14-school plan stirs parental ire, may not comply with court order

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

MISD's new elementary assignment plan flies in the face of what most Midlanders publicly said they wanted and even has some wondering if the settlement agreement has been met.

At its last board meeting on April 11, the Midland Independent School District board of trustees voted 4-2 to approve the much debated 14-school plan, despite overwhelming public sentiment to the contrary. After announcing its elementary school assignment plan in January, MISD held two public forums to garner public comment about the plan.

The first of those meetings was Feb. 7, and was attended by more thanr 600 parents. The crowd, which overflowed the Alamo Junior High auditorium, presented a unified and somewhat angry front.

"It doesn't take a genius to see where the inequality is on this paper," parent Robert Marquez said at that meeting.

"I believe what you are doing is wrong. It is unfair and it's discriminatory," said Alvin Dunson, a black parent from South Elementary.

"You are taking a bad situation and making it worse," said Lorraine Barela," a mother from Milam.

A subsequent meeting at Lee Freshman High School netted similar results. Even though a majority of the public sentiment displayed at those two public forums was against the 14-school plan, the school board voted exactly opposite.

That action has resulted in several community meetings among affected parents and prompted the Rev. Tom Kelley, of Our Lady of San Juan Catholic Church, to say, "I'm incensed that it appears to me that the school board did so simply and casually ignore months of discussion.

"I think they absolutely ignored them. I think they disregarded them," Kelley said.

Trustee George Lara is taking a similar stance on the subject. "I think it's disappointing that other school board members didn't heed the pleas of the people at those public forums," Lara said.

According to Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson attorney Rick Strange, who represents MISD in its unitary status fight, the district could do little else.

"We had a court order and we didn't have much choice. The public sentiment that was expressed — there was a tremendous amount of sympathy for that," Strange said. "But, what I heard most of the public advocating was not consistent with what the judge ordered us to do."

In October, MISD and the U.S. Department of Justice entered into a settlement agreement that would give MISD unitary status Jan. 1, 2000. The agreement called for several adjustments in the school district, one of which was the dismantling of the cluster system and its replacement with a 14-school integration plan that would integrate schools through boundary adjustments. When U.S. District Judge Edward Prado approved that plan, it became a court order.

Strange said that the board's only option was to approve the proposed 14-school plan or risk being in contempt of court.

However, if anything but strict compliance to the settlement agreement is contempt of court, MISD could have a problem.

Regarding elementary student assignment, the first sentence in the settlement agreement says, "MISD shall replace the present cluster system with a student assignment plan whereby each MISD student shall have the opportunity to attend a single school within his or her neighborhood attendance zone for grades K through 6 . . . . "

The 14-school plan, approved by the board does not allow that each MISD student will attend a campus within his or her neighborhood.

"They do seem to contradict each other, don't they," Lara said.

Early voting to begin today for city elections

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

County elections have been held, candidates for county commissioner and sheriff have been chosen, and now voters must turn their attention to next month's city elections.

At stake in the May 6 election are four seats on the City Council, three seats on the Midland Independent School District board of trustees, three seats on the Midland College board and four seats on the Midland County Hospital District board of directors.

Early voting begins at 8 a.m. this morning at the Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington. Early voting will be held Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. until May 2. The only exception will be this Friday, when the office will be closed.

Of the upcoming election, Midland County Democratic Party Chairman Michael Higgins said, "There's a lot of candidates, so voting ought to be brisk. The situation with a one-vote difference in one of our races should prompt people to believe that their vote counts."

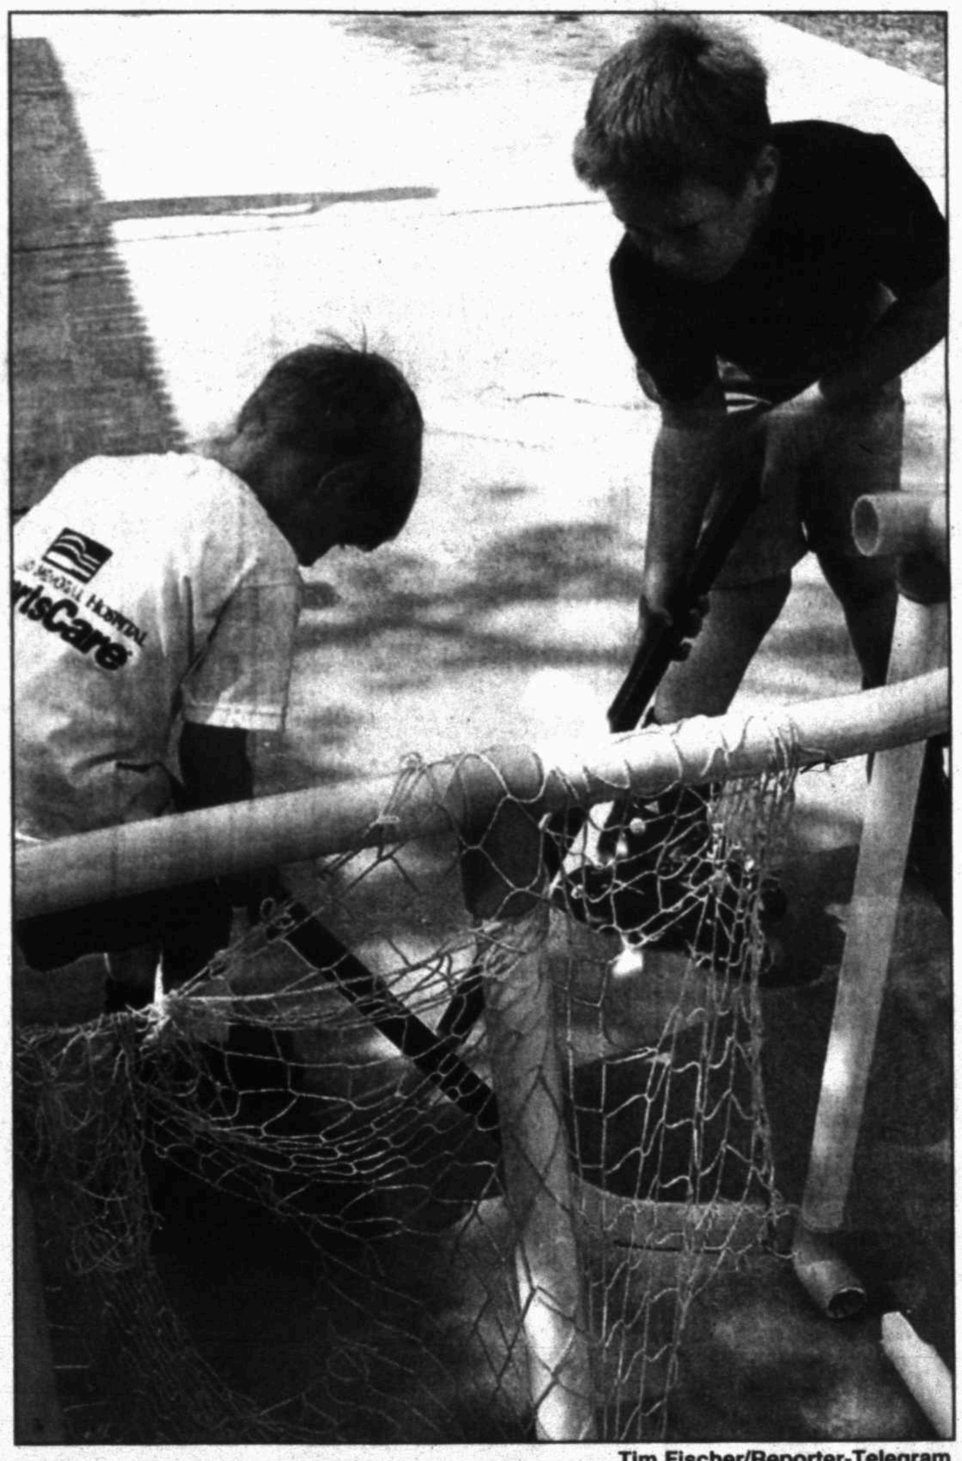

Sue Brannon, incoming chair of the Midland County Republican Party, said, "I do hope we have a good turnout. It's such a privilege to be able to vote that it's disappointing when people don't exercise that privilege. We have so many good candidates running, I hope people will turn out."

Pat Eastup, elections administrator, advised voters to look at their voter registration card. On the right hand side the card will list what City Council district, hospital district and school board district the voter lives in so he will know what candidates he can choose from. All precincts, except Greenwood, will vote for the Midland College board, which are at-large positions.

"Wouldn't it be nice if we got as good a turnout as we did with the sports complex? There are a lot of good candidates in this elec-

Petition to halt bonds dies for lack of support

■ Petitioners fall short of the signatures needed to stop the city's issuance of bonds for the sports complex.

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

The petition drive to stop the city of Midland from issuing sports complex bonds backed by the property tax base died Tuesday from lack of support.

According to City Secretary Kaylah McCord, an unidentified man dropped off 112 signatures at City Hall Tuesday. This brings the total number of signatures to 3,180, leaving the petitioners 1,578 short of the 10 percent of the registered voter signatures necessary to stop the city's issuance of the bonds.

When he turned in the original petitions to City Hall on April 6, Richard Stovall could not verify that he had the necessary 10 percent of the voters' signatures but said there were enough to make an impression on the City Council.

But, on April 8 Ms. McCord and City Attorney Keith Stretcher faxed Stovall informing him that he had fallen short of the 4,758 signatures, turning in only 3,068. Stovall had 10 days from April 8 to collect the remaining signatures. The additional signatures were due Tuesday.

"We worked hard. What else can I say?" Stovall said.

Stovall said he plans to address the council regarding the bond issuance at the May 9 City Council meeting, but wouldn't specify what he'll say.

Mayor Bobby Burns commended the petitioners' efforts but said council must now move forward with the Scharbauer Sports Complex.

"We welcome the process and admire the work that everyone does for what they feel is in Midland's best interest," Burns said. "The petitioners worked very hard for what they believe in. It appears they've fallen short of the state and local requirements."

The petition drive began in late February in an effort to prevent the City Council from issuing $38.95 million in bonds that were backed by the property tax base.

Stovall told council on March 7 that he had roughly 2,600 signatures, but chose not to submit them. From that point the city charter granted 30 days to achieve 10 percent of the active registered voters' signatures from the last municipal election. May 1998 was the last regular election and, according to the Midland County Elections Office, had 47,578 active registered voters.

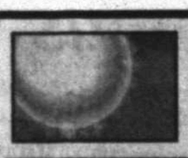

If 10 percent had been collected and all signatures deemed legitimate, City Council would have had two options:

■ Allow the voters to decide if the city or 4b Corporation should issue bonds via a referendum vote; or

■ Divert the bond issuance back to the 4b Corporation, which would then issue revenue bonds.

School violence concerns Texas parents but they are worried about preventive measures

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

DALLAS — A year since the carnage at a Colorado high school heightened public awareness of school violence, Texas officials continue to grapple with incidents that have the potential for bloodshed.

An eighth-grader in Santa Fe, southeast of Houston, was arrested this month after allegedly carrying four guns — three of them loaded — to his junior high school.

A pipe bomb was found Jan. 10 at a high school in Blanco.

The small school district of Comal had a rash of 12 bomb threats from Jan. 13 through Feb. 17.

"It would be foolish to think the problem has gone away," Attorney General John Cornyn says.

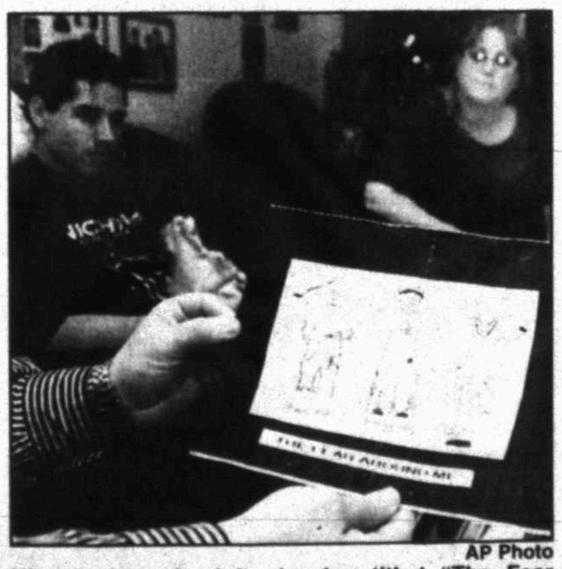

Spurred by last April's shootings at Colorado's Columbine High School, where two students killed 12 classmates and a teacher before killing themselves, state officials started a number of initiatives, including the Texas School Violence Prevention Task Force and the Texas School Safety Center.

But some parents, attorneys and civil rights advocates say many school officials are now too sensitive to potential threats, citing cases in recent months where students were jailed for homework assignments considered threatening.

The violence prevention task force, which Cornyn formed with the Texas Education Agency, is scheduled to issue a report on its findings by the first week in May.

Some of the issues discussed during its four meetings included possible psychological reasons why children lash out violently and whether schools had crisis management plans to deal with the

Vermont Senate takes up bill on civil unions for gay couples

By Ross Sneyd
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A bill that would create the closest thing in America to gay marriage won preliminary approval in the state Senate on Tuesday after a debate watched by people wearing either white ribbons or pink stickers to show where they stood.

The 19-11 vote came after the Senate defeated two proposed constitutional amendments designed to outlaw same-sex marriage.

The bill will be up for final approval in the Senate on Wednesday. A similar measure has already passed the House, but that chamber will have to consider changes made by the Senate. Democratic Gov. Howard Dean has said he will sign the bill.

The measure would enable gay couples to form "civil unions" that would entitle them to all 300 or so rights and benefits available under state law to married couples. No other state has gone as far as Vermont to give gay couples something approximating marriage.

However, Vermont's gay couples would still not be entitled to the federal benefits available to married couples in such areas as taxes and Social Security. And unlike marriage, civil unions would not confer portable rights; other states would probably not recognize such unions.

National groups quickly weighed in after the Senate vote.

"Vermont is taking care of its gay and lesbian citizens in a way that other states are not. Vermont is restating its commitment to fairness by today's action," said David Smith of the Human Rights Campaign, the nation's largest gay rights organization.

In a statement, Janet Parshall of the Family Research Council said: "It's a tragic day for the state of Vermont, for the Senate has ignored the will of the people. But it's an even sadder day for the state of marriage, for the Senate action today was a direct assault on this sacred institution."

Sen. Richard McCormack, a Democrat, said in support of the bill, "We can do something very, very important."

The reaction of the dozens of people sitting in the Senate galleries, standing along the chamber's walls and milling about the hallways was subdued.

The Senate debate lacked much of the passion displayed during 17 hours of debate last week in the House, where the Legislature's only openly gay member spoke several times, drawing tears to the eyes of many observers.

Opponents of the legislation, wearing white ribbons to signify their support for traditional marriage, stood shoulder-to-shoulder with supporters wearing pink stickers favoring civil unions.

Several senators who voted against the bill said they were doing so because their constituents opposed it. Others said they feared the national and international reaction.

"All of the United States and the world will judge our decision today," warned Republican Sen. Julius Canns.

The state Supreme Court set the stage for the legislation with its unanimous December ruling that same-sex couples were being unconstitutionally denied the benefits of marriage.

The legislation would create a status parallel to marriage by allowing gay and lesbian couples to obtain a license from their town clerks and then have their unions certified by a judge or member of the clergy.

Same-sex couples then would qualify for the wide array of benefits available to married couples, from being able to make medical decisions on behalf of their partners to qualifying for certain tax breaks.

To break up a civil union, couples would have to go through Family Court to obtain dissolutions, just as when married couples divorce.

Opponents of the measure had attempted to derail it Tuesday with the pair of constitutional amendments. One amendment would have added to the state Constitution the definition of marriage as a union between a man and a woman. The second would have overturned the Supreme Court ruling.

"I believe their sexual orientation runs counter to natural law," Republican Sen. John Crowley said of same-sex couples as he argued for the marriage definition.

Neither amendment won a simple majority, let alone the two-thirds required for constitutional amendments.

Nicole Christian stood with a brightly colored sign that read: "Friendship does not equal marriage! Get real!"

Chuck Kletecka, a social worker who is gay, surveyed the crowd of white ribbons and said: "It's always sobering to see how many people would oppose civil rights."

Recall notices join 'Most Wanted' on post office walls

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's post offices will soon have a new poster to accompany the FBI's "Most Wanted" list of dangerous criminals. The Consumer Product Safety Commission announced Tuesday it would put up posters of safety recalls to alert the public to the most dangerous products.

About 33,000 post offices, where 7 million people go each day to mail letters and ship packages, will get the new posters. The first posters should be up later this week, officials said.

Commission Chairwoman Ann Brown said the posters — with color pictures of the recalled products — will allow people to recognize hazardous products around the house.

"We can get dangerous products off store shelves but the real challenge is to get them out of families' homes," she said.

Francia Smith, vice president of consumer affairs for the U.S. Postal Service, said postal officials decided to become involved because "we're convinced that this action will help prevent injuries and save lives."

"As the one hand that binds this nation together, the Postal Service is the communication network that reaches out to each and every individual in this nation," she said.

Officials from 32 states also will visit thrift stores to seek out the recalled products, Brown said.

The new outreach program was launched as the commission announced its annual recall roundup, a list of products that were recalled throughout the previous year.

Here are eleven reasons I am going to vote for myself:
1) I can't be corrupted, although I am looking forward to having someone try. Honesty and integrity are of paramount importance to me.
2) I will represent you. I am running at-large so that I may represent all of Midland. I will listen to your concerns, no matter who you are.
3) I don't hold grudges. It seems to me that much of what is wrong with government is the work of politicians who do.
4) I'm not afraid to stand up for what I think is right.
5) I get along with everyone. I can initiate and enjoy a conversation with anyone from a senator to a street bum. I am neither awed by the one nor repulsed by the other.
6) I care about Midland and I have the intellectual capacity to grasp the complexity of its government.
7) I pride myself on my ability to see things from all perspectives. Understanding the viewpoint of others is a hobby of mine.
8) I'm frank and straightforward. I appreciate eloquence, but not at the expense of clarity.
9) I'm unconstrained by convention. Often the reason people have always done things a particular way is out of habit. I try to think outside the dots.
10) I'm not too proud to admit my mistakes and move on. The alternative is to waste time rationalizing.
11) I have the time to devote to the job.
Please cast one for me, BILL DINGUS.

U.S. approves world's first entirely new antibiotic in 35 years

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Doctors are getting an important new weapon in the growing battle against drug-resistant infections: The government on Tuesday approved a long-awaited drug called Zyvox, described as the world's first entirely new type of antibiotic in 35 years.

Zyvox seems to cure some infections impervious to all other antibiotics, even that longtime drug of last resort called vancomycin. Consequently, Zyvox could help hundreds, perhaps even thousands, of life-threatening infections every year.

"It comes at a time when we were literally running out of antibiotics," said Dr. Robert C. Moellering Jr., physician-in-chief of Boston's Beth Israel-Deaconness Hospital.

Plus, it is being made in both oral and intravenous forms — meaning when hospitals discharge infected patients, they might go home with pills instead of a troublesome IV unit, said Dr. Dennis L. Stevens of the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Boise, Idaho.

"Zyvox is just a superb drug," said Stevens, who helped test it. "It's good ... to treat some pretty nasty infections with an oral drug."

But he stressed that doctors should reserve Zyvox for only the worst infections and those suspected of being antibiotic-resistant, or bacteria will quickly evolve to make Zyvox useless.

"It's my wish that Zyvox is used primarily in hospitals," not when primary care physicians just hand out a routine antibiotic prescription, he said.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Zyvox on Tuesday for use by adults with pneumonia and skin infections, including those caused by a tough-to-treat form of staph bacteria, and with deadly infections caused by a supergerm named "Enterococcus faecium."

This infamous germ frequently invades surgical wounds and also causes serious abdominal, urinary tract and heart valve infections. Worse, enterococcal infections are growing increasingly impervious to antibiotics. About a quarter of enterococcal infections among intensive-care patients last year were untreatable by even vancomycin — a stunning 43 percent increase from the mid-1990s, said FDA antibiotic chief Dr. Gary Chikami.

But in a clinical trial of 145 people with vancomycin-resistant enterococcal infections, Zyvox cured 67 percent.

In additional studies, Zyvox helped other infections as well as vancomycin or other standard treatments.

Zyvox isn't the only option for untreatable infections: The FDA last fall approved competitor Aventis' Synercid as the nation's first alternative when vancomycin fails. Synercid, an intravenous drug, is a combination of two older European antibiotics that delivers a one-two punch against bacteria.

In contrast, Zyvox is a synthetic chemical designed from scratch to fight germs at an entirely different point in their life cycle than any other medicine — a true surprise attack. It stops bacteria from making protein, which in turn stops their growth so the body's immune system can step in and finish them off, Moellering said.

Known chemically as linezolid, it is the first in a long-awaited class of antibiotics called oxazolidinones.

But it's not a magic bullet. Zyvox has been used experimentally in only a few thousand people, yet doctors already have counted 15 Zyvox-resistant infections.

Nor can it fight all bacteria, only those known as "gram-positive" germs.

But gram-positive bacteria are a huge public health threat. They cause more than half of all serious infections treated in hospitals worldwide, particularly the kind caught by patients while they're in the hospital for some other problem.

Zyvox's main side effects are headache, nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, afflicting between 3 percent and 11 percent of patients, the FDA said. The oral version caused more side effects.

Also, Zyvox can cause a decrease in blood platelets, so doctors must monitor patients' blood, the FDA warned.

Zyvox patients should tell their doctors if they take over-the-counter decongestants such as those containing pseudoephedrine, or antidepressants such as Prozac, because Zyvox can interact with such drugs to raise blood pressure.

Pharmacia said Zyvox would be available within a few weeks, but refused to disclose the price except to say it was expected to be a little lower than competitor Synercid, which costs $85 per intravenous vial.

Bush might invite McCain to join him on GOP ticket

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — George W. Bush mixed election politics with talk of affordable housing on a trip to this battleground state Tuesday and said he would consider asking former rival John McCain to join him on the GOP ticket. The issue may come up when the two meet next month, Bush said.

"I know he's said he's not interested, but until I talk to him and find out how interested or not interested he is, I'll give him consideration," said Bush.

His campaign theme for the day was housing, and at a rebuilt home in Battle Creek he called for a $1.7 billion tax break for developers who build for low-income residents. Later in the day, he held a roundtable discussion with housing experts, but the focus shifted to politics.

McCain last month suspended his bid for the GOP nomination after falling far behind in a sometimes-brutal campaign against Bush. The Arizona senator won seven primaries, attracting support from independents and Democrats that could be helpful in November.

McCain has said repeatedly and forcefully that he's not interested in the No. 2 spot on the ticket. But Bush said the topic may well come up on May 9 in Philadelphia when they have their first face-to-face meeting since the primaries.

"As I walk into the meeting, I'll take him for his word, but I do want to visit with him," said Bush. "He's been pretty outspoken about his opinions, but I really want to look him in the eye and visit with him."

Bush hastened to add that "there will be a lot of people who will be given consideration."

Standing next to Bush at a news conference was Michigan Gov. John Engler, who was frequently mentioned as a potential running mate until Bush lost the Michigan primary badly.

Bush said "of course" he would give Engler consideration.

"In spite of the fact that we had a rough go here in the Michigan primary, he's still an ally," said Bush. "I like him a lot."

Bush is routinely asked about selecting a running mate, and he usually deflects those questions.

On Tuesday he was asked about Engler, but on his own declared, "I'll give John McCain consideration."

Asked if he planned to raise the issue May 9, Bush said, "I might, depending on how the conversation goes."

Before shifting to politics, Bush offered the latest in a series of housing initiatives. This proposal includes a five-year program giving developers a tax credit worth up to 10 percent a year on the cost of building homes in low-income areas.

STOP: Petitioners fail to get enough signatures

(From 1A)

Original plans had the 4b Corporation — a board whose sole purpose is to build the Scharbauer Sports Complex — issuing bonds to pay for the complex.

But, the city chose to issue bonds itself and use the property tax base and water and sewer fund as collateral to achieve a lower interest rate on the bonds.

City Manager Rick Menchaca had said that although the property tax was being pledged as collateral there was nearly no possibility of it ever being raised to fund sports complex payments. On Nov. 2 voters approved a quarter-cent sales tax increase to fund construction of the sports complex. Menchaca said to ensure there would be no failure to make bond payments the city pledged conservative estimates in sales tax revenue — between $2.8 million and $3 million annually for the next 30 years — inflation aside, while the actual revenue stream from sales tax receipts to pay off the complex should exceed $3 million each year.

According to Stretcher, the 4b Corporation was created for a specific purpose — to build the sports complex — and is required by law to do so.

But, because the 4b Corporation has no collateral it would have had to issue revenue bonds, which carry a higher interest rate.

In early March, George H. Williford, senior vice president of First Southwest Company, submitted tentative estimates showing that $38.95 million revenue bonds could end up costing the tax payers $7.4 million more in interest. There were no revised estimates for what extra interest $35.9 million in revenue bonds would cost.

"Only 10 percent of districts had plans in place," Cornyn said.

Two weeks after the task force was formed, Gov. George W. Bush's office awarded a $500,000 grant to Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos to create the Texas School Safety Center to help reduce violence on campuses.

The center held a statewide summit on school violence, developed a youth leadership institute to help students with such issues as anger management, provided training to teachers and other school officials at 10 of the state's 20 education service centers and developed a school safety manual and a CD-ROM on dealing with school violence.

"We contacted all 1,100 school districts in the state and 93 percent said they needed training on dealing with school violence," said Margaret Dunn, executive director of the safety center.

However, officials with the American Civil Liberties Union and some attorneys and parents say some efforts to prevent violence are being taken at the expense of students' rights.

Last October, a 13-year-old student in Ponder, northwest of Dallas, was arrested and held in a juvenile detention facility for five days on suspicion of making a terrorist threat for a story he wrote in which he described shooting a teacher and two classmates.

A week later in Robinson, 120 miles south of Ponder, a 14-year-old was arrested for a poem school officials considered a terroristic threat. In the poem, the high school student said if he ruled the world he would kill police and blow up schools. He spent 16 days in a juvenile detention facility before charges were dropped.

While the statements were not smart, they weren't criminal, contends Tim Corwin, the student's attorney.

Vincent Lopez, a seventh-grader in the Dallas suburb of Arlington, was placed in alternative school for five days for drawing gang members, which school officials said was an indication of gang-affiliation.

"It was a satire of what he thought was gang related," his father, Leonard, says. "This was totally wrong."

Lopez is working with the ACLU, considering a lawsuit against the Arlington Independent School District for what happened to his son.

"The security issue is legitimate but the reaction to it is irrational at this point," said Frank Colosi, a Fort Worth attorney with the ACLU. "It will limit creativity."

A report issued April 12 by the Justice Policy Institute and the Children's Law Center said more school counseling, balanced media coverage of school shootings and tougher gun control laws are needed to deal with school violence.

Colosi said the situation could get worse because some schools across the country are investing in student profiling — where officials try to identify certain characteristics in students that might signal a greater chance for causing violence in classrooms.

"The fear is if students meet these characteristics, they will automatically be sent to alternative schools or suspended," he said.

Cornyn says student profiling was discussed at some of the task force meetings but officials are skeptical of it.

"I think school districts have done an excellent job but I know we've done mistakes," says Billy Jacobs, TEA's senior director of safe schools. "We need to protect students' rights. But when a student identifies himself as a potential threat, we need to really look very carefully at the situation."

