Annual 'Blowout'

The sixth annual Energy Appreciation Week ends Saturday with the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Blowout. The Blowout will be on the grounds of the American Legion Post 19 and opens to the public at 11 a.m. It will feature a variety of cookoff teams competing in the brisket, fajita and chili categories as well as live entertainment. A highlight of the Blowout is the World's Ugliest Roughneck Contest, set for 3:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Also on tap for Saturday and Sunday is the Midland Arts Assembly's ninth annual Celebration of the Arts at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza. The Preview Party is tonight, although the first official event was Thursday's free concert at Midland College. See photo/1B.

Car hits children

CHICAGO — A car jumped the curb and plowed into a crowd of third-graders on a field trip at O'Hare International Airport on Thursday, killing a 9-year-old girl and injuring dozens of other people, authorities said. Three child victims were injured critically. The 87-year-old man driving the car told police he thought he hit the brakes but the car accelerated and he was unable to stop./11A

More cholera

BROWNSVILLE — A 40-year-old Brownsville man was recovering at a local hospital Thursday after being diagnosed as the state's second cholera victim, officials said. Emilio Garcia was being treated in the Brownsville Medical Center's intensive care unit, but was alert and coherent, according to his wife, Sylvia./3B

A swift comeback

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Laura Iannone gathers with fellow cheerleaders on a campus field, steadying herself during a lift stunt and showing off her back handspring. "Go, Tigers, go," the college squad chants, concentration on their faces. Miss Iannone shares the determined look, but her challenge is greater. She lost a leg after a traffic accident last summer. Her swift comeback as a Riverside Community College cheerleader — performing without an artificial leg — is a study in grit and the power of friendship. "I didn't want to give up," the 20-year-old said.

Plan eliminates 393 area jobs

Midland and the Permian Basin suffered their biggest loss of jobs in recent years, when Chevron announced Thursday that it would restructure its operations in the Permian Basin, eliminating nearly 400 employees.

Of the 970 employees in Chevron's Permian Basin Business Unit, which includes producing properties in New Mexico and West Texas, 237 jobs in Midland and 156 jobs at field locations outside Midland will be eliminated, the company said.

"This is a tough call," said Robert Herrin, vice president Permian Basin Business Unit, "when you make these kind of cuts you are really getting into quality workers, and impacting an awful lot of lives."

He said some of the cuts will be voluntary and some involuntary, but it is too soon to tell what the percentage of each might be. Response to voluntary severance

Riots, arson, looting rage through L.A.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Riots, arson and looting raged in the Los Angeles area Thursday and the death toll rose to 21 as National Guard troops moved into neighborhoods torn by outrage over the Rodney King verdict.

Gunfire erupted after two dozen Guard soldiers arrived at a video arcade threatened by looters. The machine-gun-toting soldiers did not return fire.

Bands of people roamed the streets long after a dusk-to-dawn curfew took effect. Police said there were no immediate arrests.

About 700 people had been injured and 378 arrested in the outburst of destruction that terrorized vast parts of the city for a second day, from downtown to the suburban San Fernando Valley.

At nightfall Thursday, violence had spread into San Bernardino, 60 miles to the east, where one person died in a gun battle between a security guard and a motorist that police said was riot-related.

Anger, protests cross nation

Associated Press

Protesters rallied nationwide Thursday to denounce the verdict in the Rodney King beating case, and blacks attacked whites in Atlanta. Black leaders demanded federal civil rights charges against the white Los Angeles officers who beat the black motorist.

"The anger is not only in Los Angeles. The anger is all over this nation," Rep. Floyd Flake of New York said at a news conference by black lawmakers at the U.S. Capitol. "When Rodney King was on the ground getting beat, we were all on the ground getting beat."

Demonstrations were held in cities throughout the nation. In contrast to the deadly scene in Los Angeles, most of the demonstrations elsewhere were peace-

Pastors, Midlanders gather, pray for unity, end to racism

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Local religious leaders gathered with about 50 Midlanders Thursday night at Hollowell United Methodist Church to pray for the citizens of Los Angeles and the growing civil and racial unrest that has erupted in the last two days.

"Today, in the land of violence and destruction, we must seek the Lord," said the Rev. Hadley Edwards, the church's pastor.

"If my brothers in Los Angeles don't have freedom, how can I have freedom. We must pray for those in L.A., Atlanta and New York, where there is violence."

Rev. Edwards led the group in song and prayer before several other people stood to express their dismay with the violence.

Attorney General William Barr

Justice Department kick-starts probe

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department accelerated its investigation Thursday into whether four acquitted white policemen should face federal civil rights charges in the videotaped beating of a black motorist in Los Angeles.

