Clinton vows a better future; Bush says his rival is not fit to lead

■ Perot says he's the only candidate who can repair the economy.

Associated Press

Bill Clinton and George Bush battled across the nation's recession-scarred heartland for one last Sunday, the front-running Democrat pledging a "new day for the country" and the president sharply attacking his rival as "Slick Willie," unfit to lead.

Ross Perot campaigned in California and aired a new 30-minute television commercial that said only he could straighten out the economy. "Believe me, we've got big-time experience by Clinton and Bush in mismanaging money," he said of the president and the Arkansas governor.

With 48 hours remaining in a long and grueling campaign, Clinton led Bush by five points in ABC's daily survey, and was ahead by eight in CNN/USA Today's tracking poll. Perot was a distant third in both.

There was more encouragement for the Democrats in a spate of single-state surveys that gave Clinton a comfortable edge in Missouri, a key battleground, and showed Bush with unusually slender leads in traditional base Republican states such as Indiana, South Carolina and Virginia. Perot challenged Bush for second place in other states.

Bush's rhetoric grew sharper as his poll tidings grew dimmer.

"Slick Willie," he called his rival. He added that Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein was planning a "party for 500,000 people in downtown Baghdad" to celebrate if Clinton wins. "They're wrong. No party," he said.

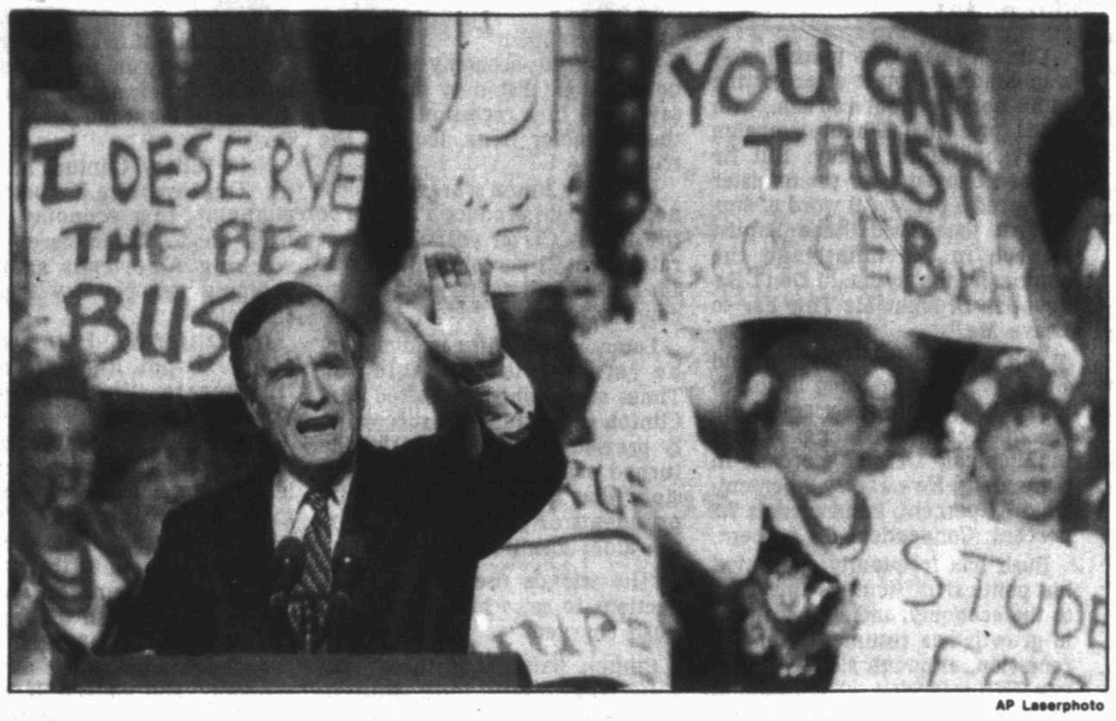

Clinton, struggling to regain his voice after a string of long days, said the election was a choice between "those who say things are fine and those of us who believe we can do better."

Perot was vinegary, as usual. His latest infomercial was titled "Deep Voodoo, Chicken Feathers and The American Dream," a reference to GOP economics, Clinton's record in Arkansas and his own pledge of a better future.

Far more than the White House was at stake in a year of unbridled voter anger at incumbents of both parties, as evidenced by the 14 states with congressional term limitation measures on the ballot.

Republicans all but conceded Democrats would renew their majorities in the Senate and the House on Tuesday, although an unusually large number of races appeared close in the final two days of the campaign. Candidates in a dozen gubernatorial races were sweating out the final hours of their races, as well.

United Jewish Appeal gets most in donations

■ 52 United Way agencies are included in survey of 400 non-profit groups.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans gave more money to the United Jewish Appeal last year than any other non-profit organization, mainly to help Soviet Jews emigrate to Israel, according to a survey released today.

The Jewish charity replaced the Salvation Army at the top of The Philanthropy 400, an annual ranking of non-profit organizations by The Chronicle of Philanthropy.

Donations to major charities rose 5.8 percent in the past year, keeping ahead of the inflation rate, said the trade newspaper, which reports on philanthropic organizations.

Private donations to the United Jewish Appeal rose 57 percent last year, to $668.1 million. Much of the money went to Operation Exodus, a $1 billion drive to help resettle thousands of Soviet Jews.

Bush won't say if he'll fire Walsh

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush refused to say Sunday whether he'd fire Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh after Election Day, but accused him of engaging in "a big witch hunt."

Bush went on the attack against Walsh as Democrat Edmund S. Muskie, a member of the bipartisan panel that investigated the Iran-Contra affair, raised new questions about the president's role in the arms-for-hostage dealings.

Muskie said Bush's "claims of ignorance" about arms sales to Iran by the Reagan White House "conflict directly" with the latest revelation in the affair — a note by former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger saying that Bush knew of the arms-for-hostages scheme on Jan.

Sorghum may help farmers recover losses

LUBBOCK (AP) — A bumper sorghum crop on the West Texas High Plains could help cotton farmers overcome unprecedented losses from a poor harvest last spring, agriculture officials say.

Grain sorghum, planted as a substitute crop on many of the acres lost to cotton, is expected to produce 74.1 million hundredweight, more than double last year's harvest of 29.83 million.

Sorghum plantings surged to 2.27 million acres, up from 904,000 acres last year. Yields off the 2.2 million acres remaining for harvest are estimated at an average of 3,368 pounds per acre.

At a price of $3.25 per hundredweight quoted to growers in the Lubbock area last week, the sorghum crop would have a gross

Officials promote Bush's plan for small businesses

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

ODESSA — With only two days left before the presidential election, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, Texas State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchinson and Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry made a stop in Odessa to promote President Bush's economic plan for small business.

"We came here today because the issue in the election is jobs and small business," Gramm told a crowd of about 80 Bush supporters who had gathered at Big Tex Trailer Manufacturing. "President Bush believes that the future of America is the competitiveness of small business. He also believes in putting the federal government on a budget just like everyone else."

Gramm said the president, despite being behind in national polls, would be re-elected Tuesday.

"Bush is going to stage the greatest comeback in the history of American politics," he said. "When Clinton first started talking about change, it sounded good to a lot of people who were fed up with how the system was running. But, when he started outlining those changes, it didn't sound so good. There is a difference between change and progress."

Bush's plane

ABILENE — A West Texas businessman noted for far-flung salvage efforts wants to help dredge up part of President Bush's past. Jack Grimm of Abilene, who has searched for the Titanic and the Loch Ness monster, now has set his sights on a submerged World War II torpedo bomber once piloted by Bush. Computer calculations show the torpedo bomber is at a depth of about 15,000 feet in the Pacific Ocean south of Japan, Grimm said. Plans call for using remote-operated vehicles to assist in search operations. The Abilene oilman said he's joining Jim Egan, 35, president of Ferrumar Resources, and Al Ponnwitz, 48, to find the plane's watery grave. The men are trying to raise $3 million just to launch the search for Bush's old plane.

Angola accord

LUANDA, Angola — The United Nations announced Sunday night it had arranged a cease-fire between government and rebels troops in Angola, where two days of fighting had threatened to renew civil war. The cease-fire will take effect at 12:01 a.m. today and details will be worked out by U.N. officials in the southern African nation, according to a statement issued by Joe Sills, a spokesman for U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, in New York. The statement also said foreigners being held by the warring sides would be released. The accords halted a 16-year civil war, which began after Angola gained independence from Portugal in 1975. At least 350,000 people died in the fighting.

WWII bomb

TOKYO — An American bomb that had lain unexploded in Osaka since World War II was defused by Japanese soldiers Sunday after 3,000 residents were evacuated from the area, authorities said. Soldiers from Japan's Self-Defense Forces defused the 1-ton bomb 11 days after workers discovered it while digging for a new train line, authorities said in a statement. U.S. air attacks destroyed much of Osaka, a major commercial center.

MONROVIA, Liberia — The archbishop of Monrovia led hundreds of people Sunday in praying for five slain American nuns whose bodies lay unrecovered in a battle zone four miles from the center of this besieged capital. The massacre of the nuns recalled the killings of four American missionaries in El Salvador in 1980, slayings that prompted an international outcry. /6A

Barbara Bush mans phone banks

HOUSTON (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush contacted a few of the thousands of Texans who have already voted when she manned the Bush-Quayle '92 Victory phone bank Sunday in her family's adopted hometown.

"We're gonna win Texas," she told reporters confidently, adding that she has made no plans to move out of the White House to return to Texas because she is sure her husband will be re-elected.

"Texans know that George Bush has changed the world," she said.

She placed three phone calls to Republican supporters Sunday from the Houston phone bank before traveling to Dallas, Des Moines, Iowa, and Bismark, N.D., later in the day to work the phones in those cities.

Of the Houston calls, two were placed to homes where the residents said they had already cast early ballots for George Bush. Mrs. Bush left a message on a telephone answering machine at the third residence, encouraging the Houstonians to vote on Tuesday.

Ann Bumstead told Mrs. Bush she and her husband, John, were among the more than 179,000 Harris County residents who voted in the two weeks before the election. Mrs. Bumstead said both had voted for Bush.

"That's the most happy news I've every heard," Mrs. Bush said. "He's gonna win, thanks to people like you. He really appreciates your support and so do I."

Texas and Colorado are the only states that permit early voting.

Laroy Estes said she wasn't surprised to hear the first lady call her just as she and her daughter began watching the Houston Oilers play the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I'm a great newspaper reader — I practically drink the newspaper — and I knew she was going to be in town and making some phone calls," Ms. Estes said later. "I was shocked to hear her voice, of course, but I recognized it immediately."

Ms. Estes told Mrs. Bush she, too, had already voted.

"I told her she probably would be happy to know my daughter and I had already voted for her lovely husband," said Ms. Estes, who would give her age only as "21-plus."

"I still think he's the man with the knowledge to run this country and no to shut out the whole world," Ms. Estes said.

Mrs. Bush told Ms. Estes she had a busy schedule before the election, but she took time to speak to Ms. Estes' daughter, Wylene Day, and to thank both for voting for Bush.

Mrs. Bush said she will return to Houston today to meet her husband for the GOP's final rally at the Astroarena before Election Day.

"I've been working hard," she told reporters. "I've been to 250 cities in 27 states and it's a cinch for me. I've got the best candidate. I've never been embarrassed by George Bush not one day."

Today to be sunny, warm

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 70s and west to southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the mid-40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be sunny with a high in the upper 70s.

After an overnight low of 48, Sunday's high reached 68, compared to the record high for that date of 87 set in 1952. The record low was 22 set in 1969.

STATE

A cold front pushed across much of Texas Sunday, triggering light rainfall in western and northern sections of the state and ushering in drier air.

Rains ended over Northeast Texas shortly after the noon hour but low clouds lingered. A few areas of light rain were indicated over the western South Plains and along the upper Gulf coast.

The front Sunday night extended just west of a line from Texarkana through Longview to Crockett as it continued east through North Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Generally clear nights and sunny days were expected through Tuesday, with a slight chance of thunderstorms early today in North Texas.

Highs through Tuesday should range from the 60s to 80s, with overnight lows from the 20s to 50s, the weather service said.

NATION

Wild weather ranged across the United States on Sunday with tornadoes in Louisiana, heavy rain in Texas and Indiana, and snow across the northern Plains and Western mountains. Gale warnings were posted over the Great Lakes

The twisters caused no injuries but did some property damage near Cade, La. Also in Louisiana, severe thunderstorms downed power lines and tore limbs from trees near Grand Cheniere and Perry.

A tornado watch was posted through nightfall over parts of Louisiana and Mississippi.

More than 2 inches of rain fell at Lake Charles, La., between 6 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. local time, flooding streets and low-lying areas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ELECTION: Long campaign coming to an end

(From 1A)

Clinton's pace was punishing — a mid-morning start after getting to his hotel room at 4:30 a.m., with plans for a final 29-hour campaign spurt beginning today. But he seemed buoyed after the minister delivered a prayerful word of support at the Tryed Stone Baptist Church in Cincinnati and the choir sang the hymn: "I Don't Believe He Brought Me This Far to Leave Me."

The states where Clinton and Bush were campaigning in the final 48 hours bore the scars of the recent recession: Unemployment in Michigan was 8.8 percent in September; New Jersey 9 percent; Ohio 7.1 percent; Pennsylvania 7.6 percent; Connecticut 6.9 percent.

Bush has frequently attributed his political difficulties this year to the economy, and says economic growth has resumed after the recession, although slowly. Asked in a CNN interview what he would say to those who supported him in 1988 but now seem in Clinton's column, he replied:

"I'd say the economy is getting better. Don't listen to those who say we're in a recession. Look at the character issue, look at the trust issue."

He said Clinton's brand of economics would produce a replica of the Jimmy Carter years: "Interest rates up at 21 percent, inflation at 15 . . . he would not be good for the country."

Later, campaigning in Michigan, he referred to a Washington Times story which reported that Clinton supporters had successfully pressed to have his ROTC file turned over to them in 1974 — a story that two former university presidents dispute, and that Clinton aides dismiss.

"His friends used special connections to seize his ROTC files," Bush charged."

Clinton partook of three vital American institutions: church, professional football and politics.

His voice nearly gone, Clinton limited himself to a few words at a tailgate party in the parking lot outside Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium. "Fight on. Don't give up. Go."

Said Hillary Clinton, his stand-in: "This campaign has been about changing this economy, giving back good jobs to decent, hard-working Americans again and bringing this country together," she said.