Small Texas communities shaken by rash of bomb threats

By Juan Lozano
Associated Press

The bomb sniffing dogs, closed campuses and bans on backpacks made the small school districts of Blanco and Comal in the Texas Hill Country appear to be under siege earlier this year.

In essence they were, after a series of bomb threats from the middle of January to early February and the discovery of a pipe bomb prompted cancellation of classes, frightened teachers, parents and students and had school officials looking for answers.

"You don't ever think it's going to happen to you until it does," Mike Adkins, superintendent of the Blanco Independent School District, says.

On Jan. 10, a pipe bomb was found in the boys' bathroom at Blanco High School. It was detonated in a nearby field and no one was injured. The school, about 50 miles north of San Antonio, was evacuated three other times in January because of bomb threats but no devices were found.

Adjacent Comal Independent School District had a series of 12 bomb threats from Jan. 13 through Feb. 17 at a high school, three middle schools and one elementary school. No bombs were found, but in each case buildings were evacuated and students were forced to make up lost time during several days they normally would have had off.

The bomb threats also had financial consequences, Comal district spokeswoman Kari Hutchison says, costing the district more than $10,000. The price tag for Blanco, a district of 940 students, was about $11,700.

During public meetings at both districts, parents talked about the possibility of installing metal detectors, fingerprintng students and requiring school uniforms.

Comal, which has 10,500 students, banned backpacks for an indefinite time and restarted a campus crimestoppers program at the high school, where five bomb threats were made.

The Blanco district also banned backpacks at the high school and temporarily barred students from leaving the building during school hours, Adkins said.

"This is a very quiet, conservative town," Adkins said. "It's not going to be the same."

COMPLY: Lawyer says there isn't much hope for reversal

(From 1A)

"We are going to have 1,028 students that are going to be inconvenienced because MISD didn't comply with neighborhood schools."

However, despite the contradiction and the civil unrest, Strange feels there isn't much hope for a reversal of the decision.

Parents unhappy with the plan, however, will wait and hear that from the judge. At a Friday meeting among parents of affected children, Kelley said, "I think the way to go is by the law and by way of the courts. If it takes money to hire lawyers, then whatever, we should raise the money to take that court action."

All indications are that parents from South, Milam and Bush will proceed with those plans and are staging additional meetings to work out the details.

The 14-school plan will bus:

123 students from Bush Elementary to Long,
155 rural students to Bush from Scharbauer,
86 rural students from Emerson to Bowie,
61 students from Emerson to Santa Rita,
137 rural students from Rusk to Burnet,
93 students from Milam to Emerson,
123 students from Pease to Santa Rita,
122 students from South to Parker,
128 students from Travis to South.

Those maneuvers would create six schools with an Anglo population between 35-50 percent of the district average and eight schools with an Anglo population between 30-60 percent of the district population.

Ten schools would not experience any busing: Greathouse (which is 78.22 percent Anglo), Fannin (91.79), Crockett (0.66), DeZavala (0.91), Washington (0.80), Houston (48.36), Jones (53.18), Bonham (54.40), Henderson (50.50) and Lamar (30.82). The schools that will remain racially identifiable will be linked together as sister schools and will cooperate in cultural activities. The plan also calls for two magnet schools to be implemented in 2001-2002.

Sheriff: Kempf has 22-month-old arrest warrant

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

At-large City Council candidate Hal L. Kempf has had a warrant out for his arrest since June 1998, Ector County Sheriff Reggie Yearwood said Tuesday.

Yearwood said the warrant was issued because of a bad check written at a music store in the amount of $20.

"I called him myself and told him," Yearwood said. "I would suggest very strongly he gets in touch with Judge (Dennis) Bright. If he does not contact the judge by 5 p.m., we will ask Midland to pick him up on the warrant."

It is not known whether Kempf reported to Bright, Ector County justice of the peace. Kempf could not be reached for comment.

If he did not report to Judge Bright on Tuesday then the warrant will be transferred to the Midland County Sherriff's Office for Kempf's arrest, Yearwood said.

Yearwood said Kempf seemed surprised by the news when told about the 22-month-old warrant. "I would think if he knew about it, it had slipped his mind."

Yearwood said Kempf will owe $225 for a bond, $165 to Judge Bright and $55 to the Ector County attorney.

Kempf also committed a Class C misdemeanor in early April by not reporting his campaign funds to City Hall.

Kempf, an attorney, said he didn't intend to break the law but simply forgot about the reporting deadline. Candidates are required to report their campaign finances both 30 days and eight days before the election. City Council elections will be held May 6.

Kempf later turned in his campaign contribution information following the April 11 Reporter-Telegram article on the violation.

Karen Lundquist, spokesman for the Texas Ethics Commission, said candidates who fail to report campaign finances are typically fined $100, or no more than $5000.

Kempf was also one of four city manager candidates back in January, but Rick Menchaca was selected.

Clinton urges high-tech leaders to help close 'digital divide'

CHICAGO (AP)— President Clinton, at a showcase of high technology, challenged industry leaders Tuesday to share "this astonishing new era of enterprise" by ensuring that all Americans have access to computers and the Internet.

"I'm asking you to do this because you can," Clinton said. "I'm asking you to do this because it's right. And I'm asking you to do this because America needs it to have a continually growing economy."

Clinton came to the Comdex trade show at the close of a two-day "digital divide" tour intended to dramatize the gap between computer haves and have-nots. While government surveys have shown it to be a "racial ravine" between whites and minorities, academics and industry analysts say Internet access is much more closely tied to income and education than race.

Strolling through an exhibition hall on the shore of Lake Michigan, Clinton stopped to try out a warm ergonomic pillow designed to prevent carpal tunnel syndrome. "This would be good for me with my crazy lifestyle," he said.

Another vendor gave the president a user name (Clinton) and password (Buddy) for a site for online storage of computer files. Told that he could hide files that would not accessible to anyone else, Clinton said, "We've had enough problems" — referring to a controversy over White House e-mails.

The president also was intrigued by a voice-recognition system for Internet access. "Pretty neat, huh?" Clinton remarked. "You've given me hope with my big, awkward hands."

In his speech, he urged high-tech leaders to support his goal of providing the latest learning tools to every child in every school and creating "digital opportunity for every family and every community." More than 400 businesses, schools, community groups and volunteers have signed up, Clinton said.

He asked them to help "give our schools computers and high-speed connections, to design the educational software our children need to succeed, to make sure our teachers are as comfortable in front of a computer as in front of a chalkboard."

Moreover, he urged them to expand internships, particularly for women and minorities, who are underrepresented in most information technology jobs. Saying there is a limit to what the federal government can do, the president also encouraged more technology partnerships with schools, local communities and local governments.

Clinton said the technology boom has accounted for about 30 percent of America's economic growth and "this astonishing new era of enterprise."

"I think, just on pure ethical grounds, we all sense that the American values require that everybody be given a fair chance to participate," Clinton said. "But secondly, I think it's in our economic interest to do it."

He said Washington policymakers spend a lot of time wondering how to prolong the economic expansion.

"Well, it's clear to me that if we want it to continue, we have to do more to find new markets," he said. "New markets mean creating new businesses and new employees, as well as new customers. And if you do both, it means you can have growth without inflation."

Appeals court allows Letourneau to earn royalties, visit children

SEATTLE (AP) — Mary Kay Letourneau, convicted of child rape for a relationship with a former grade-school student who fathered two of her children, may earn royalties from books, movies and interviews, an appeals court ruled.

Overturning sentencing conditions imposed by a King County judge, the state Court of Appeals ruled Monday that Letourneau could not be barred from profiting by selling her story as part of her sentence. The appellate court also ruled that Letourneau could visit with her six children without supervision.

Letourneau, 38, serving a 7 1/2-year prison term for second-degree child rape, is reportedly working on an autobiography that describes her relationship with Vili Fualaau that began when he was 12 and she was a married mother of four. The boy earlier had been a grade-school pupil of hers in a suburban Seattle school district.

The appeals court did not address Washington state's "Son of Sam" law, which bars convicted criminals from profiting from their crimes. But Letourneau's attorney said Tuesday it is unlikely that prosecutors would try to block his client under that law, since the original Son of Sam law in New York state was struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The prosecutor or the (state) attorney general's office would have to ask, 'Is there any possible way we can argue with a straight face that our law is meaningfully different than the Son of Sam law that was struck down?'" attorney James Lobsenz said.

Since the Supreme Court's decision in the New York case, "there is no reason for anybody to be motivated enough to try to enforce the law" in Washington state, he said.

County prosecutors were considering whether to appeal the ruling, and no decision had been made on whether to invoke the state law, spokesman Dan Donohoe said.

New York's law was passed in 1977, after reports that publishers were offering "Son of Sam" serial killer David Berkowitz huge sums of money for the rights to his story.

The original law was struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1991 on free speech grounds. New York then enacted a revised version, which remains on the books.

Both of Letourneau's daughters fathered by Fualaau — one when Letourneau was free on a suspended sentence under condition that she have no contact with him — are in the custody of the Fualaau's mother. Letourneau's four older children are in the custody of her former husband.

Last week, Fualaau, 16, and his mother filed claims for damages exceeding $1 million from Des Moines, a suburb south of Seattle, and the Highline School District, saying police and school officials failed to protect him from the teacher's sexual advances.

Two women shot at senior center

LINCOLN PARK, Mich. (AP) — A man who had been summoned to a meeting at his senior-citizen apartment house because of complaints from neighbors about his vulgar language opened fire with a rifle Tuesday, killing two women, authorities said. A third woman was critically wounded.

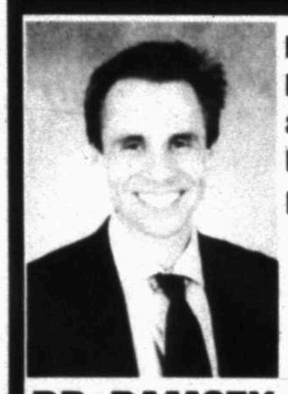

The man was taken into custody in the middle of the afternoon, Fire Chief Ernie Moon said.

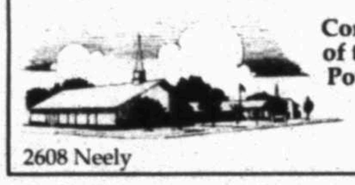

A man was seen being taken out of the building on a stretcher, but there was no immediate word if that was the suspect or another victim.

The suspect's name was not released, and no immediate charges were filed.

Police had spent several hours searching the 14-story building for the gunman after the noon shooting.

First Columbine lawsuit filed against sheriff; more expected

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — The parents of a slain Columbine High School student sued the sheriff and several deputies Tuesday, alleging they ignored warnings about the teen-age killers that could have prevented the massacre.

Michael and Vonda Shoels' lawsuit was the first of several expected to be filed by Thursday, the one-year anniversary of the attack that left 15 dead, including the Shoels' son Isaiah and the two student gunmen.

The victims' families have one year to sue under the statute of limitations.

Nearly two dozen notices of intent to sue the sheriff's office were filed in October, most involving two allegations: that Jefferson County Sheriff John Stone's deputies failed to take action when told of threats one of the gunmen made in March 1998 and that authorities mishandled their response to the attack.

"The sheriff's department, Sheriff Stone, Lt. (Terry) Manwaring and the deputy sheriffs stood by while innocent children were shot," the Shoelses' lawsuit alleges.

County Attorney Frank Hutfless, who represents the sheriff's department, did not respond to a request for comment.

On Monday, Hutfless said: "While we sympathize with the families of the victims and the community, the fact is that two people were responsible for the deaths and injuries at Columbine High School on April 20."

Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold had planned the attack for months before opening fire in the suburban high school, killing 12 classmates and a teacher and wounded about two dozen others.

"The killers had free rein in the library to kill and maim," said Dale Todd, whose son, Evan, was wounded. He expects to file a lawsuit Wednesday.

Klebold's parents, Thomas and Susan Klebold, also have filed a notice of intent to sue, claiming the sheriff's officials should have alerted them to Harris' violent tendencies.

The Shoelses' lawsuit notes that the parents of another student told sheriff's deputies Harris operated a Web site that included threats of terrorism and against individuals. They contended deputies failed to notify school officials or the parents of Harris and Klebold.

If the defendants had taken these steps, "the chain of events that led directly to the assaul t... would have been interrupted and this tragedy would not have occurred," their lawsuit states.

The legal developments come as the Columbine community is bracing for Thursday's anniversary. Some have said they will attend memorial services, while others plan to leave the area.

School officials have planned a private assembly, followed by a public remembrance and evening candlelight vigil. There also will be several separate memorial services.

Charlotte, N.C., forced to change zoning decisions

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A judge ruled that the way Charlotte makes its zoning decisions violates state law — a decision that could cool off the business climate in one of the nation's hottest growth areas.

Superior Court Judge Ben Tennille's ruling, which came Monday in a lawsuit filed by a group of residents, will force the city to overhaul the way it makes about 80 percent of its zoning decisions.

City officials pledged to have a new zoning process in place in 90 days.

The ruling affects about 50 projects under city review, from shopping centers to apartment buildings. Decisions made in the last two months could be in jeopardy as well.

"The cases that are in the pipeline today will be stopped," City Attorney Mac McCarley said.

Seventeen residents sued last year after the City Council approved a shopping center near their neighborhoods. They argued that the council violated state law by making the decision without a trial-like hearing.

Five years later, peace and horror mix at Oklahoma City bomb site

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jeannine Gist stood looking out Tuesday through a window blown to daggers by the Oklahoma City bombing and found what had been missing in her life for five years.

"I feel peace," she said, looking out from a bomb-damaged building at the spot where her daughter died at work on April 19, 1995.

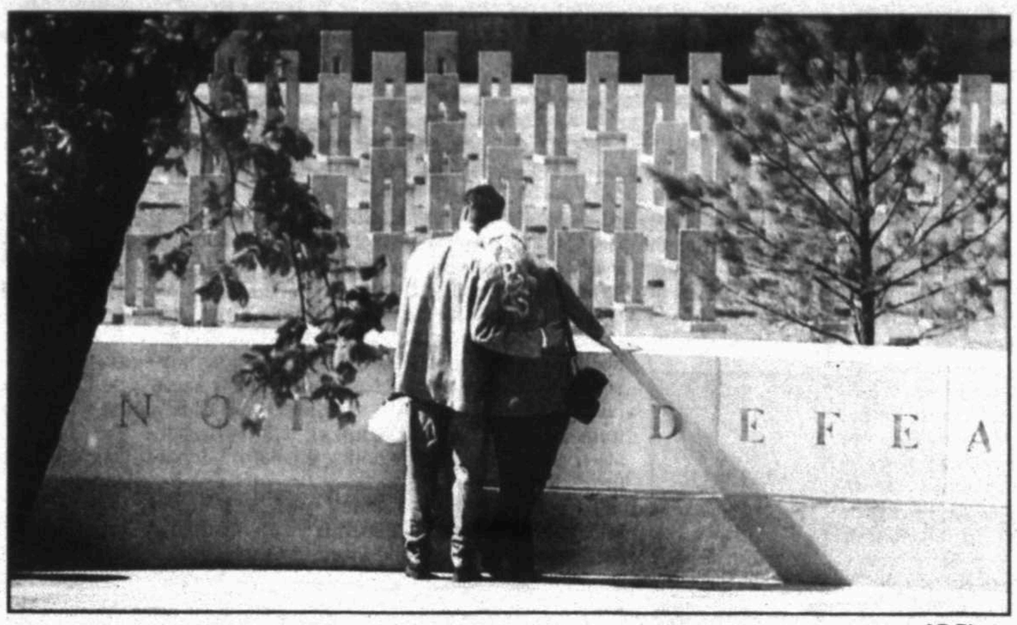

The Oklahoma City National Memorial — consisting of a long, dark reflecting pool and 168 chairs for each of the victims — stretched before her on the spot where the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building once stood.

The memorial will open on the Wednesday, the fifth anniversary of the deadliest terrorist attack on U.S. soil.

Two ceremonies will mark the opening: A private one for families, survivors and rescue workers, and a public ceremony where President Clinton is scheduled to speak. Thousands of people are expected to attend. There will be hymns, a flyover of military jets, the ringing of church bells, the readings of the victims' names and silence in their memory.

Across from the memorial, at the bombed-out shell of what was the Journal Record newspaper building, a museum is being constructed where visitors will be able to hear the bomb blast and learn more about the victims. The museum is scheduled to open in November.

"I'd like them to leave thinking 'If there is anything I can do to make sure this never happens again, I will do it,'" said Gist, whose daughter, Karen Carr, 32, worked on the federal building's fourth floor.

AP Photo

Hans and Torrey Butzer, architects of the Oklahoma City National Memorial, pause Tuesday as they look over the Field of Empty Chairs, which has 168 chairs memorializing each person who was killed in the Oklahoma City bombing five years ago. The dedication ceremony of the memorial will take place today, the fifth anniversary of the bombing.

At the interactive museum, visitors will be taken from everyday life right before the blast, hear the bomb as it was recorded during a meeting under way in a neighboring building and see the community's response and the national outpouring that followed.

The story will be told simply, without drama, museum director Sunni Mercer said, pointing to one example — a box holding keys plucked from the crumbled federal building. Piles of these unclaimed house keys, locker keys, gate keys will be on display, all speaking to the normal lives changed by an act of terrorism.

David Page, managing editor of the Journal Record, had just stepped out of his office for a cup of coffee that April 19 day when the bomb went off, sending long shards of glass flying like knives. A pink scar on one of his hands is a reminder.

On Tuesday, he visited the former newspaper office but was ordered for safety reasons to stay away from the hole that was once his window.

Looking out on the memorial's green lawn, the Survivor Tree and the black granite pool, he said: "I think it looks nice. It is a peaceful look, seeing it now."

Some of the 168 chairs are smaller than the others, representing the 19 children who died.

Gist said she knows exactly where her daughter's chair sits. She explained how the empty chair represents the empty one at her dinner table and the empty seat at her side when she goes shopping.

"You're not ever going to forget what happened to those people," she said. "But you're going to look out and see the water, see the Survivor Tree, the beautifulness of it and realize life still goes on."

Treasury official: GOP budget obscures future cost of tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican budget blueprint adopted by Congress obscures the true future cost of its tax cuts, which could consume more than $1 trillion of the budget surplus over the next decade, Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers said Tuesday.

Those assumptions include a projected cost of up to $215 billion over five years in GOP tax cuts. Summers said an estimate covering only five years masks the ballooning cost in later years if the cuts are phased in, as most tax measures are. In that case, he said, the cost "could possibly escalate as high as $1 trillion," far more than the $792 billion GOP tax cut vetoed last year by President Clinton.

Other Democrats have leveled similar criticism at the five-year, $483 billion tax cut proposed by Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the Republican presidential nominee-in-waiting. Some analysts have estimated its cost at $1.3 trillion or more over a decade, which critics say would consume too much of the projected budget surplus.

"Without the discipline of 10-year horizons, it becomes easy to adopt policies that tempt today but could raise serious risks over the long term," Summers said.

Beyond that, Summers pointed to statistics showing that millions of middle-class Americans pay a lower percentage of their earnings in federal income and payroll taxes than at any time since at least the mid-1970s. Although tax collections as a percentage of U.S. gross domestic product are at a post-World War II high, Summers said that is driven by higher overall incomes, including money made in the stock market.

"The tax burden for most Americans is at its lowest in a generation," Summers said.

Garcia, Strauss Foster to benefit MISD transition

While there is only one contested race for the Midland Independent School District board of trustees on the May 6 ballot, the tremendous changes that will undoubtedly occur as the school district moves from the cluster system to a new arrangement for its elementary students makes this election a critical one.

The only contested race is for the District 5 slot on the board in which local attorney Charles Tighe and Midland police Sgt. David Garcia are vying for the position.

But two uncontested candidates — Dale Strauss, a lawyer running for the District 3 seat, and Linda Foster, area manager for Southwestern Bell who is a candidate for the District 6 seat — are also of interest to local voters, although they do not have opponents. Their influence on the school board as it navigates the waters toward a post-desegregation school system will be critically important to the school district and the community.

In the Tighe-Garcia race, both candidates would bring outstanding credentials to the MISD board — Tighe, as a longtime member of a well-respected Midland law firm, is a representative of the Midland business and legal establishment. His law firm has represented the school district in many of its legal battles. Garcia, a Midland native who has lived here all his life except for the three years he was in the U.S. Army, is a 22-year veteran of law enforcement in Midland and Midland County. He has been with the Midland Police Department since 1983, including time spent as community relations officer. Before joining the police department, he was with the Midland County Sheriff's Office for six years.

Garcia showed that he has a good grasp of the issues MISD is confronting. He would be a good addition to the Midland school board along with Foster and Strauss.

Although either man is capable of representing the people of District 5, our choice for this position is David Garcia. He represents the new direction that the school board and the Midland community must move toward if it is to put to rest the controversy that revolved around the district following its court-ordered desegregation — which began 20 years ago.

Garcia embraces the move away from the cluster system as long as that change is carried out in a fair and equitable manner. He said he supports the 14-school plan adopted by the MISD school board.

He also asserts the need for the school board to take a positive stand to resolve such controversies as the Neil Richmond case, saying that situation has been allowed to drag on too long without resolution.

Garcia also said a new Midland High School should be constructed as the first of a series of physical improvements to the district's facilities. But before that step is taken, he said, school officials should lay out the entire plan for all improvements — including the best cost estimates possible — before the Midland community.

From his years in law enforcement, Garcia acknowledged that Midland and the school district have a drug problem and said MISD's "zero tolerance" policy on drugs and alcohol is "ludicrous." He said there are not enough programs now in the schools to effectively deal with the problem.

On those and other subjects, Garcia showed that he has a good grasp of the issues MISD is confronting. He would be a good addition to the Midland school board along with Foster and Strauss.

Voters in MISD District 5 should cast their ballots for David Garcia.

Putin and Blair ... two control freaks with a mission

The phrase most often used by friend and foe alike to describe British Prime Minister Tony Blair is "control freak."

He tightly controls the flow of all government information from 10 Downing St., and put in a financial supporter to chair the British Broadcasting Corp. He "devolved" power to Scotland and Wales so as to make most of that leadership loyal to him. He abolished hereditary peers so that power in Britain's conservative House of Lords would shift to his Labor appointees.

Anderson

Only when he sought to ram through his choice of a sheeplike follower to be mayor of London did voters rebel. An old radical lefty spurned by Blair is running as an independent and may well become London's Jesse Ventura — a rambunctious rebuke to Blair's new "third way" establishment.

The prime minister, a Clinton political clone, knows that Conservatives behind the feisty William Hague are likely to pick up enough seats to become a formidable minority in next year's elections. Like his American mentor, Blair seeks to bestride the foreign-policy scene to bedazzle voters lest prosperity not continue to obscure unfulfilled domestic promises.

Enter Vladimir Putin. Blair, unlike other Western leaders, paid an obsequious visit to Yeltsin's handpicked successor before the Russian election. In a virtual campaign endorsement played up on Russia's state-owned TV, Blair bestowed pre-emptive forgiveness on the former KGB operative who had won popularity among Russians by slaughtering the pesky Chechens.

Now it's diplomatic payback time: Putin is in London on Monday to take tea with Queen Elizabeth II, courtesy of Tony Blair. The prime minister sees himself as the broker between the Russian leader who needs Western money and Blair's trans-Atlantic sidekick, Clinton, who is desperate for his own foreign-policy fix before departure.

To some, Putin's London visit will recall Mikhail Gorbachev's meeting with Margaret Thatcher, who then announced the Russian was "a man we can do business with." But Maggie had a card up her sleeve: Gorbachev had been set up. He was briefed for the London meeting by his trusted KGB station chief, Oleg Gordievsky — who the world later learned was spying on the Russian leader for Britain's MI6.

The tables are turned today: The KGB man briefing himself is the Russian leader. He comes prepared to offer a fake concession: Now that he no longer needs an invigorating war (and indeed needs to reduce Russian casualties being inflicted by guerrillas), Putin will agree to negotiate a face-saving form of surrender by the Chechens. This will allow Blair to pose as peacemaker.

In return, Putin will get exactly what he wants from the prime minister: British pressure on Clinton not to exercise the U.S. right of withdrawal from the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty made three decades ago with the now-defunct Soviet Union. Putin's goal is to block any U.S. ability to deal with the threat of incoming missiles from rogue states like Iraq or North Korea.

That's why Putin came armed with his Parliament's long-delayed ratification of the Start II treaty, which reduces by thousands the long-range nukes held by the United States and Russia. Start II saves Russia money — many of its missiles are rusting anyway — and well serves the safety of both countries. But Putin conditions his approval on Clinton's willingness to hold to the outdated ABM treaty, thereby subjecting the United States to nuclear blackmail by dictators like Saddam Hussein.

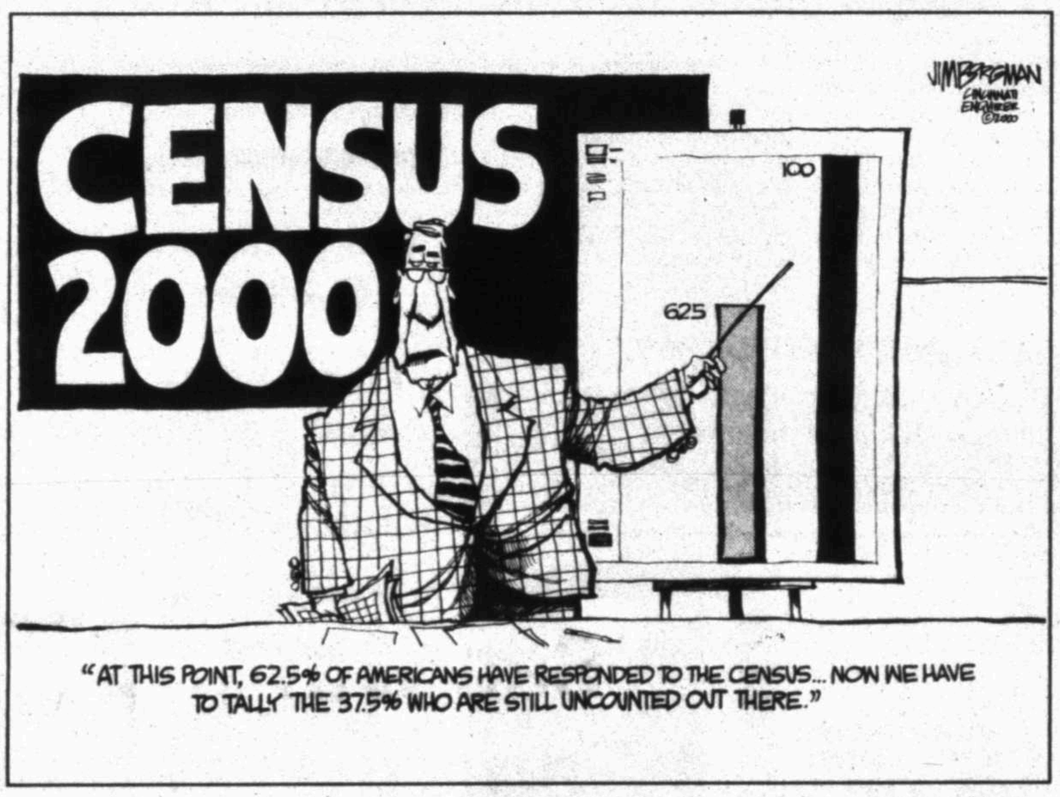

Will Blair play along with Putin to keep U.S. cities at risk? Yes. "Blair laid heavy emphasis on the importance of maintaining the ABM treaty ...," wrote Jim Hoagland of The Washington Post last week. Why? "I heard him suggest, without quite voicing, serious concern about the viability of Britain's own nuclear arsenal if the 1972 treaty is abrogated and missile defenses proliferate."