As protests and violence spread in the wake of the not-guilty verdicts in the trial of police who beat Rodney King, President Bush said federal agents would probe the case. In a nationally televised appearance, Bush also condemned the "lootings, beatings and random violence" and appealed for "calm and tolerance."

Minutes after the president's White House announcement, Attorney General William Barr said agents "are now pursuing a federal criminal investigation." He sent Wayne Budd, a top aide and a black former U.S. attorney, coordinate the federal probe.

"It's important for people to understand that the verdicts yesterday on state charges are not the end of the process," Barr said. He promised that federal civil rights laws would be "vigorously" enforced.

Meanwhile, members of the Congressional Black Caucus urged the Justice Department to quickly put the four Los Angeles policemen on trial.

"We're not asking for an assessment; we're asking them to prosecute," said Rep. Maxine Waters, D-Calif. "We believe that they're guilty. Most of America believes that these officers are guilty."

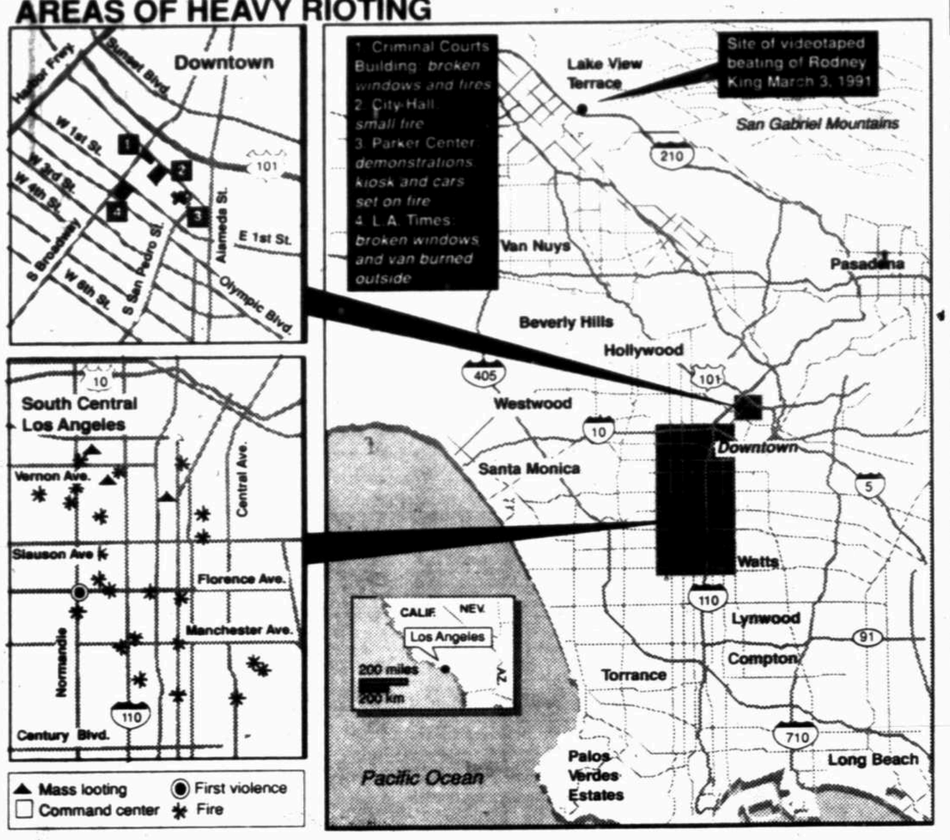

Despite their acquittal in state court, the four policemen could face 10-year jail sentences if convicted on federal charges.

AREAS OF HEAVY RIOTING

Police slow to react as violence spread

By Robert Reinhold
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Police apparently caught off guard by the violent reaction to the acquittal of four white officers in the beating of a black motorist, were slow to react, even after the scope of the anarchy sweeping the city had become apparent.

As unruly demonstrators threatened to invade police headquarters downtown early Wednesday evening, Chief of Police Daryl F. Gates was attending an event in the affluent Brentwood area, about 11 miles away, to raise money to fight a proposal on the June ballot to limit the term of the police chief. Matthew Hunt, the deputy chief in charge of the affected area, was attending a community meeting about 6 miles from the police command center.

It was hours before the police entered many of the areas in South-Central Los Angeles where stores were being looted and motorists were being dragged from their cars and beaten.

As late as 11 p.m., with at least two dozen fires blazing out of control, Gates resisted Mayor Tom Bradley's call for National Guard troops, telling Gov. Pete Wilson in a conference call with the mayor that he was not sure the police needed help handling the situation, according to a source close to Bradley.

