Permian Basin on the cusp of 200 rigs

Find out this week's rig count.

The Permian Basin has seen rig count gains for the 12th straight week, and Midland County continues to have the most activity of any county nationwide.

The Permian added three rigs this week for a total of 199, according to data from Baker Hughes. Midland County held steady at 36 rigs, and Reeves rose one to 26. Loving idled three rigs, which left 13 county-wide. Martin was unchanged at 12.

District 8 fell one to 131. In other areas operating in the Permian, District 7B increased to four after Nolan County saw renewed activity. District 7C was unchanged at 22. Increased activity in Yoakum and Borden counties pushed District 8A's count up three to 12. New Mexico was unchanged at 30 after a new rig in Eddy County was offset by one idled in Lea.

Nolan wasn't the only county with renewed activity in the Permian. Hockley snapped three weeks of inactivity after one rig went online. Nolan went four weeks without rigs. Sterling ceased all activity.

The Permian had 255 rigs at this time last year.

Texas & New Mexico

Texas' run of three consecutive weeks of gains halted after the Lone Star State lost a rig, lowering its tally to 237. Eighty-three percent of all rigs in the state were in the Permian.

The Eagle Ford had 35 rigs, down one. The Barnett also lost a rig, leaving four in the North Texas basin. The Haynesville and Granite Wash were unchanged at 14 and

Midland-Odessa can expect tens of millions more in highway funding

From staff reports

Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance President James Beauchamp expects a state program to add tens of millions of dollars in highway funding over the next decade for the Midland-Odessa metropolitan area.

Beauchamp in a release Friday said the Texas Transportation Commission approved the 2017-26 Unified Transportation Program during Thursday's TTC meeting.

For the state, that means another $38 billion in new funds over the next 10 years. For Midland-Odessa, the result will be "programmed funds for the next 10 years in the Midland-Odessa metropolitan area will be just over $160 million, which more than doubles what was programmed in the previous 10 years."

"Those dollars are vital to preserving our economy and safety," said Beauchamp, who added there will be another $80 million in the Odessa District to combat congestion on area roadways in the central Permian Basin.

"We appreciate the desire by Gov. (Greg) Abbott to take this issue on and make it a priority, and we appreciate the hard work of Transportation Commission Chairman Tryon Lewis to make this plan a reality," he said. "Those efforts will greatly benefit Texans and residents of the Permian Basin for years to come."

Beauchamp added that "virtually every aspect of MOTRAN's transportation plan for energy-impacted areas are included in the plan, including the inclusion of a permanent funding stream for roadways in our energy production areas ($2 billion) and statewide connectivity funding for the first time in over 10 years ($6.6 billion) to address areas like I-20 in Midland and Odessa, as well as, build out of our state's trunk system highways to improve the ability of travelers and facilitate the movement of freight through our region."

Oil industry shifts from survival to growth

By Rakteem Katakey
Bloomberg

Multibillion-dollar oil and gas deals are back on the table.

More than $11 billion of transactions were announced globally in July as crude's recovery fueled hopes of a steadier market, Wood Mackenzie Ltd. said. That's the highest monthly total this year and brings the amount since May to $32 billion, triple that of the previous three months. Dealmaking will continue to accelerate as oil prices stabilize, according to the consulting firm.

ExxonMobil and Statoil were among the buyers after crude's rebound from a 12-year low earlier this year bolstered confidence. Acquisitions will allow the companies to ensure future growth as the industry has slashed $1 trillion in spending to protect their balance sheets during the downturn.

"The extreme oil price volatility in the first quarter caused a lot of uncertainty," said Greig Aitken, principal analyst for mergers and acquisitions at Wood Mackenzie. "Activity picked up as confidence returned and companies started looking towards future growth instead of focusing entirely on survival."

Exxon, the world's largest oil producer by market value, agreed last month to acquire natural-gas explorer InterOil Corp. for as much as $3.6 billion to add discoveries in Papua New Guinea. The company also is in advanced negotiations with Eni to buy a stake in gas finds off Mozambique, people with knowledge of the talks said in July.

Statoil, Norway's biggest oil producer, agreed last month to purchase an oil block off Brazil from Petroleo Brasileiro for $2.5 billion, its biggest acquisition since 2011.

The deals follow a period of relative quiet as buyers and sellers failed to agree on valuations amid oil's decline. North America, home to many higher-cost

Kelly Marie Garlitz

Kelly Marie Garlitz was born July 4, 1992, and lost her life on August 19, 2016 at 4:12 a.m. due to a severe blood infection.

She is survived by her mother and father Maria and David Garlitz, along with her younger brother Brain Garlitz.

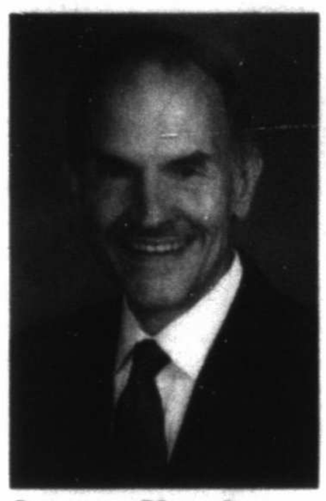
Kelly was an accomplished amateur motocross rider and won numerous races in the female division. She also won dispatcher of the month in May 2015. Along with her accomplishments in motocross, she managed to get a bachelor's degree in communications.

Kelly was always known to have a heart of gold and would never talk bad about anybody. She would help with food drives and blood banks. She would wish a stranger happy birthday just to make sure they had a smile on their face.

Kelly will be missed by many but not forgotten. She will always be with us in heart and soul.

A private scattering of her ashes was held at the West Texas Motorcross Park on Friday, August 26, 2016. Family and close friends were there to spread Kelly Garlitz's ashes.

In God we trust.



George Aloysius Koehl, III

George Aloysius Koehl, III, of Midland, Texas, went home on August 19, 2016, his 62nd birthday.

The Memorial Service will be Saturday, August 27, 2:00 p.m., at First Baptist Church in Midland, officiated by Dr. Jim Denison, Dr. Gary Dyer, and Dr. Randel Everett.

A Tribute Celebration of his ministry followed by a reception will be Sunday, August 28, 5:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church.

George was born on August 19, 1954 in Midland to Margy and George A. Koehl, Jr. He graduated from Midland High School, Class of 1972, and received his Bachelor's degree in Church Music, and his Master's degree in Music Theory and Composition from Hardin Simmons University in Abilene, Texas.

George married his college sweetheart, DiAnn Schmidt, from Singapore, in 1977 and they lived out their love story for 39 years of marriage. George and DiAnn began their partnership in ministry in 1977 when he was called to serve with Immanuel Baptist Church as Youth Minister, followed by Crescent Heights Baptist Church as Music Minister, both of Abilene, Texas. George and DiAnn were then called to First Baptist of Killeen as George continued his Music Ministry. In August of 1993, God called George to Midland to serve the community as the Minister of Music at First Baptist Church, where he spent his final 23 years faithfully representing our Lord.

George generously loved his Lord, his family, and his friends, constantly encouraging others in their God-given gifts. He loved creating an environment of worship, supporting his children to pursue their dreams, and simply embracing life and all God gives us!

No one had more fun than George with sports, both as a participant and as a fan. He was asked to serve as booster president for MHS football and for MHS girls' basketball programs, and assisted with multiple boosters, sports, tournaments, and events. George made every attempt to be in the crowd for each of his children's games, concerts and events, and he travelled around the country as their biggest fan, and then back through the night on Saturdays to be in his place of service leading worship on Sunday mornings.

He was always willing to collaborate with other churches and the community for events on the 4th of July, for Christmas, prayer meetings, and spiritual awakening opportunities.

He appreciated all styles of music, loved all ages of people. George loyally served in countless ways, taking youth on mission trips, ski trips, and camps each summer, and children's choirs on fun trips in the summer. He especially cherished sharing mission trip experiences with his children and wife in a variety of countries around the world.

Over the years, he enjoyed rehearsing and traveling with the Centurymen and The Singing Men of Texas, sharing the message of Christ through music and cultural exchange.

Grandchildren were the new love of his life and he prayed for them daily to grow to know the Lord as their Savior one day.

Left to cherish George's memory include his loving wife, DiAnn Koehl; sons and daughters-in-law, Liz and George Koehl, IV, and Blaire and Wade Koehl; and his daughters and sons-in-law, Candace and Jean-Paul Bourgeois, and Brittany and Stephen McGee; his grandsons, George V., Nash, Dean, Trapper, and Rhett; sister and brother-in-law, Rebel and Tony Park; cousins, Jeanne Wallace and Rebecca Wallace; mother-in-law and father-in-law, Darleen and Sidney Schmidt; and brothers-in-law, Tim Schmidt and Todd Schmidt and their families.

He is preceded in death by his parents, Margy and George Koehl, Jr.

His oldest son wrote this tribute to his dad, with the assistance of all the siblings: "George was a man that was unlike any other man. He served, he loved, he laughed, he encouraged...and he gave. 'Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.' John 15:13. George literally gave himself away. To those of you who received this gift first hand, you know exactly what this means. We each carry a piece of him in our hearts and we will never be the same as a result. George was a man that truly walked with God. Like Enoch, he walked with God and then he was no more, because God took him away.

"In many ways, George seemed like he was not of this world. In all of the 34 years that I have known him, not once, not one single time did I ever see him lose his temper. This simple fact is astounding, especially considering the fact that I know I was a very exasperating child in many ways. My father was a peacemaker and peace followed him everywhere he went. He could walk into a room that was filled with anger and conflict and he could calm it and replace the anger with love and grace. His joy was contagious. His genuine care and encouragement for others was legendary. He made everyone he interacted with feel special just for being alive that day.

"No one who spent any amount of time with George was ever the same again. As I think back on Dad's influence in my life, I realize that most of his influence on me comes from what he did rather than what he said. My dad never preached at me. Not that there's anything wrong with preaching - and not that he never gave direct verbal advice. But he mainly just lived what he believed so thoroughly that by simply interacting with him, you received a stronger impact than mere words could have ever delivered.

"This verse summarizes him quite perfectly: 'To live is Christ and to die is gain.' Philippians 1:21. On this earth he completely gave himself away, just like his Savior did, and just like Christ called each of us to do. George obviously took those words quite literally and generously poured himself out as an offering until he was all used up. Even in his suffering, he was still thinking primarily of others and just loving on everyone.

"And now, he has gained all and is with Christ face to face. He has entered the presence of his Lord and has left this earth with an impact that will be felt for generations to come. He leaves behind a legacy that his children are proud to humbly carry on - just as he would have wanted. Serving our Lord by serving others, trusting God in all circumstances, and keeping our eyes focused fully on our Lord and Savior all the way."

The family suggests memorials be donated in George's honor to either First Baptist Church of Midland, Midland Fair Havens, or to the George Koehl Soli Deo Gloria Fund through Permian Basin Area Foundation, to award student scholarships for higher education, dedicated to carrying on a legacy of giving and serving. Any gift given to a nonprofit of the donor's choice in George's memory will be treasured. George's heart's desire would be to bring glory to God alone.

