Police probe robberies

BIG SPRING — Three aggravated robberies in less than 24 hours have police searching for what they believe are two separate gunmen.

According to a Big Spring Police Department spokesman, a man held up the East 4th Fast Stop, 1500 E. 4th St., at about 7 a.m. Monday. The spokesman said police think the same man then held up Kay's Fina Mart, 1506 E. Marcy, about an hour later.

In both incidents, the man was described as black, early- to mid-20s, 5-foot-10 to 6-feet and 130 pounds to 160 pounds, the spokesman said. At both stores, the robber walked in, pointed a short-barreled revolver at the clerk and asked for money, the spokesman said.

The Fast Stop lost an undetermined amount of money, while Kay's Fina Mart reported that currency totaling $183 and watches valued at $279 were stolen.

In a third incident, another gunman robbed the 7-Eleven at 2301 W. Wason Rd. at about 4 a.m. Tuesday.

The spokesman said this robber was described as a black man in his late 40s, 5-foot-7 and 130 pounds. The store clerk never definitely spotted a gun, the spokesman said, but saw the outline of it under a shirt or jacket.

All three robberies are under investigation, and composites have been made of both robbers, the spokesman said.

6 nabbed in drug bust

BIG SPRING — A drug task force raid on a Big Spring house Monday night resulted in six arrests for charges of possession of a controlled substance.

According to a Big Spring Police Department news release, officers from the police department, the Howard County Sheriff's Office and the Permian Basin Drug Task Force used a search warrant to raid a house at 209 NE 7th St. at about 10:30 p.m. Six Big Spring residents were arrested and charged with possession of a controlled substance after officers found what was believed to be cocaine.

Those arrested include: Salazar Francisco Rosales, 32, 209 NE 7th; Miguel Mejia Yanez, 41, 105 NE 3rd; David Gutierrez, 20, 602 Abrams; Caroline Rameriz Talamantez, 21, 1311 Mobile; Abel Salas Martinez, 34, 504 N. Runnels; and Norma Valenzuela, 27, 2509 Seminole.

No bond currently has been set for any of the six.

Tie-breaker

BIG SPRING — The tie-breaker game between Philadelphia and Los Angeles proved to be the difference in the Big Spring Herald's weekly football contest last weekend.

Willie Mae Greenfield, Rt. 1, Box 550; Linda Robertson, Box 273, Coahoma; and Aurora Rodriguez, 2300 Alabama, each correctly selected 20 of the 23 ballgames. As a result of her tie-breaker selection, Greenfield won first and $35 in Herald Bucks, good for spending at any advertiser in the football contest.

For her second place finish, $15 in Herald Bucks went to Robertson, while Rodriguez was third, good for $10 in Herald Buck.

Wheat's Furniture was the winning advertiser in the contest, selecting 19 of the 23 games correctly; as a result, the business wins a free quarter-page advertisement.

The contest appears each Tuesday in the Big Spring Herald and each Thursday in the Herald's sister advertising publication, the Howard County Advertiser. Participants are limited to two entries in each week's contest.

Guards dismissed after beating charges

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

TEMPLE — Two guards at the Bell County Jail have been dismissed after a former Big Spring resident claimed he was beaten in his cell.

Joseph Bernardo Lopez of Big Spring, was in custody in the Bell County Jail earlier this month in connection with the death of two Temple men when he alleges he was beaten by a guard. But Major Bill Bryan with the Bell County Sheriff's Department said Monday the events surrounding the injury are still uncertain.

"There are discrepancies in their stories — only Lopez and (the guard) know for sure what happened," Bryan said.

"I was recently beaten by a guard for protesting them not giving inmates in isolation any clean clothes. I was immediately taken to the jail infirmary and the officer that did it said that I fell down." — Joseph Bernardo Lopez, accused killer

Bryan said while Lopez maintains he was assaulted by a guard, the guard contends that Lopez fell down. The two men were in Lopez's cell when the incident occurred, he said.

In a letter to the Herald, Lopez charges, "I was recently beaten by a guard for protesting them not giving inmates in isolation any clean clothes. I was immediately taken to the jail infirmary and the officer that did it said that I fell down."

And in a second letter to the Herald Lopez further charges, "I had been beaten by a jailer. He was hitting me so hard he broke a finger or his wrist, I'm not sure which. Within a couple of days he was wearing a cast.

"I made two trips to the jail infirmary because of the bruises on my head. I felt like it was going to explode." Lopez charges he suffered "numerous bruises and bumps" from the guard.

Another officer standing by the door agreed not to say anything about the incident, Lopez alleges.

But Bryan charges it was a "very provoked, very minimal assault of any kind." The officer responded after "being doused with a cup of urine" by Lopez through a food drawer, he said.

"I want this to be carefully balanced," Bryan said. "The officer didn't just bust in his cell and beat him up. It's certainly far from that," he said.

Bryan said Lopez was never hospitalized while at the Bell County Jail, but said he doesn't know if Lopez was ever injured during his stay in the county jail.

The jail has an in-house infirmary and it is possible he could have been admitted there, he said, but inmates usually go to there as often as twice a week.

Lopez said the man who allegedly beat him told superiors he hurt his arm in an elevator door and that the guard said that Lopez sustained head injuries from falling in his cell.

After sending a first letter to the Herald, Lopez said he was called to

BIG SPRING — Ashley Owens sits among four of the dolls that were received at the Big Spring Salvation Army recently. Approximately 100 of the non-clothed dolls are still available for either individuals or groups to pick up and dress. The dolls will then be judged as part of a contest and given away to needy children for Christmas. Ashley, 19 months old, is the daughter of Lt. W.D. and Neala Owens, commanders of the local Salvation Army.

Harsh realities of drug abuse explained to students

By JAMES FLEEHR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The harsh reality and ugliness of drug use is being brought home to local students this week.

As part of Red Ribbon Week, local law enforcement officials are visiting area schools with a message: Don't use drugs.

Kentwood elementary students were enthralled Monday afternoon by presentations describing what happens to drug users and even a video tape of a convicted drug user.

The school took a break during Red Ribbon Week, sponsored by the National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth, as students wore red ribbons with gold lettering: My Choice, Drug-Free.

The students viewed a videotape made Sunday using a convicted drug offender in the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp. The inmate had been a confessed user since the age of 13.

The inmate, whose name was not released for privacy reasons, said, "The safest place for a drug user is probably in prison."

The inmate described the harsh life he has led watching friends die violent deaths because of their involvement with drugs from such causes as wrist slashing, suicide by gun, reduced degree of mental capabilities and death by hanging.

Diseased needles were also a topic of concerned discussion with the inmate warning of the better-than-even odds of the intravenous drug user's chances of contracting infectious hepatitis.

Featured speakers included Sgt. Drew Bavin of the Big Spring Police Department, Cruz Olague of the prison camp, and Fredda Arney, a drug and alcohol abuse counselor with the Big Spring State Hospital.

First to offer the details of drug arrest procedure to the elementary students was Bavin. He explained the stop-search warrant methods and the route to the jail.

From fingerprinting to photographing arrested suspects, the kids participated in the discussion about booking the suspect with charges.

Bail was a well-known word to the young class members at Kentwood Elementary. Probation, rehabilitation and the concept of actually being in jail were less familiar to the young listeners.

When asked if any could afford putting the house up to supply bail money — $20,000 to $30,000 — even fewer of the children responded.

Next Olague updated the group on the existence of American institutions designed to house criminal offenders like the Federal Prison Camp. Locally, 718 inmates are living in the prison and out of that, from 70 percent to 80 percent were drug-related offenders, Olague said.

The secretary described the processing as long and involved and supported Bavin's point. It's a permanent record.

Arney, from the Big Spring State Hospital, explained that the final phase of the drug "trip" is to the rehabilitation center for treatment. Many do not get to this final stage of the drug experience and some require three and four stays in the hospital before treatment is successful, she said.

Texas plant explosion injures more than 50

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

PASADENA — A fire from a series of explosions at a Phillips Petroleum Co. plastics plant continued to burn today as officials waited to enter the charred complex to search for more than 20 missing workers. At least one employee died and more than 100 were injured.

Twenty Phillips employees and at least three contract workers were not yet accounted for, Glenn Cox, Phillips Petroleum president, said Monday night nearly 12 hours after the blast occurred. The one confirmed fatality was found at the plant, but Cox did not have his name or any other details.

"All of us as Phillips employees feel a personal loss," Cox said. "We know these people, we pray for their safety. It's a difficult time for all of us."

Flames and intense heat kept rescue workers from getting close enough to investigate the Monday afternoon explosion, and officials feared the worst.

"We're betting there's a lot of fatalities, just because of the nature of the explosion and where it happened," said Dr. Paul Pepe, the director of Houston's emergency medical services. "We don't think there's anybody alive in there."

Cox said at a new conference here Monday night that 109 workers were taken to hospitals where 33 were admitted and five to six were listed in serious to critical condition.

Emergency crews were not likely to enter the plant before daybreak because of the intense heat, he said.

Firefighters fought the blaze Monday night nearly 12 hours after the blast occurred. The one confirmed fatality was found at the plant, but Cox did not have his name or any other details.

Plant employees were taken to staging areas, some of them ferried across the channel to safety by fireboats, so that a head count could be taken. More than 900 people work in shifts at the plant, built in 1948 on the sprawling 800-acre complex, said Dave Dryden, Phillips spokesman at company headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla.

"Each area has an evacuation area but in some cases you just run. We just ran. There's nothing you can do but run," said Lonnie Odgen, who has worked at the plant for 14 years.

Farmers send aid

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma farmers and ranchers will donate hay to cattlemen in south Texas, where a three-year drought has tightened forage supplies, a spokesman for the Oklahoma Farm Bureau says.

Robert Peeler said Oklahoma was expected to be the biggest out-of-state contributor to the campaign, scheduled to be launched Wednesday in Guthrie when Oklahoma hay will be loaded onto train cars.

Peeler said some parts of Texas reportedly have received less than 12 inches of rain in the three-year period, resulting in a 75 percent herd reduction.

The problem is compounded by a quarantine of some East Texas hay because of fire ant infestation, he said.

"The need is more than we could ever come up with to pull them out," Peeler said, "but we hope it will help some."

Lubbock wine wins gold in international competition

LUBBOCK (AP) — Even one of Llano Estacado's competitors is happy the winery recently won a gold medal in international competition for its cabernet sauvignon.

"We think that's great," said Jennifer Cox, co-owner of Pheasant Ridge winery north of Lubbock. "Anytime wines win from the Lubbock area, it's good for all of us."

Llano Estacado, a 12-year-old winery south of Lubbock, won the gold last week with its 1985 reserve cabernet sauvignon at the International Wine and Spirit Competition in London.

Llano's 1988 Johannisberg riesling won a silver and the 1988 sauvignon blanc won a bronze.

"We need to establish credibility for this wine-producing region, and I think this does that. It's important for the High Plains growers, our reputation and the Texas wine industry to have a distinguished group of judges find our wines among the finest in the world."

John Lowey, Llano's president, said his winery won't be the only one to benefit from the award.

"We need to establish credibility for this wine-producing region, and I think this does that," Lowey said. "It's important for the High Plains growers, our reputation and the Texas wine industry to have a distinguished group of judges find our wines among the finest in the world."

A gold medal did not mean best of show, but that the judges considered it excellent. Four American cabernet sauvignons won golds; only the cabernet sauvignon from Stag's Leap in northern California scored higher than Llano Estacado's, Lowey said.

Lowey said he and winemaker Don Brady knew when the grapes were coming in four years ago that they would have an award-winning wine. The rights to some of the output was sold while it was still aging in the barrels for two years, he said.

Llano Estacado made 336 cases of the gold medal-winning cabernet, sold under Llano's Cellar Select reserve label. It was released in March and is difficult to find, Lowey said, adding that it probably can be found in Houston, Austin, San Antonio and possibly Dallas. About 95 percent of the winery's 80,000-case annual production is sold in Texas.

Emergency

Rural/Metro recently. Instead I was amazed at the quality of the service and the equipment they had.

"We've got the best selection of medics we've ever had," said Brenda Whatley, acting field supervisor for the Big Spring service. "I would put our people up against any ambulance service in Texas for ability and skills."

Rural/Metro has a staff of four full-time paramedics, five part-time paramedics, and two part-time EMTs. A normal shift consists of a two-person crew on duty, with two back-up crews available. A shift begins at 8 a.m. and lasts for 24 hours, with the on-duty staff sleeping at headquarters.