The mayor prevailed with the governor, and by Thursday morning Gates agreed that the Guard was needed. But the first contingent, about 2,400 military police, were not deployed on the streets until mid afternoon Thursday. The governor traced the delay, in part, to a shortage of ammunition.

Similarly, the Los Angeles Fire Department, had no special contingency plan apart from declaring a tactical alert.

The deparment was forced to let many fires burn unattended, not because it lacked sufficient engines at first but because the police did not have enough officers to protect firefighters. There were barely enough officers on hand to prevent Parker Center, the police headquarters downtown, from being overrun.

The slow response was due in part to the fact that almost nobody, including the mayor, anticipated such a sweeping acquittal of all four officers.

The police apparently gambled that restraint would result in less violence than an agressive show of force.

But by the time they mounted a more intense response, rioting, looting and burning had spread beyond containment. Gates Thursday conceded that the police should have moved faster.

"Quite frankly, we were overwhelmed," he said at a news conference at City Hall Thursday morning. "I wish it had been much faster, but it was not. We think we were as ready as we ought to be. We did not want to appear that we were overreacting. We were very, very careful not to show that provocativeness."

Rioters target Korean grocers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A day that began as usual for employees at Cosmos Appliance in Koreatown ended Thursday with fearful employees boarding up the front door as groups of angry blacks gathered outside.

Smoldering ethnic tension exploded into the city's worst racial violence in decades as blacks angered by verdicts in the Rodney King case targeted Korean-American businesses for arson and looting.

More than 100 Korean-owned stores in the neighborhood, just west of downtown, and in the predominantly black South Central section were burned, looted or robbed in rioting that began Wednesday.

For many blacks, the riots also provided an opportunity to vent pent-up anger over the March 16, 1991, videotaped killing of Latasha Harlins, a 15-year-old junior high school student shot to death by a Korean-American merchant in a dispute over a bottle of orange juice.

Miss Harlins' killer, Soon Ja Du, 54, was sentenced to probation, a ruling that enraged blacks and was upheld by the state Court of Appeals only last week.

America speaks language of violence

Associated Press

Once again, America is speaking the language of race riots.

The message is rage. The messengers are killing, looting and burning. And the script is as predictable as it is disheartening: One group screams injustice and feels violence is its only recourse.

The city is again Los Angeles, smoldering in death and destruction after four white policemen were acquitted of assaulting a black motorist.

Twenty-eight years ago, black anger burned in Watts after police arrested a black motorist and a scuffle ensued.

"This is deja vu. Very little has changed," said Charles Hamilton, professor of government at Columbia University and co-author with Stokely Carmichael of the 1967 book "Black Power."

"One of the major points we made 25 years ago was the pervasive nature of racism in our society will very frequently result in frustrated acts of violence," Hamilton said. "It's predictable. When there is a perceived act of blatant injustice, then large numbers of people are going to vent their outrage."

Rioting followed Wednesday's acquittal by a jury of 10 whites, an Asian and an Hispanic, despite an 81-second videotape that showed motorist Rodney King being beaten.

In the '60s, the six days and nights of Watts rioting was just the first in a series of explosions. The torch from Charcoal Alley scorched places like Newark, N.J., Detroit, Baltimore, and Washington, D.C., culminating in the long, hot summer of 1968 when the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated.

Nearly 200 people were killed in that period when federal troops patrolled city streets as cautiously as they swept Vietnam's rice paddies. Black militant H. Rap Brown spread his gospel of "Burn, baby, burn" while preaching that "violence is as American as cherry pie."

The National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, known as the Kerner Commission, fixed the blame for riots on the cycle of poverty and despair. It warned on March 1, 1968, that: "Our nation is moving toward two societies, one black, one white — separate and unequal."

Twenty years later, a group of experts on race and urban affairs met in Racine, Wis., and concluded the same conditions persist.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies bring high in 90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high in the mid-90s with south winds 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny with a high around 90 to 95.

After an overnight low of 50, Thursday's high soared to 89 compared to the record high for that date of 96 set in 1948. The record low for that date is 34 set in 1970.

STATE

It was partly cloudy and warm across Texas on Thursday with southerly winds at 5 to 15 miles an hour across most of the state.

Breezes in West Texas were brisk and gusty to near 35 mph in the Panhandle.

There were widely scattered thunderstorms in the Big Bend.

Sunshine allowed temperatures to climb into the upper 80s in West Texas, but fog and cloud held readings elsewhere in the 70s.

