You've seen them around town, marching in parades, planting flags on headstones at the cemetery, or raising money outside local stores. They're usually wearing their camouflage uniforms with red T-shirts, or green dress uniforms. They're the Cross Roads Young Marines, and recently a member of the local organization's first class took his oath with the not-so-young Marines. "Earlier this month, former Young Marine Sgt. Raven Holguin took his oath of enlistment with the United States Marine Corps," said Cross Roads Yong Marines Commander Roger Rodman. "I believe his ship date will be sometime in August." Rodman said Holguin was an exemplary Young Marine. "Outstanding," he said. "He has an extraordinary ability to lead other people under him. Through our program, we were able to foster that ability in Young Marine Sgt. Holguin. You watch, when he graduates from boot camp, he will graduate with honors."

Rodman said that Holguin has a Marine Corps job – or "Military Occupational Specialty (MOS)" – in mind.

"Of course, that will be up to Holguin and the U.S. Marine Corps," he said. "But he told me he wants to go 0331... Machine Gunner."

Rodman said the MOS involves training in both light and heavy machine guns.

when the program was formed locally. He plans to become a machine gunner in the Marine Corps.

Kids participated in different activities during last year's Asthma Camp put on by Scenic Mountain Medical Center. One camp attendee draws a life-size version of himself. This year's camp is scheduled for July 25.

Special to the Herald

Scenic Mountain Medical Center will be hosting Asthma Camp, July 25 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at SMMC. There is no fee for the camp and spots are still available.

"We are excited to be able to bring this camp back to the Howard County community," Marketing Manager Amanda Duforat, said. "Asthma does not have to be the end all when it comes to having an active lifestyle and we want to make sure that families understand that."

While the camp has been revamped, the focus has remained the same. The camp will start off with education on how to recognize signs and symptoms, triggers, and help the kids feel comfortable using their inhalers and spacers. There will also be some outdoor activities and a short tour of the hospital departments.

"We don't want the kids to think, or even the

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Reminder: Reward Increased to $12,500 for Most Wanted Fugitive from Abilene

Jesus Alberto Villegas

Special to the Herald

AUSTIN – The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) is reminding the public that the reward for Jesus Alberto Villegas, 39, a Texas 10 Most Wanted Fugitive and this month's featured fugitive, has been increased to $12,500 for information leading to his capture if the tip comes in during the month of July. Villegas is wanted for sexual assault of a child and probation violation. All tips are guaranteed to be anonymous.

Villegas' last known address was in Abilene. He has ties to the Abilene area, as well as to Mexico. Villegas has been wanted since 1998. His criminal history also includes possession of a prohibited weapon, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and theft of property.

Villegas is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs approximately 145 pounds. He has a tattoo on his back. For more information or updates in the event of his arrest, see his wanted bulletin.

The higher reward amount will only be paid if the tip comes in the same month the fugitive is featured. In 2017, Texas Crime Stoppers paid $61,000 in total rewards for anonymous tips that resulted in arrests.

To be eligible for the cash rewards, tipsters

MUST provide information to authorities using one of the five following methods:

Call the Crime Stoppers hotline at 1-800-252-TIPS (8477).

Text the letters "DPS" – followed by your tip – to 274637 (CRIMES) from your cell phone.

Submit a web tip through the DPS website by selecting the fugitive you have information about, and then clicking on the link under their picture.

Submit a Facebook tip by clicking the "SUBMIT A TIP" link (under the "About" section).

Submit a tip through the DPS Mobile App. The app is currently available for iPhone users on the Apple App Store and for Android users on Google Play.

All tips are anonymous – regardless of how they are submitted – and tipsters will be provided a tip number instead of using a name.

DPS investigators work with local law enforcement agencies to select fugitives for the Texas 10 Most Wanted Fugitive and Sex Offender lists. You can find the current lists – with photos – on the DPS website.

Do not attempt to apprehend these fugitives; they are considered armed and dangerous.

Beltone Hearing Centers of the Permian Basin announces their free annual Wax Out Event

Special to the Herald

Permian Basin Locations, July 19, 2018: During the month of August Beltone will conduct Free Wax Exams and Free Wax Removal for the residents of the Permian Basin. This originated 2 years ago for back to school students and staff and has now evolved into all residents. This is a 1 month free event at the Beltone hearing centers located at: Midland 4519 N Garfield Ste. 8, Odessa 4011 JBS Parkway, Big Spring 106 w Marcy Dr., Snyder 2703 College Ave, Alpine 402 E Holland Ave.

Owner Garrett Morgan states "We love providing this service at no cost for our community. Wax is usually over looked by most people and is a quick and easy procedure for our patients. We began this service after we treated students who failed their hearing screenings at school. The majority of these students had a conductive loss, which means wax has impacted the canal causing temporary hearing loss. Once we removed the wax their hearing returned to normal thresholds. We use the latest technology for cerumen or wax removal called the Earigator by Nupur Technologies. This technology has allowed our staff to painlessly and quickly remove wax. So, we decided to offer this service to anyone in the community for the month of August". For more information contact (432) 332- 0519.

Texas economy adds 27,200 positions in June

Special to the Herald

The Texas economy added 27,200 seasonally adjusted non-farm jobs in June, which marked

24 consecutive months of employment growth. Over the year, Texas added 359,500 jobs for an annual employment growth rate of 2.9 percent. Private-sector em-parents for that matter, that because they have been diagnosed with asthma that they have to sit on the sidelines. It is still possible for these kids to play sports, run around with their friends and all the activities that any other child does, but they just need to be aware of their triggers and be prepared to handle an asthma attack, should one occur," Duforat said.

Some people don't realize that the majority of asthma attacks can be prevented if you can identify what sets them off. Once you know your triggers, you can learn to avoid or limit your interaction with them. Some of the more common triggers include animals, smoke, dust, perfumes, aerosol sprays (hairspray, bug spray, etc.), weather changes and car fumes.

"Education is the best tool that we can equip the kids with. Their parents can't be with them 24/7 and for the child to be able to be aware and recognize the onset of an asthma attack and be equipped with how to handle that attack, even if the parents are not around, it is one step to keeping that child from allowing panic to set in. The more educated the child can be about their asthma, the powerful they will feel and in control should the situation arise."

The camp is open to children between the age of 9 and 12 years of age. There is no registration fee, but applications must be received by July 23. For more information or to register your child, call Amanda Duforat at 432-268-4699.

Some words from a broadcaster

I've known Bev Brown for a long time. He's a broadcasting friend who lives in Carthage. He thinks a lot about his town. "Carthage is the best little town in Texas," he told me. "It's the third best town in the United States according to the guy who did the research and wrote the book on the best little towns in America."

He carries the family name, Beverly. Most of the men in his family used it as the middle name, but for him, it's his real first name. "Well I couldn't get a room in the girls' dorm when I got to college." He has never minded his name. When he gets mail addressed to Mrs. Beverly Brown he just throws it away. He was an infantry officer in the military and didn't have any problems with his name.

Bev was a car salesman in 1957 when he found out the local radio station KGAS was going to shut down. So he got some backing and bought it. "I was too lazy to work and too nervous to steal. I thought radio was an ideal career for me."

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

He owned the station 31 years. He used to broadcast football games. "I was a poor announcer. You wouldn't recognize the game from the way I described it. Course we were a daytime only station. We ran down at sundown. We recorded the game and played it back on Saturday. But we had a PA system we put up downtown and carried the game live on the PA system. People who couldn't go to the out of town games came to the square and listened to the ballgame. It was a big deal. We just fed the broadcast direct to the PA system with a telephone line. We did that for years. And I'll tell you the revenue wasn't bad. We had big bucks out of that because we had lots of sponsors."

Bev served as president of the Texas Association of Broadcasters and was on the board of the National Association of Broadcasters. "At that time, no one from a market this small had ever been chairman of the radio board. I'm so blessed. I've been honored so many times and received lots of awards but feel like I didn't deserve any of them. But I've got arthritis and don't deserve that, either."

Bev is known for his sense of humor. When you mention his name to anyone who knows him, it brings a smile. He enjoys entertaining people. Once he made a sales call in Longview. "I gave the secretary my card and told her my business. She went into her boss's office and soon came back out and said she was sorry but he was tied up and just doesn't have time to talk to you today and he's not really interested in buying any advertising right now. I said I understand. Would you mind going back in there and get my business card and bring it back to me. I have to pay for these things to be printed. She looked at me with this deer in the headlights expression and went in there and got the card and handed it to me. You could hear the guy laughing and he said to the secretary, 'tell him to come on in.' I went in and we had a nice visit. He didn't buy any advertising, but I got my card back."

Bev is 90 and still does a weekly broadcast about current events.

A Look Back at Losses

It will be the focus of books yet to be written, and of songs yet to be sung. Rarely does drama equal that of the rescue of a dozen Thai youngsters and their coach. They were assumed lost until flashlights revealed life and fearless rescue team members shared the good news. Voices around the world "seconded the emotion."

Humanity immediately seemed closely woven; pettiness that too often divides was ignored. Instead, we waited for news that there might be hope.

Survival odds seemed tiny, but bravery, commitment and cooperation led to a "rope of hope." The world pulled together, and millions prayed.

For 18 days, we focused in ways sharper than we thought possible. We prayed for victims in an underground jail, where dangers lurked, oxygen was "iffy" and food in short supply.

