Raymond Poincare, French Wartime President is Dead

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY AT FOUR TODAY

PARIS, Oct. 15 — Raymond Poincare, French wartime president, died today.

He had been ill in health since resigning his third tenure as premier in 1929, but death came suddenly. It was announced yesterday he was slightly ill. Last night he died peacefully, becoming worse at midnight and died at 4 p. m.

The death of Poincare called the attention of the world to the stability of the currency when he was elected to the prime ministry for the second time in 1926, deprived France of a great statesman within a

THOUSANDS TO SEE COWBOYS BATTLE BEARS

ELINE, Oct. 15 — Thousands of West Texans, including the many who will be returning for an "homecoming", are expected to witness the annual battle of the Simons Cowboys and the Bears when the Bruins pay a visit to the Cowboystadium here today night.

It will be the only appearance of the Simons team in this section this fall. The 190 pound line and the Simons team, consisting of running and passing backs, the Cowboys have a squad of mostly of hustling, hard-fighting sophomores, with a sprinkling of veterans. Coming along this far on account of inexperience, the Cowboys expect to be when they tangle with the Bruins.

Understanding this far among the performers have been Pete Clyde sophomore, who runs the Bear ground attack and who is a hard to catch in an open field as Henry Milby, one of the few seniors and the defensive star of the Bruins; and Captain Odell Wynn, a stellar end who caught a pass for a touchdown on the Bears' year only to have it called back on account of an off side penalty.

After the Bears beat the Cowboys last year after the Bear ground attack failed to dent the Cowboy line, Lloyd Russell, called by Waco writer as the greatest broken runner for Baylor since Wesley Shaw.

Customers might as well get prepared to see an aerial battle in the sky-Bear set. With four cap- tures in his backfield, Gram- makes no bones of the fact that he is going to have his men hurl the Bear. And with such a passer as in the line-up the visitors are to strike in the air before the Bears are over.

Cobham also encountered ill-fortune, being forced down at Malta.

HOLLAND STILL IS NATION OF BULB RAISERS

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 15 — "Holland as a bulb and flower-growing country still is very much alive," declared Ernst H. Krelage, president of the General Dutch Bulb Growing society.

"Our foreign customers still buy as much as ever," Krelage said. "People all over the world these days consider that flowers are a necessity and not a luxury any more."

Bulb-Grower's Headquarters
Krelage has been the president of the society for many years. Their headquarters are at Haarlem where they have their own experimental gardens. Every bulb-grower is compelled to be a member, so that they come under the strict supervision of the society. They have their own laboratory and no Dutch bulb is exported unless a certificate is obtained from the governmental institution for Diseases in Plants in Wageningen stating that the bulbs are absolutely healthy.

"In the peak year, 1932," said Krelage, "the export had grown to 47,500,000 kilograms of bulbs, representing a value of $12,700,000. In 1933 the export dropped to 42,500,000 kilograms, but the value increased. All indications show that the 1934 both weight and value have again increased."

World Monopoly
"Even though we no longer boast that we hold the world's monopoly, we find it makes no difference to our trade. Dutch bulb-growers have settled in Britain and the United States, but our figures show they do us no harm. Hyacinths, especially, which require a very special soil, remain a Dutch specialty."

Krelage said that the restrictions on bulb imports in the United States have hit their trade tremendously, but he hopes that the Washington authorities will realize that Dutch bulbs are the healthiest in the world and that if Holland sells more bulbs in the United States, the Dutch will be able to purchase more American produce.

No Firemen Among Poly High Students

FORT WORTH, Oct. 15 — If the attitude of students at Polytechnic high school can be taken as a criterion, future city fire departments may have to engage robots to put out fires.

In a survey at the school as to what students planned to become in future life, not one youngster even hinted at the desire to become a fireman, once the goal of myriads of youths.

Moreover, only one wanted to become a railroad engineer, once a favorite boyhood choice. Instead, most of them were interested in engineering — aeronautical, chemical, mechanical and otherwise — and in becoming lawyers or doctors.

