The star-studded cast of Liberty Weekend's closing ceremonies fills Giants Stadium with a show featuring with lasers, fireworks and balloons.

Liberty Weekend hoopla ends with high-tech bang

NEW YORK (AP) — The multitude of magnificent images that was Liberty Weekend ended with an eruption of lasers, fireworks and balloons, sending millions of dazzled revelers homeward with one lingering vision from among many — the silhouette of a rejuvenated lady.

On Sunday, Hollywood produced a slam-bang, all-out, red-white-and-blue birthday bash for the Statue of Liberty with 200 Elvis Presley look-alikes, a 500-member marching band, 300 Jazzercize ladies and stars, stars, stars.

But today, after a four-day centennial extravaganza that celebrated the $66 million restoration of the statue, Lady Liberty is on duty once again — the dignified beacon of New York Harbor.

Liberty Weekend cost up to $32 million to produce, and officials said tickets and television contracts may not quite cover the costs.

Still, as Vice President George Bush put it at the closing ceremonies, "It's been quite a weekend."

A cast of 5,000, including Liza Minnelli, the Pointer Sisters, Willie Nelson and Kenny Rogers, performed for an audience of 50,000 at Giants Stadium in the New Jersey Meadowlands.

The real star, though, was the crowd, which on cue used flashlights to light the darkened stands in shimmering red-white-and-blue stars and stripes and spell "Liberty" across the highest tier.

At the end, the cast formed an electric map of the United States; the performers and crowd sang "America the Beautiful," and fireworks, lasers and balloons decorated the sky.

The finale was typical of the ways in which Liberty Weekend, orchestrated for the visual impact of television, engaged the eye. When President Reagan shot a laser beam across New York Harbor to set in motion the illumination of the statue, he also triggered an avalanche of images.

Not just the 40,000 shells that burst over the harbor on the Fourth of July, sending reflections of red, blue, gold, silver and green ricocheting off glass towers and calm waters.

Not just the 22 tall ships, their sails rippling in the breeze as they brought a bit of the 19th century into the city.

Not just the simultaneous swearing-in of hundreds of new citizens around the country.

It was blimp races over the Hudson, Cajun dancing on Wall Street, a harbor so full of pleasure craft that the few reported accidents were notable because there were so few.

It was the millions who took part — how many millions no one knows, but city officials had expected more than 6 million.

While the visitors who paid $5,000 a ticket to join the president on opening night got the publicity, the thousands who lined up to be among the restored statue's first callers were average citizens.

Tolentino opens talks with Aquino officials

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Arturo Tolentino, the running mate of Ferdinand E. Marcos, today left the hotel where he had holed up with hundreds of soldiers after proclaiming himself Philippine leader, and headed for talks with government officials.

President Corazon Aquino today gave Tolentino 24 hours to end what she called a "desperate" challenge to her rule.

The 75-year-old Tolentino, who ran with the now-ousted Marcos in the fraud-tainted Feb. 7 elections, took the presidential oath of office on Sunday, saying he had been pressured to do so by Marcos loyalists.

He then took refuge with a cordon of soldiers in the Manila Hotel.

Following Mrs. Aquino's ultimatum, Tolentino, Marcos' lawyer Rafael Recto, Marcos' loyalist Brig. Gen. Jaime Echeverria and other soldiers left the Manila Hotel in several cars to go to the nearby Army-Navy Club.

Tolentino and Recto refused to answer reporters' questions after leaving by a fifth-floor fire escape, but Echeverria said they would meet Deputy Defense Minister Rafael Ileto at the officers' club, next to the U.S. Embassy on Manila Bay.

Referring to Mrs. Aquino's demand that the pro-Marcos forces leave the hotel, Echeverria said, "If they will succeed in negotiating this, there will be no trouble. But if for another five hours this is not settled, then I don't know and I can't tell what will happen."

Reporters were not allowed into the officers' club where the talks were scheduled to take place.

In a news conference earlier today at the presidential palace's guesthouse, Mrs. Aquino said she was not concerned about Tolentino's revolt, which she said had been "instigated by Mr. Marcos."

Marcos, in a telephone interview today from his exile home in Honolulu, Hawaii, said he could not yet make a "fair comment" on the situation because "I am not a personal witness to what has happened."

But he said in the interview with Manila freelance journalist Sol Vanzi, "My main concern is that it might divide the armed forces and result in the Communists getting stronger. I hope this will not happen."

On Sunday, however, Marcos spokesman Arturo Aruiza said in Honululu that since leaving the Philippines in February, Marcos had written a letter to Tolentino, telling him that as his vice president, he should take over in his absence.

Mrs. Aquino said the "situation is completely under our control," and was limited militarily to those soldiers who had holed up in the hotel with Tolentino.

Man attacks ferry passengers

NEW YORK (AP) — An emotionally disturbed man armed with a sword killed a woman and wounded nine other passengers on the Staten Island ferry today, officials said.

The attacker was taken into custody by a retired police officer who was riding the boat, the ferry Samuel I. Newhouse, from Manhattan to Staten Island, said police spokesman Joseph McConville.

The former officer, Edward Delpino, fired one shot, but no one was hit by the bullet, McConville said.

John Kilcooley, an EMS spokesman, said one of the people who needed medical attention had suffered cardiac arrest.

Three people were being treated at the emergency room of Bayley Seton Hospital, according to Fran Edwards, a hospital official. She said more were expected.

No details were available immediately from St. Vincent's Hospital, where other wounded people were taken.

Besides ferrying commuters, the boat is a popular ride with tourists because it passes by the Statue of Liberty. It was a draw during the statue's centennial celebration, which ended Sunday night.

Mayor Edward I. Koch rushed to visit the wounded. Reflecting on the general tranquility in the city through the four-day Liberty Weekend, he said, "It's sad that it would happen at any time."

"That it didn't happen on the Fourth of July made the Fourth of July weekend perfect."

Secret files reveal UT tower sniper ate amphetamines 'like popcorn'

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas tower sniper Charles Whitman ate amphetamines "like popcorn" and spoke frequently about hating his father before his shooting rampage that left 16 people dead, according to a file kept secret for 20 years.

The nine-inch-thick file also contains information that a Travis County grand jury recommended be kept secret forever, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday in a copyright story.

Austin police, however, allowed the newspaper to review the file recently.

"I think Aug. 1, 1966, was one of the most terrifying days ever in this country," assistant police chief George Phifer said. "With the terrorism that exists across the world today, it is important to remember what terrorism was like back then."

During the early morning hours of that day, the 25-year-old architectural engineering student killed his mother and his wife, Kathy, and assembled an arsenal of seven weapons.

He hauled the weapons to the observation deck of the 307-foot UT tower, and at 11:45 a.m., began firing indiscriminantly on students on the campus and on people walking on streets blocks away in downtown Austin.

By the time police stormed the tower fortress and killed Whitman with a shotgun blast to the head 99 minutes later, 16 people were dead and 31 were wounded.

The case stood for nearly 18 years as the largest mass murder by a single killer in one day in U.S. history until James Oliver Huberty killed 21 people and injured 18 when he opened fire inside a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif.

Information in the file shows that Whitman spoke frequently to friends and acquaintances of his hatred for his father, something the father said he was not aware of until last week when he was interviewed by the Austin newspaper.

It shows that while awaiting court-martial in the Marine Corps in 1963, he began writing a diary in which he frequently included accounts of his love for his wife, Kathy, and his dissatisfaction with himself.

The file, which contained investigators' reports and Whitman's own letters and diaries, had been stored in a cardboard box in a safe at police headquarters.

When the American-Statesman examined the file, it was first time much of the information had been seen by someone other law officers or grand jury members, Phifer said.

Graham pleasantly surprised by desigination as safest town

The Bright Side

GRAHAM (AP) — Even though this North Texas town's crimes often consist of nothing more than a family feud or a boy shooting a water pistol at cars, residents were surprised to learn they live in one of the safest places in the state.

"You're kidding," said City Manager Larry Fields. "We've got the lowest crime rate in the state? I sure didn't know that."

According to Texas Department of Public Safety crime statistics, the community of 10,500 has a crime rate of 951 per 100,000 people.

Graham is located 90 miles northwest of Fort Worth. The law-abiding attitude of its citizens is evident in the well-tended lawns and absence of litter.

Police Sgt. Curtis Dees said the city sits in a peaceful valley, although he pointed out the town is not trouble-free. Two weeks ago, gunmen opened fire on his house early one morning.

Two suspects were arrested who were reportedly intoxicated and upset about receiving a traffic ticket from another officer earlier.

Graham has also had one slaying this year involving a husband and wife.

"This ain't no perfect place," Dees told The Dallas Morning News.

One of the most popular items in the Graham Leader's columns is the police blotter.

"We've tried to get rid of it several times, but there was always such an outcry, we had to put it back in," said Leader Publisher Ed Harris Jr.

Health Science Center to open Wednesday

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ceremonies Wednesday morning will officially open the Texas Tech University Health Science Center.

A ribbon cutting ceremony is scheduled for 10:30 a.m., with a luncheon catered by Odessa's Chuck Wagon Gang to follow at 11:30 a.m.

The first phase of the $3.3 million regional academic health center was completed in February and administrative offices have been occupied since the end of March when personnel vacated temporary offices in the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce building.

Located west of Medical Center Hospital on slightly more than six acres of land, the new building provides space for administrative offices, classrooms for resident doctors and a medical library.

Medical Center Hospital will be the primary teaching facility used by the RAHC, but Women's and Children's Hospital in Odessa as well as other Permian Basin medical facilities will also be used for training purposes.

The new health center will employ about 75 people, including three resident first-year resident doctors, with an annual payroll of around $1.6 million.

The RAHC is a five-phase project. The second phase will include an additional walk-in clinic for a family practice residency program. Phase 3 will see the addition of more administrative office space. The scope of the fourth and fifth phases is yet to be determined.

The Odessa center is the fourth such regional health center to be established by Texas Tech regents, with others in Lubbock, Amarillo and El Paso. The centers provide health care training for individuals living in 108 counties in the West Texas area.

In addition to general medical programs, the health science center will also offer obstetrics, gynecology and neonatal medicine. Registered nurses will also be able to earn their baccalaureate degrees from the health science center.

Council considering salary reductions to trim budget

From Staff Reports

A reduction in the salaries of city employees may save the city some $460,000 next year, Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said.

The savings would stem from a City Council plan to give 2 percent pay cuts to city employees making $35,000 or less, and a 5 percent decrease for those making more than $35,000.

The recommendation must be formally approved in August when city officials finalize next year's budget.

Officials discussed the salary reductions along with other items in last week's preliminary budget discussions.

Other decisions made by the council included not raising the property tax rate and reducing funding to several groups.

The city's budget will be about $58 million next year.

As for needed street construction and repairs, council members decided to use about $3 million left over from bond money, Poe said.

The budget talks lasted two days last week. City council members will meet again Tuesday afternoon.

Mayor Carroll Thomas had originally recommended at least a 3 percent pay cut across-the-board for city employees.

But the two-tier plan was brought up because city officials were concerned about morale of the lower-wage employees.

"We made a plea to keep the reductions as low as possible," said City Manager James Brown said.

Of the some 900 city employees, about 40 have salaries higher than $35,000 annually, Poe said.

Mexican opposition party might seek new election

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Elections in this northern border city were handled in a fraudulent manner, according to leaders of the main opposition party who say they might call for new balloting.

But unofficial preliminary results released late Sunday night by the National Action Party, or PAN, showed their candidates for mayor of Juarez and governor of the state of Chihuahua leading by a slight margin with 100 precincts out of 332 reporting.

Several hours before, however, the long-ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party claimed victory saying it had received about 60 percent of the Juarez vote in favor of all its candidates with more than 70 percent of the precincts reporting.

And in the only fatality in this city just across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas, the state judicial police reported a man was killed in an incident involving PAN sympathizers, the PRI's main challenger.

"This is totally outrageous. This is blatant fraud," said Gustavo Elizondo, PAN candidate for mayor of Juarez.

"In most of the polling places, our representatives have not been allowed to observe the process; there have been ballot boxes filled before the voting even started; 24 voting places shut down early," he said.

Juarez is the PAN stronghold in Chihuahua. Voters all over the state went to the polls Sunday to choose a new governor, mayors and state representatives.

Political observers have given PAN, a conservative party, a good chance of winning the governorship. That would represent a major upset for the PRI, which has never lost a gubernatorial election since its begining in 1929.

Elizondo, 42, whose campaign was hurt last week when his 1985 drunken driving arrest in El Paso became known, is running against the PRI's Jaime Bermudez, 63, a wealthy industrialist.

PAN candidates will meet Tuesday to decide whether to call for new elections, said Elizondo. Final results will not be announced for another week.

By late afternoon Sunday, witnesses said, there were lines of up to 300 people at some polling places, which were supposed to close at 6 p.m. MDT but would stay open as long as there were voters in line.

Some people who had waited for hours said voting had been slowed down in some strongly pro-PAN neighborhoods to discourage voters.

"I didn't dream it would be this long," said Maria Teresa Gutierrez, who said she had been waiting in line for more than nine hours.

Elizondo showed reporters at PAN headquarters about 50 ballots stamped with what appeared to be the State Electoral Commission seal. The ballots were discovered by a PAN representative in a stuffed in a ballot box before the polling place opened Sunday, he said.

He also said he witnessed at his voting place Sunday morning as another PAN representative, in place to observe the voting process and prevent fraud, was ordered out of the premises by an official with the State Electoral Commission.

"If they're claiming fraud, we'd like to see proof," said Mario Niebla Alvarez, a PRI representative to the national legislature. "Just like we accepted the fact that we lost in the last ½Juarez mayoral) elections, they should accept that they lost this time."

Niebla declined to release preliminary figures.

"We can't speak of an overwhelming victory," he said. "We haven't had the 95-97 percent victories of the past."

Authorities were investigating the death of Victor Manuel Hernandez Romo, 57, according to a statement from the state judicial police. Hernandez was heckling PAN sympathizers near party headquarters when he was chased by a group of people, the statement said.

Some witnesses said Hernandez was pushed in front of an oncoming mini-bus while others say he ran in front of the vehicle while trying to escape.

In another elections-related incident, Gilberto Meraz Hernandez, 28, a U.S. citizen from El Paso, was turned over to Mexican immigration authorities for questioning, said Guillermo Terrazas, a spokesman for the State Electoral Commission in Juarez.

Trucks full of military personnel patrolled the streets of Juarez, but apart from the one death, there had been no reports of violence as of early Monday morning.

Francisco Barrio, 35, who resigned as mayor of Juarez earlier this year to campaign for the governorship of Chihuahua on the PAN ticket, voted in his home district Sunday and flew back to Chihuahua City, the state capital, said PAN officials.

Barrio is running against PRI's Fernando Baeza, 44, a federal representative and former federal district attorney in Mexico City. Baeza was mayor of his native Delicias in southern Chihuahua 1971-74.

Chihuahua voting labeled 'joke, insult'

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — Opposition parties charged the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party with irregularities in the Chihuahua elections, and one leader blasted its claim of victory as a "joke and an insult."

"We've seen serious problems," Matias Mesta, a spokesman for PAN, the main opposition National Action Party, said during Sunday's state elections.

"The presidents of the polls have refused to allow our poll watchers into the polls. And one woman said the ballot boxes were already full when she went to vote," he said.

Shortly after the polls closed at 6 p.m., ruling party spokesman Manuel Gurria claimed that Fernando Baeza, the Institutional Revolutionary Party's candidate for Chihuahua governor, had won the election, calling it a "legitimate triumph."

Gurria said the victory claim was based on reports made by party workers charged with bringing voters to the polls.

Ruling party candidates for mayor were also leading by "a considerable margin" in at least six other cities, Gurria claimed.

But Antonio Becerra Gaytan, gubernatorial candidate for the leftist Unified Socialist Party of Mexico, said the victory claim was "totally false. It's too early to have collected this information from all over the state."

Guillermo Prieto, PAN state president, called the victory claims by the Institutional Revolutionary Party "a joke and an insult to the people of Chihuahua."

Baeza's chief rival, Francisco Barrio of the PAN, said late Sunday, "We're just beginning to receive results from the voting. In a good part of the state, the voting continues."

State elections were also held in Durango, Zacatecas and Michoacan, but attention focused on Chihuahua, Mexico's largest state and the one in which the ruling party, known as PRI from his Spanish-language initials, faced its biggest challenge.

Alfonso Melo, a PRI spokesman, said that "in no manner" was fraud being committed. He said "three or four minor incidents" in which PAN representatives were refused entrance to polling places had been resolved.

The federal Interior Department issued a statement saying that "there were no major incidents" in the balloting.

In addition to the gubernatorial race, 67 mayoralties and 14 legislative seats in the state were at stake.

Chihuahua has 1.3 million registered voters among its 2.5 million residents, and no official results were available as of early today.

The PRI has ruled Mexico since the party was founded in 1929. Since then, it has never lost a presidential or gubernatorial election. Its victories are partly due to a strong grassroots organization that reaches into every city and village in the country.

Nakasone's party looks like winner

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's long-ruling Liberal Democratic Party appeared certain today of scoring its biggest election victory ever, a stunning parliamentary landslide that could boost Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's chances for a third term in office.

Based on computer projections of the 63 million ballots cast in Sunday's voting, Kyodo News Service and Japan Broadcasting Corp. said the LDP was assured of winning more than the 271 seats needed for uncontested control of the House of Representatives, the lower house of the Diet, or Parliament.