Dallas protest leader sentenced to 2 years in prison

By Claudia Lauer
Associated Press

DALLAS — A leader of the group that organized the protest where a sniper killed five law enforcement officers in Dallas was sentenced Friday to prison for unrelated probation violations.

State District Judge Gracie Lewis revoked probation for Dominique Alexander and sentenced him to two years in prison with credit for time served. Alexander, the 27-year-old founder of the Next Generation Action Network that organized the July 7 rally to protest recent fatal police shootings of black men, had been on probation for a 2009 felony injury to a child conviction.

The hearing Friday was held two weeks after Dallas County District Attorney officials filed a motion to revoke Alexander's probation for multiple violations. Alexander's supporters have said those issues had largely already been addressed by the same judge at previous hearings. They say he is being targeted because of the protest, but the shooter Micah Johnson was not affiliated with their group.

"We will continue to push for police reform. This is the very reason we need to push for police reform. This system is corrupt," said Kim Cole, an attorney for Alexander and for the network. "There were five applications (for revocation) filed in 11 days and there were no new offenses committed. Explain that."

Prosecutors alleged Alexander violated his probation by missing meetings with his probation officer, leaving the state without notifying his probation officer, failing to complete community service and classes and falling behind on fines and fees. Court records showed Lewis sentenced Alexander to 10 days in jail in December for several missed meetings and added 30 hours of community service after he admitted to leaving the state at a hearing earlier this month.

Prosecutor Douglas Millican said Alexander was being treated the same as any other defendant.

"I feel silly having to say this, but we would be standing here in this position regardless of circumstances with who the defendant was or what he was involved in. I would be having the same conversation with you if he was a pediatric neurosurgeon and had to be in surgery in 10 minutes," he told the judge.

Cole said Alexander received extra scrutiny because of his protest involvement, noting that police and sheriff's officers had sent social media posts and other photos and video of Alexander to the judge to show he had left the state.

Lewis said she had given Alexander multiple opportunities over the last six years to follow the rules.

"I've done everything but almost beg him to do what he is supposed to do," she said.

Cameron Gray, another attorney representing Alexander, said he doesn't plan to appeal the ruling. He said with time served Alexander will be eligible for parole in six months or less.

Texas man charged with beheading wife after police visit

Police say a Texas man is accused of beheading his wife just hours after officers visited the couple for a welfare check.

Martin says a relative called police again two hours later to say Dauzat had killed his wife. Police returned and found Natasha Dauzat had been decapitated. The couple's two toddlers were home, but not hurt.

McLennan County jail records show Dauzat is being held Friday on a murder charge. Bond is set at $500,000. No attorney is listed to speak on his behalf.

Bellmead is 80 miles south of Dallas.

Confederate inscription removed from University of Texas

An inscription honoring the Confederacy has been removed from public display at the University of Texas in Austin.

The Austin American-Statesman reports the stone panels were removed last month from the South Mall.

President Gregory Fenves last summer said the inscription would stay. Fenves told the American-Statesman this week that he decided this spring that the inscription must go.

The inscription is dedicated to "the men and women of the Confederacy who fought with valor and suffered with fortitude that states rights be maintained" and who were "not dismayed by defeat nor discouraged by misrule."

Fenves says the inscription is inappropriate for UT's goal of diversity and inclusion. He says the panels are in storage and will be considered for possible exhibit at UT's Briscoe Center for American History.

Lower court tosses Texas case that Supreme Court let proceed

Texas A lower federal judge has dismissed a Texas housing discrimination lawsuit that the U.S. Supreme Court allowed to go forward last year in a decision previously cheered by civil rights groups.

U.S. District Judge Sidney Fitzwater tossed Friday a 2008 lawsuit by the Dallas-based Inclusive Communities Project.

State Attorney General Ken Paxton called it a victory for Texas.

In 2015, the Supreme Court let the case return to district court. Supporters were more excited about the legal precedent that ruling set than the case itself.

In it, the Supremo Court found that federal housing laws prohibit seemingly neutral practices that harm minorities, even without proof of intentional discrimination.

That upheld a key tool long used by advocates to challenge housing discrimination, which remains even with the Texas case itself dismissed.

Mural of assassin Oswald on Dallas building draws scrutiny

A nearly two-story mural of assassin Lee Harvey Oswald recently painted on a Dallas building is drawing criticism for being insensitive.

The mural outside a barbershop features Oswald's black-and-white portrait. He lived in the neighborhood and the owner of the barbershop, Christian Avanti, says the mural is meant only to reflect the neighborhood's history and isn't an homage. Avanti says it wasn't meant to upset people.

The area is part of an arts district featuring a variety of murals. The Bishop Arts District Merchants Association says what property owners choose to paint on their buildings is up to them.

Neighbor Jeanie DeLeon tells KXAS-TV that the mural hurts efforts to promote the district.

Oswald shot President John F. Kennedy in 1963 as the president traveled through Dallas in a motorcade.

Central Texas man stung to death by bees

A 68-year-old Central Texas man is dead after he was attacked by a swarm of bees while riding a lawn mower on his rural property.

Authorities say Donald Williams was mowing grass late Friday morning when he was attacked at his rural property about 8 miles northwest of Waco. McLennan County Sheriff Parnell McNamara says when the man's wife looked outside when the lawn mower motor stopped, she saw her husband lying on the ground covered in bees.

The woman rushed to her husband and was stung multiple times herself. Both were taken to Baylor Scott & White Hillcrest Medical Center in Waco, where Williams died. McNamara said Williams' wife is expected to recover.

The sheriff said the bees apparently came from hives Williams maintained on his property.

Report: Texas flouted federal aquifer rules for 34 years

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

AUSTIN, — Texas allowed the drilling of oil and natural gas injection wells in some areas near drinking water sources starting more than three decades ago, but state regulators recently assured the federal government the effort posed "little to no risk" to the subterranean reserves, according to a report released Friday.

Clean Water Action, an environmental advocacy group, contends in its report that the nation's top oil-producing state doesn't really know how many injection wells are affecting drinking water or the full impact. That's because the state still hasn't properly implemented federal aquifer safeguards, 34 years after telling the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency that it would do so, the group said.

"We actually don't know the full extent of the problem," said John Noel, primary author of the report. "They've permitted tens of thousands of injection wells without following federal guidelines."

Injection wells take various forms and are used for production and waste disposal in oil fields. In addition to exploratory drilling, oil producing operations can produce large amounts of briny fluid and other waste, and oilfield operators often dispose of the waste by injecting it back underground.

In 1982, the EPA and Texas' Railroad Commission, which oversees oil and gas production, agreed that many existing injection wells would be exempted from federal rules designed to protect underground sources of drinking water.

Excerpts of letters from 1982 released Friday as part of the report show that the commission said it would provide federal officials with a map of existing exempt areas already being used by oil producers and pledged to secure EPA approval before sanctioning new exempted areas or allowing existing ones to get larger.

Noel's report says Texas never produced such a map and that the Railroad Commission doesn't have a full record of the exemptions granted. The commission now says it is in the process of producing a more complete inventory.

The report references a letter the Railroad Commission wrote to the EPA in March in which the Texas agency said that since 1982, it had issued permits for injection wells in "a handful of fields" that could affect underground water reserves.

Tracey Maholland, of Bethlehem, 37, spends time with her children in Bethlehem, Pa. Maholland is a recovering drug addict who abused both heroin and methamphetamine, even as her three daughters and two sons looked to her to guide them through the pitfalls of childhood. Struggles like hers are common as Pennsylvania grapples with a heroin epidemic fueled by cheap access to the drug and the overprescription of painkillers.

Dozens treated as heroin overdose spikes hit several states

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Officials in several states are scrambling to deal with a series of heroin overdose outbreaks affecting dozens of people and involving at least six deaths.

The spikes in Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia over the past few days have seen rescue workers rushing from scene to scene to provide overdose antidote drugs.

While it's unclear if one dealer or batch is responsible for the multistate outbreak, the spikes reflect the potency of heroin flooding the Midwest.

In Cincinnati, police on Friday asked for the public's help in identifying the source of the heroin behind an estimated 78 overdoses in two days.

Officials in surrounding Hamilton County are calling the latest onslaught of overdose cases a public health emergency. County Health Commissioner Tim Ingram said the number of emergency room incidents over the last six days was "unprecedented."

Emergency rooms estimate they had 174 suspected opioid overdose cases this week, including three deaths. Last year, accidental drug overdoses killed 3,050 people in Ohio, an average of eight per day, state officials said.

A record high 47,055 people died from drug overdoses in the United States in 2014, according to the latest figures from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. That was up 7 percent from the year before, spurred by large increases in heroin and opioid painkiller deaths.

The spikes in overdoses might be much worse without naloxone, a now widely available overdose antidote that many first responders such as firefighters carry. In Ohio alone, emergency medical personnel last year administered nearly 19,800 doses of naloxone, known by the brand name Narcan.

In Mount Sterling, Kentucky, one person died following a series of 12 heroin overdoses that occurred within hours of each other on Wednesday. Most of the victims were in their 30s or 40s, said Jeff Jackson, battalion chief for the Montgomery County Fire Department.

In Huntington, West Virginia, an Ohio man was charged with heroin distribution in connection with 27 drug overdoses in a few hours last week, a federal prosecutor said Friday.

Bruce Lamar Griggs was arrested after the Aug. 15 spate of overdoses clustered around an apartment complex in Huntington, a city of 49,000 residents already badly battered by drug abuse and overdoses. He made an initial court appearance Thursday in Ohio and will be transported to West Virginia. A message left with his public defender in Ohio was not immediately returned.

In southeastern Indiana, Jennings County Sheriff Gary Driver said a wave of drug overdoses Tuesday killed one person and left 14 hospitalized.

In Cincinnati, City Manager Harry Black said authorities suspect carfentanil, a drug used to sedate elephants, may be mixed in with heroin and causing the overdoses. The drug is 100 times more potent than fentanyl, which is suspected in spates of overdoses in several states.

Last month, carfentanil was discovered in the Cincinnati area's heroin stream, but many hospitals don't have the equipment to test blood for it.

In Hamilton County, officials say they will seek funding for treatment and expanded response teams. Each team would include a law enforcement officer, an emergency responder and a specialist who could treat people who've overdosed, County Commissioner Dennis Deters said.

Transgender plaintiffs get narrow win on injunction request

By Jonathan Drew and Emery P. Dalesio
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — A judge ruled Friday that two students and an employee must be allowed to use restrooms matching their gender identity at University of North Carolina campuses, and he said they have a strong chance of proving the state's bathroom-access measure violates federal law.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Schroeder temporarily blocked the University of North Carolina from making the three plaintiffs follow the restroom provision of the so-called HB2 law as the larger case makes its way to trial in November. His final decision on the law won't come until after that trial.

Passed in March, HB2 requires transgender people to use the restrooms in schools and many public buildings that correspond to the sex on their birth certificates, rather than their gender identity. It also excludes gender identity and sexual orientation from statewide antidiscrimination protections.

