Fraternity Brothers Claim Victim Worrying Over Financial Troubles; "Rather Die Than Phone Relative"

AUSTIN, Nov. 21. (AP)—An official verdict of death by self-administered poison was returned here tonight by Justice of the Peace Bryan Bialock in the death early today of Carroll Guggisberg, 17, of Vernon, freshman at the University of Texas. Guggisberg was found in a dying condition in his room at a fraternity house and died on the way to a hospital.

An empty box, said by Justice Bialock to have contained poison, was found in Guggisberg's bed. The youth's fraternity told Justice Bialock it had been worrying over financial affairs and that he had appeared despondent last night.

He was reported to have said to fraternity brothers "I would rather die than phone his grandfather for money." He later said that he had promised to wire him some money.

The youth's death also was being investigated by University of Texas officials.

Texas Banks In Good Condition

AUSTIN, Nov. 21. (AP)—Texas banks are in "good condition" and are likely to feel depressed, to say great extent, according to a statement issued today by James Shaw, state banking commissioner. Texas banks were reported sound despite failure of financial institutions in other sections, Shaw said.

The commissioner said Texas banks, the past several years, have been lulled with the idea of purging their institutions of doubtful assets and in this respect they had been generally successful. Shaw said approximately $15,000,000 in doubtful assets had been removed from Texas banks in the last three and one-half years.

Texas banks were "prepared for the strain and are in a strong condition," he said. He expressed the opinion that banks get into trouble in good times through unwise granting of credit and these troubles show up when hard times hit.

Twenty-four hours after the peak of the storm, many communities had not been heard from, but reports that had trickled through the crippled communication lines told of two deaths, trains delayed, roads blocked by huge drifts and thousands of poles and miles of wire leveled by the sudden blast.

Lubbock Enjoys Its First Taste Of Shakespearean Tragedy Friday Night With Presentation Of "Hamlet" Here

LUBBOCK got its first taste of Shakespearean tragedy Friday evening when six Phillip Ben Crest presented "Hamlet" at the auditorium of Texas Technological college.

This play came here as one of the artist course productions for the college. Rivalling numbers predicted to appeal more to the taste of pleasure seekers here, "Hamlet" drew a crowd of collegians and townspeople to fill the gymnasium halls and the crowd was held through the season of the tragedy.

The interest of the titular role increased during the evening and Hamlet's appeal as an actor progressed with the performance. Ben Crest was unmistakable as an artist in whatever role he undertook. "Hamlet" was the first performance of this nature to have been shown in Lubbock and the fact that the actors were English added to the interest of their appearance and gave to the play more of a realistic appeal.

Those who attended received the play well and quotations, familiar to every school boy and girl, were followed during the evening. "Hamlet" lost none of its appeal as an entertainment, because it was a tragedy; its appeal probably growing because it was different from the usual thing that has been brought to the college.

Ferguson Says Higher Pay Not Constitutional

Former Governor Does Not Believe 42nd Legislature Can Take Advantage of Amendment Raising Salaries

DALLAS, Nov. 21.—Former Governor James E. Ferguson does not believe the 42nd legislature—which will convene early in January, can take advantage of the constitutional amendment raising the pay of legislators from $5 to $10 daily.

He contended the amendment would not become effective until the legislature passed an enabling act and claimed the incoming legislature could pass the act only for the succeeding, or 43rd, legislature, which will not meet until two years later.

"If the incoming legislature passes an enabling act and attempts to apply the new wage scale to itself it will automatically legislate the legislators out of office," Ferguson said. "The constitution provides that no state officer shall raise his own pay. The next legislature can pass the act for future legislatures but not for itself."

Accustomed as we are to freedom, we have some difficulty in comprehending the position of this Moslem, whose family for generations had observed the custom of "purdah." But her very appearance, as described in Associated Press dispatches, was an illustration of what may be expected of India's women as they are given an opportunity to participate in the affairs of that nation.

She was Oriental, to be sure, in her dress, but in her manner and her plea for all that she holds dear to her country were the epitome of refinement and class and intelligence.

BOOKS DRAW INTEREST INTEREST noted at the Lubbock County Library this week in the observance of National Book Week indicates that a lot of children, parents and teachers are interested in better books. Miss Rue Eubank, the librarian believes.

Although there were not many books on display, since Miss Eubank had so little time to plan her observance, a few new ones were received, particularly for this occasion. A number of children inquired for special books last week or asked about what the library had to offer and some of the children were accompanied by their mothers. Miss Eubank said. Several teachers sent lists of books that the library has that are for the use of children.