Both Kyodo and Japan Broadcasting predicted that Nakasone's party, which since 1983 had relied on a coalition with a minority party to maintain a shaky, two-vote margin in the 512-seat lower house, would capture at least 300 seats.

Those projections would give the Liberal Democrats, who have dominated Japan's political scene since the end of World War II, their biggest election victory ever. In 1960, they had scored a 296-seat landslide.

A Liberal Democratic victory in the House of Councilors, the upper chamber of the Diet where half of the 252 seats were being contested, was never in doubt.

A buoyant Nakasone, claiming victory on the basis of the unofficial returns, said his party would win at least 304 seats. Kyodo said that total included four victorious independents who pledged to join the LDP.

The prime minister said he believed voters had expressed support for his government's programs of education, tax and bureaucratic reforms, while the opposition had not made its policies clear.

"The people have judged correctly that these policies can only be carried out by the LDP," Nakasone said in an interview on Japan Broadcasting Corp.

Deficit provision ruled unconstituional

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today declared unconstitutional a key provision of a law requiring a balanced federal budget by 1991. The ruling jeopardizes congressional efforts to cut spending and reduce spiraling deficits.

The justices, by a 7-2 vote, said the central provision of the Gramm-Rudman Act — ordering automatic deficit reductions — violates the constitutionally mandated separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches.

The law wrongly empowers an officer of Congress, the comptroller general, to perform an executive function, the court said.

Gramm-Rudman contains a fallback provision that allows Congress itself to vote on a deficit-reduction package if the automatic feature were invalidated.

The much-anticipated ruling, on the last day of the court's 1985-86 term, came 22 days after ABC News reported that the court was about to strike down the law. That report touched off a flurry of speculation about the future of Gramm-Rudman and the source of an apparent rare "leak" providing advance word of a court decision.

The case provided one of the most significant constitutional confrontations in recent years between Congress and the White House.

To check what has been described as a spreading cancer of red ink threatening the nation's economic health, the Gramm-Rudman law established an automatic mechanism to align spending and revenue more closely.

The focus of the effort is the comptroller general, head of Congress' General Accounting Office, who is appointed by the president to a 15-year term and may be removed only by Congress.

The GAO, now headed by Charles Bowsher, is a watchdog agency that audits federal programs.

A special three-judge court last Feb. 7 ruled that Gramm-Rudman breaches the separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches because of the comptroller general's role.

That unsigned ruling was authored by Antonin Scalia, the federal appeals court judge selected by President Reagan for elevation to the Supreme Court.

The Reagan administration urged the high court to strike down the comptroller's general's role, even though President Reagan signed the legislation and has called repeatedly for reduced federal deficits.

The act was defended by the congressional leadership and the comptroller general's office.

The Supreme Court heard arguments in the case April 23, putting it on a fast track for a resolution by July.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, announcing the court's decision on his last day presiding over a court session, said, "No one can doubt that Congress and the president are confronted with fiscal and economic problems of unprecedented magnitude."

But Burger said that "convenience and efficiency" cannot justify an unconstitutional law.

Burger is retiring this month and President Reagan has picked Justice William H. Rehnquist to succeed him as chief justice.

WHITMAN

Phifer was one of the lieutenants in charge of the 1966 investigation, described by Phifer as the largest and most extensive investigation ever associated with a criminal case in Travis County.

Then-President Lyndon Johnson personally directed the FBI to join the probe.

"Every bit of information that we have is in that file," Phifer said. "There is a lot of information that has never been released before. There is a lot of information about his personal and military life and his compulsive behavior that has not been brought out.

"It is a story of a man that was really looking to accomplish something with his life, but instead, ended up going to pieces," he added.

The grand jury that reviewed the Whitman file and letters Whitman left near the bodies of his wife and mother recommended they be kept from the public "since they contain unverified statements of an insane killer concerning an individual which could be misunderstood if publicly released."

So the file sat undisturbed and unexamined for nearly two decades.

It is not known whether Whitman was high on amphetamines during his shooting spree, but the report reveals he was a frequent user of the drugs.

Thomas Sewell, an Austin computer specialist and a friend of Whitman, told the FBI in 1966 that Whitman said he frequently used amphetamines.

"I eat them like popcorn. They won't hurt you," Sewell quoted Whitman as saying.

"We were talking about staying up late or something, and he mentioned that," said Sewell in an interview with the Austin American-Statesman last week.

A metal tube full of amphetamines and aspirin was found in Whitman's pants pocket after he was shot.

At the 1966 inquest, a justice of the peace quoted reports from the Department of Public Safety as saying a blood sample from Whitman showed no sign of drug intoxication.

A report in the Whitman file by an investigator with the Bureau of Drug Abuse Control, a predecessor to today's Drug Enforcement Administration, said it was impossible to tell whether Whitman was taking amphetamines while he was in the tower.

"The autopsy wasn't done until it was too late to determine if Whitman was under the influence of amphetamines at the time of his death," the report by the federal drug agency said.

The agency said the body had been embalmed and various fluids needed for such a test had been discarded by the time the autopsy was begun.

Whitman used amphetamines to stay awake to study or to attend classes after studying all night, investigators said. He took the tranquilizer Librium to calm his nerves and aspirin for headaches, they said.

A letter he left beside the body of his wife said Whitman had suffered "tremendous headaches in the past and I have consumed two large bottles of Excedrin in the last three months."

In an interview from his home at Lake Worth, Fla., Charles A. Whitman, Whitman's father, said last week he thought that a pecan-size tumor that was found at the base of his son's brain was the likely reason for the rampage. The police file offered no new information about the tumor.

The file also contains scores of letters to then-Austin Police Chief R.E. Miles from FBI agents assigned to do a background investigation of Whitman. The letters summarize interviews with Whitman's relatives and friends.

They depict Whitman as an intelligent, friendly, ambitious youth who worked hard to please a father described by friends, family members and a family priest as domineering and overly strict with his family.

The file also contains statements from friends and psychiatric reports that indicate Whitman's already-low self-esteem plummeted in the months immediately preceding the shootings.

In the letter left beside his mother's body, Whitman wrote:

"The intense hatred I feel for my father is beyond description. My mother gave that man the 25 best years of her life and because she finally took enough of his beatings, humiliation, degradation, and tribulations...to leave him.

"...I am truly sorry that this is the only way I could see to relieve her suffering but I think it was best."

The report says a priest told an FBI agent that Whitman joined the Marine Corps to get away from his father.

During Whitman's stay in the Marines, he was court-martialed for usury, gambling and carrying a weapon. While in the brig at Camp Lejeune, N.C., in November 1963, Whitman began a diary.

"Someday I hope to be in a brighter shade of life's light looking back at the darkness with my wife Kathy sharing the pleasures and joys of life with me," Whitman wrote in the introduction of the diary.

It was only a little more than two years later, however, that Whitman wrote:

"It was after much thought that I decided to kill my wife Kathy tonight after I pick her up from work at the telephone company. I love her dearly and she has been as fine a wife to me as any man could ever hope to have. I cannot rationally pinpoint any specific reason for doing this.

"I don't know whether it is selfishness or if I don't want her to have to face the embarrassment my actions will surely cause her. At this time though, the prominent reason in my mind is that I truly do not consider this world worth living in and am prepared to die and I do not want to leave her to suffer alone in it. I intend to kill her as painlessly as possible," he said.

Kathy Whitman was stabbed to death as she slept, less than 12 hours before Whitman began firing his weapons from the top of the UT tower.

Former agent acquitted of spy charges

LONDON (AP) — A former CIA agent and Navy commander arrested in Britain on an espionage charge was acquitted today after the prosecution said he had duped the Soviets with useless information.

The prosecution was ordered to pay $7,500 in court costs.

Lawyers for the defendant, former U.S. Navy Cmdr. John Bothwell, formerly of Narbeth, Pa., said later he was considering a suit for wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution. The lawyers said the allegations ruined Bothwell's import-export business.

Bothwell, 59, an American who lives in Bath, England, was arrested Feb. 16 as he tried to leave for Austria. He was charged under the Official Secrets Act with arranging for the communication of information calculated to be useful to an enemy.

Prosecutor Michael Bibby told Bow Street Magistrates Court that Bothwell was charged after police received a tip "from a very good source" that he was passing North Atlantic Treaty Organization secrets to the Soviet Union.

However, Bibby said, it had been learned Bothwell was handing over useless information which he packaged to look like top military secrets.

"He was a CIA agent with the U.S. Navy in Greece but left in 1972 to set up a shipping business,' Bibby said.

"He had legitimate business with the Russians, but pressure was put on him by them to supply information," he added.

Defense lawyers declined to say what sort of pressure was put upon Bothwell, but they said it was not blackmail.

Bibby said of Bothwell: "He has admitted passing information to the Russians but denied it was information of a damaging nature. It could have been obtained by anyone. But he packaged it up to make it seem authentic.

"He also admitted making dead letter drops to the Russians but it is now conceded that any information he did pass was to dupe the Russians," Bibby said.

At a hearing in March, when Bothwell was granted bail, he said he was approached by Soviet agents but only gave them information he obtained from Britain's Daily Telegraph newspaper and from Newsweek.

A formal verdict of not guilty was given after Bibby offered no evidence against Bothwell.

"The prosecution have to prove he prejudiced the safety of this country, and that is a vital gap in this case," Bibby said.

Richard Lissack, representing Bothwell, said Bothwell never had any intention of harming the state, and that he was conning the Soviets all the time.

"These charges have ruined his business, carefully built up over 13 years, and have affected his serious heart condition.

"His son, the vice president of an international bank, has also been affected as a result of these charges," Lissack said.

Outside court, Lissack said, "We expect to bring high court proceedings against the prosecution to obtain compensation for wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution."

Governor's meeting has colleges mobilizing to fight cutbacks

DALLAS (AP) — As Thursday's meeting of the Governor's Select Committee on Higher Education approaches, five of the 34 state colleges facing cutbacks, mergers or shutdowns are mobilizing their troops.

The committee's members say the proposals are only a written version of what has been under discussion for several years. But some college officials say the state's current $2.3 billion revenue shortfall has added importance to the proposals.

"For presidents, these are the worst times of our lives," Homer Pena, president of Pan American University at Brownsville, said. "Instead of worrying about what we teach, we have to wonder if we will teach."

In Alpine, residents are demonstrating their support for Sul Ross State University, which is a candidate for merger or closure. The school was established in 1917 and has more than 1,600 students.

Some merchants have hung "Save Sul Ross" signs in their windows. Businesses have offered free copying services to people who want to send letters to several legislators.

Ranch managers in the Big Bend area depend on the school's range animal science program to forecast weed growth and provide tips on pasture management, said Vic Morgan, assistant to Sul Ross President Jack Humphries.

The school also hosts the National Intercollegiate Rodeo competition.

Speculation on the fate of the campus if the school is closed has settled on two possiblities: conversion to a minimum security prison or a mental institution.

At East Texas State University in Commerce, officials say they were surprised to learn the school was a candidate for closure.

"We got this memo from the select committee saying that closing ET had been, quote, 'discussed in public forum,' unquote," said Gene Lockhart, vice president for development.

"Well, we were never aware of any such suggestions before other than what we thought was a humorous article," he said, referring to a magazine article that had suggested the school might be closed.

Enrollment has dropped 17 percent during the past five years, bringing the present total to about 8,000. The school was established in 1917 and focuses on education and liberal arts programs. Officials expect the decline in enrollment to reverse with renewed emphasis on teacher education.

Faculty members avoid discussing closure, said professor Jim Reynolds.

At Pan Am-Brownsville, more than 85 percent of the 1,200 students enrolled are Hispanics living in the surrounding area.

Most undergraduates attend two years at Texas Southmost College, a community college, then enter Pan Am, established in 1973 as an upper-division branch campus of Pan American University in Edinburg. The school's top programs are business, education and criminal justice.

Pan Am's administration and faculty are not entirely opposed to the idea of a merger with Southmost if it would save four-year programs. Most oppose the other option of downgrading to a study center.

"It would really hurt the kids," said Mary Wagoner, a math teacher. "Right now kids are overloading, taking full schedules at both schools to finish. They're very serious about a degree, and they don't have any other place to go."

A suggestion to merge Texas Woman's University in Denton with North Texas State University a few miles away, has students rallying in protest. Last week, hundreds of TWU students protested by brandishing signs with slogans such as, "It's not merger, it's murder."

The school was established in 1901 and concentrates on health care, education and liberal arts. Enrollment now is about 8,200 students.

TWU is the largest women's college in the country and graduates more nurses than any other school. Male enrollment is restricted to graduate level classes.

Students and administrators say merging the school with another institution would take away its special identity as a place where women are taught to become leaders.

In Odessa, the president of the University of Texas at Permian Basin says he is confident the school will not be closed. The school is also a candidate for a merger.

President Duane Leach says the school was briefly excised from the state budget by the 1985 legislature but funding was restored.

"We were visited by every major newspaper in the United States for a doom story," Leach said. "They were like traveling pathologists."

STATE IN BRIEF

Two boys injured badly playing with fireworks

PLAINVIEW (AP) — A boy lost his hand and a companion was burned when an undetonated aerial shell from an Independence Day fireworks show exploded after one of the boys lit the device, police said.

David Ponce, 11, underwent surgery at Central Plains Regional Hospital but doctors were unable to reattach the hand blown off in the explosion, hospital spokeswoman Marcia Raines said.

The boy, who also suffered severe burns and extensive shrapnel wounds, was in serious but stable condition Sunday and was moved out of the intensive care unit, said nursing supervisor Diana Parker.

"He's a pretty tough little boy," she said.

The other boy injured in the explosion, Fermin Barrera, 11, of Plainview, was treated for facial and body burns and shrapnel wounds, and was in satisfactory condition Sunday night in Lubbock General Hospital's burn unit, said nursing supervisor William Smith.

A third boy was treated and released at Central Plains for minor burns and ear injuries caused by the blast, hospital officials said.

Police said Sunday that the two boys were playing with the device Saturday on the front porch of a home in Plainview when it exploded about 6:13 p.m. It was likely they found the shell after the Friday night fireworks display at a city park, police said.

Man rescues daughter

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A Wichita County farmer's quick action saved his daughter's life by pulling her from a burning car only seconds before it exploded after an accident, police said.

Freddie Behrens and her father, Fred Dwyer, had stopped at a traffic light early Saturday when a car that had ignored several other red lights plowed into the back of their car at over 60 mph, officer Mike Little said.

"The impact on that car, it was tremendous. It completely compressed the car from the truck to the back window," Little said.

The door on the passenger's side was pinned shut, trapping Dwyer. But he was able to climb over his daughter and then pull her to safety through the window, Little said.

"The car was surrounded by fire," the officer said, adding that the flames apparently scorched the father's boots as he pulled his daughter from the car.

Dwyer had managed to carry his daughter only a few feet from the car when it exploded.

"I saw the explosion. It sent a fireball about 30 feet in the air," Little said. "Undoubtedly, if Mr. Dwyer had not had his wits about him, they would have both perished."

Dwyer and his daughter were treated for minor injuries at Wichita Falls Clinc. The the driver of the other car, a Seymour man, was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Hunters destroying history

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' heritage is rapidly diminishing because of artifact hunters who have destroyed 1,000 years of Northeast Texas history by plundering — and in some cases bulldozing — archaeological sites for profitable relics, archaeologists say.

The looting already has caused the loss of thousands of archaeological sites said state archaeologist Robert Mallouf.

"We've lost the ability to reconstruct the past in Northest Texas," he said. "Looting is continuing at a phenomenal rate."

The state, with the help of groups such as the Dallas Archaeological Society and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, is launching an extensive education program hoping to raise public appreciation of archaeological sites.

Mallouf said of 200 known cemeteries of the Caddo Indians, most have been victims of looters. The Caddos lived in a highly structured society, and their burial mounds and cemeteries are full of artifacts, he said.

"In five or 10 years the Caddo cemeteries will all be gone," he said.

Taking a public approach is unusual for archaeologists. In the past, they have not revealed locations of historic sites or discussed prices paid for black-market artifacts.

Planes return after 26 days

AUSTIN (AP) — Eight Texans completed a 26-day, around-the-world flight in four single-engine propeller-driven airplanes Sunday, stopping along the way at an Australian state also celebrating its Sesquicentennial.

The "Flags of Freedom" flight, sanctioned by the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission, departed from Austin June 11 and landed in Austin Sunday afternoon, said Preston Clark, a Texas Aeronautics Commission spokesman.

The primary destination of the flight was Adelaide, the capital of South Australia, which is also celebrating its 150th year of independence, Clark said. The Texans stopped in 18 cities planting Texas and South Australia flags at each of the stops, said Wayne Collins, one of the pilots.

Cisneros victim of thieves

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros spent several hours helping police try to find thieves who smashed in his car's window and copped his wife's purse.

Spending the hours talking to various people on the streets to find the thiefs identity, "has provided me with an insight into a different world," Cisneros said Saturday.

Someone smashed the window of Cisneros' car, which he and his family parked on a city street Friday while participating in a Fourth of July celebration.

A purse belonging to Cisneros wife, Mary Alice, and another belonging to a niece, were stolen from beneath a car seat, Cisneros said. His wife's purse containaed her checkbooks and identification, several credit cards and $100 cash, he said.