MAN CONFESSES TO SLAYING OF NEW YORK GIRL

MT. VERNON, N. Y. Oct. 15 — Lawrence Stone, 24, today signed a confession that he killed 5-year-old Jean Costigan, in the basement of a fashionable apartment house and stuffed her body into the white hot fire box of the furnace.

The child's body was found today. It had been reduced to charred bones and would have been consumed in five minutes.

After 9 hours of questioning, Stone confessed he had put the body in the furnace, believing her dead.

They had been playing with her rubber ball. He threw it, it struck her head. He said she dropped heavily, hitting her head on the concrete floor. Panic stricken, he said he carried the body around several minutes before the thought.

AUSTIN, Oct. 15 — The Texas centennial hung in the balance today as legislators raised the question if it should not be postponed.

In the senate the proposal to limit the time was denounced by senate advocates as an indirect attempt to delay legislation till the Allied administration begins.

The house heard a direct proposal to postpone the centennial until a more proper time. The proposal of a resolution, was refused by the state affairs committee without date.

The house cut short a proposal to limit the time by tabling an adjournment resolution. The senate also voted down a proposal to adjourn October 25.

A bill, calling for an appropriation of $8,972,174 for the centennial celebration was offered by George Purcell, Dallas.

In the house the Brazos river bill was found to be the only one reported out by a committee. It could not be taken up because it had not laid on the members' desk long enough so they recessed with only a half an hour session until Tuesday.

FAMILY WAITS AS 'ZERO HOUR' APPROACHES

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 15 — Hope for safety of Alice Stoll, society beauty, was revived today as the "zero hour" for word from her abductors approached.

George Stoll, brother of the 30-year-old husband of the kidnaped woman appeared more hopeful when he talked with reporters today than at any time since the young wife was taken from a sick bed last Wednesday and carried away.

He spoke eagerly of the approaching "zero hour" which will be at 4:30 p. m. today. At that time the five-day period mentioned in the ransom note will have elapsed.

Harold Nathan, in charge of the force of federal officers, searching the Kentucky hills, spoke of "when she is returned."

The restored of the Stoll family and authorities contrasted with their despair yesterday gave rise to reports that a new contact had been established with the kidnapers. There were no statements to support this conclusion, however.

The original ransom note, a typed message left behind in the home late Wednesday said the kidnapers would contact the family within five days.

Those receiving the additional loans will be required to show the yellow form, CSD, signed by Oscar Johnson, which they hold, before the loans can be made it was announced.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When DAN BRECKEN, junior publisher of The Blade, learned that CHARLES MORDEN, police reporter, had been mysteriously killed, he determined to employ STONEY GRIFF, famous criminalist, to solve the murder.

Morden had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent who had threatened to sue The Blade for a story which had been written by the man arrested, giving the name of Cathay and accompanying him to a girl named MARY BRIGGS, who was an impostor. MRS. CATHAY accuses Brecker her husband will drop the charges if The Blade publishes a retraction, and this is done.

CHAPTER X

BRECKER looked across at Griff. "Well," he said, "you've got quite a reputation for getting results. I'm not going to worry about methods; those are up to you. What you want to do is to try to find Mary Briggs—which we're already doing—and on the disappearance story involving some woman who has disappeared within the last 48 hours."

"Correct," said Griff. "The first thing to do is to locate the girl. And in the meantime I will see the doctor in Riverside who thinks it's a poison case and will also interview Mrs. Cathay."

Brecker showed some surprise. "I thought you wanted us to make all the contacts," he said.

"No," Griff told him. "I want you to get the facts. I'm a criminal biologist, not a detective. I don't scout and gather facts but I want to contact the principals. I want to watch them talk."

Brecker smiled and said, "You mean listen to them talk?"

"No," Griff replied. "I want to watch them talk. I've found out you can learn more about a person's character by watching his lips when he talks than in any other way."

Brecker looked thoughtful, slowly nodded his head.

Griff scribbled a number on a sheet of paper which he tore from his notebook. "That," he said, "is the private, unlisted telephone number which is assigned to you for the life of this case. Give that number only to the men who are in your closest confidence. Don't ever try to call me on any other telephone. When this case is over that number will be changed."

Brecker folded the paper thoughtfully.

