Can Cabinet explain Iran-Contra connection?

By JIM DRINKARD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of President Reagan's Cabinet will be called to testify and fill in gaps left by the failure of two administration officials to tell the Senate Intelligence Committee what they know about the Iran-Contra connection, the panel chairman says.

Vice President George Bush, admitting that "Clearly, mistakes were made" in the deal that sent U.S. arms to Iran and money to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, said the administration was determined to bring the truth of the scandal to light and to "let the chips fall where they may."

Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, who resigned last week as Reagan's national security adviser after Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Poindexter had some knowledge of the funds diversion, invoked the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination on Wednesday.

Poindexter, during a closed-door, one-hour appearance on the fourth day of the congressional investigation, declined to answer questions unless granted legal immunity.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, Poindexter's fired former aide who according to Meese was the only government official with extensive knowledge of Iran-Contra link, invoked the Fifth Amendment two days earlier. But senators running the investigation said the failure of the two key figures to testify would not slow the probe or limit its findings.

"North didn't do anything by himself," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the intelligence panel. "Everything he did in this entire caper had to have a response. If we can get everybody at the other end of all those phone calls and plane trips, we can find out what went on."

Asked whether that meant the committee would call Cabinet members, Durenberger said it did. "Somewhere during this we are going to decide when to move it to Cabinet level," he told a reporter.

He said the panel had made no decision on whether to grant immunity to any witness, and other panel members said the idea was not being seriously considered.

In a speech Wednesday to a group of businesswomen at the White House, the president expressed hope the controversy would not produce a backlash against sending aid to the Contras and other rebel forces battling leftist regimes.

"We cannot let recent events distract us from the cause of those brave fighters for freedom around the world," Reagan said. As the audience applauded, the president said, "Bless you. Yes, you just did make my day."

"Nothing that's happened makes those causes any less just or vital to our country and all it stands for," Reagan said.

In related developments:

— An ABC News telephone poll found that nearly half of those surveyed believe Reagan should resign if it is learned he lied about his knowledge of the Iran-Contra program. Of 505 people interviewed Tuesday, 48 percent said he should step down if he lied and 48 percent said he should not. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

— The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, in today's editions, reported Reagan last year personally asked Shimon Peres, then prime minister of Israel, to help secure the release of hostage William Buckley, cited in news reports to be the CIA's top anti-terrorism expert in the Middle East. Asked about the report, which cited unidentified Israeli officials, White House spokesman Dan Howard declined to comment. Buckley is reported to be dead, although no body has been located.

— Two Israeli newspapers, Haaretz and The Jerusalem Post, reported today that Israel has helped the United States supply the Contras for several years with material including light weapons and ammunition captured in Lebanon. Israeli officials have denied that government had any contact with or supplied weapons to the rebels in Nicaragua.

— Documents obtained by The Associated Press show 406 tons of cargo were flown this year to an El Salvador airfield used by an American-manned Contra resupply operation by Southern Air Transport of Miami, which was once owned by the CIA.

Insurance pool helps county save

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A recently formed insurance pool will enable county governments to insure themselves at prices competitive or below private insurance rates, said Midland County Commissioner Winfree Brown.

"I doubt very seriously any private insurers can insure for as low as what the county insurance pool will be insuring for," Brown said.

Brown, along with eight other county commissioners statewide, has been appointed to the Texas Association of Counties Insurance Board.

Midland County may choose to buy insurance from the pool when its present auto insurance policy expires in January and its general liability and fire insurance runs out in June.

"We decided let's just do our own and save the taxpayers money," Brown said of the pool's formation.

For every dollar counties pay for insurance, they are getting back about 11 cents in claims, Brown said.

The pool, made up of counties with populations below 200,000, will collect premiums from counties and settle claims.

Permian Basin leads state in teen-aged pregnancies

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin has the highest teen pregnancy rate in Texas, while the state ranks third among the 50 states in total pregnancies and first in pregnancies for girls under the age of 14, an area family planning specialist said today.

Gloria Munson, director of community relations for Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, said the regional statistics — though they are not directly related — correspond with the results of a study released this week in "Family Planning Perspectives," an Alan Guttmacher Institute publication.

The study by Susheela Singh, a senior research associate at the institute, found wide variations in teen-age pregnancy rates in the 50 states. She found even larger differences between states in the proportions of pregnant girls who decide to have an abortion.

The Texas Department of Health reported in 1985 that Midland had a total birth rate of 2,424. Of these, 356 babies — or 15 percent — were born to mothers ages 15-19.

Ms. Munson said Texas led the nation in the number of births for girls ages 14 and under in 1984, with teen-age girls accounting for 16 percent of the total births.

In 1984, there are 46,767 births to girls between the ages of 10 and 19. Of these, 17,650 were out of wedlock births.

The Guttmacher study found 75 teen-age girls per 1,000 get pregnant in North Dakota while 144 per 1,000 do so in Nevada, the study found.

In Mississippi, 125 girls per 1,000 get pregnant. Of those, 84 per 1,000 give birth and 22 per 1,000 have abortions.

California has a moderate birthrate, 53 per 1,000, but the highest abortion rate in the nation, 69 per 1,000.

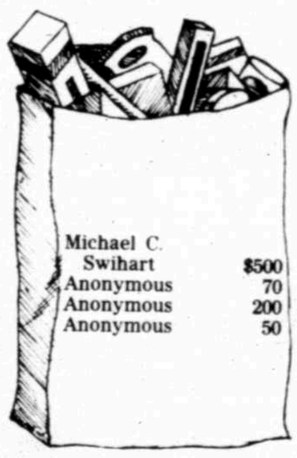

States with higher percentages of poor people or people living in urban areas have significantly higher teen-age pregnancy and birth rates, according to the study.

Ms. Munson said the Permian Basin is an exception to this so-called trend, in that it has high pregnancy and birth rates among a seemingly small urban population.

Silver-dollar-sized pacemaker buys baby new life

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — An 8-month-old baby is no longer worn out by the simple task of sucking milk from a bottle, thanks to what his doctor says is the smallest pacemaker on the market.

Timothy Anthros of East Northport is the first infant to receive the new pacemaker, which because of its small size could make heart surgery on infants much safer, said Dr. John Luber, Timothy's surgeon at Long Island Jewish Medical Center.

The pacemaker, which weighs less than an ounce, is the smallest approved by the Food and Drug Administration. It has been implanted in about 500 adults since September, said Intermedics Inc., an Angleton, Texas, company that produces the pacemaker.

Timothy's was put in Monday to correct an irregular heartbeat that continued after a hole in his failing heart was closed four months ago, Luber said Wednesday.

The large size of previous pacemakers caused unique problems with infants because their bodies are so small, Luber said.

Occasionally, the pacemaker would wear through the skin and the wound could become infected, leading to months of rehabilitation or even death, he said. In addition, the bulge it created was embarrassing to children, especially those in their teens.

"Having something like this means we can make it virtually invisible always," he said. "The child doesn't get tagged with being strange or different."

The silver-dollar-sized unit can hold more information than other pacemakers twice its size, Luber said. "It's really a quantum leap in terms of its size, our ability to implant and its ability to monitor the patient's heart rhythms."

The change in size and capabilities resulted from improvements in electronics and batteries, which were the size of flashlight batteries when pacemakers entered the market in the late 1950s, said Ted Swift, a spokesman for Intermedics. "In 1981, pacemakers were still the size of hockey pucks.

"The mission for the manufacturers is to make them smaller and make them last longer."

Timothy, the son of Ted and Michele Anthros, was expected to leave the hospital today. He was being fed six hours after surgery and was doing well, Luber said Wednesday. "He's sitting there sucking a bottle this morning."

The child's pacemaker was programmed to boost the heart anytime the heart rate fell below 90 beats a minute.

The new pacemaker, which costs about $4,695, can record over a six-month period how often it is needed and whether its battery is getting low, he said.

It was in use about 10 percent of the time the first day, Luber said.

Doctors can retrieve data from it by placing a recorder-type device against the skin of the baby and requesting the information, he said, adding that the pacemaker can be reprogrammed in the same manner within seconds.

Evans executed for 1977 killing of Dallas church pianist

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Michael Wayne Evans, asking for forgiveness, was executed early today in the Texas death chamber for killing a Dallas woman nine years ago.

"I want to say I'm sorry for the things I've done and I hope I'm forgiven," Evans said in his final statement as tears welled in his eyes. "I don't hold nothing against no one. Everyone has treated me well and I know it's not easy for them. That's all. I'm sorry."

The lethal dose was administered at 12:11 a.m. Evans cleared his throat a few times, but died peacefully. He was pronounced dead 10 minutes after being injected.

Evans, 30, an auto mechanic from Dallas, was setenced to die for the June 1977 killing of Elvira Guerrero, a pianist at the Second Mexican Baptist Church in Oak Cliff.

The execution, the ninth in Texas this year and the 19th since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982, came after federal courts and the governor's office refused Wednesday to grant him a stay. Evans had two previous stays and two trials.

He was convicted of killing Ms. Guerrero, 35, who was abducted with her fiance after leaving the church where she worked. She was robbed of $40 in church offerings, shot twice and then slashed across the eyes and throat with a carpet knife. Her fiance, Mario Garza, a Mexican national, also was robbed of $12, then shot several times with a .22-caliber pistol Evans said he had stolen earlier. Their bodies were found in a hayfield four days after they were reported missing.

"He was one of the sorriest human beings ever," said Kevin Byrne, a Dallas attorney who prosecuted Evans.

Evans, in a confession to Dallas police, said Ms. Guerrero asked God to forgive her attacker as she was being killed.

"I cut the lady from the bottom of her chin to her hairline above her forehead," Evans said. "I was trying to get her to quit talking."

Evans had refused repeated requests for interviews.

"He didn't seem like he was too worried," said Calvin Williams, a death row inmate who watched Evans being moved out of his cell Wednesday. "He had kind of a warm smile."

Evans' appeals were rejected Wednesday by a federal district judge in Dallas, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and then the U.S. Supreme Court.

Reagan wants truth, but only two men who know it 'aren't talking'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are problems ahead when the president says he wants the truth to come out, when the attorney general says only two men know the full truth, and when those two say they're not talking.

President Reagan can say, as he did Wednesday, that "all Americans are entitled to have their questions answered" in the puzzling affair that saw profits from the sale of weapons to Iran flow to Nicaraguan rebels. And he can issue orders to that effect.

But even with a command that "there must be a full and complete airing of the facts," the president of the United States cannot waive another individual's constitutional right against incriminating himself.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the president's recently resigned national security adviser, invoked his Fifth Amendment rights Wednesday in an appearance before the Senate Intelligence Committee just as Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a principal figure in the diversion of funds to the Contras, had done two days before.

Last week, in disclosing the Iran-Contra linkage, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said North was the only person in the U.S. government who knew exactly what happened and that Poindexter "did know that something of this nature was occurring but he did not look into it further."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the committee, said the two men's testimony "could have made our lives easier, but it doesn't make it impossible. I was surprised only because it was said at the White House they would testify, but the White House cannot order anyone to give up their constitutional rights."

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the panel would get the facts with or without Poindexter and North's testimony.

"Nobody has the whole story about this subject," he said. "Their refusal to testify will put a hole in the story, but we can work around it and fill it in and find out what happened."

Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, told reporters his client "serves the president and wishes to cooperate with every committee that wishes to investigate."

But he said in view of the expected appointment of an independent counsel and requests for testimony at other places he didn't specify, "I would be doing a disservice unless I asked my client to invoke his rights."

One way the Reagan White House could demonstrate its cooperation with the investigation is by not attempting to throw a cloak of executive privilege over presidential aides.

When Richard Nixon was confronted in 1973 during the developing Watergate scandal with demands that his closest aides testify before the Senate Watergate Committee, he sought to claim executive privilege.

The White House has not yet said what it will do, but if sources are correct that all requested documents have been supplied to the committee, it would not seem that executive privilege will be invoked.

"The executive privilege is not North's right or Poindexter's or (Robert) McFarlane's right, that's the president's right," said Earl Silbert, who as principal assistant U.S. attorney in 1973 prosecuted the Watergate burglars. "President Reagan can say he is not going to invoke that."

McFarlane, who preceded Poindexter as national security adviser, testified before the committee Monday.

The Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, he said, can be overcome only if the committee grants immunity, a step that has been discussed.

"By granting immunity," said Silbert, now in private law practice, "you are saying 'you won't be hurt by what you say.'"

Prosecutors, however, have a means of protecting their cases if it appears immunity will be granted to get a reluctant witness to talk.

In a telephone interview, Henry J. Ruth, the third of four special Watergate prosecutors, said the method was used when Watergate figure John Dean was planning to testify on May 1, 1973, under immunity.

NATION

Prosecutor: To grant anyone immunity would be premature

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning that an independent counsel's case could be jeopardized, the nation's first special prosecutor says it would be premature for Congress to grant immunity now to anyone under investigation for diverting Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

As the Senate Intelligence Committee discussed granting immunity to secure testimony of Reagan administration officials, former special prosecutor Arthur H. Christy said, "it would be wise" for lawmakers to first "sit down and pow-wow" with an independent counsel when one is named.

Otherwise, Christy said Wednesday, the independent counsel might find it difficult or impossible to prosecute the immunized official if he later develops evidence of criminal wrongdoing.

"I think that if they (a three-judge court) will appoint an independent counsel shortly, I think he would immediately consult with Congress so as not to have the investigation jeopardized by grants of immunity," Christy said.

The New York City attorney investigated cocaine use allegations against top Carter administration aide Hamilton Jordan, and concluded in 1980 that insufficient evidence existed to prosecute.

Another expert on the independent counsel law, speaking only on condition of anonymity, was even more blunt than Christy in warning against congressional immunity at this time.

"Surely, this should not be done without consulting with the independent counsel," he said. "One does not muck up an investigation at its outset."

The two experts were interviewed by The Associated Press on Wednesday, after former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, following the lead of his fired aide, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and refused to testify before the intelligence panel.

Afterward, members of the committee said discussions have begun over the possibility of securing testimony from North and Poindexter by granting them immunity from prosecution.

Intelligence Committee Chairman David Durenberger, R-Minn., and other committee members said no decisions had been made, and actual immunity grants were only distant possibilities at this point.

President Reagan announced Tuesday the administration is asking a special three-judge court to name an independent counsel to conduct a criminal investigation of arms sales to Iran — and possible illegal diversion of the profits to the Nicaraguan rebels. There was no timetable for the court to make the appointment.

An independent counsel would have his own authority to petition a court to immunize an official from prosecution to compel testimony. But whether he would want to do so is a matter of discretion.

Normally, federal prosecutors use such tactics for lower-level witnesses in an attempt to convict the important targets in the case. It is rare that the major targets would be let off the hook if there was a possibility of convicting them without immunity.

Framing the problems that could develop, Christy said: "Say the person goes before the Senate committee and they give him immunity. The independent counsel develops evidence to warrant an indictment. Is the counsel stopped from getting an indictment because the committee has given him immunity? This is where I think there will be very interesting developments."

While immunity only would protect a target from prosecution based directly on his testimony, the second legal expert said an indictment based solely on independent evidence could be difficult to obtain.

Reagan asserts nation filled with optimism, promises hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is trying to calm the uproar over the Iran arms sale-Contra aid deal, asserting the nation is filled with optimism and promising that investigations will restore confidence in U.S. foreign policy.

Even as Reagan delivered his upbeat message in a speech Wednesday, Vice President George Bush conceded that "clearly mistakes were made" and "there can be no denying that our credibility has been damaged by this entire episode and its aftermath."

Likewise, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, on a trip to Brussels, said Reagan got bad advice from those who told him there was someone in Iran to deal with other than the "lunatics" who run the country.

"I think unfortunately some of that advice has not turned out to have been accurate or correct," Weinberger said.

Today, Weinberger said he believes the advice first came from former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, who secretly went to Iran for the president.

"I think that's where it started, but then I don't have any real knowledge of all of the information about that," Weinberger said in a live interview from Brussels on NBC's "Today" show.

Weinberger, who also appeared on ABC's "Good Morning America," said he was "horrified" to learn that funds from the Iranian arms sale were diverted to the Contras. He said he did not think the president's competence was an issue in the controversy.

Asked on NBC whether it would be the exception or the rule for Reagan to know about something like the diversion of funds to the Contras, Weinberger said it would be "clearly the exception for anything as important as this. The president has to know what is being done in his name."

Reagan on Wednesday recounted to a group of businesswomen at the White House the investigations that are under way or planned.

"In short, the machinery is in place to seek answers to the questions that are being asked — to fix what needs fixing and to restore complete confidence to the conduct of our foreign policy," Reagan said.

'Iran$cam, Contragate' gives old hands sense of deja vu

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Old Washington hands who were around for the decline and fall of Richard Nixon have a sense of deja vu as they witness the storm that has enveloped the Reagan White House since Election Day.

But this scandal in search of a name is at once broader and less overwhelming than Watergate was. Dubbed "Iran$cam" by one New York tabloid and "Contragate" by another, this presidential crisis may yet earn a name all its own.

To the extent that it has exposed a secret foreign policy contrary to the president's publicly stated principles regarding terrorism and the embargo of weapons shipments to Iran, the controversy may damage U.S. relations with its allies and the moderate Arab states more than did Watergate.

An analysis

Many friends of the United States abroad never understood the fuss made over what Nixon spokesman Ron Ziegler called "a third-rate burglary." The long march to prove the president and his aides conspired and lied to cover up high-level approval of the break-in at Democratic headquarters mystified people who dismissed the crime as just another political dirty trick.

This time, senior officials in a number of countries have been subjected to public and private U.S. pressure to use their influence to block arms sales to Iran and resist the demands of terrorists. But White House admissions of the Iran arms dealings challenge the credibility of American foreign policy.

At the same time, the inevitable revelation of U.S. secrets is bound to upset Israel and other countries that conduct covert operations in league with the United States and now stand to be embarrassed as their special relationships and clandestine activities are spotlighted in the rush to define the dimensions of Reagan administration operations.

Unlike Watergate, which was kept largely under wraps for nine months despite the determined digging of two young Washington Post reporters and some others, Reagan's problems have mushroomed in a month into a full-scale, multi-act presidential drama.

Springing from a single article in an obscure Lebanese magazine that revealed former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane's secret mission to Iran, the case is expanding daily in ever-broadening concentric circles.

Reagan and his aides have sought to portray the administration as anxious to get to the bottom of the matter, but they have offered little new information about the case since Attorney General Edwin Meese III disclosed the diversion of profits from the Iranian weapons sales to the U.S.-supported Contra guerrillas battling the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

The president, denying any prior knowledge of impropriety while defending the clandestine arms deal, has moved to expedite independent investigations of his own National Security Council and allegations of wrongdoing by its members. Following a pattern established by Watergate, Reagan has asked for appointment of a independent counsel and the formation of a select congressional investigating committee to conduct separate probes.

Nixon, by contrast, tried to contain the case from the outset, yielding to public disclosure only under the most intense political and congressional pressure and then so selectively that the records he did provide became part of the evidence of coverup.

While it is still much too early to draw conclusions about the role of Reagan and his aides in the matters under investigation, it is apparent the problems the president already has acknowledged grew from the same penchant for secrecy and frustration with established restraints that led the Nixon White House to set up a covert squad to search for news leaks.

Members of that squad, known as "the plumbers," committed felonies in the belief they were doing the president's will — with or without his consent.

It is apparent that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the first fired in this new firestorm, thought he, too, was doing what his commander-in-chief wanted, whether or not he had anyone's express approval. It was possible for him to operate from within the National Security Council staff because people at the White House understood there were some things they shouldn't ask.

"This thing was cauterized pretty well," one senior White House official said. "Practically no one in the West Wing (where Reagan and his top aides have their offices) knew about the arms to Iran."

And of the three who did — Reagan, Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan and national security adviser John M. Poindexter — only Poindexter admitted to authorities that he knew of the skimming of Iranian weapons money.

Scientists: Layer of heavy soot may be heating North Pole

WASHINGTON (AP) — A layer of warm soot in concentrations sometimes heavier than that found near U.S. industrial areas may be raising temperatures around the North Pole, government scientists report.

A multi-national study of the haze which forms over the arctic in winter reported Wednesday that pollution around the North Pole sometimes exceeds that in the air off the heavily industrialized East Coast.

The arctic soot absorbs newly arriving sunlight, as well as light reflected from the icecap below, acting like a blanket that can increase air temperatures, reported Dr. Russell Schnell of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"One pollution plume we encountered on a flight over the icecap off Barrow, Alaska, last March was the equivalent of five or six large power plants putting all their effluents in a single plume," Schnell said.

He said in a statement that the Alaska pollution "was about 100 miles wide and 1,000 feet deep, and when we first flew into it we thought we had flown into the plume of a volcanic eruption. We didn't believe the instruments on the aircraft."

The layer of arctic haze has been reported as much as 18,000 feet thick, and scientists have expressed concern about its warming the arctic climate, although they remain unsure of the exact effects.

The haze was first noticed in the 1950s, but scientific studies have begun to look at it closely only in recent years following reports of a reduction in the amount of pack ice in the arctic.

Direct evidence has not yet linked the melting ice to the haze, however, although scientists consider such a relationship a possibility.

In recent years the average surface temperature of the Earth has risen slightly, probably a result of the so-called greenhouse effect in which the increasingly polluted atmosphere traps more heat from the sun.

The arctic pollution probably moves north from industrial and chemical complexes in eastern Europe and Asia, said a statement issued by NOAA, the parent agency of the National Weather Service.

Schnell reported that studies of air flow and a chemical analysis of the pollution indicate some of the soot has traveled as much as 4,000 miles.

Another participant in the study, Tony Hansen of the University of California, said that at times the arctic pollution exceeded levels measured over the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of New Jersey.

Hansen said on one test flight carbon soot in the arctic was measured at 700 nanograms per cubic meter, while the highest concentrations found in the New Jersey studies last January were 500 nanograms per cubic meter. A nanogram is about one-billionth of the weight of a typical paper clip. A cubic meter is a little more than a cubic yard of air.

The same NOAA research aircraft and instruments were used in both studies, officials pointed out.

Another pollutant, sulfur dioxide, averaged two parts per billion of air over the arctic, about the same levels as the U.S. East Coast, said Dr. Donald Thornton of Drexel University.

However, he added, the highest arctic concentration of sulfur dioxide was 15 parts per billion of air, compared with a top concentration of nine parts per billion over the Atlantic Coast.

Black carbon soot and sulfur dioxide are considered prime indicators of man-made air pollution.

Court to decide weight of contagious disease vs. law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is deciding whether risks of transmitting a contagious disease outweigh a federal law prohibiting discrimination against the handicapped.

Arguments in the case heard by the justices on Wednesday dealt with a third-grade teacher who was fired because she has tuberculosis, but gay rights activists say the court's decision may affect the national debate on AIDS.

Brian Hayes, the lawyer for the Nassau County, Fla., School Board, told the court Gene Arline was dismissed after being found to be "an unacceptable risk" to children's health.

A federal appeals court, ruling that contagious disease is a "handicap" covered by the 1973 law, said Mrs. Arline can sue the school board.

The American Medical Association supports the Nassau County school board's appeal, but says there must be a reasonable medical judgment about the risk of contagion before a firing can be deemed nondiscriminatory.

The justices are expected to announce their decision in Mrs. Arline's case by July.

Vitamin B may aid smokers

WASHINGTON (AP) — High doses of vitamin B seem to reduce the incidence of pre-cancerous cells in lungs of cigarette smokers, but researchers who made the finding warned it should not be considered a substitute for quitting the habit.

"I hope that these studies don't encourage smokers to think that they don't need to quit, they can just take a vitamin," said Charles Butterworth of the University of Alabama. "My feeling is that they ought to stop, but we know that there are some who won't or can't."

Butterworth said Wednesday the vitamin therapy, once developed further, may enable doctors to prevent pre-malignant growths from developing into lung cancer.

"What's significant is that it may be at a reversible stage," he said.

Butterworth, chairman of the university's Department of Nutrition Sciences, summarized the results of a four-month study that involved testing sputum samples from 88 men who had a history of smoking 20 to 30 cigarettes a day for the past 20 years.

Memorial eyed for cracks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inspectors using microscopes are trying to determing what has caused two dozen tiny cracks in the polished black granite walls of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Two panels of the memorial were removed for inspection Wednesday.

Samples of the memorial's concrete retaining wall and black granite panels will be examined microscopically, said Jan Scruggs, president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund.

There are 24 cracks on 14 of the 140 panels that form the memorial. The tiny cracks, varying in length from four to eight inches, are almost imperceptible to the naked eye. They were first noticed in October 1984.

Visitors to the memorial will be routed around the two panels, 5 and 6 West, until the inspection work at the site is completed later this week, Scruggs said.

Toy helicopters recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flying toy helicopters that have been involved in several injuries are being recalled because their rotor blades can fly off and strike the user if the toy is put together improperly, a federal agency said.

The M.W. Kasch Co. of Mequon, Wis., is recalling its Flying Copter Model WL 322, a plastic toy helicopter with a hand-held launching device.

HOW TO CHOOSE A PLASTIC SURGEON.
Today, you no longer have to live with a nose you hate. Or wrinkles that make you look older than you feel. Or an unflattering figure. Modern plastic surgery can improve these and many other conditions.
If you're considering plastic surgery, you should make sure you select a doctor who is qualified as a specialist in plastic surgery.
Because of the level of expertise needed, a specialist in plastic surgery has completed five to seven years of supervised training. To be a board-certified plastic surgeon, the physician then is required to pass a series of stringent examinations.
However, the average consumer may not know that a doctor can legally claim to be a cosmetic surgeon without specialized training or board certification.
How can you tell?
Check his credentials thoroughly. Is he certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery? Is he a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons? Does he get good references from his patients? Is he listed in the Directory of Medical Specialists? Is he affiliated with an accredited hospital?
Make sure you check before you choose.
Sylvan Bartlett, M.D. is a board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon and otolaryngologist. He is a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons and the American Academy of Otolaryngology. Dr. Bartlett is a specialist in plastic and reconstructive surgery including hand and microvascular surgery and otolaryngology as it applies directly to problems in plastic surgery.

Trillion-dollar budget considered

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Despite renewed vows by President Reagan to shrink the nation's huge budget deficit, the administration is poised to submit to Congress the first $1 trillion budget in history.

That's a $1 followed by 12 zeros: enough money to give every man, woman and child in the world around $250 apiece. It's a thousand times the population of China. In miles, it represents 5,376 round trips to the sun.

It's also roughly one quarter of the nation's $4.2 trillion gross national product, but a little less than half of the accumulated national debt.

President Reagan's Cabinet got its first peek on Wednesday at the new budget, and the $50 billion in spending cuts and other savings that Budget Director James C. Miller III claims are needed to meet the $108 billion deficit target set by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

Congress, which in past years has rejected nearly all of the deep spending cuts proposed by the president, will get most of the budget plan on Jan. 5.

Many of the items contained in the new budget represent previous proposals, modified slightly and recycled, administration officials said.

Federal agency heads can appeal the proposed cuts to the Office of Management and Budget before the budget is put in final form, but usually only minor modifications are made to the spending outline.

Wednesday's presentation was accompanied by a strong pitch by Reagan to his Cabinet on the need to go along with the deep spending cuts needed to meet the Gramm-Rudman deficit target, according to presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, whose own agency would be subjected to sharp cuts under the plan, said Reagan presented the "big picture."

A more detailed analysis of the new budget proposal was expected to emerge over the next few days as agency budget officers sift through the raft of "pass backs," or specific program-by-program cuts, that began going out Wednesday afternoon.

The president's 1988 budget comes in at a shade over $1 trillion in spending, officials said, with anticipated revenues projected at about $910 billion for the fiscal year that will begin next Oct. 1.

The fiscal 1987 budget Reagan presented last year called for spending of $994 billion.

However, additional spending approved by Congress could also push 1987 spending close to the $1 trillion mark and possibly even slightly over it, once final revenue and expenditure figures for the year are in, according to Edwin Dale Jr., spokesman for the budget office.

The first draft of the president's budget reportedly calls for:

— Roughly $25 billion in spending cuts and program eliminations and another $25 billion in proposed new user fees and the sale of federal assets, including loan portfolios.

— A dramatic overhaul of the government's credit programs, in which new loans would be sold to private investors soon after they were made and private insurance would be purchased to back up government loan guarantees.

— Another attempt at most of the 40 program eliminations the president had previously proposed.

— A proposed increase in defense spending of about 6 percent — made up of 3 percent in "real" increases on top of projected 3 percent inflation — to a spending level of $308 billion.

— No higher taxes and no decrease in Social Security benefits.

Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said the president's budget will "be accompanied with a lot of pain."

"There is no way to cut back or even restrain spending that doesn't create problems in the various departments," Sprinkel said.

Saudi Arabia paid for most weapons

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Saudi Arabia, playing a key role in a shadowy arms sales network with Israel, paid for most of the American weapons shipped to Iran, according to congressional and other sources.

"They've got the money and they are very deeply into it," a well-placed congressional aide said Wednesday. The aide, speaking on condition he not be identified, estimated the Saudi financial contribution at "in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

The Saudi connection added a curious twist to a complex affair. For several years, the oil-rich kingdom had been depicted as vulnerable to any spillover from Iran's war with Iraq.

The Saudis had lined up with most of the Arab world in backing Iraq against non-Arab Iran, paying for most of Iraq's weapons.

According to the congressional source, the Saudis also provided aid to anti-communist forces in Afghanistan, Nicaragua and Angola as a way of maintaining "good relations" with the United States.

Another source who also refused to be identified estimated the Saudis contributed a minimum of $60 million to $70 million, or about 70 percent of the cost of the packages of anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles.

"We did not know about the whole thing, the negotiation between Washington and Iran concerning the arms deal until it has become public," said Habib Shaheen, spokesman at the Saudi Embassy.

And the State Department said Wednesday, "We have no evidence that would suggest the Saudi government was involved in selling arms to Iran."

The Saudis are not natural allies of the Khomeini government in Tehran. The royal family is at the conservative end of the Moslem spectrum. The ayatollahs are at the radical end.

Scientists and rescue volunteers wrestle with a pilot whale in the shallow waters near Eastham, Mass.

Rescuers still at work trying to save Cape Cod whales

EASTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Volunteers and biologists who rescued nearly three dozen pilot whales beached along the Cape Cod coastline worked feverishly early today to save 10 others after 11 of the massive mammals died.

Some rescuers waded into shallow tidal pools and marshes along 20 miles of coast to cradle the heads of some to help them breathe after 50 of the whales, mostly females and calves from a pod of 100, swam ashore Wednesday.

"They're such mammoth animals. I've always held them in awe," said volunteer Peggy Christian. "To cradle the head of one to keep it up is sad. It's sad to be in a situation to be able to do that."

The black whales, 15 to 20 feet long, thrashed on the white sand and gasped for air through their blowholes. Volunteers, aided by Wednesday's incoming tide, managed to push many back into the water at least temporarily.

"They're really determined to do it, almost preprogrammed," said Sonny Famatter, a volunteer. "They keep sticking their heads back into the beach."

Ten whales, some weighing as much as 2 tons, remained stranded early today, and officials said they were in danger of suffocating under their own weight.

— The same planes and crews that carried non-lethal aid to the Contras also delivered weapons to the rebel fighters on other flights, The New York Times, quoting unidentified sources, said today. The flights occurred early in 1986, during a ban on U.S. military help to the rebels.