"We know that the checks are being used today," the mayor said Saturday. "The word on the street is that it's the act of heroin addicts who apparently have written a lot of checks.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ7652 ♡Q3 ◇952 ♣64
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your queen of hearts is a huge asset, as is your ace, and perhaps even your doubleton club. Don't rebid spades and make partner think you don't like his hearts. Raise to four hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ102 ♡83 ◇Q954 ♣752
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble	2 ♡	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have a borderline decision. Partner is showing a pretty fair hand with his raise to three spades and you have a useful hand where you have promised little. However, the vulnerability here favors the brave, so we would choose to bid four spades.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South with 60 on score you hold:
♠KQ9 ♡AQ83 ◇AQ6 ♣J72
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble	1 NT	Pass
Pass	Dble	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	2 NT	Pass
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Don't flog a dead horse. You have already told partner you have a very good hand, and he has informed you that he is poverty-stricken by failing to compete over two no trump. You have some chance of defeating your opponents, so let them struggle—Pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K63 ♡6542 ◇873 ♣752
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Follow the example of the chap who said: "I've seen my duty and I done it!" Partner asked you to bid your longest suit, and that's hearts. We know you didn't dream of passing, and one no trump shows more values than you have. Two hearts fits the bill.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1052 ♡KJ93 ◇Q76 ♣K
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—We know that you have an aceless hand and that partner passed originally. Nevertheless, we see no reason why you should not take a normal action. One of the reasons you opened this hand is that you held both major suits, so go ahead and show the second one. Bid three hearts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ85 ♡1093 ◇852 ♣84
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	4 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A.—You can't afford to be shut out of the bidding—partner might not be able to act again at this level. Bid four spades. True, this action runs a certain amount of risk, but you have a good suit and your hand is worth far more than its point count might suggest.

President's son makes splash with multi-media career

Reagan

AP Laserphoto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Prescott Reagan seems to be everywhere these days — hawking credit cards on TV, reporting on the July 4 extravaganza in New York, and dancing across a national magazine spread clad in the skimpiest of briefs.

The president's younger son has become the most visible of the four first-family offspring, thanks to his jack-of-all-media career.

The former professional ballet dancer, who has written articles for several magazines in recent years, is raising eyebrows not for his writing but for a risque, full-page photo of him in the current issue of Vanity Fair.

"It is bold. There's no question," said Reagan's agent, Michael Carlisle of the William Morris agency in New York. "One should remember that he was a dancer and that to some extent the pose is a dancing pose."

The revealing photo, accompanying a story on Reagan's evolving career as a TV journalist, movie actor, magazine contributor and entertainer, shows Reagan posed in red bikini briefs, an unbuttoned white shirt and socks.

Carlisle said the idea for the photo, accompanying others of Reagan in an outfit of white slacks and red-and-white striped jacket, came from photographer Annie Leibovitz.

"I think his feeling was it was no big deal," Carlisle said of the underwear shot. "He's a dancer and he's not ashamed of his body.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan got a custom-made saddle from President Reagan for her 65th birthday and expects to try it out when they go horseback riding at their California ranch next month.

The president surprised Mrs. Reagan, whose birthday was Sunday, when he told her that the saddle will be waiting when they begin a three-week ranch vacation, said Elaine Crispen, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary.

The Reagans usually horseback ride daily during their stays on the 688-acre ranch north of Santa Barbara.

CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (AP) — Mitch Miller celebrated his 75th birthday by conducting his hometown's orchestra — the Rochester Philharmonic.

Now a resident of New York City, Miller conducts some of the great orchestras of the world and led the Rochester Philharmonic here Thursday night.

The son of a metalworker and a seamstress who came to the United States from Russia in 1904, Miller said that although there were financial struggles, it was the tradition of immigrant families that their children were educated.

"And we never lacked for food," he said, "but we never had anything else."

Brandishing a cigar, Miller said he doesn't plan to change his lifestyle much in the near future.

"My father lived to be 94; my mother 88," he said. "The trick is never to give up striving for excellence, for Rochester — and for everybody."

Stevie and friends

New Orleans Mayor Sidney Barthelemy, right, watches his daughter Bridget plant a kiss on the cheek of singer Stevie Wonder. Wonder was in the city for concerts Saturday and Sunday.

Redford

SUNDANCE, Utah (AP) — Robert Redford, who moved here 28 years ago to escape the demands of success, say he's enjoying building his Sundance Institute into a haven for other, mostly unrecognized, performing artists.

Redford, in an interview in Utah Holiday magazine, also said his shyness and dislike for publicity are intertwined with his increasing desire to direct films.

While Redford acknowledged that Sundance, about 40 miles south of Salt Lake City, is a private development, he said he did not build it for financial gain.

"It's a lifelong project that's a bit of a dream; it's one I feel totally dedicated and committed to, and it makes me feel good to do it."

He hopes to eventually have arts activities going year-round at the resort, which already attracts skiers.

Media medicine

A dying patient whose only hope is an organ transplant needs more than a good surgeon these days. He needs a hospital with a good public relations department.

Baby Jesse is only the latest example of the need for change. Loma Linda University Medical Center, one of the most adept at capturing the national eye with its infant heart-transplant program, unfolded Jesse's saga recently on prime time. First, the hospital rejected the defective newborn as a heart-transplant candidate because it felt his unwed parents couldn't care for him after the operation. Then Jesse seemed to dodge nature's death sentence when his grandparents took custody of him and the hospital relented, giving the green light for surgery. And as millions of television viewers watched, Jesse's parents learned on the Phil Donahue talk show that a Michigan couple had donated the heart of its brain-dead baby to Jesse.

Then Baby Calvin made his public debut. He had been on the waiting list for a heart transplant a week longer than Jesse, and his condition was rapidly deteriorating. Because his parents chose anonymity and the Kosair Children's Hospital in Kentucky relied on a standard organ-procurement network, Calvin was passed over — though, fortunately, his plight was soon remedied with a press conference. A donor heart was quickly located.

As it was with a handful of other infants and children needing organ transplants, the media became the patients' best advocate. And that's not all bad, of course. The hitch is that newspapers and television only focus on a few patients, whose surgery usually involves the riskiest, most experimental forms of organ transplants. Thousands of others, the more routine cases, never attract full-blown media attention. They and their families suffer no less anguish. It's just that their cases typically aren't public knowledge.

Congress knows about them though. Two years ago, it mandated a computerized national network for matching donor organs. But recently, Sens. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., complained that the Reagan administration has been slow in implementing the law. In this instance, the complaint appears justified.

It's time to do better. Federal health officials have received a proposal from an agency willing to set up a national organ-donor information system, and, barring any glaring problems, it should be accepted. Lives have been needlessly lost because existing organ-donor lists are only regional in scope. The administration also should move more quickly to distribute the $2.5 million that Congress earmarked for local agencies to improve assistance to patients seeking donated organs.

Since many severe handicaps among newborns result from low birth weights and premature delivery, health officials should strongly support prenatal care programs for all pregnant women. That significantly could reduce the demand for infant organ transplants.

For Baby Jesse and Baby Calvin, the system that relied on the good graces of Phil Donahue to find an organ donor proved successful. But America can and should do better.

Congress 'rewarding'

Occupying a seat in Congress is turning out to be an increasingly "rewarding" experience, according to a new report from Common Cause, the public affairs watchdog.

Representatives and senators pull down salaries of $75,100 a year, which, as the saying goes, is not exactly chopped liver. But that is just for starters, the base, so to speak.

A Common Cause survey has determined that in 1985 these sterling legislators on average collected speaking and writing fees of about $15,000 each — up by $4,000 over 1984. Only 10 senators and 56 representatives, about 10 percent of the whole body, said "no thanks" to the fee offers.

Altogether, various trade, industrial and service groups distributed $7,156,004 among the lawmakers for speeches and articles in 1985 as against $5,419,296 expended for these purposes in 1984 — a whopping increase that does not take into account the reimbursements for travel and lodging expenses.

It's hardly mere coincidence that the speech invitations and writing assignments find their way to legislators directly involved with legislative matters of special concern to the groups paying the steadily rising fees.

As Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, put it, "Special interest groups seeking to gain access and influence on Capitol Hill obviously must think it pays them to give ever-increasing amounts."

Obviously.

Another View: Where is Palestine?

A catchy slogan, long popular among Israeli hardliners, helps explain the intractability of Middle East problems. The slogan is this: "Jordan is Palestine." It means that Israelis and the Arabs could quit arguing if Arabs agreed that Palestinian self-determination should be exercised east of the Jordan River only, while Israel takes care of the west. The slogan is simple and wrong.

Yet so clear is the phrase, so tidy the solution it suggests, that you wonder why everyone doesn't adopt it as a plan to bring peace to the region. You wonder, too, why Jordan's King Hussein has his government working on a plan to plough millions of dollars into developing the West Bank — the area administered by Israel since it drove out Jordanian forces in the 1967 war.

Arthur Day offers thoughtful observations on such questions in "East Bank/West Bank," a book about Jordan just published by the Council on Foreign Relations. Day spent most of his diplomatic career in the Middle East. The book reflects his sympathy for Jordan, its people and its king, but Day is neither uncritical of the kingdom nor unsympathetic toward other countries, including Israel.

"East Bank/West Bank "is especially helpful in understanding why Jordanians and Palestinians reject the idea that their nationalities are interchangeable. Contrary to some assumptions, Jordan has developed its own distinctive national personality. Even though its population has become preponderantly Palestinian, its government differs with Palestinian leaders in and beyond Jordan. The vivid recent example was Hussein's February announcement of an end to joint peace-seeking efforts with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Most West Bank Palestinians evidently remain loyal to the PLO. And Hussein, as always trying to retain independence of action without alienating fellow Arabs, is chipping away at that loyalty. His program for investing $150 million annually in West Bank agriculture, industry and services exemplifies the paradoxes that pervade the Middle East. Some West Bankers who would benefit resent the plan. And where else but the Middle East would there be a plan for development in an area controlled by an enemy?

Such questions seem less mysterious in the light of Arthur Day's brief book. Read it.

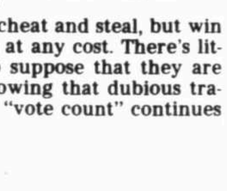
Election fraud major Mexico concern

WASHINGTON — A traditional morale booster among Indian braves heading into battle was: "Today is a good day to die."



Jack Anderson

Their latter-day cousins south of the border who have run Mexico's ruling PRI party since 1929 have a less honorable, if more politically pragmatic, tradition: Stay in power any way you can; lie, cheat and steal, but win the elections at any cost. There's little reason to suppose that they are not now following that dubious tradition as the "vote count" continues today in the border state of Chihuahua.

The opposition National Action Party, commonly known as PAN, has predicted the customary electoral chicanery, and made plans to prevent it. PAN fielded candidates in all 608 municipalities of Chihuahua, and took steps to have observers at every polling booth to "try to ensure that residents do not vote more than once and that ballot boxes are empty when the polls open," as the Mexico City News explained.

These tactics — the blunt instruments of electoral fraud — are not the wild imaginings of a paranoid opposition. Even when their candidates were favored to win, according to intelligence sources, PRI bosses have resorted to a whole arsenal of dirty tricks to achieve overkill at the polls. For example:

— Hundreds of teachers have stuffed ballot boxes the day before an election. Complaints, and sometimes riots, have been touched off when voters who waited hours to cast their ballots early found that the boxes were too full to hold even the first votes.

— Many known or suspected PAN supporters have shown up on election day only to be turned away because their names had mysteriously disappeared from the registration lists.

— Bottles of indelible ink that are supposed to be used to mark the thumbs of departing voters have been found unopened. This meant that PRI supporters were allowed to vote repeatedly — sometimes with the bizarre result that the vote total exceeded the entire population of the community.

— The drawn-out vote-counting process gives the best opportunity of all to rig an election. Opposition observers are simply ejected forcibly from the polling places by police.

No less a figure than the Catholic archbishop of Chihuahua, Adalberto Almeida y Merino, has spoken out this time in a pastoral letter denouncing vote fraud — while carefully not mentioning the PRI by name. Electoral fraud, he told his flock, "emerges not only in falsification of votes, but also in all those reproachable methods that lead to weighting the results in favor of one party, going over the head of free elections by citizens."

President Miguel de la Madrid's vaunted "moral renovation" has been unable to curb the excesses of regional PRI bosses. Indeed, the CIA has concluded in a secret report that while de la Madrid did win the 1982 election, his majority wasn't what he and the PRI claimed. On the other hand, the CIA also doubts that PAN, which was officially credited with only 16 percent of the vote, got the 46 percent it claimed.

What was the actual result of the 1982 election? Our sources in Mexico say the PRI keeps two sets of books: the publicly announced official vote count and the true, untampered count (which it needs to gauge the depth of popular opposition). Figures reportedly slipped out of the high-level military office where the second set of books is kept showed that PAN had won 32 percent of the vote — an astonishing show of strength, but close to the CIA's estimate.

One of the most outrageous thefts of an election in recent years was the 1985 gubernatorial race in Sonora, where the popular mayor of Ciudad Obregon, Adalberto Rosas Lopez, seemed a good bet to win for PAN. So PRI officials simply charged him with vague crimes and convicted him. They didn't quite dare put him in jail, and finally let him run in the election. But the PRI candidate won, and PAN claimed fraud.

A REAL BOMB: The Federal Aviation Administration is studying a radical technique for detecting explosives at airports: a neutron device that would identify the molecules of non-metallic bombs that might otherwise make it past the regular screening devices. But congressional sources tell us the bomb-detector may bomb out, because it works by using radioactive particles.

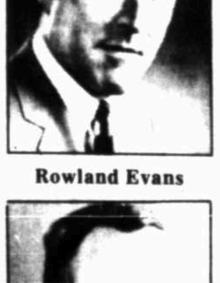
Worried officials ready economic measures

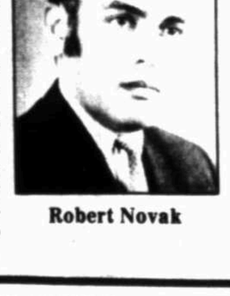
WASHINGTON — Amid deepening concern in administration circles over the mid-year state of the economy, a double dose to prevent stagnation or even recession is ready.

Dose No. 1: The long-awaited additional half-point drop in the discount rate by the Federal Reserve Board is at hand, whether or not Japan and West Germany precede it with interest cuts of their own.



Rowland Evans

Dose No. 2: The drop in federal income tax rates scheduled to begin July 1, 1987, under the Senate's tax reform bill is likely to be advanced to next Jan. 1.



Robert Novak

These preventive measures reflect worries at policy-making levels about the sluggish state of economic growth and, for the first time, articulated concern about a new recession that would transform the political climate nationally. This is not a replay of 1981, when the Reagan administration was willing to accept the recessionary consequences of tightened money and delayed rate cuts.

Even the optimists have become nervous about anemic indicators for the second half of 1986. One previously bullish government economist now sees growth limping along under 3 percent. He and his colleagues think the Fed is overdue in dropping the discount rate another half point.

Chairman Paul Volcker has been reluctant, but not out of the old central banker's fear that easier money will fuel inflation. Nor does soaring M-1, the principal money supply measurement, impress anybody. Even arch-monetarist Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, says privately that M-1 is no longer an accurate measurement of reality.

Rather, Volcker's reluctance to cut the discount rate stems from the ultra-conservative refusal in Tokyo and Bonn to spur their non-growth economies with interest-rate cuts. Volcker has told visitors he would feel responsible if unilateral U.S. interest-rate cuts result in a still weaker dollar, a stronger mark and yen and, therefore, more painful economic slowdown in Japan and Germany.

But nothing has been quite the same at the Fed since that February day when the Reaganite-dominated board voted Volcker down, 4-to-3, on a discount-rate cut. The chairman recently told a private group in all seriousness that he speaks for himself, not the Board. While the Fed's Reaganite governors want to avoid an impression of discord in the central bank, they will not wait forever for movement from Tokyo and Bonn.

This impatience is enhanced by resentment at the Fed that lack of growth internationally is why the weakened dollar has not been able to swell U.S. exports. According to this analysis, the ultra-conservatives in Tokyo and Bonn have retarded the American economy as well as their own.

On top of this, the White House under Donald T. Regan as chief of staff is considerably less reticient than it was under James A. Baker in pressuring action from the Fed. Presidential aides have made no secret of their desire for a discount-rate cut now.

The Fed will cut. It hopes for harmonization with the Japanese and Germans, but the cut will come all the same and very soon. The word around Washington had been that it could come this week or early next. However, the Fed may well wait until the Open Market Committee meeting July 8-9 to look over the whole breadth of monetary strategy.

Less immediate but potentially more critical is the date of the tax reform's rate cuts. Arthur Laffer, a founding father of supply-side economics, has written the president, warning of the adverse economic impact if the economy gets only a half-year tax cut in 1987 and no change in withholding tables until July 1.

Don Regan has publicly poohpoohed Laffer's warning, but there is strong sentiment at both the White House and Treasury for speeding up the date. While still failing to appreciate the supply-side negative effect of a delayed tax cut, administration strategists don't like the shock value of so many Americans ending up with a net tax increase for 1987 if deductions are clipped on Jan. 1 but taxes are not cut until July 1.

Bullishness is not entirely dead. The uniquely accurate model used by Wainwright Economics of Boston still shows a 5.5 percent growth increase for the second half of 1986, followed by sustained growth around that rate into 1987 and maybe 1988. Less confident of that long view, administration policy-makers are pushing for a boost by cutting interest rates and speeding tax cuts.

