachers can adapt for their students," she explained. They discuss what they would like repeated from the previous year as well as ideas for new projects.

She loves to "brainstorm" ideas.

She also coordinates her lessons with what the students are learning in class.

Carol gears the daily hour-long sessions to the students' developmental level, and she varies each lesson as much as possible.

She packs a lot into each lesson. Basic elements can include art history, culture awareness, visual perception, aesthetic awareness, critical thinking and discussion, as well as art production, lines, shapes, forms, colors and texture.

SJHS teacher will pursue 2nd career

Sue McGlothlin-Candia, longtime Snyder teacher, has retired, but you won't find her sitting down with her feet propped up. Instead, she is making a career change to a different profession entirely — alcohol and drug abuse counselor.

She is planning to move to Midland this month to begin working on the 4,000 hours of service work she must complete before she will be able to work as a counselor.

In 1992, Sue earned an associate in science degree in alcohol and drug abuse counseling at Midland College. She is a certified intern but still must perform 4,000 hours of work.

Sue had previously worked the required hours but they have to be renewed every two years.

During the final days of the 1996-1997 school year, Sue reflected on her 27 years in education, 25 with SISD and two in Levelland.

Sue arrived in Snyder in 1962 when she was hired to teach at Lamar Junior High School, then newly opened. She taught for four years before taking a leave of absence when her children, Julie and Kirk Eiring were young.

She returned to the workforce a decade later, serving one year as a secretary in the high school counselor's office before going back into teaching.

By then, Travis and Lamar Junior Highs had combined to form Snyder Junior High School.

Throughout her career, Sue has always taught seventh grade English, spelling, reading and reading

Patsy Taylor is retiring

Patsy Taylor volunteered at North Elementary long before she became a paid full-time employee for Snyder ISD.

Patsy chose North because that's where her two daughters attended school.

During the early 1970s she began substituting as a teacher and secretary. After six years, she was hired as the secretary for James Stehley, Snyder Junior High School principal. Her daughters were both in high school by then and she had intended to work "just a few years."

Four years later, she transferred to the school administration building where she was the secretary for Jack Gorman Sr., then assistant superintendent in charge of personnel.

