Reagan enters hostile grounds at Cancun summit

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — President Reagan, expecting opposition to his free-market prescriptions for the Third World, is keeping an open mind as he flies to this island resort for an unprecedented 22-nation economic summit, U.S. officials say.

Reagan's emphasis on the role of private enterprise in improving living conditions and domestic economies in developing countries puts him at odds with many of the leaders attending the conference.

Reagan himself acknowledged last week that he will be entering a "hostile atmosphere" among some "who simply want a policy of take away from the haves and deliver to the have nots."

But Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who also is attending the summit, said Reagan is coming here "very sensitive to the problems of the developing world, problems which also cause great problems in the developed world, the rising cost of energy, the tendency toward the declining economic growth rates, protectionism, unemployment and other economic dislocations."

"The president goes with an open mind," Haig said Tuesday in Washington. "He wants to listen and he wants to learn and he hopes his own view will be accepted with an equally open frame of mind."

Delegates to the North-South summit, representing capitalist, socialist and Marxist nations, have been arriving here since Monday.

After a late-morning arrival, Reagan planned to join his colleagues at a buffet dinner this evening hosted by Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo. During the day, he planned private meetings with Lopez Portillo, Premier Zhao Ziyang of China, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India, President Shehu Shagari of Nigeria and President Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela.

While downgrading the role of foreign assistance, Reagan has said the key to global prosperity rests on a combination of fiscal discipline, free enterprise and expanded trade.

But in the two days of meetings scheduled to begin Thursday, most leaders are expected to contend that Reagan's formulas are irrelevant to Third World needs.

They are prepared to argue that nothing short of the creation of new global financial and economic institutions — giving political power to poor countries — will enable them to raise their living standards.

Over the past month, Reagan and his top aides have served notice in a series of speeches that they will oppose any proposals for a fundamental restructuring of the international economic system.

"The challenge is to create new wealth, rather than redistribute current wealth," said Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who is accompanying the president and Haig.

From a security standpoint, Cancun is an ideal location for a summit because its only direct links to the Mexican mainland are two bridges, one at each end of the sickle-shaped island.

Nonetheless, gunboats patrolled the offshore area while marine guards walked the white sand beaches, with the heaviest concentrations near the site of the summit.

The U.S. delegation will be joined by the leaders of seven other industrialized countries and fourteen developing nations.

China and India, the world's two most populous countries, will attend, as will Saudi Arabia, the world's largest exporter of oil. Also represented will be two of the poorest countries, Bangladesh and Tanzania.

Reagan and his aides initially were reluctant to take part in such a gathering because of the long history of acrimonious debates in North-South forums dating back almost two decades.

But Reagan relented in the face of a strong lobbying effort by Lopez Portillo and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Reagan also was reassured by the absence of the Soviet Union and Cuba from the proceedings and by a format which emphasizes informal exchanges and limits the possibility for public posturing.

FREEZIN' SEASON was playing hide and seek with Pampa residents this morning as temperatures dipped into the 40s. Charlene Nelson, a fifth grader at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School, braved the elements today on her way to school. Gusting winds and cold temperatures are forecast for today with a chance of light rain. More cold temperatures for Thursday.

No arrests in robbery of $1,400 from store

Gray County Sheriff's officers today are continuing to search for the person, or persons, who robbed the Allsup's Convenience Store at Price Road and Alcock of $1,400 early Tuesday.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan today said the robbery occurred at 1:25 a.m. Tuesday when the night manager at the convenience store, returning from the back, encountered a man armed with a bowie knife, and wearing a red and blue ski mask and blue down coat.

The clerk told authorities she was told to get in the bathroom of the business and the door would be locked, Jordan said. The clerk refused but was later persuaded to enter the bathroom, he added.

Money, totaling about $1,400, was taken from the business's cash register and from a "money drop" machine, the sheriff said. He said the lock on the money drop was sawed off.

Jordan said the clerk thought she heard two persons in the store at the time of the robbery. The sheriff said a full-scale investigation was underway, but he had no suspects at this time.

School board votes on appraisal district members

The board of trustees for the Pampa Independent School District elected four members of the board of directors to serve on the Gray County Tax Appraisal Board.

The trustees cast their 23,010 votes by electing Bill Gething - 685 votes, Lloyd Hunt - 255 votes, Dr. Robert Lyle - 685 votes and R. D. (Jimmy) Wilkerson - 685 votes.

The trustees opened their meeting Tuesday afternoon by first conducting a closed session which lasted about 15 minutes. Buddy Epperson, president of the board, said, "We held the closed session first to discuss candidates for the election."

Upon returning to the open session, members voted upon the only item on the agenda, naming representatives for the Gray County Tax Appraisal Board.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter today said she had not yet received the candidates from the Pampa Independent School District, Grandview - Hopkins Independent School District and Alanreed Independent School District. She said she would not be able to release the final results of the tax appraisal board election, until the three taxing entities had turned in their ballots.

Maynard to begin serving 30-year murder sentence

Preston Wayne Maynard, 45, convicted last July of murdering his wife, surrendered Tuesday to Gray County Sheriff's officers and is to be transported to the Texas Department of Corrections to begin serving his 30-year sentence.

District Attorney Harold Comer said that although the murder conviction is currently on appeal, Maynard will have to wait out the appeal in the Huntsville prison. He said anyone sentenced to more than 15 years imprisonment for a crime must appeal from the correctional institution.

Maynard's motion for a new trial based on discovery of new evidence was denied recently in 31st District Court here. Judge Grainger McIlhenny ruled in the hearing that the evidence was not sufficient for a new trial.

Shirley Louise Maynard, 40, was shot to death Dec. 10 in the couple's mobile home at the Pampa Mobile Home Park. Her husband, Preston Wayne Maynard who was shot in the knee in the incident, was charged in the shooting death of his wife.

In July, Maynard was tried on the murder charges, found guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment.

Grand jury indicts suspect in Miami roadside murder

MIAMI — A Colorado man, charged with the stabbing death of an Oklahoma man in a Roberts County roadside park, was indicted on first-degree murder charges Friday by a Roberts County Grand Jury.

Jack Russell Hinds, 25, of Colorado Springs was present for the grand jury hearing in the Roberts County Court House in Miami Friday. District Attorney Harold Comer said.

Comer said the grand jury met at 9 a.m. and did not adjourn until 4:30 p.m. A total of four witnesses gave testimony before the jury, he added.

Jan. 11, 1982 has been set as the trial date, with jury selection to begin at that time.

Hinds is currently free on $50,000 bond.

Ross Sherman Williams, 21, of Tahlequah, Okla., was found dead of numerous stab wounds to the throat and chest in a road side park on U.S. 60 near Miami Aug. 17. The body was discovered by a Pampa family on an outing looking for wild grapes.

Abolishes local agent

Santa Fe seeks central freight office

By DEBORAH BRIDGES

Staff Writer

Santa Fe Railroad officials Tuesday eased their announcement to area freight shippers of their plans to abolish the local freight agent with a steak dinner at the Pampa Country Club.

Bob Perry, assistant general manager at Amarillo, told the group of 13 shippers from Pampa, Canadian, Kingsmill, White Deer and Panhandle that the local freight agents would be replaced with a central agent in Amarillo. He said Charlie Gardner would be the Amarillo agent.

Perry explained that the request for a centralized freight office has not yet been filed with the Texas Railroad Commission in Austin.

Houston attorney William Wade said the request will be ready for filing in "about a month." He added it would be from six months to a year before the centralized office would go into effect, should it be accepted by the Railroad Commission.

Perry said Santa Fe's plans are to abolish the agent at the stations in Pampa, Canadian, Kingsmill and Panhandle. A freight yard office, manned by freight clerks, will be kept at Pampa and Canadian, he added.

Pampa's office will probably retain two of its present three employees, Santa Fe officials said.

The assistant general manager skirted a question about what will happen to the current local agents. He said the persons presently acting as freight agents in these towns will be able to use their seniority to get jobs in other Santa Fe offices.

The freight agent for Pampa is Efrén Lopez. Other area agents include Don Thurman of Panhandle and John Winters of Kingsmill. All three were present at the luncheon Tuesday.

The shippers seemed to be most concerned with the signing of their bills of lading.

Perry said, "We're flexible." He said there were "any number" of ways to handle the bills of lading. For those who need it signed the same day, he said, clerks from the nearest freight yard office could be authorized to sign the bills of lading.

Perry said some of the advantages of the regional freight office will be 24-hour service, finger-tip information through computers for rates or to a freight car's location, load and destination, and a toll-free telephone number.

Shippers were told that the centralized freight office plan has been working successfully for five years in California and one year in Kansas.

Santa Fe's plan, in addition to centralizing the Pampa area local agents, also considers absorbing the agencies at Friona, Bovina, Hereford, Dumas, Etter, Stratford and Kerrick. A regional yard office will be open at Hereford and Dumas, according to the plan.

Last night, Santa Fe officials met with shippers in Dumas to discuss their proposal and are scheduled to meet at noon today with Hereford area shippers.

Summonses received by parties in Grandstaff suit

By SHEILA ECCLES

Staff Writer

Summonses have been received by the majority of the parties named in the $2 million civil lawsuit initiated by the family of slain 6666 ranch foreman James Grandstaff, with the exception of Gray County officials.

The $2 million lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court in Amarillo by the law office of Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

Grandstaff was fatally shot on the night of Aug. 11, when he went to aid Borger police officers who chased an Oklahoma fugitive, Lonnie Cox, into the area of the Grandstaff home.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said today that no word of any summons had been received by his office.

The parties named in the lawsuit include the cities of Borger and Pampa, the counties of Hutchinson, Carson and Gray, Hutchinson County Deputy Ricky Morris, Borger Police officers John W. Turner, John Ray, Bailey Roberts and Robert Alonzo.

Each of the parties named in the suit have 20 days from the time the summons is received to make a reply. The decision as to what defense attorney will be used in the case will be decided, in many cases, by the city or county councils. The suit does not fall under the regular duties of the county and city attorneys.

Carson County Judge Clarence Williams said today, "The county insurance company lawyers will handle the reply for Carson County. The insurance company is the A.J. Weiser Company."

Hutchinson County Sheriff Lon Blackmon said, "This office will obtain counsel from an outside attorney through our insurance company."

Borger Police Chief Arthur Waight said, "The reply will be handled by the office of Gassaway, Gurley, Sheets and Mitchell," (a Borger law firm).

Pampa City Manager Mack Wofford said, "The decision will be made by the city council in the next regular session."

Borger City Attorney Jody Sheets said, "The decision will have to be made by the city council. So far, I have been taking care of the legalities in the case, but the final decision is up to the councilmen."

Hutchinson County Attorney Bill Smith said, "We will probably hire outside counsel for the county defense. The county attorneys just prosecute cases, not defend. Since this is such a large case with so much notoriety it will have to be someone who can handle all that."

The lawsuit from the office of Haynes and Fullenweider was filed in behalf of Sharon Grandstaff, listed as a representative of the estate of James C. Grandstaff, and Jo Cheryl Grandstaff, a daughter.

The suit states, "On or about the morning of Aug. 11, defendant officers of the city of Borger Police Department were in some manner alerted by law enforcement officers from one or more of the other defendant governmental entities to the presence in or about the vicinity of Borger of one Lonnie Cox, an alleged felon. Defendant police officers then engaged in a high speed, extremely reckless chase of a vehicle which allegedly matched the description of Lonnie Cox's vehicle. This high speed chase commenced in Hutchinson County and proceeded through Gray and Carson Counties."

"During the chase, a number of bullets were fired from the weapons of the defendant Borger police officers, some of which officers had been on the force for a few days. One of these bullets struck Lonnie Cox or his vehicle causing it to career dangerously onto the private property of the 6666 Ranch, where Cox successfully escaped from the area."