Estimates of distance to them varied greatly, ranging from 2-6 miles, the longer including twists and turns, ups and downs. The latter, someone guessed, was "as the bat flies."

Technology, bravery and prayers spoken in many tongues combined for a miraculous outcome, perhaps in reverse order.

The coach leading the youngsters into the cave never called such a "boneheaded play."

Yet, he was contrite, courageous and shared his food. The last to be rescued, he sought forgiveness for his blunder..

I want to hear more details, particularly about the heroic Thai Navy SEAL who perished during rescue attempts.

Two previous times, we waited with others to learn the fate of two youngsters in earthen entrapments. The first, in April of 1949, concerned two-year-old Kathy Fiscus, who fell into an abandoned water well.

Ironically, it had been drilled 46 years earlier by the firm that employed her father.

Gargantuan rescue attempts were made to reach her, lodged 100 feet underground. Some 10,000 people gathered at the site when she was extracted and her death confirmed, three days after the fall. Historians say this tragedy introduced massive TV coverage in the US.

A similar accident in 1987 occurred in Midland, TX, where 18-month-old Jessica McClure (Morales) fell into a well in her aunt's backyard. This one had a happy outcome.

Dozens of rescuers frantically worked to remove her from 22 feet below the surface.

Millions following the saga through mass media were heartened when they heard the toddler singing a favorite song about Winnie-the-Pooh. She was removed to safety 56 hours after the ordeal began.

Five months after the Fiscus tragedy, there was similarity in the death of a 34-year-old Methodist minister. The outcome was not prolonged, and there was limited news coverage.

Rev. Vernon White, my revered uncle, fell into an abandoned well during a hunting trip. He and several other men had scattered across a field to hunt dove. He was alone when others heard gun shots, then yells. They assumed a farmer was calling his cows.

At hunt's end, they realized White was missing. He was believed to have shot some birds and was running to retrieve them when he fell into an unmarked, ground-level cistern.

Committed to ministry at an early age, he worked hard to make a living while attending Howard Payne and Southwestern. He received his degree from the Georgetown institution in 1942.

Pastor of Waco Lakeview Methodist Church for three years, he was serving there when he died on September 9, 1949. The congregation gave the parsonage to his widow, who was left to support seven-year-old daughter Dora Fay and son Terry, who was born a few months after the tragedy. (Terry now lives in Arizona; Dora Fay is Mrs. Bill McKenna, in Fort Worth. White's widow, Mildred, later married Dr. Clarence A. Sutton, longtime pastor of Arlington Heights United Methodist Church. Their son, Jamie, lives in Wisconsin.)

At age 10, I first felt death's sting when my uncle died. I join others in claiming the century-old hymn, "Farther Along." The lyrics include: "Cheer up, my brother. Live in the sunshine. We'll understand it, all by and by."

THE RUSSELL FAMILY

The Great Depression was coming to an end. The oil fields of West Texas were calling men to work. 1938 or thereabouts Walter C. Russell moved to Forsan with his wife Opal and their four children: Marion, Carl, Francis and Phillip. He was employed by Phillips Petroleum Company as the Superintendent. The family lived in company housing called a Camp. Forsan was a growing community about 10 miles south of Big Spring offering a church, a school and a grocery store.

January of 1942 found the nation entrenched in World War II. Oil production was in full swing. The economy was strong. Financial prosperity was within reach of families emerging from 'hard times.' Prospects were good. Hopes were high.

That spring; however, right at Easter time, the family was devastated when the middle son, 12 year old Francis, whom they called Frank, died tragically in a drowning accident. Each member of the family was stricken with grief. It was said that Mama's hair turned gray overnight. Life no longer made any sense. The Russell family did the best they could to deal with the reality of their horrific loss.

Marion entered her Senior year at Forsan High School the following Fall, finding solace in her school work. (She graduated Salutatorian of her class.) She fell in love with the Captain of the football team, Dan Holt. They married two weeks before graduation, May, 1943. He entered the U.S. Army Air Corp two weeks after graduation. After completing his basic training as a radio operator, he was stationed at Myrtle Beach Army Air Field at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina for the duration of the war.

The young couple lived off base sharing a two story house with an Italian couple from up North. Marion learned from her neighbor who lived in the upstairs part of the house how to make real Italian spaghetti sauce. (That became one of her signature dishes to be enjoyed for years to come.) When the war ended in 1945 Dan received an honorable discharge and sent home. He was 21 years old.

Also in 1945 the Russell family built a house on the 160 acres of farm land located south of Lubbock that was purchased in 1941. The young couple moved nearby to await the birth of the first grand baby who was to become one of the first crop of babies born when Daddies got back from the War called 'Baby Boomers.' The baby girl arrived in March of 1946. They named her Lynda after a popular song from that year. (Actually something like half of the little girls born that year were named Linda. She was called Lyn which was OK. She wished for a name that 'had music in it' a name with with more than one syllable.)

Mama and Papa

Walter Carl Russell married Opal Margaret Morgan in 1923. He was 21. She was 16. He was tall, dark and handsome with a warm smile. She was petite and blond with piercing blue eyes. He absolutely adored her.

Little Opal's mother died when she was only 5 years old. She was raised by relatives. Her marriage to Walter, whom she called Walt, gave her the family she longed for. By the time she was 38 years old, she had lost her mother, given birth to four children, suffered from a serious illness, (pernicious anemia a blood disorder easily treated today, not so during the 1930's) and the grievous loss of a child.

The birth of that first grandbaby breathed new life into Mama. Some of her grief began to ease and she began to smile. "That baby saved my life." She often said.

It was not a happy day when Daddy announced: "We're movin' to Carlsbad, New Mexico. My brother Howard can get me a job working in the potash mines out there. That did not deter Mama. Frequently she would show up at the backdoor. There were few telephones. There was; however, a reliable bus line that connected Lubbock to Carlsbad.

The move to Carlsbad did not go well. It seems Daddy hated working in the mine. He learned the meaning of the word 'claustrophobia.' Soon enough they were back in Lubbock much to Mama's delight. Daddy got a job in construction. They lived there until 'Little Brother' came along in May of 1948.

A favorite song became the lullaby Mama sang when she rocked the 'wee lassie.'

"Soft as the voice of an Angel
Breathing a lesson unheard
Hope with a gentle persuasion
Whispers her comforting word.
Whispering Hope
Oh how welcome thy voice
Making my heart
In its sorrow rejoice."

Over the next years, Lyn spent much time with Mama, right up until she started to school in Colorado City. After, that summer visits to the Farm were often. In fact "The Farm" became the nucleus of the Russell Family. Uncle Phil married Aunt Doris. They had two children Phyllis Ann and Mark. Uncle Carl married Aunt Beverly. They had Carl Jr. and Lonnie Joe. All six grandchildren were born in Lubbock delivered by the same doctor, Dr. Hand.

(The farm house is no longer there. It has been replaced by homes and businesses. It is now 98th and Quaker Ave.)

Woman gives birth in Chick-fil-A bathroom, baby gets perks

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A baby girl is guaranteed food for life — and a job — after her mother gave birth in a Chick-fil-A bathroom.

Falon Griffin was having contractions when she and her husband stopped at the fast-food restaurant in San Antonio to drop off their daughters with a family friend. She had to use the bathroom, but the restaurant was closed.

The couple banged on the door.

Store director Brenda Enriquez tells KSAT-TV she opened the door and Griffin was screaming. Enriquez grabbed some towels.

Husband Robert Griffin says he managed to unwrap the umbilical cord from the baby's neck and deliver Gracelyn Griffin.

Mom and baby are doing fine. The company says Gracelyn will have free Chick-fil-A for life and a job when she turns 14.

Officials: Alamo monument must relocate for $450M plan

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio officials insist a historic monument must be relocated as part of the $450 million plan to redevelop the Alamo.

City Councilman Roberto Trevino tells the San Antonio Express-News that the 1930s Cenotaph doesn't fit on-site and obscures views. He says the city isn't considering leaving the 60-foot (18-meter) in its current location.

The monument honors Alamo defenders killed in the 1836 battle.

Relocating the structure has been the most vocally opposed issue in the plan proposed in 2014 by the city, the Texas General Land Office and nonprofit Alamo Endowment. Residents have also voiced concerns about demolishing buildings and closing streets.

Trevino says a new draft plan with renderings will show why moving the monument will provide a better visitor experience. The illustrations will be shown publicly next month.

NOT REAL NEWS: A look at what didn't happen this week

A roundup of some of the most popular but completely untrue headlines of the week. None of these stories is legit, even though they were shared widely on social media. The Associated Press checked these out. Here are the real facts:

NOT REAL: Elon Musk Leaves Tesla, Jumps On Financial Tech

THE FACTS: Elon Musk has not announced plans to leave Tesla to start a digital currency company despite a false report circulating online. The report, carried on a webpage made to look like the CNN Tech site, claims that Musk is leaving his job as CEO of the company so he can focus on "Bitcoin Profit." Links in the story for Bitcoin Profit redirect the user to advertisements or video streaming sites. A similar report made headlines in September and has circulated since then, sometimes with slightly different details. Kamran Mumtaz, a spokesman for Tesla, said the reports are false. CNN said the story and graphics published on the page were false and had been manufactured to appear as a CNN.com article. Attempts to reach creators of the webpage were unsuccessful.

