Sales tax revenues climb

In the face of a continuing decline in sales tax revenues reported by other cities in Texas, revenues from sales taxes in Rockport and Fulton continued to grow, according to the report this month from State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

October sales tax payments — representing sales actually made this past August in the two cities — amounted to $16,937.87 for Rockport and $1,425.61 to Fulton.

Rockport's sales tax revenues for the month were nearly $4,000 ahead of those received in October 1982 and the city's year-to-date total of $319,028.76 was 28.59 percent ahead of the sales tax collections for the same period in 1982.

Fulton's October collections were down by just under $1,200 from October a year ago, but the city's year-to-date tax collections of $33,650.58 were 1.2 percent higher than last year's.

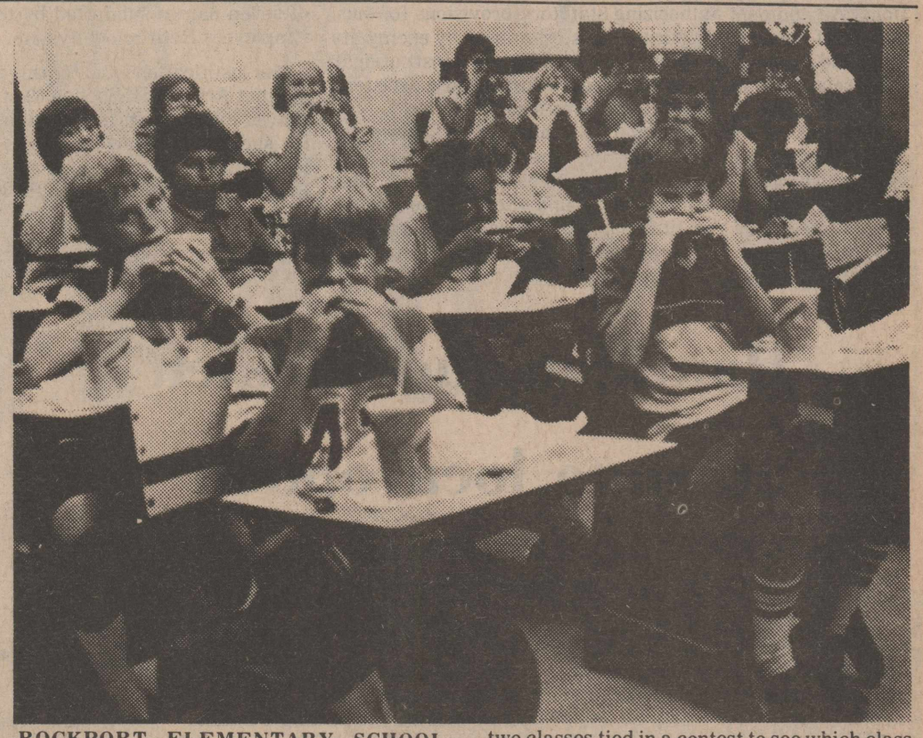

Sales tax revenues in the two cities compared favorably with those collected by other cities in the Coastal Bend. In Aransas Pass, October revenues of $20,718.64 were almost $3,000 higher than those of October 1982, but the year-to-date total of $303,226.46 was 6.48 percent less than last year. Ingleside's year-to-date collections of $87,309.86 were 10.85 percent lower than the 1982 collections and the October revenues were down by a little more than $3,000 from the $7,307.38 collected for the month a year ago.

Portland's $20,003.05 October collections were a little more than $1,200 ahead of October 1982, but the overall '83 tax collections of $335,035.41 were down by 2.15 percent from the prior year.

Port Aransas was one of the few area cities showing gains, with an increase of just over $3,000 in its October sales tax revenues over last year and a year-to-date total of $175,-114.85, 6.6 percent ahead of 1982.

Refugio's October revenues of $6,308.63 were approximately $700 ahead of the October '82 returns but the year-to-date total of $146,023.81 was 3.09 percent less than in 1982.

Lease raises debate over fees

Woman's Club request splits ACND commission

After an hour-long debate and two votes of the Aransas County Navigation District (ACND), members of the Aransas County Woman's Club were told they would have to return to the district's Nov. 1 meeting for a decision on their request for a 20-year lease of the ACND property on which their club building is located in Rockport.

The women made their request Tuesday night during the ACND's meeting in the wake of the district's granting of a 20-year lease to the Paws & Taws Building and a 29-year lease to the Rockport Art Association for location of an art center near Rockport Harbor.

But their request was made after the district's Oct. 4 meeting in which ACND Commissioner Charlie Augustine made a series of recommendations for increasing the district's revenues from its recreational and beach facilities, including increasing the amount paid by lessees for ACND property.

The study was made in response to a $26,000 deficit in the district's recreation fund for the current fiscal year and the anticipation that the recreation funds will continue to show a deficit under current policies. In the past, the recreation expenses, covered primarily through taxes collected by the district, have been subsidized by revenues collected from the district's three harbor operations.

Approximately 20 members of the ACND Woman's Club were present at the navigation district meeting Tuesday as their request for a 20-year lease was presented. The present lease held by the club is for 5 years at $1 per year.

ACND Chairman Hillis Dominguez read a letter from Rockport resident Anita Dingenary stating her belief that the Woman's Club Building was built 30 years ago by donated funds to be used by the public and asserting she (Dingenary) "would like to see the building used for its intended purpose."

ACND attorney Reese Rozzell said according to the lease the woman's club holds with the navigation district, they own the building, and members of the club pointed out that they do make the building available for organizations and public functions.

Club members observed that Emory Spencer gave them the money to move the building from its original location in Ingleside to Rockport and that they repaid those funds.

"The building was not repaired or refurnished or anything with public money," said one. "It was money we (woman's club members) earned."

ACND Commissioner Dave Maguglin made the first motion, that the woman's club be granted a 20-year lease at the current rate of $1 per year. The motion was seconded by Commissioner Hal McKnight.

Rozzell pointed out that the district's position in recent years has been that the district has the right to grant a lease for up to 30 years if the lease is "incidental to navigation district purposes" but otherwise a lease can only be granted for five years and a longer lease for any other purpose must be put out for bid.

The attorney later said the art association's lease was put out for bid but the Paws & Taws lease was not. Both these leases call for payment of $1 per year to the navigation district. In response to a question from Maguglin, "Can we legally give the woman's club a 20-year lease?," Rozzell replied, "It's a delicate question."

During the debate that centered around both the length of the lease and the lease fee, Augustine told members of the woman's club, "I'm the culprit in this because I was looking at ways of increasing revenue. I for one feel the public is entitled to more than $1 per year for this land and that applies to the woman's

Fire station repairs to go out for bid

FULTON — A motion by Alderwoman Lynelle Hunt to put repairs on the Fulton Fire Station out for bids was unanimously approved by the town council during a special meeting Tuesday evening, Oct. 18.

Specifications for the repairs were drawn up by Alderman Elgin Dietz after he and Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline met with fire department officials Saturday morning, Oct. 15.

The Fulton Volunteer Fire Department had originally asked the town council for financial support in an effort to add onto and remodel the existing fire station. However, council members have instead opted to make temporary repairs on the building with the intention of applying for a grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to build a combination town hall and fire station.

The temporary repairs are to include repair and patching of the metal roof on the station's west end; repair of the front and frames of two door openings for overhead doors on two west bays of the metal building; installation of two new overhead doors for the two west side bays; rebracing the engine room roof, including replacement of door jambs; patching and repair of the roof deck on the entire building; replacement of all facia boards where needed; reflashing and tarring the roof

$500,000 bond issue is voted by navigation district

By PAT BLAIR
Managing editor

Aransas County's navigation district commissioners have voted to issue $500,000 in revenue bonds to pay for the rewiring of Rockport Harbor and additional improvements to all three county harbors.

The vote came during the commissioners' regular session that began at 7:30 p.m. and followed a workshop discussion of the bond issue and a review of preliminary plans and specifications for the harbor rewiring project.

The commissioners during the regular session also approved the preliminary plans for the rewiring project and designated Goldston Engineers of Corpus Christi — the company that drew up the plans and specifications — to be inspecting engineers on the project. Goldston is on retainer to the district and estimated cost for the inspections is $1,000.

Charles T. Sharpless, vice president First Southwest Company, presented commissioners with debt service schedules for bond issues of varying amounts during the workshop meeting that began at 6:30 p.m. In answer to questions from the commissioners, he said the navigation district would not have to authorize or sell the bonds all at once but it would cost the district less to do so.

He added the sale of these bonds would carry a restriction: the projects for which they are to be used must be undertaken within 18 months after the bonds are sold.

Estimated cost of the Rockport Harbor rewiring project is $100,000. To that project, commissioners added construction of 35 new boat slips in Rockport Harbor and 55 in Fulton Harbor and improvements to Cove Harbor.

Referring to the proposed Cove Harbor project, Commissioner Hal McKnight observed, "One thing we sure ought to look at real hard is handling bulk cargo." To do that, he said, the commission will have to improve lease areas in the harbor.

McKnight estimated expenditure of $100,000 each in Rockport and Fulton harbors for the boat slips — a total of $200,000 — plus $100,000 for improvements to Cove Harbor, a total bond issue of $400,000.

Commissioner Dave Maguglin objected, "That's not enough for Cove Harbor. We spend more than that just for dredging."

Maguglin recommended the district allocate $200,000 for the Cove Harbor improvements, bringing the total revenue bond issue to $500,000.

"I hate to go over $400,000," Commission Chairman Hillis Dominguez said at this point.

"I can appreciate you being conservative," Maguglin replied, "but you don't want to run out of money. You can't turn around and issue more bonds."

Sharpless at this point cautioned the commissioners, "You don't want to run out (of money) but you don't want to over-issue. The question that's going to be asked (by those buying the bonds)," he said later, "is when the boat slips will be completed."

To this Maguglin replied, "It will probably all be completed by the end of 1984."

The major debate during the workshop was whether to issue $400,000 or $500,000 in bonds, and Maguglin at one point pleaded, "We real-

City park grant receives federal approval

Federal approval of an $88,925 grant for improvements to Rockport's Memorial Park was announced at a meeting of the city's board of parks and recreation Wednesday night at City Hall.

State approval of the funds was granted by the Texas Parks & Wildlife Commission in September, but federal approval was still needed before the funds could be released. That approval was given this past Monday, Oct. 17, according to Parks Board Chairman George McCague.

In other action during the board's meeting, a request by the Rockport-Fulton Soccer Association (RFSA) for permission to have a concession stand near the association's pee wee field in Memorial Park received approval from the parks board.

Board member Bobby Jackson moved that the board recommend the request to the city council for approval at the council's Oct. 24 meeting. The motion was seconded by Patty McArdle and approved unanimously.

The request was presented in a letter to the parks board by George Hernandez of the RFSA and backed by the appearance before the board by Maxine Romero. Romero told the board the RFSA needs more money to buy trophies, awards and equipment for the soccer teams which now includes three more junior high teams.

She said the soccer association plans to provide soft drinks and snack-type foods as well as sandwiches made by team mothers. "We will handle everything," Romero said, including cleanup and moving of the portable concession stand onto and off the field.

Rockport was awarded 100 percent of the money city officials requested through the federally-funded Land-Water Conservation grant program and has been waiting for the federal government to give the final okay.

The city plans to use the money for improvements and additional facilities to Memorial Park, including additional parking and restroom facilities, connection to the city's sanitary sewer plant, a jogging-exercise trail and new baseball and soccer fields.

Proposed annexations set for hearing

The first public hearing on Rockport's proposed annexation of approximately 300 acres of land, including two state tracts and several lots along Hwy. 35 North, will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 25, at City Hall.

Also scheduled for hearing at that time will be the city's proposed annexation — by request — of Unit II of Rockport Country Club Estates.

Both annexation proposals will be heard again before the council on Nov. 8 before city officials can decide whether to act on the annexations.

During the regular council session that begins at 7:30 p.m., officials will consider first reading of the city's updated subdivision ordinance.

Also scheduled during the regular session will be a request from the Rockport-Fulton Soccer Association for permission to operate a concession stand during soccer season in Memorial Park. This request was heard by the city's board of parks and recreation Wednesday night and received a favorable recommendation from those officials.

The Aransas County Council on Aging is scheduled with a request for a variance from the floodplain ordinance to allow an addition to the COA Adult Activity Center on South Church Street.

Scheduled for hearing Tuesday night is the city's proposal to annex State Tracts 149 and 150 in Aransas Bay, a total of more than 288 acres.

Also proposed for annexation are the site of the U-Tote-M at the Key Allegro bridge, two tracts just north of the SeaAire Shopping Center between Hwy. 35 North and Little Bay Shores and several lots north of those tracts along Hwy. 35 that are not presently in the city.

The annexation hearing will include the lot presently occupied by Joe's Exxon at the intersection of Glass and Hwy. 35 and the lot on Hwy. 35 presently occupied by Sandpiper Real Estate.