An ambulance and crew must always be ready to leave at a minute's notice in an emergency. But even when the radio's silent, there's plenty to do.

"Basically from 8 to 5 it's business work — cleaning trucks, paperwork, transporting," said paramedic Jimmy Futrelle, describing a typical day. "After 5, if the paperwork is not done we have to finish that, but in the evenings we usually have time to sit and read and watch television."

I spent six hours with Whatley and Futrelle on a recent Friday evening. We were joined by EMT student John Wilson, who had come from Gail to get in required ambulance hours for training class.

States differ in their requirements for EMS personnel. In Texas, the basic emergency medical technician certification can be earned in one semester in a six-hour college course.

"This is a basic life support certification," said Futrelle. "A special skills certification requires another eight-hour class, and a paramedic certification is one more eight-hour course."

Howard College offers the classes, he said, adding that other schools might offer a two-year associate degree in EMS and that two colleges in the country offer a bachelor's degree in emergency medical service.

Guards

the office to make a statement. Although Lopez said he did not seem to get any results, an investigation was started that led to the uncovering of the incident.

Bryan said Lopez told another jailer that someone came into his cell and hit him, and that the investigation was initiated after that time.

The investigation did uncover some wrongdoing by the guard, he said.

Bryan acknowledged that the guard and his supervisor were dismissed from the facility, but declined to elaborate under what circumstances the sheriff's personnel left the department, saying, "We don't release that kind of information."

Bryan said he believes the incident is settled. "That's what Mr. Lopez told me," he said. Bryant said he personally talked with Lopez about the incident.

Lopez was "made thoroughly aware of what happened" about the guards and "was satisfied with the outcome of the investigation."

Bryan said potential jailers are given two written tests and a psychological test in an effort to attract quality people, but said being a jailer is a "tough job."

Bell County Jail runs a "safe and sound operation," he said.

Armed with a pager and a radio, we trooped out to the ambulance for the trip to the restaurant. "Ordering a meal is usually a guarantee of a call," Futrelle said with a laugh.

In this case it wasn't. We enjoyed our meal in peace and then Wilson had to go back home without having made a run. I hung around the station a little longer since I lived in town.

Around 11:30 p.m. we got the first call of the night — a medical emergency. I rode in the front while Futrelle drove to the residence. The situation was an older man who had been sick for several days. When he was unable to stand up, his wife called for an ambulance to take him to Veterans Hospital.

I watched as Whatley and Futrelle efficiently unloaded a stretcher and wheeled it into the house. While one got a medical history from the wife, the other quickly examined the patient and took vital signs. Within minutes the patient was installed in the ambulance and we were on our way to the hospital.

Because the patient complained of chest pains, Futrelle hooked him up to a cardiac monitor on the way to the hospital. Once there, the patient was unloaded and quickly wheeled into the examining room.

It actually took longer to do the required paperwork than it took to get the call, respond and transport the patient.

"We have to be very careful about our paperwork," Whatley explained. "Since some of these forms are legal documents, they have to be completely filled in and they have to be accurate."

We were back in the station shortly after midnight with the ambulance cleaned and prepared for another trip. Whatley and Futrelle planned to catch what sleep they could, fully dressed and ready to respond in two minutes to the next call.

I drove home with a renewed respect for the work they do and confident that my life would be in good hands if I ever needed their services.

Weather

Fair weather prevailed across most of the nation early today, while rain and snow brought signs of winter to the West.

Snow advisories were in effect today for the northern and southern Sierra Nevada and for the mountains of northeastern California. At least 6 inches of snow fell Monday on parts of the Sierra Nevada.

The storm forced closure of state Highway 120 into Yosemite and prompted the California Highway Patrol to require drivers to put chains on their vehicle wheels when traveling on mountain roads, including state Highways 80 and 50.

The storm also encouraged eager skiers, said Marilyn Graham, an operator for the Hyatt Lake Tahoe hotel.

"If there's a big storm like this, they naturally think it's ski time," she said.

Scattered showers and a few thunderstorms were expected today in the San Francisco Bay area. On Monday heavy rain complicated the area's cleanup from last week's earthquake.

Strong and gusty winds also were over parts of the West, with 40 mph winds reported at Ontario, Ore., on Monday evening. A wind advisory was in effect today for the Owens Valley of Southern California.

Elsewhere, sunny skies brightened the Plains and the Mississippi Valley Monday.

Gas prices dip slightly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average price of gasoline nationwide dipped about a half-cent a gallon at the pumps in the past two weeks, a survey found.

The Lundberg Survey of 12,000 gas stations showed the average retail price of all grades of gasoline, including taxes, at 109.12 cents a gallon on Friday, down .53 cent from Oct. 6, analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

"The movement is not untypical for this type of year. It's partially a response to seasonally lowered demand, but also to ample supplies," she said.

Wholesale prices fell, allowing retailers to pass their savings on to customers, she said. According to the survey, self-service prices per gallon were: regular unleaded, 97.74 cents; premium unleaded, 114.87 cents; regular leaded, 96.62 cents.

At full-service pumps, prices per gallon were: regular unleaded, 127.26; premium unleaded, 139.92 cents; regular leaded, 126.01 cents.

Student drowned

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A Texas student touring Spain with the Up With People entertainment troupe and a friend were presumed drowned after being swept into the ocean as they posed for a photograph, an official with the Tucson-based organization said Monday.

Searchers were unable to locate Shannon Wayne Trumbula, 22, of Dallas and Jose Semper, of Santander, Spain, who were swept into the Atlantic on Sunday, said Jim MacLennan, Up With People executive vice president and chief operation officer. He said the search was hampered by stormy weather conditions.

Trumbula and Semper, whose family was hosting Trumbula during his stay, were being photographed standing on rocks with their backs against the Atlantic when an unanticipated wave swept them into the water, MacLennan said.

Sunday was a free day for the cast, MacLennan said.

Trumbula, a trumpet player, was taking a year off from attending Texas Tech University to tour with the group.

MacLennan said the group had decided to continue with the tour and were on their way to Namur, Belgium. He said they would remain in Europe until January.

Trumbula is the second person to be killed in the organization's 24 years.

In May, a 26-year-old Wyoming woman was killed in a Montana traffic accident while on tour.

Up With People is an international education and cultural program that uses entertainment to encourage understanding among people of the world.

Chili cookoff

ROSAMOND, Calif. (AP) — On a rainy, cool Sunday at this former gold mining town on the edge of the Mojave Desert there was food to warm the coldest belly and the weather was like home for $25,000 winner in the World's Championship Chili Cookoff — Philip M. Walter of Seattle.

The Washington state man was among 82 winners of prior state, regional or foreign cookoffs who were entered in the annual event sponsored by the International Chili Society, whose logo shows fire coming out of the top of a pot instead of beneath it.

Judges, including cast members from the television soap operas "General Hospital" and "The Young and the Restless" wore holsters equipped with bottles of stomach acid.

The chili chefs and their teams were given three hours to prepare their fiery creations. While waiting, the crowd attending the 23rd annual cookoff at the Tropic Gold Mine was entertained by three bands, a dishwashing contest won by Sheila Sowell of Abilene, Texas, and a hollering contest won by Mame Lykins of Riviera, Ariz.

Astronauts complete successful mission

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Atlantis' five astronauts were home with most of today off, while their "amazingly clean" spaceship remained in California for servicing after a successful mission that sent the Galileo to Jupiter.

The Galileo probe, said to be operating flawlessly, has traveled more than 1.1 million miles since deployment about 6½ hours after Wednesday's blastoff. The $1.5-billion, nuclear-powered probe's 2.4-billion-mile trip will take six years.

The long-delayed odyssey to Jupiter will include one sweep past Venus and two by Earth to gain momentum from the planets' gravity. Once it reaches Jupiter, Galileo will fire a probe into the Jovian atmosphere and then orbit the largest planet for 22 months.

Atlantis returned to Earth on Monday with a picture-perfect landing that occurred three hours early at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., to avoid higher winds predicted for the afternoon. Winds moments before touchdown were only about 4½ mph.

"Atlantis, congratulations on an outstanding mission," Ken Cameron radioed from the Johnson Space Center in Houston. "You've extended the shuttle's reach to the outer planets."

"It's nice to be home," replied shuttle commander Donald E. Williams, who guided the 97-ton winged spaceship to a pinpoint landing on a hard clay runway in the Mojave Desert.

The 9:32 a.m. PDT landing ended a 1.7 million-mile-mission that unofficially lasted 4 days, 23 hours and 41 minutes. The mission's main purpose was launching Galileo, which scientists hope will find clues to the formation of the universe and provide the best look yet at another planet.

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE — Space Shuttle Atlantis makes its early landing at Edwards Air Force Base in this television picture Monday. Atlantis, with its crew of five, returned after a 5-day mission.

About 20,000 people were at Edwards to watch the landing. The crowd was small compared to past touchdowns because of the week-day landing, officials said.

About 45 minutes after landing, the astronauts emerged from the shuttle and performed the traditional walkaround inspection with NASA officials. The other crew members are pilot Mike McCulley, and mission specialists Ellen Baker, Shannon Lucid and Franklin Chang-Diaz.

"The vehicle looks amazingly clean," said William Lenoir, an acting associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "We did not see, with a quick inspection, any significant tile damage — a little nick here and a nick there."

The black tiles protect the shuttle during its fiery re-entry into the atmosphere.

Later in the afternoon, the astronauts left Edwards aboard two Gulfstream jets for their home base in Houston.

The crew members and their spouses arrived at Houston's Ellington Field at about 6:30 p.m., where they were greeted by their children and 300 cheering friends and co-workers.

"This is obviously one of the highest points in my life so far," Williams told the crowd. "It's super."

The astronauts have most of today off, but were expected to the space center this afternoon to look over film they took during their mission, said spokesman Jeff Carr. They return to work Wednesday to begin a week of formal briefings about their flight.

Atlantis will ride piggyback on a modified Boeing 747 for a two-day trip to Cape Canaveral, Fla., this weekend.

After deploying Galileo, the crew turned their attention to several science and medical experiments, including one that measured the Earth's protective ozone layer.

Pro-life activist critical of governor

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has betrayed abortion foes who helped elect him, a pro-life leader charged after the governor said he wouldn't reconsider his decision to keep abortion off the legislative agenda until 1991.

"There are lots of people in the pro-life movement, who if not for this issue, would not have voted for Bill Clements for governor, who feel betrayed and feel let down," Bill Price, president of the Dallas-based Texans United for Life, said Monday.

Clements said he would not debate his decision with anti-abortion activists.

"I have no intention of talking to him (Price) about the issue at all," he said. "I've made up my mind about it. There's nothing to discuss."

Price said, "The fact that he's not even willing to meet and discuss it indicates he's completely abandoned the cause."

Abortion is too difficult an issue for a 30-day special session, Clements said. He said he never promised to allow lawmakers to address abortion before the next regular session convenes in January 1991, when he leaves office.

"I said I would consider it. And I have made my decision that it's not an appropriate subject to get into the special session because you can't limit the subject to what the issues would then be," said Clements, a Republican who isn't seeking re-election.

The governor, who calls and sets the agenda for special sessions, has called a session for Nov. 14 on workers' compensation reform, the second workers' comp session this year. Another special session will be held in the spring to address court-ordered school finance reform, he said.

After the U.S. Supreme Court ruled this summer that states could impose some restrictions on abortion, Clements said he was considering whether to call a special session on the issue. He added, "I would bet on it."

"We took him at his word — that when he said, 'You can bet on it,' he was making a sincere commitment to do it," Price said. He said the complexity of the abortion issue is the reason it should be the object of a special session.

"Frankly, we're left bewildered at why a pro-life governor would refuse to allow pro-life legislation to be acted on during the remainder of his term of office, and would refuse to even discuss it," Price said.

Clements refused to discuss his position on abortion Monday.

Children are big spenders, savers

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Juniors and Juniorsettes are making the big bucks, and more of what they're making is getting into their piggybanks.

A study by Texas A&M University shows that children are making more and saving more of what they're making — about 30 percent of their average weekly income.

That income, for children between the ages of 4 and 12, averages about $4.42 cents a week, said Dr. James McNeal, professor of marketing.

Of that, children are putting aside about $1.35, either in their piggybanks or in financial institutions. That savings rate is up from 10 percent in 1984, McNeal said.

The increase in savings is in part a result of parents encouraging their children to be more self-sufficient, he said.

But the overall numbers are attracting the attention of bankers. On a national basis, McNeal estimates that children are making $8.6 billion, spending slightly over $6 billion and salting away the rest.