The state's Republican leaders argue the law is needed to protect privacy and safety by keeping men out of women's restrooms. Transgender residents challenging the law argue that restroom safety is protected by existing laws, while the North Carolina measure is harmful and discriminatory.

In his ruling Friday, Schroeder wrote that the three plaintiffs in the lawsuit "are likely to succeed" in their arguments that HB2 violates Title IX, a federal law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of gender in educational institutions.

However, he said they haven't shown they are likely to succeed on a claim that the law violates their constitutional equal protection rights, and he reserved judgment on another constitutional claim related to due process.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which represents the transgender plaintiffs, and the U.S. Justice Department both argued for a preliminary injunction to block the restroom provision of the law. Defending the law are Republican Gov. Pat McCrory, Republican legislative leaders and a citizens group.

Several cases seeking to challenge or defend the law were assigned to Schroeder, while another case is pending in a separate federal court.

FDA expands Zika screening to all US blood centers

By Matthew Perrone
Associated Press

> "There is still much uncertainty regarding the nature and extent of Zika virus transmission. At this time, the recommendation for testing the entire blood supply will help ensure that safe blood is available for all individuals who might need transfusion."
> Dr. Peter Marks

WASHINGTON — The government told all U.S. blood banks Friday to start screening for Zika, a major expansion intended to protect the nation's blood supply from the mosquito-borne virus.

Previously, blood testing was mostly limited to parts of Florida and Puerto Rico, where Zika is spreading. Screening will initially extend to states along the Gulf Coast and a few others.

"There is still much uncertainty regarding the nature and extent of Zika virus transmission," Dr. Peter Marks said in a Food and Drug Administration release. "At this time, the recommendation for testing the entire blood supply will help ensure that safe blood is available for all individuals who might need transfusion."

Blood banks already test donations for HIV, hepatitis, West Nile and other blood-borne viruses. The Zika virus stays in the blood for about one week, but is thought to remain in other bodily fluids longer.

While Zika is primarily spread through mosquito bites, there have been reports in Brazil of Zika transmission through transfusion. No such cases have been reported in the United States. One Zika-positive blood donation, though, was recently intercepted in Florida, Marks said Friday.

"The donation was identified while the blood bag was still in quarantine, before it was released," Marks told reporters on a media call. "The system worked correctly."

Zika can also be spread through sex, and Marks said that played into the decision to expand testing. Current evidence suggests that infected men can spread the virus for several months through sex, and women can transmit it for several weeks.

Adding to the challenge is that 4 out of 5 people infected never develop symptoms, such as fever, joint pain and rash.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on Friday reported the first U.S. case of a man spreading Zika through sex even though he never had any symptoms. The Maryland man had traveled to the Dominican Republic, one of the many countries in the Caribbean and Latin America hit with a Zika outbreak.

There have been nearly 2,500 cases of Zika in the U.S. linked to travel to outbreak areas. Since February, blood banks have turned away people who had recently visited those regions, under a previous FDA directive.

While the virus causes only a mild illness in most people, infection during pregnancy can lead to severe brain-related birth defects.

Blood testing began last month in parts of Florida after the first cases of homegrown Zika occurred in Miami. So far, there have been about 40 cases of Zika caused by mosquito bites in Florida. Health officials, however, don't expect widespread outbreaks to occur in the U.S.

The FDA has authorized use of two experimental blood screening tests for Zika, one made by Roche and another from Hologic Inc. and Grifols. Several testing sites are already voluntarily using the technology, including blood centers in Texas. The cost of adding Zika testing to the screening process is less than $10 per blood donation, according to officials at South Texas Blood and Tissue Center.

FDA officials said they do not anticipate any problems supplying the tests throughout the U.S.

The tropical mosquito that spreads Zika and other viruses is found along the southern U.S. Friday's directive lists 11 states that will need to begin screening blood in the next month because of their location or because of the influx of travelers from Zika outbreak countries.

On the list: Alabama, Arizona, California, Georgia, Hawaii, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, New York, South Carolina and Texas.

All other U.S. states and territories will have three months to comply.

An executive for America's Blood Centers, which has more than 600 locations in the U.S. and Canada, warned that the amount of work needed to comply with the FDA's timeline is "titanic."

"Testing labs and the test vendors are working feverishly to allow testing to start on time in the areas subject to the 12 week timeline," said Dr. Louis Katz, in an email.

The FDA works with other federal agencies to set standards for screening, testing and handling blood donations. Blood banks and donation centers adhere to those guidelines.

Friday's announcement follows recent pressure from members of Congress to expand Zika screening. The move is "a strong step forward in protecting our nation's blood supply," Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., said in a statement.

Girl's killing is New Mexico's latest horrific child death

By Russell Contreras and Susan Montoya Bryan
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The killing this week of a 10-year-old Albuquerque girl who was drugged, raped and dismembered is just the latest horrific child slaying case for New Mexico, which has the nation's highest youth poverty rate and a state government that has had heavily publicized difficulties protecting children from abuse.

Victoria Martens was not known to have been a victim of previous violent abuse. But officials acknowledged Friday that the man accused of injecting her with methamphetamine before raping her was not being monitored by probation officers or tested for drugs as mandated by a judge last year.

In that case, 31-year-old Fabian Gonzales was arrested for beating another woman in a car with a baby inside it while the woman was driving and ended up pleading no contest to two misdemeanor crimes that kept him out of jail. Corrections department officials said Friday they never got the judge's order for him to be supervised by probation officers.

Victoria's death follows May's 40-year prison sentence for an Albuquerque woman for the 2013 kicking death of her 9-year-old son. That case prompted an overhaul of the New Mexico state agency that investigates child abuse.

That same month, an 11-year-old Navajo girl was taken to a desolate area by a stranger who sexually assaulted her, bludgeoned her and left her to die.

"We have a litany of little angels who are crying at us from the grave," said Allen Sanchez, executive director of the New Mexico Conference of Catholic Bishops.

New Mexico Children, Youth and Families Secretary Monique Jacobson said Friday that state records showed no prior cases involving violence or sexual abuse against Victoria. The agency has joined police in the investigation into the death.

Jacobson said she was prohibited by law from disclosing whether the agency had received any other complaints related to Victoria, described by neighbors from her blue-collar apartment complex as a seemingly happy and sociabie girl who loved to swim and dance.

The others charged in Victoria's death are her mother, Michelle Martens, and Gonzales' cousin Jessica Kelley. While Martens has no online record of an arrest in New Mexico, she told police Kelley had been released from jail just days before Victoria's death.

The three face charges of child abuse resulting in death, kidnapping and tampering with evidence. Gonzales and Kelley are also charged of criminal sexual penetration of a minor.

There were conflicting reports from state officials Friday over communication of probation requirements imposed on Gonzales between court administrators and the New Mexico Department of Corrections.

Deputy Corrections Secretary Alex Sanchez said her agency never received a judgment and sentence order mandating supervised probation for Gonzales. It was meant to ensure he committed no crimes and threatened jail time as punishment for violations like illegal drug use.

Second Judicial District Court spokesman Tim Korte said records show the documents were forwarded to the corrections department in February 2015.

Martens worked at a local grocery store, said neighbors who knew little else about her, and told detectives she met Gonzales online about a month before her daughter's death.

Victoria's grieving grandparents and other relatives said they were thankful to first-responders, investigating authorities and community members who offered prayers, said minister and family spokeswoman Laura Bobbs.

"Children have few rights and no one to speak for them," Bobbs said. "Today, I speak for the children and the voice of Victoria. Parents, communities and governments need to put our children first because they are our future."

Other high-profile New Mexico child killing cases include a woman sentenced last year to 21 years in prison for smothering her infant daughter to avoid hearing her cry and a man sentenced to 63 years for raping and killing his baby daughter.

Those stories made national headlines, but Victoria's slaying is drawing deeper condemnation.

New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez said it was more troubling than all crimes she handled during a 25-year career as a state prosecutor before her election to the state's top post in 2010.

"I personally took on some of the most brutal, violent, gut-wrenching cases our state has ever seen. This has to be the worst," she said in a statement Friday.

Sanchez suggested deaths like Victoria's could be prevented if state child welfare case workers made more home visits and New Mexico implemented a statewide pre-kindergarten program. Research shows both help reduce to reduce child abuse and poverty, he said.

"We should get on this now," Sanchez said. "It's going to take a whole generation before we see real change."

A memorial for a 10-year-old Albuquerque girl who police said was sexually assaulted, strangled then dismembered is shown at Petroglyph Elementary School, the girl Albuquerque school, on Friday. On the day she was going to celebrate her 10th birthday, she was found dead Wednesday in her family's apartment by Albuquerque police, her dismembered remains lying under a burning blanket. The girl's mother, 35-year-old Michelle Marten, her 31-year-old boyfriend, Fabian Gonzales, and his 31-year-old cousin, Jessica Kelley, are facing charges.

nine, respectively.

The state's offshore rig count was unchanged at one, and there weren't any rigs in inland waters.

All of New Mexico's rigs were in the Permian.

A year ago this week, there were 386 rigs in Texas and 50 in New Mexico.

United States

The nation's oil rig count was unchanged at 406, as was the miscellaneous count at two. Natural gas rigs, however, fell two to 81. In total, the U.S. had 468 rigs, down two. There were 468 rigs on land, down two; four in inland waters, up one; and 17 rigs offshore, down one. All offshore rigs were in the Gulf of Mexico.

By drilling trajectory, there were 379 horizontal rigs, down three; 62 vertical rigs, down two; and 48 directional rigs, up three.

The U.S. had 877 rigs at this time last year.

Most-Active

The basins with the most activity this week were the Permian, the Eagle Ford, the Cana Woodford (32), the Williston (27) and the Marcellus (25).

The most-active states were Texas, Oklahoma (62), Louisiana (42), New Mexico and North Dakota (27).

Canada & North America

Canada jumped to 146 after 25 rigs were added, 19 of which were oil and six were natural gas. In total, it had 84 oil rigs and 62 natural gas rigs. Canada had 196 rigs a year ago this week.

The total number of rigs in the North America region rose 23 this week to 635. At this time last year, there were 1,073 rigs in North America.

Bolivia's Deputy Minister of Internal Affairs Rodolfo Illanes speaks during a press conference at the government palace in La Paz, Bolivia. Government officials said that the striking miners kidnapped and beat Illanes to death after he traveled to the area to mediate in the bitter conflict over mining laws. Government Minister Carlos Romero called it a "cowardly and brutal killing" and asked that the miners turn over the body of his deputy.

Bolivian president, opposition spar over official's killing

By Carlos Valdez
Associated Press

LA PAZ, Bolivia — President Evo Morales and his political opponents traded recriminations Friday over the shocking beating death of a high-ranking government official by protesting miners who had blockaded a highway.

The killing of Deputy Interior Minister Rodolfo Illanes underscored how Morales, a former coca growers' union leader, has increasingly found himself at odds with the same kind of popular social movements that fueled his rise to power and have made up his political base.

"This is a political conspiracy, not a social demand," Morales said at a news conference, accusing his political opponents of backing the miners' cause. He called for three days of official mourning, criticized the "cowardly attitude" of the protesters and insisted that his government had "always been open" to negotiation.