In California, Perot said he aimed to put Republicans and Democrats "in blender" on Tuesday.

"Our children's futures are not in the poultry industry," he said in his commercial in a reference to a major employer in Clinton's state. "And they are not in the worst education system in the 50 states, and on and on and on and on."

He accused Bush of practicing "hands-off, closed-eyed-hands-over-the-ears management" of the economy, and added, "If you can take four more years of this, God bless you. I can't.

Clinton's aides took a rare swipe at the Texan in response, issuing a statement that said he was putting up a "multimillion-dollar smokescreen designed to distort the record of the only candidate who can bring real change."

Vice President Dan Quayle campaigned in Ohio, Kentucky and Louisiana.

"The American people want their president to be faithful to their country. They want a president that is faithful to their principles. They want a president that is faithful to their family," he said in a fresh attack on the "character issue."

Democratic vice presidential candidate Al Gore countered with an attack on Bush's economic stewardship.

Over the past 12 years, Wisconsin has lost 16,000 farms, Gore said on a farm. "Farm income has gone down 10 percent in real terms just since Bush . . . took over," he said.

WALSH: Prosecutor on 'witch hunt,' Bush says

(From 1A)

7, 1986.

Bush has said he didn't realize the Reagan White House was trading arms for hostages until mid-December 1986.

After the arms deal became public, Bush requested an interview with Muskie and the other two members of the presidentially appointed board, John Tower and Bush's current national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft.

The Tower Board's account of that interview is at the Reagan library in California and won't become public until 1994.

"Nothing emerged from that meeting to suggest that the vice president was well aware of or significantly involved in the Iranian arms transfers," Muskie said in a statement issued by Democrat Bill Clinton's campaign.

"In short, Vice President Bush presented himself then as President Bush likes to characterize his role now — as being 'out of the loop,'" said Muskie's statement, issued Saturday night.

"But President Bush's repeated claims of ignorance about the arms-for-hostages deal now conflict directly with the personal notes" by Weinberger of the Jan. 7, 1986 meeting, Muskie's statement added. Muskie said that if indeed Bush knew in detail about the arms-for-hostages operation, that "calls into question President Bush's judgment . . . Bush could have stood up and headed off what was ultimately a foreign policy disaster."

Scowcroft has steadfastly defended his boss in recent days. He characterized as "political" Walsh's decision to include information about Bush in the new indictment of Weinberger that came out Friday.

"They are rehashing the same old stuff, there is no new information," Scowcroft said.

For the first time, Bush was asked Sunday whether he would fire Walsh, whose $32 million probe began in December 1986.

"I am not going to discuss what I'll do about that," Bush replied in an interview on CNN. But "I think it's been a big witch hunt out there when you see a decent man like Cap Weinberger going through all kinds of hell."

Mary Belcher, a spokeswoman for Walsh's office, said she could not respond to the accusation because the Weinberger case is pending. Weinberger faces trial Jan. 5.

Federal law says Walsh may be removed "only by the personal action of the attorney general and only for good cause." Good cause is defined as an act that "substantially impairs" the performance of his duties.

That law expires in December, but the Bush administration would still have to adhere to its requirements if it fired Walsh.

If he gave the Iran-Contra prosecutor the ax, Attorney General William Barr would have to explain the reasons to Congress and the federal appeals court that appointed Walsh in 1986, which could be embarrassing for the administration.

The independent counsel could file suit in an effort to save his job. Fired Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox took such a step after his dismissal, but abandoned the lawsuit when he felt assured that his successor, Leon Jaworski, would carry out a vigorous investigation. Jaworski did — and President Nixon eventually resigned, after surrendering incriminating Oval Office tape recordings sought by Jaworski.

The dismissal of Cox led to the Ethics in Government Act, the law under which Walsh was appointed.

CHARITIES: Salvation Army is 2nd for donations

(From 1A)

The survey lists the 400 American non-profit organizations that receive the most private donations. The ranking is not based on total income since government grants and other earnings are not included.

The Salvation Army, which raised far more than the United Jewish Appeal in overall contributions, came in a close second in private donations, bringing in $649 million, a 1.5 percent drop from the previous year. But the newspaper ranked the Salvation Army first among human service organizations.

Second Harvest of Chicago, a food clearinghouse, ranked third. It mainly collected donations of food, bringing in total contributions valued at $404.5 million.

The other non-profit groups to make the top 10, and the private donations they received, were: the American Red Cross, $386.1 million; Catholic Charities USA, $368.3 million; American Cancer Society, $346.3 million; American Heart Association, $235.7 million; United Jewish Appeal-Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York City, $235.5 million; YMCA of the USA, $214.5 million; and Boy Scouts of America, $209.6 million.

The list includes 143 colleges and universities, 52 United Way groups, 44 health organizations and hospitals, 28 international relief and development groups, 15 museums and libraries, 12 environmental and animal-related groups and 11 youth groups.

Harvard University raised the most of any college or university, bringing in $195.5 million.

World Vision raised $154.7 million in private donations, more than any other international relief and development organization.

The Nature Conservancy topped the list for environmental non-profit groups, raising $146.4 million.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York came in first for museums, raising $71.5 million.

Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Tampa, Fla., raised $186.8 million, the most of any hospital.

The only private school on the list was Phillips Academy of Andover, Mass., which brought in about $14.9 million.

Local United Way agencies, which raise money independently, generally reported modest increases and small decreases, the newspaper said. The United Way-/Crusade of Mercy in Chicago ranked 43rd, down from 38th last year, while the United Way of New York City held its place at 52nd. Most of the United Way reports covered fund-raising that occurred before a controversy erupted over the management practices of United Way of America, the newspaper said.

Because United Way of America does not engage directly in fund raising, it was not ranked.

In compiling its list, The Chronicle of Philanthropy relied mainly on information supplied by the organizations themselves in response to the newspaper's questionnaire.

small businesses.

"His plan calls for a 16 percent increase in the marginal tax paid on profits made by small businesses like this one here," he said. "He also calls for five new business taxes and new benefits that companies, not the government, will have to pay for."

Ms. Hutchinson said the country deserves better than someone who "only solidly stands for more government spending and taxes."

"We know the president, we love his wife, we know his kids" she said. "He is a good person, a good neighbor and someone who can lead the country."

Perry called Gov. Bill Clinton "the tax man" and his running mate, Al Gore, "the ozone man" and said that jobs would suffer if they were elected.

"If Clinton wins, every critter in the world will be more important than you," he said.

CROP: Cotton farmers plant sorghum

(From 1A)

farm value of $240.8 million.

Much of the sorghum, estimated at 48 percent of the Texas crop, is destined for area cattle feedlots. The crop will overflow the capacity of storage facilities in some communities.

Cotton prospects are rated almost a million bales below last year's weather-troubled crop. But many producers who lost their cotton but had crop insurance and replanted to quicker-maturing sorghum expect to make more money than they did last season.

High yields of high quality cotton have been reported in the early stages of the harvest.

A crop estimated at 1.36 million bales, down from 2.333 million last year, could be worth a little over $359 million for the lint and seed at prevailing market prices.

Despite an all-time high loss last spring of 1.72 million acres, the area crop is expected to account for 43 percent of the cotton production in Texas, still the nation's top cotton producer.

High Plains corn production is estimated at 101.65 million bushels, about equal to last year's crop. Yields, however, are expected to average 160.8 bushels per acre, up from last year's 152.6, off 666,000 harvested acres.

The corn crop would contribute $218.55 million to area farm income at the recent cash price of $2.15 per bushel in the central Plains.

Disaster stalking Yeltsin's Russia

While America focuses on choosing a president, Russia slides toward disaster.

A misguided policy of pumping rubles into state-owned factories has sent prices skyrocketing, threatening to shatter the economy and reform. The political situation is equally alarming.

While demagogues exploit ethnic conflicts in the former Soviet republics, President Boris Yeltsin and the Russian Parliament are locked in a constitutional power struggle.

Election campaign notwithstanding, Americans have a powerful interest in the survival of a stable reformist government in Russia. But Washington's influence is evaporating fast. November will be a crucial month; if America wishes to offer a steadying hand, the time is now.

Yeltsin has risked hyperinflation in an effort to head off a more immediate danger, the collapse of Russia's state-owned factories. Mostly, these dinosaurs have stayed alive only because of huge government subsidies.

Reformers like Prime Minister Gaidar wanted to end the subsidies to force factories to become productive or go belly up.

But the latter would have thrown millions of Russians out of work. Yeltsin took the easy way out. He allowed the factory managers to go to the central bank for credit to pay wages and buy raw materials. That, in effect, meant printing money.

This politically expedient decision quickly turned economically ruinous. The issue is no longer whether Russia pursues slow or rapid economic reform. Pouring billions of rubles into an economy producing fewer and fewer goods is sure to send prices roaring skyward, and destroy any hope of creating a market economy.

What drives Yeltsin to easy money is rough politics. Challenged by an unholy alliance of old-guard Communists, authoritarian nationalists and disgruntled military officers, Gaidar's liberals lacked the strength to sustain their reforms.

On top of it all, Yeltsin finds himself in a power struggle with the leader of Parliament, Ruslan Khasbulatov. This has already led to armed confrontations and a parliamentary challenge to freedom of the press.

There may not be many more weeks, or days, for the U.S. government even to try exerting constructive influence. It's probably too late to use aid to spur reform.

But Washington could still give the reformers a steadying hand — and warn their opponents that America won't support ruinous economic policies or backsliding on democracy.

JACK ANDERSON

Is it a federal agency or a limo service?

WASHINGTON — When former Rep. Guy Molinari's, R-N.Y., daughter got married in July 1988, one politically prominent couple made a memorable entrance.

Anderson

The Molinari wedding was held at Fort Wadsworth, in Staten Island, New York, a property owned by the Navy. Among the VIPs were Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and his wife, Elizabeth. After a helicopter landing, three unmarked cars from the Federal Protective Service delivered the Doles from a helicopter landing area to a Fort Wadsworth chapel — a mere 150 yards.

With studied attention to detail, FPS "maintained radio contact with the pilot" so that they could "prepare for their arrival by turning the air conditioner on in ... (the) car," according to an unreleased report recently completed by the General Services Administration's Inspector General.

"The problem is not with Sen. Dole. It's with GSA and the people who provided the services and didn't tell Dole this was an official vehicle," Dole spokesman Walt Riker told our associate Jan Moller. "Don't forget, this is the same senator who refused Secret Service protection during his entire presidential campaign (1988)."

Dole's office was not informed until last July that something might have been amiss with the transportation provided at the wedding. Prompted by the internal probe, Dole was billed last July approximately $496.

It also turns out the Doles were not singled out for special treatment. In the New York region, the FPS, which falls under GSA's jurisdiction, has long been moonlighting as a private limousine service while its official task is to guard government buildings. None of the other eight GSA regions had a similar policy for VIP transportation.

The several hundred page IG report details every request by a Bush administration official for FPS limo services to the New York region (of FPS). It reads like a who's who of the Bush Cabinet.

Among the most frequent riders who requested FPS shuttle service were: Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan and HHS official Gail Wilensky, Labor Secretaries Elizabeth Dole and Lynn Martin, and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp.

Even White House chief economist Michael Boskin requested FPS security during a 1990 visit to New York. There was also requests from the Small Business Administration, the office of first lady and the vice president.

"A review of records further disclosed that VIPs, or their staffs, requested a wide range of services ... (including) protection, transportation and armed protection in a high crime area; escort; unmarked car with sirens and lights; communication; security coordination; chauffeuring and VIP physical protection to press conference ...," according to the IG report.

GSA launched its investigation following reports last year that former White House Chief of Staff John Sununu had used FPS personnel to shuttle him on two occasions to New York Giants football games, and on another occasion to a stamp auction at Christie's in Manhattan.

Among the tidbits unearthed is the fact that Sununu received and placed several telephone calls while at the Giants game, including at least one he received from the White House.

After the game, Sununu avoided the headache of heavy traffic thanks to the use of emergency lights and sirens by two FPS cars. One witness told the IG that after being whisked away from the stadium amid sirens and flashing lights, Sununu was purported to have commented, "That's the way to travel." Sununu refused to comment.

Though the report confirms that most trips by Cabinet members were for official functions, the line between business and pleasure at times became blurred. In addition, FPS only has authority to protect government property and the people using it. A GSA official here says that the FPS broke no laws by transporting administration officials, but added that the report is being reviewed to determine if there were any ethical violations. Meantime, new GSA rules allow federal agencies access to fleet cars, but drivers are not included.

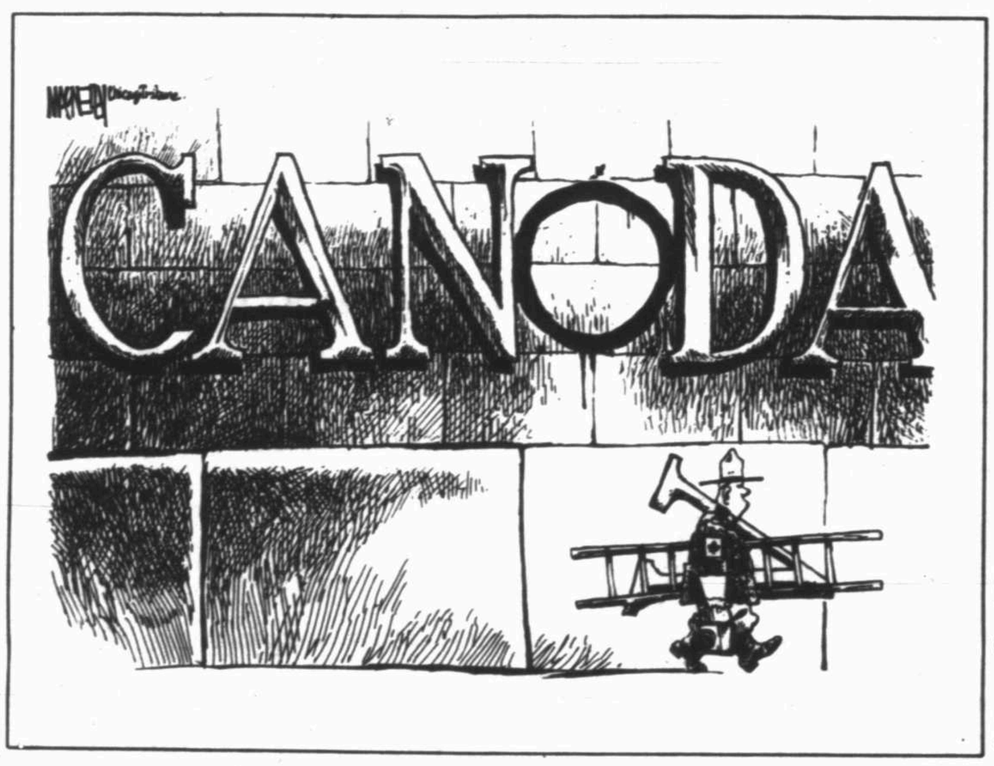

One FPS insider — looking back on the decade-long practice — believes that what transpired in the New York region was simply an efficient way for GSA's cops to mix with administration celebrities.