Branson mourns for 17 killed in sinking of packed duck boat

A duck boat sits idle in the parking lot of Ride the Ducks, an amphibious tour operator in Branson, Mo. Friday, July 20, 2018. The amphibious vehicle is similar to one of the company's boats that capsized the day before on Table Rock Lake resulting in 17 deaths.

By MARGARET STAFFORD

Associated Press
BRANSON, Mo. — The country-and-western tourist town of Branson, Missouri, mourned Friday for more than a dozen sightseers who were killed when a duck boat capsized and sank in stormy weather in the deadliest such accident in almost two decades.

Divers found four more bodies in Table Rock Lake, bringing the death toll to 17, including the crew member who was driving the amphibious boat. In their initial assessment, authorities blamed thunderstorms and winds that approached hurricane strength, and a full investigation was underway.

"Branson is a city full of smiles," Mayor Karen Best said. "We have so much fun here. But today we are grieving and crying."

The risk of heavy weather was apparent hours before the boat left shore.

The weather service station in Springfield, about 40 miles (64 kilometers) north of Branson, issued a severe thunderstorm watch for its immediate area Thursday, saying conditions were ripe for winds of 70 mph. It followed up at 6:32 p.m. with a severe thunderstorm warning for three counties that included Branson and the lake. The warning mentioned both locations. The boat went down about 40 minutes later, shortly after 7 p.m.

"When we issue a warning, it means take action," meteorologist Kelsey Angle said.

Suzanne Smagala with Ripley Entertainment, which owns Ride the Ducks in Branson, said the company was assisting authorities. She said this was the company's only accident in more than 40 years of operation.

The boat was

Soaring temperatures, humidity bring dangerous heat in South

By KEVIN MCGILL, DIANA HEIDGERD and JEFF MARTIN

NEW ORLEANS — Scorching heat was spreading Friday across much of the South, where temperatures are expected to soar over 100 degrees (37.8 Celsius) and persist into next week.

The National Weather Service posted heat advisories and warnings from the New Mexico-Texas border eastward to parts of Alabama. Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, west Tennessee and parts of Kansas, Missouri and Kentucky were all under heat advisories or warnings Friday. In Texas, the nation's largest prison system took the unprecedented step of allowing all inmates and staff unlimited access to cold water and opportunities to cool off in air-conditioned spaces.

"This one will be rather long-lasting in the areas it affects," said David Hamrick, a forecaster at the Weather Prediction Center in College Park, Maryland.

The hot temperatures will combine with high humidity, which could be lethal to some people, forecasters said. They were warning that children, older people, those without air conditioning and outdoor workers will be particularly at risk.

Highs Friday were expected to

Iowa tornadoes hit unexpectedly, causing damage and injuries

By DAVID PITT

Associated Press
MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa — Thousands of people were without power Friday after a flurry of unexpected tornadoes swept through central Iowa, injuring at least 17 people and flattening buildings in three cities.

The storms even surprised weather forecasters when they hit the region Thursday afternoon, causing extensive damage to a manufacturing plant and prompting the evacuation of a hospital.

The National Weather Service said Friday that at least five tornadoes and likely more struck. Meteorologist Jeff Johnson said it will take days to determine their strength and total number.

The most extensive damage was in Marshalltown, a city of 27,000 people where 10 people were injured, brick walls collapsed into the streets, roofs were blown off buildings and the cupola of the historic courthouse tumbled to the ground.

Heavy equipment crews worked around the courthouse lawn Friday to remove entire trees blown over or shredded by the storm. The loud beep of backing trucks and grinding chain saws echoed several blocks away. Businesses and homes had gaping holes, some with roofs torn off or collapsed inward.

Terri Shetler, owner of an embroidery shop, was digging out her 2017 Toyota Sienna. The vehicle's windows were blown out and it was filled with be 109 degrees (42.8 Celsius) in the Dallas and Oklahoma City metro areas; 111 degrees (43.9 Celsius) in parts of western Oklahoma; and 100 degrees (37.8 Celsius) in Shreveport, Louisiana.

With highs that hot, temperatures in many places were in the 80s during the pre-dawn hours Friday. In Dallas, for instance, the low temperature early Friday was 85 degrees (29.4 Celsius), Hamrick said.

The heat wave has already broken records in Texas set more than 90 years ago.

"I have records all over the place," said Bianca Villanueva, a National Weather Service forecaster in north Texas. "It looks like we'll probably break most of the records that we have through the weekend."

The high temperature in Texas on Thursday was 112 degrees (44 Celsius) in Wichita Falls, breaking a previous 111-degrees mark set in 1925 and also 1936. Wichita Falls is about 120 miles (193 kilometers) northwest of the Dallas area.

Villanueva says Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport hit 108 degrees (42 Celsius) Thursday, breaking a previous record set in 1925. In central Texas, Waco also reached 108 degrees (42 Celsius) on Thursday, breaking the previous record set in 1951.

The heat wave prompted a federal agency to warn residents who were displaced by Hurricane Harvey and still living in government-provided mobile homes to make sure their air conditioning was working. More than 2,300 families displaced by Harvey were still living in mobile homes and travel trailers provided by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, spokeswoman Lauren Hersh said Friday.

Harvey made landfall in South Texas last Aug. 25, leading to torrential rain that swamped parts of Houston and the Beaumont-Port Arthur area of south Texas.

Texas Department of Criminal Justice spokesman Jeremy Desel said that for the first time ever Friday, all of the more than 145,000 inmates at Texas prisons — most of which are housed in units without central air conditioning — were offered unlimited access to cold water and cold showers, and opportunities to cool down in air-conditioned spaces including prison chapels and clinics. The policy came after a federal judge ruled last summer in favor of inmates at a southeast Texas unit who complained that the sweltering heat amounted to unconstitutionally cruel punishment.

In New Orleans, the leader of a homeless shelter says people and groups who feed the homeless at encampments that develop along city streets and under bridges and overpasses may be doing more harm than good — at least during the current heat wave.

"During this extreme heat the best thing for the people that go and feed people under the bridge is to not do that. The men and women just sit there and dehydrate," said David Bottner, the CEO of the New Orleans Mission.

Bottner is asking groups that feed groups of homeless people to please coordinate with the various homeless shelters in the city.

"If you want to bring them something, bring them liquid right now and offer them a hand to get off the street," he said.

Keuchel takes no-hitter into 7th, Astros top Angels 3-1

By GREG BEACHAM
AP Sports Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Dallas Keuchel didn't allow a debatable scoring decision to ruin his dominant night.

Keuchel took a no-hitter into the seventh and finished with 7 2/3 innings of two-hit ball in the Houston Astros' 3-1 victory over the Los Angeles Angels on Friday night.

Justin Upton broke up Keuchel's bid for two outs in the seventh when his line drive went off the glove of leaping Astros shortstop Marwin Gonzalez. The Angel Stadium official scorer awarded a hit instead of an error on what would have been a fine defensive play if Gonzalez had held on.

Houston manager AJ Hinch disagreed with the decision, believing Gonzalez should have been charged with an E.

So did a penitent Gonzalez.

"In my personal opinion, that should be an error," Gonzalez said. "I don't know why they got a hit. That changed the game a little bit for (Keuchel). ... I thought I caught it. It was moving, but I should have caught it."

Keuchel (8-8) shrugged it off and improved to 5-0 in his last seven appearances for the Astros (65-35), who are off to the second-best start through 100 games in franchise history.

"(Upton) hit the ball hard, man," Keuchel said. "I probably shouldn't have started him off with a first-

Texas heat: Hottest home game for Rangers in 25 seasons

Texas Rangers starting pitcher Martin Perez, middle, wipes his brow during a mound conference with shortstop Elvis Andrus (1) and catcher Robinson Chirinos (61) during the fifth inning of a baseball game against the Cleveland Indians, Friday, July 20, 2018, in Arlington, Texas.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Mother Nature is bringing the heat at the home ballpark of the Texas Rangers.

The temperature was 107 degrees for the first pitch just after 7 p.m. Friday, when the Rangers played the Cleveland Indians in their first game after the All-Star break. It was the highest temperature ever at the start of a game at the Texas ballpark, which is in its 25th season — and the second-warmest in the majors this season.

When the Los Angeles Angels hosted the Dodge ers on July 7, it was 108 degrees for a first pitch, a record for a game in Anaheim, California.

At Texas, there were two games with 106-degree temperatures in 2011 during an extended stretch of warm weather and 100-degree days in North Texas.

There will be extreme heat for the entire series against the Indians. The expected high on Saturday is 109 degrees, when the teams again play at night, and the forecast for Sunday's afternoon finale calls for a high of 108.

Elvis Andrus was retired on a force at home after Ronald Guzman's grounder to third baseman Ramirez. Robinson Chirinos and Joey Gallo — whose back-to-back homers off closer Cody Allen with two outs in the ninth had tied the game — then both struck out.

"Tough that we lost," Gallo said. "I think it showed the grit in this team, though. ... Personally, it was a pretty good game for me, but I did want to win it there in my last at-bat."

Shin-Soo Choo, the only All-Star this season for the Rangers, singled in each of his first two at-bats to extend his majors-best on-base streak to 52 games.