Strictly observing the interviewing rules of background, Hoagland thus reported a stunning divergence in Blair's perception of British and American strategic interests. If the United States develops a system to protect America and its allies from terrorist missiles, goes Blair's perverse notion of deterrence, it will somehow lessen the value of nuclear weapons held by Britain, which is not a terrorist nation.

America may now have to go it alone on missile defense, as these two control freaks, sipping her majesty's tea, strike up their special relationship.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

Five years ago, on April 19, 1995, a truck bomb destroyed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, killing 168 people and injuring hundreds. Timothy McVeigh was later convicted on federal murder charges and sentenced to death; Terry Nichols was sentenced to life in prison for conspiracy and involuntary manslaughter.

On this date:

In 1910, after weeks of being viewed through telescopes, Halley's Comet was reported visible to the naked eye in Curacao.

In 1933, the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1943, during World War II, tens of thousands of Jews living in the Warsaw Ghetto began a valiant but futile battle against Nazi forces.

In 1982, astronauts Sally K. Ride and Guion S. Bluford Jr. became the first woman and first African-American to be tapped for U.S. space missions.

Candidate wants schools to reach new heights

Charles Tighe will be an excellent school board member.

His three children went all the way through Midland's public schools, then completed excellent college careers. He believes in Midland's schools. He knows they can continue to improve, and he wants to be a part of a strong community-wide effort to make them better than they've ever been.

Let's elect Charles Tighe to the District 5 position on the Midland school board. I believe we'll be glad we did.

Margaret Cowden

High petroleum prices only great for oil companies

It's ironic, don't you think, when gasoline and oil prices are low, you have a certain group of people complain to the president and Congress, but when gasoline prices go up too fast you have a different set of people protest the high prices, which is probably the little guy? I think gasoline prices are too high. It's sad to see all the filling stations get together and charge the same price for a gallon of gas. This is really gouging the customers.

This kind of practice isn't right. I think that the high oil prices and gasoline helps the Midland economy, but whose economy does it really help? To me it means paying more at the pump for gas. The American people shouldn't stand for this. The high prices are great, if you own an oil company or have land that has oil on it, but for the little guy it really hurts him in the pocketbook.

Visit to local high school refreshing for speaker

On Monday, April 3, I was invited by Mrs. Jean Hightower to teach four of her social studies classes at Midland High School. My contact with high school students in recent years had been mostly through what I had read and heard in the media.

I just want to take this opportunity to say my experience that day was one of the most refreshing things I have done in a long time. The students were attentive and polite as I shared experiences from my 22 years in Africa as a missionary. They asked insightful questions when given the opportunity.

To top it all off, recently I received a lovely note from the teacher and written comments from each student thanking me for coming. I just wanted to state publicly my appreciation to Mrs. Hightower and her students for their thoughtfulness and to say that Midland can be proud of the quality of young people and teachers in their public schools as represented in my contact with this group.

Mrs. Betty Merritt

Council candidate given back more than others do

A remarkable young man is running for an at-large place on Midland's City Council. His name is Bill Dingus. At age 41, he has done more and given more than most people do in a long lifetime.

In the more than 50 years that my husband and I have lived in Midland, there has not been a person who has run for office who is as fine, as qualified, as tireless and compassionate as he.

I love this city; two of our four children have returned to Midland to live. In the course of 50-plus years, we've seen Midland make some mistakes, both small and not so small. We don't complain — that's what most all cities do. But to ignore this opportunity to have Bill Dingus on our city council would be a tremendous mistake and one many would find very hard to forgive.

Bill Dingus is tireless, he's intelligent — but not an intellectual snob — and he approaches all his goals with logic, respect and boundless energy. He seems to know innately what is right in all regards.

I implore all voters who care about Midland to vote on May 6 for Bill Dingus. It may be the smartest thing Midland has ever done.

Bolivian upheaval underscores dissent over free-market policies

COCHABAMBA, Bolivia (AP) — Around the leafy plaza of this colonial city in the Andean foothills, steps from a 16th-century church and Indian women hawking fresh fruit, spraypainted messages tell of a battle waged.

"Water is not for sale!" reads one slogan, painted in black. Another in red declares: "The water belongs to the people of Cochabamba."

A decades-old dispute over water rights sparked demonstrations, roadblocks and violent confrontations across Bolivia last week. In this city, thousands of Indians crowded the Plaza 14 de Septiembre to protest.

For angry campesinos, the matter was simple: They had for decades shared among themselves the cost of maintaining their local wells, and now the government was privatizing the water supply. Under an approved plan, an international consortium would begin administering water, and initial bills shot up between 35 and 200 percent.

The result was a head-on clash of the free-market policies of modern-day Latin America against decades of Bolivian tradition. The struggle brought Bolivia's third-largest city to a standstill.

Brandishing sticks and iron bars, men, women and children manned roadblocks in a haze of smoke and tear gas. Buses idled, store shelves sat empty and the price of soda skyrocketed fivefold. By the time the protests subsided nationwide, six people lay dead.

Cochabamba, 350 miles east of the capital of La Paz, has had water problems dating back a quarter century. Only half the city's residents have regular access to treated water; slightly less have a working sewage system. It's not unusual to see throngs of Indian families washing their multicolored wraps in the shallow rivers snaking around the city.

But mountain water flows freely just beyond the jagged Andes mountaintops, and a consortium led by London-based International Water Ltd. had hoped to redirect the water through a long tunnel. The $200 million project, which the government can't afford by itself, would have served as a source of electricity and provide water for corn, alfalfa and fruit on nearby land.

But the farmers argued against the plan, saying they were backed by a 1906 law written when Bolivia was a mostly agrarian economy. They said it states that water is not for sale because it belongs to the state.

"That's where the government's problems with this whole privatization began," said Gonzalo Rico, director of a state-owned company involved with the water project. "It didn't help that the farmers didn't understand how the project worked and that it would bring better water to them in the long run."

One protest organizer, Juan Flores, said the farmers never considered water a resource that could be bought or sold by the state.

"Suddenly the government was selling water sources that had been financed and maintained by these communities," he said. "And the new prices are way out of reach for many of these people."

Many in the most humble neighborhoods make little more than $65 a month, said Victor Flores, a community leader in one barrio, called Vinto.

A few of the simple, one-level brick homes have running water, Flores said, but many don't. Barefooted kids carry metal cans to collect water from an open well. Elderly men, bent over by heavy plastic pails of water, stagger down dusty roads.

"Sometimes the water comes out looking like coffee, or algae will build up in the sinks or toilets," Flores said.

"Of course we want water that is clean and drinkable," he said, "but we can't afford it at these new prices."

Like much of Bolivia, Cochabamba has felt the sting of a government crackdown on coca leaf planting, once a leading source of income. And what first began as a battle over water soon spurred widespread protests against President Hugo Banzer, who Bolivians insist isn't doing enough to jump start the economy of South America's poorest country.

Soon after the first unrest began, policemen were demanding higher salaries. So were teachers at rural public schools. Meanwhile, thousands of Aymara Indian farmers upset over Bolivia's struggling economy filled the streets.

Clinton faces tougher, more predictable partner in Putin

MOSCOW (AP) — After a backslapping seven years dealing with Boris Yeltsin, President Clinton will face a tougher summit partner in Vladimir Putin — but one who's likely to be more pragmatic and more predictable.

The new Russian president, who is to meet Clinton in a June 4-5 summit in Moscow, is an often stern-faced leader who keeps his emotions in check — at least in public — and relaxes by practicing judo. He is unlikely to engage in the kind of boisterous camaraderie that Yeltsin lavished on Clinton, calling him "Bill" and stressing their personal relationship.

Analysts say U.S.-Russian dealings, at least from the Russian side, are likely to be more businesslike and formal now. Still, though he may regard the United States with suspicion as he tries to rebuild Russia's stature as a great power, Putin wants good relations with the West, they add.

"His vision of Russia is a Russia that stands its ground," said Margot Light, a Russia scholar at the London School of Economics. "He is more of a hard-liner, but he's a man who realizes he has to deal with the West."

Both qualities were on display during Putin's visit to London over the weekend, when he addressed a major business forum. It was a sign of his need to attract foreign investment, but he also showed his immovable side, stonily rejecting Western accusations that Russia has used excessive force in Chechnya.

Clinton's visit to Moscow was announced at a time when many analysts say U.S.-Russian relations are at their lowest ebb since the Soviet collapse.

The two sides have sparred over the U.S.-led bombing of Yugoslavia and Iraq, Russia's ties to countries such as Iraq and Iran and U.S. accusations of Russian corruption. And while Yeltsin stressed relations with the United States, Putin appears ready to focus more on Europe.

Some say a tougher but more predictable negotiating partner could be a relief. Yeltsin, enfeebled by age and illness, often startled Western officials with his erratic behavior.

German officials once watched in consternation as Yeltsin grabbed a baton and wildly began conducting a military band. Irish officials once waited in vain for Yeltsin to get off an airplane in Shannon, Ireland. He later said he was sick.

Yeltsin's bonhomie "had something unstatesmanlike about it," said Light, the Russia expert. "People didn't always know how to respond to it."

It's a safe bet that Putin will be more staid. It took visible effort for him to call British Prime Minister Tony Blair by his first name during a televised phone call. During the recent presidential campaign, he often looked like he'd rather have been somewhere else instead of mixing with ordinary people.

The central topic of the summit will likely be arms control, with Clinton seeking to overcome vociferous Russian objections to a proposed U.S. missile defense system. The United States wants Russia to permit modifications to the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty so it can build a defense against "rogue" states such as North Korea.

Russia fears that the U.S. plan would undermine the deterrent value of its own missiles. Putin has said that if the United States backs out of the ABM treaty, he will tear up the START II arms agreement ratified April 14 by the Russian parliament — and all other arms control agreements with Washington as well.

Analysts say Clinton may find there is room for negotiation. One tack could be offering Russia even deeper cuts in U.S. and Russian nuclear arsenals under a START III treaty in return for ABM changes.

Clinton has less than a year left in office to achieve a legacy on arms control. To get a deal, he may have to offer Putin a chance to save face with some significant concession, analysts say.

Putin needs "some sort of step forward from Clinton" to overcome doubts in the Russian military, said Lilia Shevtsova, an analyst at the Moscow Carnegie Center.

Putin may push for U.S. support in getting European governments to let Russia stretch out repayment of some of its huge debt to the West. Russia also hopes the International Monetary Fund, where the United States has considerable influence, will unfreeze part of a stalled $4.5 billion in loans.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED INCREASE IN ENVIRONS GAS RATES AND SERVICE CHARGES

On March 8, 2000 Energas Company filed a statement of intent with the Railroad Commission of Texas to increase its gas rates in the unincorporated areas ("Environs") surrounding the sixty-seven West Texas Cities listed below. The proposed increase would affect all classes of environs tariff customers including Residential, Commercial, Public Authority, Small Industrial and Air Conditioning customers and would be identical in relative magnitude to those proposed by the Company for the sixty-seven West Texas cities in the Company's pending Appeal at the Railroad Commission. The proposed effective date for the increase is April 27, 2000. The Railroad Commission may delay the proposed effective date for up to 150 days. However, the environs rates will not be changed until the rates inside the sixty-seven West Texas Cities are changed. There are approximately 22,275 Environs customers in the unincorporated areas surrounding the sixty-seven West Texas Cities from which the Company has appealed to the Railroad Commission. The proposed changes in environs rates are expected to increase the Company's annual revenues by approximately $1.0 million or 8.5%, adjusted for normal weather. The change is a "major change" under state law only in the environs of Lubbock and Odessa.

Energas proposes to restructure its gas rates to moderate bill variability during the heating season, to increase its revenues from gas service by increasing the customer charges and lower pricing blocks, and to increase its charges for miscellaneous services such as reconnecting gas services following nonpayment. The Company also proposes changes to its Gas Cost Adjustment ("GCA") Clause to collect all of the gas cost and related taxes instead of just the difference between actual gas cost and a base cost of gas in the base rates. Copies of the proposal may be obtained at the Energas Office at 5110 80th, Lubbock, Texas, 79424.

Customers who are affected by the proposed environs rate changes may, within 30 days following the proposed effective date, file written comments or a protest with:

Docket Services Section
Legal Division (Re: Docket No. 9002-9068)
Railroad Commission of Texas
P.O. Box 12967

Any such protest must be received by the Commission no later than May 27, 2000. The deadline to file a petition to intervene in the case as a party is May 27, 2000.

NATO commander: Creation of 'secure environment' a top priority

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — The new commander of Kosovo's international peacekeepers said Tuesday his top priority would be creating a "safe environment" in a province defined by ethnic hatred and violence.

Nine months after NATO entered Kosovo to try to end fighting between Serbs and ethnic Albanians, violence still claims lives every day.

Lt. Gen. Juan Ortuno of Spain on Tuesday took command of the peacekeeping operation, known as KFOR. His group — Eurocorps — is the first non-NATO unit to lead KFOR. Eurocorps is the new European military bloc, whose members, France, Germany, Belgium, Spain and Luxembourg are also part of NATO.

Ortuno's predecessor, German Gen. Klaus Reinhardt, urged Kosovo's rival ethnic communities to end the rivalries that plunged the province into ethnic warfare and led to the arrival of the peacekeeping force after 78 days of NATO bombing.

Ortuno, 60, said his main priority was, "the provision of a secure environment in Kosovo and to allow the continued return of refugees."

The return of refugees, ethnic Albanian and Serbs alike, is a delicate issue. Western countries have begun to send back refugees and hundreds have returned in recent months.

U.N. officials are concerned that Kosovo's shaky infrastructure will be unable to cope with an influx of people without jobs and sometimes without homes.

The presence of Serbs in the U.N. interim council, the de facto government, is seen as a test for the international community's ability to bring both sides together in a multiethnic society. Moderate Serb leaders say they will withdraw from the council if Serb refugees do not begin to return within three months.

Ortuno stressed the importance of cooperation between the KFOR and the United Nations.

U.S. and NATO commanders are worried about a newly formed rebel group of ethnic Albanians who operate just outside Kosovo's eastern administrative boundary in Serbia, but are believed to move freely between Kosovo and Serbia proper.

The group calls itself the Liberation Army of Presevo, Medvedja and Bujanovac, named after three predominantly ethnic Albanian towns just outside Kosovo. It is comprised of fighters who say they are trying to protect villagers in the region from attacks by Serb forces.

On Tuesday, Reinhardt urged both sides to stop the violence.

"The proper tools for a peaceful coexistence are not the use of weapons; they are not the use of macho violence; and they are not the harassment of your political opponents," he said. "Practicing confrontation, vengeance and ethnic hatred opens the province to extremists, to chaos and to disaster."

Alluding to recent violence against Kosovo's dwindling Serb minority on the part of ethnic Albanians seeking revenge for the mass crackdown ended last year by NATO air strikes, Reinhardt said that the peacekeeping force and the United Nations "came to Kosovo to prevent a great injustice."

"We did not come here to see that same injustice inflicted on a different group of people," he added.

In the same vein, NATO's supreme commander in Europe, Gen. Wesley Clark, called on all of Kosovo's people to "halt a cycle of violence" and work together to create peace.

"It may be too early to expect ideal harmony, but it is certainly too late to accept any continuing violence," he said.

German insurance companies pledge $250 million to Nazi fund

BERLIN (AP) — German insurance companies pledged $250 million Tuesday to an industry fund aimed at protecting firms from lawsuits for their actions during the Nazi era.

All 463 members of the Association of German Insurance Companies will be contributing to the $5 billion fund — the first time a business group in Germany has joined together to give money in the effort.

"We look forward to other associations following this very good example," said Wolfgang Gibowski, spokesman for the fund, who added that discussions are ongoing with other business groups.

Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder and the leader of Germany's Jewish community, Paul Spiegel, have led calls for more companies to join the fund to help industry meet its $2.5 billion share. This past weekend, the leader of Germany's Jewish community also urged more companies to contribute, saying most firms who profited from the use of Nazi-provided forced and slave labor had not yet pledged money.

Industry and government are splitting the fund 50-50. Before the insurance contribution, industry had collected more than $1.2 billion from about 1300 companies.

The fund is mainly aimed at compensating the victims of Nazi-era forced labor policies, mostly non-Jews from Eastern Europe who were made to work to help keep the German war machine running. Part of the fund is also aimed at resolving lingering issues concerning German companies' activities during World War II.

The firms formed the foundation last year under pressure of class-action lawsuits in the United States. In exchange for the fund, they will receive legal protection backed by promises from the U.S. government.

In a statement, the insurance association said they were giving the money because the companies feel they have an obligation to help the goal of the industry foundation.

Kenyan tribe fights drought, rival herdsmen

NANAM, Kenya (AP) — The impoverished people in this remote corner of northwestern Kenya are fighting for their lives on three fronts: in the north against Sudanese tribesmen, in the west against Ugandan herdsmen and in the south against a rival Kenyan tribe.

If that weren't enough, the nomadic herdsmen are now battling another dangerous enemy — an 18-month-old drought that has already killed 70 people and thousands of cattle, goats and donkeys, local leaders said Tuesday.

"We have been living on the skins of dead animals," said Awesit Dapal in the tiny community of Nanam 430 miles northwest of the capital, Nairobi.

The U.N.'s World Food Program estimates that some 2.7 million Kenyans — nearly 10 percent of the East African country's population — are threatened with food shortages caused by the same drought that has parched parts of neighboring Ethiopia, Somalia, Eritrea and Sudan.

Dapal, a tall Turkana tribeswoman with beads covering her neck and her lower front teeth removed according to tribal custom, said drought killed her year-old son and the last of her 10 camels last month. It had already killed hundreds of sheep, she added.

One of four wives of the same man, Dapal said the family's 24 children were now in danger. More than 300 people, including Dapal's family, gathered Tuesday in dusty, parched Nanam for an aid handout from the U.N. food agency.

Since March, the agency has twice distributed seven pounds of maize to anyone who could make their way here. But in an area where an AK-47 automatic rifle can be brought for seven cows and the tribal histories are steeped in warrior culture, running an aid operation is not easy.

"Selling guns is a way of life," said Tom Ochieng, a WFP official in Kenya, referring to the refugees from Ethiopia, Sudan and Somalia who crisscross the region.

With the proliferation of small arms since the 1980s, the price of an AK-47 has shrunk to a half-dozen cows from as high as 50, Ochieng said. By contrast, a Turkana man wishing to marry must pay a bride price of 20 cows.

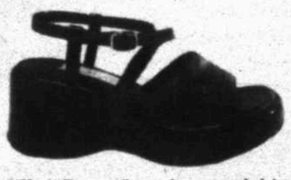

Besides undermining the work of aid agencies, the insecurity in the region is also a major cause of hunger.

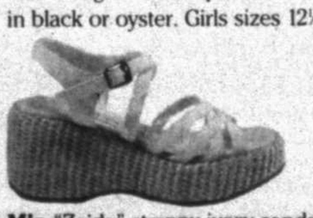

For centuries, the Turkana have ranged over vast tracts of land in search of better grazing and more water for their livestock. Now, they say it is not safe for them to move.

"We used to migrate to water holes but now when we reach them they are occupied by our enemies and we have to come back for security," said Amoni Ebei, a community elder, his head decorated with a hat adorned with ostrich feathers, part of a cow's tail and orange clay.

DPS nabs shooting suspect in Midland

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

An Odessa man wanted in connection with a Saturday night shooting and robbery in Odessa was arrested in Midland Tuesday morning by the Texas Department of Public Safety and sheriff's deputies from Midland County and Ector County.

Ricky Grumbles, 40, of Decatur and more recently Odessa, was arrested after a two-county manhunt that began Saturday night after the shooting of a West Odessa man, said DPS spokesman Jess Malone.

The search involved two stolen vehicles, both abandoned by Grumbles, also known as Ricky Glen Winchell, and shots fired by Texas Rangers as he fled a beer bar Monday night.

The search ended about 10 a.m. Tuesday with the help of Midland police dogs, when the suspect, who is on parole for aggravated robbery, surrendered to law enforcement officers without incident at an abandoned house in West Midland.

Grumbles was arrested for attempted capital murder and parole violation and was detained in the Midland County Detention Center. He was transferred to the Ector County Detention Center Tuesday evening.

Grumbles is accused of shooting James Allen Glidwell, 39, at 4370 N. Robin Road in Odessa. The suspect allegedly pretended to be buying a used car, said Ector County Sheriff's Office Sgt. Carl Rogers. Grumbles is accused of entering the house, pulling a weapon and robbing the two residents.

Grumbles allegedly tied them together with a bedsheet and stole jewelry and money when a stepbrother of one of the victims entered the home through a garage door. Grumbles reportedly was startled by the man and is allegedly shot him four times. Glidwell is in satisfactory condition at Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

The suspect fled the scene and eluded police Sunday and Monday. Malone noted that the search was aided by several tips throughout the manhunt.

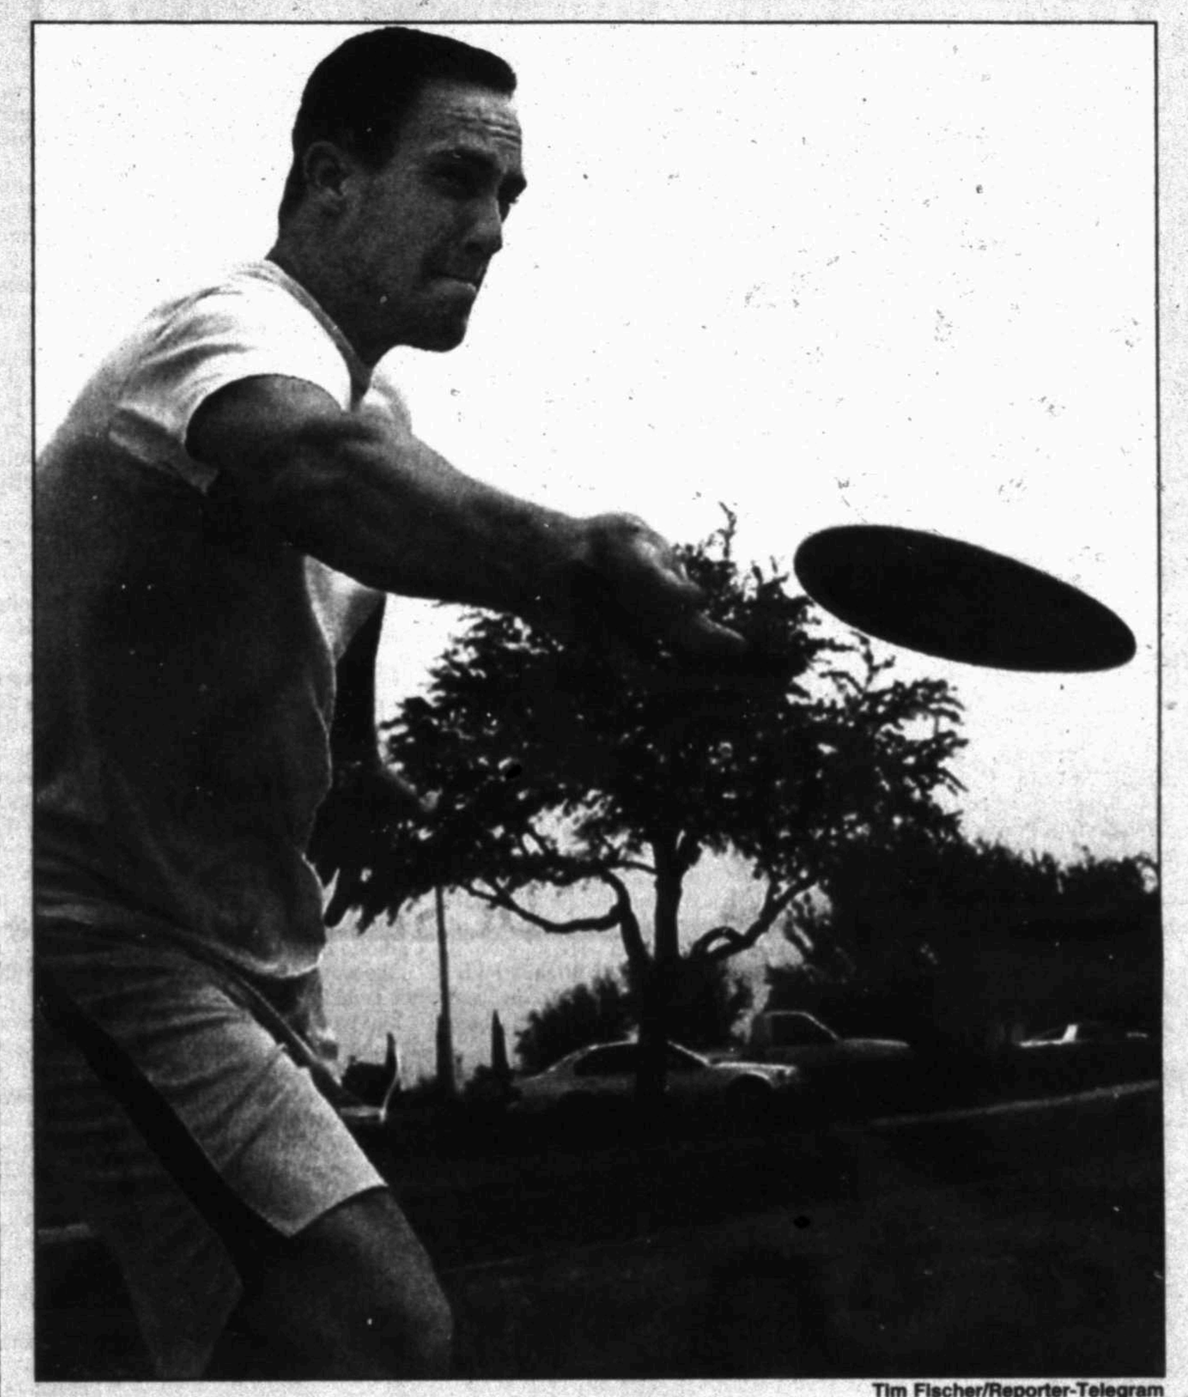

Deputies resumed the search Sunday with the help of Midland County Sheriff's Office mounted unit horsemen and a DPS helicopter, said Rogers.

The suspect's vehicle, reported to be a pickup and said to be stolen from Mineral Wells, contained property linked directly to the robbery, Rogers said. It was found Sunday near Highway 80 and FM 1788.

Grumbles eluded police again, but another tip led to a beer bar where Grumbles was leaving. The tip was answered by police and

Outside program funding applications due April 25

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Nonprofit organizations in need of funding from the city of Midland have until April 25 to apply for funds to be applied to economic development, tourism, convention promotion or extensions of city services.

The city of Midland is in the early stages of planning its 2000-2001 budget that goes into effect Oct. 1.

According to Assistant City Manager Tommy Hudson, funding sources fall under three categories: economic development, hotel/motel tax funds and non-departmental funds.

The hotel/motel tax comes from a 7 percent tax on hotel and motel room occupancies. According to state law, hotel/motel tax funds can be used for improving, maintaining or building convention centers, materials for registration of convention delegates, attraction of tourism and conventions, promotion of the arts and historical restoration.