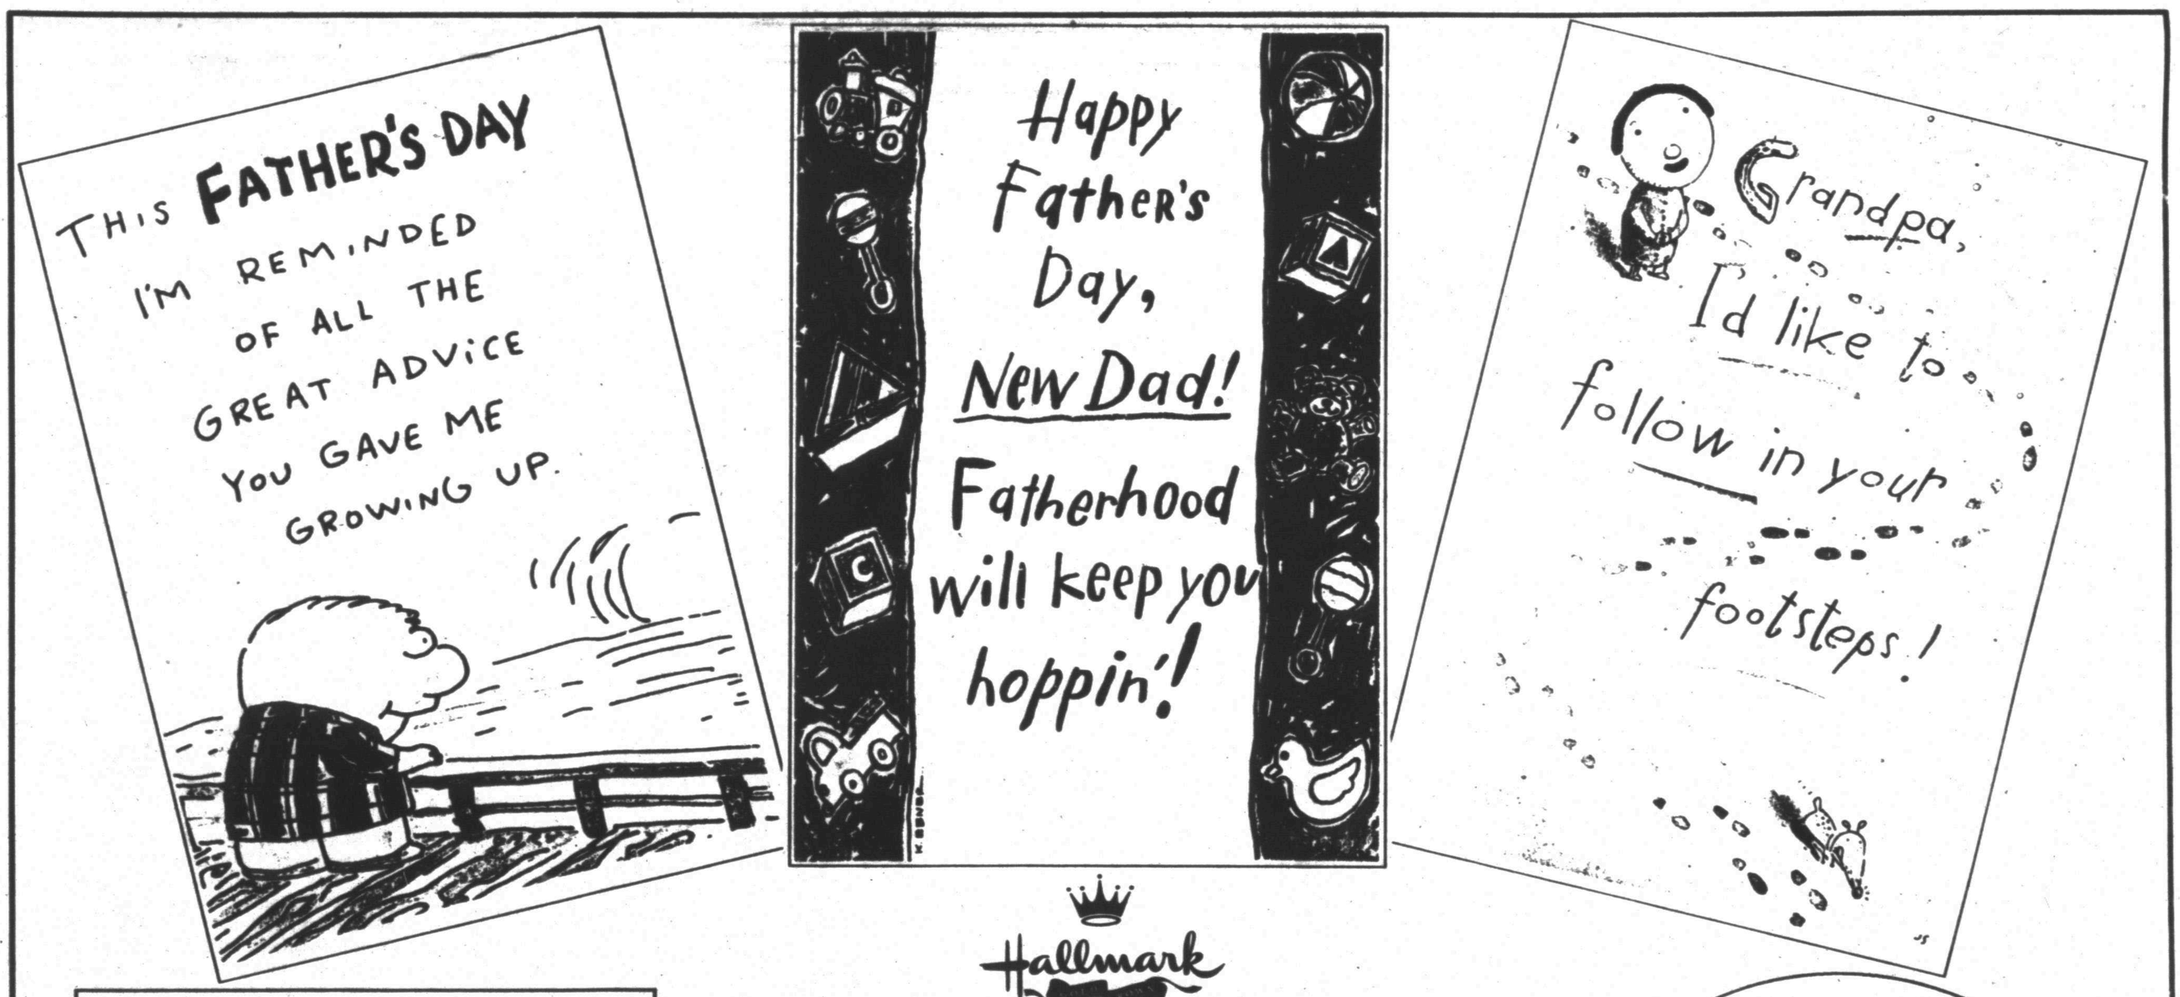

Bill J. Hood was the superintendent at the time. When he retired,

Gillums will celebrate 50th wedding anniversary June 8

A reception will be held from 2-4 p.m. on June 8 at the Hermleigh Community Center to honor Mr. and Mrs. S.H. Gillum in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Their children include Mr. and Mrs. Surry G. Gillum of McAllen, Mr. and Mrs. Ross L. Gillum of Lubbock and Mr. and Mrs. Randy R. Gillum of Abilene.

Virginia Delores Dulin of Loraine and S.H. Gillum were married on June 5, 1947, in Snyder. Gillum attended Texas Tech University. He has stock ranching interests at Hamlin, Aspermont, Yeso, N.M., and Hermleigh where his grandfather, Zeddy P. Gillum, settled in 1878. He was also a rural letter carrier for Rt. 1, Hermleigh for 39 years.

Mrs. Gillum, a homemaker, has been active in community affairs and for over 30 years she volunteered at the nursing homes on Thursdays, fixing residents' hair. Mr. and Mrs. Gillum are active members of the Church of Christ and the Scurry County Historical Society where Gillum serves on the board.

Their grandchildren are Kindra and Tim Gillum of McAllen; Chris Steely and Clint Gillum of Lubbock, Adam Emmert and Miranda Gillum of Abilene, and one great grandchild, Summer Rose Steely.

'Junior League' recipe

JALAPENO SOUTHERN FRIED CHICKEN

- 5 cups buttermilk
- 2 large cloves garlic, peeled and minced
- 2 medium jalapeno peppers, seeded and minced
- 5 to 6 pounds chicken breast halves
- 1-1/2 cups self-rising flour, OR 1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour mixed with 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons finely shredded orange peel
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 8 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup honey
- Vegetable oil for frying
- Jalapeno slices for garnish

Combine the buttermilk, garlic and half the minced jalapenos in a bowl.

Rinse chicken in cold water and pat dry with paper towels. Place in a large bowl. Pour the buttermilk mixture over. Cover and chill 1-1/2 to 2 hours.

In a medium bowl, combine flour, orange peel, salt, basil and cayenne. Drain the chicken. Coat the chicken in the flour mixture, shaking off excess. Place coated chicken on waxed paper and let stand at room temperature 20 minutes.

In a small heavy saucepan, melt the butter over low heat. Add remaining minced jalapeno pepper. Cook and stir for 1 minute. Stir in the honey. Bring to a boil, reduce to simmer and simmer for 15 minutes. Remove from heat, cover and keep warm.

Meanwhile, in a heavy 12-inch skillet, heat 1/4 to 1/2 inch of cooking oil to 375 degrees. Add the chicken in batches and fry for 5 to 7 minutes per side, or until crisp and golden brown. Drain on paper towels. Transfer to platter. Garnish with jalapeno slices and serve with honey-jalapeno sauce on side.

Yield: serves 10 to 12.

Up the sticky slope

By Phillip Alder

B.W.M. Young, the British administrator, suggested that "everyone should learn to do one thing supremely well because he likes it, and one thing supremely well because he detests it."

I wonder which two things Mr. Young did supremely well. Most of us struggle to do just one thing better than the average. I worked very hard at one thing I detested: Latin. I did it for an exam, but not to get an A, just to achieve the lowest passing grade.

An expert in any field presumably has fun doing it. And success adds greatly to that enjoyment. Yet playing at the highest level, whether in, say, tennis, golf or bridge, is more a business than a sport.