"Although it was known to the defendants that James C. Grandstaff resided with his family on the 6666 Ranch, no warning of danger was given at any time to either Grandstaff or his family by the defendants. Subsequent to Lonnie Cox's disappearance, other bullets recklessly fired by the Borger police officers entered the house of James C. Grandstaff and family. The noise of the bullets entering his family's dwelling place and the furor of the general disturbance created by the conduct of the defendants, who may have already lost contact with the supposed fugitive, caused James C. Grandstaff, a man simply trying to protect his wife and children, to leave the bullet ridden confines of his home," the lawsuit states.

"Then the defendants wrongfully and maliciously shot James C. Grandstaff in the back, handcuffed him, threw him to the ground and let him painfully and excruciatingly bleed to death on the private property of the 6666 Ranch," the suit said.

New Mexico joins states seeking Amarillo suspect

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A woman whose charred body was found in a suburb of Albuquerque, N.M., telephoned authorities the day before she disappeared to say she was afraid for her life, according to police officials in New Mexico.

The husband, Marion Albert Pruett, is jailed here awaiting an extradition hearing Oct. 26. He is wanted in seven states — including New Mexico — on charges ranging from bank robbery to the murder of his wife.

Pruett, 32, was arrested Saturday during a routine traffic investigation near Stratford in the Texas Panhandle, said officers with the Texas Department of Public Safety. A check of his identification revealed he was one of the FBI's most-wanted men and peace officers from three states already have traveled to Amarillo to question him.

He has been arraigned on a Mississippi warrant in a bank robbery and abduction case, and bond was set at $150,000 by a U.S. magistrate.

In New Mexico, Sandoval County Sheriff Jerry Ferrara said Tuesday that Pruett's wife called the U.S.

marshal's office in Albuquerque March 1, the day before Pruett reported her missing, and said she feared for her life.

She telephoned the marshal, Ferrara said, because she and Pruett were in the federal witness protection program at the time after Pruett testified in a murder case in Atlanta, Ga.

Pruett immediately was taken into custody as a material witness in the death of his wife but never was arrested in the case.

Violence, more strikes in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - A riot in Katowice and fresh strike alerts nationwide are challenging the government's latest threat that the Solidarity union must stop striking or face martial law.

Tuesday's violence in Katowice 160 miles south of Warsaw, where mobs stoned a police station and flamed a squad car, was among the worst outbreaks the strike-scarred nation has seen in 14 months of confrontation between Solidarity and the Communist government, but no injuries were reported.

The riot was prompted by the authorities' seizure of three Solidarity unionists who distributed underground pamphlets.

It came as 12,000 textile workers in Zyrardow west of Warsaw ignored demands to end a weeklong sit-in and telegraphed Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski instead to plead for more food. In southwest Zielona Gora province, 180,000 workers vowed to strike over a management dispute.

Strike alerts were declared elsewhere by locals of the independent union, rejecting government threats to stop all labor protests or face martial law.

Solidarity officials in Katowice said several thousand people gathered when plainclothes police arrested three union members distributing pamphlets and posters from a van outside a theatre.

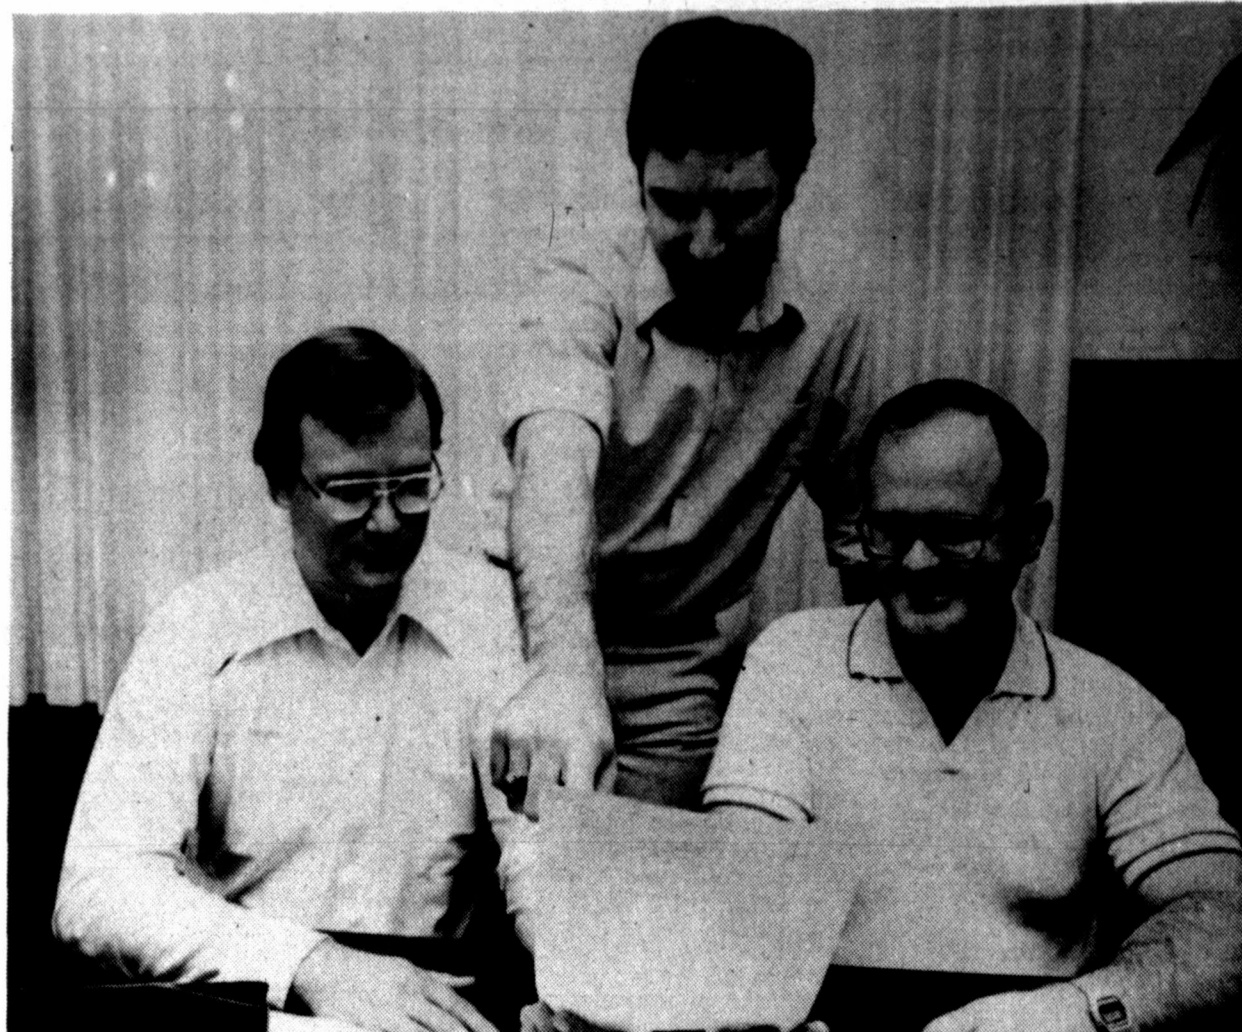

The Katowice prosecutor was quoted by Warsaw television as saying the posters had "an anti-state and anti-Soviet character. Simultaneously, aggressive incitements were made by loudspeakers and passersby began to gather around the van."

Twenty vans of riot police arrived to disperse the crowd, who smashed windows of a nearby police station, overturned a squad car and allowed two of those detained to escape, Warsaw Television said. A later broadcast said the third detainee was released hours later after talks at police headquarters with Solidarity representatives.

Contents of the pamphlets and posters were not disclosed. But Katowice, a steel and coal city, has been a center for Solidarity publications that criticize the government and the Soviet Union. Poland's chief ally. Authorities closed a union print shop in August for publishing anti-Soviet cartoons.

Jaruzelski, who became Communist Party chief Sunday, told the 9.5 million-member union to stop all strikes. He replaced Stanislaw Kania, who was widely criticized by Soviet and Polish party officials for failing to stop Solidarity's drive for power.

PAMPA FAMILY OF THE YEAR will be chosen on Nov. 17, in a contest sponsored by the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Nominating committee members from left, Dale Thorum, Robert Wood, and Gary Stinnett have the task of checking the nominating forms.

Allies avoid comment criticism

GLENEAGLES, Scotland (AP) - Although President Reagan's comment on the possibility of nuclear strikes in Europe has fueled Western European ban-the-bomb sentiment, NATO defense ministers are avoiding criticism of his remark.

Acting Dutch Defense Minister Hans van Mierlo said he asked Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger to brief NATO ministers meeting here Tuesday on Reagan's remarks. It was the opening session of their two-day meeting.

Van Mierlo said the response gave him the impression "that President Reagan, probably in a somewhat unfortunate manner, discussed the sensitive subject of a nuclear war restricted to Europe."

Reagan told visiting American editors in Washington on Friday that nuclear attacks against troops in Europe were possible "without it bringing either one of the major powers to pushing the button."

A spokesman for West German Defense Minister Hans Apel said Apel is satisfied that Reagan's remarks did not constitute a change in U.S. policy calling for use of U.S. intercontinental missiles as the ultimate deterrent against a Soviet attack in Europe.

British Defense Minister John Nott also said he saw no change in U.S. policy and said he saw "nothing controversial" in Reagan's remarks.

Nott said the remote possibility of a nuclear war confined to Europe made it even more important for Western Europeans to have a nuclear deterrent.

Western European anti-nuclear activists are claiming that Reagan's remarks indicate the United States would sit back and let a limited nuclear war rage in Europe while keeping U.S. territory safe from Soviet attack. They maintain that a NATO decision to deploy 572 new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe is an attempt to remove the nuclear link between the two continents.

More than 250,000 demonstrators marched in Bonn, West Germany, two weeks ago to protest nuclear weapons in Europe. Similar protests are planned Saturday in London and Sunday in Paris.

Weinberger said there was very little discussion of Reagan's remarks in the formal sessions of the ministers' meeting, but he assured his colleagues that the United States would not "abandon" its allies in a limited nuclear war.

He said the discussion concentrated more on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plans to deploy new cruise and Pershing II missiles in Belgium, the Netherlands, Britain, West Germany and Italy beginning in 1983.

The Netherlands has indefinitely deferred a final decision on deployment and Belgium has linked final approval to the outcome of U.S.-Soviet disarmament talks scheduled to begin Nov. 30 in Geneva, Switzerland.

Ford reaffirms AWACS support

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - Former president Gerald Ford reaffirmed on Tuesday his support for President Reagan's proposal to sell sophisticated AWACS airplanes to Saudi Arabia.

"I can assure you if the AWACS sale is turned down, it could have a serious and dire effect in the Middle East and our friendship with Saudi Arabia," Ford said, during a speech in this West Texas city.

The former president said he still was recovering from a 60-hour trip to Egypt for slain President Anwar Sadat's funeral. He said he believes more than four people participated in Sadat's assassination.

"There are some questions that need to be asked and some answers gotten," Ford said. "My speculation is that there must be more to the assassination than four people dressed as the military. That assassination was so well-planned and so skillfully executed."

Ford spoke to a group of builders and contractors.

Economy falls, new recession sign

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. economy slid backwards at an annual rate of 0.6 percent in the July-September quarter, the government reported today in the clearest signal yet of national recession.

The Commerce Department report said inflation-adjusted gross national product - the broadest measure of American economic activity - fell for the second quarter in a row, having declined at a rate of 1.6 percent in the April-June period.

Those two consecutive declines meet the most common benchmark for deciding when a merely sluggish economy has slipped into genuine recession, a period characterized by production cutbacks, worker layoffs and slow or falling sales totals.

One month ago, department officials had estimated a 0.5 percent rate of decline for the then-unfinished third quarter, but many analysts had expected the drop to be somewhat larger in light of recently fading factory production and rising unemployment.

President Reagan himself declared last weekend that the economy appeared to have fallen into "a slight and I hope a short recession." He and his advisers have blamed the downturn on problems inherited from former President Carter, but political foes have blamed Reagan.