— Nancy Reagan, regarded as a major influence on her husband's staff decisions, said she has made "no recommendations at all" on whether the president should fire any more of his aides.

— Frank Carlucci, named by Reagan as his new national security adviser, once oversaw an unsuccessful undercover effort to harass Marxist South Yemen, The Washington Post reported today. Carlucci, deputy CIA director at the time, worked with British and Saudi Arabia in setting up the operation in 1979. The operation ended in 1982 when a team of CIA-trained Yemenis was captured trying to blow up a bridge, said the report, which quoted unidentified sources.

— The CIA denied a report it commingled profits from the Iran sales in the same account with funds for covert support for rebels in Afghanistan. "The only funds related to the Iran program that passed through agency hands were the $12 million owed to the Pentagon for the arms," which was passed on to the Defense Department, CIA spokesman George Lauder said.

But The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted an unidentified administration official as saying the commingling was a "dumb" decision by an overanxious CIA employee who was not willing to wait the several days required to establish a separate account for the Iranian money.

— Republican and Democratic leaders of the Senate sparred over whether Congress should be called back into a special session to immediately set up a Watergate-style investigative committee. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the current majority leader, said Reagan was still actively considering such a step, but Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who will take the majority reins in January, said to do so would be "a knee-jerk reaction."

— A Utah political consultant who was a classmate of North's at the Naval Academy said this week he is starting a legal defense fund for him. H. Keith Haines said he is trying to contact about 500 members of the Academy's class of 1968 to donate to the fund. He said North is unaware of the fund-raising effort.

In a speech to the conservative American Enterprise Institute, Bush said he had been aware of and supported Reagan's decision to seek a diplomatic opening with moderate elements inside the Iranian government and to ship arms there as a symbol of trust.

But he denied knowledge of the diversion of as much as $30 million in profits from the Ianian arms deal to the Contras. He said he opposed that move as well as any payment of ransom for hostages taken by terrorists.

Bush said "there is no denying our credibility has been damaged by this entire episode and its aftermath."

But he said it was important the situation not undercut support for the anti-Sandinista Contras. "The Sandinistas must not benefit from the errors of people in Washington, D.C.," he said.

Of the current congressional investigation and others sure to be launched in the coming months, he said: "If the truth hurts, so be it. We've got to take our lumps and move ahead."

One member of the intelligence committee, Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said the departures of North and Poindexter and Reagan's call for an independent counsel to launch a probe would not end the furor. That can be done, he said, only if Reagan himself "comes clean" and admits he knew about the entire episode.

"We don't have a Watergate, but we have a good chance of developing one if we continue on course," Hollings said. "We are coming down into quicksand if Colonel North takes the Fifth and we give him immunity, and before long we catch the president. I prefer that he catch himself."

Asked what he meant by "catch the president," Hollings said: "Catch him at having given the authority generally and having known about it." He said he was "positive" the president knew of the Iran-Contra connection. He said he had reached that conclusion on his own and not as a result of testimony during the committee's secret sessions.

Reagan has said "flat out" he did not know of the arrangement to finance the Contras with the weapons proceeds until told about it by Meese a week ago.

The eight to 10 witnesses heard by the panel so far this week have testified under unusually tight security and secrecy rules in a specially built hearing room in the Hart Senate Office Building. The large rectangular room, off-limits to those without special clearance, is like a vault, with shielding to make it electronically and acoustically impermeable.

INSURE

The group has received a $3 million loan from a Texas Association of Counties workmen's compensation insurance fund, that will be paid back as other counties join and premiums are collected, Brown said.

The key to the inexpensive insurance rates, which Brown predicts to be equal to or 25 percent below private industry rates, is the accumulation of money over the years.

The county now pays $33,139 for auto liability insurance and $18,830 for collision auto insurance, said Johnny Johnson with Johnny Johnson Insurance.

The county's rates for collision and liability auto insurance have increased about $2,000 each since last year, Johnson said.

For fire and general liability insurance, the county pays $57,000, which dropped down from $62,000 paid the year before, Johnson said.

Unlike other counties, Midland has had few claims or losses, so the cost of general liability insurance has decreased, Johnson said.

While the county has not had problems getting insurance, only one or two companies have offered bids for insurance, Brown said.

"We're basically restricted to one or two bidders," he said.

The county insurance pool would add another bidder to the insurance buying process, Brown said.

Brown said he expects the pool's initial rates to be competitive or below private insurance rates for the first three years.

"We expect the initial rates to be close to what the market rate is now for at least two to three years and from that point we expect a substantial reduction," he said.

By state law, counties cannot be sued for more than $100,000 for each person injured or up to $300,000 for each incident. The law also places a $100,000 limit on property damage.

The pool will insure the counties for these limits.

Brown said Midland County will be protected from paying for other counties' mistakes if they join the pool, because of these limits.

Joining the insurance pool will be an investment for the future, Brown said.

"It's an investment in the future. We put money in the pool and let the money sit there and earn interest," he said.

TEEN

A teen-ager's social environment is the most important single factor in determining whether she becomes pregnant, gives birth or has an abortion, the study found. It also linked high levels of religious fundamentalism with high birth rates and low abortion ratios, and found low pregancy and birth rates and relatively high abortion ratios in what it said were politically more liberal states.

States that spend most heavily on education have relatively high pregnancy and abortion rates, which the study said suggested that girls are more highly motivated to avoid childbearing in states where the quality of education is higher.

Ms. Munson said other studies show "Children who receive more sex education are less likely to become sexually active. They postpone it to a later age."

Also, "Teens who have had sex education courses are better users of contraceptive devices than those who have not had such courses.

"In the Permian Basin, there are no sex education courses in the public schools except in Odessa, and we have one of the highest teen pregnancy rates in the state," she said.

The level of a state's welfare payments to young mothers did not affect the birth rate, the study found, and states with comparatively high welfare payments also had high abortion levels.

Four Egyptian officers charged with conspiracy

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The country's top prosecutor today charged four military officers and 29 other men with forming an extremist Moslem organization in an attempt to overthrow the government.

The indictment issued by Prosecutor-General Mohammed el-Guindi committed the 33 defendants to a state security court for trial. No trial date was set.

The indictment cited penal code articles under which, if convicted, the defendants could be sentenced to hard labor for up to 25 years. The indictment was distributed by the official Middle East News Agency.

A senior official at the Interior Ministry, which oversees public security, said the defendants were arrested about four months ago. He said the officers were members of the reserve, and not on active duty. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

Cunning Assad

Amid the furor over Iran's sponsorship of terrorism, the role of Syria and its cunning leader, Hafez al-Assad, has been largely overshadowed. But Assad's involvement in terrorist attacks is much better documented, at least publicly, than that of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini or Libya's Moammar Gadhafi.

Courtrooms in London and Berlin have produced ample proof of the Syrian terror link. In November a British jury convicted Nazar Hindawi of trying to plant a time bomb aboard an Israeli jetliner in the suitcase of his pregnant Irish girlfriend. Hindawi testified that he had acted under instructions from Damascus and was aided by Syria's ambassador in London. On the basis of such irrefutable evidence, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher broke relations with the Assad regime.

In Germany, a Palestinian confessed in court that he collected a suitcase bomb from the Syrian embassy in East Berlin and smuggled the device into West Berlin. There he and an accomplice blew up the offices of the German-Arab Friendship Society, injuring nine persons. The accomplice, Ahmad Nawaf Hasi, is the brother of the terrorist convicted in London.

Ironically, Assad's support for terrorism has not resulted in Syria's ostracism from the community of civilized nations. On the contrary, Assad has been publicly praised for his assistance in arranging the release of hostages held in Lebanon.

Last year, even President Reagan telephoned the Syrian leader to thank him for helping in the release of American Jeremy Levin from captivity in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley of Lebanon. And many Americans still remember him as the hero who turned over downed Navy pilot Robert O. Goodman to the Rev. Jesse Jackson as the black leader was gearing up for his presidential campaign.

There's no doubt that Assad is a professional at playing "both sides against the middle." He had a hand in the kidnapping of many of the hostages and that fact should not be forgotten.

Assad is no defender of innocent victims. The world need not be grateful to the kidnapper for releasing his hostages unharmed when it suits his purposes.

Another View:
Tough selling job

Neil Kinnock, the leader of Britain's Labor Party, has a difficult trip ahead of him. His party has pledged to ban all nuclear weapons, both its own and American, from Britain if it should come to power in the election that will probably be held next year.

The purpose of his visit to the United States this week is to persuade Americans that a Britain divesting itself of nuclear arms would remain a reliable ally and a serious deterrent to Soviet adventuring. He is unlikely to succeed in any part of that mission.

Americans, contrary to the view widely entrenched on the European left, do not love nuclear bombs. They are hideous weapons that give pause to even the most callous commander of any country's armies.

They have one purpose, to keep peace, and they have kept it for more than four decades in Europe, a continent that suffered grievously in two great wars in the preceding generation.

It is possible to defend Europe without nuclear weapons. Many military officers, including Americans, have testified to that. But to achieve the same balance, the Western allies would need many more men under arms and much more money.

Kinnock will speak to that point. He will argue that as prime minister in a Labor government, he would cancel the Conservatives' plans for new Trident missile submarines and use the money to augment Britain's conventional forces.

But the opposition to all military spending has been rising in the Labor Party. It is altogether implausible that Kinnock in power could match the conservatives' military budgets, let alone exceed them.

If Britain ruled out all nuclear weapons, including the American weapons now at British bases, the United States would not respond by retreating into isolationism, as some Europeans fear, or by pulling all its troops home from Europe.

But it would have to conclude that Britain had begun to think of itself as a small country, like Denmark or New Zealand.

The United States has the military power to protect Europe as long as it has allies there, and as long as it has allies, it will work with them. If Britain refuses to share the responsibilities for the West's nuclear defense and the world's nuclear peace, NATO will not instantly crumble.

But in the absence of this country's closest European friend, the job of maintaining that balance would be more disagreeable.

The strength of the Western alliance has never been purely, or even primarily, military. It has always depended on qualities of spirit and political conviction to which the Europeans' contributions have been essential.

Kinnock is doubtless right in thinking that, at least in the short run, nothing very dramatic would happen if he came to power and carried out Labor's promises.

But he would be quite wrong to assume that a Britain moving toward unilateral nuclear disarmament would mean a safer or more stable Europe.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Dec. 4, the 338th day of 1986. There are 27 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Dec. 4, 1783, Gen. George Washington bade farewell to his officers at Fraunces Tavern in New York. In a choked voice, the departing commander of the Continental Army said, "With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you."

On this date:

In 1816, James Monroe of Virginia was elected the fifth president of the United States, defeating Federalist Rufus King.

In 1875, William Marcy Tweed, the boss of New York City's Tammany Hall political organization, escaped from jail and fled the country.

In 1918, President Woodrow Wilson set sail for France to attend the Versailles Peace Conference, becoming the first chief executive to travel outside the United States while in office.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the liquidation of the Works Progress Administration, which had been created in 1935 to provide work for the unemployed during the Depression.

In 1942, U.S. bombers struck the Italian mainland for the first time in World War II.

In 1945, the Senate approved U.S. participation in the United Nations.

In 1965, the United States launched Gemini VII, with Air Force Lt. Col. Frank Borman and Navy Cmdr. James A. Lovell aboard.

In 1980, the bodies of four American churchwomen slain in El Salvador were unearthed. Five national guardsmen were later convicted of murdering them.

Ten years ago: Benjamin Britten, one of the leading composers of the 20th century, died at his English farmhouse at age 63.

Five years ago: President Reagan expressed concern over intelligence reports that a terrorist squad trained in Libya had entered the United States on a mission to assassinate him or other officials.

One year ago: President Reagan announced the appointment of Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter as national security adviser, succeeding Robert C. McFarlane.

Today's Birthdays: Actress-singer Deanna Durbin is 65. Actor Victor French is 52.

JACK ANDERSON
Safety no joke, except in U.S. Army

WASHINGTON — American soldiers continue to die needlessly in accidents that could have been prevented if the Army would take safety instruction seriously.

Jack Anderson

Part of the problem is a sort of macho, fatalistic belief by young officers and enlisted men that accidental deaths and injuries are an inevitable price to be paid for realistic training exercises.

The Army's own inspector general holds the high command responsible for failing to drill safety into the officer corps and to see that recruits are taught how to avoid accidents starting in basic training.

The inspector general has set forth his views in a highly critical report, not meant for public perusal. A copy obtained by our associate Stewart Harris is stamped on each page: "FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY. This document contains information EXEMPT FROM MANDATORY DISCLOSURE."

This desire for secrecy is understandable. Among the embarrassing information in the report, for example, is a survey of officer candidates at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., which found that:

— 22 percent said they "infrequently or never" thought about safety on the job.

— 15 percent said their superiors gave safety "little or no importance" either on or off duty.

— 17 percent said safety rules often interfered with realistic field training.

In another survey at a different Army base, half of those polled said they believed it is "inevitable that accidents will occur on duty in their unit." In a third survey of enlisted men and officers, one out of three guffawed at the idea of safety measures in field training.

The inspector general included several examples of fatal accidents that might have been prevented if the officer in charge had received proper safety training — or had been taught to get his priorities straight.

One such incident involved a soldier who was run over by a 30-ton, self-propelled howitzer during a night exercise. The young battery commander had refused to let the howitzer crew turn on its headlights to spot the soldier on foot, who was acting as "gun guide."

"This was caused by a sense of urgency to get all of his (howitzers) into position on a timed portion" of the exercise, the inspector general's report stated, adding: "The battery commander believed that the unit would fail that portion of the (exercise) if driving lights were used to locate the missing gun guide."

Throughout the chain of command, the inspector general found, there is a reluctance to blame anyone but the soldiers directly involved in an accident. Even on bases where safety is supposedly given a high priority, it is not included on the commander's job evaluation.

Furthermore, the number and quality of safety inspectors are inadequate. Morale is often low because of poor chances for promotion, and wide pay discrepancies abound, with some safety officers earning little more than enlisted men while civilians with the same duties can make up to $50,000 a year.

"Numerous examples of improperly conducted accident investigations and inaccurate accident reports were found during the inspection," the report notes.

Examples from more than 300 accident reports included such unhelpful explanations of the cause of injury as "struck by passenger seat," "ejected from vehicle" and "not applicable." Descriptions of accidents included: "At some point both riders were separated from the motorcycle," and "The soldier was new on post and the alcohol in the driver's body combined to cause the accident."

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Khomeini-watching is still a growth industry in Washington intelligence circles. Fueled by the Reagan administration's ill-starred arms deal, which the White House claimed began as a feeler toward potentially friendly Iranian officials who might succeed the 86-year-old ayatollah, speculation on the state of Khomeini's health continues apace. The trouble is that the inside scoop coming out of Iran is hopelessly contradictory. He's had a heart attack; he hasn't. He's dying; he's doing fine. You pays your money and you takes your choice.

AIDS & TOURISM: Americans traveling abroad may soon face discrimination because of fears that they will bring exposure to AIDS, the fatal disease spread by sexual contact. Japanese authorities have reported an outbreak of AIDS cases and claim to have traced them all to contact with visiting Americans. Mainland China has had no cases of AIDS yet, but Chinese authorities are said to be nervous about the growing influx of American tourists. The Swedes are also reported to be concerned. U.S. medical specialists of the disease say they wouldn't blame foreign governments if they instituted screening measures for incoming Americans.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The burden of worrying about foreign policy, Wall Street chicanery, the budget deficit and holiday traffic snarls is pretty exhausting, so we're grateful for one small favor: There is nothing we can do about the "ozone hole" over the South Pole until scientists figure out its cause, and so far they haven't been able to. The finger of suspicion points to chemical gases used in refrigeration, but apparently it would be premature to scrap all our air conditioners until more studies are done. What a relief! At this rate, we could have our worrying over the 1988 election out of the way before we have to ponder the ozone hole.

Poles still forced to live 'as if we were free'

WARSAW, Poland — Life in Poland goes on. There isn't much news, which some Poles say is a good sign that things aren't so bad, and others say is a bad sign of how glum and depressing things have become. Even the usual daily supply of fresh, tart political jokes seems to have narrowed to a trickle.

Flora Lewis

The gap between the rulers and the ruled is immense and unbridged. The regime keeps trying one way and another to woo at least the toleration, if not active allegiance of its dispirited people so as to renew their energies. But most Poles simply go about their personal lives, scrabbling for necessities and what comforts they can find, and ignore the "prominenz," the people in power.

They are evidently trying, as best they can, to act on the advice of writer Adam Michnik to "live as if we were free." His remarkable phrase sums up the situation. The Poles have simply taken for themselves certain liberties that the state will not grant and that they exercise in the interstices of the regime's diminished power.

Or, in another way that Michnik puts it, "Instead of having socialism with a human face, we live under a communism which had its teeth knocked out."

Poles envy Hungarians their much better living standards, and Hungarians envy Poles their vigorous assertion of intellectual freedom. There is still a flourishing illegal press that pours out a stream of papers, books, tapes and now even videocassettes. Many are of a marvelous quality, sparkling with humor and the uncanny clarity of high talent.

Political prisoners have been freed. People live without fear, but they are producing poorly because there are no incentives, neither material nor ideological nor moral. The regime keeps trying to spur them but with half-measures, concessions that once would have been considered tremendous in a communist state but that no longer evoke hope or even much interest.

The deadlock is profound and there is no visible way out. The regime has even come to speak of "the opposition" instead of the underground or the enemy, but the only political truce is one of impotence, on both sides.

The government looks for stimulation from abroad. It claims that U.S. sanctions have cost Poland $15 billion directly and indirectly since 1982, and it is looking for a new infusion of foreign money in aid and trade when sanctions are lifted, which is likely fairly soon. And it is looking for a new infusion of enthusiasm and effort when the pope comes to visit early next summer, after a planned trip next year to Rome and the Vatican by Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the leader.

Senior officials talk of introducing "socialist pluralism" and "gradually broadening our socialist democracy." They make a distinction between what they call the "moderate opposition" and the adamant opponents of the system, hoping to lure the less hostile into a compromise that would give them the trappings of official legitimacy without conceding any actual power.

None of all this seems likely to prove effective. It is too late, there have been too many disappointments and too much disillusion. But neither are there any signs of another confrontation looming. The opposition leaders are weary and know their limitations, the once ardent followers have withdrawn from the futile fray.

It is the story of post-war Poland that every decade has its upheavals. Each time new leaders suddenly emerge from the unknown, and when their hopes are dashed, they fade away. And repetition can be expected some years from now, because the young are the most determined, the most unyielding. Eventually, they are likely to take their turn at trying to change Poland decisively, and when they do it will be in full awareness of all that has gone before, all the lessons that their elders had to learn.

The common tangible yearning, among those involved in the regime and their critics alike, is to become a fully accepted part of Europe, an "ordinary country" as even supporters of the government put it. "How can it be that 40 years after the war we still have to live this way?" said an elderly man who spent his adult life in the regime's service.

Little spill-over benefit is anticipated from Mikhail Gorbachev's reform program for the Soviet Union. It falls so far short of the unsatisfactory level Poland has already reached. So the outlook is unchanging for the time being, but so are the distant goals. Meanwhile, in their absence, Poles make do with living "as if ..." Ersatz is better than nothing.

ART BUCHWALD
$30 million question gets plug nickel answer

Now for some questions about the $12 million Iranian misunderstanding.

Who in the White House knew what was going on in the Iran arms deal?

Art Buchwald

A U.S. Marine colonel and a bank teller on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Did the CIA know?

No, because all the arms were shipped in sealed wooden cases marked, "Do Not Open Until Christmas." The CIA always honors requests like that.

The President said the arms hardly filled one airplane. Now it turns out it was bigger than the Berlin Airlift. What does one make of that?

Since the President didn't know anything about the operation he was in the dark as to what transportation was needed to ship the weapons. He was under the impression you could put 500 antitank guns under an airplane seat.

Although the President didn't know, did he suspect certain people of being involved in a shady deal?

From the start he has been suspicious of a lady who lives in a welfare hotel in New York City on $37,000 a month.

Did the President ever meet anyone in the White House who roused his suspicions as to what was going on?

There was one occasion when the President was in the basement looking for his dog. He ran into a Marine officer who was sticking long-range nuclear missiles into Federal Express boxes. The President asked the Marine what he was doing and the leatherneck replied, "I'm sending flu shots to my mother."

How were the arms paid for?

This was the brilliance of the operation. After the planes arrived in Tehran an Iranian rug merchant sent $30 million to a butcher in Tel Aviv, who took the money and deposited it in Karl Malden's American Express account in Morocco, where it was turned into traveler's checks and forwarded to the First National Chocolate Bank of Geneva. Then the traveler's checks were sent to retired General Secord, manager of the Club Med for contras in Central America.

It sounds very neat. Where did it go wrong?

A story appeared in Beirut in a Syrian magazine blowing the whistle on what was going on in Tehran. It told about former moderate NSC director Bud McFarlane's role in forwarding arms to Iran in exchange for hostages. The news of arms-for-hostages got George Shultz mad and he said he would never launder the Ayatollah's money. This statement got Nancy Reagan mad because it showed once again Shultz wasn't a team player.

What was the first thing the people in the White House did after the story broke?

They shredded the evidence.

Why?

To save the country.

What was the second thing they did?

They blamed the press for smelling blood.

If the President didn't know about it, isn't he grateful to the press for telling him what was going on?

Not when his bile is up.

So what comes next?

The White House is talking seriously about throwing out the baby with the bathwater.

That should solve it.

It has constitutional problems. If the President knows about the baby, he has to know about the bathwater.

Chopper crash delays experiment of 'nuclear winter,' pilot unharmed

SAN DIMAS, Calif. (AP) — A helicopter crash delayed an experiment to study whether smoke and dust from atomic war would trigger a "nuclear winter," but NASA said it gathered important data about the greenhouse effect that warms Earth's atmosphere.

The Los Angeles County Fire Department helicopter had dumped flaming gasoline to ignite a five-acre test burn Wednesday when the cable suspending the torch from the craft snagged on utility lines, causing it to crash.

Pilot Gary Lineberry, 46, suffered scratches and was treated at a hospital and released.

The test burn was to have been followed by a brushfire of up to 480 acres. Several hundred scientists and firefighters trekked to the Lodi Canyon area of the Angeles National Forest's San Dimas Experimental Forest 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles to watch the $750,000 experiment.

The main fire was postponed until at least Tuesday because unfavorable wind and cloud conditions were forecast for the rest of this week and Monday is needed to prepare, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Steve Raybould.

The large blaze initially had been planned to reduce the wildfire hazard by clearing dead brush, but attracted Pentagon-funded scientists and others who want to study how smoke from an atomic war might blot out sunlight to plunge Earth into a dark, chilly "nuclear winter."

National Aeronautics and Safety Administration scientist Wesley "Randy" Cofer III was in a second helicopter that flew through smoke from the test burn and "obtained important measurements of gases" that aggravate the greenhouse effect, said NASA atmospheric chemist Joel Levine.

Gordon Rowley of the Forest Service said that if the experiment doesn't take place by Dec. 15 or 16, it probably will have to be delayed until June because of difficulty in assembling the needed scientific aircraft under favorable weather conditions.

Fire Capt. Garry Oversby said the cause of the crash wasn't immediately known, but it was possible that smoke may have blocked the pilot's view of the utility wire or that air heated by the test burn was too thin for the chopper to get adequate lift.

The National Transportation Safety Board will investigate, said county fire spokeswoman Deborah Shackelford.

Oversby said the Bell helicopter was badly damaged as it crashed and rolled 30 yards down a steep slope. The tail rotor dug into the ground, breaking on impact and sending a piece flying into the door of a nearby Forest Service fire truck.

The torch began a small spot fire after the crash, but those flames and the test fire were extinguished quickly, Oversby said.

Hearst appoints Susanna McBee to be News Editor of its Washington Bureau

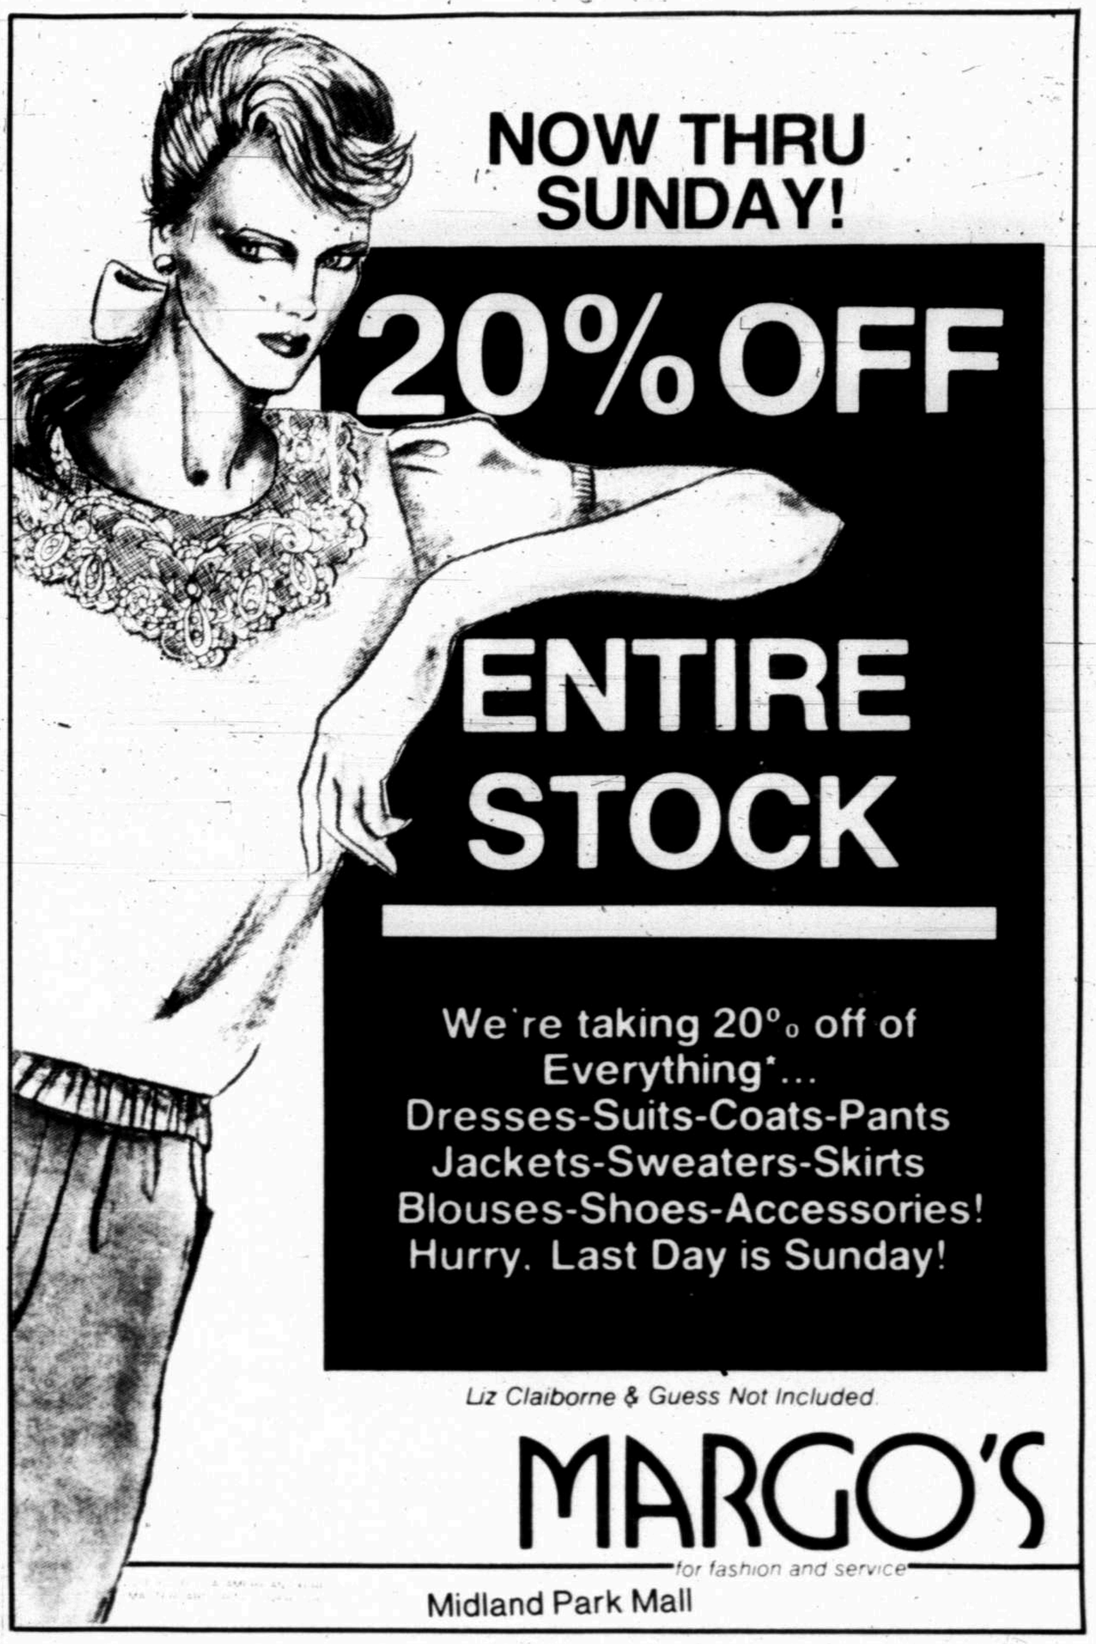

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Appointment of Susanna McBee as News Editor of the Washington Bureau of the Hearst News and Special Feature Service was announced today by Bureau Chief Robert E. Thompson.

A highly respected journalist in the nation's capital, Ms McBee has been an associate editor of U.S. News and World Report since June, 1981. She worked at the Washington Post for nearly 15 years, serving as a national staff writer and then as an editor from January, 1973, to April, 1979. She left the Washington Post in the latter year after President Carter nominated her as assistant secretary for public affairs in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Before joining U.S. News, Ms. McBee was articles editor of the Washingtonian Magazine. Earlier, she was Washington Editor of McCall's Magazine for three years and before that a Washington correspondent of Life Magazine for four years. At Life, she won the Penney-Missouri Magazine Award and the Sigma Delta Chi public service award for articles that revealed a medical scandal involving dangerous diet pills.

A native of Santa Fe, N.M., Ms. McBee started her journalistic career as a news aide at the Washington Post in 1956. After five years at the Post, she took a leave of absence to study constitutional law as a Falk Fellow at the University of Chicago, where she earned a masters degree in political science before returning to the newspaper.

Extended forecast

West Texas: Increasing cloudiness Saturday. Turning colder Sunday and Monday with a chance of rain, possibly snow Panhandle and South Plains. Panhandle and South Plains lows 30s Saturday cooling to 20s Sunday and Monday.

High in 50s due Friday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny and cool is the National Weather Service forecast for Friday. The high is expected to be in the middle 50s with winds out of the south-southeast at five to 15 mph.

The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is calling for an overnight low tonight in the upper 20. Under partly cloudy skies, winds will be light and variable.

Wednesday's high of 60 was 23 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1954. Today's freezing 32-degree low was 12 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1934.

STATE

Skies were fair over Texas early today because of a high pressure area north of the state, but fog was seen in parts of North Central and Central Texas.

A northwest wind flowed across most of the state except in the High Plains where a south wind blew. Wind speeds were in the 5 mph to 10 mph range.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 20s in West Texas to the 60s in the far South.