At least one U.S. bank goes to elementary schools to make it easier for children to conduct their banking business.

McNeal's study shows that children's income has increased 46 percent during the past 5 years, or about 9 percent annually.

Public Notice

On October 18, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWB) intends to file an application with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to add a new service offering for business customers, called Consolidated Billing (CSB). The proposed effective date for this offering is December 4, 1989.

Consolidated Billing allows the business customer to combine an unlimited number of accounts within a single Revenue Accounting Office (RAO). Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's RAOs in Texas are located in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio. This service will establish a common billing date for each of those accounts so that they may receive one bill each month. Each customer account is tied together for billing purposes, but retains its own identity and level of detail.

PROPOSED RATES

There is no monthly rate associated with Consolidated Billing. However, a nonrecurring charge of $15.00 will be applied to establish a Consolidated Billing arrangement. An additional $15.00 nonrecurring charge will apply for each account which is incorporated into the Consolidated Billing arrangement.

Consolidated Billing (CSB) has been forecasted to generate an increase in first year annual revenues of approximately $581,733.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by November 24, 1989. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Budgetary madness

The White House and Congress are engaged in an elaborate conspiracy to disguise the enormity of the federal deficit. According to the official estimate, which has been shamelessly manipulated, the 1990 deficit will decline to $110 billion. In fact, the true deficit will actually grow to $206 billion.

The $96 billion gap is the difference between fiscal reality and the monstrous political myth, perpetrated by both the administration and lawmakers, that the deficit is under control. Even as President Bush imposes automatic spending cuts and congressional negotiators work on a package to reduce the apparent deficit, the real deficit is surging again.

The Congressional Budget Office, which has calculated the deficit's genuine dimensions, notes that after declining significantly during the mid-1980s, the deficit is once again growing as a percentage of gross national product. The government's increased borrowing exerts upward pressure on interest rates by soaking up capital that could be used for productive investment. A rise in interest rates is one of the factors contributing to the dangerous volatility of the stock market.

Accounting chicanery on a massive scale has been employed to cover up the true deficit. This includes a sweeping expansion of off-the-books spending. For example, $30 billion of the $50 billion to be spent over the next three years to salvage bankrupt savings and loans has been placed "off budget." So has the Postal Service's $1.7 billion shortfall for this fiscal year. Off-budget spending simply is not counted against the official deficit, even though it drives the government deeper into the red.

Perhaps the most irresponsible trick of all is the looting of Social Security surpluses to pay for the government's day-to-day operations.

To paper over the deficit, the government this year will spend for other purposes every dollar of the $68 billion surplus collected by the Social Security Trust Fund. Under legislation passed in 1983, Social Security payroll taxes are increasing steadily each year to build up the enormous reserves needed to pay retirement benefits to the baby-boom generation, beginning in 2010.

But the projected reserves are being squandered by today's policies, stirring mounting concern that tomorrow's retirees will face sharp decreases in benefits. Worse, the raid on Social Security is also being discounted from the official deficit.

In other words, the $68 billion being taken from the Social Security Trust Fund in 1990 is in addition to the projected deficit of $110 billion. Under provisions of the Gramm-Rudman budget act, the deficit can be slashed to zero in 1994 — but only with the help of an estimated $113 billion in Social Security reserves. This accounting sleight of hand merely piles up more debt by transferring today's fiscal obligations to tomorrow.

A bipartisan coalition that includes members of the House and Senate has proposed counting the Social Security drawdown as part of the official deficit. This would, of course, boost the deficit substantially and make it far more difficult to achieve the Gramm-Rudman targets. Accordingly, proponents would delay balancing the budget from 1993 to 1996.

Such a reform would be a major blow for honest budgeting and help force Congress to face up to the real deficit instead of hiding behind a political figment. As long as President Bush and the Congress continue to opt for political gimmicks instead of fiscal solutions, the deficit will persist as Washington's biggest, and riskiest, folly.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Short-term drug solution, long-term financial disaster

By JERRY SIMONEK

Easing around an 18-wheeler Adam accelerates his Mazda 929, enjoying the feel of its handling and performance. Adam is a bright, young executive with a growing computer technology research and development firm. Wow, what a break. Barely out of college three years and earning over $50,000 a year. Of course, Adam earned it. He was top in his graduating class, very innovative in his profession, and ambitious.

"Yes," Adam thought to himself, "it is all falling into place nicely." His income was budgeted where his wife with their newborn son was able to stay at home and take care of little Rick. Not only was he nicely taking care of the mortgage on their new home on Belaire Dr., but he was able to finance this new Mazda 929.

But then it all changed. Adam went around the 18-wheeler right into the eye of a state trooper's radar. Nothing major — just 71 in a 65 zone. At least not until the trooper wanted to see Adam's insurance papers, which were kept in the glove box. With the trooper standing right at his side, Adam opened the glove box, and there in clear sight was the vial of white powder. How could he have forgotten? Was it one too many beers the night of the party when he tossed it into the glove box? Or was it that it really wasn't that big of a deal? It was just something he used every once in a while to help him unwind.

Whatever — Adam was busted. With the new no-tolerance drug program, Adam was made an example like thousands of other casual users. Adam lost his job, lost his home, lost his car, and was fined a large sum that he couldn't even pay because he didn't have a job anymore. Another great victory for our no-tolerance drug program! Or is it?

There is no doubt that we have a very serious drug problem. Cocaine producers in Columbia are proving to be a bunch of savages, and crack dealers are showing that they have little or no regard for human lives or the quality of our society. Yes, casual users are supporting the cocaine producers in South America, but you don't put a gun to someone's head and pull the trigger to get rid of the cancer. Nor should we rush into a crowded football stadium and start shooting recklessly, hoping that we will put an end to the bad guys that are out there someplace, because innocent people are going to get hurt.

Who is going to pay the mortgages and the car loans of the casual user once he is busted? Will the already overburdened taxpayers have to foot the bill? Or will these debts just be dumped onto the already troubled financial institutions to their, and ultimately our, demise? Who is going to take up the slack of the productive income that will be created when we turn the casual user into a criminal and take them off the work force? Who is going to pay the bill for all of the increased prison space we are going to need for these casual users who were once financially productive individuals?

According to figures released by the Bureau of Justice Statistics our prison population for the first six months of 1989 increased by 46,004 inmates. This six month increase set a new record, not for any previous six months but for any previous year's increase. The biggest annual increase ever recorded previously was in 1981-82, when the national prison population grew by 41,060 inmates.

With already overcrowding problems in our prison systems, we can not afford to lock up every casual user convicted for illegal possession of drugs. President Bush is seeking 1.2 billion in funding for 1990 for additional federal prison space. Where will it all end? Will we eventually begin sectioning off states and make them into penal territories? Again, who's going to pay the bill? More important than the financial expenses, are we going to create an even more socially undesirable individual after we ruin the users' careers, incriminate them, and lock them up with even greater social misfits?

Yes, we do have a problem with drugs. But a mindless, desperate no-tolerance movement scares the hell out of me. It could easily grow into another witch hunt and burning that would hurt our society more than help it. Bomb the cocaine fields, burn down the crack houses with the crack dealers in them. But when it comes down to the casual user, who in most cases is a socially contributing and productive human being, we need to deal with them as someone needing a little help, not as criminals needing to be punished.

For the good of our country, our fellow brothers and sisters, and our financing well-being, this is an issue that is in need of very serious consideration. JERRY SIMONEK

Marine reunion battles

By ART BUCHWALD

I went to a reunion of my Marine Corps Fighter Squadron 113 in Pensacola the other day. All of us had fought valiantly in World War II — that's right, buster, World War II — and there are still a lot more around than most people think.

The guys set up a "ready room" in a suite at the Dunes Hotel, and that's where members of the squadron gathered to weave war stories and swap photos and souvenirs from the past. I grabbed a beer and waited for the lying to begin.

Schmitt was relating his war story when Frank Drury, one of the organizers of the reunion, came in white-faced. "Shellack bought it."

"Where?" someone cried. "At O'Hare Airport. Delta's computer went down and Shellack was left at the gate in tears."

"Couldn't they have put him on standby?"

"You know Shellack. He would only fly first class with a confirmed seat. He always maintained that standby was for dogfates."

"Here's to Shellack," I said, raising my glass. "We'll always remember that Delta was not ready when he was."

Russ Drumm said, "Did I ever tell you about the time a shark stole my skivvies off a clothesline on Eniwetok?"

This sounded interesting, but the phone rang and Grundler answered it. He kept saying, "Oh, no. Oh, no." Then he hung up and held his head in his hands. "Andy Jones lost all his luggage coming into Kennedy."

John Lincoln threw his glass against the wall. "Why do they always lose the luggage of the good ones?"

"He had a hunch about this," I told them. "We were sitting together in the Denver terminal one day and he said, 'Last night I dream that my bags on TWA never made it to Boston. In case anything happens to me, I want you to see that my wife gets these claim checks.'"

We didn't seem to be making much progress with our war tales. I had one ready but before I could begin, John Zoellner staggered into the ready room. His suit was crumpled, his shirt-tail hung out and his cheeks were twitching.

He went straight to the bar, grabbed a bottle of cognac and began to drink. "What happened?" someone asked.

"Tri-Continental had a flat tire. We sat on the runway for four hours, and then the gate attendant discovered that the flight was overbooked. They made us slide down the chute and find our way back to the terminal in the dead of night."

Green said, "That happened to me once when I was traveling business class on Eastern. They announced that any passenger giving up his seat would get stock in the company. Everybody who got off went broke."

Zoellner took another swig. "I'm never going to fly again."

Drury grabbed him by his lapels. "No one chickens out at a Marine reunion. You're going on the next USAir flight to Atlanta if I have to strap you to the 'No Smoking' sign myself."

The conversation turned serious. Kimak spoke up. "Question: Does anyone know why we fought the Japanese in World War II?"

Bill Murray replied, "Everyone knows that. It was to keep them from flooding the United States with Toyotas."

Just then we heard the roar of engines and we rushed out onto the balcony. There was a squadron of commuter planes coming in from Tampa at sunset. Drury was looking through his binoculars and counting them. "One — two — three — four — five — my God, Chuck Woodbury's plane is missing. Call the tower."

Dufford called the tower. "What happened to 814?"

The controller told him, "Chuck blanked out after he ate the airline food over Biloxi."

Flag burning isn't the real issue here

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Gregory Lee Johnson did something worse than burn the American flag at the Republican Convention in Dallas in 1984. He started a fire under one of the seedier elements of democracy — those who would fight until death to protect their right to tell others what to do.

Sadly, there are enough of those people in the United States to constitute a hefty voting bloc, and now they have their representatives in Congress stuck between that bloc and a hard place.

For the record, we never met Gregory Lee Johnson, but we don't like him anyway. He took advantage of the very country that he despises by burning the flag to show his contempt. Then, he dragged the case against him all the way to the Supreme Court, which painfully had to admit that Johnson had a right to burn the flag.

Johnson was right and his case was solid, but don't expect us to invite him over to dinner for a spirited debate on freedom of expression. He offended every American who cares deeply about this country.

Now Congress has compounded that offense by compromising the right to freedom of expression. Johnson, who doesn't deserve the time it takes to tell him he is a jerk, has sparked a constitutional crisis.

Last week, Congress approved the final version of an anti-flag-burning bill and sent it to the president. That bill makes flag-burning a crime, punishable by up to one year in prison. If President Bush doesn't veto the bill, it will be a crime to express one's opinion by putting a match to one's personal property.

Where do we go from here? Will it be a crime to tear up a copy of the Bill of Rights? Shall we lock people up for wadding up their "1040-EZ" forms? Shall we arrest them for setting fire to this column?

The flag is different, you say. It's a symbol of our freedoms. People die for it. Since Gallup can't take a poll of everyone who has died in the service of their country, that point is up for debate. Soldiers don't die for symbols. At the worst, some soldiers die because they are stuck in a place they don't want to be. At best, some die to protect their country or another country from a hostile takeover by others who would limit their freedom.

We don't have to wait for a hostile takeover by outsiders to limit our freedoms. We have Congress and the president and anyone who insists that flag-burning should be against the law. Now we have a law that sets a precedent for eliminating other rights of expression, and all because one American set fire to a flag.

Jack Anderson

The members of Congress who supported the bill did so either through blind patriotism or fear of losing votes. The majority of those who voted against it didn't have the courage to say it was a bad idea. Instead, they said that they opposed a law because a constitutional amendment is what we really need. Why smash the American spirit with a fly swatter when you can use a sledgehammer?