Gallo homered twice, giving him 24 for the season. His two-run blast to right-center in the seventh got the Rangers within 7-6 when he was the first batter to face Brad Hand, the Indians' newly acquired All-Star reliever.

Hand, who was the closer for the Padres, and rookie right-handed sidearmers Adam Cimber were traded from San Diego on Thursday. Hand retired his next three batters and was followed by Cimber, who gave up a one-out single before inducing a double-play grounder that ended the eighth.

"I thought it was good we got Hand in. Well, we got everybody in. Hand, I think he ARLINGTON, Texas — Both of Cleveland's new relievers got into the game before the Indians closer had a rare blown save.

Manager Terry Francona had to go deep into his bullpen — using seven relievers after All-Star starter Trevor Bauer's early exit — before the big hitters in the heart of the lineup finally put Cleveland ahead to stay.

Edwin Encarnacion had an RBI single in the 11th inning to lift the Indians to a 9-8 victory over the Texas Rangers on Friday night. Jose Ramirez, who earlier had hit his majors-best 30th homer, had a leadoff double off the right-center wall against Matt Moore (1-6).

Those key hits came after Zach McAllister (1-2) worked out of a bases-loaded jam with no outs in the 10th inning.

Vandersloot becomes 7th WNBA player with triple-double

CHICAGO (AP) — Courtney Vandersloot became the seventh player to have a triple-double in WNBA history, finishing with 13 points, 10 rebounds and a career-best 15 assists in the Chicago Sky's 114-99 victory over the Dallas Wings on Friday night.

Vandersloot set a franchise record with 10 first-half assists and tied her team mark of 14 midway through the third quarter. Ticha Penicheiro holds the league record with 16, which she accomplished twice — in 1998 and 2002.

"It is a big deal," Vandersloot said. "This is my first ever triple-double. ... I can't rebound like that."

She's the first Sky player to accomplish the feat.

Kahleah Copper scored a career-high 23 points on 9-of-10 shooting to help Chicago (8-16) snap a four-game losing streak. Allie Quigley added 21 points as the Sky scored the most points in franchise history, topping 107.

Dallas center Elizabeth Cambage's consecutive games with 35-plus points came to an end after being double-teamed for much of the game. She finished with 23 points for her 13th 20-point game of the season.

Skylar Diggins-Smith added 21 points for Dallas (14-10), and Azura Stevens had 14 points and a career-high nine rebounds. Dallas coach Fred Williams was ejected for the second time in the last three games.

pitch fastball. It's just the way it goes. You need to be very fortunate in games like those. I thought I was at times. But he hit the ball hard. Probably get on base more times than not."

Gonzalez nearly made the play, but the 6-foot-1 shortstop couldn't quite hang on. Houston's regular shortstop, injured Carlos Correa, is 6-foot-4.

Ian Kinsler got a clean leadoff single in the eighth and scored on Jabari Blash's sacrifice fly, chasing Keuchel.

Josh Reddick had an RBI triple for Houston. Only last season's World Series champions got off to a better start than these Astros, who are 15 games ahead of the injury-plagued Angels (49-49) in the AL West.

KEUCHEL'S FORM

Keuchel retired the Angels' first nine batters before walking David Fletcher to open the fourth. The heavily bearded lefty then retired the Angels' next 11 batters before Upton's hit with solid defensive help, getting within seven outs of the first no-hitter by a left-handed pitcher in the history of the Astros, who have 11 no-hitters.

Yuli Gurriel made an impressive diving catch on Upton's liner to first base to end the fourth inning, and Kyle Tucker plucked Andrelton Simmons' sinking liner right before it hit the left-field grass leading off the seventh.

"This was certainly a night where he was in total control of everything," Hinch said. "I thought his fastball was exceptional. I thought his use of the changeup was great. He arguably never should have given up a run, maybe not even a hit. There was a lot of good in Dallas."

EARLY RUNS

The Astros piled up five singles and scored two runs off Tyler Skaggs (7-6) in the first two innings before Reddick's drive down the right-field line scored Evan Gattis in the third for a 3-0 lead.

Skaggs settled into six innings of six-hit ball in yet another strong start, but the left-hander took just his second loss since May.

HALO OUTS

Mike Trout went 0 for 3 and Shohei Ohtani struck out three times against Keuchel.

Hector Rondon pitched the ninth for his ninth save. He got a generous call to strike out Trout, who went 0 for 4 for only the second time since June 8.

"In the batter's box, it was a lot of what we saw versus left-handed pitchers before the break," said Angels manager Mike Scioscia, whose club began the night batting .224 against lefties. "We've got to get better."

SHOHEI THROWS

Before Ohtani went 0 for 3 as the Angels' designated hitter, he played catch in the outfield for the second straight day since getting approval to begin a throwing program. The two-way rookie took six weeks off from throwing to rest the sprained ligament in his pitching elbow after getting treatment with platelet-rich plasma and stem cells. The Angels hope he'll pitch again this season.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Astros: Correa won't return from his lower back injury until after this five-game road trip. He has been out since June 25, and hasn't resumed baseball activities while making "slow but steady progress," Hinch said.

Angels: Albert Pujols is scheduled to return to the lineup Monday, Scioscia said. The 38-year-old slugger went on the disabled list July 13 with left knee inflammation, one day after hitting his 629th and 630th career homers.

UP NEXT

Astros: Justin Verlander (9-5, 2.29 ERA) went winless in his final six starts before the All-Star break, but has already beaten the Angels twice this year, allowing two runs in 16 innings.

Angels: Nick Tropeano (3-4, 4.83 ERA) returns from a 31-game injury absence with right shoulder inflammation. Although he has been effective when healthy this season, he has never beaten the Astros in his career, and hasn't won at Angel Stadium since May 18, 2016.

Analysis: Few good options for NFL owners on player protests

By JIMMY GOLEN

AP Sports Writer

The controversy over NFL players protesting during the national anthem isn't going away, despite — or perhaps because of — team owners' efforts to stop players from using the forum to speak out on political causes.

The league's attempt to turn responsibility for disciplining protesters over to individual teams backfired Thursday when the Miami Dolphins tried to categorize raising a fist or kneeling during the anthem as "conduct detrimental to the club." That gave them the right to punish a player with a fine or up to a four-game suspension — one game more than Buccaneers quarterback Jameis Winston got when he was accused of groping an Uber driver.

Hours after The Associated Press reported on Miami's rules, the NFL and the players union issued a joint statement saying they were putting any anthem conduct policy on hold to see if they could come up with a compromise.

But the owners aren't left with many good ways to defuse the controversy — especially with President Donald Trump fanning the flames by subtweeting Commissioner Roger Goodell on Friday: "The $40,000,000 Commissioner must now make a stand."

Here's a look at some of the options: LEAVE IT TO THE TEAMS

The Plan: The league's solution, which the NFL Players Association challenged, was to allow each team to determine whether to punish its own players for protesting during the anthem. The policy adopted in May subjected clubs to fines and required players to stand if they are on the field during "The Star-Spangled Banner," though players could choose to stay in the locker room.

This would have given hard-line owners in conservative regions a chance to clamp down while allow-

Olson to Triple-A Columbus. Cleveland also recalled 3B Yandy Diaz from Columbus and brought back OF Melky Cabrera.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Indians: OF Bradley Zimmer's right shoulder surgery was performed Friday by Rangers team physician Dr. Keith Meister. Zimmer hit .226 with nine RBIs in 34 games with the Indians before getting sent down to Triple-A on June 5.

Rangers: RF Nomar Mazara was put on the 10-day DL, retroactive to Tuesday, because of a sprained right thumb. He hurt the thumb on his glove hand on a defensive play when he last played, Saturday at Baltimore.

UP NEXT

Bartolo Colon made his major league debut with the Cleveland Indians in 1997. Now 45 and with the Rangers, his 11th team, Colon makes his third attempt at his 246th career win to break a tie with Dennis Martinez for the most in the majors by a native of Latin America.

got a little slider happy with Gallo. If he just probably elevated the fastball, I think he'd have been OK," Francona said. "But Cimber came in and did a really good job after giving up an 0-2 hit."

Allen had only one blown save in his 21 chances before the All-Star break.

Bauer had a season-high five walks and allowed nine hits, and was pulled after three consecutive singles to start the fifth. Bauer struck out seven. He also started Sunday in Cleveland's last game, and didn't pitch in the All-Star Game.

With a temperature of 107 degrees at first pitch, it was the hottest start ever for game at the Rangers ballpark, which is in its 25th season. It was still 92 degrees when the game ended 4 hours and 48 minutes later — just a few minutes before midnight.

The only hotter game in the majors this season was July 7, at 108 degrees when the Los Angeles Angels threw their first pitch against the Dodgers.

STREAKS AND LISTS

Choo's 52-game streak reaching base is the longest in the majors since Kevin Millar's 52-gamer for Baltimore in 2007, and doesn't include his single in the All-Star Game on Tuesday night. It is the longest single-season streak in Rangers history. Will Clark reached in 59 consecutive games in 1995-96. ... Adrian Beltre had two hits, giving him 3,116 and passing Alex Rodriguez for 19th on the career list.

TEXAS HEAT

The Rangers had two home games with 106-degree temperatures in 2011 during an extended stretch of warm weather and 100-degree days in North Texas. The expected high on Saturday is 109 degrees, when they play at night again, and 108 for the Sunday afternoon series finale.