First in a series

Pros, cons cited for Proposition 4

Aransas County voters, like others across Texas, are being asked to decide — either now, through absentee balloting, or in another two weeks at the polls — on 11 proposed amendments to the state Constitution. Beginning in this issue, the Pilot weekend edition will be providing information on these proposed amendments, with the pros and cons of each.

The series will begin with Proposition 4.

Proposition 4 will appear on the ballot as "The Constitutional Amendment authorizing statutory provisions for succession of public office during disasters caused by enemy attack, and authorizing the suspension of certain Constitutional rules relating to legislative procedure during those disasters or during immediate threat of enemy attack."

What this amendment would do, if adopted, is require the Texas Legislature to provide for emergency interim successors to replace legislators who become "unavailable" due to enemy — i.e. nuclear — attack, and allow the House and Senate to suspend constitutional rules governing actions of the legislature for up to two years by concurring with a proclamation by the governor to that effect.

This suspension may be renewed with another proclamation and concurrence. It would permit the governor to keep the time and place of the legislature's meeting secret. Implementing legislation, in the form of HB 1216, would provide for selection of emergency successors from former state senators or representatives living in districts where the legislators become "unavailable." The lieutenant governor and Speaker of the House would choose successors from a list of seven names submitted by the executive director of the Employees Retirement System.

The justification cited for this proposed amendment points out that Article III, Section 62 of the Texas Constitution, approved by voters in 1962, requires the legislature to provide for succession to public offices — except members of the legislature — in case of disaster caused by enemy attack. Proposition 4 is designed to fill a perceived gap and provide for other emergency measures.

The pros — Supporters of this proposed amendment offer the following in justification:

— The state government presently lacks crucial powers to respond to enemy attack or the threat of enemy attack. This amendment would provide a needed plan for bypassing the usual restrictions which could become a hindrance during an emergency.

— Proper civil defense planning, offered by this amendment, could save lives and ensure continuance of our democratic form of government. The advanced form of weaponry likely to be used in an enemy attack could isolate the state, preventing reliance on the federal government.

The cons — Opponents to the amendment advance the following:

— In event of a nuclear attack, the federal government would most likely assume total control of all governmental functions, making this amendment unnecessary.

— Even if some governmental authorities survive a nuclear attack, they may not be the ones designated by this legislation to issue emergency edicts and choose successor legislators. It is possible that all the "qualified" substitute legislators in a given district would also be "unavailable."

— The amendment would give the governor dangerous and unprecedented powers, allowing him to possibly aggravate an international crisis by precipitately exercising those powers.

Handgun questions left to state, local option

As it often does, the Supreme Court avoided ruling directly on the constitutionality of the Second Amendment right to "keep and bear arms," and decided instead that citizens may be prohibited by local or state laws from keeping handguns in their homes.

The ruling in effect went against those who believe the Constitution guarantees citizens the right to keep as many handguns as they like.

Since the Second Amendment was adopted, there has been a running argument about its meaning. Some contend it places no restraint on citizens' right to keep handguns in their homes, while others insist the amendment applies only to arming a militia.

The amendment provides that "A well-regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

The nearest the Supreme Court has come to ruling directly on Second Amendment constitutionality was in 1886. A decision in the case, Presser vs. Illinois, held the Second Amendment's "arms guarantee" applied to Congress, not to states and localities.

The court, opening its 1983-84 session, refused, without explanation, to review a lower court decision upholding a controversial ban on handguns in Morton Grove, Ill., a village of 25,000 in Chicago suburbs.

It was a defeat for the National Rifle Association, which had challenged the Morton Grove ordinance on behalf of several residents. NRA attorneys argued the city government violated citizens' constitutional right to keep handguns.

Morton Grove's defense was handled and financed by the powerful National Coalition to Ban Handguns.

Morton Grove citizens favoring the handgun ban were elated by the high court ruling, but an NRA spokesman said they were celebrating too early. He warned against exaggerating the gun decision's impact because of a separate NRA challenge of the ordinance, based on the state Constitution, is still pending before the Illinois Supreme Court.

Backers of the handgun ban, however, feel sure the U.S. Supreme Court decision will prevail. If so, it may open the way for local governments to put handgun control ordinances on the books.

The Morton Grove law, passed in 1981, prohibits possession of handguns within borders of the village. Police officers, prison and security guards, licensed gun collectors and certain others are exempt.

Are we ready for a woman vice president?

The Live Oak Peninsula philosopher

Editor's note: The Live Oak Philosopher on his grassburr ranch examines an issue now in the news, in a self-protective sort of way.

Dear Editor:

There's a lot of talk, mostly by columnists who're required to write something every day, about having a woman nominated for vice president.

When asked what they think of the idea, all the presidential candidates say "Why not?" But they don't say who. If asked to suggest a name, they talk about the situation in the Mideast.

Women react to the idea of a woman vice president in three or four ways.

One group is flattered, saying "Sure. It's about time."

Another group is outraged. "A woman vice president?" they say. "Baloney. We ought to have a woman president. We're tired of being put in second place."

A third group says, "Don't interrupt. We're watching TV."

A fourth group says, "Vice president? What does a vice president do?" They're not to be looked down on. Lots of vice presidents haven't known what they were supposed to do either. There may have been some presidents in the same shape, but I won't go into that.

Some men are automatically against the idea of a woman vice president. "What if something happened and she becomes president?" they ask. "Can you imagine a woman as Commander-In-Chief in the Falkland Islands?" Mrs. Thatcher is still in charge and the Argentine male commander is out of a job.

I suppose that some day we'll have not only a woman vice president but also a woman president. Why not? A deficit run up by either sex would be just as unmanageable.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

A need for reform

Capitol update

By JOHN TOWER
U.S. Senator

The federal government's new financial year began Oct. 1. Yet, Congress has passed only six of the needed 13 appropriations bills that give federal agencies the authority to spend money for this fiscal year. The other agencies — including such vital departments as Defense and State — are able to meet their obligations only through what is called a "continuing resolution."

This is not the way the founding fathers intended for the government to do business. Certainly, no sound business or corporation would begin its new financial year without a budget. Yet, year after year Congress fails to complete its business on time. Why is this the case?

Congress has come to be more and more bureaucatic. Three separate steps are required before money can be spent. First we go through the Congressional budget process, which sets overall spending ceilings for the various budget categories.

The motivation behind setting up this process was admirable. Before it was in place Congress passed spending bills without any regard for what their cumulative total — and the resulting deficit — would be. Yet, the budget process has become so cumbersome that it takes most of the spring to complete.

Only then can work begin on authorization legislation. These bills set forth needed programs for each of the budget areas. For example the Senate Armed Services Committee, which I chair, looks carefully at the administration's budget recommendations for the Department of Defense. It is our job to make any changes we believe are in order and send a bill to the full Senate, which then acts upon it.

Because our committee only deals with defense issues, our colleagues rely on our judgment concerning our national defense needs — although some changes, of course, are made by the full Senate.

The final step in providing money for the government to operate is the appropriations process. Appropriations bills set forth the amount of money which can be spent. In other words, authorization bills outline program needs and appropriations bills consider how much money we can afford to spend.

Since both the Senate and the House of Representatives have to pass each bill, and then a conferece committee has to resolve the differences in the two versions of each bill, each step in the process is time-consuming. Further complicating the system is the fact that increasingly the Appropriations Committee is working on their legislation before authorization legislation has passed.

Clearly, reform is needed if the Congress is ever to be able to take a responsible, business-like approach to spending the public's money. Several proposals have been put forth.

The first of these is two-year budgeting. This would require the Congress to look ahead and would mean that we would have to undertake this time-consuming process only every two years. In fact, I also believe we should look very carefully at the possibility of authorizing and appropriating money for a two-year instead of a one-year period.

Secondly, I am looking favorably at a proposal to combine the budget and appropriations committees, since both of these committees are charged with making sure we are not spending more money than we should be. Under this plan, the authorization committees — such as the Armed Services Committee or the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee — would both authorize and appropriate within the spending ceilings set by the Budget Resolution.

This would preserve the responsibility for overall budget planning while allowing the committees with expertise in a given subject area exercise the primary influence over spending by the agencies it oversees.

THE FILM STRIP, if that's the proper term, began with the camera scanning a group of some half a hundred boys and girls, ages 9 to 13. Dressed in neat camp uniforms, the children were so overall attractive one might have thought they had been picked and assembled by Hollywood. Some of the girls were simply lovely.

The group was assembled to answer questions from a group of New England physicians on the subject of nuclear war. I'd like to have an accurate list of those questions, and more important, a tape on the responses. Here I must inject that I feel a bit backward attempting this report, essentially because I am of an age to have forgotten what to expect of the mentality of 9 to 13-year-olds. Let it suffice that I was impressed, justly so or not. My disadvantage acknowledged, I shall attempt to summarize.

Without being frightened, certainly not panicked, the children were completely aware of the meaning of a nuclear holocaust. They wanted to live, enjoy life, they wanted their friends to live. "I don't want my mother and father to die that way."

Several had seen films of the consequences of the atomic bomb after it had been dropped over Japan. Briefly describing what they had seen, they were horrified. "That doesn't need to happen again."

All seemed certain in their belief that the leaders of none of the great powers would institute a nuclear war. The danger they said lies in a mistaken signal by one power or another that would lead to retaliative measures. Were they echoing the voices of their parents? None believed that air raid shelters would enable them to survive an attack. "When you come from a shelter the air, the food, the water would all be posioned."

Anyone see this film strip? If so you know that is was made in Russia. The American medics spoke through an interpreter. How alike, or different from mine was your reaction? There were spots where I found it close to being a tear jerker, even though these sentences may not reflect it.

Or did you put the whole show down as Russian propaganda? In this instance I refuse to accept that, even recognizing the cynical paranoia of the Kremlin.

Perhaps we should turn the running of the world over to little children. Simplistic thought. Kids can be little devils that grow up to become the hardcase characters that run this and other nations.

THERE — I HAVE perhaps ruined what might have been called a rather nice story. Why did I have to spoil it all with that last sentence? Yet I couldn't resist because beside me as I watched was, still half-read, "The Price of Power," a rather tediously detailed account of Henry Kissinger in the Nixon White House by Semour M. Hersh. Despite his being a Pulitzer Prize winner, I am not always an admirer of Hersh. However his book amounts to a harsh, even brutal account of men on high.

Gentle me not with a reminder that "those were the Nixon years." I can say no more good and no more bad about the Nixon years that those of any other presidential era, specifically if you like since World War II.

I would make an old point, one of my own that is. Through their formative years, through high school at least, such history as our children are taught is pap. I still regurgitate when I think of the stuff foisted upon my own children. But what would I suggest, substitute? Ha, I tread on ground upon which I should not walk. Yet I must say this: When the high school student moves on to college he begins to get large doses of realism, often as not imagined realism, at least in part.

The consequences we all know. The young become cynical and spurn politics and politicians with the result that they are the least in numbers among the ranks of voters. Under the circumstances you may say, it is just as well that they don't vote.

HERE I MUST return to those earlier mentioned 9- to 13-year-old children and their greatest fear, that a nuclear halocaust might be started entirely by accident. That probability of accident is very real, one that must dwell in the minds of all of us who presume to think. Were it not the circumstance this writer at least would concentrate his fears upon what otherwise be the greatest danger to the continuance of life upon his planet — uncontrolled population growth.

It is a desperate and bitter thing because this increase in population is greatest amongst those people who can least afford to reproduce. All of us hate to see starving children and many among us answer pleas to save their lives, yet when we do so we eventually contribute to overpopulation.

THERE — I HAVE perhaps ruined what might have been called a rather nice story. Why did I have to spoil it all with that last sentence? Yet I couldn't resist because beside me as I watched was, still half-read, "The Price of Power," a rather tediously detailed account of Henry Kissinger in the Nixon White House by Semour M. Hersh. Despite his being a Pulitzer Prize winner, I am not always an admirer of Hersh. However his book amounts to a harsh, even brutal account of men on high.

Gentle me not with a reminder that "those were the Nixon years." I can say no more good and no more bad about the Nixon years that those of any other presidential era, specifically if you like since World War II.

I would make an old point, one of my own that is. Through their formative years, through high school at least, such history as our children are taught is pap. I still regurgitate when I think of the stuff foisted upon my own children. But what would I suggest, substitute? Ha, I tread on ground upon which I should not walk. Yet I must say this: When the high school student moves on to college he begins to get large doses of realism, often as not imagined realism, at least in part.

The consequences we all know. The young become cynical and spurn politics and politicians with the result that they are the least in numbers among the ranks of voters. Under the circumstances you may say, it is just as well that they don't vote.

HERE I MUST return to those earlier mentioned 9 to 13-year-old children and their greatest fear, that a nuclear holocaust might be started entirely by accident. That probability of accident is very real, one that must dwell in the minds of all of us who presume to think. Were it not the circumstance this writer at least would concentrate his fears upon what otherwise be the greatest danger to the continuance of life upon his planet — uncontrolled population growth.

