NO LOCATION FIGHT

Centennial leaders have worked out a technique for the legislative ratification of locating the central exposition in Dallas. The appropriation bill likely will read to the general effect that the money is granted for the central exposition "in Dallas, Texas, conditioned that said appropriation shall become available only in the event that the city of Dallas shall have voted the bond issue proposed in its successful bid for the central exposition."

They hope to have the legislature so engrossed in the question of the amount of money and the extreme importance of official state support to the Texas-wide movement that sectional controversy over approving the Dallas location will be subordinated or perhaps forgotten entirely.

The Editor of the Pingang Gazette remarks that traffic control in his city leaves much to be desired. The traffic officers are unable to deal with the cyclist menace because too many cyclists take no notice of the traffic officers' signals. They ignore them and peddle away. Having no license number, the policeman can do nothing, as he cannot leave his post. We suggest that he might load a shotgun with salt and take a shot at one once in a while. That particular cyclist would obey signals after that!

In the last analysis the primary functions of government are to safeguard our liberties as a free people, to protect our lives, liberties and pursuit of happiness—not to go into business in competition with its citizens.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

CARLETON KENDRAKE

©1934 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY When DAN BLEEKER, publisher of The Blade, learns that CHARLES FISHER, a reporter, has been mysteriously killed he determines to employ SIDNEY GRIFF, forensic criminologist, to solve the murder. Morden had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent, who had threatened to sue The Blade because the newspaper reported Cathay had been arrested. Later it was proven that the man arrested, giving the name of Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS, was an impostor. The Blade published a retraction. Then Morden is found dead and a few hours later comes news that Cathay is dead—possibly poisoned. Sidney Griff undertakes the case. He calls on Cathay's doctor and then goes to see CHARLES FISHER, Cathay's friend and lawyer. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII GRIFF had been listening to the lawyer intently. "How long," he asked, "was this reporter in Riverview?" "Just a day I think. Perhaps not a day. I don't know. He made some investigation and made some comments. He spent most of his time in the office of The Riverview Chronicle, a newspaper, by the way, which has been hostile to Mr. Cathay's political candidacy for membership in the city council." "Did that man," asked Griff, "call on you, counselor?" "No, certainly not. He was collecting evidence which would have a tendency to undermine my client's reputation. Naturally, he would hardly have called upon me." "You didn't know him then?" "No." "Perhaps then," said the criminologist, "you entirely missed the significance of the account in The Blade this morning of the murder of one of its reporters." Charles Fisher gripped the edges of his desk. His eyes fastened upon the criminologist's face and gradually grew wider and wider. "Good heavens!" he said. "You don't mean to tell me . . . it can't be . . . that is, it wasn't the same man?" Griff nodded. Charles Fisher got slowly to his feet. He mopped his forehead with a handkerchief, regarded Griff with wide, startled eyes. "Now," said Fisher slowly, "I can understand your interest in the matter. I understand who is employing you." Griff remained silent. The attorney looked at his watch, went to the window and stood with his back to Griff, looking down at the street. He turned at length to the criminologist. "Has the newspaper," he asked, "any idea of the motive for the murder?" Griff shrugged his shoulders. "Really, counselor," he said, "I can't tell you just what the newspaper knows or what it suspects."