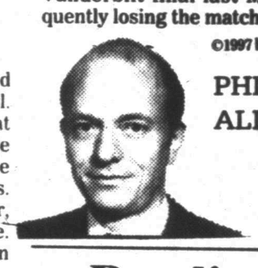

Bridge experts benefit from knowing how to play certain suit combinations. In today's deal, what would be your line in four spades? West cashes three top hearts, then switches to a diamond.

Having to bring in the trump suit without loss, South has three choices: cash out the ace and king, cash the ace before finessing on the second round, or finesse on the first round.

The first line is the worst, doing better than the other two only when West has queen-doubleton. Cashing the ace first wins when West has a singleton queen, but loses when he has a low singleton. As West can have four different low singletons and only one singleton queen, finessing on the first round is the best line.

If you think you would have got this wrong, take solace. An international misplayed this exact suit combination — in a grand slam! — in the Vanderbilt final last March, consequently losing the match.

In Santa Fe ceremony...

Stertz, Smith marry

SANTA FE, N.M. — Rachel Leigh Stertz and Gregory Lyle Smith, both of Snyder, were united in marriage at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, May 24, in the Loretto Chapel in Santa Fe.

The Rev. Richard Gundrey of Santa Fe officiated the double-ring rites.

The bride's parents are Richard and Ginnie Stertz of Garland and the groom's parents are Larry and Sue Smith of Ropesville.

The bride's father presented her in marriage. Her matron of honor was her twin sister, Julie Davidson of Allen. Bridesmaid was another sister, Leslie Pearson of Garland.

Best man was Mitch McNabb of Ropesville.

Their honeymoon was a Royal Caribbean cruise to Nassau. They reside in Snyder where Mrs. Smith is branch manager of Interim Healthcare and the groom is employed by Patterson Drilling Co. as a diesel mechanic.

Smith was reared in Ropesville and graduated from Levelland High School in May, 1987. Mrs. Smith, reared in Dallas, is a December, 1993 graduate of Texas Tech University School of Nursing.

How to get rid of spider webs

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: It is my understanding that there is a non-toxic product that will virtually eliminate spider webs wherever it is used. I spend a lot of time in the spring and summer at the beautiful lakes in upper South Carolina. — JUDITH A. MATHEWS, Brevard, N.C.

DEAR JUDITH: There's a product called Web-Away that is non-toxic and will get rid of spider webs. Also, a quick shot can be sprayed to destroy wandering cockroaches.

A one-quart bottle is $12.95, including shipping. To order, call: 1-800-562-3415 or write Web-Away, 10165 N.W. 8th Lane, Ocala, FL 34482.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am looking for a pattern for men's knitted slippers. I want to make them for residents of a nursing home, where they are confined to wheelchairs. I have looked in all the books without any luck. I have a pattern for women's slippers, but no pattern for men. — MRS. SUSAN M. FITCH, Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR SUSAN: We found a pattern for knitted slippers at the Whipple Tree in Woodstock, Vt. The pattern includes directions for slippers for kids, women and men. You can use either worsted weight or bulky yarn.

To order, send a check or money order for $2.50 to: The Whipple Tree, 7 Central St., Woodstock, VT 05091.

FEEDBACK: DOG-DOO AND PLASTIC NEWSPAPER BAGS — This great suggestion comes from Paul Wilkinson of St. Charles, Ill. There's a leash law in St. Charles, and Paul noticed a neighbor, who walks her dog in all weather, using the plastic bags newspapers arrive in when the weather is crummy. When her dog "did his business" she put her hand in one bag and picked up the dog-doo, pealed the bag off her hand and knotted it. Then she put it in the second bag, which she disposed of in a trash container.

Paul was inspired. He writes, "Our local recycling purveyor will accept the newspaper bags if they are in bundles, so a thought hit me! I went to two pet shops and talked to the owner/managers. I asked if they would consider selling these recycled bags to dog owners. In time it worked out. A bundle of 25-30 'Bags in a bag' sell for $1, which the store collects and gives to a local pet welfare agency. It's also teaching our citizens to be better folks." Good for you, Paul!

UPDATE: NO MORE BETTY CROCKER COUPONS — The Methodist Home for Children in Philadelphia no longer collects these. The coupons were used to purchase kitchen utensils for the residential program, which no longer exists.

Astro-graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sunday, June 8, 1997

Pleasant developments could be in store for you in the year ahead where your business life is concerned. The new contacts you'll establish will help you find fresh, profitable interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today if you go shopping, don't yield to pressure from an assertive salesperson. Do not forget the money is coming out of your pocket, not his or hers. Gemini, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An arrangement can be revised today so that you will gain in an involvement you have with another. Point out the inequities that need adjustment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard against insecure surges today that cause you to underestimate the worth of what you have to offer, especially if you perform a service for pay.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are basically an interesting person and people enjoy hearing what you have to say. Today, however, be careful not to monopolize conversations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today you might reap rewards as well as gratification from situations where you sincerely do what's best for the largest number.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even though you might be slow getting out of the starting blocks today, you will accomplish a great deal, provided that you don't delay too long.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It could prove wise today not to get mixed up in anything financial about which you have disturbing thoughts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A tricky development might require your personal touch and managerial skills today. Once you step into the arena, be decisive in your intentions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Priority assignments should be handled promptly today. If you hem and haw, you may lose some advantages that you have recently gained.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you aspire to have something beneficial happen today, it will be up to you to engineer it. Wishing won't bring it into being.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Important achievements are possible today, provided that you put a lid on your self-doubts. Solving problems heightens self-esteem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A disturbing matter can be worked out favorably today if you maintain a positive attitude. Go into the situation expecting beneficial closures.

Your Birthday

Monday, June 9, 1997

Operating independently could be a significant requirement for your success in the year ahead. You must handle this tactfully, however, so that you don't jeopardize old alliances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Think before you speak today or you might unintentionally offend a sensitive friend. Avoid commenting on anything serious until you're certain your mind is in gear. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Continue to practice prudence and sensibility in your financial affairs. Do not base today's budget upon funds you're hoping to acquire.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Making last minute changes to your plans might not secure the advantages you anticipate. Proceed with your original blue print, minus the add-ons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your workload might be a trifle heavier than usual today, so it's imperative that you keep pace with your productive expectations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you buck the will of the majority today, it could cause dissension within your circle. Brush off your ego and join the rest of the world.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In competitive involvements today, you're more likely to be tripped-up by your own carelessness than by the opposition. Preparation is essential.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It is best not to prematurely discuss plans you hope to pull off today. If things don't work out as anticipated, you could be embarrassed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Analyze your present budget today to determine if it is elastic enough to take on additional expenditures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Respectfully listen to the suggestions of companions today, but don't second guess your own sound judgment. Incorporate all opinions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You could be better off today if you do things yourself instead of allocating them to inept assistance. Their free labor could be costly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In situations that have elements of chance, you might not be as lucky as you feel today. If you win, take your prize and run.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not make domestic decisions today that might affect your family without consulting everyone first. They could provide unexplored options.

