Student's body among 12 in cult's mass grave

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A satanic cult of drug smugglers who sacrificed and apparently cannibalized humans slaughtered 12 people, including a U.S. college student on spring break, authorities say.

Five people were arrested in connection with the killings and on drug charges by Mexican Federal Judicial Police, which found the dozen bodies in graves at a ranch just south of the U.S. border.

"It was horrible," Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez told a news conference Tuesday in the Texas border city of Brownsville. "It was like a human slaughterhouse."

The suspects were U.S. and Mexican citizens, said Sheriff's Lt. George Gavito, who did not identify them further.

The dead included 21-year-old University of Texas student Mark Kilroy, who vanished last month in Matamoros, Gavito said.

Kilroy apparently was chosen at random by drug smugglers who had hoped human sacrifices would protect them from harm, Gavito said.

Kilroy was grabbed after the cult members "were told to pick one Anglo male that particular night," Gavito said.

The cult had been involved in human sacrifices for about nine months, he said, and prayed to the devil "so the police would not arrest them, so bullets would not kill them and so they could make more money."

Authorities found candles and kettles full of body parts and animal bones, said Oran Neck, chief U.S. Customs agent in Brownsville.

Also found were bowls and a caldron from which brains, hearts and other organs of victims were eaten, Perez said.

"They were cooking body parts in a big pot there on that ranch," said Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Felipe Flores, spokesman for the Mexican attorney general's office, said he knew nothing about reports of cannibalism. But he added that during the ritual killings, victims' brains were cut out and put on a fire, mixed with blood, herbs, rooster's feet, goat's heads and turtles.

Authorities would not identify the other victims, but said all were males.

Some victims were shot in the head, and others appeared to have been slain with machetes or sledgehammers, Neck said.

The bodies were found Tuesday morning in a field about 20 miles west of Matamoros, Gavito said.

Rick Strange, an attorney representing Midland Independent School District, presents his case against fired warehouse worker David Marin at a Tuesday school board hearing.

School board upholds termination of eight-year warehouse worker

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Despite a unanimous Midland school board decision Tuesday to uphold his termination, former warehouse worker David Marin vowed Tuesday to continue the fight to get his job back.

Trustees said that although Marin, an eight-year Midland Independent School District employee, may have been surrounded by questionable circumstances at the warehouse, he continued to violate MISD rules even after he was warned.

Marin and two Texas State Teachers Association representatives, who spoke on his behalf, contended that the firing stemmed from him "knowing too much" about alleged illegal activities at the warehouse, such as gambling and theft.

Ed Roderick, a TSTA representative from Lubbock, said Marin took part in some of the activities only because he feared for his job, which became endangered when he began questioning the activities.

Trustees, however, questioned why Marin became involved in the improprieties, why he didn't report them and why he said nothing to other school officials and the media until after his termination.

"Two wrongs don't make a right," trustee Jim Builta said. "I thought that he was wrong with what he did.

"He had an opportunity to right that wrong and he didn't. He should be responsible for his own actions."

Marin said he was intimidated, harassed and lived in fear of losing his job if he ever spoke up.

"Who was I to tell?" he said. "If I did say something, I would have had to mop the warehouse all day long.

"I didn't want this to go far. I just wanted to settle it and that's it."

After Marin's firing in December, school officials also terminated Greg Bulger, supervisor of warehouse services, and warehouse foreman Robert Prado in February.

Rick Strange, a Cotton, Bledsoe law firm attorney presenting the district's case to trustees, said MISD had sufficient grounds to fire Marin without considering admitted illegal activities.

Strange said Marin admitted to stopping without permission, excessive tardiness and insubordination to his supervisors.

On two occasions, while on district business, Marin made personal stops without permission, Strange said.

"The school district has a simple rule," he said. "If you don't get approval, you don't stop. He should have called on the radio or telephone."

Roderick, however, said the stops, one of which was made because a friend frantically flagged him down in the street, never lasted more than a few minutes. Marin also had no radio in his car to call in, he added.

Strange also pointed out 72 incidents in the last 11½ months of employment when Marin's time card showed him being late for work.

Roderick countered that the total time missed for tardiness amounted to only 1½ hours, while supervisors were sometimes that late on single days.

MISD denies detachment of 560 acres

By BRIAN PEARSON

Greenwood resident Frank Pannell said he knew his request to have his land detached from Midland schools would go down in a raging ball of flames Tuesday before school board members.

Before trustees unanimously met his expectations, Pannell, who wanted his 560 acres of property to become part of Greenwood Independent School District, even made light of what he stood against in having his wishes granted.

"I'm ready for my fair trial and I'm ready for you to hang me," the colorful Pannell quipped, prompting the trustees and the audience to burst out laughing.

Pannell, who has no children attending school in either district, said no one will buy his land because the children would attend schools in Midland Independent School District rather than GISD, southeast of the city and about 10 miles closer to his residence. He said has been trying to sell the property for the past two years.

Superintendent Joe Baressi said allowing the detachment would mean a loss of about $1.3 million in taxable property.

"I realize it's a heck of a tax base loss, but I have two businesses in town I could easily move to Greenwood," Pannell said, adding that he wouldn't do it despite what the board decided. "I pay more than my share of taxes in Midland. I'm willing to pay higher taxes in Greenwood."

GISD taxpayers fork out $1.61 per $100 valuation, while those in MISD pay 90 cents.

But Pannell's lack of children became his downfall before the board as Rick Strange, a Cotton, Bledsoe law firm attorney representing MISD, pointed out that a 1975 Texas Attorney General's Office ruling states that a majority of trustees must sign the petition before it can be approved.

"You have no power to even consider it," Strange explained to trustees, who voted down the petition about a minute later.

"I see I've been outfinessed here," Pannell responded.

After saying he would be willing to move a family into a rent-free home on the property, Pannell met another possible stumbling block.

Rescue recreated at historic studio

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a three-part series on the filming of "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure." From a backyard in Southern California and a Hollywood sound stage to Midland locations, moviemakers are striving for accuracy in the heroic tale that needed no dramatic embellishment.

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant City Editor

CULVER CITY, Calif. — First it was "Gone With the Wind."

Then "Citizen Kane."

Now, "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure."

What do they have in common? The Culver City, Calif., studios on the corner of Washington Boulevard and Ince Street.

Monday and Tuesday, on sound stage No. 14, camera crews, technicians and dirt-smudged actors struggled to re-enact the efforts inside the rescue tunnel and the water well which imprisoned the 18-month-old Midland toddler for a tense 58½ hours in October 1987.

The studio shots were filmed on the same lot that was Selznick International Studios when Atlanta was burned for the southern classic starring Clark Gable and Vivian Leigh.

In 1941, when Orson Welles created the classic life and times of Charles Foster Kane, the studio was called RKO.

Today, the compound known as Culver Studios is owned by GTG Entertainment — a venture of Grant Tinker and Gannett Communications — and is a "boutique studio," a relatively small facility available for rent to production companies like Interscope Productions.

In the row of small, free-standing dressing cabins along two walls of the cavernous studio, rescuers in their dust-covered work clothes and replica police uniforms dozed and read awaiting their turn inside the cramped tube that serves as the movie tunnel.

Elsewhere in the studio compound, where movies have been staged for 70 years, Gannett's USA Today television show and the CBS teen drama series, TV 101, were also being shot.

Only two days of more than three weeks of California shooting of the Jessica movie was restricted to the studio, the other filming was done in a backyard of a suburban Bellflower home that was eerily similar to the house on Tanner Drive where the original drama unfolded, according to reporter-turned-actor Rodney Wunsch, who worked for KMID-TV at the time of the rescue. Trampled grass and flower beds were the order of the day at both locations.

"The neighborhood was similar, the yard was similar ... there was a 'Live 2' (KMID) truck there. When they brought the green rathole rig onto the set, I kept waiting for (the Twilight Zone's) Rod Serling's voice," Wunsch recalled Monday at a press conference for the Southern California media.

Change of venue granted in assault case

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The case of a Midland man accused of assaulting a police detective will be tried in another West Texas city, a judge ruled Tuesday after attorneys in both sides agreed to the move.

Judge Pat Baskin of 142nd State District Court also ruled that he would preside over the trial of Howard Lee Mitchell, 52, when a site acceptable to all parties is selected. Among the cities mentioned during Tuesday's hearing were Lubbock, Abilene and San Angelo. Mitchell is accused of aggravated assault of a peace officer.

"Both sides felt like the case received enough publicity that it would be better conducted in a neutral city," District Attorney Al Schorre said. "When there is an incident that draws a lot of public attention and press exposure it can become difficult."

Tom Morgan, Mitchell's defense attorney who filed a motion with Baskin on March 31 to move the trial, said he was "very pleased" the motion was granted.

Morgan said the "mass of adverse pre-trial publicity" made moving the trial necessary. The case is expected to take about a week.

The attorney had "no comment" when asked where he would like the trial moved. Schorre said the attorneys and Baskin would have to meet and agree on a site.

Mitchell was wounded Aug. 5, 1988 by Detective Brian Bogart, 32, in the parking lot of the Bojangles Club, 3709 W. Wall Ave. After Bogart arrested a man outside the club for public intoxication, the officer spotted Mitchell in a pickup truck with a revolver on his lap, according to police.

When Mitchell "displayed" the gun but refused to drop if after several warnings, Bogart fired twice from a nine-millimeter pistol. Mitchell's weapon, a six-shot .38-caliber revolver, was fully loaded but not fired in the incident, according to police.

Mitchell was hospitalized for several days in serious condition and "nearly died," according to his attorney. He attended Tuesday's hearing and appeared healthy.

A Midland grand jury found Mitchell threatened Bogart with the pistol, and found that he knew he was a police officer. He was indicted August 10, 1988.

Police Chief Richard Czech said he had "no problem" with Schorre agreeing with the venue change.

Heritage Ministries making interim move to North Carolina

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The "promised land" for Heritage Ministries lies not at the Christian retreat formerly controlled by television evangelist Jim Bakker but for now across the border in North Carolina, its president said.

The ministry will relocate to Charlotte, N.C., but ultimately plans to settle in South Carolina, Sam Johnson announced Tuesday at a news conference at the Heritage USA television studios.

The ministry has made down payments on two tracts of land in North and South Carolina totaling more than 100 acres and worth nearly $5 million, Johnson said.

Heritage Ministries is the non-profit television ministry spun off from the bankruptcy reorganization of the PTL ministry in August.

The ministry and the separate Heritage Church, of which Johnson is pastor, are based in Fort Mill at Heritage USA, the 2,200-acre retreat Bakker once controlled.

"Amusement is a wonderful thing," Johnson said. "A family park is a wonderful thing. Mr. Bakker had a wonderful dream but it went awry through mismanagement and misappropriations and for that we have all paid and are paying dearly."

Heritage Ministries offered to purchase some of the properties it leases for $80,000 a month from the former PTL corporation, such as the television studio, following bankruptcy proceedings.

But Stephen Mernick, the Toronto businessman who bought PTL's assets for $65 million in December, was unreceptive, Johnson said.

Johnson said he informed Mernick of the ministry's plans to move on Monday.

The ministry will leave Heritage USA by July 1 for a nearly 20-acre site of three lots in south Charlotte, Johnson said.

A church on the site will serve as the home for the Heritage Church, which has about 600 adult members, and as the studio for the television ministry, Johnson said.

The ministry also has made a $10,000 deposit on 88 acres of undeveloped land in South Carolina's York County worth $2.5 million.

Johnson said the ministry also has an option to purchase an additional 25 acres at the site.

The two sites are within miles of the ministry's current headquarters.

The ministry's "more permanent home" will be in York County, where Fort Mill is located, but it has not set a timetable for development of the site, Johnson said.

The most important concern for the ministry, Johnson said, is raising the money to finance the resettlement.

One likely source is $5.5 million donated by Heritage Ministries supporters when the ministry was considering bidding on PTL before Mernick's purchase. The ministry plans a campaign this weekend to reach those contributors.

"We believe that most of the money, if not all of it ... will be released to help us relocate and cross the river Jordan and enter the promised land," Johnson said.

More contributions could come in from supporters who have waited for the ministry to announce its plans, Johnson said.

PTL filed for bankruptcy in June 1987, three months after Bakker resigned amid revelations that he had a sexual relationship with church secretary Jessica Hahn and later arranged payments of ministry money to buy her silence.

Mernick began joint operation of Heritage USA, which includes a hotel and theme park, with bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton on Feb. 13, but has yet to close on the sale.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Chance for rain in area forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mostly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of rain is in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 40s and winds will be out of the southeast at 10-20 mph.

Skies will continue to be mostly cloudy and the chance of rain or thundershowers is expected to increase to 40 percent on Thursday. The high will be in the middle 60s and winds will be out of the southeast at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 67 was 28 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 95 set for that date in 1972. The overnight low of 44 was 14 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 30 set for this date in 1957.

Small town shocked by young man's death

SANTA FE (AP) — Hope turned to horror in a small Texas town where residents had been raising money to help a family find their missing 21-year-old son.

Kilroy

The discovery of the body of Mark Kilroy, with at least 11 others slain in apparent satanic rituals on a ranch in Mexico, quickly spread through the town about 30 miles south of Houston. Kilroy disappeared a month ago.

"It's like a nightmare," said Mary Delahouseey, a close friend of Kilroy's mother, Helen. "I really can't believe it. Helen and I said it over and over that we just want to wake up and not believe that it's true."

Doris Williams, a clerk at a convenience store, said: "Even though it had been almost a month, everyone was really hoping he'd still be alive. Everybody's heart is going out to that family."

Cheryl Gautier, who was dining Tuesday at the Busy Bee Cafe, said: "Most people felt that when they found him, he'd be dead. But I didn't want to discourage anyone from thinking otherwise. I thought he'd be dead, probably shot, but the manner in which he was killed is unreal."

Santa Fe residents have been donating their time and money to help Mrs. Kilroy and her husband, James, search for their son.

Last weekend, proceeds from a citywide garage sale and carwash went toward a fund set up for the Kilroys.

A yellow ribbon ceremony had been scheduled for today to draw attention to Kilroy's disappearance. The ceremony was being turned into a memorial service.

"This little town is real supportive. We're like a big family," Joe Nichols, state prison guard, said of the community of 5,400. "They may not know you, but they support you."

"It's nice to see Santa Fe help each other, to get money for his parents to go down there and try to find him. It's nice," said Victor LaPoint, a cashier at the Busy Bee Cafe.

Since Kilroy's disappearance during a spring break excursion, the family had distributed about 20,000 fliers in Brownsville and Matamoros as well as appealing to state lawmakers to help with the search.

Law officers on both sides of the border had been stumped by the disappearance, with no clues despite an intensive search, the questioning of nearly 100 people and a $15,000 reward.

Kilroy's disappearance also was re-enacted for a segment on the Fox television network's "America's Most Wanted" program.

The mother of Bill Huddleston, one of the students with Kilroy the night he vanished, took the Kilroys from their Santa Fe home to the airport Tuesday for the trip to Brownsville, near the Mexican town where the bodies were found.

"Helen (Kilroy) of course is very upset after finding out the news that it really was Mark down there," Gwen Huddleston said. "They went down there in hopes that it wouldn't be, but it didn't turn out that way."

"I've been an investigator 15 years and it's one of the worst things I've ever seen," he said.

Anthony Padilla, a photographer with The Brownsville Herald, said he saw Kilroy's body at a Matamoros funeral home. "There was nothing inside the skull," Padilla said.

In some forms of witchcraft, removal of the brain signifies a sacrifice of the victim's soul.

Padilla said Kilroy's legs were cut off at mid-calf and his spine was severed and twisted.

Kilroy, a premedical student, vanished from a crowded Matamoros street shortly after 2 a.m. on March 14 while on drinking with a group of friends in the city of 180,000 just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

The 3-foot-deep grave containing his body was found after federal police alerted U.S. officials early Tuesday they had obtained confessions from the suspects, officials said.

At least one of the suspects admitted involvement in Kilroy's death.

FILM

Project producer Diana Kerew explained that California was used as the backdrop for outdoor scenes because of the greater predictability of West Coast weather. "Because the entire production covers only 60 hours, we needed consistent weather.

"It was lucky we planned it that way. On the second day of principal photography, it was snowing in Midland," said Ms. Kerew, who has worked on projects ranging from the telefilm "The Bunker," and the miniseries "Chiefs," to the recent Valentine's Day telefilm "Babycakes," with Ricki Lake.

Ms. Kerew, co-executive producer John Kander II and a film crew were scheduled to arrive in Midland this morning for three days of shooting building exteriors at City Hall, Midland Memorial Hospital and other Tall City locales. The actual filming here is slated for Thursday.

One scene will involve many of the actual individuals who were at the rescue site as extras, Ms. Kerew said, declining to divulge the shooting location.

That will leave less than a month of post-production time to edit the final product for airing on ABC-TV on May 21.

On the set, actors killed time between shots by reading, resting and playing with the twins who portray Jessica — in the movie's early scenes, before the accident and when she is raised from the well by Whip Hubley, who portrays paramedic Robert O'Donnell in the film.

Scenes recreating Jessica's time in the well utilize a "prop baby" during shooting.

Others in the acting troupe helped out with equipment between shots, connecting the air hammers which provided vibration for the drilling scenes.

Away from the shooting, veteran actor Mills Watson (Dukes of Hazzard), who plays driller Charles Boler, and Hollywood newcomer Scott Fults, who plays his son Ribble Boler, swapped stories both in and out of character.

Fults recounted the day that as a messenger he went into the casting director's office to pick up a script for Roxana Zal's agent. "Ahm here to pick up a scrip`," he said in an exaggerated drawl. "I said it kinda as a joke."

"Where are you from?" the casting represenative asked. "I said, 'Houston,'" he recalled. "'Read this,' she said. And the next thing I knew, I had the job," Fults remembered.

Other major actors and actresses who landed parts in the film include Beau Bridges (Midland Police Chief Richard Czech), Patty Duke (Victim's Assistance Worker Carolyn Henry), Roxana Zal (Cissy McClure) and Will Oldham (Chip McClure).

Lighting, sound and film technicians swarmed all over an immense wooden scaffold which held a model of the rescue tunnel.

To the side of the crowd, Laura and Jenny Loesh played with balloons and met the toddler whose story they are helping dramatize, oblivious to the flurries of activity.

MISD

Strange said a third reason for Marin's termination involved insubordination to a Bulger, his supervisor. Roderick contended that the confrontation was sparked by the boss.

A fourth accusation include an alleged exchange between Marin and another co-worker.

Strange also pointed out that during Marin's appeal process through MISD officials, including Superintendent Joe Baressi, the former worker admitted to taking an athletic bag and asking about "his cut" regarding thefts by other workers, which allegedly included Lee High School football jerseys and school paper.

"He went to Mr. Prado and said, 'Where's my cut?'" Strange said. "He got angry when he didn't get his cut."

He also said Marin admitted to owing another worker $200 in gambling debts. Roderick said the debt was only $20, and Marin only took part in the gambling because it would have angered Bulger if he didn't. Roderick also said Bulger gave Marin the athletic bag.

Strange told trustees to focus on what Marin did, not what his co-workers did.

"There are several rabbit trails that are awful tempting to run down," Strange said. "I remind you that this is not a review of other employees. They have no factor in why he was rightfully terminated. Save those accusations for the proper time period."

The board's decision upheld a March 3 ruling by Baressi to deny Marin's appeal.

"I think we had sufficient grounds to fire him," Baressi said Tuesday, adding that the district plans to "clean up the mess" in the warehouse, located in northwest Midland.

Roderick said he and Kay Walling, Region 18 TSTA representative, would meet with Marin later this week and discuss where the case could go from here.

Results of a Texas Rangers investigation of the warehouse ongoings haven't been turned over yet to the Midland County District Attorney's Office, Capt. Gene Powell said this morning.

"I don't anticipate any indictments, but we're going to leave that up to the grand jury," Powell said.

He said the amount of reportedly stolen MISD equipment recovered during the Rangers' investigation was worth "very little" in terms of value.

Meanwhile, Marin hasn't found another job since his firing.

"I can't even get unemployment," he said. "The school district blocked it."

VENUE

"I think the district attorney makes those decisions based on the information he has," Czech said. "If he's got no trouble with it, I've got no trouble with it. We have a good solid case and our officer did exactly what he was supposed to do."

In his motion to move the trial, Morgan said publicity about the case has created "so great a prejudice against the defendant that the defendant cannot receive a fair trial by a fair and impartial jury ... due to extensive pre-trial publicity, especially from the Midland Reporter-Telegram, the defendant cannot receive a fair trail because such pre-trial publicity has been inflammatory, unfair and created such hostility toward the defendant."

Morgan has disputed the police version of events. He is expected to call an expert witness, former Department of Public Safety officer Jack Benton, at the trial. Benton is a firearms and forensic specialist, Morgan said.

Morgan declined to say if his client would testify at the trial.

Baressi told him any move of students between two school districts affecting racial balance in either district could face Texas Education Agency scrutiny.

After the decision, Pannell said he would look over his options and determine where he could take the case.

"I need to talk to some people in the area and see how far they're willing to go," Pannell said.

Randy Watson, also a GISD resident, said he still plans to go ahead with his hearing before the board despite Pannell's defeat. Watson, in a petition submitted at Tuesday's meeting, is asking that MISD detach his 50 acres of Greenwood property, where he is building a home for his wife and two children.

"My back fence line is the Greenwood school district," Watson pointed out.

Watson claimed that by the time his children have graduated from Midland High School in about 13 years, he would spend $12,000 on gasoline alone to transport them to school.

Trustees set a hearing for Watson's petition for April 25.