The forecast for North Texas was for mostly clear skies today with increasing clouds Saturday and a slight chance of thunderstorms. Highs were to be 85 in the east to 97 in the west today with lows tonight 64 to 68. Highs Saturday were to be 87 to 93.

West Texas was expected to be mostly fair through Saturday. Highs today were to be mostly in the 90s except near 104 in the Big Bend. Lows were to be in the 50s and 60s. Highs Saturday were to range from the upper 70s in the north to near 104 in the Big Bend valleys.

Forecasters said South Texas would be partly cloudy and warm today and Saturday. Highs were to be in the 80s and 90s with lows in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Record low temperatures were scattered across the East on Thursday, but a heat wave continued across the Southwest and Plains.

Lows were only in the 30s across most of New England, and in the 40s as far south as northern Florida. Lows were in the 30s and 40s across the Great Lakes region.

Key West, Fla., southernmost point on the continental United States, had a record low of 59, the city's third record low in a row and its coolest reading on record for so late in the season.

Clouds helped keep afternoon temperatures in the 40s across the Great Lakes into the upper Ohio Valley. But temperatures rebounded into the 70s across the Southeast.

Temperatures soared over much of the Southwest, with readings already in the 80s and 90s by midday.

And strong southerly wind blew warm air across the central Plains to the Dakotas and the upper Mississippi Valley. Early afternoon temperatures were in the 80s across much of the Plains.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CHEVRON: More than 200 employees to remain

packages offered to employees nationwide are not due until May 15, and the company will not assess manpower needs until after that date.

Herrin said Chevron would keep its building at ClayDesta Plaza and that more than 200 employees still would be in Midland to serve two smaller "profit centers."

"Also, the present cuts do not include another 90 additional jobs," which will be effected later at other locations, Herrin said.

Those effects could come at Chevron's wholly owned subsidary, Warren Petroleum, which operates an extensive gathering system and gas plant in the Sand Hills Field near Monahans, and the North Ward Estes Field, which Chevron has contemplated selling.

The cuts in the Permian Basin are the result of a nationwide, restructuring of Chevron USA Production Co. which involves cutting the work force 28 percent, from 8,100 to 5,800.

When the restructuring in Midland is complete by Sept. 1, it will no longer be one of Chevron's five major business units, but will be divided into two smaller profit centers. The North Permian Basin Profit Center will comprise the Westbrook Field and New Mexico production, while the South Permian Basin center will consist of the Goldsmith and McElroy fields.

The primary function of these profit centers will be to manage Chevron's oil and gas production, with responsibility for financial performance. There also will be a few exploration people to develop opportunities for evaluation, according to the company.

Chevron presently has five business units at Denver, Houston, New Orleans, Bakersfield and Midland. Denver will be closed; Midland reduced to two small profit centers and full business units maintained in Houston, New Orleans and Bakersfield. Fourteen profit centers will be created across the nation and will report to the three business units. At the same time, Chevron USA Production Co., headed by president Ray Galvin, will relocate to Houston.

Still at issue is the divestiture of oil- and gas-producing properties in the Permian Basin.

Herrin said the company has an "A" list of about 100 properties it will keep, and a "B" list of about the same amount it wants to sell.

Some of the properties on the "B" list are significant producers. Last year, Chevron put its Sacroc Unit interest in Scurry County on the market, and is still considering the feasibility of selling its Sandhills and North Ward Estes fields in Ward County.

"We have had one unsolicited offer on the Sandhills Field, which we negotiated on some. We have also considered selling the North Ward Estes because of its high operating costs, but have still not made a decision to sell it," Herrin said. He said the company was torn between selling or keeping the project, because it provided excellent cash flow and still had good reserves.

Chevron Chairman Ken Derr has said the present restructuring is to improve overall performance and competiveness, and to improve financial performance and reduce operating costs.

Herrin said many major oil companies were making drastic cuts and moving overseas because of lack of opportunity in the United States. "We produced 60 million barrels of oil in the Permian Basin last year, but we were successful in replacing only half of that production. It is not possible to replace reserves in this county, the major oil companies have been locked out of the Alaskan National Wildlife Refuge and promising offshore drilling areas in this country. We are being forced overseas."

The loss of 237 jobs in Midland has the potential to create a glut of homes in the Midland real estate market, but Realtor Joanne Langston said she doesn't expect that to happen. "If 237 jobs are at stake, only about half of them may leave the community, putting only 100 homes on the market. However, Midland has a very low inventory of homes now and could take that number without depressing home prices."

At the same time Langston said another major oil company would soon annouce that it was moving a substantial number of people into Midland. "It could be a wash as far as homes go," she said.