"They were just mimicking the Secret Service," according to this source. He recalled a time an FPS officer and a GSA official drove Commerce's Mosbacher to a black-tie affair bedecked in tuxedos with guns tucked into their cummerbunds.

The FPS work did not go unappreciated, which is attested to by a raft of thank-you notes sent by administration officials. James Rosebush, deputy assistant to President Reagan, was so impressed after one trip he wrote FPS:

"You were a great help. The sound and light show were fun, too."

Here's why Atlanta lost

All I've been writing about for weeks now is baseball. Sports. I thought I gave that up.

Grizzard

I know I did. It was April of 1977. A former editor said he would get me out of Chicago and put me back to work in Atlanta as a columnist.

"I can't pay you as much as you're making," he said. I was sports editor of the Chicago Sun Times. (I was making about what one minute costs Ross Perot to tell people on network TV why he should be president.)

I replied, "I don't care. I'll get a night job at the 7-11."

Then, I said, "I don't want to write a sports column. There's not enough to say in sports."

He said, "You've never written a column before. Why don't you start out with something you know, sports."

"OK," I argued.

For eight months I wrote, "On my way to the football game ..." and proceeded from there on topics that had nothing to do with final scores or yardage gained.

Finally, management realized I was in the wrong section, and I've been blessed the last 14 years never to have had to write about who's on first.

But, without any warning, the Braves won back to back National League pennants, and for the past two Octobers I've been back in the press box writing for the sports section during two National League championship series and two World Series.

Don't get me wrong. I've enjoyed it. The paper gave me 9:30 deadlines, which meant it was too early to have to talk to any sweaty, naked ballplayers.

And when the Braves beat Pittsburgh in Game 7 of the NLCS, I got to rewrite my earlier column for a later edition.

Writing on deadline is the greatest challenge any writer can face.

I offer all this background because I've got a few opinions about why the Braves lost to Toronto in six games in the 1992 World Series, and I'll need a little credibility.

It's my opinion that...

■ Bobby Cox should have started Deion Sanders in all six games. He gets things done. He makes things happen.

■ Jeff Reardon lost the World Series. Cox should have brought in Mike Stanton in relief instead in both games 2 and 3. American Leaguers have been seeing Reardon for years.

■ Cox should have pinchhit for Jeff Blauser late in the game with runners on in Game 5.

■ Somebody should have told Terry Pendleton to play close to the third base line in the 11th inning of Game 6. He should have known to do it without anybody having to tell him.

■ Cox should have brought in a righthander to replace Charlie Liebrandt to pitch to Dave Winfield in the 11th of Game 6. A Little League coach would have.

■ Somebody should cheer television commentator Don Cherry, who witnessed Jane Fonda praying during Game 6 and asked, "Who's she praying to? Ho Chi Minh?"

Reader is mistaken about Garry Mauro

Tim Speer's commentary Monday (Oct. 26) on Texas Land Commissioner Gary Mauro was misleading and inaccurate as it related to Mauro's recent statement that 1992 has been one of the worst years ever for oil and gas leasing on state school lands.

Speer mistakenly said Mauro was talking about "University of Texas" lands. But Mauro, in an Oct. 6 General Land Office press release, did not refer to the university lands that are in West Texas and dedicated to the Permanent University Fund (PUF) which benefits the University of Texas and Texas A&M. Mauro clearly referred to the leasing of state lands dedicated to the Permanent School Fund (PSF) which benefits the public schools. These are two separate operations.

The leasing of the 13 million acres of the public school lands, which include 3 million acres in the Gulf of Mexico and scattered across the state, is overseen by the three-member School Land Board which Mauro chairs. The School Land Board is otherwise made up of a gubernatorial appointee and an appointee of the attorney general. Managing this land is a primary function of the land office.

Speer complained that there has not been any severance tax relief for the beleaguered Texas oil and gas industry. That is strictly a legislative matter over which Mauro has no control. Speer also complained that Mauro has "held tightly" to high royalty payments for production of state lands. However, Mauro, with School Land Board support, instituted leasing incentives starting in 1988, the main one being a reduction in the royalty payment for offshore leases if the lessee brings production on line within a certain length of time.

By law, Mauro also is chairman of the University Board for Lease which leases 2 million acres of UT-A&M land in West Texas. Similar leasing incentives have been adopted by the university board. Mauro has repeatedly said that as land commissioner he has a constitutional duty to get the best leasing deal possible for benefit of Texas school children.

Mauro has criticized the Bush administration for lack of a national energy policy that would emphasize U.S. production over foreign imports and have domestically produced, clean-burning, relatively inexpensive natural gas as its cornerstone.

Disgruntled parents should get involved

I am a classroom teacher within the Midland Independent School District. Time after time, I read letters that slam the teachers and the Midland Public School System. Most often, I feel these letters warrant little response, yet the same question always pops into my mind, "I wonder what they'll do to bring about change, since they are so unhappy?"

I find it interesting that many people seem to feel that they can treat their child's education like a spectator sport. They sit back, point fingers and give advice, but they never take any constructive role within their school district to try to improve things.

If you are one of these people that feel the need to bash our school system, I want you to ask yourself how many PTA meetings, board meetings and public school meetings you have attended in the past few years? How many times have you attended the school for a visit with the teacher when there was not a problem? What have you done that has a positive note in it to help the schools?

It seems to me that the entire nation is aware that there is a problem in education. We are searching for answers and ways to improve things everyday. Please feel that you are welcome to come and join us in the search for an answer. Anyone can get involved, we welcome volunteers. If you are unhappy with your child's education or his teacher, go to school, talk with the teacher, principal and anyone else that you feel can help you get satisfaction. Then tunnel those irritations into a plan that will help your child and the other children at that school.

Please, get involved and help improve things. Parents need to stop pointing fingers at the teachers. Teachers need to stop pointing fingers at the parents. It takes very little effort to point that destructive, lazy, little finger at each other. Let's put a little more effort into our children and lend each other a helping hand.

Get involved, we want your advice and need your help.

Visitor gives thanks to city ambassadors

While in your city to attend the annual "Confederate Air Force's" Air Show, I was helped by two of your "Ambassadors," Ms. Margaret M. Livingston and Ms. Mim Gaddy. If all members of Midland's Chamber of Commerce emulate Ms. Livingston and Ms. Gaddy I fully believe that your city will benefit.

Both Ms. Livingston and Ms. Gaddy went out of their way to see that I had transportation back to my guest residence and that I was given the location of a nearby facility that I could enjoy the evening as a first-time visitor to Midland. Their dedication to their position as Ambassadors cannot be expressed with only a simple "Thank You." I also take my hat off to the City of Midland for selecting citizens such as Ms. Livingston and Ms. Gaddy to represent the hospitality of the Basin.

Again, I say "Thank you to the City of Midland and Ambassadors Livingston and Gaddy."

Pickwicks shouldn't have used violence

I am pleased that the Pickwicks are attempting to provide some entertainment for the children at Halloween. I am referring to the spook house at Midland Park Mall.

I am, however, appalled at the quality of this entertainment. At a time when the world is filled with violence and we monitor what our children watch on TV the Pickwicks provide entertainment filled with violence. I wonder how many children will go home and put a rope around their neck or how many will mutilate someone's arm or leg. (Does this remind you of anyone in Chicago?) There is a big difference between scary (with witches, spiders, bats, etc.) and violence of this type.

Pickwicks in my eyes ya'll messed up.

Columbia lands safely at NASA's spaceport

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia swooped through a clear sky and landed at NASA's spaceport Sunday with six astronauts who released a laser-reflecting satellite and tested a robotic eye during their 10-day journey.

"Beautiful ending to a great mission," Kevin Chilton, an astronaut inside Mission Control, told the crew.

Columbia landed on the concrete runway at Kennedy Space Center at 8:05 a.m. Just before nosewheel touchdown, the astronauts released a red, white and blue drag chute that slowed the shuttle as it rolled to a stop.

It was a fine morning for a landing. There were only a few wispy clouds and, contrary to earlier forecasts, barely any fog.

More than 300 people were on hand to welcome Columbia home.

Columbia traveled 4.1 million miles during its voyage, which began Oct. 22, and circled Earth 159 times. It was the 51st shuttle mission and the 13th flight of NASA's oldest shuttle.

A quick inspection showed the shuttle to be in good shape, said NASA launch director Bob Sieck.

Ground controllers had to scramble when shuttle commander James Wetherbee reported during descent the failure of a mechanical gauge that displays the positions of the rudder, body flaps and other flight control surfaces. Mission Control told him to turn the power off and on, which got the gauge working but only for a few minutes.

AP Laserphoto

The Space Shuttle Columbia flies over the Banana Creek as it makes the final approach to Kennedy Space Center's Runway 33 early Sunday morning ending a 10-day mission.

NASA spokesman Jeff Carr said it appeared to be a power problem and that the crew was able to monitor the information on computer screens.

The five U.S. astronauts and one Canadian completed their primary orbital job — releasing the Laser Geodynamics Satellite — early in the mission. They released the satellite on Oct. 23, and an attached rocket quickly boosted the craft into a 3,632-mile-high orbit.

The satellite is covered with 426 prisms to reflect laser beams fired from around the world. Geologists hope, over time, to gauge the slow drifting of continents by measuring the time it takes for the pulses to travel back and forth. That, in turn, should provide a better understanding of earthquakes.

Italy's space agency built the $4 million satellite and its $120 million booster.

Kennedy director Robert Crippen, a former shuttle commander, took issue with critics who blasted NASA for spending nearly a half-billion dollars on the mission and risking six lives to launch a satellite that could have been lofted by an unmanned rocket.

He said there was no reason not to use the shuttle for hoisting the satellite since that had been the plan all along.

Although the experiments that were conducted during the flight might be considered small by some, they are important, Crippen said. "There is a really big plus for science," he said.

National AIDS Commission chairman criticizes Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government spending on AIDS research is almost adequate, but the Bush administration has devoted far too little effort to AIDS prevention and care for AIDS victims, the chairman of the National AIDS Commission says.

"People are literally dying in the streets," said Dr. June Osborn, chairman of the panel that was appointed to be the government's conscience for the epidemic that already has claimed more than 152,000 American lives.

"This is going to get very, very big," Osborn said. "It seems big now, but you ain't seen nothing yet."

A Democratic appointee to the commission, Osborn said she has tried to keep herself and the panel away from partisan politics. She recently declined a request that she make a campaign appearance with Democratic candidate Bill Clinton.

But the commission, which is set to go out of business next fall, has kept itself in the public eye, often scolding the government for failing to do more or act faster. The centerpiece of its work was a 1991 report listing 30 recommendations for dealing with the epidemic.

Many of the recommendations involved making health care available and affordable, establishing a national plan for handling AIDS and promoting AIDS education.

In the nine months after they issued the recommendations, members of the commission met with President Bush and Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, urging them to take action. Finally they issued a statement calling the administration's response "woefully inadequate." They said that Bush and Sullivan had failed in critical areas of leadership, including the development if a national plan and support for health care.

Government's role falls into three areas: prevention, care and research, Osborn said.

The only area in which she says the government's efforts are close to adequate is research, where the administration has asked for some $1.2 billion.

Repeatedly during the campaign President Bush has said the government is spending more than four times that much on AIDS.

"He's got that unpleasantly wrong," Osborn said. It may be inadvertent, but it's distorting, alright."

Rule changes in Alaska may help develop wetlands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Friday proposed rules that will make it easier to develop wetlands in Alaska.

The proposal was assailed by environmentalists and the Clinton-Gore campaign as an accommodation to the oil industry and big business. Alaska Republicans said it would not harm the environment and made good sense for the economy.

The Environmental Protection Agency said Alaska would be exempted from the general rule under the Clean Water Act that developers restore or create new wetlands to compensate for any that have been damaged or lost.

Developers in Alaska, as the only state where less than 1 percent of its wetlands has been filled in, will still have to meet standards for minimizing the loss of wetlands, but will not have to compensate for any loss. Under the proposed rule, Alaska would return to the rules that apply to other states once 1 percent of its wetlands is developed.

The Alaska proposal could become effective after a 45-day period for public comment.

"EPA supports the objectives of the President's wetlands plan to protect the nation's valuable wetlands resources," said Lajuana S. Wilcher, EPA Assistant Administrator for Water.

The new proposal recognizes "that a national goal of no net loss of wetlands may have to be implemented at a different rate in areas like Alaska," she said.

The National Wildlife Federation adamantly opposed the plan it said would jeopardize Alaska's 170 million acres of wetlands.

"Removing this protection for Alaska's wetlands will spark unbridled oil and urban development. No wetland ecosystem will be safe," said Jay D. Hair, president of the environmental group.

Brooks Yeager, national coordinator of environmentalists in the Clinton-Gore campaign, said the decision was "a direct contradiction to President Bush's 'no net loss of wetlands' promise, and a last-minute gift to the oil industry."

Alaska's three members of Congress, all Republicans, welcomed the proposal.

"These rules should expedite the permitting process for such public projects as new schools, water and sewage treatment plants, ports, as well as a wide variety of private sector economic projects," said Rep. Don Young.

Madonna movie avoids rating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The makers of a new Madonna movie abandoned plans to release the sexual thriller with an adults-only rating, saying the new NC-17 mark has become synonymous with pornography.

Director Louis Malle said his film "Damage," starring Academy Award-winning actor Jeremy Irons, has been unfairly given the NC-17 classification.

"I am stunned, just shocked" Malle said Thursday in a telephone interview. "If 'Basic Instinct' got an R, I think I deserve a PG-13. This is a very passionate movie. But there is no ice pick. There is no murder. There is no rape."

The NC-17 rating, introduced two years ago by the Motion Picture Association of America, made the distribution of adult-oriented feature films increasingly problematic for movie makers.