STATE IN BRIEF

Father may ask grand jury to investigate child's death

RICHMOND (AP) — The father of a 6-year-old Missouri City girl who was killed when she was struck by a school bus says he may ask for a grand jury investigation.

Trent Duncan, 35, made the remark Tuesday after Fort Bend District Attorney Sam Dick said he will not seek a grand jury indictment against the driver of a bus that ran over and killed Deidra Duncan on Feb. 27 because of the lack of evidence to bring criminal charges.

Duncan said Tuesday he is considering asking a grand jury to hear the case without the district attorney's involvement.

Police reports said the first-grader motioned for a waiting car to go ahead, but the driver motioned for her to cross. Before either moved, the bus driver, Bobbie Bonner, drove forward. The bus knocked the child down, then crushed her head with a back wheel.

Duncan said he is considering requesting an appearance before a grand jury.

"We don't want to bypass the grand jury. But if the potential exists that he (Dick) can sandbag the case before it even goes to a grand jury, then he can keep it from going to a full court," Duncan said.

Bush to address Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — President Bush will address a joint session of the Texas Legislature on April 26, Gov. Bill Clements announced Tuesday.

"We are honored and delighted that the president will speak before a joint session of the Legislature," Gov. Bill Clements said in a statement. "It is fitting that President Bush is coming home to speak to his friends in Texas.

A message from Bush that praised the city of Lubbock was distributed in the Legislature as lawmakers celebrated "Lubbock Day."

Bush's message to Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said of Lubbock, "This vibrant city has led the way in the economic development of the High Plains" and "enjoys a fine reputation far beyond the Lone Star State."

"Last month, I was pleased to hear that 'the people in Lubbock think things are going just great' with my administration," Bush said.

Montford said Bush uses Lubbock as "his barometer to see how things are going in the country."

Bill could ban ticket quota

AUSTIN (AP) — Setting of traffic ticket quotas for police officers would be prohibited under legislation tentatively approved by the Texas House.

On a non-record vote Tuesday, lawmakers approved the bill by Rep. Ron Lewis, D-Mauriceville, to prohibit any state agency, city or town from requiring policemen to issue a specific number of traffic citations.

The bill, supported by the Department of Public Safety and Texas State Troopers Association, also would prohibit the formal or informal use of a quota system in evaluations of officers, discipline, promotion or pay. Violators could be removed from their jobs.

Lewis said some communities receive 70 percent of their budgets from traffic fines and establish quotas to make certain revenues will meet expectations.

Woman's first videotaping captures crash

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sue Kocol's first try at videotaping turned out to be once-in-a-lifetime event.

Peering through the viewfinder of a borrowed camera, she recorded the dramatic crash of a helicopter that was removing equipment from the top of her 25-story condominium building.

"It was a peculiar thing," Mrs. Kocol said. "I do recall that as long as you're behind the camera, you think maybe it's not real...maybe it (the helicopter) will straighten out."

But the craft that had begun to tilt and spin out of control first sent its load crashing to the ground and then plunged down itself.

It crashed next to the U.S. Coast Guard station at the Lake Michigan shore, but pilot Ben Moore, the only person in the helicopter, escaped serious injury.

NATION

Moore, 43, of Elmhurst, Ill., was treated for cuts to the legs and face at Milwaukee County Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Pam Hansen.

"We've been very lucky here," Mrs. Kocol said. "At the moment it looked like it was going to be very tragic."

Mrs. Kocol's videotape and another taken from the roof by the building's maintenance man, Peter Bakke, appeared on local and network newscasts Tuesday evening.

Richard L. Porter, Milwaukee district manager for the Federal Aviation Administration, attributed the crash to the failure of a coupling between a transmission drive shaft and the tail rotor. As a result, he said, the rotor stopped and the helicopter started spinning clockwise, out of control, finally diving to the bank of ground next to an old submarine slip.

The helicopter was a Sikorsky S-58T owned by Midwest Helicopter Airways Inc. of Hinsdale, Ill.

Mrs. Kocol's son, Stan, is a helicopter pilot with the Air National Guard in Salina, Kan., but Mrs. Kocol said:

"I really know nothing about flying and I really know nothing about cameras."

She had never used a video camera before but borrowed one from another son, David, Monday night to videotape the helicopter at work.

She and her husband, Raymond, watched from a small park as the helicopter arrived and began removing air conditioning equipment from the roof.

As the helicopter carried the largest piece, believed to weigh about 2 tons, the rotor snapped, Mrs. Kocol said.

Construction workers from a nearby work site rescue the pilot of a helicopter that crashed while attempting to remove an air-conditioning unit from the roof of a 25-story condominium building.

Applications for weapons up at border

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gun importers are prepared to bring close to 1 million more semiautomatic assault-style rifles into the United States should the Bush administration decide not to make its import ban permanent.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms now has applications pending for 965,000 of the weapons, ATF spokesman Dick Pedersen said Tuesday.

"It appears there have been a lot more applications that came in after the ban," he said.

The temporary suspension imposed March 14 covered some 400,000 weapons, including about 300,000 for which import permits already had been approved. An expansion of that suspension last week covered another 240,000 weapons.

The ATF is required by law to permit imports only of weapons suitable or adaptable to "sporting purposes."

"We noticed the increase in these showing up in crimes, an increase in demand, and we reacted to it," Pedersen said. "The main thing is that we might be nipping the semiautomatic assault-type rifle in the bud rather than have millions of them flooding in here."

Police organizations nationwide as well as much of the public have called for a ban on weapons such as the semiautomatic versions of AK-47s and Uzi carbines. The calls have been prompted by hundreds of drug-related shootings in the nation's cities and the January slaying of five children at a Stockton, Calif., school by a man armed with an AK-47.

Most murders by firearms are still committed by people with handguns, according to FBI crime statistics. Of the 17,859 murders committed nationwide in 1987, 10,556 were committed with firearms of which 7,807 were handguns, the FBI says.

Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Con Dougherty said Tuesday that more powerful and sophisticated handguns such as the 9mm semiautomatic and the Uzi pistol are being confiscated during arrests.

Nevertheless, Pedersen said it is extremely unlikely that the current import suspension on rifles will be expanded to any handguns.

"Handguns are used in sport, in target shooting, extensively," Pedersen said.

Any changes in availability of foreign handguns would have to be imposed by Congress, said Pedersen.

A bill introduced by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, would place some of the same restrictions on both semiautomatic machine-style pistols and assault-style rifles that are now imposed on automatic weapons, including FBI background checks on purchasers and fingerprinting, but not the $200 fee charged to owners of machine guns, according to the senator's spokeswoman, Nancy Coffey.

Among the semiautomatic handguns that would be restricted if Metzenbaum's bill passes are the Uzi pistol, the Ingram Mac 10 and Mac 11 and the Tec 9 and Tec 22, she said.

Bush unveils tough ethics plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is proposing tougher ethics rules for government employees but faces criticism that he is letting Congress off easy, by not seeking to bar the speaking fees that enrich members' incomes.

Bush's package calls for a 25 percent pay raise for federal judges coupled with a ban on judicial honoraria, or speaking fees, income, said administration officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But Bush will not recommend any hike in the $89,500 congressional salary, nor will he call for a halt to the system that permits lawmakers to earn thousands of additional dollars in honoraria, the officials said.

Executive branch employees already are barred from accepting honoraria, and that ban would be continued under the executive order and legislative proposals Bush planned to announce today in a speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention.

News of Bush's decision on the congressional honoraria question brought an accusation from Fred Wertheimer, president of the lobby group Common Cause, that Bush "caved in to pressure by members of Congress who want to keep this corrupt system going. He knows better and it appears the president doesn't have the courage of his convictions."

Common Cause supports a pay raise for Congress and opposes all honoraria on the grounds they promote excessive influence by the special interest groups that pay members of Congress for speeches.

Bush's Commission on Federal Ethics Law Reform, in its report March 10, endorsed a ban on honoraria for all three branches of government.

While turning down the congressional honoraria recommendation, Bush is accepting a commission recommendation to bar judges and members of Congress who leave the government from lobbying their former offices for one year, one source said. Executive branch employees already are subject to such a ban.

The commission was created by Bush to recommend changes in government ethics rules.

Mayor squeaks by to win fifth term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley fended off an upstart challenger to win an unprecedented fifth term in a squeaker election that almost had him facing a runoff.

Bradley

"Never take anything for granted," the 71-year-old Bradley told supporters today after his narrow victory.

Bradley — the city's first black mayor, an ex-cop and son of a sharecropper — needed at least 50 percent of the vote to avoid a June 6 runoff.

Early today, he held more than 52 percent of the vote with 98.4 percent of the city's precincts reporting. At one point, he had dropped to 50 percent of Tuesday's non-partisan vote, in which turnout was less than 20 percent.

Bradley's nearest finisher among the 10 candidates, freshman Councilman Nate Holden, conceded after midnight.

"A little more time and more money, there could have been a difference," said Holden, who gathered only $150,000 for his campaign funds versus Bradley's $2 million.

Bradley, who remained out of sight most of Tuesday night, declared victory early today.

"I am grateful for the people who gave us this victory," he told supporters at the Biltmore Hotel.

Bradley quickly pledged to renew the battle against drugs and gangs that plague the nation's second largest city.

With 98.4 percent of the 2,353 precincts reporting, Bradley had 152,373 of the vote, or 52.13 percent. Holden had 81,747 votes, or 28 percent; and former county supervisor and television commentator Baxter Ward drew 44,186 votes, or 15 percent.

Only 16.5 percent, or 384,000 of the city's 1.9 million registered voters, went to the polls to elect the officials to lead Los Angeles during the next four years.

A poll taken recently by The Los Angeles Times showed 78 percent of Hispanics, 70 percent of whites and 68 percent of blacks had a favorable impression of the Democratic mayor.

That's led Bradley to be dubbed the "Teflon mayor" because he's apparently not being blamed for the city's mounting urban problems.

Other candidates included a socialist oil field worker and a singer-dancer who used to cavort in a green bikini across the street from City Hall every day.

Stormy winds breaking up oil rapidly

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — The oil spill from the Exxon Valdez is shrinking following two days of pounding by stormy winds and seas, giving a reprieve to threatened shorelines and fishermen.

"I don't want to say it's over because something may change, but the oil is breaking up very rapidly," said John Whitney, an official with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"The combination of winds and waves is taking care of it nicely."

The news late Tuesday was welcome relief to areas of the central Alaskan Coast that have spent three tense days waiting for the oil to hit land. Whitney and other officials said aerial reconnaissance suggested that the danger had eased for Kodiak Island and the Kenai Peninsula, home of the Kenai Fjords National Park.

"Kodiak still seems to be saved," state cleanup coordinator Jim Hayden said of the port where last year's $166 million fish harvest was the nation's largest.

In other developments:

■ The flow of oil from the North Slope has returned to normal, the operator of the trans-Alaska pipeline said. It also said it has complied with a state order for more tanker safety measures and a full-time emergency spill response team.

■ State officials said a huge Soviet skimming ship, the Vaidogubsky, was heading to Alaska to offer assistance. The ship, which Soviet officials said left Sakhalin on Tuesday and would reach Valdez in eight to 10 days, can skim 200,000 gallons an hour and store 2 million gallons of oil on board.

■ British Columbia and Washington state officials announced a task force to prevent future spills. Premier William Vander Zalm and Gov. Booth Gardner said the first test is to prevent the Exxon Valdez from polluting more coastal waters and beaches en route to Portland, Ore., or elsewhere for repairs.

■ Despite the favorable weather, a light sheen of oil did seep into the Kenai Fjords National Park at scattered inlets and fjords, Coast Guard spokesman Ken Freeze said. With a thickness measured in molecules, the sheen does not threaten serious environmental damage, he said.

■ New York Gov. Mario Cuomo ordered officials in his state to investigate rising oil prices. "It would be patently unfair if the oil industry took advantage of a tragedy of its own making in Alaska as an excuse to increase retail gasoline prices," said Cuomo. "That would be the equivalent of picking the pockets of ...consumers."

The Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. said it now has a 12-person emergency spill response team on duty 24 hours a day at Valdez harbor to attack spills.

The team had been disbanded years ago, and Alyeska transferred the duties to other employees.

Embassy security isn't for diplomats

A few years ago the U.S. Marine Corps was castigated for allegedy allowing the Soviet KGB to penetrate the innermost secrets of the American embassy in Moscow. Marine guards at U.S. embassies behind the Iron Curtain and elsewhere also were tarred with similar brushes.

Now, the Heritage Foundation, a Washington research organization, has produced a blistering indictment blaming the U.S. State Department for poor security at U.S. embassies. The report comes amid news the Soviets had bugged the U.S. consulate in Leningrad.

The dreadful security reputation of the State Department has long been well known. It allowed the Soviets to plant so many bugs in the new U.S. embassy in Moscow that President Reagan ordered that building razed. Here is more on State's unflattering record:

■ The department lobbied against legislation that would have stopped Soviets from working at our embassy in Moscow.

■ It ignored the anti-terrorist recommendations of its own advisory panel after the 1983 bombing of the U.S. embassy in Beirut.

These security failures are not mere departmental incompetence. They are institutional because the U.S. diplomatic function, according to the department, is to get along with the host nation.

Security at U.S. embassies abroad remains inadequate. It is department procedure to support the interests of foreign citizens and regimes even at risk to U.S. security.

State has long been assailed for this view yet refuses to change. That is why every President since Dwight D. Eisenhower has been wary of its career diplomats. It is one reason why the new secretary of state, James Baker, has surrounded himself with trusted aides.

Diplomatic security needs widespread reform. Americans, not residents of the host country, should be hired to handle virtually all embassy work. A special office at State and at each embassy should take over security responsibilities from the ambassador. Washington must act with strict reciprocity in the treatment of foreign diplomats.

Embassy security simply is too vital to be left to diplomats.

Relief for debtors

The industrial world's major lenders adopted a hopeful new approach to the Third World's crushing debt this week, agreeing at last that the debtors must have relief. The trick will be to provide enough, and soon. There is a heavy burden on debtors and creditors alike to get moving.

The new strategy was floated last month by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, abandoning the government's long opposition to open intervention. Three dozen finance ministers, representing both sides of the problem, agreed to the essential point, that relief is urgent, at meetings of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

The creditor nations were not uniformly enthusiastic about Brady's proposed concessions. Britain and West Germany were notably cool. As a group, however, they agreed they could no longer remain aloof without threatening human welfare and political stability in Latin America, the Philippines and perhaps elsewhere. Riots and death in the streets of Venezuela last month provided ample evidence that the stress of forced austerity to pay off foreign bankers can become unbearable.

The new approach doesn't promise blanket relief. Deals will be offered only to governments that make genuine efforts at economic restructuring. Lenders and guarantors can properly insist that debtors tackle fundamental distortions, such as bloated bureaucracies and appalling disparities between rich and poor. In Brazil, for instance, the poorest fifth of the population survives on just 2 percent of the national income while the wealthy park their money in safe foreign investments.

The plan would obligate creditor governments, too, by asking them to commit public funds to guarantee that banks will be repaid for at least part of what they are owed. Tentatively, the aim is to reduce debt to banks by about $70 billion through various devices involving the pooled funds of the IMF and the World Bank, as well as direct support by Japan and write-offs by the lending banks.

The public funds may never be needed, but reluctant Europeans note that they and Japan, along with the World Bank and the monetary fund, are expected to risk more than is the U.S. Some also argue that it's wrong to use any public funds to cover the commercial banks' bad debts, a point made this week by former Secretary of State George Shultz. In light of those objections, it is uncertain how much relief will be forthcoming.

For the plan to succeed, the creditor nations will have to confront their own economic difficulties, not least America's budget deficit. In the absence of deficit reduction, interest rates are rising, adding billions to debtors' costs; a recession would shrivel markets for their exports.

The real worth of the new strategy will be seen in the results of country-by-country negotiation. The creditors have made a promising commitment to break the vise of Third World debt; they and the debtors must now work urgently to make it happen.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 12, the 102nd day of 1989. There are 263 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 12, 1945, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, 32nd president of the United States, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Warm Springs, Ga., at age 63 — just three months after beginning an unprecedented fourth term in office. Vice President Harry S. Truman became the nation's 33rd chief executive.

On this date:

In 1606, England adopted as its flag the original version of the Union Jack.

In 1861, the Civil War began as Confederate forces fired on Fort Sumter in South Carolina.

In 1862, Union volunteers led by James J. Andrews stole a Confederate train near Marietta, Ga., but were later caught. This episode inspired the Buster Keaton comedy "The General."

In 1877, the catcher's mask was first used in a baseball game.

In 1955, the Salk vaccine against polio was declared safe and effective.

In 1961, Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin became the first man to fly in space, orbiting the earth once before making a safe landing.

In 1975, the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh was closed, and the last of the American personnel, including Ambassador John Gunther Dean, evacuated in the face of advancing Khmer Rouge forces.

In 1980, the U.S. Olympic Committee's House of Delegates endorsed, by a 2-1 margin, President Jimmy Carter's call for a boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics.

In 1981, the space shuttle Columbia, carrying astronauts Robert Crippen and John Young, blasted off on its first test flight.

OSHA's bark lots worse than its bite

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department wants to look like the tough guy when it comes to protecting the American worker. The department goes on a public relations binge when it decides to penalize an employer for safety violations. But long after the headlines have been recycled, the government too often ends up going easy on the bad-boy companies.

Jack Anderson

The job of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration is to monitor the workplace for hazards and to fine employers who break the law. Those fines are couched in tough talk by OSHA officials, but the companies have a right to their day in court — that's when the government's tough talk turns weak. Employers can contest a fine. Then attorneys from the Labor Department — OSHA's parent agency — sit down at the negotiating table with the offender, aiming to reach a settlement both sides can live with.

Our associate Scott Sleek has obtained confidential OSHA records showing that, on the average, companies cough up less than half of the original fine that was publicly touted by OSHA. Frequently those puny settlements are not published and the Labor Department certainly doesn't brag about them. Often the last to know about the settlement is the labor union representing the employees who are at risk.

The case against Scott Paper Co. is an all-too-common example. In 1987, OSHA charged the company with concealing a number of employee injuries and illnesses at its Winslow, Maine, plant. The proposed fine was $813,000.

Scott Paper contested the charges, and lawyers for the company and OSHA met in Washington, D.C., to hash out a settlement. The company promised to correct its errors by the end of 1988 and the government lowered the fine to $475,000.

Nobody bothered to tell the paper employees union about the settlement meeting or to ask for input. The president of the local was called at the last minute, and union members say he was pressured into endorsing the settlement. OSHA officials said it was a Thanksgiving holiday and they had trouble reaching union members. Apparently, the settlement talks couldn't wait.

OSHA officials say they try to include labor representatives in all talks. But labor doesn't see it that way. "They just cut us out," said Peg Seminario, associate director of occupational health and safety for the AFL-CIO.

Cutting workers out of the negotiations has some members of Congress concerned about whether the settlements are fair. They are also considering adding more teeth to OSHA laws. "All too often, you'll have OSHA and the companies meeting and the unions banging on the door but not being allowed in," said Stuart Weisberg, who works for a Government Operations subcommittee chaired by Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif.

Behind those closed doors, are the companies that endanger their workers really getting the bruising they deserve? Our sources in the labor movement don't think so. They say the settlement talks weigh more in favor of the companies and that the law doesn't require OSHA to monitor the companies to make sure they hold up their end of the bargain.

Bargaining in itself is not a bad idea. If a company appeals the charges by OSHA, the matter can hang in limbo for years without workplace hazards being corrected. The government offers to reduce the fine if the company promises to clean up its act. But without effective follow-up, a rogue employer can make promises it never keeps.

Those promises would not slip so easily off the employer's tongue if the workers were sitting at the bargaining table with evidence of past indiscretions.

NOREIGA'S REVENGE — The U.S. command in the Panama Canal Zone has warned the Pentagon that spontaneous fighting could erupt between Panamanian and U.S. troops. Ever since a U.S. grand jury indicted Panamanian dictator Manuel Noreiga on drug smuggling charges, he has been harassing Americans living in the Canal Zone. Noreiga's military government won't issue auto licenses to Americans and their Panamanian employees. Panamanian soldiers have arrested and held U.S. soldiers without charges. Noreiga's troops deliberately try to provoke arguments. So far, American officers have been able to restrain their troops and avoid any clashes.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Supreme Court has ruled that Drug Enforcement Administration agents can search air travelers who simply act suspicious. For your future reference, in the eyes of the DEA, a suspicious person is one who pays cash for an airplane ticket. In these days of disappearing cash, that is indeed odd behavior. The DEA also thinks a suspicious person is one who looks nervous. That news could cause a rush on fear-of-flying workshops.

Where pepper's concerned it's all in twist!

It wasn't a serious problem before, but it has now become a crisis. No restaurant worth its salt will let you put pepper on your own food. One of the reasons for this is that waiters in the United States cannot be licensed to serve a meal unless they are able to operate a nine-foot pepper grinder.

Art Buchwald

In order to handle the demand for qualified grinders, pepper schools are springing up all across the land. Their function is to teach students the art of using a pepper mill in a public place. This includes spraying everything from salads to smoked salmon. A great deal of the curriculum is also devoted to safety.

Pierre au Poivre, the Isaac Stern of pepper grinders, told me, "You have to have nerves of steel to be in this business.

"Most accidents in restaurants are caused when an incompetent person using a pepper mill misses the salad and hits the diner in the nose or on the head. In the wrong hands a pepper mill is considered a lethal weapon, and we need all the guidelines we can get to prevent serious injury.