As the economy cools down in a recession, inflation also tends to fall, but the new Commerce report indicated that welcome side effect is not occurring.

The GNP implicit price deflator - a broad inflation measure linked to national output - rose at an annual rate of 9.4 percent, compared with 6.4 percent in the

West Germans flying Texas skies

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — West German and Norwegian fighter pilot trainees are opting to fly the friendly skies of Texas rather than crowded European airspace, Air Force officials said Tuesday.

The first multinational training classes began on Oct. 1 at Sheppard Air Force Base. The North American Treaty Organization authorized that candidates for the Euro-NATO Joint Jet Training Program be trained at the Air Force base after West Germans reported good training experiences during the past 13 years in the 1st German Air Force Squadron.

Dutch officials began sending students to Sheppard in 1978.

This is the only program where you might have a Turkish instructor teaching a Greek student, with a Danish or Dutch squadron commander all working for an American wing commander," said Col. Larry Pritchett, U.S. Air Force wing commander.

The class of student pilots includes 17 West Germans, 15 Americans and four Norwegians. Students from Denmark, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands, Canada and the United States are training to be instructors.

Hosting a multinational student program has been a benefit and a burden for city officials, who had to overcome feelings of hostility when NATO pilots began their training.

To ease those tensions, city leaders asked major companies and civic organizations to adopt individual squadrons and involve airmen and officers in social activities.

In the "squadron adoption program," city officials took airmen to parties, concerts, picnics and rodeos. But hospitality wasn't the only reason NATO airmen came to Wichita Falls for training and remained.

Officials said pilots who someday may have to fight together are taught the same flying techniques, and the instruction is conducted in better weather at a more reasonable cost.

Over North Central Texas, European pilots find that they have more room to fly in than the entire southern half of Germany, Pritchett said.

It took eight years for NATO countries to decide to train fighter pilots in Texas. Air Force officials estimate that training will cost slightly more than the $224,000 it costs to train U.S. pilots because there is more flying and less training in simulators.

Judge lifts deadline for the closing of state prison hospital

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has lifted the Nov. 1 deadline for closing the Texas prison hospital and ordered the hiring of a fire safety expert to inspect Army tents that house 1,800 inmates.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice said he agreed to lift the deadline for downgrading the Texas Department of Corrections Unit Hospital here to a clinic "because the interest of inmates as well as the TDC will be served by issuance of a stay."

"However, this decision which is based on the needs of inmates who may be treated reasonably and safely at the Huntsville Unit Hospital is conditional," the Tyler judge said.

The TDC hospital has been the subject of stinging reports by the Texas Department of Health and by a New York doctor hired to inspect the facility. Both reports called the hospital unsanitary and the quality of treatment poor.

While Justice granted TDC's request to lift the hospital deadline, he refused to stay other portions of his order to eliminate overcrowding in Texas prisons.

The TDC asked Justice to lift the Nov. 1 deadline for providing at least 40 square feet for each inmate living in a prison dormitory, achieving a 1-to-10 guard-to-inmate ratio, abolishing the use of turnkeys to open and close prison doors and for housing only minimum security prisoners in dormitories.

Rick Hartley, administrative assistant to Prison Director W.J. Estelle, said officials were pleased the hospital would remain open but added they will ask the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to stay parts of the order Justice has refused to lift.

The appellate court stayed other portions of Justice's order in June, including the Nov. 1, 1983, deadline to house one inmate per cell.

In his order issued Monday, Justice also asked TDC attorneys to tell him whether prison officials can comply with seven suggestions for improving the hospital made by a California attorney representing a former inmate.

San Francisco attorney William

Turner, representing former inmate David Ruiz, suggested that no major surgery be performed at the hospital; the emergency room be staffed 24 hours a day by a doctor; terminally ill prisoners be placed in a non-prison environment and that handicapped prisoners be allowed to live outside the hospital.

Hartley said prison officials will meet with the inmates attorney as soon as possible to decide whether they can agree on a future plan for the hospital.

"It's been our hope all along that the hospital remain open until we complete the new hospital in Galveston," he said.

Hartley, however, blasted as "foolish" Justice's order that Vincent Nathan, an Ohio attorney appointed to oversee changes in the prison system, hire a fire safety expert to inspect the tents used to reduce overcrowding in cells.

Nathan has questioned the safety of the tents.

Prosecutor wants truth in trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Flashing traces of anger, the chief prosecutor in Vickie Daniel's murder trial says he wants only the truth in the slaying of former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

"I'm not trying to hide anything," Liberty County District Attorney Carroll Wilborn told a cluster of newsmen after Tuesday's testimony. "We're just trying to find out what happened."

Obviously upset by media coverage he considered biased toward the defendant, the normally affable Wilborn declared, "I can't help the fact that there were two witnesses to the killing and one of them is in the ground."

"I'm just doing my job. I'm not going to walk in and dismiss the case."

"She admitted that she shot him. If she intentionally did the act that caused the death, then it's murder."

The state charges that Mrs. Daniel, 34, did knowingly and intentionally shoot her 39-year-old husband on Jan.

19. She never has denied firing the fatal shot, but said it was an accident.

Her murder trial is in its third week. Not unlike the victim, Wilborn is a member of a wealthy and quite prominent Southeast Texas family.

He all but said he doesn't need the job of district attorney, which he doesn't. But supporters are quick to say Wilborn accepted the case because he's not one to sidestep responsibility.

"Are you going to seek re-election?" he was asked by a reporter.

"Why?" he smiled. "Am I doing that bad?"

The problem to a large extent would appear that despite the power and prestige of the Daniel family, sympathy rides largely with the blond defendant. "That's the risk I assumed when I took on this case," Wilborn said in a response to a question.

"It's been a difficult case for me... but don't sell us short until you hear the whole case."

The district attorney's comments stemmed in part from the testimony of the state's 11th witness, an identification expert from the Harris County Sheriff's Department.

Sgt. J. D. Satcher told the jury he wanted to compare fingerprints removed from the death weapon with those of the victim but no prints were available before Daniel was buried.

Wilborn labeled the lack of prints an "investigative mess-up."

During Tuesday's testimony, the victim's younger brother — Houston Daniel — said he arrived at the home of Price and Vickie Daniel about 7:30 p.m. the night of the shooting. Jan. 19, and found medical technicians trying to restrain Mrs. Daniel.

However, Daniel said he did not know what transpired in the Daniel house that night.

"I have an opinion," he said. "But you don't know?" asked defense lawyer Jack Zimmerman.

"No," Daniel replied.

Segregation charges heard in court

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A former high school principal and district personnel director testified in federal court that he once was ordered to transfer teachers to achieve racial balance in public schools here.

Howard Butler, a former Ector High principal and district personnel director, testified in the second day of a trial prompted by a lawsuit lodged in 1970 against the Odessa school district by the U.S. Justice Department and a disgruntled minority group.

Government attorneys have argued that a pattern of segregation is woven into the school district's actions the past decade.

Plaintiffs charge that the district traditionally has operated a "dual school system" that assigned white students and faculty and black students and faculty to separate schools.

Butler initially disagreed that black teachers were assigned to schools with a large minority population, when asked by justice department attorney LaVerne Younger.

Ms. Younger then ticked off statistics that showed that most black teachers were assigned to predominantly black Ector High School throughout the decade. For example, during the 1974-75 school year, 15 of 20 black teachers in the district were assigned to Ector, she said.

"Isn't that a disproportionate number of black teachers at those schools?" she asked Butler.

"Yes," he said.

Butler told visiting U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon of San Antonio that eight to 10 black teachers at Blackshear Junior High were to have been transferred to other junior highs and an equal number of non-blacks into Blackshear.

Edward Downing, EISD director of special education services, testified Tuesday that when the district was segregated during the 1970s, he served as principal for all three minority schools in the district at once.

The black administrator said he was not paid for performing three jobs.

Shannon set aside two weeks for the trial, and has said he will hand down his ruling this month.

School lunch programs waste milk

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — School lunch programs appear to reward the waste of milk, lawyers for several Mission school employees have tried to emphasize at the start of a federal court trial.

The six employees are charged with conspiring to file phony milk invoices which resulted in the Mission Consolidated Independent School District being overreimbursed by the federal government for nearly $500,000 over a five-year period.

On the first day of the trial Tuesday, defense lawyer Frank Maloney of Austin introduced as evidence several letters from the Texas Department of Health.

Health department officials at one time told school districts they could not recycle unopened half-pint cartons of milk. Health officials in later letters reversed their position.

"Rather than throw away the milk, they chose to recycle it," Hector Villarreal of Edinburg, another defense lawyer, said in opening arguments. The trial before U.S. District Judge James DeAnda is expected to last two weeks. The judge told lawyers not to discuss the case with the news media. He fined Villarreal $500 Tuesday for referring in opening arguments to a technical line of evidence the judge earlier had ruled off-limits during the trial.

The school employees were named this summer in two counts of indictments, along with several employees of the Golden Jersey Creamery of Edinburg.

The dairy and four of its employees have pleaded guilty to charges of conspiring to file fake milk delivery invoices. They are expected to testify in the trial.

Under federal school lunch rules, a half-pint of milk must be placed on each child's tray, testified Paul Joseph Schmitz, school lunch program supervisor for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Dallas.

If the milk is not on the child's tray, the entire meal is ineligible for federal school lunch reimbursement, Schmitz said.

Texas Congressman wants the gold standard to solve problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressman has made another pitch for the United States to solve many of its monetary problems by returning to the gold standard.

Rep. Ron Paul, R-Lake

Jackson, testified Tuesday in a House subcommittee that he shares the concern with high interest rates, but said they are not the problem in themselves.

"I don't see high interest rates as the disease but as a symptom, a symptom of a very sick currency," Paul told the House Consumer Affairs Subcommittee. Paul, ranking Republican on the subcommittee, is a member of the U.S. Commission on Gold Policy, which is studying the role of gold in domestic and international monetary affairs.

"You must get to the core of the problem by addressing monetary policy. When you have a sound currency, you don't have 20 percent interest rates. The problem is caused by the never-ending expansion of money and credit," Paul said. The cure is a return to the gold standard, he added.

Paul's comments came during hearings by the subcommittee on two bills designed to override interest rate ceilings imposed by states on consumer loans.

Two lawyers for the subcommittee testified Tuesday they made an undercover investigation of furniture stores and auto dealer showrooms in Texas and Arkansas to compare their prices.

Their investigation turned up no evidence, they said, to suggest that things are significantly worse for consumers in Arkansas, the state with the lowest usury ceiling in the nation.

Harrelson friend was driving car at search

HOUSTON (AP) — A friend was driving convicted hit man Charles Harrelson's car at the time a search warrant was issued that led to Harrelson's arrest on illegal gun possession charges, a federal agent has testified.

Harrelson has been pegged as a prime suspect in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood and is on trial for an unrelated charge of possession of firearms by an ex-convict.

The testimony of federal agent George M. Taylor came Tuesday as Harrelson's attorneys continued to try to cast doubts on the legality of the warrant. The guns were found during a search of his car after police stopped him in Houston Feb. 1, 1980.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

PUSH loses funds

While the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson was busy rounding up protestors in Chicago recently against appearances by a South African rugby team, things weren't going well for his six-year-old Operation PUSH.

In a letter delivered to Jackson's Washington office, the U.S. Department of Education announced that it was ending its $1 million per year subsidy to Operation PUSH-EXCEL ("Push for Excellence") because program officials had refused to allow federal auditors to examine PUSH financial records.

PUSH was funded by the department with the best of intentions — to implement innovative education activities for needy children — and it was in this spirit that we were prepared to continue the project under the proposed grant. Dr. Vincent Reed, assistant secretary for elementary and secondary education, said in the letter.

However, he continued, "we cannot provide funds to organizations that fail to cooperate with the most minimum requirement to account for federal funds."