Recipients of $1.2 million in hotel/motel funding include Midland Center, $450,000; capital for Midland Center, $64,000; Midland Chamber Convention and Visitors Bureau, $500,000; Midland Hispanic Chamber, $47,000; Midland Arts Assembly, $65,000; Confederate Air Force, $44,000; COM Swim Team $2,000; Texas Best, $3000; Museum of the Southwest $15,000; Midland County Historical Society, $3000; Petroleum Museum, $20,000; NIKE Golf Tournament, $6,500.

Herrera, the law firm and Salinas were found guilty of criminal contempt by practicing law without authorization and with criminal contempt by disobeying a court order by continuing to represent a client they were barred from representing.

The Herrera Law Firm was found guilty of criminal contempt for failing to supervise Eli Salinas and prevent him from practicing law without authorization.

Salinas was found guilty of criminal contempt for obstruction of justice by committing perjury for false affidavits and obstructing justice for falsely testifying under oath.

Herrera and Salinas could face up to six months in prison when they appear for sentencing today before Furgeson. In addition, Furgeson can revoke their licenses to practice law, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Roomberg, who is representing the government in the case.

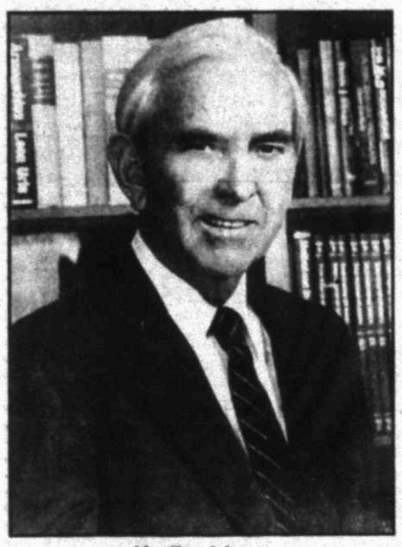

Herrera's attorney, David L. Botsford, stated in court documents that "the court had essentially found Jesse Herrera guilty of ... a failure to supervise one of his employees."

Botsford has asked the court to sentence Herrera to continuing legal education courses dealing with law office supervision and criminal law. Herrera now resides in Ruidoso, N.M.

Roomberg said the law firm's contempt of court troubles began in January 1996 with a case in Ector County against Nelson Gonzales on drug conspiracy and money laundering charges. Roomberg said Gonzales was represented by Tony Chavez, "but at some point, Gonzales wanted to switch to the Herreras."

The court ruled that representation by The Herrera Law Firm was a conflict of interest and barred the firm from being

Children honor parents with new charitable fund

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Continuing the legacy of philanthropy they lived, the children of Hy and Elizabeth Davidson have established a memorial fund that will help address area social, educational and cultural needs.

Steve Davidson, a former Midland resident now living in Irving, and his sister, Susan Davidson McClenahan of San Antonio, created the Elizabeth and H.W. Davidson Memorial Fund, a permanent component of the Permian Basin Area Foundation. The fund is a gift of the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation.

"Hy and Elizabeth gave a strong exhibition of the value they placed on giving to the community, so it's appropriate Steve and Susan chose to honor their parents' commitment by creating this fund," said Jack Swallow, executive director of the Permian Basin Area Foundation.

Steve Davidson, speaking from his office at The Meadows Foundation, said he and his sister believed the foundation is "an excellent vehicle for us as a family to, in some way, continue the support we've given through our Davidson Family Charitable Foundation for years."

The fund is unrestricted, meaning it may be used to fund any grant chosen by the PBAF's board of governors and its grants committee.

"It made sense to us that there would be changing and revolving needs as the community grows and prospers, so my sister and I decided it would be a good idea to give the board that flexibility," explained Davidson.

Another important motivation, he said, was "we wanted to encourage other people to consider creating a fund within the foundation. Private dollars are going to play a major role in alleviating a lot of social ills, and we want people to know it doesn't take a lot of money. A lot of funds have been set up with $5,000, $10,000 and $15,000 and they grow and grow. Foundation members believe that if they can get enough of these funds, it can be a major contributor in the community. The government can't do it all, and even as substantial a family as the Meadows can't do it all."

Moving to Midland in the early 1950s, the Davidsons were engaged in the oil

TEEN BEAT

Whatever happened to nonviolent protests of the good old days?

'Heck no, we won't go!"

This is a slightly censored version of the classic rallying cry, most commonly associated with the angry, frizzy-haired protesters of the 1960s. Even though it is nostalgic, out of date, and even overplayed at times, to me it represents something our society has lost. I'm talking about nonviolent protest.

Maddox

The key word here, of course, is NONVIOLENT; the concept is simple. Get lots of socially conscious, politically minded folk to gather in a public place, give them a catchy tune to sing (e.g. "We Shall Overcome") and call some attention to whatever cause happens to be your cup of tea, whether it be citizenship for little Elian or the legalization of domestic ferret ownership. Make a few signs, light a few candles, and before you know it, the news stations will be falling all over themselves to make domestic ferret ownership the hot new controversial issue.

Here, for the benefit of the socially challenged, are a few basic rules to a successful nonviolent protest. Do not, I repeat, DO NOT throw bricks and/or people through shop windows, light things on fire, yell and/or fling rocks at the police, loot 7-Eleven stores, or trample your fellow protesters. Indeed, break these basic rules and you deserve to be pelted with rubber bullets. Perhaps the National Guard in full riot gear can billy club some sense into you.

Unfortunately, the people who seem to have the most difficulty following these guidelines are the angst-ridden adolescents of my own generation. I can't even count the number of times I've seen young people on the evening news, speaking out against the World Trade Organization by bravely carrying a man-sized TV out of Best Buy, or protesting racial profiling by courageously hurling a half empty beer bottle at another protester.

Granted, protests of the past weren't perfect. I'm sure there were many instances of unwarranted violence among overzealous activists. But at least they were fighting for a worthy cause such as civil rights or ending an unpopular war. My generation doesn't even need a cause to start screaming slogans at each other.

Case in point: Woodstock '99. The music festival progressed merrily along until about 100 enraged 20-somethings started huge bonfires with the "Peace Candles" given to them by the concert promoters. They stormed the stage, beat each other senseless, and spray-painted "Profitstock" over the concert logo. Apparently, they were protesting the high cost of the snack stand nachos.

If any problem, even one as trivial as snack food, justifies an all-out youth riot, what stops me from "protesting" excessive homework in physics by standing up in the middle of class, bellowing "Down with gravity!" and heaving an overhead projector at the unfortunate educator? I'd probably get an interview on "Dateline," maybe even my own talk show.

With all the media attention events like Woodstock inevitably incur, the public has been made all too aware of the growing popularity of the violent protest. This leaves many of them asking what sparks this kind of frightening, unprovoked rage in the minds of young people like those at Woodstock.

Could it be that a noxious combination of grotesquely violent video games and insanely gory action films are being mercilessly advertised and sold to an increasingly apathetic and desensitized youth population, rendering them incapable of relating to other people without the aid of an aluminum baseball bat?

Nah ... couldn't be.

FUNDING: Deadline looms for submission of applications residents can apply for monies provided through the general fund. The city appropriates 1 percent of its general fund, or roughly $460,000, for economic development.

"State legislation allows a municipality, and other cities with populations of 900,000 or less, to appropriate from the general fund amount not to exceed 1 percent of the general fund budget for that year for the purpose of advertising the municipality and promoting its growth and development," said Hudson.

Organizations currently receiving economic development funding include the Midland Chamber, $224,720; Midland Hispanic Chamber, $93,750; MOHRE, $38,900; Citizens Coalition, $37,500; Midland College, $24,000; and UTPB Small Business Development Center, $10,000.

Organizations can also receive city funding if they offer programs that are extensions of services already offered by the city.

The total amount currently provided for this funding is $184,202. Recipients include Permian Basin Community Centers, $66,402; Crime Stoppers, $21,200; Texas State Guard, $600; Keep Midland Beautiful, $35,000; Midland Teen Court, $30,000; D-FY-IT of Midland, $6,000; and Downtown Midland, Inc., $25,000.

City Manager Rick Menchaca encourages all organizations involved in convention and visitors, economic development, or ancillary services to city departments to apply.

"There is a limit on funds available and all applications will be reviewed by its respective citizen review committee — the hotel/motel tax advisory committee, city development advisory committee, and non departmental requests will be directly reviewed by the city council," Menchaca said. "Funds as usual are always tight and it's no different this year. We have asked our departments to reduce the nonpersonnel budget by 2 percent and we would ask outside agencies to do the same."

After the April 25 deadline, advisory boards for the hotel/motel funds and funds for economic development will review the applications to ensure they qualify. Those boards will then make recommendations to council. City Council will be the only group to review the extension services applications.

For funding applications contact City Hall at 685-7100.

In the meantime, one of the outside lawyers discovered the bogus billing practices and money laundering.

A bench trial was held July 30 with Tom Morgan representing the Herrera Law Firm and Jesse. Salinas was represented by Warren Heagey.

In separate troubles for The Herrera Law Firm, the government has alleged for months that former employees of the law firm and some Herrera family members have engaged in illegal drug transactions in and out of the law firm's offices. The firm's offices in Midland and Odessa have recently been sold to a former partner of Herrera's, Israel Guardiola.

Blacks ask for Marshall police chief's resignation

MARSHALL (AP) — Members of the black community here plan to ask the Marshall City Commission to fire the police chief for racial statements he made in a 1998 deposition.

Several hundred people gathered Monday night at a Marshall church to speak out against Charles Williams' remarks. They plan to submit petitions for Williams' dismissal during a Marshall City Commission meeting April 27.

Williams' comments have been widely publicized because Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the presumed Republican presidential nominee, appointed him to a top law enforcement post.

Charles Oliver, who attended Monday's meeting, said Williams' remarks should outrage blacks and whites alike.

"We cannot let it stand," Oliver said. "The white community should be just as concerned."

While Williams has apologized for the comments, he previously said he did not consider several racially charged terms to be slurs. He made his comments in a deposition in 1998 in a race discrimination lawsuit filed against him.

At the time, he already was serving on the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education, which oversees the state's law enforcement training. A year later, Bush elevated him to chairman.

In that deposition, lawyers asked Williams about several comments that were allegedly made in the department. Williams testified that terms such as "porch monkey" and "black bastard" were not racial slurs. He also said blacks didn't mind being called "niggers" 50 years ago.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Gasoline prices down

HOUSTON — Gasoline prices in Texas have dropped 10 cents a gallon in the past month, according to the latest survey of service stations by AAA Texas.

Self-serve regular unleaded fuel averages $1.38, compared to $1.48 in the same survey taken in March, the auto club said Tuesday.

A national survey by AAA found gasoline prices now at $1.49 per gallon, down 5 cents from a month ago, when the $1.54 was the highest average price per gallon ever recorded by AAA.

"OPEC's decision to increase oil production helped push gasoline prices downward," AAA Texas spokeswoman Rose Rougeau said. "This is welcome news to millions of motorists and commercial drivers as they look toward the summer driving season."

Among 15 Texas cities surveyed, Corpus Christi had the cheapest gasoline, averaging $1.24 per gallon. Dallas, at $1.48, was the most expensive.

A month ago, Houston recorded the highest Texas prices, nearly $1.52. San Antonio was the least expensive at $1.44.

■ Two dead at Prairie View A&M

PRAIRIE VIEW — A man and woman were fatally shot Tuesday afternoon in a parking lot at Prairie View A&M University in what authorities believe was a murder-suicide.

The shootings occurred just before 1 p.m. when a man shot the woman, then himself, in a lot near the architecture building on the north side of campus, school spokesman Bryan Barrows said.

The woman, Kirsten Tarver, was a 22-year-old senior architecture major from Houston. Tarver was to graduate in August.

Barrows said the man was not a student, but declined to release his name until the man's family members could be contacted.

"Both died at the scene," he said. "We're still investigating why this happened. They knew each other but we don't know the extent of their relationship."

Campus police were handling the investigation, Barrows said.

Shortly after the shooting, dozens of students milled about the scene as police cordoned off the area where the bodies, which authorities covered, remained on the ground.

■ Mysterious odor sickens some

HOUSTON — A Continental Airlines flight bound for Fort Lauderdale, Fla., returned to Houston shortly after takeoff Tuesday when a noxious odor was detected on board, causing dozens to feel queasy.

About 40 or 50 passengers complained of nausea, Continental spokesman Dave Messing said. Eight suffering more acute symptoms were taken to Columbia Kingwood Medical Center as a precaution, though none was thought to be seriously ill, he said.

Flight 1856 was carrying 117 passengers and five crew members. It was eastbound from Bush Intercontinental Airport for less than 30 minutes before turning around early Tuesday afternoon.

Houston Fire Department paramedics provided treatment to anyone requesting it. Another aircraft took off for Florida around 3:20 p.m. with all but the eight sick passengers aboard.

"They (airline workers) are going through to look at the (initial) aircraft," airline spokesman Ned Walker said. "They'll determine what the source of the odor was, and corrective actions will be taken."

MC, Manor Park to collaborate on child care facility

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

At its Tuesday afternoon meeting, Midland College announced a new cooperative effort between the school and Manor Park. The two entities will join together in offering child care.

"I think it's a win-win on both sides," said Richard Jolly, vice president of instruction at Midland College.

According to Glyndon Ruth Kimbrough, health care administrator at Manor Park, the elderly living center discovered that it had a need to offer child care for employees. Likewise, Midland College's child care program has an extensive waiting list and no additional space to expand the program.

The solution to those two problems will result in an on-site child care facility at Manor Park. The childcare will operate under its own license and will offer preference to employees of Manor Park, then the great-grand children of residents and finally MC students and the community at-large. The facility will offer care for 17 children.

"One of the biggest problems we face in health care is the turnover of our nurses aides," said Ms. Kimbrough, adding that child care concerns over child safety is a major consideration of working mothers. "This way they can come to work with their child. They can take their breaks and go see their child or have lunch with them."

MC will provide the services, staff and expertise for the facility while gaining an extra classroom. Students seeking an education in child care or education will be able to get laboratory experience at the Manor Park facility and the school will use the program for additional training opportunities. Some MC nursing students also do their clinical studies at Manor Park and could benefit through placing their children in the child care program.

Ms. Kimbrough added that children and elderly residents also will benefit from the interaction. "We already have the Eden Alternative Program where we bring in kids, plants and pets to make the environment more natural and home-like (for elderly residents)," said Ms. Kimbrough. "Part of this program puts an emphasis on elderly interaction on a regular basis with children."

Additionally, Ms. Kimbrough said children will benefit through gaining a better understanding of the elderly and becoming more sensitized.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the Midland College board approved an item that would place a new sign at the school's Wadley Avenue entrance.

MC President David Daniel also discussed future plans for a residence dining hall that will be funded in part by a $1 million donation by Jack and Francis Brown. Subsequently, Daniel announced that the dining hall will be named for Brown.

Group forms to battle health care discrimination

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Low insurance reimbursement rates for female-specific medical care are unfair and putting a financial squeeze on hospitals, a group of women's health advocates said Tuesday.

The Equal Health Care Alliance of Austin was formed to "end gender discrimination in health care insurance reimbursement rates," said Margaret Thompson, an obstetrician-gynecologist at Renaissance Women's Center.

She is one of several doctors in the group suing to keep the hospital open. Its owners want to close the facility because of financial losses of about $2 million a year.

A Travis County judge has ordered the hospital to remain open until after the trial expected this summer.

The group cited a University of Washington Medical Center study that concluded hospitals are reimbursed between 37 and 50 percent less for female-specific surgeries such as hysterectomies over male-specific surgeries like prostate removal.

"We were surprised to discover that women's health care procedures, especially those related to maternity care are reimbursed at rates drastically lower than equivalent services for men," Thompson said.

Managed care industry officials in Texas say the group used outdated statistics from other states and that raising reimbursement rates for procedures such as child birth would result in higher premiums.

"The numbers are not valid in Texas in 2000 and even if they were, why would they want women to pay higher premiums than they already do?" said Jerry Patterson of the Texas Association of Health Plans.

Reimbursement rates, which are kept confidential, are based on the fact that many women's procedures are more difficult and expensive than procedures for men, Patterson said.

"These things are based on experience, the difficulty of the procedure and the market place," he said.

Hospital officials say other factors contribute to their financial struggles, including paying high salaries and expensive services.

"It's a financially-distressed institution. A lot of that has to do with a lot of issues, reimbursement is certainly one of them," said Ed Gray, acting chief executive of Renaissance Women Center LLC, the Austin hospital's parent company.

"The company decided to close its doors after considering many, many other options," he said.

Equal Health Care Alliance members and Gray both said low managed care reimbursement rates have created a crisis for some hospitals across the country.

The 3,300-member Equal Health Care Alliance includes co-chairs Susan Dell, wife of Dell Computer Corp. chief executive Michael Dell, University of Texas women's athletic director and basketball coach Jody Conradt and Lucy Baines Johnson, the daughter of former President Lyndon Johnson.

Members will encourage employers to renegotiate contracts with health care providers to ensure fair reimbursement rates. The group will pursue state and federal legislation, Thompson said.

"It won't be easy but it will be hard for decision makers to justify a health care system that values bunion removal over child birth," she said.

Teen pleads guilty to role in murders

WACO (AP) — A 16-year-old Killeen boy pleaded guilty Monday to federal carjacking charges for his role in the June 21 kidnapping and slaying of an Iowa couple near Fort Hood.

Tony Sparks, who was certified to face the charges as an adult, faces a maximum life prison term after his plea in Waco's U.S. District Court to armed carjacking resulting in death.

Sparks joins Michael Lewis, 15, Terry Terrell Brown, 17, and Gregory Hardin Lynch, 15, all of Killeen, who have confessed to playing parts in the deaths of Stacie Lynn Bagley and her husband, Todd Alan Bagley, of Ottumwa, Iowa.

The Bagleys' burned bodies were found in the trunk of their car at the edge of Fort Hood. Both had been shot in the head.

Man dies from gunshot wound during chase

The four-minute pursuit by Levelland Police and Department of Public Safety officers ended on FM 300, just west of U.S. 385 early Sunday morning.

DPS troopers began the chase and radioed for help when they saw David Rodriguez run a stop sign around 12:05 a.m., Levelland Police Chief Ted Holder said.

"The Levelland units pulled up beside him attempting to bring him to a stop, and during that time he rammed one of the units," DPS Lt. Steve Shatley said.

Shots were fired as a second Levelland unit began to speed ahead of Rodriguez's vehicle to slow him down, but it's unknown who fired them.

"Deadly force was not used by us until after the driver of the automobile first used deadly force against our police officers," Holder said.

He did not say whether an officer from his department fired the fatal shot, but said this is the first time a Levelland officer has been involved in a deadly shooting.

Shatley said DPS agents apparently fired no shots. He did not know how many officers were near Rodriguez at the time of the shooting or how fast they were going.

The Texas Rangers are investigating the chase and will report their findings to Attorney General John Cornyn.

Rodriguez's family members say they believe he was beaten or otherwise abused after the shooting. The abuse caused a skull injury, enhancing the severity of the gunshot wound, they say.

Holder refutes the allegations. He says police records show Rodriguez has been arrested 14 times in two years.

"We didn't have any idea who it was during the pursuit, but when we saw him, we knew exactly who it was," he said. "That young man was in no way hit, struck, beaten or in any way mistreated by any law enforcement agency after the vehicle was stopped."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, April 19, 2000: Emphasis is on finances and new potential. Your vision of what could happen changes quickly this year. Challenging what you hear often brings out another point of view. Be willing to grow and to break patterns. Your life becomes more dynamic. Your career demands flexibility. Go with the flow, and you'll gain. If you are single, romance is likely during the next few months, although you might feel you have other priorities this year. Others find that you offer a lot. If attached, your partner is there for you, often presenting different ideas. Accept other views; let go of stubbornness. SCORPIO enjoys you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Go with the tried and true as you check out financial information. Focus on making money. Opportunities strike, but the question is which way to go. Tempers flare when the unexpected occurs. Getting angry with another doesn't help. Tonight: Chill out with a partner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Others give you important feedback, whether you want to hear it or not. Stay on a steady, even course. You might find another's behavior a bit erratic. Ease up on your demands, if possible. Authority becomes a bone of contention. Tonight: Go along with another's ideas — for now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★ Clearly, you are out of sorts. Realize that limits might be self-imposed. Understand what is going on with another at a distance. You might need to discuss some strong feelings in order to deal with them. Schedule some time off. Tonight: Work off stress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Aim for what you want. Know what you want when another puts a plethora of options before you. A partner could be testy or unsure of what he wants or expects. Be supportive. Don't let problems occur. Tonight: Take a midweek break.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You quickly find out that you aren't the only one who is pressured. You could be overwhelmed by what is happening. Demands come from your family and career. An associate could easily become flaky. Try to surmount the current problem. Tonight: Work late.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Make your best effort to touch base with others. Try walking in their shoes and understanding their feelings. Your empathy will be greatly appreciated. Conversations are animated. Take a walk or break if you feel your nerves are getting frayed. Tonight: Out and about.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Your expenses could be out of whack, and a child could be costing more than you had anticipated. Avoid risk. You might find that one action causes a multitude of problems. A partner can be testy, especially if you don't run with one of his ideas. Tonight: Do your budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Others turn to you for answers. Opportunities happen because of tension and outside reactions. Associates have many ideas, but they might have a difficult time focusing. Realize that you are in control. Tonight: Allow another to chill out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★ Lie low. You might not totally understand what is going on; others are somewhat explosive, and they do the unexpected. Deal with personal frustrations; realize your limits within a given work situation. Use your high energy to work through stress. Tonight: Early to bed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Your sensitivity to others comes into play. You want to help, but raiding your checking account might not be the solution. Easy does it. Creativity is on the upswing. Keep yourself focused. You pick the financial wild card. Tonight: Where your friends are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Maintain a high profile. Decide to bring others together; start making calls. Listen to your sixth sense with family. Another goes hog wild trying to pitch in and help you. Your foundations are strong. Pressure builds at work. Be careful about tension. Tonight: Go with spontaneity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Make calls. Get a different perspective. Many offers come to you. The real question is deciding what you want to do. Initiate change when you feel comfortable with it. Actions are sudden and dynamic. Tonight: Opt for mental relaxation.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

How skilled is your declarer play? Study this diagram and decide how you would play six no-trump after the lead of the queen of spades.

You have reached six no-trump on a power auction where you showed 19 to 20 points with your two-no-trump rebid. All that remains is to bring home 12 tricks.

If you played a low spade from dummy, it is already too late. East discards a club and you have to look for a 12th trick. You cash nine tricks in the other three suits, but nothing good happens. You exit with a low spade, West wins and is forced to return a spade away from the remaining honor. But you have to either win the trick in dummy and then surrender a red-suit trick to East, or else overtake the spade and give up a spade for the setting trick.

It does not require any spectacular coup to land your slam. All you have to do is spend a high spade from the board on the first trick. Now cash your side-suit winners and lead a low spade toward the dummy, jettisoning the remaining high spade under West's honor. Now West must lead a spade away from the remaining honor in hand into your K-7 tenace, giving you three tricks in the suit and your slam.

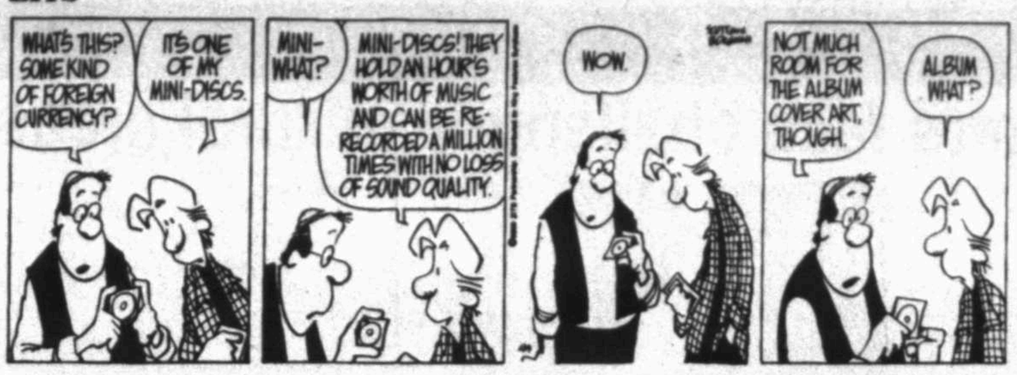

There are hopes for a squeeze. However, the defense against a squeeze is to keep the same length in the suits as there is to your right, so no competent defender should go wrong in choosing discards on spades.

PHOENIX — Country music star Waylon Jennings was recovering Tuesday from surgery to ease leg pain, a spokeswoman said.

Jennings, 62, underwent surgery Monday to ease the pain from peripheral vascular disease in both legs. He's expected to fully recover.

Peripheral vascular disease is a condition in which the arteries that carry blood to the arms or legs become narrowed or clogged, slowing or stopping the flow of blood.

"He came through it fine," spokeswoman Schatzi Hageman said Tuesday. She did not name the hospital.

Jennings' long list of hits includes "Good Hearted Woman" and "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow up to Be Cowboys," a duet with Willie Nelson.

CLEVELAND — It's back to college for Drew Carey.

The TV star has agreed to deliver the keynote speech at Cleveland State University's commencement on May 7.

This won't be the first time that the crew-cut Carey has donned a cap and gown. In 1996 he spoke to dental graduates at Case Western Reserve University.

Carey, a Cleveland native, attended Kent State University but dropped out.

"This isn't a frivolous thing," Valencic said.

Drew Carey will deliver the keynote speech at Cleveland State University's commencement.

LOS ANGELES — Tenacious D fans will be shocked to hear lead singer Jack Black sing "Let's Get It On" at the end of "High Fidelity," but it was Black himself who chose the song.

Black is known more for his heavy metal parodies than the sweet rendition of the Gaye standard that closes the movie starring John Cusack.

"I pushed for the song that they ended up using just cause I thought I could sing it well. They were talking about me doing another Marvin Gaye song that I didn't think rocked as hard. I wanted to really get a good clop in the chops at the end of the movie," Black told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

Black plays a bombastic music snob who works in a record store.

LOS ANGELES — Lee Iacocca, the brains behind the Ford Mustang and the minivan, will spend Earth Day on Saturday on two wheels.

Iacocca's EV Global Motors Co. styled an electric bicycle — the E-Bike — like a mountain bike. It can reach 20 mph and travel up to 20 miles on a single charge from a regular household outlet. Prices start at $995.

"Not only am I going to be out riding an electric bike everywhere, but I'm encouraging my friends and family to do the same," Iacocca said of his Earth Day plans. "Consumers are taking a real interest in clean energy and alternative-fuel vehicles."

Iacocca said E-Bike inquiries have tripled since gas prices nudged $2-a-gallon in recent months.

MIAMI — A player piano custom built for Liberace is to be auctioned May 13.

The 30-year-old, off-white wooden piano was expected to fetch more than $100,000, said Sloan's Auctions in Washington, D.C.

The player piano, which is also a fully functioning piano, was bought at a 1988 California estate sale by a collector who lives in Coral Springs, Fla. It is one of seven pianos made for Liberace, who died in 1987.

According to the entertainer's sister, this piano was his favorite, said Albert Parker, vice president in Sloan's Miami office.

The famed pianist had the instrument built for entertaining guests at his Las Vegas home. Liberace also recorded his own arrangements on the piano to create 45 player piano rolls, Parker said.