RIOTS: Violence spreads into San Bernadino

(From 1A)

A gang in Long Beach, a city south of Los Angeles, pulled two motorcyclists from their bikes Thursday night and robbed, beat and shot them. One died and the other was critically injured.

Vandals descended upon historic Hollywood Boulevard west of downtown, setting fire to at least one business.

Fire officials said 63 fires were burning at mid-evening.

Arizona Gov. Fife Symington said California Gov. Pete Wilson had asked him for National Guard equipment and told him: "It's out of control." Wilson declared a state of emergency and headed to Los Angeles from the capital, Sacramento.

Much of the city shut down. Bus service was halted, professional sporting events were postponed, thousands of businesses and schools were closed, and some flights were rerouted around columns of smoke. Santa Monica, to the west, closed its beaches.

Shoppers stocked up on batteries and candles, fearing power outages as night approached.

"Why tear down something you own? We all have to make a living here. I just don't understand it," said Miles Taylor, 49, a black man who has lived in South Central Los Angeles since 1965, when the Watts ghetto exploded in riots.

Police departments confirmed 19 deaths in Los Angeles, one in San Bernardino and one in Long Beach.

Most of the rioters were black, but whites, Asians and Hispanics took part in some of the violence.

By 9 p.m., firefighters had responded to 1,291 structure fires. Officials said they were too busy to compile damage estimates. Two firefighters were wounded by gunfire.

Police arrested six youths in suburban Compton and said they may have been part of a youth gang that was trying to torch 10 buildings an hour. "To them, it's a free-for-all," said California Highway Patrol Lt. Bud Shields.

Near downtown, a security guard was fatally shot in a gun battle with looters outside a store.

More than 100 Korean-owned stores were burned, looted or robbed. Racial tensions between blacks and Korean-Americans have seethed for several years.

About 1,000 National Guard soldiers armed with M-16 rifles and pistols were on the streets by mid-evening and another 1,000 were preparing to go to troubled areas, to patrol and protect firefighters, said Lt. Stanley Zezotarski, a Guard spokesman.

Wilson ordered the deployment of 2,000 more, and hundreds of Highway Patrol officers were flown in from Northern California.

Demonstrations were held in cities across the nation to protest the acquittal of the four police officers whose beating of King was captured on videotape by an amateur photographer.

The protests turned violent in Atlanta, where black youths smashed windows and attacked a few whites. In San Francisco, demonstrators blocked the Bay Bridge and major highways, smashed windows and looted shops. Hundreds were arrested and the mayor declared a state of emergency and imposed a curfew.

President Bush denounced the violence and called it "tragic for our country."

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley announced restrictions on the sale of ammunition and gasoline. "We cannot and we will not tolerate any violence as a means to express anger," Bradley said.

The adjoining city of Inglewood also declared an emergency and asked for National Guardsmen.

Ten miles from downtown Los Angeles, helmeted police converged to disperse hundreds of people outside a blazing South Central Los Angeles shopping center pillaged by looters.

Thieves packed cars with food from markets, then waved in glee at news helicopters hovering overhead. They also stole everything from food to shoes, car parts and a washing machine.

"It's not stealing. The jury did us wrong," said a woman loading purloined goods into her car, who didn't give her name.

Fire Chief Donald Manning and police Chief Daryl F. Gates grimly conceded that their forces were overwhelmed.

"We had numerous occasions when there were attempts to kill firefighters. They tried to kill them with axes. They tried to kill them with gunshots," Manning said.

Critics complained that police and firefighters waited roughly two hours to respond after the rioting began Wednesday evening. Gates didn't deny it.

"Quite frankly, we were overwhelmed," Gates said. "I wish we had responded more quickly, but we could not."

The predominantly black South Central section was hardest hit. But mobs also rampaged in the mostly non-residential downtown area, attacking police headquarters and City Hall. Smaller blazes broke out in the city's mostly white Fairfax and Westwood sections and several largely white San Fernando Valley communities.

Rioters torched the Compton Center Mall to the south, engulfing a department store in flames. Some stores closed in Beverly Hills.

PROTESTS: S.F. declares state of emergency

ful. But there were notable exceptions.

A state of emergency was declared in San Francisco after demonstrators became rioters, looting stores and setting fires downtown. Mayor Frank Jordan imposed a curfew until 6 a.m.

In Atlanta, young blacks left a peaceful demonstration at City Hall and attacked whites at a downtown subway station. Windows were smashed and passersby were beaten. A shopping and entertainment complex was ransacked, bus service to downtown was suspended and police made numerous arrests.