President Bush comes from the sledgehammer school of lawmaking. He says he doesn't like the bill because it isn't enough. He wants a constitutional amendment, maybe something that can be squeezed in right under the Bill of Rights. Bush's shallow presidential campaign was based on exactly the same blather that prompted the flag-burning bill. Candidate Bush didn't give the country a clue about how he would stop the drug epidemic or eradicate the deficit or achieve world peace or house the homeless or feed the hungry. But, by golly, he promised that your children would say the Pledge of Allegiance every day whether they wanted to or not.

Gregory Lee Johnson doesn't deserve a law in his honor, much less a constitutional amendment. What he deserves is for everyone who witnessed his little bit of street theater to tell him exactly what they thought of it. He expresses himself, we express ourselves and nobody gets arrested.

DONATIONS OFF — The buyout of American companies by Japanese and other Asian and European firms has had a disastrous effect on American universities and related institutions.

Ever since the industrial revolution, companies in the United States have contributed mightily to the support of colleges, universities, non-profit hospitals and the arts.

Indeed, the names Carnegie, Duke, Guggenheim, Mellon and Stanford, to cite a few, are more identified with education and culture than they are with the families whose lucre set them up.

But as foreign firms have taken over American businesses, this tradition of giving has fallen off. Universities that have budgeted for corporate contributions have found that the overseas headquarters of once-benevolent companies are now saying no.

All over America, desperate college fund-raisers have had to educate the new owners. One money-short college president told us that the Japanese are being much more cooperative than Europeans, but it is still an uphill battle to get dollars from the new foreign owners.

Exxon sues state of Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Exxon Corp. has sued the state of Alaska charging that cleanup of the nation's worst oil spill was hindered because the state opposed the use of oil-dispersing chemicals.

A state official said Exxon was trying to rewrite history, and that the state had approved the use of chemicals before the spill.

Exxon said it will seek reimbursement from the state for cleanup costs and damage claims that the company believes were worsened by the state's conduct. No amounts were specified.

The case, filed Monday in Anchorage Superior Court, is a counterclaim to a lawsuit the state filed in August against Exxon and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the industry consortium that operates the trans-Alaska oil pipeline and the Valdez oil terminal.

The state's lawsuit alleges that negligence was involved in the March 24 wreck of the Exxon Valdez and the subsequent oil cleanup, and that the oil industry misrepresented its ability to deal with a major spill in Prince William Sound, which leads from Valdez to the open sea.

Exxon's counterclaim says immediate use of chemicals to break oil into droplets was a key part of a spill contingency plan approved by the state.

Nevertheless, the suit alleges, the state persistently opposed the use of chemical dispersants after the Exxon Valdez ran aground and ripped its hull open, spilling nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil.

Lighthouse funded one more year

BOSTON (AP) — The 273-year-old Boston Light, the nation's oldest lighthouse, has received federal funds for someone to light the lamp for at least another year.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Coast Guard Adm. Richard Rybacki said Monday the money will postpone plans to reassign Boston Light's three-man crew and automate the lighthouse this fall. The automation was to be part of a nationwide program to upgrade lighthouses.

In the Coast Guard's fiscal 1990 appropriation, $100,000 that was earmarked for automating the lighthouse on Little Brewster Island will be used instead for staffing. Boston Light was first lit in 1716.

"There are some benefits having a lighthouse manned by the Coast Guard. It's a traditional thing and the places are very valuable national treasures," said Coast Guard Lt. Paul Wolf. "However, technology has allowed us to do the automation work so there isn't a need for someone to go and light the lamp anymore."

Kids at high risk for shootings

WASHINGTON (AP) — About one in 10 children who die before they reach age 20 are killed with guns, the government's National Center for Health Statistics reported today.

Black male teen-agers are most at risk to die in shootings. More than 40 percent of the deaths in this group are associated with firearms, compared with 16 percent for white male teen-agers, a report said.

The report, "Firearm Mortality Among Children and Youth," was released in conjunction with the premiere of a television documentary on youth homicide, produced by the Department of Health and Human Services. The program will air in Washington tonight and is being offered to stations nationwide.

The report counted 3,392 firearm-related deaths among children ages 1 to 19 in 1987 — about 11 percent of all childhood deaths. Among children ages 1 to 4, guns accounted for about 1 percent of deaths, but the proportion rose to 17 percent among teen-agers, the report said.

Teen-age boys are six times as likely as teen-age girls to die in a shooting, the report said.

Israel accepts Baker plan for peace talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens has notified Secretary of State James A. Baker III that his government accepts a U.S. plan for Palestinian negotiations, with two reservations, the Israeli embassy said today.

One proviso is that Baker provide assurances that the Palestine Liberation Organization will not participate in the talks. The other is that any Israeli meeting with Palestinians before elections are conducted on the West Bank and in Gaza would be restricted to arrangements for the balloting, said Ruth Yaron, the embassy spokeswoman.

Arens sent a letter to Baker on Monday night outlining his government's position. It was delivered by Ambassador Moshe Arad after Baker returned from San Francisco, where he made a speech on U.S. arms control policy.

"He is not optimistic or pessimistic," a U.S. official said after Baker read the letter. "He is realistic."

Arens informed Baker in the letter that Israel "accepted basically" his five-point proposal for a meeting with Palestinians, Mrs.

Yaron said.

Baker's proposal included an assurance that Israel would be "satisfied" with the composition of the delegation and it assigned Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak a middle-man role of consulting with the PLO.

However, Mrs. Yaron said Arens also requested what she called "tactical changes." One would assure Israel that the PLO would not participate in the meeting and the other would limit the agenda to the election itself.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Arens and other members of the ruling Likud coalition have been concerned from the outset that the meeting would turn into a negotiating session. Shamir's election plan provides for negotiations after the 1.4 million Palestinians on the West Bank and in Gaza choose their representatives.

The PLO, meanwhile, has rejected both the Shamir and Baker proposals. It was not clear whether an Israeli-Palestinian meeting could be held without at least PLO acquiescence.

Baker was expected to reply to Arens, but the Israeli foreign minister was on a trip to Brussels.

Jets bomb Afghan guerrillas

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Communist government jets bombed central Afghan villages and guerrilla strongholds after guerrillas renewed efforts to strangle supply lines to besieged cities, Western diplomats said today.

Also today, U.S.-backed Moslem guerrilla sources claimed 1,500 soldiers and 700 armed militiamen defected to the self-proclaimed guerrilla government based in Pakistan.

The militiamen defected on the weekend from 20 outposts in northern Samangan province, guerrilla sources said. The defection weakened a security ring around the northern town of Robatak, they said.

One Western diplomat, speaking in Islamabad on condition he not be identified, said high-altitude cluster bombs, spraying shrapnel over several miles, have been raining down over the past few days on villages and guerrilla positions along the Logar Road, which links the capital Kabul to Gardez, 100 miles southeast.

There were no immediate casualty reports.

Diplomats said guerrillas have stopped a 200-vehicle supply convoy on the Logar Road at Mohamad Aga, 18 miles southeast of Kabul.

A guerrilla source, known only as Amanullah, corroborated reports of heavy bombing along the Logar road but said about 60 percent of the villages had already been reduced to rubble in bombing raids during the early years of the war.

Reagan tosses first ball

TOKYO (AP) — A capacity crowd of 56,000 cheered today as former President Reagan tossed the first pitch of the third game of Japan's version of the World Series, narrowly missing a Kintetsu Buffaloes batter.

Winding up about halfway between home plate and the pitcher's mound, Reagan, a former sportscaster, fired off a throw that barely cleared batter Daijuro Ohishi's backside.

Reagan, wearing a blue suit, laughed and waved to the crowd. Some people chanted, "Reagan, Reagan."

The former president is in Japan on a nine-day visit at the invitation of the Japanese government and Japan's largest media conglomerate, Fujisankei Communications Group.

Fujisankei reportedly is spending about $7 million on the trip, which aims at improving ties between the United States and Japan. Fujisankei officials have refused comment on reports Reagan and his wife Nancy will earn $2 million.

On Monday, Reagan met with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and Emperor Akihito. He received one of Japan's highest awards.

Zambia cuts back on celebration

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Zambians glumly marked their 25th independence anniversary today with little of the jubilation that hailed the birth of what was black Africa's wealthiest nation.

While it was a public holiday and bunting draped some streets of Lusaka, the capital, there were no signs of open celebrations.

President Kenneth Kaunda, who led the white-ruled British colony of Northern Rhodesia to independence as black-governed Zambia on Oct. 24, 1964, four months ago called for a low-key Silver Jubilee to save his impoverished nation money.

Kaunda at the time was forced to abandon a moderate home-grown program and adopt more radical and unpopular measures including a devaluation of the Kwacha currency, lifting of state-fixed price controls and sharp increases in the cost of staple corn.

All this meant severe belt-tightening for the nation's 7 million people, whose living standards have plunged since they were regarded the most prosperous black Africans at independence.

Since the mid-1970s world prices of copper, which account for 90 percent of all export income, have plunged.

Coast Guard sleuths track down sources of oil spills

GROTON, CONN. (AP) — When millions of gallons of oil blackened Alaska's Prince William Sound, the whole world knew where it came from — a jagged rip in the hull of the grounded Exxon Valdez.

But when a fisherman finds his fishing grounds befouled or a beachcomber's favorite stretch of sand is soaked with oil, it's often a mystery.

That's where the super sleuths of oil-spill investigations come in: The U.S. Coast Guard Oil Identification Laboratory.

The laboratory, often working with dissipated evidence and few clues, has helped track down those responsible for hundreds of oil spills nationwide, from one or two gallons to hundreds of thousands.

The laboratory uses sophisticated tests to identify the type of oil and pinpoint its source, a task complicated by the fact that even oils of the same weight have different chemical "fingerprints," depending on where the original crude was pumped out of the ground and how it was stored.

"It's like crime-solving in which all of the pieces of evidence have to fit together," said Martha S. Hendrick, the chief chemist and the only civilian in a lab that employs nine other marine-science technicians.

The Coast Guard was given jurisdiction for determining liability for oil spills by the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972, which created a $6 million to $7 million revolving fund to cover the costs of cleanups. Additional money is collected from those found responsible for the spills.

The lab opened at the University of Connecticut's Avery Point campus in 1978, moved to Washington in 1980, and returned to the campus in 1986.

Two technicians who assisted in the Alaska investigation helped save Exxon $97 million in cleanup costs when they found that several thousand gallons in haddock- and salmon-fishing grounds didn't come from the Exxon Valdez.

In that time, the laboratory, which has an annual budget of about $440,000, has helped investigate more than 3,000 oil spills and seen its case load grow each year amid heightened concern about the environment.

Recent spills it investigated include the 11-million-gallon spill from the Exxon tanker in March; a 288,000-gallon spill by the Greek Uruguayan tanker Presidente off Claymont, Del., on June 24.

The lab can also help exonerate those being blamed for a spill.

Two technicians who assisted in the Alaska investigation helped save Exxon $97 million in cleanup costs when they found that several thousand gallons in haddock- and salmon-fishing grounds didn't come from the Exxon Valdez.

"We have been very busy since the Exxon Valdez incident because everyone has become much more aware of pollution by petroleum products," said Cmdr. Larry H. Gibson, 40, who has headed the laboratory for two years.

Most investigations into oil spills, however, have far fewer clues than the Exxon Valdez disaster.

In 1987, a 50- to 75-gallon spill fouled the Willamette River near Portland, Ore., leaving Coast Guard officials with a slick, but no suspects. A year later, the lab linked the spill to oil found near an intake valve on the underside of a tanker that was in dry dock for repairs. The tanker's owner agreed to pay for the cleanup.

"A lot of people are very surprised when they learn that the oil did come from their vessel or their facility and they immediately cooperate once they're shown the evidence," Gibson said. "Some other people fight it tooth and nail."

Field investigators take 4-ounce samples from the spill, along with samples from possible sources in the area.

Back at the lab, six to eight tablespoon-sized batches are tested: gas chromatography, thin-layer chromatography, fluorescence spectroscopy, infrared spectroscopy and high-performance liquid spectroscopy. The combination of tests allows scientists to cross-check their results.

Spills can consist of dozens of kinds of oil, from the lighter kerosene and jet fuels to the thick No. 6 oil used in heavy industry. Oil of the same weight can have slightly different characteristics.

Halloween: Keep safety in mind for little ghosts

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the dark of night the ghouls and witches will soon be setting forth on their rounds, seeking to ransom gifts from American families. To keep the fun in Halloween's spookiness, adults need to give safety some advance thought.