Josephine Vasquez is part of the group of 20 people gathered outside the Governor's Mansion during a lunch-hour protest Tuesday in Austin to call for the resignation of Texas Health Commissioner Dr. William "Reyn" Archer. Archer was quoted last week as saying that Hispanics "tend to be less judgemental towards a teen-ager who's pregnant than are members of other racial groups."

Small group of protesters pickets Governor's Mansion

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of about 20 protesters picketed the Governor's Mansion on Tuesday demanding the resignation of state Health Commissioner William "Reyn" Archer for his comment concerning teen pregnancy in Hispanic communities.

Archer last week apologized after being quoted in newspapers as saying that Texas' high teen pregnancy rate came about because the state's Hispanic population lacked the belief "that getting pregnant is a bad thing."

"I don't think his apology was good enough," said Austin attorney Gina Hinojosa, who organized the 30-minute lunch time protest. "Regardless of whether he's sorry or not, it hurts too many people."

Gov. George W. Bush, who approved Archer's appointment, has said the apology was appropriate and has rebuffed calls for Archer's resignation.

The protesters carried signs reading "Out With Archer" and "Gov. Bush, Fire Your Man."

Hispanic state lawmakers on Monday wrote Archer to tell him they were disappointed by his remarks and wanted him to explain them further.

Department of Health spokesman Doug McBride said Archer will not resign.

Prison officials trying to figure out what prompted standoff

AMARILLO (AP) — An investigation into why a prison inmate took a guard hostage inside a utility closet for seven hours last week at the William P. Clements Jr. Unit has revealed little about Charles Lamon Polk's motivation, prison officials said.

The only clue they have as to what caused the 35-year-old former trusty's actions is what he told negotiators during the seven-hour standoff last Friday. Before Polk surrendered and released Heather Wheeler, 26, unharmed, he told negotiators he was upset that he was denied a visit by his teen-aged daughter in mid-March during a system-wide lockdown.

The lockdown was ordered by Texas Department of Criminal Justice Executive Director Wayne Scott after a fatal stabbing in Palestine's Coffield Unit.

"Supposedly, his daughter was going to come and visit during the lockdown," Clements Unit Warden Keith Price said. "But we never could find where we approved a special visit and then it was denied because of the lockdown."

Price said Polk has not had any visitors since 1997.

Clements Unit administrators are pursuing aggravated kidnapping charges against Polk for barricading himself and Wheeler into an 8-by-10 closet about 2:30 p.m. Friday. Authorities say Polk broke a broom in half to use as a weapon.

Following the incident, prison officials locked down the unit until Sunday and placed Polk in isolation.

The psychiatric building where the incident occurred remained locked down until Tuesday. Polk has since been transferred to Lubbock's Montford Unit.

The hostage situation was the second of its kind in as many months at a Texas prison.

Two armed death row inmates used homemade weapons on Feb. 21 to hold a prison guard, Jeanette Bledsoe, 57, hostage in the Terrell Unit near Livingston, 40 miles east of Huntsville. She was released unharmed after 13 hours.

Regional officials from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice are reviewing how the most recent incident was handled and the emergency tactics unit officials used during the standoff. Price said TDCJ officials hope to come up with procedures to avoid similar occurrences.

In the meantime, Clements officials are updating the steel door that separated prison officials from the utility closet, Price said.

"We're going to put a (metal) plate on the inside key hole where the only way you can access that is through the outside, and add a peep hole in the door," the warden said.

Other units within the prison system have the same door, Price said, explaining the Clements Unit was built as a prototype for about a dozen other units.

Census 2000

Census-takers face challenges in rural areas

By Michelle Kolden
Associated Press

SIERRA BLANCA — Nineteen miles north of this tiny West Texas town, past endless fields of tall yellow grass and desert shrubs, is the beginning of a hilly dirt road.

From there, it's eight miles down the bumpy path, beyond the signs that read "No trespassing" and "Keep out — Private property," before you reach Jim Walker's trailer.

It is the task of Census Bureau workers to find Walker and thousands of other Americans who live way out in the country.

Census-takers must go door-to-door in rural areas because the agency has a rule against mailing census forms to post office or rural route boxes.

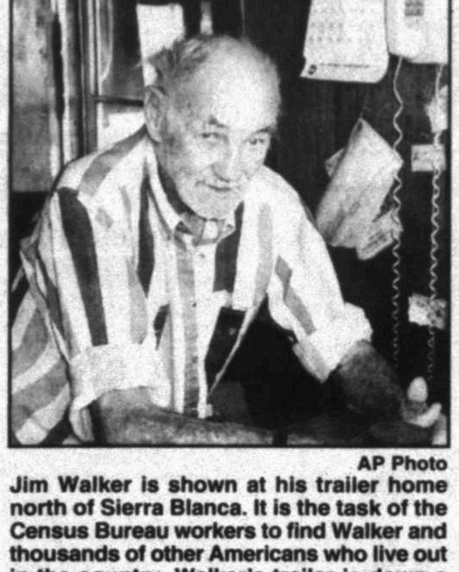

Walker, 80, doubts the headcounters will be able to find everyone. The census-takers are dropping by known homes and driving around, looking for other residences, only until May 1 but will make follow-up visits through early July.

Out here, "it's pretty hard to get around," said Walker, who has raised cattle for the last 25 years on the Gunsight Ranch in Hudspeth County, estimated population 3,200. A census worker called to tell Walker to expect a visit, but five days after the appointment, no one had shown up.

Some politicians fear that many rural Americans will go uncounted.

Val Beard, the county judge, or top elected official, in Brewster County — the largest county in Texas and home to Big Bend National Park — believes the count would be higher if the Census Bureau would mail forms to people with P.O. boxes.

Beard contends that census-takers driving around will never be able to locate everyone in sparsely populated yet vast counties such as hers, which is bigger than Connecticut and Rhode Island combined.

AP Photo

Jim Walker is shown at his trailer home north of Sierra Blanca. It is the task of the Census Bureau workers to find Walker and thousands of other Americans who live out in the country. Walker's trailer is down a bumpy path eight miles from a dirt road.

"We think it's a horrible mistake for all of rural America," she said. "It's going to cut out a lot of people."

Beard points out that some people have locked gates several miles from their homes, that some may not be home when census-takers arrive and that a good number would be more likely to respond by mail than to open the door to a stranger.

One census-taker working in Brewster County faced yet another obstacle: A pet javelina — a type of wild hog — sprang out from under a porch and attacked her. The woman had gashes on both legs and needed 20 stitches.

Community leaders say an exact count is vital because the census is used to determine how to distribute billions of federal dollars for schools, housing, health care and other programs.

Census Bureau spokesman Frank Newton dismissed Beard's concerns.

"It's not correct to say we're going to be missing people out in rural, remote areas," said Newton, spokesman for the district that includes Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. "From our perspective, we're doing even more to make sure those people are counted."

Census officials say they cannot mail forms to P.O. boxes because each person has to be linked to a specific residence. They also say that some people have more than one P.O. box and that they want census-takers out searching for people who don't get mail.

Census officials have tried to recruit people to go door-to-door in their own communities, since residents of remote areas not only know where all of the houses are but won't be considered strangers when they approach.

"We will go up to a cardboard shack," said George Bell, manager of field operations at the agency's El Paso office.

China urges United States to stop all arms sales with Taiwan

By Charles Hutzler
Associated Press

BEIJING — China called on the United States to end all arms sales to the rival Taiwanese government Tuesday, a day after Washington went part way in meeting China's demands by deciding not to sell Taiwan advanced Aegis destroyers.

Word that President Clinton will forgo the Aegis sale disappointed Taiwanese leaders, but it brought hope for a cooling of tensions with China. In Washington, it sparked worries of a fight with Congress over support for the island.

In Beijing, which has been trying to isolate Taiwan to pressure it into unifying with the mainland after 51 years of separation, Clinton's move was seen as insufficient. While denying Taiwan the Aegis-equipped warships, U.S. officials said they would sell the island long-range radar to detect missile launches as well as provide training and technical help.

"The Chinese government urges the U.S. government ... to stop all arms sales to Taiwan, including the long-range warning radar and Aegis, so as not to obstruct the improvement of China-U.S. relations," Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Sun Yuxi told reporters at a briefing Tuesday.

Sun reminded Washington to abide by an 18-year-old agreement on limiting arms sales to Taiwan. He said Beijing had "taken note" of reports on Washington's decision on Aegis.

Washington's decision to withhold Aegis marked the first of two successes for Chinese diplomatic pressure this week. Rallying developing nations, Beijing also prevailed Tuesday in blocking the U.N. Human Rights Commission in Geneva from discussing a U.S. motion to censure China for human rights abuses.

As part of its pressure campaign against Taiwan, Beijing in recent months have stepped up threats to attack the island if it moved toward outright independence. Chinese officials also have accused Washington of emboldening separatist sentiment through arms sales — an argument Sun repeated.

The destroyers had come in for particular criticism. At one point a senior Chinese official indirectly hinted that China might attack the warships if they were sold to Taiwan.

The Arleigh Burke-class destroyers are equipped with the Aegis system, which includes an advanced radar, the SPY-1, able to search for, track and engage more than 100 targets simultaneously. The ships also come with Tomahawk cruise missiles like those used against Iraq and Yugoslavia. China fears the system would undercut the tactical edge drawn from its rapidly growing arsenal of missiles.

AP Photo

President Clinton's decision to shelve Taiwan's request to buy four billion-dollar U.S. destroyers, like the USS Lassen shown, is likely to touch off a fight with Congress, where support for the island is strong. More than 500 feet long and armed with 90 Tomahawk missiles, six torpedo tubes and a 5-inch deck gun to boot, the USS Lassen is the 14th Aegis-Class destroyer built by Ingalls Shipbuilding in Pascagoula, Miss.

In reviewing Taiwan's annual arms shopping list, the Pentagon recommended that the administration put off Taiwan's request to buy four of the billion-dollar apiece destroyers, as well as submarines and anti-submarine aircraft, to avoid angering China.

In Taiwan, Washington's reluctance to sell the warships was seen as a possible lift to strained relations between China and the island.

"I think this is a win-win situation" for Taiwan and China, said Andrew Yang, a Taipei-based senior military analyst at the Council of Advanced Policy Studies, a think tank with close ties to Taiwan's Defense Ministry. He said Beijing would have been furious about the deal.

Selling Aegis this year would have been particularly provocative. Beijing is already nervous about Taiwan's newly elected president, Chen Shui-bian, whose party has previously backed formal independence. Chen, who will be sworn in May 20, is under pressure to improve relations with China.

But Washington's decision also added to the debate over what Taiwan needs to fend off Beijing. While China is believed to be years away from having sufficient force to invade the island, foreign military analysts have criticized Taiwan's military for not making good use of the advanced weaponry already purchased.

Vocal Taiwan backers in Congress, where support for the island runs deep, criticized the Clinton administration for compromising Taiwan's defense.

A spokesman for Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative North Carolina Republican who heads the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, suggested Tuesday that the administration may have violated a U.S. law requiring Washington help Taiwan maintain an adequate defense.

The Senate's Republican leader, Sen. Trent Lott of Mississippi, is expected to call for a vote on an arms package for Taiwan.

The Senate is also due to take up a measure, the Taiwan Security Enhancement Act, that would strengthen ties between the U.S. and Taiwanese militaries.

The Clinton administration has threatened a veto, and China has warned that approval of the act would harm relations.

Plane carrying 130 people crashes in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An Air Philippines jetliner carrying 130 people crashed in the southern Philippines Wednesday and rescuers said there were no signs of survivors.

The Boeing 737-200, which began its flight in Manila, circled the city of Davao, 625 miles southeast of Manila, before going down on nearby Samal Island, said Defense Secretary Orlando Mercado said.

Emergency crews arriving at the site of the still-smoldering plane said there were no signs of survivors. If that turns out to be the case, it would the worst plane crash in Philippine history.

The pilot of a small plane which flew over the area told authorities that the craft appeared to be totally destroyed.

"We have an initial report that one Air Philippines flight circled around Davao first and then crashed," Mercado said. "We are getting final confirmation of the other details."

The airline said that the plane was carrying 130 people — 124 passengers, including four babies, and six crew members.

There was no immediate word on what caused the crash. The airline said plane was given its normal maintenance check before taking off and it checked out OK.

Weather conditions at the time of the crash were good, the government weather bureau said.

Planes, buses and ferries throughout the Philippines were jammed Wednesday because of the start of Easter holidays, in which many Filipinos return to their hometowns.

It appeared to be the most serious crash in the Philippines since a twin-engine plane slammed into the hills in the northern part of the country on Dec. 7, killing all 17 people aboard.

In 1998, a Cebu Pacific DC-9 jet crashed near the top of a fog-shrouded mountain in the southern Philippines, killing all 104 people aboard in the country's worst air disaster.

Several of the country's airlines created since the industry was deregulated several years ago have been dogged with safety- and maintenance-related problems.

Prime minister attempts to break peace accord deadlock

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Tony Blair met with Northern Ireland political leaders and the Irish prime minister on Tuesday in a new effort to salvage the province's faltering peace accord.

He said he did not expect any breakthroughs in the complex issues, but hoped to work out a plan that would lead to restoration of powers to the Protestant-Catholic Cabinet suspended in February because of a deadlock over Irish Republican Army weapons.

"I think there are possibilities, but I think it is important that we don't raise people's expectations too highly before we know what those expectations may be," Blair said after a series of meetings in Belfast.

"I think there is a good will to see this thing through," he said. "There was an attitude by the parties in favor of the (1998 Good Friday peace) agreement that this is the only serious way forward."

The power-sharing Cabinet — which included the largest Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, and members of the IRA's political ally, Sinn Fein — was the centerpiece of the accord and was only 11 weeks old when its powers were lifted. The British government decided on a suspension to prevent the complete collapse of the administration should the Ulster Unionists carry out their threat to withdraw over the IRA's failure to commit to disarmament.

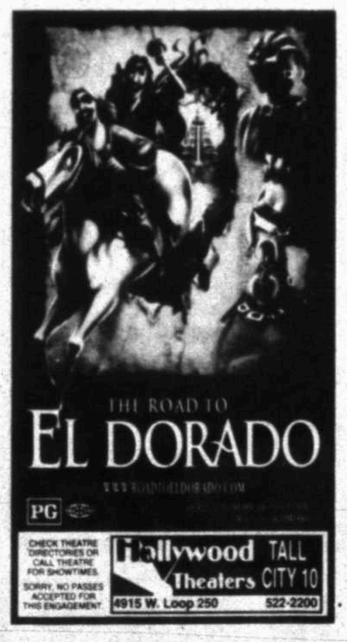

"What the British and Irish governments now have to seriously consider is what pressure can they bring to bear and how can they do it," Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble said after his meeting with Blair. "They really do have to rethink their approach to this and the business of always offering the republicans carrot after carrot is in itself not going to work.

John Hume, leader of Northern Ireland's main nationalist party, said he put forward a plan to break the impasse and that his meeting with Blair was "very positive."

CBS shipwreck 'survivors' compete for treasure on Borneo

AP Photo

A CBS video cameraman tapes the activities of three participants in the network's docudrama series "Survivor" on the island of Pulau Tiga, which is off the coast of Borneo. From back to front, Gervase, 30, Jenna, 22 and Colleen, 23, eat a meal of rice. The weekly, one-hour reality-adventure series is slated for broadcast in 13 episodes this summer.

By Beth Duff Brown
Associated Press

PULAU TIGA, Malaysia — Catch fish with a bamboo spear, and roast rats over an open fire. Help another castaway track down water — but don't sabotage your own chances for survival by calling her a stupid cow.

Outwit, outlast.

That's the motto of a group of adventurous Americans who are now vying for a million bucks on this little island off the coast of Borneo.

Sixteen back-stabbing castaways, captured on film by camera crews lurking behind palm fronds and coral reefs, are trying to outfox each other as well as vipers, poisonous plants and other natural perils.

In a bid to capitalize on America's obsession with reality TV, CBS is throwing millions of dollars behind "Survivor," which is to air in 13 weekly episodes beginning May 31. The network chose eight women and eight men — a mix of personalities and professions — and turned them loose on this lush rain-forest island.

"This is like an extreme version of an office or a large family," executive producer Mark Burnett told The Associated Press during a two-day visit to the island, allowed only after agreeing not to talk to contestants or reveal who remained halfway into the six-week contest.

"People are out for themselves and only themselves," said Burnett, creator and producer of the "Eco Challenge" series on the Discovery Channel. "Yet all 16 people will grow a bit stronger and may discover who they really are out here."

The castaways are working together to survive, yet every third night they hold secret ballots around a "tribal council" campfire to kick out one contestant, who is escorted away by helicopter with a consoling psychologist.

One of the first men voted off the island had been overheard saying something to the effect that the only thing stupider than a woman was a cow. Big mistake.

"The united women's front got that guy off the island right away," Burnett said. "They all mooed at him — and he was gone."

Everything is unscripted and the emotions are real. Not only are the castaways competing for $1 million, their every action will be judged by American viewers who could turn them into national celebrities — or just turn them off.

On the 21st night, during the tribal council at which the number of castaways was cut to nine, the sunburned, exhausted contestants nervously chatted with host Jeff Probst and then marched off one by one to blackball someone.

"We love to see ourselves represented in reality TV," said Probst, who mediates the tribal councils and conducts on-camera interviews. "You start peeling away layer after layer and you get at the truth."

Does Hollywood ever really get at the truth?

The survivors are indeed camping out on the beach beneath a makeshift hut of hand-cut rattan and palm fronds. They're catching their own fish and stomaching field rats for protein to conquer the wilting heat and humidity.

But though CBS on its Web site first promoted "Survivors" as being filmed on a "deserted" island "untouched by humans for centuries," reports pointing out that park rangers live there and a resort is under way forced the network to concede the island is merely remote.

And survivors do stand a chance of stumbling onto modern production equipment. Tons of sound and lighting equipment have been shipped in, generators keep the crew cabins and editing rooms air conditioned, and satellite TV and rock music blares beneath the neon sign at Survivor Bar.

"If you were really on a deserted island, you wouldn't be participating in a water torture race," shrugged Probst. "So, it's a cool combination of game show and psychological drama. They can vote you off simply because they don't like you or simply because you're too good."

On the 21st night, the castaways ousted a woman who was by all accounts one of the most likable and capable contestants. Several other women appeared stunned and jumped up to hug her before she dashed off.

Probst said he was surprised at how devious the contestants had become.

"When these people finally watch themselves, they're going to be amazed at what went down here," he said. "It's the ultimate social experiment."

Starting out, there was a 72-year-old retired Navy SEAL, a 38-year-old female truck driver and several attractive young college students who romp around in sexy sarongs. There was Sonja, a 62-year-old musician, and Sean, a 30-year-old neurologist who no doubt will capture many female viewers.

When the group is whittled down to the final pair, the last eight kicked off the island will decide who becomes the celebrity millionaire. Another half-million dollars will go to the losers, with the first runner-up taking home $100,000 and the others getting a share depending on how long they lasted.

"But they're all getting a multi-million-dollar experience," said Burnett.

The show is based on a popular Swedish production, "Expedition Robinson," which has been filming in Malaysia for three years. The producers of that show are still trying to live down the suicide of the first contestant to be voted off the island.

Burnett said he had "zero" concern about a copycat suicide.

Of 6,000 applicants, CBS interviewed 800 people. Forty-eight were then flown to Los Angeles for 10 days of grilling and six hours of psychological tests. "It's all in choosing people who are really strong to begin with," said Burnett.

Dr. Gene Ondrusek, the psychologist who greets the losers as they are voted out, spends the night talking with them in a tent on the beach and then flies back with them to Kota Kinabalu for debriefing at a luxury resort.

"I try to prepare them for what may happen back home," said Ondrusek. "If they obtain the celebrity status which I think they will, it may be as challenging as anything they've gone through here."

Cuba stages mass protest against U.N. right resolution

HAVANA (AP) — Cuba called 100,000 people into the streets Tuesday to denounce a U.N. Human Rights Commission resolution criticizing the communist island, accusing its Czech sponsors of being U.S. lackeys.

A sea of Cubans marched past the two-story Czech Embassy for about 90 minutes, shouting "Traitors! Marionettes!" and a few obscenities.

"This is the seat of the lackeys!" exclaimed a Cuban state television announcer as the crowd waved small Cuban flags made of paper. The government urged other Cubans to stay away, saying there was not enough room on the narrow streets for more.

While the march took place, the rights commission in Geneva voted 21-18 to censure Cuba for its human rights record. The measure was introduced by the Czech Republic and was cosponsored by Poland, though Cuban officials made no reference to the Polish role.

The censure expressed "concern about the continued repression of members of the political opposition and about the detention of dissidents" and accused Cuba of "continued violation of human rights and fundamental freedoms ... such as freedom of expression, association and assembly."

Both the government and marchers expressed a sense of betrayal; Czechs were Cuba's close allies before the collapse of the Soviet bloc at the start of the 1990s led to noncommunist governments in both.

"All those countries that were our friends are now betraying us," said Daniel Heredia, a 44-year-old mechanic who marched. "They don't have any right to do that."

"Those people always helped us and now they are putting themselves on the side of the big countries and not with us ... a small country that needs help," said Armando Flores, a 56-year-old university professor.

Swarms of Cuban police kept protesters from the embassy, where a large Czech flag waved beside a towering palm tree.

State television announcers accused the Czechs of oppressing Gypsies and the United States of violating the rights of immigrants and prisoners.

They also accused the United States of violating the rights of Elian Gonzalez, the 6-year-old at the center of a custody dispute between the boy's Cuban father and his great-uncle in Miami.

"Who are they to make accusations about violations of human rights?" asked an announcer, his voice quavering with anger.

The government statement announcing the march said the Geneva resolution was "directed by the United States and seconded by the hypocrisy and racism of Europe with the miserable complicity of lackeys headed by the Czech Republic." The statement also called the commission corrupt.

Another mass rally was scheduled for Thursday in front of the U.S. Interests Section, which serves in place of an embassy because Cuba and the United States have no formal diplomatic relations.

A similar resolution censuring Cuba was narrowly approved last year after being defeated in 1998 for the first time since 1991.

In Prague, Czech President Vaclav Havel said in a statement that "the aim of the U.N. resolution is not to enforce the spirit of confrontation and intolerance. Rather, we want to make clear that the problem of human rights in Cuba can only be solved by cooperation based on a democratic dialogue."

India police make arrest Tuesday in missionary death

BHUBANESHWAR, India (AP) — Police have arrested a key suspect in the slayings of Australian missionary Graham Staines and his sons, capturing the fugitive while he bathed in a jungle waterfall, officers said Tuesday.

Abhi Ram Mohanta, 30, eluded police for more than a year after Staines and his young sons, Timothy and Philip, were burned to death outside a village in the eastern state of Orissa.

Police said villagers stopped sheltering Mohanta in April after the arrest of his associate, Dara Singh, who is accused of leading the mob that killed the missionary and his sons.

Mohanta was captured Monday by Balaram Sagar, the officer in charge at Thakermunda police station in the hilly jungle region. Sagar also led the sting operation that captured Singh.

Police under Sagar's command said Mohanta was bathing at the Shampjharna waterfall when Sagar and three policemen — all armed with rifles — surrounded him. Mohanta offered no resistance.

Police did not say whether they had received a tip on the whereabouts of Mohanta, who had a $1,150 price on his head.

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The No. 1-ranked Midland College Lady Chaparral golf team needed a challenge to prove they're ready for the NJCAA National Tournament next month.

During the Second Annual Lady Chap Invitational played at Ranchland Hills Country Club the past two days, Midland College got a challenge from both Tyler Junior College and McLennan Community College. The Lady Chaparrals answered the challenge by shooting a 306 on Tuesday to win their invitational by eight strokes with a two-day total of 620. The Lady Chaps also won the Region V crown.

"I was very pleased," said MC coach Joe Williams. "I felt we had a very competitive tournament and it really pushed us to play our best. That (306) was the lowest score we've had all year and even though it was our home course we had to reach down deep in order to win it. It really was in question even throughout the back nine. You really didn't know how it was going to pan out."

Tyler finished in second place after winning a playoff with McLennan. Both teams had a 628. Tyler also claimed the Region XIV championship.

Not surprising is that Linzi Morton, MC's sophomore Scottish import, won the medalist title after shooting a blistering 1-under par 69 on Tuesday to finish with a 36-hole total of 142.

Tyler's Shelbie Allison, who was tied with Morton going into Tuesday's round, couldn't match Morton's score but still shot a good round of 73 to finish with a 146 total and the second place medalist.

"It was a little better today," said Morton of her play on Tuesday. "The conditions were good and I was hitting the ball a lot better. My putts were also going in today and that made a big difference."

Midland High softball team earns long-awaited victory against Lee

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Yes, Midland High and Midland Lee played softball Tuesday, and, yes, Virginia, it was 1-0. What else would you expect?

For the third time this year Lee and MHS produced a 1-0 final. But there was one news flash. This time it was the Lady Bulldogs of MHS on the winning side for the first time under second-year head coach Shawnda Vines in her sixth crack at Lee.

This was a so-called District 4-5A playoff game. It really had no bearing on who goes to the playoffs or who stays home. This was for playoff seeding.

So, by virtue of MHS' win over Lee, the Lady Bulldogs will play Lubbock High, the third seed from District 3-5A, in the bi-district round at a date and time to be determined. Vines doesn't know when that game will be, but has stated that she wants to play on Friday.

Lee, now the third seed from 4-5A, will play Lubbock Monterey, 3-5A's two seed, at 5 p.m. Friday in Andrews.

But the highest of praise should go to Lady Bulldog Collin Lange. She pitched a complete game shutout on Monday against Abilene Cooper in Snyder to get MHS into the state playoffs. Lange then hurled a two-hit shutout against Lee on Tuesday.

Lange

In those two games, MHS scored three runs. Lange drove in all three in addition to her pitching chores.

"To pitch back-to-back games like she did with the results she had is one of the hardest things to do in fast pitch softball," Vines said. "Collin couldn't have thrown any better than she did today. That was one fine effort."

Lange admitted that she went into the game a bit concerned.

"After pitching on Monday, I really felt it when I was warming up, so I was worried going into the game," Lange said. "But it went good. I just gave it all I had because I won't pitch again for a couple of days, so I just went all out."

Lange was locked in a major pitching battle with Lee's Mandy Hacker, who had defeated Lange by a 1-0 margin in the first district game of the season. Neither team had scored through six innings of play and there was a feeling that this one would be headed for extra innings.

But in the top of the seventh, Midland High's Amanda Martin led off with a single to left field. She moved to second on a hot grounder to first by Kristi Heard. Lange then laced a Hacker pitch just past diving shortstop Crista Hargrove and Martin scored the game's only run from second base.

"When Collin hit that ball, I knew I had to score then," Martin, a freshman, said. "I really wanted

Midlanders claim three 4-5A titles

ABILENE — A down year for Midland track and field? Well, one day does not make a year, but the first day at the District 4-5A Track and Field Championships was a good one for the Tall City Track teams.

All totaled after Day 1 at Abilene Christian University, Midland High and Midland Lee produced three District 4-5A individual champions — Midland Lee's Steve Subia in the shot put, T.J. Glover in the triple jump and Midland High's Jerry Morgan in the pole vault.

Two more tracksters — Lee's Sam Shearod (in the triple jump) and MHS' Tara Burns (triple jump) — qualified for the Region I-5A Track and Field Championships, which will be held April 28-29 in Lubbock, with second-place finishes (the top two in each event qualify for the regional event).