Science shows how salt makes food taste good

By MATT CRENSON
AP Science Editor

Every good chef knows that salt makes things taste better — but until now, science hasn't shaken out the reason why.

A new study shows that salt suppresses bitter tastes, bringing sweet and sour flavors to the fore.

That may not sound like a big revelation. But it could help food designers concoct more effective salt substitutes for people with high blood pressure.

It was a simple experiment by Paul Breslin of the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia that cracked the salt nut. Breslin offered people tastes of sugar, the salt relative sodium acetate and urea, a bitter substance, in every possible combination.

He used sodium acetate instead of sodium chloride because it enhances flavor like table salt without delivering its powerful salty taste, which can confuse subjects.

With each flavor combination, the researchers asked their subjects to rate how much sweetness, saltiness or bitterness they tasted.

It turned out that all of the flavors inhibited each other, but the sodium acetate salt inhibited the bitter urea more than it did the sugar. So when all three were served together, the result was sweet compared with the urea-sugar combination.

"Everything suppresses everything else, but the sodium is special for the bitter," Breslin said. "If you add salt, you're going to knock out the bitter taste."

In the real culinary world, the finding suggests that in baking, for example, salt masks the compounds that give unsalted bread the flavor of cardboard.

So in designing a salt substitute, food engineers would want to invent something not just salty tasting, but also with the ability to mask bitter flavors.

"Salt does amazing things to food that are probably related to this phenomenon," said Breslin, who describes his work in Thursday's issue of the British scientific journal Nature.

Still, Breslin's work can't really explain exactly how salt does what it does. Because the taste receptor that detects bitterness is unknown, there's no way to determine how salt interferes with it.

"These things probably go on all the time in our food," said Harry Lawless, a psychologist and food scientist at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Nash is looking for a replacement for fake policeman

NASH, Okla. (AP) — It was bound to happen — the lone policeman in Nash sat alone in the parked car, day after day, along a lonely highway. Now he's gone.

Don't worry — it's not like Nash is missing one of its finest. It was a mannequin and, for the past two years, a successful deterrent to speeders.

The dummy wore a police cap and blue coat and sat in a fake police car parked along U.S. 64. The old black Chevrolet Nova with a white star painted on the doors was moved occasionally from one side of the highway to the other.

It worked. Some cars slowed down. Some motorists waved. Some even stopped to ask directions.

"Then they look around to see if anybody's watching them," Mayor John Wilkins said.

About a week ago, the mannequin disappeared.

"They broke the car window and kidnapped him," Wilkins said Thursday.

There has been no ransom note and now the town of 280 people about 100 miles north of Oklahoma City is looking for a replacement.

Emu's on the loose make friends

MOODY, Mo. (AP) — Bill Barrett had settled back to sip his morning coffee when he felt a stranger's gaze upon him.

"I looked up and this big thing's staring at me. This bird's about 4½ feet tall," Barrett said.

The emu wasn't alone. At least 16 of the big birds were on the prowl after busting loose from a pen on Tuesday. Owner Hiver Gravely blamed the breakout on a thunderstorm and a "mating frenzy."

Barrett did what he could to capture the rogue emu. He and a neighbor managed to get a rope around the bird's leg and tie it to a tree, where they fed it corn and water.

That night, he borrowed an emu harness from a neighbor who raises the birds. When he tried to put it on, the bird fled.

"He took off at a high timber," he said. "I never did see him after."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Children of Widowed Parent Often Resent New Spouse

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Sad Grandpa" who, 38 years ago, married a widow with seven children. He now wants to remarry after her death, and his stepchildren are upset about it.

Perhaps his stepchildren are afraid not only of losing their stepfather, but also any property or belongings (monetary or not) that their biological father and mother would have left them.

I don't mean to make them sound greedy, but we all know from the letters you print that people who remarry later in life when their children are grown often forget that what they and their first spouse accumulated should be shared with their children. When parents remarry and are outlived by their new spouse, many times everything goes to the new spouse's family. And the children feel resentful and abandoned when nothing of their original family, monetary or not, is left for them.

Many clergy today require young couples about to marry to attend premarital counseling, but this is often waived for mature couples who have been married before. Perhaps these couples should also attend counseling which, among other things, would cover disposition of property and how each other's heirs will be remembered in their wills.

ELYN KIRCHNER, MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ELYN: I agree, it is unfair for all the assets to be left to another family. And premarital counseling is an excellent arena for ironing out such important issues.

It is also important, however, for grown children to understand their widowed parent's need for companionship in their later years, and to put forth every effort to make the new spouse feel welcomed into the family. Regarding the newcomer as an intruder can have painful consequences. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Stuck in Oklahoma," I felt compelled to write. "Stuck" stated that her mother had died and her father's second wife was difficult to like. She said she didn't know anyone who liked the new wife.

I can think of someone who likes her: "Stuck's" father! The relationship with my two grown daughters was strained for years after I remarried. They slighted my wife, and indirectly me — in many subtle ways. They would "forget" her birthday, and address special-occasion cards to me only, or behave rudely in her presence. Any intervention by me was met with protestations of innocence on their part. After the loss of my second wife, I had a belated father/daughters talk and told them their behavior had been inexcusable.

My second wife had never tried to replace my daughters' mother. She had simply given their father the love he needed to make his life whole again. Remember, children, it's not easy being a second wife or husband. Cut some slack, OK?

G.W. IN SHARPSBURG, GA.

DEAR G.W.: Thank you for sharing your experience. Perhaps others will learn that when widowed parents remarry, the grown children shouldn't feel abandoned. They should practice the Golden Rule.

DEAR ABBY: Recently here in the Santa Rosa area, a police officer shot and killed a man who was behaving in an irrational manner. He was advancing toward the officer with a wooden bar in his hand.