"There's something I'd like to ask you about."

"What is it?"

"Around 10 o'clock on Monday night—the night our newspaper pulled its story by mistake—the impostor for Cathay—a detective by the name of Shillibeg was murdered. A man by the name of Decker was apparently the only eyewitness to the murder. He told his story to the police officer who first appeared on the scene and promised that he would be available whenever he was needed as a witness. There was a lot of confusion. Decker took advantage of it and disappeared. Later on you telephoned the police that Decker had come to you."

Mary Briggs, "mystery girl," wanted for questioning concerning the death of Charles Morden.

GRIFF watched the newspaper man with frowning concentration. "What about it?" he asked. "How does that affect this case?"

"It doesn't," Brecker said. "I'm representing a newspaper. Decker came to you. That was an unusual thing for a witness to do. He told you something that he didn't tell the police. As a newspaper man, I'm interested."

"And," Griff said, "you're using this other case as a lever to pry my lips open, and make me disclose a professional confidence. Is that right?"

"No. Badly as I want the news, I wouldn't do that. But remember that The Blade is employing you. It's Blade money that is going to pay you. We make our money from distributing news. Sooner or later the facts about Decker are going to come to light. You'll know what time will be. When that time does come I want The Blade to have the first chance at the story. I want it on the inside track."

"Suppose," said Griff slowly, "it should appear that Decker was unnecessarily alarmed? Suppose that he doesn't know a thing other than what he told the police? Suppose he came to me in a state of fear which bordered on hysteria? Suppose, further, that there was no reason why Decker shouldn't have vanished for a while? He had no business matters which necessitated his presence here. Suppose I put Decker under cover, not because I thought it was necessary but simply because he was nervous, because that was what he wanted and because he was willing to pay for my services in covering him up?"

"Would you?" asked Brecker. "Say that those were the facts?"

"No. I wouldn't make any such statement. I am simply asking you what your position would be if it should turn out those were the facts."

"Then I'd appreciate it very much if you'd let The Blade discover Decker when it's time for him to put in his appearance."

Griff dropped his legs to the floor, pushed his tall frame up from the chair, stood six feet of lean, hard efficiency. The bathroom door opened and he strode to the door and placed his hand on the knob.

"Perhaps," he said in a tone of finality which left no doubt that the interview was over, "that might be arranged."

He bowed and held open the door.

DR. P. C. COOPER was fat, cherubic, steady-eyed and thoughtful. He surveyed his visitor appreciatingly, studied Griff's card.

"Criminologist," he said, musically.

Griff nodded.

"You're investigating some particular case?" Cooper asked.

While attending Cisco High School, Frank became imbued with the love for journalism, editing the school paper. Later, during his vacations, he worked on the editorial staff of the News, and was staff reporter for the Waco News-Tribune and Times-Herald while attending Baylor University. He was supply teacher in the public schools here two years ago and last year was elected as regular teacher in the grammar school, from which place he has resigned to accept the editorship of the Daily News.

Leonard L. Hudson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., comes to the advertising department highly recommended as a young man of sterling character and one who is expected to enter into the community life of Cisco and become of much value to local business men in their efforts to tell their customers of merchandising values in Cisco.

June Kimble, of Eastland, is the new shop foreman and job man. Mr. Kimble has had many years of experience and is considered an unusually skilled workman.

Monta Laughlin, of Comanche, Texas, is the Intertype operator. Monta grew up in Cisco and worked for the Daily News some ten years ago. He will renew friendships with many old Ciscoans of that period.

Miss Laura Rufe is acting society editor. Miss Laura is well known and will greatly appreciate any courtesies from her friends.

Boost the Drive To Dress the Band

The efforts of the group of men who have launched a campaign to suit-out the Lobo Band should be commended and supported by every local citizen of Cisco.

The nondescript uniforms of our band on the field last Friday night during the Lobo-Brownwood game should be a reproach to all of us who have up until now neglected one of our greatest and best loved assets.

Bandmaster, G. W. Collum, is one of these good, patient souls, who will labor on uncomplainingly, trying to make the best of what he is given to work with, and so has spent hours and days of bitter anguish over our seeming neglect, yet never letting up on his work to give us the best high school band in West Texas, and doing it year after year.