At 4 a.m., the extremes were 22 at Marfa and 63 at McAllen.

In the forecast, North Texas should be partly cloudy and cold tonight with lows in the 30s. A bit warmer on Friday with highs in the mid to upper 50s.

South Texas should be cool tonight. Scattered showers were expected to spread north tonight. Friday should be a little warmer with highs from the mid 50s and 60s. Lows tonight should range from near 40 in the north to the mid 50s in the south.

West Texas should be cooler tonight, but sunny and warmer Friday. Lows tonight whould be in the mid 20s in the Panhandle and the mid 30s in the South. Highs Friday should be mostly in the 50s, except west of the mountains where readings should be in the 60s.

NATION

Strong winds whipped up snow in the Great Lakes region today and combined with low temperatures to produce bitter wind chills in the Plains and upper Midwest.

Lake-effect snow squalls and west winds prevailed from Michigan across northern Ohio and western Pennsylvania to western New York.

A snow squall warning for as much as 6 inches of snow in some areas was in effect near the eastern end of Lakes Erie and Ontario.

A travelers' advisory for snow and blowing snow was issued for northwest Pennsylvania and northern Michigan.

Soil conservation measure 'bother' to area farmers

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The federal government's "sodbuster" conservation provision is causing some concern among Midland area farmers.

"Sodbuster" is a soil-conservation provision of the Food Security Act of 1985 (the farm bill). It denies farmers eligibility for certain U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) programs if farmers "break out a field of high erodible grassland or woodland to plant crops without following a conservation plan" approved by the USDA's Soil Conservation Service.

"Farmers take pride in their land," said Greenwood farmer Roy Graham. "They are going to take care of their land."

However, he said that the "over abundance of government intervention bothers me."

"There's nothing wrong with the intentions of the program," Graham said. "Farmers need to take care of their soil. But it needs to be done on an individual basis."

If the farmer can get "a decent price" for commodities produced on his land, "he can afford to take care of his land," Graham said. "You take care of the hand (the land) that feeds you."

Midland area farmers are to have their conservation plans prepared and approved by the SCS here by 1990 and are to implement those plans by 1995.

But Dick Hagelstein, the recently retired district conservationist for the SCS office for Midland County, said many farmers are "starting now" to implement conservation measures "for their own benefit."

"WE'RE STEWARDS of this land," Hagelstein said. "And throughout history, we've abused it. I don't know if we'll ever change."

The "sodbuster" provision calls for anti-erosion measures such as strip-cropping, over-seeding cotton with wheat after the harvest season, planting rows perpendicular to the prevailing wind, and drill-planting as opposed to till-planting.

Strip-cropping with a forage sorghum would provide wind-breaks to cut down on wind erosion in cotton fields. The cover crop and cotton would be planted in uniform patterns and in alternating rows. Over-seeding cotton fields with wheat would minimize erosion during the November-to-April season of critical winds. And drilling planting, which would call for new and expensive planting equipment, would cut down on wind erosion. The land would not be turned as it is in till farming.

"I have mixed emotions," Hagelstein said. "I am for soil-and-water conservation. The timing is terrible because of the economic situation."

The use of strip-cropping would cut back on the number of acres the farmers could plant in his cash crop, which in the Midland area is cotton.

"There are some farmers that are not going to be able to operate under this program," Hagelstein said. "This is going to put them out of business. ...There's no ideal solution to any of this. There's no way you can fight Mother Nature."

TOMAS DOMINGUEZ, SCS range conservationist who has been named acting district conservationist here, said that the "sodbuster" provision calls for holding down wind erosion to five tons per acre per year for the Amarillo fine sandy loam soil that is prevalent in Midland County. Currently, wind erosion accounts for aprroximately 25 tons to 40 tons per acre per year, Hagelstein noted.

"We can live with that loss (five tons per acre)," Dominguez said.

Lake site designated state park

By JANE MARLER DEES

The Lubbock Lake Site — nationally acclaimed as a historical landmark and a wealth of information for archaeologists studying the Paleoindian period (10,000-5,000 B.C.) — has been designated a state historical park by a vote of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

"We are very excited about this. We think it will be a phenomenal interpretive device and well-received by Texans as well as those who will come from out of state to visit it," said Ron Ralph, archaeologist for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin.

The site is situated on the Yellowhouse Draw near Buddy Holly Lake and Canyon Lake, an area located on the northern outskirts of Lubbock off Loop 289, Shirley Rendleman, a spokeswoman for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Lubbock, said.

"The 300-acre site contains evidence of continuous human occupation from approximately 11,000 B.C. to the present," Ms. Rendleman said.

Unanswered City Hall calls 'frustrating'

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

An unanswered telephone's monotonous ring — and a feeling of frustration — may greet callers to City Hall.

Even while backup switchboard operators remain in training, the city's current phone system may be inadequate to answer a sometimes huge caller backlog, Public Works Director Fred Baker said Wednesday.

The city's head switchboard operator, Nancy Lambert, said this morning that during extremely busy periods, her Hitachi EX10 switchboard periods logs up to 350 incoming calls during a 15-minute period.

Because Ms. Lambert can answer about 14 calls a minute, that means some calls don't get answered at all, she said.

At least three city councilmembers agreed Wednesday that the unanswered calls are a bother.

"It happens almost every afternoon," said At-Large Councilmember Gordon Marcum III. "I just let it ring, and they cut me off. (Then) I just redial."

Marcum, who said he calls City Hall "a couple of times a day," worries about the frustration citizens who call fairly infrequently might feel.

District 2 Councilmember Oralia Corrales said the plight of an elderly person who calls to report a fire or other emergency is of most concern to her. "I know we're supposed to be familiar with 911 (the direct-dial number for reporting emergencies), but not all of us are," she said.

"City Hall is there to serve all of the citizens of Midland," observed District 1 Councilmember David Godfrey. "It gives a terrible impression for a citizen to call over there and the phone not be answered."

Baker said the problem is further aggravated by back-up operators who as yet are unfamiliar with the different extensions that callers want to reach.

Callers who are unsure which department they need and must be helped also add to the time between answered calls, Ms. Lambert said.

The current phone system problem is not the same as one callers experienced in October, when heavy rains affected the actual phone lines, Cliff Bailey, a technician with Universal Communications Systems — the company that holds the city phone service contract — said Wednesday.

Wet phone lines caused some calls not to ring at city switchboard, Bailey said, adding that the lines now are in good working order.

City administrators are taking a wait-and-see attitude toward fixing the current problem. If backup switchboard operators gain greater facility with the system and the number of unanswered calls diminishes, no city action may be necessary, Baker said.

However, if the problem persists, the public works director offered two solutions. At a cost of about $17,000, the city could install an automatic answering machine that would queue callers for later answering, he said.

Two other local government entities are currently installing this kind of system, he said, and city administrators would like to determine the success of those systems before committing to one of their own.

A second solution would be spending $12,000 for another switchboard and an estimated $15,000 yearly for a second full-time operator, he said.

The first solution seemed best to Godfrey. "I think that right now — given the financial situation and government constraints — the recording would probably be adequate," he said.

But Ms. Corrales found the second solution more appealing. "I'm hesitant about an answering machine," she said, adding her concern for emergency callers.

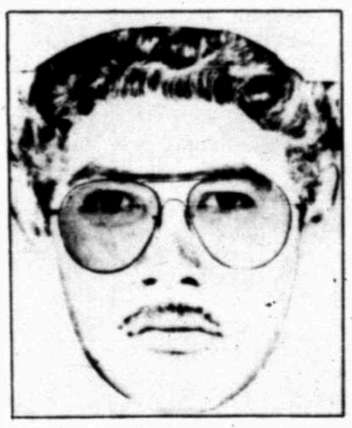

Whichever solution is finally chosen — or whether a solution is deemed necessary at all — the problem may continue for six months to a year, Baker said.

Nancy Lambert, head switchboard operator at City Hall, takes a quick break between calls at her Hitachi EX10 switchboard. Ms. Lambert says she sometimes receives up to 350 calls during a 15 minute period and some calls may go unanswered because she can only take about 14 callers in a minute.

Composite sketch made of man who allegedly threatened women

The Midland County Constable's Office released this composite sketch of a man wanted for questioning in connection with downtown incidents in which young women have been accosted.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland County Constable's Office has released a composite sketch of a man wanted for questioning in connection with threats he allegedly made against two women while he held a pair of panty hose.

Deputy Constable Ron Rice said although the man has not physically assaulted anyone yet, authorities are anxious to talk to him.

"He has been a genuine threat to at least two women," Rice said. "They believed the threat was there."

The man is described as "a neat dresser" in his early to mid 20s, 5 feet 7 to 5 feet 9 inches tall, with a stocky build. Authorities said he is "polite" when he speaks.

Deputy Constable Benny Matlock said there have been 10 reported incidents involving the man in the last eight weeks. He said the man typically approaches young, attractive, professional women in the downtown area and asks directions. The incidents have usually occurred between 7 and 8 a.m., and 5 and 6 p.m., and authorities said it is possible the man works downtown.

"In two instances, he has produced a pair of panty hose from a pocket, and threatens them with his gestures," Matlock said. He said initially women are not afraid of the man, since his dress and manner are not unusual.

Anyone with information about the man is asked to call the Midland County Constable's office.

Police Roundup

The Midland County Sheriff's office is investigating the latest in a string of residential burglaries that have occurred this week.

According to reports, a mobile home on County Road 1220 South between CR 116 West and CR 118 West was burglarized Wednesday, between noon and 3 p.m. A woman's cocktail ring valued at $400, a man's diamond ring valued at $300, a .22 caliber pistol valued at $60, $35 in silver dollars, and assorted other jewelry were reported stolen.

Deputies are also investigating the burglary of Twin Oaks grocery on Cottonflat Road. According to reports, 29 cartons of cigarettes valued at $290 were stolen after someone used a rock to break a plate glass window at the business. The burglary occurred between 2:45 a.m. and 3 a.m. today, reports said.

Midland police are investigating the burglary of a residence in the 3500 block of Baumann Street. According to reports, a diamond and gold chain valued at $500, a cable television converter box, a 13-inch color television set valued at $200, and a pocket knife valued at $20 were stolen. The burglary occurred between 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Man seems to hear Thoreau's 'different drummer'

The thin man with the full white bushy beard looked like a walking pawn shop. He was the bearer of trinkets, brass bells, an Iron Cross, and other what-nots dangling from his waist and pinned to his baseball cap.

He walked lightly in his winter garb and traveled alone like a cat who preferred to be the murmuring outcast rather than howling with the others.

He filled his supper plate; it needed sideboards.

Were he to eat such generous square meals regularly, it seems, his slender stature would give way to a pot belly.

He sat apart from the others in the upper room of the Salvation Army. They, who were ravenous, were interested in piling on the food and downing it to fuel their bodies to stave off the cold dampness that would envelop their bodies in the night. They were homeless.

"People say I am crazy," said the thin man, who called himself "J.R."

He didn't seem to mind. He knew he wasn't.

"Every individual is God's own individual creation," said J.R. "Do not put him down for it but hold him up for what he is — God's individual creation."

J.R. was secretive and protective about his past 50 years and about how he perceived others might have labeled him. He seemed to fit Thoreau's "different drummer" observation: "Why should we be in such desperate haste to succeed?"

J.R. seemed not to mind.

"If a man does not keep pace with his companions," Thoreau, the transcendentalist, wrote, "perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer."

J.R. reflected more of an interest in word games and philosophy than he did in the task of competing in the world and succeeding according to Wall Street Journal standards.

"What's the definition of nothing?" he asked. "How would you spell the definition of nothing? They' said it's space; that's not true. Nothing," he imparted, "is no-thing."

Though he looked hungry, J.R. seemed oblivious to his tray of food even as he hovered over it.

He conjured up, obviously with much forethought, a 35-letter word which he was certain was not in any man's published dictionary: Mintaporeatelacontroadestroalepathy.

He was so sure of its meaning: "Mind power — reading and telling and controlling and destroying another mind."

He drifted into a chant:

"Tinkle, tinkle little bell," he volunteered, "how I wonder what the hell." Wonder all you want but toil not, he said, and the "answer will come to your mind."

He imparted more of his word-game vocabulary: Werwolvampiranamaghohisatanicist: "Werewolf vampire animal ghost satan in person."

J.R. hardly seemed to notice his food. He was so consumed in his verbiage. His world of free-flight transcended the work-a-day mundane existence. Most of the other desperate fellows already had fled the Salvation Army's upper dining room and kitchen and returned either to bunks to bed down for the night or entered the cold darkness. J.R. would retreat to safety, not of a home, but to a darkened corner where he would not be noticed during the night.

J.R. had hardly touched his food. He had tarried too long. He transferred his food from the tray to a carry-out container and peacefully, almost dancing, breezed down the steps and entered the night to return to his homeless home.

His word-game entertainment went from the battle of the sexes to political prophecies.

"The female is smarter," he said, "because her power is here and now."

He prophesied on world events and chanted, as he drifted into the darkness with his box of food.

"May not be true," he sang. "May not be right. But I don't care."

Blaze causes heavy damage to wood house

From Staff Reports

Fire broke out early today in a wood frame house near County Road 1192 South, causing heavy damage but causing no injuries, according to Midland Fire Department reports.

Four units and nine firefighters responded to the blaze about 1:30 a.m. on CR 1192 just north of CR 125 West. Reports said the home was fully involved when firefighters reached the scene.

Fire officials said the blaze, which caused heavy fire damage to the attic and smoke damage throughout the house, was started after a vent in the attic overheated. The cause of the fire was an improperly installed wood stove, reports said.

Texas man charged

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A man wanted in Texas on a murder charge was formally charged on Wednesday with attempting to kill four police officers during a gun battle in which he was wounded.

Moises Arispe, 27, was charged with four counts of attempted murder with the use of a handgun.

The shoot-out started when Arispe allegedly waved a gun in a bar, according to police. One officer was slightly wounded when he was struck by an apparent ricochet from the gunman's 9mm pistol.

Dozier: Money not used as ransom

WAUCHULA, Fla. (AP) — The $500,000 that Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot deposited in an Italian bank after the 1981 kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Dozier was intended to buy knowledge, not freedom, Dozier said.

"It was not to be used as ransom. It was to be used to obtain information," said Dozier, who was the senior American officer at a NATO base in Verona, Italy, when he was kidnapped.

It is "perfectly proper" and makes "impeccable sense" for those with the resources to support efforts to get information about kidnapped countrymen, Dozier told The Tampa Tribune in a story published Wednesday.

"I sure as heck appreciate what Mr. Perot did on my behalf," he said.

Dozier, currently an executive with Golden Grove Management Corp. citrus company in this west coast Florida town, said he is strongly opposed to paying ransom.

"I categorically object to fueling the engine of terrorism whether it be done by a national government or an individual," said Dozier.

Dozier said he learned of Perot's activity soon after he was rescued from his Red Brigade captors by Italian police commandos in early 1982, 42 days after his kidnapping on Dec. 17, 1981.

He said the dramatic rescue made use of the money unnecessary and the $500,000 was returned to Perot.

Most recently, Perot said he placed $2 million in a Swiss bank account as part of a secret transaction to secure the release of American hostages in Lebanon.

Perot's secret activies on behalf of the U.S. government date back to at least 1969, when he agreed to work behind the secnes for the Nixon administation in an effort to improve treatment of American prisoners in Vietnam.

Christmas tree lights to be lit

From Staff Reports

The City of Midland's Annual Christmas Tree Lighting Festival will be at 6 p.m. Friday at the Centennial Plaza Park. The event is co-sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department, Fire Department and Midland Jaycees.

The evening entertainment will include the following: "Dance with Class," twirlers under the direction of Carla Macaw and Sherri Chernesky, a routine by Jazzercise, the Alamo Scout band and choir, Bingham Dancers, the "Masterringers" from Crestview Baptist Church, and a solo twirling performance by Christy Hamilton.

Hay rides will be provided by Charlie Welch. Also, Santa will be in his house to visit with the children.

Two bicycles have been donated and will be given to a boy and a girl at a drawing.

Job-seekers to be on telethon

ODESSA (AP) — Job-seekers will go on television today to advertise their skills to potential employers.

It's the second "Opportunities Telethon" sponsored by television station KPEJ and the Texas Employment Commission.

At least four people found jobs after the first telethon Oct. 23, said Ron Norris of the employment commission.

"I guess if there is one, it's worth it," Norris said.

The show will air live from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m..

KPEJ Operations Manager Michael T. Walenta said interviews with job-seekers will be interspersed with descriptions of job openings.

Walenta said he expects more job seekers on camera than the 20 who participated in the first telethon. Norris said the commission expects to meet its goal of 50 participants.

Finalists were Tim Brower, Shannon Gassie, Scott Thompson, Suzanne Bryant and Mike Hosey, reader's theatre "Classed Dismissed;" Tim Brower, fourth place in dramatic interpretation; and Mike Hosey, original oratory.

Winners from Midland High School were semifinalists Amy Furgeson, poetry; Jennifer Helms, poetry and dramatic interpretation; Danica Milios, poetry and humorous interpretation; Stephen Murrell, prose; Iris Brito, poetry; and Melissa Akins, humorous interpretation.

Finalists were Jennifer Helms, poetry; Stephen Murrell, prose; Danica Milios, humorous interpretation and poetry and second place in poetry.

Man charged in theft

HOUSTON (AP) — Police charged one man and were looking for another in the theft of a U-Haul moving truck taken from a Houston family on their way to a new home in St. Louis, officials said.

Charles Glenn Musser, 22, of Houston was charged Wednesday with theft and unauthorized use of a vehicle and remained in Harris County Jail today in lieu of $7,000 bond, jail spokeswoman Kathleen Scott said.

Houston police were searching today for another suspect, a 30-year-old man, Sgt. Bob Kuehn said.

The two men and perhaps a third allegedly stole the 24-foot truck and a 12-foot trailer from a hotel parking lot on Thanksgiving rented by Dale and Annette Allen.

SOIL

"My main thing is to get you guys in compliance with this program," he told almost 50 farmers in the Midland-Greenwood-Warfield-Midkiff areas at Midland Soil and Water Conservation District's Sibley Learning Center on Wednesday. "There is no alternative. This thing is mandated by law."

Dominguez said that he and Herb Sorley, county executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASCS) office for Midland County, would work with Midland County farmers in setting up their conservation plans.

Not all farmers were pleased with the mandatory provision of the program.

"We can't even go to the bathroom without asking for permission," lamented Ron Stanley. "That's what it amounts to."

"This contract is flexible," Dominguez said. "We can do anything we like to keep this soil from blowing and washing away. We're mainly concerned with wind erosion. We are lucky in a sense that we don't have to deal with water (erosion) problems."

BUT AT LEAST a couple of farmers expressed concern over draws which meander through their land. The draws have caused flooding problems from time to time.

"What about Midland Draw?" asked Greenwood farmer Rick Evans. "It runs right through my farm. What are we doing to do about that?"

"What are we going to do about Monahans Draw?" asked George Anderson.

Quipped a farmer: "Stock it."

Farmer-rancher Hoot Leonard noted that Midland County's "main problem" is blowing winds. "Our soil already is shallow.

"We don't have much top soil," he said. "We can't afford to lose it."

Said Charlie Green, retired agricultural agent for Midland County: "It's a terrible problem. It's hard to make a go of it and comply with the good (conservation) program even if you want to comply." Green said that there's an "economic limit" to implementing even "the best conservation program." They (farmers) love the land."

LAKE

About $3 to $5 million will be spent on developing the site. Planned additions include a 4,000-square-foot interpretive and educational building which will house artifacts from the site, a laboratory, trail system, interpretive overlook area and other day use facilities such as a picnic area, Ms. Rendleman said.

"The archaeological significance of the area is comparable to the Seminole Canyon State Historical Park and the Caddoan Mounds State Historical Site and will be developed in a similar fashion," she said.

Eunice Barkes, an adjunct professor of archaeology and physical anthropology at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said the site is basically a record of human occupation at that time and of their killing and butchering of animals.

Among the artifacts found at the site are the lanceolate points, made of flint, which were attached to spears and used to kill mammoths (very large, hairy elephants indigenous to the area).

"This is fairly new information. We've also found the projectile points were used for killing as well as butchering the animals. While the point was still in the animal, the foreshaft of the weapon would be removed and the hunters would use the point as a knife," Ms. Barkes said.

As well, obsidian (volcanic glass) points were found in the area which indicates trading went on between the inhabitants of the area.

"The obsidian is from what was the Jemez region of New Mexico (Los Alamos area). The significance is that it shows long distance movement of people that was not natural. Maybe they were meeting halfway," Ms. Barkes said.

"We really don't know what data we'll find there in the future. But there are not many sites of this capacity in the area.

"We want to protect and preserve this area. There really will be a multi-disciplinary study going on," she said.

The site was discovered by accident in 1936 during a public Works Progress Administration project to reactivate springs for the Lubbock water supply, Ms. Rendleman said.

"The artifacts turned up in the dredging projects and were then examined by Texas Tech University scientists who found them to be of significance.

"The role of the Texas Tech archaeology department will be to continue the on-going program to curate and store all the artifacts, develop a rotating exhibit program and provide educational programs for public users," Ms. Rendleman said.

The $3 to $5 million cost of developing the area will be taken out of a state fund numbered 64, Ralph said.

"That's the cigarette fund. If you buy a pack of cigarettes, two pennies go to buy a state park," he said.

The cigarette tax funds are used only for purchase and primary development of state parks,

The park should be fully operational in three to five years, Ms. Rendleman said.

CAMPUS CHATTER

Annual football banquet will be Tuesday

By KELLY DODSON

Welcome back from the holidays. The Chatter Column hopes all you Dawgs had a great Turkey Day.

There are only 11 days, 66 hours, and 50 minutes until Christmas vacation.

The MHS roundballers hosted the Tall City Tournament at Chaparrel Center this past weekend, and while the Dawgs didn't win it, they were excellent hosts.

We need all of you Bulldog fans to come out and support the basketball team.

The JET Legs Contest is still under way. We'll let you know the results in our next column.

This past weekend the Youth Center, along with The Canopy, hosted a luncheon and style show. It was a big success. Thanks to everyone who offered support.

The annual football banquet is slated for Tuesday, Dec. 9, at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. Come help us salute our Fighting Bulldogs and our "bad to the bone" Junior Varsity.

The MHS Student Council is having a fundraiser for Catoico. If you see any kids peddling the streets with boxes of candy, help them out — buy some candy. It is only a dollar.

Of course, great things are happening at the Youth Center with all of the Christmas festivities getting under way.

This Friday, the Lee High School Freshmen are having a Student Council Dance at the Lee Youth Center and San Jacinto Junior High is having its dance at Midland Youth Center, sponsored by the S.J. Cheerleaders.

On Saturday evening, "High Roads" is having a concert at the Lee Youth Center for students of all ages. Last year the concert was a big success, as well as a lot of fun.

On Sunday, P.U.S.H. will be meeting at Midland Youth Center. Young Life will be meeting each Wednesday evening this month at Lee Youth Center.

On Friday, Dec. 12, JETS are having a Christmas Dance for all high school students at Midland Youth Center.

On Saturday, Dec. 13, the Midland Youth Center will be hosting a Junior High Activity night for all seventh and eighth graders. The Youth Center calendar is filling up quickly for both school and private Christmas parties and we are looking forward to a fun-filled holiday season.

Schools take part in speech tournament

From Staff Reports

The Lee and Midland Debate and Drama Squads participated in the West Texas State University University Interscholastic League/Texas Forensic League Speech Tournament. Lee was third in sweepstakes behind Amarillo and Tascosa who won the sweepstakes.

Winners from Lee High School included quarter-finalists Joel Dunn and Mark Saum, cross examination debate; semi-finalists. Dave Parkerson, impromptu; Tim Brower and Debbie Cornell, humorous interpretation; and Dave Parkerson, men's extemporaneous speaking.

Placing were Claudia Houston and Kristen Knebel, third place in cross examination debate; Rod Phares, fourth place in Lincoln-Douglas debate; and Tim Brower, fourth place in dramatic interpretation.

Winners from Midland were quarter-finalists OLiver Garcia and Gretchen Wilson, Lincoln-Douglas debate; semi-finalists Lebette Sale, humorous interpretation; Margaret Mogford, prose; Melissa Akins, dramatic interpretation; Jennifer Helms, dramatic interpretation; Danica Milios, poetry; and finalists Melissa Akins, dramatic interpretation; Jennifer Helms, dramtic interpretation; and Danica Milios, poetry.

Placing were Amy Black, first place in Lincoln-Douglas debate; Jennifer Helms, first place in dramatic interpretation; Louis Zambrano, second place in Lincoln-Douglas Debate; and Melissa Akins, third place in dramatic interpretation.

UT to suspend fraternity members

AUSTIN (AP) — Four members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, including the fraternity president, were told they will be suspended as a result of an investigation into the alcohol poisoning death of a pledge, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

Thee other students also were reprimanded by University of Texas officials after the six-week campus investigation into the September death of Mark Seeberger, unidentified sources told the newspaper.

Brent Monteleone, president of the UT chapter of Phi Kappa Psi, and Ron Brown, UT vice president for student affairs, would not comment.

According to the newspaper, the punishement decison came in late November.

Seeberger, an 18-year-old freshman from Dallas, died in his off-campus dormitory Sept. 18, a few hours after he was brought home from a Sept. 17 fraternity outing.

An autopsy indicated Seeberger drank about 18 ounces of rum.

Sources said UT plans three-semester suspensions for the Monteleone and the fraternity's pledge trainer, Kenneth Norwood.

Computer ...MUST BE DIFFERENT

Twenty-two claims of originality have been recognized in granting the patent!

SOMETHING GENUINELY DIFFERENT IN HEARING AIDS

What's So Unusual About The Computer Hearing Aid?

Computer Hearing Aids have special and sophisticated circuits built in that make them unlike any other hearing aid.

What is Meant By "Special And Sophisticated Circuits"?

The U.S. Patent Office recognized 22 claims of originality in granting the patent (U.S. Patent No. 3,229,049). Since then, more multiple automatic signal processing has been incorporated into the latest models.

What Does This Mean To A Hearing Aid User?

These special circuits control all sounds, soft, as well as loud, automatically. A user will hear at a greater distance (up to 3 times as far) and hear more of the sound in our language which helps the user to understand better. Computer Hearing Aids are designed for specific hearing problems. Most people with various hearing losses will receive improvement with a Computer Hearing Aid.

How About The Unpleasant Loud Sounds?

Loud sounds are regulated automatically. You seldom need to change the volume control, because the Computer Hearing Aid automatically decreases the gain for loud sounds, so you can hear without discomfort. This way you are comfortable even in noisy environments.

What About Soft Sounds?

The Computer Hearing Aid automatically increases the gain for the weak sounds and soft whispers. Voices can be heard at a distance.

Will The Computer Sound Natural?

Yes, because all loudness levels are produced in their proper porportions to the need of the defective ear. The Computer Hearing Aid will sound more natural (closer to normal hearing levels) than other aids.

How Do I Know I'll Be Satisfied With A Computer Hearing Aid?

We have a policy whereby you can try this unique hearing aid and experience these benefits firsthand. Then you decide for yourself.

Now You Will Find Loud Sounds Pleasant

Automatically handles all sound levels clearly in order to improve your understanding in noisy places and in large groups.

Now You Will Hear Whispers In A Quiet Place

Automatically brings whispers and soft voices up to your required level for hearing while it controls louder sounds to keep them within your comfort range.

Now You Can Hear The Tick Of A Clock

Automatically makes hearing through a hearing aid a pleasant and rewarding experience.

You owe it to yourself to try one!

Biden: Cities will be neglected if arms deal crisis continues

Biden

STATE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The nation's cities will suffer from even greater federal neglect if President Reagan's Iranian arms-deal controversy becomes a long-running national crisis, Democratic Sen. Joseph Biden warned urban leaders.

"The Congress finds itself preoccupied with this crisis," Biden said Wednesday at the conclusion of the National League of Cities annual meeting.

"We don't need that. Our constituents that we represent don't need that. The issues that bring you together today will in fact be more unattended than they have been in the recent past," he said.

Biden, D-Del., and another potential 1988 presidential aspirant, former Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, turned to the president's controversy as they addressed the more than 7,000 mayors, council members and city managers.

Baker, who gained national prominence as vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, said this crisis is no Watergate because there is no evidence of a cover-up.

"I think the president recognizes there were mistakes," he said. "That's a painful thing for anyone to do, to say that I made a mistake, but that's effectively what he's said."

"I think those mistakes were made pursuant to humane considerations — I do not think they were venal mistakes of personal greed," Baker added.

Biden urged the resignation of CIA director William Casey and White House chief of staff Donald Regan. And he called for Reagan to quickly "tell us...what happened, why it happened and all of what he knows."

The league concluded its annual Congress of Cities by elevating Denver council member Cathy Reynolds to president, following San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

The officials also voted for a package of resolutions and urban policy statements that listed more than $20 billion in federal domestic spending, plus many other requests for which no pricetag was affixed.

They ask for more than $3 billion over five years to increase the war on drugs, nearly $2 billion for food and shelter for the homeless, $8.5 billion for sewer and water treatment projects, and $7 billion to continue big urban aid programs for community development, mass transit, housing and other purposes.

Still more money was sought from Congress for AIDS research, youth unemployment, illiteracy, low-income housing and other programs.

Although not listed as a top urban priority, the league adopted a policy statement urging renewal of the $4 billion revenue sharing program of direct aid to cities, which expired this year.

Baker, one of the original sponsors of revenue sharing in the late 1960s, said he still backs the program.

"I'm not making any political announcements today, but...if I were president of the United States, I would revive revenue sharing from the dead," Baker said.

Biden told reporters later, however, that cities are not going to get revenue sharing.

The city officials also approved a statement calling for welfare reform but opposing proposals to swap fuller federal funding of welfare programs for the elimination of many other domestic programs of direct aid to cities.

Biden told reporters later, however, that a proposal along those lines is "on the right track."

Lewis tells new lawmakers to keep sense of humor, 'shoot straight'

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Shoot straight, keep a sense of humor and learn to live in a fishbowl were some of the wise words of experience House Speaker Gib Lewis imparted on 27 new Texas lawmakers Wednesday.

Speaking at a three-day orientation session for the 23 new House members and four new senators, Lewis weaved a yarn he once heard about former prizefighter Joe Lewis to describe what life is like at the state Capitol.

In response to efforts by his trainer to psyche up the great boxer for an upcoming bout with a formidable opponent, Joe Lewis replied: "The ring is square and I don't know of anywhere in there he can hide."

"I assure you there is nowhere you can hide in this process that you are entering into," Lewis told the new lawmakers as he welcomed them to the "world's largest fishbowl."

Always shoot straight, Lewis said, or face the grim possibility of losing the respect of your colleagues.

"Don't ever, ever distort any facts on the House floor," he warned.

Keep a sense of humor, ask a lot of questions and control the ego, Lewis advised.

"There are 150 prima donnas down here and 31 supreme prima donnas," he joked.

Be sure to look at all sides of an issue to represent all constituents, Lewis said, and be prepared to battle a colleague one day and support him the next. "Don't walk around with a chip on your shoulder," he said.

The legislative process is a "game of compromise, a game of debate," he said. "And please don't burn any bridges behind you."

The duties and image of an elected official go beyond the walls of the Capitol, Lewis said.