All of these things indicate that the interest of people is aroused by the observance of book week, Miss Eubank believes, and it does seem of particular significance in view of the number of national observances during the year. We have Music week and Health week and Thrift week and others, so that our attention is being called to something vitally all of the time.

Although there were not many books on display, since Miss Eubank had so little time to plan her observance, a few new ones were received, particularly for this occasion. A number of children inquired for special books last week or asked about what the library had to offer and some of the children were accompanied by their mothers. Miss Eubank said. Several teachers sent lists of books that the library has that are for the use of children.

All of these things indicate that the interest of people is aroused by the observance of book week, Miss Eubank believes, and it does seem of particular significance in view of the number of national observances during the year. We have Music week and Health week and Thrift week and others, so that our attention is being called to something vitally all of the time.

MISTAKEN FOR DEER Man is Fatally Shot from a Moving Automobile LEWISTON, Mich., Nov. 21.—(P)—Vern Bennett, 21, of East Huron, Mich., was fatally shot from a moving automobile as he was hunting in the woods near here at dusk yesterday.

Wounded twice in the left leg, Bennett died at midnight of loss of blood in a hospital at Eastford.

Reported at first to have been the victim of a gang shooting, Bennett now is believed to have been "mistaken for a deer" by hunters who saw a movement in the woods near the road. Firing from automobiles is the most common offense during the deer season in Michigan.

Two boys or three men in the automobile in which Bennett was shot sped away and it was believed that his cry told them they had shot a man.

Accused as we are to freedom, we have some difficulty in comprehending the position of this Moslem, whose family for generations had observed the custom of "purdah." But her very appearance, as described in Associated Press dispatches, was an illustration of what may be expected of India's women as they are given an opportunity to participate in the affairs of that nation.

She was Oriental, to be sure, in her dress, but in her manner and her plea for all that she holds dear to her country were the epitome of refinement and class and intelligence.

FOR THANKSGIVING OLIVE dishes still rule the Thanksgiving dinner, in spite of modernistic trends in living. The other day I saw a recipe for baked date pudding for the Thanksgiving dinner. Here it is: Two cups chopped dates, one and one-half cups sugar; one cup broken nut meats, one teaspoon vanilla, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one-half cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, four egg yolks, four egg whites stiffly beaten.

Beat the egg yolks and add the dates, sugar, nuts, vanilla salt, flour and baking powder. Fold in the egg whites and pour into a shallow greased pan. Set in a pan of hot water and bake 35 minutes in a moderately slow oven. Cool and serve with hard sauce.

I didn't eat the two pieces of candy. . . . Jean Shelby Jennings and Winfield A. Wardell, Tech students, coming to the office at my request to tell me of campus social activities. . . . Benefits Seen By Cooperation Of Two Parties

Joett Shouse, Chairman of Democratic National Executive Committee, Says That Possibilities Incalculable

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 21 (AP)—Joett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, says he believes the possibilities of benefit to the country are incalculable "if the spirit of cooperation between the Democratic and Republican parties is carried out."

This view was expressed in a statement issued here last night before he left for Washington. Declaring the United States "is in the midst of a very critical and trying period," and saying the present situation is "almost as serious" as in time of war, he called upon members of both parties to meet it with constructive measures.

Shouse said Democratic success in the recent election "is not so much a victory as an opportunity." He predicted the party would elect the next president and control congress in 1932 "if the party conducts itself with judgment and sense and patriotism during the next 18 months."

There was immediate and gratifying response to the statement on the part of leaders of the Democratic party to show that they would place the interests of the country above the interests of mere party," he said. "If the spirit of cooperation embodied in that statement pervades the short session of the present congress and extends to the seventy-second congress which goes into office on the fourth of March, the possibilities of benefit to the country as a whole are incalculable."

Bank Failures In Kentucky 14

Officials of Clearing House Association Meet, Pledge to Aid Each Other Should Bank Runs Develop

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 21. (AP)—The number of banks in Kentucky that have suspended operations during the week was brought to fourteen with announcement that the Crestwood bank, a small institution in a suburb of Louisville, would not open today.

W. A. Dicken, deputy state banking commissioner, said he believed all Louisville banks not affiliated with the National Bank of Kentucky, first to close, were solvent. "If they were not," he said, "we would close them."