It is said that virtue has its reward, and all things come usually the result of waiting, but rather come to him who waits, although modern achievements are not goes out after it and does it fiercely, yet in the case of Collum's band it seems that it's finally going to come. Yes, it will come, for the type of men who have formed themselves as a committee to properly clothe this band are not the kind of men who set themselves a task for the good of their community and then quit until the thing is done.

Business concerns will be seen first and will be asked to donate the amount necessary to properly suit out one band member. When this committee comes to you, respond and do it gladly. Don't ask them to come back for, remember, they are busy men just the same as you. They are neglecting their business to collect the money that every patriotic citizen should be glad to donate and we are sure they will do so.

We want our football team to win games. Can you imagine a game being won without the band? Do you want your boys and girls parading up and down the field with all colors of sweaters, pants, skirts and shirts, while the other side has a band, dressed and uniformed in a successful way? Of course you don't. Then let's dress them like they were our own, for they are our children and our neighbor's children. Think of the thrill you'll get when they march on the field of Breckenridge with our new uniforms looking so swell and playing as only our band can play, before all the thousands of fans that Breckenridge has invited to their big home-coming event, set for that day!

There'll be lots of those old timers that won't be for Breckenridge. They'll be old Lobo fans who'll yell themselves hoarse for the Black and Gold. We'll be proud of our football team that day, whether they win or lose, because we'll know that they will acquire themselves according to the traditions of the Lobos. They never lay down on the field nor do they lay down on their coach or fans. And you wouldn't want our band to come out dressed as they were Friday night. Don't blame the band. They are to be highly commended for playing 'at all—all honor to them! But let's not neglect them any longer. Make yourself happy and make it pleasant for the committee when they come by saying: "I know what you came for. Here is your money. Now, go on to the next man."

AN EX-PRESIDENT OF THE BAND SPEAKS

The manager of the Daily News has just received the following:

"Dear Mr. Laroque: As ex-president of the Lobo Band, I want to ask you to use all of your influence in the Lions Club and as manager of the Daily News toward getting the Lobo Band into new uniforms."

"Sincerely
Melvin Lawson, Stephenville, Texas"

LETTERS FROM READERS

In the issue of your paper of October 12th I have noted the article wherein Superintendent of Cisco Schools R. N. Cluck takes exception to what he termed our unnecessary delay in the forwarding to our Austin Headquarters the applications for the teaching places in the FERA school at Cisco, and with a resultant criticism.

The article failed to mention considerable delay was met up with by Superintendent Cluck delivering to this office the applications, of which sixty-five per cent were in completely made up and which should have been passed upon and approved by Superintendent Cluck before delivery to this office. While in my office Superintendent Cluck verbally placed his approval upon these papers, but upon this office passing upon the applications, the majority were found to be incomplete to the point that were we to forward such papers to Austin for approval they would be returned for proper handling. Accordingly, Superintendent Cluck was immediately notified of this fact and was handed the applications for further handling.

It is necessary for our Case Work Supervisor, Mr. Hunter George, to pass upon all teacher applications with final approval made by the Administrator and in line with our rules and regulations it is not our policy and never has been to approve anything where a return for correction or disapproval would engender further delay.

We welcome constructive criticism as we deplore unwarranted criticism and it would be greatly appreciated if, through your Press, you would acquaint your citizenship with the fact this is but a brief outline of the other side of the matter, unmentioned in the article.

Yours very truly,
H. E. Driscoll,
County Administrator

FOLLOW LETTER FROM READER

Following is the article to which the county administrator refers:

A telephone call to the county relief office at Eastland today revealed that applications for the teaching places in the FERA adult school to be organized here, filed two weeks ago, were being forwarded to Austin this morning. It was announced by Supt. R. N. Cluck.

Delay of the relief administration in acting upon these applications had caused much criticism, Mr. Cluck said. He said however, that assurance has been received that the matter will be attended to without further delay.

Mr. Cluck said he regretted the delay very much, particularly since the applicants for places in the school are in need of the employment. "I consider the delay very unnecessary," he said.