"Probably the most important point to remember when holding a pepper grinder is to keep it at a 45-degree angle. If you raise it any higher, you could shoot the pepper into someone's eyes. If you hold it any lower, the pepper will fall onto the customer's shoes. Next comes — 'twisting the mill.' The twist of the wrist is what distinguishes the great grinders from the mediocre ones."

"Is that all there is to it?" I asked.

"You must also practice. I devote five hours a day to my art. My wife makes 34 pounds of Caesar salad every morning for me to train on. But it has all been worth it."

Pierre said that there are many waiters aspiring to be pepper grinders who just don't have it.

"Why is that?" I wanted to know.

"Because they close their eyes when they are putting the pepper on the salad. We call it 'Fear of Sprinkling.'"

"I know this is a silly question, but what are the advantages of having a waiter do your pepper grinding for you?"

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime gastronomic experience. We live in a very frenetic world, and most people do not have the time to put pepper on their food. If you're dining at a restaurant which provides such a service, you know that you're in a classy joint, even if the food tastes like bicycle tires."

Pierre felt that everything in pepper grinding is timing.

"My favorite maneuver is to hide behind a palm tree. I wait until someone starts to tell a story and just when he gets to the punch line, I jump out with my mill at the ready and yell 'PEPPER.'"

"It takes a real pro to ruin someone's joke."

"I also like to grind pepper just as a man is proposing marriage to a girl or when a couple is breaking up. It makes me feel that what I'm doing has some value."

He continued, "Recently, however, I have observed that people are starting to grind their own pepper. They have no class and are the same ones who insist on putting gas in their own tanks. Nevertheless, restaurants are no longer ignoring them and are setting aside a special section for do-it-yourself pepper grinding, and another one where waiters provide the service."

The biggest criticism heard about self-grinders is that they are inexperienced and badly trained. Many hold the grinders upside down and wind up shooting peppercorn dust at everyone in the room.

I asked Pierre if he owned his own pepper grinder.

"Every great waiter does," he replied. "Mine was crafted by Antonio Stradivari, the celebrated peppermill maker from Cremona."

"Why is it so valuable?"

"Because of the pure sound it makes when the pepper hits the lettuce."

NRA helping teach self-protection in school!

The class will come to order. Today, boys and girls, we have a special treat.

"Instead of studying our geography this hour, we will be talking about something much more important.

Lewis Grizzard

"As some of you may know, there have been recent incidents of boys and girls your age being shot in their school playgrounds by various sick people.

"It was not the guns that killed these boys and girls. It was the persons who pulled the triggers. Always remember, boys and girls, guns don't kill people. It's people who kill people. Can you repeat that?

"Very good. Now, some very smart grown-ups in Washington, D.C. — that's the capital of our nation — have been thinking about how we can stop schoolchildren from being shot.

"Some have suggested we make new laws outlawing the type of weapons that sick people use to shoot schoolchildren.

"But, of course, we can't do that. If guns are outlawed, only outlaws will have guns. Can you repeat that?

"Very good again. It is our constitutional right to have any sort of gun we want, and no bed-wetting liberals are going to take away that right.

"Can you say, 'Bed-wetting liberals'? Excellent. Now, thanks to some very hard work by the National Rifle Association, who talked some sense into President Bush and the Congress, a better solution has been worked out as to how to protect boys and girls like you from getting shot.

"To explain, it is our honor to have with us today Mr. Matthew Dillon IV of the National Rifle Association, and I will now turn it over to Mr. Dillon."

"Thank you, Miss Parker. Boys and girls, we at the National Rifle Association love and cherish our children, and we are not going to sit idly by and see you shot down without a chance to fight back.

"For that reason, the decision has been made to arm every boy and girl in America so, if somebody shoots at you, you can shoot back at them. That, boys and girls, is the American way.

"Now, here I have two of the best weapons money can buy. In my left hand I have what is known as the Uzi. Girls will be given Uzis, and after class you girls can pick up yours from the truck outside.

"All you need to know about the Uzi is to pull this little trigger here and you will have enough firepower to blow away anything or anybody trying to harm you.

"In my right hand, I have the AK-47. Boys, this will be yours. Now, the AK-47 can tear a man in half in a matter of seconds. Just aim and pull the trigger and your target's own mother couldn't recognize him after you finish firing.

"Boys and girls, your weapon is your friend. It is your best friend. Can you say, 'My weapon is my best friend'?

"Gosh, what fast learners you have, Miss Parker.

"You should bring your weapon with you to school each day. Ammunition will be passed out each morning after you have said the Pledge of Allegiance and repeated the Shooters' Code.

"You should never go on the playground without your weapon. If you should suddenly hear shots, you should hit the asphalt immediately and assume the firing position.

"Some of your classmates may be hit in the initial volley. This will be unfortunate, of course, but remember that dead classmates make excellent cover.

"Pile a couple on top of each other, duck behind them and commence firing at your target at will.

"Remember, boys and girls, it's 'Shoot or be shot.' It's 'Kill or be killed.' Can you say that?

"Fine. Just fine. Miss Parker, that is all I have."

"Thank you, Mr. Dillon. The children and I appreciate what you at the National Rifle Association are doing for all of us. Can you boys and girls say, 'You're dead meat, suckah,' for Mr. Dillon?

"Very good. Class dismissed."

Wright's attorney accused of 'breach' of procedures

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Republican House Whip Newt Gingrich on Tuesday accused the lawyer for Democratic House Speaker Jim Wright of a "most extraordinary breach" of procedures for conducting briefings on findings that have not yet been made public by the ethics panel probing Wright's finances.

Gingrich said he is now considering asking the ethics panel to investigate William C. Oldaker, Wright's lawyer, for briefing top Democratic leaders and lobbyists concerning "confidential information" discussed in closed-door sessions of the 12-member ethics panel that were attended by Oldaker.

The panel had given Oldaker permission to attend its sessions.

Gingrich said that briefings by Oldaker had "enmeshed 20 to 30 Democrats in subverting the committee's process and in violating House rules."

As whip, Gingrich is the second ranking Republican in the House to Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois.

Gingrich called Oldaker's behavior "an act of irrationality which defies common sense, (is) so stupid, (and) so fundamentally undermines the ethics committee process...(that it makes) a travesty" of the panel's secrecy rules."

Of his reaction to Oldaker, Gingrich said that it is "beyond rage and into amazement."

Meanwhile, Gingrich came under attack from Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., who formally requested that the ethics panel investigate a 1984 book publishing deal by Gingrich.

Gingrich, who entered into a partnership with 21 investors who each contributed $5,000 to market "Windows of Opportunity," has insisted that he did nothing wrong in the venture.

He said Tuesday that he would release all documents relating to the deal within the next two weeks.

Regarding Gingrich's charges that Oldaker has acted improperly, Wright's spokesman, Mark Johnson, said the speaker sees "nothing wrong in laying out his case to the members. Oldaker is not releasing any secret documents."

As speaker, Wright is third in the presidential line of succession. He faces a possible recommendation from the ethics panel that the House reprimand, censure or expel him for alleged violations of House rules.

House members of both parties have confirmed what the most serious allegations against Wright are. They involve the financial relationship between Wright, his wife and George Mallick, a friend and Fort Worth developer, as well as a publishing deal in which a book by Wright, "Reflections of a Public Man" was sold in bulk quantities to evade House limits on outside speaking and writing fees.

NATION IN BRIEF

Fugitive bank robber has surgery, recaptured

PENSACOLA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A bandit with a penchant for robbing banks and a knack for escape is back behind bars because plastic surgery designed to make him look like actor Robert DeNiro failed to fool the feds.

Deputy U.S. marshals arrested Robert Litchfield, 41, on Tuesday in this Florida Panhandle resort community.

Litchfield was the first man to escape from the federal penetentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., in 12 years, said W.L. McLendon, U.S. marshal for northern Florida. He escaped March 10.

"Robert DeNiro is his idol," said Ken Pekarek, the U.S. marshal for Kansas said from Kansas City, Kan. "He said he altered his appearance so he would look like Robert DeNiro."

Litchfield's nickname, "Blockhouse Bandit," stemmed from his specialty of robbing bank drive-in windows separate from main banks in the Miami area, McLendon said.

Indictment accuses firm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The government has indicted Northrop Corp. for allegedly falsifying test data on cruise missile guidance systems, raising questions whether the strategic nuclear weapon would function in time of war.

The aerospace giant and five current or former employees were charged Tuesday with conspiring to defraud the government in the construction of part of the Air Force missile's guidance system and a component of the Navy's Harrier fighter jet.

The 167-count indictment charged that Northrop and the employees conspired to install parts for the Flight Data Transmitter of the cruise missile that failed to meet government specifications.

Bribery case jury still out

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A jury considering the bribery case against three California executives charged in the Pentagon corruption case is resuming deliberations after failing to reach a verdict in two days.

The four women and eight men informed U.S. District Judge Richard Williams late Tuesday that they had not come to a decision after a total of 20 hours of deliberations.

Williams said he would give the jury new instructions today if they were having problems with the charges.

Dale Schnittjer, Eugene Sullivan and George Kaub, three former vice presidents of Teledyne Electronics of Newbury Park, Calif., are charged with bribery, conspiracy and wire fraud in the first case brought to trial since the government "Ill Wind" investigation into fraud and kickbacks at the Pentagon began nearly three years ago.

North blames adviser for sending letter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North today blamed former national security adviser Robert McFarlane for sending a letter to Congress that falsely denied the National Security Council staff was assisting the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

North

As the former NSC aide took the stand for the fifth day at his Iran-Contra trial, prosecutor John Keker read aloud a section of a proposed response to then-Rep. Michael Barnes saying, "None of us has solicited funds...or...coordinated the military...efforts of the resistance."

"That statement is untrue and I did not put it in there," North said of the draft letter to Barnes, D-Md. He said McFarlane, then his boss, "had written his own" letter on Sept. 12, 1985.

"What did you do to straighten it out?" Keker asked.

"I am quite certain I didn't do much...at all," North replied. He said McFarlane "had already put this kind of language in his letter" on Sept. 5, 1985 to Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., then the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

"I wrote a number of other letters" that were "inconsistent with the facts...I just simply do not believe I wrote this letter," said North. "Those...words are written in Mr. McFarlane's handwriting."

Keker interjected: "And apparently sent to you for editing."

"And that is a point I would contest because I don't believe it was sent to me for editing," North said.

Among 12 criminal counts, North is accused of making a false statement to Congress in connection with the letters to Barnes and Hamilton. No charges have been filed against him in connection with letters he says he wrote on Contra support.

Meanwhile, documents released at the trial suggest North deceived President Reagan's lawyers by saying that a fund-raiser and wealthy donor weren't providing money to the Contras.

As a result of those assurances, Reagan got the go-ahead from White House Counsel Fred Fielding to send thank-you notes to Carl "Spitz" Channell and Barbara Newington for their support of the administration's policy in Central America.

In an Oct. 7, 1985, memorandum to Reagan, North described Mrs. Newington as a "stalwart supporter of your Presidency" and Channell's organization as providing "paid television advertising in support of...your policies in Central America."

Mrs. Newington, a Connecticut widow, donated $2.8 million to the Nicaragua rebels through Channell's tax-exempt organization, according to records.

In fact, Channell's tax-exempt group, with which North worked closely, help raised more than $10 million from private contributors for the Contras during a two-year congressional ban on military aid for the rebels.

Reagan didn't send the thank-you notes until after North assured White House Counsel Fred Fielding that Channell's activities were legitimate, according to an Oct. 10, 1985, memo from Fielding that was presented in court.

The Bar to be allowed trial outdoor party

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

David Harrison probably echoes many young Midlanders' sentiments when he laments there isn't much to do here for "fun" on a Saturday night.

To remedy that condition, Harrison and business partner Bill Bergman want to move their downtown watering hole, The Bar, outside into its parking lot one Saturday a month during the summer.

They've modeled their idea after a popular outdoor beer garden in Fort Worth called Sam's, Harrison said.

The two took their cause to Midland City Council Tuesday seeking a mandatory permit. They faced strong opposition from neighboring businessmen and clergy harboring concerns about alcohol, rowdy behavior and litter.

After hearing both sides, City Council voted 5-1 to allow The Bar's owners to hold one trial outdoor party — "The Bar Jam" — Saturday, April 22, from 3 to 10 p.m.

Les Reynolds, representing Reynolds & Sons Reproduction offices two blocks west of The Bar on Missouri Avenue, told council he was against "alcoholic beverages being served after (his firm's) work hours."

Cecil Robinson, an elder at the Petroplex Covenant Church at 601 Missouri Ave., worried that Bar-goers would get rowdy and throw beer bottles around. And according to the mayor, the church's pastor was concerned "persons feeling friendly may wander toward the church."

Lights to be added to two school zones

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

School zones can be both a lifesaver and a redundancy, City Council action reflected Tuesday.

Since the November afternoon her seventh-grade son was struck by a van outside Goddard Junior High, Mona Craig has lobbied City Hall for the addition of flasher lights atop warning signs in front of the school.

She got her wish at Tuesday's council meeting, but the move was in concert with the removal of noon-time school zones in front of Trinity School on Wadley Avenue.

City of Midland research supports both actions, explained Gary Saunders, a senior traffic engineer.

"We do two school studies a year," Saunders said. The Goddard and Emerson elementary school zones on Haynes Drive "did warrant" the addition of flashers and will "increase the safety around the schools," the engineer continued.

Archeologist vows to protect sites

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE
Staff Writer

Just as the president has sworn to preserve, protect and defend our Constitution, Teddy Stickney has vowed to preserve, protect and defend the remnants of our past.

"For every day that passes in the state of Texas, we lose 100 prehistoric and historic sites in the state of Texas," said the current president of the Texas Archeological Society. "By 2020, we'll have very few left."

The longtime Midlander — she's lived here since 1959 — is determined to stop the needless waste of prehistoric and historic resources.

This year, the TAS has promoted the first Texas Archeology Awareness Week, which began Sunday. Local amateur societies around the state have planned educational and cultural activities around this year's theme, protecting our archeological and historic sites. Other sponsors of the week include the Texas Historical Commission, the Council of Texas Archeologists, the Office of the State Archeologist and the Texas Historical Foundation.

In Midland, the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., has mounted a special exhibit highlighting 12,000 years of area history. Beginning Friday, the city will host the 25th annual meeting of the Southwest Federation of Archeological Societies at the Ramada Hotel, 3300 W. Wall Ave.

Organization is the key to saving our cultural resources, Ms. Stickney said, because coordinated efforts are needed to stop the destruction of sites.

"When you think about it, all the pipelines, all the roadways, all the construction that's going on...and in all the big cities and the little towns where buildings are being torn down, it can add up quick," she claimed.

"We're losing tremendous amounts of our historical stuff. People don't stop to think that 50 years ago is history."

To many people "it's just old," Ms. Stickney continued. "And modern-day progress is to build new things, rather than renovating old ones."

The TAS has tried to convince property and land owners that "what they have on their property in the way of a prehistoric or historic site is their responsibility to conserve or preserve for the future," she said.

If none of us think it's important to preserve our past, the landowner's family "generations from now, will have nothing to remember him by."

Sometimes this really hits home, she said. "When you say that to them, they say 'But they will (remember me).' And I say, 'Where?'

"I tell them, 'If you let the cemeteries go, and you've let all the landmarks go, all the historic buildings go, in a hundred years there won't be anything left to remind them of you,'" Ms. Stickney said.

"And it really jars them, when they think that we will not protect their headstone, where they're buried in the family plot will no longer exist," she continued. "The ranch house or farmhouse that they built will no longer be standing. There will not be any remnants of them left."

This week, a TAS-backed bill that would protect, locate and register unmarked cemeteries — both prehistoric and historic — is before the Legislature.

Right now, it's legal for contractors to plow under or build over any unmarked cemetery, lacking headstones or a wall surrounding it, in the state, Ms. Stickney claimed.

"There is no protection for an unmarked cemetery in the state of Texas. We don't have a law that says after you plow into an old cemetery that you have to preserve it."

As part of its public education program the TAS holds "one of the better archeological field schools of amateur societies" in the United States, with an average of 300 participants each year.

These eight-day long schools are held at different sites around the state so that all Texans have a chance to learn about archeology, she said. This year the field school will be held at Devil's River State Natural Area in Val Verde County, from June 10-14.

Ms. Stickney stressed the importance of amateurs to the local and state archeological societies.

"Amateurs have the time to record sites in their area and to become knowledgeable of the prehistoric resources," she continued. "An amateur does not have to be a collector of arrowheads."

In Texas, professional and amateur archeologists have "a very good relationship," she said. "The professionals respect the amateurs, and the amateurs look to the professional for leadership."

The amateurs also serve as a sort of early warning system to alert archeologists to threatened sites.

More than $3,000 raised for volunteer fire departments

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Fund-raising efforts for area volunteer fire departments have raised just over $3,000, a figure which has disappointed organizers and damaged efforts to ensure fire protection in rural West Texas.

"I'm real disappointed in the turnout," said Andy Glasscock, a Greenwood resident and chief of that community's volunteer firefighting effort. "I really don't know why. I expected a lot better response to it (the fund-raising effort) due to the high number of fires we have had. I really don't understand it. We fought fires on some of the big ranches," he added, wondering aloud about the lack of local landowners' support.

Button Estes, a local rancher who helped organize the effort nearly a month ago to benefit the volunteer units in Greenwood, Northeast Midland County, Martin County, South Ector County, and Gardendale, also expressed surprise at the lack of contributions.

"Not as well as I expected," Estes said of the $3,180 received from 14 contributors, including himself. "You never know about these things. Some of the people hurt the most haven't responded at all."

The Greenwood department made 103 emergency runs during 1988. So far in 1989, they have been called to 63 fires, Glasscock said.

The first allocations from the Volunteer Firefighters Fund have been made, with $500 distributed to each of the departments, Estes said.

But the money doesn't go far.

"We got the $500, but in this business it doesn't go a long way," Glasscock said. "We just had to buy $120 worth of brooms. They are the best tools to fight grass fires, besides water, and we have burned them all up."

City of Midland firefighters and the volunteer departments have been plagued this year with a record fire danger blamed on unusually thick brush and grass, high winds, and carelessness by residents.

Midland County Commissioners in February voted to issue emergency refunds of $100 per call to assist the Greenwood and Northeast departments to pay 1988 overhead costs. On Monday, commissioners voted to extend funding into 1989 based on quarterly fire call reports.

Commissioners Win Brown, Durward Wright, and Guy McCrary also repeated their interest in several funding options, including the establishment of a rural fire district which would require levying a tax.

About $450,000 yearly comes from county coffers to pay for rural fire protection, with the city footing the rest of the bill as part of an agreement which requires the county operate the downtown public library on Missouri Avenue.

The number of fire calls has dropped the last two weeks, which has given weary volunteers and outdated beat-up equipment a break. But the calls will resume and may worsen dependent on the rainfall and heat during the summer months.

Donations to the fund have ranged from $10 to $1,000, Estes said. The account at First City National Bank in Midland will remain open until there is no longer any interest in raising funds to aid the departments, he said.

"We're going to keep the account open," he said. "And we do expect some more contributions."

Glasscock added: "Regardless of whether they want to donate or not, we will continue to fight the fires."

A list of contributors to date includes Fanny Bess Sivells, Mr. and Mrs. James Walton, the Lazy-Z-Ranch, Cynthia Lynn Truitt, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Cowden, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Mitchell, Scharbauer Cattle Co., Scharbauer Bros. and Co., William Johnston, M.F. and Mickey O'Conner, Hubert Whitt Jr., Dean E. and Jeanne B. Kilbourne, Mr. and Mrs. R.A. Estes, and Button Estes.

Contributions can be sent to Volunteer Firefighters Fund, P.O. Box 2097, Midland, Tx., 79702, Attention Garth Wright.

Bond denied man awaiting sentence in drug possession trial

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 31-year-old Odessa man who is awaiting sentencing for conspiring with three others to possess 95 pounds of marijuana near Presidio last year was denied bond and was returned to jail on Tuesday after U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton found that the man had failed random urine tests to detect illegal drug use.

After the man, Jose Guadalupe Bustamente, was convicted in Pecos in a bench trial in November, Bunton conditionally freed the man on bond. And those conditions of release included that Bustamente submit to random drug testing and that he not take illegal drugs.

In a hearing before the judge on Tuesday, Bustamente sat quietly, while an interpreter translated the court proceedings from English to Spanish for Bustamente's benefit. He did not testify in his own defense.

Under questioning of Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery, U.S. Probation Officer Richard Russell testified that Bustamente was cooperative in submitting to the testing. "He has come in every time he was asked to," Russell said.

Laboratory analyses of several of Bustamente's urine specimens indicated that Bustamente was taking morphine, a narcotic derived from opium, and codeine, a morphine derivative.

Downed aircraft

A 56-year-old Midland man escaped injuries Tuesday when his single-engine plane lost power and he was forced to make an emergency landing at Midland Air Park. Billy Evans had taken off just before 6 p.m. when he lost power, turned around and belly-landed the aircraft. The plane was heavily damaged, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Midlander to petition for racing issue on ballot

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A service station owner believes a petition containing more than 500 local signatures can shove the horse racing issue in Midland back toward the starting gate.

Ada Thorne, owner of Thorne Service Center, plans to present the petition requesting that the issue be placed on a November election ballot to Midland County Commissioners for consideration at their meeting on May 8.

She's been collecting signatures since last December after the issue failed to be included on the November presidential election ballot.

"If the commissioners' court can do it (call for an election) on their own, I think it would be an embarrassment — with this many signatures — for them not to put it on the ballot," she said.