It is a desperate and bitter thing because this increase in population is greatest amongst those people who can least afford to reproduce. All of us hate to see starving children and many among us answer pleas to save their lives, yet when we do so we eventually contribute to overpopulation.

Try playing ring toss

Scott Burns

Q: I've recently taken an interest in stocks. My weekly gross salary is $625, but I know nothing of buying, selling or choosing stocks. I'm 25, single and can risk losing 60 percent of my paycheck. What books and brokers would you suggest for a person who likes to take risks for a high return? I would start off with $2,000 and add $300 weekly. — C.P.D., Chicago, Ill.

A. Let me tell you the Parable of Ring Toss.

Management trainers sometimes play a game with management trainees. They find a big room, set up a game of ring toss and tell the trainees they can throw their rings from anywhere in the room.

Three groups emerge from this exercise:

1) The High Flyers. These fellows get as far away from the goal as possible and fling the rings. They seldom make a goal, but they are dramatic and a lot of fun to watch.

2) The Security Seekers. These trainees are worried something terrible will happen to them if they don't score with each shot. So they walk up to the goal and drop their rings onto it. Not much of a challenge, but they have a hard time missing.

3) The Moderate Risk Takers. A few of the trainees will take a position some distance from the goal and make a challenging shot. Sometimes they miss, sometimes they hit, but you know they are learning, improving and figuring the odds.

The moderate risk-takers usually become the best corporate managers.

You can see similar behavior in investors. Some will take no risks at all and prefer the security of guaranteed savings. And some seem to strive for risk, seeking it for its own sake.

I believe the best investment results accrue to the people who take moderate risks to achieve an above-average return.

So . . . before you invest a dime, please play some ring toss!

Peculiar as it may sound, most investors don't want to do the hard work of measuring risk against potential return. Some opt for a secure return and allow others to reap the benefits of using their money; others pursue risk for the excitement alone.

Speaking for myself, I gladly forsake exciting investments for above-average results. You can get that by making careful measurements of risk vs. return.

Here is a framework for understanding risk and return:

— There is a risk-free investment return. It is the return on short-term U.S. Treasury bills, now just under 10 percent.

— Getting higher returns is difficult. This is a very competitive world. Any company with an opportunity for substantial returns soon has massive competition. The typical company now has a return on shareholders' equity of about 11 percent. Very few earn more than 20 percent.

Unless you are prepared to devote an enormous amount of time to finding good investments or are a corporate "insider," the odds against a return over 20 percent are tremendous. Face that and you'll save yourself a lot of grief — and money. Anyone who offers you a "sure thing" or "near sure thing" that returns 25 percent is a charlatan.

— No investment outruns its underlying earning power forever. Many people forget this when stocks zoom. When you buy a share of stock you are buying an interest in the company. While stock prices sometimes magically float on a sea of promise and prospects, the ultimate test is whether the business is profitable. Many high technology companies don't survive that simple test. You can measure promise against reality by reading annual reports. As an alternative, you can get a great deal of information, quickly, from services such as Value Line — available at most public libraries.

— Having found some earning power, measure how much certain return you must give up for a prospective return. In other words, if riskless T bills offer 10 percent, what does AT&T offer that makes it worth accepting an 8 percent yield? Answer: 6 to 7 percent earnings growth — a 3-to-1 payoff.

The further you get away from a secure reward, the greater your risk of having a below-average investment return. Why? Simply because the riskless money always earns a return. In a period of high interest rates, the longer you must wait for an investment to mature, the greater the odds of failure or mediocrity.

— Invest in what you know. General knowledge of the stock market can be acquired by reading business periodicals and some of the endless supply of books on investing. Start now and keep reading. No one has "The Answer" in investments, but it's a good idea to keep abreast of what people think.

You'll improve the odds for success if you specialize in an industry that you know or a type of investment that you understand particularly well.

No one ever made a profit on ignorance.

Gas, refining summaries released by RCC

TEXAS GAS PRODUCTION IN JULY

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced Texas oil and gas wells produced 476,192,044 mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas in July, down 5.99 percent from field runs a year earlier.

That brings total production for the year through July to 3,193,946,917 mcf of gas. Through July of 1982, Texas had produced 3,584,181,618 mcf of gas.

Marketed gas production in July totaled 385,432,917 mcf and reflected a 7.28 percent decrease from the July 1982 volume.

Marketed production is the gas left after liquid hydrocarbons have been separated on the lease from the "wet" gas that is usually produced at the wellhead. It also does not include gas that is reinjected into the producing reservoir to maintain gas pressure, gas that is used to fuel production-related equipment on the lease site or gas that is otherwise not marketed.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in July totaled 140,776,589 mcf and reflected a 9.57 percent decrease from the year-earlier month.

Texas gas production in July came from 235,178 oil and gas wells.

In June 1983, Texas wells produced 448,878,428 mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in June totaled 362,-837,690 mcf. June exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 133,710,721 mcf.

JUNE REFINING SUMMARY

Wallace announced 61 refineries in Texas processed 133,569,068 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during June. Through the first six months of 1983, Texas refineries processed 754,962,017 barrels of these materials.

The June volume compares to 137,828,193 barrels in May and 129,598,172 barrels in June 1982.

Texas refineries ran 101,865,395 barrels of crude oil in June compared to 103,836,094 barrels in May and 100,884,869 barrels in June 1982.

Products manufactured in June totaled 134,820,827 barrels, down from 136,550,112 barrels in May and up from 132,906,431 barrels in June 1982.

June manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 60,003,302 barrels, compared to 59,243,064 barrels in May and 59,107,381 barrels in June of 1982.

Texas refineries manufactured 9,144,055 barrels of home heating oil in June — a decrease of 1,639,955 barrels from the May volume. June 1982 output was 12,115,502 barrels.

Rachel Garcia is doing just what she wants to do

By PAT BLAIR
Managing editor

"Wife . . . mother . . . nurse . . ." That's how Rachel Garcia describes herself. To those could be added "city commission member . . . election judge . . . former county commission candidate . . ."

A native of Corpus Christi, Rachel has lived in Rockport 26 years, following her marriage. "My husband was born and raised here — his father, Steve Garcia, was one of the first Mexican-Americans here."

The Garcias' home on South Mathis Street was an old Baptist Mission. They converted it into a five-bedroom, two-bath house, added a garage and a fence — "but we tried not to change it too much," Rachel adds.

It was here that the Garcias raised their eight children. Three of their children are married now — and Rachel has three grandchildren — but three are still at home: Mark, 16; Brenda, 12; and Joanna, 10. Her home is filled with photos of her children and grandchildren, the awards and trophies they have won.

"As if raising eight kids wasn't enough work," Rachel has involved herself in outside work and community activities over the years. She worked for a local doctor for a while, then was employed at the old nursing home that used to be here.

"I went to work for the nursing home six months before it was blown off by a hurricane," Rachel said. "I felt when I was working there, I was really doing something — I felt sad when it was gone."

Her children were still young and needed her home at that time, she said, and she felt for that reason she couldn't transfer to the nursing home in Aransas Pass, so she moved on to other jobs.

For five years, she was employed by the Aransas County Family Planning Program, and for the past year and a half she's been with the Texas Department of Public Health. "I'm classified as CSA II — I work in the lab, take blood pressures, assist the nurse and doctors that come in . . .

"I work 40 hours a week," she adds, "then I come home to wash and clean and everything else . . ."

But she enjoys her work. "I like working with people. I feel it's something. People need to feel like they're welcome when they come in," she said. "I try to do that."

Rachel has been a member of Rockport's city planning and zoning commission for two and a half years. "It's a job I've enjoyed very much." Like the other members of the commission, she's currently involved in work on a new two-year master plan for the city.

She has worked in city elections for six years. "I started out as a clerk — they asked me to help that year," she recalls. "I guess they liked what I did. From then on, I've been an election judge every year — except one year when I was sick."

Not too long ago, she ran for county commission — and is debating whether, in this coming year, she wants to try again. "I haven't decided if I should run or not," she said, "but I like being involved in politics." She's a member of the Democratic party.

She's also a member of the PTA association and the Rockport-Fulton Band Boosters and a past secretary for the local Pentecostal church.

"I love to sew," she said, "and I love to go bicycle riding." In keeping with Gov. Mark White's recently-declared "Walk Across Texas" campaign, Rachel said she and her coworkers at the health department this week began their own 14-week campaign to walk, run or jog three times a week for an hour.

"We keep a log," she said, "and on Jan. 25 (the end of the 14 weeks), we see how we feel. So," she laughs, "I have to reserve an hour now for that. But I feel it's a good program."

While growing up in Corpus Christi, Rachel attended Del Mar. Now she takes night courses on subjects she believes will benefit her in her jobs. "I took a venetech course — now I'm able to draw blood," she said.

She's taken courses in bookkeeping and from National Family Planning — including a course in which she became certified to teach breast self-examination — and, of course, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

"It's mandatory that we know CPR," she said, "because we never know when we might need it." She also plans to take some courses in childbirth soon.

Although she hasn't yet had to deliver, or assist in the delivery of a child, "we've come pretty close."

Despite all her activities, Rachel says, "I don't run a real exciting life."

But she's doing what she wants to do.

New procedure developed for saving newborns in respiratory distress

A new procedure which may save the lives of newborns who are in respiratory failure and would otherwise have a 90 percent chance of not surviving, has been used successfully at the Ochsner Foundation Hospital in New Orleans by pediatric surgeon Dr. Robert M. Arensman.

It is called extracorporeal cardiopulmonary bypass with membrane oxygenation, or ECMO. It not only gives the newborn infant an opportunity to keep his lungs at rest, but it also provides the proper conditions for the lungs to begin healing themselves, says Dr. Arensman, who also supervised some of of animal studies for the new procedure done in Ochsner's Richard W. Freeman Research Institute.

ECMO uses a heart-lung machine similar to those used adults by surgeons in coronary bypass surgery. Two tubes are inserted into the chest via the artery in the neck. The blood is then pumped out to an external artificial lung where it is oxygenated, reheated and returned to the baby's body. It requires only local anesthesia at the time of insertion of the tubes, and soon the baby is awake throughout the procedure which may take several days. Up until now, babies in respiratory failure were given conventional ventilator therapy which could not perform the vital function of oxygenating the blood flow and in some cases carried with it the possibility of permanent lung damage, Dr. Arensman points out.

The medical center using ECMO must be prepared to commit large segments of time and other resources because while the infant is on ECMO, he requires the services of both a round-the-clock doctor and nurse or technician to supervise the treatment. In addition, there must exist close cooperation between the surgical staff, the perfusionist, the blood bank, the neonatologists and the respiratory therapists.

The baby treated at Ochsner was born at Bogalusa Charity hospital and brought immediately to Ochsner because he was suffering from "meconium aspiration," a common occurence in which the baby, inhales amniotic fluid which ahs been contaminated with his own waste matter. The result of this event is usually respiratory failure.

"When he was brought in, the prognosis for survival was less than 10 percent. Now, because he has made steady progress, the odds have been significantly increased," Dr. Arensman explains. The baby was on the ECMO system for more than 100 hours before being removed and able to breathe on his own.

Eighth grade team ends season

The Rockport-Fulton eighth grade girls' "A" volleyball team has ended its 1983 season — without losing a game. The team's final contest of the season Monday night in Tuloso-Midway ended up 15-9, 15-9 in R-F's favor and was the last in a long streak of wins that began in September.

The team is coached by Sharon Figart. "Of course I'm extremely pleased by their performance," says Figart. "I have to give a lot of credit to their seventh grade coach last year, Miss (Jan) Chesbro. She did a good job with them."

Figart adds, "They're just an outstanding group of kids. I'm heartsick about letting them go."

The eighth grade "A" team began its season Sept. 19 with a 15-8, 6-15, 15-5 win over Flour Bluff. In the following weeks came a win over Sinton 15-3, 15-8; a practice game victory over Gregory-Portland, 10-15, 15-5, 15-7; 15-8, 15-3 win against Tuloso-Midway; another win over Flour Bluff, 15-4, 13-15, 15-0 and Sinton's second defeat at the hands of R-F, 16-14, 15-4 two weeks ago.

Two tournaments were part of the junior high season, both won by the R-F eighth graders. The first, in Tuloso-Midway at the season's start, saw the team defeat T-M, St. Joseph's and Aransas Pass to take first place. On Oct. 8, the Sinton tourney was won by R-F after beating T-M, Sinton and Woodsboro.

Leading scorers for the "A" team were Tracy Kinsel, with a total of 107 points on her serves and Stacy Galbraith, with 105.