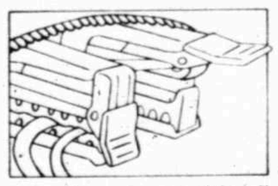

"Don't get out and throw your weight around in public," he said. "Don't get out and run up and down the streets and highways speeding and thinking you are going to get any special privileges, because you're not. And although I know there is no one in here who goes to lounges and places that sell alcoholic beverages, but in case one of you do, be sure to remember that you are an elected official for the state of Texas and you have to present that image at all times."

Lewis touched only briefly on the state deficit, the biggest issue lawmakers will face when the 70th Legislature convenes Jan. 13, telling the new legislators to prepare for "some hard decisions."

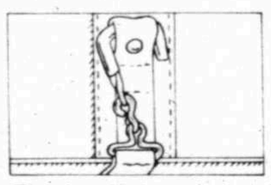

"Welcome to the big time, welcome to the place where all the action is," Lewis concluded. "And believe me, by June of next year, you are going to say: 'I wonder why I did this?' "

Couple accused of giving alcohol, pornographic materials to students

BELTON (AP) — A couple has been accused of giving pornographic materials and alcohol to high school students.

Jody Bounds and his wife, Delores Bounds, each were charged with two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, one count of displaying harmful materials and seven counts of furnishing alcohol to minors, authorities said.

They were in the Bell County Jail on Wednesday on bonds totaling $15,000 each, officials said. The misdemeanor charges carry a maximum penalty of one year in jail and fines ranging from $100 to $2,000.

County Attorney Pat Ridley said the charges stem from dinner parties attended over the last several weeks by about seven male Belton High School students, ages 16 and 17.

Suspected red tide could spread

SHEFFIELD (AP) — A suspected outbreak of red tide in the Pecos River could spread as far south as the Mexico border, a Texas Water Commission official said Wednesday.

Bill Lockey said the toxic algae could enter the international Amistad Reservoir on the border. The Pecos empties into the Rio Grande about five miles north of the reservoir.

Lockey said the suspected red tide should have "very little effect" on Amistad water supplies because water from the Rio Grande dilutes the Pecos.

Officials of the International Boundary Water Commission plan to meet to discuss stemming the flow of the red tide in the Pecos River, Lockey said.

Mattox: TDC doesn't have to pay

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texs Department of Corrections does not have to pay for medical care of a premature baby born to an inmate, according to an opinion issued Wednesday by Attorney General Jim Mattox.

The child was born three months premature and will need up to three months of intensive care hospitalization, TDC officials told Mattox in requesting the opinion.

Prison officials said they pay for routine deliveries of infants born to inmates. But TDC questioned whether it has the authority to pay extensive medical costs of a premature baby.

Mattox said the state's Family Code says parents are responsible for a child's medical care.

"Parental duties clearly include necessary medical care for a premature infant," he said in the opinion, but that the baby might be eligible for some sort of financial aid if the mother is indigent.

PUC lowers deposit interest rates

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission announced Wednesday that the interest rate on customer deposits held by utility companies will drop to 6 percent next year.

The interest paid on deposits this year is 7.29 percent. The rate is keyed to the average rate on one-year Treasury bills, which this year was below 6 percent, according to the commission.

However, PUC rules set 6 percent as the minimum interest rate on deposits.

Many utility customers, including those who have paid their bills on time, do not have to post deposits.

Fair Park to be historic landmark

AUSTIN (AP) — Fair Park in Dallas, home of the Texas State Fair, has been designated a national historic landmark, an honor held by only 34 other sites in the state, the Texas Historical Commission announced Wednesday.

Khomeini regime waning, former Israeli official says

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's former ambassador in Iran says the power of the Khomeini regime is waning, and that Israel and the United States are correct to seek communications with Iranian moderates.

Other experts at a Tel Aviv University seminar said 86-year-old Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's greatest problems are the growing dissatisfaction of his people with the six-year Persian Gulf conflict, a shaky economy and a soaring birth rate.

"We are seeing the ebbing strength of the revolution. We have passed the zenith," said Uri Lubrani, who was envoy in Tehran for six years until the 1979 fall of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi.

Lubrani said in the seminar Wednesday that once the storm over secret U.S. arms sales to Iran dies down, "history will judge the American moves with a large degree of understanding and justification."

He said Israel should view the Khomeini days as a passing phenomenon, "and seek a road to the heart of the Iranian people, to the Iran which will be built on the ruins of the revolution."

Lubrani, now a senior defense ministry official, is in charge of policy in Lebanon, where Israel faces mounting attacks from Iranian-backed Shiite forces.

While seeking links with moderates, he said, Israel must also wage a ruthless war against the Iranian-backed forces in south Lebanon. "We will destroy them," he vowed.

Intelligence sources say 200 Iranian cadres are training Shiites in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley for attacks against Israel and the South Lebanon Army militia, Israeli allies.

Differing from the official line of neutrality, Lubrani said an Iranian victory over Iraq would be in Israel's long-term interests. Iraq, an Arab nation, has a long record of animosity toward Israel, he said. Iran is a Persian country.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and some other officials have said they would like the debilitating war to continue indefinitely, sapping resources that otherwise might be directed against Israel.

David Menashri, who is with the university's Center of Strategic Studies, said the unending war with Iraq was costing Khomeini his popular support, until now his major asset.

"There isn't a family which hasn't suffered some bereavement," Menashri told those attending the seminar.

Israel has longstanding link to Contras, papers claim

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Despite official denials, Israel has for several years maintained a U.S.-backed covert connection to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, three Israeli newspapers said today.

The Jerusalem Post and Al Hamishmar, quoting unidentified authoritative U.S. officials, said the clandestine support for the Contras included the limited supply of light weapons and ammunition Israel captured in Lebanon.

Their reports said the support was fully coordinated with both the CIA and the National Security Council, and that U.S. officials reportedly pressed Israel very hard to help the Reagan Administration skirt congressional restrictions on arming the Contras.

They said Israel appealed to the United States to keep its connection secret because it was concerned about congressional anger.

The daily Haaretz, carrying the same report, attributed it to a former official of the CIA who worked for the agency in 1984 and 1985.

The official was quoted as saying a U.S. Justice Department probe determined at the time that Israel acted within the law in selling arms to the Contras, because the weapons were not American-made and did not contain U.S. components. Most of the weapons Israel captured in Lebanon were Soviet-made.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told the Israeli parliament this week that Israel "does not maintain contacts or ties with the rebels in Nicaragua, nor does it supply arms from here to them. Israel did not grant permission to any Israeli to assist, supply know-how or sell weapons from Israel to the rebels in Nicaragua."

Americans to visit Syria in hostage quest

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two American Moslems said today they had scheduled a visit to Syria as part of their crusade to win the release of U.S. and other foreigners missing in Lebanon, but have yet to arrange a hoped for meeting with any of the groups claiming to hold hostages.

Mohammad Mehdi, secretary-general of the New York-based National Council for Islamic Affairs, and his deputy, Dale Shaheen, said they planned to travel to Damascus on Friday.

"We will meet with Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam and possibly President Hafez Assad. We will also see a number of Arab ambassadors and religious leaders there," Mehdi said.

The two Americans, who arrived in Beirut on Sunday, have been consulting with Lebanese government and religious leaders on ways to help free the 17 foreign hostages held in Lebanon.

They met with Prime Minister Rashid Karami and Brig. Gen. Osman Osman, Lebanon's national police chief, at the premier's office in Moslem west Beirut on Wednesday evening.

"The prime minister pledged to provide whatever help he can for us," Mehdi said.

Mehdi and Shaheen had said upon their arrival that they expect to get in touch with the kidnappers within a week, hoping to return home with at least one freed hostage before Christmas.

But no contact has been made with the kidnappers, both Americans said today.

Mehdi and Shaheen met earlier Wednesday with Parliament Speaker Hussein Husseini, the highest ranking Shiite Moslem official in Lebanon.

After the meeting, Husseini denounced the kidnapping of foreigners and said in English: "The current crisis of foreign hostages in Lebanon has definitely made Lebanon the No. 1 terrorist country...Lebanon is the first victim of this all."

Pro-Iranian Shiite extremist groups are believed to be holding many of the kidnapped foreigners missing in Lebanon, including six Americans, six Frenchmen, two Britons, one Irishman, one Italian and a South Korean.

Dollar slips

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar posted modest losses against most major currencies in sluggish European trading early today.

Gold prices were mixed in Europe, hovering around $391 an ounce, after gaining $6.10 in Hong Kong.

Currency traders said the dollar was holding steady at lower levels at midmorning.

They said many market participants were staying to the sidelines ahead of a report due later today on U.S. October factory goods orders. A Dow Jones survey of of 11 economists predicted a 3.3 percent drop in the indicator, following a 3.4 percent rise in September.

The dollar has been under pressure from concern over the U.S. economy and the Irans arms scandal, and traders said today that market sentiment remained bearish.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

— 1.9665 West German marks, down from 1.9740

— 1.6463 Swiss francs, down from 1.6495

— 6.4700 French francs, down from 6.4825

— 2.2260 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2345

— 1,363.75 Italian lire, down from 1,371.00

— 1.38205 Canadian dollars, down from 1.38350

The British pound was quoted at $1.4315, unchanged from late Wednesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar edged up against the Japanese yen for a third straight day, closing at 162.20 yen, from Wednesday's 162.10 yen. Later, in London, the dollar was pegged at 162.30 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $391.20 a troy ounce, up 10 cents from late Wednesday.

In Zurich, the metal traded at $391.30, down from $392.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose to a closing bid of $391.30, from Wednesday's bid of $385.20.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.37 an ounce, down from $5.41 late Wednesday.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed lower Wednesday, in busy, trendless activity marked by profit-taking in the wake of gains made in the previous record-breaking session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 8.30 points to 1,947.27.

Losers outpaced gainers by about 9-to-8 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 832 issues down, 746 up, and 435 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 200.14 million shares, compared with 230.35 million shares in Tuesday's session.

Throughout the day, the market hovered within a close range of Tuesday's close, but mostly on the downside.

SIPES sees hope for import fee

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

"Building a ring of increasing pressure around the White House for implementation of a variable oil import fee," will be the strategy used by the Society of Professional Earth Scientists (SIPES) in its upcoming lobbying efforts, Lucius Geer, a member of SIPES' National Energy Advisory Committee (NEAC) told members of the group's local chapter on Wednesday.

"We're looking beyond the White House because we haven't been able to find a 'meaningful' friend of the import fee within the administration," Geer explained.

Key Senate chairmanship changes in the offing as a result of this year's election will improve chances for legislative pressure for a variable crude and product fee with Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen chairing the Senate Finance Committee and Louisiana Sen. Bennett Johnson leading the Energy Committee, Geer said.

In addition, the Appropriations Committees of both houses of Congress are headed by gentlemen from northern Mississippi, an area as hard hit by the deterioration of the domestic oil industry as West Texas, according to Geer. While not directly impacting the energy industry, the Appropriations Committees represent an "unbelievable power base" for the political bargaining which will be needed to legislate an import fee.

SIPES' national board of directors endorsed the variable import fee earlier this year on the recommendation of its NEAC, explained Gail Oliphant, national SIPES president, who was also on hand for the monthly Midland chapter meeting. Despite the oil industry's historic opposition to government involvement in the marketplace, Oliphant said that the new global realities of oil economics are forcing the industry to "create a new alliance, a partnership, with the national government and change the perception of the oil industry as an enemy."

NEAC member Al Wadsworth of Houston, a founding member of SIPES, echoed Oliphant's concerns over the reversal of the industry's traditional position. "It galls me to stand here and call for government intervention on our behalf, but it is the only available solution to a problem not of our own making.

"Our industry has been attacked just as vehemently as our country was on Dec. 7, 1941, only OPEC is dropping cheap oil on us instead of TNT. Back then we had national intervention within 24 hours," Wadsworth noted.

Since the onset of the oil price collapse earlier this year, more than 600,000 barrels per day of domestic production has already been lost through plugging and the trend is continuing at a rate of 1,500 barrels per day, Wadsworth said.

The "double-dip" impact of lost production is seen in the shrinkage of the value of the tax base available to local, state and national taxing authorities plus each barrel of crude not produced domestically must be bought and paid for outside our borders, further aggravating the trade deficit problems facing the country, he added.

"By tax time, April 15, we expect a full million barrels of domestic production will have been lost to imports," said Geer.

Energy secretary sees ways to aid oil industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has several options to aid the financially troubled oil industry without considering a controversial proposal to levy an oil import fee, Energy Secretary John Herrington said Wednesday.

"There's a lot we can do for this industry," Herrington said, calling for repeal of the windfall profits tax, further deregulation of natural gas and loosening of other controls on oil and natural gas production.

Government actions must "set the stage for the reemergence of this industry free of government control," he said.

The administration has consistently opposed calls for an oil import fee as an obstacle to free trade.

Other alternatives are likely to be outlined in a report expected early next year assessing the effects of falling oil and gas prices on national security, Herrington said.

He declined to speculate on the contents of the report or its likely recommendations.

In a speech on a similar subject, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel warned the United States "faces substantial risk ... of becoming increasingly and unduly reliant on the Persian Gulf for oil supplies."

Unless the United States and other nations accelerate their own energy exploration, Hodel told a Council on Alternate Fuels conference on oil imports, the Middle East will become an increasingly important source of fuel.

If Soviet oil production declines, as expected, he added, "We may see an increase in the urgency of Soviet aspirations toward the Middle East."

Retroactive tax may total $100 million on strippers

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Stripper wells may retroactively lose their historic exemption from windfall profit taxes if proposed Internal Revenue Service rules are adopted. The proposed administrative rulemaking would redefine stripper wells so that many of them would be subjected to windfall profit calculations and payments from April 1, 1980 forward.

The potential price tag of the retroactive tax burden for independent producers has been estimated at $100 million, says Glen Michel, executive vice president of the National Stripper Well Association (NSWA) in Abilene.

The NSWA and the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) have filed briefs with the IRS commissioner to head off the rule change, which is structured as a "minor item," meaning that it does not require the direct approval of Treasury Secretary James Baker.

Nevertheless, the NSWA is pushing hard for a meeting with Baker, who Michel says, "is the only person who can stop this potential death blow to producers already brought to their knees by low prices and thin operating margins." Among the officials helping the stripper well group in their efforts to meet with Baker are U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, from the 17th congressional district in West Central Texas; Texas Senators Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen; and Governor-elect Bill Clements.

The proposed change would unfairly subject small producers of wells producing less than 10 barrels of oil per day to liability for millions of dollars in taxes, penalties and interest on oil production which Congress intended to be exempt from the windfall profit tax, according to R.H. (Ray) Hefner, chairman of the board of the IPAA.

"Historically, the stripper well exemption — first from price controls in the 1970s and later from the windfall profit tax — has been based on the fact that small entities incur substantial operating expenses," Hefner says.

Although prices are currently well below the $18 per barrel trigger level of the profit tax, the retroactive provisions could lead to substantial liabilities for operators from production from 1980 through 1984, according to Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Other troublesome aspects of back dating the action are the facts that many well operators earlier in the decade may be out of business, non-operating partners may have gotten out of the oil business, and that royalty owners and others may say that underpayment of taxes was the responsibility of the operator and refuse to contribute to making up the back tax liability if the proposal isn't stopped, says NSWA's Michel.

Even though Joyce Tyson, left, has a washer and dryer at home, she and Chuck Keegan like to visit the laundromat and meet others. She recently won a trip to Dallas from the laundromat.

Combining romance with clean clothes

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

When Johnny Lee sang about "Looking for love," he most likely wasn't thinking about looking in a laundromat.

But a Midland laundromat is hoping to change all that. The Supermat located at 4338 Illinois has scheduled Singles Night every Wednesday from 7 to 10. "I want this to be fun and increase my business," said manager Janie Cunningham.

Cunningham recalled her father telling her he had read in an article that the best place to meet a mate was while doing laundry. After taking over management of the laundromat in August, she began working on a singles night.

The first Singles Night was held the last of October, and was in conjunction with The Matchmakers, a dating service. "It was a lot of fun, and people were really surprised," Cunningham said. "We give out nametags and have drawings." The grand prize was a drawing for a trip for two to Dallas, including a stay at the Galleria.

"We want to fix this so you can do your laundry and meet people," stated Cunningham. "To me, a laundry wouldn't be like a singles bar."

Joyce Tyson, who won the weekend in Dallas, likes the laundry even though she has a washer and dryer at home. "This way, you can visit or go do your grocery shopping. If you do laundry at home, you can be washing all day."

Todd Larsson, another customer, said the first place he'd expect to meet people would be at his churge.

"But the laundry might be a good way."

"I like (the idea)," said Jackie Benson. "You can come out and do your laundry and there's not a big crowd around." And who knows, one day the right person might come along, she added.

Sales of import cars show sharp rise in November

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic automakers continued paying back for wholesale incentives offered from August through October as car sales rose only slightly in November from a year ago while imports jumped sharply.

Domestic makers' sales rose only 5.1 percent in late November and 5.2 percent for the month compared with the year-ago periods.

But imported car sales rose 10.1 percent in November from a year ago and accounted for 33.4 percent of the U.S. market.

Sales of light-duty trucks dropped 11.1 percent in November from a year ago for domestic makers but rose 41.6 percent for foreign makers, who held 24.1 percent of the U.S. light-duty truck market.

Light-duty trucks, including sport-utility vehicles, pickups and vans, account for approximately a third of all domestic vehicle sales and have become increasingly important to both U.S. and foreign makers.

Combined car and truck sales fell 0.6 percent for domestic makers in November compared with a year ago and rose 16 percent for foreign makers.

The biggest loser was industry leader General Motors Corp., whose domestic car market share fell from 56.4 percent in late November 1985 to 43.9 percent in the period this year.

"GM's market share is incredibly poor," said industry analyst Ron Glantz at Montgomery Securities in San Francisco. "October's was the lowest GM market share in 21 months and this is even worse."

Some investors unhappy with Perot buyout

DALLAS (AP) — Some large institutional investors are studying ways to keep General Motors Corp. from spending at least $750 million to buy shares in the automaker held by H. Ross Perot and three long-time managers of Electronic Data Systems Corp.

They are unhappy that GM is paying Perot and his managers $60 per share for their Class E stock, more than double the current market value.

"It's unfair to shareholders," said Jose Arau, principal investment officer for the California Public Employees Retirement System, which holds 902,300 shares of GM worth $63.8 million. "Right now we're looking at writing letters or maybe suing GM. We're looking into all the possibilities."

He said, however, he expects many institutions to resist getting involved in costly complaints.

Arau and several other big investors want to be offered the same price, and want EDS to retain its top leadership, set to step down as part of the deal.

In 1984, GM bought the Dallas firm Perot founded in 1962. Perot became the largest single shareholder in GM in the 1984 transaction.

GM spokesman Bill Winters said this week's buyout is unique, and that the company has no plans for similar agreements with other Class E shareholders.

Please, no more calls — we have a winner

As a source of daily information — and in offering a degree of permanence for the data carried — the newspaper serves a distinct function in informing and educating its readers.

However, there is one misconception about a daily newspaper that persists. That is: every person on the staff of the paper is aware of everything that goes into print every day and has an intimate working knowledge of anything published in the past five years, immediately at his or her fingertips.

Wrong!

Nevertheless, frantic students, curious readers and assorted fact finders call the business/oil department on a regular basis to check on any number of subjects. In the past couple of weeks, we've fielded requests for the current retail price of gas in Japan, the monthly local unemployment figures for the past two years, and the number of bankruptcies filed last week, last month and last year.

That's not counting the various, "Six months ago or so you ran a story, something about natural gas. Remember? Could I get 10 copies of it?" and "Your paper ran a story and picture about my brother-in-law's cousin's daughter's cookie sale a few years ago. Can I pick up the picture?" calls that filter in from time to time.

Don't get me wrong. I'm glad to provide background information that a reader might have missed or misplaced, fill in a lost fact for someone tracking our weekly oil activity indicator page, or help someone track down an extra copy of a specific article from our pages. That goes with the territory and is an important part of the job of serving the reading public.

But I'm not interested in doing someone else's extra credit homework assignment or unraveling the mystery of the unknown story.

Despite all of this, as a public service I am going to provide some interesting, arcane, and/or marginally useful — at best — facts in the hope that it saves someone a telephone call one of these days:

— One barrel of crude oil can be used to manufacture 910 pairs of panty hose. At an average cost of $3 a pair, that comes to $2,730 per barrel in revenue, or at today's prices $2,715 with which to cover expenses. Not bad.

— The same barrel could also yield 46 sweaters or 2 automobile tires.

— P.T. Barnum's observation on the perpetual birth process among the group known as suckers is still operational. A guy in Florida was able to convince about 70 investors that the oil into tires process can be reversed and altogether the gullible investors plopped down more than $3 million in this guy's company, T.C.S. Reclamation Inc. C. Timothy Straight claimed that his company had a process which could reclaim two to three gallons of oil from each tire, according to police reports in Fort Lauderdale. Straight and his 1985 Maserati have since disappeared, leaving disgruntled investors, a baffled family and some very interested detectives in his wake.

— In 1985, the average weekly unemployment benefit for a jobless Texan ranked fifth highest in the country at $147.54, almost $20 more than the national average of $128.01 per week. Average benefits ranged from $156.30 per week in Alaska to $90.32 weekly in Tennessee.

— The Department of Energy ranks 11th among the 13 cabinet-level executive departments in terms of the number of staff employed, scarcely a ringing endorsement of the importance of energy in the national security concerns of the U.S. Only the Education and Housing & Urban Development Departments have fewer than the 16,674 bureaucrats, lawyers and papershufflers on the DOE payroll as of May of this year. As with most federal agencies, more than a third of its total payroll ($46.5 million) stays in Washington D.C.

— The most recent year in which the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. did NOT close a bank was 1977. During the economic prosperity generated at the end of World War II, there were 10 years (1945 to 1954) without a single bank closing. In 1985, there were a post-Depression record 119 bank closings.

— One 6,000 ft. oil well, when completed with production equipment installed, utilizes as much steel as 2,500 automobiles.

— Per captia expenditures for energy in Texas during 1982 (the most recent figures available) were $2,618, more than 46 of the 50 states in the union. Only Alaska, $3,499; Wyoming, $3,286; and Louisiana, $2,962, spent more per person on energy than the Lone Star state. The national average for 1982 was $1,811 per capita.

— Total personal consumption expenditures for gasoline and motor oil in the U.S. in 1985 were $91.9 billion, less than half the $192.2 billion Americans spent for clothing, shoes and fashion accessories, including jewelry and watches, during the same period.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Pennzoil potentials 720 barrel well

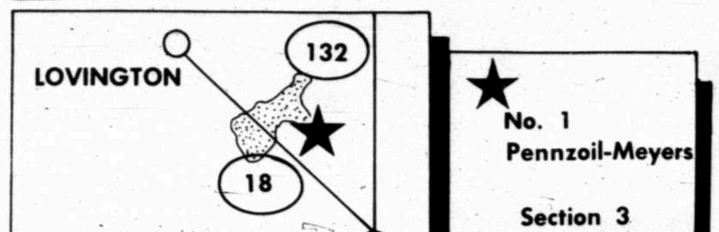

From Staff Reports

PENNZOIL CO. reports a prolific new Strawn producer in the Shipp field of Lea County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 1 Pennzoil Meyers flowed 720 barrels of crude, 1 Mmcfd and no water on a 20/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 585 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 11,205 to 11,304 ft., no treatment reported.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 11,470 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 11,370 ft. Pay was topped at 11,205 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 810 ft. from west lines of Section 3, T17s, R31e.

Borden wildcat yields 223 barrel producer

The Escondido (Strawn) field of Borden County gained a new producer as WEST TEXAS OIL AND GAS OPERATIONS potentialed a well in the area.

The No. 1 Clayton was finaled to pump 223 barrels of 41 gravity crude from perforations 7,707 to 8,126 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 250:1.

Permitted as an 8,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 8,160 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 1,992 ft. from south and 1,995 ft. from east lines of Section 23, Block 30, T-4-N, T&P survey, seven miles south of Gail.

Cherry Canyon well tested for 79 barrels

EXXON CORP. has completed a new producer in the Dimmitt (Cherry Canyon) field of Loving County.

The company tested the No. 10 TXL "13" to pump 79 barrels of 41.38 gravity crude, 38 Mcfd and 323 barrels of water from perforations 6,467 to 6,590 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 159 barrels of gel and 70,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 481:1.

Permitted as a 6,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,725 ft. and plugged back to 6,677 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,719 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,989 ft., include the Rustler at 544 ft., Salado at 923, Castile at 4,599, Bell Canyon at 4,827, and the Cherry Canyon at 5,844 ft. Pay was topped at 6,467 ft.

Location is 560 ft. from south and 1,856 ft. from west lines of Section 13, Block 53, T-2-N, T&P survey, 11.2 miles northeast of Mentone.

Reeves County wildcat flows 25.9 barrels oil

SOUTHERN UNION EXPLORATION CO. reports a Delaware completion in the Orla Southeast field of Reeves County.

On potential test, the No. 4 H.H. Trippett flowed 25.9 barrels of 34.8 gravity crude, 227 Mcfd and 228 barrels of water on a 13/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 820 psi. Production is from perforations 3,557 to 3,569 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 10 percent acid and fractured with 16,000 gallons of gel and 24,000 lbs. 10/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 8,764:1.

Scheduled as a 3,900 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,680 ft. and plugged back to 3,633 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,679 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,869 ft., formation tops include the Dewey Lake at 871 ft., Rustler at 1,081, Salado at 1,590, Delaware Mountain at 3,496, and the Delaware Pay at 3,558 ft. Pay was topped at 3,557 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 1,980 ft. from south lines of Section 42, Block 56, T-3-S, T&P survey, 10 miles northwest of Arno.

Reentry project nets San Andres discovery

A reentry project in Chaves County, N.M. has netted a San Andres gas discovery for STEVENS OPERATING CO.

The company reentered the No. 1 State "Z", recompleting it to flow 61 Mcfd and 48 barrels of water from an 8/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 100 psi. Production is from 3,104 to 3,241 ft., which had been acidized with 3,500 gallons of 28 percent acid.

Abandoned at a depth of 8,723 ft., the well was cleaned out to 8,731 ft. and plugged back to 4,029 ft. with 9 5/8 inch casing set at 4,064 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 2,446 ft. on ground elevation of 4,174 ft. Pay was topped at 3,104 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 36, T7s, R29e.

Chaves field gains three new producers

The West Pecos Slope field of Chaves County has three new Abo gas producers as McKAY OIL CORP. completes some activity in the field.

McKay potentialed the No. 8 Remmele Federal Com. to flow 1.66 Mmcfd on a one inch choke with a flowing pressure of 895 psi. Production is from perforations 2,886.5 to 2,795 ft.

The No. 4 Remmele Federal Com. was tested to flow 2.9 Mmcfd, also on a one inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 801 psi. Production is from perforations 2,970 to 2,983.5 ft.

The third, the No. 1 Royale Fee, was completed to flow 623 Mcfd on a one inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 935 psi. The well is producing from perforations 2,762 to 2,881.5 ft.

The two Remmele producers are located in T6s, R22e. The Royale is located in T6s, R23e.

Operator plans rank explorer in Brewster

GUNNELS OPERATING CO., Humble, has scheduled a deep wildcat in Brewster, located miles from any established production.

Gunnels plans to drill the No. 1 Margaret to a contract depth of 12,900 ft. The well is staked 528 ft. from south and east lines of Section 245, Block 10, GH&SA survey, 20 miles northeast of Alpine.

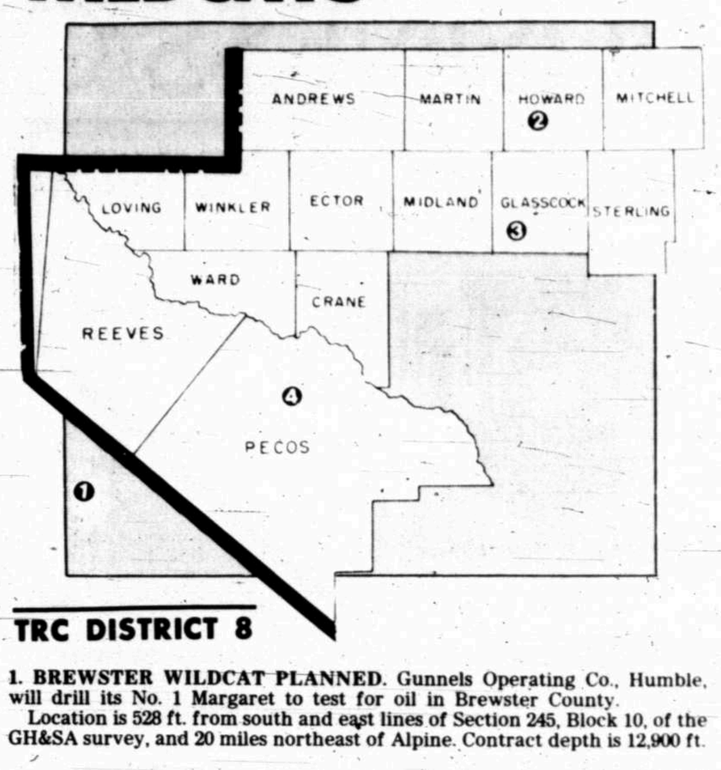

The well is located near a second wildcat, the F. Gunnels No. 1 Kim, a 5,000 ft. explorer.

Hockley location for deeper pool wildcat

Midland-based GROVER OIL CO. will tested the Cisco Canyon sand in Hockley County by scheduling a deeper pool wildcat in the Ropes West field of Hockley County.

The No. Hoskins is staked 1,650 ft. from north and 2,650 ft. from east lines of Section 29, League 21, of the McCullough CSL Survey, nine miles southeast of Levelland.

WILDCATS

1. BREWSTER WILDCAT PLANNED. Gunnels Operating Co., Humble, will drill its No. 1 Margaret to test for oil in Brewster County.

Location is 528 ft. from south and east lines of Section 245, Block 10, of the GH&SA survey, and 20 miles northeast of Alpine. Contract depth is 12,900 ft.

2. UNOCAL STAKES HOWARD EXPLORER. Union Oil Co. of California, Midland, has staked its No. 1 Iden as a 9,850 ft. exploratory well in Howard County.

Location is 660 ft. from north and west lines of Section 24, Block 31, Township 2 North of the T&P survey, and 13.6 miles northeast of Big Spring.

More and more workers willing to file wrongful dismissal suits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More and more, workers who think they were wrongfully dismissed are suing their former bosses. People who follow such litigation say it accounts for about half the civil injury suits handled by labor law attorneys.

And more often now, the suits are brought by clerks and other non-management employees.

"There is a tremendous willingness of employees to sue employers," said Paul Grossman, a lawyer who handles such cases, mostly defending managers.

Since a California court ruled in 1979 that employers do not have an unfettered right to dismiss workers at will, there has been a virtual explosion in wrongful-discharge suits.

"This is a major growth area," said William B. Gould IV, a professor at the Stanford University Law School in Palo Alto, Calif.

The flood of such suits has made companies more reluctant to fire workers, more thorough in documenting causes and more cautious about the reasons they give for termination — both to the worker and to future employers.

Besides suing for being terminated, some workers have won libel suits against ex-bosses for comments that damaged their reputations.

Grossman said his firm has 600 to 700 active wrongful-discharge cases, compared to about 20 six years ago.

The wave of wrongful-discharge actions has spread across much of the country, but California remains the hotbed of such litigation, said Jim Dertouzous of Rand Corp., a research center based in Santa Monica, Calif.