Although $3 million in federal monies had already reached PUSH the past three years, the only actual audit of PUSH had been by the Department of Commerce in 1980 when it was concluded that the program's accounting systems were inadequate to safeguard program assets. Later the Department of Education also attempted an audit, but was denied access to the organization's books.

The loss of $1 million yearly in tax subsidies are bound to hurt Operation PUSH over the short haul, but perhaps it will become a blessing in disguise. If Operation PUSH is truly worth the effort, it can only succeed by attracting the type of financial support that will demand financial statements.

PUSH-EXCEL, in contrast to many programs merely dreamed up to latch onto federal monies, stresses positives — the need for self-confidence, self-discipline, hard work and abstinence from drugs — in an effort to motivate high school students from poor families. Its success record was high in some cities, low in others.

Its key to survival now will probably put the Rev. Jackson to the same sort of tests he applied to the youngsters he is attempting to reach — the tests of hard work, self-discipline and self-confidence.

Used car rules are unnecessary hassles

The federal Trade Commission is at it again. This time, the targets of the FTC's zeal are used car dealers.

Officials at the federal agency are trying one more time to impose regulations that would call for placement of a "Used Car Buyers Guide" label on every used auto sold off the lots. Auto dealers, understandably, are upset with the pending requirement and say the regulation would add unnecessary expense to the cost of doing business.

We think they're right. There is no denying that thousands of consumers may be burned every year by the purchases of bad used cars not covered by warranty. In too many cases, though, car buyers make their purchases without considering the pertinent facts.

How is the auto's drive train? Are the valves in good shape? Does the electrical system seem to be functioning properly? And what about warranties? Is there any coverage provided by the dealer? What does the fine print say in that contract?

It often seems that consumers don't worry about those things until it's too late. This is regrettable, of course. But should the federal government step in and force dealers to compensate for human failings? We think not.

Texas auto dealer Carl Bingham of Odessa has made another point on the same issue. Millions of used cars are sold every year by individuals. Why should only dealers, and not those one-on-one used car sales, be subject to the FTC regulation?

The bottom line is individual responsibility. Consumers who purchase products — particularly major items such as automobiles — should be their own best protectors.

This seems particularly important where used car lots abound. The prudent buyer will pay an independent mechanic to go over the auto in great detail. He or she will read the contracts thoroughly and not hesitate to ask questions. And if the dealer appears less than happy to cooperate, the consumer is perfectly free to go elsewhere.

We can see where implementation of the FTC rule, which is now being considered by the Congress, would be all but impossible to police. And in the long run, we doubt whether its effect would be worth the expense that would have to be passed on to the consumer.

Looks like the FTC is hollering into the wind again.

Pollution remains international issue

Ever have to breathe the smoke from a neighbor's chimney? One who has can understand the resentment of Canadians whose air is polluted, they claim, from coal-burning power plants in the U.S.

Sam Speck, state senator from New Concord, thinks the Canadians should help pay the cost of purging the acid rain that is said to be produced by our plants and comes to them on the south wind. Would he want to buy the bricks to lay his neighbor's chimney higher?

This exemplifies a problem that gets stickier the more populous the world becomes and the more fastidious we are regarding the air we breathe. So long as our fathers could get that blessed electricity at ever lower rates they did not fuss about the air pollution that accompanied its generation. But when the benefits became less manifest, as they have, we became conscious of the costs, one of which is acid rain.

Just how much "acid" our plants are injecting into the air is a question. Many coal miners of Ohio are out of work because their product, condemned as polluting, is no longer in its former demand.

Power companies are bringing in cleaner coal from the far west.

The vice president of U.S. Steel Corp., in a recent company address, described the pains the steel industry has taken to reduce pollution of the air.

In short, are our industries actually foisting a nuisance on our neighbors in eastern Canada and the northeastern U.S.? This is a question to be answered by actual tests of their air and by tracing any objectionable degree of pollution to its source.

Clearly, our firms have no right to force pollution on our neighbors, more than a householder would have to dump garbage or pipe sewage on a neighbor's lawn. Nor would we be justified in demanding that a neighbor bear part of the cost of dispelling our pollution of either air or lawn. It is up to the U.S. to refrain from making acid rain, or other poisons, that may spoil Canada's air.

This conclusion would not be complete without adding that it is up to the Canadians, too, to refrain from polluting the Great Lakes and endangering the health of the fish that are as much ours as theirs.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The Reagan administration has been criticized in recent months for its apparent lack of a coherent foreign policy — or, at least, of a clearly enunciated one — beyond cries of, "The Russians are coming — everywhere." President Reagan himself brushed aside such criticism at a news conference by saying that he was satisfied that his administration did indeed have a foreign policy.

But the issue has arisen anew following a recent speech by Chester Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, to the annual convention of the American Legion.

State Department sources say that Crocker was only one of a number of middle-level administration officials who were to make courtesy appearances before a group that have been a simple restatement of policy toward South Africa.

As late as the day before the speech, Crocker's office was telling reporters that the assistant secretary would say nothing out of the ordinary. The same information was given to representatives of South Africa and several black African countries.

Furor over African speech

Instead, Crocker delivered a major policy address that went far beyond anything that had been said previously and that sent shock waves through the diplomatic community here and abroad.

The speech dwelled at length on the strategic importance of South Africa to the West. "It is not our task to choose between black and white," Crocker said. "In this rich land (South Africa) of talented and diverse peoples, important Western economic, strategic, moral and political interests are at stake... We have no intention of destabilizing South Africa in order to curry favor elsewhere."

Coming on the heels of South Africa's invasion of Angola and of statements in which South African leaders backed off promises to modify their apartheid policies, the speech was viewed in Pretoria, Washington and black Africa as an endorsement of the new get-tough policy of Prime Minister P.W. Botha and his white minority government.

The State Department sources say that Crocker originally drafted a "moderate" speech for delivery to the Legationnaires. Major changes were dictated to Crocker following review of the text by the State Department officials, including Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

Haig reportedly insisted that the speech contain certain specific language, including references to the presence of Cuban troops in Angola. He is also said to have brushed aside objections from middle-level State Department officials that the timing of the speech was all wrong given that the South African troops were still in Angola and that the United Nations was about to debate independence for South Africa — ruled Namibia. In fact, the changes were dictated after Haig had agreed to meet with the foreign ministers of five black African countries on their way to New York for the U.N. meeting.

The speech also apparently caught the U.S. Embassy in Pretoria by surprise. When the wire services began reporting on Crocker's speech, embassy officials were besieged by telephone calls and had to frantically cable Washington for a copy. The final text bore little resemblance to the preliminary draft that they had received earlier.

State Department officials now are trying to downplay the speech as having been no more than a restatement of existing policy. They reportedly are surprised at the reaction it has received, especially from officials of several Western countries (including Canada, West Germany and Britain, all of whom have been working with the United States to arrange a negotiated settlement in Namibia).

It is generally held that South Africa is dragging its feet on its promises of Namibian independence. Some allied officials have warned the State Department that Crocker's speech may have only encouraged the South Africans to greater intransigence.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 21, the 294th day of 1981. There are 71 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 21, 1969, Willy Brandt became the first socialist chancellor in West Germany's 20-year history.

On this date: In 1805, England's Lord Nelson defeated the Franco-Spanish fleet at Trafalgar but was mortally wounded. In 1945, women were allowed to vote for the first time in France.

In 1972, North Vietnamese Premier Phan Van Dong said his government was ready to accept a ceasefire as the first step toward settlement of the Vietnam War.

In 1979, the government of Israel, Prime Minister Menachem Begin was rocked by the resignation of Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

Ten years ago: The Nobel Prize for literature was awarded to Chilean poet and Communist leader Pablo Neruda.

Five years ago: China announced that the Communist Central Committee had shattered a power play by the "Gang of Four," which included the widow of Mao Tse-tung.

One year ago: Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan accused President Carter of "negotiating in the press" for the release of the American hostages in Iran.

Today's birthday: former New York Yankees pitcher Whitey Ford is 53. "Thought for today: 'We must not promise that we ought not, lest we be called upon to perform what we cannot.'" — Abraham Lincoln (1809-65).

Grappling with gold

By DON GRAFF

Is all that Franklin Roosevelt and Richard Nixon wrangled about to come to naught?

You might think so from all of the talk and some of the action concerned with the question of whether the United States should resurrect the gold standard.

A presidential commission on that very matter has commenced consultations in Washington. Outspoken supporters include court economist Arthur Laffer and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., father of the three-year tax cut. Further, candidate Reagan himself indicated definite interest, although President Reagan has been officially more reticent.

If it should come to pass, it would be a complete reversal of developments that go back to the first FDR administration and the ending of gold coinage. The dollar remained tied to gold at a fixed price of $35 an ounce for the next few decades. But in 1971 the Nixon administration severed the last tie, withdrawing the treasury's standing offer to buy and sell to foreign authorities upon demand.

The dollar has since been on its own, and you know how it has done.

By PAUL HARVEY

A lot of your tax dollars went to thieves

President Reagan, more carefully policing the use of your money for so-called "social services," is catching a lot of crooks.

In Lansing, Mich., 92 escaped convicts have been collecting welfare checks — 92 fugitives on the lam, without even changing their names, were collecting welfare checks.

Social Security Administrator John Svahn found 8,518 dead people collecting Social Security checks.

Obviously other people using the names of the dead people cashed the checks.

And some of this fraud has been going on for ten years!

With all the computers available to the bureaucracy, nobody bothered before to compare disability and retirement rolls with death records.

The disabled are something else. Reagan administration belt-tighteners are reviewing the rolls of those who have been collecting disability payments. These are individuals who reported themselves out of work for a year because of some physical disability.

There were 21 million of them! But state-by-state re-examination of those claims reveals that in New York, for example, more than a third — 38 percent — are perfectly able to work.

A lot of your tax dollars have been going to white-collar thieves! Food stamps have been costing taxpayers $10 billion a year. A sampling of Chicago area recipients could be developed, greatly increasing supplies and dropping the price.

But even if not, present supplies are a problem in themselves. Most new gold comes from South Africa, which strictly controls its marketing but could be expected in its own interests to cooperate, and the Soviet Union, which is another case. The Soviets market gold as they need foreign exchange.

Cost of production means nothing in their fantasy monetary system and it would well suit their interests at some point to dump so much of the metal that the U.S. treasury and other buyers would be hard pressed to hold a fixed price.

There is also the historic fact that the U.S. economy went through some very rough times when on the gold standard. Recessions and depressions were more severe and prolonged and price levels fluctuated greatly.

It is also of interest that the gold mining and refining industry itself is not enthusiastic. A fixed price may not keep up with the costs of production, as was the case with $35 gold.

All of these points and more must be considered by Congress if the issue of a gold standard eventually is submitted to it. Which raises possibly the most important point.

In the end it is a political, not an economic, issue and comes down to the question of whether politicians who must decide it really want to surrender the power over monetary policy that a gold standard would require.

You might try that one on Richard Nixon. You'd probably get pretty much the same answer Franklin Roosevelt would have given.

Summit site example of reason for the gathering: rich and poor

CANCUN, Mexico, (AP) — The tropical breeze from this deluxe Caribbean resort where 22 world leaders are gathering to discuss poverty brings only a whisper of comfort to the cane hut dwellers of its teeming backyard slum.

To the 30,000 people who live there with no electricity or running water, the breeze can be a curse. When the wind carries rain that floods the rutted dirt streets, garbage must be burned because the collection trucks — one of their few public services — cannot get in.

One evening, a gust invaded the slats of Pablo Canul's two-room shack, knocking over the butane lantern that is his only source of light and burning down both his grocery store in the front parlor and the bedroom for his family of eight in back.

However, like most Mayan Indians who arrived over the past decade to build or work in the hotels and restaurants of Mexico's newest resort, Canul says he is better off than he was a home.

Here, he finds full employment, adequate schools and medical facilities.