A few weeks ago, a man was killed at a service station because he attacked a police officer with a screwdriver.

Abby, I think I have a way for the police to protect themselves without killing anybody if they feel threatened.

I have always enjoyed "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom." When they have shown episodes where they were checking on the health of a potentially dangerous creature such as an elephant, rhino, etc., they shot the creature with a tranquilizer before approaching it!

It seems to me that having a tranquilizer gun in his hand instead of a .357-caliber Magnum would give the police the means to gain control of an incident, and allow everyone to go home to their families without being in a coffin.

Why can't the police use a tranquilizer gun in cases where they feel threatened?

WAYNE IN SANTA ROSA, CALIF.

DEAR WAYNE: That's an interesting question, and one that I took to James Butts, chief of police in Santa Monica, Calif., who responded; "Tranquilizing agents don't affect everyone uniformly. Therefore you cannot predict whether or not you have a sufficient dose to tranquilize the individual.

"Second, any tranquilizer will take time to enter the bloodstream and sedate the individual. If someone is advancing on you with a deadly weapon or a threatening object, there's no way a tranquilizer would take effect in the two to three seconds it would take someone to seriously injure you."

DEAR ABBY: My brother and his wife moved to Paris, France, for business reasons about 10 months ago. Since then, I've been put in an awkward situation, having been appointed their U.S. domestic secretary on matters ranging from summer camp registration to resolving old traffic tickets, banking and even the filing of income tax extension forms.

In the beginning, I didn't mind being asked. I am organized, efficient and get the job done. I also feel that my children and their cousins have always been close, and that's important to me.

However, I am at my wit's end and want to bow out of any other assignments from abroad. Also, I have yet to receive one thank-you note or phone call of thanks from my brother's wife, who is known to be selfish and very self-centered.

Abby, how can this situation come to an amicable solution without upsetting all involved? I don't want the harmony among the six cousins to be damaged in any way.

HAD IT IN LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR HAD IT: Begin filling your communications with your brother and sister-in-law with how busy you are catering to the needs of your husband, your children and your job (if you have one). If you are given another assignment, explain that your schedule does not permit you to do it "right now." Gradually wean them from their dependence on you. As you become less available, they'll either get the message or find a more willing domestic secretary.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to ask if you know how the story of the birds and bees goes.

I often hear people mention the story, but they never say how it goes. Please put this in your column because I know there are other kids who would like to know. Thank you.

A KID IN PORT RICHEY, FLA.

DEAR KID: There is no "story." When someone makes reference to "the birds and the bees," they mean the story of "reproduction" — how they came into the world. This is sometimes called "sex education."

Bullard enjoys teaching art

She encourages "hands on practice" which reinforces the day's lesson. Students work with a variety of media such as watercolor, tempera paint, crayon resist, collage, clay, pencil and markers.

They wear old clothing or artist's smocks.

Various art forms have also been introduced, including drawing, painting, sculpture, mixed media, puppetry, architecture, paper construction, cartooning and poetry.

Students worked on a variety of projects this past school year. Stanfield second graders created more weather cartoons which appear daily in the Snyder Daily News. Carol taught them how to use different art tools, draw different lines and how to create the facial expressions so important in cartooning.

Also included was how to reduce the size of a cartoon using a copier.

For those lessons, Carol drew upon her nine years of experience drawing cartoons for the SDN. She also incorporated the second graders' lessons on weather with her curriculum.

Third graders drew murals of underwater habitat and made valentines. Some of the mural artwork was displayed at the chamber of commerce banquet while the 100 feet of ocean murals were displayed during the Reading Festival.

One of the projects included 1,000 faces of school which encouraged the elementary students to create two by two-inch self-portraits.

Students also drew wildflowers which were displayed at Scurry County Museum as part of the annual Wildflower Day.

For students, the hands on visual experience is very beneficial, Carol said. They are motivated to learn.

The art lessons also give students a chance to develop problem-solving skills. For instance, she stresses that there is no "set answer" or "failure" in art. Rather it "may be just a mistake," and students can always stop what they are doing and "go in another direction."

She said she gives her students lots of leeway to create their own project after she gives them the basic instructions. Art helps students with a low frustration level to learn to work through a problem, Carol said. They learn to be persistent until they finish.

The art program brings success to some students who aren't used to experiencing it, Carol said.

She also said numerous research has shown that art as well as fine arts can improve TAAS, ACT and SAT test scores.

Before being accepted by the Texas Commission On The Arts, Carol had to pass a stringent application process, including a personal interview before a panel in Dallas. Her name was then placed on a list which was presented to SISD personnel who had submitted a separate grant application to the Texas Commission On the Arts. School officials selected Carol from a list of several available artists.

She discovered the Texas Commission On The Arts program while using the Texas Tech University library to research how to fund an art program.

Carol said she chose to apply because she felt the TCA program would allow her the most flexibility to draw up her own curriculum.

In 1972, Carol earned her BA in art with specialization in painting and drawing from the University of California at Santa Barbara. The following year, she obtained a BA in French.

She earned an all-level art certificate at Texas Tech University in 1994. She has currently completed all but the final research paper for her master of art education degree.

Art was a natural choice for Carol, who said she has "really loved being an artist since the age of three."

While attending college in California, Carol spent her summers in Snyder where her family lived. Her dad was employed by SACROC.

During the summer of 1969, Carol worked for the Scurry County Girl's Recreation Program, headed by Guy Sullivan.

For seven years, Carol also served at various times as the exhibit designer for Scurry County Museum.

This past school year she taught art at the high school and routinely instructs art classes through Western Texas College.

In 1973, she married Drew Bullard and they settled in Snyder. Drew owns Computer Solutions and is a trustee at Western Texas College.

They have two children, Mark and Christina.

Teacher to change careers improvement, from below average to accelerated students. However, she said she preferred to work with the below average students because "they really needed me."

Sue began her teaching career in Levelland after obtaining an associate's degree at what was then called Tarleton Junior College, and a bachelor of science in education from Texas Tech University.

That first day in the classroom gave Sue good reason to believe that she had "made a four-year mistake." She faced 45 remedial reading students. The class was so large that the school had to remove an accordion door separating two rooms to accommodate them, Sue said.