Among the top considerations is visibility, say safety experts. Children out on their trick-or-treat rounds need to be easily seen, and to be able to see where they are going.

"Make or buy costumes light and bright enough to be clearly visible to motorists," urges the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission.

And, by the same token, motorists need to be aware that the children will be out in numbers and be especially careful when driving, with the sun setting earlier at this time of year, the children will most likely be out in the dark, and if they dress in drab costumes they can be nearly impossible to see.

Complicating matters is the change from daylight to standard time just a couple days before Halloween, meaning that sunset will come an hour earlier than people are accustomed to. Black and other dark colors are popular with many children when it comes to Halloween costumes, but these can be decorated with reflective tape to make them easily seen at night. Bags or sacks can also be trimmed with this tape, which can be purchased at most hardware and sporting goods stores.

Also, encourage children to carry flashlights, both to make them visible and to help them see where they are going and not trip over curbs, steps, items left on lawns and so forth.

Some safety experts also discourage the use of masks by children, contending that it restricts their vision. Makeup can be used to decorate faces instead.

When buying costumes, the safety agency stresses the importance of selecting fire-resistant materials. The label "flame retardant" means that the product will resist catching on fire and will extinguish quickly once removed from the source of flame.

Filmy materials and costumes with big, baggy skirts and sleeves should be avoided because of the danger of contact with candles or other sources of fire.

Costumes should be short enough to prevent children from tripping and falling and sturdy, well-fitting shoes are the best idea. Mom's high heels may look cute, but can be hazardous to inexperienced wearers.

Every year reports circulate of people hiding dangerous items in the candy they give out, so children should be advised not to eat any of their goodies until they get home. The candy and fruit should be inspected by an adult before the child eats it.

Of course, smaller children should be accompanied by an older child or an adult when trick or treating.

Remind all youngsters not to run out from between cars and to go only to homes where the porch light has been left on as a sign they are welcome.

Homeowners also need to consider that trick or treaters will be arriving and remove anything that could trip them or pose a hazard.

Polygraphs violate privacy

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Civil Liberties Union claimed victory Monday in a federal lawsuit challenging the use of polygraphs by the Houston police and fire departments.

The organization said a seven-person jury in Houston federal court ruled in behalf of two people who had applied to work for those departments, and one who sought a job with the airport police, in 1980-81.

The jury found that Houston's use of polygraphs violated the constitutional right to privacy, the TCLU said. The verdict means each plaintiff will receive back pay and benefits, it said.

Professor likes his language low-falutin'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the world uncovered by Professor William Lutz, nobody is ever laid off.

When a company has to fire people, the departing employees are: — "Dehired."

— Or "non-retained."

— Or "non-renewed."

— Or "selected out."

— Or, if all else fails, "released."

You see, the company is having "work force adjustments." Or "head count reductions." Maybe experiencing "negative employee retention." Or it may be "initiating a career alternative enhancement program."

The company is "restructuring."

Or "downsizing."

When General Motors closed a plant in Massachusetts, it announced "a volume-related production schedule adjustment." When Chrysler downsized in Wisconsin, it "initiated a career alternative enhancement program." Some 5,000 workers were non-retained.

In Lutz's book, hospitals don't charge for services; they seek "reimbursement." A patient who dies experienced "negative patient care outcome."

Lutz laughs at these things — if he can laugh through gnashed teeth. He thinks using words to cloak meaning is perverse, pervasive and dangerous to democracy. He prefers his language low-falutin'.

"I have a real sense of outrage that something as beautiful and powerful as language is being perverted. I think that language is the most precious invention of human beings."

He's written "Doublespeak," a book that looks at the work product of the mind capable of writing a government safety pamphlet that says: "Exit access is that part of a means of egress that leads to an entrance or an exit."

"Doublespeak is not a slip of the tongue, or language used out of ignorance, but is instead a very conscious use of language as a weapon or tool by those in power to achieve their ends at our expense," he writes.

Sometimes doublespeak is so clever it is funny. People riding a roller coaster at an exhibition in Vancouver, Canada, might throw up? No, but Expo 86 said they might experience an "occasional protein spill."

A black-and-white television set is "television with nonmulticolor capability." The death house in New Jersey is the "capital sentences unit." The executioner is an "execution technician." In New York State, death row is the "Unit for Condemned Prisoners."

And solitary confinement cells are "individual behavior adjustment units."

"I have a real sense of outrage that something as beautiful and powerful as language is being perverted," Lutz said in an interview. "I think that language is the most precious invention of human beings."

Lutz, 48, teaches English at Rutgers, the state university of New Jersey, and is chairman of the Committee on Public Doublespeak of the National Council of Teachers of English. He has clipped examples of doublespeak for 16 years.

He makes these points:

— Words needn't be convoluted to be doublespeak. When an advertiser says its product "helps fight the symptoms of dandruff," that's doublespeak because it seeks to evade meaning. "Helps" is a weasel word; it doesn't say how much it contributes to the fight.

— "Fight" doesn't say it succeeds, just that it tries. "Symptoms of dandruff" aren't dandruff, just a condition that accompanies the malady.

— Government uses doublespeak, but so do businessmen, admen and educators — such as the college officials who shunned the term "raiding" when they told of luring faculty members from other campuses. Instead they engaged in "selective development" at George Mason University, "quality recovery" at Indiana or "preventive retention" at Minnesota.

— Doublespeak doesn't come easily. It is crafted, at great effort and cost, with committees hard at work, staffs meeting, drafts drafted.

When the Reagan administration decided to raise taxes after pledging not to, budget official Lawrence A. Kudlow offered "tax enhancement" to officials seeking an escape euphemism. That was too frank, so "revenue enhancement" was crafted.

And when that term's veils proved too thin, "tax base broadening," "tax base erosion control" and "update the revenue mechanism" were labored out.

"Doublespeak is used by very, very intelligent people who are extremely skillful in using language," says Lutz.

He has isolated four kinds — euphemism, jargon, gobbledygook and inflated language.

Euphemisms are used to hide unpleasantness. He doesn't object to "passed away" but won't permit the Pentagon to get away with "in-continent ordnance" to refer to bombs dropped by error on civilians.

He accepts jargon as verbal shorthand, but objects when it is used to make "the simple appear complex, the ordinary profound, the obvious insightful." He singles out lawyers, like those who described a plane crash as "the involuntary conversion of a 727."

He skewers the government for pretentiousness, as in this outfit's name: the Federal Insurance Administration of the Office of Risk Assessment of the Technical Operations Division of the Production Control Branch of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

And he faults anyone who uses the kind of inflated language that causes car mechanics to call themselves "automotive inter-nists" and used car salesmen to call their product "pre-owned" or "experienced."

Lutz concedes that it is an old battle. The Pentagon described the Grenada invasion in 1984 as a "pre-dawn vertical insertion"; Julius Caesar described his brutal subjugation of another state as "pacifying" Gaul.

Holidays happier with Operation Abby

DEAR ABBY: Last year, through Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers, your readers sent more than 6 million pieces of mail to our troops in Okinawa, Germany, the Philippines, Iceland, Korea, Europe and beyond to tens of thousands of young men and women in the military stationed abroad and at sea during the holidays. In addition to the avalanche of holiday cards and letters, there were homemade brownies, cookies and fruitcakes!

This year, the Pentagon has provided us with a list of ships and units ranging in size from five people to 500. Wouldn't it be wonderful if groups of caring Americans — schools, service groups, business clubs, and perhaps towns and cities — would "adopt" a unit for the holidays? Imagine how proud the small towns across America would be knowing they are taking care of "their" troops across the ocean. Elementary schoolchildren would work on special class projects, and teenagers would also join in the operations. Imagine how thrilled the troops would be!

I hope that this idea, in addition to the usual Operation Dear Abby deluge of mail, proves successful. With deepest thanks to you, your staff and your millions of readers for all your love and concern — Donald P. Grimes, National Chairman, 1989 America Remembers campaign

DEAR READERS: You have proven yourselves to be generous beyond belief, and I hope this year you will open your hearts to our servicemen and women who will be far from their homes and families for the holidays. In past years, your cards, letters and goodies were tremendous morale-boosters. Some wonderful friendships were formed — and a few even found romance.

Those interested in adopting a unit, please write to: America Remembers Campaign/Operation Dear Abby, P.O. Box 13202, Lansing, Mich. 48901. This year, no stamped, self-addressed envelope is necessary because Taco Bell has generously volunteered to pick up the cost of return mailing.

DEAR ABBY: I participated in Operation Dear Abby in 1987, never dreaming what it would lead to. (Given the odds, I thought my chances for winning the lottery were far more favorable than finding a husband!)

I lived in Cleveland, and Cesar was stationed in Korea. I sent one Christmas card with a letter to each of the five addresses you printed in your column. That was in December of 1987. The other correspondences faded out, but the one with Cesar continued, and we really got to know each other through our letters and the pictures we exchanged.

As luck would have it, Cesar was relocated to Tucson, Ariz., in April. This gave us an opportunity to call each other as well as write letters. Cesar's leave was scheduled for Sept. 1, 1988, and that's when he came to Cleveland to meet me.

Our meeting was a dream that had come true. We were married six days later — Sept. 6. Abby, this is the best thing that has ever happened to us. I tease him and call him my "mail-order groom." How can I thank you? — Shelly K. Davila, Mayfield Heights, Ohio

DEAR SHELLY: You just did. Congratulations and best wishes for a lifetime of happiness.

Readers can write to Abby at P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

English is not always sensible

"In the crazy English language, the blackbird hen is brown, blackboards can be blue or green, and blackberries are green and then red before they are ripe. Even if blackberries were really black and blueberries really blue, what are strawberries, cranberries, elderberries, huckleberries, raspberries, boysenberries, and gooseberries supposed to look like?"

"To add to the insanity, there is no butter in buttermilk, no egg in eggplant, neither worms nor wood in wormwood, neither pine nor apple in pineapple, and no ham in a hamburger. To make matters worse, English muffins weren't invented in England, french fries in France, or Danish pastries in Denmark."

Reusable costumes

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — For little girls who like to dress up year-round, not just at Halloween, there's a new line of pretend fashions just for them.

Playskool's "Dressing Pretty" outfits include that of a bride, fashion model, ballerina, fairy, princess and rock star. Accents include three evening purses, each with a compact pendant; three styles of party shoes; a selection of hats and boas and four groups of fashion jewelry.

The clothes come in one size that fits girls 3-6x and are machine washable and dryer-safe, according to the company. Suggested retail prices range from about $5 for the accessories to $15 for the fashions.

Vacation homes need attention

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — Automatic dishwashers and clothes washers require special attention when it is time to close a summer house for another season.

Unless water is removed from hoses and internal components, these appliances can be damaged by winter freezes.

The Maytag Company says inlet hoses on clothes washers should be disconnected and drained after the water supply is shut off. To clear the water valve, start the warm water fill cycle for a few seconds. Then drain any water that may be in the drain hose and disconnect the electrical supply.

For an automatic dishwasher, remove both the inlet and outlet connections to the valve, then open the valve to remove any water. Remove the drain hose from the pump and drain as much water from it as possible. Disconnect the electrical supply.

'Basic' Browns blast Bears

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — Bernie Kosar, the awkward one, the one with the slow feet and the odd release, never worried much about looking good on a football field, as long as he got results.

But when his unusual throwing style began producing interception after interception, he decided it was time to go back to basics.

"I worked on my mechanics. It's something that I've had to concentrate on since I've been in high school," Kosar said after passing for 281 yards and two touchdowns as the Cleveland Browns beat the Chicago Bears 27-7 Monday night.

Kosar and the Browns had been mired in a four-game offensive slump during which they had produced 47 points. They hit bottom a week ago, when he threw four interceptions in a 17-7 loss to Pittsburgh, a team the Browns had defeated 51-0 in the season opener.

"It was important for us as a team and specifically for the offense to play a solid game," Kosar said. "There were still some mistakes, but there were no turnovers, and that helped us put together a couple drives."

To erase the slump, the Browns went to a ball-control, short-passing game that produced 22 completions in 29 attempts against a banged-up Bears' defense that was missing such stalwarts as linemen Dan Hampton and Richard Dent.

Rookie Eric Metcalf opened the scoring with a 3-yard touchdown reception on the Browns' third possession, capping a 14-play, 73-yard drive on which Kosar completed seven passes for 56 yards.

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Cleveland Browns' Webster Slaughter (84) struggles against Chicago defender Shaun Gayle (23) for a pass during first quarter action at Cleveland Stadium. The pass was incomplete.