Many theaters won't book films given the rating and newspapers and television and radio stations refuse their ads. NC-17 excludes children under age 17; an R rating means moviegoers under 17 must be accompanied by an adult.

Jack Valenti, MPPA president, said the ratings board is not in the position of deciding whether sexually explicit movies have artistic merit.

Hundreds mourn five slain American nuns in Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — The archbishop of Monrovia led hundreds of people Sunday in praying for five slain American nuns whose bodies lay unrecovered in a battle zone four miles from the center of this besieged capital.

The massacre of the nuns recalled the killings of four American missionaries in El Salvador in 1980, slayings that prompted an international outcry.

In this western African country, rebels loyal to Charles Taylor have been battling for control for nearly three years, overrunning all but Monrovia. A seven-nation West African force sent in to the halt the war is defending the capital.

Archbishop Michael Francis blamed rebels for killing the nuns, saying: "They call themselves freedom fighters, but they kill innocent people. ... We pray for those liars."

He did not specifically identify Taylor's fighters, although he previously said Taylor's men control the area where the nuns died.

The Roman Catholic prelate spoke to hundreds of people gathered in Sacred Heart Cathedral to mourn the nuns, two of whom were slain after leaving their convent to try to rescue a wounded child on Oct. 20. Three others were last seen by a parish priest Oct. 22. Nearly two weeks later, it was still too dangerous to recover their bodies.

Taylor, whose fighters have besieged Monrovia for more than two weeks, insisted his men do not control the area around the convent. There are several armed factions in the area, including rebels opposed to Taylor.

"It is really no man's land, so it is anybody's guess what has happened to those nuns," the U.S.-educated Liberian rebel leader said over rebel radio.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul II said he hoped the nuns' deaths might somehow inspire "all who can influence the fact of that martyred country" to stop the fighting in Liberia, a nation founded by freed American slaves.

The U.S. State Department called the killings a "cowardly act" and said the nuns apparently were slain several days ago in a rebel-controlled area.

Barbara Brillant of Brunswick, Maine, one of three American nuns still in Liberia, said Taylor's fighters "see the CIA behind every white face." All the slain nuns were white; all were from Illinois; and all were in their 50s and 60s. They were members of the Adorers of the Blood of Christ order.

One of the nuns, 69-year-old Sister Barbara Ann Muttra, worked as a nurse in Saigon for three years before coming to Liberia in 1971; another, Sister Shirley Kolmer, 61, was a Fulbright scholar and educator who came to Liberia in 1977.

Two of the nuns were killed along a road and three died in front of their convent, Francis said.

Francis had been quoted as saying four Liberian novices also were killed, but he told The Associated Press that three Liberian novices were missing and none was confirmed dead.

Few details of the killings were available. Francis said he hoped fighting could be stopped long enough to allow the nuns' bodies to be recovered for a requiem Mass.

On Sunday, there was a lull in the fighting, although more rockets hit an airfield near Monrovia that has been targeted by Taylor's fighters. Rockets struck near the airfield as a plane landed with more troops from Nigeria, the country that is leading the West African force.

At least 11 people were killed in the past week. No count was available of rebel casualties.

Taylor invaded from Ivory Coast in December 1989 to overthrow President Samuel Doe, who was later captured and slain by a rival rebel faction. The seven-nation West African forces was sent to Liberia in 1990 to try to halt the civil war.

Passenger train slams into freight train

SUKKUR, Pakistan (AP) — An express train packed with sleeping passengers slammed into a parked freight train on Sunday, and at least 1,000 soldiers crawled through the mangled wreckage to search for survivors and recover bodies.

As darkness fell they pulled the 14th body from the wreckage. It wasn't known how many bodies were still buried beneath the twisted metal, but railway officials said it was probably not more than five or six.

About 60 people, many of them seriously injured, were rushed to the nearest hospital about 50 miles away, the state-run Associated Press of Pakistan reported.

There was no passenger manifesto, and railway workers said they did not know how many people were crammed into the three front cars that rammed into the freight train.

Pakistan's antiquated railway system has been plagued by accidents. In a similar accident last year in the same region, a passenger train rammed head-on into a parked freight train, killing 100 people and wounding scores more.

Pakistan's southern Sindh provincial government ordered an inquiry into the pre-dawn crash, about 70 miles north of the interior city of Sukkur.

An assistant station manager at the tiny railway stop of Reti, where the accident occurred, fled the scene, the news agency reported. Police said there was a search warrant out for his arrest. It was not known why he fled, but police said he probably panicked.

A preliminary investigation showed that an incorrect signal may have sent the passenger train barrelling down the track blocked by the parked freight train, officials said.

Witnesses said villagers, many of them awakened by the sound of churning metal, ran to the site with blankets, bandages and a meager collection of medical supplies.

The Pakistani government suspended the head of its railway, Zafarullah Qureshi, after last year's crash.

Three of the country's deadliest accidents occurred during Qureshi's tenure in an 18-month period and within 45 miles of one another, government officials say. All the accidents occured in the southern Sindh province.

The rail system was developed by the British before the subcontinent was partitioned in 1947.

Fischer, Spassky draw in Game 28

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Boris Spassky pressed Bobby Fischer on Sunday in the 28th game of their chess rematch, but settled for a second draw in two days instead of risking a series-ending loss.

Both players agreed that the Russian-born Spassky had an edge in the game, which ended after 35 moves. But in order to press hard for a win, Spassky would have had to open his position and risk a counterattack by Fischer.

The first player to win 10 games collects $3.35 million. The loser gets the remainder of the $5 million prize money. Fischer leads the series 9-5, and according to match rules is guaranteed at least a tie. Draws do not count.

The next game is scheduled for Wednesday, with Fischer having a slight advantage by virtue of playing the white pieces.

Spassky, who played white Sunday, said after the match that he couldn't find a way to continue his attack and that he was in danger of counterattack.

Fischer said, "Boris got a decent edge somehow, but my position had some latent counterplay."

Spassky "had more space and pressure" but not enough to carry him to victory, Fischer said.

The two old rivals repeated the opening moves that won Spassky the 12th game of the match. Spassky opened with a pawn to queen 4, and Fischer responded with the Samisch Variation of the King's Indian Defense.

Muslims reject Serb goods in UNICEF drive

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnia's Muslim-led government on Sunday rejected Serb-made clothing brought by UNICEF for needy children in the ravaged capital.

The rejection of such badly needed aid only underlined the deep hatred felt toward the Serbs, who have besieged the city for seven months, bombarding civilian targets at will.

Bosnian health officials said nine people were killed and 111 wounded in fighting on Saturday, the heaviest in weeks.

On Sunday, a cameraman for the British Broadcast Corp. was killed when his vehicle was hit by mortar fire near the northeastern town of Travnik. Tihomir Tunukovic, a Croatian, was at least the 29th journalist killed covering Bosnia's war.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic and his Croatian counterpart Franjo Tudjman met in Zagreb, Croatia, on Sunday in an apparent effort to defuse tensions between the once nominal allies.

A joint statement said the two leaders agreed to punish those responsible for recent Muslim-Croat clashes and to form a joint military command to prevent future conflicts.

Sarajevo was relatively quiet Sunday, but heavy infantry clashes broke out for about half an hour in the evening around the presidency building, the site of fierce clashes the day before.

Gen. Phillip Morillon, the U.N. commander for Bosnia, demanded that rebel Serb leaders explain the shelling, a U.N. statement said.

GEM DANDY

Randy Bryant makes a clock during a gathering of the Midland Gem & Mineral Society.

Randy Bryant polishes a blue opal stone.

While on vacation or a camping trip, Rick Cinotto sometimes picks up a free souvenir or two.

"I find an interesting-looking rock and I keep it," he said.

But up until about two months ago, that's all Cinotto did — save the rocks.

"I know more what to do with rocks now," he said.

These days, Cinotto cuts, shapes and polishes the stones, and even incorporates the rocks into silver jewelry.

Cinotto's former innocent attraction to rocks isn't uncommon.

"You see a pretty rock, you pick it up," said Jerry Tedford, a silversmith instructor for the the Midland Gem & Mineral Society.

And some people choose to help bring out the natural beauty.

"You'd be surprised what you can do with a piece of rock," Tedford said.

And in shaping stones for jewelry or ornament, people can "let their imagination go wild," he added.

Jeanie Edwards, who joined the Midland Gem & Mineral Society with her husband, Dick, in January, agreed.

"It's interesting to go out and find a rock and say we found the rock and shaped it and put it in something," said Ms. Edwards as she worked on a heart-shaped pendant.

In addition to the aesthetic rewards, many rock workers find the hobby relaxing.

"I'm an air traffic controller at Midland International Airport, so I guess this is called stress relief," Cinotto said as he worked on a piece of jewelry.

Cinotto is one of about 160 people who belong to the Midland Gem & Mineral Society.

"The basic purpose is to provide an organization for people interested in gems and minerals or the natural sciences," said Christyn Wise, a board member and the publicity chairman for the organization's 30th annual Gem & Mineral Show.

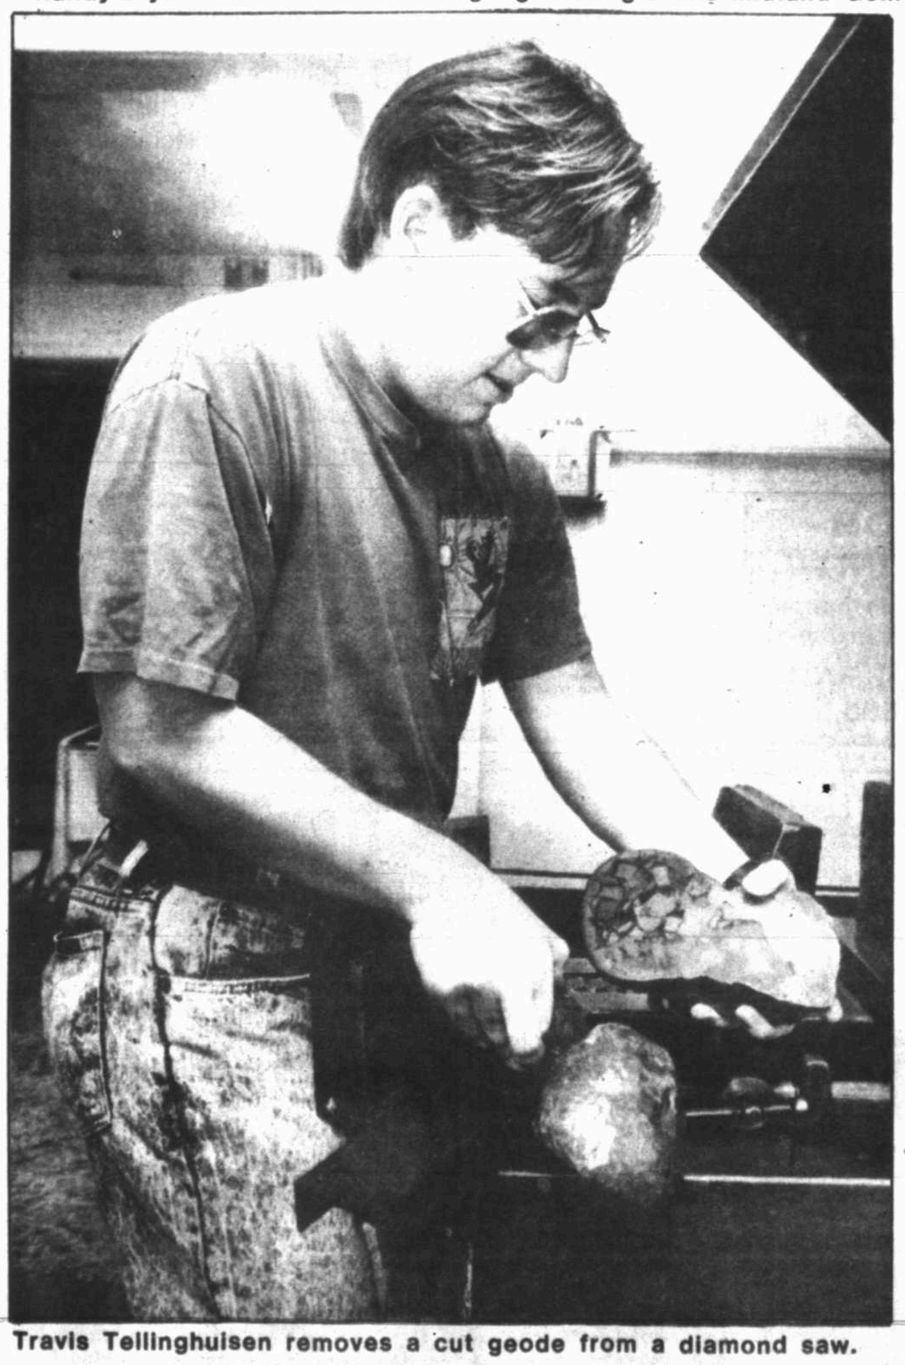

"We have classes to teach people how to do various things — faceting, silversmithing and lapidary," she said.

Faceting consists of the cutting and polishing of transparent gemstones, which includes precious and semiprecious stones. Some commonly used stones are quartz, tourmaline and topaz.

Lapidary is the cutting and polishing of opaque or translucent stones, such as agate and tiger-eye.

Faceting and lapidary are done "either

Area teen dies in accident

Staff report

DAWSON COUNTY — One Lamesa teen-ager died and another was in critical condition Sunday evening after a one-vehicle accident early Sunday morning.

According to a Department of Public Safety report, a 1986 Chevrolet pickup, driven by Timothy Davis, 16, was westbound on FM 1210, 11½ miles north of Lamesa, at about 12:25 a.m. Sunday.

The vehicle left the road to the left and when the driver tried to correct it, the pickup went to the right. But Davis overcorrected and the vehicle skidded into a ditch, according to the report.

The pickup overturned once and the passenger, Timothy Gibbs, 16, was thrown from the pickup, according to the report. The vehicle rolled over on top of Gibbs and then onto the pavement. Davis was thrown from the pickup onto the pavement.

Justice of the Peace Dennis Dyess pronounced Gibbs dead at the scene.

Davis was in critical condition at Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa, according to the report.

for jewelry or exhibition or just for the fun of doing it . . . just to bring out the beauty of the stone," Ms. Wise said.

Silversmithing includes the making of silver jewelry and other items from pieces of silver sheets and wire by sawing, cutting, filing and soldering.

The society also has bead-stringing groups, short speciality seminars to teach other skills, rock hunts, monthly meetings, and their annual show coming up this weekend.

But it's not all work.