Midland County Election Administrator Bettye Calvert said the Texas Legislature most likely will call for a constitutional amendment election in November.

If it does, the option of allowing Midland voters to decide whether to put in a race track for pari-mutuel wagering could be placed on the ballot.

Mrs. Calvert said the commissioners' court can place the issue on the ballot or Mrs. Thorne can petition the commissioners to place the issue on a special election or on a regular election.

Ms. Thorne is opting for the regular election because a special election would "cost money that the taxpayers can't afford to pay," she said.

To petition for a vote on the horse-track issue, Mrs. Thorne will need to garner signatures of 5 percent of the 24,611 Midland voters who cast ballots in the 1986 gubernatorial election. Today, 52,385 Midland County residents are registered to vote.

More than 50 percent of voting Midlanders — 8,075 to 7,193 — approved a 1987 referendum on legalized horse racing in Texas.

Should Midlanders vote for horse racing here, then the Texas Horse Racing Association would have to act on competition applications for a race track in West Texas.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Clinton Jones, Sonny Fields, Jack Hightower, Barry Biscoe, Mike H. Roberts, John L. Campbell and Bob Lindsey.

RACING

Mrs. Calvert observed that the horse-race issue, if it is allowed on this November's ballot, might pull some people in to vote, who otherwise wouldn't vote.

Midland County Commissioners decided not to include the horse-race option on last year's presidential election ballot because the request came one day prior to the deadline and the ballots already had been printed.

The vote last September to not allow the horse-race issue to appear on the Nov. 8 ballot disappointed some Midlanders who claim that a race track here would generate millions of dollars in revenue and help diversify the local economy.

Mrs. Thorne hopes the commissioners court will change its mind this go-around.

"We want to ensure that the general population's opinion carries this issue to the ballot. We don't want a handful of people to determine an issue for the people," she said.

"We're prepared to prove to the commissioners that it is a desired vote and we would hope they would agree with the majority."

SCHOOL

The installation of flashers, however, will reduce the length of the Haynes Drive school zone by about 70 feet, Saunders said.

City engineers believe the reduction will reduce the number of Haynes Drive yards that would need to be "trenched" while installing power lines for the flashers, Saunders explained.

Mrs. Craig and Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joe Baressi support the addition of flashers near the two schools.

"The safer the better," Baressi said.

"We need to do everything we can to slow these parents down," Mrs. Craig said today. "I think they (drivers) think junior high kids are old enough to take care of themselves.

"I'm really surprised more kids have not been hit. I've seen some near misses," the mother continued.

Her son was not seriously injured in the November accident, but had to undergo emotional counseling because "he had to face the fact you can die," Mrs. Craig said.

Trinity School children don't cross busy Wadley Avenue at lunchtime, however. So council voted Tuesday to negate the 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. school zone in front of that school.

"We have no problem" with council's move Tuesday, explained Trinity's Head of Schools Peggy Simmons. Drivers have complained to City Hall the zone wasn't needed during lunch.

Carpool lines, however, clog the thoroughfare's northernmost westbound lane during the lunch hour at Trinity, Saunders said.

Council agreed Tuesday to put up a sign alerting drivers that Trinity's "carpool waiting lane" will be backed up during lunchtime as parents pick up their pre-schoolers.

"This (the sign) will handle the problem just as well if not better than the school zone," Ms. Simmons added.

BAR

The church doesn't meet on Saturday afternoons during the summer months, however, acknowledged Bob Carnes, a Missouri Avenue property owner.

Midland Councilmember Katie Heck was the sole dissenting vote Tuesday. This morning she echoed concerns that the party has the potential to get rowdy.

Bergman, however, stressed before the council Tuesday he and Harrison are taking security measures that should quell their opponents' fears.

Plans for "The Bar Jam" include the construction of a 5- to 7-foot-tall wood and barbwire fence around The Bar's parking lot at Carrizo Street and Missouri Avenue.

"It's going to look like a prison camp," Harrison mused.

An off-duty Midland policeman, one of three or four to be at the event, will stand guard at the entrance to check identification and ensure no one leaves the property with alcoholic beverages.

Outdoor music will be provided by "Long John Hunter and the Walking Catfish," and people are asked to "BYOL" or bring their own lawnchairs, Harrison explained.

"Their main complaint was the beer cans," he continued Tuesday. "That doesn't come out of our establishment.

"We're going to have a 'can slam' where people throw their beer cans and cups into trash cans with basketball hoops on them. They clean a lot up for you," Harrison said.

Any other trash that could potentially escape the scene will be cleaned by The Bar's employees.

"The Bar Jam" also will celebrate the 10th anniversary of the establishment, a Midland "institution" bought by Harrison, Bergman and other limited partners last December from Midlander Jim Conine.

"Response from the public has been great. It's a good idea. It's fun and it's different," Harrison believes.

"There's really nothing to do on the weekends here. This is an alternative to staying at home."

Judge answers petition

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Jack Hampton of Dallas has told the Texas Supreme Court a move to oust him is based on party politics, not on statements he made about a murder case whose victims he called "queers."

In a response to the high court, Hampton's attorneys said a removal petition filed by 17 Dallas lawyers is "but a reflection of a county and a courthouse charged with political activity in which one political party undertakes to bash the other political party."

Hampton told the court his remarks were the result of an "informal conversation" with a reporter.

BOND

Russell said that his fellow probation officer, David Worland, had collected the specimens. "I know that he would collect them properly," Russell said under cross-examination of Odessa attorney of Richard Alvarado.

Worland noted that Bustamente had been admitted to a methadone-treatment center in El Paso to help him break his addiction to heroin. Methadone is a synthetic narcotic drug used for relief of pain and as a substitute narcotic in the treatment of heroin addiction.

"He advised me that he, indeed, was a heroin addict, and he needed help," Worland said. "We felt that Mr. Bustamente needed some help."

Evidence indicated that Bustamente was not a flight risk.

"As far as being an absconder," Worland said, "I don't believe he would."

After the hearing, Bunton ordered Bustamente to the custody of U.S. deputy marshal and set his sentencing date to noon on April 24.

Mothers think child killing capital offense

AUSTIN (AP) — People who kill children should be charged with capital murder, say two mothers whose young children were slain — one by a babysitter's boyfriend and the other by the child's father.

The women testified before a Senate panel considering a bill that would make killing a child younger than 6 years old a capital offense.

"I ask you to please give this bill all of your consideration," said Theresa Ward of Victoria, whose 3-year-old son Daniel was shot to death by her ex-husband.

"As gut-wrenching as this is, I cannot do anything more for my son," Ms. Ward said. "But what I can do is come here and ask you to make it a capital offense to murder a child.

"Children are being killed every day by cold-hearted people, people who show no remorse at all," Ms. Ward told the Senate Criminal Justice Committee Tuesday.

Ms. Ward and Diana McManus of Austin testified on a bill by Sen. J. E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson.

Ms. McManus said her 15-month-old daughter Casey was beaten, bitten, slammed to the ground and placed on an anthill by the boyfriend of her babysitter last August.

Hugh James Gallagher was sentenced to life for the killing, but could be eligible for parole in five years under current law, Ms. McManus said.

Ms. Ward played a taped phone conversation with her ex-husband during which the man fatally shot their son, also last August.

Senators listened somberly as they heard Ms. Ward pleading with James P. Ward not to harm the child. She had taped the phone call because he had threatened her, she said.

"You're going to kill him?" Ms. Ward screamed.

"Yes, I am," James Ward said. "Here he is. You want to tell him goodbye?"

"Don't you dare!" cried Ms. Ward.

A few seconds later, two gunshots could be heard on the tape. Ms. Ward said her ex-husband also shot himself but survived.

The tape was used to convict James Ward, who also received a life sentence, but who will be eligible for parole in 15 years, Ms. Ward said.

"A life sentence for this murder is no sentence at all compared to the lifetime of heartache that we are going to feel," she said.

"An amateur knows what construction is going on, and when a site is in danger he can get professional help" to conserve or preserve any prehistoric or historic artifacts.

"The Midland man site (a human skull dating to about 12,000 years ago discovered in the southwest part of the county) was found by an amateur who recognized that it was a fossilized human bone," Ms. Stickney said.

Proclamation signing

Representatives from various heritage groups gathered in February to commemorate the official proclamation of Texas Archeology Awareness Week, which began Sunday. Joining Gov. Bill Clements, seated, in his Capitol office in Austin are, from left, Midlander Teddy Stickney, president of the Texas Archeological Society; Pat Mercado-Allinger, Texas Historical Commission; Bonnie McKee, Texas Historical Foundation; Robert J. Mallouf, state archeologist; Robert Scott, Council of Texas Archeologists; James Walker, Archeological Conservancy; and Curtis Tunnell, executive director of the THC.

Bill restricting school corporal punishment struck down in Senate

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill that would have restricted corporal punishment in public schools failed to clear a Texas Senate hurdle Tuesday.

While Senate Bill 20 mustered a majority, the 19-11 vote was one short of the two-thirds threshold needed under Senate rules to bring up a bill for consideration.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, sponsor of the bill, said corporal punishment shows students that violence can control situations, but Sen. Bill Haley, D-Center, argued that teachers need the threat of paddling as the "ultimate punishment" to enforce classroom discipline.

"I don't want to see someone beaten, but a paddling properly administered brings about the discipline," said Haley, a former schoolteacher.

At first Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby announced the vote as 20-10, which would have allowed the bill to proceed, but after conferring with Hobby Washington announced he would hold off on the bill.

Washington said he wanted to give fellow senators an extra day to consider proposed amendments, but a Senate clerk said the vote apparently was miscounted. Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, whose district includes Midland, voted against the bill.

The Senate approved Senate Bill 1526 by Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, which would allow the Texas Water Commission to take over the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's role in permitting and monitoring wastewater discharge applications.

Ratliff said the provision would bring state regulations in compliance with the EPA and eliminate duplication in applying for permits and submitting periodic reports to the state and federal agencies.

The bill would increase maximum fees to $15,000, from the current $11,000, but Ratliff noted that most cities would save money since they would only have to pay for one permit.

Ratliff also noted that the EPA could reassert its authority under the Clean Water Act if it finds the state agency is not doing a proper job.

The Senate also concurred with a House amendment to Senate Bill 41 that would require motorcyclists to wear helmets. The amendment would allow motorcyclists to get temporary exemptions for medical reasons.

The Senate voted 16-14 against a motion to reject the House amendment and later on a voice vote approved the bill, which goes to the governor.

Official says workers need benefits quicker

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The chairman of the board that administers workers compensation in Texas said Tuesday he was frustrated with his inability to help injured workers in a system that encourages disputes and fraudulent claims.

As a special subcommittee started review of 16 bills, including a 339-page omnibus bill to overhaul the workers compensation system, Joe Gagen, chairman of the Industrial Accident Board, called for a system in which workers would get benefits sooner.

Under current law workers may be eligible for awards of as much as $92,000 for a disabling injury, he said, but economic hardship often forces them to settle for less.

"Most claimants think the Industrial Accident Board is there to see they get their benefits," he said, but too many find out the board can do little for them. "The worker never gets what he's entitled too," he said.

Gagen told the senators of a letter he received from the attorney of a disabled woman who was contemplating suicide after she ran out of money when her compensation payments were stopped pending a lengthy appeal.

"Senators, there's not a damn thing I can do for that lady," he said. "My biggest frustration is the inability to solve problems."

He called for a board that not only has authority, but also has responsibility for its actions.

Gagen, a former Houston trial lawyer, said he respects the right to a jury trial in appeals of the board's decisions, but injured workers need prompt relief that appeals delay.

"The claimant is the party least able to tolerate delays," he said.

The system also encourages nuisance claims, he said, because it is cheaper for insurance companies to pay them rather than take them to court.

The board rejects 10 percent of the claims it hears, but Gagen said insurance companies settle those rejected claims on appeal for an average of $3,500.

The subcommittee is reviewing Stephenville Sen. Bob Glasgow's substitute for House Bill 1, the workers compensation overhaul that organized labor and trial lawyers have criticized as too pro-business.

The Senate bill, which is more palatable to labor, would incorporate many of the provisions of the House version, but it would keep the right to a jury trial on appeals of compensation cases. It also would provide fines for businesses with safety problems and would set up a division to review medical costs in workers compensation cases.

While workers compensation reformers hope it will result in reduction of insurance rates, George Finger, chairman of the Texas Association of Business acknowledged that the immediate goal is to stabilize costs.

Finger also said businesses should not have sole responsibility for safety in the workplace, since workers share responsibility for accidents.

Tensions cooling in capital of Soviet Georgia

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — Sporadic strikes persisted today as soldiers complained of harassment but residents said tensions had cooled in Tbilisi, scene of a bloody clash between Red Army troops and Georgian nationalist protesters.

The official Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today that the mood remained "extremely tense" in the Georgian capital and several other cities in the southern republic.

The situation is "more or less quiet now," said a church employee in Tbilisi who asked not to be identified. "They've promised to lift the curfew if people behave."

Pravda put the number of police and troops injured in Sunday's melee between Soviet troops and pro-independence demonstrators at 91. Previously, officials had said 75 soldiers and police were hurt.

No reason was given for the change.

The military newspaper Red Star said army political officers have been dropping leaflets onto the city from helicopters. It indicated the leaflets were part of an official campaign to counter public anger against the military.

Officials said 18 civilians died Sunday.

The head doctor at the Central Republican Hospital in Tbilisi, Jor Benadze, said in a telephone interview today a report that a 32-year-old man injured in the clash had died was incorrect. That report came from David Lazarishvili, an anesthesiologist at the hospital.

Red Star said youths were harassing Soviet soldiers, and "there are attempts under way to organize provocations against soldiers."

The newspaper said a major had been pelted with stones and a lieutenant colonel had been hit in the head by a bottle thrown from a window.

"We run into people, mainly youth, who yell humiliating things at us and then run away," the newspaper quoted a sergeant named O. Parkhun as saying.

Soviet media said strikers have been trying to prevent other Georgians from working, including bus drivers and factory workers.

The central square where the clash took place was covered today in flowers, placed as memorial tributes to the dead, said Zhorab Lomidze, an editor at the Georgian news agency Gruzinform.

"Official mourning ended yesterday," he said. "People went out to the square where the tragedy happened, and today the square is full of flowers."

As authorities enforced a ban on public gatherings and an 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew in Tbilisi, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev expressed his resolve Tuesday to oppose "extremism, anti-Soviet displays and the destructive actions of adventurist elements."

At a meeting with Hans-Jochen Vogel, head of West Germany's Social Democratic Party, Gorbachev was quoted by the official Tass news agency as saying he considered it a "sacred" principle that Georgians and others have the right to express their opinions freely, but that the law limits their actions.

"The question of state power is nothing to be trifled with or taken lightly," Vogel quoted Gorbachev as saying.

Cars and trolleys were adorned Tuesday with black flags and people wore black clothes and ribbons, said Nana Natadze, wife of a Georgian nationalist activist.

About 200 people were arrested for violating the curfew.

Concorde minus section of tail lands safely

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A Concorde jet with 100 Americans aboard lost a nine-foot piece of its tail today while attempting the aircraft's first supersonic circumnavigation of the globe, but it landed safely in Sydney.

"It wasn't till we got out of the plane and saw the firetrucks and all the press ... that we knew something was wrong," said American journalist William Buckley Jr., who helped organize the trip, which cost each passenger $39,000.

Part of the rudder disintegrated while the British Airways supersonic jet was flying at 40,000 feet at about 1,500 mph — nearly twice the speed of sound — from Christchurch, New Zealand, said Peter Stanton, an airline spokesman.

"It experienced a shudder while over the Tasman Sea that was thought to have been air turbulence," said Stanton.

He said the pilot was unaware of any problem until he was alerted by the control tower at Sydney's Kingsford-Smith International Airport.

But another passenger on the 1,000-mile flight, which lasted one hour and 25 minutes, said the plane shuddered and the passengers were tense.

Buckley said, "There is a possibility they (British Airways) will find a defect ... that will result in the grounding of other Concordes. But obviously they're hoping that won't be so, that this is simply an eccentric fluke."

"It was a normal landing, there was no emergency," Stanton said. "The pilot, Capt. David Leney, was told by the control tower that a piece of the tail was missing." There were no injuries among the 100 passengers, all Americans, on the 38,343-mile journey that started April 1 in London.

Pat Boody, a British Airways airport service manager, said the cause of the tail problem was being investigated and that the plane would not be allowed to fly "unless it is absolutely safe."

Australian Associated Press said the Concorde was about 15 years old and apparently had never experienced any problems.

"I'm glad that it was a plane that could manage without that much superfluous tail," said Buckley.

"If we had nosedived ... into the Tasmanian Sea, there would have been a considerable reaction. But one simply assumes that nothing fatal has happened if indeed there is no confirmation nor any visible invalidation of the ship's performance," he said.

In London, a British Airways spokeswoman said the airline was sending out spare parts to Australia to repair the plane, which would go on to Perth, Australia Friday as scheduled and then to Africa before returning to London. Another spokesman said the tail sections of other Concordes were being checked.

The Concorde had been trying to break the speed record on all stops.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President Thomas Jefferson, balladeer Peabo Bryson, actor Ricky Schroder, actress Saundra Santiago, playwright Samuel Beckett, singers Al Green and Howard Keel, actor Lyle Waggoner, soap actress Page Hannah, merchant F.W. Woolworth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to look into the true state of your financial affairs. Close the books on an old romance and go smiling in pursuit of better times. The future holds wonderful surprises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Build savings and stay in the black. Keep your credit cards in your pocket. Showing more affection will create a better climate for close relationships. Loved one needs your understanding and support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Short-term emotional involvements may be too complicated to be satisfying. Look for new worlds to conquer in your career field. Do not give in to pressure from overly cautious associates. Think bold!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are accountable for your own actions, but not for anyone else's. As your personal resources grow, so does your happiness. Try to complete whatever you start today. Follow-through is vital.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accept life as it arrives on your doorstep. Good fortune is on the way. A parent-child relationship takes on a new dimension. This could be a day of surprising revelations. Know yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Although early morning may be unsettling, by evening you will feel good about almost everything. Postpone both travel and launching new projects. Be extra careful if you work with heavy machinery. No daydreaming!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Chances are you will get important new responsibilities. Make sure you also get paid for what you will be doing. A spiritual reawakening is part of the picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stay in the saddle at work and show what an effective leader you are. Outdoor activities provide a valuable change of pace. Invite a close friend to join you. Educational endeavors also pay off.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Something happens that raises your expectations. You will need to be extremely diplomatic with higher-ups for the remainder of the week. Be careful not to overstep your authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Business deals will be complicated. Rely on expert advice and you could see higher profits in the near future. Pay attention to your intuition. Going against your instincts would be a big mistake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Little will stand between you and success today. Your persistence is rewarded. Good luck affects your money supply. The worst is over where a relationship is concerned. You will find happiness again!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Listen to your peers, but make final decisions based on your own experience and knowledge. Treat children like individuals. Get skeletons out of the closet.

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| 2 ♠ | Pass | 3 ♠ | 4 ♡ |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | |

Opening lead: Five of ♠

When a skilled player makes an unusual play you can assume there is a good reason for it. If you can work out why something strange occurred, the cure can become obvious.

At any vulnerability, especially favorable, East would have been better advised to raise his partner's weak two-bid all the way to game as a two-way action—it might make, or it could jack up the auction to a level where the opponents could not interfere.

West's opening lead of a low spade was taken by declarer's ace, and a club hit the table. That was a peculiar play with five clubs in the dummy, since it risked for an adverse ruff. West asked himself: Why didn't declarer draw trumps before playing on clubs? There was only one answer: Declarer had to have a hole in the trump suit.

That meant declarer had to have started with a singleton ace of spades. The club lead, therefore, had to be an attempt to get to the table for a discard on the king of spades, to be followed by a trump finesse. To prevent that desperate measures were called for, and West was up to the task. He rose with the ace of clubs and boldly shifted to the king of diamonds. A diamond to the ten, followed by the ace, cooked declarer's goose.

He was able to prevent an overruff by trumping with an honor, but West countered by discarding his remaining club. Declarer had no way to get to the board for the trump finesse, so he had to concede a trick to the king of hearts for down one.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

First Lady begins treatment to destroy overactive thyroid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush is undergoing radioactive treatment to destroy her thyroid gland because it is producing excess levels of hormones, a condition that has irritated her eyes and caused her to lose 18 pounds in recent months.

Bush

A White House statement said the procedure "has no significant side effects" and has been a standard treatment for 40 years for people suffering with her condition, known as Graves disease. It was to be administered today at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Once her thyroid gland has stopped operating, probably in two to three months, Mrs. Bush will have to take daily medication to maintain adequate hormone levels, according to her press secretary, Anna Perez.

Mrs. Bush consulted doctors last month because of swelling and irritation in her eyes, causing them to tear, and the sudden weight loss.

For several weeks, Mrs. Bush has been treated with methimazole, a drug that blocks production of excess hormones in the thyroid, a butterfly-shaped gland in the neck.

Ms. Perez said the use of drugs was an interim therapy and that the destruction of the thyroid through radiation was a more permanent treatment.

"She's feeling great. She's feeling just fine," Ms. Perez said. She said the first lady still was experiencing some problem with tears but that the condition was much improved.

Today's procedure, an alternative to surgery, was to be carried out with radioactive iodine in an oral solution. Once ingested, it seeks out the thyroid and begins destroying it.

Mrs. Bush was expected to be at the hospital for about two hours, including time for observation, and then return to the White House in time to host a mid-afternoon reception for visiting Queen Silvia of Sweden.

Left untreated, Graves disease can be life threatening, but it generally responds quickly to therapy.