Also three captured third-place finishes, and one team — the Midland Lee boys — finds itself atop the team standings after a day of limited field finals and mostly running preliminaries.

Not only did Glover live up to his "event favorite" status, winning with a jump of 46 feet, 4 1/2 inches, but Shearod came through with a jump of 45-9 1/4. It was a mark that was two feet better than his previous best.

"I didn't expect it," said Shearod, who will also be racing for a region spot in the 400 meters today. "I haven't worked on it at all. It just happened. Today was a good day."

Yanks just keep beating Rangers

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Orlando Hernandez gave the New York Yankees' bullpen some much-needed relief.

Hernandez pitched the Yankees' first complete game this season and New York won its seventh in a row, beating the Texas Rangers 6-3 Tuesday night.

The Yankees matched their longest winning streak from last year. The string began last week with two victories over the Rangers.

Hernandez (3-0) allowed just two runners in the final 5 1-3 innings. He gave up eight hits, beating Kenny Rogers (1-3) for the second time in a week.

"He gets stronger. He just knows what he has got to do," Yankees catcher Jorge Posada said. "He was not feeling good early and had a little funny face when I went out there. After that, he was nails and he competed."

Posada and Derek Jeter both homered as the Yankees kept up their dominance over Texas. Jeter's homer came in a three-run first that pushed New York ahead to stay and eliminated any need for another miracle play.

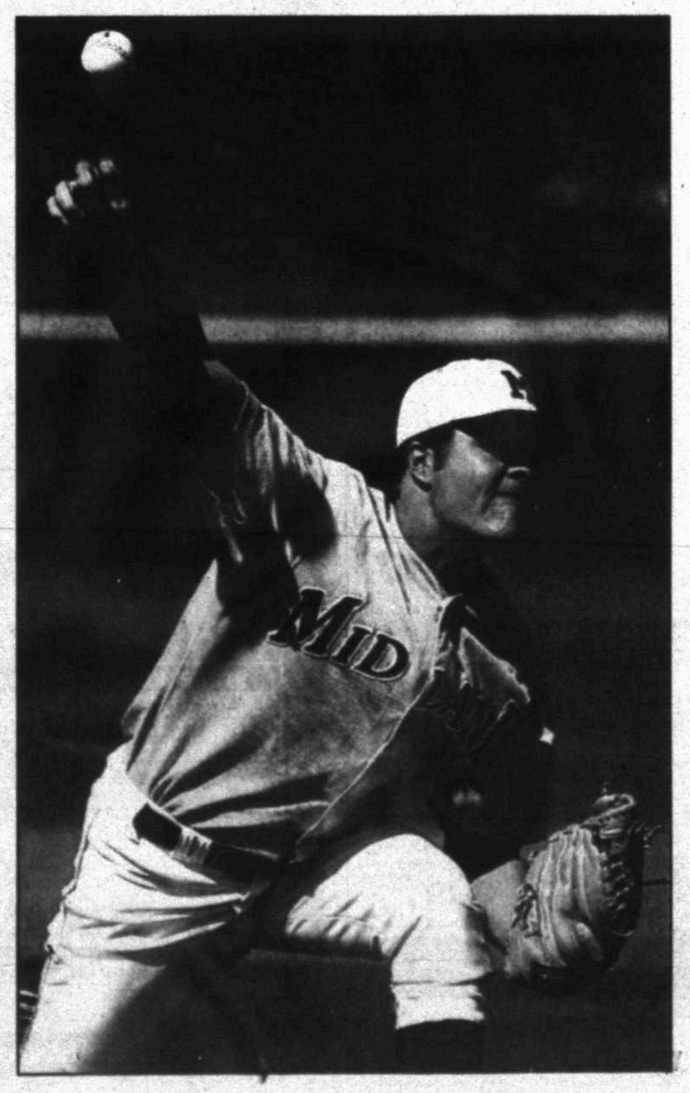

New York (10-3), off to its best start since 1988, has won 35 of the last 46 games over the Rangers, including sweeps in the last two postseasons.

Hernandez threw 84 of his 119 pitches for strikes.

"He got behind a little bit early, but the good sign is he knows what it takes. It was a great effort," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "In the ninth inning, he was a little tired, but he knew what we were

MHS passes test from last-place San Angelo, 7-4

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Maybe it wasn't as impressive as it could have been Tuesday afternoon, but the Midland High baseball team has shown it can walk through the fire of the District 4-5A race and come out unscarred.

Only three days after a tough loss to Abilene Cooper, the Bulldogs had to come out and face district cellar dweller San Angelo Central in order to hang on to at least a share of the 4-5A lead. With another district contender, Abilene High, lurking two days away, a letdown might have been inevitable.

There might have been a letdown, but it didn't affect the bottom line for Midland High, as the Bulldogs ground out a 7-4 win over the Bobcats to improve to 21-5 overall and 7-3 in district, tied with Cooper for the lead.

"It was exactly what I thought it would be for two reasons," said MHS coach Barry Russell, who anticipated a tight game. "No. 1, (Central pitcher Murry) Carson is one of the top strikeout pitchers in the district, and No. 2, we were coming off a very emotional loss to Cooper and I knew it was going to be a tough, tough game."

That it was, but it might be a case of what doesn't kill the Bulldogs could make them stronger. A question which has lingered for Midland High all season is who will step up as a pitcher to support

'Hound hurlers throw shutout

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — It took leaving Christensen Stadium for awhile to get the best out of the Midland RockHounds' pitching staff.

For the second night in a row, the 'Hounds got stellar pitching, as Tim Manwiller and Steve Gajkowski combined to shut out the San Antonio Missions 3-0 Tuesday night. It was the second straight pitchers' duel in Nelson Wolff Stadium, as the Missions won Monday night 3-2.

Over the last two games, Midland's pitching has been nearly flawless. After giving up three first inning runs to the Missions in Monday's loss, the 'Hounds have now thrown 16 straight scoreless innings at San Antonio.

Manwiller (1-2) went six innings for the victory, giving up four hits. He allowed baserunners in the fourth and fifth innings, but left them stranded. Manwiller and Gajkowski combined to retire the last 15 San Antonio batters.

Gajkowski's perfect performance has typified the 'Hounds' bullpen of late. The save, Gajkowski's first of the season, gave the Midland bullpen 11 consecutive scoreless innings.

The contest was scoreless through five innings until Midland's Jacques Landry led off the fifth. Landry fouled off five two-strike pitches from Missions' reliever Bobby Bevel (0-1) until he hit a home run over the left field wall to give the 'Hounds a 1-0 lead.

That would be all the 'Hounds would need, but they added two more runs for insurance in the top of the seventh on a two-run single by Cody McKay, who extended his hitting streak to nine games.

The 'Hounds can finish their series in San Antonio with no worse than a split. The series concludes with an early game today starting at 12:05 p.m.

Rocker receives standing ovation in return to Braves

Associated Press

ATLANTA — John Rocker returned to a standing ovation Tuesday night, pitching a scoreless ninth inning in his first game since rejoining the Atlanta Braves after a two-week suspension.

The crowd of 34,903 gave Rocker a big cheer when the reliever sprinted in from the bullpen. One fan held up a sign that read: "Rocker for President."

Rocker struck out the first hitter he faced, Philadelphia's Mickey Morandini, walked the next batter and then got two flyouts.

The Braves eventually won 4-3 in 12 innings.

"It's all out of the way," said Braves outfielder Brian Jordan, one of the reliever's harshest critics initially. "Rocker's back. Hopefully, things will quiet down a little bit and we can get back to baseball."

Perhaps hoping to avoid another misstep, Rocker continued his policy of refusing to speak to the media about the controversy.

"Beat it, media," he barked at reporters who surrounded his locker after the game. "Are you deaf?"

There was hardly a hint of protest before the game, with Rocker hoping fans remember his fastball more than his comments about minorities, gays and immigrants. Overall, it seemed just like another nondescript, midweek contest game for a lot more reporters.

Rocker said he heard only one negative remark while traveling with the Braves last weekend in Milwaukee.

"It's not a big deal," Rocker told TBS for an interview that aired before the game. "I think when the team starts winning and we get the ball rolling, all that will be forgotten."

His teammates made peace with the reliever during spring training and he had already pitched in Atlanta during an April 1 exhibition game.

"Before the season, I was thinking about this night the whole time," catcher Eddie Perez said. "But once the season started, I didn't remember anything about it until you guys brought it up."

However, he talked with Braves broadcaster Joe Simpson for the interview with TBS, owned by the same company that owns the Braves.

Most fans arriving at the ballpark on a cool, windy night were ready to welcome the reliever back.

"There's not one person walking who hasn't opened his mouth and said something he regrets," said Sandra Seagraves, munching on a snack in the picnic area beyond the center-field stands. "He picked the wrong time to say the wrong thing. Unfortunately, he got crucified for it."

Her husband, Charles, added, "I'm going to stand up and cheer like crazy when he comes in."

But Larry Lee of New Orleans, in town for a convention, said he wouldn't cheer for Rocker.

"Personally, I'm not going to cheer for someone who seems to be a heck of a lot more prejudiced than he's letting on to be," said Lee, who is black. "I wasn't a big fan of him before and I'm certainly not now."

The Braves planned to put Rocker right back into his familiar role as closer. A year ago, he had 38 saves — one short of the franchise record — and his absence was felt as Atlanta split its first 12 games.

The bullpen went 1-4 with a 5.14 ERA and two blown saves while Rocker was suspended. Former closer Kerry Ligtenberg, coming back from a serious elbow injury, struggled with a 10.13 ERA.

"The thing we really missed was having him in the game," Perez said. "That's what I've been thinking about since the season began."

Phillies first baseman Rico Brogna wasn't looking forward to the prospect of facing Rocker in the ninth inning.

"I'm not thinking about all that stuff that happened over the winter," Brogna said. "He's a very good pitcher. He adds another dimension to their team. He makes it that much more difficult for us."

Some Atlanta-area civil rights groups protested at Turner Field during the offseason and urged the Braves to trade Rocker. But they decided not to picket Tuesday, saying they will probably raise the issue again when the Braves play host to the All-Star game on July 11.

trying to do. It was not something where he had thrown too many pitches."

New York got all of its runs off Rogers, who has lost two straight home starts after putting together a 19-game home winning streak that was the third-longest in major league history.

"As eventful as last night was, tonight was one of those methodical nights with nothing much exciting happening," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "Kenny had a little stiff back, and couldn't get the ball down but he battled."

Jeter's solo homer to center field got New York started. Later in the first, Tino Martinez had an RBI double and scored on Posada's single.

Posada hit a two-run homer in the fourth, his third of the season. The Yankees added another run in the fourth when left fielder Gabe Kapler misplayed a ball.

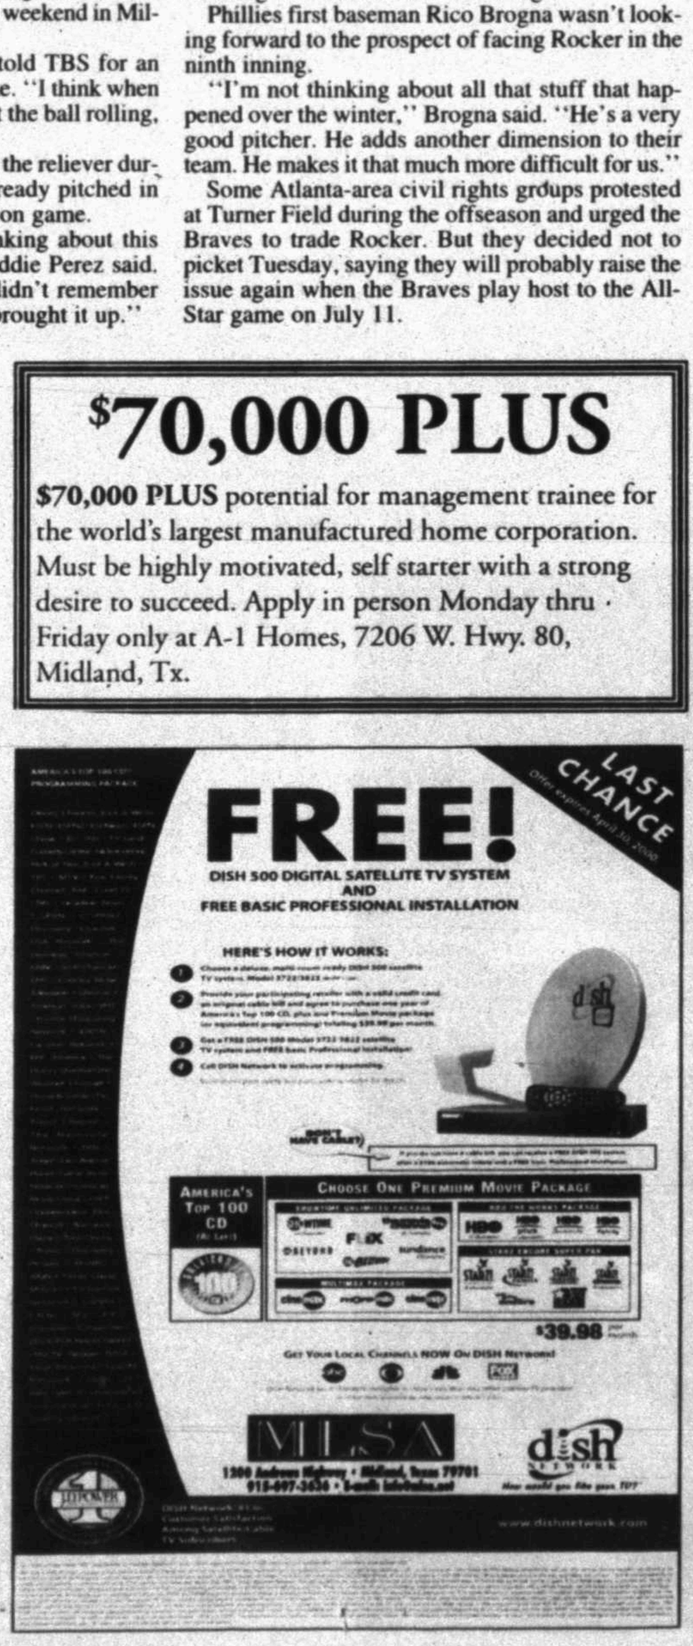

Rogers had extended his home streak with an opening-day victory over the Chicago White Sox. The former Yankee has since lost three straight games, including a 5-1 defeat at New York last Thursday.

"I made some bad pitches. I was a little stiff and didn't have a lot to draw on," Rogers said. "Today, I was mediocre at best."

Kapler hit a two-run homer in the second inning, his first since hitting home runs in his first two Ranger at-bats on opening day. Kapler doubled and scored the other Texas run in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Tom Evans.

TRACK: District meet continues effort. That gave the injured Glover, a regional and state qualifier in 1998, his second district title. Glover has been hampered by heel and back injuries.

(From 1C)

"It is a big deal to say you are the district champion," said Glover, who has jumped as far as 48 feet this season. "Coming off an injury, I was hoping to get to regionals. Getting first is a blessing for me."

It wasn't minutes later that Midland High pole vaulter Morgan made sure the Bulldogs, the 1999 district and region champs, would be represented in Lubbock. Morgan, a senior, vaulted 13-0. It wasn't his best effort of the year (14-0 is), but that didn't matter for Morgan.

"Regionals was my goal and luck came down on my side," Morgan said. "There was a lot of pressure with colleges looking too, but I came through."

Coming off an ankle injury which limited Morgan's practice time over the past week, he still had enough in reserve to become the Bulldogs' third pole vault entry in as many years.

"It is saying a lot that he only jumped two days in the last week because he was getting treatment on his ankle," MHS boys track coach Kirk Thurman said. "I didn't know if he would do it."

Expectations have been high for Burns, the top performer for the Lady Bulldogs this season. She is expected to claim at least three regional spots. She got her first with a second place in the triple jump.

"It is exciting," said the sophomore. "I didn't think I was going to make it. I always think that way."

Burns, who wins more often than naught, didn't get the gold on Tuesday despite a personal-best jump of 38-0 1/2. It was just that Permian's Trina Woodard was better on this day. Woodard, a junior, had five jumps of 38 feet or better on Tuesday, a remarkable feat. She finished with a best mark of 38-10 1/2, which was almost two feet better than her previous best this season.

"She got me in the triple jump, but I think I can get her in the long jump," said Burns, who has not lost a long jump this season and is also the No. 1 seed in the 400 meters.

Lady Bulldog coach Susan Nix said getting that first regional spot will help Burns relax.

"It will take the pressure off her in the long jump," Nix said. "She will go out and take care of business."

Moments after Burns, the smallest of Midland's Tuesday qualifiers, got her ticket to Lubbock, the largest wrapped up a golden effort in the shot put. Subia, a 330-pounder, won the shot with a heave of 59-5 1/2, more than a foot-and-a-half better than his previous best. The win continues Subia's season-long unbeaten streak. Subia also won his second 4-5A title and returns to regionals, where he placed fourth last year.

"This is unfinished business," Subia said. "And that is what Lee Rebels are all about — taking care of business."

Subia was not the only one to earn a medal in the shot. Painter took a third. Another bronze medal winner was Ivanhoe in the high jump. Ivanhoe, a junior, almost came through with another magical competition. Tuesday, he jumped 6-8. His previous best this season was 6-4. Last year when Ivanhoe made regionals, he jumped 6-7, a huge improvement from what was his previous best in 1999.

"He had a great day and recorded a previous best," Lee boys track coach Kelvin Ratliff said of Ivanhoe who lost to Cooper's Odele Acha-Ngwodo (who jumped 6-9) and Roy Williams (who also jumped 6-8 but had fewer misses at a previous height). "He got beat but what else can you ask for. He did a great job of competing. In any other year, 6-8 takes you to regionals."

The Rebels had the best showing of the Tall City teams Tuesday and lead the boys standings after Day 1. Lee has 40 points. Cooper is second with 38 points. Permian, the 4-5A favorite, is third with 34.

"I don't know if we could make a run (at the team title), but you have to have guys like Sam and Kolby do well," Ratliff said. "That will allow you to stay in the meet.

"We are giving ourselves a chance. That is an important thing."

A down year for Tall City track? Maybe, but Tuesday really was a good day.

4-5A NOTES: The Abilene High girls, the 4-5A favorites, scored 32 points and are in good position to repeat... The Lady Eagles are the only girls team to qualify more than one athlete for the region meet... The Lee and Permian boys both qualified three entries. Cooper has two... Cooper's Kaylee Conner broke the record in the girls' discus with a toss of 135-0. The previous record was 134-8 by AHS' Tasha Newman in 1994... Today's events begin at 9 a.m. with selected field events. The running finals are set to begin at 1:30 p.m.

GOLF: Lady Chaps hit nationals in May

(From 1C)

NJCAA National Tournament to be played May 15-18 at Shawnee, Okla.

"I feel more confident going in," Morton said. "Hopefully I play as well as I did today."

McLennan took the next two medalist spots as Susan Helmersson was third with a 152 and Casey Williams finished in fourth after winning a one-hole playoff against Lady Chap sophomore Pam Mackay, who finished with a 155.

"I played OK. I could've played better," said Mackay. "Linzi had a good score so I'm delighted for her.

"We all played pretty steady. All the scores were in the low 80s and we didn't have anything major, so that's good."

Lady Chap sophomore Vanessa Cody finished strong on Tuesday by shooting an 80 for a 162 total. Fellow sophomores Krystal Mehaffey and Renee Gonzales didn't have as strong of a round on Tuesday as they had on Monday but finished with two-day totals of 162 and 167, respectively.

"I thought it was a good team effort," Williams said. "I feel like that's what we need getting ready to go into the national tournament. I think we've got our eyes open to the competition. Tyler and McLennan are good teams but they really had not come out and challenged us strongly until now. We can't say that we fell off, I think they just raised the level of their game. I think they need to be congratulated as well."

The Lady Chaps agree they might have some strong competition at the National Tournament after seeing both Tyler and McLennan have good showings this week.

"Tyler has started to come on," Mackay said. "McLennan has always played well but if Tyler plays the way they did this week at nationals, it should be a good tournament."

LADY CHAP NOTE: The Midland College women's golf team wanted to thank Red McKeller of Texas Refreshments for supplying chips and drinks for the players...

BASEBALL: Bulldogs share 4-5A lead the team's prodigious offensive attack. The Bulldogs got a couple of affirmative answers.

(From 1C)

Senior right-hander Marc Majors, who turned in a solid six-inning relief performance to defeat Odessa High a week earlier, earned his first district start of the season. Majors went six innings, giving up only four hits (all singles) until exiting by walking Jon Anderson, the leadoff batter in the seventh, on four pitches with a 7-3 lead.

It's safe to say that Majors did his job up to that point.

"I just told (Majors) to go out and throw strikes and let things happen," said Russell. "He did a great job."

Majors wasn't exactly dominant, as he threw two wild pitches and hit three batters while striking out only two. However, he usually got the ball over the plate and had retired five straight batters before leaving in the seventh.

"I wanted to complete it real bad," said Majors. "I got the opportunity but I couldn't take complete advantage of it. Things got pretty sticky."

They got even stickier for reliever Mark Avila, who walked Josh Morgan and Jeremy Gafford in succession to load the bases.

Then with a 2-1 count on Aaron Jones, Russell came out to remove Avila.

That meant the last option would be freshman right-hander Casey Zachry, who had pitched six innings in Saturday's 9-8 loss to Cooper and is scheduled to start Thursday against Abilene High.

"Mark's been up and down this year," said Russell of Avila. "His arm's been hurting lately. Casey said he felt like he could get three outs.

"It was good to see him come in and throw strikes."

Inheriting Avila's count against Jones, Zachry struck out Jones for the first out, then fanned Carson for the second out. Michael McClellan spoiled what would have been a remarkable Houdini act by Zachry with a single up the middle to drive home a run, but Zachry got Reed to ground into a fielder's choice to end the game.

Zachry's role for the Bulldogs wasn't known at the beginning of the season, as it wasn't even certain he'd be on the varsity once district play began. He started out as a long reliever, but showed enough to become the team's most effective starter in district, and against Central, Zachry showed he could finish as well.

"I love to come into a save situation and just mow them down. It's fun," said Zachry, who earned his second save of the season. "I knew if I could throw strikes we'd come out with a victory."

Central began the scoring with a two-out rally against Majors in the first inning, but in gutty fashion, Majors got out of a bases-loaded situation which typified the day for the Bobcats, who left eight runners on base.

The Bulldogs grabbed back the lead at 2-1 in the bottom of the inning on a two-run single by Cotey-Joe Cswaykus, but Central got the lead back with a pair of unearned runs in the top of the third. In the bottom of the inning, Laynce Nix and Jayson Nix both drove in runs with singles to give MHS the lead for good.

In the bottom of the fifth, Jayson Nix hit a towering two-run home run to left which gave the Bulldogs some breathing room.

"Any time you can get a win is good, but we've got to play better," said Russell.

that run. I just kept thinking, run, run, run."

Martin beat a close throw to home from Lee centerfielder Yvette Bass. Lee catcher Shandi Neatherlin couldn't quite come up with the ball.

When Lange was asked if it was only up to her to drive in runs like the last two days, she replied, "I hope not, but in this case, I thought this was my chance because the last time we played them, I came up with two runners on base and struck out."

Hacker went on to pitch Lee out of a bases loaded jam to give Lee a fighting chance in the bottom of the seventh.

But Lange was just too tough. She may have been one tired pitcher, but the run gave her one more adrenalin rush. With two outs, Lee's Sarah Dzubinski reached first on an error, but Lange got Bass to pop to short to end the game.

Going into the seventh, Hacker had allowed only one hit to Martin in the fourth and had faced only one batter over the minimum.

Lee had a couple of golden opportunities to score, but couldn't put hits in the right places. In the second, Dzubinski reached on an error and moved to second on a grounder by Marci DiGennaro.

That brought up Erin Evans, who gave Lee a 1-0 win over MHS with a key hit the last time these two teams played. Evans got an infield single, but Dzubinski got caught up between second and third and was tagged out.

Lee also got a runner to second base in both the fourth and sixth innings. Evans, who had both of Lee's hits off Lange, got to second in the sixth with only one out, but Lange got the next two Lee hitters to end the threat.

"We just couldn't get two hits in a row," said Lee coach Wes Overton. "What I did like about the game was the fact that we made them earn the one run they got. Our defense played really well.

"No matter the outcome of this game, it was a great game for both teams going into the playoffs. We could have had a practice game but there is now way you are going to match the intensity we had out here today. You can't duplicate this. This was playoff intensity and it's going to help both teams."

High school soccer player arrested for involvement in brawl

DALLAS (AP) — A 17-year-old Athens High School student was arrested at school Tuesday for his involvement in a fight after a soccer game last month.

Chris Garcia, a senior, was pulled from class just after 1 p.m. and taken to the Henderson County Jail. He was charged with felony assault of a public servant and misdemeanor assault causing bodily injury.

The fight happened after a game at Palestine when an Athens player got into an argument with some fans. Players from both sides started pushing each other and a fight began.

During the melee, Garcia allegedly started kicking a Palestine player who was on the ground. Palestine coach Sam McCutchen tried to cover the injured player and he also was kicked, police said.

Barkley prepares for finalé

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley's big farewell will be in Houston on Wednesday. There was no dress rehearsal in Phoenix.

Barkley had flirted with the idea of making a cameo appearance in the Rockets' game Tuesday night against the Suns, a team he led to the NBA Finals in 1993.

After Tuesday's shoot-around, he said he would be in uniform but wouldn't play. But the Rockets never even activated Barkley. He wasn't in uniform when the team took the court.

Instead, when the lights were out for the introduction of the Suns, he walked onto the court, hardly noticed by the crowd.

Perhaps the Rockets were worried that if Barkley was in uniform, he might be too tempted to enter the game on his own. That's just the sort of thing Barkley might do.

Barkley said earlier Wednesday that doctors believe because his injured knee is only about 70 percent its normal strength, it would be too risky for him to play on consecutive nights, even for just a minute or two.

"Charles doesn't have to prove anything," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "The guy's one of the greatest players to ever play the game. We love what he's done for us.

"To me what makes sense is to have one final tribute at home. Why take the chance of getting him loose here and then having a back-to-back situation? That just doesn't make sense to me."

Barkley called an end to his 16-year career after he ruptured a knee tendon Dec. 8 in Philadelphia.

But, after rehabilitation, he will make a final appearance in the Rockets' last game Wednesday at home against Vancouver. He wants to end his career by walking off the court, not being carried off.

A brief appearance in Phoenix seemed fitting. That would make his last three games in cities he played — Philadelphia, Phoenix and Houston.

Barkley has a home in Phoenix, and he played four seasons with the Suns when he was in his prime. His first season with the Suns, he averaged 25.6 points and 12.2 rebounds as Phoenix reached the NBA Finals, where they lost to Chicago. It was as close as Barkley would get to a championship ring.

Barkley and the Suns parted company with bitterness. Barkley felt he was treated unfairly.

"I regret how it ended here, how they treated me here," Barkley said. "I wanted to finish my career here. It didn't happen."

Barkley said that he's had time since his injury to reflect on his career.

"There's not one person around here who expected me to accomplish what I did in 16 years," he said. "As cocky as I am, I never expected it."