Those were the only points in a first half that featured five punts by each team.

A 10-play drive in the third quarter set up the first of two Matt Bahr field goals, and Metcalf scored his second touchdown of the night on a 7-yard run three plays after Frank Minnifield intercepted a Mike Tomczak pass at the Chicago 25. That made it 17-0 late in the third period.

Then came the killer. Cleveland's defense stopped the Bears on downs at the Browns' 2-yard line, and on the next play, Kosar hit Webster Slaughter down the left sideline for a 97-yard touchdown pass, the longest play from scrimmage in Browns' history.

There have been only 12 longer plays in NFL history.

It put to rest any doubt about Kosar's arm, the strength of which has been questioned since he sprained it seriously early last season. And it vindicated offensive coordinator Marc Trestman, whose play-calling has been criticized by many in Cleveland, including Coach Bud Carson.

"We have been waiting for this team to play a game like we thought it could," Carson said. "We played our last great game against Pittsburgh (in the season opener) and we haven't played one since. I'm especially proud of Bernie and the way he came back."

Cleveland (4-3) earned a share of first place with Cincinnati and Houston in the AFC Central.

The Bears (4-3) lost their third straight, their longest losing streak in seven-plus seasons under Coach Mike Ditka. They dropped a game behind Minnesota in the NFC Central, marking the first time the Bears have been out of first place since the final game of the 1983 season, a span of 85 games.

Ditka, who all but buried his team for losing to Houston a week earlier, accepted this loss better than expected.

"I believe in them. I believe we can turn it around," he said. "I'm more encouraged after today's game than after the last two weeks. Our defense played aggressively, but our offense gave them no help. Our special teams gave us no field position."

Tomczak completed only four of 14 passes for 76 yards before he was benched following the Minnifield interception. Jim Har-

Crossroads Chalk Talk

Crossroads Country teams had a slightly better than average week, going 6-4 against their opposition.

Big Spring continued its winning ways by downing Lake View, Sands downed Dawson, Grady blasted Loop, Borden County edged Klondike, Garden City zapped Irion County and Stanton upset pre-season favorite McCamey.

On the down side, Coahoma was defeated by state-ranked Ballinger, Forsan lost to Wall and Colorado City was beaten by Clyde. Here are what area coaches had to say about last week's games and this Friday's contests:

Leandro Gonzales, on a win over Loop, and this week's game against Klondike — "I thought we came off extremely well on offense and defense. We made some mistakes both sides. But I'm proud of them."

"We were pretty well balanced rushing and passing, and we found their weak side."

"Klondike is passing the ball a lot more than last year. They'll come out passing and that's what we working on this week. We want to stop the pass and force them to run."

Sam Scott, Garden City, on the win over Irion County, and this week's showdown with Rankin — "I think we played well. I felt like we had good game plan. The kids executed on offense and played good defense."

"I think we improved as a football team, which was the main objective, and we won. We had some kids do some things they haven't done all year. It gave us confidence, it was a big plus."

"Rankin is a good ballclub. They've got more talent than anyone in state. They mix it up well. They are more balanced than last year, by far the fastest team we've played."

Jan East, Forsan, on the loss to Wall and this week's contest against Eldorado — "It wouldn't surprise me if Wall won district. We made two or three mistakes in the secondary that cost us. I don't think we played as good as we did against Ozona, but Wall had a lot to do with that."

"They ran the football on us too. We didn't play as good of defense as we have been playing."

"Eldorado is kind of like we are, struggling a little bit, they can't get things going. We're not going to change anything. We're not going to panic, we'll keep doing what we've been doing, only we'll try to do them better."

Dale Ruth, Stanton, on the win over pre-season favorite McCamey, and this week's game against Van Horn — "It was a game we've been looking forward to since last year. It was a great win for our kids, and we needed to get this game out of the way. It really boosts our confidence up high."

"The kids feel really good. They've got the attitude... take one game at a time. They realize we've got to be real careful."

"Van Horn is much improved from last year; they're about as tough as four or five times better. Their young kids have been coming through, they'll be tough."

JAN EAST

Steve Park, Coahoma, on the loss to highly-ranked Ballinger, and this week's game vs. Merkel — "They've got some real good backs. That Gibbs kid (Ballinger RB Jamie Gibbs) is a tremendous running back. We kind of slowed him down, but he broke a long one on a pass, and his punt return set them up for another touchdown."

"While concentrating on Gibbs, their wingback hurt us on the counter."

"On our first drive, we drove it down and scored. We didn't throw the ball good. We let them penetrate a few times and that hurt us on our passing."

"Merkel has 20 seniors, they've got a lot of experience. It will be a test. The kids have to get up and play good ballgame. We can beat them if we cut down on mistakes."

Tom Ramsey, Colorado City, on a loss to the undefeated Clyde Bulldogs, and this week's homecoming tilt against Wylie — "I'll tell you, it was rough. The Bulldogs are tough, probably the best team in the district. They were so quick and balanced. They run and throw equally well. You can't play one or the other."

"Turnovers hurt us. We fumbled at midfield, they take it down and score. It's 13-0 and we're in trouble at halftime."

"Wylie is for real. They are the largest team in the district Their offensive line has two kids 6-foot-5 that weigh over 200. We might have to buy a couple of Hondas and dig some trenches."

David Thompson, Big Spring, on the win over San Angelo Lake View and this week's game in Pecos — "The offense moved the ball well, needless to say; we scored 50 points. It seemed like everything we ran worked. The defense gave up a little bit of yardage, but they only scored 14 points. We've got to get better defensively."

"Pecos is like Lake View, they'll put it in the air. It's something we've got to get used to, because I think most of the teams in the district will try to pass on us."

Coach benches 'Too Tall'

IRVING (AP) — One day after he started his 198th consecutive National Football League game, defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones lost his starting job with the Dallas Cowboys.

Jones, the only remaining member of the Cowboys' famed "Doomsday" defense of the 1970s, was benched Monday, a move that may mark the beginning of the end of a Hall-of-Fame caliber career.

Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson had moved Jones from defensive end to defensive tackle, but the move didn't work well. He said he decided to bench Jones rather than return to him to defensive end and bump back Tony Tolbert.

"Number one, we have got to get more of a pass rush," Johnson said. "About the only pass rush we're getting right now is when we blitz, and we can't afford to do that. We've got to make something happen with the front four."

The move was not surprising because of the new coaching staff's emphasis on youth and speed, Jones said Monday.

"When Dallas turns it around, it will be Tony Tolbert, not Ed Jones, who is playing," Jones said. "This is the move they had to make."

Jones, who at 38 was the oldest starting player in the NFL and the league's second oldest player, was told of the move by defensive line coach Butch Davis, 37. Tampa Bay backup quarterback Joe Ferguson, 39, is the league's oldest player.

The last time Jones missed a start was in 1979 when he took a year off to try his hand at boxing.

Jones, who earned the "Too Tall" nickname at Tennessee State because of his 6-9 frame, was the Cowboys' first-round draft choice in 1974. He was named to the Pro Bowl in 1981-83 and was an All-Pro in 1981 and 1982.

He has made 1,022 career tackles, batted down 85 passes since the statistic was created in 1980, recovered 19 fumbles and intercepted three passes.

Jones was quick to admit that moving him to defensive tackle was not the answer.

"Look at me — I'm not a tackle," he said. "A guy my size doesn't belong in there with those stumpy guys. Don't get me wrong — I'm a competitor. I want to play even if you have to put me at linebacker."

Johnson said he planned to keep Tolbert and Jim Jeffcoat at defensive end and Dean Hamel and Willie Broughton at tackle.

Calling Jones "a class individual," Johnson said he was

Is Gubicza baseball's best?

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — His record was only 15-11 and most managers would rather have his teammate, Bret Saberhagen. Still, the Elias Sports Bureau computer says Mark Gubicza is the best player in baseball.

Gubicza, the Kansas City Royals right-hander, was rated at 96.528 on a scale of 100. San Francisco Giants first baseman Will Clark was next at 96.316, followed by Saberhagen at 96.230.

The rankings, used to determine free-agent compensation, are based on statistics compiled over a two-year period. The formula was agreed to by the Major League Baseball Players Association and the owners' Player Relations Committee in the 1981 and 1985 strike settlements. It is based on statistics such as batting average, plate appearances, home runs and runs batted in for hitters, and starts, innings, earned-run average, saves and strikeouts for pitchers.

Gubicza would have been eligible for free agency following the World Series but agreed to a three-year, $7.4 million contract in September. He took over as the American League's top-rated starter from Boston's Roger Clemens, who was baseball's top-rated player in 1988.

Tagliabue emerges as front-runner for commissioner post

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

CLEVELAND — Paul Tagliabue, who might have had an easier road to the NFL commissioner's job had he been the third or fourth choice of the owners rather than the second, is now the front-runner for the job that Pete Rozelle abdicated seven months ago.

The 48-year-old Washington lawyer, who has been one of Rozelle's top advisors for a decade, seems to have moved ahead of New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks in the balloting for the job.

Technically, the owners begin today's meeting as deadlocked in their search for a commissioner as they were two weeks ago in Texas.

But Mike Lynn of Minnesota, one of the leaders of the insurgent group that earlier blocked the election of Finks, said: "I think we can get something done this time."

So far the owners have debated for 28 hours in meetings and endlessly by telephone in what has been the league's most celebrated and extended deadlock since 1960, when it took 23 ballots and 11 days to elect Rozelle, then the little-known, 33-year-old general manager of the Los Angeles Rams.

This time, there have been six ballots in the effort to find a successor to Rozelle, who announced his retirement in March and has been living in a New York hotel since September while his wife, Carrie, takes care of arrangements in their new home in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

The high-water mark was July 6, when Finks, the sole candidate recommended by the selection committee, got 16 votes, three fewer than required for election. Finks' election was blocked then by 11 abstentions, primarily from new owners and those who had largely been left out of power. A result of that impasse was that a second search committee was formed, this one made up of more than owners who had been in the NFL for 20 or more years.

When the owners got together again at Grapevine, Texas, they took four ballots. The last one ended in a tie, 13 votes each for Finks and Tagliabue, with two abstentions. That came after Tagliabue was made the candidate of the insurgents, despite his position close to Rozelle and his ties to many of the so-called old guard to which they object.

In fact, many Tagliabue supporters thought he would emerge as a compromise candidate.

"I had envisioned that as the scenario," said a team official close to him. "I thought Paul might be elected, but as a compromise candidate if the others were deadlocked."

In fact, there were compromise candidates proposed, but only one,

Pittsburgh owner Dan Rooney, might have had a chance. Rooney was one of the two owners who abstained on the final vote — the Los Angeles Raiders' Al Davis was the other — but Rooney was also a member of the original committee that had recommended Finks.

Rooney reportedly turned down the offer.

Rooney and Davis shifted in Grapevine, both willing to compromise while others among the older owners balked — not so much at Tagliabue but at the idea of giving into owners like Seattle's Kenneth Behring, Dallas' Jerry Jones and New England's Victor Kiam, none of whom has been in the league more than a year. Rooney and Davis reportedly would be willing to shift to Tagliabue if that's what it takes to get a commissioner.

Rozelle, meanwhile, has been working by telephone the last two weeks, urging compromise. He is known to be fond of Tagliabue, a former Georgetown basketball player.

Owners close to the commissioner have been holding out for Finks, although they might be persuaded to go for Tagliabue, who has good relations with both groups. The main objection of those like Wellington Mara of the New York Giants, Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs and Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns, all members of the original selection committee, is the opposition. They feel that their participation in league affairs over the years gives them more right to choose than those who have just become owners.

Finks remains in the race because, he says, he is loyal to such owners as Modell, Mara and Hunt who sought him out for the job. The 62-year-old Finks, a former Steelers quarterback who has built teams in Minnesota, Chicago and New Orleans, was, ironically, also recommended by owners.

Beck wins Shoot-out

DAUFUSKIE ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Chip Beck beat Paul Azinger in a last-hole chip-off and won the seasonal finals in the Merrill Lynch Shoot-Out.

Beck, who lost a chip-off to David Frost on the final hole of the 1988 Shoot-Out finals, collected $90,000 in cash and a $100,000 zero coupon bond for his victory in the wind-up of the season-long series.

Azinger, who stayed alive with remarkable recoveries on the 11th and 17th holes at the Melrose Club, won $40,000.

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Tony Manero, the 1936 U.S. Open golf champion and a member of the 1937 United States Ryder Cup team, died Sunday at Greenwich Hospital of heart failure. He was 84. Manero, played on the PGA tour in the 1930s and 1940s.