INDIANS MOVES

To make room on the active roster for Hand and Cimber, the Indians optioned outfielder Greg Allen, right-hander Adam Plutko and lefty Tyler

Cambage breaks WNBA's two-game scoring record with 88 points

Dallas Wings forward Kayla Thornton (6) reaches for the ball on a rebound during the team's WNBA basketball game against the Washington Mystics on Thursday, July 19, 2018, in Arlington, Texas.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Elizabeth Cambage had 35 points and 17 rebounds, breaking the WNBA's two-game scoring record, and the Dallas Wings beat the Washington Mystics 90-81 on Thursday night.

Coming off a historic 53-point performance Tuesday, Cambage broke Minnesota star Maya Moore's record two-game total of 80 points set in 2014. Cambage also became the first player with back-to-back 30-point, 10-rebound games since Moore in 2014.

Kayla Thornton added 15 points, and Glory Johnson had 13 for Dallas (14-9).

Dallas had three players score in double digits in the first half. Cambage had 17 points and nine rebounds, and Thornton and Johnson each scored 10. Dallas led 81-73 with 4:59 left in the fourth quarter and didn't score again until Cambage's three-point play at 1:32. But the Mystics couldn't get closer than four points during the stretch.

LaToya Sanders made 10 of 13 field goals and scored a career-high 25 points for Washington (13-10). Elena Delle Donne was held to nine points on 3-of-14 shooting.

a bitch off the field."

The Winners: Fans who were triggered by the sight of players kneeling during the song. And players, who could surely find another forum for their protests.

The Losers: NFL owners. The president has already said this isn't patriotic enough for him, so there's little hope of him easing up on his criticism. And it would cost them the connection to the flag and country they have worked hard to cultivate.

COMPROMISE
The Plan: Other sports worked with their players so that they didn't have to protest to be heard. Maybe the owners make a donation to the players' pet projects, play a video on the scoreboard, or otherwise give them a forum for their concerns.

The Winners: Players. It's not about the protest, it's about the cause.

The Losers: NFL owners. Even if they could stomach the loss of control, the political intrusion on the sport is bound to alienate some fans.

STOP PLAYING THE ANTHEM BEFORE GAMES

The Plan: Join almost every other country in the world and skip the forced display of patriotism that demands players stand at attention while fans check their phones, finish their hot dogs or visit the bathroom. If teams want to honor the military or local first-responders, let them do so — free from marketing deals.

The Winners: Fans who don't consider the anthem an integral part of the sports experience, giving them another 90 seconds to spend in game-day traffic without missing anything.

The Losers. NFL owners. Concessionaires. And a whole generation of American Idol also-rans.

Lights, camera, action! Check your Brains Productions are at it again as they just finished their latest movie project, and for now, can say "that's a wrap!"

Since 2011, Check your Brain Productions has produced films, music, and all things awesome, according to their website. Check your Brain Productions just wrapped up their most recent work of art on Friday July 20, which is a short film called Carnage Radio.

Carnage Radio is a psychological thriller about a late night radio show DJ in a small West Texas town who uses his airtime as an escape from everyday life struggles.

He learns that his listeners are being killed off one by one. He receives a call on the air one night from an unfamiliar voice who admits to the killings and places the DJ in the middle of the mystery. The local police and ex FBI profiler, with the help of the DJ and his connection with the killer, try to put the pieces together to stop the murders.

"Carnage Radio is about a serial killer who travels from town to town finding reasons to kill people. When the killer stumbles across a small quite Texas town he can't find a reason to kill, but like all serial killers, he has a deadly itch and it needs to be scratched," said James Fite, Director and Writer for Carnage Radio. "That's when he tunes into the radio station with a local DJ, and starts killing the radio listeners who call in to the station."

Filming for Carnage Radio started on July 6, but has been in the works for a lot longer.

"It started as a demo reel for Brandon J. Johnson, who plays the DJ in the Carnage Radio. He has wanted to act more since his acting debut in 2017 while the Iron Orchard was filming in Big Spring," said Fite. "Then it just kept expanding and growing so we decided to run with it."

Check your Brain Productions, who has won many awards for the documentary, "Project Monet," and the short film, "I See Something," have high hopes for the anticipated film, "Carnage Radio."

"Ever since we previewed the trailer of Carnage know with every investment you have to take a chance, we really think we have a good thing going on. We have already gotten so much positive feedback on Carnage Radio."

Speaking of positive feedback, Fite went on to say that they showed the trailer for Carnage Radio at a film festival and James Hart, who has directed many movies such as Hook, Bram Stoker's Dracula, and the series Crossbones, came up to Fite after watching the trailer and told him I want to see that movie.

"We are really supported by the community, from the mayor, police, and the locals. It really means a lot to have your town back up your dreams," said Fite. "We hope by next year we will have proven ourselves and have made something really amazing for the world."

Filming for Carnage Radio has taken place all around town, such as Gold Rush Discount and Tobacco, and KBYG as the radio station in the movie.

Carnage Radio is written and directed by James Fite, Produced by Brandon J. Johnson, James Fite, Amanda Fite, James Womble and Jared Rush. The movie stars Brandon J. Johnson, Cashea Shockley, Jake Leos, Carl Hart, Scott Emerson, Kennedy Johnson, Brittany Hankins, and Greg McAlister. Director of photography is Zach Campbell. Sound Engineer is David Haro. Production and Supervisor/ 2nd Unit Director, Ada Hernandez. Makeup artist, Claudia Leos. Assistant Director, Jose Ramirez. Production Assistant, Ezekiel Roman.

Radio about a year ago, everyone has been asking when will it be ready," said Fite. "The problem is, it takes money to make a movie and we are in need of an investor."

Fite went on to state that that's why he and Johnson decided to create a 20 minute feature film of Carnage Radio in the hopes of showing their work to possible future investors.

"We have a great business plan for Carnage Radio. We want to be able to go in and show investors what we can do with no budget at all, with the hopes that they will like what they see," said Fite. "I

'Brady Bunch' house for sale for nearly $1.9M

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The home featured in the opening and closing scenes of "The Brady Bunch" is for sale for $1.885 million.

Records show George and Violet McCallister bought the two-bedroom, three-bathroom split-level home in the Studio City neighborhood of Los Angeles in 1973 for $61,000.

Real estate agent Ernie Carswell tells the Los Angeles Times the house has been updated and upgraded, but the interior layout does not resemble what was featured on the show, which ran from 1969 to 1974. Interior scenes were shot in a studio.

Carswell says a rock-wall fireplace, wood-paneled walls and floral wallpaper are vintage touches of what homes looked like in the 1970s.

The agent says the home attracts 30 to 50 visitors a day.

The owners died, and their children are selling the property.

Comic-Con fans go wild meeting first female 'Doctor Who'

By LINDSEY BAHR

AP Film Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Some 6,500 Comic-Con attendees cheered on the 13th "Doctor Who" Jodie Whittaker Thursday in San Diego in her first public appearance since getting the coveted role.

Whittaker is the first woman to play the role, which has also been occupied recently by Peter Capaldi and Matt Smith.

The English actress described the Comic-Con experiences as "loud" and "amazing" and says she has felt "lots of support."

Whittaker said it was "incredibly emotional" when her casting was announced a year ago. A viral video of a little girl responding to the news reminded her that she didn't have a TV role model who looked like her when she was young, she said.

She said she knew that being the first female Doctor would have extra responsibility thrown in, but that she and her co-stars are standing on the shoulders of the 12 previous Doctors.

"Hopefully we make them all proud," Whitaker said.

New showrunner Chris Chibnall told The Associated Press that switching up the Doctor's gender was the "easiest decision ever."

"The world was ready, the show was ready, the audience was ready, and the BBC were totally behind it from the start and then it was the question of finding the right person for the role and we had a great list of people and we got the best person for the part," Chibnall said. "I think audiences are really going to fall in love with her this year."

Many fans in the convention center's Hall H waited in line overnight to get a spot in the panel. Some also wore their best Doctor Who costumes — men and women alike.

Little was revealed about the upcoming season of the highly secretive show, but the producers stressed that this new season will be accessible to all, fans and newcomers alike. In other words, don't get scared off if you don't know TARDIS from a Sonic Screwdriver.

"It's a new volume in the story, it's a new book of the tale of 'Doctor Who'," said executive producer Matt Strevens. "If you've never seen the show before it is the perfect time to start because you've got a brand new doctor. She's figuring out who she is."

The new season will debut on BBC America in the fall.

Roger's Reviews: The Equalizer 2

"Got a problem? Odds against you? Call the Equalizer. 212-555-4200."

From 1985 to 1989, that was the classified ad of Robert McCall, a CIA agent played by British actor Edward Woodward in the television series "The Equalizer."

In 2014, the series was ported to the silver screen with Denzel Washington as McCall, minus the British accent.

This week, the sequel to the 2014 film was released, called simply "The Equalizer 2."

I never did see the original movie version. I watched some episodes of "The Equalizer" TV series, but it was never one of my favorites. I have to say, though: "The Equalizer 2" – notably, the first sequel of Washington's long and storied career – isn't bad.