"California is by far the most liberal state in its interpretation of the law," Dertouzous said.

By the end of 1985, all but 10 states recognized restrictions on employers' ability to fire at will, he said. At the very least, they provided protection for "whistleblowers" who report misdeeds of their bosses, he said.

Even broader are emerging legal doctrines that employment itself constitutes an implied contract and that employers must actively try to help workers who are having trouble rather than just firing them.

While those doctrines are new to the United States, employers in Japan, Europe and elsewhere historically have been far more restricted in their ability to dismiss workers.

The California Supreme Court is expected to decide before the end of the year a case that may help resolve some uncertainties in the law and possibly affect many other cases.

The suit was brought by Daniel Foley against Interactive Data Corp., a subsidiary of Chase Manhattan Bank.

Foley was hired in 1976 and rose to manager of the Los Angeles branch before being fired in March 1983, two days after receiving a merit bonus of $6,762 on top of his annual $56,164 salary.

According to his lawyer, Foley's problems began when he told a company executive in 1982 that Foley's new supervisor was under investigation by the FBI for embezzlement from a former employer, an allegation to which the supervisor pleaded guilty in late 1983.

After Foley raised the issue, he says, the company began saying he wasn't doing a good job, and that was the reason given for his firing.

Among issues involved in the suit are:

— Whether a firing can be held improper on the grounds of a public policy that is not defined by statute, in this case the policy that company whistleblowers deserve protection.

— Whether a wrongful termination suit can be based on an oral promise of continued employment, a pledge Foley claims he had.

When wrongful-discharge suits first began to be filed, after 1979, they were brought primarily by highly paid executives who thought they had been fired unfairly, Dertouzous said.

But later, non-management workers began to use the courts as well. Of the suits that went to juries in Los Angeles County last year, Dertouzous said, about 9 percent were brought by upper-tier executives and about 40 percent by middle managers. The remainder involved non-management employees.

The ousted employees won about 70 percent of the cases, Dertouzous said.

In the last legislative session, the California Employment Law Council, a coalition of 70 of the state's largest companies, proposed a plan that would curb such suits by pressuring both sides to accept arbitration.

CARS

GM's car sales were down 18.2 percent and 9.4 percent for the month from the year-ago periods.

GM on Wednesday announced it would cut production at three luxury car plants early next year and lay off 4,500 workers indefinitely to combat poor sales while avoiding widespread financing incentives.

Ford Motor Co.'s car sales, boosted by the strong performance of its popular Taurus and Sable models, rose 26.7 percent in late November and 23.8 percent for November as a whole from the year-ago periods.

"Taurus really hasn't lost its luster," said analyst Joseph Phillippi with E.F. Hutton in New York. Among Ford division cars, Taurus consistently has outsold Escort, Ford's previous best-seller, in recent sales periods.

Ford's market share in late November rose to 28.7 from 23.8 percent a year ago and Chrysler's rose slightly to 13.6 percent from 13.2 percent a year ago.

Chrysler's sales also were up, increasing 8.6 percent in late November and 9.3 percent for the month from a year ago. American Honda Motor Co.'s sales were up 341.8 percent, reflecting increased U.S. production.

American Motors Corp.'s U.S.-made car sales continued to plummet, falling 41.2 percent in late November and 48.1 percent for the month compared with the year-ago periods.

Honda also was a big winner with its foreign-made cars, whose sales increasd 23.7 percent in November over a year ago, as was Toyota Motor Corp., whose import sales jumped 27.9 percent.

Nissan Motor Corp.'s imports fell 23.3 percent in November from a year ago and Mazda Motor Corp.'s imports were down 17.2 percent.

Chrysler, Ford, AMC and GM's Chevrolet division offered limited sales incentives during part of November, but analysts discounted the lures' effects and said the changes in tax laws for 1987 did not seem to prompting sales either.

"We're still paying back that August-to-October year-end clearance sale," Phillippi said.

Only Chrysler's car sales were up for the year so far, rising 1.8 percent over a year ago. GM's sales were down 1.7 percent for the year and Ford's were down 3.1 percent.

Honda's and Nissan's sales of U.S.-made cars were up 53.9 percent and 30.3 percent, respectively, for the year over a year ago.

The eight domestic automakers sold 169,635 cars in the seven selling days from Nov. 21-30 and 521,074 in 24 selling days during the month, compared with 184,506 in eight days and 515,802 in 25 days a year ago.

Foreign makers sold 261,023 cars in November compared with 245,858 a year ago.

Domestic makers sold 81,474 trucks in late November and 241,998 during the month compared with 105,149 and 283,575 a year ago. Foreign makers sold 76,723 trucks in November compared with 56,447 a year ago.

For the year, domestic makers have sold 7,541,593 cars and 3,355,323 light-duty trucks in 281 business days compared with 7,646,718 cars and 3,337,236 trucks in 282 selling days last year.

Foreign makers have sold 2,909,566 cars and 835,662 trucks compared with 2,573,910 cars and 705,680 trucks a year ago.

New home sales plunge 9.6 percent in October

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of new single family homes plunged 9.6 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 662,000, offsetting a sharp rise in September, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

New home sales rose from 618,000 in August to 732,000 in September, according to revised figures issued in a report from the department's Census Bureau.

The August and September sales figures are up substantially from earlier reports, so the setback in October does not reflect as much weakness as first anticipated.

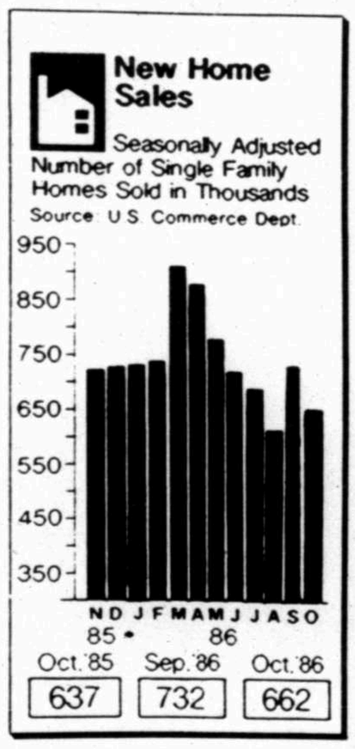

Even so, sales are off substantially from levels in early 1986. Sales peaked at 924,000 in March before diminishing demand, especially in depressed farm and energy producing regions, combined with sharply higher prices to wear down the rapid pace of sale.

March sales were the highest in eight years, while the August level was the lowest since December 1984.

The estimated actual number of new homes sold in October was 53,000, down from 60,000 in September. The figures are adjusted for seasonal differences and extended for 12 months to arrive at the annual rate.

The pace of new home sales slowed more abruptly than that of existing homes. Home resales peaked at a seven-year high of 3,770,000 at an annual rate in September and nosed down to 3,760,000 in October.

Mark Obrinksi, an economist with the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, stressed it is important to look at both new and existing home sales to get a complete picture of the market.

Combined sales remain at the highest level since 1979, Obrinski said, and the October figures represent "a continuing solid sales pattern."

"The rush to buy houses when mortgage interest rates went down so rapidly early this year is now behind us," Lyle Gramley, chief economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association, said.

GM lays off 4,500 workers

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. on Wednesday said it would lay off about 4,500 employees in Michigan and Missouri early next year and reduce production at three assembly plants to avoid offering incentive financing.

"It is our intent to maintain dealer inventories in this manner in the hope of avoiding large incentive financing programs," GM Vice President William E. Hoglund said in a statement.

About 2,500 workers will be laid off at the Hamtramck assembly plant Feb. 2, and plants in Oakland County's Orion Township and at Wentzville, Mo., will lose 1,000 workers each to layoffs Jan. 5, GM said.

All three Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac assembly plants produce top-of-the-line, luxury automobiles, GM spokesman John Grix said.

"They are not selling as well right now as we thought they would," Grix said. "What we're trying to do is prevent building up big inventories."

GM Chairman Roger Smith has said repeatedly the automaker will do whatever it can to avoid incentive financing.

Last month, GM announced it would close 11 plants in Michigan, Ohio and Missouri, affecting more than 29,000 workers in the next three years. Smith said the move would reduce overcapacity and cut operating losses.

The automaker reported operating losses of $338.5 million during the third quarter.

Grix said the layoffs announced Wednesday would be indefinite, but that production might be increased if sales pick up.

The Orion Township plant will reduce production by eight cars per hour on each of two shifts, GM said. The plant assembles Cadillac DeVille, Fleetwood Sedan and Oldsmobile 98 Regency models.

The Hamtramck plant will reduce production of Oldsmobile Toronado, Buick Riviera and Cadillac Eldorado and Seville models from two shifts at 54 cars per hour to one shift at 54 per hour, the automaker said.

The Missouri plant will reduce production by eight cars per hour on each of two shifts that assemble Buick Electra and Park Avenue, Oldsmobile 98 and Oldsmobile Delta 88 models, GM said.

McWilliams, three former Rebels honored by AP

DALLAS (AP) — David McWilliams, who brought Texas Tech its first winning season and bowl appearance in the 1980s, has been named The Associated Press Southwest Conference Coach of the Year in balloting by his peers.

McWilliams, who has been interviewed for the opening at the University of Texas, left the Longhorns a year ago as defensive coordinator to take the Tech job after Jerry Moore was fired.

The Red Raiders were 7-4 under McWilliams and received an Independence Bowl bid to play Mississippi. It was Tech's first winning season since 1978.

Three former Midland Lee players were honored on the team. Sophomore Tyrone Thurman was named as the top conference return specialist after setting the Texas Tech record for punt return yardage in only two years.

Also Tech junior linebacker Michael Johnson and senior defensive end Calvin Riggs were named to the second team. Both are former Rebels and Johnson was an All-State player in 1983 when Lee went to the state finals. Riggs and Johnson also were given honorable mention status on the AP All-America team named today.

Texas A&M, the SWC champions, dominated the mythical all-star team.

Led by quarterback Kevin Murray, the SWC's Offensive Player of the Year, the Aggies landed eight players on first team offense and defense. Tight end Rod Bernstine was a unanimous choice.

Other Aggie first teamers included running back Roger Vick, offensive tackle Louis Cheek, placekicker Scott Slater, defensive lineman Sammy O'Brient, linebacker Johnny Holland, and defensive back Kip Corrington.

The Defensive Player of the Year was Baylor defensive back Thomas Everett. The Offensive Newcomer of the Year was Tech's James Gray and Texas' linebacker Duane Duncum earned Defensive Newcomer of the Year honors.

The Cotton Bowl-bound Aggies, who meet Ohio State on Jan. 1, placed six players on the second team.

Baylor had six players on the All-

SWC first team and two on the second squad.

Murray became the SWC career leader in touchdown passes and owns all the Aggie career passing marks and two single season records.

Murray led A&M to the SWC title for the second consecutive season.

Everett was the SWC Defensive Player of the Year last season and retained that honor again.

Reagan County faces unbeaten Goldthwaite

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Prep Playoffs

With three extraordinary skill players, Reagan County earned a reputation as an offensive machine in rolling to the co-championship of District 6-2A.

And though neither fullback Junior Romero nor tailback James West have crossed the 1,000-yard threshold and quarterback Scott Lipsey has just gone over that mark in passing, the Owls' offensive reputation has been well deserved, blowing out opponents 91-27 in playoff action.

But in those last three games, the Owls have rediscovered a chilling defense to give them a three-game playoff winning streak and a berth in the Class 2A quarterfinals Friday at 8 p.m. against Goldthwaite in San Angelo.

By shutting out Panhandle last week in regional play, Reagan County put together what coach Ronnie Reeger called "a great defensive effort."

"We played better than we have in a while on defense," Reeger said. "Our defense hasn't been getting noticed, but until you start getting some shutouts, that's the way it's going to be."

A SHUTOUT of unbeaten Goldthwaite would really draw attention to the Owls defense. The Eagles come into the quarterfinals with a 29-game unbeaten string and a Class 1A state title as their latest accomplishments.

First year coach Gary Proffitt now finds his Eagles enjoying the same kind of success as the 1985 team, but in a higher classification. An assistant at Goldthwaite for six seasons, Proffitt has made the transition in style with a 13-0 record.

Reagan County, 11-0-1, is making its first trip into the quarterfinals under Reeger after making the postseason tournament for the second straight season. The Owls have compiled a 5-1 playoff record for Reeger.

And they've been doing it with defense.

The Owls eliminated the big-play mistakes that have been haunting them all season to shut down an offense that scored 30 points against a state-ranked Abernathy team.

The Panthers were forced to throw the ball as Reagan County allowed just 33 yards rushing in 25 attempts. Panhandle did accumulate 164 yards passing, but the Owls defense grew stingy before the Panthers got too close to the end zone.

"THAT'S THE first time our front seven has really dominated a ballgame. It's usually our secondary that's the one picking off passes and doing what it has to do," Reeger said. "That's not to say that they didn't do a good job Friday, it's just it was one of those nights that there weren't many scraps left."

Luis Garcia, at defensive end, and tackles Robert Chaney and Tony Smith were pointed out by Reeger as three of the little-known stalwarts on the Owls front line. Reeger was especially pleased with their defense against the rush.

"We took away what they liked to do — run — and they didn't think anybody could do that. That kind of hurts your head when you can do that to a team."

The Eagles are also a running team with Douglas Holtzclaw carrying the brunt of the offensive load for Goldthwaite. Holtzclaw leads the Eagles with 1,421 yards on the ground while the other halfback Byron Henry adds 680 to the attack.

So Reagan County will try to stop the Goldthwaite rushing game and make the Eagles move the ball in the air — something no one has been able to do all season.

In three post-season games, the Eagles have outscored opponents 79-21, including a 33-7 pasting of 10-2 Quanah last week. The closest anyone has come to the Eagles all season has been Forsan in a 16-6 loss.

The Owls know all about Forsan, playing the Buffaloes to a 13-all tie early in the district season. But Reagan County has improved immensely in the past few weeks, especially on defense.

Lombardi finalists named

HOUSTON (AP) — Playoffs to determine the top collegiate football team would not be economically sound for schools that depend on football programs for revenues, two finalists for the Lombardi Award say.

A playoff program that would result in the Rose Bowl being the Super Bowl of college football isn't a bad idea, according to Lombardi Award finalist Brian Bosworth of Oklahoma.

But finalist Jerome Brown of Miami is against such a playoff.

"We have an independent school where the bowl money comes to the school. In conferences, like the Big Eight, they have to split their money up," Brown, a 6-foot-2, 285-pound defensive tackle, said at a news conference Wednesday.

"All the money comes to the University of Miami. It means we get more students, they upgrade the campus and do more things for us," said Brown whose team faces Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl Jan. 2 to determine the No. 1 college team.

Other finalists of the Lombardi Award, recognizing the outstanding college lineman of the year, include Chris Spielman of Ohio State and Cornelius Bennett of Alabama. The winner of the award is to be announced tonight.

A playoff would "take away a lot of money out of the pockets of the schools and conferences," Bosworth, a 6-foot-2, 240-pound linebacker, said.

The outspoken Bosworth says college athletes have been prostituted, adding the football program at Oklahoma last year made over $10 million.

"Of that $10 million not any of it came back to the football program," he said. "It all is sucked into the academics and I don't see $10 million worth of academics at Oklahoma."

Players should be subsidized since they make money for the schools and they are not allowed to work during the school year, said Bosworth, donning his usual diamond stud and a "Boz" earring along with his punk-style haircut — shaved sides, a dark pin stripe circling his head and a tail in the back.

Spielman, a 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker, said players who accept money from alumni are taking a chance of not only ruining their eligibility but also tarnishing their team and school.

"We have a responsibility as players not to be involved in cheating. If somebody comes up and offers you money, it's hard to resist temptation ... I think it's the responsibility of the player to be a mature person about it and deny that money," the 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker said.

Bennett says he warns recruits about accepting alumni benefits when they first visit the Alabama campus.

"You have to think of the consequences you have to face if you get caught. It could cost you your eligibility and a possible shot of playing professional football."

Chaps face risky trip to NMMI

From Staff Reports

ROSWELL, N.M.— Midland College's Chaparrals risk their No. 8 national ranking in the snake pit here tonight where last they were beaten in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play.

New Mexico Military Institute handed MC its last regular season defeat here in Feb. of the 1984-85 season.

The all-freshmen Cadets are under .500, but are always tough at home.

MC RAISED its record to 11-0 with a 110-69 win over Clarendon College Monday in Midland. It was the Chaps WJCAC opener.

Going into tonight's game, Daron "Mookie" Blaylock leads the Chaps with a 21.7 average per game while Lincoln "Ice" Minor has a 16.3 average.

Top rebounder on the team is Billy Ray Smith with 81. The freshman from Garland also carries an 11.9 scoring average.

Blaylock, 53; Minor, 41; Smith, 27; Herman Henry, 24, and Todd Duncan, 21, are the assist leaders on the team while the quick hands belong to Blaylock, 53 steals, and Minor, 41.

Alex Stanwood's tops the team in blocked shots with 13 while Blaylock with 25 and Duncan 23 are the leaders in three-point shots.

Hitch says SMU must leave past sins behind

DALLAS (AP) — What's needed at Southern Methodist University, says Athletic Director Bob Hitch, is a chance to forget past football recruiting sins and to start over with a clear record.

Otherwise, Hitch said, SMU might forever be in trouble with the National Collegiate Athletic Association because of rules violations that occurred years ago.

"There's got to be a point in time where we draw the line and forget about all the stuff that's happened in the past and start anew," Hitch told reporters Wednesday.

Hitch appeared before the Faculty Senate to answer questions about the football program after reports last month that a football player was paid, a violation of NCAA rules. The player claimed he was paid after the school was placed on three years' probation for recruiting violations.

Another player reportedly received a rent-free apartment, also a rules violation.

Hitch said he has no doubts that the SMU Board of Governors would drop football if violations continue. Gov.-elect Bill Clements, chairman of the board of governors, said football would be abolished if SMU doesn't clean up its act.

"I think football has embarrassed this institution enough right now, and I think they've got to look at strong measures," Hitch said. "I think really, in all honesty, the board would drop football right now. And you can see why. It's an issue right now, and we've got to get things in order."

"The SMU boosters have to realize the board is serious about dropping football if we can't handle it," Hitch said.

Hitch said SMU "has been in trouble forever, even back in the 1920s. We have a reputation of being crooks and being bad guys and that type of reputation is hard to live down."

But he said that the football team next fall "is going to be clean."

Earlier, Hitch told the Faculty Senate that the school would not have a winning football team if special admissions for athletes were abolished.

The board of governors last week announced that special admissions for football players would be abandoned immediately.

Special admissions allow students to enroll under academic standards that are less than those required for others. Hitch said the athletic department has an average of about 28 such students, mostly football and basketball players.

"If you take special admissions and look at our won-loss records, you will be scared to death at what you see," Hitch said.

SMU officials have pointed out that every major university has special admissions programs for athletes and talented students in other fields.

NCAA places LSU cage program on one-year probation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University Chancellor James Wharton says LSU won't appeal the NCAA's decision to strip the school of two basketball scholarships during a one-year probation for violations of NCAA rules.

Wharton called the penalty stern, but said, "Overall, we're pleased with the outcome."

The probation does not prohibit LSU from television appearances or postseason tournaments.

Coach Dale Brown said that although he has been a severe critic of NCAA rules, he does not dispute the charges.

"How many of you committed that many mistakes in 15 years and after four years of investigation?" he said at a news conference Wednesday after the sanctions were announced. "I still hope to change the rules."

Brown has been an outspoken proponent of changes that would allow more financial aid to student-athletes.

The NCAA last month cited LSU for 16 violations, 13 of which were disputed by the university.

The NCAA found the university guilty of nine violations, including former Athletic Director Bob Brodhead's attempt to eavesdrop on NCAA investigators. The other violations involved boosters buying players' free tickets for up to $500 and donating free apartments and meals to players.

The university may issue only two new basketball scholarships in the 1987-88 academic year instead of the six normally allowed, the NCAA said. However, the total number of scholarships was reduced only by two, from 15 to 13.

LSU attorney Mike Pharis said he will ask for more explanation of the sanction since LSU now has 14 athletes on scholarship, including three high school seniors who already have signed commitments for the '87-88 school year.

With only two new scholarships allowed that year, one might have to go, Pharis said.

"We plan to talk with the NCAA about that," he said. "We're just not sure."

The NCAA report issued Tuesday said further penalties could be handed down unless LSU bars further booster activities of Baton Rouge businessman Al Guglielmo, who bought tickets from two players, helped another obtain credit for a car loan and allowed others to live free at an apartment building.

Wharton said he was disappointed the NCAA included Brodhead's bugging among its violations. He had argued that university officials had settled the matter by disciplining Brodhead after he pleaded guilty last April to a federal wiretap charge.

Brodhead resigned in October after being charged with three violations of the state Code of Ethics involving a free vacation trip and improper payments from Baton Rouge media executive Doug Manship Sr.

The violations also involved boosters Jack Andonie and Tom Moran. Players named in the violations were Theron Cojoe, Tom Curry, Tito Horford and Steffond Johnson.

More and more workers willing to file wrongful dismissal suits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More and more, workers who think they were wrongfully dismissed are suing their former bosses. People who follow such litigation say it accounts for about half the civil injury suits handled by labor law attorneys.

And more often now, the suits are brought by clerks and other non-management employees.

"There is a tremendous willingness of employees to sue employers," said Paul Grossman, a lawyer who handles such cases, mostly defending managers.

Since a California court ruled in 1979 that employers do not have an unfettered right to dismiss workers at will, there has been a virtual explosion in wrongful-discharge suits.

"This is a major growth area," said William B. Gould IV, a professor at the Stanford University Law School in Palo Alto, Calif.

The flood of such suits has made companies more reluctant to fire workers, more thorough in documenting causes and more cautious about the reasons they give for termination — both to the worker and to future employers.

Besides suing for being terminated, some workers have won libel suits against ex-bosses for comments that damaged their reputations.

Grossman said his firm has 600 to 700 active wrongful-discharge cases, compared to about 20 six years ago.

The wave of wrongful-discharge actions has spread across much of the country, but California remains the hotbed of such litigation, said Jim Dertouzous of Rand Corp., a research center based in Santa Monica, Calif.

"California is by far the most liberal state in its interpretation of the law," Dertouzous said.

By the end of 1985, all but 10 states recognized restrictions on employers' ability to fire at will, he said. At the very least, they provided protection for "whistleblowers" who report misdeeds of their bosses, he said.

Even broader are emerging legal doctrines that employment itself constitutes an implied contract and that employers must actively try to help workers who are having trouble rather than just firing them.

While those doctrines are new to the United States, employers in Japan, Europe and elsewhere historically have been far more restricted in their ability to dismiss workers.

The California Supreme Court is expected to decide before the end of the year a case that may help resolve some uncertainties in the law and possibly affect many other cases.

The suit was brought by Daniel Foley against Interactive Data Corp., a subsidiary of Chase Manhattan Bank.

Foley was hired in 1976 and rose to manager of the Los Angeles branch before being fired in March 1983, two days after receiving a merit bonus of $6,762 on top of his annual $56,164 salary.

According to his lawyer, Foley's problems began when he told a company executive in 1982 that Foley's new supervisor was under investigation by the FBI for embezzlement from a former employer, an allegation to which the supervisor pleaded guilty in late 1983.

After Foley raised the issue, he says, the company began saying he wasn't doing a good job, and that was the reason given for his firing.

Among issues involved in the suit are:

— Whether a firing can be held improper on the grounds of a public policy that is not defined by statute, in this case the policy that company whistleblowers deserve protection.

— Whether a wrongful termination suit can be based on an oral promise of continued employment, a pledge Foley claims he had.

When wrongful-discharge suits first began to be filed, after 1979, they were brought primarily by highly paid executives who thought they had been fired unfairly, Dertouzous said.

But later, non-management workers began to use the courts as well. Of the suits that went to juries in Los Angeles County last year, Dertouzous said, about 9 percent were brought by upper-tier executives and about 40 percent by middle managers. The remainder involved non-management employees.

The ousted employees won about 70 percent of the cases, Dertouzous said.

In the last legislative session, the California Employment Law Council, a coalition of 70 of the state's largest companies, proposed a plan that would curb such suits by pressuring both sides to accept arbitration.

GM's car sales were down 18.2 percent and 9.4 percent for the month from the year-ago periods.

GM on Wednesday announced it would cut production at three luxury car plants early next year and lay off 4,500 workers indefinitely to combat poor sales while avoiding widespread financing incentives.

Ford Motor Co.'s car sales, boosted by the strong performance of its popular Taurus and Sable models, rose 26.7 percent in late November and 23.8 percent for November as a whole from the year-ago periods.

"Taurus really hasn't lost its luster," said analyst Joseph Phillippi with E.F. Hutton in New York. Among Ford division cars, Taurus consistently has outsold Escort, Ford's previous best-seller, in recent sales periods.

Ford's market share in late November rose to 28.7 from 23.8 percent a year ago and Chrysler's rose slightly to 13.6 percent from 13.2 percent a year ago.

Chrysler's sales also were up, increasing 8.6 percent in late November and 9.3 percent for the month from a year ago. American Honda Motor Co.'s sales were up 341.8 percent, reflecting increased U.S. production.

American Motors Corp.'s U.S.-made car sales continued to plummet, falling 41.2 percent in late November and 48.1 percent for the month compared with the year-ago periods.

Honda also was a big winner with its foreign-made cars, whose sales increasd 23.7 percent in November over a year ago, as was Toyota Motor Corp., whose import sales jumped 27.9 percent.

Nissan Motor Corp.'s imports fell 23.3 percent in November from a year ago and Mazda Motor Corp.'s imports were down 17.2 percent.

Chrysler, Ford, AMC and GM's Chevrolet division offered limited sales incentives during part of November, but analysts discounted the lures' effects and said the changes in tax laws for 1987 did not seem to prompting sales either.

"We're still paying back that August-to-October year-end clearance sale," Phillippi said.

Only Chrysler's car sales were up for the year so far, rising 1.8 percent over a year ago. GM's sales were down 1.7 percent for the year and Ford's were down 3.1 percent.

Honda's and Nissan's sales of U.S.-made cars were up 53.9 percent and 30.3 percent, respectively, for the year over a year ago.

The eight domestic automakers sold 169,635 cars in the seven selling days from Nov. 21-30 and 521,074 in 24 selling days during the month, compared with 184,506 in eight days and 515,802 in 25 days a year ago.

Foreign makers sold 261,023 cars in November compared with 245,858 a year ago.

Domestic makers sold 81,474 trucks in late November and 241,998 during the month compared with 105,149 and 283,575 a year ago. Foreign makers sold 76,723 trucks in November compared with 56,447 a year ago.

For the year, domestic makers have sold 7,541,593 cars and 3,355,323 light-duty trucks in 281 business days compared with 7,646,718 cars and 3,337,236 trucks in 282 selling days last year.

Foreign makers have sold 2,909,566 cars and 835,662 trucks compared with 2,573,910 cars and 705,680 trucks a year ago.

New home sales plunge 9.6 percent in October

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of new single family homes plunged 9.6 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 662,000, offsetting a sharp rise in September, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

New home sales rose from 618,000 in August to 732,000 in September, according to revised figures issued in a report from the department's Census Bureau.

The August and September sales figures are up substantially from earlier reports, so the setback in October does not reflect as much weakness as first anticipated.

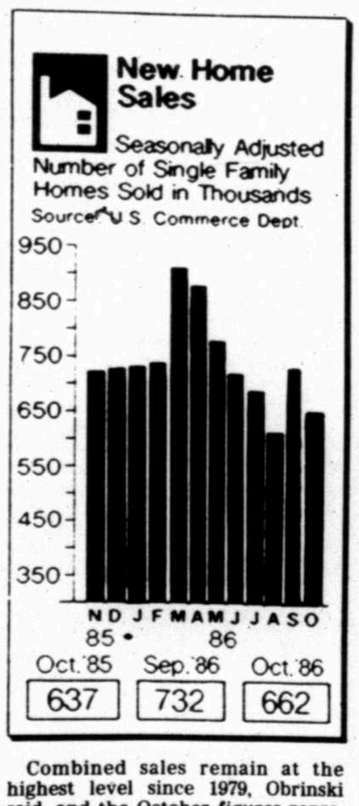

Even so, sales are off substantially from levels in early 1986. Sales peaked at 924,000 in March before diminishing demand, especially in depressed farm and energy producing regions, combined with sharply higher prices to wear down the rapid pace of sale.

March sales were the highest in eight years, while the August level was the lowest since December 1984.

The estimated actual number of new homes sold in October was 53,000, down from 60,000 in September. The figures are adjusted for seasonal differences and extended for 12 months to arrive at the annual rate.

The pace of new home sales slowed more abruptly than that of existing homes. Home resales peaked at a seven-year high of 3,770,000 at an annual rate in September and nosed down to 3,760,000 in October.

Mark Obrinksi, an economist with the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, stressed it is important to look at both new and existing home sales to get a complete picture of the market.

Combined sales remain at the highest level since 1979, Obrinski said, and the October figures represent "a continuing solid sales pattern."

"The rush to buy houses when mortgage interest rates went down so rapidly early this year is now behind us," Lyle Gramley, chief economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association, said.

GM lays off 4,500 workers

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. on Wednesday said it would lay off about 4,500 employees in Michigan and Missouri early next year and reduce production at three assembly plants to avoid offering incentive financing.

"It is our intent to maintain dealer inventories in this manner in the hope of avoiding large incentive financing programs," GM Vice President William E. Hoglund said in a statement.

About 2,500 workers will be laid off at the Hamtramck assembly plant Feb. 2, and plants in Oakland County's Orion Township and at Wentzville, Mo., will lose 1,000 workers each to layoffs Jan. 5, GM said.

All three Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac assembly plants produce top-of-the-line, luxury automobiles, GM spokesman John Grix said.

"They are not selling as well right now as we thought they would," Grix said. "What we're trying to do is prevent building up big inventories."

GM Chairman Roger Smith has said repeatedly the automaker will do whatever it can to avoid incentive financing.

Last month, GM announced it would close 11 plants in Michigan, Ohio and Missouri, affecting more than 29,000 workers in the next three years. Smith said the move would reduce overcapacity and cut operating losses.

The automaker reported operating losses of $338.5 million during the third quarter.

Grix said the layoffs announced Wednesday would be indefinite, but that production might be increased if sales pick up.

The Orion Township plant will reduce production by eight cars per hour on each of two shifts, GM said. The plant assembles Cadillac DeVille, Fleetwood Sedan and Oldsmobile 98 Regency models.

The Hamtramck plant will reduce production of Oldsmobile Toronado, Buick Riviera and Cadillac Eldorado and Seville models from two shifts at 54 cars per hour to one shift at 54 per hour, the automaker said.

The Missouri plant will reduce production by eight cars per hour on each of two shifts that assemble Buick Electra and Park Avenue, Oldsmobile 98 and Oldsmobile Delta 98 models, GM said.

McWilliams, three former Rebels honored by AP

DALLAS (AP) — David McWilliams, who brought Texas Tech its first winning season and bowl appearance in the 1980s, has been named The Associated Press Southwest Conference Coach of the Year in balloting by his peers.

McWilliams, who has been interviewed for the opening at the University of Texas, left the Longhorns a year ago as defensive coordinator to take the Tech job after Jerry Moore was fired.

The Red Raiders were 7-4 under McWilliams and received an Independence Bowl bid to play Mississippi. It was Tech's first winning season since 1978.