"This is how Rodney King felt," rioters yelled as they stomped on a white man and ripped off his shirt.

About 15 blacks beat a white newspaper photographer and a white woman who had driven past in her car. Another white woman was beaten and kicked on the steps of a state office building. About 100 young black protesters hurled rocks at buildings and cars. Twenty people were hurt, at least one seriously, hospital officials said.

In Northern California, several hundred demonstrators were arrested after marching from the campus of the University of California at Berkeley across the Bay Bridge to San Francisco, briefly blocking access to Interstate 80, a key commuter route.

And protesters in San Francisco blocked the northbound lanes of Interstate 280, another commuter route, causing traffic jams.

Later in San Francisco, about 1,000 protesters converged on a state building, then broke into smaller bands that marauded through downtown, setting fire to garbage cans, overturning cars and breaking store windows.

The Bay Area Rapid Transit system closed four stations in San Francisco. Rioters also smashed windows in San Jose.

Two students were arrested for fighting during a demonstration at a high school in Odenton, Md., where about 75 students protested by refusing to go to class.

Fights erupted between black and white students at a Tennessee high school. And three white students were beaten up by black students at a Dallas high school.

Cleveland police arrested a man who disrupted a peaceful rally by twice driving by in a van while waving a flag showing a swastika. Part of the crowd chased the van, but it sped away in the wrong lane of a road.

And in Madison, Wis., someone shattered the windshields of 34 police squad cars parked at a garage. A note at the scene said "Justice for King" and "All pigs must die."

Few court decisions have prompted such nationwide outpourings. Those denouncing Wednesday's verdict included black leaders, police chiefs, civil libertarians and ordinary citizens, all of whom said what they saw on video didn't square with the jury's decision to exonerate the white officers.

"This reminds me of the Dred Scott decision of 1857, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that black people have no rights that white people are bound to respect," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Atlanta.

■ More coverage/12C

Arthur A. Fletcher, chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, said he was was eating dinner when he heard the verdict.

"I picked up my plate and slammed it against the wall," Fletcher said. "I was just trembling."

Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was among many black leaders urging calm.

"Let's destroy this system by our votes, not by burning down houses," Hooks said at NAACP headquarters in Baltimore.

Warren Christopher, who headed a civilian commission that investigated the Los Angeles Police Department, urged residents to channel their frustration into support for police reform.

PROBE: U.S. agents begin criminal investigation

(From 1A)

"There are two different sovereigns, and so there is no issue of double jeopardy here," Barr explained. "What we are looking at is whether there was intentional infliction of excessive force, which may constitute a violation of the civil rights laws. And so we are not bound by any of the state proceedings in that inquiry."

The Los Angeles policemen could be charged under federal statutes that prohibit a conspiracy to deprive someone of their constitutional rights and prohibit the use of law-enforcement authority to deprive someone of their constitutional rights.

In the past four years, the Justice Department has a 75 percent conviction rate in bringing such charges against 123 law enforcement officers for police-brutality, Barr said. Most of these policemen had not been convicted in state trials.

Barr said the Justice Department had begun an investigation soon after the videotape of King being beaten was shown on television newscasts. Then it put the probe on hold. "As is our established practice in such cases," Barr said, "We deferred action while the state completed its proceedings."

The long dormant probe nov. is moving ahead at an speeded-up pace, he said.

Federal civil rights laws have been used since the 1960s to remedy injustices in state courts. During the civil rights movement, the federal statutes were used in the South to prosecute white defendants who had been acquitted by all-white juries in state courts of crimes against blacks.

In the Capital, civil rights leaders also asked for federal financial help for the riot-ravaged neighborhoods and their residents.

"Even when the Justice Department moves on prosecuting the police, if it gets to that stage, that does not deal with the alienation and pain that we're now seeing manifesting itself in the streets of Los Angeles," Jesse Jackson said. "That's why the president must offer a corrective measure other than riot gear."

Jackson and Rep. Waters, whose district is in Los Angeles, met with Barr before Barr met with Bush.

"Los Angeles is in flames, and this country is at risk," warned Rep. Waters. "Many other cities could go the way that Los Angeles went last night unless the president is willing to step in and take some strong action in terms of letting people know he cares about this issue ... and that he wants to do something about injustice in this country."

Speaking to Ohio broadcasters in Columbus in the afternoon, Bush said federal agencies would help small businesses "wiped out by the wanton destruction" of the Los Angeles riots.

He said anger over the verdict did not justify the rioting.

"Yes, in some places in America, there is regrettably a cycle of poverty and despair," he said. "But if the system perpetuates this cycle, then we've got to change the system."