Griff got to his feet. "Is there," asked Fisher with a forced attempt at his old cordiality, "anything I can do to assist you, Mr. Griff, which will not in any way conflict with my professional obligations to my clients?" Griff smiled at him. "I think not," he said. The two men shook hands. Griff went at once to a public telephone, called the office of Dr. P. C. Cooper and explained to the nurse that it was quite important that he talk with Doctor Cooper upon a personal matter. A moment later he heard Doctor Cooper's voice on the wire. "This is Griff, Doctor Cooper," he said. "The criminologist who called on you earlier this morning." "Yes," said Doctor Cooper in a tone that was calm and wary. "What is it you wish, Mr. Griff?" "I just wanted to tell you," Griff said, "that I have been in communication with the counsel who is representing Mrs. Frank B. Cathay, and that the Cathays are planning to have you cited before the medical board because of the statements you made concerning the symptoms of Mr. Frank B. Cathay." "Yes," said Doctor Cooper in the tone of voice one uses in asking a courteous question. "Yes," Griff said, "and I just thought, Doctor Cooper, that if a post-mortem should disclose that your diagnosis was correct and that of Doctor Amstead incorrect, it might go a long way toward eliminating the necessity for any defense upon your part." Griff ceased talking and held the telephone to his ear. For a moment there was only the buzzing noise of the wire. Then Doctor Cooper's voice said in the same cautious, thoughtful tone, "Thank you." There was a click at the end of the line. Griff slipped the receiver back on its hook. SIDNEY GRIFF'S taxicab deposited him at the wide entrance to the Cathay mansion. "You want me to wait?" asked the cab driver. "Yes," Griff said, and started up the long cement walk which led from the ornamental wrought-iron gate to the porch on the front of the house. He had almost reached the porch when the door opened and a tall man with broad shoulders and a slight paunch which bulged out his waistcoat stepped with quick vigor from the house and turned sharply to the right, walking across the porch to stairs which led to a driveway that came from the garage. Griff called a low comment: "Hello, Racine," he said. "You going to pass me up?" The man whirled at the sound of the voice. His eyes stared at Sidney Griff with an expression of quick recognition which speedily gave way to wary appraisal. He turned and walked back toward Griff with a leisurely manner.

Texas CCC Camps Show Progress

COLLEGE STATION.—A total of 7,483 check dams 2,694 of which are of concrete and 4,789 of rock masonry, have been constructed by the ten CCC camps in Texas, according to a summary compiled at the end of the third six-month period of the work by M. R. Bentley, extension agricultural engineer and director of soil erosion control work in Texas. In making the dams 121,900 sacks of cement have been used; 34,700 tons of rock have been placed; and 28,400 cubic yards of dirt were removed by hand, with much larger amounts moved by landowners with teams. The camps, each working a radius of about 12 miles, are located at Farmersville, Cohn county; Cleburne, Johnson county; Dublin, Erath county; Bowie, Montague county; Belton, Bell county; Taylor, Williamson county; Graham, Young county; Boyd, Wise county; Weatherford, Parker county; and Coolidge, Limestone county. The camp now located at Cleburne will be moved to Hillsboro, Hill county, about Oct. 15, and the Dublin camp will be located at Brenham, Washington county, after that date. Seven camps were organized in June, 1933, and assigned to the Forest Service for the purpose of carrying on soil erosion control work. They are financed by Emergency Conservation Work funds. Upon request the Extension Service added to an established program of erosion control and soil conservation the technical supervision of erosion control and soil conservation the technical supervision of erosion control methods in this new work. The CCC workers survey for terraces, but do not build terrace ridges. Their work is limited to the construction of check dams at terrace outlets and outlet ditches for terrace systems. Four county graders are at work throwing up terraces in the territory of the Taylor camp and approximately 2100 acres have been approved for new terraces. These cover 20 different projects. Seven large grading outfits are engaged in terrace construction in the Farmersville territory, while the Bowie camp reports that it has had many projects lined up and terraced with the county equipment. The adjoining counties in a radius of 25 miles of the camp have also given cooperation with their equipment. Work at the Boyd camp has just started on their largest project to date. This includes approximately 43 miles of terraces, 8 miles of controlled ditches, 1002 acres, and 50 structures. All of this is to be planned and controlled as a unit. Twenty-one members of the engineering detail of the Belton camp are enrolled in a class in engineering, covered such subjects as terracing, topography, level work, and mapping. The class is taught by Carlton Crowner, A. N. Gibson, and C. M. Evans, engineering foreman at the camp. The class meets once a week for two hours and is supplemented by group meetings from time to time, taking up work that has been covered or will be covered by the regular class. Hauptmann Alibi Is Being Checked NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The story of two new witnesses placing Bruno Hauptmann in New York city four hours before the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped at Hopewell, N. Griff watched him with eyes that twinkled with amusement, yet were cautiously watchful. "Business here, Racine?" he asked. Carl Racine stood with his feet planted slightly apart, his eyes staring steadily at the criminologist. "Business here, Griff?" he asked mockingly. Griff nodded. "Yes," he said. "I want to see Mrs. Cathay." "Hardly a time for social visits," Racine pointed out. Griff shrugged his shoulders in a polite gesture of dismissal. "There was a moment of silence. "I wonder if you can tell me just what angle of this case you're working on?" Racine asked. "How many angles has it?" Griff countered. Racine frowned impatiently. "Oh," he said, "I'm just a square-toed dick. I can't match wits with you if it comes to a matter of being indefinite in conversation. You don't have to tell me if you don't want to, but don't be so damned superior. After all you're only human, you know, even if you are Sidney C. Griff, the great criminologist." Griff said nothing. His eyes held a twinkle of amusement. "I thought," Racine said, "that you might like a chance to pool information on this." "Sure," said Griff, "that's fair enough. You start off. You tell me something, then I'll tell you something." "That's a bargain," Racine said. "Who are you working for?" Griff's laugh was almost sarcastic. "So that was the way you wanted to pool information, was it Racine?" A smooth running motor slid into view, stopped where the side steps of the porch met the driveway. The Cathay chauffeur slid from behind the wheel, opened the rear door of the car and stared steadily at the two men. "There is," said Griff musingly, "something strange about that chauffeur, Racine. Turn around and take a look at him. He wears the livery of a servant but notice the expression on his face. He's evidently very much irritated because we're talking together." Racine did not turn, but he straightened abruptly and his tone became formal. "He's in a hurry," he said. "He's under instructions to get me to a certain place. I've got to start. Goodbye, Griff." Racine crossed the porch with long strides. The chauffeur stood at right attention, his face a mask. As the detective entered the car, the chauffeur slammed the door, turned to face Sidney Griff. "You can't see Mrs. Cathay," he said, jerking open the front door of the car. He did not wait for a reply, nor did he turn back for any instructions from the detective. (To Be Continued)