"We socialize quite a bit," Ms. Wise said.

Many people join the society, take classes then use their skills on projects at the workshop in the company of other enthusiasts.

"Every Monday night is shop night and you can come down and do whatever you want to do," Ms. Wise said.

"It is very individual. But it's very much a social thing too," she said. The hobby is individual in likes and dislikes in rock and silver working, and social in the mutual interest and the get-togethers, she added.

One thing the members have in common is their love of the process involved in making fascinating things with rocks, Ms. Wise said.

"I think the initial appeal is how you can take something so ordinary and make it so beautiful . . . like a sculptor releasing this inner form," she said.

That hidden beauty can be viewed and purchased at the society's Gem & Mineral show set for Saturday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m., and Sunday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

The show will include various demonstrations and exhibits as well as pieces for sale.

For people who would like to become involved in the club, membership is $5, and classes cost $25. Classes — beginning, intermediate and advance — generally last about six weeks and meet once or twice per week.

Youth shot trick-or-treating

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 9-year-old girl was in stable condition Sunday after she was caught in the crossfire of a neighborhood dispute while trick-or-treating.

Herlinda Medrano was shot once in the lower back Saturday night when a group of youths shot at a car they believed was carrying gang members, police said.

Two youths, aged 14 and 16, were arrested about an hour after the incident when officers recognized their pickup. A .22 caliber sawed-off rifle was recovered from the vehicle, and authorities said the two youths were blaming each other for firing the shot.

Herlinda was shot shortly before 8 p.m. The bullet went almost through her body and lodged under the skin of her abdomen, officials said.

"I heard a pop — it wasn't very loud — like a .22, then I saw the little girl," said Robert Moreno, 48, who lives in the area.

Herlinda and her mother were driven to Santa Rosa Children's Hospital by a man witnesses described as a good Samaritan. She was listed in stable condition Sunday according to the hospital staff.

The incident began when the occupants of a car "flashed gang signs" at a group of youths who were standing beside a pickup at an intersection on San Antonio's west side, witnesses said.

Police believe one of the youths standing beside the pickup pulled the sawed-off rifle from the truck and fired at the car, said Detective Joye Kokal.

The shot missed the car, but struck Herlinda about a block away, Kokal said.

Officials said the youths remained in the Bexar County Juvenile Detention Center. No charges had been filed Sunday. Their names were not released because they are minors.

Dead's guitarist makes return following illness

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia used a Halloween concert to prove he remains a living legend — not the dearly departed kind — returning in good health after his rumored imminent demise.

Garcia fell seriously ill in August and the busy band was forced to cancel a fall tour. There were reports that his condition was much worse than the band was saying publicly. Rumors brewed among Grateful Dead fans that the king of psychedelic rock was dying.

But after a lengthy convalescence, a slimmed-down Garcia played Saturday with his other group, The Jerry Garcia Band, in a sold-out show at the Oakland Coliseum. A banner in the crowd read: "Welcome back Jerry!"

Garcia had lost 50 pounds, according to Grateful Dead spokesman Dennis McNally. Fans agreed that regarding their idol's physique, less was more.

"He's a lean, mean guitar-pickin' machine," said Grier McCurdy, 27, who staked out a front row spot. "He's slim and that means he's healthy and hopefully that means he'll be around for a long time."

"He looks svelte, comparatively speaking," said Bryan Hillebrant, 24, of San Francisco. "He sounds like he is more on top of his playing."

Attorney general calm in controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — William P. Barr earned high marks as a Mr. Fix-it for the Bush administration, but lately things have not gone so smoothly for the attorney general.

In the closing days of the presidential campaign, the Justice Department seems to be in disarray.

First there were allegations that the administration was covering up illegal loans to Iraq made before the Gulf War by the Atlanta branch of the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, which is owned by the Italian government.

Then the news broke that the Justice Department was investigating FBI Director William S. Sessions, who was conducting his own probe of the BNL scandal.

Through it all, Barr has appeared unflappable.

Barr became attorney general a year ago at age 41, succeeding Richard Thornburgh. Only Robert F. Kennedy, 36, and Ramsey Clark, 40, were younger when they took office.

In contrast to Thornburgh, Barr is accessible and affable, even self-deprecating at times.

Many in the Justice Department credit him with bolstering morale by restoring power to the assistant attorneys general who run the various divisions.

Barr solidified his standing in the Bush administration by providing legal justification for the U.S. invasion of Panama in 1989, and by his handling of a potentially explosive hostage crisis at an Alabama prison in the summer of 1991. Nine hostages were released unharmed after being held for 10 days by armed Cubans facing deportation.

"I think he's hard working, honest and responsible," said Robert Del Tufo, attorney general of New Jersey, who has worked closely with Barr on crime-fighting initiatives. Del Tufo, a Democrat, has criticized the administration — and Barr — for opposing gun control.

"When it comes to analyzing a problem, he is one of the quickest people I've seen," said Chicago attorney James G. Richmond, who used to be one of Barr's top aides at the Justice Department.

Barr's critics are upset that he did not turn the BNL case over to a three-judge panel for appointment of an independent counsel. Instead, he picked his own man for the investigation.

"This is the biggest crisis to hit the department since the Saturday Night Massacre almost 20 years ago and it requires full and independent review," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

New York Times columnist William Safire branded Barr "the cover-up general."

Barr argues that the soon-to-expire independent counsel law gives too much power to court-appointed lawyers like Lawrence Walsh, the prosecutor in the Iran-Contra case who has spent more than $30 million in a six-year investigation.

Those who seek the posts often are "bored Washington lawyers trying to jazz up their practice," Barr said. "With something minor, you go through this oppressive, expensive investigation."

"I think that the whole BNL matter is largely conjured up by a tag team match between Capitol Hill and some of the national media to try to develop a scandal where I don't think one exists," he said.

Defenders of Sessions say the allegations against him are trivial and unsupported.

African dustclouds nourishes the U.S. coasts

By Marlise Simons
N.Y. Times News Service

ETOSHA, Namibia — Hot and potent, the October winds scoop the thin topsoil off the African savanna, swirl the dust high into the skies and thrust it west on a journey that can stretch thousands of miles.

Scientists tracking this dust say it bears a message as harsh as the law of the jungle: The severe and lethal droughts of Africa are a boon for life in the Atlantic Ocean and for soil and vegetation in the Americas.

Tons of dust fall into the ocean, and scientists have recently discovered that the dust provides vital minerals to plankton and krill at the beginning of the food chain.

Researchers are also beginning to understand the significance of African dust moving to Florida, the Caribbean islands and South America.

And new studies have shown that deep in the heart of the Amazon rain forest, tons of dust blowing in from Africa act as a kind of vitamin supplement to nutrient-poor soils.

The equation is a bitter one for the hungry nations of Africa.

On the brittle scrublands and desert of northern Namibia, a group of scientists from the United States and other nations is now examining the scope and impact of these tons of earth.

The project, backed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, is part of the first major atmospheric study to cover much of the South Atlantic region.

The six-week expedition is taking place during the worst southern African drought of this century, one that is badly hurting people, animals and land across nine countries.

This year alone, members of the research team say, millions of tons of topsoil have been lost, a process that accelerates as dry spells persist.

Satellites have recorded unusually thick dust plumes leaving Africa in the last six months, while monitoring stations on land have registered their arrival in the Americas.

Scientists are just beginning to understand the implications of this ancient process, which ebbs and flows with rainfall and drought.

Although it has long been known that winds can blow very fine particles of dust from deserts like the Sahara hundreds of miles away, only in recent years have researchers had the sophisticated tools, ranging from satellites to nuclear physics, to chart and analyze the phenomenon.

"This African dust feeding the Atlantic and the Americas shows how very large and distant ecosystems depend on each other," said Dr. Michael Garstang of the University of Virginia, who is collecting soil specimens here to be compared with samples being gathered in Brazil and the mid-Atlantic. "The message is that our planet consists of many interconnected and interdependent systems which we barely understand. We're just beginning to scratch the surface."

Those systems are ruled by powerful forces of nature that lie beyond the influence of man, he said, adding, "But if we want to know how man is affecting the planet, we first have to know how these systems work."

The seasonal bursts of dust do more than provide an uncanny link between two continents that were united when the earth was younger.

Researchers are also studying how the dust highways affect the regional and global climate: the enormous dust flows can trap the heat leaving the earth while blocking solar radiation from coming in.

In humid areas, heavy dust can promote cloud formation and rain because dust particles act as seeds around which cloud droplets form.

The dust plumes also thicken the vast pool of ozone and smog that forms over the South Atlantic at this time of the year as farmers and herders clear their land and set fire to huge areas of Brazil and southern Africa.

Scientists here in Namibia also hope that their findings will draw attention to man's own contributions to Africa's erosion and focus on the need for better land management. Specialists have long warned that overgrazing, the cutting of trees and the planting of unsuitable crops damage the fragile arid and semi-arid soils.

"People do not cause desertification," Garstang said, "but they can exacerbate it."

Evidence of drought and degraded land is strong across northern Namibia, where 13 years of abnormally low rainfall have turned savanna grass to straw, dried up creeks and water holes and left cattle thin and mangy.

Dust devils dance over the plains, and a sudden blast of wind can bring a blizzard of white dust, dense as mist.

Among the researchers working here, the scientists from the University of Virginia are probing air and soil around the Etosha Pan, which is now a dried-up lake but which in wetter years was one of Africa's most important breeding areas for flamingos.

"This is part of mapping the communication between Africa and South America," said Dr. Robert Swap, who was surveying soil conditions and collecting dust.

Researchers stop AIDS infection in laboratory

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University Medical Center researchers say they have created a protein fragment that stops the AIDS virus from infecting human cells in laboratory tests.

The finding could open the door to a new class of drugs against HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. But researchers warned there's no guarantee and said a new drug wouldn't be developed quickly.

"There is some interest in developing this idea into an antiviral drug," said Dr. Dani Bolognesi, director of Duke's Center for AIDS Research and one of the scientists involved in the research. "We're making plans for that right now."

A report on the advance will be published this week in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

John Moore, a research scientist at the Aaron Diamond AIDS Research Center in New York City, said the advance is "an extremely good piece of science."

However, he noted that what works in the laboratory may not work in people.

Although there are several drugs for the treatment of AIDS, none cures the disease.

Most anti-HIV drugs, including the best known, AZT, work inside already infected cells by interfering with the enzyme the virus uses to reproduce itself.

The Duke researchers are looking for a way to disarm the virus before it gets into the cells.

The team, which included Dr. Thomas Matthews and Dr. Carl Wild, created a peptide — a short piece of protein — that mimics a key part of the HIV infection machinery, found on the outside of the virus particle.

In laboratory experiments, scientists mixed the peptide, called DP-107, with HIV and human immune cells. The peptide blocked the virus from entering the cells and also stopped infected cells from killing healthy cells.

The researchers said they repeated the experiment many times, with the same outcome.

Millionaire goes on trial for murder-for-hire scheme

ATLANTA (AP) — A Florida millionaire faces trial this week in the 1987 slaying of his estranged wife, who was shot to death at her home hours before a scheduled hearing on the legality of the couple's post-nuptial agreement.

Prosecutors say James Vincent Sullivan hired a hit man by telephone to kill his wife, Lita Sullivan, because he feared losing his property in a divorce settlement. Sullivan, 51, of Palm Beach, Fla. made his millions from an inherited Macon liquor distributorship.

Mrs. Sullivan, 35, was killed Jan. 16, 1987, at her posh Atlanta home by a rose-carrying gunman posing as a delivery man.

A federal grand jury in Atlanta indicted Sullivan in January on charges of using "interstate commerce" to arrange a murder for hire and "causing others to use and carry a firearm."

His trial begins Monday. He faces a maximum of life in prison and a $1.25 million fine if convicted.

A cellmate of Sullivan's, and Sullivan's former wife, Suki Rogers, are expected to testify that he admitted involvement in the killing, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported Sunday. Sullivan and Ms. Rogers, who were married after Mrs. Sullivan's death, have since divorced.

The prosecution says it also has evidence of telephone calls made three days before the killing between Sullivan's Palm Beach mansion and an Atlanta motel where three men had registered under a fictitious North Carolina address.

Shortly after the shooting, a collect call was placed to Sullivan's home from a highway rest stop near Suwanee, about 25 miles from Atlanta, the newspaper said.

Defense attorney Edward Garland contends the prosecution has "nothing to go on but innuendo, suspicion and desire to end an unsolved crime."

Natural gas prices were mostly higher, but contracts for delivery in December fell 1.3 cents to $2.295 per 1,000 cubic feet. Gas fell 20.4 cents during the week.

Expert:. Airline situation 'terrible'

■ Carriers around the world suffer third successive year of billion-dollar losses, head of industry group says.

Associated Press

GENEVA — Airlines around the world are suffering their third successive year of multibillion-dollar losses in their worst-ever performance, the International Air Transport Association said Sunday.

Hardest hit are U.S. airlines, battered by fare wars and a decline in domestic travel, said Guenther Eser, the industry group's director general.

"The situation domestically in the United States for the airline industry is terrible," Eser said. "Half of all our losses of the 213 (IATA member) airlines are practically the five, six big airlines in the United States."

A sign of the world industry's hard times is that airlines from a number of countries have parked 900 planes in the deserts of the U.S. Southwest, where the dry climate will keep them from deteriorating until they are needed again, he said. Some of the planes have been sent to Arizona straight off the production line.

Many airlines also are drastically cutting the size of their staffs, he said. Some 52,000 people, or 3.4 percent of all staffs, lost their jobs in 1991, and that number was expected to be much higher this year. Total figures were not yet available.

"I don't have to tell you that the air transport industry is doing very badly," Eser told reporters at IATA headquarters in Geneva ahead of the association's annual meeting in Montreal on today and Tuesday. "It's going through its worst-ever time."

IATA, whose member airlines carry 98 percent of all scheduled international traffic, said in its annual report that a slow recovery began this year, but Eser said he didn't expect a solid turnaround until 1994.

Eser forecast that IATA members would lose at least $2.5 billion on their international operations this year. This comes on top of a record loss of $4 billion during 1991, when the Gulf War curbed air travel. In 1990, which was affected by the build up to the war, losses were $2.7 billion.

Total losses for the first three years of the 1990s exceed $9 billion, "more than all the profits the airlines made in the 1980s," he said.

Other problems hurting the airlines have been the world recession and higher fuel prices, Eser said.