Scientists' warning urges SDI development

Here's the straight dope on Star Wars, from the horse's mouth. Thirty scientists who got out of the Soviet Union have warned us: It's time to get busy, because the Soviets have been working longer and harder on their Star Wars than we have on ours.

Charley Reese

In an open letter to Congress, the scientists are urging our lawmakers to fund the Strategic Defense Initiative and warning President Reagan not to make any concessions.

The very fact that these men most likely know what they are talking about is enough to assure that Congress, the foreign policy establishment, and the liberal gurus in the press will ignore them. Committees in both the Senate and House, in fact, have already cut the funds requested for SDI for next year.

The scientists say that they love the country of their birth as much as they love their country of choice and wish a future of peace and freedom for all their countrymen.

But they warn that peace in the future is only possible if the United States is strong enough to discourage Soviet leaders from employing nuclear blackmail to gain their ends.

Quoting the Soviet physicist, Andrei Sakharov, they point out that genuine security is possible only with a repudiation of expansionist policies, openness and pluralization in the socialist countries, and observance of human rights throughout the world.

Here's what the Soviet scientists had to say:

"When we were scientists in the Soviet Union, we belonged to a privileged part of Soviet society. We had the opportunity to observe the Soviet ruling elite, its way of looking at the world and its view of Soviet-American rivalry in particular, and to learn of many of its programs and intentions.

"We can say unequivocally that the Soviet party elite honestly believes no genuine coexistence between socialism and capitalism is possible. Despite all its talk about peaceful coexistence and detente," the Soviet ruling elite is convinced that one of the two superpowers is destined to dominate the other and makes every effort to ensure that it will be the Soviet Union.

"Consequently, the structure of Soviet society is designed to best contribute to the ultimate worldwide victory of the Soviet communist totalitarian system. We know that the Soviet leadership spends enormous resources, in fact, all it can, to surpass the United States in the military field because it believes overwhelming military superiority will be a decisive factor in the victory of communism."

In regard to what critics dubbed Star Wars, the Soviet exiles and defectors said that despite Gorbachev's denial, they are convinced:

"The Soviet scientific community and government leaders believe that effective strategic defenses are technically possible and doable; the Soviet Union has been intensely working on its own version of the Strategic Defense Initiative since the late 1960s, and puts much more of its efforts and resources into its 'Star Wars' and strategic defense programs than does the United States. Development and deployment of Soviet 'Star Wars' systems is part of the Soviet Union's global strategy against the non-communist world which seeks by coercion to usher in the 'final historical era' of worldwide communism and 'peace' maintained by Soviet military power."

Then they say, "Soviet communist morality and the history of Soviet behavior teaches us that the Soviet leaders do not consider it immoral to cheat or deceive their mortal enemies — and, unfortunately, they consider the U.S. their Number One Enemy. Therefore, they will break any international agreement the moment it serves their interest to do so, as they have done many times before."

It continues to amaze me that so many otherwise sensible Americans go to such extraordinary and strenuous efforts to avoid facing the accumulation of empirical evidence about the pathological nature of the Soviet government.

Vladimir Bukovsky, another Soviet exile, likens it to the reaction of a person hearing that he has cancer — avoidance. As with cancer patients, though, survival depends on facing reality, not running from it.

Population reaches five billion mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's population reaches the milestone 5 billion mark with the birth of a child sometime today, The Population Institute reports.

"Never before have so many people shared space on this planet," observed Werner Fornos, president of the private institute which studies population questions.

"Five billion propably puts the world population about at its carrying capacity. It will be difficult to feed, clothe, shelter and employ many more people at more than a subsistance level of life," added M. Rupert Cutler, executive director of Population-Environment Balance, another population research group.

Rapid population growth has stretched the resources of the world and the prospect of future increases raises questions of how to cope with their growing needs, population experts generally concur.

"Somewhere in the world a child will be born and the earth's population will reach five billion," Fornos said in announcing the date for the population milestone.

"The birth of a child is usually a joyous occasion and our fondest wishes and fervent prayers are extended to this precedent-setting newcomer to the world," he said.

"This particular baby will most probably need both and then some, for it is a sobering symbol of the shocking rapidity at which the world's population is multiplying."

Population experts tended to agree with Fornos' concern for the future, though not all would have selected the same date for the world to reach the 5 billion people mark.

"He may very well be right," said Carl Haub, a demographer at the private Population Reference Bureau. But, Haub noted, the United Nations estimates that the 5 billion mark won't be reached until about next March.

"Most demographers believe it will happen early next year, but we're close and given the margin of error, who knows, we might already be at 5 billion. At any rate, we're bearing down on 5 billion just a dozen years after we hit 4 billion," said Joseph Speidel, vice president of the Population Crisis Committee.

This population growth "is a revolutionary force in the world that we're not doing very much about," said Speidel.

"I can't quibble with his date, it's good enough for me. Whether it's today or tomorrow or the next day, it's 5 billion about now," commented Cutler of Population-Environment Balance.

Other statisticians have said the milestone may have already quietly passed, since there are simply no very good counts of the population in many countries, the Population Reference Bureau's Haub pointed out.

For example, Haub recalled that while population researchers hailed the Earth's 4 billionth person in 1976, later censuses helped determine that that event actually occurred as early as 1974.

What is known, though, is that the Earth's population has more than tripled in the last century and continues expanding rapidly.

"While the numbers are staggering, the consequences of such startling growth are even more so," said Population Institute head Fornos.

"The child very probably will be born in the Third World, where nine of every 10 babies are born today and where poverty, disease, hunger, illiteracy and unemployment make life a daily struggle for survival," he said.

The problems are a factor of where people are living in the world, he explained, "how they are distributed or maldistributed ... that is really the issue, not whether the world passes 5 or 6 or 7 or 8 billion."

State taxes to rise with federal overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — People in dozens of states can expect to see their state taxes rise if Congress passes a federal tax overhaul, touching off local struggles over whether to roll back taxes or take advantage of huge windfalls.

Many states haven't yet calculated the fallout, but at least nine predict increases totaling more than $100 million a year under provisions of the tax bill passed by the Senate last month.

A survey of officials in the 50 states by The Associated Press shows that passage of a tax overhaul bill like the Senate version would cause tax increases in at least 26 states, regardless of whether individuals would be helped or hurt on their federal income taxes.

In many states, that translates to personal income tax increases of 10 percent to 20 percent, said Gerald Miller, director of the National Association of State Budget Officers.

"Tax policy will be one of if not the major issue for state legislatures in 1987," Miller said. "This is not an issue that can be swept under the rug. They can't ignore it."

The windfall is as much as $2 billion in New York, according to a state Republican estimate. Other big annual increases estimated by state officials include: $250 million in Missouri, $120 million in Kansas, $150 million or more in Michigan, up to $200 million in Colorado, $123 million in Illinois, and at least $200 million in Ohio.

Minnesota expects an extra $360 million over two years. In Virginia, a $130 million windfall is seen from the tax bill passed earlier by the House, and the Senate version would produce far more, though state officials don't have an estimate yet.

At least 17 more states see lesser increases, or anticipate an increase but haven't yet reached an estimate.

"There'll be pressure on states that do have windfalls to lower their own rates," said Steven Gold, fiscal director for the National Conference of State Legislatures. "Aside from revenues, the fact the federal government has had this reform, I'm sure, will encourage states to reform theirs."

But for a handful of states — principally Rhode Island, Vermont and Nebraska — the federal changes would actually cut taxes unless legislatures act to halt the revenue loss.

The revenue changes would result from the way many states have tied their income tax laws to the federal code.

The tax overhaul bills would would eliminate or reduce many tax deductions. While they would be offset by lower federal rates, the changes would broaden the base of money that is subject to state income taxes and thus raise taxes if state rates aren't also lowered to compensate.

The Senate bill, for example, sharply cuts deductions for charitable donations and interest payments and eliminates the break for capital gains income and the value of tax shelters.

Some states already have begun planning their own tax changes, even though differences between the House and Senate bills still must be worked out by a conference committee.

In New York, Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo has told his economic advisers to propose changes in New York's tax code to prevent automatic state increases.

"My strong support for federal tax reform is coupled with a determination not to allow changes in the federal tax code to trigger an automatic increase in state taxes," he said.

In Michigan, Democratic Gov. James Blanchard and the majority Republicans in the state Senate have reached rare agreement that a tax cut is needed.

"I think it's fairly certain ... if the bill passes, we would lower rates," Blanchard said. "I don't think anyone here would want to see the state try to reap a windfall off of federal tax reform."

Some states, though, are eyeing the windfall. In Virginia, officials are looking for money for roads and have no plans to roll back taxes. In Illinois, Senate Revenue Chairman Dawn Clark Netsch said the windfall will barely make up for the erosion of state money that resulted from the 1981 federal tax cuts.

"It's possible we might need that money just to maintain the status quo," said Kansas Gov. John Carlin. A Democrat, he is retiring this year, and already a Republican candidate for his job is attempting to make a campaign issue of the increase.

Ice cream bar plant sterilized

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Kraft Inc. officials say their plant in Richmond, Va., will be completely sterilized while searching for the cause of food contamination that may have sickened more than 170 people in seven states.

The sterilization was to begin today, said Kraft spokeswoman Randi Killian at company headquarters in this Chicago suburb.

U.S. Food and Drug Administration investigators and Kraft officials will be "taking apart parts, cleaning pumps and product services," she said Sunday.

"They're working on getting it completely cleared to make sure that everything has been completely sanitized and ready to produce again ... hopefully within 30 days."

She stressed that none of the reported illnesses had been positively linked to Kraft's Polar B'ar ice cream bars.

The Richmond plant was shut down Thursday after potentially deadly Listeria monocytogenes were found in Checkerberry flavor Polar B'ars that left the factory before June 19.

The same day, Kraft voluntarily recalled all Polar B'ars made in the plant as a precaution and is now confident that all bars have been removed from store shelves, said company spokesman Fred Clay.

The company had virtually ruled out sabotage or an infected worker as sources of the contamination, he said.

The five-ounce bars, sold in packages of six, were distributed primarily in the eastern United States, Clay said. Polar B'ars made at Kraft plants in Framingham, Mass., and Huntington, Ind., are not affected by the recall.

Packages of the recalled bars have the code 51-6426, Clay said. In addition to Checkerberry, the flavors recalled are vanilla, Crunchy, and Checkerchoc.

Kraft instructed consumers who have bought the bars to destroy them and return wrappers to the store that sold them for refunds.

Ms. Killian said concerned consumers could call Kraft's toll-free number — 1-800-572-3877 — with any questions.

The Listeria bacteria, found in milk products, can cause listeriosis, an illness that can be dangerous to pregnant women and their fetuses, as well as to small children, frail elderly people or others with weakened immune systems.

Teachers' union affiliates get approval to experiment

CHICAGO (AP) — The head of the nation's second-largest teachers' union says his local affiliates now have approval to experiment with radical ways of running schools and weeding out incompetent teachers, even if the efforts run counter to official union policies.

If the experiments succeed in improving the schools and the status of teachers, "we'll come back two years from now and change our policies," American Federation of Teachers President Albert Shanker said Sunday.

The 2,600 AFT delegates, winding down their biennial convention, were holding a ceremony today to honor teacher-astronaut Christa McAuliffe, who died in the Challenger explosion Jan. 28. Her backup, Barbara Morgan of McCall, Idaho, was to speak, two days after a similar appearance at the National Education Association convention in Louisville, Ky.

Seventy-five hundred NEA delegates ended their meeting Sunday after narrowly voting to condemn the recently enacted $100 million U.S. aid package for the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist goverment.

The NEA delegates also rebuffed attempts to water down the stand the 1.8 million-member union took last year in favor of dismissal proceedings against incompetent teachers, and voted to protest the use of professional athletes in alcohol and tobacco advertisements.

The AFT delegates voted overwhelmingly to back an AFT task force report called "The Revolution That Is Overdue" that calls for radical changes in the profession.

It says teachers, not administrators, should make decisions about instruction; supports higher starting salaries for teachers whose speciality is in short supply; and calls for more self-regulation of the profession. It also endorses abolition of undergraduate education degrees and creation of a national teacher certification board, as the Carnegie Task Force on Education and the Economy recommended in May.

The AFT delegates hailed the Carnegie report as "a bold new vision" for education, though their resolution acknowledged it contains several ideas long opposed by the union. It said the 630,000-member union, without modifying its policies, will "continue to encourage and offer support to state and local affiliates that wish to explore and experiment with these new directions."

"It gives the green light to all of our locals to go ahead and do all the things" in the Carnegie report, Shanker said.

Some experiments are already under way. The AFT local in Toledo, Ohio, has a peer review program, and the Hammond, Ind., affiliate has embarked on a program that gives teachers more control over the operation of their school.

The NEA on Friday endorsed the concept of a national certification board, but did not pass judgment on any other Carnegie proposals.

Several AFT delegates, including some from teachers colleges, raised objections to the report.

Atlanta homicides up half in first part of year

ATLANTA (AP) — Homicides in Atlanta rose more than 50 percent during the first half of 1986 compared to the same period in 1985, police said.

Police reported 94 murders during the first six months of 1986, compared to 61 during that time in 1985.

The number of homicides solved by police declined. Last year, the city's homicide squad solved 72 percent of the cases it investigated through June, matching the national rate for that time.

In the first half of 1986, however, Atlanta police solved 62.5 percent of the homicides they investigated.

Atlanta police Lt. Cleveland Whitehead said the lower rate was because more bodies were found in which the identity of the victim and the nature of death was not known immediately, which lessens the chances of solving the case.

Experts hope fruit recovers

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Florida's $2 billion-a-year citrus industry has hit another pothole on its road to recovery from several disastrous years of killer freezes and tree-endangering canker disease.

Citrus canker, which forced the burning of more than 10 million seedlings and young trees in nurseries within two years, has reappeared.

And for the first time since the disease reappeared in Florida in 1984, it has infested a producing grove.

But growers and scientists say they're optimistic the latest outbreak will be only a minor hitch in the industry's recovery.

State agriculture officials confirmed Friday that the brown-and-yellow lesions on fruit, leaves and twigs in a grove near Palmetto on the Gulf Coast were caused by canker. Canker also has been confirmed at homes near Bradenton near Palmetto, and at Holmes Beach near St. Petersburg.

"We thought it was pretty well gone, and this certainly disturbs us," said Jerry Chicone Jr., a citrus grower near Orlando. "Everybody is still going forward, but it's sure frustrating that it's come up again in this way."

Canker is not harmful to humans, but it is highly contagious and deadly to citrus trees.

Since the disease has until now been confined primarily to nurseries, it has not affected Florida production, 90 percent of which goes into juice. It has, however, disturbed fresh fruit sales.

Inmate takes guard hostage

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — A convicted murderer apparently upset over his impending transfer handcuffed a guard and held her hostage in his cell for nearly five hours Sunday before surrendering, a prison official said.

Tim Meaker, 41, gave up after releasing 37-year-old guard Sharon Hall, said Adria Libolt, a spokeswoman for the Huron Valley Men's Facility in Pittsfield Township. There were no injuries, she said.

Meaker grabbed Ms. Hall as she opened his cell door, probably to make a search, then took her handcuffs and chained her to his bed, Libolt said.

Authorities were unsure if Meaker had a weapon, adding guards at the prison are unarmed. Other inmates at the men's prison were confined to their cells after the incident began. The 411-bed maximum-security prison was housing 369 inmates, she said.

Meaker apparently was upset about his scheduled transfer Monday to the State Prison of Southern Michigan in Jackson, she said. He was transferred in 1979 to Huron Valley following a first-degree murder conviction in Wayne County Circuit Court.

The inmate was being held in a single cell under "protective segregation," which he requested in April because he feared for his safety, Libolt said.

In January, two convicts took four hostages at the prison, holding three of them in the prison's food service area for 30 hours before releasing them unharmed. One hostage was released 12 hours into the ordeal.

Concert leaves one dead

(AP) One person was killed, two others were critically wounded and at least a dozen more were injured in an outbreak of apparently gang-related stabbings, shootings and beatings over the weekend at the High Desert Music Festival in the desert community of Adelanto, authorities said.

However, local police and servicemen from nearby George Air Force Base assigned to control the 35,000 concertgoers, who braved the heat and high winds at the free two-day outdoor festival, said that most of the audience was well-behaved.

"It was pretty low-keyed," Adelanto Police Detective Les Follis said Sunday. "We had around five to 10 arrests in all, ranging from drunk in public to brandishing a weapon to the actual homicide."

Follis said that there were no obvious signs of drug use at the festival, which ended Saturday night. The concert featured country and rock music from the 1950s and '60s and marked the largest event ever held in the desert community, situated about 65 miles northeast of Los Angeles near Victorville.

Fumes kill two, wound 28

NEW YORK (AP) — Toxic fumes overcame three workers found inside a vat at a metal factory, killing two of them, and injured 18 police officers and 9 paramedics who came to their aid.

When the three workers were found Saturday evening at the bottom of a vat used for cleaning metal products at Ever-Nu Metal Products Inc. in Brookly, their skin was blackened and peeling and the one survivor was foaming from the mouth, the police officer who first spotted them said Sunday.

Sunday's high of 87 was 15 degrees cooler than the record of 102 set in 1947. The overnight low of 69 was 7 degrees warmer than the record of 62 set in 1958.