The movie kicks off on a train bound for Istanbul. McCall – decked out as a practicing Muslim with kaffan, taqiyah, and a full, bushy beard – is watching a man (Adam Karst) with a young girl (Rhys Cote). The man heads into the bar coach, and McCall follows. The two have a nice pleasant discussion before McCall offers the man – a Turkish man who has kidnapped his daughter in a custody dispute – the opportunity to do the right thing, release the girl, and turn himself in. The kidnapper declines, and McCall proceeds to quickly eliminate him, along with his four friends and/or bodyguards. Back in the States, we're treated to a scene with the girl's mother (Tamara Hickey) frantically reporting to a State Department office, where her daughter has been dropped off by a mysterious stranger.

After this set up and insight into how McCall does his thing, the story diverges into a few different plotlines.

We see a Belgian couple (Antoine de Lartique and Abigail Marlowe) being killed by a group of men. Terrorists? Criminals? We don't know yet.

We're introduced to Fatima (Sakina Jaffrey), a woman at McCall's apartment building who grows a garden. Later the garden is trashed and the walls graffitied by vandals.

We learn that McCall works as a Lyft driver. We see a young man (Lance A. Williams) put a disoriented young woman (Caroline Day) into McCall's Lyft car for him to drive home. McCall discerns that the young woman – Amy – had been assaulted by the young man – Junior – and his friends. McCall does not take this well.

We see McCall begin to interact with an African-American teenager named Miles (Ashton Sanders) at his apartment complex. The boy is on the cusp of beginning to run with the wrong crowd, and McCall seems determined to alter that course of events.

We see one of McCall's regular Lyft customers – an old man named Sam Rubinstein (Orson Bean) – trying to prove he's the rightful owner of a painting of his sister...his sister he lost track of in the World War II Nazi concentration camps.

And we see Susan Plummer (Melissa Leo), McCall's friend from the first movie – and apparently the only friend from his CIA life who knows he's still alive – head to Belgium to investigate the murder of the couple (see above). We see her get murdered.

The last item in the list turns into the main storyline of the movie, as McCall investigates Plummer's murder and confronts the killers.

Other performances include Pedro Pascal as Dave York, Plummer's associate and McCall's former CIA co-worker; and Bill Pullman as Brian Plummer, Susan's husband.

While it would be easy to dismiss "The Equalizer 2" as another forgettable action/thriller, doing so would not take the whole picture into account. While there's a lot of tense moments and over-the-top violence in this movie, there's also a lot of deeply satisfying punishment of the guilty, redemption of the misguided, and justice for the aggrieved.

And then there's Denzel Washington. While McCall's perpetually cool, in-control persona may not be the most challenging role the 63-year-old Oscar winner has ever played, his performance – coupled with Antoine Fuqua's direction – elevates the movie from a run-of-the-mill revenge flick to something approaching a morality drama.

If there's any criticism, it's simply that the multiplicity of plot lines doesn't make for a tightly-woven narrative; Sam Rubinstein's story, for example, seems tacked on and doesn't fit with the story in any meaningful way, except to develop the character of Robert McCall.

All in all, a good movie. Eight stars out of 10.

Giant statue of bare-chested Jeff Goldblum pops up in London

Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — Londoners and tourists alike have been bemused to find a giant statue of a bare-chested Jeff Goldblum next to the city's iconic Tower Bridge.

The 25-foot (7.6-meter) statue, depicting the actor in the reclining pose he made famous in "Jurassic Park," is meant to mark that film's 25th anniversary.

Sky's subscription service Now

TV installed the temporary "Jurassic Jeff" statue on the south bank of the Thames Wednesday. The outlandish stunt prompted many selfies and social media posts — though some Twitter users called it "far-fetched," pointing out that the movie wasn't filmed in London and nor is Goldblum a London native.

Goldblum played the scientist Ian Malcolm in Steven Spielberg's dinosaur thriller, and returned to the role this year for "Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom."

Stocks waver, dollar slips as traders shrug off trade talk

In this Oct. 24, 2017, file photo, people pass the New York Stock Exchange. The U.S. stock market opens at 9:30 a.m. EDT on Friday, July 20, 2018.

AP Markets Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. stocks are little changed Friday as traders shrug off the latest trade threats from President Donald Trump and focus on company earnings reports, which contained some better-than-expected results from big names including Microsoft. Banks are rising along with interest rates and high-dividend companies are slipping.

KEEPING SCORE: The S&P 500 index remained at 2,804 as of 1:25 p.m. Eastern time. The Dow Jones Industrial Average edged up 13 points to 25,077. The Nasdaq composite rose 8 points, or 0.1 percent, to 7,834. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks rose 1 point, or 0.1 percent, to 1,702.

More stocks fell than rose on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks have wobbled this week as investors reacted to solid company results as well as heightened trade tensions. The S&P 500 is up 0.2 percent for the week, while the Russell, which is made up of more domestically-oriented companies that could hold up better in a prolonged trade dispute, is up 0.8 percent.

EARNINGS: Microsoft continued to set records after its fiscal fourth-quarter results topped Wall Street forecasts and its cloud computing division continued to grow. The company said it's being helped by its rivalry with Amazon, because some retailers are reluctant to team up with Amazon on cloud computing services while they compete with Amazon in sales. The stock climbed 2.2 percent to $106.74.

General Electric lost 4 percent to $13.17 after it said its power business continued to struggle as revenue and orders decreased. GE, which has been selling and splitting off businesses, also cut its forecast for how much cash its businesses will generate.

Elsewhere, industrial conglomerate Honeywell rose 4 percent to $153.37 after it raised its forecast for the year. Uniform supplier Cintas gained 4.5 percent to $202.30.

Shoe maker Skechers plunged after its estimates for the third quarter fell far short of analyst expectations. The company said its U.S. wholesale business and international distributor business both saw their sales drop in the last quarter. The stock sank 21.9 percent to $25.98.

BONDS: Bond prices fell. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note rose to 2.89 percent from 2.85 percent. That helped banks because bond yields are used to set interest rates on many kinds of loans including mortgages. JPMorgan Chase gained 1.6 percent to $111.60 and Bank of America picked up 1.2 percent to $30.03.

High-dividend stocks like real estate investment trusts and utilities fell as investors shifted their money out of those stocks and into bonds.

MORE TARIFF TALK: In a taped interview with the business channel CNBC, Trump said "I'm willing to go to 500," referring roughly to the $505.5 billion

Trump slams rate increases by independent Federal Reserve

Federal Reserve Board Chair Jerome Powell testifies during a House Committee on Financial Services hearing, Wednesday, July 18, 2018, on Capitol Hill in Washington.

By ZEKE MILLER, JOSH BOAK and KEN THOMAS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Donald Trump on Thursday cast aside concerns about the Federal Reserve's independence, saying he was "not happy" with the Fed's recent interest rate increases.

Trump told CNBC in an interview: "I don't like all of this work that we're putting into the economy and then I see rates going up." Last month, the Fed raised its benchmark rate for a second time this year and projected two more increases in 2018. Its rate hikes are meant to prevent the economy from overheating and igniting high inflation. But rate increases also make borrowing costlier for households and companies and can weaken the pace of growth. In particular, the Fed's most recent rate hikes could dilute some of the benefit of the tax cuts Trump signed into law last year.

The president acknowledged that his comments about the Fed would likely raise concerns. The central bank has long been seen as needing to operate free of political pressure from the White House or elsewhere to properly manage interest rate policy.

The Fed's dual mandate is to maximize employment and stabilize prices. By maintaining its independence, the central bank can make politically contentious decisions to combat economic challenges, like the huge bond purchases it made after the 2008 financial crisis to help drive down long-term rates to support the economy. That policy drew rebukes from many Republican lawmakers.

In February, Jerome Powell, Trump's hand-picked choice, became Fed chairman. Last week, Powell said in an interview with the radio program Marketplace that he didn't expect to face pressure from the White House.

"We have a long tradition here of conducting policy in a particular way, and that way is independent of all political concerns," Powell said. "We do our work in a strictly nonpolitical way, based

Zuckerberg's Holocaust comment puts Facebook on the spot

In this May 1, 2018, file photo, Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg makes the keynote address at F8, Facebook's developer conference in San Jose, Calif. Remarks from Zuckerberg have sparked criticism from groups such as the Anti-Defamation League. Zuckerberg, who is Jewish, told Recode's Kara Swisher in an interview that although he finds Holocaust denial "deeply offensive," such content should not be banned from Facebook.

By BARBARA ORTUTAY

AP Technology Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Denying the Holocaust happened is probably OK on Facebook. Calling for a mob to kill Jews is not.

Mark Zuckerberg's awkward and eyebrow-raising attempt this week to explain where Facebook draws the line illustrates the complexities social media platforms face as they take on the unwanted role of referee in this age of online misinformation, manipulation and hate speech.

Facebook, with 2.2 billion users, disallows such things as nudity, the selling of guns, credible threats of violence, and direct attacks on people because of their race, sex or sexual orientation.

Hours after the Facebook founder's comments about Holocaust deniers aired on Wednesday, the company announced it will also start removing misinformation that could lead to bloodshed. The policy will begin in Sri Lanka and expand to Myanmar, where Facebook users have been accused of inciting anti-Muslim violence.

But beyond those guidelines, there are large gray areas. What, exactly, qualifies as supporting terrorist groups versus merely posting about them? Or mocking someone's premature death — something that is also prohibited?