But, what prompted this week's summit of rich and poor nations is unknown in the Cancun slum called Puerto Juarez, isolated from the resort area itself where the world leaders will meet Thursday and Friday.

But its proximity to the peninsular hotel strip, where 600,000 Mexican and foreign tourists will vacation this year and spend an average of $120 a day, points up the immense gap between rich and poor within Mexico and most other developing nations.

Puerto Juarez is part of the county of Cancun; one mayor serves the entire region from offices in the resort city.

The plight of Cancun's poor also highlights the central role of the Mexican state in trying to narrow that gap, in accord with a philosophy shared among Third World nations at this conference that private enterprise alone cannot reduce human poverty.

Ten years ago, when tourism earned more for Mexico than oil, the government assigned Cancun, then a fishing village of 800 people, to become a tourist boom town that would become a "pole of growth" for the backward, isolated Yucatan peninsula.

While investing $240 million to develop the area and attract big-name hotels, the government created an explosion of unforeseen migration. Each day, officials say 15 people arrive seeking work and another 10 are born, swelling the population of 55,000.

Manuel Castillo, Cancun's public works director, said planners "expected about half the number that came."

Little change seen in the VCR industry

NEW YORK (AP) — The future of video cassette recorders remains bright despite a court ruling that using the machines to tape copyrighted TV programs is illegal, industry officials and analysts assert.

Sony Corp., maker of the Betamax recorder and one of the defendants in the case that spurred the ruling, is "not changing anything" because of the ruling, said William Baker, a vice president of the Japanese company's U.S. unit, Sony Corp. of America.

Baker called the court's action "just one step of what's been a long legal case and which no doubt will continue for several years."

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco on Monday overturned a lower court and ruled that makers, distributors and users of the recorders, or VCRs, were breaking the law if the machines were used to tape over-the-air broadcasts of copyrighted programs — even if only for home use.

More than 3 million homes in the United States are estimated to have VCRs.

MCA Inc. and Walt Disney Productions, two entertainment concerns that produce TV programs, filed suit against the use of VCRs in 1976. They said the copyright violations could affect their future earnings.

Sony's U.S. unit, its advertising agency, four retailers who sell the Betamax and a person who taped a network TV program also were defendants in the case.

The court said the corporate defendants were liable for damages, but sent the case back to U.S. District Judge Warren Ferguson in Los Angeles to consider how damages might be awarded — a task it conceded would be "exceedingly complex."

A court injunction against the making or selling of VCRs has been suggested, but the appeals court said that might "result in great public injury." Instead, it suggested a set of royalties might be levied.

But industry spokesmen and analysts said Tuesday the case is far from decided, and is almost certain to end up at the U.S. Supreme Court. In Tokyo, Sony Managing Director Naoto Mabuchi called the ruling "anachronistic," and said the company would appeal.

Joseph J. Schumm Jr., secretary and corporate counsel of Associated Dry Goods Corp., one of the retailing defendants, said the recent ruling's effect on VCR sales would be "none whatsoever."

BRINKS ROBBERY. Police mill around a Brinks armored truck after Tuesday afternoon's holdup in Nanuet, N.Y., in which two police officers and a Brinks guard were killed. Four suspects, including two women, were taken into custody but police said two other suspects were still at large. The incident began when robbers robbed the truck of nearly $1.5 million which was followed by a short car chase and shootout with police in nearby Nyack.

Two officers and one Brink's guard die in armored car robbery

NANUET, N.Y. (AP) — Robbers shot a Brink's truck guard to death and stole $1.6 million in a brazen mid-afternoon ambush, then opened fire with automatic weapons at a roadblock and killed two police officers, authorities said.

Four suspects — two men and two women — were arrested and all the stolen money was recovered, but police searched the area today for two to four other suspects.

A third police officer, two other Brink's guards and a suspect were injured.

The armored truck was picking up the day's receipts at the Nanuet National Bank, at a shopping mall in Nanuet, at around 4 p.m. Tuesday when at least four bandits opened fire "without warning" on the three guards, Rockland County District Attorney Kenneth Gribetz said early today at a news conference.

A 49-year-old guard, Peter Paige of East Brunswick, N.J., was killed.

The getaway cars were spotted about five miles away at a roadblock at an entrance to the New York State Thruway, and four police officers from the town of Nyack, 25 miles north of New York City, stopped the van to question the driver.

A man and a woman were sitting in the front seat and the officers, including Waverly Brown, 45, of Spring Valley, ordered them out. Sgt. Edward O'Grady, 32, of Pearl River walked around the side.

"Suddenly the side door was flung open and men armed with automatic weapons burst out, instantly shooting Officer Brown," Nyack Police Chief Thomas Coffey said at this morning's news conference.

The robbers moved to the back of the truck and shot O'Grady at least three times in the back and abdomen, Coffey said.

The officers were the first policemen ever killed in the line of duty in suburban Rockland County, Coffey said.

The gunman and the man who was sitting in the front seat of the truck stole two cars from bystanders and escaped, Gribetz said.

The woman, identified by Gribetz as Barbara Edson, 38, was caught by an off-duty New York City Transit Authority policeman who was in the crowd that had gathered.

Other officers were meanwhile chasing the second getaway car until it crashed in Nyack. Two men and a woman, identified by Gribetz as Judith Clark, 31, of Manhattan; James Hackford, 33, of Queens; and Solomon Quienes, no age or address given, were seized.

Quienes was taken to Nyack Hospital where he was in critical but stable condition suffering from head wounds from the crash.

Brown, who had two grown daughters, died where he was shot, Coffey said. O'Grady, a 12-year police veteran who had a wife and three children ranging in age from less than 12 months to 7 years, died in surgery at Nyack Hospital.

The third officer, Arthur Keenan, 33, of Valley Cottage, N.Y., was treated for superficial wounds and released, Gribetz said.

Nuclear war talk causes European jitters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growing talk within the Reagan administration about the specter of nuclear war is stirring jitters in Europe, an angry retort from Moscow and charges of irresponsibility at home.

Reagan said during a weekend interview that a limited exchange of nuclear weapons would not necessarily escalate into world war.

Then, on Monday, the top military officer of the National Security Council, Major Gen. Robert L. Schweitzer, claimed the Soviets have nuclear superiority and "are going to strike."

Reagan said he did not agree with the general, who was promptly relieved of his NSC duties for not clearing the speech in advance.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he was "appalled" by Schweitzer's speech and added: "Such war talk bears the danger of becoming a self-fulfilling prophecy when mouthed carelessly by top presidential assistants."

In his interview, Reagan was asked if there could be a limited nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"I don't honestly know," Reagan replied, and then went on to say: "I could see where you could have an exchange of tactical weapons against troops in the field without it bringing either one of the major powers into pushing the button."

He said U.S. nuclear strategy must be based, in part, on the notion that the Soviets believe "a nuclear war is possible and they believe it is winnable."

Reagan's remarks got little immediate attention in this country but were the lead story on British Broadcasting Corp. newscasts Tuesday.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev demanded that Reagan make a public statement declaring the idea of a nuclear attack as "criminal."

In an interview distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass, Brezhnev said, "Only he who has decided to commit suicide can start a nuclear war in the hope of emerging a victor from it."

Reagan's statement raised eyebrows among the United States' European allies and forced Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger to defend U.S. nuclear strategy to NATO defense ministers meeting in Scotland.

Schweitzer spoke to the Association of the United States Army.

"The Soviets are on the move; they are going to strike," he said, adding that there was "a drift toward war" and that the United States "is in the greatest danger that the republic has ever faced since its founding days."

Schweitzer was fired early Tuesday — and reassigned to the Army — for ignoring a rule that requires NSC staff members to clear their public remarks with national security adviser Richard V. Allen.

Teen arrested after six-hour standoff

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston teenager who held police at bay for six hours undergoes psychiatric tests today at a Houston hospital.

The 19-year-old man, whose name was not released, was arrested Tuesday night at his southwest Houston home by the police department's Special Weapons and Tactics team.

However, police said, no charges have been filed. The youth's mother and his sister, who was carrying a 3-month-old infant, called police Tuesday afternoon after he waved a .357-caliber pistol at them, police said. The young man, also armed with about 20 rifles and guns, fired the pistol twice but did not hit anyone, police said.

Officers entered the darkened home six hours later and arrested the man.

Telephone show to be at Kiwanis

A telephone that brews tea, a video system that enables doctors to make house calls and a miniature model of the U.S. space shuttle are highlights of this year's new Southwestern Bell science demonstration.

It's called "Blue Sky of Communications" and it's scheduled to be presented to the Pampa Kiwanis Club at noon Friday at the First Methodist Church.

Bill Haehnel, Southwestern Bell science demonstrator, says the new program shows there are no limits to enriching lives through communications.

"There's a whole universe waiting," he says. Haehnel's presentation — complete with lighted display and removable panels — begins with a demonstration of a Bell Solar Battery. By applying light, he activates a solar battery that causes a music box to play. When he blocks out the light, the music stops.

The Bell solar battery has paved the way for other intriguing uses of the sun — in solar — powered cars, telephone lines, homes and satellites in space. In his 25-minute program, Haehnel demonstrates a variety of more recent innovations that he says will mark the beginning of tomorrow's world of communications.

Included are a communications system that instantly translates spoken English into other languages and a silicon chip the size of an infant's fingernail that holds the equivalent of 150,000 transistors.

Haehnel introduces his audience to an electronic data retrieval system that calls up such information as a patient's medical records or a perfect match for bridge. "Because telebridge knows exactly how you've played your last 1,500 hands, you're instantly matched with three other players in a system of equal ability," he explains.

But future telecommunications will serve more than recreational needs. One special relay device, for instance, uses a flashing lamp to alert deaf persons when a phone rings. Another innovation makes it possible to call up two weeks' bills so one can balance a checkbook by phone. We call this process the "paperless chase."

The 39-year veteran of the telephone company presents his program to adult groups in a non-technical, entertaining manner. After each presentation, a display of flashing sights and sounds is activated which ushers in a new world of communications wonders.

Chemical society to meet Thursday evening

The Panhandle Plains Section of the American Chemical Society is hosting Dr. Clifford N. Matthews at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at K Bobs on Bell St. in Amarillo.

Dr. Matthews will be discussing the chemical evolution of proteins to protein. The crucial question often asked by scientist today concerning the origin of proteins — the building blocks of life — will be discussed in detail.

Evidence from laboratory and extraterrestrial chemistry consistent with this view suggests that hydrogen cyanide polymerization is a universal process that could account not only for the abundant formation of primitive proteins and other important biomolecules on Earth, but also for the yellow-orange-brown colors of Jupiter and for the presence of water-soluble compounds hydrolyzable to amino acids in materials obtained from environments as diverse as the moon, carbonaceous chondrites and the reaction chambers used by many experimenters to simulate organic synthesis in planetary atmosphere.

The public is invited to attend.

CHRIS SKAGGS
Chris Skaggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Skaggs of Pampa, is a member of the all-senior horse judging team at Texas Tech University.

The team, which consists of five members, will compete for its fifth year in the All-American Quarter Horse Congress Judging Contest in Columbus, Ohio, October 18.

Dr. James C. Heird, coach of the horse judging team, said the students will be competing in the contest, one of the most prestigious intercollegiate horse judging events, against 25 colleges. Over the past three years the Texas Tech team has finished in the top three of the competition.

Team members spent this week traveling throughout Texas meeting ranchers and producers and testing their horse-judging abilities.

"This is probably the best team we've ever had," Heird said. "The students have spent a lot of time out of class working evenings and weekends preparing for the contest."

The Texas Tech horse judging team will also participate in the American Quarter Horse Association World Championship Intercollegiate Horse Judging Contest November 20 in Oklahoma City.

BOBBY L. GUTHRIE
Airman Bobby L. Guthrie, son of Lydia A. Guthrie of 1108 Main, Wheeler, Texas, has been assigned to Lowry Air Force Base, Colo., after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the supply field.

He is a 1978 graduate of Wheeler High School.