It is caused when antibodies attack the thyroid gland and cause it to secrete too much hormone.

The disease is more apt to occur in older women.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival's jazzy 1989 poster can't get enough of Fats Domino.

A smiling Domino is shown in four identical 1960s portraits tinted in four colors.

"That's just fine," the 62-year-old New Orleans native said of the 20th anniversary poster. "It represents when I was young and I like that about it."

The poster, unveiled Tuesday, was done by New Orleans artist Richard Thomas.

"They told me they either wanted Louis Armstrong or Fats Domino and I said 'Let's do Fats,'" Thomas said. "I love them both, but people always kid me about how much I look like Fats."

Domino, who said he works five to six months a year now, will play May 7 at this year's jazzfest.

"All I need is a good piano and a good mike and I'm happy," the singer said.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Singer Ben E. King says the revival of his 1960 hit "Stand By Me" has brought new life to his career.

"You look to that one thing to keep you alive, like a motion picture actor looks for the one film that will make them live forever," said King, who is here for a two-week engagement at the Atlantis Casino Hotel. "I don't think I'll ever drop to a very low point again in my career."

The song was revived in the 1986 Rob Reiner film "Stand By Me," about a group of friends on a journey to find a dead boy's body.

"I wrote it as a love song," said King. "But why can't it be about kids friendship and depending on each other?

"Why can't it be about dealing with the things that lie ahead in life? Even I as the songwriter missed seeing the new interpretation."

LONDON (AP) — Sir John Gielgud couldn't bear to be there, but a star-studded cast including Albert Finney, Ian McKellen and Dame Judi Dench attended a luncheon to celebrate the actor's 85th birthday.

"I am most grateful to you all for being there today, but I really can't face the celebration of birthdays, and I feel that far too much is made of one's being old," Gielgud said in a letter that Dench read to the assemblage Tuesday.

"I dread making speeches and thanking people in public," Gielgud wrote.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean set partisan matters aside and took the stage at a charity cabaret for the theater run by Dukakis' Oscar-winning cousin, Olympia.

Dukakis

The actress introduced the governors as "two kids with a lot of talent, a lot of heart, on the brink of stardom — one had a national tour last year."

Her cousin, the 1988 Democratic presidential candidate, wailed "Happy Days are Here Again" on the trumpet and launched into "Michael Rowed the Boat Ashore" with jokes about the Boston Harbor campaign issue and the Alaskan oil spill.

Republican Kean, who will be president of Drew University after he leaves office, read a parody of Rudyard Kipling's "If" twitting both lame duck governors about prison furloughs and vanishing budget surpluses.

"Remember the greatest award lies ahead

"when at last you announce the end of your public days

"and watch some other joker go through it instead," he said.

"Superman" Christopher Reeve dropped in to proclaim himself "a Jersey boy," songwriter Jimmy Webb sang his "Wichita Lineman" and actress Blythe Danner sang "Peel Me a Grape."

About 450 people paid $150 to $500 to attend Sunday night's benefit, which raised $65,000 for Miss Dukakis' Whole Theater in Montclair.

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Singer Grace Jones was freed on bail after her lawyer argued she wanted to stand trial on a charge of cocaine possession to clear her name.

A magistrate on Tuesday freed Ms. Jones on $2,700 bail on condition she returns for trial June 6. She wasn't asked to enter a plea.

Spectators packed the small courtroom. A crowd of about 200 gathered outside, and some shouted support as she left.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.S. team in Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A U.S. military team arrived in Vietnam today for the fifth joint field investigation to account for American servicemen missing from the Vietnam War, a U.S. spokesman said.

The 10 specialists flew from Bangkok to Vietnam's capital of Hanoi for the 18-day mission, which is expected to be the longest of its type since the war ended, said Ross Petzing, Bangkok's U.S. Embassy spokesman.

Previous investigations were limited to about 10 days each.

The U.S. investigators, including forensic scientists, are from the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Army Central Identification Laboratory, both based in Honolulu. They will work with officials of Vietnam's Office For Seeking Missing Personnel.

U.S. Defense Department officials said earlier that most of the investigative work this month would focus on the area of Danang, a major port 400 miles southeast of Hanoi.

Officer speaks out on sub

MOSCOW (AP) — More sailors might have survived the sinking of a Soviet submarine off Norway if they had realized sooner that the vessel could not be saved, the Soviet Northern Fleet commander said in an interview published today.

"People didn't think about retreat, they were sure they would be able to save the ship, and so part of the submarine's crew didn't get a chance to use the life-saving equipment on board," Adm. Felix N. Gromov told the Defense Ministry newspaper Red Star.

The nuclear-powered submarine, carrying two nuclear-tipped missiles, caught fire and sank Friday, killing 42 of its crew of 69.

The Soviet navy plans to raise the ship from its resting place 4,950 feet deep to determine the exact cause of the disaster, Soviet television reported.

U.S. convoy ambushed

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Unidentified assailants ambushed a U.S. military convoy, raking it with gunfire and disabling a jeep with an explosive, but no casualties were reported, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The attack Tuesday in northern Honduras was the third this year on U.S. troops in the country.

The caravan of 11 jeeps was hit as it carried supplies to troops taking part in military exercises, said the spokesman, Charles V. Barclay. He said 14 U.S. and six Honduran soldiers were in the vehicles.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but leftist groups including the Cinchonero People's Liberation Movement have attacked U.S. troops in the past.

New earl gets grand tour

LINCOLN, England (AP) — The new Earl of Lincoln — a retired Australian sheep shearer — received a guided tour of his family seat in northeast England and called it a nice place.

Edward Fiennes-Clinton, 75, visiting Lincoln for the first time Tuesday and Britain for the second time, said he hopes to take advantage of the only real perk offered by his title — a seat in the House of Lords, the unelected upper chamber of Parliament.

When the Duke of Newcastle, wh was also the Earl of Lincoln, die last Christmas, historians began frantic search for the new earl.

PARADE OF HOMES

Color, pattern enliven decor

Through the use of passive solar design, the home of Ron and Judy Warren at 3805 St. Andrews Court was custom-designed with one thing in mind — maximum energy efficiency.

To achieve this, architect John Pankratz of the Frank Welch Agency designed the home with no west-facing windows. Instead, two bedrooms — located on the west wing of the house — have large picture windows on an inside hallway wall, with patio doors across the hall which provide access to the Warren's large backyard. In fact, almost every room of the Warren home has a view of the patio — which features a wisteria covered arbor — and spacious backyard.

"We love our backyard and spend a lot of time in it," Mrs. Warren said. "I love blooming flowers and every spring, I fill the (flower) beds and patio containers full of flowers."

The Warren's also enjoy their orchard behind the house. "We have 10 peach trees, numerous apple trees, pear and pecan trees, and grape vines that completely cover our back fence," Mrs. Warren said. "Our one-and-a-half acres with garden area and fruit trees gives us a feeling of being out in the country while still being close in."

The 3,080 square-foot home, built by John Salisbury, is seven years old, according Mrs. Warren.

HOME—Chinese fortune cookies an American concept

However, the Warrens have completely remodeled the home in the past year and a half, adding decorative molding and bookshelves and repainting.

"We basically had to come in and finish it," Mrs. Warren said.

Because she has her own decorating business — J. Warren Interiors — Mrs. Warren decorated the house herself. A combination of contemporary furnishings and heirloom pieces are mixed throughout the home. Several pieces of furniture have been recovered to blend with the decor. Her love for stripes is evident throughout the house.

Mrs. Warren has used a number of decorative house plants to add warmth and color to the decor.

A glass front door leads to a Mexican tiled entry. Visitors immediately are provided with a view of the patio area from the large picture window opposite the door. Walls painted toasted almond reflect the light streaming in from both the window and the door, creating a very light, bright area. Here, the floor plan divides into two wings.

TO THE right of the entry are four bedrooms and two baths; to the left are the living room, dining room, breakfast area, kitchen and work area.

The right wing has a long windowed hall providing access to each bedroom, as well as providing light and an outside view for each of these rooms.

The first room, with deep teal walls, is the guest bedroom featuring several pieces from Warren's grandmother's boarding house in Florida circa the mid-1800s, including the iron bedstead, bedside chest, mirror and china cabinet. In the corner of the room is a small doll that belonged to Warren's mother, dressed in Warren's white christening gown.

The guest bath is decorated in beige, and shades of peach and teal, and features brass accessories.

The two middle bedrooms serve as individual offices for the couple. Each office has built-in bookshelves where Mrs. Warren has displayed several family treasures and photographs.

THE FIRST of these two bedrooms is designed as Warren's study, complete with a built-in desk for his computer. The second is designed as Mrs. Warren's office. The peach walls and carpet give this room a soft background for the hodgepodge of collections displayed on the ceiling-to-floor shelves. Among the most intriguing knickknacks are Mrs. Warren's collection of limited, signed mime figurines and a small suitcase that her grandmother used to use to carry baby clothes.

The master bedroom is located at the end of the hallway. It is decorated in shades of tan, brown and crimson. The large, four-poster bed — a reproduction of an antique — is the focal point of the room. The bed is flanked by skirted bedside tables featuring storage space underneath. Floral curtains of crimson and deep teal adorn the windows and sliding glass doors to the patio. An antique armoire, which Mrs. Warren has had rebuilt with molding added to the top to increase its height, encases the television.

ALSO OF interest is the antique chair, which could be considered a predecessor to the recliner. It is called a Morris chair (after William Morris, the man who popularized it) and it has an adjustable back.

The large walk-in closet is tucked away in the master bath so that it almost goes unnoticed. The bath features high ceilings, a skylight and extra storage space.

The sunken living area — which Mrs. Warren likes to call the great room — is located to the left of the entry. Through a creative use of color and pattern, Mrs. Warren has created a very happy mood in this area. Plantation shutters decorate the windows and built-in shelves cover the east wall, allowing more room for some of the Warrens' collections. The room is centered around the fireplace, which the Warrens' have had completely rebuilt. The mantle is now home to part of Mrs. Warren's Parisian hand-painted doll collection.

Up a few steps from the sunken living area is the dining room which, according to Mrs. Warren, will easily seat 12. The seats of the dining chairs are covered with white and teal striped fabric. Teal and crimson window coverings accent the view to the patio and backyard area. Built-in glass shelves backed with mirrors flank the entrance to the living area, and heirloom china belonging originally to Warren's mother is kept in a lighted hutch.

A SMALL hallway leading to the breakfast room features a built-in serving bar with a wine storage space equipped with a cool slab for better temperature control.

The breakfast room is open to the kitchen and features more heirloom pieces of Warren's mother. The breakfast table was used by his mother at her boarding house for railroad workers, Mrs. Warren said.

The kitchen was totally remodeled and is now centered around a butcher block. It has white cabinets — including a built-in telephone desk — and tiled flooring. A silk vegetable arrangement designed by Mrs. Warren decorates one corner cabinet.

Adjacent to the kitchen and breakfast area is Mrs. Warren's work area where she stores many of her fabrics and silk flowers she uses in her decorating business.

"One of my favorite things to do is to take old furniture and redo it," Mrs. Warren said. Many of the heirloom and antique pieces in the Warren home have been recovered and refininshed.

Adding to the energy efficiency of the home is the use of ceiling fans throughout the house and the use of two-zoned heating and air conditioning systems.

HONG KONG — An old saying pokes fun at the eating habits of the southern Chinese: Whatever flies in the sky, whatever crawls on the ground, whatever swims in the sea, the Cantonese will eat it all.

There is an exception, however, that may seem strange to Americans. Very few Cantonese or Chinese elsewhere in Hong Kong, Taiwan or China have a taste for fortune cookies.

At Chinese restaurants across the United States, fortune cookies usually go hand-in-hand with a Chinese meal.

But many Chinese on this side of the Pacific have never heard of fortune cookies, let alone eaten one.

A year and a half ago, Nancy C. Anderson, a Chinese woman who married an American, tried to change this by introducing the cookie to Hong Kong.

Now she imports fortune cookies made in California and sells them in Hong Kong to fancy delicatessens that cater to foreigners and young Chinese professionals.

"Europeans and Americans here have this idea that fortune cookies come from China," said Mrs. Anderson, 42, who was born in Shanghai.

"They can't imagine they were made in the United States," she said.

Mrs. Anderson advertises her product as "Genuine American Fortune Cookies."

"Fortune cookies?" said a teacher in Beijing who lived in the United States for eight years. "Oh yes, I've seen them in the States."

The fortune cookie may have originally been created by Chinese immigrants in the United States, a makeshift rendition of a food or custom dear to them at home.

EVEN CHINESE restaurant owners in New York are puzzled by the origins of the fortune cookie, although they do say the cookie was a Chinese-American invention.

One version of the cookies' origin traces the notion of treats bearing messages back to the Yuan Dynasty in the 12th century.

During the revolts against the Mongols, who had invaded and ruled China, rebels monks had to devise a way to pass details about the rebellions to the peasants. So they slipped messages into moon-cakes, a sweet holiday dessert, and sold them to the people.

Message-bearing cakes were also used in ancient Chinese parlor games. Players used to write wise and witty sayings on scraps of paper that were then inserted into twisted cakes.

Mrs. Anderson suspects Chinese immigrants remembered this bit of history when they settled in the United States.

Many of them were Buddhists, accustomed to going to temple to pray and have their fortunes told.

Early Chinese immigrants in the United States had no temples for prayers and fortune-telling, Mrs. Anderson said. So perhaps they baked moon-cakes with fortunes in them and sold them in their restaurants, she said.

Another story traces the invention to George Jung, who founded the Hong Kong Noodle Co. in 1916 in Los Angeles.

In her book "Madame Chu's Chinese Cooking School," Grace Zia Chu says that perhaps Jung created the fortune cookies to cheer people up after World War I.

BUT SHE ALSO adds that Jung may have invented fortune cookies to amuse dinner guests while they waited for their orders.

Importing the cookie has forced Mrs. Anderson and her Japanese supplier in America to make a few changes in the way a fortune cookie is sold.

Her cookies are individually wrapped in clear cellophane to protect against humidity and dirt during the ocean voyage.

To Americans who are used to seeing a bunch of fortune cookies handed out on a plate at the end of dinner, this may seem a little awkward, like single-wrapped Oreos.

The Chinese also take a different approach to the cookie, trying to pluck out the fortune without letting the cookie crumble.

Mrs. Anderson then explains to them that it is proper to break the cookie to get the fortune.

"The Chinese eat the cookie first and then look at the piece of paper," Mrs. Anderson said. "Most Americans look at the fortune first."

Despite her efforts to insure proper handling of the cookies, restaurant managers have been suspicious.

"There is a sanitary problem," said Fred Yip, the senior purchasing manager at Maxim's Caterers Ltd., which runs a chain of Chinese restaurants in Hong Kong. "We are afraid that the paper inside the cookie is not sanitary."

Zoo work can mean exotic cuisine

Copley News Service

Dr. John Phillips of the San Diego Zoo smelled a rat and then ate it.

"It was down in Central America, in Belize. It was a paca, a rodent made into a stew.

"Not exactly yum-yum. But edible," Phillips says.

It was but a taste of his doings for the zoo.

Phillips is a comparative physiologist. Which means he helps make wildlife feel at home in the zoo as much as possible.

See him flee an angry komodo dragon in Indonesia. See him warn an Australian customs guard he'd better not open that jar. See him make a scene in a Santa Barbara, Calif., restaurant.

But first, rat-eating.

He'd gone to Belize, formerly British Honduras, hunting lizards for the zoo. Locals told him he had to eat paca.

"The paca dish they served me was sort of like a creole stew. Tasted like beef.

"Who was I to complain?" Phillips says. "Look at Queen Elizabeth."

Britain's monarch was visiting her former colony the same time as Phillips. Her former subjects felt they must offer her, too, their national delicacy. Phillips says the local press was so delighted when Elizabeth noshed on paca that a Belize newspaper headline screamed: "QUEEN FED RAT!"

ONCE, LOOKING for birds of paradise, Phillips romped into some New Guinea jungle denser than most. The almost midget Chimbu tribesmen, lots of 5-foot-nothing fellows armed with poisoned arrows, came to protect Phillips and his fellow romper, Hawaiian museum official Dr. Alan Allison, from beasts and 6-foot-plus Toli tribesman.

One night the Chimbus said they'd make supper.

Don't bother, said Phillips.

Quiet, said Allison. The only thing they dislike worse than Toli warriors is folks refusing their food, he told Phillips.

Phillips sat and ate what looked like chunks of crunchy charcoal and tasted like chunks of crunchy charcoal. The Chimbus gave him eight chunks. Phillips ate it all and smiled.

Later, Allison said some may have bats in their belfry but now Phillips had bats in his belly. They had been eating whole roasted bats.

"I had no woe with my stomach," says Phillips. "Just in my head."

Once, in a komodo dragon pit in Indonesia, Phillips learned the joy of haste.

A komodo dragon delights younger zoo-goers. It has a long, blue, forked tongue. It can grow as long as a crocodile. It sometimes eats people.

Phillips and an Indonesian scientist had gathered eight of the big-toothed dragons in a 15-foot-deep pit for study. First, were the eight male or female? There was only one way to find out.

They lowered a 10-foot-long box into the pit. They climbed down a ladder, put meat in one end of the open-ended box and waited. An 8-foot-plus komodo dragon scrambled into the long trap for the meat.

Bang! The ends came down. The dragon was trapped. Phillips thrust his arm into the box. He reached for the dragon's rear — it is the only way to tell a komodo's sex.

THE DRAGON, a powerful beast, did not like this. The dragon began thrashing. With his right arm still inside, Phillips saw the box breaking up. Nails were popping out.

"I yanked out my arm and flashed up the ladder. The Indonesian was just behind me. So was the dragon. It was coming after us.

"Just as the dragon had moved most of the way up the ladder, a helper pushed the ladder back. The dragon and ladder tumbled back. We were safe," he says.

To better study the dragon, Phillips collected 24 glass jars of komodo droppings in New Guinea on another trip. Bringing them home, he had to pass through Australian customs in Sydney.

Customs inspector: "What's in the jars?"

Phillips: "Komodo dragon foo-foo."

Customs inspector: "Bah. Looks like dope to me. You a smuggler? Open it up."

Phillips: "You don't want it opened. Nothing smells worse than komodo dragon droppings."

Customs inspector: "We'll see about that."

Phillips says the inspector "opened a jar, took a major-league whiff and immediately threw up."

The doctor is no stranger to other exotic sights. Once, in a Namibian jungle where even Land Rovers go on tiptoe, he stumbled upon a nudist health resort run by Americans wearing only shoes for the benefit of wealthy Canadians wearing even less.

He says one of his more exciting adventures came in the wilds of Santa Barbara.

"UP THERE, actor James Brolin's ex-wife Jane takes in mountain lions which have been kept as cubs as house pets. She prepares them for release into the wild. I had gone there to photograph them in one of her enclosures.

"I noticed a 120-pound female mountain lion staring at a Nikon camera lens I had set down beside me. The big cats are like pussies. They like to play. To her the lens was a ball.

"I bent to yank away the lens. The big cat leaped. It landed on my back," Phillips says.

He still has the scars from the lion's claws. The animal also cut him under his left ear. Blood flowed.

"Jane got the big cat off me. If the mountain lion had wanted to kill me, I wouldn't be here now. She just wanted to keep me from grabbing the lens she wanted," Phillips says.

"We staunched the bleeding. I cleaned up. Jane gave me one of James' white shirts and led me to a very expensive restaurant in Santa Barbara.

"Everything went dandy," says Phillips. "Until I noticed all the other diners and the waiters staring at us. Ah, I thought, Jane is so nice-looking and I'm so handsome. Then our waiter came over.

" 'I assume you know, sir,' said the waiter, 'that blood is flowing down your nice white shirt.' "

Pizza most appealing aroma for U.S. children

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Mom's homemade apple pie apparently has lost its emotional appeal.

Given a choice of what one thing they could smell for the rest of their lives, kids chose pizza.

At least that was the most popular answer in an essay contest — sponsored by a pharmaceutical company, not a pizzeria — for school children in grades one through six.

And what one sight would they like to add to a desert island? Their families — not necessarily including

More than 12,000 students answered

"According to entrants, the powers of pizza are almost limitless," says contest director Beth Dauley. "It seems that the way to a youngster's heart is the nearest pizzeria."

DEAR ABBY

AIDS patients advised to keep selves informed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: According to the AmFar (American Foundation for AIDS Research): If you are told, after careful and competent medical evaluation, that you are HIV-positive, that you have AIDS-related illness or that you have AIDS, it is important to keep the following information in mind:

Being HIV-positive (infected) does not mean that an individual will immediately get sick.

Though a diagnosis of AIDS or HIV infection is nobody's idea of good news, it is NOT an instant "death sentence." In some individuals, even full-blown AIDS has not proved fatal over a period of many years. Like many other illnesses, there are cycles: Things get a little worse, things get a little better, etc.

There are no hard and fast rules about how quickly HIV disease progresses. Although there are isolated cases in which an individual is diagnosed one day and gone the next, by and large, most patients (and their families) have a bit of time to consider carefully their options. You should take the time to seek out medical advice from a doctor you trust.

A word about experimental drugs and drug trials: Presently, new agents and ideas are being studied in the lab. In time, some of these may work better than anything that's being tested in the clinics. If you're impatient to know what's new and possibly promising, keep current by reading some of the established medical journals that report regularly on AIDS research, such as The Journal of the American Medical Association or The New England Journal of Medicine. But do not be fooled into thinking you can be your own doctor after reading a selection of articles.