DONATE SNAKES

ET. CLAIREVILLE, O., Oct. 15 — Highway department engineers here have decided they don't want to be here petologists. They brought several copperhead snake eggs into the county sheriff's office after killing the parent snake. Deputy Sheriff B. P. Mackey cut open one egg with his penknife. A young snake appeared and struck at him.

As the others hatched, the shells and snakes were both preserved and turned over to a Martins Ferry, O., high school biology class.

HIT HEALTH DICTA

CLEVELAND, Oct. 15 — Wed 60 years, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Burtcher, respectively 85 and 79, scoff at the idea that caffeine is harmful to the aging, so they celebrated their sixtieth anniversary by a steaming pot of hot coffee clinking a special dinner. Burtcher, who lights in exploding health theories, started smoking when he was 13.

Did You Ever Stop To Think

By Edson R. Waite
Shawnee, Oklahoma

Morley Stuart, editor of the Cambridge (England) Daily News, in a talk given before the Cambridge public club said:

"There have been some people who thought that it might be possible to produce a paper without advertisements, but they could have given little thought to the enormous expense that attached to the production of a modern journal. Many years ago a former editor of The Spectator wrote some articles in favour of newspapers without advertisements, but they were not taken seriously by those who understood the position. Lord Northcliffe described them as 'propheters' and asked three pertinent questions: 'Where are the printers' wages to come from?'

'Who is to pay the wholesale and retail distributors?'

'What about the price of paper?'

"Referring to the history of newspaper advertising, what is believed to be the first advertisement appeared in 1649. It began:

Reader, thou art entreated to endure after a blackish and kind of piteous nag — and ended:

"Whoever will enquire find him out and make stay of him and bring out and tidings of him shall have what content they will, or can desire for their pains."

Advertising had not been without its humor, but it was distressing to read that what appeared to be romantic effusions in the Agency Column were often thieves' communications in the unweaving of which Scotland Yard was said to be particularly cunning.

There can be no question that a very great improvement has taken place in the layout of advertisements. It is only of recent years that the real value of newspaper advertising has been properly appreciated and I, for one, am glad that the provincial Press is coming into its own. The near future will I believe, see big developments."

LUTHERANS SEEK CLOSER FELLOWSHIP

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 15 — Steps toward closer fellowship and more unified action are expected to be taken at the ninth biennial convention of the United Lutheran church here Oct. 17.

This matter is expected to attract the major attention of approximately 600 delegates, representing 1,000,000 members of the church in the United States, who will attend the sessions.

Closer Co-Operation

Closer co-operation between the church's various units will be urged in a series of memorials coming to the convention from its constituent synods. Action taken on similar memorials by the American Lutheran Church, convening at Warren, Ia., a week before the Savannah convention, is expected to bear considerable weight in the discussions.

Most of the memorials expound the theory that the economic war through duplication of effort in many phases of the church's work is inefficient and impractical in the face of present conditions.

Southern Lutherans Favorable

Rev. C. A. Linn, Savannah, president of the Georgia-Alabama Synod, represents Lutherans in the territory as favorable to any reasonable action leading to closer relationship between the general Lutheran bodies in the United States.

He expressed the hope that definite steps toward this end will be taken at the Savannah convention.

Another important feature of the convention will be a report of the committee on moral and social welfare recommending action in steps to improve motion pictures and instructing church members to help the movement "toward a better moral control of this modern industry."

Science Reveals Why Eyesight Fades As Birthdays Increase

Of all men and women past 40 years of age, 85% have defective eyesight. Such is the penalty that man pays for his compromise with nature. Neglected eyes may be repaired, but damaged eyesight at last can be only partially restored. Good light and properly fixed eyeglasses are a great boon to old people. Since the pupils of their eyes are only one-third as large as those of young people, they need at least three times as much light in order to have an even vision in seeing.

The average child is born with normal sight. All too soon, however, it begins to use its eyes for close work, such as looking at pictures or playing with toys, often under poor lighting. Eyestrain and visual defects are quick to result. No child should be permitted to use his eyes for close work under any but the best of visual conditions. Abundant, glare-free light should always be provided, and the child's eyes examined frequently by a competent specialist.