Following the closing yesterday of two banks at New Albany, Ind., across the Ohio river from Louisville, other members of the new Albany clearing house association met and pledged aid to each other should runs develop. The clearing house association voted not to permit withdrawal of time deposits, savings accounts or certificates of deposits unless 60 days' written notice was given, as required by Indiana law.

Nine Louisville building and loan associations took similar action yesterday, declaring they would require 30 days' notice on withdrawal, since such associations are not operated as banks and are not equipped to meet unusual withdrawals.

Closing of two Louisville banks yesterday brought the total of those that have suspended here to seven. Two suburban banks have closed, as have institutions in Horse Cave, Franklin, Sulphur, Booneville and Caneyville, outside Louisville. The president of the Horse Cave bank committed suicide Wednesday.

Mr. Moody Views Chicago

DURING his two terms in the chief executive's chair at Austin, Governor Dan Moody has been accused of many shortcomings but never—even by his bitterest enemy—has he been accused of being a coward.

He has reprieved condemned criminals in the face of a disapproving public; he has allowed the state to exact the supreme penalty in the face of argument. His life has been threatened; he has sent troops into a hostile community. He has baited prize fights at the cost of personal safety and he has most innumerable assaults upon the part of the state's largest newspaper, because of political differences with its publisher, with a keen eye, an active brain and a steady nerve while defeating the candidate of that newspaper right in its own city and county.

Governor Moody, like all humans, has his shortcomings but cowardice certainly is not one of them. Because of his unflinching nerve, the Governor's observations of the Chicago gang situation are worthy of comment. "I'd do something about those gangsters if I were Governor L. L. Emmerson, of Illinois," he told reporters, and The Morning Avalanche is enough of an admirer of Governor Moody's courage to believe that he would.

Governor Dan would place Chicago under martial law, and if there were still more gangsters than soldiers he'd "recruit some more and clean up the town." And if Chicago seceded from the state, as it has threatened to do, the governor would let them secede, then "take the militia up there and put them back in the state. Take a few shots at them like they took at us when we tried to secede!"

Of course, one never knows what one would do "in the other fellow's shoes," and probably the governor would see things differently if he were administering to Illinois, instead of to Texas. But The Avalanche believes Governor Moody would "do something about those gangsters," which is another way of saying that some good, old Texas blood and thunder might be applied to the hoodlums of America's second largest city.

When age scolds youth it should remember that virtue often consists in being fed up.

A faint heart never won a fair lady, but otherwise it has no particular advantage.

To catch suckers, merely offer unreasonable returns and let nature take its course.

If she is bent and wrinkled and listless, the villagers call her a "dutiful wife."

Civilization has contrived to refine everything about petroleum except its methods.

Many a heart catches fire from the flicker of an eyelid.

No husband likes to be treated like a dog. You can't feel dignified in a woman's lap.

Practical Health Problems

BABY NEEDS CALCIUM

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

It is now generally well known that practically all of the common food substances contain varying amounts of the important mineral salts.

Milk, which is the chief food of the infant, contains much mineral matter and an especially large amount of calcium. It is, however, quite deficient in iron and iodine.

Green vegetables contain sodium and potassium, small amounts of calcium and iron, and, according to the section of the country in which they are raised, varying amounts of iodine.

The fruits and fruit juices contain varying amounts of potassium salts, and the whole cereal grains a variety of salts, but cereals are not considered an especially good source of calcium. Eggs contain varying amounts of various salts, particularly calcium and iron.

The growing infant has to have enough calcium to provide for the growth of the bones and of the teeth. The more rapidly it grows, the more calcium it needs. Furthermore, as has been emphasized, unless the amount of calcium in the blood is maintained at a certain level, spasmodic disorders will appear.

In order to get the calcium into the tissues, however, it is not only necessary for the calcium to be taken into the body, but also for it to be absorbed and properly distributed. If there is an excess amount of phosphates or of fat in the food, insoluble calcium salts will be formed in the intestines and very little calcium will be absorbed.

Recent investigations in the field of nutrition have revealed the fact that the amount of calcium retained in the blood or deposited in the bones is definitely influenced by the amount of vitamin D, and probably also by the amount of vitamin A in the diet.

Vitamin D in the diet may be substituted by exposure to ultra-violet rays, which cause the development of vitamin D by changing the ergosterol in the tissues to vitamin D.

Apparently also it is necessary for a secretion to be poured into the blood from the parathyroid glands, because when this secretion is absent, the amount of calcium in the blood may fall off greatly.