THE HIGH SCHOOL TENNIS TEAM is one win into its light fall season, beating the Port Aransas team last Wednesday 11-7 in 18-point dual match play. In this type of play, six singles are played, followed by three doubles matches in both boys' and girls' divisions. Teams get one point for each win. Coached by Art Weiss, the R-F team will play Gregory-Portland Tuesday. Six more matches remain in the fall tennis season. Their only tournament of the fall season will be Nov. 4-5 in Port Lavaca. Shown above in the top photo are varsity girls (front row, l to r) Stacey Johnson, Richanne Giller, Kim Britzius, Erica Chupe, Mary Gonzales, Inasia Contreras, Kathy Carter (back) Laura Pogue, Audra Ballou, Lorena Short, Cindy Sbrusch, Jenny Davis, Jennifer Heldenfels and Coach Weiss. Ducks Unlimited raises $100,000 for waterfowl

The Rockport-Fulton chapter of Ducks Unlimited Inc. raised nearly $120,000 at its annual banquet, dance and auction last Saturday night. According to DU spokesmen, after expenses the chapter expects to clear over $100,000 toward ongoing DU funding for preservation of wetland habitat to increase waterfowl propagation.

Saturday's event at the Paws and Taws Building was attended by several hundred and was the most successful in the chapter's six-year history. DU committee members responsible for the affair included Howard Brown, Jay Watkins, Stormy Reeves, Herb Booth, DU treasurer Eddie Ratliff and James Fox.

Also, Al Barnes, Jody Roquette, DU vice president Ronny Barker, Jerry Shaw, Vernon Townsend, Louis Guido, DU president Jim Friebele, Bob Dziuk, Roy Smith, Carol Kelley, Gordon Eckert and Allen Cessac.

James Richard Fox was the master of ceremonies Saturday and music was provided by Sam Neeley. In addition to the awarding of door prizes donated by local merchants and individuals, bidding in a silent auction took place, plaques were presented and a live auction proceeded. Following the live auction, DU members and guests enjoyed dancing.

Since its inception in 1937, Ducks Unlimited Inc. has donated some $164 million in conservation dollars to preserve and enlarge valuable Canadian wetlands which serve as the nesting grounds for much of the North American waterfowl. DU funds are also used in the revitalization of Mexico's Lerma Marshes, wintering habitat of thousands of ducks. Also funded by DU are numerous research projects, water control structures and other factors vital to the continued growth of the waterfowl population.

Sea Gun — 729-2341 — Another good week for the charters. Plenty of trout and the sheepshead are beginning to run. Some flounder, too. Bait supply good for the weekend.

Palm Harbor — 729-8540 — "It's been real, real good this week — every day." Nice redfish and trout off flats on live bait, gold and bronze spoon and the well-known and successful purple worm. Plenty of live bait for the weekend.

Fulton Harbor Bait — 729-8532 — "Average to mediocre." Flounder and trout off the seawall in the early mornings. Trout in the evenings off the pier. Plenty of golden croakers. Things should pick up when the tide goes out. Plenty of live bait for the weekend.

Sandollar — 729-8562 — Catching flounder and specks in the early morning (1 a.m. till daylight). Live bait supply is good and there should be plenty for the weekend.

Bon appetit!

By ANN THOMAS

Halloween is traditionally a time for leaving the "real world" for a few hours and living in a make-believe one. It seems like Christmas, a time when people of all ages enjoy the revelry of the evening. Today we have some recipes and ideas which may be used in preparation of that holiday.

If you were to entertain with a cookout you might serve hot cider, soft drinks, frank kabobs, sloppy joes in pita bread, chips and dips, popcorn balls, caramel apples and haunted house cookies. What would be a better setting than a bonfire on a crisp, dark night with the sound of leaves rustling and the clouds sailing past the moon causing shadows to take on a life of their own? Guests could help in cooking the kabobs, bob for apples later and dip them in the warm caramel at the bonfire. And wouldn't it be fun to sit around the fire and either have a sing-along or tell ghost stories?

If guests are in costume give a prize for the scariest, funniest and most original. Two lines could be formed and see which team could pass the wicky wacky whatsit the fastest . . . without using any hands because it has to be held under the chin and given to the next person in line in that manner. If it's dropped it goes back to the first person in line. Sound easy? Just try it! If teenagers are present then, of necessity, you must have some good music so they can dance.

HOT CIDER

Make this 2 to 3 days ahead of time and heat it just before serving. Serves about 20 people, but can easily be doubled.

- 2 quarts sweet cider
- 4 3-inch sticks cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon whole cloves
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- ½ teaspoon allspice

Combine all the ingredients, simmer for 30 minutes, then refrigerate.

FRANK KABOBS

Depending upon the number of people and the size of their appetites you may want to increase this recipe

- ½ pound franks cut into 4-inch chunks
- 1 large can pineapple chunks, drained, and reserve juice
- 1 large sweet onion, cut in chunks
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 tablespoon mustard
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce

Alternate the first 3 ingredients on skewers. Mix the remaining ingredients and marinate kabobs until time to cook them. Broil for 5-8 minutes. Baste with marinade mixture when needed to keep moist. Serve in rolls.

SLOPPY JOES

This will fill 8 pita pockets. Warm the mixture in a saucepan when ready to serve and fill the pockets only as needed to prevent a soggy sandwich.

- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ bell pepper, diced
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 16-ounce can tomatoes, chopped
- 1 tablespoon mustard
- 1 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 teaspoon salt

Cook the beef, bell peppers and onion until the onion is tender. Drain off excess grease and add the remaining ingredients. Simmer until thick.

POPCORN BALLS

- ½ pound popcorn
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup white corn syrup
- 1 3-ounce box orange Jell-O

Prepare the popcorn as directed. Place in a large heatproof bowl. In a saucepan bring remaining ingredients to a bowl while stirring to dissolve the sugar and Jell-O. Quickly pour over the popped corn and mix to cover it well. Butter your hands slightly and make 18 popcorn balls. Wrap them in Saran wrap to prevent their becoming sticky.

CARAMEL APPLES

You can prepare the caramel at home and take to the cookout with skewers so guests can dip their own.

- 1 can sweetened condensed milk
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 6 medium apples and skewers

Mix first five ingredients and cook until it comes to a boil, then cook on low for about 30 minutes or until it almost forms a thread. Remove from heat and at the cookout site heat it slowly and remove from the fire when a thread forms.

HAUNTED HOUSE COOKIES

This makes 3 dozen and takes about 3 minutes to make and at least that long to eat.

- 2 cups sugar
- ½ cup milk
- 1 cup oleo
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 cups quick cooking oats
- ½ cup peanut butter
- 1 cup nuts, chopped

Combine sugar, milk and oleo and heat to boiling. Remove from heat and add remaining ingredients and stir until peanut butter melts. Drop by spoonful onto waxed paper.

Now you're all set for a party. Have fun! Bon appetit!.

Tasty Mexican Pie is perfect for festive occasions

For a unique celebration that blends in the Mexican fiesta theme, serve this tasty Mexican Pie. Seasoned ground beef and sliced ripe olives fill a pie crust made quickly and easily with Potato Buds mashed potatoes. The crust is made by pressing the potato mixture in a pie plate. Topped with shredded cheese, this delicious dish is sure to win an ole!

MEXICAN PIE

- Betty Crocker Potato Buds mashed potatoes (enough for four servings)
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- ¼ cup sliced green onions (with tops)
- 2 tablespoons dairy sour cream

- 1 small green pepper, chopped (about ½ cup)
- 1 medium onion, chopped (about ½ cup)
- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- ¼ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
- 2 to 3 teaspoons chili powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 large clove garlic, crushed
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese (about 4 ounces)

Stir in egg, green onions and sour cream. Press potato mixture against bottom and side of pie plate. Prick bottom and side with fork. Bake 15 minutes.

Cook and stir ground beef, green pepper and chopped onion in 10-inch skillet until beef is brown; drain. Stir in remaining ingredients except cheese. Texas pumpkins well worth the preparation effort

When B.A. Robertson began harvesting pumpkins in 1956, he was — as far as he can recollect — the first commercial pumpkin farmer in West Texas. Back then, people from all over Floyd County would come to see his fields of gold-orange orbs, standing around as if in wait for the Great Pumpkin.

Robertson, 79, started with three acres at the request of a Dallas friend who wanted to sell pumpkins at his roadside stands. By the time Robertson retired, he was raising 110 acres and had sold pumpkins as far north as Wichita and as far west as Phoenix.

Other farmers, taking Robertson's lead, also began sowing their fields with pumpkin seeds. Acreage grew until pumpkins became a good business in parts of West Texas — at least for one month of the year. Though statewide totals are not available, Bailey County, west of Robertson's home in Floydada, is expected to harvest 10-15 million pounds this season. Pumpkins are still raised in Floyd as well as Deaf Smith, Parmer and Lamb counties.

Many of these pumpkins are sold in-state, most to become jack-o-lanterns. Eighty percent of the fresh market pumpkins harvested in the United States are sold at Halloween, and the Texas variety is no exception. The remaining "pie pumpkins," some as small as four or five pounds, are sold for food.

Though any size pumpkin is edible, small ones have sweeter, more finely textured meat and a distinctive flavor that cannot be matched by canned pumpkin. According to Texas Department of Agriculture home economists, the extra effort that it takes to prepare the fresh product will yield worthwhile results. Here is how to do it.

If pumpkins are to ce carved, their meat can be removed and set aside for cooking. Place the meat in a large saucepan and cook it in a small amount of water for 25-30 minutes or until it is very tender. Drain the pumpkin and mash it well or puree it in an electric blender. Pumpkins bought strictly for food can be baked in the oven. Wash the rind well and cut it in half. Place the cut sides down on a 15 by 10 by 1-inch jellyroll pan and bake for 45 minutes or until the meat is fork tender. Cool for 10 minutes, peel, discard the seeds and puree the pulp. Three pounds of fresh pumpkin will yield about three cups of cooked, mashed pulp.

Try your fresh pumpkin in a recipe that kids are bound to enjoy.

CHOCOLATE CHIP PUMPKIN SQUARES

- 2¼ cups flour
- 2¼ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 4 beaten eggs
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 2 cups cooked, mashed, fresh pumpkin
- 1 cup chocolate chips

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Grease 9 by 13 by 2-inch baking pan. Sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, cinnamon and nutmeg.

Beat eggs in another bowl. Add granulated sugar, brown sugar, shortening, pumpkin. Mix well. Add flour mixture to sugar mixture. Blend. Add chocolate chips.

Pour mixture into pan. Bake 45 minutes. Allow to cool 15 minutes and cut into squares. Makes 25 servings.

Frosted Pear Bars make a nutritious snack for kids

Treat the kids with Frosted Pear Bars and a tall glass of cold milk for a wonderful after-school snack. The time is right to try them, too, because the season for fresh Pacific Mountain Bartletts extends into December.

These spicy bars containing fresh pears, chopped nuts, raisins and eggs, are topped with a smooth cream cheese frosting. They are perfect for snacking and can also be used for a late-summer tailgate picnic. Simply transport to the picnic site in a flat, covered container.

Pacific Mountain Bartletts lend moistness and flavor to a wide variety of homebaked treats. They are also great in salads, pastries, deserts and entrees. Or, eat fresh Bartletts out-of-hand and enjoy their natural refreshing sweetness.

When ripe, fresh Bartletts will yield to gentle pressure at the stem end, and will turn a sunshine yellow, or in the case of the Red Bartlett, a bright crimson. Refrigerate ripe pears until ready to enjoy.

FROSTED PEAR BARS

- 2 fresh Pacific Mountain Bartlett pears
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2½ cups flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1 teaspoon each salt and ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- ½ cup each raisins and chopped walnuts
- Cream Cheese Frosting recipe to follow

Core and finely chop pears to equal 2 cups. Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add eggs one at a time and mix well. Combine flour, soda, salt and spices; add to creamed mixture. Stir in pears, raisins and nuts. Turn into greased and floured 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Cool and frost with Cream Cheese Frosting. Makes about 2 dozen bars. Per bar: approximately 253 calories, 3 grams protein, 7 g. fat, 46 g. carbohydrates, 1 g. fiber, 37 milligrams cholesterol and 148 mg. sodium.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

Cream together 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Mix in about 2 cups powdered sugar or until spreading consistency. Makes ¾ cup.

Herbal teas are free of caffeine

Today, with people becoming more health conscious, there's lots of talk about caffeine-free beverages, such as herbal teas. But, as usually happens with trends, there's also a lot of confusing and conflicting information. To help, we've collected a list of frequently asked questions about herbal teas and provided answers straight from a well-known manufacturer.

Herbal teas are made with all-natural ingredients that come from the leaves, flowers, bark, seeds, stems and roots of plants. Many of these ingredients are the same spices and herbs found on your kitchen shelf.

Regular tea is actually black tea, while herbal teas contain none of these leaves. This means herbal teas contain no caffeine and have a more delicate color and flavor than regular tea. Yet, these relaxing hot beverages have full, gentle tastes and aromas.

It is wise to use caution if purchasing herbs in bulk form from health food stores or using those grown in the wild, because some herbs can present health hazards if used in excessive amounts or if they are incorrectly identified.

Of course, major well-known herbal tea manufacturers do not use herbs of questionable safety. Most herbal teas contain ingredients such as alfalfa, barley, cinnamon, chamomile, chicory and lemon grass, none of which are associated with any special health hazards. So, you can be sure of a safe, reliable product.