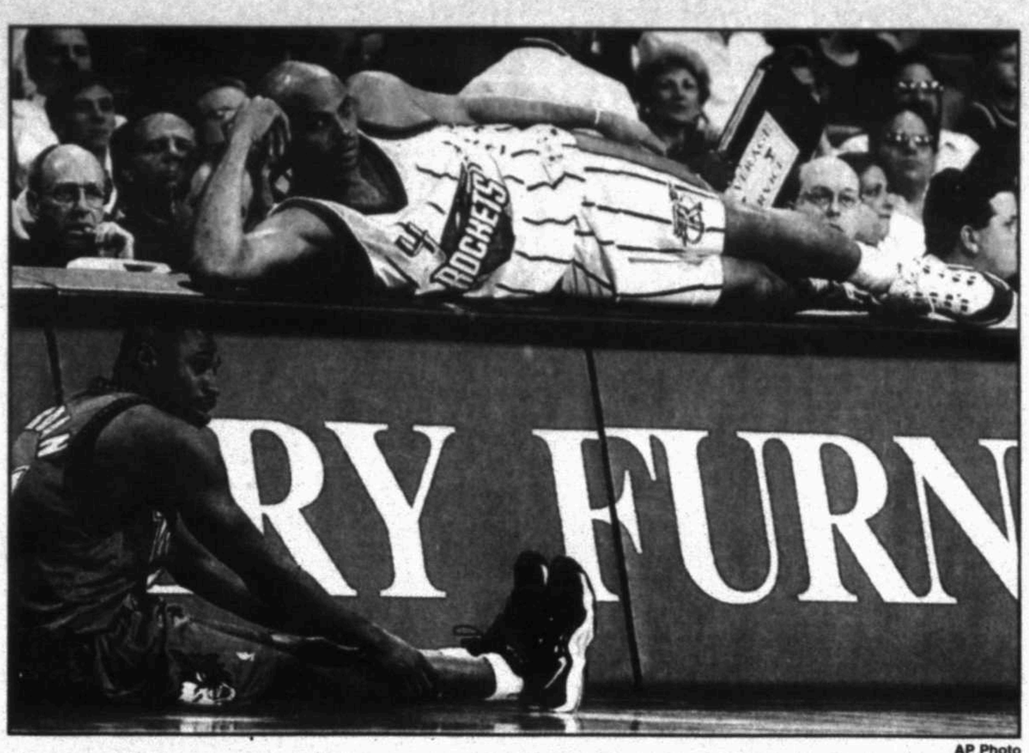

He said the injury has allowed him time to face life after basketball.

"Even though I had great sadness that I got hurt, it's kind of been preparing me for what my life is going to be like next year," Barkley said. "If I had played the entire season, I can honestly say it would have been really hard and difficult the last month."

So now he goes back to Houston, to end it on his own terms.

"It's just been fun. That's the only way to explain it," he said. "Not many people get to do something they really like to do for a living. I'm so blessed to do that.

"When I first started, I said I want to make a million dollars a year and play for 10 years. My only goal was to take care of my mother and my grandmother and obviously I've done that. Everything else has been, 'Wow! Unbelievable!'"

Charles Barkley doesn't want his career to end with him lying on the sidelines. The retiring superstar will play — if for only a few minutes — in the Houston Rockets' season finalé against the Vancouver Grizzlies tonight in Houston.

Heat gives Riley his 999th victory

Associated Press

MIAMI — Pat Riley is one win away from 1,000.

Jamal Mashburn scored 16 points and keyed a third-quarter rally that propelled Miami past the Toronto Raptors 97-73 Tuesday night, giving Heat coach Riley his 999th regular-season victory.

If Miami beats host Charlotte in Wednesday's season finale, Riley would become the second NBA coach to hit the four-figure milestone. Atlanta's Lenny Wilkens has 1,179 career wins.

Vince Carter paced Toronto with 17 points, but the Raptors had a moment of concern when he left the game late in the third quarter with an injured left ankle. It turned out to be nothing more than an aggravation of a muscle sprain and Carter returned to start the final period.

Mavericks 112, Lakers 102

DALLAS — Michael Finley scored 25 points as the Dallas Mavericks ended their 19-game losing streak to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Steve Nash added 23 as Dallas beat the Lakers for the first time since April 5, 1995. It was the Mavericks' eighth win in their last nine.

Los Angeles' Shaquille O'Neal scored 38 points and had 20 rebounds, but hit just 8 of 19 free throws.

In three previous meetings this season, Dallas coach Don Nelson had his players foul O'Neal nearly every time he touched the ball.

The ploy didn't work then as O'Neal averaged 30 points and 14 rebounds in three Lakers' wins.

This time it did.

Nelson held off employing "Hack-a-Shaq" until the final minute of the third quarter, but the strategy keyed a run that put Dallas in control.

■ NBA Roundup

After Bradley knocked O'Neal to the floor with a hard foul, 6-foot-3, 185-pound guard Damon Jones came into the game with just over a minute left. His sole purpose was to foul O'Neal, who entered shooting 52 percent from the free-throw line.

Twice Jones grabbed O'Neal around the waist away from the ball, the second time coming before the ball even crossed midcourt. O'Neal missed six straight free throws in the final 49 seconds of the quarter.

Knicks 100, Pistons 88

NEW YORK — Detroit failed to clinch the seventh seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs, losing in a game that meant almost nothing to New York.

Detroit can still claim the seventh spot and a more favorable matchup — against the Heat rather than the Pacers — in the first round of the playoffs by beating Chicago on Wednesday, the final day of the regular season.

The Pistons went 2-2 vs. Miami this season and were 1-3 against top-seeded Indiana.

Allan Houston scored 29 to lead the Knicks, who already are locked into a tough first-round matchup against Toronto.

Hawks 111, Nets 109, 2OT

ATLANTA — Lorenzo Wright scored four of Atlanta's six points in the second overtime and blocked a potential tying layup by New Jersey's Keith Van Horn at the buzzer.

It was the Nets' 10th straight loss.

Hornets 103, Cavaliers 88

CLEVELAND — David Wesley scored 23 points, including 14 in the third quarter, to spark Charlotte, which has won six straight and 13 of 15.

Wesley scored the first four points of a 9-0 run that put Charlotte firmly in command at 79-63 late in the third quarter.

Derrick Coleman had 21 points and 11 rebounds and Anthony Mason 16 points and 11 rebounds for Charlotte.

Bob Sura led Cleveland with 20 points.

Celtics 114, Wizards 81

WASHINGTON — In a game between losing teams playing out the string, Boston led from start to finish.

Reserve forward Danny Fortson had 17 points and 12 rebounds to lead seven players in double figures for the Celtics, who posted their biggest margin of victory for the season and broke a seven-game road losing streak.

Chris Whitney, finishing the season for injured point guard Rod Strickland, scored 25 points for the Wizards, who matched their worst loss of the season and dropped their final three home games.

76ers 93, Bulls 89

CHICAGO — Aaron McKie made three free throws in the last 24 seconds as Philadelphia, without Allen Iverson, barely kept its hopes alive for first-round home-court advantage in the playoffs.

Philadelphia is a half-game ahead of the Hornets in the race for the home edge, but Charlotte has one more game and wins the tiebreaker because it took the season series 3-1.

Matt Geiger's dunk with 11:06 left gave the 76ers an 80-55 lead and the game should have been all but over. But the Bulls went on a 29-8 run, making Philadelphia work for its win.

Nuggets 105, Jazz 104, OT

DENVER (AP) — Raef LaFrentz had a career-high 32 points and 17 rebounds, and George McCloud hit a 20-foot jump shot with 25 seconds left in overtime for Denver.

Nick Van Exel added 15 points and 10 assists for the Nuggets.

Having clinched the Midwest Division in Phoenix on Sunday, Utah coach Jerry Sloan took the opportunity to rest starters Karl Malone, John Stockton, Jeff Hornacek, Byron Russell and Olden Polynice for the final 19 minutes.

Utah was led by Scott Padgett's 13 points, as the Jazz reserves accounted for 67 points.

Good news for Bucks: Allen isn't hurt badly

ST. FRANCIS, Wis. (AP) — Ray Allen won't end his breakout season in street clothes, and the Milwaukee Bucks are breathing a whole lot easier.

Allen, the Bucks' leading scorer, will be able to play in the Bucks' first-round playoff series starting this weekend at Indiana or Miami. Allen sprained his left knee Monday night during the Bucks' playoff-clinching victory over Orlando.

Allen and coach George Karl will wait until after Wednesday morning's shootaround to decide whether Allen, who hasn't missed a game in his four-year NBA career, will play in the Bucks' season finale against the Washington Wizards that night.

An MRI on Tuesday was negative, revealing a sprained medial collateral ligament but no tear. Allen was listed as day to day.

At the team's training facility on Tuesday, Karl said he would recommend that Allen skip Wednesday's game and rest for the playoffs.

"He's cautiously optimistic that he'll play tomorrow, but that's Ray's call," Karl said. "I think players have their own pain threshold and level of desire, and Ray's is as high as just about anybody. So we'll wait on that."

Allen, who is averaging a career-high 22.3 points per game while emerging as the Bucks' most reliable scorer, wasn't available for comment while undergoing a day of tests. He has played in 295 consecutive games, starting all but one.

Allen's teammates had plenty to say after a jubilant plane ride home from Orlando and a light workout. Milwaukee's playoff chances were all but dead just three weeks ago before 10 victories in 14 games — and two critical victories over the Magic — propelled them into the postseason.

Milwaukee (41-40) likely earned the eighth seed and a rematch with the Pacers.

Nasdaq soars

NEW YORK — Technology stocks drove the Nasdaq composite index to its biggest one-day point gain Tuesday as investors flocked back to the shares that were devastated by last week's rout. Blue-chip stocks also advanced sharply.

The sharp rally extended Wall Street's big gains of Monday, when stocks began recovering from last week's collapse. But the market's gains were far more widespread on Tuesday, with smaller stocks joining the rally as investors looked for bargains.

The Nasdaq rose 254.41 to close at 3,793.57, while the Dow Jones industrial average rose 184.91 to 10,767.42.

Broader stock indicators were also higher. The Standard & Poor's 500 rose 40.17 to 1,441.61.

Gold falls

LONDON — Gold closed in London at $281.20 bid per troy ounce, down from $281.30 on Monday. In Zurich the bid price was $280.75 up from $280.65. In Hong Kong, gold closed at $281.25 an ounce, down $3.00 from Monday.

Silver closed in London at $5.11 bid per troy ounce, unchanged from Monday.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar advanced against other currencies Tuesday as a strong rebound on Wall Street quelled investor fears about flight from U.S. financial markets.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at 94.80 cents, down from 95.38 late Monday. The dollar also was quoted at 104.75 Japanese yen, up from 104.26.

The dollar had declined against the yen on Monday on disappointment from investors that a weekend summit of financial officials did not produce an agreement to weaken the yen vs. the dollar.

Crude soars

Oil prices were slumping until late in the session when Citgo closed its 350,000-barrel-a-day refinery in Lake Charles, La., following a power outage due to a boiler malfunction.

The refinery, operated by the U.S. refining arm of Venezuela's state oil company, processes crude into gasoline as well as distillate and other fuels.

The problem was not believed to be serious but it was enough to jangle nerves in a market with little cushion against supply disruptions. Also underpinning the price rise was the strong showing of equity markets for a second straight day.

West Texas Intermediate crude for May delivery, a contract which expires Wednesday, settled up 22 cents at $26.11 a barrel — a two-week high.

BP Amoco becomes biggest producer

N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — BP Amoco has completed its $33.1 billion buyout of Atlantic Richfield Inc. The completion comes after BP agreed last month to sell Arco's Alaskan oil fields to Phillips Petroleum Co. for $7 billion to win clearance from the U.S. Federal Trade Commission.

Since BP announced the buyout on April 1, 1999, its stock has fallen almost 4 percent, lagging Exxon Mobil Corp. and Royal Dutch/Shell Group which gained during the same period.

The buyout makes BP the largest U.S. crude oil and natural gas producer and Asia's biggest privately owned natural gas company. It will also provide the chance to cut $1 billion of costs and a bigger share of West Coast gasoline sales.

"Five years ago, (Chief Executive John) Browne's biggest gaps were in the Far East and in natural gas," said Bruce Evers, an oil equities analyst at Investec Henderson Crosthwaite. "Arco in one go has filled those two holes."

The combined company will have a market capitalization of $197 billion, BP said. BP had 1999 sales of $101.2 billion and Los Angeles-based Arco had $12.5 billion. Exxon Mobil, the biggest publicly traded oil company, had sales of $187 billion in 1999, ahead of Shell, the second biggest, with $150 billion.

The FTC in February sued to block the transaction, alleging it could lead to higher prices for West Coast refiners. BP and Arco combined pump about 70 percent of Alaska's oil output, much of which is turned into gasoline on the West Coast.

FTC concern that large oil mergers were beginning to limit competition led to the order to sell the assets to Phillips.

BP shares dropped as much as 26 pence, or 4.9 percent, to 501p. The stock has gained 13 percent since people familiar with the discussions said BP was in talks to sell the Alaskan assets in order to win clearance from the FTC.

BP Amoco itself was created when British Petroleum Plc bought Chicago-based Amoco Corp. for $61.7 billion on the last day of 1998. Later, Exxon Corp. bought Mobil Corp., creating the largest publicly traded oil company.

"Before Amoco, BP was in no-man's land," Evers said. "Before they were a small company in a hurry and now they're right up there, nipping at the heels of" Exxon Mobil and Shell, he said.

BP also agreed to sell Arco's oil terminals and pipelines in Oklahoma to Teppco Partners LP for $355 million to help satisfy FTC demands. The company agreed to sell Arco's 50 percent share of the Seaway Pipeline Co., and three other pipelines Arco operates in Texas and New Mexico, the FTC said.

European Union officials cleared the merger Sept. 29 after BP agreed to sell pipeline and processing assets in the U.K.

BP's weighting in the U.K.'s benchmark FT-SE 100 index will rise to 8.6 percent from 7.6 percent, a FT-SE International spokesman said last week. The number of BP shares outstanding will increase by 3.176 billion to 22.669 billion.

Some of the estimated $1 billion in savings will come from BP's purchase of all of Vastar Resources Inc., a Houston-based oil explorer that is 82 percent-owned by Arco. BP has offered to buy the remaining 18 percent for about $1.25 billion.

Last month BP also agreed to pay 3.4 billion pounds in cash and debt for Burmah Castrol Plc. In addition, the company paid $580 million for a 2 percent stake in PetroChina Co.

"Browne has probably got his hands full at the moment," said Steve Turner, an analyst at HSBC Securities. "Those should keep him occupied for the rest of this year."

BP's Browne said Friday the company will cut 2,500 jobs as a result of the Arco takeover, 25 percent more than it announced April 1, 1999.

The acquisition gives BP two oil refineries in California and Washington, as well as 1,760 gas stations and convenience stores across California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

BP's oil and gas reserves will swell by about 2.7 billion barrels. BP will get Arco's oil fields in Algeria, Venezuela, the Caspian Sea, Russia and the North Sea, along with gas fields in Indonesia, the South China Sea, Malaysia, Thailand and Qatar.

"Alaska was not the only point of the Arco transaction," Browne said in an interview with Bloomberg Television on Friday. "Four reasons out of five were because of overseas interests."

Uncertainty continues for Arco Permian workers

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

As of 2:15 a.m. Tuesday, Arco Permian became the property of BP Amoco Plc, the world's third-biggest publicly traded oil company, in a $33.1 billion buyout of Atlantic Richfield Co.

The completion of the deal, which comes more than a year after announcing a bid for the eighth-largest U.S. oil company, has kept Midland and Arco Permian employees on the edge of uncertainty.

Tom Holland, spokesman for Arco Permian, said the uncertainty will continue for a few more weeks. Despite rumors stirred by a local radio news report that noted that Arco Permian would probably remain intact and continue to manage Permian Basin operations, Holland says that is not certain.

"Arco Permian is now the Permian Business Unit of BP," said Holland. "And, in terms of changes, any potential change will be made over the next six weeks, after BP Amoco has looked at our assets and made a determination on how we would fit best into the larger picture."

Holland said BP Amoco would be taking a close look at all U.S. onshore assets of Arco.

"No final decision has yet been made on the fate of Arco Permian," he said.

A BP official, however, is reported to have spoken to Arco Permian employees and told them that BP Amoco had no intention of selling the company or moving it to Houston.

After reviewing all scenarios BP Amoco, could keep Arco Permian in Midland, move it to Houston or sell it. The British company last month gave an indication of its feeling about Permian Basin oil and gas assets when it sold Altura to Occidental Petroleum for $3.5 billion.

Industry insiders, however, say there is a distinct difference between Altura and Arco Permian. One, there was a lack of harmony between Amoco and Shell the partners of Altura, and two Arco Permian has much better margins than Altura.

Arco Permian — which was spun off as a unit of Atlantic Richfield Co. — has become a highly effective Permian Basin operator and allowed to operate more or less autonomously as an independent oil company within a major oil company.

As such, the company became a benchmark for performance, showing strong margins during good and bad times. Such arrangements, however, are not part of the style of BP which prefers strong-handed central management.

Talking head

LONDON (AP) — She has green hair, big eyes, slightly jerky movements and a vaguely American accent. She says she is "the face of the future."

Ananova — billed as the world's first virtual newscaster — makes her debut Wednesday on the Internet. With a click of a mouse, computer users around the world can have breaking news bulletins read to them by the glamorous cyber-anchor, programmed to exude a range of human emotions.

"She's a lot more than a talking head that reads the news," Mark Hird, publishing director at Ananova Ltd., said Tuesday in launching the creation to the media. "She's a computer with a face in front of it, not a face with nothing much behind it. It's a phenomenal information resource."

In addition to the virtual newscasts — which are delivered TV-style by a head-and-shoulders Ananova and come complete with a commercial break — users can arrange to receive tailored e-mail bulletins on subjects that interest them, from sports scores to stock alerts. Just as with a host of other Web sites, they also can browse entertainment listings, buy tickets and make use of Ananova's dedicated search engine.

Ananova was developed by Britain's Press Association news agency, which has gone so far as to rename its new media division Ananova Ltd.

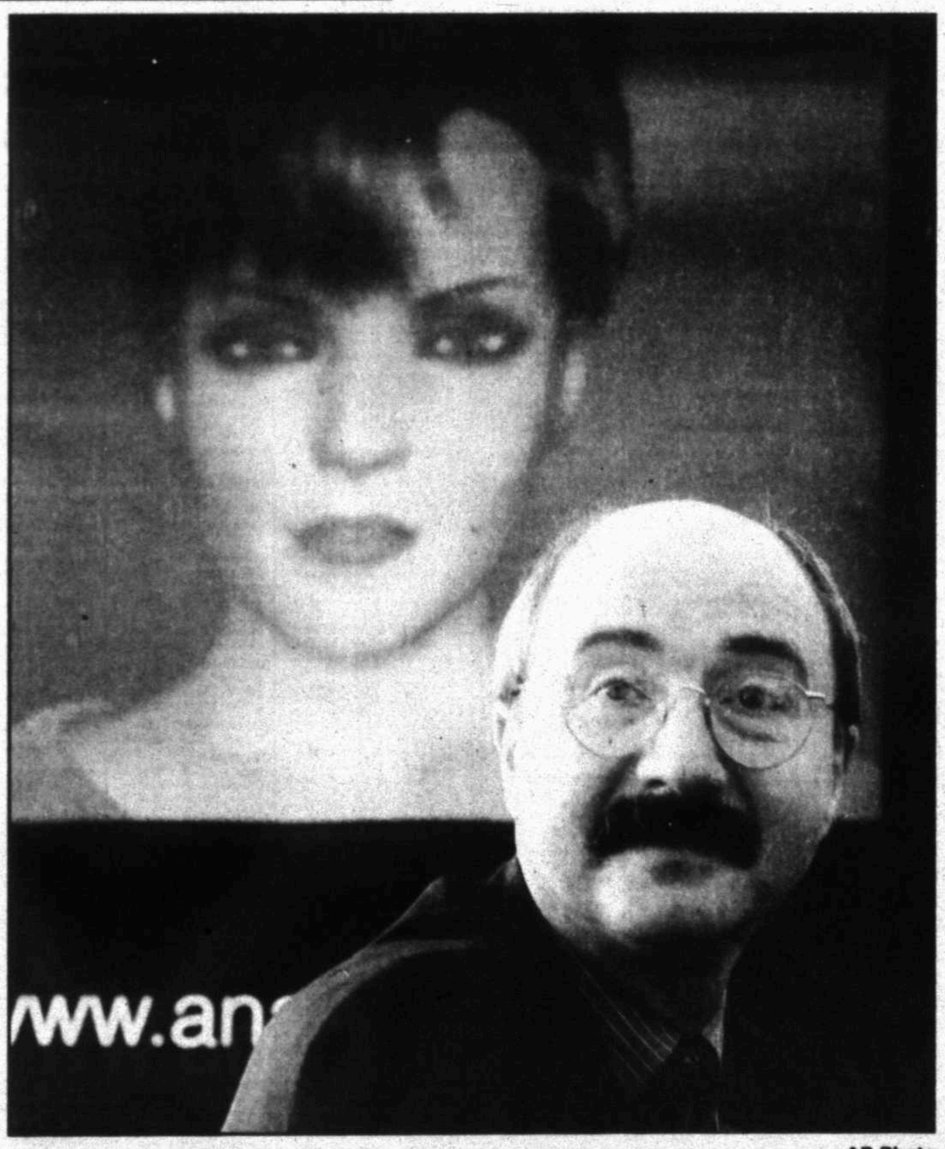

Ananova "will completely change the way we communicate," said Vivienne Adshead, the company's commercial director.

"It's quite a cute idea," said Rebecca Ulph, an analyst with Internet specialists Fletcher Research Ltd in London. "I think it will appeal to the younger end of the market and people who are new to the Internet, people who want a filtering mechanism through all the news that's out there. It's a marketing idea, rather than anything really innovative or exciting."

Ananova has a definite glamour factor: She bears more than a passing resemblance to Posh Spice, a.k.a. Victoria Beckham, and several designers reportedly have expressed interest in fashioning her wardrobe. But her creators dismissed claims that she's just another cyber-babe along the lines of Internet icon Lara Croft, buxom heroine of the video game Tomb Raider.

"We did some tests and in general people said they preferred to get their information from a woman," Adshead said. "She's been designed to appeal, though, to both men and women. She's not a babe. She's a sophisticated real-time computer system."

AP Photo

Robert Simpson, chief executive officer of Ananova.Com, launched a Web site in London Tuesday featuring an animated newsreader called "Ananova", which is seen in background. Ananova is the world's first annimated newscaster, that has expression and near real time updated news as it arrives. It will in future allow users to customize the site for their own use and interests.

The Auto Wash on Midland Drive adding express lube center

By Mella McEwen

In an expansion mode is THE AUTO WASH, 405 N. Midland Dr. The self-service car wash has begun the process of adding a lube center.

THE AUTO LUBE EXPRESS is expected to open in late June or early July, said owner Randy Jones. The two-bay center will not only offer oil changes, but check all fluids and be licensed to perform state inspections.

He opened the car wash two years ago with four self-service bays and a laser-wash bay. The car wash is open 24 hours a day.

"I opened here because everything was going on the Loop and this was a forgotten area," said Jones, noting the business has been going strong since he opened.

Traditional Easter menu updated

By Natalie Haughton
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Traditional holiday dinners sometimes need a little update. For a fresh approach to the Easter menu, we turned to Linda Fay, chef at Happy Trails Catering in Pasadena.

Her do-able inspirations are based on traditional spring ingredients including ham, asparagus and berries — but with a contemporary twist. The creations can be served for a glorious Easter dinner — or even brunch.

"The beauty is that almost everything can be made in advance," Fay told 10 students gathered in the commercial kitchen at Happy Trails for a hands-on cooking class one recent evening. And a home cook can easily manage the entire relatively simple menu alone with a little organization.

"This menu is not low-fat. It's designed for special occasions."

The menu speaks to her philosophy of cooking: that "food should be simple, well-executed, and there should be lots of it."

"When you braise the ham in lots of liquid, you end up adding moisture to the meat so it comes out more flavorful and is not as dry as when you bake it."

However, Fay doesn't recommend cooking a good expensive brand such as a Smithfield ham this way; it should be baked.

FOR THE RECIPE included today, the ham can be braised a day or two before serving. Trim the ham of all fat and place it atop sauteed roughly chopped carrots, celery, onions and thyme in a large pot or casserole.

"The vegetables can also be chopped in a food processor," added Fay, "because it doesn't matter what they look like."

Pour in enough white wine — an inexpensive one will suffice — or water to cover half of the ham. Then cover and heat to boiling stove-top. Either continue cooking the ham on top of the stove or in the oven for about an hour, Fay advised, as she checked the progress of a small group of students preparing this dish.

Once cooked, the ham can be cooled slightly, wrapped well and then kept refrigerated until just before serving time. Be sure to save and refrigerate the braising liquid to use in the sauce. Use any leftover cooking liquid to make split pea or other soup, recommended Fay.

Although the sauce involves a few different steps, including a couple of separate reductions — of vinegar and seasonings as well as the braising liquid — it's not difficult to make. Reduce the braising liquid to less than half in a saucepan stove-top over medium high heat to concentrate the flavor. For additional flavor in the sauce, reduce white vinegar with shallots or green onions, tarragon, bay leaf, peppercorns and parsley.

"If you use fresh tarragon, you'll have to use a lot more than dried," pointed out Fay, noting that the dried is more intense. The two reductions are then combined with egg yolks and cream — and whisked together until thickened in a double boiler. "To avoid curdling, watch the sauce carefully, and don't let it get too hot," warned Fay. It's a bit tricky, but not if you pay attention.

Just prior to preparing the sauce, cut the cooked ham and place slices in an ovenproof casserole dish with some of the reserved braising liquid. Cover with plastic wrap and then foil and seal well. Pop into a 350-degree oven to steam slowly until heated through. Don't worry about the plastic wrap as long as it is covered with foil. The ham will turn out moist and juicy.

"You can make the vinaigrette a day or two in advance, but for best results the asparagus should be blanched quickly (in boiling water) on serving day and then plunged into an ice bath to retain its bright green color," stressed Fay. Select asparagus stalks of the same size for even cooking; remove the dry, woody parts for best eating.

If you have difficulty finding raspberry vinegar, substitute an equal amount of raspberry vinegar dressing, advised Fay.

When it comes to seasonings, Fay told the class, "I only cook with kosher salt. It tastes better than regular salt and you don't have to use as much. Also, you can tell the difference between that and sugar — as it's bigger."

Fay is not as hung up as some of her counterparts on using everything from scratch in her cooking. She makes a great chicken stock, she noted, by doctoring up canned broth (with chicken wings or backs bones and chopped vegetables such as onions, carrots and celery and bay leaf). Or canned tomatoes can be turned into a delicious tomato sauce; fresh are not required.

"The more cornbread you use, the stiffer the mixture will be. If you opt to use less cornbread, the mixture will be more custardy."

MAKE THE HOMEMADE corn bread a couple of days in advance of preparing the souffle and leave at room temperature, uncovered, to dry out.

"If you don't like goat cheese, use smoked gouda instead, but leave the diced green chiles out of the recipe."

To accompany the main Easter meal, offer a salad of assorted gourmet greens tossed with the catering company's house Balsamic Vinaigrette. We reduced the vinaigrette recipe to a home-size quantity and in doing so omitted the raw egg, using a pinch of mayonnaise instead.

For dessert fanciers, offer Lemon-Lime Pound Cake with Fresh Berries or Easter Sugar Cookies.