STATE

A weak stationary front located across the Texas Panhandle and South Plains triggered showers, thundershowers and thunderstorms across a vast area of West Texas today.

Forecasts called for much of the same tonight and Tuesday.

Thundershowers were reproted across eastern portions of the Panhandle and over the South Plains.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported at dawn near the Davis Mountains in Southwest Texas and along the coast in Southeast Texas.

Forecasts called for a chance of scatered showers and thunderstorms over the High Plains, the low rolling plains, Trans Pecos and along the Gulf of Mexico in Southeast Texas through Tuesday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s. Highs Tuesday will be mostly in the 90s, ranging to around the 100-degree mark in southern and southwestern portions.

Early morning temperatures were in the 70s over most of the state. Extremes ranged from 69 at Midland and Amarillo to 82 at Corpus Christi.

NATION

High water alerts were in effect today in parts of the nation's midsection and heat waves dominated much of the East and Alaska, but a high pressure cooled the northern Plains.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across New England, southern Florida, the central Rockies and west central Plains.

Thunderstorms also rolled across northern Oklahoma and northeast Colorado, while showers and thunderstorms ranged along a stationary front from eastern Iowa to the Texas Panhandle.

Mac O'Grady ....Hartford winner.

CROMWELL, Conn. — Mac O'Grady (269) fired a course-record 62 then beat Roger Maltbie on the first hole of sudden death to win the Greater Hartford Open. Although O'Grady, who is playing under the appeal of a six-week suspension, missed a four-foot birdie putt in the playoff, Maltbie missed an even shorter putt for par to give O'Grady his first career victory on the PGA Tour.

O'Grady has been embroiled in a running feud with PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman since the 1984 USF&G Classic in New Orleans when he allegedly verbally abused a tournament worker...

SUGAR LAND — Amy Alcott ran in a long birdie putt on the first playoff hole to beat Lauren Howe for the LPGA Mazda Hall of Fame Championship at Sweetwater. Alcott scored her 25th career victory and first of 1986 and also gave her at least one victory in each of her 12 years on the LPGA Tour.

Howe, overcoming a series of injuries and ailments, charged into contention with a final-round 68. Pat Bradley, the tour's leading money winner and the first female to surpass the $2 million mark in career earnings, shot a final-round 75 for a 294 total and Juli Inkster, second on the money list this year, shot a 74 for a 295 finish.

Auto Racing

CLEVELAND — Danny Sullivan overcame oppressive heat and humidity and a stop-and-go penalty Sunday to win the Budweiser Cleveland Grand Prix Indy-car race, his second straight record-setting victory. Sullivan, who won the previous Sunday at the New Jersey Meadowlands, added this latest victory to a triumph in the Cleveland GP in 1984. The 1985 Indianapolis 500 champion joined second-place finisher Michael Andretti, the CART-PPG series point leader, as the only drivers to record more than one victory in seven races this season. Andretti, who was 44.25 seconds behind at the end, also has won twice...

Kenny Smith of North Carolina scored 23 points to lead the United States to a 107-81 romp over China in a first-round game of the men's World Championships in Malaga, Spain. Smith and Arizona guard Steve Kerr combined to hit eight of 10 three-point shots as the United States, 99-63 winners over Ivory Coast on Saturday, won its second game in as many starts. China is 0-2...

VERSAILLES, France - Severiano Ballesteros won his fourth straight title on the European circuit with a 69-269 two-stroke victory in the French Open. Doubts gone as Boris aces Ivan

By PETER ALFANO
N.Y. Times News Service

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England — The doubts disappeared two weeks ago when Boris Becker walked onto Centre Court for the first time in a year and felt as if he had never been away. Goose bumps spread over his body, he said, and the grass was a magic carpet under his feet. Others doubted whether the boy who dared to win Wimbledon could do it again, but Becker was no longer one of them. All that remained was for the chair umpire to say "play."

And play Becker did, even better than last year. His serve was bolder, his net game more complete and his maturity remarkable for one so young. "I learned a lot in a year," Becker said. "I'm a different person. I'm more experienced if you can say that about an 18-year-old."

What can be said is that Becker has won Wimbledon for the second time, defeating Ivan Lendl, the No. 1-ranked player in the world, 6-4, 6-3, 7-5, in Sunday's final. Last year, at 17, he became the youngest men's singles champion. Sunday, the smiling West German became the second youngest to accept the Challenge Cup.

He came to Wimbledon ranked No. 6 in the world.

"AT THE U.S. Open last year, I thought about how difficult it would be to win a Grand Slam or Wimbledon again," Becker said. "But when I got here, it was like home. Centre Court felt like my court. And although you cannot say I am the best tennis player in the world, you have to say that, maybe, I am the best on grass."

On the slick grass, Becker's serve is a blur. He follows it quickly to the net, punching volleys deep or angling them for the sidelines where they skid under an opponent's racquet.

The West German had 15 aces and 13 clear service winners Sunday.

Becker's serve, which he boasted is even faster than it was last year, paid an additional dividend because it put more pressure on Lendl to hold his service. "Boris takes a big crack at my serve," Lendl said. "And he puts so much pressure on my second serve, standing inside the baseline, swinging away. He takes a lot of chances here that he doesn't on other surfaces."

Lendl, the 26-year-old from Czechoslovakia who lives in Greenwich, Conn., is at his best on the slow red clay and on hardcourts where the bounces are true and he can stay on the baseline, passing opponents with whiplike topspin groundstrokes.

The tension was evident in the first game when Becker's first serve was shaky and he faced 3 break points. Lendl, though, could not capitalize.

LENDL did break Becker in the fifth game, but was broken back. Becker then broke again in the 10th game, hitting a pair of service return winners, then reaching break point when Lendl netted a low forehand volley. The set was decided when Becker scooped a half volley and placed it in the open court for a winner.

Becker began the second set serving three aces and a service winner, stalking confidently to his chair between games. Lendl doggedly stayed in the set until the eighth game when Becker finally outguessed him a couple of times and hit passing shots from the baseline. Becker then closed out the set in style, chalking up his 14th ace and a service winner that Lendl barely touched.

Lendl held serve, then broke Becker in the second game of the third set, eventually building a 4-1 lead. At 4-2, however, Lendl was broken for the fourth time in the match. But the 10th game will probably be remembered by Lendl as the one that got away.

Dodgers down Midland again

Frm Staff Reports

Texas League

SAN ANTONIO— Midland's misery was made complete Sunday when the San Antonio Dodgers defeated the Angels, 5-2, to take the Texas League series five games to one.

Now the Angels will have until Thursday to contemplate the disasterous road trip before opening a 10-game homestand against the Texas League East, first five games with Shreveport and then five with first-half champion Jackson.

In between, the TL will hold its annual all-star game in Shreveport Wednesday night, matching the East division luminaries against the West.

Sunday's loss was Midland's sixth in its last seven starts as Ken Harvey drove in three runs and scored another to lead the San Antonio.

The game was tied at 1-1 when Harvey lined a bases-loaded double into right field.

Midland picked up a run in the sixth when Pat Keedy doubled and scored on a single by James Randall.

Bill Brennan, 5-5, was the winning pitcher. Kevin Devine picked up his first save. Don Timberlake, 5-5, was the losing Midland pitcher.

PAUL HERTZLER'S fifth inning double drove home the winning run as the Jackson Mets took a 4-3 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

In other action, Arkansas defeated Shreveport, 8-4, and El Paso outscored Beaumont, 8-1.

Hertzler's double scored Jason Felice to give Jackson the winning margin.

Jackson had taken a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Rick Lockwood doubled home Shawn Abner and Kevin Elster.

Tulsa grabbed a 3-2 lead in the third on a two-run double by Mark Poole and a bases-loaded walk to Jeff Melrose.

Even Horner's four homers not enough for Braves

Associated Press

Atlanta's Bob Horner became the eighth player in major-league history to hit four home runs in a nine-inning game Sunday, but it wasn't enough as the Braves lost to the Montreal Expos 11-8.

Horner, who has 17 home runs, hit solo shots in the second and fourth innings, a three-run homer in the fifth and another solo drive in the ninth. The first three came off Andy McGaffigan, the last off Jeff Reardon. He fouled out against Tim Burke in the seventh.

Montreal got home runs from Andre Dawson, Mitch Webster and Al Newman and the Expos scored six runs in the fifth inning for a 10-2 lead.

The last player to hit four homers in a game was Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt on April 17, 1976, in a 10-inning game. The last to hit four in a nine-inning game was San Francisco's Willie Mays on April 30, 1961.

"In my wildest dreams I would never have expected to do anything like that. I had a good week today," said Horner, who had never hit more than two homers in a game.

"I haven't seen it before either," he said. "The home run pitches were a fastball, two breaking balls and a fastball. It's just one of those things that happens and you can't explain it. I certainly don't expect that to happen again anytime soon."

Webster, who had five hits, singled twice in the big fifth inning and homered in the seventh for the Expos' last run. Dawson homered for two of the fifth-inning runs and Newman hit his first major-league homer in Montreal's three-run fourth.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants 8, Cardinals 3

Carlton left trailing 3-0 but the Giants narrowed it to 3-2 before scoring six times in the eighth on a single, two sacrifice flies, a squeeze bunt and a two-run double error by St. Louis catcher Mike Heath.

Randy Kutcher led off the eighth with a single and went to third when pitcher Danny Cox threw wildly trying to get him at second on Robby Thompson's bunt. Todd Worrell gave up a game-tying sacrifice fly to Joel Youngblood and Chili Davis' single and a walk to Chris Brown loaded the bases.

Mets 5, Astros 3

Sid Fernandez became the NL's first 11-game winner and Howard Johnson and Kevin Mitchell homered. Fernandez, 11-2, won his sixth straight start, giving up a run on six hits and five walks in 6 2-3 innings. Mitchell hit a solo homer off Mark Knudson in the seventh inning and Johnson's two-run shot off Frank DiPino in the eighth gave the Mets a 5-1 lead.

Padres 2, Cubs 1

Marvell Wynne homered and Andy Hawkins and Rich Gossage held Chicago to eight hits. Hawkins went 7 2-3 innings, the first time in his last four starts he has lasted past the sixth. The Padres took a 2-0 lead off Scott Sanderson on Wynne's first-inning homer and a sacrifice fly by Garry Templeton in the fourth. The Cubs scored in the sixth on singles by Terry Francona, Jody Davis and Shawon Dunston.

Dodgers 4, Pirates 3

Rookie Jeff Hamilton snapped a 3-3 tie with a run-scoring single in the sixth inning.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Tigers 5, Rangers 2

Frank Tanana and Willie Hernandez combined on a seven-hitter as Detroit snapped the Rangers' four-game winning streak and trimmed their lead over California in the AL West to one-half game. The only runs off Tanana came on homers by Scott Fletcher in the third inning and Gary Ward in the eighth.

Angels 8, Blue Jays 2

Kirk McCaskill pitched a six-hitter, Gary Pettis and Wally Joyner had RBI doubles in the fifth inning and Bobby Grich hit a three-run pinch-hit homer in the ninth. McCaskill had nine strikeouts in notching his sixth complete game and seventh victory in his last eight decisions.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 3

Tom Seaver, making his second appearance for Boston, pitched seven solid innings and won the 308th game of his career, allowing four hits and an unearned run.

Ashford, Joyner, Daland lead U.S.

By BERT ROSENTHAL

Goodwill Games

MOSCOW (AP) — Female track and field stars Evelyn Ashford and Jackie Joyner, swimmer Leslie Daland and basketball All-American Cheryl Miller all excelled Sunday to spur the United States' success in the Goodwill Games.

For the second consecutive day, the United States and Soviet Union matched gold medals as each nation colleced six, including three apiece in track and field and swimming. After three days of competition in these inaugural games, which continue until July 20, the Soviets lead the United States 47 to 38 in total medals and 14 to 12 in golds.

However, the Americans are making a tremendous impact in this city, where they were denied a chance to compete in the 1980 Olympics because of a boycott ordered by President Carter after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Ashford, who sat out the 1985 season to have a child, clearly showed her comeback was complete, edging Heike Drechsler of East Germany in the 100-meter dash, with both women clocked in a sparkling 10.91 seconds.

Joyner, who set the American record in the heptathlon this year, established a world record for the first four events of the punishing seven-event, two-day competition with 4,151 points.

Daland, the daughter of U.S. swimming coach Peter Daland, claimed her second gold medal of the competition, capturing the women's 1,500-meter freestyle in 16 minutes, 15.88 seconds, a personal best.

Miller, the star of the 1984 U.S. Olympic basketball team that won the gold medal in Los Angeles, scored 26 points, leading the undefeated Americans to their second victory, 91-70 over Brazil.

The Soviets produced some remarkable performances as well.

In track and field, Robert Emmiyan became only the sixth long jumper in history — and the fifth without the aid of wind — to surpass the 28-foot mark, soaring three inches further for a European record.

In men's swimming, world-record holder Vladimir Salnikov, Igor Polyansky and Vadim Yaroshchuk each won their second gold medals of the games.

Salnikov, who smashed his world record in the 800 Friday, won impressively in the 1,500 freestyle in 15:10.87, while Polyanksy, winner of the 200 backstroke Saturday, added the 100 backstroke to his gold medal collection, winning in 56.02, a personal best. Yaroshchuk, the gold medalist in the 400 individual medley Friday, took the 200 individual medley Sunday in 2:02.83.

And the Soviet women's basketball team also remained unbeaten, downing Yugoslavia 63-52 for its second victory. The Soviets and Americans meet Thursday night in the final game of the round-robin basketball tournament.

Ashford, the world-record holder in the women's 100 at 10.76 and the 1984 Olympic champion, was slow out of the blocks and appeared out of contention against the frontrunning Drechsler with about 30 meters remaining. But then Ashford put on a tremendous burst of speed down the middle of the track and outleaned the less-experienced Drechsler at the tape.

The time was the fastest legal clocking of the year, with Dreschsler's wind-aided 10.80 at Oslo on Saturday night the fastest overall.

"I haven't run my best sprint yet," the confident Ashford said after a finish so close that the result had to be decided by a phototimer.

"When I got to the finish line, it looked like I had won," Ashford said. "But when I saw my name on the scoreboard, I knew I had won."

Ashford was not scheduled to run in the 100 because she had not qualified in last month's U.S. Championships, but became a late entrant when national champion Pam Marshall withdrew with a groin injury.

Joyner unleashed a tremendous assault on the world record in the heptathlon, her first-day total shattering the world record of 4,085, set by Sabine Paetz of East Germany in 1984, en route to setting the world heptathlon mark of 6,946.

Joyner began by setting an American heptathlon record of 12.85 in the 100-meter high hurdles. The previous mark of 13.24 by Jane Frederick had stood since 1977.

Then, Joyner tied for first in the high jump at 6 feet, 2 inches, a personal best, had the fifth-best shot put at 48-5, and ran the fastest 200 meters, 23.00.

The heptathlon will be completed Monday, with the long jump, javelin and 800 meters.

Immigrants make it on playing field

They're honoring a great lady today. The mother of us all, in a way, whether our families came here before she did, whether they came in steerage or on the Mayflower. She stands for not only what America meant to the world but what she still means.

We all come from huddled masses yearning to breathe free in the final analysis. Or we wouldn't be here.

She is 100 years old today yet as young as tomorrow. Liberty doesn't age, tyranny does. She is as beautiful today as she was when the first waif spotted her through a crack in the hull of a packet boat a century ago.

The world of sport has as much reason to salute her as the worlds of commerce, art, entertainment or politics. The sons and daughters of immigrants have flourished on the playing fields of America as surely as they have in the counting houses, courtrooms, ateliers, surgeries, theaters or councils of government.

Although his origins are the least bit obscure, it is a fact Babe Ruth spoke fluent German well into his adulthood. Lou Gehrig's parents never spoke anything else but. Neither did Lou until he was 5 and enrolled in Public School 132 in New York.

JOE DiMAGGIO'S parents probably sailed under Liberty's torch on their way from Sicily to Martinez, Calif. Joe's sister, Nellie, the last one of the clan to be born in the old country, was with them.

If it was hard for immigrant parents to come to grips with the fact that their sons could make money hitting, catching, throwing or running with a ball, it was horrifying to some that their sons could do it fistfighting. The well-worn legend, the staple of the silver screen, of the prizefighter whose parents wanted him to become a violinist probably sprang up over the career of the classy Benny Leonard, a cerebral fighter from the ghetto who used to talk – and jab – his opponents into defeat, while his parents prayed in their shawls. Gene Tunney's parents wanted him to become a priest.

Jack Dempsey, despite his Irish surname, was probably one of the few American athletes whose forebears were not only here before the Statue of Liberty but before the Mayflower. Dempsey, whose family called him "Harry," was part Red Indian. So, as a matter of fact, was Joe Louis.

IT WAS possible to trace the waves of immigration by a study alone of the rolls of boxing champions. There were the Irish and the Germans to the turn of the century, then the rush of Jewish fighters till the '20s, followed by the Italians and then the Latin Americans.

Athletic prowess ministered to group esteem in ways no other successes could. Whose Irish heart did not beat faster over the exploits of the mighty John L. Sullivan – or take comfort in the fact that another broth of a lad, Gentleman Jim Corbett, proved to be the one man in the house he couldn't lick?