Herbal teas are now conveniently packaged in individual tea bags for ease in preparation. Choose from relaxing varieties such as almond, cinnamon apple, orange, chamomile and spice. Then, simply pour boiling water over one bag per cup and brew for approximately three minutes. If desired, serve with honey or other sweetener. The perfect wind-down beverage!

These good-tasting beverages are also delicious when served as an iced beverage. Simply brew three tea bags for five minutes for every two glasses of iced herbal tea. Sweeten to taste and pour into ice-filled glasses. So refreshing!

'83 changes averted Social Security crisis

By ERIC R. KINGSON
(Fourth of 14 parts)

SOCIAL SECURITY And you

Social Security's retirement, survivors' and disability programs are, as best as anyone can project, financially sound through at least 2057.

Social Security has four trust funds. Three — the Old-Age and Survivors' Insurance (OASI) trust fund, the Disability Insurance (DI) trust fund and the Hospital Insurance (HI) trust fund — are financed almost entirely from payroll taxes. Funds for the fourth, the Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI) trust fund come from premiums paid by beneficiaries, which cover about 25 percent of the cost and from general revenues.

In 1983, workers make payroll tax contributions of 6.7 percent on earnings up to $35,700 and employers match these contributions. Self-employed people also pay a tax on their income. In 1983, about 4.8 percent of your paycheck was allocated to OASI, 0.6 percent to DI and 1.3 percent to HI.

These funds are used only for benefits and administration (about 1.5 percent of the total). Because Social Security has been primarily a pay-as-you-go system, most of the money put into trust funds is paid out in benefits.

Each year Social Security's board of trustees (the Labor, and Health and Human Services) issues a report on the financial status of the trust funds. This year's report indicates the retirement, survivors' and disability programs are actuarily sound at least through 2057.

Through 1987, the reserves of the OASI trust fund are relatively low, making them vulnerable to a severe economic downturn. After 1987, these reserves are expected to build up rapidly, providing a large buffer against future downturns.

Medicare's Supplementary Medical Insurance trust fund is adequately financed, but problems are projected for the Hospital Insurance trust fund around the beginning of the next decade.

Social Security's actuaries use economic and demographic trends to forecast the future status of the trust funds. They make different forecasts based on optimistic, intermediate and pessimistic assumptions.

Last year the actuaries projected both a short-term financing problem from 1983 through 1989 and a long-term problem through 2056 in the cash benefit programs. Fortunately, because of the 1983 amendments, these deficits are no longer expected.

Here's what was projected last year under the most commonly accepted intermediate assumptions. From 1982 through 1989 a shortfall of roughly $75 billion — about 5 percent of anticipated outlays — was projected. This could be explained almost entirely by the economic problems of recent years.

It was projected that from 1990 until 2015 large surpluses would accumulate in the cash programs. However, beginning about 2015, the cash programs would start spending more money each year that they took in, although anticipated surpluses would be sufficient to carry the program until 2025. After 2025, large deficits were projected. The projected long-term deficit represented about 13 percent of anticipated program expenditures from 1982 through 2056.

The cause of the perceived long-term problem was primarily demographic trends. Americans are living longer and the aged population is increasing. At the peak of the retirement of the post-World War II baby boom generation, about 18 percent of Americans are expected to be 65 and over. Today, the figure is 11 percent. Also, families are smaller than they were in the 1950s and 1960s. So, relatively fewer young workers are expected to make payroll tax contributions to support future beneficiaries.

There are some offsetting factors. The ratio of what's generally considered the working-age population (20-64) to the aged (65 and over) and the young (under 20) is expected to remain fairly stable over the next 75 years. When the baby boom generation is retired, program costs as a percentage of gross national product are not expected to be that much different from what they are today. Finally, even cautious economists expect the economy will grow. A small portion of this growth could go for Social Security.

The 1983 amendments addressed the problems with the financing of Social Security. Their enactment showed again that Social Security is just too important for Congress to ever allow it to be so much as a little late in meeting its monthly commitments.

where necessary on the storage building; rehanging the storage room door; installation of a gutter on the north side of the building; painting the entire outside of the station except for tne metal building; painting all the new and old facings; repair and retexturing of walls and ceilings; and painting the inside of the recreation room, bathroom and kitchen.

Casterline announced a public hearing on the need for a comprehensive study of the feasibility of a wastewater treatment plant for the town of Fulton. Representatives of Triad Engineering of Austin will be on hand Monday evening, Oct. 24,to discuss the study with council members and answer questions.

The council approved a resolution casting 20 votes in the election for appraisal district directors. Ten of Fulton's votes went to Peggy Bloch with the other 10 going to Elaine Faulkner. Fulton's votes will be totaled along with those from the City of Rockport, the Aransas County Independent School District, the Aransas County commissioners court and the Aransas County Navigation District in order to elect five directors for the 1984-85 term. Aside from Faulkner and Bloch, those on the ballot include Lenora Beck, Gordon K. Eckert, Albert H. Johnson, D.H. Roberts and Tom Rogers.

In other action Tuesday night, First National Bank was accepted as depository for the period extending from Nov. 1 of this year until Oct. 31, 1985. First National offered interest rates of 8 percent on time deposits of $1,000 or more but less than $100,000 for a period of 30 days or more; 10 percent on amounts of $2,500 or more but less than $100,000 for a period of 182 days; and 10.25 percent on amounts of $100,000 or more for a period of 30 days or more. The bank also offered a short-term lending rate of 9 percent per annum.

The third and final readings were held of the town's subdivision ordinance and the effective tax rate of 3½ cents per $100 valuation. Both were accepted by the council.

Any action on the bait-concession stand a L.E. Casterline Fishing Pier has been tabled for a two-week period while the Walter McMillan family evaluates its offer to lease the stand.

Council members will continue discussion of a place to store the town parade float. Prior to the time the float was built, County Commissioner Mike Womack told the council there was a possibility that the float could be stored at the Aransas County Airport. According to Alderman Leslie Cole, Womack ha since told him that there is no space available at the airport. The float is temporarily being housed in one of the stalls at the Fulton Fire Station. However, the department has had to park one truck outside to make room for the float.

Lease

club, the art association, Paws & Taws . . ."

Augustine pointed out the navigation district has no power now to increase the lease fees established by the leases with the art association and Paws & Taws and at one point observed he "would certainly like to see a fair return on the art association and Paws & Taws lease."

The woman's club gained support from members of the Aransas County Taxpayers' Association (ACTA) present at the meeting, who said they could understand the district's need to increase their revenues but felt it was unfair to begin with the woman's club.

"We're not picking on the woman's club per se," Dominguez told those at the meeting. "It's necessity — we need more money."

One woman's club member observed that the club donates money annually to the Aransas County Public Library — which they founded — the fire departments, Aransas County Medical Services Inc. and other area organizations and services.

"Except for money to pay for the upkeep of the building," she said, "every bit of the money we raise goes back to the community."

"I realize that," Augustine said, "but only $1 comes back to us (the ACND)."

At this point, Maguglin said, "I can appreciate Commissioner Augustine's study and input, but my motion (to grant the 20-year lease at $1 per year) still stands." In the vote then taken, he and McKnight voted for the motion and Dominguez and Augustine voted against.

This vote was followed by additional discussion during which Maguglin pointed out the woman's club does not have a tax exempt number and so pays taxes on their property. The art association, he said, has a tax exempt number and does not pay taxes.

Dominguez said the question of raising additional recreation revenues will be brought up at the district's Nov. 1 meeting and indicated the district will discuss all of the proposals presented by Augustine at the Oct. 4 meeting.

"The biggest mistake the navigation district could make," Maguglin said, "is to put a price on that little portion of land that the woman's club can't afford. I don't feel we should take anything away from the community and we would (by increasing the woman's club lease)."

Augustine responded, "I voted against 20 years at $1 a year. That doesn't mean I'm against giving them (the woman's club) the lease. The only thing I'm saying is, we got to start someplace (to increase revenues) and where do we start? What I voted against was 20 years at $1 a year. My conscience won't let me do it."

Commissioner McKnight made the next motion, to grant the woman's club a five-year lease at $1 a year, but withdrew it after club members expressed dissatisfaction with that offer.

Club members then expressed a willingness to accept an increased lease figure of $100 a year, and Maguglin moved to grant a 20-year lease for that payment. McKnight seconded that motion which was then tied 2-2 in the vote with Augustine and Dominguez again casting the nays. Following the vote, Dominguez said "It will be on the agenda at the next meeting."

In other action during Tuesday's session, the ACND commissioners voted approval of the district's payment of $5,000 toward the cost of maintenance dredging of Blevins Harbor.

The Key Allegro Canal Owners Association has agreed to sponsor the project, according to McKnight.

The commissioners granted permission to Bill N. Johnson Inc. at Cove Harbor to sublease a portion of his lease at the harbor's south levee. Also approved, pending submission of drawn plans, was a request by Kirk Holman, Fulton Harbor Bait Stand, to make improvements to the bulkhead under his facility. The commissioners also clarified a point brought up by Holman, telling him that any unauthorized person who docks at his slip in Fulton Harbor must get a permission slip from the navigation district office or the harbormaster.

Commissioners approved the purchase of two riding mowers from Western Auto at a cost of $1,449.95 each minus $699.90 trade-in — making the total cost of the mowers $2,200.

John Jackson of Jackson Seafood appeared before the navigation district to ask why his request of Oct. 4 — for electrical and water service to Jackson's lease — had not been placed on Tuesday night's agenda. He was told in order to get the request placed on the agenda, he needed to make a formal request at the ACND office during its regular busines hours.

Sales

Statewide, Bullock said, the October 1983 sales tax payments to the 924 cities that levy the one percent tax were 7.2 percent higher than October 1982 but the year-to-date totals overall were less than for the same period in 1982.

"We're looking at areas that still have economic problems," Bullock said, "and other areas that show some economic growth. But taken as a whole, nobody's going anywhere — up or down — very fast."

Total sales tax monies returned to the 924 cities in October was just over $38.2 million, approximately $3 million more than for October 1982, but the year-to-date revenues returned statewide — just over $571.3 million — are .77 percent less than last year.

Bonds

ly need $1 million (to fund improvements to the harbors) so please don't go less than five ($500,000), fellas. If we can go four, I know we can go five."

As finally moved by Maguglin and seconded by McKnight during the regular meeting, the commissioners voted to proceed with issue of $500,000 in revenue bonds with a 15-year payoff schedule but with a clause that would allow the district to pay off the bonded indebtedness in 10 years if they so decide.

The revenue bonds will be paid off through revenues raised through the district's harbor operations and will not require use of tax monies.

Testimony to Congress

Wallace recommends Texas gas regulation system

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman, Mack Wallace has chided Congress for its inability to solve the nation's natural gas problems and suggested the federal government look at Texas' system of gas regulation for managing gas resources on the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS).

In testimony prepared for a hearing on OCS gas and gas prorationing conducted by the House Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels, Wallace told congressmen the states aren't responsible for the present turmoil in the nation's natural gas markets.

"You need not look to state systems of proration and ratable take to find causes for the nation's inability to solve its natural gas problems," the Wallace statement said. "Congress must look to its own back door to see the effect the NGPA (Natural Gas Policy Act) has had in creating the price differential problems of which you complain."

Wallace praised Texas' system of correlating natural gas production to market demand and said a similar system would be beneficial in developing the nation's OCS gas reserves.

"The Texas system has worked well for over six decades, during times of both shortage and surplus, and continues to work toward a fair and equitable balance between the interests of the consumers, producers, pipelines and royalty owners," Wallace said.

The key to the Texas gas proration system is flexibility, according to Wallace. Each month, purchasers submit nominations of their requirements for gas - their market demand. Producers also submit monthly their forecasts of production.

Taking this data and using semi-annual well test results, the Commission then determines the total estimated market demand for gas in each field in the state. allowable production for each individual well is then set by dividing the field's allowable up equitably among producers.

The system's flexibility comes into play when actual market conditions change between the time purchaser nominations are filed and the time gas is actually taken from the fields. To meet demand which rises above or falls below anticipated levels, the Commission allows a pipeline to take production in excess of, or below, its wells' assigned allowables — within certain limitations. The over or under production is carried forward and made up when market conditions permit.

"By our system of ratable takes," Wallace said, "the state seeks to assure that all producers have the opportunity to sell their fair share of gas, whether the market is large or small."

In addition to preventing waste of a valuable resource by overproduction, the Texas proration system has other important advantages, Wallace said. First, it ensures that a well will not be shut in unfairly and that a producer will be able to maintain the cash flow necessary to provide for future production.

The guarantee that a producer will have access to a market for this gas encourages new exploration and thus continued supplies. "The continuing decline of production from existing wells makes this feature of the Texas system a highly important one," he said.

Natural gas consumers benefit because abuses which have plagued the interstate market are stymied by the Texas approach. It does not allow shutting-in of wells producing lower priced gas in favor of wells producing more expensive gas, which may be subject to high take-or-pay contracts.