SHARAE TURK
Coronado Community Hospital Administrative Secretary Sharae Turk recently completed a two-day workshop for Medical Staff Services conducted by the Texas Hospital Association.

Norman Knox, administrator, said Ms. Turk is a member of the Texas Society for Medical Staff Services, a professional organization of persons responsible for administrative support and coordination of affairs for the hospital medical staff and administrator.

Topics presented at the workshop included risk management, credentialing, cancer registries, and the appeal mechanism.

The workshop was conducted in Corpus Christi in conjunction to the fifth annual meeting and program, Knox said. The Texas Society for Medical Staff Services is part of the Texas Hospital Association and open to participating hospitals.

MIKE GRAHAM
Mike Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Graham of Lefors, has been named a gold award winner in the regional competition for the FFA Swine Production Proficiency Award.

Graham became eligible for the regional runoff when he won the $100 State FFA Swine Production Proficiency Award sponsored by Pfizer, Inc. of New York, N.Y. as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. The award is one of 22 Proficiency Awards presented annually at local, state, regional and nationwide levels to recognize FFA members for achievements in activities leading to careers in agriculture.

He will receive a plaque, a check for $250 and partially paid travel expenses to the National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Mo. in November. At the convention he will compete against Regional Swine Production Proficiency Award Winners selected in each of the other three FFA Regions.

GERALD E. MOORE
Sgt. 1st Class Gerald E. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Moore, Jr., of Pampa, has arrived for duty at Fort Hood, Texas.

Moore, assigned with the 2nd Armored Division, is a 1966 graduate of Pampa High School.

His wife, Sonja, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Bridge of San Angelo, Texas.

TRAVIS PLUMLEE
Travis Plumlee, Director of Social Services at Coronado Community Hospital, was recently elected as Executive Vice President on the Board of Directors of the Texas Society of Hospital Social Service Directors, a branch of the Texas Hospital Association.

This marks the first time anyone from the Panhandle has ever received this position. He is the youngest person ever elected. He won solely on the work he has done in Pampa. He will continue as Social Service Director at Coronado Community Hospital but will make trips to Austin. He will serve a two-year term on the board, which is the chief legislative body for the society.

Plumlee has also been named as guest speaker at the state convention of the National Association of Social Workers. He will speak on ways to provide social services to the rural community.

LT. DAVID CRADDOCK
Lt. David Craddock, Commanding Officer of The Salvation Army in Pampa, has been sent to assist with the Salvation Army Disaster Services to the victims of the flood in Breckenridge, Texas.

Lt. Craddock reports that three Salvation Army Mobile Canteens are serving meals to the flood victims and workers.

CHARLOTTE COOPER
Charlotte Cooper, Director of Nursing at Coronado Community Hospital, recently completed a workshop sponsored by the Texas Society for Hospital Nursing Service Directors.

The theme for the workshop was "Preparing the Nursing Supervisor for Key Health Issues." The main topics included were nursing shortage and what can be done to recruit nurses back to nursing.

Another key topic was how to prepare the student nurse for the real world of nursing. The Houston workshop also covered the impact on nursing caused by the oversupply of physicians, a problem which occurs only in major metropolitan areas.

WALTER L. JOHNSON
Walter L. Johnson, Director of Public Relations and Marketing for Coronado Community Hospital, recently completed a three-day workshop sponsored by the Texas Society for Hospital Public Relations, according to Norman Knox, administrator.

The workshop covered topics including "Management Development," "Focus on Recruitment and Retention," and "Administration use of Public Relations."

Other topics for the Fort Worth workshop included promotional campaign development, and display of graphic arts materials and products.

ALAN SCOTT FRAZIER
Alan Scott Frazier, 2244 N. Russell, recently received a Bachelor of Science degree in Geology during commencement exercises at Stephen F. Austin State University, Nacogdoches, Texas.

PENNY SUMMERS
Penny Summers, a freshman marketing major from Pampa at West Texas State University, has been elected to the WTSU Student Senate.

Most of the 33 senators are elected by students in the seven schools and colleges. Next semester, freshman senators will face re-election among other students in their academic areas.

The WTSU Student Senate exists to improve the quality of life at WTSU. Senators participate in decision-making regarding rules and policies affecting students at the university. The organization is working on such issues as a pass-fail grading system and registering students to vote in Randall county.

Wild burros, horses available for adoption

No plan exists to exterminate 6,000 to 11,000 excess wild horses and burros removed from the public lands in Fiscal Year, 1982, according to a letter to Sena Ann Brainerd, from Robert E. Burford, director of the Bureau of Land Management, Washington, D.C.

The Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act (Public Law 92-195, as amended) provides for the protection, management and control of these animals on lands administered by the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management, according to Burford's letter.

To protect the rangeland from overgrazing and to maintain healthy herds of wildlife, livestock and wild horses and burros, it is necessary to control populations of these animals on public lands. Wild horse and burro populations are controlled by removal of excess animals in accordance with the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act, which specifies the order and priority for these removals.

First, old, sick or lame animals must be destroyed in the most humane manner possible. Next, any additional excess wild horses and burros remaining on the public rangeland must be humanely captured and made available for private maintenance as long as an adoption demand by qualified individuals exists, Burford said.

Wild horses and burros for which no adoption demand exists must be destroyed in the most humane and cost efficient manner possible, said Burford.

A recently announced increase in adoption fees will affect the number of animals requested by individuals who are willing and able to adopt a wild horse or burro.

Big U.S. cotton crop has impact throughout world

WASHINGTON (AP) — The big U.S. cotton crop is having a major impact on world cotton supplies, prices and the outlook for the coming year, according to a new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

Also, bumper cotton crops in several other countries, including the Soviet Union and China, may boost world stockpiles of the fiber to a seven-year high by next Aug. 1, officials said Monday.

World cotton supply-demand prospects for 1981-82 will be affected by anticipated higher production levels and more pessimistic expectations for overall use.

the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a monthly report.

That will boost world carryover stocks of cotton to an estimated 25.6 million bales by next Aug. 1, the most since 30.8 million at the beginning of the 1975-76 cotton marketing year. The inventory this Aug. 1 was 22.2 million.

The 1981 U.S. cotton crop is estimated at 15.5 million bales, up 39 percent from last year's drought-reduced 11.1 million bales.

"Crop prospects have improved in the Soviet Union and Pakistan, while estimated consumption levels deteriorated in Western Europe and Japan," the report said. "World prices declined during September, and U.S. export prices reached their most competitive level in nearly two years."

As a result of the price decline, it said, the U.S. share of world cotton trade "is virtually certain to increase" during the coming season.

Global cotton production in 1981-82 was estimated at record 70.9 million bales, nearly 7 percent more than the 1980-81 harvest of 65.4 million bales.

World use of cotton was estimated at 67.1 million bales, up from 65.6 million last season.

Although the Soviet Union's cotton harvest improved from prospects a month ago, the report indicated a yield of 13.7 million bales, still below the output of 14.3 million in 1980-81.

The report said U.S. cotton exports could reach about 7.03 million bales in 1981-82, compared with 5.93 million last year.

In all, world cotton export trade was projected at about 20.5 million bales, compared with 19.9 million in 1980-81, it said.

A related report issued by the department's Crop

Reporting Board showed in the week that ended on Oct. 18 about 98 percent of the U.S. cotton crop had reached the stage where the bolls were opening, compared with 91 percent a year ago.

Most of the leading states showed bolls opening ahead of last year. But Texas, the biggest producer, showed that only 68 percent of the bolls were opening, compared with 76 percent a year ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Farm Bureau Federation says the House should scrap its farm bill unless the measure is improved before a final vote is taken this week.

Robert Delano, president of the federation, also urged Monday that the House should "resist efforts to kill the tobacco program because of the adverse economic impact" on tobacco producers.

Delano said the Farm Bureau's reasons for opposing the current bill include decisions by the House to continue target prices for wheat and feed grains, and votes to repeal the peanut and sugar programs.

The farm leader, in a statement, also criticized the bill's dairy provisions. "Farm Bureau is dismayed at the apparent lack of understanding of the bill's sugar and peanut titles," Delano said. "Repeal of these titles will surely result in severe gyrations in supplies and prices for those commodities and will seriously impact net farm income of sugar and peanut growers."

Delano also said the Farm Bureau opposes an amendment that would establish a federal "export grain bank" to set minimum export grain prices.

IT'S A JOGGERCYCLE. This strange cycle's Japanese inventor shows off a machine sure to attract stares — and the attention of both running enthusiasts and cyclists. Pedal power drives a pair of running shoes through mechanical linkage. The joggercycle made it to the finals recently of a Japanese industrial firm's employee idea contest.

Recent changes made in Medicare

Several changes have been made in Medicare health insurance protection by a recently enacted law, Larry Mayo, Social Security branch manager in Pampa, said recently.

Changes were made in both parts of Medicare — hospital insurance, which helps pay for inpatient hospital care and certain kinds of post-hospital care, and medical insurance which helps pay for physicians' services and other medical services and supplies not covered by hospital insurance.

Changes made in hospital insurance include:

Per-day amounts paid by patients will be based on the hospital insurance deductible in effect during the calendar year the services are received, rather than the year the benefit period began. This provision is effective for hospital services and extended care services received in 1982 and later.

The law raises the base amount used to determine the hospital insurance deductible from $40 to $45, the first change since the Medicare program began in 1966. As a result, future deductibles will bear more accurate relationship to the actual cost of care. The provision is effective starting with 1982.

Changes in medical insurance include:

The medical insurance annual deductible will be raised to $75, from $60, starting in 1982.

Under the old law, any medical expenses incurred during the last 3 months of a year which counted toward that year's medical insurance annual deductible also counted toward the following year's deductible — the "carryover rule." This carryover rule has been eliminated. Starting with 1982, the annual deductible will have to be met each year without regard to the previous years' expenses.

General enrollment period. Under the law in effect before 1981, a person who did not sign up for Medicare insurance at his or her first opportunity, could enroll only during a general enrollment period, the first 3 months of each year. Since March 1981, a person could enroll at any time. The new law returns to the way things were before 1981; there will be a general enrollment period the first 3 months of each year.

More information about these changes and changes made in Social Security cash benefits can be obtained at the Pampa Social Security office, located at 125 S. Gillespie. The telephone number is 669-3381 or call Toll-free, 1-800-392-1603 for any kind of general inquiry. Call Toll-free, 1-800-442-2620 for Medicare Part B, general information and claims information.

Reagan assistant, other Republicans will speak in Amarillo Saturday

Special Assistant to the President for Political Affairs, Lee Atwater, and Republicans Jim Collins, Walter Mengden, and Don Richardson will be in Amarillo Saturday at the Hilton Inn. Atwater will discuss the policies and goals of the Reagan administration and will be available for the questions about appointments.

Atwater received his appointment from Reagan in recognition of his success on behalf of the Reagan campaign.

A native of the South Carolina, Atwater worked as a campaign director for Reagan in the primary in his home state. In the general election he served as Regional Political Director for Reagan — Bush in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and West Virginia.

Atwater now serves as Special Assistant to the President for Political Affairs, working directly under Lyn Nofziger. In this position he has played an important role in the selection of key administration officials and served as Political Clearance Officer for more than 2,500 key federal jobs. Nofziger has recently designated Atwater as the Administration's point man in the 1982 Republican Congressional campaigns.

Collins, Mengden, and Richardson will all be official candidates for the U.S. Senate seat in the Republican Primary as of Saturday.

Congressman Jim Collins is presently serving his eighth term as the U.S. Representative from the Dallas area, which

Local horses place at show

The Panhandle Quarter Horse Exhibitors Association held their Annual Futurities and Maturities recently in Canyon.

Pampa horses which placed in these contests were Swizzy, owned by Ben and Betty Wilson and shown by Betty Wilson. Swizzy placed first in the two-year-old Western Pleasure Futurity.