Thousands of young men and women in schools and colleges throughout the country are needlessly wearing out their eyes long before their time by reading and studying for long hours under poor distant objects, under large amounts of natural daylight. When a defective eye, the student is unnecessarily imposing a serious defect. Statistics show that one out of every five children in grammar school has defective vision.

COWBOYS FACE BAYLOR BEARS NEXT SATURDAY

WACO, Oct. 15.—West Texas football fans will have the opportunity to see a Southwestern conference football team in action October 20 when the Baylor university Bears journey to Abilene to clash with the Hardin-Simmons Cowboys. This will mark the first encounter of the two teams at Abilene, although they have played a series of games on Carroll Field, home of the Bears. This week-end the Bruins are meeting the University of Arkansas Razorbacks in a conference battle in Little Rock.

Last year the Baylor aggregation was famed chiefly for its defensive play. Every opposing team had extreme difficulty in denting that "good old Baylor line." The running game not being up to par, the Bruins depended entirely on a passing attack for offensive power. Here the steady right arm of Joe Jack Pearce proved itself the finest in the conference.

This year Pearce is again on hand to rifle the pigskin to capable receivers, and in addition, two fine sophomore backs have come up from the Cub squad of last year to form the nucleus of a dangerous running attack. Lloyd Russell and Hal Finley are two of the fastest and most elusive backs Baylor has had in years. This trio Pearce, Russell, and Finley, will show West Texas a dazzling combination of end-runs, off-tackle cutbacks, and bewildering passes that is due to give the Cowboys a very busy afternoon. The line play this year is better offensively, but not so strong defensively as last year's forward wall displayed.

ENDED GHOST SCARE

AUBURN, Mo., Oct. 15.—No more will spectral wraiths flit among Auburn tombstones on dark nights. No more will eerie walls pierce the night from the direction of the "haunted" house. No more will bloody footprints send shudders up Auburn spines. Auburn's ghost scare came to an abrupt end when one of the ghosts pointed out the speckles and found they were six small boys with a bent for supernatural mischief. Nearby were six sheets and a bucket of blood from an abettor.

THE NEW FANGLES (MOM 'N POP) By Cowan

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Oct. 15.—In view of the success of public utilities through the years in preventing the state from regulating their rates, an illuminating item has found its way into print at San Angelo. The city of a million-dollar received assurance of a million-dollar public works loan and grant for erecting a municipal light and power plant, subject to conditions it can meet. A citizens' committee recommended that the West Texas Utilities company reduce rates in the city 25 per cent as a compromise, in lieu of the city's erection of its own plant.

If the people of San Angelo have been entitled to a 25 per cent rate reduction they were entitled to it whether or not the federal government was willing to give $250,000 and $875,000 for erection of a municipal plant.

Submission of the subject of making an appropriation to the Texas Centennial will be impractical as having opened also the question of finding the money to be appropriated of opening up taxation to cover revenues applied to the Centennial.

A double-barrel tax proposition will be advanced by some of the house members arriving early in Austin. Either levy an additional one-cent gasoline tax for a short time, or else divert part of the present gasoline tax for a two-year period with a provision for repayment to the highway fund.

Officials of the Texas good roads association, agency dedicated to keeping the highway fund intact, said it will fight either or both branches of this tax plan.

In order mutually to use two present systems of paved roads, the people of the San Antonio-Austin section, and the people of the Abilene-San Angelo section owe it to themselves and to the state to get together and organize a drive sufficient to cause the completion of one of the worst unpaved gaps in the state—that between Mason and Eden. There are two graded, unpaved highways, one by Melvin, one by Menard. Both are from one to six miles deep in powdered alkali, with hidden chug-holes and precarious dips. In case of a little rain, the Menard route would be impassable because of running water.

Conj. J. P. Buchanan, who gave Texas $24,000,000 unmatched federal road construction money in 1933 and $12,000,000 in 1934, recently rode over these unfinished gaps. He protested that much of the value of the fairly good highways of the Austin-Fredericksburg section, and of the magnificent paving from Eden to San Angelo and Abilene—connecting with the east-west highway system—was destroyed by the lack of any satisfactory road between the two.