Wallace attacked the myth that state regulatory systems inhibit market pressures and competition in times of gas surplus. Wallace emphasized that "Texas ratable take orders do not tell pipelines how much total gas to purchase or at what price, but rather solely direct that pipelines take whatever gas they purchase ratably (equitably) from all wells within a filed and between fields when the pipeline's system covers more than one field.

"The system, in face, can accurately be said to be 'blind' to price: high priced and low priced gas are treated exactly alike, both when production exceeds allowables and when it is less."

The guarantee that individual producers will continue to get their fair share of a reduced market in times of surplus is vital to continued gas supplies, Wallace said. "Were a producer denied access to markets in times of surplus, his incentive to explore would be diminished, if not destroyed. The Texas rules thus assure that adequate supplies will exist when demand once again increases."

Wallace decried the jumbled federal management of OCS gas production and suggested it be replaced with a Texas-style market demand proration system. "Since the Railroad Commission's ratable take orders benefit consumers, producers, pipelines and royalty owners, why should not the federal government as regulator and royalty owner similarly prevent waste, protect interstate consumers from take-or-pay, and prevent drainage and discrimination?" Wallace asked.

He said current minimum take provisions in OCS contracts as high as 95 percent discriminate against onshore production and probably cause waste. He said, "Individual fields may be depleted far sooner than is necessary. Such waste from the OCS is foolhardy and shortsighted."

Wallace noted that current OCS production rates leave no margin of supply for emergencies brought about by severe weather or alternative fuel supply disruptions.

The Railroad Commission has successfully regulated natural gas for 64 years, benefiting consumers, producers, pipelines and royalty owners, by encouraging exploration, preventing waste, and protecting correlative rights, Wallace statement concluded.

The names of fish, especially saltwater species, can often throw the fisherman for a loop. Texas Parks and Wildlife Department fishery technician Marshall Smith said some species can have as many as a half-dozen locally used names, depending on the region.

To help identify fish the American Fisheries Society has published the "List of Common and Scientific Names of Fishes from the United States and Canada."

YOU AND YOUR HEALTH

by Peter J. Esse, M.D.

Dear Dr. Esse: I'm in a dilemma many thousands of other wives would cherish. My husband has made enough money to retire. He's only 48 but wants to quit before age 50. Our two children are married. Nothing keeps us here except old friends who still have to work and stay around. I'm healthy and so's my husband. But what concerns me is if he will stay healthy after he retires. The horrid stories I hear about what befalls early retirees scares me. Is it true he is likely to die sooner if he quits work so early? I'd certainly rather him continue working than invite illness. Do you think I'm worrying unnecessarily? Mrs. N.

Dear Mrs. N.: As you say, what a dilemma — comparative youth, good health and a lot of money. Nevertheless, you may have reason to be concerned about your husband's early retirement. Probably you've heard a lot about men prematurely "withering on the vine" and dying early. But there are other ways: sudden exodus due to heart attacks and other acute illness. Each retiree is a problem unto himself. None is similar. Your husband will have to face up to himself honestly and answer questions. Have I prepared myself for early retirement? Do I think I could exist happily on a regime of daily golf, or just sitting around waiting for something exciting to happen? Preparation for retirement should begin early. It should be planned. The retiree needs to have absorbing interests and hobbies to take the place of daily work habits. I've known early retirees who have prepared, who lived into their 80s. Others, unprepared, either withered or died suddenly.

Parson Jones

We've finally come up with a disease spelled "AIDS". As I understand, it plays havoc with our immunity system. I went to sleep the other night pondering this and I had a medical dream.

The Surgeon General had become co-equal ruler with the President because of the growing concern over health hazards in the U.S. An eerie silence had settled over the Congress since the death of a senator. It seems he cut his throat with his own sharp tongue! Never before had such a possibility been considered. Because the Capitol was a high risk area, the President had been whisked away to a turkey farm for protection. In his absence, the Surgeon General moved swiftly to declare all that was dangerous to one's health as "Dangerous to One's Health!" Signs had to be plastered on everything that was suspect.

I saw sharply dressed ladies in high heels with this warning on their shoes, "High Heels, dangerous to your health." "This is too much!," I said, as I entered a restaurant for dinner. When they brought my fish, there it was ..."Fish Bones Are Dangerous To Your Health." So, I left the bones in the fish and exited.

The churches were not untouched by the fear labels. Plastered across church buildings were such warnings as "Hate is dangerous to your health!", "Greed causes heart attacks!", and "Fear brings strokes!". "Great Guns!" I shouted, as I returned to the world of reality.

I'm glad I woke up when I did!

Costa Rican birding expedition set

KINGSVILLE — A 15-day nature expedition to Costa Rica to study the bird and plant communities of Central America has been scheduled for March 17-31 by Texas A&I University's Center for Continuing Education.

Welder Wildlife Foundation curator of natural history Gene W. Blacklock and Scott and Joan Holt, research scientists for the University of Texas Marine Science Institute at Port Aransas, will lead the expedition.

Participants will spend four days at the La Selva Field Station operated by the Organization for Tropical Studies. More than 389 bird species have been observed along the network of trails on about 1,400 acres of tropical forest. The green ibis, king vulture, black hawk-eagle, parrots, owls, hummingbirds and many other species are found there.

The next stop will be the Poas Volcano, an area of a dwarf cloud forest, habitat to some 80 birds.

A two-day stop at the Monteverde Preserve, a 7,400-acre forest traversed by the Continental Divide, is next on the itinerary. Animals and birds of special interest include the howler and white-faced monkey, agouti, Brocket deer, magnificent quetzel, prong-billed barbet, ruddy treerunner, keel-billed toucan, several hummingbirds and more.

Participants will also visit the Santa Rosa National Park outside La Pacifica, the Cerro de la Muerte near San Jose, and areas around San Isidro.

The $1,200 tour package includes round trip air fare from Corpus Christi, group transportation in Costa Rica, all hotel and lodge accommodations (double occupancy) and meals at La Selva and Monteverde.

Enrollment is limited to 15. Reservations, including a $200 deposit, should be made as soon as possible to ensure space. For details write Continuing Education at Campus Box 147, Texas A&I University, Kingsville 78363, or call (512) 595-2861.

Worst of recession may be over

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock told Texas officials this week the worst of the economic recession is over in Texas but the state treasury shouldn't expect any windfalls.

Bullock released a revised estimate of available revenues to top state officials and members of the Legislature.

"The worst of the state's economic slump is behind us," Bullock wrote state leaders. "However, there has been no dramatic overall change in the revenue estimate I gave you last May."

Bullock predicted Texas will have about $15 million more than necessary to meet state expenses when the current 1984-85 state budget ends on Aug. 31, 1985.

"That's a good deal better than the $36,866 left unspent at the end of the special legislative session last summer," Bullock said.

The adjusted revenue estimate shows oil severence tax receipts are higher than first estimated but this increase is offset by lower receipts from natural gas severence taxes.

Other factors which appear to be trade-outs, according to Bullock, include increased income from franchise taxes and insurance taxes but lower-than-expected sales tax receipts.

Bullock also knocked out $27 million in potential tax receipts as the result of credits allowed insurance companies to offset insured losses to Hurricane Alicia.

"There aren't any pennies from heaven in this economic forecast," Bullock said, "but there aren't any hailstones either."

Pizza everyone's favorite

Pizza is a favorite with kids of all ages. Prepare one package extra rich and thick spaghetti sauce mix using one can (1 pound) whole tomatoes, cut up and ¼ teaspoon garlic powder with parsley. Split four English muffins in half and broil until light brown. Spread 2 tablespoons of sauce on each muffin half, sprinkle with cheese and desired pizza toppings. Broil until bubbly and brown.

Fall is the time for garden cleanup

Editor's note: The following new column is written by members of Rockport's Home and Garden Club and will be a regular feature in the Pilot's weekend edition.

It's fall cleanup time. If you have not cleaned up your flower beds, disposed of diseased material, it is time to do so.

This is the time also to work manure and superphosphate or bonemeal into your beds and cut back perennials that have bloomed.

Roses should have already been fertilized. Dig up caladiums and gladiolus as taps die down. This is the time to divide and replant overcrowded bulbs and lilies.

It's time now to divide and replant perennials that bloom before June, plant early sweet peas and pansy plants — also any other seeds of hardy annuals.

This is the time to set out petunias for early bloom.

Theft of service occurs at airport

The bookkeeper at an airport aeronautical services firm reported theft of $112.07 to the Aransas County Sheriff's Department on Oct. 19.

The firm had accepted payment for services in the form of a check on Sept. 16. A stop payment order was issued on the check and attempts to contact the Victoria man who wrote the check have been unsuccessful. The case is under investigation.

Alvino Rios of Aransas Pass was the victim of a dog bite Wednesday, Oct. 19, as he picked up cans alongside FM 1069. Rios was treated at Medical Arts Clinic in Aransas Pass. The owner of the dog has agreed to confine and observe the animal for a period of 14 days.

Rockport men ordained to Permanent Deaconate

Two members of Rockport's Sacred Heart Catholic Church were ordained to the Permanent Deaconate in ceremonies last Saturday, Oct. 15, at the Corpus Christi Cathedral.

Ordained as part of a class of 19 by the new Bishop of Corpus Christi, Rene Gracida, were Jerre Ledbetter and Ciprian Martinez.

By virtue of this ordination, the two men will function as helpers at the local Catholic Church or on a Diocesan level and are now allowed to officiate at marriages and baptisms, to preach and to bring Holy Communion to the sick.

A number of people from Rockport attended the ordination ceremony.

Donations, volunteer workers needed for Methodist Bazaar

Donations for the "Buffeteria" and volunteer workers are being sought as the women of Rockport's First United Methodist Church prepare for the Nov. 9 Fall Bazaar.

The buffet-teria, to be in the church recreation room, will replace the sidewalk cafe featured by the bazaar in past years. Plans are to serve a chicken spaghetti lunch as well as snacks throughout the day-long event.

The bazaar will be styled as a mini-mall this year and will be in the Educational Building of the church. Booths will include the white elephant, chaired by Lois Odell and Jackie Riley; handcrafts and gifts, chaired by Barbara Reddick; plants, etc., Lois Taylor; the country kitchen, Mary B. Burke; and the cookie walk, Ola Mae Symons.

The country kitchen will feature jams, jellies, homemade cakes and pies and other goodies.

The buffet-teria will need donations of sweet rolls, doughnuts, muffins, coffee and frozen orange juice as well as pies and cakes. Cash donations will be accepted.

Religion—more than 'just ritual'

Religion does not occupy any one part of man's life. It is the reaction of a man's whole being to his object of highest loyalty. Religion must be felt and thought. It must be lived out; it must translate itself into action. Religion is not a segment of life, nor is it connected with any one time or place. It is not just ritual, ceremony, doctrines;, or the church, even though these may all be aids in stumulating it.

The great religious leaders of the race have spoken of religion as a vital, personal experience. This experience grows out of real needs — the need for courage and companionship in life. Micah speaks of man's chief duty "To love mercy, to do justly, and to walk humbly with thy God."

For Jesus the great commandments were love of God and love of one's neighbor. Whether religion has been interpreted as man's cooperative quest for the values of life or as "the Spirit of God in the soul of man," it has been stressed as involving the whole of life.

Melissa leaves 'House,' has 'First Affair'

By Joan Crosby

Melissa Sue Anderson

Melissa Sue Anderson, formerly the blond, oldest daughter Mary on "Little House on the Prairie," has just turned 21, so it is perfectly all right that she has filmed a love scene for a TV movie, and that she is more than happy to talk about it.

The scene is in "First Affair," airing Oct. 25 on CBS. Miss Anderson plays a naive Midwesterner attending a posh Eastern college. She's hired by her English professor (Loretta Swit) as a baby sitter and soon love blooms between Miss Anderson and the professor's husband, played by Joel Higgins.

"People who watched 'Little House' may be shocked by the picture," says Miss Anderson. "The scene wasn't hard to do. The first assistant director asked me if I wanted the set cleared before they shot and I said it wasn't necessary.

"The cinematographer had it all worked out and every once in a while, as we rehearsed, he'd say 'Guys, it's not pretty. He'd tell Joel to put his hand on my elbow or something like that and he'd say 'Very romantic' and we'd be told 'But it looks pretty.'

"Just before we shot the scene I looked at Joel and said 'Now who shall I think about, Paul Newman or Robert Redford?' and he cracked up. We had a great time shooting the picture."

"First Affair" was filmed entirely on location in Boston and was originally called "Freshman Year."

Since she stopped filming "Little House," Miss Anderson has made several TV movies and one feature film, "Happy Birthday to Me," co-starring Glenn Ford.

She has no idea what she will do next. Even though she's managed by the Svengali-likeg Jay Bernstein, she says, "I have the final decision on whether or not I do a show. It's only if I can't decide that I ask what he thinks I should do."

Does Miss Anderson get restless when she's not working?

"No," she answers decisively, "I'm not a workaholic."