Bake the cake in a loaf pan or medium-size bundt pan, instructed Fay, adding that's its best baked a day or two ahead of serving, which results in a denser, finer texture. The cake also freezes well.

In general, Fay doesn't favor freezing prepared foods unless she is faced with no other choice.

Select the freshest and sweetest berries for the fruit mixture, and mix and match according to availability.

Toss with a little sugar and a splash of creme de cassis, nonalcholic blackberry syrup, Triple Sec or Grand Marnier, and marinate at least an hour before spooning over cake slices. Top with dollops of whipped manufacturing cream.

"Because the manufacturing cream ... has a higher butterfat content (around 40 percent) than regular whipping cream, it whips up more quickly — and you don't have to chill the bowls and beater," pointed out Fay.

And for a finishing touch for the buffet, Fay advised: "Be sure to garnish the plates attractively with something edible that goes with food — not something you pick off the food and set aside.

BALSAMIC VINAIGRETTE

1 or 2 cloves garlic, minced OR pressed
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon mayonnaise OR whipping cream
1-1/2 cups vegetable OR canola oil (or use part olive oil)

Place garlic, mustard, salt, pepper, vinegars and mayonnaise in bowl of processor and pulse to combine. With food processor running, add oil in a steady stream through funnel. Taste and adjust seasoning if necessary. Keep refrigerated. Use to dress greens.

BRAISED HAM WITH TARRAGON SAUCE

HAM:
3 tablespoons butter
3 carrots, peeled and chopped
3 celery stalks, trimmed and chopped
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon dried thyme
1 precooked ham (4 to 5 pounds), trimmed of fat
4 cups white wine (such as sauvignon blanc)
Water
SAUCE:
1/2 cup white vinegar
1/3 cup minced shallots OR green onions
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
1 bay leaf
5 peppercorns
3 sprigs parsley
2 cups liquid left over from braising ham
3 egg yolks
1/2 cup heavy whipping cream
Salt
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon

For ham, in a heavy ovenproof pan or pot, melt butter. Add vegetables and thyme, and sautee until limp. Place ham in pan with vegetables; add wine and enough water to come halfway up ham. Cover. Bring to a boil on top of stove. Place pan, tightly covered, in preheated 350-degree oven 1 hour (or simmer on top of stove 1 hour). Baste thoroughly every 15 minutes. When ham is done, remove from braising liquid. Refrigerate ham and braising liquid separately. An hour or so before serving, cut ham into slices and place slices in ovenproof casserole along with 1 to 2 cups strained braising liquid. Cover with plastic wrap and then foil, sealing well. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven about 20 to 25 minutes or until hot.

Meanwhile, prepare sauce. In a small non-reactive saucepan, combine vinegar, shallots, dried tarragon, bay leaf, peppercorns and parsley sprigs. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat to a simmer until liquid is reduced to 2 tablespoons. Strain and squeeze herbs to release flavors. Set aside.

In a medium saucepan, over high heat, reduce 2 cups of ham braising liquid to 3/4 cup.

Place mixture in a double boiler. Stir sauce constantly with a whisk. Do not let sauce get too hot (it will curdle). When sauce has thickened, remove from heat and taste for seasoning, adding salt to taste. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and fresh tarragon. Serve warm sauce with hot ham slices.

MONTRACHET AND CORN BREAD SOUFFLE

4 to 6 cups 1-inch cubes Corn Bread (recipe follows)
8 ounces Montrachet (goat cheese), cut in pieces
1/4 cup diced green chiles
7 eggs
4 cups heavy whipping cream
Salt and pepper to taste

Butter a 9x12-inch baking dish. Layer corn bread, cheese and chiles in dish. Beat together eggs, cream and salt and pepper to taste. Pour over corn bread, cheese and chiles and let stand 10 minutes. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven about 25 minutes until puffed and golden. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

CORN BREAD

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup sifted flour
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 cup solid vegetable shortening
1 egg
1 cup milk

Sift together cornmeal, flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Mix in shortening with fingers. Mix together egg and milk, and add to dry ingredients until just combined. Do not overmix.

Turn into a greased 8-inch-square baking pan. Bake in preheated 425-degree oven 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 1 pan corn bread.

ASPARAGUS WITH RASPBERRY VINAIGRETTE

Water
1 cup raspberries
1/2 cup raspberry vinegar OR prepared raspberry vinegar dressing
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 cup vegetable OR canola oil
Salt and pepper to taste
Raspberries for garnish

Place asparagus in boiling water 1 to 2 minutes. Quickly remove and place in ice water. When asparagus is cooled, keep chilled until ready to use.

For vinaigrette, place 1 cup berries, vinegar, sugar and mustard in food processor. Pulse on and off to combine. With food processor running, add oil through funnel until well mixed. Season with salt and pepper.

When ready to serve, place asparagus on a platter and drizzle vinaigrette over all. Garnish with fresh raspberries.

LEMON-LIME POUND CAKE WITH FRESH BERRIES

CAKE:
2 sticks (8 ounces) unsalted butter
1-1/2 cups sugar
5 eggs
2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 tablespoon baking powder
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon grated lime peel
GLAZE:
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons lime juice

For cake, cream butter and sugar until light. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. In a separate bowl, sift together flour, salt and baking powder. Add lemon and lime peels and dry ingredients to butter mixture. Stir until just combined. Do not overmix. Place in a greased 9x5-inch loaf pan or a medium bundt pan. Bake in preheated 325-degree oven 55 to 60 minutes or until cake tests done.

Meanwhile, make Glaze. In a saucepan combine all Glaze ingredients and heat until sugar dissolves. Pour over warm cake and let soak in. Cake should be made 2 days in advance. Serve with Fresh Berries and whipped cream.

FRESH BERRIES

4 cups mixed berries (blueberries, strawberries and raspberries), rinsed and sliced
1/2 cup creme de cassis
1/2 cup granulated sugar
2 cups manufacturing OR heavy whipping cream
1/2 cup powdered sugar

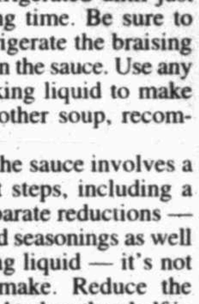

Mix together berries, creme de cassis and granulated sugar and let marinate at least 1 hour. Meanwhile, whip cream until soft mounds form. Beat in powdered sugar until mixed. Spoon berries over cake slices and top with whipped cream.

DEAR ABBY

Out-of-control parents show how not to be good sports

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Basketball season is over, and I am appalled at some of the things that have happened to our team. Because of one family, our team has been torn apart. The coach did nothing to deserve this attack and has always acted in the most professional way. He has never embarrassed one child or our school in any way. I hope you will print my letter because there is a good lesson in it for all of us.

Van Buren

Abby, please share with your readers the following 10 guidelines given in the journal The Physician and Sportsmedicine for parents, to assure that blessings — rather than curses — come from their children's involvement in sports.

1. Make sure your children understand that win or lose, you love them.
2. Be realistic about your child's physical ability.
3. Help your child set realistic goals.
4. Emphasize "improved" performance, not winning.
5. Don't relive your own athletic past through your child.
6. Provide a safe environment for training and competition.
7. Control your emotions at games and events.
8. Be a "cheerleader" for your child AND other children on the team.
9. Respect your child's coaches. Communicate with them in a positive way.
10. Be a positive role model.

Parents: Be sensible and responsible, and keep your priorities in order! There is a lot more at stake than a win/loss record.

Abby, I cannot sign my name to this letter. It's not because I'm ashamed; it's because of fear of more controversy. — AN INTERESTED FAN IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR INTERESTED FAN: Every year I hear about parents who behave irrationally and emotionally at their children's sporting events. Parents who cannot control their behavior, or who lose their perspective and project their own frustrated ambitions onto their children, should not attend sporting events.

I urge all parents to review the guidelines you have submitted, and consider the messages they are giving to their children — intentionally or unintentionally.

DEAR ABBY: Morse code is NOT dead! I am president of the Lone Star Chapter of the Morse Telegraph Club. We have chapters in many cities in the United States and Canada. On May 28, our chapter will have a table at a train show in Fort Worth, Texas, and will demonstrate Morse code sending and receiving. Other chapters also do demonstrations.

We are mostly retired railroad and Western Union telegraphers, but also have members who are ham radio operators. We welcome new members. — EUGENE WOOD, MADILL, OKLA.

DEAR EUGENE: Oops! I'm pleased to know that the announcement of the demise of Morse code was premature, that some people still use it and there is still an interest in it.

P.S. How do you say "sorry" in Morse code?

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: Easter will soon be here, and many people regard it as an occasion to give pets to small children. A word of caution: If you plan to surprise a child with a live baby rabbit, duckling or chick, please consider that living creatures need proper care. Unless you are ABSOLUTELY certain that the little pet will receive the care it needs to survive, please give a stuffed bird or rabbit instead. Regardless of how cute baby birds and animals are, they should not be given to children on impulse.

Fiesta: Enjoy taste of San Antonio without ever leaving home

Staff Reports

New Orleans has Mardi Gras and Rio de Janeiro has Carnival. But Texas own San Antonio — home to the Alamo, bluebonnets in the spring, the River Walk, pageantry and propensity to party — has Fiesta!

Every spring, this 10-day celebration is a swirl of parades, fireworks, mariachi music, art fairs, ethnic festivals, concerts, Mexican rodeos, royalty and satire. This year Fiesta will be April 22-30.

The San Antonio festivities include an amazing array of activities, such as belly dancing, bagpipes, coronations for Rey Feo (Ugly King) and King Antonio, parades and countless other lapses of decorum. New events debut every year, so your options are limited only by your imagination.

Fiesta began in 1891. Planned to salute the fallen heroes of the Alamo and the Battle of San Jacinto during a visit from President Benjamin Harrison, it began as a simple parade now known as the Battle of Flowers. The parade featured horse-drawn floats, cavalry and carriages festooned with flowers, and concluded at Alamo Plaza with participants throwing flowers at each other.

Despite the many diverse Fiesta activities, however, there is one common denominator for any event: food. Wherever you go , festive comestibles abound. And what an eclectic mix of cuisine is available! Think gorditas, jambalaya, tacos, sauerkraut, anticuchos, mountain oysters, egg rolls, burritos, escargot, fajitas and much more. (Check out the official website, www. fiestasa.com.)

If you can't get to San Antonio for the Fiesta, why not create your own? Host a Fiesta party and serve some of these recipes, courtesy of Luby's Inc. But first, however a recipe for a Fiesta tradition that is not edible:

CASCARONES

Cascarones (Spanish for "eggshells") are staples in almost every Fiesta event, but they are also fun to use at Easter, birthday parties and other festive occasions. These merrily messy confetti-filled eggs are simple to make, so even children can assemble or decorate them. Once prepared, cascarones are cracked on someone else's head (a sneak attack is best). Be prepared for retaliation!

SUPPLIES:
A dozen eggs with a carton
Bowl for raw eggs
Water and paper towels
Egg dye and/or marking pens
Confetti*
Colored tissue paper
Scissors
White glue or flour-and-water paste
Plastic funnel with a nickel-sized hole

TO HOLLOW EGGS: Gently strike the top of an egg with a spoon until you crack the shell. Make a small hole about the size of a nickel and pour the egg out into a bowl. Empty all your eggs and refrigerate the contents to cook and eat later. Carefully rinse out the eggshells with water and place them back in the egg carton to dry.

TO COLOR AND FILL EGGS: When dry, color the shells with the egg dye or decorate with felt tip markers. When dry again, fill the eggs about three quarters full of confetti using your funnel. Cut tissue paper into pieces large enough to cover and overlap holes by about half an inch all around. Seal the confetti in by gluing the pieces of tissue paper over the holes.

Note: You can buy confetti at a craft store, make your own with hole punches and colored paper, or obtain leftover hole punches from local printers.

TORTILLA SOUP

Vegetable oil
4 corn tortillas (6-inch), cut into 1x3-inch strips
1/2 pound lean ground beef
1/3 cup finely chopped onion
6 cups chicken broth
1 can (14-1/2 ounces) whole peeled tomatoes, undrained, chopped
1 can (about 12 ounces) cream style corn
1-1/2 cups (6 ounces) shredded American cheese
2 teaspoons ground cumin
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
1 small clove garlic, minced
1/3 cup cornstarch
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup chopped cilantro (optional)

In small skillet, heat about 1/2-inch oil. Add half the tortilla strips and cook until crisp. Drain on paper towels.

In small skillet, brown ground beef with onion. Drain

In small bowl, mix cornstarch and water until cornstarch is completely dissolved. Gradually add to boiling soup, stirring constantly. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in ground beef mixture and uncooked tortillas.

Ladle into bowls. Garnish with fried tortillas and, if desired, cilantro. Makes 8 servings

SPANISH RICE

1-1/2 cups converted rice
1/4 cup vegetable oil
2-1/2 cups chicken broth
1/4 cup finely dice green bell pepper
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1/4 cup finely chopped celery
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 can (8 ounces) whole peeled tomatoes

In medium saucepan over medium heat brown rice in oil. Add broth and bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and cook 10 minutes.

Add green pepper, celery, onion, cumin, garlic powder, chili powder, salt, and pepper. Mix well. Add tomatoes and their juice, mixing well and breaking up tomatoes with large spoon. Cover and continue cooking over low heat 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender and most of liquid is absorbed. Makes 8 servings

CHICKEN ENCHILADAS WITH TAMPICO SAUCE

TAMPICO SAUCE:
6 cups chicken broth
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green bell pepper
1/4 cup picante sauce (mild or hot)
Salt and pepper to taste
2/3 cup cornstarch
2 cups (8 ounces) shredded American cheese
ENCHILADAS:
16 corn tortillas (6-inch)
Vegetable oil
6 cups diced and cooked chicken
1-1/2 cups (6 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1 cup sour cream
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon seasoned salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup (2 ounces) shredded American cheese

For Tampico sauce, in large saucepan, combine broth, onion, green pepper, picante sauce, salt, and pepper. Bring to a boil over medium heat.

In small bowl, mix cornstarch and water until cornstarch is dissolved. Gradually add to sauce, stirring constantly. Reduce heat and continue cooking five minutes. Add cheese and stir until cheese melts. Remove from heat.

For enchiladas, heat oven to 350 degrees. Heat about 1/2-inch oil in small skillet, until hot but not smoking. Quickly fry each tortilla in oil to soften, about 2 seconds on each side. Drain on paper towels.

In large bowl, combine chicken, 1 cup Monterey Jack cheese, sour cream, onion, and seasoning. Mix well. Spoon scant 1/2 cup mixture down center of each tortilla. Roll up and place seam side down in two 11x7-inch baking dish. Top with sauce. Cover with foil.

Bake 10 minutes or until hot.

Remove foil. Sprinkle with remaining Monterey Jack and American cheese. Continue baking two minutes or until cheese melts. Makes 8 servings

FLAN (CARAMEL CUSTARD)

CARAMEL SAUCE:
1-1/4 cups granulated sugar
1 cup water
CUSTARD:
3-1/3 cups milk
7 extra-large eggs
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Heat oven to 375 degrees.

For sauce, heat heavy 10-inch skillet over medium heat. Evenly sprinkle half the sugar into skillet. Gradually add water, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 5 to 7 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and cool at room temperature.

Place about 1-1/2 tablespoons caramel sauce in bottom of each of eight custard cups. Pour 3/4 cup custard mixture into each cup and place in large baking pan. Fill pan with enough water to reach halfway up sides of cups.

Bake 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Refrigerate at least two hours.

Taste of Tex-Mex:

San Antonio-style food is more than beans, chile peppers and a handful of tortillas. Commonly referred to as "Tex-Mex," the regional cuisine is a flavorful — and sometimes sizzling — blend of specific seasonings and ingredients that bring people back time and again. Recreating these dishes isn't hard, but it does require using the right ingredients.

ANISEED: Liberally used in candies, cakes, cookies (like the holiday favorite, bizcochitos) and some stews. Tastes like licorice.

BAYLEAF: Used primarily to flavor sauces, soups, marinades and beans or other lentils.

CHILES: Sautèed, roasted or ground, chiles are a must in a Texas kitchen.

CILANTRO: A tangy, almost pungent leaf used in both fresh and cooked salsas, soups, stews, bean and rice dishes, and moles. Also called Chinese parsley.

OREGANO: Essential for hominy chowder (or pozole) and numerous tomato-based dishes.

Red beans and rice not bad, especially for boxed mix

By Linda Anderson

I'm still trying to figure out if I like Cajun food or not. Since I've lived most of my life here in the Desert Southwest — and have never visited New Orleans in my life — I haven't had a whole lot of opportunity to really sample that particular form of Louisiana cookin'.

Anderson

But thanks to a recent taste of Red Beans and Rice from a local restaurant, I'm willing to give Cajun foods more of a try. That may have been why I picked up a box of Tony Chachere's New Orleans Red Beans and Rice at my favorite supermarket and took it home to see if I could come up with something even half-way as good as the previously-mentioned Red Beans and Rice.

A 7-ounce box of the red beans and rice cost $1.99 and contained enough mix to make about four servings. That's only about 50 cents per serving. (A serving is listed as 1/4-cup on the label, so I guess that means side-dish serving. But wait a minute! The label also says each box contains enough mix for four servings, and I guarantee when you cook the mix in four cups of water, the result is a lot more than four servings of 1/4-cup each!)

But the good news is, for all those who are careful about such things, that one serving contains 100 calories with none of them from fat. Of course, directions for preparation say to add 1/4-pound of chopped sausage or ham (optional), and the calories/fat calories from the added meat are not included on the box's nutrition label.

Label advertising says: "The great thing about our Tony Chachere's delicious Boxed Dinners — other than how wonderful they taste — is how easy they are to prepare. Just think, in only 30 minutes, you'll have a complete, mouthwatering meal the entire family will enjoy!" Well, that's OK if the "entire family" wants to dine on red beans and rice in 1/4-cup servings, but if you're using this as a side dish, you'll probably need something more.

I followed package directions but left out the meat (taking that "optional" choice). I combined four cups of water with the contents of the package, brought it to a boil and then lowered the heat, covered and simmered for about 30 minutes; then let it stand for a few minutes before digging in. I must have done something wrong, though, because I ended up with something that looked more like red beans and rice soup than just plain ol' red beans and rice. (Didn't use Midland water either, so I can't use that as an excuse.)

However, I was pleasantly surprised at how tasty the "soup" turned out to be. The red beans part of the dish reminded me of the pinto beans my mother used to fix; the rice added flavor and texture to the whole thing.

I liked it. I may even buy it again. Who knows, I may end up loving Cajun food as much as I love Mexican food.

Naahhh...

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Winner's circle remains closed to Duval, Els, Love

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

They are among the best players in the world, considered the chief challengers to Tiger Woods. They already have earned more than $1 million this year, and the season is not even four months old.

Lately, however, David Duval, Davis Love III and Ernie Els share one other distinction that has become a troubling trend.

They can't seem to win.

All of them have been there on the back nine Sunday, either in the lead or close enough that it seems like only a matter of time before they're holding an oversized check and hoisting a trophy for the cameras.

The latest opportunity belonged to Els, a two-time U.S. Open champion whose credentials carried him only so far in the MCI Classic.

With a birdie sandwiched between two great bunker saves, he was at 14 under and three strokes clear, cruising toward what looked like a sure victory. Suddenly, shockingly, the Big Easy became the Big Pushover.

"I don't know what happened," Els said after playing the final 11 holes in 5 over to finish five strokes behind Stewart Cink. "I just lost it. What can you do?"

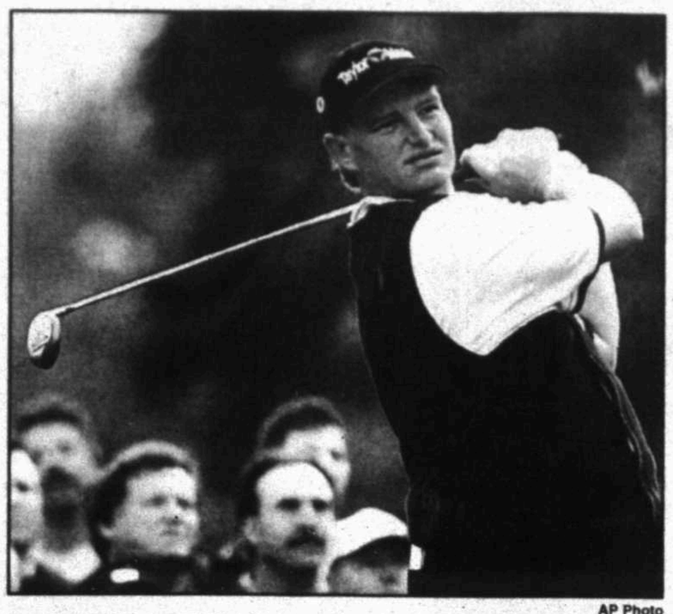

That's a consolation speech Love should know by heart. Love was only three strokes behind Els to start the final round and quickly bowed out, just as he did in the Masters a week early, just as he did in the Bay Hill Invitational a month ago.

Duval wasn't at Harbour Town. He folded his tent a week earlier at Augusta National, one stroke out of the lead with seven holes to play when he hit a bad shot at a bad time. He wound up with a bogey on the par-5 13th and finished four strokes behind Vijay Singh.

Just more than a year ago, Duval was No. 1 in the world, a winner in 11 of his last 34 tournaments. He is 0-for-23 since, dating to his victory in Atlanta the week before last year's Masters.

Els is 0-for-26 going back to his victory a year ago in Los Angeles, where he held off Woods, Duval and Love down the stretch at Riviera.

"When you haven't won like me, for almost a year now on this tour, it feels like you've got to work a little harder to get back there," Els said. "I've felt like that for quite some time."

AP Photo

Ernie Els is one of the best golfers in the world, but he hasn't won a tournament in some time. Neither have two other top golfers, David Duval and Davis Love III.

It must feel even longer for Love.

He followed his first major, the PGA Championship at Winged Foot in 1997, with a victory the next year in the MCI Classic. Since then, he has had six runner-up finishes, eight chances Sunday afternoon, a lot of money and no hardware.

He is 0-for-52 since his last victory.

"Time flies out here," Love said. "I think it would seem like a long time if I hadn't played well at all in between, but I've been close and had a lot of exciting things happen in between. So it hasn't been grinding on me or anything."

Duval is the most puzzling of the three. He remains the only player to hold the No. 1 ranking without ever having won a major. Clearly, he has enough talent to win with less than his best. Only now, he can't seem to win under any circumstances.

The same player who won four times before the '99 Masters let three chances get away on the West Coast this year. Putting cost him in Hawaii and in the Bob Hope Classic, and his 5-iron into Rae's Creek cost him a chance to wear a green jacket.

His focus on the Masters came at the expense of other victories.

"I probably wasn't as focused on those as much as I should have been," Duval said during the Masters. "Not to say I've neglected other events, but I've had an eye to the future. That's a balance I'll have to work on."

Justin Leonard has two big wins on his resume, the 1997 British Open and The Players Championship a year later. The latter was his last victory, a dubious winless streak at 55 and counting.

No one said winning was easy, especially on the PGA Tour. In no other sport is a 25 percent success rate considered a banner year.

Perhaps Woods has made winning look so routine — 10 of his last 18 tour events — that expectation levels are rising around him.

"It just seems like when he plays, he wins," Els said. "It kind of makes people think it's easy to win out here on tour. I guess when you're on such a high, with so much talent like Tiger has, that winning becomes a habit."

Not winning has become a habit that Duval, Els and Love need to break.

Officials disqualify able-bodied persons from wheelchair race

Associated Press

BOSTON — In a first for an event that has already played host to the most notorious scandal in running, the Boston Marathon has disqualified two able-bodied competitors for entering the wheelchair race.

"To the best of my knowledge, that's never happened before," said Marja Bakker, a member of the Boston Athletic Association's adjudication committee.

BAA spokesman Jack Fleming said Tuesday the names wouldn't be released, as is race policy for disqualified participants who didn't finish in the money. He said neither was contesting the disqualification.

"The wheelchair division is for people with an impaired range of motion. That's what it's for," Fleming said. "We have a division for people who can run."

It's been 20 years since Rosie Ruiz took a trolley to the finish to temporarily claim the women's title in Boston, an infamous incident that spurred organizers to add checkpoints and video surveillance to protect against cheaters. In most years, 6-12 people are quietly disqualified.

After reading the official reports on this year's incident, Fleming said it may be more a misunderstanding than an attempt to deceive.

"I don't think it was done with any sort of bad intent," he said. "I would hate, for the sake of these people, if the impression was that they were trying to pull something over on the disabled community."

Not all wheelchair races prohibit non-disabled people from participating. In Canada, for example, it is not uncommon — or against the rules — for able-bodied athletes to participate in wheelchair sports. The "reverse integration" fills up leagues and helps the able-bodied understand what wheelchair athletes experience.

"A lot of your elite wheelchair athletes say, 'Bring 'em on,'" said Todd Hatfield, the program manager of Wheelchair Sports USA, the national governing body.

"If they're willing to work that hard — typically they're carrying some extra weight, because of the legs and so forth — they might want the competition. But I just can't imagine an A.B. (able-bodied) wanting to get in and push a racing chair. I cannot see it. Those people must have been very hardcore."

In the United States, though, wheelchair sports are limited to those with "any lower limb impairment that prevents you from competing in the able-bodied analog sport," Hatfield said. Those who qualify are further classified based on the degree of impairment.

In Boston, those who apply to enter the wheelchair race are interviewed so they can be put into the right classification. "The people who work on that aspect really get to know them," Fleming said.

Ruiz was the first woman to finish in 1980, with a time that was then the third-fastest in women's history. Officials determined that she skipped part of the race and, eight days after crowning her champion, stripped her of the victory.

In 1997, a California couple finished first in their respective age divisions — seconds away from record times — but they didn't look tired or sweaty enough to have run a marathon. When they didn't show up on surveillance videotapes, they were disqualified.

This year, race judges noticed the two wheelchair racers moving around the starting line without any apparent impairment. The two were allowed to race before being approached after they finished; Bakker said one immediately acknowledged, "I am not disabled."

Jean Driscoll, who won the women's wheelchair race this year for the eighth time, said she wasn't so much offended as surprised that someone would choose to scrunch into a racing chair for more than two hours.

"I don't think they're making light of (disabilities). I think it's kind of funny they would want to cramp their legs up for 26 miles. There's a level of comfort you need to be able to do that," she said.

IOC eases ban on non-rights broadcasters

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Olympic organizers eased restrictions Tuesday on television access at the Sydney Games, allowing a limited number of international broadcasters to film within the main Homebush site.

Sydney organizing chief Michael Knight announced a compromise plan — approved by the International Olympic Committee — to allay the concerns of non-rights-holding entities including CNN, ESPN, Fox, Associated Press Television News and Reuters Television.

Under previously announced guidelines, all non-rights-holders would have been banned from the entire Sydney Olympic Park area at Homebush, a public area that is the site for most of the marquee sports, including track and field, swimming, basketball and gymnastics.

The rule would have restricted access to local Australian rights-holders and NBC, which paid $705 million for exclusive U.S. rights to the Sept. 15-Oct. 1 games.

The ban led to official protests by TV companies and the threat of possible legal action against Sydney Olympic officials.

Under the new rules, Olympic officials will issue eight permits per day to international non-rights-holders and eight to Australian non-rights-holders.

The permits will be issued on a rotating basis by the Olympic Coordination Authority, a body of the New South Wales government that controls the Homebush site.