If Facebook were to ban Holocaust denial, it might also be called on to prohibit the denial of other historical events, such as the Armenian genocide or the massacre of Native Americans by European colonizers. This, Facebook might argue, could lead to a slippery slope where the company finds itself trying to verify the historical accuracy of users' posts.

So, where it can, Facebook stays out of policing content.

While thousands of Facebook moderators around the world are assigned to review potentially objectionable content, aided by artificial intelligence, executives like to say the company doesn't want to become an "arbiter of truth" and instead tries to let users decide for themselves.

This is why fake news isn't actually banned from Facebook, though you might see less of it these days thanks to the company's algorithms and third-party fact-checking efforts. Instead, Facebook might label disputed news stories as such and show you related content that might change your mind.

YouTube recently started doing this too. Twitter has been even more freewheeling in what sorts of content it allows, only recently ramping up a crack-down on hate and abuse.

"Facebook doesn't want to put time and resources to policing content. It's costly and difficult," said Steve Jones a professor of communications at the University of Illinois at Chicago. "It's a difficult job, I'm sure an emotionally draining job, and given the scale of Facebook, it would take a lot of people to monitor what goes through that platform."

in goods the U.S. imported last year from China. Earlier this month the U.S. placed import taxes on $34 billion in goods imported from China and Beijing responded in kind. The Trump administration is considering tariffs on another $200 billion in goods.

The dispute between the world's two largest economies stems from accusations that China steals technology from U.S. companies or forces them to hand over technology to Chinese companies as well as differences over the U.S. trade deficit with China. Investors have worried that the trade war and other disputes involving the U.S. could slow down the global economy.

The U.S. government put tariffs on imported steel, aluminum, washing machines and solar panels this year and is considering taxing auto imports. Representatives of the auto industry asked Congress to oppose that move on Thursday.

YUAN DECLINES:

The People's Bank of China weakened the country's currency against the dollar on Friday. If the yuan continues to depreciate, goods exported to China will become more expensive to consumers there. Chinese exports would also be relatively cheaper, possibly balancing out suggested increases in tariffs by the Trump Administration.

The yuan has been skidding since February, mostly because of slower economic growth in China and rising interest rates in the U.S.

OIL: Benchmark U.S. crude added 1.1 percent to $70.25 a barrel in New York and Brent crude, used to price international oils, gained 0.4 percent to $72.85 a barrel in London.

OVERSEAS: Germany's DAX lost 1 percent and France's CAC 40 slid 0.3 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 gave up 0.1 percent. South Korea's Kospi added 0.3 percent and Hong Kong's Hang Seng gained 0.8 percent. Japan's Nikkei 225 fell 0.3 percent.

CURRENCIES: The dollar fell to 111.60 yen from 112.46 yen. The euro rose to $1.1717 from $1.1644.

on detailed analysis, which we put on the record transparently."

He added, "No one in the administration has said anything to me that really gives me concern on this front."

The reaction to Trump's remarks in the financial markets was muted. The U.S. dollar fell to 112.46 yen from 112.84 yen earlier, and yields on Treasuries dipped slightly.

After Trump's interview with CNBC was made public, Lindsay Walters, a White House spokeswoman, said the president "respects the independence of the Fed."

"The president's views on interest rates are well-known, and his comments today are a reiteration of those long held positions, and public comments," Walters said.

Speaking about Fed policy in his interview with CNBC, Trump said he is "letting them do what they feel is best."

But his comments raised alarms, including with some former Fed officials who saw in his remarks a possible effort to apply public pressure on the central bank.

"I am not pleased," said Carl Tannenbaum, a former Chicago Fed official and chief economist at Northern Trust. "The remarks certainly aren't an immediate threat to Fed independence, but they break with the tradition of respectful distance."

Randall Kroszner, a former Fed governor, said the central bank has withstood political pressure before and will continue to do so under Powell's leadership.

"The Fed has often faced political pressures — from Congress, presidents, Treasury secretaries and innumerable outside groups," said Kroszner, an economics professor at the University of Chicago. "My experience at the Fed is consistent with what Jay Powell recently said — being non-political is deep in the Fed's DNA — and I believe that Jay will keep it that way."

During the 2016 presidential campaign, Trump was highly critical of the Fed and accused its policymakers of keeping rates at ultra-low levels to favor Democrats. But he also told CNBC during the campaign that he is a "low interest-rate-person."

Past efforts to apply political pressure on the Fed have sometimes hurt the economy. President Richard Nixon encouraged Arthur Burns, the Fed chairman at the time, to help boost economic growth ahead of Nixon's 1972 landslide re-election. That episode ultimately triggered runaway inflation that took a decade to tame and required raising the Fed's policy rate above 15 percent — more than eight times the rate's current average.

George H.W. Bush's administration complained that he felt the Fed's failure to cut rates more quickly in 1992 contributed to his re-election defeat that year.

When Robert Rubin led President Bill Clinton's National Economic Council, he adopted a rule of never commenting on the Fed's actions — a policy that was subsequently followed by the George W. Bush and Obama administrations.

Auto industry urges US to hit brakes on proposed car tariffs

"We fought a war together," says John Hall, a maintenance team member with Hyundai Motor Manufacturing Alabama, center, as he holds up a book about the Korean War, next to Joseph Boyle, senior director of business development and sales at LG Electronics, left, and Yong-Geun Kim, president and CEO of the Korean Automobile Manufacturers Association, during a Commerce Department hearing on investigation into whether auto imports threaten national security, Thursday, July 19, 2018, at the Commerce Department in Washington. The Commerce Department holds a daylong hearing on the latest trade fight the Trump administration is primed to start: It wants to impose tariffs on imported autos and auto parts, a move that President Donald Trump says would aid American workers but that could inflate car prices, make U.S. manufacturers less competitive and draw retaliation from other nations.

By PAUL WISEMAN

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commerce Department sought feedback on President Donald Trump's plans to consider taxing auto imports. It got an earful at an all-day hearing Thursday.

Critics lined up to urge the administration to reject auto tariffs. They argued that the taxes would raise car prices, squeeze automakers by increasing the cost of imported components and invite retaliation from U.S. trading partners — and allies — like the European Union and Canada.

Jennifer Thomas of the Alliance of Auto Manufacturers registered her organization's opposition to levies on car, truck and auto parts imports. She noted that "our view is shared by over 2,200 comments that were filed before this hearing. In fact, we were only able to find three organizations" in favor of pursuing the tariffs.

Trump has ordered Commerce to investigate whether auto imports pose a threat to U.S. national security that would justify tariffs or other trade restrictions. Earlier this year, he used national security as a justification for taxing imported steel and aluminum.

Auto tariffs would escalate global trade tension dramatically: The U.S. last year imported $192 billion in vehicles and $143 billion in auto parts — figures that dwarf last year's $29 billion in steel and $23 billion in aluminum imports. Not to mention the $34 billion in Chinese goods the administration has so far hit with tariffs in yet another dispute over the predatory practices China deploys in a push to challenge U.S. high-tech dominance.

At the same time, Jones said he has his doubts that throwing more moderators (Facebook's goal is to increase the number from 10,000 to 20,000 this year) and more technology at the problem would make a difference. He said he has no idea how Facebook can fix things.

"If I knew," he said, "I'd probably be sitting next to Mr. Zuckerberg asking for a big fat check."

Why these companies try to stay out of regulating speech goes back to their roots. They were all founded by engineers as tech companies that shun labels such as "media" and "editor." Facebook's chief operating officer, Sheryl Sandberg, even said in an interview last year that, as a tech company, Facebook hires engineers — not reporters and journalists.

Then there's the legal shield. While a newspaper can be held responsible for something printed on its pages, internet companies by law are not responsible for the content others post on their sites. If they start policing content too much — editing, if you will — tech companies risk becoming media companies.

Zeynep Tufekci, a prominent techno-sociologist, said on Twitter that the notion that you can "fight bad speech with good speech" doesn't really work in a Facebook world, if it ever did.

"Facebook is in over its head," she tweeted Thursday, but she also confessed that "nobody has a full answer."

In an interview with Recode , Zuckerberg, who is Jewish, said posts denying the Nazi annihilation of 6 million Jews took place would not necessarily be removed. Zuckerberg said that as long as posts are not calling for harm or violence, even offensive content should be protected.

While this has been a longstanding position at the company, Zuckerberg's statement and his reasoning — that he doesn't think Holocaust deniers are "intentionally" getting it wrong — caused an uproar.

The Anti-Defamation League said Facebook has a "moral and ethical obligation" not to allow people to disseminate Holocaust denial.

Zuckerberg later tried to explain his words, saying in an email to Recode's Kara Swisher that he personally finds "Holocaust denial deeply offensive, and I absolutely didn't intend to defend the intent of people who deny that."

Still, for now the policy is not changing.

Opening lead — two of clubs.

It's hard to estimate how many contracts are lost because players get overly upset after running into a bad suit break. A significant part of the skill in bridge consists of keeping your cool when the unexpected strikes, and then calmly doing the best you can under the circumstances.

Take the present case where South discovered early in the play that all five missing trumps were banked against him.

When dummy first appeared, it seemed his only possible losers were a spade, a heart and a diamond. But when declarer ruffed the club lead and played the ace of trumps, East did not follow suit, and it now seemed South would have to lose two trump tricks.