Three former Midland Lee players were honored on the team. Sophomore Tyrone Thurman was named as the top conference return specialist after setting the Texas Tech record for punt return yardage in only two years.

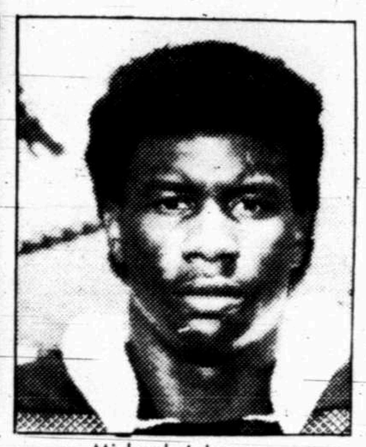

Also Tech junior linebacker Michael Johnson and senior defensive end Calvin Riggs were named to the second team. Both are former Rebels and Johnson was an All-State player in 1983 when Lee went to the state finals. Riggs and Johnson also were given honorable mention status on the AP All-America team named today.

Michael Johnson

Texas A&M, the SWC champions, dominated the mythical all-star team.

Led by quarterback Kevin Murray, the SWC's Offensive Player of the Year, the Aggies landed eight players on first team offense and defense. Tight end Rod Bernstine was a unanimous choice.

Other Aggie first teamers included running back Roger Vick, offensive tackle Louis Cheek, placekicker Scott Slater, defensive lineman Sammy O'Brient, linebacker Johnny Holland, and defensive back Kip Corrington.

The Defensive Player of the Year was Baylor defensive back Thomas Everett. The Offensive Newcomer of the Year was Tech's James Gray and Texas' linebacker Duane Duncum earned Defensive Newcomer of the Year honors.

The Cotton Bowl-bound Aggies, who meet Ohio State on Jan. 1, placed six players on the second team.

Baylor had six players on the All-

SWC Team

SWC first team and two on the second squad.

Murray became the SWC career leader in touchdown passes and owns all the Aggie career passing marks and two single season records.

Murray led A&M to the SWC title for the second consecutive season.

Everett was the SWC Defensive Player of the Year last season and retained that honor again.

Reagan County faces unbeaten Goldthwaite

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

With three extraordinary skill players, Reagan County earned a reputation as an offensive machine in rolling to the co-championship of District 6-2A.

And though neither fullback Junior Romero nor tailback James West have crossed the 1,000-yard threshold and quarterback Scott Lipsey has just gone over that mark in passing, the Owls' offensive reputation has been well deserved, blowing out opponents 91-27 in playoff action.

But in those last three games, the Owls have rediscovered a chilling defense to give them a three-game playoff winning streak and a berth in the Class 2A quarterfinals Friday at 8 p.m. against Goldthwaite in San Angelo.

By shutting out Panhandle last week in regional play, Reagan County put together what coach Ronnie Reeger called "a great defensive effort."

"We played better than we have in a while on defense," Reeger said. "Our defense hasn't been getting noticed, but until you start getting some shutouts, that's the way it's going to be."

A SHUTOUT of unbeaten Goldthwaite would really draw attention to the Owls defense. The Eagles come into the quarterfinals with a 29-game unbeaten string and a Class 1A state title as their latest accomplishments.

First year coach Gary Proffitt now finds his Eagles enjoying the same kind of success as the 1985 team, but in a higher classification. An assistant at Goldthwaite for six seasons, Proffitt has made the transition in style with a 13-0 record.

Reagan County, 11-0-1, is making its first trip into the quarterfinals under Reeger after making the postseason tournament for the second straight season. The Owls have compiled a 5-1 playoff record for Reeger.

And they've been doing it with defense.

The Owls eliminated the big-play mistakes that have been haunting them all season to shut down an offense that scored 30 points against a state-ranked Abernathy team.

Prep Playoffs

The Panthers were forced to throw the ball as Reagan County allowed just 33 yards rushing in 25 attempts. Panhandle did accumulate 164 yards passing, but the Owls defense grew stingy before the Panthers got too close to the end zone.

"THAT'S THE first time our front seven has really dominated a ballgame. It's usually our secondary that's the one picking off passes and doing what it has to do," Reeger said. "That's not to say that they didn't do a good job Friday, it's just it was one of those nights that there weren't many scraps left."

Luis Garcia, at defensive end, and tackles Robert Chaney and Tony Smith were pointed out by Reeger as three of the little-known stalwarts on the Owls front line. Reeger was especially pleased with their defense against the rush.

"We took away what they liked to do — run — and they didn't think anybody could do that. That kind of hurts your head when you can do that to a team."

The Eagles are also a running team with Douglas Holtzclaw carrying the brunt of the offensive load for Goldthwaite. Holtzclaw leads the Eagles with 1,421 yards on the ground while the other halfback Byron Henry adds 680 to the attack.

So Reagan County will try to stop the Goldthwaite rushing game and make the Eagles move the ball in the air — something no one has been able to do all season.

In three post-season games, the Eagles have outscored opponents 79-21, including a 33-7 pasting of 10-2 Quanah last week. The closest anyone has come to the Eagles all season has been Forsan in a 16-6 loss.

The Owls know all about Forsan, playing the Buffaloes to a 13-all tie early in the district season. But Reagan County has improved immensely in the past few weeks, especially on defense.

Lombardi finalists named

HOUSTON (AP) — Playoffs to determine the top collegiate football team would not be economically sound for schools that depend on football programs for revenues, two finalists for the Lombardi Award say.

A playoff program that would result in the Rose Bowl being the Super Bowl of college football isn't a bad idea, according to Lombardi Award finalist Brian Bosworth of Oklahoma.

But finalist Jerome Brown of Miami is against such a playoff.

"We have an independent school where the bowl money comes to the school. In conferences, like the Big Eight, they have to split their money up," Brown, a 6-foot-2, 285-pound defensive tackle, said at a news conference Wednesday.

"All the money comes to the University of Miami. It means we get more students, they upgrade the campus and do more things for us," said Brown whose team faces Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl Jan. 2 to determine the No. 1 college team.

Other finalists of the Lombardi Award, recognizing the outstanding college lineman of the year, include Chris Spielman of Ohio State and Cornelius Bennett of Alabama. The winner of the award is to be announced tonight.

A playoff would "take away a lot of money out of the pockets of the schools and conferences," Bosworth, a 6-foot-2, 240-pound linebacker, said.

The outspoken Bosworth says college athletes have been prostituted, adding the football program at Oklahoma last year made over $10 million.

"Of that $10 million not any of it came back to the football program," he said. "It all is sucked into the academics and I don't see $10 million worth of academics at Oklahoma."

Players should be subsidized since they make money for the schools and they are not allowed to work during the school year, said Bosworth, donning his usual diamond stud and a "Boz" earring along with his punk-style haircut — shaved sides, a dark pin stripe circling his head and a tail in the back.

Spielman, a 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker, said players who accept money from alumni are taking a chance of not only ruining their eligibility but also tarnishing their team and school.

"We have a responsibility as players not to be involved in cheating. If somebody comes up and offers you money, it's hard to resist temptation ... I think it's the responsibility of the player to be a mature person about it and deny that money," the 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker said.

Bennett says he warns recruits about accepting alumni benefits when they first visit the Alabama campus.

"You have to think of the consequences you have to face if you get caught. It could cost you your eligibility and a possible shot of playing professional football."

Chaps face risky trip to NMMI

From Staff Reports

ROSWELL, N.M.— Midland College's Chaparrals risk their No. 8 national ranking in the snake pit here tonight where last they were beaten in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play.

New Mexico Military Institute handed MC its last regular season defeat here in Feb. of the 1984-85 season.

The all-freshmen Cadets are under .500, but are always tough at home.

MC RAISED its record to 11-0 with a 110-69 win over Clarendon College Monday in Midland. It was the Chaps WJCAC opener.

Going into tonight's game, Daron "Mookie" Blaylock leads the Chaps with a 21.7 average per game while Lincoln "Ice" Minor has a 16.3 average..

Top rebounder on the team is Billy Ray Smith with 81. The freshman from Garland also carries an 11.9 scoring average.

Blaylock, 53; Minor, 41; Smith, 27; Herman Henry, 24, and Todd Duncan, 21, are the assist leaders on the team while the quick hands belong to Blaylock, 53 steals, and Minor, 41.

Alex Stanwood's tops the team in blocked shots with 13 while Blaylock with 25 and Duncan 23 are the leaders in three-point shots.

Hitch says SMU must leave past sins behind

DALLAS (AP) — What's needed at Southern Methodist University, says Athletic Director Bob Hitch, is a chance to forget past football recruiting sins and to start over with a clear record.

Otherwise, Hitch said, SMU might forever be in trouble with the National Collegiate Athletic Association because of rules violations that occurred years ago.

"There's got to be a point in time where we draw the line and forget about all the stuff that's happened in the past and start anew," Hitch told reporters Wednesday.

Hitch appeared before the Faculty Senate to answer questions about the football program after reports last month that a football player was paid, a violation of NCAA rules. The player claimed he was paid after the school was placed on three years' probation for recruiting violations.

Another player reportedly received a rent-free apartment, also a rules violation.

Hitch said he has no doubts that the SMU Board of Governors would drop football if violations continue. Gov.-elect Bill Clements, chairman of the board of governors, said football would be abolished if SMU doesn't clean up its act.

"I think football has embarrassed this institution enough right now, and I think they've got to look at strong measures," Hitch said. "I think really, in all honesty, the board would drop football right now. And you can see why. It's an issue right now, and we've got to get things in order."

"The SMU boosters have to realize the board is serious about dropping football if we can't handle it," Hitch said.

Hitch said SMU "has been in trouble forever, even back in the 1920s. We have a reputation of being crooks and being bad guys and that type of reputation is hard to live down."

But he said that the football team next fall "is going to be clean."

Earlier, Hitch told the Faculty Senate that the school would not have a winning football team if special admissions for athletes were abolished.

The board of governors last week announced that special admissions for football players would be abandoned immediately.

Special admissions allow students to enroll under academic standards that are less than those required for others. Hitch said the athletic department has an average of about 28 such students, mostly football and basketball players.

"If you take special admissions and look at our won-loss records, you will be scared to death at what you see," Hitch said.

SMU officials have pointed out that every major university has special admissions programs for athletes and talented students in other fields.

NCAA places LSU cage program on one-year probation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University Chancellor James Wharton says LSU won't appeal the NCAA's decision to strip the school of two basketball scholarships during a one-year probation for violations of NCAA rules.

Wharton called the penalty stern, but said, "Overall, we're pleased with the outcome."

The probation does not prohibit LSU from television appearances or postseason tournaments.

Coach Dale Brown said that although he has been a severe critic of NCAA rules, he does not dispute the charges.

"How many of you committed that many mistakes in 15 years and after four years of investigation?" he said at a news conference Wednesday after the sanctions were announced. "I still hope to change the rules."

Brown has been an outspoken proponent of changes that would allow more financial aid to student-athletes.

The NCAA last month cited LSU for 16 violations, 13 of which were disputed by the university.

The NCAA found the university guilty of nine violations, including former Athletic Director Bob Brodhead's attempt to eavesdrop on NCAA investigators. The other violations involved boosters buying players' free tickets for up to $500 and donating free apartments and meals to players.

The university may issue only two new basketball scholarships in the 1987-88 academic year instead of the six normally allowed, the NCAA said. However, the total number of scholarships was reduced only by two, from 15 to 13.

LSU attorney Mike Pharis said he will ask for more explanation of the sanction since LSU now has 14 athletes on scholarship, including three high school seniors who already have signed commitments for the '87-88 school year.

With only two new scholarships allowed that year, one might have to go, Pharis said.

"We plan to talk with the NCAA about that," he said. "We're just not sure."

The NCAA report issued Tuesday said further penalties could be handed down unless LSU bars further booster activities of Baton Rouge businessman Al Guglielmo, who bought tickets from two players, helped another obtain credit for a car loan and allowed others to live free at an apartment building.

Wharton said he was disappointed the NCAA included Brodhead's bugging among its violations. He had argued that university officials had settled the matter by disciplining Brodhead after he pleaded guilty last April to a federal wiretap charge.

Brodhead resigned in October after being charged with three violations of the state Code of Ethics involving a free vacation trip and improper payments from Baton Rouge media executive Doug Manship Sr.

The violations also involved boosters Jack Andonie and Tom Moran. Players named in the violations were Theron Cojoe, Tom Curry, Tito Horford and Steffond Johnson.

Testaverde tops AP team

Miami, Oklahoma dominate squad

Associated Press

Quarterback Vinny Testaverde, the nation's most effective passer, and two defensive teammates from No. 1-ranked Miami of Florida — tackle Jerome Brown and free safety Bennie Blades, the nation's leading interceptor — were named today to the Associated Press All-America team for 1986.

Testaverde, who is expected to win the Heisman Trophy on Saturday, led Miami to the head of the college football rankings by completing 175 of 276 passes for 2,557 yards and a nation-leading 26 touchdowns in 10 games before missing the Hurricanes' final regular-season contest with bruises suffered when he fell off his motor scooter. His completion percentage was 63.4 and he led the country in passing efficiency.

Blades intercepted 10 passes in 11 games and returned them for 128 yards while the 285-pound Brown was the top lineman on a unit that finished sixth nationally in total defense.

"I had never before coached a game where we had to find out where a defensive lineman was before the snap," Pitt Coach Mike Gottfried said of Brown's dominance.

OKLAHOMA, THE team Miami displaced as No. 1 after beating the Sooners 28-16 on Sept. 27, also put three players on the All-America team — inside linebacker Brian Bosworth, tight end Keith Jackson and offensive guard Mark Hutson, all juniors.

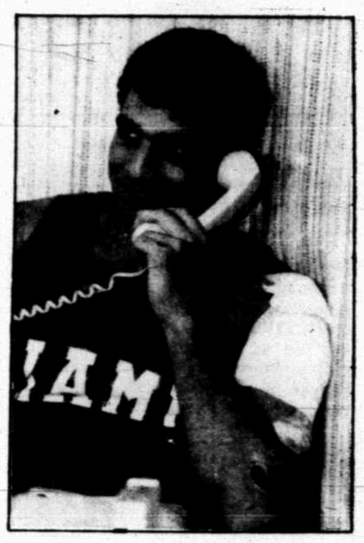

Bosworth is one of five repeaters and nine juniors on the first team. The other repeaters are offensive guard Jeff Bregel of Southern California, defensive backs Thomas Everett of Baylor and Mark Moore of Oklahoma State and punter Barry Helton of Colorado.

Besides Blades, Helton and the Oklahoma trio, the other juniors are wide receivers Tim Brown of Notre Dame and Cris Carter of Ohio State, defensive tackle Al Noga of Hawaii and inside linebacker Chris Spielman of Ohio State.

The rest of the elite squad consists of offensive tackles Harris Barton of North Carolina and Danny Villa of Arizona State, center Ben Tamburello and running back Brent Fullwood of Auburn, running back Paul Palmer of Temple, placekicker Jeff Jaeger of Washington, outside linebackers Cornelius Bennett of Alabama and Shane Conlan of Penn State, nose guard Danny Noonan of Nebraska and defensive back Rod Woodson of Purdue.

The AP All-America team will be featured on Bob Hope's Bagful of Christmas Cheer (Dec. 21, NBC-TV, 9-10 p.m., EST). It will be Hope's 48th annual Christmas special on radio or television.

The All-America team was selected by the AP's regional sports editors, along with the college football editor and the sports editor, from all-conference and all-sectional lists.

Miami's Vinny Testaverde

Three 1985 first-team All-Americans failed to repeat. Michigan State tailback Lorenzo White and LSU linebacker Michael Brooks were hampered by injuries while Texas A&M linebacker Johnny Holland made the third team this time.

By throwing for 308 yards against Tulsa in his final regular-season game, Testaverde eclipsed Bernie Kosar and became Miami's all-time passing leader with 6,058 yards, all but 266 in the last two seasons. The 26 touchdown passes, and 48 for his career, are Miami records.

TEMPLE'S PLAMER led the nation in rushing with 1,866 yards, an average of 169.6 a game and 5.4 per carry. He added 110 reception yards and 657 on kickoff returns to finish No. 1 in all-purpose yardage, with an average of 239.36 a game.

The 5-foot-9, 180-pound Palmer's best rushing game was a 349-yard effort against East Carolina. He followed that with 239 against Virginia Tech, 187 against Syracuse and 212 against Boston College, setting NCAA records for two (588), three (775) and four (987) consecutive games.

Fullwood, who played behind 1985 Heisman winner Bo Jackson until this year, led the nation with 8.3 yards every time he carried the football. He also topped the Southeastern Conference with 126.4 yards a game, good for fourth place nationally.

"Play after play, he's a better runner than Bo," said Mississippi State Coach Rockey Felker.

Brown, Notre Dame's all-around star, is one of the country's most dangerous and exciting performers. Lining up at wide receiver and running back, he finished third in all-purpose yardage with 176.09 yards a game — 254 rushing yards, 910 receiving (on just 45 catches), 698 on kickoff returns — he was third nationally with a 27.92 average, returning two for touchdowns — and 75 on punt returns.

Carter, the other wideout, is regarded as the finest receiver in Ohio State history. He set school records this year by catching 65 passes for 1,066 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Tight end Jackson caught just 14 passes all season — Oklahoma only threw 88 — but he averaged a school record 28.8 yards per catch and five of his receptions were for touchdowns. He also carried six times on end-arounds for 98 yards and his blocking — along with that of Hutson — helped the Sooners lead the nation in rushing.

In the regular-season finale against Nebraska, Jackson caught three passes for 87 yards — including a one-handed grab of a long pass that set up the winning field goal — and his blocking graded out at 90 percent.

UP FRONT, Barton graded out a winner in every game and North Carolina Coach Dick Crum calls him the best offensive lineman he has ever had. He switched from tackle to center against Maryland after practicing at that position for only one day. Barton also is an excellent student and will be honored next week as one of the National Football Foundation's 11 scholar-athletes for 1986.

The other tackle, Villa, was one of the reasons Arizona State won the Pacific-10 championship and a berth in the Rose Bowl.

Southern Cal's Bregel, who moved from weakside to strongside guard this year to take advantage of his run-blocking abilities, also is a National Football Foundation scholar-athlete. He became the first USC offensive lineman since World War II to start every game for four consecutive years.

Hutson's blocking was a key to Oklahoma's averaging 404.7 yards a game on the ground, almost 100 yards ahead of runnerup Nebraska.

Tamburello has been Auburn's starting center for four years and pro scouts say his speed and quickness make him the highest-rated player at that position since Nebraska's Dave Rimington, a two-time Outland Trophy winner. Coach Pat Dye called Tamburello's grade of 96 percent against Tennessee "the best grade I've ever seen by a center."

Washington's Jaeger made 17 of 21 field goals this season and set an NCAA career record of 80 three-pointers in 99 attempts. He was 20-of-26 as a freshman walk-on in 1983, 22-of-28 as a sophomore and 21-of-24 last season.

Ohio State's Spielman led the Big Ten with 194 tackles and is one of the five finalists for the second annual Butkus Award, which Bosworth won last year.

Frogs survive NTSU 3-pointers

Associated Press

What started as a basketball game quickly became a long-range artillery barrage.

And Jim Killingsworth didn't like it a bit because his Texas Christian University Horned Frogs were the targets.

Texas Christian survived a North Texas State three-point bombardment Wednesday night and went on to defeat the Eagles 92-85 in a non-conference basketball game.

The Eagles hit 13 of 23 shots from three-point range. Guard Glenroy Ferguson sank eight of 13 three-pointers for a career-high 35 points.

BUT TEXAS Christian dominated the boards and threw up a zone defense in the second half to halt the barrage.

The Horned Frogs, 2-2, used their muscle under the boards, out-rebounding the Eagles 60-28. North Texas, 1-1, missed six of its first seven three-pointers in the second half.

"We've got the game back to where it started with a peach basket on the wall down at the YMCA," said Texas Christian coach Jim Killingsworth, referring to the three-pointers. "All you need to do is jack it up and click your heels together. It's like a Chinese fire drill. Something has to be done."

In other games involving Southwest Conference teams, Arkansas beat Mississippi 70-56, Baylor defeated Tarleton State 85-56 and Texas rolled past Central Missouri 88-60.

Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson said he knew his Razorbacks were a time bomb ready to explode, and William Mills proved to be the fuse.

Mills came off the bench to score 18 points and grab 12 rebounds to spur Arkansas over Mississippi.

Mills scored 14 of his points in the second half as the Razorbacks improved to 3-0. The Rebels of the Southeastern Conference fell to 1-1.

SWC Roundup

"We are like a time bomb," said Richardson, who is in his second year at Arkansas. "We can explode and we did it again tonight."

In the last two Arkansas games, the Razorbacks have outscored their opponents 92-56 in the second half to post come-from-behind victories.

Darryl Middleton scored 21 points and Brandon Taylor added 15 to lead Baylor over Tarleton State.

The Bears, 2-1, had a balanced scoring effort. Michael Hobbs scored 12 points and Frank Williams added 11, both coming off the bench.

Middleton scored 14 of his points in the first half as Baylor ran up a 46-28 lead.

Zachary Zastoupil led the Texans with 17 points and eight rebounds. Tarleton's season record is now 4-6.

PATRICK FAIRS scored 28 points and Raynard Davis scored 21 as Texas handed NCAA Division II Central Missouri State its first loss of the season.

Texas led from start to finish, opening up a 40-26 halftime lead before outscoring the Mules 7-2 at the beginning of the second half.

Skip Ellison led Central Missouri with 18 points, followed by Glenn Harrison with 10.

Texas improved its record to 2-2. Central Missouri dropped to 4-1.

"It will end up being a good learning game," said Texas coach Bob Weltlich. "We made enough mistakes to last a lifetime. It was beginning to look like Barnum & Bailey out there. I don't like to see us play like that no matter what the score."

UT decision may be near

Tech's McWilliams still at top of list

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Tech football Coach David McWilliams says there will be no announcement today concerning a possible move to the Univeristy of Texas, "because there is nothing to announce."

But when asked if that meant he would not move to Texas, McWilliams answered, "I didn't say that. I just said there's nothing to announce."

Speculation has centered on the longtime UT assistant, who became head coach at Texas Tech a year ago, since Fred Akers was fired Saturday.

McWilliams, in Pasadena to speak at a high school football banquet, confirmed he met for three hours Wednesday with Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds in Dallas.

McWilliams said he would return to Lubbock today to talk with his family, Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones and the Red Raider team.

"I'm a loyal person," McWilliams said. "Maybe that's my problem.

"I would be disappointed in myself if I didn't have loyalty to Texas Tech ... and of course, there are all my ties to Texas. I spent 26 years there and it means a lot to me."

McWilliams moved to Texas Tech this season and led the Red Raiders to a 7-4 record and Independence Bowl bid.

"First, I want to go home and see my family — we make all decisions together, and that's the way it's going to be with this one.

"We'll make the decision, then I'll talk to Mr. Jones, and then make an announcement. Probably, it will be no later than Sunday — that's when we (Tech) start practicing for the Independence Bowl."

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that sources indicated Arizona State Coach John Cooper also was interviewed for the job.

ASU Coach John Cooper was out of town Wednesday and could not be reached for comment by the Associated Press.

But ASU Athletic Dirctor Charles Harris said, "To the best of my knowledge there has been no official contact between John Cooper and the University of Texas."

Harris said no request seeking permission to interview Cooper had come from Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds or any other Texas representative.

"John (Cooper) understands where Arizona State is and certainly our desire to keep him here, and that's about all I can say," Harris said.

In Austin, Dodds said twice that no deal had been reached for a new head coach.

"I'm still anticipating the end of the week," he said, Wednesday morning. "It would be hard for us to do anything Thursday, and I've said all along it would probably be the end of the week before we are able to announce anything."

At a UT basketball game Wednesday evening, Dodds repeated the message, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Several other names besides McWilliams and Cooper have been mentioned as possibilities for the Longhorn job, including Larry Smith of Arizona, Fisher De Berry of Air Force, Mike Shanahan, an assistant with the Denver Broncos and Allen Lowry, a Dallas Cowboys assistant.

Meanwhile, the American-Statesman also reported Wednesday that Akers and his wife, Diane flew to West Lafayette, Ind., Wednesday for an interview with the selection committee of Purdue, one of Akers' closest friends said.

The vacancy war created last months when Boilermaker Coach Leon Burnett resigned.

Rozelle suspends Bears' Wilson

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Chicago Bears linebacker Otis Wilson isn't happy with his one-game suspension for Sunday's injury to Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Louis Lipps, but he's not going to appeal it.

"I just want to get back to football, get ready for the playoffs and get this thing behind me," Wilson said Wednesday.

Bears President Michael McCaskey said National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle might have given Wilson a milder penalty had the incident not occurred only a week after Green Bay nose tackle Charles Martin's body slam of Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon.

On Tuesday, Rozelle upheld a two-game suspension of Martin for that violation and announced the one-game suspension of Wilson.

"If it was just this one incident, it probably would have just been a money fine," McCaskey said. "I think the commissioner wanted to send a clear message and, being that we are the Super Bowl champions, we became the vehicle for sending that clear message."

Rozelle said Wilson must sit out the Bears' game Sunday against Tampa Bay without pay "as a result of his flagrant forearm blow to the jaw."

Troubled America II searches for answers

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — The New York Yacht Club, perennial defender of the America's Cup and now hoping to be the challenger to Australia, isn't ready to panic after two losses by its yacht in the third round of the challenger series.

Tom McLaughlin, mainsheet trimmer for America II, conceded that modifications to his boat's mast and other changes before the third round began this week may have helped cause losses to Heart of America and Stars & Stripes.

"Obviously we have a lot of things to do," McLaughlin said after Wednesday's 13-minute, four-second loss to the San Diego Yacht Club's Stars & Stripes in heavy seas. "There's a long hit list of things to try, but the mood in our camp is not one of panic. We see this as a development program. We still have confidence in the boat going well."

In today's races, America II faced Eagle, while second-place Stars & Stripes faced front-running New Zealand. Also, it was Italia vs. White Crusader; Heart of America vs. Challenge France; Azzurra vs. USA and French Kiss vs. Canada II.

Wednesday's other results saw New Zealand, skippered by Chris Dickson, score its 24th victory in 25 races, by 3:27 over Heart of America, the Chicago Yacht Club's entry. Italia beat Azzurra by 14:41 in a race between Italian boats. San Francisco-based USA whipped Challenge France by 11:29; French Kiss beat White Crusader of England, which did not finish; and Canada II defeated Eagle, entered by the Newport Beach, Calif., Yacht Club, by 6:16.

America II not only lost its race in six-foot seas and winds gusting to 31 knots, but had two men fall overboard. A wave sent water over the foredeck all the way to the boat's mast, and Robbie Young and Charles Santry were swept into the sea. They were picked up by an escort craft in 20 seconds.

But the New York Yacht club entry lost 80 seconds in retrieving them and any chance for the race.

After America II's mishap, Stars & Stripes dropped her spinnaker and sailed a conservative course for the finish line.

"Anything could happen on a day like this," said Dennis Conner, captain of Stars & Stripes and the man who lost the Cup while sailing for the New York Yacht Club in 1983.

"We have some momentum going," Conner said, "but you can't get too excited about one race."

Friends gather for Layne's funeral

LUBBOCK (AP) — More than 450 friends, former teammates and family members of Bobby Layne paid tribute to the Hall of Fame quarterback in funeral services here.

Layne gained fame playing football for the University of Texas, the Detroit Lions and Pittburgh Steelers among other teams. He died Monday at the age of 59 in Lubbock, where he had made his home for many years.

Private burial rites were held today in the City of Lubbock Cemetery only a short distance from where rock singer Buddy Holly rests.

The Rev. Harold O. Clinehens Jr., rector of St. Paul's Church, declined to read a eulogy for Layne at a packed funeral service at the church. He said many others present were more qualified to eulogize Layne and "Bobby wouldn't want one."

Layne's teammates including four Hall of Famers — Doak Walker, a friend and teammate of Layne's dating back to junior high, Joe Schmidt, Yale Lary and Ernie Stautner — recalled their days with Layne.

"He was a friend," Walker said, choking with emotion.

He smiled when asked if there will ever be another Bobby Layne.

"He was the greatest two-minute quarterback ever," Walker said. "They threw the mold away."

Stautner, a Layne teammate with the Steelers, remembered him as a great competitor. "He never believed he could lose," Stautner said. "He said he didn't lose, time just ran out on him."

"He had the ability to infect the team with the same attitude," Stautner said.

Lary, whose exploits as a Detroit Lions defensive back and punter earned him a Hall of Fame berth, recalled his first training camp as a rookie in 1952.

Tisdale struts over Malone

Associated Press

After a 27-point night against the Washington Bullets, Indiana's Wayman Tisdale was strutting at the expense of three-time Most Valuable Player Moses Malone.

Tisdale, who struggled as a rookie last year, has become more consistent for the Pacers this season, with seven 20-point efforts in 18 games. After leading Indiana to a 116-103 defeat of the Bullets Wednesday night, Tisdale said his youth was paying dividends for him.

"Every time I shot, Moses never left his feet," Tisdale said. "I felt with Moses I can out-quick him, and that really lit my eyes up. I thought I could make one move here, one move there and that kind of freezes him. That's where quickness pays off, because he never knew when I was going to shoot the ball, really."

A dunk by Tisdale defused a late Washington rally in the fourth quarter and gave the Pacers only their second victory in the last eight games. Washington was coming off a victory the night before that snapped Boston's 48-game home winning streak.

The Bullets and Pacers were tied 83-83 at the start of the fourth quarter, but a 10-2 run, led by Kyle Macy, put Indiana ahead to stay. Macy scored 12 of his 18 points in the final period.

"We defended the ball well," Indiana Coach Jack Ramsay said. "We were aggressive on offense, and we had good ball movement. We've beaten some good teams by doing that, but if we don't do one or two of them, we don't have the same efficiency."

"It's dispapointing, because we've had trouble with back-to-back games on the road," Washington Coach Kevin Loughery said. "It's expecially disappointing since we didn't take advantage of the high from last night's win over Boston."

More Sports on Page 8D

The Bullets were led by Jeff Malone with a game-high 30 points, followed by Moses Malone with 26 points and 16 rebounds, and Catledge with 17.

Celtics 119, Nuggets 113

Danny Ainge scored 34 points, seven more than his previous career high, as Boston overcame the absence of injured Larry Bird to beat Denver for its 46th consecutive victory at Boston Garden.

The Celtics, who saw their streak of 48 straight home wins snapped Tuesday night in Hartford, got 13 points from Ainge as they outscored the Nuggets 39-22 in the third quarter, extending a three-point halftime lead to 97-77. They went on to increase the margin to 26 before the Nuggets made the score close down the stretch.

Kevin McHale added 24 points and Fred Roberts 19 for Boston to compensate for Bird, who missed the game with an achilles tendon injury.

Jazz 99, Bulls 94

Utah survived a brilliant individual effort by Michael Jordan to beat visiting Chicago.

Jordan scored 45 points, nearly half of the Bulls' total, and also was outstanding defensively, stealing the ball on three consecutive Utah possessions and scoring after each theft as Chicago turned an 85-80 deficit into an 86-85 lead.

But the Jazz scored the next eight points to go ahead to stay and fought off another Chicago rally on Karl Malone's driving layup and Thurl Bailey's two free throws in the final 20 seconds.

Malone led the Jazz with 24 points, matching his season high.

76ers 115, Bucks 110

Philadelphia blew a 21-point lead, then rallied to hand Milwaukee its first loss of the season after leading through three quarters.