Doctor Patsy, owned by Della Moyer and shown by Betty Wilson, placed second in the three-year-old Western Pleasure Maturity.

Lady Bea April, owned by Rocking E Quarter Horses and shown by Della Moyer, placed third in the 1980 Mares Halter Futurity.

makes up the Third Congressional District. He was first elected to Congress in a special election in 1968 and received almost 80 percent of the vote in 1980.

Collins serves on the Energy and Commerce Committee and is the ranking minority member on its subcommittee on Telecommunications, Consumer Protection and Finance. This panel legislates on the radio, television, telephone, and securities industries and automobile safety.

He is also on the committee's two energy-related subcommittees covering coal, oil, gas energy conservation and power. For his leadership in Congress, Collins has been honored with 100 percent ratings from the American Conservative Union Americans for Constitutional Action, the National Alliance of Senior Citizens, and the American Security Council.

Senator Walter Mengden is serving his third term in the Texas Senate. He was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1970. His re-election to the Texas Senate in 1976 saw him receive more votes for state Senator than anyone in the history of Texas. He was re-elected without opposition in 1980.

As an elected Republican office holder, Mengden worked for Ronald Reagan in both the 1976 and 1980 primaries. Mengden is known as a champion of the pro-family, pro-life causes and likes nothing better than to rattle liberal cages. This is illustrated by the fact that his floor speeches in Austin are regularly interrupted by heckling, jeering, booing and screaming liberals.

He was named "The Most Outstanding Member of the Legislature" for both the 64th and 65th sessions by The Texas Lawman, the official publication of the Sheriff's Association of Texas. Mengden was also honored as "Law Enforcement's Strongest Supporter in the Senate" for the 66th session by The Texas Prosecutor, the official publication of the Texas District and County Attorney's Association.

Richardson is a West Point graduate with a Masters Degree in Mathematics from Texas A&M, who has been in the computer science industry since 1959. He grew up in Dallas and entered the Army Air Corps in 1946 as an enlisted man.

Empress of Blandings in the true light

NEW YORK (AP) — In the elegant serenity of the Pierpont Morgan Library, the Empress of Blandings is seen at last in her true colors — black with white markings. Definitely not pink.

To enter this august repository of rare books, belles lettres and master drawings on Manhattan's East Side, and there find sane and sober ladies and gentlemen admiring a portrait of a fat, fictional pig is to breathe the air of P.G. Wodehouse's England.

The exhibition, which opened to the public last Friday, celebrates the 100th anniversary of the creator of Jeeves, Bertie Wooster, Psmith and, especially, Clarence, ninth Earl of Emsworth and proud owner of the Empress.

Pelham Grenville, Wodehouse, whose 100th birthday was Thursday, also labored in Hollywood and in a long Broadway career wrote the lyrics to "Bill" and "I Get a Kick Out of You."

It's a rummy thing, reading Wodehouse. You read a story or two, chuckling over a dreamy ninth earl who plugs his bossy secretary with a BB gun, or a valet who bends his considerable intellect to rigging the girls' egg-and-spoon race at the school treat.

Soon you've read a dozen and are tolerably familiar with the infamies of Sir Gregory Parsloe-Parsloe, Bart., Lord E's pig-breeding rival.

Before you stop, you've become a Wodehouse character, commissioning portraits of black Berkshire sows.

Richard Osborne, who has read the 92 Wodehouse novels

"several times" and contributed three essays to the exhibition catalog, confided there seem to be a lot of "Wodehouse maniacs" out there, especially in the United States.

A Wodehouse authority, apparently, is a chap like Osborne who can dash off an essay speculating on the location of Blandings Castle. A Wodehouse maniac, on the other hand, works out the train schedules between London and Blandings.

The redeeming thing about being a Wodehouse pedant is that it cannot be carried off with a straight face.

"Why is it spelled Psmith?" an unwary young lady asked James Heineman, the Morgan Library trustee who assembled the exhibit.

"The 'p' is silent, as in 'pshrimp,'" Heineman replied, not at all concerned that Wodehouse's joke works only in print.

"Pigs and income tax were the only subjects that really stirred him," Wodehouse wrote of Lord Emsworth, whose designs of hanging the sow's visage among the ancestral portraits at Blandings were frustrated time and again by his haughty and infinitely brighter sisters.

"This is one case of a fictional character getting his way," said Heineman, who commissioned not only the large portrait but also a four-picture study probing the many moods of the Empress.

Wodehouse — Sir Pelham in the last of his 93 years — turned out his first book in 1902 and the first of the Blandings saga in 1915. He was working on another Blandings book when he died in 1975.

"I cannot tear myself away from Blandings Castle," he once wrote, but nearly as often as he returned to write another Blandings story, there was a pink pig on the dust jacket to offend the eye of the purist.

"Specious... sham... soi-dissant" protest tiny tags attached to several of the offending dust covers on novels in a display case, Berkshires, like Empress of Blandings, are black with white markings. Just ask the Archbishop of Canterbury, Heineman did.

"What is not possible anywhere," decreed the Rev. Robert Runcie, spiritual leader of the Anglican church and ardent breeder of Berkshires, "is to represent a Berkshire as another pink, chubby porker."

Wodehouse never thought of a pig-loving archbishop, but one would have fit. Wodehouse's dukes and earls were all mentally negligible, his girls beautiful, his older women predatory and vain, his butlers sagacious and his skies unclouded. His guiding principle, he once wrote, was "ignoring real life altogether."

Freed of any weighty questions, his acolytes are free to probe the lesser mysteries.

From whence, they wonder, did Wodehouse derive Lord Emsworth's cherished book, Whiffle's "The Care of the Pig," with its "noble passage on swill and bran mash?"

The exhibit suggests the source is "The Pig — Breeding, Rearing and Marketing," published in 1919, which included a portrait of a black Berkshire by a person identified only as Wippell.

Such questions would not have troubled Sir Pelham.

The exhibition includes a letter he wrote in 1948, profusely thanking an admirer who had charted the genealogy of Lord Emsworth's clan.

Bake a hearty, meatless 'souffle'

BY AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

A meatless meal can satisfy even a steak- and potato man occasionally.

MUSHROOM-SPINACH STRATA

1 pound fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onions
8 slices firm-textured white bread
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
1 package (10 ounces)

frozen chopped spinach, thawed, or 2 cups cooked, chopped fresh spinach

3 eggs
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1-16 teaspoon ground black pepper

Grease a 10-inch quiche or pie pan (1 1/2 quarts); set aside. Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about 5 3/4 cups).

In a large skillet, melt butter. Add mushrooms and onions; saute until tender, about 5 minutes. Set aside.

Remove crusts from bread; cut in halves diagonally. On the bottom of the prepared pan arrange 6 of the bread halves. Top with the mushrooms and onions (removing and refrigerating a few mushrooms for garnish, if desired), cheese and spinach. Arrange 8 bread halves overlapping in a circle on top of the spinach; place remaining 2 halves in center.

In a medium bowl, beat eggs; mix in milk, salt, nutmeg and black pepper. Pour over mushroom-spinach mixture. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Bake, uncovered, until almost firm, about 40 minutes. Place reserved sauteed mushrooms in center; bake until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean, about 5 minutes. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 portions.

Man keeps farming in spite of blindness

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — Although John Malkow is legally blind, he raises cattle and hogs, cuts wood and pilots his boat on the Rogue River.

When an explosion plunged Malkow into a world of darkness 14 years ago, a rehabilitation counselor told him to accept his blindness as a handicap.

"The guy said I should set up a cigarette stand at a federal building," recalled Malkow, 33.

"A lot of people cling to a crutch," Malkow said in an interview. "When I got injured so young, knowing that I had 50 years ahead of me, I decided I didn't want to sit around feeling sorry for myself."

"I'm not handicapped," he says. "I've met people with sight who are handicapped because they refuse to see. Blindness isn't a handicap. Maybe everybody should be blind for 30 days. They'd quit judging people by their appearance."

Malkow can barely see light. Outlines are hazy to him. He was injured at Fort Lawton in Seattle. Malkow, an Army enlisted man, was in charge of a medical unit.

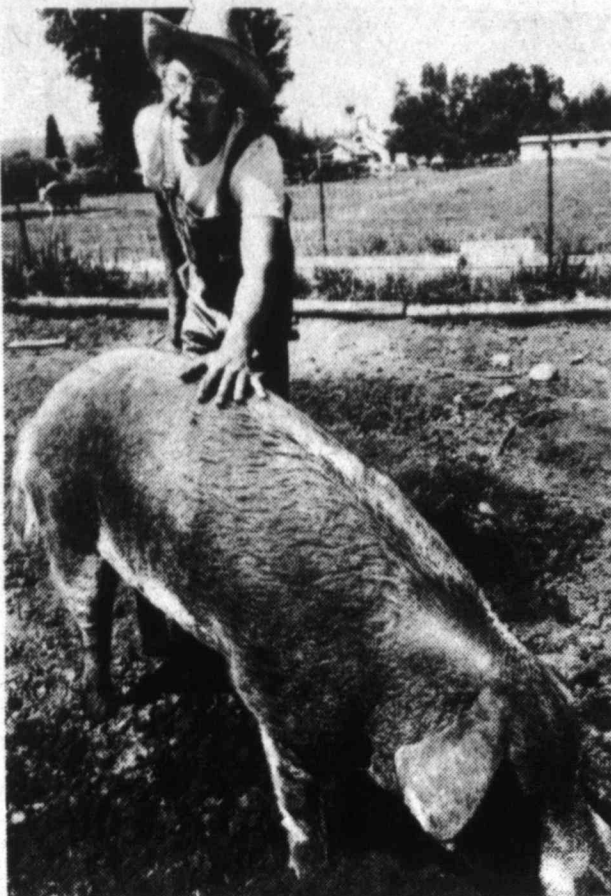

He walked into a room just as a container of medical chemicals, including caustic silver nitrate, exploded. The reason for the explosion was never determined.

Bits of wood and silver nitrate showered Malkow's face, causing blindness. The chemical imbedded in his skin eventually turned dark blue, coloring his face with splotches.

His oldest daughter, Heidi, was born three weeks after the accident. He and his wife, Anita, have another daughter, Holly, 9. He never has seen his children.

"That first year was the pits," said Malkow, who has had 103 operations on his face and eyes.

His fight for independence was not easy. He used savings to buy the 5½-acre farm near Grants Pass, where he was born. The Malkows use the farm to supplement his veteran's pension.

FEELS FINE. Legally blind John Malkow checks on the condition of one of the pigs at his farm in southern Oregon, near Grants Pass. Refusing to consider his blindness a handicap, he performs farm chores and even learned to drive a tractor.

Dear Abby

Girl may put damper on wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of brides who come down the aisle crying at their own wedding? Or doesn't it ever happen?

I am a 20-year-old college girl and I'll probably be getting married within the next two years. I cry "at the drop of a hat," as my parents say.

I cry at sad movies and I cry when I hear a nostalgic song. I even cried when I found a picture of my boyfriend's old girlfriend in his Bible. My boyfriend's sister had a pet raccoon that I saw maybe twice. The thing got hit in the jaw by a car and died. As they were looking it over and talking about skinning it to save the hide, I started to cry like a baby. Anything can set me off.

I am so afraid I will cry rivers at my own wedding. What do you make of this?

CRYBABY

DEAR CRYBABY: So you cry easily. It's no crime to give in to your emotions — such sensitivity these days is refreshing. You have a fortune in liquid assets. Don't knock it.

DEAR ABBY: I have searched for help for years with no success. I am a "pederast." (I like young boys.) I cannot tell you how difficult it is for me to even write those words. For people who read about child molestation, every individual who has sex with a child ranks among the most evil deviates of our society. Perhaps the act is, but often it is performed by an otherwise responsible, well-adjusted man. I consider myself such a man. Nothing could be further from my mind than wanting to hurt a child. In fact, my greatest joy is working with children, and my success in dealing with them has been remarkable.