Rep. Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo has taken an extremely active part in opposing the Colorado river authority bill, designed to regain for the state rights now held by utility companies, in waters of the Colorado river. Many people have assured him that his section could more readily look to the state for a square deal on water, with the perme in its hands than to some utility company, converted with the necessity of earning profits.

But whatever his attitude on this measure, Metcalfe is a house member who votes his convictions, who sticks to what he believes is right, who is willing to work hard on public matters, who considers his duty as a lawmaker is not wholly to one county or section, but to the entire state. He is a man of consistency, fearless and unyielding in his position on any matter, and one whose

One Growing Town Near Hidalgo Field

MISSION, Oct. 15.—Of three towns started within a short distance of Hidalgo county's new oil strike 20 miles west of here, Sullivan city, a privately-owned property is the only one to show signs of activity.

The site is located on state highway 4, a short distance north of the discovery well, the Otto Wood No. 1 John M. Lawrence. The town is being built near Sullivan's ranch store, opened several years ago by Ed W. Sullivan.

Ten modern cottages for persons whose business keeps them at the oil field, are nearing completion. Construction has been started on a one-story frame building to be used as an emergency hospital. A two-story frame building has been planned, to be used as a lumber company office and a public lounge.

An oil field supply company will open a yard within a few days. Water for the town is supplied by two wells owned by Sullivan.

NORRIS LOOKS FOR PROGRESS IN NEW DEAL

McCook, Neb., Oct. 15.—Neb. rask's pioneer liberal, Sen. George W. Norris, who has seen the "New Deal" outstrip most of his early liberal views, believes the United States constitution does not constitute a "stop-light" to national progress.

A new era in government is on the way and there is no place to stop to look conditions over before taking further progressive steps, according to the senatorial veteran.

New Human Values
The new era will see the recognition of human values in harmony with political and religious theory as the result of changes in social, economic and political thought.

The current fight in which we are engaged, Norris said, is for the preservation of our civilization.

"That civilization is better today than it was 100 years ago because men going before us did not fear progress," Norris said.

Civilization Endangered
"It would take only about one more depression to kill our civilization," Norris said. "If we are as wise as I think we are, we will recognize we cannot permanently exist with an army of 13,000,000 unemployed. We will devise, through legislation, a means to prevent the return of depressions which the older school of economists tell us are natural."

"To do so will require that we set aside some of our cherished ideals which have outlived their usefulness. What we need is humanity in our statutes. If we learn to practice humanity in government; recognize that we are, after all, our brother's keeper and that the sole object of government is the happiness of the people, there will be no difference between politics and religion."

Gang Chief Loses Fight For Freedom

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 15.—Al Capone today lost probably his last plea for liberty from the federal penitentiary where he is serving 10 years of the 11 years of sentence imposed in Chicago for failing to pay his income tax.

The supreme court, to which the premier of Chicago gangdom carried his fight for relief, turned a deaf ear to his habeas corpus fight which was begun while he was at Atlanta which he lost in two lower courts.

Striking Miners Threaten Suicide

FUNKIRCHEN, Hungary, Oct. 15.—Twelve hundred hungry striking on bent mass suicide held themselves in the depth of the Uez mine today while their women pleaded with officials to allow them to enter the mine and die with them.

Soldiers with bayonets and machine guns held wives, mothers, daughters, and sweethearts of the miners.

The miners, demanding higher wages, threatened to cut off the ventilating fan and asphyxiate themselves, or to stop the pumps and drown.

River Rectification Survey Is Started

EL PASO, Oct. 15.—Mexican engineers have begun a survey of the proposed river rectification program on the lower Colorado, the international boundary commission announced.

The American section will begin a survey soon to determine the effect of Boulder dam on the lower river flow. The surveys are expected to be made the basis of a U. S. Mexico treaty on water rights.

The rectification program is planned to prevent the formation of another Salton Sea in California.

CUTS FUEL COSTS

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—A survey made by the Dominion fuel board of Canada shows that if all the residential buildings in Canada were insulated there would be an annual reduction in domestic fuel costs of $30,000,000.