Cow's milk contains three or four times as much calcium as human milk, but the calcium in the cow's milk is not absorbed in as great proportion as that of human milk. Perhaps it is due to the greater relative amount of the phosphates that is present. As was pointed out previously, when too much phosphate is present, the calcium is held in insoluble form. An infant that is getting as much as two and one-half ounces of human milk or one and one-half ounces of cow's milk for every pound of its body weight is getting enough calcium salt for its normal requirements.

If, however, the infant suffers from any spasmodic disorder, the physician is likely to prescribe calcium salts in excess in order to take care of this condition.

Narrow Margins His Dish!

By CHARLES F. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

ASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Why Senator Thomas D. Schall of Minnesota is a desperate political fighter is not hard to understand. To survive at all, he has to be.

Minnesota is a uniquely doubtful state these days; doubtful three ways at once, which beats all records.

Senator Henrik Shipstead carried it on the Farmer-Labor ticket in 1928 by more than 322,000 majority. This year the Democrats were so strong that Elmer Holdrege, their candidate, won by several days to have won the other senatorship.

Running as a Republican, with so many Farmer-Laborites to right of him and so many Democrats to left of him, Schall obviously is up against cut-throat competition.

EVEN as a Republican the blind Minnesota has an extraordinary kind of dependence about him that infuriates many G. O. P. voters.

For example, at the last session of congress he engaged the regulars by opposing most of President Hoover's policies. Yet he cast his ballot to seat Senator-elect Vane of Pennsylvania, thereby antagonizing the progressives. It has been recalled of him lately that, as a war-time representative, he supported the Democratic Champ Clark for speaker, on the ground that the emergency entitled the Wilson administration to a friendly congressional organization.

A mercilessly hard hitter anyway, in addition to all these political heresies, naturally he has enemies galore.

INDEED, opposition to him is so bitter that nearly every campaign he wages seems to be the end of his career. Early advices usually indicate that he actually is beaten. Then, precisely as his foes are beginning to rejoice, he gains ground on the strength of returns from the remotest precincts and finally squeaks through by a handful.

Each election that he won during his decade among the representatives hung in the balance until the last minute.

In 1924 he took Senator Magnus Johnson's toga away from him by so narrow a margin that Magnus disputed the result and a particularly vicious contest ensued. Schall's speech, following his ultimate victory, is remembered yet for the ferocity of his exhortation of the authors of the ugly accusations made against him.

OFF THE congressional floor or the election platform the Minnesotaan is an exceptionally mild, friendly senator, but he is of an angry temper as an orator and his anger is terrific.

His handicap of blindness appears to make him only the fiercer.

He gives no quarter and he asks none—and neither does he receive it, for the fury of his attack is enough to make any individual against whom it is directed fight back in sheer terror.

THE NORTH STAR lawmaker is much under middle fire but deep chested and stocky. He has a huge beak of a nose and a head of thick, bushy black hair, which he wears rather long—somewhat on his neck but overhanging his forehead, somewhat in football fashion. His blindness does not show in his eyes, the electric shock that destroyed their vision having left them outwardly unblemished.

His delivery is peculiar. His voice is exceedingly high, clear and piercing, with a strong suggestion of the warlike screech of a bagpipe.

AS FOR Senator Schall, one may be delighted at his re-election (and he has as enthusiastic friends as he has unrelenting enemies) or one may regard it as a calamity (a view one can hardly blame those who have skinned alive from entertaining, but on one who knows the senator's wife can resist offering up peacocks of praise, on her account, that he triumphed).

Scarcely ever absent from his side throughout the entire period of his 16 years service on Capitol hill, she has been his devoted helper in his every re-election battle hitherto. A hard fate decreed that she should be kept from him during his most recent campaign by the dangerous injury of their son in an automobile accident only a few days after his father's re-election.

Had her husband lost his seat by a mere few hundred votes, Mrs. Schall's conclusion, and probably rightly, could hardly have been other than that her inability to be with him was responsible for the misfortune—which really would have been a well-nigh intolerable tragedy to her.

IMPROVEMENTS AND COSTS

Improvements costs in all progressive communities are looked upon generally as gilt-edged investments.

Sidewalks must be built. Municipal buildings must go up. Sewers, roadways, parks and municipal playgrounds to keep citizens physically fit, are necessary and as vital as the purchase of food is to the individual.