"After the Gulf War we had expected that especially the business people to fly again as they did before the Gulf crisis," said Eser. "This was not the case. The recession is all over, and they cannot afford to fly."

The airlines are one of the first industries to feel a recession and one of the last to recover, he said. "When people are looking for ways to save money in a recession, one of the first is not to buy a new car or not to fly."

Eser said he expected many airlines to overcome current problems and disagreed with forecasts that only four or five European airlines would survive. But he foresaw an increase in cooperation arrangements and alliances among airlines.

Under such arrangements, the airlines run joint ticketing and boarding operations.

Regulators deny banking crisis is imminent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators deny the collapse of a large chain of Texas banks signals the start of a national banking crisis, but they say Americans should be braced for more bank failures.

Banking regulators announced last Friday that they had taken control of First City Bancorporation of Texas in what they ranked as the biggest bank failure this year and the eighth largest in U.S. history.

The bank holding company, which had assets of $8.8 billion, was seized after regulators determined that a growing level of bad loans had made it insolvent.

Sen. Donald Riegle, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said that what worried him about the collapse of First City was that it marked the second time the banking chain had failed.

In 1988, the FDIC had provided $977 million to protect depositors. Officials estimated the failure of the bank this time could end up costing $500 million.

Riegle, D-Mich., said he would ask the congressional General Accounting Office to study the First City case to determine "what specific steps should be taken by regulators in the future to prevent a bank failing twice."

Officials at the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency denied that the timing of their decision was linked in any way to Tuesday's election.

"It is always unfortunate when any bank must be closed," acting Comptroller Stephen R. Steinbrink said. "Nonetheless, once we clearly identify that a bank is insolvent, we must act. That was the situation we faced with First City."

While President Bush and Democratic challenger Bill Clinton have both said that the nation's banking industry is basically sound, independent candidate Ross Perot has raised questions about a possible wave of bank failures starting in December as banks are unable to meet new stringent federal regulations.

Federal regulators, however, insisted that the collapse of First City did not alter their forecasts of the number of banks failures likely over the next 14 months.

So far this year, 104 banks with assets of $36.6 billion have been closed. Officials predict that number could reach 120 before the year is over and total between 100 and 125 banks next year. But they said this should not overwhelm the resources the FDIC has available.

Federal officials have insisted that the tougher regulations going into effect Dec. 19 should not increase the number of bank failures significantly although they may hasten some closings.

During the last presidential debate, Perot brought up a new study that warned that 1,150 of the nation's 12,000 banks were solvent on paper only and should be closed or merged with stronger institutions.

Phillips workers sue lawyers in explosion case

HOUSTON (AP) — A group of Phillips Petroleum Co. workers have sued for negligence the attorneys who represented them in injury lawsuits stemming from the 1989 explosion at the Pasadena plant.

The lawsuit, filed Friday, contends five prominent lawyers and the Houston law firm of Umphrey, Burrow, Reaud, Williams & Bailey took advantage of the workers' position and misled them into accepting inadequate settlements.

The 50 former and current employees and their dependents allege the lawyers failed to investigate each case individually, refused client requests to talk until the day settlements were offered and negotiated a group settlement instead of individual payments.

Phillips has paid more than $100 million, according to the lawsuit.

The attorneys named include Walter Umphrey, David Burrow, Wayne A. Reaud, John E. Williams and F. Kenneth Bailey.

The Phillips workers are seeking $100 million from each lawyer; a refund of their attorney's fees, and other exemplary damages.

GM to boost output of Arlington plant

ARLINGTON (AP) — General Motors Corp. executives plan to shift their Arlington assembly plant into high gear in the wake of the giant automaker's cost-cutting move to close a Michigan facility.

A $63 million GM investment in its Arlington facility will enable it to boost its current capacity of 145,000 cars annually, plant manager Art Hester said last week.

"We will go to over 200,000 a year and we will accelerate to that level right after Christmas," Hester said.

General Motors announced earlier this year that it would move production from its Willow Run assembly plant near Ypsilanti, Mich., to Texas.

The Arlington plant would then handle the combined production of large, rear-wheel-drive cars, Hester said.

The world's biggest automaker in February, following a three-month study of its plants, decided to consolidate large rear-wheel-drive production in Arlington.

Ypsilanti Township residents opposed closing of the Michigan plant as part of GM's plan to return to profitability. The company Thursday reported a $752.9 million third-quarter loss.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Calculating what stock will yield easy task

By Bill Doyle

Q: In December 1991, my wife and I purchased 100 shares each of five electric and gas utility companies, with dividend yields of 5.23 to 7.47 percent. We are reinvesting our dividends and are adding enough money each month to buy about 10 additional shares.

Doyle

We realize we are assuming some risk, but we hope to get modest capital gains, and so far have done so. Our goal is to average about 6 percent.

Next January, when each company sends us a Form 1099, showing the amount of dividends we reinvested, how do we figure yields and total returns?

A: Calculating yield is a snap; total return more complicated. You don't need the Form 1099s for either exercise in arithmetic.

The yield on stock is determined by dividing the annual dividends paid on one share by that stock's market price. If XYZ Gas & Electric common stock paid $1.20 during the past 12 months and the stock is trading at $20, its yield is 6 percent.

Total return is the yield plus or minus change in the stock's value. If the market price of the above-mentioned XYZ G&E stock rose from $18 to $20 in the past 12 months —an 11 percent gain in value —a quick calculation puts its total return at 17 percent, the 6 percent yield plus the 11 percent increase in value.

However, that is an oversimplification. A more accurate and complex measurement of total return assumes reinvestment of dividends to buy additional shares, takes into account exactly when each dividend was reinvested, the length of time the additional shares were owned and what dividends those additional shares received. The complicated calculation is best left to computer wizards, though. Settle for the easier total return exercise of yield plus or minus change in stock value.

Whether you reach your goal of an average 6 percent total return is anybody's guess. As has happened in the past, you can expect the market values of your stocks to fall, resulting in total returns lower than yields.

But you seem to be on the right track. Most utility stocks have been relatively good investments.

Q: To "realize" total return, wouldn't we have to sell our stock?

A: The word "realize," as used on Wall Street, does mean selling and pocketing the proceeds from the sale. In that context, you would have to sell in order to get your hands on the increased value of your stock —in dollars.

That said, in the general use of the word, you realize total return by seeing a gain or loss even if you don't sell. You have that total return in the value of the investment you continue to own.

Q: A friend of mine calculates the yield on his investments based on the dividends he now receives and the prices he paid, no matter how long ago that was, rather than on current prices. Is this the preferred way to determine yield?

A: No. Your friend is calculating "yield on original investment." The generally accepted and far more meaningful calculation is "current yield" — dividends paid during the past 12 months divided by the stock's current value.

Let's say your friend bought Hot Shot Widget stock at $10 a share five years ago when it paid 50 cents a year in dividends. Let's also say Hot Shot Widget now trades at $20 and the annual dividend is $1.

Using his method — $1 dividend divided by $10 cost — your friend would come up with a 10 percent yield. But the 5 percent current yield — $1 dividend divided by the $20 market price — informs your friend what rate of income the present value of his investment is providing now.

Rocket dreams

NEW YORK — Rocket Ismail said Sunday that though he would like to play in the NFL, he plans to fulfill the remaining two years of his contract with the CFL's Toronto Argonauts.

"I definitely intend to fulfill the rest of my contract there," Ismail said in an interview aired during CBS' "NFL Today."

"The two years I've been here have gone rather quickly, so I guess the two years that remain will do the same," he said.

Ismail has two years left at $3.5 million with the Argonauts under a deal he reached just before he would have been a high pick in the 1991 NFL draft.

When asked whether he would like to play in the NFL, Ismail answered "yes" — but he added that he has not been in contact with the Los Angeles Raiders, the team that holds his NFL rights.

CBS said it was told by the Raiders on Saturday that the team is interested in Ismail, but that it was up to him to work out his contract situation before the two sides could talk.

The Argonauts, who won the CFL championship last year, were eliminated from the playoffs on Saturday. Ismail said the team's collapse has been frustrating.

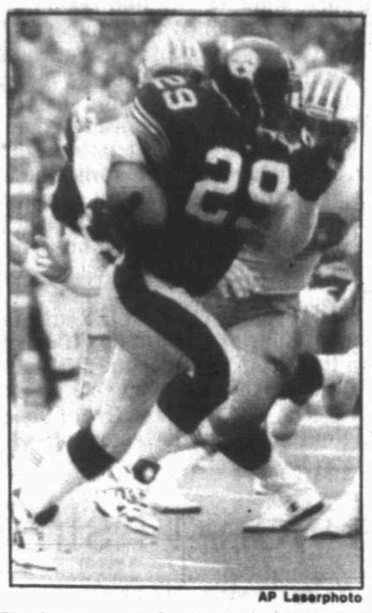

"This is the first time that I've been involved in anything that is actually this bad," he said. "I'm just glad I'm getting it out of the way now and I look forward to many successful years after that."

IRVING — Emmitt Smith finally showed someone can run away from Philadelphia's defense.

Smith ran through the Eagles for 163 yards on 30 carries, the first time Philadelphia had allowed 100 yards rushing in 54 games dating back to 1989, and the Dallas Cowboys won 20-10 Sunday.

"This is it, this is the best," the defending NFL rushing champion said. "Something like this is seldom done against the Eagles. To achieve it, is a big feeling."

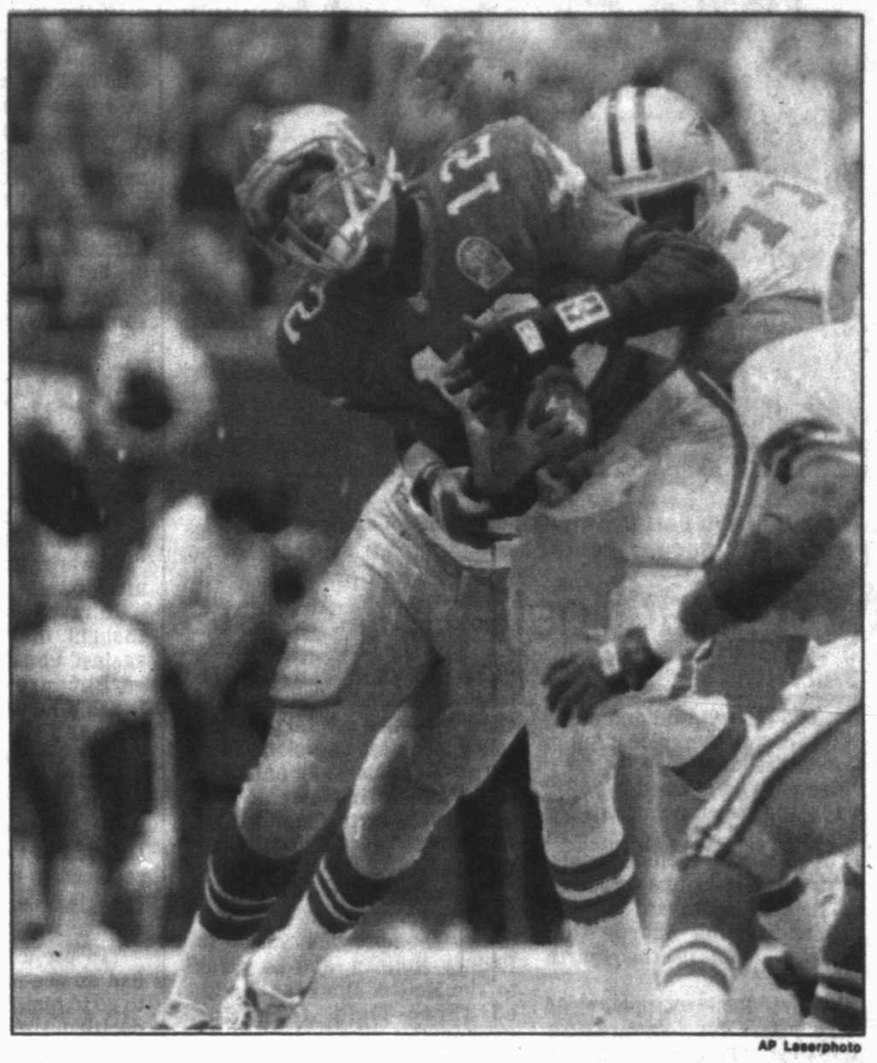

Dallas took over first place in the NFC East with a 7-1 record while the Eagles, who had defeated Dallas 31-7 only a month ago, dropped to 5-3. Dallas has the best record in the NFL because of San Francisco's 24-14 loss to Phoenix.

But it was Smith's performance which stood out. Gerald Riggs was the last to gain 100 yards on Philadelphia, and no Cowboys runner had done it since Herschel Walker in 1986.

"It was a pretty good job but it would have been a great job if I hadn't lost a fumble," Smith said. "I'm sore right now, big time sore. I can imagine how I'm going to feel tomorrow."

Smith dashed 51 yards to set up a go-ahead 48-yard field goal by Lin Elliott, then gained 45 yards on five carries to position Dallas for Troy Aikman's 14-yard touchdown pass to Daryl Johnston with 7:39 to play.

Jets shock Miami, 26-14

■ The Dolphins have lost two straight after being undefeated through six weeks.

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press Writer

Will the real Miami Dolphins please stand up?

After going through the first six weeks of the season as the NFL's only undefeated team, the Dolphins have lost two straight and look like a team headed in the wrong direction.