UW coach investigated

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The NCAA has concluded that Wisconsin football coach Don Morton violated one of its policies when he paid part of assistants' salaries last summer, a UW Athletic Board member said.

Ted Finman, the UW Athletic Board's representative to the NCAA, said that he received an interpretation regarding Morton's actions from the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee.

Finman said his own investigation into the matter found no evidence that Morton intentionally violated NCAA rules, and that the committee's conclusions may be appealed.

Morton acknowledged last week he took out a loan to pay nine assistant coaches a total of $14,100 in August to make up for salary cuts ordered by the Athletic Board.

It's a wash

OAKLAND, Calif. — A sticker-clad groundskeeper checks the tarpaulin spread across Oakland Coliseum's infield Monday as heavy rains pelted the grounds. The rains forced cancellation of the Oakland A's practice session.

Coach hospitalized

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer, who suffered mild chest pains during the Hokies' game at East Carolina on Saturday, was hospitalized for tests and observation.

Beamer, 43, said he is "feeling very well," according to spokesman Jack Williams. Beamer underwent tests at Montgomery Regional Hospital in Blacksburg Sunday and was transferred Monday to Roanoke Memorial Hospital for further tests.

Assistant head coach Billy Hite will be in charge of the team in Beamer's absence.

Tribunal to convene

PARIS (AP) — A special auto racing tribunal, originally called to hear the complaints of Britain's Nigel Mansell, instead will convene Friday to rule on an appeal of the results of the Japanese Grand Prix by Brazil's Ayrton Senna and the McLaren-Honda team.

The tribunal's decision either will confirm Frenchman Alain Prost as the Formula One racing champion or prolong the struggle for the title into the final race of the season, the Australian Grand Prix at Adelaide.

Senna was first across the finish line at the Japanese Grand Prix on Sunday, but he was disqualified for having avoided part of a curve as he headed into the pits after a crash with his teammate and bitter rival, Prost.

Packer coach fined

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packers assistant coach Virgil Knight pleaded no contest to disorderly conduct in connection with a halftime altercation last month with a fan at Lambeau Field.

Knight, the team's strength conditioning and tight end coach, was fined $295.

Fans staying away from Cards' games

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The NFL's Phoenix Cardinals keep drawing fewer fans for each home game, although team owner Bill Bidwill thinks the worst may be over.

Sunday's 34-20 victory over Atlanta was watched by only 33,894 in 74,724-seat Sun Devil Stadium. It was the smallest home crowd since the team moved to Arizona before the 1988 season after 28 years in St. Louis.

"This game will be our low for the year," Bidwill predicted. "Advance sales for the rest of our games — with the exception, possibly, of the Tampa Bay game (Nov. 26) — are already well ahead of this."

"We figured the Atlanta game would be a hard sell. But the rest of our home schedule will draw well. Of course, we have to produce on the field, too."

Phoenix (3-4) had lost its last four games before beating the Falcons (2-5).

When it comes to tough sells, perhaps the toughest is Kansas State, losingest program in college football. But 68,606 flocked to Sun Devil Stadium on Sept. 9 to watch Arizona State play the Wildcats. ASU has drawn at least 63,000 for four subsequent home games. Since the last major expansion of the stadium 11 years ago, ASU has averaged just a shade under 67,000 a game.

Bidwill, the Cardinals' owner since 1972, said he moved the club out of 54,392-seat Busch Stadium in St. Louis because of declining attendance, the fact that the stadium was the second-smallest in the NFL and because he wanted to stay financially competitive with the rest of the league.

Last season, the Cardinals sold 55,000 season tickets and drew a single-season franchise record of 472,937, an average of 59,117 per game, despite having the NFL's highest average ticket price at $38.

They had 67,139 for the Sept. 12, 1988, regular-season opener against Dallas, a Monday night game that was the franchise's largest-ever home crowd.

But after peaking with a 7-4 record in mid-November, Phoenix lost its final five games last year, playing before a season-low 44,586 in the season finale on Dec. 18 against Green Bay.

This year, Sun Devil Stadium was expanded by about 2,000 seats, million-dollar luxury skyboxes were added and the average ticket price was lowered to $36. But the Cardinals sold 29 percent fewer season tickets.

The Oct. 1 home opener against San Diego drew just 44,201 in 95-degree heat. Attendance dipped to 42,620 against Philadelphia Oct. 15 in 85-degree weather before Sunday's low in 78-degree conditions.

Many fans complain that the hot afternoon sun on the stadium's east side is too much for them to handle.

"We did a survey last year and anticipated we'd lose about 25 percent of the east side, but the drop-off was larger than we expected," Bidwill said. "But the biggest sales drop-off came in non-premium seating areas. The sun is definitely a major factor."

Goalie stops pucks, fists in Devils' win

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Hockey Writer

Sean Burke was making all kinds of stops for the New Jersey Devils, including the punches thrown by opposing goaltender Mark Laforest.

By the time the final buzzer sounded at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, both goaltenders were long gone from the scene along with three other fight-happy players.

And the Devils literally had a hard-fought 5-4 victory over Toronto Monday night.

"It took a lot of hockey courage to finish the game," said Devils coach Jim Schoenfeld, who had three of his players ejected in the brawl-filled game. "For a while, I was double-shifting forwards — and I mean every other shift."

In other NHL action, it was the New York Rangers 5, Vancouver 3 and Montreal 3, Hartford 2. Calgary and Washington tied 3-3.

The Devils-Maple Leafs game exploded into a brawl with 2:46 left in the second period, as all 12 players on the ice went at it. Laforest and Burke actually fought on two occasions before officials broke things up.

Referee Terry Gregson sent the teams to their dressing rooms for a 15-minute intermission. He handed out 116 penalty minutes and the 2:46 that remained in the second period was added onto the third.

"It might have produced a good thing for our team," said Laforest, whose Maple Leafs were losing 5-2 at the time.

Toronto regrouped for two goals to close to within one, but it wasn't enough to avoid an end to its two-game winning streak.

Burke didn't fault Laforest, who was the aggressor on each of the two occasions they fought.

"He just felt he was firing up his team," Burke said, "but what are you going to do? You just can't stand back and say 'No, No.'"

Along with Burke and Laforest, the officials also threw out the Devils' Brendan Shanahan and Dave Maley and the Maple Leafs' Brad Marsh.

Lost in the brawl was a 12-point effort and all five goals by the Devils' line of Shanahan, John MacLean and Patrik Sundstrom.

Shanahan extended his scoring streak to five games with two goals and two assists. MacLean had two goals and three assists to extend his scoring streak to three games while Sundstrom had one goal and two assists.

Wendell Clark, Gary Leeman, Tom Fergus and Dave Reid scored for Toronto.

The Devils also set a franchise record for their fourth consecutive road victory.

Rangers 5, Canucks 3
John Vanbiesbrouck made 31 saves as the Rangers continued their domination of Vancouver.

The Rangers, whose 7-1-1 record is best in the NHL and represents their best start since 1983-84, are 58-17-5 against Vancouver since the Canucks entered the league in 1970. The Canucks lost for the seventh time in their last eight visits to Madison Square Garden, and are 7-31-3 in New York.

Vanbiesbrouck improved his career record against the Canucks to 11-1-0, including 6-0-0 at Madison Square Garden.

John Ogradnick assisted on a first-period goal by Carey Wilson and scored in the third for a 4-1 New York lead and the Rangers' eventual winning goal.

Vanbiesbrouck said getting an early lead has been critical to the Rangers' success. The Rangers have outscored their opponents 18-6 in the first period this season and have not trailed after the opening 20 minutes in any of their nine games.

"The key for us has been getting ahead," Vanbiesbrouck said. "It makes my job easier."
Canadiens 3, Whalers 2

Ryan Walter scored his first goal of the season with only 21 seconds remaining in regulation to lead Montreal over Hartford.

Walter tipped a point shot by Peter Svoboda past goaltender Mike Liut to help Montreal break a two-game losing streak and regain first place in the Adams Division.

Hartford's Ray Ferraro scored early in the third period to tie the game at 2.

Scott Young had a first-period goal for Hartford while Stephane Richer and Jocelyn Lemieux scored in the second period for Montreal.

"It was a big win for us," said Walter, whose injury-plagued team has won only twice in its last six games. "To lose this would have meant we lost a bunch this week."

Montreal had lost twice in overtime and twice in the third period in the past nine days.

Flames 3, Capitals 3
Theoren Fleury scored a power-play goal on a two-man advantage in the third period as Calgary tied Washington.

Alan May, Mike Ridley and Michal Pivonka scored for Washington, May and Ridley on the power play. The Capitals, 3-4-2, last won a game in Calgary on Feb. 22, 1987.

Shortstop Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals and second baseman Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs led their positions for the sixth straight season. Mike Schmidt's eight-year reign as the National League's top third baseman was ended by Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla. Schmidt, who retired in May, had been the only player to lead his position in each year of the rankings.

The New York Mets placed five starting pitchers among the NL's top 17. Frank Viola, acquired from the Minnesota Twins on July 31, was second, followed by David Cone, fifth; Dwight Gooden, 13th, Sid Fernandez, 16th, and Ron Darling, 17th. Bob Ojeda, another Mets starter, ranked 33rd among 68 pitchers.

Clark, selected most valuable player of the playoffs, led NL first basemen for the second straight year.

Tony Pena of the Cardinals, who has said he will become a free agent and leave St. Louis, led NL catchers, replacing Houston's Alan Ashby.

Three new players led the NL outfielders: Eric Davis of Cincinnati, Kevin Mitchell of San Francisco and Tony Gwynn of San Diego. The top three in last year's rankings were Pedro Guerrero of the Cardinals, Darryl Strawberry of the Mets and Kal Daniels of Cincinnati.

Orel Hershiser of the Los Angeles Dodgers led NL starters for the second straight year. Mark Davis of San Diego was the top NL reliever, replacing the Cardinals' Todd Worrell, who led the NL relief rankings in 1987 and 1988.

Alvin Davis of Seattle became the third player in three years to lead AL first basemen. Kansas City's George Brett, who led last year, was second and New York's Don Mattingly, who achieved the only perfect score in rankings history in 1987, was third.

Toronto's Kelly Gruber overtook Wade Boggs of Boston, the leader at third in the AL the last two years. Boggs also trailed Minnesota's Gary Gaetti.

Julio Franco of Texas, who tied for first in the AL at second base last year with Boston's Marty Barrett, took sole possession of the position this year. Baltimore's Cal Ripken regained the top AL ranking at shortstop after a two-year absence. Ripken, the leader from 1984 through 1987, was second last year to Detroit's Alan Trammell.

Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox led AL catchers for the second straight year. Harold Baines of Texas, who tied Brian Downing last year at designated hitter, led all DH's this year.

Kirby Puckett of Minnesota and Jose Canseco of Oakland repeated in the AL outfield. Mike Greenwell of Boston had the top outfield ranking in the league. Teammate Dwight Evans was the third outfielder last year.

Oakland's Dennis Eckersley was the top AL reliever.

baugh, playing against a looser defense, hit nine of 16 for 93 yards and one touchdown, a 5-yarder to Wendell Davis late in the game.

"They change a quarterback because it's a possibility for improvement," Tomczak said. "I've got no hard feelings about the decision. Harbaugh moved the team downfield and he put us in the end zone."

Ditka wouldn't say who would start at quarterback next week against the Los Angeles Rams.

"Offensively, we were just terribly inept," he said. "Their rush really took a lot of things away from us. We tried to trap them a little bit to try to slow them down, but nothing seemed to work. This was the worst pass protection we've had."

upset at having to make the move to bench Jones. He also said a bruise Jones suffered on his right knee in Sunday's 36-28 loss at Kansas City forced him to make the decision quickly.

"The injury bothered him in the game, but Tony Tolbert is coming on and making some plays," Johnson said. "We just felt like Ed would be better off if he was not playing on an everyday basis."

"When you have a young talent like Tony Tolbert and you're 0-7, you've got to look to the future," Jones said. "You can't keep a talent like that on the bench. He's going to be a great player."

Jones said he is unsure whether he will try to play another season. "I'll take a wait-and-see attitude, just like the last four years," he said.

Jones is expected to play Sunday against the Phoenix Cardinals at Texas Stadium and extend his consecutive-games-played streak to 216.

Ironically, one of Jones' former teammates, Lee Roy Jordan, will be inducted into the Cowboys' Ring of Honor at halftime of that game.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor's infamous Rolls-Royce isn't as infamous as she hoped.