If that wasn't bad enough, the principal came by that first day to warn her to "watch out for three of the boys who had been confined in Gatesville."

She also learned that one of them had been confined for trying to murder his grandfather.

In spite of that precarious beginning, Sue said teaching turned out to be a good choice for her. However, she is not as enthusiastic as she was in the beginning.

She said she noticed a change in students when she returned to teaching in 1976. Some were "not quite so gung-ho about learning, but just wanted to make a grade," she said.

She also noted that often today's students are more interested in television and video games than learning.

Teachers today are more guarded, Sue said, so they have less time to interact with their students, and "everything has to be documented."

When she started teaching, she said teachers were more involved in their students' lives and even knew what type of home life they had.

Today, since TAAS tests are stressed so much, she said teachers don't have as much time to do "fun stuff" with their students.

Ironically, Sue had started out wanting to be a doctor. But high school chemistry made her look for another career choice. Teaching was a natural choice because one of her father's brothers and four of his sisters were all teachers.

She picked English because "I have always liked it," she said.

Born in New Mexico, Sue and her family moved to Texas when she was eight years old. She calls Comanche home.

Besides her 4,000 service hours, Sue said she also plans to get involved with church work.

Bob Hawes replaced him. Gorman retired during Hawes' administration. Dalton Moseley was hired as assistant superintendent. When Hawes left, Moseley became the superintendent. He was also placed in charge of personnel as well.

Under Gayle Lomax, the current superintendent, Patsy and Ann McCabe, who is the assistant superintendent, have been in charge of personnel.

Personnel responsibilities include being in charge of all applications of employment, all substitute teachers and certification requirements.

She noted that the biggest change during her tenure was all of the requirements which accompanied the career ladder. When asked what she will miss most, Patsy said, "meeting new people and being with the people."

She has made no definite plans except to spend time with her family. Husband Lawton is the SISD maintenance director.

They have two daughters and four grandchildren. Carrie Richardson is a teacher at Snyder High School and her husband, Jim, works for Mobil Oil. They have three children.

Cynthia Davis and her husband, Mark, live in South Carolina. They have one child.

Patsy is a native of Snyder and a graduate of SHS. Before joining SISD she worked at West Texas State Bank for four years.

Oprah denies gay rumors

CHICAGO (AP) — Oprah Winfrey says she's not a lesbian. She just played a shrink counseling one on TV.

"I am not in the closet. I am not coming out of the closet. I am not gay," Winfrey said in a statement, answering rumors spurred by her role and a gossip column.

And during a speech Wednesday to TV promotion and marketing executives in Chicago, she said: "Let me just tell you again, I'm not coming out. I'm not gay. I have nowhere to go, nowhere to come out to. It does not mean I'm getting married, I'm just not coming out."

Winfrey, who is single and is the star of the highest-rated daytime talk show in TV history, has a longtime boyfriend, businessman Stedman Graham.

She said the rumors have been circulating since she appeared on "Ellen."

Letters

Thanks to all

Dear Editor,

The Snyder Fire Department would like to thank the following for the unlimited support provided during our latest public fire education effort. Without their help this would not have been possible:

Texas Commission on Fire Protection and Gary Dodson, Deputy State Fire Marshall, for the use of the Fire Safety House Program.

Wal-Mart for providing the locations and the use of fans and other items.

KSNY for allowing us to be on the Saturday morning talk show and the live broadcast on Tuesday, June. 3.

Snyder Daily News for the coverage provided by them.

Last but not least, to all parents, children and teachers, thank you for coming and participating. We hope you gained something valuable.

Gratefully,
Kyle Cox

Kind people

Dear Editor,

Last Tuesday, May 20, I was driving alone on Highway 84 between Post and Snyder. A tire blew off the left front wheel of my vehicle. I know I was passing through God's country because two angels riding in a pickup truck stopped and helped me. They changed my tire and led me to Lang Tire Company in Snyder were store manager George Scifres and his staff took an honest assessment of my problem and took care of it in a very professional manner.

Your city is fortunate to have such caring citizens and business people. Because of them, I was able to continue my journey and arrived home safely later that night.

I am grateful for the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Chaney and the good staff at Lang Tire Store. I look forward to passing along a like consideration to someone else. You have good people in your town.

Sincerely,
Margaret A. White

The 4th estate

Dear Editor:

Within the past week there was an article, AP, concerning the establishment of something or other to commemorate June 19 and the emancipation proclamation as "the day the slaves were freed."

That is plain baloney. The proclamation plainly states that slaves in those states who were in rebellion were free. Which states federal authorities had no control over and therefore practically nobody was freed.

The reason for the proclamation being so worded was that there were states, slave, which did not secede, period, he knew that those states would probably take a walk. He needed that like a hole in the head. He had enough trouble without that.

The slaves were freed only when the Constitution was ammended to forbid slavery.

So? This 4th estate which is so holy (according to its members) has a free lunch. "I seen it in the paper or seen it on TV so it must be true."

Yes, I am aware that Amendment No. 1 states that the press is to be free. I don't believe it says that what is "pressed" has to be true.

But I kind of believe it ought to be, that is, you should have to pay for your lunch just like everybody else.

Sincerely yours,
Robert Merritt

P.S. This epistle is not worth 32 cents so I'll just drop it off as I go by, and save my 32 cents.

Bard on CD reads exceeding ill

Joseph Spear

People keep misunderstanding my anxiety about the future.

They keep telling me, in letters and cards and sometimes in person, that I fear it. For the record: I do not fear the future. Just because I am put off by electronic things that require dense manuals to operate and just because I am leery of cyberbaloney in general does not mean that I fear the future.

What's to fear? There will never be a shortage of flakes and fools in Washington, D.C., and thus I earn my living burrowing about in an everlasting vein of gold. As long as the Lord gives me the faculties to mine it, I am on easy street.

There are other things that give me great comfort and will be around for a long while. Pencils and paper clips, for example. And blue jeans and Jello and Ferris wheels and Coca-Cola and Arm & Hammer baking soda and toothpicks and baseball.

It does bother me a bit that baseball is becoming a game that only CEOs can afford to attend, and I worry that the damn fools who run it are someday going to install time clocks. But by and large, baseball is a thing that soothes and lifts the spirits.