He ordered prosecutors to find and bring to justice those responsible for Illanes' killing, as well as anyone who might have ordered it.

Businessman and opposition leader Samuel Doria Medina rejected Morales' comments about the opposition and said the government should try to make peace.

"The prices of minerals have gone down, and the costs of production have increased," he said. "That is the cause of the protest."

"Morales would do well to be critical of himself and set aside false conspiracy theories blaming the right wing and the media," former President Jorge Quiroga said, "when the undercurrent of these protests is the crisis." Mourners brought flowers to a funeral Mass for Illanes on Friday in the capital, La Paz, where a red-uniformed honor guard carried his coffin into the government palace. Lawmakers and government officials paid their respects.

Illanes' kidnapping and killing followed weeks of tension over dwindling paychecks in a region of Bolivia that has been hit hard by falling metal prices.

The miners began blocking the highway in the town of Panduro, 80 miles (south of La Paz, on Monday, to demand they be allowed to work for private companies, which promise to put more cash in their pockets.

The issue has bedeviled Morales, who began as a champion of the working class and nationalized oil and gas interests, only to see his support crater amid the financial downturn. Miners say Morales has become a shill of the rich and done little to help them make ends meet as the economy slows.

Illanes, who was also a lawyer and university professor, had traveled to the scene of the protests to negotiate with the strikers, who had armed themselves with dynamite and seized several highways, stranding thousands of vehicles and passengers.

Instead, he was taken captive by the miners Thursday morning. At midday he said via Twitter: "My health is fine, my family can be calm."

But later in the day, Illanes' body was found abandoned on the side of the highway, his car burned. An autopsy found he died from trauma to the brain and thorax. Police raided the offices of the miners' union and detained 15 people.

Illanes "was kidnapped, tortured and murdered," Morales said.

His driver escaped.

The fatal beating came after the killings of two protesters in clashes with police Wednesday, deaths that likely fueled the tensions.

The highway was clear on Friday as the miners returned to their camps and their leaders stayed out of sight. Bolivia's informal miners number about 100,000 and work in self-managed cooperatives producing primarily zinc, tin, silver and gold.

It's rough work in the barren, high-altitude "altiplano" region of the Andes, where the miners live in camps and work with picks and dynamites in nearly tapped-out mines. They want to be able to associate with private companies but are currently prohibited from doing so. The government argues that if they associate with multinational companies they will no longer be cooperatives.

The influential National Federation of Mining Cooperatives of Bolivia, a strong ally of Morales in years when metals were more valuable, was organized in the 1980s amid growing unemployment in the sector that followed the closure of state mines.

shale drillers, saw the fewest transactions last year since 2004, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. Benchmark Brent crude averaged $35.21 a barrel in the first quarter of 2016, the lowest in more than a decade. The grade traded at $49.40 at 11:27 a.m. London time.

"Buyers and sellers were so far apart in terms of price expectations," said Bijan Mossavar-Rahmani, executive chairman of oil producer DNO, which made a $300 million bid for Gulf Keystone Petroleum in July. "A lot of the sellers still were hopeful that $100 oil or at least $80 oil was around the corner, and it hasn't happened."

Those companies that did make acquisitions had little cash to draw on. Royal Dutch Shell's debt ballooned when it bought BG Group, a rare mega-deal of the past two years, valued at more than $70 billion in April 2015. The transaction was announced just weeks before crude prices resumed their slide, prompting some analysts and shareholders to suggest Shell was paying too much.

Such anxiety might ease with Brent crude now trading around $50 a barrel, and acquisitions could pick up as buyers and sellers have more similar price expectations, according to Bloomberg Intelligence. Although crude has recovered, "there seems to be an increasing consensus that oil will not go back to over $100 any time soon," said Philipp Chladek, a senior industry analyst for BI in London. "So the differing perceptions about the asset values that, next to the volatility, were the main deal-breaker in the past, and are gradually converging."

There'll be plenty of assets up for grabs. Shell intends to raise $30 billion through divestitures in the three years to 2018, and BP plans as much as $5 billion of disposals this year. Total and Eni also are putting assets on the block.

The market for oilfield acquisitions has "stabilized in the last three months; and the consensus around commodity prices and where prices are going has narrowed," said Jon Clark, a transaction adviser at Ernst & Young. "There seems to now be a shift back into M&A-type activity and we're starting to see potential divestments coming out of the majors."

Week in oil: WTI down nearly 2 percent

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

West Texas Intermediate future fell 32 cents (0.68 percent) Friday after closing at $47.64 a barrel. WTI is down 88 cents (1.81 percent) for the week.

Monday marked the end of September contracts. The final settlement price was $47.05. Monday closed lower, snapping seven consecutive days of increases. So far in August, the price has fallen only eight times.

October became the new near-month contract Tuesday and finished the day at $48.10 barrel, down 69 cents (1.41 percent) on the day. The price marked the highest of the week.

In 165 trading days this year, WTI has been in the $40 range 94 times and in the $50s four times. It has fallen 78 times and risen 87 times. On the year, WTI is up $10.88 (29.60 percent). The year-high is $51.23 (June 8), and the low is $26.21 (Feb. 11).

Plains Marketing posted prices were also down this week. WTI posted fetched $44.25 Friday, marking a 75-cent (1.67 percent) decrease since Aug. 19. It was up 50 cents (1.14 percent) on the day.

West Texas sour also rose 50 cents (1.25 percent) Friday, but was down 75 cents (1.82 percent) this week. Tuesday marked week-highs for WTI and sour at $44.50 and $40.80, respectively.

WTI posted has been in the $40s for 12 straight days. The year-high is $47.75 (June 8), and the low is $22.75 (Feb. 11). Sour has wavered between the high $30s and low $40s most over the past two weeks. Its year-high is $44.15 (June 8), while its low is $19.55 (Feb. 11).

In other futures trading Friday, November contracts rose 30 cents to $48.33, December was up 29 cents to $48.98 and January jumped 28 cents to $49.63. The nearest month in the $50s is February at $50.20, up 28 cents Friday.

Yellen suggests rate hike is coming but offers no timetable

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

Associated Press

Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen, right, talks with Stanley Fischer, vice chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, before her speech to the annual invitation-only conference of central bankers from around the world, Friday at Jackson Lake Lodge in Grand Teton National Park, north of Jackson Hole, Wyo.

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen said Friday that the case for raising interest rates has strengthened in light of a solid job market and an improved outlook for the U.S. economy and inflation. But she stopped short of offering any timetable.

Yellen sketched a generally upbeat assessment of the economy in a speech to an annual conference of central bankers in Jackson Hole, Wyoming. She pointed to steady gains in employment and strength in consumer spending.

She also noted that while inflation is still running below the Fed's 2 percent target, it's being depressed mainly by temporary factors.

"In light of the continued solid performance of the labor market and our outlook for economic activity and inflation," Yellen said, "I believe the case for an increase (in the Fed's benchmark borrowing rate) has strengthened in recent months."

Still, Yellen declined to hint at whether the Fed might raise rates at its next policy meeting, Sept. 20-21, or at its subsequent meetings in early November and mid-December. Instead, she stressed, as she frequently has, that the Fed's rate decisions will depend on whether the freshest economic data continues to confirm its outlook.

"As ever," she said, "the economic outlook is uncertain, and so monetary policy is not on a preset course."

Economists took her remarks to mean that while a rate hike remains possible at the Fed's September meeting, it isn't necessarily likely.

"We think most officials will want to see more concrete evidence of a rebound in GDP growth and a rise in inflation towards the 2 percent target, with a December move still appearing the most likely outcome," said Andrew Hunter, an economist with Capital Economics.

Hunter pointed to a government report Friday that the economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, grew at an anemic 1.1 percent annual rate last quarter as evidence that the Fed likely wants to see stronger growth.

In December, the Fed raised its benchmark rate modestly in response to a brighter economic picture, notably a job market nearing full health. The rate had been kept at a record low near zero since the depths of the 2008 financial crisis.

At the time, the Fed foresaw four additional rate increases in 2016. But since then, global economic pressures, financial market turmoil and a brief slump in the U.S. job market have kept the Fed on the sidelines.

Some economists have said they think conditions are ripe for the Fed to boost rates next month. Others say they foresee no action until December, after the elections, in at the earliest.

Stanley Fischer, the Fed's vice chairman and a close Yellen ally, said after her speech that in deciding whether to raise rates as soon as September, policymakers will assess the August jobs report next Friday to see whether employment growth maintains its solid pace of the past three months.

"That will probably weigh in our decision, along with other data that may come in," Fischer said in an interview on CNBC. "We think the evidence is that the economy has strengthened."

Fischer said it was still possible that the Fed could raise rates twice before year's end. But he said that would depend on the strength of forthcoming economic data.

In her speech, Yellen said the Fed still believes that future rate increases, whenever they occur, will be "gradual."

Some have said that if the Fed does decide to act in September, it would need to further prepare investors. After Yellen's speech, data from the CME Group indicated that investors foresee only a 24 percent probability of a rate hike in September and about a 58 percent chance by December.

The Fed chair on Friday defended the extraordinary tools the central bank has used to support the economy since the 2007-2009 Great Recession. To ease the impact of the recession, for example, she said the Fed had effectively used bond purchases to reduce long-term borrowing rates and had assured investors that short-term rates would stay low.

But to combat future downturns, she said the Fed should explore other options, too. She mentioned raising the Fed's 2 percent inflation target to give it more leeway or possibly expanding the types of assets the Fed could buy beyond Treasurys and mortgage-backed securities. But she said those options would require more study.

Yellen said that while the Fed's support had been critical in supporting the economy, political leaders should considering using the government's tax and spending powers as well. She said efforts need to be made, in particular, to boost the productivity of U.S. workers. Productivity growth has weakened sharply in recent years and has been a major factor in holding the economy back. Yellen was the lead-off speaker Friday for the annual conference sponsored by the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City. The conference draws members of the Fed's board of governors in Washington, officials from the 12 regional banks and monetary leaders from around the world.

In advance of Yellen's speech Friday, several Fed officials met Thursday with about 120 activists from the Campaign for Popular Democracy's Fed Up coalition. The group of policy activists, labor unions and community groups has been lobbying the Fed to keep rates low to allow the economy to strengthen enough to benefit more Americans. The group, some wearing T-shirts bearing the slogan, "We Need a People's Fed!" posed questions about economic policy and the need for diversity to the Fed officials who took part in the 90-minute discussion.

"Our communities are being sacrificed for an inflation enemy that isn't here," said Rod Adams, a community organizer for Neighborhoods for Change in Minnesota. The coalition said it wanted the Fed and Congress to consider changes in the makeup of the boards of directors of the 12 regional banks to promote more diversity among a group of officials that is mainly white and male and dominated by bankers.

Top French court rules burkini bans violate basic freedoms

By Philippe Sotto
Associated Press

PARIS — France's top administrative court on Friday overturned a ban on burkinis in a Mediterranean beach resort, effectively meaning that towns can no longer issue bans on the swimsuits that have divided the country and brought world attention to its fraught relationship with Muslims.