There is no such thing as the Official Guide to Coping With Serious Illness. However, there is something very real that is known as "the will to live." It cannot be found in a test tube or under a microscope. Every person must discover it for himself. If you have it or can find it, the will to live can make a difference.

DEAR ABBY: Hi! I am an 18-year-old father who needs some advice. Six months ago my ex-girlfriend and I had a baby boy together, but that's not the problem.

When she was seven months into her pregnancy, we broke up permanently and I started seeing someone else. Well, this "someone else" and I had sex and now she's pregnant. I want no part of this. I don't love her and never did. She was just another girl, and I want to forget that this ever happened.

Here's my question: How can I live a normal life without this someone else and her family bothering me? I've got a beautiful 6-month-old son now, and I'm going for custody because his mother has proven herself unfit to raise him. What should I do? — C.S. IN OREGON

DEAR C.S.: Whoa — back up. You say you got a girl pregnant, and now you want no part of it; you want to forget it ever happened. You must be kidding.

Sorry, young fellow, even if you feel no moral obligation for any child you father, you have a legal obligation to support that child.

I suggest you see a lawyer. And I hope you can come up with all the money you'll need to handle the financial responsibility of supporting these children until they are adults.

You'd better develop a conscience and a sense of responsibility soon, or your son will become a man before you do.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for telling your readers about the book "Flying Without Wings," by Dr. Arnold Beisser (Doubleday). Excellent! My husband has severe emphysema and is on oxygen full time. We got the book, I read it aloud, and we enjoyed and discussed it.

It gave me a totally new respect and feeling for my husband's condition. He could identify with the author, who was severely disabled because of polio.

Again, you have helped many. — MRS. GERALD O. TRUDELL, MESA, ARIZ.

Classic foods fit today's convenience-oriented lifestyles

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's consumer has little time or inclination to fuss with elaborate meals.

Over 56 percent of all American women work, which cuts heavily into meal preparation, yet the new generation of baby-boomers want better and fresher foods. And they are not ready to sacrifice taste and variety.

One answer: pasta, perhaps Italy's first fast food.

Pasta can take just minutes to prepare. And fast does not necessarily mean fattening. Without sauce, a 2-ounce portion of cooked pasta is only 210 calories.

Guido Conti, director of the Flavors of Italy show and exhibition, says Italian foods are easy to prepare, delicious and healthy. Based on natural ingredients, lower sodium and olive oil, Conti says Italian foods are the ideal foods for the 1990s.

"Our cuisine is historically rooted in high quality foods that are versatile and fit in perfectly with today's lifestyle," he says.

Instead of using smoke, salt, sugar or artificial preservatives, Italy has traditionally favored olive oil, vinegar, or sun-drying. As a result, a wide variety of vegetables and spices are preserved in oil, adding zest and taste to many recipes.

Piero Antolini, president of I Mastri Oleari, Italy's only olive oil guild, says olive oil is judged, much like wine, by its taste, flavor, aroma, color and degree of acidity. I Mastri Oleari helps establish the standards by which olive oil is judged.

"Olive oil is cholesterol-free and it is higher in monounsaturated fats than any oil," Antolini says. "Studies show that monounsaturates reduce cholesterol."

Many cheeses from Italy are low in fat because historically it was often the practice to cull the butter and cream for the nobility and preserve the remainder for local cheese production.

Low-fat mozzarella, for example, can be used as an alternative to low-fat cottage cheese. Mozzarella may contain as little as 73 calories per ounce, compared to 150 calories per ounce of American cheese.

The Flavors of Italy gourmet show will feature over 200 of Italy's leading food manufacturers and wineries, as well as the fare from nine of its leading culinary regions. It will be open to the trade from April 27-April 30, and to the public from May 1-2, at Pier 90 of the Passenger Ship Terminal in New York. There is an admission fee.

Strawberries top cheesecake

Associated Press

This cheesecake recipe gets my vote as the best we've ever published. It's rich and creamy, yet light and fluffy. Top it with strawberries as we suggest, or use your favorite fruit or sauce. My husband likes it best with fresh raspberries; my son prefers cherry sauce.

To test the cheesecake for doneness, gently shake the side of the pan. The center should appear nearly set. It will set as the cheesecake cools. Loosen the pan sides after baking to keep the cheesecake edges from cracking. Sometimes the top will crack; that's normal.

REGAL CHEESECAKE

1 6-ounce package zwieback
4 tablespoons margarine or butter, melted
2 tablespoons sugar
2 8-ounce packages cream cheese
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
3 egg yolks
2 8-ounce cartons dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites
6 to 8 whole strawberries, hulled and halved
½ cup currant jelly

Finely crush zwieback; stir in margarine and 2 tablespoons sugar. Press onto bottom and 1½ inches up sides of a greased 9-inch springform pan. Set aside.

In a large mixer bowl beat cream cheese until smooth. Add 1 cup sugar; beat until fluffy. Add whole eggs and egg yolks; beat on low speed just until mixed. Stir in sour cream, lemon juice and vanilla. Transfer sour cream mixture to another large bowl. Thoroughly wash the large mixer bowl and beaters.

In the large mixer bowl beat egg whites until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight). Fold beaten whites into sour cream mixture. Turn into prepared pan. (Filling is higher than crust.) Bake in 350-degree oven 60 to 65 minutes or until center is almost set. Cool on wire rack 5 to 10 minutes. Using a thin metal spatula, loosen cheesecake from sides of pan. Cool 30 minutes more; remove sides of pan. Cool completely. Cover and chill for several hours or overnight.

About 1 hour before serving, arrange halved strawberries in a circle on top of cheesecake. In a small saucepan heat jelly over low heat just until melted; spoon over strawberries and center of cheesecake. Chill 30 to 60 minutes or until jelly sets. Cut into wedges to serve.

Sizzling cheese salad easy to prepare

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

You'll wow spring dinner guests with this spectacular salad. Despite its impressive look and taste, it's not hard to make because you can divide the preparation into several simple steps. Hours ahead of time, prepare the platter of greens, shake together the dressing, and shape the cheese patties. Cover and chill them all. Fry the cheese patties just before serving.

SIZZLING CHEESE SALAD

4 cups torn mixed greens
¼ cup pitted ripe olives
6 tomato wedges
2 teaspoons sliced green onion
¼ cup salad oil
¼ cup tarragon vinegar
2 tablespoons water
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
2 tablespoons cornmeal
1 tablespoon fine dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon sesame seed, toasted
2 teaspoons grated Parmesan cheese
4 ounces Neufchatel cheese, cut up
1 cup shredded gjetost cheese (4 ounces)
2 tablespoons margarine or butter

On a platter arrange greens, olives and tomatoes; sprinkle with green onion. Cover; chill. For dressing, in a screw-top jar combine oil, vinegar, 2 tablespoons water and mustard. Cover and shake. Chill.

In a small bowl combine egg and 1 tablespoon water. In shallow bowl combine cornmeal, bread crumbs, sesame seed and Parmesan cheese.

In a small mixer bowl beat Neufchatel and gjetost cheeses with an electric mixer until combined. Shape mixture into 12 equal balls; flatten to form 2-inch patties. Dip each into egg mixture; coat with cornmeal mixture. Cover and chill.

At serving time, in a 10-inch skillet melt margarine. Add patties; cook on medium heat 3 to 5 minutes or until golden, turning once. Arrange patties on top of the salad. Shake dressing and serve with salad. Serves 6.

Cold cereal considered best nourshing breakfast

Copley News Service

The best nourished are children who eat cereal, reports Dr. Gretchen Hill, assistant professor at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

In a study of 548 preschoolers, those who regularly ate cold, store-bought cereal met their daily vitamin and mineral requirements better than children who ate any other type of breakfast or those children who ate no breakfast.

House rejects S&L requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are rejecting President Bush's effort to make the savings and loan industry meet the same capital requirements as banks in return for bailing out the thrift industry.

The administration and other reformers, however, are succeeding in early House action to end many "accounting fictions" that enabled S&L operators to hide billions of dollars in losses.

On a 24-23 vote Tuesday, the House financial institutions subcommittee rebuffed Bush's insistence on doubling the required capital base of S&Ls from 3 percent to 6 percent, the same level that commercial banks have to meet.

But then in several votes against the panel's chairman, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., it endorsed elimination of several "smoke and mirror" accounting practices that allow S&L owners to meet the present capital standards with little or no investment of their own.

Meanwhile, the Senate Banking Committee is scheduled to begin formally amending Bush's 330-page bailout bill today after reaching a bipartisan consensus behind closed doors "on nearly all issues," according to its chairman, Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich.

One Senate committee member, speaking on the condition of anonymity, predicted its version will be much tougher than whatever emerges from the House in regulating S&Ls in the future.

But Riegle conceded in a letter to Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady that financing the taxpayer portion of the bailout "remains unresolved." And committee sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, predicted a party-line fight on the issue.

Bush wants to raise the $50 billion immediate taxpayer share of the bailout through 30-year bonds to be issued by a new quasi-governmental corporation as a way to prevent the costs from showing up on the federal deficit this year and next.

Riegle, with support from congressional auditors and "acquiescence" of Senate Budget Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., wants to put the bulk of the costs in the fiscal 1989 budget, saying it would save taxpayers $4.5 billion in lower interest costs over three decades.

In his letter dated Monday to Brady, Riegle said he was aware of the treasury secretary's threat earlier this month that Bush would veto the bill if the bailout costs are included in the 1989 or 1990 budget deficits.

"We have made substantial movement toward the administration's direction on the regulatory and structural aspects but have yet to see any flexibility from you on the funding dimension," he complained.

Will the real Oriyx stand up?

Unusual name change breeds some confusion

DALLAS (AP) — Sun Exploration and Production Co. went looking for a unique new name and found a jungle full of homonyms, but only after choosing an antelope for its new symbol.

Sun E&P announced with some fanfare on March 21 it was changing its name to Oryx Energy Corp. because it believed the qualities of the namesake antelope reflected the company.

Two weeks later, Sun executives were stunned to open up the Wall Street Journal and find yet another Orix in the marketplace as Orient Leasing Co. Ltd. announced its own new handle.

"I guess everybody would have been really concerned if it had been spelled the same," said Sun spokesman Tom Sullivan, who said the company nevertheless has no plans to abandon Oryx, even though shareholders have yet to give it their OK.

There is another Oryx out there, however, lurking on page 368 of the Dallas phone book.

This one is Oryx Development Corp. of Austin, and spokesman William Mina said, "We're getting a lot of calls for Oryx Energy. That's all I can say."

Out of more than half a million English words, the selection of such an unusual, soundalike names "is an incredible coincidence," said Lee Ballard, director of the naming center at The Richards Group, the Dallas agency that came up with the name for Sun E&P.

Ballard, who headed up the two-month project, said "oryx"

MHCC eyes job training program

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Helping underprivileged members of the minority community has been a top priority for the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce since its founding.

At Tuesday's monthly chamber meeting, two representatives of the Permian Basin Private Industry Council, which oversees the Job Training Partnership Act, discussed with members a new tool to accomplish this goal.

PIC employment representative W.C. Wilson described for members the JTPA summer youth employment and training act, aimed at economically disadvantaged youth aged 14 to 21. He estimated the program will provide jobs for approximately 200 in Midland County.

"The purpose is to employ young people so they can earn money to buy clothing, food, things they need so it will be easier for them to stay in school," he stated.

In addition, the program addresses students' remedial problems, working with the Midland Independent School District's alternative education center to help borderline students raise their grades and return to regular classes.

Advanced students are also addressed, being given the chance to attend classes at Midland College in the mornings and work at a job in the afternoon. The program offers students 38 hours of school and work and two hours of counseling, Wilson told members.

Josie Paz, job placement representative with the JTPA, told members that the act also addresses adult workers, offering training or new skills to the unemployed so they can reenter the workforce.

Among the incentives to businesses is that the JTPA will reimburse 50 percent of the employee's salary during the training period, Paz said, and there is no paperwork until an employee is chosen.

She added that the JTPA will send an employer two or three applicants to choose from, and once one is chosen, a contract is drawn up specifying the amount of salary reimbursement and a training schedule. The JTPA then does follow-up interviews to make sure the employee is getting the training agreed on and the employer is sent a monthly evaluation form on the employee.

"The objective is that at the end of the training period, the individual will have full-time permanent employment," Paz pointed out.

In other business, the chamber recognized Gilbert Garcia of Goddard Junior High as educator of the month and Maria Elena Ramirez and James Saenz of Midland High and Nancy Fierro and Enrico Enriquez of Lee High as outstanding students of the month.

Also, Executive Director Elvia Hernandez reported that the chamber offices will be moved into their new location at 1100 Parker this coming week-end. She also announced that a summer session of "Step Up to Success" is scheduled for June 10 at Midland College.

Impasse seen on minimum wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration and Democratic congressional leaders are trying to convince the public the other side is to blame for an impasse that threatens prospects for a higher minimum wage.

The finger pointing is taking place as Congress moves closer to sending President Bush a minimum-wage bill he repeatedly has vowed to veto. Such a development could lead to a ninth consecutive year without an increase in the minimum wage despite the first White House support this decade for some boost.

The House already has passed a measure that would boost the minimum wage to $4.55 an hour by October 1991 and a final Senate vote on a similar bill could come today, although consideration of a lengthy list of proposed amendments could push it back to Thursday.

Polls have shown the public overwhelmingly supports an increase, a fact not lost during the partisan wrangling.

NCNB Texas earning listed at $58.8 million

DALLAS (AP) — NCNB Texas National Bank, which took over First RepublicBank Corp.'s 40 failed banks last year, earned $58.08 million in its first full quarter and the managing partner said Tuesday it may consider increasing its stake in the Texas bank.

NCNB Texas said the earnings were driven by a net interest income of $187.27 million.

"The higher level of net interest income reflected growth both in our investment securities and loan portfolios," Vice Chairman Timothy P. Hartman said.

The bank said its investment securities portfolio grew $1 billion from year's end to $4.7 billion. Total assets were up from $25.57 billion to $26.35 billion and total deposits rose from $20.47 billion to $20.8 billion.

In Charlotte, N.C., where the superegional NCNB is headquartered, Chairman Hugh McColl said NCNB Texas "solid first-quarter earnings (lead) us to consider increasing our ownership position from the current 20 percent."

Overall, NCNB reported net income for the three months ended March 31 totaled $75.8 million, or 82 cents a share, up 8 percent from earnings of $70.02 million, or 83 cents per share, in 1988.

NCNB said the results included $10.8 million, or 13 cents per share, in earnings from NCNB Texas branches, reflecting the parent company's 20 percent ownership interest. The remaining 80 percent is held by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. NCNB has five years to increase its ownership, but has indicated it may not wait that long before expanding its holdings.

NCNB's overall results also included $5 million in dividends on convertible preferred stock issued to fund the investment.

Deadlock over pipe settled

From Staff Reports

A tug-of-war over 1,500 feet of pipe belonging to Pacific Texas Pipeline was settled late last week with removal of the pipe.

Midland firms Temporary Resources Inc. and Bekins Van Lines Action Moving & Storage had sought the pipe in settlement of Pacific Texas' debts. Late Friday, Pittsburgh Pipe, a Missouri-based creditor, agreed to settle the firm's debts with the local companies for a total of $10,000.

The action halted an auction scheduled for Monday at the pipeline's construction site at FM 307 and Fairgrounds by the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Crude prices turn lower

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices headed lower today, with contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate dropping 21 cents to stand at $20.42 at midmorning.

WTI closed Tuesday at $20.63 a barrel, up 4 cents. The contract jumped 57 cents Monday.

Gasoline futures surged in hectic trading, reflecting continued seasonal demand and concern that a California refinery fire might sharply curtail production.

Prices for unleaded gasoline futures traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange had jumped more than 3 cents a gallon at one point Tuesday, before profit-taking helped push the closing price down to a gain of just under 2 cents.

Bob Baker, an energy analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., attributed the uproar in the gasoline pits to news of a fire at Chevron Oil Co.'s busy Richmond, Calif., refinery.

He said traders speculated that gasoline and jet fuel production there could be curtailed by up to 25 percent as a result of the blaze.

"The markets are a bit distrustful of supply capabilities lately anyway," said Baker.

Oil prices, particularly gasoline, have gotten a boost in recent weeks from the massive Exxon oil tanker spill off the coast of Alaska. Strong seasonal demand and new summer octane regulations that are likely to strain refinery capacity gave the market its initial strength.

On the New York Merc, the May contract for unleaded gasoline jumped 1.71 cents to settle Tuesday at 69 cents a gallon. The contract had risen 2.34 cents on Monday.

Dollar edges higher overseas

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged higher against major foreign currencies in light European trading early today. Gold prices were lower.

Dealers said they expected the dollar to trade within a narrow range, squeezed by dollar demand and fears of intervention by central banks, before Friday's release of several key U.S. economic indicators.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

— 1.8850 West German marks, up from 1.8825

— 1.6651 Swiss francs, up from 1.6582

— 6.3638 French francs, up from 6.3535

— 2.1268 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1225

— 1,380.50 Italian lire, up from 1,379.25

— 1.1900 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1888

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6910 from $1.6995 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $383.80 a troy ounce, down from $385.25 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $384.15.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.82 a troy ounce, down from $5.84 bid late Tuesday.

Stocks rise in uncertain trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose in light trading Tuesday amid ongoing uncertainty about the direction of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 9.71 points to finish the day at 2,311.58.

In the broader market, advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by about 12 to 7 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 878 issues up, 515 down and 566 unchanged.

Stocks opened higher, peaked around midday and then moved sideways for the remainder of the session. Volume remained light, with many institutional players staying on the sidelines to await the slew of economic data scheduled for release later in the week.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Eastern deal close to collapsing

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter V. Ueberroth's $464 million deal to buy strike-bound Eastern Airlines veered toward collapse today in an apparent impasse with its parent Texas Air Corp.

Dow Jones News Service quoted Eastern President Phil Bakes as saying the parties planned a news conference later to "explain why this deal didn't go through." But Eastern attorneys told The AP the news conference was canceled.

"I don't think you can say that the deal is definitely off," Eastern attorney David Boies said. "All you can say is there is no deal right now and the parties are still talking."

Pritzker family reduces Ramada stake

CHICAGO (AP) — The Pritzker family has reduced its stake in Ramada Inc. to less than 5 percent, indicating the billionaire clan has chosen to take profits rather than try to take over the Arizona-based hotelier, analysts said.

HCC Corp., a Chicago company headed by Jay A. Pritzker, said in an April 5 filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it had sold 959,100 shares of Ramada stock from March 16 through April 5 at an average price of $11.29 a share. Ramada stock closed Tuesday at $11.75 a share, unchanged.

New drive-through video stores open

By MELLA McEWEN

McEwen

VIDTRON, the chain of drive-through video stores, arrives in Midland this week with the opening of the first store Thursday in the Kmart parking lot. The second store will open in San Miguel Square April 18.

A trio of Midlanders purchased the West Texas region, expanding from San Antonio through the Panhandle, El Paso to Abilene, and Eastern New Mexico. They are Terry Scott, chief executive officer, Lewis Thompson, president, and Nancy Thompson, secretary-treasurer. Scott also owns Quality Body Works.

Lewis Thompson said Vidtron will carry multiple copies of the top 40 releases — there will be 30 copies of the top seven — as well as children's movies, science-fiction and horror movies and some westerns. He noted the stores will carry 95 titles and hold 650 movies.

New releases rent for $2.49, children's movies for $1, and customers who rent three or more can keep the movies an extra day. In addition, customers can rent video players. Customers who rent

Memberships are free — the customer has to come by and fill out a card — and members receive a weekly listing of upcoming video releases.

New regs may hit aging U.S. aircraft

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is moving to impose new maintenance standards on older airliners, but industry officials say the agency needs to do a more thorough job of inspecting the aircraft.

The Senate aviation subcommittee examined the problem of aging airliners at a hearing on Tuesday, a session that also produced a warning from the panel's chairman that tougher government regulations might be on the way.

The chairman, Wendell Ford, D-Ky., told reporters after the session that Congress should consider requiring the FAA to force an increase in the frequency of inspections of older aircraft, require replacing certain parts rather than examinations of them, and set training and experience standards for airline inspectors and mechanics.

Ever since the roof of a 19-year-old Aloha Airlines Boeing 737 peeled off over Hawaii last April, sweeping a flight attendant to her death, attention has been focused on the older aircraft.

The FAA and the nation's major airlines agreed in February to more than $800 million worth of improvements to be made on 1,300 older Boeing jetliners. The goal is to eliminate certain routine inspections in favor of design improvements and a schedule for regular replacements of certain parts.

On Tuesday, Anthony J. Broderick, the FAA's associate administrator for regulation, said that late this month or in early May, the agency will propose rules that would require more than 160 structural changes in Boeing 727s, 737s and 747s.

The last year has been a difficult one for the older members of the U.S. airline fleet. Nine people died in December when a 19-year-old United Airlines Boeing 747 broke open over Hawaii; a 22-year-old Eastern Airlines Boeing 727 landed without casualties after a hole opened in its fuselage while flying over West Virginia; and an 8-year-old Piedmont Airlines 727 lost an engine during takeoff from Chicago.

The average age of airliners used by U.S. carriers is 12.7 years, up from 8 years in 1980. It is expected to be 15 years by the year 2000, because there are backlogs of orders for new aircraft and an ever-growing passenger load.

At the hearing, officials from the FAA, the airlines and the aircraft manufacturing industry assured lawmakers that improvements were being made constantly in how aircraft are constructed, maintained, tested and inspected.

But Benjamin A. Cosgrove, a vice president for engineering for Boeing Commercial Airplanes, a Boeing subsidiary, said FAA inspectors should spend more time examining airlines and less time checking paperwork, and complained that FAA fines for maintenance infractions can be counterproductive.