Wasn't Honus Wagner a hero to every transplanted Rhinelander in North America? Didn't Benny Leonard's and Hank Greenberg's pictures hang in every living room in the Bronx? Weren't Little Italy's buttons popping over the headlines on the doings of the great DiMaggio and Poosh 'em Up Tony Lazzeri and Frank Crosetti and Yogi Berra? Didn't the Italian flag fly in the left-field bleachers at Yankee Stadium in their heyday?

SPORTS FORCED a respect for the new Americans hardly any other achievement could. How could any resident snob convince his offspring these aliens were inferior beings when they were flattening his representatives in the prize ring, thrashing them in football, outhitting them in baseball, outrunning, outjumping or outsmarting them in other areas?

The Constitution proclaimed equality. The fist, arms, legs and guile of the sons of immigrants proved it. Even the epithets faded away. Who was going to call Rocky Marciano, Dago? Who was going to call Joe Louis anything but Mister?

Rockne at Notre Dame gave the Republic a lesson it would not forget. An immigrant himself, he took teams made up of the sons of immigrants and ran roughshod over the societal stereotypes of West Point and Annapolis. And, even though Red Grange was as American as a flapjack, his wily old coach, Bob Zuppke, had an accent right out of Baron Munchausen. Babe Ruth made the Yankees but it was the German-born brewery owner, Col. Jacob Ruppert, who brought him to the Yankees.

WHEN THE BLACKs came along to seize athletic hegemony, the ethnics of America nodded wisely. They had been there.

The people who had passed Miss Liberty to get here not only wrote our songs, cracked our jokes, danced our dances – and built our railroads, mined our coal, grew our grain, and fought our wars – but they won our Rose Bowls, captured our World Series, led our Opens, piled up our gold medals and became the greatest athletes in the world. In one stretch, the heavyweight championship of the world was held by immigrants or sons of immigrants who were: Irish, Lithuanian, Italian, Jewish, and Irish (Tunney, Sharkey, Carnera, Baer, Braddock).

The inscription on the base of the lady's garment should not only read "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free ... the wretched refuse of your teeming shore." It could also read "Give me your swift, your strong, your sure, the pride and glory of your lives and times."

For them the lamp was lifted – and lit – beside the golden door, all right. For them, the melting pot overflowed.

Despite loss, Ivan Lendl still considers himself as No. 1 in world

By ROBERT MILLWARD

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Ivan Lendl said Sunday he still deserves the No. 1 ranking among the world's tennis players despite a straight-set thrashing by Boris Becker in the men's final at Wimbledon.

Lendl, seeking his first major grass-court championship, could not cope with the powerful serves of Becker and lost 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

But the Czechoslovakian said that to lose his top rating he would have to be beaten on clay and cement courts, too.

"To be the best player you have to play consistently for 12 months," he said. "You have to win on every surface, not just one.

"He won today, no question about it, but I'm not prepared to give up my title (of No. 1). I think my record is a little better than his, though his is very impressive.

"Now it depends on who will win the U.S. Open. That will tip the scales."

Lendl won the French Open last month on the clay courts of Paris and took the U.S. Open crown on the cement courts of New York last September.

He said that the only thing he could do to be better prepared for Wimbledon is to miss the French Open, which is played two weeks before Wimbledon begins.

"If your priority is to concentrate solely on winning Wimbledon, you would have to be prepared to skip the French. But if you want to be the world's No. 1 you have got to be prepared to play all of them," he said.

The Czechoslovakian waited a long time for his first Wimbledon final.

His six previous attempts since 1979 had taken him no further than the semifinal, and he admitted before and during the 100th edition of this tournament that he wanted the title badly.

Sunday's match gave him the chance to become the first player in 16 years to hold the U.S., French and Wimbledon titles simultaneously.

In the absence of rival John McEnroe, and the earlier departures of second and third seeds Mats Wilander and Jimmy Connors, Lendl just had No. 4 seed Becker in his way.

But, on the day, the powerfully built West German proved to be an unsurmountable obstacle.

Becker served 15 aces and pounded Lendl with sledgehammer volleys and powerful groundstrokes. But Lendl earned the respect of even Becker's fans with some brilliant winners, some of them at full stretch on the run.

The No. 1 seed had his chances in the match, but had them snatched away by Becker's surges of stunning power.

Lendl engineered the first break of serve in the final, and also had three opportunities to take the third set.

"The problem was that Boris took a crack at my serve. I would love to do the same on his serve," he said.

"I have to say I'm very disappointed and very tired at the moment, so I'm going to go back and rest and get myself back in decent shape healthwise.

"I'm going to see what I can improve again and how to do it," Lendl added.

"Hopefully, by this time next year, I can play even better. I don't know."

A record 400,032 fans watched this year's Centenary Wimbledon championships. A spell of hot dry weather helped send the total attendance figure for the the 13-day tournament past the 400,000 mark for the first time.

BECKER

Clenching his fist determinedly, he stung three winners past Becker and had triple set point. Then, he lost them all as Becker once again thrived on a challenge. A backhand stab volley made it 15-40. A forehand angled volley made it 30-40. Then Becker picked off a passing shot on his backhand and sent the game to deuce. His 15th ace and another service winner gave him the game. Lendl shook his head dejectedly.

Becker pounced on the opportunity, breaking Lendl for the fifth and last time, hitting three winners.

Serving for the match, Becker fell behind 0-30. Lendl hit a backhand volley wide and it was 15-30. Then, he sent Becker to his knees on the next point and it still wasn't enough.

It came when Lendl stroked a running forehand down the line and Becker dove after it in desperation. The ball hit the top of the net and dropped over. Becker, who was trying to scramble to his feet, hit a backhand into the open court to win the point. Lendl had seen enough. He hit two service returns into the net and watched as Becker raised his arms above his head in triumph, waving to his parents, his coach, Gunther Bosch, and his manager, Ion Tiriac.

The victory was worth $196,000 but the true value is in the endorsements and other side benefits that winning Wimbledon brings. Lendl still claimed to be No., but groped for the words to describe Becker.

The Americans' other victories in the first full day of track and field competition came from Greg Foster in the men's 110 hurdles and Tom Petranoff in the javelin.

Foster overcame a horrible start to win in 13.25, the best time in the world this year, one-hundredth of a second faster than he had run earlier in the season.

"My blocks slipped about 12 inches, and I took at least 10 steps to the first hurdle, when I normally take eight," Foster, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist and 1983 world champion said.

Foster said the slip made him think about Los Angeles, when he finished second to fellow American Roger Kingdom in a big upset.

The hurdles were run in two heats, with Andrei Prokofyev of the Soviet Union taking the other section in 13.28, equalling the European record held by Guy Drut of France.

Petranoff, the American record holder at 327-2 but still acclimating himself to the new style javelin, won with a toss of 273-10, the best by an American this year.

Two lifeguards at the wave pool pull out a child who was caught in the gravity of the wave. On a busy day a lifeguard can make 10 to 12 saves a day.

Lifeguard Steve Merritt watches the wave pool. He is one of the 45 lifeguards working at Water Wonderland.

Some people feel its the ideal summer job. Not only does a person get to bask in the West Texas sun all day and meet new people, but one gets paid for it.

Lifeguarding, some say, is easy — almost anyone can do it!

Lifeguarding, some say, is easy — almost anyone can do it!

But, the lifeguards at Water Wonderland on Highway 80 would dispute the above statements.

"Lifeguards train very hard and put in a full day's work," said Al Yowell, assistant manager of operations at Water Wonderland.

A lifeguard usually works approximately seven or eight hours a day, 30 hours a week.

Billy Haynie, Water Wonderland operations manager, said the pay scale for lifeguards ranges from $3.90 to $4.70 per hour.

No it's not the real thing. A lifeguard practices a lifesaving technique on another lifeguard. At Water Wonderland would-be lifeguards must demonstrate four different saves and pass other requirements.

Twenty-year-old Yowell has been a life guard for nearly six years.

"I started teaching swimming lessons at 15 and I just worked into lifeguarding."

This is his fourth season at Water Wonderland.

As the Assistant Manager of Operations Yowell helps to oversee the 45 lifeguards at the park.

He previously lifeguarded for two years at another water park.

To become a lifeguard, a person must take an advanced lifesaving class and get recertified every three years.

Water Wonderland, however, has added requirements a would-be lifeguard must past, according to Yowell.

"We must be certified in CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) and first aid. We must also demonstrate four saves (lifesaving techniques) and then swim 50 yards," he said.

Not only must Water Wonderland lifeguards go through extra training, but they must meet everyday before work.

"We have talk sessions and review new lifeguarding techniques."

Kevin Miller, a lifeguard at Water Wonderland, applies zinc oxide to his nose before starting a day's work. Most of the lifeguards work a 30-hour-week.

Yowell said he has no idea how many people he has personally saved, but it has been "a lot."

Last year, according to Haynie, there were 325 saves.

"On a busy day," Haynie added, "there is an average of 10 to 12 saves."

The park opens for weekends in May and is open every day once school is out. It closes on Labor Day.

Odessa man jailed on murder charge

ODESSA - A 28-year-old man remained in the Ector County jail today in lieu of $25,000 bond on a charge of murder in the fatal shooting of a 33-year-old man early Saturday morning.

Ramiro Ramirez, 1217 S. Lee, was arrested about 6:30 p.m. Saturday at his home in connection with the earlier shooting of Elis Arenivas Zuniga, Route 2, Box 3307. A second suspect continues to be sought in the fatal shooting, police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon said.

Zuniga was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital just before 5:30 a.m. Saturday by Ector County Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford.

According to McAhon, Zuniga was shot once in the chest about 3:20 a.m. in the 900-block of South Crane Avenue after arguing with two men.

The two men reportedly left the scene in a brown and yellow pickup truck.

Ramirez was arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly about 6:30 p.m. Saturday. He was transferred to the county jail about 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Drag boat racer dies in lake race

WACO, Texas (AP) — An Oklahoma drag boat racer was killed after he lost control of his boat and was thrown out during the Texas Shootout race on Lake Brazos, authorities say.

Bill Hartman, 38, of Tulsa, died Sunday night about an hour after his boat flipped over and hurled him into the water just after crossing the finish line, Providence Hospital officials said.

He had reached a top speed of 182.92 mph during the blown alcohol hydro class race, throughout which his boat had been shaking and appeared unsteady, contest officials said.

Hartman was still alive and tried to sit up after paramedics pulled him from the water, but he died at the hospital from internal injuries suffered in the crash, officials said.

"I was behind him (Hartman) the whole time," Waco racer Randy Randolph said. "I could just see the spray, but the water was all right. There's nothing wrong with it."

A 12-year veteran of boat racing, Hartman competed in up to 25 races per year. He had competed independently before joining the Ofixco team in 1982.

Hospital spokesman said his body would be sent to his home state of North Carolina for burial.

The last fatal accident during the 11-year-old event was in 1978, Waco Jaycees spokesman Paul Holt said.

Police seek suspects in shooting

ODESSA — Police today continued to seek two suspects in connection with the fatal shooting early today of a 21-year-old man.

Gustavo Mendevil, 413 N. Whittaker, was pronounced dead at 2:25 a.m. today at Medical Center Hospital by Ector County Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford, who ordered an autopsy, according to police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon.

Patrolman Kevin Begley was patrolling the southside area when he was stopped and advised a gunshot victim was lying in the alley of the 600-block of West Clements Street.

Mendevil was transported to Medical Center Hospital, where he died on arrival, McAhon said.

According to McAhon, Mendevil and an unidentified suspect got into a fight near the intersection of West Clements and Broughton. A second unidentified suspect pulled a gun and handed it to the man fighting with Mendevil. McAhon said Mendevil was shot twice in the back and twice in the front of his body as he tried to flee the scene.

DPS says lack of seat belts raised toll

Associated Press

The highway death toll for the long Independence Day weekend stood at 39, including the deaths of three Rowlett residents in the weekend's worst single accident, the Texas Department of Public Safety says.

DPS officials had predicted 45 people would lose their lives on Texas highways before midnight Sunday. The traffic fatality count began at 6 p.m. Thursday.

A final count will be released today, according to DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

Many of those who died were not wearing seatbelts.

"I suspect we'll make it to 45," Cox said. "It's just incredible to me that people don't get the message about seat belts. In accidents where it would have made a difference, the belts usually weren't worn."

Three members of a Rowlett family died at Methodist Medical Center Sunday from injuries received Saturday when two cars crashed head-on in Collin County on State Highway 78.

They were Barry Lynn Foster, 33, of Rowlett, his wife, Georgette Foster, whose age was not available, and their son, Jamison, 13, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

In a separate accident, Donald R. Guidry, 31, of Fort Hood was killed when his car, which was in the wrong lane of Interstate 35 near Bellmead in McClennan County, collided head-on with a pickup truck at 3:04 a.m. Sunday, DPS troopers said. Three others were hurt.

Other fatalities reported by state troopers included the following:

Dennis Young, 29, Galveston, died after he rode his bicycle into the path of a Galveston police officer in pursuit of a stolen vehicle at 3:20 a.m.

Joel Ramirez, 17, of Monte Alto was killed when his motorcycle crashed through a barricade on Farm to Market 1015 in Hidalgo County sometime between midnight and 7 a.m. Ramirez, who wore no helmet, then struck a parked trailer.

Also killed Sunday was Virgil Fay Bunger, 67, of Whitedeer. He died at 1:20 a.m. Sunday when a Santa Fe Railroad freight train slammed into his car seven miles east of Panhandle in Carson County.

Daniel Leroy Hotchkiss, 30, of Baytown died when his pickup truck careened off Farm to Market Road 1985, hit a pine tree and burst into flames at 1:50 a.m. in Chambers County.

Alejandro Ortiz Lopez, 20, of Farmers Branch was killed at 2 a.m. when the car in which he was a passenger hit an abandoned trailer that jutted into a traffic lane of Interstate 30 in Grand Prairie. He wore no seat belt.

Terry Quintana Sanchez, 25, of Wharton also wore no seat belt when his car left the roadway and hit a culvert at 2:30 a.m. on FM 2977, two miles north of Pleak in Fort Bend County. He died instantly.

Midland police said Sergio Santos Martinez was pronounced dead at 3:06 a.m. Sunday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

He was thrown from the 1979 Chevrolet Blazer he was driving about 2:25 a.m, and was trapped underneath it when it struck him as it rolled over, police said.

Police said he was not wearing a safety belt.

Yowell said that most of the lifeguards at Water Wonderland have their Water Safety Instruction Certificate.

"This is an elite group of people." You must be 18 years old to get it and it enables you to teach advanced lifeguarding."

In the off season, Yowell is a student at Texas Tech majoring in public relations. He said he would rather work at Water Wonderland in the summer than a desk job.

"I come back every summer basically because all my friends are here and I don't want to sit behind a desk," he said.

'Fergie' marries into changed royal family

LONDON (UPI) — When Sarah Ferguson marries Prince Andrew later this month she will enter a royal family which is not quite the same as the one Princess Diana joined five years ago.

"Fergie" herself is part of the change. She is, as the British press breathlessly puts it, "a girl with a past."

Both the institution of monarchy and the royal family's own attitudes are altering all the time. Change is often glacially slow, unspoken and half hidden.

But Queen Elizabeth's 34-year reign has seen a drastic loosening of the straight laces inherited from Queen Victoria. The monarchy now reflects society's changed moral standards and takes more account of what the public will accept.

The Sarah-Andrew marriage July 23 will lack nothing of royal wedding pomp, panoply and tradition. This 26-year-old redhead's acceptance by the family obviously is total.

But this marriage, says one expert, is "a great departure."

"What is different and rather staggering," said Harold Brooks-Baker of Burke's Peerage, the aristocrats' bible, "is that she has had a few serious romances that everyone knows about."

Newspapers refer openly to Sarah's two "live-in lovers." There are solemn discussions concluding that her "experience" is a good thing.

Yet when Diana married Prince Charles in 1981, her "purity" and virginity was made a vital issue of public and media debate.

Sarah, of course, will not be queen, as Diana will. Andrew is now only fourth in line to the throne. But the winking at her "past" is proof of another shift in Britain's thousand-year-old monarchy — a demonstration that royal echelons are no longer "obsessed," in Brooks-Baker's term, with the notion of feminine purity.

Sarah Ferguson will become the bride of Prince Andrew July 23.

In many other ways the royal family has become more relaxed, more open, more human — even while preserving the royal mystique.

Until recently, cartoons depicting its members were taboo. Now they abound. Until recently it would have been impossible for the queen to take part in an informal TV show, chatting about her horses, as she did not long ago.

"Hers, more than any previous, is a performing monarchy, consecrated by camera and microphone and relying heavily on the media for its projection," wrote royal biographer Robert Lacey.

Thus Charles and Diana coupled their engagement announcement with an informal — and unprecedented — joint television interview. Sarah and Andrew did the same, consolidating a new royal tradition.

The queen now grabs every chance to meet her subjects at handshake range.

It will never be just "the people next door." There will always be an apartness, a reserve, a particular style.

"I entirely agree that we are old-fashioned," Philip once said.

Yet in a triumph of quiet public relations, the monarchy has opened itself to public gaze.

The process probably began with the 1969 "Royal Family" TV documentary which, for the first time, captured informal chat among royal family members and showed glimpses of its private moments.

"The big thing about it," said producer Richard Cawston, "was not merely that we were allowed to film things that had never been filmed before ... but the fact that we had a microphone there.

"I think that (until then), no member of the royal family had ever been heard on a public medium uttering anything other than a prepared speech."