PRAYERS: Midlanders gather being destroyed in '65, I looked at that last night and tears rolled down my face," L.S. Littlejohn said. "Sure, there were those who were hurt by the decision, but there were others who took advantage of what was going on — opportunists."

Others called for unity among the people.

"It's essential to be together because somewhere it says one nation, one God and either someone is lying or you all need to open the church doors a little wider," Victor Hollins said. "Because what is going on 1,500 miles away will filter down to here if we don't do something."

The Rev. Michael DeVaughn delivered a boisterous closing speech asking the crowd to keep up the fight against racism, while blasting the system that fosters it.

"Our concern is great and runs deep. We stand today in the utmost solidarity with our brothers and sisters in L.A.," he said. "The courts have never been kind to black people, especially black males. It all started with Dred Scott, when the courts ruled he was not a person ... and didn't pursue the case. Even now, blacks are subject to harsher prison sentences."

He then cited an example of an Asian store owner who received a six-month sentence for shooting a black man.

"The system abuses us, it alienates us and now some of us are frightened by it," he said. "... It even outraged the 'pharoah' George Bush."

"There are no instant solutions to racism. Something must unite us together. We must keep up the fight," DeVaughn said.

The crowd joined hands and prayed as the revival ended.

South African judge sentences convicted police captain to death, officers to jail

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A white police captain convicted of murdering 11 blacks was sentenced to death Thursday and four black colleagues were sentenced to 15 years each in prison.

It marked the first time a group of police officers were convicted of a mass killing. The African National Congress said the case proved its allegations that security forces instigate violence in black townships.

Spectators packed the courtroom during the trial and about 100 people gathered outside Pietermaritzburg Supreme Court for the sentencing.

The five were convicted last week.

Judge Andrew Wilson sentenced Capt. Brian Mitchell to death and constables Dumisane Ndwalane, Kehla Ngubane, Thabo Sikhosana and Marshall Khambule to prison for the Dec. 3, 1988, massacre of 11 black funeral mourners in Trust Feed, near Pietermaritzburg in Natal Province.

The judge said Mitchell, the officer in charge, showed a "completely cold-blooded approach" to the massacre and "made no attempt to ascertain how many people were shot or injured."

President F.W. de Klerk suspended executions in South Africa two years ago, but judges can still hand out death sentences. Mitchell's attorney said his client would appeal.

There was no immediate word on whether the others could appeal or whether any appeals would be filed.

The case led to renewed debate about the role of security forces in township violence that has claimed more than 11,000 lives since 1984.

Police reported four more deaths Thursday in townships near Johannesburg and said attackers fired on train commuters in Soweto. Hospital officials said 11 people were injured.

Most of the violence has been blamed on a power struggle between the ANC and the rival Inkatha Freedom Party, the two leading black organizations. But the ANC has long accused security forces of helping Inkatha and launching attacks to undermine the black opposition movement.

In the Trust Feed case, prosecutors and witnesses said an Inkatha official asked police to help eliminate political rivals. They said police agreed and staged a night raid, fatally shooting 11 people and wounding eight. The bodies of the dead were mutilated.

"This case shows the police have a culpability in the violence," ANC spokeswoman Gill Marcus said.

Police commanders say the force is impartial and called the case an isolated incident.

Wilson last week asked for an inquiry to determine if senior police officers attempted a cover-up in the massacre.

Sierra Leone military overthrows government

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Mutinous troops in Sierra Leone overthrew President Joseph Momoh and said Thursday that they had set up a new government. Momoh was reported to have fled to Guinea.

There were no reports of deaths, though reporters saw wounded soldiers. The coup leaders declared a dusk-to-dawn curfew and warned violators would be shot.

"The patriotic officers and men of the Sierra Leone armed forces have overthrown the regime of President Momoh," the coup leaders were quoted as saying Thursday in a private radio broadcast.

"We are now in full control of the situation and the former President Momoh is now in hiding," they said in the message read by Capt. Valentine Strasser-King and reported by the British Foreign Office.

Diplomats reported from Freetown later in the day that military officers had formed a National Provisional Defense Council.

The only council member identified, Lt. Col. Yahya Kanu, told the British Broadcasting Corp. that the soldiers favored a return to democracy in the former British colony.

Momoh, in power since 1985, was ousted the same day a West African peacekeeping force began deploying in Liberia. It was Momoh's support for the peacekeepers that caused Liberia's 2-year-old war to spill over into Sierra Leone, which in turn led to his downfall.

Liberian rebel leader Charles Taylor invaded Sierra Leone last year to punish Momoh for backing the West African force, which had prevented Taylor from becoming president of Liberia.