The ruling by the Council of State specifically concerns a ban on the Muslim garment in the Riviera town of Villeneuve-Loubet, but the binding decision is expected to impact all the 30 or so French resort municipalities that have issued similar decrees.

The bans grew increasingly controversial as images circulated online of some Muslim women being ordered to remove body-concealing garments on French Riviera beaches.

Lawyers for a human rights group and a Muslim collective challenged the legality of the ban to the top court, saying the orders infringe on basic freedoms and that mayors have overstepped their powers by telling women what to wear on beaches.

Despite the court victory, the debate was unlikely to go away. Prime Minister Manual Valls, who supported the bans, called the debate "fundamental" for secular France, where religious displays are unwelcome in the public space.

Valls wrote on his Facebook page that denouncing the burkini "in no way puts into question individual freedom" and is really about denouncing "fatal, retrograde Islamism." The burkini, he wrote, "is the affirmation of political Islam in the public space."

Mayors had cited multiple reasons for the bans, including security after a string of Islamic extremist attacks, risk to public order, and France's strict rules on secularism in public life.

The Council of State ruled that, "The emotion and concerns arising from the terrorist attacks, notably the one perpetrated in Nice on July 14, cannot suffice to justify in law the contested prohibition measure."

It ruled that the mayor of Villeneuve-Loubet overstepped his powers by enacting measures that are not justified by "proven risks of disruptions to public order nor, moreover, on reasons of hygiene or decency."

"The contested decree has thus brought a serious and manifestly illegal infringement on basic freedoms such as freedom to come and go, freedom of conscience and personal freedom," the ruling read.

Lawyer Patrice Spinosi, representing the Human Rights League, said that women who have already received fines can protest them based on Friday's decision. He told The Associated Press the group plans to ask all French mayors who banned burkinis to withdraw their orders and, if they refuse to do so, he will systematically take each case to court.

"It is a decision that is meant to set legal precedent," Spinosi said to reporters earlier outside the court. "Today all the ordinances taken should conform to the decision of the Council of State. Logically the mayors should withdraw these ordinances. If not, legal actions could be taken" against those towns.

The head of the Collective Against Islamophobia in France, the other group that appealed to the top court, hailed the decision but lamented that the crackdown "will remain engraved in the history of our country."

"One cannot take back the harm which was caused, humiliations that were provoked," Marwan Muhammad told reporters outside the court.

The bans have become a symbol of tensions around the place of Islam in secular France and the heated debate has brought about divisions even among cabinet ministers.

While Valls argued that burkinis oppress women, two ministers in his cabinet, Education Minister Najat Vallaud-Belkacem and Health Minister Marisol Touraine, have said banning burkinis is not a good option. Vallaud-Belkacem, a feminist with North African roots, argued that while she doesn't like the burkini swimsuit, banning the garment amounted to a politically driven act that encouraged racism.

Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve, who is also in charge of faiths, said that "it is now up to everyone to seek calm."

The conservative mayor of Villeneuve-Loubet, Lionnel Luca, said that "far from calming, this decision can only heighten passions and tensions, with the risk of trouble we wanted to avoid."

Luca, also a lawmaker, said that now only a law can stop troubles. He denounced a "rampant Islamization" in the country and said that, with Friday's ruling, "they've gained a small additional step."

While addressing only one local ban, the Council of State sets general principles in its ruling that any mayors will now have to abide by when using their powers in the future.

Technically, other local bans are still in effect until mayors revoke them or groups contest them in courts. But de facto the town decrees are hollow because burkini fines can be contested.

Nevertheless, the mayor of the Corsican town of Sisco said he wouldn't lift the ban he imposed after an Aug. 13 clash on a beach. "Here, the tension is very, very, very high and I won't withdraw it," Ange-Pierre Vivoni said on BFM-TV.

Former President Nicolas Sarkozy, who announced this week he's seeking the conservative nomination for the 2017 race, said at a rally Thursday night in southern France that he wants a law banning the burkini "on the entire territory of the Republic."

Far-right National Front leader Marine Le Pen said the battle is not over. She said in a statement that lawmakers must vote "as quickly as possible" to extend a 2004 law that bans Muslim headscarves and other ostentatious religious symbols in classrooms to include all public spaces.

"The burkini would obviously be part of it," said Le Pen, who is running for president in the 2017 race.

President Francois Hollande has remained neutral on the issue, arguing that society "presumes that each person conforms to the rules, and that there is neither provocation nor stigmatization."

But critics said the bans had been feeding a racist political agenda.

Amnesty International praised the court decision Friday, calling the local decrees "invasive and discriminatory" and saying their enforcement has led to "abuses and the degrading treatment of Muslim women and girls."

Britt sparks Lee to rout of Thunderbirds in Hartman's debut

Rebels	41

It didn't take long for Lee receiver Taye Britt to put on a spectacular show Friday night at Grande Communications Stadium.

On the game's opening kickoff, the Rebels' speedy senior returned the kick 102 yards for a touchdown just 16 seconds into the contest. He went on to haul in six passes for a career high 202 yards and a pair of scores to help Lee blow by El Paso Coronado, 42-12 in head coach Clint Hartman's debut with the Rebels.

Britt returned another kickoff for 48 yards — missing a second touchdown return by a couple of steps — and totaled 352 yards of offense in the Rebels' victory.

Hartman said it was a warm feeling to be able to win his first game at Lee and he credited the determined efforts of his players.

"It feels great," Hartman said. "(With) the first game, you never know. But the guys stepped up tonight and played well. If we clean up the penalties and dropped passes, we might (have) scored 60. It's hard to be unhappy when you win any game in the state of Texas in 6A football."

After the game, a giddy Britt and his Rebel teammates were fired up with emotion. He said it's a great feeling to start off the 2016 season on such a resoundingly positive note.

"It's just excitement," Britt said. "There were things we messed up on, but just leaving the field like this, compared to (Lee's season opener) last year, it just puts a smile on my face.

"It's heartwarming. I'm so excited. I feel like a little girl right now," Britt jokingly added.

Britt's kickoff return score handed Lee (1-0) a quick 7-0 lead and gave the Rebels the early momentum, but it didn't last as long as they would have liked.

On their second series of the game, the Thunderbirds (0-1) answered with a 1-yard touchdown run by Daniel Stephens. The score capped a five-play, 36-yard drive that included a blocked extra point attempt by the Rebels' defense.

Hampered by a series of pre-snap penalties and offensive holdings, Lee's offense took a little while to get into gear. But it finally

Rangers rally to beat Snyder after QB ejection

Rangers	34
Tigers	20

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Things didn't look good for Greenwood late in the first half against Snyder when senior safety Ben Brockman was ejected on a controversial targeting call on a Tigers receiver.

That ejection would hurt the Rangers in two ways as Brockman is also the team's starting quarterback and had accounted for three touchdowns at that point.

But the Rangers didn't hang their heads. They got angry, rallied around losing their leader, pitched a defensive shutout in the second half and came from behind for a 34-20 victory over the Tigers in the season opener for both teams at J.M. King Memorial Stadium on Friday night.

"That was probably one of the best things that could have happened for us (on defense)," Greenwood coach Shad Hanna said. "We were just kind of mushing around a bit and not being super physical. And then when Ben got ejected, it really got us fired up. All the kids love Ben, they played with him forever and they said, 'We're going to get this one for you Ben.'"

Senior wide receiver and linebacker Fabian Madrid said his team reacted just like any family would.

"It just really hit in the heart and we just wanted to go out and finish what Ben started when they ejected him," he said. "We just had that fire in us."

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Greenwood's Ben Brockman is chased by Snyder's Luis Cruz on Friday at J.M. King Stadium.

At the time of the ejection, the Tigers had a 20-19 lead and it seemed like the entire Rangers faithful was more shocked than anything that the call was made. Brockman was 9-of-14 passing for 166 yards, two touchdowns, to go with 45 yards rushing and another TD when he left.

Hanna said he will watch film to agree or disagree if the call was the right one.

"It was a costly penalty for a little bit but I thought Jake Somers came in, and for his varsity game, I thought that kid did a great job for me," Hanna said.

Local teams set for Tall City Invite

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Today the pitter-patter of roughly 700 high school cross-country runners will reverberate throughout Rock the Desert Festival Field.

Twenty-five West Texas schools will be competing in Midland Classical Academy's Tall City Cross-Country Invitational, which kicks off at 9 a.m today.

The Tall City Invitational, held at Beal Park in previous years, was moved to Rock the Desert Festival Field this year because of more space, larger running trails and more parking.

MCA cross-country coach Clif Coleman said one of the hassles of hosting the event at Beal Park was shutting down streets too.

Coleman believes the new course will be more of a test for the meet's competitors.

"I think the course will be more challenging and a lot more fun for them because they will have varied terrain out there," Coleman said. "They will be running everything from green grass to more of a desert landscape."

Midland High originally planned to compete in Amarillo this weekend, but decided to compete in the Tall City Invitational because of cost concerns.

MHS lost five seniors, including University of Kansas cross-country runner Bryce Hoppel, from last year's District 3-6A boys championship team.

Even with the losses, Midland High welcomes back senior Cade Michael, an eighth-place finisher and medalist at last year's district meet. MHS coach Hil Ochoa also has high hopes for returning letterman L.J. Mendez.

"Cade Michael, he is at another level," Ochoa said. "We have a bunch of young guys that are running pretty hard. They have worked all summer long."

Ochoa also said his girls team has a chance to be the best in school history if they stay healthy.

Midland Classical's Conrey Echols finishes third in the Tall City Invitational varsity boys cross-country race with a time of 19:21.24 on Saturday, August 29, 2015, at Beal Park.

The Lee cross-country team will be competing in its first meet today under the direction of first-year coach Robert Matthews, who took over for Alfred Acosta after he assumed the Lady Rebels girls basketball head coaching duties.

Ochoa believes Lee boys runner Tanner Bushman has a chance to be one of the best runners in District 2-6A this season.

MCA is led by sophomore Conrey Echols, a fifth-place finisher at the 2015 TAPPS Class 3A State Track and Field Championships.

"Conrey is an outstanding young man, not just in athletics, but he has an outstanding character also," Coleman said. "He's poised to have another great cross-country season. He's just a joy to coach, just a fine young man of really high integrity."

Coleman also has high hopes for freshman Lily Marshall, who he feels could be a factor at the girls state meet this year.

Abilene High's Ashton Endsley, Andrews' Christian Arzabala and Junior Bejanano and Greenwood's Exalander Magallan are other runners expected to excel in today's races.

No. 9 Garden City Vs. No. 5 Austin Veritas

When/where: 10 a.m., Coyote Stadium, Gail

Records: Garden City 0-0; Austin Veritas 0-0

2015 records: Garden City 11-2; Austin Veritas 13-0

Last meeting/series: This is the first meeting between the two programs.

Three things to watch:

■ Austin Veritas won the TAPPS Six-Man Division II state title last year and returns nine starters off that team. The Defenders are making the move to TAPPS Division I this season.