The Bucks rallied from the 21-point deficit to trail only 55-48 at halftime. They took their first lead of the game at 67-66 midway through the third quarter and extended the margin to 80-74 at the end of the period.

Paul Pressey's three-point goal with 29 seconds left in regulation forced the overtime, but the 76ers took the lead for good on consecutive baskets by Cliff Robinson that made it 112-108 with 1:45 left in OT.

Tim McCormick led Philadelphia with 22 points, and Charles Barkley added 17 points and 16 rebounds. Terry Cummings had 26 points and Pressey 23 for the Bucks.

Pistons 107, Nets 106

Detroit rallied from an 11-point deficit in the fourth quarter and handed New Jersey its ninth loss in 10 games when Isiah Thomas scored on a tip-in and Rick Mahorn added two free throws in the final 28 seconds of overtime.

The Nets had a chance to win the game, but Mike Gminski, who led the Nets with 24 points, missed a 20-foot jumper with three seconds left in regulation.

UH fires four to save $150,000

HOUSTON (AP) — Firing four University of Houston athletic department officials should save the financially-strapped division more than $150,000, the interim athletic director says.

Elvin Hayes, a former basketball star who was a special assistant to the athletic director, was one of the four dismissed, the university announced Wednesday.

Also fired were Jay Goldberg, sports information director; ticket manager Mark Koson and Vince Granito, assistant ticket manager, interim Athletic Director Michael Johnson said.

"We have been facing the budget deficit issue for some time and it was felt that staff reductions had to be made in the best interest of the department," Johnson said.

The personnel cuts would save the department more than $150,000 in salaries and fringe benefits, he said.

"When a business has obvious financial problems, steps have to be taken to try to solve them," he said.

Rick Rivers, sports spokesman, said Wednesday night that no other layoffs were planned.

Hayes, a two-time all-American and former all-pro in the National Basketball Association, was hired about 18 months ago by former athletic director Tom Ford as a special assistant.

"Elvin is a terrific guy, but he was doing basically public relations, and we couldn't afford it," Johnson said of Hayes' $35,000-40,000 salary.

Goldberg, sports information director for nearly eight years, was told of his dismissal Tuesday several hours after a news conference to announce the hiring of new head football Coach Jack Pardee.

Johnson said Mike Mullis, assistant athletic director for business, would oversee the ticket office. Bobby Risinger will be appointed assistant athletic director for media relations in charge of tue sports information office.

Chap Center hosts unique tripleheader

From Staff Reports

A Midland tripleheader highlights Friday night basketball at Chaparral Center, with both boys and girls taking to the floor in a rare same time, same court appearance.

Opening the the tri-night performance is Midland High's Lady Bulldogs at 4 p.m. against Seminole followed by the Midland Lee Lady Rebels at 6 p.m. against Andrews and the Midland Lee boys at 8 p.m. against Lamesa.

Also on Friday, the Midland High Bulldogs travel to Lubbock where they'll take on Coronado at 8 p.m.

Elsewhere around the area, the Greenwood Rangers and Stanton Buffaloes are competing in the three-day Coahoma Tournament starting tonight while the Greenwood and Stanton girls open play in the Reagan County tournament Friday.

The Andrews boys are in the three-day Plainview Tournament; Crane is hosting its own three-day tournament. In District 6-2A, the Rankin boys and girls are playing in the Mertzon Tournament and the McCamey boys are in the Irion County tournament.

In Midland junior varsity action the MHS and Lee boys are competing in a tournament at MHS Gyms starting today and the MHS and Lee girls are in a tournament at Lee Gym starting Friday.

FOR THE MHS and Lee boys, finding a dominating scorer has been a problem this year. Both teams have only one player in double figures: Lee's Mark Van Cott at 10.6 while the Bulldogs have Michael Ball, 12.4.

And, winning games hasn't been easy either with victories coming few and far between.

Midland Lee is 2-5 with a 51-43 win over Lubbock Dunbar Tuesday while the Bulldogs are 1-6, the only win a 58-57 squeaker over Brownfield in the season opener.

The team that's playing the best of all Tall City teams is the Midland Lee girls with a 6-0 record. The Lady Rebs are led by LaVette Wallace's 13.5 per game average while Roz Eaden added another 10.3.

The Midland High girls are also playing well with a 4-2 mark, including a 72-70 heartbreaker to Midland Lee in the Del Rio Tournament and an overtime loss to Andrews.

The Bulldogs have a strong one-two-three offensive punch led by Amy Cumings, 17.5; Brend Rodriquez, 17.0; Sebrenia Finch, 15.0.

BYU loses three football starters to drugs

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young University will play its final game of the regular season Saturday against Air Force without three starters suspended from the team a day after they were charged with altering drug prescriptions.

J.C. VonColln, a junior linebacker from Clearfield, Utah; Trevor Molini, a junior tight end from Reno, Nev., and Ladd Akeo, a senior linebacker from Pearl City, Hawaii, will not play in Colorado Springs, Colo., BYU spokesman Paul Richards said Wednesday.

The three were charged Tuesday, along with former player Steve Sanders of Orange, Calif. Police reports identified the drugs involved as Percodan and Percocet, two painkillers unavailable without a prescription.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Friday, December 5, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your popularity will continue in the year ahead. Do not let daydreaming get in the way of positive action. Better business results are possible if you make a point of finishing what you start. Be good to yourself. Upgrading your wardrobe could help you land a promotion or new job. A romance could develop with a long-time friend.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, New York Yankees slugger Gary Roenicke, Army officer Gen. George Custer, author Joan Didion, the great movie maker-entrepreneur Walt Disney, golfer Pam Higgins, Raiders quarterback Jim Plunkett, producer-director Otto Preminger, President Martin Van Buren, gum executive P.K. Wrigley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get an early start to beat the holiday rush. Mail Christmas packages and cards right now. A small windfall or legacy leads to a celebration.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A combination of imaginative ideas and hard work proves ideal. You accomplish "the impossible." Greater teamwork is possible. A good deed will be richly rewarded.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day for dealing with family concerns. Do not refuse a co-worker's help. Be more realistic about money matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Allow more give-and-take in your professional relationships. Do some business entertaining. A well-thought-out plan should be put into action without further delay. Remember your priorities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take care of routine tasks. Useful agreements can be finalized. A friend's ideas may not be worth much. Social activities could prove more expensive than expected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Join forces with several of your colleagues in an effort to boost productivity and increase profits. Teamwork pays big dividends. Experts help you deal with a tax problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use your time alone constructively. Tackle chores that are difficult to complete when other people are around. A clash between friends could put you in an embarrassing position.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work pressures subside, allowing you to concentrate on a complex project. Research is necessary if you want to make the best bid. You can beat the competition! Build a sound financial base.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Member of opposite sex makes an interesting proposal. Do not be too surprised by what you hear at a business meeting. Your ability to perform when under fire will impress higher-ups.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curb a tendency to rush into business deals. You need to think things over. Accept an invitation to attend a party or informal social gathering. You need to relax and meet new people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep accurate records so that no one can reproach you later on. A long-time relationship begins to cool. You are surprised at how relieved you feel! Entertain a small group at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Complete household shopping early in the day to avoid Christmas shoppers. A legal matter is settled in your favor. Give yourself enough time to make an important decision.

Close doubles are a feature of duplicate bridge. In the recent World Pair Olympiad held in Miami Beach, Pauline Gumby of Australia had to come up with a fine effort on defense to justify her partner's penalty double.

Since East-West can make nine tricks at a heart contract, four diamonds doubled by North-South was the par contract. All that remained was for East-West to defeat the contract.

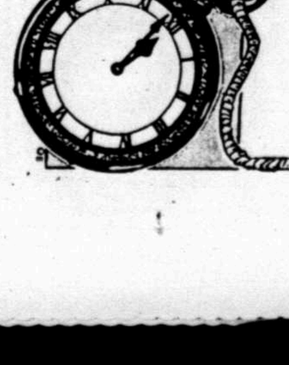

Gumby led the king of hearts and continued with the ace. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps in two rounds and led a low club to the king in dummy. East took his ace and shifted to the queen of spades. Declarer flew up with the ace, cashed the queen and jack of clubs and, when the suit did not break evenly, ruffed his fourth club. He then exited with a low spade.

Had West followed with a low card, East would have won the jack. However, he would then have been forced to lead a heart and concede a ruff-sluff, allowing declarer to get home. But West decided that, had East started with Q-x in spades, he might have returned a low spade to make life easier for his partner. So West shot up with the king of spades and was gratified to see partner's jack. She then cashed the ten of spades for the setting trick.

In the trade, this technique is known as the "Crocodile Coup." It derives its name from the fact that the defender must open his jaws wide like a crocodile to snap up his partner's high card in the suit and take him off an end play.

Generous Texan wants to bring 'vast wasteland' to park's lone rangers

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A generous Texas real estate agent wants to bring television to rangers who spend their winters in isolated parts of Yellowstone National Park, park officials say.

Chief Ranger Dan Sholly said Wednesday the agent has offered to purchase television satellite dishes for seven remote sections of the park that are reachable only by snowmobile six months of the year.

Sholly declined to release the agent's name, but he said the gift may have some 66 winter employees enjoying a television link by Christmas, unless it is too difficult to install dishes by then.

Apparently, the Texan read a recent news story reporting that Sholly had authorized the purchase of about $25,000 worth of hot tubs and exercise equipment for employees who winter in Yellowstone and who have complained there is little to do when they are not working.

But Sholly had to turn down the employees' request for TV satellite dishes, saying the estimated cost of $90,000 was far more than the park's budget would allow.

Sholly said the Texan and an engineer plan to visit Yellowstone soon to look for sites for the dishes, which will be installed at employee housing areas at Madison Junction, Old Faithful, Canyon, Lake, Snake River, Tower and the east gate.

The chief ranger said park employees at Grand Teton, Wyo., and Crater Lake, Ore., have satellite dishes.

Sholly said the Texan said he was "glad to see us do something for staff. He is in business and recognizes the value of preserving staff morale."

Sholly also said he received a number of calls from people applauding the purchase of the hot tubs and exercise equipment, and no negative calls.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A dozen top athletes joined Sen. Bill Bradley, himself a former pro basketball player, in launching an anti-tobacco campaign.

"Young people look up to athletes. Athletes need to send a very direct message to young people. Don't smoke. It's dangerous to your health," Bradley, a New Jersey Democrat, said at a news conference Wednesday.

The former New York Knicks player said he hoped the initiative would aid efforts of the American Heart Association, American Lung Association and American Cancer Society to stem tobacco use.

"Everything smoking stands for, being an athlete, we're against because you've got to take such good care of your body," said Isiah Thomas of the National Basketball Association's Detroit Pistons.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Soviet Union's most internationally renowned living poet, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, says there would be no mass exodus if Soviet citizens were allowed to travel freely to the West.

"Most Russians simply want to travel abroad to form an opinion about conditions there and then go back home," Yevtushenko said in an article published here Wednesday.

"The Russian people feel that those who wish to leave the country for good should be allowed to do so," he said. "The ones who realize that they made a mistake should be allowed to return if their conscience is clean."

The article was translated and published by Sweden's biggest morning newspaper, Dagens Nyheter.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — William Timothy Kirk, the convicted killer sprung from prison by his lawyer, has sued author Sandy Johnson and Bantam Books over publication of "Against The Law."

Kirk, now an inmate at the East Tennessee Regional Correctional Facility, asks $350,000, claiming Ms. Johnson broke an agreement not to use interviews with him without his written permission.

Sara Goodman, associate general counsel for Bantam, said the publisher was unaware of the lawsuit, filed Monday in U.S. District Court.

Ms. Johnson said Wednesday she had not seen the suit, and declined comment.

"Against The Law" detailed events surrounding Kirk's 1983 escape from Brushy Mountain Penitentiary and his 139-day flight from authorities with 26-year-old Mary Evans, his court-appointed lawyer.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — It took 70 years to get Jim Thorpe's Olympic gold medals restored. Now, after three more years, the athlete's heirs have decided to present the medals to the state of Oklahoma.

Five of Thorpe's children will present their father's 1912 Olympic medals for the decathlon and the pentathlon to Oklahoma in a ceremony Monday at the state Capitol.

Blake Wade, a spokesman for the Olympic Historical Society, said the state will put the medals on permanent display in front of a painting of Thorpe on the fourth floor of the Capitol. The society is charged with making sure the medals are kept on public view.

Stetson pays as Tar Heels rebound

Georgia gives Georgia Tech a scare

Associated Press

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith liked the way Kenny Smith and Ranzino Smith played. The coach also liked the way his freshman played. In fact, he liked just about everything he saw.

"We played our best basketball of the season to date," Dean Smith said after the No. 1 Tar Heels trimmed Stetson 100-64 Wednesday night.

"I understand we're more talented than Stetson, but I also thought we played very well."

Senior guard Kenny Smith, a preseason All-America selection, scored 17 points and Ranzino Smith added 15 for the Tar Heels, 3-1, who were playing their first game since losing at UCLA on Monday night.

J.R. Reid, a 6-foot-9 freshman, scored 10 points and grabbed seven rebounds, and fellow freshman Scott Williams, at 6-11, had seven points and eight rebounds.

"Scott Williams and J.R. are coming along. They're freshmen and just slow to learn," Dean Smith said. "They've still got to work on the defensive end, boxing out and posting up inside. But they are talented freshmen."

North Carolina, playing at home, got off to a sluggish start and led just 23-22 midway through the first half. But Kenny Smith connected for three three-point baskets and Ranzino Smith added two more as the Tar Heels surged to a 48-32 halftime lead. Ranzino Smith started in place of injured Jeff Lebo.

The Tar Heels sealed it with a 21-6 burst to start the second half. Joe Wolf scored six points, Ranzino Smith had five and Kenny Smith added four in the spurt.

Mike Barnett, Eric Cumbie and Randy Anderson each scored 12 points for the Hatters, 0-3.

Iowa 89, Missouri-St. Louis 64

Reserve Jeff Moe scored 14 points and No. 5 Iowa had little trouble with Division II Missouri-St. Louis.

College Cage Roundup

Moe got 13 points in the first half as the Hawkeyes raced to a 47-28 lead. B.J. Armstrong finished with 11 points and forward Kevin Gamble 10 for Iowa, 4-0, which won the Great Alaska Shootout tournament during the weekend.

Mike Strater scored 16 for the Rivermen, 0-3.

Pittsburgh 108, St. Francis 69

Senior guard Curtis Aiken scored a career-high 32 points and Demetreus Gore added 20 as No. 12 Pittsburgh routed St. Francis in Loretto, Pa.

Aiken had 21 points in the first half as the Panthers rushed to a 55-29 lead. The Red Flash never got within 24 points in the final 20 minutes.

Tico Cooper scored 18 points and Jerome Lane had 13 points and 13 rebounds for Pitt, 2-0. The Panthers held a 51-31 margin in rebounding.

Lamont Harris scored 23 points for St. Francis, 1-1.

Georgia Tech 72, Georgia 66

Bruce Dalrymple and Duane Ferrell scored 20 points each and No. 15 Georgia Tech took control in the final five minutes to defeat Georgia at the Omni in Atlanta.

Dalrymple's basket put Georgia Tech ahead for good with 5:05 remaining, and he scored a minute later for a four-point lead. The Bulldogs pulled within 67-66 on Toney Mack's three-point basket with 3:17 left before Georgia Tech closed out the scoring.

Georgia Tech, 3-1, which trailed by 11 points in the first half, beat Georgia for the second straight year after losing seven consecutive times to the Bulldogs.

Mack and Dennis Williams had 14 apiece for Georgia, 2-1.

Georgetown 96, Grambling 52

Reggie Williams scored 30 points, grabbed 17 rebounds and had six assists as No. 16 Georgetown won its home opener by beating Grambling.

The 6-foot-7 Williams, who played forward, center and guard during the game, and Mark Tillmon scored eight points apiece during a 21-6 burst that gave the Hoyas a 42-24 lead at halftime.

Georgetown scored the first 12 points of the second half and went on to raise its record to 3-0. Tillmon scored 14 points and Perry McDonald had 11.

Charles Price had 25 points for the Tigers, 1-2.

N.C. St. 104, E. Tenn. St. 85

Sophomore center Charles Shackleford scored 21 points and No. 18 North Carolina State used a strong man-to-man defense in the second half to pull away from visiting East Tennessee State.

The Wolfpack led 55-49 at halftime before rattling the Buccaneers with tough defense in the opening minutes of the second half.

Shackleford made 10 of 13 shots from the floor and grabbed 10 rebounds. Kenny Drummond scored 13 points and Bennie Bolton and Mike Giomi had 12 apiece for North Carolina State, 4-1.

Tim Austin scored 18 for East Tennessee State.

Northeastern 81, St. Joseph's 54

Reggie Lewis scored 18 points and No. 19 Northeastern broke loose in the second half to defeat St. Joseph's of Maine.

Lewis, who set a tournamment record with 84 points in three games of the Great Alaska Shootout, scored 10 points in the second half as the Huskies pulled away from a 41-39 lead with 15:22 remaining.

Wes Fuller added 15 points for Northeastern, 3-1. Charles Warren scored 14 for the Monks, 4-1.

Divorced couple stays together on golf course

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — The field in this week's $650,000 J.C. Penney Classic features 50 teams comprised of players from the LPGA and PGA Tours, including one unique partnership.

Laura Baugh, in her 13th year on the LPGA circuit, and Bobby Cole, a veteran of 18 PGA seasons, were recently divorced. The split, however, didn't affect their decision to play together in the 72-hole mixed-team event that started today at Bardmoor Country Club.

"We do have a real good relationship," Baugh said. "We have a gorgeous little daughter and Bobby spends as much time as he can with her. Being a professional golfer, he travels a lot. So we spend a lot of time with her, have dinner, play golf and have a great time.

"We were great pals before we got married. Sometimes there's too much pressure on people when they're married," she added. "I don't understand how people are supposed to live, especially women nowadays. They want women's lib, but how are you supposed to earn a living, have the kids and do everything?"

Cole and Baugh were married for five years. He had his best year ever on the PGA tour this season, earning $88,472 on a limited schedule, and continues to give golfing tips to Baugh.

"It's just basics," he said. "It's very simple to work with Laura. She learns quickly."

Baugh cut back on her LPGA schedule this year, playing only 15 tournaments and earning $50,412 to rank 51st on the tour money-winnings list. One thing that has escaped her during a pro career that began when she was 18 years old is a first-place finish.

"Before I quit, I'd like to win," Baugh, who has finished second 10 times, said. "I'd like to get that stigma out of the way. I think of winning because that's what I come here to do — not to finish second.

"And when you haven't done anything, it becomes even more important. I think people expect me to do it before I quit. And I feel I will."

The brother-sister team of Larry and Laurie Rinker are defending champions. Four other teams of ex-champions, Nancy Lopez-Curtis Strange (1980), Beth Daniel-Tom Kite (1981), Jan Stephenson-Fred Couples (1983) and Vicki Tabor-Mike Donald (1984), are also in the field.

Familiarity with a partner is considered one key to successful team play.

"When players don't know each other, if one is not playing well, the team often gives up," said Larry Rinker, who, like his sister, is a graduate of the University of Florida.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Sweets frozen

By LINDA ANDERSON

Cold weather or no cold weather, my kids never turn down a frozen fruit treat. Popsicles have always been their favorite (grape is the current preferred flavor), but if it's frozen and colorful and looks like it will melt into a sticky mess, they love it.

Some food companies have recently jumped on the healthier-eating bandwagon, and introduced frozen desserts made out of fruit and juice, which they claim is more nutritious — and therefore more expensive — than ordinary frozen artifically-colored-and-flavored-sugar-water-on-a-stick. (And they are probably right about their new products' nutrition content; but let's face it, these frozen goodies are just popsicles for adults — I know I have a hard time resisting frozen pineapple juice or frozen strawberries on a stick and I don't feel near as guilty when I let my children eat them.)

Anyway, everytime we see a new frozen-juice-on-a-stick product, we can't wait to get it home to sample. One of our more recent acquisitions was Minute Maid's Fruit Juicee frozen snacks. These little goodies are available in several flavors. We bought the variety pack which contained three flavors — artificially flavored grape and cherry and naturally flavored orange (whatever that means).

Although the snacks are available in boxes of six individual servings (costing $1.99 per box), we bought one that contained 12 individual servings of 2¼-ounces each and cost $3.89 — which means each snack is about 32 cents. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising claims the product has "the delicious taste of real fruit juice in a refreshing frozen snack your whole family will love! ... With no preservatives, Fruit Juicee is the anytime refresher. As a dessert, an afternoon treat, or an evening snack, you're sure to love it." In addition to our three flavors, the product is also available in strawberry, fruit punch and lemonade, the label continues.

Nutrition information wasn't listed on the label, but contents were listed as: apple juice from concentrate (apple juice? That's not one of the flavors!), sugar, water, corn syrup (so far, two of the four products have been a sugar), natural and artificial flavors, natural flavor, citric and malic acids, guar, xanthan and locust bean gums, artifical colors and annatto. (Guar? Xanthan? Who makes up these names? And what are they?)

Because the nutrition information wasn't listed on the label; and because the product does seem to contain a lot of sugar and artifical this-and-that, my guess is that it isn't as nutritious as some of the other frozen snacks currently available. Manufacturers seem to like to brag, when their products can be labeled "nutritious."

The taste test turned out to be a rousing success. Of course, the grape Fruit Juicees were the first to go, and we had a bit of a crisis situation when we were down to one Fruit Juicee (orange) and three children wanted it. You solve that problem by telling them the last serving belongs to Mom.

It was delicious.

Homemade caviar made from salmon eggs

By SONJA HEINZE

Heinze

Q. I do a lot of salmon fishing and get a lot of salmon eggs. I don't know what to do with them. How can I cure them for caviar? Stanley Zeglen, Twin Rocks, Pa.

A. The following instructions for making caviar at home were given to us by Doris Hicks, a seafood technology specialist with the University of Delaware's Marine Advisory Service:

1. Begin with eggs that are less than 24 hours old and show no signs of spoilage (particularly an ammonia odor). The eggs should be of clear color and good consistency and free of blood. The eggs of coho, pink and chum salmon are best for making caviar.

2. Gently remove the individual eggs from the egg sacs and place in a bowl, being careful to remove the pieces of membrane, blood and bits of intestine or black skin.

3. For every two cups of cleaned eggs, stir ½ cup of salt with two cups of cold water in a large bowl until the salt is dissolved.

4. Pour the eggs slowly into the salt solution. Gently stir the eggs to allow contact with the brine and allow them to sit 30 minutes.

5. Pour the caviar into a strainer and rinse with cold water.

6. Transfer the finished caviar into a container that can be sealed tightly, and store in the refrigerator.

Your homemade caviar should stay acceptable in the refrigerator for several weeks. It should be served chilled by nesting the serving bowl in a larger bowl filled with crushed ice. Caviar should never be frozen.

Q. How about recipes that specify unsalted butter, then two or three ingredients later call for salt? This makes no sense to me. I feel it's an affectation. Candace Rack, Sinking Spring, Pa.

A. A recipe calling for unsalted butter may be an affectation, since the word "unsalted" is a current health buzzword, but then again, it may not. It depends on how much butter is called for and what is being made. There are approximately one and a half teaspoons of salt in one pound of butter. If you're going to use a quarter of a pound of butter in a delicate recipe, using salted butter could make a difference.

Gourmet magazine made the following comment on this subject (December 1973): "Unless otherwise specified, Gourmet's recipes (and those in most cookbooks) are designed to be prepared with unsalted butter. Although the difference might not be serious in many preparations, the use of unsalted butter is critical to the success of frostings and other confectionary."

Q. I have just read that Jell-O gelatin comes from boiled animal hooves. Is this true? I enjoy Jell-O, but if this is true I may think twice before eating it again. Janyce Kurns, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A. Personally, I don't understand why one should find eating boiled animal hooves any more offensive than eating barbecued muscle, braised liver or kidney pie. What's so bad about making desserts from an animal's feet?

Contrary to common belief, however, Jell-O gelatin doesn't come from animal hooves, or even horns. It's made from animal hides, which contain collagen.

Hide trimmings, explains Jocelyn Walter, a nutritionist with General Foods, are soaked in alkalies and/or acids and washed in clean water to remove almost all the non-collagen constituents, including meat. During this soaking period the collagen is converted to gelatin, which is then cooked in water and further refined. The extract is then evaporated and dried to produce gelatin.

If you're still squeamish about eating something made from hides, try looking at it the way General Foods does: "During this process chemical changes take place so that the composition and identity of the original material is eliminated."

Q. A recipe I have for Christmas cake calls for Muscat raisins, and for the life of me I can't find them anywhere and I don't even know what they look like. Could you please tell me what they are and where I can get them?

A. Muscat raisins are different from ordinary raisins in that they are larger, extra sweet and exceptionally fruity. So advises Iantha Goulart, the consumer relations manager of Sun-Diamond Growers of California.

The Muscat raisin is plump and dark brown and is prized for baking, especially in fruit cakes. This variety of raisin originated in Egypt several hundred years before the birth of Christ. In Egypt it was called the "Muscat of Alexandria" and was introduced into California in 1851.

"The Muscat variety of grape is produced on a small scale as compared to the production of the Thompson grape. Therefore, distribution of the product to all areas of the country is limited."

Goulart advises us that these raisins are harvested in late September and can be found in your store prior to and during the holiday season. If you purchase them at that time, you can freeze the raisins in vapor-tight bags, for they freeze well and thaw quickly for use throughout the year.

Q. I would like to get the Nutrition Action Healthletter published by the Center for Science in the Public Interest that you refer to in your column occasionally. How can I get it? Mrs. Ruth Armitage, Rochester, Mich.

A. The Center for Science in the Public Interest is a nonprofit public interest organization. To get the Healthletter, one has to become a member of the organization. Membership dues are $20 for one year, $23 in Canada. For full-time students or senior citizens, membership dues are $15 annually, $18 in Canada.

Members are entitled to 10 issues of the Healthletter a year, free "Nutrition Scoreboard" and "Chemical Cuisine" posters, and a 10 percent discount on the organization's publications, which include posters, books, pamphlets and public interest software.

Write to: Nutrition Action Healthletter, Center for Science in the Public Interest, 1501 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Q. Perhaps my taste buds have suddenly vanished, but when making parsleyed potatoes and using a newly purchased jar of dried parsley, I could not detect any parsley taste in the finished recipe. What would be the cause of this?

A. Dried parsley from a jar imparts about as much flavor to a recipe as a pile of hay, and probably less. It simply does not dry well. Dried parsley in a stew makes it look as if you've added something tasty to the concoction, but that's about all. As you have discovered, when the main ingredient of a recipe is parsley, such as parsleyed potatoes, you have to use fresh.

I realize it's not always available, but when it is, get a load of it and freeze it fresh, including the stems. Put it in a plastic Zip-loc bag, squeeze out the air and seal it. It's easy to crumble pieces off the bunch in its frozen state and return the bunch to the freezer. It's not as good as fresh, but it comes close.

Desserts healthier

By MARIAN FARR

You don't need to give up your favorite holiday foods to follow today's dietary guidelines. Dietary guidelines from the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, and those from major health organizations, recommend reducing consumption of fat, sugar and salt while increasing the amount of fiber in our diets.

Making an effort to eat nutritiously doesn't have to put a damper on your holiday season, since relatively simple modifications can reduce the fat and total calories in many favorite foods without significantly affecting their taste.

Sugar can be reduced by a third in many holiday desserts. If a recipe calls for 1 cup sugar, for example, use ⅔ cup. This works best in fruit-based recipes and in making puddings and custards. The sugar in cookies and cakes can also be reduced, but requires some experimenting to find an appropriate level.

Likewise, fat can be reduced by a third in gravies, sauces, puddings and quick breads.

Omit salt or reduce it by half and add more herbs and spices to increase flavor.

To increase fiber intake, substitute whole grain flour for ¼ to ½ of the refined flour in holiday baking. If a recipe calls for 3 cups all-purpose flour, use ¾ cup whole grain flour and 2¼ cups all-purpose flour.

Yogurt or cottage cheese may be substituted for sour cream in some recipes for sauces, dips, dressings and main dishes. Use skim rather than whole milk and in some recipes calling for whipped cream, substitute evaporated milk.

Take the time to modify favorite holiday recipes this year and you'll have a healthier alternative to hand down as part of your family tradition.

BETTER BUSINESS

Rip-off common

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Being ripped off or close to bankruptcy because of fraudulate use of credit cards numbers is a problem. Credit card fraud also is causing some people to have bad credit.

This fraud is occurring when people are not careful about who they give there credit number too. Giving out your credit card numbers to every Tom, Dick or Mary Jane who calls and asks for it is resulting in hundreds of people calling the Better Business Bureau every year (and the numbers are increasing) complaining they have been charged for things they didn't want or get, or donated money to a cause, politician or party they don't agree with.

These well-meaning people listen to a solicitor make a pitch that sounds very good and then given their MasterCard, Visa, American Express, Discover, etc. credit card numbers out to support or buy something from someone they don't know and have never dealt with before.

The BBB is not against the use of credit card numbers being used to purchase products from local merchants or national mail order or catalog companies. In those cases, you are making the purchase from a firm or organization you know.

However the BBB is strongly urging you to say no to strangers who call you and ask for your credit card number or say they are verifying your credit card number.