"Routine use of such penalties tends to drive problems underground and communication in the industry suffers," Cosgrove said.

Clyde Kizer, engineering vice president for the Air Transport Association, which represents the major airlines, said the group is considering whether inspectors and mechanics for all carriers should be required to meet uniform training standards.

This angered Ford, who asked: "Why should there be any question but that you should go ahead with strict training and education across-the-board?"

Cable television called multi-billion monopoly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcasters told Congress today that the cable television industry has grown into a multibillion-dollar monopoly in the absence of federal controls and should be re-regulated to ensure the survival of free, over-the-air TV.

The broadcasters said the 1984 Cable Act essentially deregulated the cable industry and said cable companies that once were poor cousins to traditional broadcasters now dominate the local TV marketplace.

"In 1984 when Congress passed the Cable Act, cable characterized itself as a struggling, infant industry," said Edward O. Fritts, president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

"That act, which in essence removed all regulatory oversight, has become the communications equivalent of anabolic steroids. Today, cable television operators enjoy an unregulated monopoly. Amazingly, only 32 of more than 8,000 cable systems have any direct competition," Fritts said.

Fritts said cable TV now is a $14 billion industry that is available to nearly 80 million U.S. homes. He said the five largest cable companies account for more than 40 percent of current subscribers.

He said cable rates are going up and cable companies are siphoning off sports programs that once were broadcast free.

"We ask Congress to lift the thumb that has caused the imbalance in the competitive scale," Fritts said.

Fritts testified before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on antitrust, monopolies and business rights.

The subcommittee is studying the cable industry and the antitrust implications of the proposed merger of Time Inc. and Warner Communications. Time already has the nation's second largest cable system, American Television & Communications Corp., while Warner has Warner Cable Communications.

Opponents fear the "horizontal concentration" of cable interests that the merger would create, and the "vertical integration" of giving the nation's largest pay-cable programmer, Time Inc.'s Home Box Office, direct access to cable systems.

Subcommittee chairman Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, has expressed reservations about the proposed $18 billion merger.

However, the Justice Department last week gave the merger its blessing.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., has reintroduced legislation that would require cable systems to carry all local broadcasters (known as "must carry rules") and keep cable operators from changing the channel assignments for the local broadcasters.

The courts have struck down the Federal Communications Commission's must carry rules twice.

National Cable Television Association President James Mooney has said the cable industry is willing to work with broadcasters to adopt new must carry rules that will satisfy the courts.

But Preston R. Padden, president of the Association of Independent Television Stations, said that "despite the best of intentions by cable trade association executives and industry leaders ... local independent television stations continue to suffer anti-competitive conduct at the hands of cable system operators."

He said one example of vertical integration is Turner Broadcasting Co., which operates Cable News Network, Headline News, WTBS and the TNT movie channel.

He said channel repositioning by cable companies is caused by vertical integration and should be prohibited on antitrust and copyright grounds. Padden also urged Congress to condition antitrust exemptions for major league baseball teams and the ability of cable operators to carry local broadcast signals for free upon the provision that local broadcast stations be given the opportunity to televise at least 50 percent of a team's televised games.

IRA account easy to transfer

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. A year and a half ago, I retired and put lump sum distributions from my company profit-sharing plan and another retirement plan into a rollover individual retirement account at a brokerage firm, with the agreement that I would receive a monthly check for dividends.

I thought the check would be mailed automatically on the first of each month. It was not. I was told and agreed to receive the check on the eighth of each month. This was also not the case. The checks arrive late. Sometimes I have to phone to get one. In this year, the brokerage firm has sent my check on time only once.

Can I get my money back and reinvest it in another IRA, without paying income tax?

A. Sure. You can close your present IRA, take all the money out of it and open another IRA with that money someplace else. Your money will remain tax-deferred. That's a rollover of an existing IRA, which can be done only once a year, and must be completed within 60 days. Miss that deadline and you must pay regular income tax on the money. And if you're under age 59 1/2, you're socked with an extra 10 percent tax penalty.

Doyle

Because your IRA is at a brokerage firm, it's obvious you have what's called a "self-directed IRA" invested in securities. In order to empty the account and get the money out, those securities would have to be sold. The brokerage firm would get commissions on the sales, reducing the amount of money you could take out.

There is another way. You can arrange a "trustee-to-trustee transfer" — moving everything in your IRA to a different brokerage. Pick the firm to which you want the account moved and that firm will handle all the paperwork. The securities in your IRA will not have to be sold. That will save commission charges.

Be forewarned that many brokerages are disgracefully slow transferring securities in IRAs to other firms. Since you had trouble getting your monthly checks from your present brokerage, I suspect you'll have problems with the IRA transfer.

If that happens, complain to the Office of Consumer Affairs, Securities and Exchange commission, 450 Fifth Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20549.

Q. When I transfer my IRA from one brokerage firm to another, will I have to pay my present brokerage a percentage of the value of the investments in the account?

A. Not a percentage, but you might be hit with some charge. Many IRAs have termination fees, which are levied when accounts are closed or transferred.

Read your present IRA agreement carefully. If there is a termination fee, it will be spelled out in that agreement. Those fees vary from one IRA agreement to another. The typical fee is a flat number of dollars and seldom tops $100.

Q. Upon retirement in August 1984, I placed my profit-sharing money in five-year, 11.5 percent certificates of deposit at two banks. I am aware that I will have to start making withdrawals from these IRAs after I become 70 1/2 — approximately 18 months from now.

What rate of interest will be paid on these monies, now totaling almost $200,000, between the time the CDs mature this coming August and the time I make withdrawals?

A. That depends on what arrangement you make with each bank. Come August, you can put the money into new CDs at whatever rates are available at that time.

Explain to each bank when you will be making the required withdrawals. Set up each CD so that you will be taking out all or part of the interest, instead of leaving the interest in to accumulate as you obviously have been doing.

The new CDs can be of virtually any maturity. Unless interest rates plunge between now and August, your withdrawals will be less than the CD interest for a number of years. When your withdrawals exceed the interest, you'll start cracking the CD principal. But the banks will not be required to lay on early withdrawal charges, even if you start taking out CD principal before the CDs mature.

NAME

was chosen out of an initial list of about 3,500 names. "Some of them were the very traditional type of dictionary word; some of them were the coined word a la Unisys and those types of names that are rather trendy," he said.

"The Sun leadership took to the name of oryx immediately, partly because of the symbol, partly because of the international connotation (and) partly because the shape of the word was attractive — the y and the x," he said.

Orix "is obviously a madeup word," Sullivan said. "Ours is an animal, a noun."

But Orix USA Corp. Vice President Reuben Babner said the name, developed by a California-ad agency, is also intended to reflect corporate strengths: "ORIginality and fleXibility."

Babner said the company looked for other "oryxes," but found none. "We searched it in New York, California and Delaware," but not the whole country, he said.

Babner said he was unconcerned about the homonymous names. "We're going to make (Orix) as well known as Exxon," he predicted.

Orient Leasing's 23 subsidiaries in leasing, real estate and financing, generated $1.7 billion in sales last fiscal year.

Sun E&P, spun off last year from Sun Co., is North America's largest independent oil and gas producer and had revenues of $1.29 billion last year.

Sun's Sullivan said his company doesn't care about the other firms with similar-sounding names.

S&L

In the House, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., has drafted an amendment similar to Riegle's financing scheme. But Schumer said he is waiting for the "appropriate time" to introduce it, presumably after the Senate committee has a show-down vote on the issue.

Seven Republicans on the House panel joined 17 Democrats in the 24-23 vote uesday rejecting Bush's proposal to make S&L owners have $6 instead of $3 in capital for every $100 they lend out.

Eleven Democrats sided with 12 Republicans in a failed effort to reject the adopted alternative scheme introduced by Annunzio and Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va.

The Annunzio-Parris measure maintains the current 3 percent capital floor but for the first time requires that half that amount — $1.50 on every $100 in loans — be real cash investment by S&L owners that can be recovered if the thrift fails.

Annunzio cited Federal Home Loan Bank Board estimates that 1,100 S&Ls would falter under Bush's capital standards and claimed his measure is tougher in some ways because it requires owners to put their own money at risk.

"These 1,100 savings and loan institutions are not the bad guys," Annunzio said. "For the most part these were institutions scattered throughout the country that were primarily engaged in home lending."

Rep. Gerald Kleczka, D-Wis., countered that the amendment "really guts this bill" and represents "a surrender to the savings and loan league" — the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the industry's biggest lobbying arm.

The committee, however, later rejected an amendment supported by Annunzio that would allow 271 S&Ls to escape the requirement to have $1.50 in tangible capital for every $100 of loans.

IMPASSE

"This legislation will be a test of whether we indeed are seeking a kinder, gentler nation," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said Tuesday, criticizing Bush for refusing to budge from his proposal, which would raise the minimum wage from $3.35 an hour to $4.25 an hour by January 1992.

Mitchell said Bush's "kinder, gentler" campaign rhetoric is at odds with his opposition to the Democratic bill, particularly when the president is backing expanded tax breaks for capital gains enjoyed largely by the nation's wealthy.

"How can anyone justify wanting to give $30,000-a-year tax cuts to the richest Americans and at the same time oppose 30 cents an hour more for the poorest Americans?" said Mitchell, D-Maine. "That's not right. It's wrong. It's unfair."

Mitchell spoke just before the Senate rejected Bush's proposal and instead amended a bill by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to bring it more in line with the House bill.

NCNB

NCNB Corp. is a Charlotte-based bank holding company that manages more than $50 billion in assets and has full-service banks in seven southern states.

Earlier this month, the bank initiated a takeover of Atlanta-based Citizens & Southern Corp., a move the Georgia company is resisting.

McColl said Tuesday NCNB will continue with its quest for C&S, and said, "Our commitment to a merger proposal to The Citizens and Southern Corp. of Atlanta is strengthened by these results. It is noted that the first quarter earnings of NCNB Texas alone exceeded the entire first quarter earnings of C&S from all of its operations. Clearly, the combination of our two organizations would create a strong and growing company, with benefits to the shareholders and communities of both banks."

The Grandfather Election
Avoiding the 15% Penalty Tax on Large Qualified Plans
The IRS, with the help of Congress, has determined that future pension plans cannot be used to provide above average retirement benefits and has imposed a 15% penalty tax on large qualified plans.
In an effort to protect those nearing retirement, Congress is offering a grandfather election to individuals with existing plans. Taking advantage of this grandfather election puts your pension under a different set of tax rules that can potentially reduce (or increase) your penalty tax.
This seminar is designed to help you analyze the impact of this penalty tax and the grandfather election alternative. Solutions will be presented to reduce/avoid the 15% excise tax as well as the 28% income tax and 55% estate tax that can apply to your retirement assets.

Missions abusive as Midland loses first game, 12-3

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

San Antonio salvaged just one game of the four-game Texas League series, but administered the kind of abusive treatment that made the Midland Angels glad to see the Missions leave town.

The LA Dodger farmhands buried Midland under a 16-hit avalanche for a 12-3 victory before a shivering throng of 642 hardies. By the game's end, the survivors could be counted on a set of fingers and toes.

Of course, with El Paso opening a five-game series at Angel Stadium tonight, there's no guarantee that the opposition will be any less offensive.

The only mistake the Angels made Tuesday was not calling the whole thing off, as they had Monday's game. It was cold enough to offer an excuse.

THIS ONE was so onesided that it was 12-3 after five innings and every batter in the San Antonio lineup already had at least one hit.

Roberto Hernandez was the unfortunate victim of the pummeling, 10 hits and nine earned runs.

Kevin Armstrong, meanwhile, snuffed out Midland on four hits over seven innings. Originally, drafted by the Mets, Armstrong was one of the minor leaguers involved in the Kevin McReynolds trade with San Diego and two years ago he pitched at Wichita.

After an 8-3 record for Riverside, Class A California League, last year, the Padres inexplicably left him unprotected and the Los Angeles Dodgers grabbed him. Tuesday the Dodgers had no reason to regret the steal.

In the fourth, he gave up a single to Hedi Vargas with one out and then Chris Cron homered over the left field fence.

"Claude (pitching coach Claude Osteen) came out and told me to stop fooling around and throw my fast ball," which seemed to work.

Only other offense the Angels showed was in the fourth when third baseman Dave Hansen's diving one-handed catch robbed Cron. Tom Alfredson followed with a triple to left center and died there.

Midland's fifth inning run came on a walk to Bob Rose, passed ball and error.

THE MISSIONS' offense included four doubles, a triple and a home run. Brian Traxler led off the third with his second homer of the series, but he also knocked in runs with a couple of sacrifice flies and a fourth with a fifth-inning single.

If his 8-for-14 at the plate and nine RBI are a hint, he may not be long for this league.

Despite his power display here, Manager John Shoemaker claims Traxler is most effective as a line drive hitter.

"We drafted Traxler out of the University of New Orleans last year and he was sent to me at Vero Beach. He played first base and hit .280. Tonight that wind helped him on that home run."

SHOEMAKER managed the last two seasons at Vero Beach in the A Florida League after six years as a coach at Vero for the veteran Stan Wasiak. But he's not unfamiliar with the Texas League.

"I played for San Antonio in 1978 and 1979 and I know the parks in this league."

Although San Antonio goes home to play Wichita with a 1-3 record, Shoemaker felt his team played well here. "In the first three games, we got beat because we made mistakes and Midland played good defense, but we swung the bat well."

Kevin Trudeau, righthander from Livermore, Calif., who pitched at Orlando and Portland last year, will go for the Angels tonight against the Diablos.

HALO HOOPS: After a shaky start, Vinicio Cedeno turned in 4⅓ innings of four-hit relief and Rich Merejo, a submariner from New York City, added 1⅔ innings of scoreless relief. In fact, Merejo fanned Traxler in the eighth, coming in overhand for the third strike-....Dan Grunhard is out for six weeks with a broken thumb suffered in a slide Sunday night...Otto Gonzales, a catcher with Oklahoma City last year, was added to the roster...

Midland High tumbles to third; Rebels rip Bronchos

Mojo keeps first place

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

ODESSA — In terms of hurt, this one was a killer for the Midland High Bulldogs.

Not in recent memory have the 'Dogs lost such a crucial baseball game. On the other hand, not in recent memory has such an outstanding game been played.

The Odessa Permian Panthers, 12-2 overall, 7-1 district, retained their grip on first place in District 4-5A, downing the No. 8 state ranked 'Dogs 2-1 here Tuesday.

With the loss, Midland High falls to 14-4, 5-3.

In other district action, Abilene Cooper snuffed out San Angelo, 8-3, and Midland Lee buried Odessa High 20-7; Abilene High was idle.

The Panthers scored two runs on a bizarre play in the bottom of the seventh to notch the win.

Midland High led 1-0 going into the final half-inning as victory was ever so close for the 'Dogs. Starting pitcher Kevin Rychel had pitched a tremendous game and the Panthers looked like they might have settled for defeat.

On a strange play in the bottom of the seventh, though, everything changed.

After Permian shortstop Saul Bustos singled, courtesy runner Adrian Villa came on to stand in Bustos' sted at first. Pinch hitter Ray Hernandez reached on a walk, but was tossed out at second on a fielder's choice by Mike Winchell, sending Villa to third.

With Villa at third and Winchell at first, Shawn Almond laid down a lazy, simple bunt down the first base line.

Permian coach Bob Highly had instituted the suicide squeeze and Villa scored easily from third. On the throw to first, though, Rychel tossed the ball into right field and Winchell, with all his speed, scored easily from first, giving the Panthers the go-ahead — and winning, game-ending — run.

"That play showed our general lackadaisical attitude," Midland High head coach Tim Whalen said. "I really have trouble recalling a loss that hurt more than this one.

"We can take pride in one thing, though — our baseball team has always been able to get after it. We don't give too many away."

Whalen, who was so upset after the loss he refused to comment at first, said the 'Dogs' attitudes have to change if they want to compete for a playoff berth.

Don't get the wrong idea — this game was a pitchers' duel until the very end. Both Rychel and Permian starter Mike Morgan pitched exceptionally. Morgan, 4-0 in district, struck out 14; Rychel, 3-2, fanned 10 and allowed just two hits out of the infield the entire game. On the other hand, Midland High was able to muster just three balls to the outfield.

One of those long balls came from Will Sowders, who smashed a high fastball over the left-center field fence for a home run and the Bulldogs' only score.

Sowders, though, was downtrodden after the game, like the rest of the MHS squad.

"We started hitting a little bit," Sowders said. "(Mowles) had a single (after the home run). We had it. We just got messed up."

Even Permian coach Highly was sympathetic of the Bulldogs after the Panther win.

"I feel sorry for Midland," he said. "It was one of the best high school baseball games I've ever seen. Midland High is a quality, quality team and Rychel is a great pitcher. We made one mistake (the home run to Sowders) and they made us pay for it. Nobody can say that anybody was lucky."

Highly admitted that he's not confident in his team's bunting, which was what won the game for the Panthers. But the perfectly laid-down Almond bunt — and the Rychel error — was what made the difference for the Permian team.

"Our hitting was pitiful," Whalen said. "I can't even begin to explain it. We didn't swing the bat — and when we did, we swung at bad pitches.

"We had every reason in the world to play well. If we come out of it with a win then we're right back in the hunt. We still have a chance."

Bulldog leftfielder Brian Conaway severely bruised his arm, diving and catching a fly ball in the sixth — which proved to be the defensive play of the game. It is not known whether he will miss any action as a result of the injury.

Midland High did not have its first hit until the run-scoring sixth inning; Permian went hitless until the third and then went hitless until the seventh.

The pitching was so good on both sides that Rychel and Morgan combined for 15 strikeouts in the first four innings.

The Bulldogs take Saturday off and will prepare for a trip to Abilene Cooper next Tuesday. Permian travels to Abilene High Saturday.

Midland High's Will Sowders (17) gets a high five from teammate Pat Mowles after his sixth inning homer gave the Bulldogs a 1-0 lead over Odessa Permian. The Panthers, however, won it with two runs in the bottom of the seventh.

Lee erupts for 15 hits

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Odessa High pitching has been a tonic for District 4-5A hitters all season, and it was Midland Lee's turn to drink the magic potion Tuesday.

The Rebels, who had been batting only .254 in district play going into Tuesday's game, pounded 15 hits off OHS pitching en route to a 20-7 blowout over the hapless Bronchos at Rebel Field.

Lee, 5-4 in district play, kept its feeble playoff hopes alive with Tuesday's win. LHS coach Ernie Johnson admits the Rebs are a longshot to overtake front-running Odessa Permian, Abilene Cooper and Midland High, however.

"It's not very realistic, but we'll try," Johnson said. "You never know what's going to happen in this district."

Well, almost never.

Though Odessa High has played some teams tough this season, the Bronchos self-destructed en route to their eighth straight district loss despite building a five-run lead in the first inning.

Lee starter Kyle Greeley took a while to get going, as evidenced by Odessa's five-run burst in the top of the first. But the righthanded knuckleballer baffled the Bronchos in the final four innings en route to his second district win.

Greeley said the windy conditions forced him to lay off his knuckleball in the later innings.

"The wind made it (his knuckler) harder to control, so I started throwing more fastballs and curveballs."

Greeley had two-hit the Bronchos already this season, but Jesse Paz, Tony Villalobos, James Dunlap and Travis Rhoades made sure that wouldn't happen again. All hit safely in OHS' big first inning.

Paz tripled home the Bronchos' first run. Villalobos later doubled with one out and eventually stole home on the front end of a double steal. With two out, Greeley hit Raul Villalobos with an errant knuckler and Dunlap and Rhoades followed with back-to-back singles to cap the rally.

Lee got three of those runs back in its half of the first, with RBI doubles by Vince Henderson and Greeley the big blows.

The roof really caved in on OHS when Lee batted around in both the second and third innings to fashion nine and seven run rallies, respectively.

Ty Chambers was the only Rebel starter to go hitless, but Henderson went wild with three-for-four, including two doubles and four RBI.

Pokes' Schramm leaving Cowboy sayonara signs

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Tex Schramm won't be in the Dallas Cowboys' front office much longer.

Schramm, the glue that held together one of the NFL's most successful franchises, is too much a professional and a loyalist to jump the gun on his announcement as the commissioner for a new NFL International League.

But he said on Tuesday, "I'm keeping my options open."

However, Schramm, president and general manager since the club's founding, has been on the outside looking in since Jerry Jones purchased the Cowboys from Bum Bright on Feb. 25.

For example:

— Schramm didn't know Jones gave new coach Jimmy Johnson a 10-year contract until reporters told him.

— Schramm wasn't asked to join a meeting last weekend between Jones, Johnson, quarterback prospect Troy Aikman and his agent, Leigh Steinberg.

— Schramm didn't attend a recent beer-and-barbecue session that Johnson and Jones held for the players. Jones invited some 100 business friends including Dallas Mavericks' owner Donald Carter to the affair.

Asked about being left out in the decision-making cold, Schramm said, "That's the prerogative of the new owner. He said from the beginning he was going to be involved in everything from socks to jockstraps. He has."

Schramm also said from the beginning he didn't think he could handle a day-to-day caretaker role after nearly three decades of calling the shots.

Stone replaces Rangers' Bell

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Buddy Bell's misfortune could be a blessing in disguise for Jeff Stone, who joined the Texas Rangers as a temporary replacement after Bell had knee surgery.

Stone was manager Bobby Valentine's choice primarily because of his ability to steal bases. Stone reported to the Rangers Tuesday.