There are some new things coming down the pike, also, that will help to make the future a desirable and enjoyable time in which to live. Laboratory-grown replacement body parts, for example. Super Glue surgical stitching. Voice-command appliances that will hop into action when you say, "Bake a loaf of honey-nut" or "Fricassee that flank steak." Cloned pets. The end of male-pattern baldness. Robotic automobiles. Rider mowers with enclosed cabs, air-conditioning, CD players and cell phones.

Concern. That's a better word than fear. I am concerned about a few of the trends that seem to be developing. To wit:

—Text is disappearing. They're putting more words on various forms of disks, and I don't want newspapers and magazines that you have to have a search engine to read. I want rub-off-on-your-fingers ink. I want things I can line the birdcage with or roll up and smash spiders with. Who would put Maxell MF2-DDs under the macaw? Who ever heard of swatting bugs with a compact disc?

And books. Confound it, I would miss the heft and feel and smell of books. I can see putting encyclopedias on CDs, but Plutarch and the Bard and Elmore Leonard? Please. I hereby vow that I will never take a computer to bed with me.

—The possibility is growing that senior citizens, like yesterday's Fords and Chevies, will be exported to Third World countries. It is already happening in Japan, a society that once revered the elderly. But the Japanese are go-go people now, all caught up in the flux and gush of the hi-tech age, and grandparents are a pain in the posterior. So the seniors are being exported to retirement homes in less expensive and conveniently distant places, such as the Philippines. How long can it be before this development spreads across the Pacific to California and thence to all of America?

—Cybercash is coming. Heck, it's already here. I'm sure you've seen the grocery store payment devices through which you swipe your ATM card and your checking account is instantly debited. Take it another step further and you can see the day coming when you carry no coins or bills at all, just a plastic card with a magnetic strip.

You want a soda? Swipe your card through the machine. You want to give a handout to a homeless person? Swipe your card through his portable payment device. What will we flip to start a football game? What will the treasure hunters of tomorrow look for at the bottom of the sea?

—You may not be able to visit the potty without a pin number. Those progressive Japanese are at it again: They've invented toilets with keypads. Johns that massage your back, analyze your urine, wash your bottom, blow you dry. Loos that entertain you. Problem is, you'll have to know how to work them.

I will not, repeat, not, buy "Flushing for Dummies."

Not a good time at the movies

Deanie Francis Mills

Excuse me, but am I the only parent on the face of the planet who believes that the movie ratings are there as a guide for parents, and that a rating of PG-13 means PG-13?

I have now watched Steven Spielberg's sequel to "Jurassic Park," "The Lost World," twice, in two different theatres in two different towns, and both times, the movies were crammed full of little kids who had to be preschool age — certainly no older than eight — and at least two or three restless infants.

I'm sorry, but I'm appalled at that.

"In "The Lost World," the dinosaurs are not all computer-generated. For most of the close-up scenes, they are fully "animatronic," meaning that they are operated by remote control and are full-sized, absolutely realistic-looking animals.

The dinosaurs attack and maul a little girl. The dinosaurs eat the family dog. The dinosaurs pick up screaming people in their mouths, chomp them in half, and toss them around like popcorn — even good people who are trying to help them.

Spielberg, mercifully, does not always depict every gory detail on screen, but he does show nearby streams running red with blood and the dog house collapse to the ground, empty, while the dog's chain dangles from the dinosaur's mouth. And he shows the little girl happily sharing a bite of her sandwich one moment with a creature, and in the next, her mother running up in search of the child and letting out a bone-chilling shriek.

For an adult — or a kid at least eleven or twelve — this is rip-roaring good fun, an amusement park ride chock full of chills and thrills. It's pure entertainment. But that's because kids eleven or twelve and up are fully aware that this is a movie and that the dinosaurs are robots.

But small children still believe in Santa Claus, the Easter bunny and the tooth fairy. You cannot simply tell a little child, "It's only a movie," and expect them to automatically be able to make that distinction in their minds.

Another thing about very young children is that the entire concept of a movie like this is extremely intense for them. They can't absorb everything they see and process it the same way we adults do. Their baby brains are just not developed to that extent yet. It's overwhelming to them, mind-numbing. Disturbing. Terrifying. You can't tell me that these little kids don't go home and suffer nerve-jangling screaming nightmares after watching something like this.

(It's heart-rending enough, listening to them beg their parents to explain, "Why are they killing the dinosaur?" and "What happened to the little dog?" Half the time, the parents don't even answer. After all, they're watching the movie.)

A G-rated, or even PG-rated movie, is created with small children in mind. The concepts are broad, the humor painted on with a roller, and the people and animals loveable. Bad guys are usually somewhat comic and never really all that threatening.

Which brings me to another point: A PG-13 or R-rated movie is made for people at least junior high age and older; therefore, the villains are complex and the plots complicated. "The Lost World" is not just a screen full of marauding dinosaurs. There is a great deal of talk between scientist and financial backers, explaining the genetic concept behind their breeding and the plans for using them in an amusement park.

But the adults in the audience have a hard time following the conversations because the attention spans of very small children last maybe ten minutes at a stretch. If no one onscreen is getting eaten at the moment, the kids are fidgeting, running up and down the aisles, climbing over seats, talking, and crying. Pardon me for being a crouchy old so-and-so, but I find this infinitely annoying.

And why do people even try to bring babies to movies? It can't be any fun for them, having to mess with the infant through the entire thing, and get up leave six times during the movie because the baby won't quit crying. Certainly it's impossible to expect a baby to sleep through all that roaring and screaming and gunfire going on at deafening levels, which can't be all that good for a baby's tender ears anyhow.

I know how tough it is when there's a great movie out you are dying to see and your kids are begging you to take them, and you can't find a babysitter. Lord knows I went for five years one time without seeing any movies at all. But back then, there was no such thing as videocassette recorders. Now, anybody can see movies in their homes — if they don't own a VCR, they can rent one for five bucks at video rental stores.

I figure, with very small children, if a parent honestly thinks it's all right for their small child to see such a movie, then they should do the rest of us the courtesy of waiting until it's out on video. Then they can take it home, maybe watch it first without the kids. Then, when the kids ask, "Why are they killing the dinosaur?" parents can push the "pause" button and take the time and care to explain it to the child in such a way that they can handle it. It's won't be as terrifying to them, either, on the TV screen as it is in life-size cinemascope complete with "surroundsound."