■ Garden City coach Jeff Jones said Veritas is not used to losing and is a fundamentally sound, disciplined football team. "We need to play our brand of football, but it should be a good matchup," Jones said.

■ Jones said he likes the way his team has progressed since the start of practices and now the younger kids just need to grow up and play at the varsity level.

Next: Santa Anna at Garden City, 7:30 p.m. Sept. 2; Austin Veritas at Calvert, 7:30 p.m. Sept. 2

Midland Christian falls to El Paso Eastwood

By Victor R. Martinez
MRT Correspondent

Mustangs	28

EL PASO — There is no quit in new look El Paso Eastwood.

Matter of fact, there was very little quit on the other sideline where a big, fast and talented Midland Christian stood its ground until the final 4.5 seconds.

That's what it came down to on Friday night at Eastwood Stadium where the Troopers overcame an early two touchdown deficit to pull out an entertaining back and forth football game, 34-28.

After Midland Christian, a TAPPS school which finished 5-7 last season, including a victory over Americas, jumped out to 14-0 lead early in the second quarter, Eastwood rallied for 28 unanswered and seemed to have the game in control late in the fourth quarter.

But back came Midland Christian which scored 14 points in a three minute span - a 50 yard run by quarterback Peyton Powell and a Powell to Cody Wolfe 40-yard touchdown pass - to tie the game at 28-28 with 1:48 in the game.

Eastwood junior quarterback Seth Ochoa, who suffered from cramps on the previous possession, engineered a nine-play, 60-yard game winning drive capped by a 5-yard touchdown to fellow junior Josh Ponce who wide open in the end zone with 4.5 seconds.

"Every Wednesday we work a two-minute drill, first offense against the first defense," said Julio Lopez, Eastwood's head coach. "We believe in preparing our kids for anything on the field that they might run into. We felt good about every situation we could possibly be in. After that two minute stretch where we almost gave away the game, we came up big."

Ponce ended the game with three receptions for 30 yards and that game winner.

Ochoa was 20-of-30 for 228 yards and three touchdowns. He also rushed for 23 times for 96 yards and two touchdowns.

But it didn't start off that way for the junior playing in his first varsity game. On the very first play of his varsity career, he tossed an interception.

"I was just nervous," he said. "I had to get into the groove of things and once our offense got into the groove of things, that's when we started rolling."

Powell finished with 136 yards passing, 91 yards rushing and three total touchdowns.

Lee's Dustin Hunt (4) looks to the sidelines during the game against El Paso Coronado in the season-opening game Friday at Grande Communications Stadium.

LEE

broke through early in the second quarter when senior quarterback Sema'J Davis hit Payton Tranum for an eight-yard TD pass that gave Lee a 14-6 lead.

And once the Rebels' offense began to click, it couldn't be stopped.

Davis found Britt in stride with a beautifully thrown 63-yard pass for a breakaway score with 4:43 left in the first half. Lee took a 21-6 lead at halftime.

The Thunderbirds opened the second half scoring with a 72-yard TD run up the middle by Julian Madrid that cut the Rebels' lead to 21-12 after a failed conversion.

But that was virtually inconsequential.

Over the next nine minutes of play, Davis proceeded to fire three more touchdown passes — connections of 17 and 16 yards to Grant Brown and Tranum, respectively, as well as a 28-yard strike to Britt.

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Lee offensive linemen Cormac Fish (67), Nacho Rubio (72) and Stephen Quiroz (79) match up against El Paso Coronado in the season-opening game Friday at Grande Communications Stadium.

Davis put together a career night himself, as he completed 15 of his 28 passes for 285 yards and five touchdowns. He added 56 yards on the ground on nine carries.

Hartman got a first-hand look at just how threatening his new spread offense can be with the right personnel all in sync.

"I just think we have explosive players and in the offense, the spread, it creates one-on-ones," Hartman said. "If you can't win one-on-ones then you probably need to get out of it."

The Lee defense forced nine Coronado punts and held the Thunderbirds to just 234 total yards of offense in the win.

Stephens led the Thunderbirds with 89 yards and the touchdown on 20 carries. Madrid finished with 80 yards and a score on four carries.

GREENWOOD

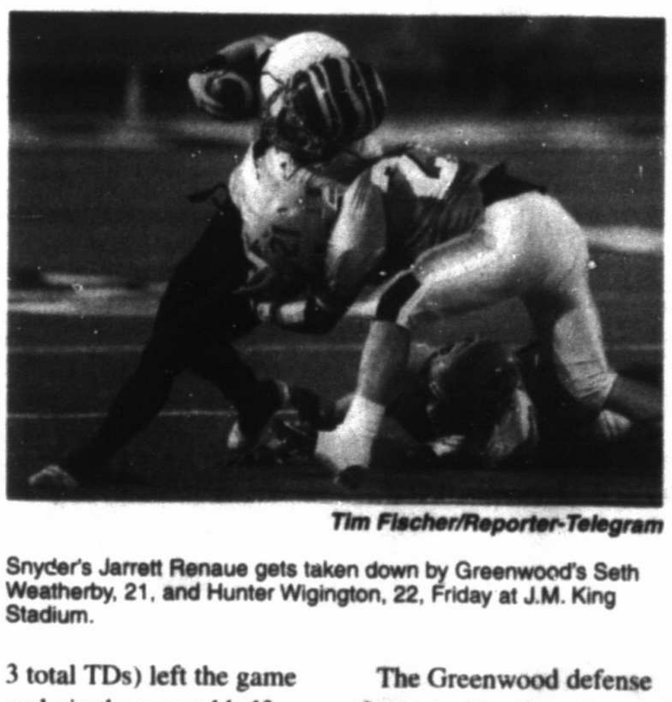
From 1B

"He threw a touchdown pass, ran the ball well, and operated everything great. I was proud of him."

Somers, a sophomore, performed very well under the circumstances as he was 7-of-12 passing for 103 yards and a 26-yard TD toss to Madrid. Somers added another 35 yards on the ground.

"I wasn't expecting that out of him," said Madrid about Somers' performance. "But he really did step up and it's great to see him play that way."

The Ranger defense was also tough in the second half, especially after Snyder starting quarterback Jarrett Renaue (177 yards passing, 81 yards rushing, 3 total TDs) left the game early in the second half with an unknown injury.



Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Snyder's Jarrett Renaue gets taken down by Greenwood's Seth Weatherby, 21, and Hunter Wigington, 22, Friday at J.M. King Stadium.

The Greenwood defense also got a big play when the Tigers fumbled the ball in Ranger territory and it was returned 60 yards for a touchdown by Hunter Wigington to give GHS a 27-20 lead early in the third quarter.

Abram Smith finished with 12 catches for 162 yards and a TD for the Tigers.

Greenwood (1-0) heads to Brownfield next Friday.

Seattle rolls past Dallas 27-17

By Tim Booth
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Three plays were all it took for Dallas to get yet another injury scare surrounding Tony Romo.

The quarterback lasted just 90 seconds into the Cowboys' 27-17 preseason loss to the Seattle Seahawks on Thursday night before leaving with what appeared at first to be a potentially significant injury, but ended up being minor.

Romo was tackled from behind by Seattle's Cliff Avril on the third play from scrimmage as Romo scrambled from the pocket.

He immediately grabbed at his back, crumpled on the field while trainers sprinted from the Dallas sideline and images of Romo's injury problems from last year immediately flashed to mind.

Turned out it was all just a scare. Romo walked off the field without assistance, threw passes on the sideline and lobbied for a return to the game. Dallas coach Jason Garrett opted to play it safe and Romo donned a baseball hat as a spectator the rest of the night.

"That was a perfect timed situation. I was going into the slide and he obviously caught me from behind," Romo said.

"In a weird way I feel good about the fact that was probably as tough of a hit I took on the back as I've had in the last five years. In that regard I feel very lucky that it could hold up and keep going."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones immediately felt the anxiety, but said there should be no issue with Romo being ready for Week 1. Romo said his back felt fine other than typical soreness.

"I just think everyone had a scare," Jones said. "And he was not hurt. He said he wasn't hurt. He wanted to go back in. He could have gone back in and played but I praise Jason. It was his decision."

Avril said he checked with some Dallas players to make sure Romo was OK.

"I thought he was going to try to throw it so I tried to swipe down and get his arm but I guess the force just, whatever, messed his back up. ... I'm never in the business of trying to hurt anybody," Avril said.

What Romo saw from the sideline was an impressive initial flash from rookie running back Ezekiel Elliott and a solid performance by backup QB Dak Prescott against one of the top defenses in the NFL.

Elliott rushed for 48 yards on seven carries, including a 13-yard run where he knocked Seattle safety Kam Chancellor backward.

Prescott was solid playing against most of Seattle's starting defense, finishing 17 of 23 for 116 yards, including a 17-yard TD pass that Jason Witten snatched away from K.J. Wright.

"I think I adjusted really well," Elliott said. "It makes my job easier when I play behind that great offensive line. I can only think of one run where someone tackled me that wasn't on the second level."

Bowman excited to fill in for Earnhardt

By Noah Trister
Associated Press

Associated Press

Alex Bowman, right rear, talks with Ryan Blaney along pit lane before qualifications for the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series auto race at Michigan International Speedway, in Brooklyn, Mich., on Friday.

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Alex Bowman should have plenty of fans this weekend at Michigan International Speedway in his return to NASCAR Sprint Cup racing.

Not only will he be filling in for Dale Earnhardt Jr., but his No. 88 Chevrolet will be adorned with a special University of Michigan paint scheme. Maybe that'll be enough to turn Bowman into a college football diehard.

"My whole life I've raced so much that I haven't really been able to be a big fan of anything," he said. "This year has been a big change in that. With football starting up here next week, I'm going to start off as a University of Michigan fan and go from there."

The 23-year-old Bowman has never finished in the top 10 in 72 starts at the Cup level, so this chance to race for Hendrick Motorsports in Earnhardt's place gives him a rare opportunity to compete under the spotlight. Earnhardt has not been cleared by doctors to return to racing as he recovers from a concussion.

Bowman drove for Earnhardt at New Hampshire last month, but Jeff Gordon has filled in for him the past four races. Earnhardt will miss at least two more races, with Bowman taking his place this weekend and Gordon driving for him at Darlington.

"Being as close of friends as I am with Dale, I have just been hoping he gets to feeling better more than anything," Bowman said. "Obviously, I'm more than happy to fill in whenever I can. New Hampshire was a lot of fun."

Bowman, from Tucson, Arizona, made 71 Cup starts over the 2014 and 2015 seasons with BK Racing and Tommy Baldwin Racing. His best finish came at Daytona in 2014, when he was 13th.

He looked as if he might have a chance to top that at New Hampshire, but his car went into the wall because of a tire issue, and he finished 26th. That's been his only Cup race of the year.

"Obviously, we ran a lot better than we finished," he said. "I hated that the race team didn't get the finish they deserved. Everybody at Hendrick Motorsports and Chevy and everybody, they have been so welcoming and easy to work with."

Bowman qualified sixth Friday for this weekend's race. He has never started higher than 14th at the Cup level.