There are, however, a few in every community who attempt to belittle each improvement as it comes up for public approval. They lament the cost, overlooking the returns in increased business for the merchants, increased employment and increased pay for the workers and general prosperity all around.

There is but one known way to keep taxes low, declares a contemporary, and that is stop all improvements. Quit building new streets, quit paving, stop sidewalk and sewer construction, discontinue building school and bridge structures, leave off getting a better protection against fire, or any of the numerous things necessary to round out things making for a better community and municipalities—stop these and there will be no increase in tax payments from time to time. But if that be done, neither will there be an increase in property values; and when there is no increase in property values, that means there is no growth.

Men and money are attracted to cities that are growing. Few individuals casting about for a new place to settle will choose a city that already is built. The chances for reward on investment in a city that is building are too great to stop in a city where a transfer of property rights in a dwelling may become a chief interest and excitement.

The more we build the more it costs, and the man who looks the situation squarely in the face and complains either is mistaken in his facts or unreasonable in his attitude.

Today's One-Minute Sermon

Being ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart, fervently:

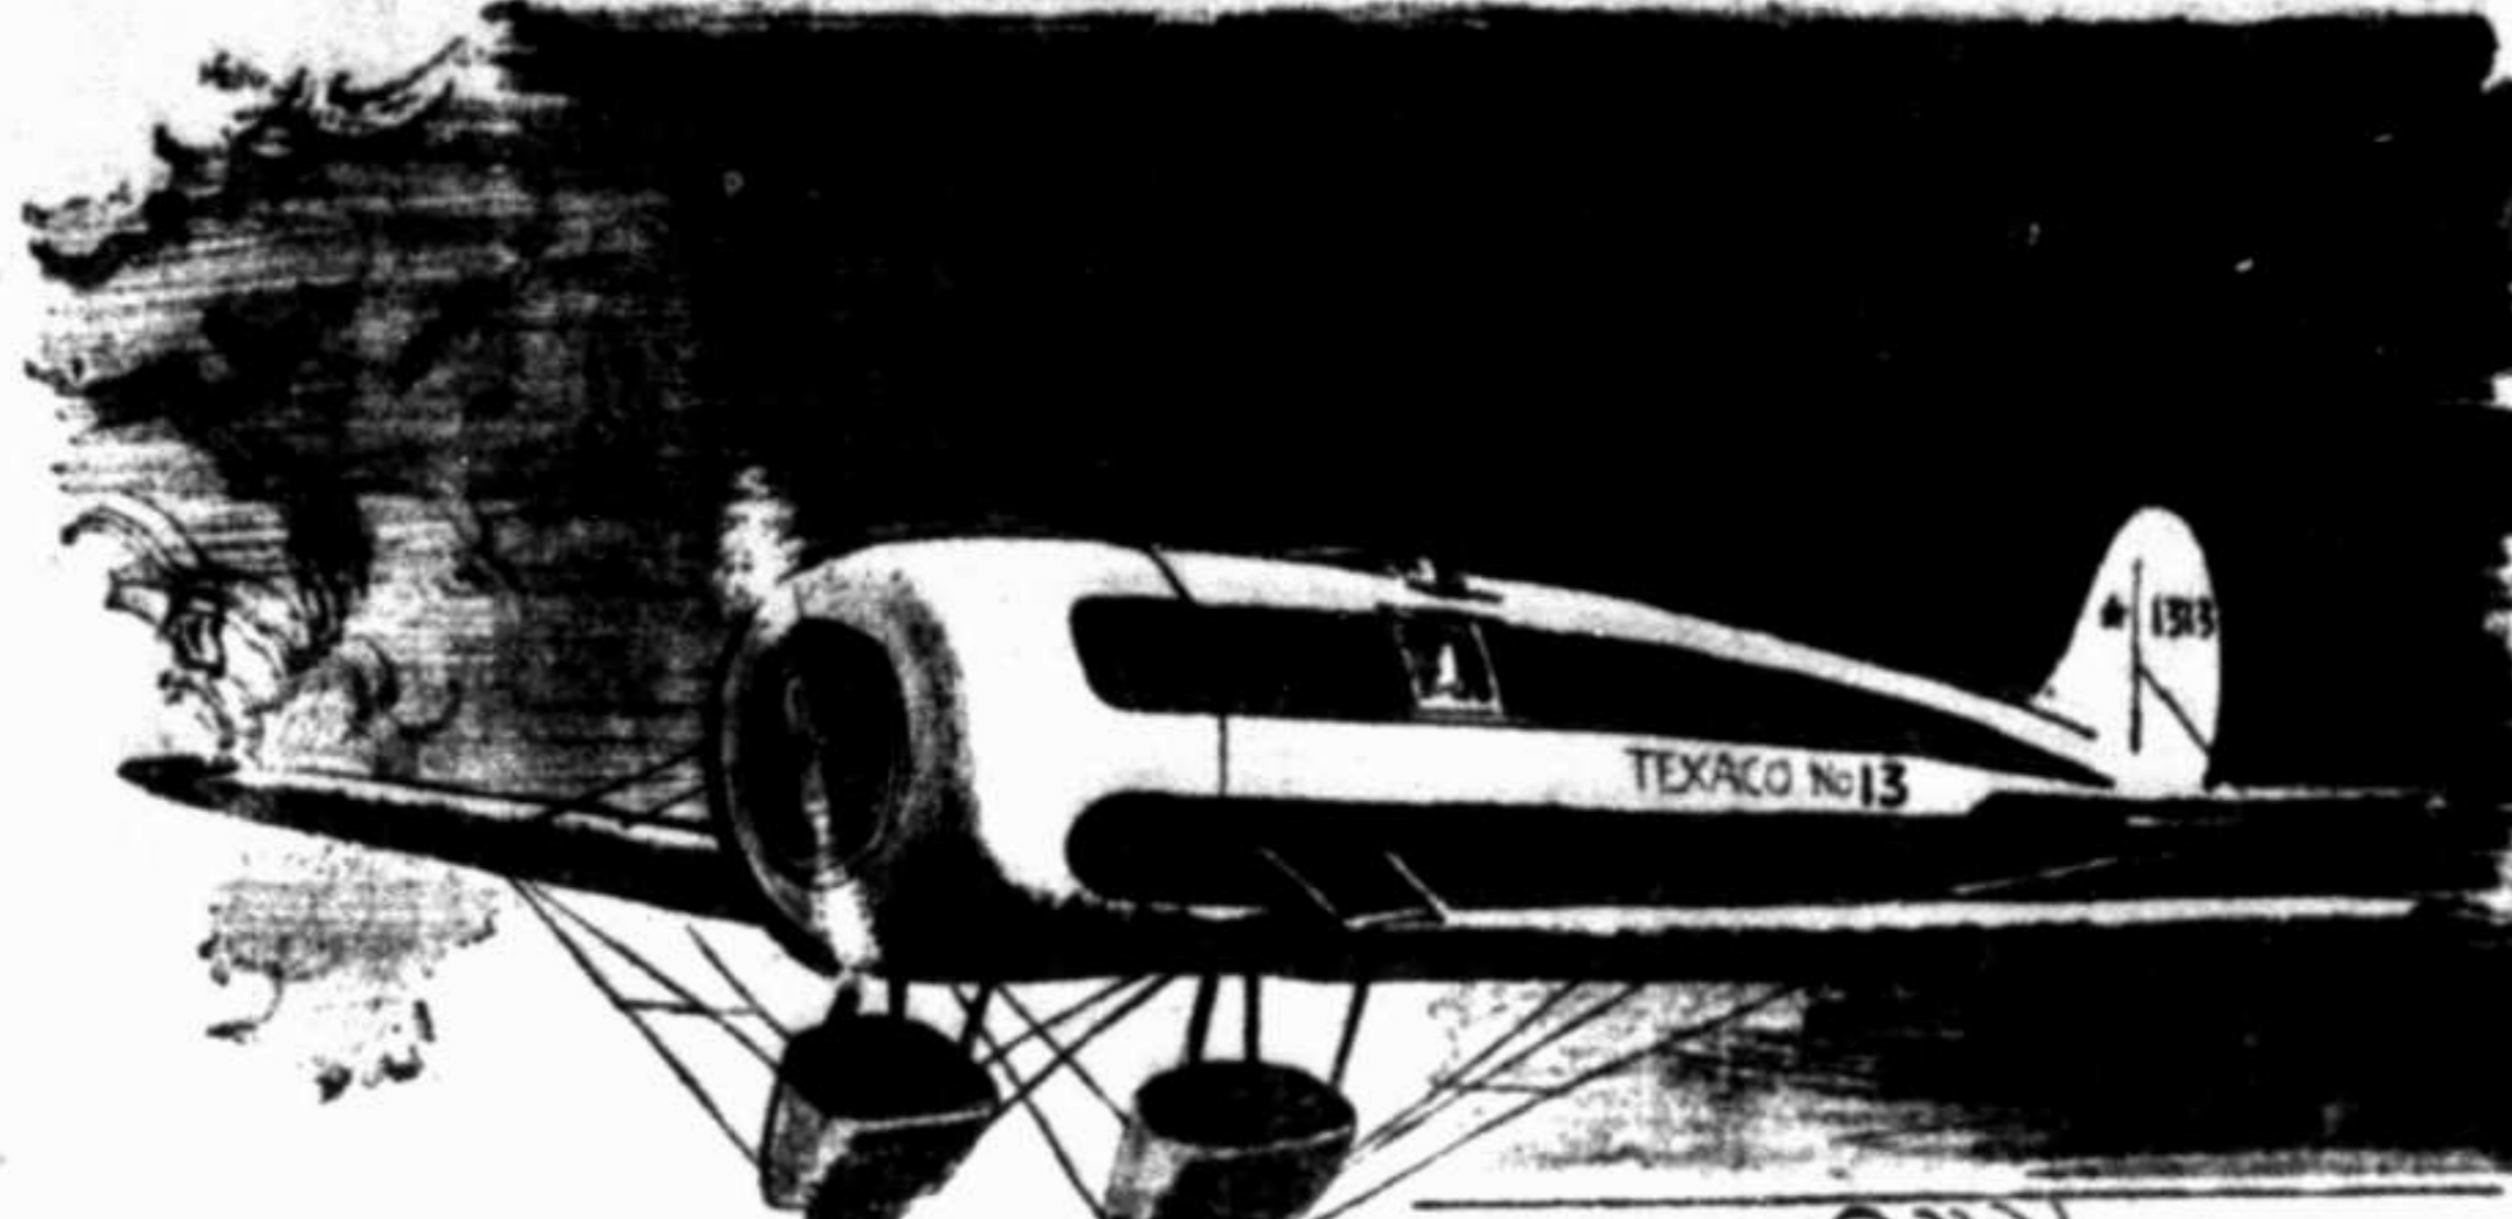

Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever.—1 Peter, 1, 22, 23.

NOBEL INVENTED DYNAMITE—Alfred Nobel, who, by his invention of dynamite, smokeless powder, and other explosives, amassed a fortune of about nine million dollars, established the famous Nobel Prize Foundation, from which several prizes are distributed annually to promote the general welfare of humanity. It is said that the great scientist felt compunction about having involuntarily contributed to make warfare more destructive, and that he conceived his plan in a spirit of counteracting the lethal effects of his invention.

Heart Hungry

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN AUTHOR OF "RASH ROMANCE" © 1930 by NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CELIA MITCHELL, 17, leaves Baltimore where she has lived with her seamstress mother, MARGARET ROGERS, to join her wealthy father, JOHN MITCHELL, in New York. The parents are divorced and Mrs. Rogers is a widow following a second marriage.

BARNEY SHIELDS, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the young man, presently, LINDY DUNCAN, a girl of Celia's age, becomes her loyal friend, Shields comes to New York to work for a photograph service and meets Celia. She tells him she has lost her heart to Jordan, Celia is a guest at Mrs. Parsons' apartment.

Celia, Lisi and Mrs. Parsons are together one evening when they hear a radio report of a disastrous fire in the building where Shields is working. Celia insists on going to the scene and the others follow. Lisi, Celia and Lisi go to the photographic service headquarters. They are unable to get news of Shields.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLII

Down in the streets newboys were shouting extras. The man who had spoken to Celia held a crumpled newspaper in his hand. It bore in huge black type the glaring banner "33 Perish in Flames."

"We're expecting to hear from Shields any minute," the man told Celia. "Waiting for the call now!"

"Then you don't know if he's hurt? Oh, isn't there some way to find out what's happened to him? Maybe he's—" She could not finish the sentence, but turned away, hiding her face in her hands.

There were two other men in the office besides the one who had spoken. They had been leaning over the desk. At sight of the two girls they straightened and moved back respectfully.

"We've got four men down there," the man with the green eyeshade continued, "and at the hospital. Half of the injured aren't identified yet. No use to worry, ma'am."

"The telephone on the desk jangled shrilly. One of the other men reached for it.

"Apex Pictures Service," he said curtly.