The Hungarian actress offered the white 1980 Corniche convertible up for sale over the weekend at an auction. Her minimum asking price was $125,000, but the high bid came in at $105,000.

To that, Miss Gabor said no, and drove off.

The actress was driving the vehicle when she was pulled over by Beverly Hills police Officer Paul Kramer last June. She is to be sentenced Tuesday on her misdemeanor convictions of slapping Kramer, driving without a valid license and carrying an open container of liquor in her car.

Miss Gabor said she had not intended to sell the Rolls, but was talked into it Saturday when she and her husband visited the auction at a hotel in Woodland Hills where another Rolls-Royce they owned went for $80,000.

Sold at the auction for $75,000 was a heavily customized, metallic red Jaguar XJS that had earned its owner, outfielder Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics baseball team, a string of speeding tickets.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock band The Clash's "London Calling" and rock star Prince's "Purple Rain" topped a list of the 100 greatest albums of the 1980s picked by the editors of Rolling Stone.

The Clash, a now defunct band whose lyrics featured aggressive working-class politics that became the staple of the punk movement, recorded "London Calling" in 1980.

The rest of the top 10, in descending order, are: "Purple Rain," by Prince and the Revolution; "The Joshua Tree," by the Irish rock group U2; "Remain in Light," by the Talking Heads; "Graceland," by Paul Simon; "Born in the U.S.A.," by Bruce Springsteen; "Thriller," by Michael Jackson.

HC holds inter-squad scrimmage

HERALD STAFF REPORT
BIG SPRING — Preparations for the 1989-90 basketball season continued for the Howard College Hawks Monday night with an inter-squad scrimmage.

Howard coach Steve Green said the scrimmage, which followed scrimmages last week with Wayland Baptist and Lubbock Christian colleges, helped point out weaknesses. The Hawks are preparing for their season opener Saturday night with St. Edwards College's junior varsity team.

"We're going to go back and we've got to cut down our turnovers," Green said after the scrimmage. "We've got to pick up our intensity on defense."

"If we don't turn the ball over as well as we shoot, we'll have an opportunity to win every game. But, that appears to be our Achilles' heel at this point."

Green split the squad into teams of eight players for the scrimmage. Although the first team outscored the second group, it was never able to break away and dominate the scrimmage.

Frank Henderson and Dexter Abrams played exceptionally well for the second team, Green said, while pre-season All-American Terrence Lewis and Greg Christian shot the ball well for the first team.

Green said the scrimmage was the first time for the team to play a full 40 minutes with just eight-man squads. The workout, if nothing else, helped the team's conditioning, he said.

"That's been my biggest concern — whether we were in game condition," Green said.

The Hawks play St. Edwards at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Team-by-team thumbnails of the eight clubs in the Major Indoor Soccer League, which opens its 12th season on Friday, Oct. 27:

EASTERN DIVISION

Baltimore Blast

Coach Kenny Cooper led the Blast to its only title in 1984. He may get another chance this year as he returns nearly his entire team, which won the regular-season title but lost in the championship series to San Diego.

The Blast have four of their top five scorers coming back: forwards David Byrne, Domenic Mobilio, and Carl Valentine. All had over 30 goals and 50 points.

Cleveland Crunch

Akron, Ohio, stockbroker George Hoffman brings the MISL back to what once was the league's strongest city. And former Cleveland Force general manager Al Miller, now president and general manager of the Crunch, brings back no fewer than eight former Force players.

Thirty-four-year-old Kai Haaskivi, who played two-thirds of his nine-year career in Cleveland, leads as player-coach. Midfielder Mike Sweeney joins him from last year's Blast team, and former Force crowd favorites midfielder Dennis Mephram and defenders Bernie James and Benny Dargle also will be in the lineup.

Kansas City Comets

Although tops in attendance,

9,228 average, the Comets had the second-worst record (21-27), largely due to the second-worst defense (222 goals allowed) behind Los Angeles.

With goalkeeper Alan Mayer retired, free-agent Mike Dowler has been added. Dowler is coming off his worst season, 5-12, 4.60 goals against average, with Tacoma.

Wichita Wings

The last two years have been bleak for Wichita, with the Wings suffering consecutive losing seasons (23-25 last year) for the first time in their history. Although last season was an improvement on the year before, it will be difficult to continue the trend as the club has lost key personnel.

Second league-leading scorer Chico Borja (34 goals, 53 assists) will have to carry a larger share of the scoring since fourth league-leading scorer Erik Rasmussen (42 goals, 36 assists) has returned to his native Denmark.

WESTERN DIVISION

Dallas Sidekicks

Despite a tumultuous last four years in the front office — which has included the team being folded, resurrected, placed in bankruptcy court and sold again — the Sidekicks (24-24) have finished 500 or better for the last four seasons.

Despite getting Tatu (35 goals, 29 assists) back last year after he missed the previous year with a broken leg, Dallas scored a league-low 185 goals. Steve Kinsey (12 goals, nine assists) has been added from the Los Angelesazers to help Tatu.

St. Louis Storm

Like Cleveland, the Storm will have a core of familiar faces.

Former Steamers, including midfielder Daryl Doran, defender Mark Frederickson and goalkeeper Slobodan Iljevski will be joined by St. Louis native and goalkeeper David Brcic. This club may get off to a slow start. The addition of Godfrey Ingram on Wednesday gave it only 10 players under contract less than less than 10 days before its opener.

San Diego Sockers

San Diego (27-21) has won seven titles in eight seasons, five MISL and two NASL indoor, and with pretty much the same team as last season (and Ron Newman behind the bench), it easily could make it eight out of nine.

One of the biggest boosts the club will get is the return of nine-year veteran goalkeeper Zoltan Toth (career 128-61, 3.91 gaa), who missed most of last season due to foot surgery.

Tacoma Stars

The Stars (23-25) hope off-season acquisition Brent Goulet will take some of the scoring responsibility off perennial all-star and league-leading scorer Preki (51 goals, 53 assists).

After nine years, James Kinchen finally getting title fight

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — It took nine years, but James Kinchen finally gets a shot at a major world boxing title tonight.

Kinchen, who has a record of 44-6-2, is scheduled to meet Virgil Hill, 25-0, for Hill's World Boxing Association light heavyweight title in the Bismarck Civic Center.

Best known for a controversial split-decision loss to Thomas Hearns on Nov. 4, 1988, Kinchen, 31, has fought as a middleweight, super-middleweight and light heavyweight over a career dating back to 1980. Kinchen is 27-0 as a light heavyweight.

"This fight is as important to me as all the others," Kinchen, who will face a seven-inch reach disadvantage, said. "Virgil is quick, but so am I. So we're just going to have to do some things to slow Virgil down a little."

The fight was to have been held in August, but was postponed when the champion was diagnosed with hypoglycemia, an abnormally low concentration of sugar in the blood. Hill blamed the condition on a poor diet and stress. An improved diet has brought the problem under control, Hill said, and he is back in top form.

"I have no blood disorder whatsoever," Hill said. "We checked it periodically through training camp and there were no problems — headaches, anything. They've been trying to slow me down, make me rest a little more."

Hill, who won the title from Leslie Stewart in September 1987, said he should be helped by the five-month layoff since his last bout, when he stopped Joe Lasisi in the seventh round on May 27.

"The layoff was better for me because I've been so consistent in my fighting," he said.

Hill thinks a victory over Kinchen could be a step toward bigger paydays and possibly a unification match among the light heavyweight titleholders.

"It's a good fight for me, it's a fight that could propel my career much further than it's been going and has gone," he said.

Prince Charles Williams, the International Boxing Federation champion, will be at ringside during the fight, which will be televised on ESPN.

Williams said Monday he would like to fight the winner of the Hill-Kinchen fight if he wins his mandatory IBF defense against Frankie Swindell on Jan. 7.

Jeff Harding, the World Boxing Council titleholder from Australia, is scheduled to defend his title Tuesday night at Sydney, Australia, against Tom Collins of Britain.

Some hunters unhappy with changes in county deer rules

Crossroads Country hunters are expecting a pretty good deer season this fall, but changes in Howard County have left some hunters unhappy and officials scrambling to make sure that deer hunters know the new policies going into effect this year.

What has caused the problem is receive one permit," he said.

Game Warden Wayne Armstrong said bucks shot will need to be tagged with the tag at the lower left hand side of the hunting license.

"It will need this tag," Armstrong said pointing to the bottom left hand tag on his hunting license. "Hunters will be required to have doe permits immediately upon their kill and tag them with the landowners permit."

A rare alga that thrives in salty fresh water appears responsible for what could be the worst fish kill in history on the Colorado River, biologists say.

The kill, running from E.V. Spence to San Saba County in Central Texas has killed tens of thousands of fish so far, according to Dennis Palafox, a biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The first kill reports were in late August, continuing into September on a stretch of the river from Ballinger to the confluence with the Concho River.

The most recent reports came over the weekend from the Shaw Bend area of the Colorado just upstream of its confluence with the San Saba River, he said.

"We have found an alga that is capable of producing several toxins that are lethal to fish and is found in areas with water with elevated salinity," he said. "It has not killed the aquatic insects or wildlife, just fish."

A Pheasant Hunt will be held at Buffalo Lake National Wildlife

Refuge in Umbarger, 30 miles southwest of Amarillo on Dec. 9, 11, 13, 15, and 17 from 9 a.m. to sunset.

To enter the hunt send your name, address and daytime phone number to Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge, P.O. Box 228, Umbarger, 79091.

Closing date for the drawing is Nov. 17. Hunter selection drawing will be Nov. 20.

Approximately 2000 acres of the refuge will be open to the hunting of ring-necked pheasants by permit only.

Some 20 permits will be issued for each hunt day by computer drawing, and each permit will be for hunter selected and one guest. Only one entry per name will be accepted and there is no choice of hunt days. Hunters will be notified of their hunt day when selected.

Permits must be in the hunters possession while hunting and are not transferable. Persons drawn will be notified by mail and be required to check-in at refuge headquarters to pick up their hunting permit on the day of their hunt.

For more information contact the refuge headquarters at (806) 499-3382 or P.O. Box 228, Umbarger, 79091.

Now that we're right in the middle of one hunting season or another, this is probably a good time to discuss the ammunition you'll be using in the field and storing in your home when seasons close.

There are no big secrets to proper ammunition use and storage but there are serious consequences for ignoring the basics.

With a little knowledge and the use of good old common sense, the proper use and storage of shells should provide no problems. Storage of ammo in your home should be in a locked closet or cabinet, out of the reach of children or anyone not having to use or having the knowledge to use ammunition.

Ammo should be kept in its original packaging when not in use. This packaging serves both to protect your shells and to identify them. Leaving them loose in your gun cabinet or closet only leads to confusion, and can result in your placing an improper shell or cartridge in your gun.

Care should also be taken that you are not carrying different caliber or different gauge shells in your hunting or shooting jacket. In the "heat of the battle" you might inadvertently use the wrong one in the gun you are shooting — with damaging results.

To be perfectly safe, it only takes a few seconds before leaving home to check the box of shells you are taking with you. Make sure the shells inside the box match what is printed on the box. After all, a box of .42 gauge No. 4s is hardly what you want to take on your next woodcock hunt.

$500,000 in fines

AUSTIN (AP) — People who violate fishing, hunting and water pollution laws in Texas have paid more than $500,000 for lost or damaged wildlife resources, according to state officials.

Legislation approved by lawmakers in 1985 authorized the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to collect civil damages on wildlife resources that are illegally taken, killed, injured or possessed.

The restitution comes in addition to any criminal fines or penalties.

Capt. Carlos Vaca, administrator of the department's civil restitution program, said 5,894 notices have been sent to violators during the first three years of the program seeking restitution totaling $1.63 million. So far, the agency has collected $533,311.

Crane migration

AUSTIN (AP) — Endangered whooping cranes may be making their annual appearance in Texas soon as they migrate from their Canadian nesting grounds to their winter home along the Texas Gulf Coast.

Parks and Wildlife Department officials are asking Texans who spot any of the rare birds to avoid disturbing them and to promptly report the location to the department or the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service.

Captive cranes split

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Wildlife officials plan to split the world's only captive colony of whooping cranes in November to reduce the chance the flock could be wiped out by disease or natural disaster.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said 22 of the 54 birds at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center would be shipped to the International Crane Foundation in Baraboo, Wis. Whooping cranes are an endangered species.

"The service has been concerned about having all of their eggs in one basket, literally," said David Trauger, the center's deputy director. "The service felt it was the prudent thing to do, to separate the breeding flocks, and there's enough breeders now to do that."