This week, NASCAR is using its lower-downforce rules package from races earlier this season at Michigan and Kentucky. That's not a huge deal for Bowman — if only because he's hardly raced on the Cup circuit this year under any set of circumstances.

"As far as the downforce package goes — only running one other Cup race this year, I wouldn't necessarily say I'm used to it the other way," said Bowman, who has made five starts this year on the Xfinity circuit.

The University of Michigan unveiled a partnership with Axalta Coating Systems in March. Axalta is a sponsor of Earnhardt's, and the plan was for him to race with the Michigan paint scheme for this weekend's race.

Hamilton excited about starting Belgian GP from back of grid

By Jerome Pugmire
Associated Press

SPA-FRANCORCHAMPS, Belgium — Starting from the back row at the Belgian Grand Prix will do little for Lewis Hamilton's chances of a 50th career race win.

But it will bring back exciting memories of his childhood days racing against the odds in karts.

"I had a really bad go-kart when I started and always had to start last because it was so bad, and then I drove through the field," the 31-year-old British driver said. "I hope I still know how to do it."

Hamilton took a 15-place grid penalty in Friday's morning practice session for having changed too many engine parts this season, and was then handed a further 15-place penalty following another component change in the afternoon.

That means he will start Sunday's race from the back row along with McLaren's Fernando Alonso, who incurred a 35-place grid penalty for a similar array of component changes. Saturday will decide which of the drivers — who share five world titles — starts from last.

Hamilton, chasing a third straight F1 title and fourth overall, won at Spa last year. A repeat win is a long shot — even for Hamilton — but since Spa is the longest track in F1 at 7 kilometers (4.3 miles) and is very fast, it should help him pick up valuable points.

Hamilton has a 19-point lead over Rosberg, his Mercedes rival, in the title race. Rosberg is seeking his fifth win of the season, and first at Spa.

"That Nico has never won here doesn't make any difference to me," Hamilton said. "I just focus on my job. I love this track, particularly if there is good weather. I will start from behind, but I have done my homework."

Meanwhile, Max Verstappen posted the fastest time in the second practice ahead of his teammate Daniel Ricciardo, boosting Red Bull's hopes of a second win this season following Verstappen's brilliant victory in Spain.

Hamilton and Rosberg were slower during the afternoon session because they ran on harder medium tires, getting an indication of durability in the event it's the main tire on Sunday if the scorching weather continues.

Nestled in the Ardennes forest, Spa is ordinarily known for its cool climate.

But temperatures hit 35 degrees Celsius (95 F) in the afternoon, having reached 25 C (77 F) for the first practice at 10 a.m.

"Everybody was struggling to make the tires last and sliding quite a lot," said Ferrari driver Sebastian Vettel, the fourth quickest in second practice.

The afternoon sun seemed to get to the 18-year-old Verstappen, who was unhappy with Finnish veteran Kimi Raikkonen — twice his age.

He was far happier afterward.

"Compared to other competitors, we showed great pace today," Verstappen said. "I had some struggles but at the end it paid off."

Will Power has won 3 of 5 races during Texas delay

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — While James Hinchcliffe has been leading the same IndyCar race for 11 weeks, Will Power has been piling up wins and runner-up finishes.

There have been five other races completed during the unprecedented 2 1/2-month rain delay of the Texas race that is set to resume Saturday night on lap 72. Power won three of those races and was the runner-up in the other two, moving the Team Penske driver from seventh to second in season points.

"It's been a fantastic stretch of races. I don't actually feel like I'm doing anything exceptional," said Power, the 2014 IndyCar champion. "I'm just kind of doing my job and obviously the team is firing on all cylinders. ... It hasn't been doing anything like taking risks or anything. We've just been very methodical."

When the Texas race was red-flagged because of rain after 71 of 248 scheduled laps on June 12, after having already been postponed a day by wet weather, Power was seventh in season points — 117 behind Penske teammate Simon Pagenaud.

Now back at the high-banked, 1½-mile Texas oval, Power is only 20 points behind his teammate and tied with a series-high four wins even while starting one fewer race. After the final 177 laps of the Firestone 600 are completed, there will be only two races left this season.

"I'm going to be doing everything I can to finish it off well," said Power, who missed the season opener because of an inner ear infection that was initially diagnosed as concussion-like symptoms.

Power, who won the second race of a weekend doubleheader at Belle Isle right before the first waterlogged one in the Lone Star State, restarts fourth Saturday night behind Hinchcliffe, Ryan Hunter-Reay and Mikhail Aleshin, while Pagenaud is 15th.

At Texas in June, Pagenaud had a dominating 80-point lead over Scott Dixon that was bolstered by consecutive runner-up finishes to start the season and then three wins in a row. But Pagenaud has won only once in the past eight races, finishing 13th or worse half the time.

Hinchcliffe will have led for 76 days when the race finally restarts, but he hasn't been out in front in other races during that span.

Houston Astros shortstop Carlos Correa (1) celebrates his game tying home run in the dugout during the ninth inning of an MLB game at Minute Maid Park on Friday in Houston.

HRs by Correa, Gattis give Houston 5-4 win over Rays

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Carlos Correa and Evan Gattis hit back-to-back homers in the ninth inning to lift the Houston Astros to a 5-4 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays on Friday night.

Mikie Mahtook's first homer this season, a towering shot with two outs in the ninth inning, had put the Rays on top before Houston's dramatic comeback.

Correa connected on the first pitch in the ninth inning from Alex Colome (1-4) on a home run to the seats in right field to tie it 4-4.

Gattis then fought through eight pitches before sending the ninth to right field for his 21st homer that gave Houston the win.

He bounded through the celebration at home plate before ripping off his jersey Superman-style and continuing the celebration bare-chested.

Corey Dickerson hit a career-high three doubles, drove in a run and scored twice on wild pitches to help Tampa Bay come back from an early 3-0 deficit.

The game was tied 3-3 with two outs in the ninth when Mahtook sent a pitch from reliever Ken Giles (2-3) onto the train tracks atop left field.

Jake Marisnick homered in the second inning to help Houston build an early lead.

Kluber extends win streak to 6, Indians top Rangers 12-1

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Corey Kluber pitched six strong innings for a career-best sixth straight victory and Abraham Almonte hit two run-scoring doubles, helping the Cleveland Indians beat the Texas Rangers 12-1 on Friday night in a matchup of division leaders.

The Indians (73-54) snapped a three-game losing streak, which had tied a season high, and pulled within a game of the Rangers (75-54) for the best record in the American League a night after losing 9-0 to Texas ace Cole Hamels.

Adrian Beltre hit a solo homer in the sixth for the AL West-leading Rangers, but Kluber (14-8) struck out the other three hitters in the right-hander's final inning to finish with seven strikeouts.

Almonte drove in four runs in his first multi-RBI game of the season, including a two-run double past diving center fielder Ian Desmond in left-center to give the AL Central leaders a 6-0 lead in the sixth.

Roberto Perez, Cleveland's No. 9 hitter with a .104 average coming in, had four singles and three RBIs.

Jason Kipnis opened the scoring with an RBI double in the third against Martin Perez (8-10), who lost at home for the first time since May 13. The left-hander gave up 10 hits and six runs in 5 2-3 innings.

ANGELS 2

DETROIT — Justin Verlander pitched into the eighth inning and Justin Upton homered for the fourth time in five games to lead Detroit past Los Angeles.

The Tigers have won five straight to move back into contention in the AL Central and wild-card races.

Upton was hitting .226 when Tigers manager Brad Ausmus held him out of the starting lineup for three days last week. Since returning Saturday, he's batting .417 with seven extra-base hits and 11 RBIs.

MARINERS 3
WHITE SOX 1

CHICAGO — Chris Sale struck out 14 but got outpitched by Felix Hernandez and the Seattle bullpen, and the Mariners beat Chicago to end a three-game skid.

Hernandez (9-4) improved to 5-0 in eight starts since returning from the disabled list, throwing 7 1/3 innings of one-run ball. Sale (15-7) gave up five hits and walked none in his fifth complete game of the season.

BLUE JAYS 15
TWINS 8

TORONTO — Russell Martin and Justin Smoak each homered and drove in five runs and Toronto handed Minnesota its eighth straight loss.

Josh Donaldson and Darwin Barney also homered. Francisco Liriano had his first win with Toronto to help the Blue Jays take a one-game lead in the AL East.

Trevor Plouffe hit a solo homer for the last-place Twins.

ROYALS 6
RED SOX 3

BOSTON — Eric Hosmer and Alex Gordon homered, and Ian Kennedy allowed one run through five innings and Kansas City beat Boston.

Kansas City has won 11 of its last 12 games and is 18-6 in August.

YANKEES 14
ORIOLES 4

Rookie Gary Sanchez homered for the eighth time in nine games and drove in four runs to help New York beat Baltimore.

Mark Teixeira and Chase Headley also went deep for the surging Yankees, who moved five games over .500 for the first time this season.

ROCKIES 5

WASHINGTON — Jayson Werth and Daniel Murphy hit solo homers and drove in two runs each, and Gio Gonzalez earned his 100th career victory in Washington's win over Colorado.

Gonzalez (9-9) threw six innings and allowed two runs and four hits with one walk and five strikeouts.

METS 9
PHILLIES 4

NEW YORK — Wilmer Flores launched a grand slam, Asdrubal Cabrera homered from both sides of the plate and even Bartolo Colon had two helpful hits while pitching the New York Mets to a 9-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Friday night.

Jose Reyes and Cabrera opened the Mets' half of the first inning with consecutive home runs, only the second time the franchise has accomplished the feat. Trying to make a significant move in the crowded NL wild-card race, New York (65-63) opened a 10-game homestand by winning for the fifth time in its past six.

Rangers reliever Jeremy Jeffress charged with DWI in Dallas

By Schulyer Dixon
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas Rangers reliever Jeremy Jeffress, twice suspended in the minor leagues for violating drug rules, was away from the team Friday following his overnight arrest in Dallas on a drunken driving charge.

The club placed Jeffress on the restricted list before a game against Cleveland, but general manager Jon Daniels said he expected the former Milwaukee closer acquired in a trade Aug. 1 to be back with the team Saturday.

Daniels said the AL West leaders were exploring the matter while Dallas police and Major League Baseball also conducted investigations.

"I'm glad no one was hurt from it," Daniels said. "I don't want to minimize the severity of what could've happened. Beyond that, we need to get our arms around some more of the specifics regarding the due process."

A Dallas police spokesman said an officer made a traffic stop at 2:24 a.m. Friday and arrested the 28-year-old Jeffress after "detecting a sign of intoxication."

Online records for the Dallas County jail show he was booked around 5:15 a.m. on a driving while intoxicated charge and that he was released on $500 bond. No attorney information was available for Jeffress.

Daniels said he spoke to Jeffress after the arrest, as did Texas catcher Jonathan Lucroy, the primary player acquired in the trading deadline deal with the Brewers.

"I know he fights some stuff on the personal level," Lucroy said. "Whenever you're dealing with stuff in your personal life like that, that becomes way more important than the game. And we have to help him get through whatever he's trying to get through, to help him be OK in life."