There are even subtle shifts in the monarchy's attitude toward divorce — though no expert today will even guess what might have happened had Sarah Ferguson included a divorce in her past.

The queen is not only "Defender of the Faith" but Supreme Governor of the Church of England, which has stringent strictures on divorce. In the past this has brought heartbreak, and more.

■ King Edward VIII had to surrender his throne in 1936 for "the woman I love" because Wallace Simpson was divorced.

■ Princess Margaret, the queen's sister, had to give up the love of her life, Group Capt. Peter Townsend, because he had divorced his wife.

■ Between Margaret's 1955 ordeal and now, three of Elizabeth's first cousins who divorced or married divorcees all had to be married or remarried abroad.

■ So rigid was the royal stance that no divorced person was allowed into the royal enclosure at the Ascot races, which the royal family always attends.

Yet in 1978, with the queen's permission, Margaret herself divorced Lord Snowdon, the former Antony Armstrong-Jones — the first divorce in the immediate royal family for 438 years, since Henry VIII shed Anne of Cleves in 1540.

Quietly and without fuss, divorced persons have been admitted to Ascot's enclosure. Current reports say the queen has invited Sarah's divorced mother, the former Susan Mary Wright, and her Argentine second husband, Hector Barrantes, to the enclosure this year.

Obviously there has been a change toward divorce. Like the altered viewpoint which winks at Sarah Ferguson's past, it is an unspoken and half-hidden thing. As are all changes in Britain's monarchy.

Wedding deals set

LONDON (UPI) — Travelers in town for the wedding of Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson can munch on "royal wedding dinners," sip specially concocted drinks or wander around Sarah's favorite coffee shop — for a price, of course.

Hotels and tour operators, trying to make the most of the July 23 wedding in what terrorism hysteria has made a slow tourist season in Britain, are offering special events for commoners who wish to celebrate the nuptials in a royal way.

One tour operator, Ambassadors of Britain, is offering walking-lecture tours that include "where Sarah Ferguson works, the coffee shop where she used to buy sandwiches and coffee ... where her engagement ring was engineered, where they are going to be married."

"We'll be going past the shops where Miss Ferguson buys things ... Claridges, where she and her father used to go to have lunch," said tour spokeswoman Verite Baker.

DEAR ABBY

Crown symbolizes continents, seas

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Several weeks ago I wrote to you asking what the seven spikes in the crown of the Statue of Liberty stood for. You wrote back and suggested I write to the mayor of New York for an authoritative answer. You also asked me to let you know what the mayor said if I heard from him.

Well, I wrote to Mayor Koch, and here is his answer:

Mr. Louis Binns
Forsyth, Mo.

Dear Mr. Binns: Thank you for your letter and question.

According to the Statue of Liberty/Ellis Island Foundation, there is a twofold symbolism in the seven spikes in the Statue of Liberty's crown. They stand for the seven seas and for the seven continents. America brings together people from every continent, and they have to cross every ocean to get here — or they did before the airplane.

All the best. Sincerely,

Edward I. Koch, Mayor, New York City

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I just had a heated argument over her new swimsuit. The top is OK, but the bottom consists of a string that goes around her waist — attached to a triangular piece of fabric that is no more than 4 inches wide in the front, and not much more in the back.

The trouble started when we went to the beach and I saw "Lisa" in her new swimsuit for the first time. I told her I thought it was too skimpy and no decent girl would go out in public like that.

She said I was living in the dark ages, and proceeded to point out other girls in similar swimsuits. I told her I didn't care if there were girls naked on the beach, as far as I was concerned, that didn't make it right.

I'm 24 and she's 22 and we're practically engaged, so I told her that wearing a swimsuit like that looks like she's advertising her body and inviting the attentions of other men. (Lisa does have a beautiful figure, and the men did look at her.) She told me she loves me and I'm a jerk to be jealous. Am I? Was I out of line to object to her skimpy swimsuit? — JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: You are not a jerk to be jealous; it's a natural reaction. You had every right to express your feelings, but having done so, it's Lisa's right to wear what she wants to wear. You seem insecure, possessive and threatened. Since you're not yet officially engaged, you and Lisa would be wise to resolve your differences now, and let it all hang out.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Prince Andrew, his bride-to-be distantly related

From Staff Reports

Here are some miscellaneous tidbits on the upcoming British royal wedding from the Lifetime cable television network, which will be covering the nuptials:

■ Sarah Ferguson's fiance, Prince Andrew Albert Christian Edward Mountbatten-Windsor, is actually her sixth cousin. Sarah has several ancestors in common with her fiance, including William Cavendish, the fourth Duke of Devonshire. Sarah is also the fourth cousin of her future sister-in-law, Princess Diana.

■ Prince Andrew and his bride-to-be played together years ago when the Ferguson children, including Sarah, had the run of Windsor Castle's park, lawn and terraces. However, according to Sarah's former nanny, Ritva Risa, "As children, they seemed indifferent to each other. If anything, Sarah seemed more fond of Charles."

■ Serving as bridesmaids and pages at the ceremony will be eight children. The only adult in the couple's immediate entourage will be Prince Edward, who will serve as his brother's "supporter," as the best man is known in royal weddings.

Scientists testing theory of methane reserves

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — After eight years of battling by Thomas Gold of Cornell University for serious consideration of his theory that almost unlimited reserves of methane lie deep within the earth, Swedish engineers have begun drilling a 15,000-foot hole in search of such gas.

If, as Gold hopes, significant quantities of methane are found in a geologic formation that, according to conventional thought, should not yield such fuel, the prospects for energy availability far into the future would be greatly improved. The digging began Tuesday.

The hole, with a budget approaching $20 million, is being drilled into a large circular remnant of a crater 30 miles in diameter 150 miles northwest of Stockholm. The formation is thought to have been fractured by the impact of a large meteorite 360 million years ago.

The conventional view is that oil and natural gas are "fossil fuels" derived from the remains of living organisms. This would expiain why oil and gas fields occur in sedimentary formations, like those that accumulated on the floors of seas and lakes.

But according to Gold's hypothesis, a large part of the world's gas and oil were incorporated into the planet while it was forming, having been part of the cloud of material from which the planet was assembled. He believes much fuel has percolated upward from the earth's deep interior. It has accumulated there, trapped by an overlying, impermeable layer of "cap rock."

In Sweden, the impact of the meteorite would have opened channels deep enough for the methane to migrate upward. If the fragmented top layer was cemented together by weathering, it could serve as a cap, allowing the methane to accumulate as a reservoir in the deeper crushed rock. The latter is thought to reach depths of two or three miles.

Seven test holes have been drilled 300 to 2,300 feet into the crater. These tests, and seismic and gravity observations, electrical conductivity measurements and lake water tests, have encouraged hope that a methane reservoir may be found. Water from lakes inside the crater contained 700 times more methane than from lakes nearby.

The discovery of methane at the site is not likely to win general acceptance of the Gold theory.

Nevertheless Gold has won support from a variety of quarters. In 1979 five influential scientists wrote on Gold's behalf to Frank Press, the science advisor to President Carter, urging attention to the theory.

Michel T. Halbouty of Houston, the former president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists who, like Gold, is known as a maverick, said last week that he had urged the Swedish government and Parliament to support the drilling project. "I feel fairly strongly," he said in a telephone interview, "that a controversial theory has to be tested if any progress is to be made in science."

The project in Sweden is being conducted by Vattenfall, the Swedish State Power Board.

Europe signs trade accord with U.S.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Economic Community today formally approved a tentative accord aimed at averting a farm trade war with the United States.

The EEC's governing Council of Ministers, comprising high-level officials from each of the 12 member governments, endorsed the agreement reached last Wednesday by the EEC executive commission and the Reagan administration.

The accord gives the United States and the EEC until the end of the year to negotiate a final settlement of a dispute stemming from a tightening of Spanish restrictions on imports of farm products, which occurred as a result of the nation's entry into the EEC last January.

By calling a temporary truce, the two sides averted a likely escalation of the dispute.

The Reagan administration had planned to retaliate against the EEC by imposing new restrictions on a wide range of European farm imports, and the EEC had said it would strike back with new countermeasures.

Ford raises prices for 1986 models

DETROIT (AP) — For the second time in 10 months, Ford Motor Co. has increased prices on its 1986 cars, raising price tags an average 2.9 percent.

Ford also announced new buyer incentives that included auto loans at interest rates ranging from 6.9 percent to 9.9 percent or rebates up to $600.

The cut-rate interest and bonuses took effect Sunday and will apply to most cars and trucks purchased from dealer stocks by Oct. 1, the company said Friday.

Ford, the No. 2 U.S. automaker, said the incentives were intended to help it keep up with those of industry leader General Motors Corp.

GM announced last week that it would offer discounted interest rates of 5.9 percent to 8.9 percent on most cars and many light trucks. It increased prices in April.

Chrysler Corp., the No. 3 U.S. automaker, has held its prices steady since last fall.

Ford already had increased prices by an average of 2.9 percent in September 1985, at the start of the 1986 model year.

Federal Reserve expected to ease policy to boost sluggish economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve is likely to take another swipe at already low interest rates in order to boost a sluggish economy, many economists believe.

Two moves this year by the Fed to cut its discount rate — the interest rate it charges to lend money to financial institutions — caused a drop in interest rates. The fall in rates was helped along by plunging oil prices that have lowered fears of inflation.

Many analysts are betting the Fed will decide to ease its credit grip again, pushing a variety of rates, including mortgage rates, lower.

Fed policy-makers are to meet behind closed doors Tuesday and Wednesday for their mid-year assessment of how the economy is doing. Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker will report later in the month to Congress on the outcome of those deliberations.

A cut in the discount rate, which now stands at 6.5 percent, is the most dramatic action the central bank can take to signal its intention to push interest rates lower.

The Fed cut the discount rate on March 7 and April 18, and rates for fixed-rate mortages dropped to near 9.5 percent in many parts of the country by mid-April, the first time they have been below 10 percent since late 1978.

The prime rate, the banking industry's benchmark business lending rate, has fallen to 8.5 percent, its lowest level in eight years, although a variety of consumer rates such as auto loans and interest on credit cards have not posted such dramatic declines.

Despite this plunge in interest rates, the economy has remained in the doldrums, with economic growth far below the 4 percent predicted by the Reagan administration. Manufacturing and the oil and gas industry have been in a virtual recession, with a loss of 200,000 jobs just since the first of the year.

Plunging mortgage rates have stimulated a boom in housing construction and sales, as well as the stock and bond markets.

But they have had little impact elsewhere. For this reason, economists are looking for the Fed to loosen credit conditions further, possibly in conjunction with similar moves by the central banks of Japan and West Germany.

"Weak growth in the United States and the rest of the world economies cries out for at least one more notch of ease by the Federal Reserve," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers.

While the Fed is supposed to be isolated from political pressures, some economists suggested that President Reagan's appointees on the board will be pushing for lower rates in hopes of stimulating economic growth before the fall elections.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

American Century, Stool call off merger

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — American Century Corp. and Gerald H. Stool jointly announced Tuesday that they had mutually agreed to terminate their previously announced merger agreement.

In that agreement, Stool would have acquired the publicly held shares of American Century for $8.85 per share.

Stool cited the continued deterioration in the Texas economy and the effects on American Century's savings and loan subsidiary as no longer justifying a price close to the range previously agreed upon.

Stool said that he would consider a number of options with respect to his investment in the company, including making a revised offer at a substantially reduced price; a sale of all or a part of his position; sale of the company as a whole; or a recapitalization of the company.

Alamo City officials boost coal-fired plant

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Saying the South Texas Project nuclear power plant will not generate enough energy to meet San Antonio's growth, City Public Service officials have recommended construction of a $500 million coal-fired electricity plant at Calaveras Lake by 1992.

The utility's manager of generation and environmental planning, Jamie Axtel, said some type of plant capable of generating 500 megawatts of electricity will be needed for the 1990s if there is the expected annual influx of 20,000 new utility customers.

The new plant would supplement the 700 megawatts San Antonio is supposed to start receiving in 1989 as its share of the South Texas Project. But Axtell said both new plants could fulfill the city's energy needs only until the year 2000, when another generating plant would be needed.

Tips for women entrepreneurs

NEW YORK (AP) — Women opting for entrepreneurship find that having their own business gives them independence and flexibility, but also brings responsibility and long working hours, reports Family Circle magazine.

Sharing some of their experiences, they offer tips on how women with big ideas but only a little money can start up:

— Find a business you can ease into, perhaps at home. Start very small.

— Read everything you can about similar businesses and talk to others who are doing what you hope to do.

— Find a niche where your business fits. Avoid intensely competitive areas.

— Choose a business in which you can finance yourself as you go.

— Have business cards printed, and give them out freely. Project self-confidence, even if you don't feel it.

— Consult a good accountant from the very beginning.

— Watch the cash flow. If you have limited cash on hand, wait until you are paid for one order before committing yourself to the next.

— Avoid taking in a partner if at all possible — because most partnerships fail. Hire an employee if you must.

— If you must take in a partner, make sure it is someone with whom you are compatible, who has different skills from yours, who has similar work habits and who shares your goals for the business. Have an attorney draw up a partnership agreement.

Standing in front of the towering columns at the south steps of the Capitol in Washington, Colorado Rep. Pat Schroeder prepares for "another day at the office" where she has worked for the past 14 years.

Rep. Schroeder huddles with California Rep. Ron Dellums during a meeting of North Atlantic Treaty Organization representatives and the House Armed Services Committee.

Rep. Schroeder and her husband Jim enjoy a rare night out on the town together, attending the opening of a Shakespeare play in Washington, D.C.

This woman's place is the House

Pat Schroeder went to Washington in a ponytail. She toted with her a diapered baby, a lawyer husband, and the conviction she was probably crazy.

No Democrat in her right mind would have run against the incumbent Republican in her state during the popular reign of Richard Nixon in 1972, but she had, and she had won.

During that quixotic campaign, Rep. Schroeder ridiculed Congress for its slow pace and promoted the abolishment of the seniority system. "We have glaciers in Colorado that move faster and with more purpose than the federal government," she told audiences.

Rep. Schroeder was the outsider wanting in. In her 13 years in Washington, she has remained the heretic, taking on all comers, including members of her own party. She has championed the cause of the poor, the family, the needy, and the disenfranchised. "I've never been the rabid, knee-jerk, I'm-going-to-run-off-and-do-whatever-the-party-tells-me sort," Rep. Schroeder proclaims proudly.

But she has not been content to be merely a gadfly. She has earned her clout. "What I've earned, I've earned on issues," she says. When she came to Washington, she said she would not be a celebrity. She would be a worker. She has managed to be both. She has dethroned two powerful committee chairmen, helping to elect a black preacher from Philadelphia chairman of the Budget Committee and a liberal from Wisconsin chairman of the Armed Services Committee. Along the way, she has become known as the most influential woman in American politics.

Although satisfied to stay in the House for now, Rep. Schroeder is ruling out nothing in the future, including a campaign for president.

Born in Portland, Oregon, in 1940, Patricia was the first child of Lee and Bernice Scott. He sold insurance; she taught school.

The family's history is one of what must have seemed like a million moves to the kids. The Scotts moved from Oregon to Iowa to Missouri to Texas to Ohio and back to Iowa.

For college, Pat chose the University of Minnesota, a school close to home.

In 1961, after three quick years, she was graduated with an armload of honors and an eye on Harvard. A law degree could give you a number of professional options: business, teaching, practicing law. The last one turned out to be unattractive to Pat Scott, however. "I thought it was like signing up to go to jail," she says.

One of only a dozen or so coeds at Harvard, Pat easily grabbed the attention of a classmate, Jim Schroeder, a graduate of Princeton and former naval officer. They met at the library, and although it was not love at first sight, some creative tension was ignited.

Their differences (He was Republican; she, a Democrat) fueled wonderful debates, which led to a wedding in 1962, two years before they earned their law degrees. After graduation, they moved to Denver, where Pat's father had opened an insurance office.

Jim got a job practicing law, and pat went to work for the National Labor Relations Board. Later, she taught law at Regis College and she did pro bono work for Planned Parenthood of Colorado.

Congresswoman Schroeder meets with the Women's Political Caucus in Washington.

Her political activity had been limited to serving one two-year term as a committee-woman, Jim was to have been the pol in the family. He even ran for the legislature in 1970. But he lost that election, and so did the Democrat who represented Denver in Congress.

When it came to finding a challenger for Republican Mike McKevitt in 1972, Jim and his friends unsuccessfully tried to convince a number of Democrats to run. In a story that is now part of Denver's political lore, Jim approached his wife about running after her name popped up at a strategy session. "Why not?" Jim wondered. "Pat was as good as I was on paper."

She was even better on the streets. Harry Hellerstein, a classmate at Harvard who worked in Pat's campaign, says he has never seen anything like her. He remembers one day when he took her to the courthouse in Denver and watched as she wooed old-line Democrats. "There was instant rapport," he says.

Pat's campaign centered on the war and the Nixon administration's domestic policy. "Has the air or water become cleaner?" she wanted to know. "Is the war in Vietnam over? Is the economy any sounder? Is medical care any more affordable? Are our streets safer? Has the impersonal, condescending approach of government bureaucracies improved?"

Pat won her primary race against a conservative state senator by a comfortable margin. And she beat McKevitt by 8,000 votes. Prior to the election, Pat, Jim, and their two children, Scott and Jamie, were planning a family trip to Disneyland. Instead, they packed for Washington.