My point in writing is to try to locate someone who is doing research in this area. I know I could make an important contribution toward a serious study.

I will freely work with any qualified group or individual. I have been to therapists, but they know less than I about this compulsion I have.

I have the problem under control, but the desire still rages within me, and I would like to eliminate it if possible. I know there must be thousands of men like me who are active and would like to overcome this urge, but there is simply nowhere to go for help.

There are many good men in prison who could also contribute to society if this problem could be solved. Please answer me in a "confidential." I cannot take any chances of being identified. There are many of us who desperately need your help.

JEKYLL AND HYDE

DEAR JEKYLL: I am publishing your letter, and if I hear from any qualified researchers who want to work with you I will let you know. Please send me your name and address. You can trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I didn't marry until I was 38. The two hardest aspects of being married were asking for money and getting used to smoke in the bedroom. (I have never smoked, but I never complained about his smoking because I knew he smoked when I married him.) Now after 20 years of marriage, he has taken up cigar smoking, knowing that I detest cigars and the odor nauseates me.

How can I convince him that he is being inconsiderate in addition to contaminating my air?

CHOKING IN CHICAGO

DEAR CHOKING: He knows he's being inconsiderate — the problem is, he doesn't care. I can't make him "care," but I can assure you that most people get about as much consideration as they demand.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby: 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ALPHA UPSILON MU BETA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Upsilon Mu chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met recently in the home of Diane Lamberth, 1439 Dogwood, with 14 members present.

Plans were made for a service project in which members will save grocery tapes. When all tapes are gathered and totaled, the chapter will purchase a gift to donate to a charity.

The chapter is also planning a Halloween party for members' children. It will be held at 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31 in the Flame Room of Energas Company.

In other business, nine chapter members are planning to attend the upcoming area convention in Perryton. Tanga Hood was elected chapter Valentine sweetheart.

Peggy Trosper and Diane Lamberth presented the program for the meeting. The subject was "Child Rearing" and included a discussion on how children were raised in the 18th and 19th centuries.

Hostesses for the meeting were Lisa Crossman and Gloria Hawkins.

The next meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 26.

PETROLEUM ENGINEERS' WIVES SOCIETY

The Petroleum Engineers' Wives Society met recently at the Pampa Country Club for a luncheon and fashion show.

Sandra Maune of "The Hollywood" showed members and guests how to construct a working wardrobe from basic items.

The next meeting will be a tour and luncheon Nov. 10 at the Square House Museum in Panhandle. Interested members may get further information by calling Ellen Grimes at 669-6794.

LA LECHE LEAGUE

The La Leche League of Pampa will sponsor a general information booth from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24 at the Pampa Mall in honor of the international organization's silver anniversary this year.

Literature available at the booth will include information on La Leche League and on "The Womanly Art of Breastfeeding." Further information on breastfeeding may be obtained by calling 665-6127 or 665-6774.

La Leche League International, a mother's self-help group devoted to the art of breastfeeding, was begun by seven women from the Chicago area. These women set up a neighborhood organization to share their experience in breastfeeding. These women now head an international group which each month reaches 100,000 women in 43 nations.

"Today, more than 50 percent of America's newborns are started at the breast, with the majority of those babies nursing through the first half year of life. With so many mothers and babies sharing a breastfeeding relationship, the need for La Leche League groups is clear," said a representative of the organization.

La Leche League International operates with no governmental support and relies primarily on volunteers. It provides a Board of Medical Advisors to its certified leaders, who function primarily on a mother-to-mother basis.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

October 21, 1981

Your ambitions and earning abilities will be greatly enhanced this coming year. If making money is your goal, you should have a tidy accumulation by your next birthday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be hopeful and positive today and dare to think big. By applying yourself, things for which you've been wishing can now be brought into being. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In areas where you are unselfish and thinking of advancing the interests of others along with your own, you should be extremely lucky today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Any dealings you have today with groups, clubs or large organizations should work out beneficially for all. Give these areas top priority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good time to set self-improvement goals. Whatever constructive changes you want to make can be accomplished successfully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Because you are willing to treat others as you'd like to be treated, your possibilities for putting lasting agreements together are excellent today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Work well done should prove exceptionally rewarding today, both from the pride you'll take in your tasks and the remuneration you'll receive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your popularity is ascending and you will be the standout at any social gathering. This should be a fun day for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Tasks you take on today will be performed properly. You are imaginative, resourceful and unlikely to leave half-finished anything you undertake.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is a good day to put your affairs in order. You have excellent organizational abilities. That which was previously hard to handle will be easy now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You shouldn't have any difficulty today getting material support for projects in which you're interested. Others will see their value and want to hop on the bandwagon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Handle personally today matters important to you. Even though you may find able delegates, they're not apt to do as well as you could.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're the type who always goes out of your way to be helpful. Today, persons you've aided will try to reciprocate.

PERFECT SERVICE. Pampa senior Lisa Sims was perfect (13-13) from the service line in the Harvesters' volleyball loss to Caprock Tuesday night.

Jimmerson named as top offensive player

Marty Jimmerson, Baylor's barefoot kicker, has been named the Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week.

Jimmerson, a freshman, kicked field goals of 50, 20, 38 and 21 yards in Baylor's 19-17 win Saturday over Texas A&M. Jimmerson has kicked nine field goals in 13 tries this season and is a perfect 14 of 14 on extra points.

He has yet to miss a field goal under 40 yards.

Pampa vb squad loses to Longhorns

AMARILLO—Caprock took advantage of Pampa's struggling offense to notch a 15-9, 15-11 victory Tuesday night in District 3-5A girls' volleyball action.

Caprock avenged an earlier loss to the Harvesters during the first half of district action.

"We just couldn't get any offense going," Pampa coach Lynn Wolfe said. "We gave them too many free balls to hit."

After losing the opener, the Harvesters bounced back to take a 4-0 lead in the second tilt.

"We got a good lead and then we just lost our momentum," coach Wolfe added.

Pampa edged Caprock from the service line, missing just four serves to Caprock's five.

Pampa players with perfect serves were Lisa Sims (13-13), Alicia Brewer (6-6) and Paula Fulton (3-3). Sims and Fulton are seniors while Brewer is a junior.

Pampa is now 0-1 in the second round of district play and 16-8 overall. Caprock is 1-0 and 14-10 overall.

Pampa outlasted Caprock in the junior varsity match, 15-5, 5-15 and 15-11.

The Harvester JVs won despite missing a dozen serves. Caprock JVs misfired on six serves.

"Our serves are still holding us back," coach Wolfe said. "We keep winning, but it just makes us work much harder."

Pampa JVs have now won 16 of 18 games.

The Harvesters host Palo Duro at 6:30 p.m. Saturday night in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Palo Duro defeated Pampa in first-half play, but fell to first-half champion Tascosa, 15-13, 15-11, last night.

Cowboys in good position for second-half run at Eagles

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas Coach Tom Landry sometimes talks about the National Football League season like it was a horse race.

Landry doesn't go to Oaklawn Park or Louisiana Downs but he can pretty well handicap his Cowboys.

He's talking about "jockeying for position" now to make a second-half stretch run against the Eagles, who are a furlong ahead in the National Conference Eastern Division.

"The (29-17) victory over the Rams was important because it got us into position to make a run for it," said Landry.

The Cowboys historically start out strong, drop back during the middle of the season and charge to the wire.

Dallas is 5-2 with Sunday's game against Miami in Texas Stadium closing out the first half of the season. The Cowboys are a game behind Philadelphia.

The Cowboys won their first four games then dropped two in a row. Landry was worried the Eagles would get too far ahead to catch.

"The Eagles finally found out that you don't play 16 good games in a row in this league," he said. "We just need to stay close until we can make our move."

The longer the season goes the more Landry has a tendency to return to things that have worked well for him. Landry has decided to all but junk his sideline signal system to quarterback Danny White.

The Cowboys used the tight end shuttle for the most part against Los Angeles Sunday.

Asked if he was afraid somebody was stealing Dallas' signals, Landry said "Anybody could break the code if they took the time to do it...We will not completely junk the hand signals...but we will continue now to operate with the tight end shuttle."

Landry said he did not think any team had intercepted Dallas' hand signals which are relayed from Landry to assistant John Mackovic to White.

Pampa hosts three grid games Thursday

Pampa will host three football games Thursday. The first game kicks off at 4:30 p.m. at the middle school field between Pampa Blue and Dumas in an eight-grade clash. The Blues are unbeaten with a 3-0-1 record.

Two games are scheduled at Harvester Stadium. Pampa meets Canyon at 4:30 p.m. in a ninth-grade game while the Pampa Shockers tangle with Amarillo High B at 7 p.m. in a junior varsity contest.

Mets hire Bamberger

NEW YORK (AP)—George Bamberger announced his appointment as the new manager of the New York Mets during a news conference Tuesday.

"They probably will find they are playing for the easiest individual they ever met," he said. "As long as they don't take kindness for weakness, they will be all right."

Bamberger became the Mets' ninth manager after Joe Torre was fired on the final day of the regular season.

The Mets last won a pennant in 1973 and haven't had a winning season since 1976. They were 41-62 this year, the fourth-worst record in the National League.

Divided Congressional Republicans battling to balance 1984 budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divided Republicans in Congress are struggling to keep alive President Reagan's fading hopes for a balanced budget in 1984.

The White House, meanwhile, is looking for a boost from a Democratic senator to save its proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

New budget projections circulated Tuesday by Senate Republicans showed the 1984 budget shortfall could be more than $90 billion.

House and Senate Republican leaders met privately to review a Senate GOP plan for reducing the deficit by $14.7 billion in fiscal 1982 and more than $73 billion over three years.

The administration's drive to win support for the proposed $8.5 billion arms sale to Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, was stalled in the Senate.

But the White House was looking for a possible boost today with an announcement by Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia of his decision on the deal, which includes five of the Airborne Warning and Control System planes and weaponry for Saudi F-15 jets.

Byrd hinted Tuesday that he might vote for the sale, saying it is not a partisan issue.

Only five of the 47 Senate Democrats have said they will vote for the Saudi arms sale, according to the latest Associated Press count, but a decision by Byrd to vote for it could influence other Democrats. The Senate lineup stood Tuesday at 52-37 opposed.

The Senate vote is scheduled for next Wednesday.

Congress also worked Tuesday on the multimillion-dollar, four-year farm bill. With the active assistance of Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, backers of federal price supports for tobacco say the "momentum is building" in the House to retain subsidies for the crop.

Responding to critics' complaints about the apparent conflict between tobacco price supports and the government's multimillion-dollar anti-smoking campaign, Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said, "The health issue is working in our favor."

The tobacco program was not originally a part of the pending farm bill, but Rep. Bob Shamansky, D-Ohio, is now proposing its abolition.

The final House vote on its version of the farm bill is expected sometime this week.

In other congressional business Tuesday:

—The House voted 305-66 to designate the fourth Sunday in October as National Mother-In-Law Day.

—Stereotypes, such as the meddlesome mother-in-law, the battle as mother-in-law, the dominating mother-in-law and the vicious mother-in-law have served to make the term mother-in-law one of ridicule and opprobrium," said the resolution, which now goes to the Senate.

—The House refused to ban the shipment of radioactive materials through New York City but paved the way for a study of the question.

Hunters' arrest a mistake

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two Texas hunters who traveled to Moscow for a trophy ram bagged only trouble when Soviet immigration officials placed them under house arrest for five days.

Rep. Gib Lewis of Fort Worth and former legislator Dick Slack of Pecos said Tuesday they arrived in Moscow two days before their visas went into effect. They said they were restricted to a bedroom, the dining room and lobby of a run-down hotel that had no heat or hot water after they returned from the Mongolia leg of a $10,000, around-the-world hunting trip.

"We made the mistake of coming back into Russia two days before the visa said we could," Lewis said. "The visa in Russia is very precise about where and when you can go."

He said a travel agent miscalculated the length of the Mongolia leg of the journey.