And the rest of us who are 13 and older can enjoy the movie the way it was meant to be enjoyed.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Suing the president

The Beaumont Enterprise

Some critics of President Bill Clinton rejoiced Tuesday after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled, unanimously, that Paula Jones' lawsuit would not have to wait until he vacated the Oval Office. But their glee could be short-sighted, because the same weapons used against the current president in 1997 could be unleashed on his successor.

Jones say Clinton sexually harassed her in 1991 when he was governor, and her lawyers had some good reasons for wanting the case tried in this century. Witnesses' memory could grow hazy by the time Clinton leaves office (if they're still alive), and a cornerstone of our democracy is that no person, no matter how rich or powerful, is above the law.

But the presidency is the most important job in this country, and presidents must be free to concentrate on their awesome responsibilities. Since they are already immune from virtually all lawsuits for official activity, it follows that the same exemption should be extended during their presidency for things that happened before they were elected.

Most people who could become president in the modern era have a track record in politics or business that could be used by their opponents for lawsuits. In the conflict of rights in this case, the national interests are better served if those potential lawsuits are postponed a few years.

On Social Security

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Because it seems to be no great problem to get ordinary people to express opinions about Social Security, but is very hard to persuade Congress or the White House actually to face the responsibility of making changes in the massive national retirement program, America has been presented with dueling polls on the subject.

A poll taken on behalf of a group that opposes any privatization of Social Security found, not surprisingly, that Americans want the system fixed, not privatized. A recent poll for the Cato Institute, a think tank that calls for privatization, not surprisingly found an opposite result, particularly among younger voters.

Our advice to the elected leaders ... is this: Ignore the polls, but screw up your courage to actually confront the problems facing Social Security and start debating the possible solutions.

The likely key to saving Social Security ... is to avoid the extremes. Don't listen to the doomsayers who worry about social Security "masking" the federal budget deficit. Concentrate instead on salvaging the good the program does. That probably means seeking a combination of "fixing" the current system (by raising the retirement age more rapidly and/or changing the way benefits are taxed, and by changing the way annual cost-of-living adjustments are calculated) and privatize the investment of some Social Security trust funds.

Social Security funds would earn more — at a sacrifice of some safety — by being invested in stocks. But the prudent fix would be a combination of savings and enhanced investment income. Even then the important part will be to develop a phase-in plan that protects the interests of already-retired and soon-to-be-retired workers.... And the thorniest question may be whether to leave the government in charge while putting trust money into the stock market.

Social Security won't be fixed with partisan polls or ideology, but with hard work and compromise. And the sooner it is done the better chance it has to succeed.

Minority enrollment at UT

The Dallas Morning News

Everyone in Texas should be concerned about the alarming impact of the Hopwood court decision on minority enrollment at the University of Texas Law School.

Unless a concerted effort is made to counteract the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruling, the state may get stuck with a national reputation as being hostile to minority students.

As of last week, only one black college student had accepted admission to the fall term of the UT Law School, the state's largest and highest-ranked law school. Only 12 Hispanic college students had sent in tuition deposits to secure their spots.

The drop stems directly from the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals' 1996 decision in Hopwood vs. Texas, which barred consideration of race in the law school's admission process. The year before the Hopwood decision, as many as 30 to 40 black students and between 50 and 65 Hispanic students comprised the 500-member entering law school class.

To make matters worse, the lone black student has since declined the UT Law School offer and is now headed to Cornell Law School. The reason: the pressure of being the class' only black student and the certain media attention of that rarefied status.

Law school officials say there's a glimmer of hope since the admission slots are not completely filled. The remaining 6 percent will be filled from a waiting list. Law school officials hope that some black students in the pool will agree to come.

But the officials probably shouldn't hold their breaths. Regrettably, the Hopwood decision has made UT Law School seem like hostile territory to qualified minority students. They are already exercising their options to go to more hospitable climates.

That could prove a stunning setback not only for the Austin law school but for other Texas institutions that are struggling to deal with the ramifications of the Hopwood decision. A de facto quarantine of Texas colleges can only hurt the state.

That's one reason Texas must find ways to offset Hopwood's tragic impact.

Radar mapping challenges notion of moon ice

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Detailed radar images offer no evidence of ice on the moon, data that appears to contradict scientists' earlier conclusions, astronomers say.

The unmanned Clementine spacecraft probably saw "very rough surfaces associated with the steep slopes of impact craters," the Cornell University astronomers at Arecibo Observatory said in an article in this week's Science.

"We don't see anything that suggests ice," Cornell astronomy professor Donald B. Campbell said Thursday.

In December, Defense Department scientists said that radar signals collected by Clementine in 1994 suggested ice deposits in deep craters in the permanently dark regions at the moon's south pole. The journal Science also reported their findings.

The implications of such a discovery would be profound on humanity's future lunar exploration. The ice could be mined and the water split into oxygen and hydrogen, which is a basic rocket fuel. It would be like having a filling station on the moon.

Campbell said observations taken at Arecibo in Puerto Rico in 1992 led to a different conclusion. Arecibo, operated by Cornell's National Astronomy and Ionosphere Center for the National Science Foundation, is the world's largest single dish radio telescope.

At Arecibo, scientists were able to study the moon's polar region with greater resolution than that used in the Clementine studies, Campbell said.

They found that the icy areas spotted by Clementine in the permanently dark region also existed in the sunlit part of the moon and near the equator, he said.

Until scientists study the entire surface of the moon, the possibility remains of water ice deposits in the bottoms of deep craters, Campbell said.

In September, NASA will launch its $63 million Lunar Prospector.

Keiko now weighs nearly 10,000 pounds

NEWPORT, Ore. (AP) — Keiko the killer whale now tops the scales at a healthy 9,580 pounds, nearly a ton more than when he arrived from Mexico City 16 months ago.

Veterinarians weighed Keiko, a star of the movie "Free Willy," on Thursday and removed a broken tooth. He has gained 1,860 pounds since he was flown to the Oregon Coast Aquarium last year.

Keiko was suffering weight loss and a fungus infection in Mexico City, where he had spent 16 years in a warm saltwater pool at an amusement park.

The Free Willy Keiko Foundation, which led efforts to get Keiko transferred, said last month it would like to put Keiko in a pen in the North Atlantic, where he was captured, possible as early as next spring as a preliminary step toward returning him to the wild.

Others question whether he could survive in the wild after being raised by humans for nearly all of his life.