Athletes risk increased injury

Associated Press

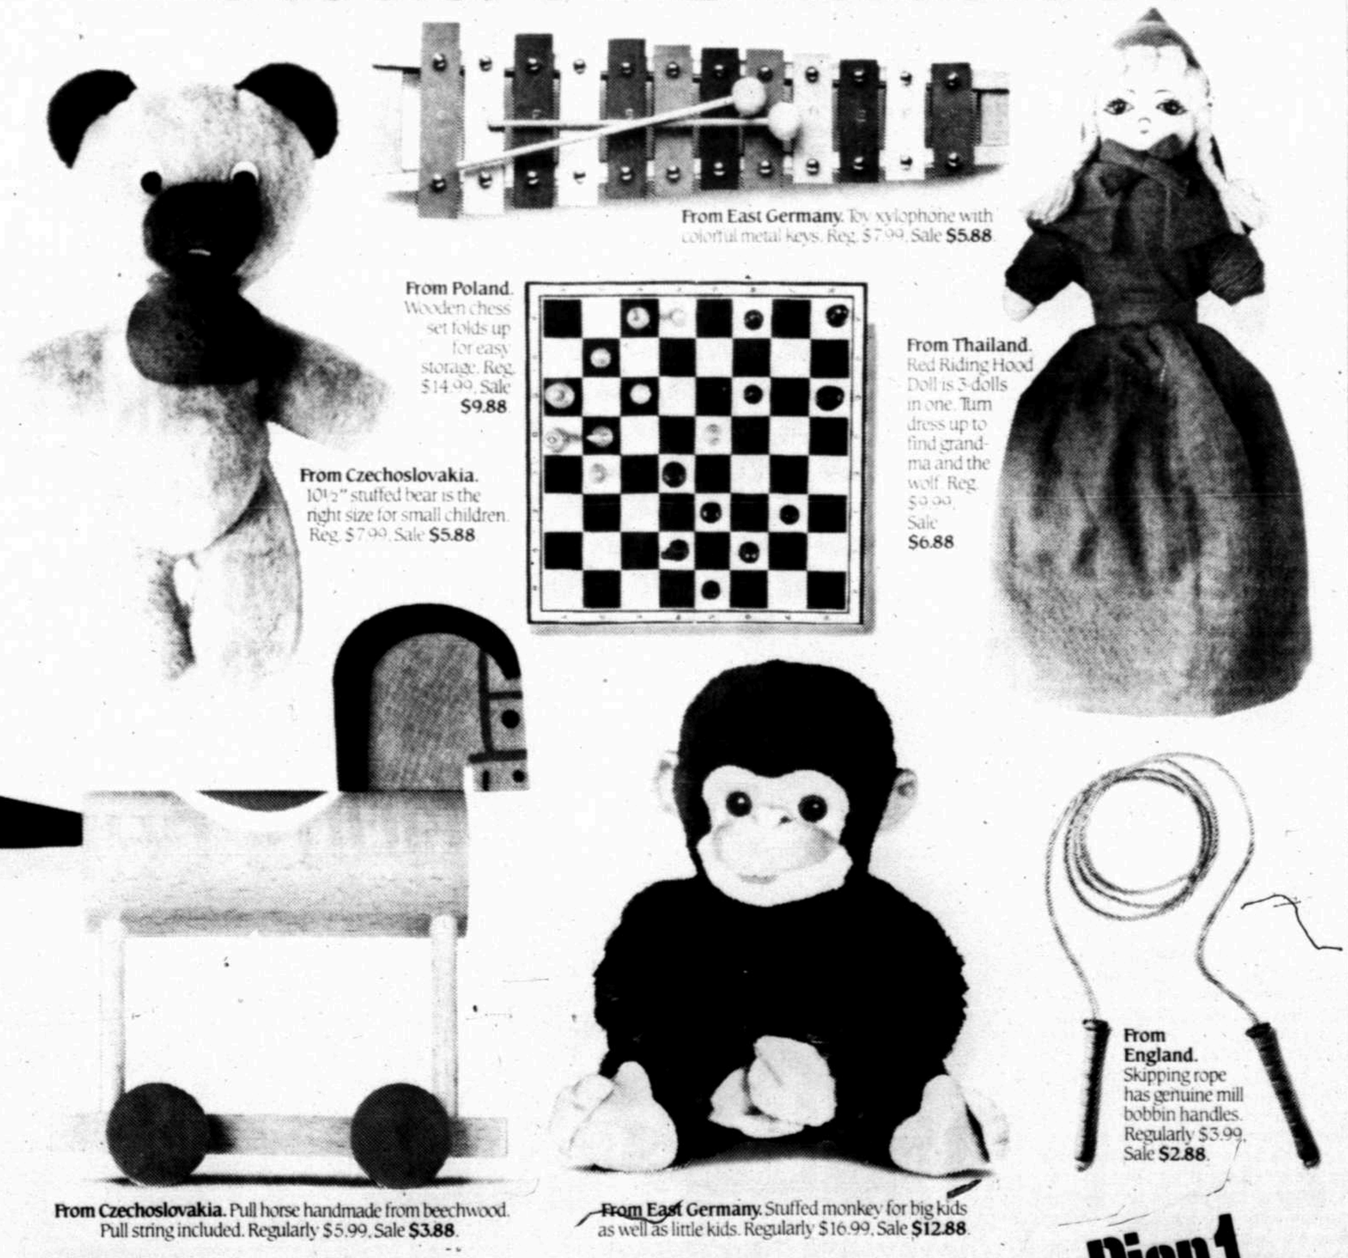

Cold weather athletes who bundle up to exercise may be increasing their risk of injury, according to physicians at New York University Medical Center.

"Wearing too many clothes when you exercise can lead to hypothermia, a sudden loss of body heat that can result in shock and heart failure," said Dr. William Bernhard, associate professor of anesthesiology at the center. "Overdressed athletes sweat and dampen their undergarments. Once wet, the clothes lose their insulating quality and facilitate the loss of body heat rather than prevent it."

Bernhard suggests layering clothing, taking off outer garments before sweating, and replacing them during the cool down. "Remember, you should feel cool when beginning to exercise," he noted.

Other guidelines for cold-weather sportspeople include keeping clothing clean and dry, to protect their insulating qualities; choosing fabrics specifically formulated for the athlete to guard against hypothermia, such as polypropylene and olefin; and bringing along extra dry socks.

DEAR ABBY

Make sure Christmas gift is 'right stuff'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Well, are the Christmases getting closer together or does it just seem that way? It's time to start preparing for the holidays again, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas or Hanukkah shopping early.

Here's my annual — slightly revised — column on holiday shopping:

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Olivia or Grandpa, who doesn't go out much, let me tell you what NOT to give them:

Forget dusting powder, aftershave and cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Sylvia doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces, bracelets or earrings.

With the price of groceries so high, older folks who live alone on a fixed income would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

A handy gift: an assortment of greeting cards for all occasions, so that they, too, can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (Be a sport and affix postage to some of the envelopes.)

Don't give a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some little doodad you received three Christmases ago, please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If you are aware that someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than some useless little trinket. Another thoughtful gift would be a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you are sure he or she will enjoy.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to exchange it, he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Never give a pet to anyone unless you're absolutely sure a pet is wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin or two of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation. Also remember that many older people have difficulty chewing hard candies and nuts. And nutritionists caution: "Lay off sugar and salt."

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and them) time and effort by giving gift certificates in the first place.

The rising cost of long-distance telephone calls restricts many older people from making them, so a practical and thoughtful gift would be a gift certificate from their telephone company.

For those who maintain their own homes and apartments, consider a gift certificate for other types of service needed — window washing and rug cleaning. And don't forget certificates for the barber shop, beauty parlor, taxi rides or a dinner out to a fine restaurant. And (don't laugh) a trip to the podiatrist!

Holiday time can be depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to have a holiday meal with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty. Love, ABBY

CD players' audience growing, price shrinking

NEW YORK (UPI) — Within the next year compact disc players, fairly expensive to date, will be translated into compact dollars, making them available to many more music fans who want a high fidelity audio experience.

CD sales already represent 10 percent of the market for classical and popular music recordings, just four years after the first CD player — a bulky stereo component that sold for $1,000 — was introduced by the Japanese.

Today, there are plenty of sleek home models in the $300 to $500 range that offer state-of-the-art audio circuitry and such extras as remote control. CD players without frills can be purchased at discount stores for as little as $119.

"I predict 7 million CD players will be sold worldwide in 1987 and the $100 price floor will be shattered," said Ken Pohlmann, editor-at-large for Digital Audio and Compact Disc Review, a magazine that covers new developments in avant-garde audio electronics.

Compact discs are thin silvery plastic discs less then 6 inches in diameter. These digital recordings are read by laser beams that provide sheer sound fidelity and twice the decibel range of old LP records. Pohlmann sees the annual worldwide demand for compact discs reaching 200 million within the year.

Such demand would outstrip the ability of existing CD factories, located mainly in Europe and Japan, to turn out enough of the discs. To compensate for the shortage, audio fans are making tape cassette copies of CDs, flouting warnings that such reproduction may be illegal.

Compact discs provide an album's worth of music, about 70 minutes, for $12 to $16, a price that has remained fairly steady since their debut in the spring of 1982. The pioneer CBS Compact Disc Club of Terre Haute, Ind., for instance, offers discs to its members for $14.98 and $15.98.

CD sales in the United States in 1986 are expected to reach 1.8 million CD players for a total of $360 million and 30 million discs for $480 million. The introduction of multi-disc players, portables and car players has spurred sales this year. The Japanese auto industry is already installing CD players in cars at the factory.

Whole libraries of classical and popular recordings are being reissued on CDs. CBS Masterworks is remixing and remastering Leonard Bernstein's vast catalogue of recordings made when he was music director of the New York Philharmonic.

Aficionados of classical music are scrambling to acquire such refined CD equipment as DSP (digital signal processing) and looking forward to the debut of MOD (magnetic-optical disc) in two or three years so they can do their own records on erasable discs.

But as David Ranada, technical editor of High Fidelity magazine, says, "DSP's precision, accuracy, repeatability and resulting sound quality make it a sure thing.

"The whole field of compact discs is just a game of numbers, of sophisticated uses for the arithmetic we all learned in grade school," said Ranada. "Far from being a gamble, you can bet on it as the future of sound processing."

New 'LaserMusic' jukebox plays only compact discs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joan Jett may still love rock 'n' roll, but "another dime in the jukebox" won't get the job done anymore.

The newly released LaserMusic jukebox, which plays only compact discs, takes only one and five dollar bills.

Introduced by Seeburg, the Chicago-based coin machine giant that pioneered jukeboxes nearly 60 years ago, the new machine uses the Sony CDK-006 automated CD changer.

"Seeburg revolutionized the jukebox industry when it introduced the first electrical amplification in 1928 and again in the 1950s with the first 45 rpm jukebox," says company chairman Ed Blankenbeckler. "We believe that once again the industry is prepared to move ahead."

The Sony changer holds up to 60 compact discs, which will allow patrons to choose from up to 1,000 song titles, compared to a selection of less than 200 on conventional jukeboxes.

"Most people look at jukeboxes nostalgically," says Blankenbeckler, "but this is no nickelodeon. This system is destined to change a lot of attitudes about jukeboxes."

The LaserMusic system, which is about the same size as a conventional jukebox, includes a three-beam laser pick-up, Sony's most advanced sound processing circuitry and a newly designed Seeburg 200-watt stereo amplifier with three-way loudspeaker system.

The CD jukebox looks almost identical to its predecessor. A see-through shelf houses the 60 cassette packages, allowing customers to select tracks from the individual discs.

While LaserMusic may end the era of the coin-operated jukebox, the system is likely to introduce millions of new listeners to compact discs. People who are now unwilling to invest in a new home system will be exposed to the high quality sound of CD on a professional system — and their audio tastes may never be the same.

"LaserMusic has the capability of creating a new surge of interest in recorded music," Blankenbeckler adds. "The public will now enjoy the sounds of today and yesterday with extraordinary musical accuracy."

The CD jukebox also provides a new degree of programming flexibility.

"LaserMusic's removable disc magazine allows club managers to easily create special music theme promotions," says Blankenbeckler. "By exchanging disc magazines, each of which can hold 60 discs, special programs of country and western, rock, oldies, big band or even classical can be featured."

Such technology will give restaurants, nightclubs and other public places more variety in ambience at less cost. Establishments with LaserMusic will not have to install a separate system for canned music. At certain times, the jukebox can be made available to the public on a pay-for-play basis; at other times, the jukebox can be programmed to play continuous background music.

Sony's involvement in the project reflects the company's desire to expand from the consumer market into professional systems, according to a company official.

Studies: Urethane in beverages

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Many wines and distilled liquors contain dangerously high levels of the carcinogenic chemical urethane, exposing moderate drinkers of those beverages to a higher risk of cancer, according to recent studies by U.S. and Canadian health agencies.

But the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, despite its own findings in July of high levels of urethane in 54 of 248 wines and liquors, does not intend to recall the products or issue public warnings until further tests are completed.

"We do not think this is an absolute emergency," said FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young. "Urethane has been there as long as spirits have been fermented and distilled. What we need to do is establish responsible standards and get the appropriate forces in place to make sure those levels aren't exceeded."

"The question is when you push the panic button," he said in an interview. "We think we're nowhere near that point."

Urethane, which is naturally produced in the distilling or fermenting of alcoholic beverages, is known to cause cancer in laboratory animals and is a suspected human carcinogen. Levels of urethane vary widely according to the type and brand of beverage.

The urethane issue was raised in a petition filed at the FDA by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a nonprofit consumer group. It urged the agency to recall and prohibit future sales of those wines and liquors already found to contain high levels of urethane, systematically test the thousands of alcoholic beverages on retail shelves and inform the public of urethane levels.

Citing scientific studies and tests by the Canadian government and FDA, the group contended that an average-sized man who daily consumes three ounces of whiskey or three glasses of wine contaminated by high levels of urethane has a risk of cancer between 32 and 4,700 times that of teetotalers.

Representatives of the wine and liquor industries disputed the findings, citing their own studies concluding that urethane has never been shown to cause cancer in humans.

Researchers study hospital admissions

BOSTON (AP) — Nearly half the hospital admissions surveyed nationwide were unnecessary or avoidable, but the frequency of needless hospitalization varied greatly from place to place, researchers reported.

The study by the Rand Corp. found that 23 percent of the hospital admissions reviewed were "inappropriate" because the patients could have been treated in a doctor's office or out-patient X-ray lab. Another 17 percent were "avoidable" because they were for minor operations that could have been performed in an out-patient surgical center.

Among these operations were hemorrhoid and hernia operations and dilation and curettage.

The study was based on a review of 1,132 hospitalizations between 1974 and 1982 in six areas. The share determined to be inappropriate ranged from 10 percent to 35 percent.

However, the researchers could not explain why this variation existed. They said it was not the result of differences in the age, sex, health status, race, income or education of the local populations.

The study, directed by Dr. Albert L. Siu, was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers made no attempt to estimate how much money could be saved by eliminating the unnecessary hospital care because such figures "are likely to be imprecise and highly speculative."

The researchers noted that since the study was conducted, hospitalization rates have fallen about 10 percent, largely because of increases in out-patient surgery.

'Intimacy' workshop could be 'best Christmas present'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Expectations come with the holiday season. " 'Tis the season to be jolly" often translates into Christmas shopping, attending entertainment events and office parties, increased social activities and additional time set aside for family members.

Presenting a workshop on relationships is especially significant at this time of year, says Pat Ponder Love, a nationally certified counselor and approved supervisor in the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapists.

"The holidays bring people together and encourage expectations of love and peace and happiness. When reality doesn't meet expectations, the result can be holiday depression."

Ms. Love will present an Imago Relationship-based workshop on "Intimacy/Communication Skills" from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Dec. 13 at Midland Center, Main Street at Wall Avenue. To register call 686-7923 during business hours. Cost is $35 per person or $50 for two.

"Most of our expectations center around relationships; therefore, attending this workshop could be the best Christmas present you give yourself or another person," she says.

Imago Relationship Therapy is a model for understanding and improving love relationships developed by Dr. Harville Hendrix.

"It's unique in that it explains not only why we chose the people that we chose and how we get into conflict with them, but what to do about it," she says. "So, it's really a skill-oriented approach which gives you many practical suggestions on how to improve relationships in general and specifically love relationships."

She cites as examples of the practical information obtained in this workshop, "how to transform criticism into a positive interaction, how to understand frustrations and utilize them to improve the relationship and how to be close and intimate with someone you care for."

In this workshop, she says, "You discover what you truly want out of a relationship and how you want to be loved. Those participating learn the unique language of love and gather knowledge related directly to their own personal growth and development."

Ms. Love estimates that at least 300 people in the Midland-Odessa area have attended this workshop in the past three years.

Dolores Hundley, a previous participant, says of the workshop, "It changed my life totally. And the change has been positive. The communication tools have not only worked in my private life but in my professional life as well. The workshop is presented in a highly professional manner, and, at the same time, it's casual and fun. I've attended four workshops, and I've never been bored. Each time I've learned something totally new about myself."

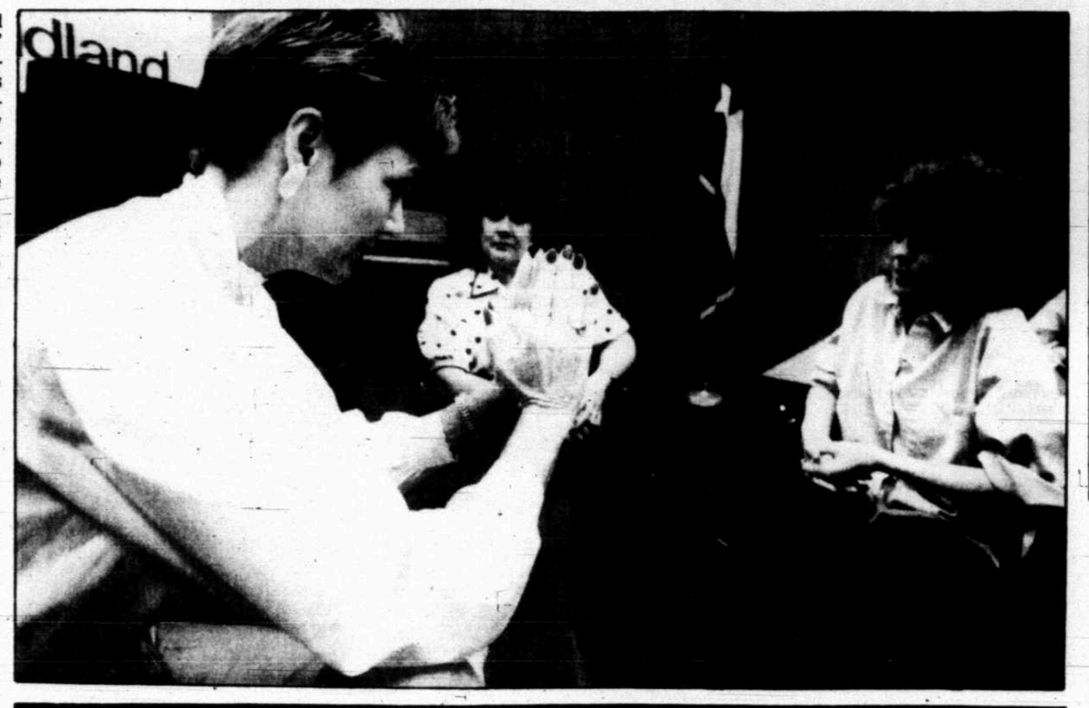

Ms. Love, an adjunct faculty member at East Texas State University, Commerce, where she was clinical director of marriage and family emphasis in the Department of Counseling and Guidance, is a published writer and has presented national workshops on human relations. Her doctorate in counseling is from West Virginia University.

In addition, she has spent three years of training in Imago Relationship Therapy and has four years of practice in the field of Imago Relationship Therapy and 10 years as a practicing therapist. Ms. Love is in private practice in Austin.

Singles and those happy in their love relationship are often confused as to whether the information in this workshop applies to them or not.

"This workshop is designed for anyone interested in understanding and improving any relationship," Ms. Love says. "It's been used effectively by single people and by people in committed relationships. Even when only one of the partners is using the information, it has positive impact on the relationship.

"There's growing research that indicates that the quality of our relationships affects almost all other aspects of our lives," she says. "For example, how we perform on the job, how we relate to friends, how we relate to family members and even our spiritual life is affected by relationships. To improve a relationship is to improve the quality of your life."

Therapist Pat Ponder Love, above, points out to workshop participants that "Nothing changes until something changes." Ms. Love explains a communication exercise to volunteers Odessan Sue Payne, center, and Midlander Becca Parum, right, during an Imago Relationship workshop.

Guillaume's special based on 'Christmas Carol'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's "John Grin's Christmas" was inspired by Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," but star and director Robert Guillaume concedes that only the "bare bones" made it to the screen.

"We use the idea of a man starting out in one place and ending up in another place," said Guillaume. "It's a morality tale. It's a tale like 'A Christmas Carol.' But if you say it's 'A Christmas Carol,' and people look for those characters, they won't find many of them."

The idea came from the network asking him to do a black version of Dickens' classic tale of redemption.

In "John Grin's Christmas," a contemporary tale scheduled for broadcast Saturday, Guillaume plays a miserly, mean-spirited toymaker visited by three ghosts who soften his heart.

Roscoe Lee Browne is the Ghost of Christmas Past, Ted Lange the Ghost of Christmas Present and Geoffrey Holder the Ghost of Christmas Future. Alfonso Robeiro plays Rocky, a small boy.

"It's a simple morality tale told in a very straightforward fashion," Guillaume said. "That, in a sense, has forced us to hew kind of close to Dickens' original idea of a Scrooge-like character. He was unable to give of himself to other people, and he suffered the most during the Christmas holiday.

"It's done with wry humor through his comments and his exchanges with the ghosts. I would call it humorous relief but not comedy."

He added, "This is an up-to-date look at 'A Christmas Carol' with black actors, black acting, black values, and we find there's very little difference from what anyone else has done. In fact, they're essentially the same.

"I'm constantly asked what it means to play black. Too often it seems to mean to be less than universal. One thing I love about 'John Grin's Christmas' is that we have a wide spectrum of ideas. People also ask, 'Why don't you just play a man? Why a black man?' To me that's a specious question. To ask it implies that a black man is less universal than, say, a Sicilian peasant, and operas have been written about Sicilian peasants."

Guillaume is best known for his role as Benson DuBois, first as the butler on "Soap," then as the governor's head of household on the spin-off series "Benson." He later became state budget director and finally lieutenant governor. ABC canceled the show last season after seven years.

Since then he has starred in a movie called "Wanted Dead or Alive" and in an episode of ABC's "Hotel."

"In the movie I play a CIA agent who recruits a kind of bounty hunter to help the agency capture a master terrorist," he said. "It's a melodrama. Rutger Hauer plays the bounty hunter and Gene Simmons of 'Kiss' is the terrorist.

"On 'Hotel' I was a father who wanted his son to follow in the footsteps of another son who has died. The first son was a basketball star."

Since the demise of "Benson," Guillaume said he has been looking for a new series idea.

"We have several ideas, one for an hour-long drama and one for a comedy," he said. "I've never been all that fond of sitcom comedies. I like comedy, but not sitcoms. But I suppose you could call one of our ideas a sitcom."

Christmas Cabaret Pops to be performed in Odessa

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale will present its annual Christmas Cabaret Pops concert at 8 p.m. today at Odessa's Holiday Inn Centre.

Music director, Thomas Hohstadt, and chorale director, Eugene Pierce, will lead the orchestra.

Special features of the evening include an audience sing-along and an appearance by Santa and Mrs. Claus. Also featured will be complimentary cheese and fruit, table seating, an available cash bar, and a candlelight recessional.

Tickets for the concert are $250 for Conductor's Table (10 people), $15 reserved, and $10 general admission. Tickets will be sold at the door.

For more information call the symphony office at 563-5269.

The Midland performance was Tuesday.

Playhouse to do 'Princess'

The Kaleidoscope Company of the Permian Playhouse will present the Brothers Grimm fantasy of "The Princess and the Pea" Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 13 and 14 at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets are $3. Children under six, accompanied by an adult will be admitted at no charge. For reservations, call The Playhouse at 362-2329.

Author to autograph book

Jean Andrews, author of "Peppers, the Domesticated Capsicums," was to be at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., from 2 to 5 p.m. today for the opening of an exhibit featuring her original watercolor paintings from her book "Peppers." She was to autograph copies of her book at that time.

The book is a botanical study of the pepper and includes recipes and tips on the proper handling of the spicy vegetable.

Ms. Andrews, who has a doctorate in art from North Texas State University, lives in Austin and has authored other books, including "Seashells of the Texas Coast," "Shells and Shores of Texas," "Texas Shells: A Field Guide," and "The Texas Bluebonnet."

The exhibition will run through Feb. 15.

Pruitt works displayed

A preview showing of works by Charles N. Pruitt will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. today at The Frame Corner, 2205 N. Big Spring St.

The exhibit of Pruitt's latest original art works will be on display through next Thursday.

Carnegie Hall to re-open

NEW YORK (AP) — Carnegie Hall, which is under renovation, will re-open Dec. 15. Carnegie Recital Hall will re-open Jan. 5 with the new name, Weill Recital Hall at Carnegie Hall.

Sanford I. Weill, 53, who resigned in 1985 as president of American Express and recently became board chairman and chief executive officer of Commercial Credit Company of Baltimore, and his wife Joan donated $2.5 million to Carnegie Hall earlier this year.

Weill is co-chairman of the fund-raising campaign for Carnegie Hall's restoration to the same condition it had in 1891 when it was built.

The 268-seat Weill Recital Hall's first week of concerts will feature classical, jazz and folk music, including performances by The Juilliard String Quartet, the Ramsey Lewis Trio and Isaac Stern and Friends.

Neil Simon's 'Chapter Two' opens Friday

Neil Simon's "Chapter Two" opens Friday in the Davis Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The Midland Community Theatre production will run through Dec. 20.

Simon in his George Schneider disguise weaves the story of his second time around love affair and marriage to Marsha Mason in this comedy hit.

"I think it's one of Neil Simon's best comedies primarily because, although all the comic elements are there, it has more depth of character," says Sharyllynn Shaw, director for the production. "It's not quite as fluffy as most of his. I think one of the reason for this increased depth is the fact that the subject matter is autobiographical. Shortly after his first wife died, he met Marsha Mason, and this is the story of their courtship and what both of them were going through when they met and how they got together.

Starring in the MCT production are John Bourke as George Schneider, Martha Manulik as Jennie Malone, Jerry Green as George's brother Leo and Jennie's best friend Faye is played by Jane Burgess.

MCT's production staff includes Richard Kowalski, stage manager; Eric Thunem, assistant stage manager; David Layman, set design; Jon Clark, technical director and lighting designer; C. Elizabeth Lee, assistant technical director; Mae Dawson, costumes; and Jim Sosa, technical intern.

Casting committe members were Carole Newton, June Bell and Ted Kruger.

Other involved in the production are Jo Stroker, talent; Roy Tolson, publicity; Jed Barker, construction; Mary Eimers and Liz Pauley, paint; Cindy Bohannon and Edwin Gibbs, lights; Scott Hammond, Charlotte Kellogg and Lyle Roberts, sound; Patty Loftis and Cindy Stephens, props gathering; Sally Fowler, running prop crew; Martha Lassetter, soft scenery; and Bill Perry and Steve Gandy, stage crew.

Also onstage at Theatre Midland in Theatre Two is the Pulitzer Prize winning play "The Gin Game." For reservations to either production call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

WORLD IN BRIEF

South African miner killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — About 5,000 black gold miners went on strike today after one miner was killed and eight wounded in a clash with police.

The strike involved virtually the entire day shift at the Grootvlei mine east of Johannesburg, according to Bruce Evans, chief executive of the gold and uranium division of General Mining Union Corp., which owns the mine.

Evans said in a statement that police were summoned by residents of a neighborhood close to the mine after between 100 and 200 miners "caused a disturbance" in the area after leaving a meeting of the National Union of Mineworkers late Wednesday.

In the ensuing clash, one miner was shot dead and eight others injured. No further details of the incident were available.

Ex-prisoner: Justice has worked

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Jacobo Timerman, who says he was tortured while imprisoned by Argentina's former military regime, said Wednesday the sentencing of one of his torturers shows "justice has worked the way it is supposed to work in a democracy."

That, the Argentine editor told The Associated Press in a telephone interview, "is the most important point. It is the first time this has happened in Argentina in connection to terrorism perpetrated by high-ranking military officers."

Argentina's Federal Court on Tuesday sentenced Gen. Ramon Camps to 25 years in jail after convicting him of participating in 73 cases of torture while he headed the Buenos Aires Police from 1976-83.

"I never thought this would ever happen while I was being tortured," said Timerman, who is in Chile to write a book and two articles for American publications about this military-ruled country.

He said he never saw his torturers because he was blindfolded, but could hear their voices.

Timerman's 29-month detention from 1977-79 prompted an international outcry. He described his ordeal in a best-selling book titled "Prisoner Without a Name, Cell Without a Number."

Thailand deports ex-Green Beret

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Former Green Beret James "Bo" Gritz, who has ventured into communist Laos to search for U.S. servicemen supposedly held captive there, tried to enter Thailand on a false passport but was deported, an immigration official said today.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he did not know the purpose of the Vietnam veteran's attempted entry last month.

However, Gritz, who has said he believes Laos is still holding prisoners from the Vietnam war, has vowed to continue his "rescue missions" since Thailand declared him persona non grata after an abortive foray in March 1983.

Mortar, rocket battles kill 14 people at refugee camps

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mortar and rocket battles raged for the 11th day today between Shiite Moslem Amal fighters and Palestinian guerrillas at refugee camps in Beirut and south Lebanon. Police said 14 people were killed and 56 injured.

The casualties raised the overall toll in the "camps war" fighting to 393 killed and 796 wounded, by police count.

Israel gunboats today rocketed Palestinian guerrilla bases in south Lebanon. Police said one Palestinian was killed and two wounded. It was Israel's second naval attack this year against Lebanese targets.

Two Amal militiamen were killed and six civilians wounded in a series of overnight hit-and-run attacks by unidentified gunmen against Amal bases in west Beirut, police said.

Beirut's An-Nahar newspaper said an anonymous caller claimed the attacks on behalf of a previously unknown group calling itself the Lebanese Punishment Organization.

Police also said the bodies of eight slain Palestinians had been found in Shiite-controlled districts of west Beirut.

A Palestine Liberation Organization statement said Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Amal militia was "kidnapping and liquidating Palestinians" living outside Beirut's three Palestinian refugee camps.

Police said 10 people were killed and 45 injured in rocket and mortar duels between Palestinians defending Beirut's refugee camps of Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh and Amal militiamen in the surrounding Shiite slums.

In south Lebanon, Palestinian guerrillas were locked in shelling duels with Amal militiamen around the hilltop town of Maghdousheh, three miles southeast of Sidon. Four people were killed and six wounded in the fighting, police said.

The guerrillas burst out of Sidon's Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh camps Nov. 24 to seize the western section of Maghdousheh and surrounding hills that have been used by Amal in shelling the two camps, which house 65,000 Palestinian refugees.

The PLO-controlled section of Maghdousheh commands the main coastal highway linking the mainly Shiite south with Sidon.

Ramos: Military backed Aquino to avert civil war

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The armed forces chief of staff today said the military went along with President Corazon Aquino's dismissal of Juan Ponce Enrile as defense minister to spare the country from civil war.

Mrs. Aquino fired Enrile, who had held the defense post for nearly 17 years, after government officials said Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos had foiled a coup attempt by pro-Enrile officers.

Enrile was the first of four Cabinet ministers to be removed in a Cabinet reshuffle begun Nov. 23.

It was Ramos' first public comment on Enrile's dismissal. He and Enrile spearheaded the revolt that propelled Mrs. Aquino to power last February and ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

"We must look at this thing from a broader and deeper perspective," Ramos said to reporters after a speech to a civic club.

"While the insurgency, while the political and economic problems of our country are great enough...there are much higher interests which we must give priority to.

"One higher interest...is to prevent the polarization of our country. This could lead to civil war," Ramos added.

He did not elaborate, but apparently referred to Enrile's strident criticism of Mrs. Aquino's peace overtures to Communist rebels, with whom her government forged a cease-fire a few days after Enrile's dismissal. The 60-day truce goes into effect Dec. 10.

No officials have stated publicly that Enrile, the only Cabinet holdover from the Marcos era, knew of the alleged coup.

Several Manila newspapers, however, today quoted unnamed military sources as saying hundreds of troops from units involved in the alleged conspiracy were holed up in western Luzon awaiting instructions from Enrile.

"That's a product of the imagination," Brig. Gen. Benjamin Cruz, commander of the Regional Unified Command for central Luzon, said in denying the reports.

The general said people may have mistaken troops from the Ilocos region hunting for a group of armed men as troops out to seize government power.

The military several weeks ago recommended the removal of some of Mrs. Aquino's Cabinet ministers for alleged inefficiency, but Ramos denied that he and other senior military officials had pressured her into firing any of them.

"It was a very respectfully and diplomatically worded set of recommendations...on what steps should be taken to improve our total effort via-a-vis the insurgency and peace and order in general," Ramos said.

The recommendations were not made public, but military and civilian sources said they included Ernesto Maceda of natural resources, Rogaciano Mercado of public works, and Aquilino Pimentel of local governments. Mrs. Aquino has since replaced all of them.