"When you look at our extra men, we don't really have a pinch-runner other than (Jeff) Kunkel," Valentine said. "And with Kunkel as the extra center fielder and middle infielder, I really didn't feel like that was the most comfortable situation. We'll see how this works having another guy who can pinch-run."

Bell underwent successful arthroscopic surgery on his left knee yesterday at Christ Hospital in Cincinnati.

Dr. Warren G. Harding III said Bell could begin rehabilitation in several days and will be sidelined three to six weeks.

Dr. Harding removed a torn cartilage from Bell's knee. It was Bell's seventh knee operation.

Tarpley back after treatment for drugs

DALLAS (AP) — Roy Tarpley was scheduled to break his silence today at a press conference to announce his return to the Mavericks' active roster in time to play against the Phoenix Suns.

Tarpley will still be unavailable for comment on his fight with chemical dependency and after returning to play, Tarpley can only comment on questions pertaining to games, his drug counselors said.

Dr. Dave Lewis of the ASAP Family Treatment Program notified the Mavericks Tuesday that Tarpley was ready to begin the next stage of his aftercare program.

"Roy is moving to the next phase of his aftercare, which is activation," Lewis said. "We'll continue to observe him and see how he does."

James Donaldson, who suffered a season-ending knee injury March 10, will be placed on the injured list to make room for Tarpley.

Norm Sonju, Mavericks chief operating officer and general manager, said the organization is encouraged by Tarpley's progress and is in full support of the National Basketball Association and drug counselors involved with the Mavericks' forward.

SCHRAMM

"That's not my style," he said.

Schramm won't admit he's made a decision but he talks like he's decided to do something other than be a figurehead for the Cowboys.

All the signs are there.

He will be in New York City on Tuesday at a special meeting when owners vote on the sale of the Cowboys and proposals for the organization and operation of an International League.

"The prospect of the International League interests me," Schramm said. "I'm very happy and very proud of what's been accomplished here. I'm also pleased I also could make a contribution as far as the league is concerned. I feel an individual club's success depends on the strength and soundness of the league."

As sure as Schramm helped invent instant replay as a member of the NFL Competition Committee, his days as a Cowboy are numbered.

"It would be a difficult decision for me because this has been my life for 30 years," Schramm said. "I guess the thing I would miss would be that relationship with all the fans. You get to know 'em all."

However, Schramm on Tuesday spoke like he would soon be gone. He was eager to reminisce about his days with the Cowboys.

Asked his proudest moment with the Cowboys, Schramm said "both winning and reaching the highest pinnacle of popularity at the same time. This franchise accomplished what few franchises have accomplished."

Asked his best decision, Schramm said "Well, after (the late original owner) Clint Murchison had confidence in me to run the team I guess it would be hiring Tom Landry. That was a pretty good decision."

Landry was fired when Jones bought the team. Schramm wept at the press conference when Landry's dismissal was announced.

What was the worst decision?

Schramm laughed for a full minute.

"Oh, I don't look back on my decisions that way," he said. "You have to make the decision that you feel is right when you make it. If it doesn't work it doesn't work. You don't have the luxury of looking back."

He thought a minute and added, "I'd like to take back the statements I made about Tom Dempsey's toe."

Schramm criticized the crippled New Orleans Saints placekicker after he set the NFL record 63-yard field goal. Schramm said the shoe Dempsey used should be declared illegal.

The story ran on The Associated Press wire and Schramm was bombarded with letters, telegrams and telephone calls.

"I learned two things from that," he said. "First, I was wrong, and second, what kind of circulation The AP had."

Goalie lands playoff goal

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Ron Hextall let fly the last of his numerous clearing shots with something different in mind.

"I was thinking 'Goal,' " said Hextall who scored his second career goal and became the first goalie to connect for a playoff goal, topping off the Philadelphia Flyers' 8-5 victory over the Washington Capitals Tuesday night. The Flyers lead the series 3-2.

"I saw (Washington goalie Pete) Peeters when he was halfway off," Hextall said. "I knew we were short-handed and that it wouldn't be icing. ... I don't know how many I'll score, but it's always a thrill."

The Capitals, trailing 7-5 after three consecutive Flyers goals, elected to pull goalie Pete Peeters with less than 1½ minutes to play, giving them six skaters to four for the Flyers, who had Jeff Chychrun in the penalty box.

After Peeters was pulled, Washington's Scott Stevens shot the puck into the Flyers' zone to the left of the goal. Hextall retrieved it and let go a 185-foot shot over the heads of his opposition.

Woodson shines off bench

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

There's nothing like a couple of days off to cure those aches and pains that make an 82-game schedule drag on and on.

Larry Nance of Cleveland and Houston's Mike Woodson came back from short layoffs and led the Cavaliers and Rockets to NBA victories Tuesday night.

Nance, who missed two games because of a sore tendon in his left calf, scored 11 of his 20 points in the third quarter, helping the Cavaliers build a 13-point lead en route to a 92-90 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Otis Thorpe led Houston with 26 points, but it was Woodson who came off the bench to hit his first seven shots and finish with 21 points in a 108-99 victory over Indiana that clinched a playoff spot for the Rockets.

Woodson was doubtful for the game after suffering a hairline fracture on his face against Atlanta last Friday.

"My legs were fresh and my shot was there,' Woodson said. "My shots seem to be there since I missed the Miami game (on Saturday)."

After scoring 15 points on 7-for-7 shooting in the first quarter, Woodson wasn't offended by being a substitute for one game.

"I spent half of my career coming off the bench," Woodson said. "I have no stigma about not starting."

Cavaliers 92, 76ers 90

Nance's 20-point effort was his best since he scored 27 against Milwaukee on March 5. He has been hobbled since late January by the injured leg.

The victory was Cleveland's 30th in its last 31 home games, including eight straight.

Mark Price finished with 19 points and 13 assists for the Cavaliers, who trail Detroit by 2½ games for the Central Division lead. Mike Gminski and Charles Barkley scored 23 each for Philadelphia, whose loss officially gave the New York Knicks the Atlantic Division title.

Bucks 125, Nets 93

Milwaukee turned a close game into a rout by outscoring New Jersey 50-27 in a 17-minute stretch.

The Bucks, who led only 41-39 with five minutes left in the first half, used a 20-9 run for a 61-48 halftime lead, then outscored the Nets 30-18 in the third period for a 91-66 advantage.

Ricky Pierce scored 19 points, Terry Cummings 16 and Jack Sikma had 15 points and 14 rebounds for the Bucks, who moved one-half game ahead of Atlanta for the Eastern Conference's fourth playoff position.

Warriors 114, Heat 98

Golden State improved its record to 11-0 against the NBA's three worst teams, beating the Heat behind Chris Mullin's 25 points and Terry Teagle's 24.

The Warriors stayed unbeaten against Miami, Charlotte and the Los Angeles Clippers and moved a half-game ahead of idle Denver in the four-team scramble for the fourth playoff spot in the Western Conference. Seattle and Houston are another game back in the race to secure the final berth.

Trail Blazers 126, Clippers 102

Portland pulled three games ahead of Dallas for the final Western Conference playoff spot as Clyde Drexler scored 24 points and Terry Porter had his second triple-double of the season.

Floresville hurler records 21 Ks in 7-inning game

Associated Press

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — While mowing down high school batters, Floresville High School pitcher Billy Flores pretends his viare major leaguers.

"I act like every pitch is like I'm pitching in the World Series," Flores said. "I get ahead on the count and just want to strike the batter out."

But never in his wildest imagination did Flores believe he could turn in a performance like his 101-pitch masterpiece recently, when he struck out 21 San Antonio Cole batters in a 4-3, seven-inning triumph.

"To be honest with you, I didn't realize he had struck out as many until I looked at the book after the game," Floresville coach John Baker said. "He always gets between 11 and 15 strikeouts, but this one was special."

Only two SA Cole players made outs where they made contact with the ball. There are only 21 outs in seven innings, but two batters reached base on passed balls after strikeouts.

"The fielders were kind of getting on me after the game," Flores said. "They told me they would like to have a chance. If I let them hit it, they would make the out."

The victory over Cole was Flores' fifth straight after a loss to Devine in the Tigers' first game of the season.

"I can usually tell what kind of game Billy is going to have by his start," Baker said. "I can tell by the first couple of batters. He's always good, but sometimes he struggles early. He started fast (against Cole)."

Flores' ERA for the season fell to 1.84 after the game. He had 75 strikeouts and 24 walks in 38 innings, allowing the opposition only 13 hits.

"I just went out there and pitched," Flores said about his performance, which raised his strikeout total for the year to 46 in three 7-inning games.

"The reason he pitched well was because of his fastball," sophomore catcher Charlie Sanchez said. "It just seemed to take off. The batters were really muttering when they left the batter's box after he got them."

A day later, in practice, Sanchez was still feeling the effects from catching Flores' deliveries in the SA Cole game.

"I can tell he was pitching," Sanchez said. "My hand is really bruised and sore. And it was a brand new glove I played with."

As amazing as Flores' strikeout performance is the fact that he is also a right-handed throwing fielder on the days when he doesn't pitch.

When Flores is rested, he is a right-handed throwing first baseman or center fielder. Against five hitters this year, he even pitched righthanded, although he says he cannot throw nearly as well that way as he can left-handed.

"We like to take some of the wear off of his arm when he's not pitching," Baker said. "I've talked to him and we don't like for him to throw right-handed if we can help it. But sometimes we've been in jams and had to use him. He's almost as consistent with his right hand as he is with his left."

The root of his right-handed throwing came during his peewee career when coaches thought Flores should throw right-handed.

"When I was 9 or 10 years old, my cousin took me to the tryouts," Flores said. "He didn't know I was left-handed, so they made me throw right-handed. I guess it all started there."

Flores learned to toss with either arm, but still feels more comfortable throwing left-handed.

"He has a good fastball at about 82 or 83 mph, but what really makes him effective is his breaking pitch," Baker said. "I've never seen it move like it did (against Cole)."

Baker added, "He has a pretty good arm right-handed, but he really doesn't have a changeup."

Such ambidexterity is not surprising for Flores, who was the starting quarterback for Floresville's football team for the last several games of the season.

"I threw most of my passes left-handed, but I threw a couple right-handed," he said. "It wasn't anything planned, but I might be rolling out and throw from that side."

REBS

The Bronchos didn't help their own cause any by committing six errors, enabling Lee leadoff man B.J. Parrish to score five runs despite hitting safely only once.

It was simply another one of those days for OHS coach Milt Thompson, who saw mound ace Paz self-destruct during that nine-run second inning.

"Jesse's our best pitcher, but when he blew we didn't have anything left," Thompson said. "Shannon (reliever Snyder) did his best, but he hasn't pitched that much.

"It just seemed like we sat back and waited for bad things to happen."

Lee travels to San Angelo on Saturday.

Diablos plunder Wichita, 12-4

Associated Press

The El Paso Diablos had 12 hits as they took an easy 12-4 victory over the Wichita Wranglers in Texas League action Tuesday.

El Paso shortstop D.L. Smith led the hitting barrage, getting four hits in five plate appearances.

In two nights, Smith was 6-of-9 with a home run, four runs scored and five RBI.

Mario Monico and Sandy Guerrero each had three hits for El Paso.

In other Texas League action, Shreveport edged Arkansas, 3-1, and Tulsa defeated Jackson, 5-1.

Jose Pena's solo homer powered Shreveport over the Arkansas Travelers.

Eric Gunderson, 1-0, struck out eight and allowed four hits and no runs in 5⅓ innings to pick up the victory. Doug Roberts pitched the ninth inning to pick up his second save.

Steve Mumaw, 0-2, was the losing pitcher.

The Captains got on the scoreboard in the first inning when Jeff Carter walked, stole second and came home on an error.

Mike Senne doubled in the fifth inning and scored on a two-out single by Erik Johnson. Pena's homer closed out scoring by Shreveport in the sixth innning.

Arkansas' lone run came in the 8th when Craig Wilson reached on a fielder's choice and scored on Ray Lankford's double.

Juan Gonzalez had a two-run homer for Tulsa in the fifth inning, leading the Drillers over the Jackson Mets.

Gar Millay singled in a run in the fourth and the Drillers added another on a bases loaded walk. Bill Haselman singled in another in the eighth for the Drillers.

Pitcher Bob Malloy gave up four hits in six innings to pick up the victory. He's 1-0 for the season.

The Mets got its only run in the seventh inning on a two-out run scoring double by Mike DeButch.

Ruins found to ancient Mesopotamian city

NEW YORK (AP) — Archaeologists have discovered the ruins of an ancient Mesopotamian city that flourished 4,000 years ago and rivaled Babylon.

The site of Mashkan-shapir, 90 miles south of the Iraqi capital Baghdad, has not been occupied since the city was sacked and burned about 1720 B.C.

The city was identified during the first six weeks of preliminary surveys earlier this year after Elizabeth C. Stone, one of the archaeologists, discovered a cuneiform inscription on a clay fragment with the name Mashkan.

"We have a whole city plan laid out there for us," said Stone, who, with her husband, Paul Zimansky, identified the site in January.

"We know where the canals were, the cemetery, the palace and religious quarters, the manufacturing area and the city wall. A complete, undisturbed city — that's what's really exciting about it as an archaeological site," Stone said in an interview in The New York Times.

Stone, an associate professor of archaeology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, and Zimansky, an assistant professor of archaeology at Boston University, said the city may rank among the region's major archaeological finds of the past four decades.

Other scholars cheered the news of the discovery.

"It's always a happy day in archaeology when somewone nails down the identity of an ancient city," said William Hallow, professor of Assyriology at Yale University.

"We have a whole city plan laid out there for us."
— Elizabeth C. Stone, archaeologist

Some said the find could be as significant as the 1985 discovery of Tell Leilan, a northern Mesopotamian center that had been the seat of a power king in the 18th century B.C. Other archaeologists doubted that Mashkan-shapir would yield as much as Ebla, an ancient city in Syria where voluminous archives were discovered in the 1970s and revealed a previously unknown language.

Stone and Zimansky began exploring the site two years ago, collecting artifacts on the surface and examining satellite images of the routes of ancient canals that served the city.

But Iraqi military restrictions barred them from using aircraft to photograph the site. So Zimansky attached a camera to a kite to obtain pictures revealing features that were not immediately visible from the ground.

The city survived for 300 years as a major trading and manufacturing center with a population of 15,000. Evidence indicated that it had been built in honor of Nergal, the ancient Babylonian god of death, pestilence and other disasters.

Stone and Zimansky plan more detailed mapping and excavation at the site next year.

Ivory Coast's game park to open under financial fire

BY ROBERT WELLER

ABOKOUAMEKRO, Ivory Coast (AP) — Twelve miles from President Felix Houphouet-Boigny's hometown, where artisans are finishing a basilica as grand as St. Peter's in Rome, a new game park will soon open.

Environmentalists are against it on grounds that the Ivory Coast, which hasn't made payments on its $10 billion foreign debt for more than a year, can't afford to maintain its existing parks, let alone open a new one.

Government officials say the total budget for all national parks is the equivalent of about $450,000, and Comoe National Park, home of the Ivory Coast's largest elephant population, will receive no money this year.

Representatives of the French company that has designed the new Abokouamekro park, whose cost is put at $20 million, say they have no quarrel with conservationists who deplore the collapse of the Ivorian park system.

"Sometimes it is better to start with something new and new people," said Benoit Desbans of ACCN, the French initials for Cultural Activities for Nature Conservation. He said Comoe National Park, in a remote area of the nation's northwest, was simply too big — 4,072 square miles, larger than Yellowstone National Park — to be effectively managed by the Ivorian government.

The official government newspaper, Fraternite Matin, in a series of articles deploring the state of Comoe, said the government has the will but not the money to pay for the maintenance of the park. Falling prices for Ivory Coast's exports, primarily agricultural commodities like cocoa, have left the government unable to pay bills. It is $1 billion behind in payments on its foreign debt.

ACCN hopes to make the new park pay for itself by drawing at least 100,000 visitors a year and from the sale of game meat from animals culled from the park population.

The new park is on a former ranch in rolling hills southwest of Yamoussoukro, the president's hometown. A small river was damned to form a 865-acre lake. A tourist hotel will be built on an island in the lake.

The park ultimately will cover 232 square miles, about the area of Chicago, but will be opened in stages. The first section, 148,200 acres, is scheduled to open in September. The Roman Catholic basilica, which the government says will cost $133 million and is being paid for from the president's private funds, also is expected to be completed by September.

The park has already been stocked with more than 400 antelopes, 46 hartebeests and 46 forest buffalo captured at Comoe by a South African team. Six South African savannah elephants were purchased and shipped to the park, and South Africa has donated two white rhinos.

Many other types of animals, including giraffes, hippopotamuses, lions and zebras will be added to the park, some from South Africa. The South African government has been quick to help the government of Houphouet-Boigny, an opponent of economic sanctions being imposed on South Africa.

The Ivory Coast has no organized environmental lobby, but officials of several government departments have privately criticized the park as little more than an expensive zoo.

"The park certainly is feasible but that doesn't mean desirable," said Anthony Hall-Martin, a South African who is one of Africa's leading authorities on elephants. "One would rather see the indigenous animals protected. Perhaps there is a middle path."

Federal fund for FDR memorial contingent on public funding

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Today marks another anniversary of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's death on April 12, 1945, in Warm Springs, Ga. And once again there is an effort to build a memorial in Washington to the nation's 32nd president.

This year may be different. For the first time since the FDR Memorial Commission was created in 1955, a president has recommended funds for a Roosevelt memorial. Ronald Reagan's departing fiscal 1990 budget — adopted by President Bush — included $19 million for the memorial.

But the budget recommendation was conditional on raising $16 million from the public to build the $35 million memorial.

The site and design of the memorial have been long established. It would be in West Potomac Park near the Jefferson Memorial and include landscaped open spaces, walkways, a waterfall with bas relief sculpture and 19 statues depicting major events in Roosevelt's four administrations.

The winning design by San Francisco architect Lawrence Halprin, 73, was selected by the commission from among more than 600 proposals.

Last week, the House Appropriations Subcommittee on the Interior held a hearing on the merits of allocating funds for the memorial.

What they heard was an emotional appeal from the current chairman of the FDR Memorial Commission — Rep. Claude Pepper, who served as a U.S. senator from Florida during nine of Roosevelt's 12 years in office.

Pepper reminded the subcommittee of the delays that have plagued the memorial. Legislation to establish the memorial commission was first introduced in 1946, a year after Roosevelt's death, but it was not approved until nine years later.

It has been 34 years since the commission's creation, but still there is no memorial here except for a plaque outside the Archives Building.

By contrast, Pepper noted that a commission to erect a memorial to Thomas Jefferson was created in 1934, in the midst of the Great Depression, and the memorial was completed nine years later, in 1943, in the midst of World War II.

Congress approved the FDR memorial design in 1982 and appropriated $950,000 in 1984 for preliminary plans, drawings and cost estimates. The National Park Service has refused to do more until Congress appropriates construction money.

Pepper recounted his personal relations with Roosevelt as a New Deal loyalist in the Senate. Reminding the subcommittee that Congress took over the private funding of the Washington Monument and fully funded the Lincoln and Jefferson memorials, he urged the panel to authorize the entire $35 million needed for the FDR memorial.

"In doing so, we will recognize and ensure that as long as Americans shall love liberty, as long as Americans shall be devoted to compassion for the needs of their fellow man, as long as Americans shall work for the great cause of peace, they shall cherish the memory and honor the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

The subcommittee also heard an appeal from David B. Roosevelt, the late president's grandson, and son of Elliott Roosevelt.

David Roosevelt acknowledged that his grandfather had expressed little interest in a memorial to himself, but he noted that FDR "believed in giving future generations of this nation a feeling for and reminders of the heritage and traditions which made this country the greatest on Earth."

He went on to declare that family members believe a memorial should be established "if for no other reason than to remind future generations of the lofty principles which guide our nation to greatness."

The planned memorial "does not specifically celebrate the man, rather his ideals, accomplishments and dreams for the future of our country," the younger Roosevelt said. "It is not a monument, but a living reminder of our past and an inspiration for our future."

Dismal sugaring season tapped in New England

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The sap from maple trees is running so slow in parts of the Northeast that some towns have canceled their annual pancake breakfasts for lack of syrup.

"One guy told me he didn't do enough to cover his pancakes," said Wilson Clark, president of the Vermont Maple Sugarmakers' Association.

The season for tapping maple trees for sap, which is boiled down to syrup, is nearing the end in southern New England amid signs that warm weather and an insect with a taste for maples will sharply lower syrup production.

"Everybody is down at least 50 percent to 75 percent, with more on the heavy side," said Edward McColgan, president of the Massachusetts Maple Sugar Producers Association.

McColgan blamed erratic weather for a poor season in the state, which usually produces 50,000 gallons of syrup annually. Vermont, the nation's top syrup producing state, may be headed for its fourth subpar season in a row. And New York, the second largest producer, appears headed for a bad season.

But farmers in Wisconsin, the No. 3 producer, and northern Vermont say continued cold spells have brought an average-to-good season so far.

In most places, the news isn't so sweet. "First it got cold and stayed cold, so the sap didn't run, and then it warmed up too fast," McColgan said. "Now we have temperatures in the 40s, but with all the rain it isn't getting cold enough at night to keep the trees from budding."

Some towns in the Berkshire Hills in western Massachusetts have canceled pancake breakfasts. "We just didn't feel right about asking for donations of syrup this year," said breakfast chairwoman Helen Wells of Cummington.

In upstate New York, Earl Parker, president of the New York State Maple Producers Association, said the yield in the Adirondacks could be down by half. Southern Vermont farmers called it their worst season in decades.