The House Armed Services Committee meets in an imposing room. Sabers and an eagle adorn the walls, and flags, draping rainbows of battle ribbons, hang quietly on their poles. Named after Georgia Congressman Carl Vinson, the meeting place was abviously a male bastion, a soldier's room, before Rep. Schroeder's arrival.

When she first sat there, she was surrounded by men who had served in the military, having fought in World War I, World War II, or Korea. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine had served on the Senate Armed Services Committee in the 1950s, but no woman had been appointed to the House committee until Pat Schroeder and Marjorie Holt of Maryland were named in 1973.

Then 32 years old, Rep. Schroeder was an oddity to the veterans. They'd scoff at her: "You've never been in a war, except the War on Poverty." And then they would laugh. She wrote them off as a bunch of "roaring hawks" who were "ready to start nuking people."

The committee was ruled by F. Edward Hebert (pronounced Ay-bear), a heavyset, 71-year-old Louisianan who had been a newspaperman before he came to Congress. He did not take kindly to having Rep. Schroeder on his committee — no sir; he hated the idea. "I was in the House of Representatives before she was born," he used to spout disdainfully.

For two years, Hebert browbeat Rep. Schroeder, who often tried to reason with him. "He said, 'The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, and I am the Lord,' " Rep. Schroeder recalls. But in 1975, she destroyed him. She spent days tracking Democrats in their home districts asking for their help in overthrowing this lord. She handed out buttons with the inscription: "Help. I have Hebert by the tail."

Inspired by her leadership, House Democrats, many of them freshmen, removed Hebert from his chair in an uncharacteristic show of bravado.

Ten years after bumping off Hebert, Rep. Schroeder captained another attack on the chairman of the committee, Melvin Price, a Democrat from Illinois. At 80, Price was in poor health, but he had refused to heed the advice of senior members on the committee and step aside. While painful to consider, Rep. Schroeder said that it was necessary to oust him because he could no longer handle the job. "No one wants to say you're getting a little senile or a little sloppy," she confides. "(So) you try to cover for it. Professionally, you want everybody covering for each other, because you always think it could be you some day. You see a lot of people here just hanging on...There's a generation of males who can never conceive of retirement."

Fellow Democrats were not ready for a woman to chair the committee, she believes. But had Les Aspin, a liberal Democrat from Wisconsin, not campaigning for the job, Rep. Schroeder says she would have challenged Price herself. Instead, she told Aspin that if he would run, she would help. Without her support, Aspin thinks that he would have lost the bid.

She waged the campaign for Aspin at the same time she was promoting William Gray of Pennsylvania as the next Budget Committee chairman.

Pope condemns drug trafficking

WORLD

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — Pope John Paul II, on a pilgrimage to the country that supplies much of the world's cocaine, told Colombians in this former slave-trading capital that drug addiction is worse than human bondage.

The pope on Sunday also visited the ruins of Armero, where 23,000 people died in a volcanic eruption in November, and prayed before a huge concrete cross erected atop a church now totally buried in volcanic mud.

John Paul winds up his weeklong visit to Colombia today with a trip to the Caribbean coastal city of Barranquilla, where he plans to give a speech.

The pontiff then flies to the Caribbean island of St. Lucia, where he will say Mass on a knoll overlooking a yacht-filled harbor outside the capital, Castries.

After a seven-hour stopover, the pope will then return to Rome.

In the steamy Caribbean city of Cartagena, John Paul on Sunday issued a strong condemnation of drug abuse, which he called "a new form of slavery ... that must be prevented at all costs."

John Paul prayed in a Cartagena sanctuary commemorating a 17th century Jesuit priest who called himself the "slave of the slaves."

St. Pedro Claver would paddle out to slave ships, which brought about 200,000 blacks from Africa, and try to care for them and convert them to Christianity.

Likening drug use to enslavement, the pontiff said: "Today, as in the 17th century, the thirst of money takes over the hearts of many people and converts them through drug trafficking to a bondage even more fearsome at times than that of the black slaves."

Dealers of cocaine and marijuana smuggle an estimated $3 billion worth of narcotics out of Colombia each year.

The drug traffickers, angered by Colombian government cooperation in extraditing suspected dealers to the United States, have set off bombs, threatened the president and even offered the government a $13 billion bribe to end the extraditions.

The government rejected the offer, which smugglers said could be used to pay off the foreign debt, but none of the top drug ring leaders has yet been captured.

Five years ago, two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents were dragged out of a Cartagena hotel by gunmen disguised as waiters, shot and left for dead. Both survived.

In Armero, the pope asked in a prayer that God "receive with compassion in your merciful heart so many of our brothers buried here by the unleashed forces of nature."

Once a thriving community of 30,000 people, the town is now a gray sea of dried mud with the tops of some houses poking through, testimony to the destruction caused when the Nevado Del Ruiz volcano erupted on Nov. 13.

The lava melted a huge glacier, sending a mudslide down a valley into Armero, where 23,000 people perished in minutes.

About 700 people greeted the pope, who arrived in a helicopter that landed on the dried mud that still entombs the bodies of thousands of victims.

From the podium, the pope looked out over the sea of mud, bowed his head and prayed, "Father, rich in mercy, ease the suffering of so many families, dry the tears of so many brothers, guard the loneliness of so many orphans."

From Armero, he went to nearby Lerida, a small community converted into a refugee camp after the disaster.

There, the pope blessed about 20 refugees, who came forward with gifts, including flowers and a chunk of lava from the eruption.

Mitterand touring U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW (AP) — French President Francois Mitterrand today began an official four-day visit to the Soviet Union that was expected to focus on disarmament, touch on human rights and include three meetings with Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Mitterrand and his wife, Danielle, were welcomed at a Moscow airport by President Andrei A. Gromyko and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze before being taken to the Kremlin in a motorcade.

The first meeting between Mitterrand and Gorbachev was to be this evening, followed by a gala Kremlin dinner.

The Soviet Union has courted France as a potential friend among the Western nations, and the Tass announcement on Mitterrand's arrival called him the leader of a "friendly country."

Last week, Mitterrand met with President Reagan in New York for talks that officials said dealt mainly with East-West relations and the prospects for progress in arms control.

Australians hanged in Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Two Australians convicted of drug trafficking walked calmly to the gallows and were hanged at dawn today, becoming the first Westerners executed under Malaysia's tough anti-drug laws.

Brian Geoffrey Chambers Jr., 29, and John Kevin Barlow, 28, died side by side at 6 a.m., Manuel Ponnusamy, acting superintendent of Pudu Prison, told The Associated Press.

Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke, who with British Prime Minister Margarat Thatcher had appealed for the two men's lives, condemned the hangings as "barbaric."

Prison regulations barred Ponnusamy from releasing further details about the executions, but officials said the condemned men walked calmly to the gallows with a prison warden on either side.

Neither ate any breakfast, officials said, but had a meal late Sunday of satay, a Malay dish consisting of small pieces of meat skewered on short sticks and barbece.

As the men were being executed, the voice of a Moslem holy man came over the loudspeaker of a nearby mosque to recite the morning prayer which begins "Allahu Akhbar," or "God is great."

Reporters saw a black truck leave the prison at 6:50 a.m. A prison officer, who refused to give his name, said the bodies were being taken to the government hospital mortuary for a postmortem before being released to relatives.

At the hospital, reporters saw two bodies covered with thick, gray prison blankets, lying side by side on stretchers at the back of the truck. The top half of the faces and the legs were visible.

No relatives were present for the hangings.

But after being told her son was dead, Susan Chambers told reporters at her hotel room, "I hope my son has not died in vain. All of us in the family grieve for him."

Barlow's mother, Barbara, said, "No one has the right to take someone else's life. It's inhuman."

Both families had visited the condemned men one last time on Sunday. Michelle Barlow gave her brother a bouquet of orchids, embraced him and wept, said Brian Chambers Sr., father of the other convicted man.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Agreement reached in Greenpeace dispute

PARIS (AP) — France and New Zealand have reached agreement on their dispute over the sinking of the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior, with France to pay $7 million in damages for the bombing attack, Premier Jacques Chirac's spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Denis Baudouin, said the compromise worked out by Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary-general, includes the transfer of two French intelligence agents sentenced by New Zealand in the case to a French military base at Hao, an island in the South Pacific.

The transfer is to take place before July 25 and the agents will have to stay at Hao for at least three years, the length of a French overseas military posting, Baudouin said.

They will be allowed to live with their families and meet friends, but they may not have any contact with the press under the accord, according to the spokesman.

France also will send a letter of apology to New Zealand for the bombing and will pay $7 million in damages, Baudouin said. He said an accord formalizing the agreement would be signed within a few days.

Jurors debate hijacking

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Two defendants in the Achille Lauro trial made their final plea to the jury today, telling the panel they were not terrorists but Palestinian fighters.

Jurors then retired to begin deliberations on a verdict.

"Long live Arafat!" said one of the defendants, Ibrahim Fatayer Abdelatif, 20, as he finished his statement from his steel-barred courtroom holding cage.

Among the 15 defendants is Mohammed Abbas, also known as Abul Abbas, a leader of a faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization chaired by Yasser Arafat.

Abbas, whose group is called the Palestine Liberation Front, is being tried in absentia on charges he masterminded the Oct. 7-9 hijacking of the Italian cruise ship.

Chilean talks possible

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Communist Party has dropped its opposition to the idea of holding talks with President Augusto Pinochet's military subordinates on a plan for restoring Chile's democratic system.

Though the likelihood of such talks seems remote, the new Communist line brought Chile's two largest political opposition groups closer to a common strategy to end nearly 13 years of rule by the armed forces.

Two party leaders, wearing hoods, announced the Communists' new position to reporters Sunday after a two-day general strike that halted most public transport and a week of political violence in which 10 people died.

Both the Communist-led Democratic Popular Movement, a Marxist coalition, and the Democratic Alliance, which groups seven non-Marxist parties, backed the strike and called it a milestone in attempts to disrupt the country and undermine Pinochet's military support.

Shamir probe demanded

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A left-wing political party and relatives of two Palestinians slain after a bus hijacking have demanded an investigation into former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's role in the affair, the national news agency Itim said.

Itim reported Sunday that the father of one slain Palestinian and the uncle of the other filed a petition in Supreme Court saying the men killed were passengers on the bus, not hijackers, and that orders to kill the two came from political officials.

Troops raided the bus to free the passengers in the April 1984 hijacking. Two hijackers were killed in the raid, and two inquiries have determined that the other two Palestinians were beaten to death shortly after they were taken from the bus and interrogated.

Sakharov plea voiced

PARIS (AP) — Five French Nobel laureates have appealed to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to allow Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov and his wife Elena Bonner to return home to Moscow from exile.

The statement was made public Sunday, on the eve of President Francois Mitterrand's departure for a four-day trip to Moscow.

The Nobel winners said forcing the couple to live in Gorky violates human rights, and urged Gorbachev to "permit the Sakharovs to exercise the fundamental right of free choice of their place of residence, at least authorizing them to return to Moscow to live."

The statement was signed by Louis Neel, a Nobel laureate in physics; Claude Simon, who won the prize in literature, and three Frenchmen who won the Nobel Prize for their work in medicine, Jean Dausset, Francois Jacob and Andre Lwoff.

Earthquake hits Tibet

PEKING (AP) — A strong earthquake shook northeastern Tibet today, China's official Xinhua News Agency said, but there were no immediate reports of any damage or injuries.

The quake, measuring 6.3 on the Richter scale, occurred in the northwestern part of Tibet's Rutog county, Xinhua quoted the State Seismological Bureau in Peking as saying.

The bureau was quoted as saying investigators had been sent from Lhasa to the area, but there was no word on whether the quake had caused damage or injuries.

There was no telephone contact with the region because telephone lines had been knocked out previously by rain and wind, the seismological bureau said.

A quake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale struck northwestern Xainza county in central Tibet on June 21.

Burns kill photographer

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A 19-year-old Chilean-born photographer from Washington, D.C., died Sunday from burns allegedly inflicted by soldiers during demonstrations last week against the military government.

The death of Rodrigo Rojas Denegri, a free-lance photographer who was vacationing in Chile, was confirmed by relatives and doctors at Santiago's emergency hospital.

Rojas and a friend, Carmen Gloria Quintana, 18, were hospitalized Wednesday night after they were found unconscious and severely burned on a farm just north of Santiago.

Relatives and human rights activists said Rojas and the woman, who remains hospitalized in critical condition, were picked up by soldiers last Wednesday in Santiago near an intersection where anti-government demonstrators had erected a barricade.

30 injured at parade

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police tried to pull suspected troublemakers from a Protestant parade as it entered a Roman Catholic area of Portadown Sunday, and the running battles left 30 people injured, police said.

The orange-sashed, bowler-hatted members of the Orange Order, a Protestant society, used the rolled black umbrellas they carry as part of their uniform to flail at the police. They also pulled policemen's hats off and threw them at the officers along with stones and coins.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said late Sunday night that 27 policemen and three civilians were hurt. One policeman was hospitalized with a head injury and another, hit in the neck with a dart, was released after treatment.

Police fired two plastic bullets and arrested four people during the clash, the police said.

Polish man burns himself

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A Polish man burned himself to death in front of the Soviet consulate in Hamburg, West German police said Sunday.

The 26-year-old Pole, identified as Marek Kucal, doused himself with a flammable liquid in front of the consulate Saturday evening and set fire to his clothing, Hamburg police spokesman Kurt Steuerwald said.

Consulate employees called the fire department and police, but Kucal could not be saved, Steuerwald said, adding that the body was burned beyond recognition.

He said Kucal emigrated to West Germany from Szczecin, Poland, on Feb. 5 and had been living in a Hamburg hotel.

Police said Sunday they did not know why Kucal killed himself. They found a Polish passport on the body, along with a Bible and a blue shoulder bag.

French firms bombed

PARIS (AP) — Two French companies were bombed Sunday and the leftist terrorist group Direct Action claimed responsibility. It issued a statement that ridiculed Statue of Liberty celebrations and condemned French and U.S. ties to South Africa.

No injuries were reported.

An explosion just before 5 a.m. caused minor damage to an office in southern Paris of Thomson CSF, a state-owned manufacturer of electronics and communications equipment with business ties to South Africa.

Minutes later, a car loaded with explosives blew up outside the offices of Societe Air Liquide, breaking windows and starting a fire inside the five-story building on the Quai d'Orsay in central Paris. Air Liquide produces gases for industrial use and has commercial connections to South Africa.

Authorities and the companies refused to give details about the explosions, but police sources, who demanded anonymity, said guards at both buildings received calls warning that an attack by Direct Action was imminent.

Run with bulls celebrated

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — Thousands of revelers packed the main square of this provincial capital Sunday to begin the weeklong San Fermin Festival of bull-running, dancing and drinking made famous by Ernest Hemingway in "The Sun Also Rises."

City Councilman Joaquin Salanueva set off the traditional rocket, or chupinazo, from the City Hall balcony to open the annual festival.

The first mad dash, in which fighting bulls chase those daring enough to run before them through the narrow streets, was set for Monday morning.

The bulls run half a mile from their corral to the bullring, where they will die at the hands of bullfighters later in the day.

Since the festival began in 1591, the running bulls have gored to death 52 people.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

Mercury Cougar boasts major changes in its power-train for 1986. Cougar buyers can match a four-speed automatic overdrive transmission with the standard 3.8 liter V-6 engine. Also available on Cougar is the 5.0 liter engine with an industry-first sequential multi-port fuel injection system.

1986 Mercury Cougar, Improved Performance

by Tom Cooper

The Mercury Cougar has kept its distinctive, aerodynamic look in 1986–the same look that has made it extremely popular in the middle specialty market. But this car has more to its credit than a stunning appearance, it is a strong performer as well.

The Cougar was aerodynamically designed to use the wind to achieve practical, functional benefits. The shape of the Cougar helps improve the car's handling by helping it to hug the road at highway speeds. This same design also helps limit wind resistance, enabling the car to achieve a given speed using less power, and contributing to fuel economy. In addition, because airflow is directed over and around the Cougar, its shape helps eliminate wind noise created by exterior factors. And the aerodynamic design of Cougar also assists in cooling the engine and brakes.

Cougar entered the model year with its winning lineup of models intact: the standard Cougar, the luxurious Cougar LS and the turbocharged high performance Cougar XR-7. Except for larger standard tires and an array of new colors, Cougar is unchanged on the outside for 1986. On the inside, two new colors, revised rear seat padding for center pasenger comfort and an optional seven-band graphic equalizer for the entertainment package enhance this personal luxury car. And, added to Cougar's attractive list of options for 1986 is a power moonroof, Cougar's major changes are in its power-train where four-speed automatic overdrive transmission has become an option with the standard 3.8 liter V-6 engine. In 1985 this fuel-efficient transmission was available only with the 5.0 liter V-8. Also available on Cougar and LS models is an improved 5.0 liter engine with sequential multi-port electronic fuel injection. This new engine will have eight injectors -- one for each cylinder -- as opposed to the two injectors of its predecessor. The new engine will have more power and better fuel economy.

The 1986 Mercury Cougar is a strong performer with a striking shape. But, more than that, it is a car that is designed with the driver in mind, from the ride & handling down to the instrumentation & interior comfort. It is perhaps best described by the Ford Motor Company as "Comfort and convenience in an appealing package."

This feature appears each Monday as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