CBN family programs

by Kim Cooper

Three family programs highlight Sunday's television programming on the CBN Cable Network — "Swords of the Space Ark," "Flying House" and CBN Special of the Week "Grand Canyon, a Journey."

"Swords of the Space Ark," from 6 to 7:30 p.m., is an animated family adventure taking place in the year 2090. Three young space adventurers experience the struggle betweeen good and evil involving the good Princess Sophia and her sister. The colorful feature shows the fiery destruction of a city in space and the action between fighting space ships.

CBN Cable's original animated family series "Flying House" airs at 7:30. The show features school-age children, an amusing robot and an absent-minded professor who travel in an airbound house to other time periods.

The weekly CBN Special of the Week (at 8 p.m.) presents "Grand Canyon, a Journey." This documentary, which originally aired on NBC, takes viewers into the mile-deep canyon. American naturalist and author Joseph Wood Krutch re-creates the historical adventures of explorer John Wesley Powell.

The program travels along the once-populated trails into the territory of the Havasupi Indians who originally settled there in the 19th century. Their lifestyles and ways adapted to the changing lands of the canyon.

Kim Cooper is publicity director of the CBN Cable Network.

BRAINSTORM, from MGM/UA. Directed by Douglas Trumbull screenplay by Robert Stitzel and Philip Frank Messina. Starring Christopher Walken, Natalie Wood, Louise Fletcher. Rated PG

By J.T. YURKO

Douglas Trumbull likes visual effects. He created many of them for such films as "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" and "Blade Runner."

"Brainstorm" is set in the future, with Trumbull using as his premise not outer space but the inner workings of the human mind. Two scientists (Christopher Walken and a chain-smoking Louise Fletcher) have developed a machine that can tap into and record brain waves to be played back and experienced by another person.

As premises go, this one is not so farfetched, especially for a science-fiction film. Brain waves are electricity, and with some appropriately exotic laser tape and lots of computers, "Brainstorm" becomes a kind of "WarGames" for the mind.

What is done with the premise is more important, however, and "Brainstorm" seems like a series of missed opportunities. The idea of being able to walk around in someone else's mind — let alone his moccasins — opens up a limitless number of possibilties, but few are tapped.

The special effects come into play when the sensory effects of such a device are exploited. Recording someone's trip aboard a roller coaster can be played back directly to your own mind, to give you the impression that you are experiencing the sensation. For these sequences, Trumbull shifts from regular Panavision to 70mm Panavision, with some success, but all too fleeting and transient. A few of the more hallucinogenic sights, however, are quite remarkable.

All of this must be set against Natalie Wood's death occurred while making the film. Although the studio wanted to shelve the project, Trumbull persuaded them to complete the picture. What he intended and what he ended up with are two different matters, and only Trumbull can say how far apart the two are. "Brainstorm" could use one of the machines from the movie to fully give us the movie in Trumbull's mind.

To runners, NYC Marathon is the biggest event

Marty Liquori

CITY FEAT — About 17,000 runners will be there. (Twice that many were turned down.) City officials will clear the streets, including 360 intersections and five bridges. Millions of spectators will line the route.

The 14th annual New York City Marathon on Sunday, Oct. 23, will also be seen by about 20 million TV viewers. The ABC telecast, featuring Jim McKay, Marty Liquori and Diana Nyad, will be shown from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. (ET).

The long-distance race — which begins in Staten Island at the Verrazano Bridge and concludes in Manhattan's Central Park — is the largest marathon in the world.

Fred Lebow, president of the New York Road Runners Club, admits that his group, which sponsors the NYC Marathon, didn't foresee when it was founded in 1958 that jogging could gain such popularity in America.

Lebow says, "It might not have been so extreme to predict an annual New York City Marathon, for there have been marathons in and around the city for many years.... (But nobody expected) a five-borough race could be held each year, with millions cheering on the runners from sidewalks, treetops, apartment and office windows..."

He says the NYRRC, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary, has come a long way, too.

"When the Club was organized in '58 with 42 members, some of them non-runners, and with merely ten races in the first year," Lebow says, "would anyone have believed a prediction that over 22,000 people would be enrolled as NYRRC members in 1983, and that the club would he housed in a building such as the International Running Center, just a few steps away from Fifth Avenue and Central Park?"

What can happen in the next 25 years? That's anybody's guess, Lebow says. He looks for a Road Runners Hall of Fame in New York City, and a NYC Marathon monument in Central Park near the finish line of the race.

Predicts Lebow: "The number of participants in the New York City Marathon will double (by the year 2008).... The Marathon will not become an elite affair.

COMPARISONS

If, like many Americans, you've found yourself most attracted to drinking and learning about your own country's wines, you may already have a good foundation in French wine knowledge without even realizing it. The key difference between the wines of France and those made in the USA is that here we use the name of the grape to define varietal wines (like chardonnay, or cabernet sauvignon); in France, wines are named after the districts where the grapes are grown. The wine we call Cabernet Sauvignon in France, is called Bordeaux, after that region of the country. If you like California cabernets, you might want to compare your American wine to Chateau Belair from Jean Pierre Moueix, a red Bordeaux imported from France (about $15).

If the chardonnays of California are wines you enjoy, you are apt to also like the French wines made from chardonnay grapes, like the white wines of Burgundy — Chablis or Pouilly Fuisse. Jacques Millar Chablis ($14.50) and Louis Rene Savin Pouilly Fuisse ($9) are both good wines to compare to California chardonnays.

To taste against your favorite American pinot noir, try Ropiteau Cote de Beaune Village ($12) from the Burgundy district of France. And, to sample with a California Sauvignon Blanc, try Henri Delamotte Pouilly Fume "Clos des Chaumes" ($8.50) from the Loire Valley of France, or Dourthe Freres' Chateau La Tour Martillac ($12) from France's Grave area.

To match a native Chenin Blanc, Vouvray wines, also of France's Loire Valley, are pleasant and inexpensive — Henri Delamotte Vouvray costs about $5.

Gewurztraminer is a varietal wine name that appears on both French and California labels; in France, it's grown and made in Alsace. You can always translate from English to French, by translating from grape to district.

MEDICINE CHEST

Your Professional:
Troy True, Reg. Pharmacist

My doctor switched me from Tagamet to Carafate for my peptic ulcer. Since they are both used to treat the same condition, do they work the same way? — L.B.

Both drugs will treat the same condition, but they will work differently. Tagamet works by reducing the amount of acid your stomach produces. Studies indicate Tagamet can reduce acid secretion up to 90 percent. Carafate, on the other hand, acts directly on the ulcer itself. Studies indicate that this drug (Carafate) forms a protective barrier at the ulcer site. In addition, Carafate is reported to have virtually no side effects other than infrequent constipation.

Is there any drug which would help stroke victims recover faster? — S.W.

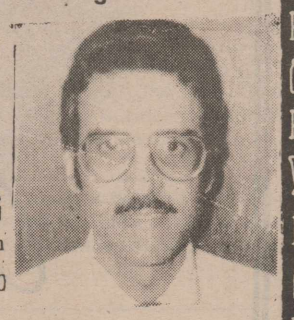

One small study sheds a little ray of hope for faster recovery for stroke victims. In eight of nine patients with strokes, researchers at Emory University in Atlanta observed definite sustained improvement after diluting the patient's blood with 5 percent human serum albumin and dextra 40. This treatment reduces blood thickness (stickiness) which seems to improve circulation in the affected brain area. While some improvement after strokes is normally expected, the high number of improvements benefiting from blood dilution is well in excess of what would be expected.

Do medicines have to be dispensed in child-proof containers? — H.T.

No. Ask your pharmacist for regular lids and you shall receive!

Soap Bubbles

TELESCOOP: Look for a major character to be written out of "As The World Turns" just about the time your Thanksgiving turkey is a matter of memory. The word is the writers have run out of a storyline for him.

GENIE MAKES SOAP MAGIC AGAIN: Genie Francis' return to "General Hospital" as Laura, albeit for a limited run, has created lots of renewed interest in the sudser. While talk continues that both she and her erstwhile soap mate, Tony Geary (Luke) will both leave again at the end of the year, dedicated "L&L" fans keep prompting her to say there'll be a further on-air manifestation of the two at some later point. Genie did say she wants to do theater and that Tony has encouraged her in this direction. (More from Genie in upcoming columns.)

SOAP SCRAPS: Lovely Lee Meredith's character, Charmaine, is about to charm Nels, Elinar Perry Scott's soap alter-ego on "As The World Turns." The prospect leaves the multi-talented Elinar (he sings, creates cosmetics and beauty products, designs and does a lot more) very pleased indeed ... While Brenda Dickson was away from her role as Jill as "Young & The Restless," she studied acting and recently won raves for her work in a Tennessee Williams play ... "Days Of Our Lives" star John deLancie (Eugene) and fiancee, Marnie Mosiman, know how pyramid power really works. They returned from two weeks in Egypt looking more in love than ever (if that's possible).

Peter Brown (ex "Days," "Lawman," "Laredo," etc. etc., etc.) is one of Hollywood's busiest actors and producers. He's now playing the role of Roger on "Loving." Although he signed a limited contract (when you're as busy as he is, you avoid long-term commitments) the behind-the-scenes word is he's so good in what he's doing, the soap-folk will try to persuade him to stay on. He told us one of the attractions in his hometown (he was born in New York) is the theater and if Peter can find a play he'd like to do, then he may continue on in "Loving."

NOTABLE QUOTABLES: Sandy Faison (Beth, "Edge Of Night") says: "I was always an 'Edge' fan and would go through quarts of ice cream while watching to see what would happen to Sky and Raven ... Now that I'm part of the cast, it's still a bit strange to me to be in Miles Cavanaugh's apartment!"

LOCUS FOCUS: On October 30, several soap stars including Meg Ryan, Hugo Hapier, Petronia Paley (Betsy and Gunnar, "ATWT" and Quinn, "Another World") will judge a Ragamuffin costume parade in Holbrook, Long Island at 1 p.m. to help raise funds for Cystic Fibrosis research. Call 1-516-472-1966 for information.

NOTE TO "Shirley" in Orlando, Florida: Call your local ABC outlet and tell them you want to see "Edge Of Night." (Other fans who can't get the show in their areas can do likewise.)

BOONE

Beyond the new series

By Andy Noble

With the debut this week of NBC's "Bay City Blues," viewers have now had a chance to sample all the new season's series. In the seven weeks since the first new series aired, the new season has produced two (not surprising) ratings successes: ABC's "Hotel" and CBS' "AfterMASH."

Some other series have not fared as well. Several are sure bets to have their lights dimmed before too long.

But fear not. When one of these turkeys buys the farm, the networks have plenty of newer shows available. They've already stockpiled 15 backup series which only await an OK from the executive suite.

CBS has ordered "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer," spun off from the TV movie starring Stacy Keach; "Airwolf" with Jan-Michael Vincent and Ernest Borgnine (from Don Bellisario of "Magnum"); "The Four Seasons," based on the theatrical film; "Empire" with ex-Avenger Patrick MacNee; "Domestic Life" with Martin Mull; and "Mama Malone," about an ethnic TV cooking show host, which was originally set on the 1982-83 schedule.

NBC's series include an untitled detective series starring Lynda Carter and Loni Anderson; Lorne Michaels' "The New Show"; Stephen Cannell's "Pier 66," about two ex-MPs-turned-detectives living on a houseboat in Miami (shades of "Surfside 6"!); "Double Trouble," about two identical twins who get caught up in adolescent fun (shades of "The Patty Duke Show"!); Allen Burns-MTM's "The Duck Factory," about a Hollywood animation studio; the self-explanatory "Night Court"; and the popular summer-replacement series "Buffalo Bill."

Meanwhile, ABC has on tap two Glen Larson ("The Fall Guy," "Manimal") projects — "Masquerade," about secret agents enlisting a different citizen each week in their battles; and "Automan" starring Desi Arnaz Jr. as a videogame designer who creates an electronic crime-fighter; "Blue Thunder," based on this summer's hit film; and an untitled Norman Lear sitcom starring Paul Rodriguez, a young Hispanic comic.

With series pink slips given out as easily as bus transfers, you probably won't have to wait too long to see some of these.

JILL JACKSON'S HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD: Michael Caine is such a good actor, it's hard to recognize how good he is. It's so effortless he never appears to be acting. However, he gets inside a character turns it inside out exploring every facet of the personality. In two films now in release, "Educating Rita" and "Beyond The Limit," he plays an older man with an affinity for the bottle. Each is a different characterization. In his next, "Love Rio," he is thirty pounds lighter, plays a younger man and says, "I get to chase girls again".

"Beyond The Limit" also stars Richard Gere who, again as in "Breathless," bares his "bod" and participates in some torrid sex scenes. But this is not what the film is all about. Based on Graham Green's "The Honorary Consul," it's the story of a guerilla group in a seedy South Americn province whose coup goes wrong. Gere is the town's Doctor and Caine the Honorary Consul. They both love an Indian girl played by Elpidia Carrillo.