MASON—The "Torn Hat" painted by Thomas Sully more than 100 years ago and reproduced on the cover of a recent issue of a farm magazine has solved the picture problem for Mrs. Arch Reeves, bedroom demonstrator for the Ten Mile Home Demonstration Club of Mason county, she tells Miss Leah Cox, home demonstration agent. Mrs. Reeves chose a gold frame that blended with the colors of the picture. By cutting out the picture and framing it herself, she has a famous picture that means something to her and to her small daughter at a cost of only 29 cents.

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT YOUR TELEPHONE

Scientists of Bell Laboratories are paid to be dissatisfied with telephone service... to find better ways of furnishing it... to keep the cost of service low. Without their help, the men and women who give your telephone service here could not do their job so well.

1. The telephone had its birth nearly 60 years ago in a makeshift research laboratory, where Alexander Graham Bell watched a tiny straw attached to the eardrum from a human skull trace wavering lines on smoked glass. In the half century and more since then, the history of the telephone has been told in the countless scientific problems that have been solved.
2. Bell Telephone Laboratories, the research arm of the telephone service, has contributed the developments that led to transcontinental and transoceanic telephone calls; that make possible 1800, instead of 50, pairs of wires in a single telephone cable; that allow, by using special equipment, for four simultaneous conversations over a single long distance line.

3. Entirely as by-products of this research, the scientists employed at the laboratories have invented an artificial larynx for persons deprived of speech by throat operations, produced many aids for the hard of hearing, and developed equipment for sending pictures over wires.

INVENTIONS of the research scientists at Bell Laboratories have been devoted, not to swelling profits, but to improvements and economies that have aided this company in giving good service at a fair cost to the telephone user.

This policy has been adopted in the belief that, as much from your standpoint as from our own, it is sound and workable. It is based upon the feeling that in an undertaking planned like the telephone service for the long pull, what is best for the telephone user is in the end the course that will bring us the surer, more enduring success.