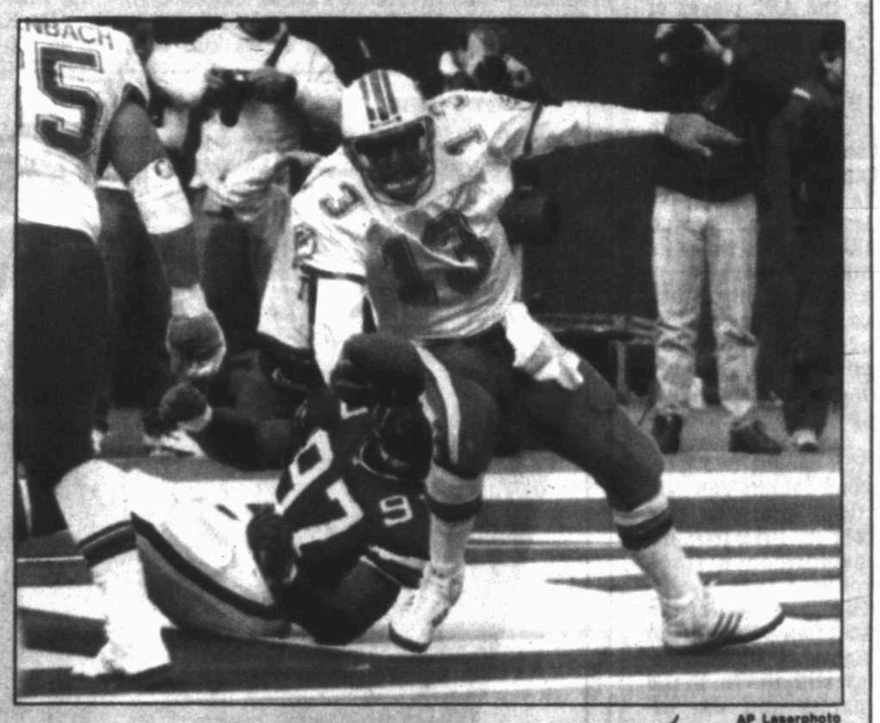

Even quarterback Dan Marino had few explanations after the Dolphins lost 26-14 Sunday to a patchwork New York Jets team that took a 23-0 halftime lead and short-circuited a Miami comeback in the second half.

"We were very ineffective in the first half and it's hard to explain," Marino said. "We're 6-2, but we're not playing well now. We're stopping ourselves. You can see we're not making things happen for ourselves."

Ken O'Brien, subbing for the injured Browning Nagle, had touchdown passes of 37 yards to Johnny Mitchell, 20 yards to Rob Moore and 4 yards to Al Toon for the Jets (2-6), who also had a 47-yard field goal by Cary Blanchard and scored a safety when Marino was sacked in the end zone.

"It's about time," Jets cornerback James Hasty said. "Things haven't gone our way, and this is probably the first game where the offense and the defense complemented each other. The offense held onto the ball when it had to, and the defense did the job getting to Marino and containing their receivers."

O'Brien completed 21 of 29 passes for 240 yards in his second start of the season. Brad Baxter led the Jets with 103 yards on 20 carries and Freeman McNeil filled in for the injured Blair Thomas by adding 37 yards on 11 carries.

Bills 16, Patriots 7

Another moral victory for New England turned into another sluggish victory for the Bills at Buffalo.

The Bills (6-2) survived an off day by Jim Kelly, who finished with 22 completions in 33 attempts, 205 yards, two touchdowns, and two interceptions, and an injury to Thurman Thomas to move back into a tie for first with Miami in the AFC East.

The Patriots (0-8) remained the league's only winless team.

Kelly threw a 13-yard TD pass to James Lofton and a 3-yard scoring pass to Pete Metzelaars. The Bills also got a safety by Chris Hale.

Washington back on top in AP poll

Associated Press

Washington's impressive 41-7 victory over nationally ranked Stanford lifted the Huskies back to No. 1 in Sunday's Associated Press college football poll.

The Huskies, who trailed Miami by one point last week, moved six points ahead of the Hurricanes after beating then-No. 15 Stanford. Miami easily beat unranked West Virginia 35-23 Saturday, but three late touchdowns against the Hurricanes may have cost them the No. 1 ranking in the media poll.

Washington topped Miami 33½ to 27½ in first-place votes and 1,520½ to 1,514½ points.

Miami barely retained its No. 1 ranking in the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll, edging Washington by one point. Both 8-0 teams received 30 first-place votes from the coaches.

Last year's co-national champions have taken turns at the top of the AP poll this season. Miami was No. 1 for the first five weeks, Washington led the next three polls and the teams tied for the top spot the following week. Miami then took sole possession of first for one week before falling to No. 2 on Sunday.

Washington has a chance to solidify its lead next Saturday when it visits No. 12 Arizona (5-2-1), which lost by a point to Miami earlier this season at the Orange Bowl. If the Huskies win by a touchdown or more, they will probably pick up more votes no matter how badly Miami beats outmanned Temple.

The Arizona comparison is vital because the Wildcats are the only team that plays Washington and Miami during the regular season.

Mtolo, Ondieki win NYC Marathon

■ South African pulls off a surprise while women's course record falls.

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Track Writer

NEW YORK — South African Willie Mtolo won the New York City Marathon on Sunday, while race director Fred Lebow plodded along the course gallantly.

The 28-year-old Mtolo never had raced outside South Africa until winning a marathon at Enschade, Netherlands, on June 21.

That race, however, did not compare in stature to the New York City Marathon, the world's largest with a field of approximately 26,000 runners. Neither did it compare in prize money.

Fifteeen minutes after Mtolo finished, Lisa Ondieki of Australia, a two-time runner-up and last year's third-place finisher at New York, won the women's division in a coure-record 2:24:40.

The previous mark of 2:25:29 was set by Allison Roe of New Zealand in 1981.

For winning New York, the soft-spoken Mtolo, who grew up as a member of a Zulu tribe in the poor, tiny village of Kilimon in the foothills of the Drakensburg Mountains, automatically received $20,000 plus a new Mercedes Benz.

In addition, for his winning time of 2 hours, 9 minutes, 29 seconds, he collected another $30,000 in bonus money.

Never had Mtolo, the son of a cattle farmer, won anything close to that amount. His biggest purse until now had been about $2,500 for his victory in the Netherlands.

Other times he received as little as $35 for winning races in South Africa.

This was the seventh marathon victory of his career, to go along with four seconds and one did-not-finish.

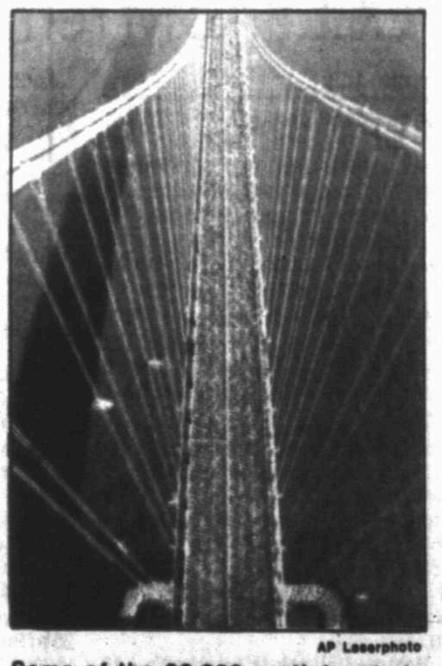

The first five victories came in South Africa, where Mtolo was confined to running until the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body of track and field, readmitted South Africa to the running community May 31.

Until then, South Africa had been barred because of its apartheid policies.

Meanwhile, Mexico's Andres Espinosa, who had held the lead until Mtolo surged past him at the 23-mile mark, was the runner-up for the second straight year, in 2:10:52.

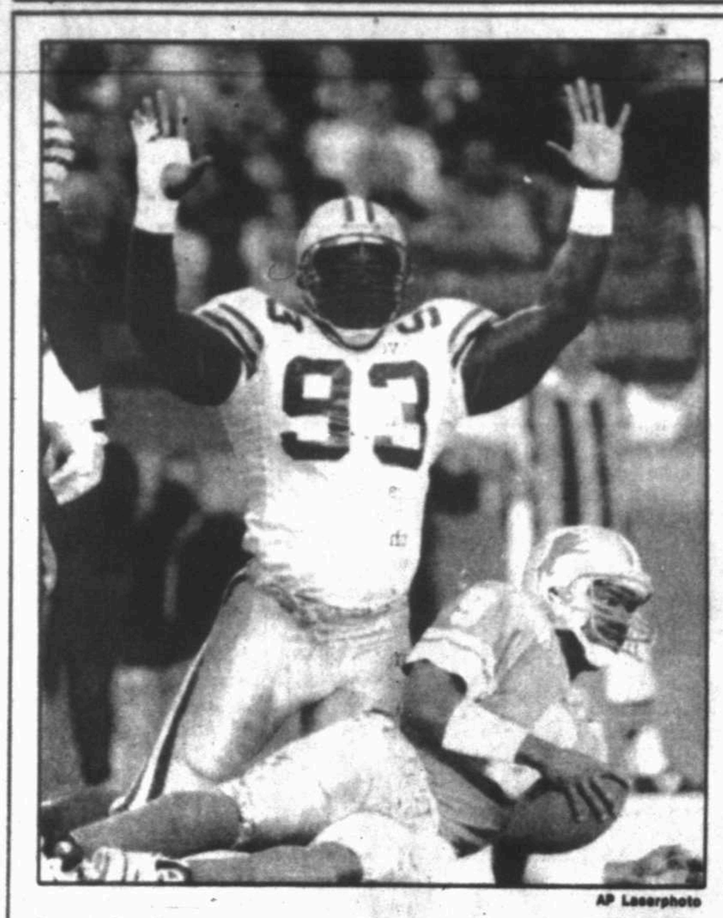

Last year, Espinosa was beaten by countryman Salvador Garcia, who did not enter this year's race. When Mtolo crossed the finish line in Central Park, waving happily to the large crowds, the gallant Lebow, competing in his first marathon since being diagnosed with brain cancer in March 1990, was shuffling along at the 11-mile mark.

Ondieki's time was the 13th-fastest ever by a woman but not the fastest of her career.

Green Bay's Robert Brown (93) celebrates sack of Detroit quarterback Rodney Peete.

NFL: Cardinals nail 49ers

(From 1C)

ries and Detroit, the defending NFC Central champions, fell to last in the division.

Brett Favre passed for 212 yards and two touchdowns for Green Bay (3-5). He completed 22 of 37 passes, including a 14-yard touchdown toss to Jackie Harris and a 30-yard scoring flip to Sterling Sharpe that broke it open in the fourth quarter.

Rodney Peete completed 14 of 28 passes for 148 yards for the Lions' faltering offense. He was sacked four times. The only touchdown for Detroit (2-6) came on the 7-yard return of a blocked punt by Bennie Blades.

Falcons 30, Rams 28

Billy Joe Tolliver replaced injured Chris Miller late in the third quarter and hit Michael Haynes with a 13-yard TD pass to defeat Los Angeles (3-5).

Tolliver completed 6 of 9 passes for 86 yards in the 81-yard drive that kept Atlanta (3-5) from blowing a game it once led 17-0.

It appeared that Jim Everett had found a way to get the Rams a victory on the road. He threw for 253 yards and four touchdowns, two to Cleveland Gary, who rushed for 144 yards on 18 carries.

Atlanta had built its 17-0 lead on a 2-yard run by Tony Smith, a 38-yard pass from Miller to Haynes and Norm Johnson's 49-yard field goal.

It was the 13th consecutive division loss for the Rams, their 12th in a row on the road and their seventh in a row indoors.

Saints 23, Buccaneers 21

At the Superdome, Dalton Hilliard scored twice and New Orleans overcame four turnovers to defeat Tampa Bay (3-5).

Halfway through the third quarter the Saints led 20-7. A minute and 57 seconds into the fourth quarter, New Orleans trailed 21-20.

Four turnovers by New Orleans (6-2) — three interceptions and a fumble — led to three Tampa Bay touchdowns.

After Steve DeBerg hit Willie Drewery with a 4-yard TD pass, and Reggie Cobb had a 4-yard scoring run for Tampa Bay, the Saints drove 32 yards to set up Morten Andersen's game-winning 50-yard field goal with 5:46 left.

Bengals 30, Browns 10

Boomer Esiason, the NFL's lowest-ranked passer, threw a season-high three touchdown passes for Cincinnati and the league's second-worst defense came up with a pivotal goal-line stand to defeat Cleveland (4-4).

The Bengals (3-5) ended a five-game losing streak and won for the sixth time in their last seven games with the Browns.

Esiason threw first-half touchdown passes of 1 yard to Craig Thompson, 4 yards to Rodney Holman, and 24 yards to Tim McGee. Jim Breech added three field goals for Cincinnati.

Chargers 26, Colts 0

At Jack Murphy Stadium, San Diego defeated Indianapolis for its first shutout in six seasons. The Chargers (4-4) got their fourth straight victory for the first time since 1987, and tied Kansas City for second in the AFC West.

Chargers quarterback Stan Humphries, the AFC player of the month for October, threw second-half TD passes of 17 and 9 yards to Nate Lewis.

Marion Butts, who had a 3-yard scoring run, ended with 120 yards on 27 carries, his first 100-yard game since Dec. 2, 1990 against the New York Jets.

The Chargers sacked quarterback Jeff George six times.

Cardinals 24, 49ers 14

Phoenix, who's only other victory this season was against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins, got three touchdown passes from Chris Chandler to defeat San Francisco (6-2).

Randal Hill caught two scoring passes and Johnny Johnson returned from injury to give Phoenix (2-6) its first 100-yard rushing performance since 1990.

The 49ers played most of the game without Steve Young, the league's highest-rated quarterback. He left with the flu in the second quarter and was replaced by Steve Bono.

Hill had TD catches of 4 and 23 yards and a 33-yard field goal by Greg Davis as the Cardinals led 17-0 in the third quarter. After the 49ers cut the lead to 10, Chandler added a 22-yard TD pass to Ricky Proehl.

Giants 24, Redskins 7

New York (4-4), using a ball-control offense and a stunting defense that took away numerous pass opportunities for Washington's Mark Rypien, took a 21-7 halftime lead and were never threatened after that.

POLL: A&M remains No. 5

(From 1C)

Alabama didn't play Saturday, but the Crimson Tide (8-0) still managed to get one first-place vote and move past Michigan to No. 3 in the AP poll. Michigan (7-0-1) dropped to No. 4 after struggling to beat unranked Purdue 24-17.

Texas A&M (8-0) remained No. 5 after beating Southern Methodist 41-7, and Florida State (7-1) stayed No. 6 after downing Virginia 13-3.

Nebraska (6-1) rose one notch to No. 7 after clobbering Colorado 52-7. Notre Dame (6-1-1) moved up two spots to No. 8 following a 38-7 victory over Navy, Boston College (7-0-1) climbed two places to No. 9 after defeating Temple 45-6, and Syracuse (7-1) went from No. 12 to No. 10 after beating Pittsburgh 41-10.

Boston College is in the Top 10 for the first time since finishing fifth in 1984.

Southern Cal is 11th, followed by Arizona, Kansas, Florida, Georgia, Colorado, North Carolina State, North Carolina, Mississippi State, Texas, Stanford, Ohio State, Penn State, Tennessee and Washington State.

Arizona's 30-0 victory over New Mexico State lifted the Wildcats five spots to No. 12, their highest ranking since finishing 11th in 1986.