But faint heart ne'er won fair lady, and South did not promptly abandon all hope. Instead, he focused all his efforts on finding a solution to his predicament. He knew that his chances of winning a diamond finesse were very poor on the bidding, so he decided to try to eliminate one of his trump losers.

Accordingly, at trick three he led a heart to dummy's jack. East won with the ace and returned a heart to the queen. Declarer then ruffed a club, played a heart to the king and ruffed another club. Next came a diamond to the ace, deliberately rejecting the finesse, followed by another diamond to East's king.

At this point, South was down to only the K-J-10-8 of spades, while West's last four cards were the Q-9-7-6. When East now led a club, declarer trumped with the ten. West realized he'd be finished if he over-ruffed, so he chose instead to under-ruff with the six.

South countered by next leading the eight of spades. West won with the nine, but then had to lead from the Q-7 into declarer's K-J, and the contract was home.

row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Sun of Happiness

It's not too hard to think about how you might get happy in the distant future, but that usually involves a lot of fantasy circumstances and events that you have zero control over. Choose to be happy right now. There's a way! Indeed, there are many ways under the Leo sun. When the sun is in this part of the sky, playtime begins. Go find your happy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Competition is usually bad for close relationships, as you want to lift, not out-shine, the ones you love. However, sometimes the competition brings out the best in everyone, as is the case today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Boredom is a necessary part of life -- and one that keeps you questing forward to discover new horizons. It's not about whether you can find something better. It's just that you want to see it all and have all of the experiences.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your discomfort may be telling you to stop an activity, or it may be an essential thing to push through in order for you to grow. So which is it? You'll have to back up and look at the big picture to tell.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It can be fun to hang around people who do the social equivalent of spinning in circles and the emotional equivalent of bumping into things for excitement. It's also tiring, though. Today you'll need a break from the drama.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). It felt as if you were in a trap, and you wanted desperately to be released from the emotional heaviness of a situation. And now you will be, but not because someone else had the key; you will be freed by your own understanding.

By Holiday Mathis

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). People owe you, it's true, but if they can't pay, what does it matter? Even thinking about it is a waste of time. Your best bet is to take the lesson and move on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You can't know everything about everything, but as you go deeper into a chosen topic of interest, you'll find that the principles apply to other areas, as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The choice to be kind often happens before you ever leave the house. When you set this as your intention, everything that happens out in the world reflects your approach.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You really don't think with just your brain; rather, you think with your whole body, and every move you make affects your thoughts. Exercise will revive your outlook.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It's within human nature to care for others while being mindful that someday others will care for you. It's superhuman to care for others out of pure love and without expectation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It's scary to go forward blindly, knowing that possibly you'll only understand an experience when you look back on it.

But if you don't go foolishly forward, there will be nothing to look back on at all.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Envy and peace of mind cannot coexist. There are unfair things afoot that you're having trouble letting go of. Try putting them aside for a while, in the name of peace, and maybe you'll forget to pick them back up.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 22). You're healthy, gorgeous and flush. Seeing as 90 percent of what you've worried about in the past hasn't happened, it could be argued that worry is unnecessary (or that worry actually works!). You decide, but so much is going right for you in the next 12 months that a worry-free year ahead is yours if you choose to take it. Virgo and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 1, 11 and 17.

FORECAST FOR THE WEEK AHEAD: When the sun king enters Leo, he is coming home to his castle after a long journey of diplomatic duty. There's a sense of relief, followed by a period of relaxation, which either fades into or overlaps with a strong impulse to have some fun. Life is a playground! Though you should keep in mind that "play" can look very different depending on who is doing the playing. Whereas some play on a golf course or boat, others play sitting in a chair in a quiet room, using their imaginations as the main event. Whatever play is for you, if you can make it a major part of your life over the next four weeks, you'll be not only happier

Of course, there is this issue of the Mercury retrograde to contend with this week. It happens smack-dab in the middle, and the more you can do to offset the potential effects before they happen the better off you'll be. Mostly, this is about planning ahead, anticipating what could go wrong and having a safety in place -- generally, getting organized. If you can make those things happen, you'll be ahead of the game.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Selena Gomez made her show business debut on "Barney & Friends" and went on to rule Disney Channel and then the pop charts. Gomez was born when the sun, Mercury and Venus were all in the charismatic station of Leo, the sign of entertainment and of children. Gomez recently showed up at a prom of a children's hospital oncology unit to bring joy to others and restore her own.

Disney streaming could get boost as Comcast drops Fox bid

This March 29, 2017, file photo shows a sign outside the Comcast Center in Philadelphia. Comcast says it’s dropping out of the bidding war for Twenty-First Century Fox’s entertainment business, instead focusing on its bid for Sky.

By MAE ANDERSON

AP Technology Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Comcast is dropping its bid for Fox's entertainment businesses, paving the way for Disney to boost its upcoming streaming service by buying the studios behind "The Simpsons" and X-Men.
Getting Fox would help the House of Mouse compete with technology companies such as Amazon and Netflix for viewers' attention — and dollars.
Disney needs compelling TV shows and movies to persuade viewers to sign up and pay for yet another streaming service. It already has classic Disney cartoons, "Star Wars,"

Pixar, the Muppets and some of the Marvel characters. With Fox, Disney could add Marvel's X-Men and Deadpool, along with programs shown on such Fox channels as FX Networks and National Geographic. Fox's productions also include "The Americans," "This Is Us" and "Modern Family."
The deal would help Disney further control TV shows and movies from start to finish — from creating the programs to distributing them through television channels, movie theaters, streaming services and other ways people watch entertainment. Disney would get valuable data on customers and their entertainment-viewing habits, which it can then use to sell advertising.

For Comcast, dropping the pursuit of Fox lets it focus on getting European pay-TV operator Sky, a deal that would help the Philadelphia-based cable and media company expand beyond the U.S.
Fox shareholders are to vote on the Disney deal on July 27.
Cable and telecom companies have been buying the companies that make TV shows and movies to compete in a changing media landscape. Although internet providers like AT&T and Comcast directly control their customers' access to the internet in a way that Amazon, YouTube and Netflix do not, they still face threats as those streaming services gain in popularity.
AT&T bought Time Warner last month for $81 billion and has already launched its own streaming service, Watch TV, with Time Warner channels such as TBS and TNT, among other networks, for $15 a month.
Expect something similar from Disney after the deal closes. In addition to boosting the Disney streaming service, expected to debut next year, the deal paves the way for Marvel's X-Men and the Avengers to reunite in future movies. Though Disney owns Marvel Studios, some characters including the X-Men had already been licensed to Fox.

Disney would also get a controlling stake in the existing streaming service Hulu.
Separately, Disney said it will release new episodes of the "Star Wars" animated series "The Clone Wars" on its upcoming streaming service. The original "Clone Wars" series ran for six seasons, with the final one as a Netflix exclusive.
Comcast said Thursday that it would not raise its $66 billion offer for Fox. The Walt Disney Co. had topped Comcast's bid by offering $71 billion. The U.S. Department of Justice has approved Disney's bid as long as Disney, which owns the national sports network ESPN, sells Fox's 22 regional sports networks. Disney may still need regulatory approvals outside the U.S.
Disney CEO Bob Iger said he was "extremely pleased" with Comcast's announcement
"Our focus now is on completing the regulatory process and ultimately moving toward integrating our businesses," he said in a statement.
GBH Insights analyst Daniel Ives called Comcast's move "the final chapter in this soap opera." He said Comcast's focus now is on getting Sky "to build a strong beachhead content strategy in Europe."
Sky operates in Austria, Germany, Ireland, Italy and the U.K. It has 22.5 million customers, attracted by offerings such as English Premier League soccer and "Game of Thrones."
Fox has been trying to buy the 61 percent of Sky it doesn't already own. The idea was to sell Sky to Disney as part of the broader deal. Last week, Comcast made a bid that values Sky at $34 billion, compared with $32.5 billion in Fox's offer.

Nearly 98 percent of the cars and trucks that would be hit by the tariffs are imported from U.S. allies: the EU, Canada, Japan, Mexico and South Korea, according to the Peterson Institute for International Economics. David O'Sullivan, the EU's ambassador to Washington, said it was "absurd" to think that imports from staunch allies undermine America's national defense.
In a study out Thursday, the Center for Automotive Research found that a 25 percent tariff on autos and parts would cut U.S. auto sales by 2 million and wipe out 714,700 jobs. It would also raise the price of the typical new car sold in the United States (now about $35,000) by $4,400 — $2,270 for U.S.-built cars and $6,875 for imported cars and trucks.

"New tariffs or quotas would also reduce competition and consumer choice; increase the cost of used vehicles; and raise the cost of getting vehicles serviced and repaired," said Peter Welch, president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, which commissioned the study.
Welch said the tariffs would push the average new-car payment to $611 a month from $533 a month (over 69 months on average).

John Hall, a maintenance worker at the Hyundai Motor Manufacturing plant in Montgomery, Alabama, testified that auto imports pose no threat to U.S. national security. "In fact, it's just the opposite," he said. Hyundai imports parts that go into its Alabama-built cars.

"New tariffs on automotive imports would have a devastating effect," Hall said. "I am one of thousands of American workers whose livelihoods would be put at risk by a substantial tariff on automotive goods.