The Brewers drafted Jeffress as the 16th selection overall in 2006. The right-hander was suspended for 50 games in 2007 and for 100 games in 2009, both times when he was in the minors.

Jeffress made his major league debut with the Brewers in 2010 before getting traded to Kansas City that offseason. He also spent time with Toronto before Milwaukee brought him back as a free agent two years ago.

The hard-throwing right-hander became the closer this season, recording 27 of his 28 career saves. As one of the setup men for Texas closer Sam Dyson, Jeffress has no record and no saves with a 4.00 ERA in nine appearances with the Rangers.

The arrest came after the first game of a 10-game homestand that includes Cleveland, Seattle and Houston. The Rangers have a slight edge on the Indians for the best record in the AL, while the Mariners and Astros are their top pursuers in the AL West.

Patrick Reed builds a 2-shot lead at Bethpage Black

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

FARMINGDALE, N.Y. — Patrick Reed's place in the Ryder Cup is looking better with each round at The Barclays, and so are his prospects of winning.

Even with a careless finish Friday at Bethpage Black, Reed rode a fast start to a 3-under 68 and a two-shot lead over Emiliano Grillo and Rickie Fowler going into the weekend of the opening FedEx Cup playoff event.

The Barclays is the final tournament for Americans to earn one of the eight automatic spots on the Ryder Cup team. Reed, who has gone 55 tournaments worldwide since his last victory, came into the week at No. 8.

At the moment, that's no longer a concern.

"Really, I'm going into this week trying to win a golf tournament," Reed said. "If I take care of me and do what I need to do this week, then Ryder Cup will take care of itself. So I'm not going into this week looking at it as, 'Oh, I need to do this for the Ryder Cup.' I'm going in this to think, 'All right, I need to go win a golf tournament.'"

Reed was at 8-under 134.

Fowler mostly likely needs third place alone to have any chance of qualifying for the Ryder Cup, and he has done his part. He played bogey-free in the sweltering heat, though still missing plenty of birdie chances. Par is never bad on the Black Course, however, and Fowler shot a 69.

He has dropped only one shot all week, missing a 4-foot par putt Thursday that spun out of the back of the cup.

"Any time you can go bogey-free out here at this place, it's good golf," Fowler said. "Feel very good about my ball-striking and tee-to-green right now. See if we can get some more putts to go in."

Associated Press

Patrick Reed tees off from the first hole during the second round of The Barclays golf tournament in Farmingdale, N.Y., on Friday.

Grillo also had a 69, opening with a double bogey and finishing with a bogey.

Ryan Moore (68) was three shots behind, while defending champion Jason Day (70) and Jordan Spieth (67) were four back.

Day tied for the lead early in the round when he ran off four straight birdies on the easier front nine. But his tee shots got wild, he finished some swings with only one hand on the club, and he dropped four shots around the turn.

Spieth missed the cut at The Barclays a year ago, and he started off Friday in that direction when his approach to the tough 10th buried in the lip of a deep bunker. Spieth had to play away from the green and made double bogey.

And then he decided to start over. His caddie, Michael Greller, told him to forget the hole ever happened and try to get those two shots back before making the turn. He eventually did, and then a lot more.

Spieth played shot 31 on the front nine, including a 6-iron that hopped out of the rough to 3 feet on the par-5 fourth hole for an eagle, and shot a 67 to get back into the mix. He still has a lot of ground to make up on Patrick Reed. Still, this round could have gotten away from him early.

"Resetting a goal there is really key for me to get my mind away from what happened and look forward," Spieth said. "I know it's such a tough golf course. It's rare when we play tournaments on courses this challenging. Normally they're majors. But 4 under makes up a lot of ground."

It moved Spieth up to a tie for fifth, which beats having the weekend off.

Spieth is among the few who only have to think about the end of the FedEx Cup. He is No. 5 in the standings, and he already has clinched a spot on the Ryder Cup team.

The top 100 in the FedEx Cup advance to the next playoff event outside Boston next week, and 13 players outside the top 100 were eliminated when they didn't advance to the weekend. As for the Ryder Cup, three players who missed the cut can no longer qualify — Bill Haas, Kevin Na and Daniel Summerhays.

Bethpage, host of the U.S. Open twice, showed how it can punish bad shots. Kevin Chappell one shot behind until he went bogey-double bogey-bogey to finish his round, posting a 72. Reed could have avoided his own sloppy finish.

Schedule of events

CAF AirSho plans F-14 Tomcat Unveiling

The CAF High Sky Wing AirSho schedule includes the unveiling of an F-14 Tomcat jet fighter, called Fast Eagle 102. The jet fighter flew during the Gulf of Sidra incident in 1981, marking the first time a since the Vietnam War that a Navy airplane shot down an enemy airplane.

Vice Admiral David Venlet, a retired U.S. Navy officer who flew in the airplane during the engagement, will be at the unveiling, which is set for noon today.

The U.S. Navy Flight Deck Veterans Group has worked to restore the airplane, and the CAF High Sky Wing is accepting donations for the restoration project.

The National Weather Service is calling for a 20 percent chance of showers today and a 30 percent chance Sunday and Monday. The chance of storms continues Tuesday and Wednesday.

Otherwise, expect high temperatures to remain below average during the week.

The record high for Aug. 26 is 105 set in 2002. The record low is 56 set in 1966. On Aug. 26 of last year, the high was 96, and the low was 70.

Environment brief

WASHINGTON

Obama creates world's largest marine protected area

President Barack Obama on Friday expanded a national monument off the coast of Hawaii, creating a safe zone for tuna, sea turtles and thousands of other species in what will be the world's largest marine protected area.

Obama's proclamation quadrupled in size a monument originally created by President George W. Bush in 2006. The Papahanaumokuakea Marine National Monument will contain some 582,578 square miles, more than twice the size of Texas.

Girl who wants to date might start first with small groups

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and my parents won't let me date. I try to talk to them about it often, but they are convinced I'm going to get hurt or lose my virginity. I think I'm old enough to have a small relationship. I don't believe in premarital sex, and neither does the guy I like. I know I'm mature enough to date. I don't want to date just because everyone else does. I want to date this guy because we are best friends and we want to see each other, hang out like teens and have a normal relationship.

What can I do to ease my parents into the idea of letting me date him? We have been together for almost two years — not dating — just seeing each other at school. We talk by texting. I want to be with him outside of school. Any ideas? — READY TO DATE

DEAR READY: Like any other "skill," being able to date successfully takes practice. I'd compare it to riding a bicycle. You don't just get on and pedal off — it happens in stages.

It is obvious that your parents don't want "their little girl" to get hurt, and trust me, on some level you will always be their little girl. But for you to become socially capable/adept, you should be able to start dating in groups. That's how you will learn to handle yourself and the young men with whom you will interact. These lessons are important to learn at your age so you won't be at a disadvantage when you are older. Perhaps this would be a persuasive argument when talking to your parents.

DEAR ABBY: I met my girlfriend a year ago and we are hopelessly in love. She has two beautiful boys, as do I, from a previous marriage. Recently, we moved in together in the house I owned after my divorce from my first marriage.

The problem is we argue every other day about things large and small. The biggest problem is her 6-year-old. She gives him no discipline. If I try to administer it, she has a fit and we argue.

Because she gave up her apartment so she and her children could move in with me, I would never want them to leave. We love each other, but we are both miserable. What should we do? — LADY WITH THE BLUES IN FLORIDA

DEAR LADY: It's time for you and your girlfriend to agree to mediation so you can reach a compromise about your parenting styles. Start now, because if you don't begin seeing eye to eye, I guarantee that you'll both STAY miserable, and it will undermine your relationship.

DEAR ABBY: We have a co-worker issue and need your opinion on the best way to handle it. We have an all-inclusive policy about lunch. Anyone is welcome to come along.

The problem is one guy who is never satisfied with his food. Never! He always complains, and we suspect he does it so his food will be "comped" (which it has been before). It has reached the point that we no longer want him with us. What's an appropriate way to handle this? — THE LUNCH BUNCH IN TEXAS

DEAR LUNCH BUNCH: The way to handle it is for one person who is closest to this co-worker to have a private talk with him and tell him that if he doesn't stop complaining, he will no longer be welcome to join you because he has embarrassed every member of "the lunch bunch."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 27, 2016:

This year you will be more expressive than you have been in the past. Others seem to flock toward you as a result. If you are single, this sensitive side of your personality gets you far. You might want to date several different types of people. You will learn a lot about yourself in the process. If you are attached, you need to make your alliance to your significant other abundantly clear. Your sweetie will appreciate having clear boundaries, and the trust and caring between you will grow as a result. CANCER loves to hang out with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Stay on top of a personal matter. Your intuitive ability will help you process a problem. Express your sensitivity when dealing with someone in your day-to-day routine. You have a way of letting others know where you are coming from. Tonight: Stay close to home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Express your feelings, and be more responsive to others. Emphasize what is important. Make plans with a friend that will allow greater flexibility, and you are likely to create a memorable adventure. Tonight: Stay in touch with a key person, even if you are out and about.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ You suddenly might become aware of the costs of your weekend plans. You could be planning to host an extended afternoon barbecue or some other type of event. Whatever goes on, you'll create goodwill wherever you go. Tonight: Let the good vibes flow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You might be more in sync with someone than you realize. Share some of this person's thoughts with your friends. Your translation seems to have meaning to others. Detach and imagine what it might be like to walk in someone else's shoes. Tonight: All smiles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Be willing to lie low and let others take the lead. Note that it won't be as easy for them to bring people together as it is for you. Practice makes perfect. Seize the moment to spend special time with a loved one or a dear friend. Tonight: Be unavailable for a change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Make a point of bringing loved ones together. What occurs could be a spontaneous and memorable party. A partner's imagination feeds the moment, the activity and the conversation. Be optimistic and share your positive attitude with others. Tonight: Wherever the action is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Your intuition will help you understand what is ailing someone who is close to you. Opportunities come forward because of your awareness. You might opt to spend special time with one person instead. The choice is yours. Tonight: Touch base with an older friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Reach out to a loved one at a distance. You have not had time to visit with this person, or even chat on the phone, as much as you would like. Make plans to get together soon. Make special time for a child who means the world to you. Tonight: Bask in the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You seem to have little choice but to relate to a key loved one. This person knows how to get your attention. A conversation could trigger your imagination and might lead to a spontaneous get-together! Invite friends over. Tonight: Don't forget about a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Understand what others want from you. You might enjoy how a loved one tries to organize a get-together in an attempt to imitate you. Rather than offer suggestions, just enjoy the moment. News from a distance could be music to your ears. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Stay in touch with friends. You might want to check out the price of a special item you have been thinking about buying. A loved one could be excessive in his or her willingness to spend money. Understand that you can control only yourself. Tonight: Play it low-key.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Romance is close to the surface, whether you're with your sweetie or a new friend. You nearly twinkle in delight as you experience these feelings, especially if you are in a long-term bond. Let go of a need to be so disciplined. Make the most of the moment. Tonight: All smiles.