Kansas (7-1) jumped from No. 18 to No. 13 after beating Oklahoma State 26-18. The Jayhawks haven't been this high in the AP poll since rising to No. 8 in 1976.

Both Georgia (7-2) and Colorado (6-1-1) dropped eight spots after losing on Saturday. Georgia was beaten by Florida 26-24.

Ohio State, ranked earlier this season, moved back into the Top 25 after beating Iowa 38-15. Virginia, No. 23 last week, fell out of the rankings following its loss to Florida State.

STEELERS: Oilers have lost five of seven to Pittsburgh

(From 1C)

0 deficit to win 29-24 in Houston on Sept. 6, came from 13 points down this time to take over first place in the AFC Central Division. The Steelers (6-2) are off to their best start since they opened 9-2 in 1983.

"I'm sure (the Oilers are) going to say 'What if, what if, what if?'" said linebacker Greg Lloyd, who recovered a fumble to set up Pittsburgh's go-ahead touchdown. "That's a tough loss for them, but a great win for us."

"We were down 20-7, but we've been there before," Steelers coach Bill Cowher said. "That was a great game, a classic and it was decided by inches."

About three feet, to be precise, for the Oilers (5-3), who had taken the lead by scoring two touchdowns in a span of 1:03 in the third quarter. Later, they drove from their 14 to the Steelers' 22 in the final three minutes, but Del Greco's potential game-winner faded left at the last second.

"When it left his foot, I thought it was good, but then it swerved off. It was a true blessing," safety Carnell Lake said. "We had a lot of things go against us, but that's one break we had go our way."

"I think I'm a good pressure kicker and I'm not going to change my mind after one kick," Del Greco said. "The way we lost will play with everyone's emotions. ... We drove it down the field and they gave me a good chance."

Not quite good enough. The Steelers now lead the division for the first time since Houston reserve quarterback Cody Carlson threw three touchdown passes to knock Pittsburgh out of the playoffs, 34-14, in the final game of the 1990 season.

Carlson almost pulled off another off-the-bench miracle after replacing injured Warren Moon early in the second half. He finished off a 76-yard drive by throwing an 11-yard touchdown pass to Webster Slaughter for a 13-7 Houston lead — the first touchdown in 11 quarters against Pittsburgh's defense.

Moon sustained a concussion when he was clipped on the chin by Rod Woodson just after throwing a 9-yard completion to Haywood Jeffires on the second play of the third quarter. He did not return, and his status for next Sunday's game against Cleveland is uncertain.

The Oilers scored again just 1:03 later as defensive tackle Ray Childress scooped up O'Donnell's fumble and ran it in from the 8 for the first touchdown of his NFL career and a 13-point Oilers' lead.

The Steelers, who have won five of their last seven against Houston, swept the season series for the first time since 1986.

COWBOYS: Dallas has won 11 straight home games

(From 1C)

"Just a tremendous job all around particularly by Emmitt," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "We were put under the gun time after time."

Johnson was asked why he thought the Cowboys could run against Philadelphia.

"Because we got Emmitt Smith," he said.

Smith's show took the spotlight away from Randall Cunningham's benching and a dramatic 1992 debut by Jim McMahon. Cunningham, who had been 8-0 against Dallas, was totally ineffective and replaced to start the second half.

Eagles coach Rich Kotite said a change was needed.

"To use a baseball analogy, we had an ace reliever and I decided to go to him," Kotite said. "It was a decision I made at halftime.

"Randall took it well. He said 'good luck, Jimmy.' We just can't win when you have 30 yards of-fense like we did in the first half."

Kotite said Cunningham would start again next week.

"Randall is a pro and he just needs to get his confidence up and get back on track," Kotite said. "He's not hurt. He's just fine."

Neither Cunningham nor McMahon said there was any problem with Kotite's move or with the Eagles' quarterback order in the future.

"There is no uncertainty, Randall is still the starter," McMahon said. "I'm just upset that we didn't win, but that was job. I have no excuses."

"It's no big deal," Cunningham said. "I don't want to start a controversy. Rich runs this team. Whatever he wants to do is OK with me. We just needed a kick start. My passes where short but my confidence level hasn't dropped. It's happened before and probably will happen again."

Aikman, 0-6 against the Eagles, also had a 22-yard scoring pass to Kelvin Martin, who faked out two Eagles tacklers to put Dallas on top 10-7 in the third quarter.

McMahon took the Eagles 80 yards in eight plays to start the second half with Walker scoring on a 2-yard run to give Philadelphia a 7-3 lead.

On the drive, McMahon completed passes of 15 and 37 yards then had a Cunningham-like scramble for 10 yards to the Dallas five. Walker then scored after gaining three yards on first down.

Dallas has won 11 consecutive home games. It's the first time Dallas defeated Philadelphia in Texas Stadium since 1987.

Allison wins Pyroil 500, takes NASCAR points lead

PHOENIX (AP) — Davey Allison vaulted back into first place in NASCAR's Winston Cup championship race with a victory Sunday in the Pyroil 500 at Phoenix International Raceway.

Allison's series-leading fifth victory of the season — his first since July 21 at Brooklyn, Mich. — gave him back the point lead that he lost to Bill Elliott 10 races at Watkins Glen, N.Y., on Aug. 9.

Elliott, who came into the race leading Allison by 70 points, had his fourth disastrous showing in the last five races — finishing no better than 26th in those events — and has gone from a 154-point lead to third place, trailing Allison by 40.

Alan Kuwlicki, who came into Sunday's 312-mile, 500-kilometer event on the one-mile oval third, trailing Elliott by 85 points, kept Allison in his sights and moved past Elliott with a fourth-place finish.

Going into the season-finale on Nov. 15 at Atlanta Motor Speedway, Allison, who led only the final 30 laps of Sunday's race, is 30 points in front of Kulwicki.

"I've never stopped believing in this race team," said Allison.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will get many chances to shine. This December, grab the spotlight and make the most of a golden career opportunity. Employment conditions will improve in early 1993. By spring, you seem to have the magic touch when it comes to making money. A streak of good luck will have you riding high next June. Romance takes on new luster. Go ahead and take a few business risks when September rolls around.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Shere Hite, actor Burt Lancaster, actress Alfre Woodard, golfer David Stockton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Domestic activities enjoy highly favorable influences. A visitor could bring you some fascinating news about a mutual pal. Avoid financial speculation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be glad that you are putting money away for a rainy day. Your savings will give you some stability when rising expenses eat away at your budget. Use your investigative skills wisely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote more time to your work and doing what higher-ups ask of you. Friction mounts in certain alliances — do not confront it; walk away. Romance on the rebound seems extra-sweet this week.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are on a winning streak! Bigwigs value your brains as well as your brawn. A romantic partner also has high praise for your efforts. Be a peacemaker on the home front.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unexpected disruptions could get in the way of your career or domestic plans today. All you need to do, however, is go that extra mile. Make a daring move in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Congratulations are in order. A financial windfall adds to the happiness of the day. You can afford to be generous. Listen carefully to a teenager's problems before giving advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your skills and ambition are in the spotlight. While you are working for other people, they will be working for you. Lighten up! Try not to take yourself too seriously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your one-of-a-kind thinking and style could be exactly what higher-ups want to see. A partnership brings several nice surprises. Talk things over with your mate before making new commitments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A business partnership thrives now. Reaching a new financial agreement will mean lasting peace of mind. You get your point across convincingly when you stand firm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make certain there is no misunderstanding about a confusing work assignment. Your good rapport with a VIP can be a real blessing. Be philosophical about plans placed on hold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You tend to get a little carried away at times. Wishful thinking is best avoided. Level with a partner; be specific about what you expect from your relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Now that your feelings are out in the open, it should be easier to deal with a business problem. Handling your financial resources efficiently will help you attain greater self-sufficiency.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ10953 ♡K6 ◇Void ♣9652
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Your king in partner's suit is the equivalent of an ace, and your spade suit is surely self-sufficient. A jump to two spades now will take all the pressure off for subsequent rounds of the auction.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ106 ♡J643 ◇K5 ♣K97
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—With 13 high-card points and a balanced hand, there's a temptation to jump to two no trump. However, that can't be right when you hold two four-card major suits. The correct response is one heart. If partner doesn't raise or bid one spade, you can jump to three no trump at your next turn.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠54 ♡AKQ102 ◇AKQ ♣1093
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This is one of the rare cases where we would recommend a jump rebid on a five-card major suit with a balanced hand. That glaring spade weakness opposite a partner who should not have more than three cards in the suit could prove fatal to a no-trump contract. Three hearts is our choice, but two no trump and three no trump are close behind, in that order.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A86 ♡K74 ◇73 ♣KQJ94
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—The popular choice will surely be two no trump to show a balanced minimum with stoppers in the unbid suits. However, in these days of nebulous club opening bids, we think it vital to confirm a good suit in case partner's jump shift is based on a club fit. Our vote goes to three clubs.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K943 ♡6 ◇K9842 ♣KQ6
Partner opens the bidding with three clubs and the next hand passes. What action do you take?
A.—If you agree that a preempt should not be made with two aces, you know that there is no game for your side. However, to make it more difficult for the opponents to get together in hearts, we would raise the preempt to four clubs, even though there's no guarantee that you can make 10 tricks—and probably won't!

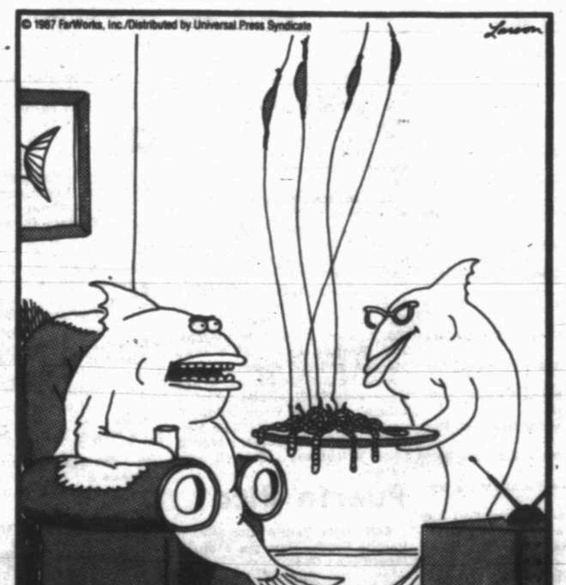

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ6 ♡A10 ◇AK943 ♣Q52
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's raise is invitational, asking you to bid game with a maximum. Even if your range is 16-18, your fifth diamond and good intermediates increase the value of your hand. If you did not carry on to three no trump, may we recommend a good primer on evaluation?

Acuff hospitalized for tests

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Roy Acuff, known as the king of country music, has been hospitalized for treatment of complications of congestive heart disease, a hospital spokeswoman said Sunday.

Acuff, 89, went into Baptist Hospital on Friday for tests, hospital spokeswoman Debbie Koch said.

"The doctor hasn't really given a condition report. He's not in critical care, he's in a private room," she said.

It is the third time the country music legend has been hospitalized since September, when he had fluid in his lungs, she said.

Acuff joined the Grand Ole Opry in 1938 and is known for his fancy fiddle playing and songs like "The Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Tom Cruise and his wife, Nicole Kidman, plan to sponsor a Christmas display at a children's hospital in Memphis, the setting for his next movie.

"When we make movies, a lot of times the movie just comes in and leaves. I enjoy giving back to the community," Cruise said. "One of the things I've asked them to do is take a lot of pictures of it so I can see it just in case I don't get to visit."

The display at Le Bonheur Children's Medical Center includes a miniature golf course, a "Kids Karnival" featuring games and face painting and areas where children can decorate holiday cookies and buy inexpensive gifts.

Neither Cruise nor hospital officials would put a dollar figure on the sponsorship.

Cruise is expected in Tennessee this week to begin wardrobe testing for the filming of "The Firm," based on the John Grisham novel.

PHILADELPHIA — Betty Shabazz, the wife of slain black activist Malcolm X, says her feelings have changed dramatically since her husband was gunned down in 1965.

Shabazz

"For a long time, I couldn't put up a photo of him," she said. "It was too emotional."

After a while, she began to tell their four children about him, and now she says she is happy to see his name and memory kept alive in popular culture.

"Whenever I see anyone walking down the street with an X or something else on, I just want to say 'Hey!' — and pat him on the back," said Shabazz, a professor at Medgar Evers College in New York City.

In Philadelphia to dedicate a three-story mural of Malcolm X, Shabazz urged a crowd of more than 100 people to get involved in their communities.

"If we can help build a space ship and design all kinds of modern technologies, we can make our community work," she said. "You have to accept responsibility as human beings."

TRUMBULL, Conn. — A wildlife group was hoping to get at least $75,000 for a painting by Katherine Hepburn that attracted little interest at an auction two years ago.

The North American Wildlife Association Inc. tried to sell the signed artwork two years ago to help pay its mortgage and other expenses. But the highest bid was only $5,000 and it was withdrawn.

The 16-by-20-inch impressionistic oil painting is the only one Hepburn has ever offered for sale or public viewing. It was done while she stayed at John Barrymore's California home overlooking Beverly Hills and the Pacific Ocean.

She guessed she painted it in the 1960s.

The group planned another auction Sunday night at the Trumbull Marriott hotel. Association director Robert Salvatore called the $75,000 minimum bid "a steal."

Hepburn said she is happy to help the association, which once went to her family's home in Old Saybrook to care for an injured osprey on her front lawn.

"I think they do good work," Hepburn said.

NEW YORK — Sinead O'Connor renewed her attacks on the Catholic Church in an interview released Sunday and criticized Bob Dylan for not sticking up for her at his tribute concert last month.

The Irish singer said her comments and actions — including tearing up a picture of Pope John Paul II on national television — were bound to offend people.

"The fact is people are asleep," she said in the Nov. 9 issue of Time. "They need a short, sharp shock. They need that to make them stand up and listen."

O'Connor pointed to the Dylan tribute concert at Madison Square Garden, where she was booed off the stage. Dylan became a folk hero in the 1960s singing anti-establishment and anti-war songs.

She said Dylan told her afterward "that I should keep on doing what I'm doing. But it's no good saying that to me. Why doesn't he say it to them? I mean, why doesn't he take his responsibility?"

HOUSTON — Max Beck Skelton, who covered everything from disasters to space flights in 35 years with The Associated Press, died at his home. He was 76.

Skelton, who died Saturday, suffered a stroke two weeks ago and had been battling emphysema and cancer in recent years, a family friend said. Skelton had retired from the AP in April 1982.