Instantly the room was soundless. All eyes were turned on the man at the telephone.

"Yes," he was saying slowly. "Yes, I get you." There was another pause and then, "O. K., Ben." He put down the instrument.

"That was Shrauger," he said. "He's sending some plates up. Says he hasn't seen anything of Shields."

The man who had spoken first pushed a chair forward.

"If you're friends of Barney Shields maybe you'd like to sit down and wait," he said. "Here—have some chairs."

The girls sat down, Lisi murmuring thanks. Celia forced the tears

Expenditures Of Railroads Shown Higher

Executives Representing 90 Per Cent of Mileage in U. S. Pledge Themselves to Continue Building Program

NEW YORK, Nov. 21. (AP)—Railway executives representing 90 per cent of the mileage of the United States today reported expenditures on construction and equipment, for the first nine months of 1936, of $128,000,000 more than in 1935 and pledged themselves to continue that program as an aid to employment.

R. E. Ashton, chairman of the executive committee, reported that capital expenditures of class I roads from Jan. to Sept. 30 total $638,821,000.

To Carry On Work
The association then voted unanimously to carry on "as far as practicable" work which may provide employment to the greatest possible number of men during the winter.

Despite general business recession and decrease in their own revenues the railroads have carried out and will continue to carry out, a resolute program of construction and equipment building undertaken at the request of President Hoover a year ago.

The association also declared its policy in respect to transportation, calling for:

1. A respite from rate reductions and suspensions by regulating bodies.
2. A respite from legislative ef-

TO RUN SPECIAL

From Simmons university comes word that the Cowboys will sweep down on Lubbock and the Tech campus Thanksgiving day supported by several hundred football fans who will come here on a special train. Enough tickets already have been sold to assure the special train.

Komer Milam, yell leader for the Cowboys, was among the leaders sponsoring the special and was very instrumental in selling enough tickets to assure the special.

Tickets sold for $3.25.

PLAN HOMECOMING EDITION

As has been the custom, a special homecoming edition of the Torch, college weekly publication, will be published for the homecoming football game. The special edition probably will appear on next Wednesday instead of Thursday, according to Frank Emison, Brownwood, editor-in-chief. The date for issuance has been moved up a day.

forts that would adversely affect rates or increase the expense of the carriers.

3. A withdrawal of governmental competition both through direct operation of transportation facilities, as well as indirectly through subsidies.

4. A fairly comparable system of regulation for competing transportation service by water and on the highways, which would include extension of authority of regulatory agencies over rates, routes and service of barge lines and passenger and freight bus lines.

due to the fact classes will be suspended from Wednesday afternoon until Monday.

Last year the game with Texas Christian university was set as the homecoming game for Tech graduates and ex-students, but the Thanksgiving day game, which will be with Simmons university, has been announced as homecoming game for this year by J. W. Jackson, president of the Tech Alumni association.

WORKS IN OHIO

June Hewett, Plainview, engineering graduate of 1929 is now employed with the Truscon Steel company of Youngstown, O.

While a student here Hewett won one of the scholarships given in the engineering school.

STUDENTS ELIGIBLE

Tech students are eligible to enter the contest sponsored by the League of Nations for the best thesis written dealing with international concern. A letter recently was received by Prof. M. E. Ogdon, of the college movement department, from S. P. Duggan, chairman of the National Advisory committee of the League of Nations, informing him of the contest.

A prize will be given for the best thesis. Students interested may obtain complete facts concerning the contest from members of the government faculty.

Miss Josephine Cowser, president of the Tech Women's Athletic association, will represent the college at the state W. A. A. meeting which is being held at Baylor college at Belton. The meeting starts today and continues through Monday.

Miss Cowser is a sophomore in the college of Liberal Arts and is active in athletics. She is from Dimmitt.

CRYSTAL BALL TONIGHT

Tech engineers will make merry tonight at their annual crystal ball which will take place in the Up Town Dance Palace, beginning at 9 o'clock.

The ball is sponsored by the college society, of which practically every Tech engineer is a member. The ball previously had been announced for November 21, but as the date conflicted with the one set for the Ben Greet plays, it was changed to one night later.

Whitford Wardell is president of the engineering society.

TO CONSIDER PARTY

Plans will be considered for a senior party at the next meeting of the senior class, according to Floyd Woodruff, president. At a meeting of the class recently, plans were discussed concerning the class gift, but it was decided to postpone action until after the Christmas holidays.