WILLIAM HURT
Tom Berenger, Glenn Close, Jeff Goldblum, William Hurt, Kevin Kline, Mary Kay Place, Meg Tilly and JoBeth Williams all became close personal friends after working for months on locaton in "The Big Chill." In a great display of ensemble playing, they are classmates who meet again at the funeral of another. It's one of the season's better films.

BITS'N PIECES: My source tells me Prince Albert is back in Monaco with an office in the Palace. He has almost completely overcome his stuttering and is with a different date each night ... Burt Reynolds and Richard Pryor are being allowed to "improv" in the wild comedy scenes of "The Music Box." Producer Blake Edwards says none of the lines are scripted ... Tarzan fans won't be seeing "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of The Apes" this year. Release has been postponed till '84 ... Danny Kaye rides as Grand Marshall in the Rose Parade January 1st at Pasadena ... Steve Martin and Lily Tomlin are shooting "All of Me" in and around Los Angeles. It was originally titled "Me Too"... In his long entertainment career, 87-year-old? George Burns plays a dual role for the first time when he appears as God and the Devil in "Oh, God III"... Alzheimer's disease (premature senility) which retired Rita Hayworth has now forced Edmond O'Brien into the Veteran's Hospital ... Not many of her peers have too many kind words for a former super-super-star, now spending most of her time performing in Dinner Theaters ... It really seems serious between Debra Winger and Governor Bob Kerry. If I'il Debbie becomes the first lady of Nebraska, she's going to have to tone down her language — and her behaviour ... Liza Minelli flew in from New York in the afternoon, appeared at a "Believe It Or Not" cocktail party, and flew back to New York that same night. She went into rehearsal the next day for her new play, "The Rink"... Producers of "Eddie and The Cruisers" are more than pleased with the pic's box office take, and are still more gleeful that the soundtrack album hit the charts after only two weeks on the market.

HEALTH HINTS

Colds are spread by contact—not through the air—according to Ernst Zander, M.D., Vice President, Medical Affairs of Lehn & Fink, a division of Sterling Drug Inc. "It is becoming more accepted that hand to hand contact, or hand to contaminated surface contact, and then rubbing the eyes or probing the nose is one principal mode of cold virus transmission.

Interruption of rhinovirus transmission by contact can be accomplished by frequent hand washing, keeping fingers out of eyes and nose, and disinfection of contaminated surfaces.

LOVE AND HONOR

Duke (Keenen Ivory Wayans, r.) wants more than anything else for Sgt. China Bell (Yaphet Kotto) to train him to be an all-Army boxer, but he's fearful that if Bell learns he cannot read he will curtail the training, in the "Learning Experience" episode of NBC's "For Love and Honor," airing FRIDAY, OCT. 28.

Hall & Oates

ESPN will begin its coverage of the new National Basketball Association season with the NBA Hall of Fame Game, live from Springfield, Mass., on Tuesday, Oct. 25. This exhibition game will feature the world champion Philadelphia 76ers against the San Antonio Spurs.

The new hockey season has also just started. On Oct. 25, USA airs the meeting between the Boston Bruins and the Chicago Black Hawks. These two teams have been among the most powerful throughout NHL history, though Chicago seems to be a bit questionable this year.

On Sunday, Oct. 23, MTV presents a Hall and Oates video special. Darryl Hall and John Oates are the inheritors of the "blue-eyed soul" school of music inspired by the Righteous Brothers. They generally perform songs in various styles first made popular by black artists, especially styles that were popular in the '50s and '60s. Like the Righteous Brothers, Hall and Oates are able to work these different styles of music with taste and a great deal of artistry, even if they are not as exciting as the originals. In other words, they sing good songs and they perform them well.

Some Spotlight movies this week.

"Missing" (Oct. 23) Director Costa-Gavras' ("Z," "State of Siege") political detective movie starring Jack Lemmon as a father looking for his missing son in a country that resembles Chile. The father finds the trail leads right into the American embassy, making him question some of his basic beliefs on how the U.S. government operates, particularly in Latin America.

"Four Friends" (Oct. 24) — Another movie about the 1960s. This one has some good moments, but it is mostly stereotypical love, drugs and confusion. None of the characters seem real, but they are used as vehicles to either comment on or view the different events of the times.

"Star Wars" (Oct. 25) — Always good for a recommendation. What is left to say? Colorful, witty, exciting, "Star Wars" both glorifies and satirizes pulp sci-fi, comics and Flash Gordon serials.

INSIDE TV ..... by Chris Colby

LINDA EVANS

CLOSEUPS: When Linda Evans was in China guesting in a segment of "Love Boat," she shot six rolls of film of just boats in the harbor. "They were so beautiful," she told me. When not before the camera, she and John Forsythe's wife explored the Peking Zoo, visited the Temple of The Jade Buddha, shopped for silks and clothes in many areas, and sampled the delicious cuisine in restaurant after restaurant ... Forty-inch-high Emmanual Lewis, the adorable youngster of the new "Webster" series, says his favorite actors are The Fonz and Mr. T; his favorite actess is Jayne Kennedy. "But", says Manny, "Michael Jackson is my main, main man"... Did'ya know thousand dollar bills are printed only on one side? The other side merely reads "United States of America."Producer Rick Rosner discovered this when he ordered bills from the Federal Reserve Bank for his new "Lottery" series ... George DeLoy, Michael in "9 to 5," was born in Canelones, Uruguay but his parents moved to Salt Lake City when he was three. He grew up, studied drama at the University of Utah, and then moved on to New York. Now living in California with his wife Deborah May, his hobbies are horseback riding and singing.

FOCUS: Maria Shriver, Arnold Schwarzenegger's love and JFK's niece, couldn't be happier. She's joined CBS News as a reporter in the Los Angeles Bureau covering stories for the CBS Morning News ... The Emmy Show is four weeks into the past, but a lotta industry-ites are still arguing the pros and cons. For my money, it was an all time low. Dull, overlong, with Murphy and Rivers draggng it even further into the "slough of despond"... Could Tom Selleck be losing his heart again? Stay tuned for full and accurate details ... Kate McGeehan and Billy Moses see each other both on and off the "Falcon Crest" set ... Earl Holliman's Fiesta Dinner Theater in San Antonio is going "el foldo." That's showbiz lingo for closing down ... Steve McQueen's daughter Terri and "The Fall Guy's" Lee Majors seem to be enjoying each other's company ... After all that hoopla and a nationwide search for a Velda for the two hour telefilm "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer: More Than Murder," the part went to Hollywood actesss Lindsay Bloom. Isn't that always the way? ... "Lottery" star Marshall Colt, besides being a licensed pilot, is a Formula I race car driver ... Catherine Bach, Daisy Dukes in "The Dukes of Hazzard," posed for the figurehead of America's newest tallship "The Californian"...

COMING EVENTS: Circle Tuesday night November 1 via CBS for "This Girl For Hire" starring Bess Armstrong, Hermione Baddeley, Scott Brady, Ray Walston, Jose Ferrer, Beverly Garland, Roddy McDowell, Percy Rodriguez and Howard Duff. It's a mystery comedy spoofing 1940's detective movies and with a cast like that it's GOTTA be GOOD!

Ornithologists gave bright red birds the name of Cardinal because their color reminded them of the red robes worn by Roman Catholic Cardinals.

The year 1948 held two of the most momentous events overseas: the birth of the nation of Israel and the Soviet blockade of West Berlin. Here at home, Harry Truman scored one of the biggest political upsets in American history by defeating Thomas E. Dewey in the race for president.

The Pierce-Arrow departed the automobile scene in 1938 after only 50 cars of that year's model had been manufactured. You can bet those cars are worth a fortune today.

Ducks are comfortable swimming in near freezing water. Their feathers provide excellent insulation and keep the cold water from ever touching their bodies. Water runs off a duck's back because its feathers are naturally well oiled.

'The Undaunted'

CTV's drama-documentary series "The Undaunted" explores the character of one of Canada's most controversial figures of the early 19th century — Thomas Douglas, fifth Earl of Selkirk — in a two-part program "The Trials of Lord Selkirk," airing Thursday, Oct. 27 and Tuesday, Nov. 1.

Starring in the title role is John Neville, who appears as both Selkirk and as a visitor to the present, who discovers how he has fared at the hands of historians. Some regard him as an exploiter of settlers of the Red River community, while others see him as a visionary who helped open western Canada.

Ask Kate

Colt played grid star

By Kate Woods

Didn't Marshall Colt of "Lottery" once play a football player in a movie, maybe "Semi-Tough"? — Y.A.

You fumbled this one a bit. Colt played the religious young quarterback corrupted by Mac Davis and Nick Nolte in "North Dallas Forty."

VITAMIN C — Did Jimmy Cagney push the grapefruit into a woman's face in "White Heat" or "Angels with Dirty Faces"? — H.B.

Neither. The memorable scene was in "Public Enemy" (1931), Cagney's first big picture. The woman with pulp dripping down her negligee was Mae Clarke.

OH CAPTAIN — I just read Taylor Caldwell's "Captains and Kings" and have been told it was made into a TV movie. I now know how I would have cast it, so can you tell me who really starred to see how close I came? — C.P.

Richard Jordan played patriarch Joseph Armagh in the 1976 miniseries. Perry King played his son, Rory, the presidential candidate. Joanna Pettet was Katherine Hennessey and Blair Brown was Elizabeth Healey Hennessey, two of Joe's love interests, while Patty Duke Astin played Bernadette Hennessey Armagh, his wife.

Marshall Colt

ON THIN ICE — I heard that Dorothy Hamill and Dean Martin's son are getting a divorce. Did they have children? Also, isn't this his second marriage? How old is he? — F.L.

Dean Paul Martin is 31, with two broken marriages under his belt. The first casualty was actress Olivia Hussey, with whom he did have a child. Martin and Miss Hamill, 26, have no children.

Movie Nostalgia

By Marie Iandiorio

For the first time in the 40-year history of the Academy Awards, the 1968 ceremony was postponed two days, due to the tragic murder of Dr. Martin Luther King. Although the voting on the Awards had taken place weeks before the assassination, it seemed as if the Academy members had taken the social upheaval of the times into consideration when they cast their ballots. Several films and performances with racial themes were honored.

The surprise winner of the Oscar for best picture was "In the Heat of the Night," a hardboiled detective story about the dramatic conflict between a white-supremacist Southern police chief and a black detective from the North. This film took on added meaning and significance as a mirror for the turbulent times, and remains a powerful statement on bigotry.

Question: Can you name the two stars of this film, one of whom won the best actor Oscar that year?

Answer: Rod Steiger (the Oscar winner) and Sidney Poitier

Dear Debbie

DEAR DEBBIE:

If you've ever experienced having someone very dear to your heart die without a chance to say good-bye, you know the emptiness and guilt one feels inside.

This past week, a friend of mine was killed in a car accident. I didn't want to believe the radio announcer when he mentioned Mark's name. He was so young, handsome and full of life to have it all come to an end like that.

I'll always cherish my memories of him and the time we had together. I'm glad I got to love him for a little while. That's at least better than never having had the chance at all.

Debbie, how do you handle the grief of losing someone you love? I feel like a part of me has died, too. I've even tried bargaining with God to bring him back, but someday I know He'll take my life, too. There is no end to the heartache and pain. If life is so full of sunshine, why am I standing in the rain?

STILL GRIEVING

DEAR GRIEVING:

Most of us at one time or another have experienced the loss of a friend or family member. Unfortunately, there seems to be no particular formula which shows us how to deal with this loss.

As you stated in your letter, we all know someday we're going to die. But that doesn't make it easier to accept the loss of someone close. While each person grieves in his own way, it might help you if you hear how others handle it:

First, give in to the pain and emptiness you're feeling. Cry, get angry, scream — do whatever you have to in order to give it an outlet. When this passes, think about the lost loved one. Consider what this person passed on to you and what you learned from knowing and being with him. This precious gift can never die. Therefore, even though you won't see this person again in this lifetime, he will always be with you.

Gather with friends and family and share your grief. Talk about it. You'll find great comfort just being together.

DEAR DEBBIE:

I don't know how I did it, but I'm involved with a married man. I always swore it was something I'd never do, but here I am! We've been seeing each other for about two years now. He has told me he's going to leave her, but hasn't done it. There are no children involved, so I can't understand why he hasn't yet. I know he has no feelings for her, but there seems to be something holding him back. At this point, I don't know how much longer I can hang on. Should I just call his wife and tell her about us? I don't think she knows. If she does, she certainly doesn't care. What do you think?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED:

Do not under any circumstances call his wife. I think that would be extremely cruel. Why should she be punished for her husband's indiscretions? Would you really want to hear from another woman if you were his wife? I doubt it.

End this relationship. It's going nowhere and probably will continue to do so if you let it. Look at it this way, this guy has the best of both worlds. He has his wife sitting home for him and he has you. What a setup! Think about what he's doing to you. When he leaves you and goes home to his wife, you're the one who's alone at night. When you just need to talk to him and he's home, you can't even pick up the phone and call him. That's no way to live. Dump him and find a single man. Believe me, they're out there and just as lonely.