Taylor, backed by some of Momoh's opponents, seized several towns in Sierra Leone, forcing Momoh to send troops to retake the towns.

Report: Kazakhstan warheads land in Iran

LONDON (AP) — Iran has obtained at least two nuclear warheads that had been reported missing from Kazakhstan, The European newspaper said Thursday.

The article, based on a secret report from the Russian Foreign Intelligence Agency, again raises questions about whether the successors to the Soviet Union will be able to control their most dangerous weapons.

The European did not say how it had obtained the intelligence report. It quoted the report as saying several nuclear warheads vanished from the Semipalatinsk nuclear test site in Kazakhstan, which the republic's president, Nursultan Nazarbayev, closed in early 1992.

The European said some intelligence sources believe Nazarbayev was behind the secret nuclear weapons transfer to Iran, trading warheads for oil or hard cash.

Iranian Industry Minister Mohammad Reza Nematzadeh said from Brussels on Thursday that while Iran wants to help rebuild the economy of the ex-Soviet republics, it was "nonsense" to claim it had bought the nuclear warheads.

"Iran cannot compete with big nuclear powers," he said. "Therefore, it is not interested in acquiring nuclear weapons."

In Washington, U.S. intelligence officials have said they have no confirmation of the Russian report, which has surfaced repeatedly since last year.

Two of the nuclear weapons were smuggled across the border from Kazakhstan into Iran last year and now are under the control of Reza Amrollahi, chief of the Iranian Organization for Atomic Energy, according to The European.

It said the Russian report, recently sent to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, disclosed that a third nuclear weapon that disappeared has not been traced but is believed to be in the Middle East.

The European said it is "almost certain" the missing warheads are nuclear shells, which are relatively small and can be easily moved in an ordinary vehicle.

Jewish teens march to commemorate Holocaust

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — More than 5,000 Jewish teenagers from 42 countries on Thursday traced the footsteps of their relatives murdered by the Nazis at the Auschwitz and Birkenau gas chambers.

The marchers, all dressed in blue windbreakers emblazoned with the Star of David, walked the two miles from Auschwitz to Birkenau in silence.

The march, in light rain under overcast skies, began behind the Auschwitz gates renowned for their German inscription "Arbeit Macht Frei" — "Work Will Make You Free."

It ended at the ruins of gas chamber No. 2 at Birkenau, a death machine where at least 1.3 million people were murdered, 90 percent of them Jews, according to researchers.

At what remains of the four gas chambers, a young child played a Yiddish melody on a violin — "My Town Is Burning" — and about a dozen youngsters read the names of Holocaust victims from various countries.

"The memories of the past are also the dangers of the future," said Abraham Hirshsohn, chairman of the committee that organized the march. "Anti-Semitism did not end in Auschwitz, and it still exists everywhere. We are here to remember, to remind, to alert and to deter."

Hundreds of the marchers dispersed over the desolate area, among the remains of the camp huts, to bury wooden plaques inscribed with the names of dead relatives.

Flash fire

A fire raced through a shanytown area of the Tepito neighborhood of Mexico City Thursday afternoon and destroyed half a city block. Witnesses at the scene reported seeing at least three people injured and taken away in ambulances. The area was made up of squatters living in homes made of plywood and cardboard. Smoke from the blaze could be seen for miles across the city.

Chief U.S. negotiator opposes greenhouse gas emissions limits

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The chief U.S. negotiator at U.N. talks on global warming said Thursday that reductions in greenhouse gas emissions could mean profits for U.S. businesses. But he said the government will continue to oppose any emissions limits.

Environmentalists say the refusal of the United States to commit to greenhouse gas reductions could lead many developing countries to abandon other environmental agreements being prepared for the U.N. Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in June.

"There are, among other things, commercial opportunities" in cutting emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases, said Robert Reinstein of the U.S. State Department.

"There is an opportunity here to find win-win approaches to some of the world's problems," he said at a press briefing Thursday.

Reinstein made his remarks just before heading to the United Nations for the opening of the final round of global warming negotiations before the Earth Summit.

Environmentalists have criticized the United States for refusing to accept a European proposal to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000.

Reinstein distributed copies of a U.S. government analysis released last week that showed the United States could easily meet that goal simply by continuing energy-conservation and anti-pollution efforts already under way.

Careful deliberation is required, he said, because "the activities involved here are at the heart of the economy of everybody."

Gorbachev offers prescription for America

By Bryan Brumley
Associated Press writer

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, preparing for a U.S. tour, said Thursday the United States should give up being the world's "policeman" and focus on building democracies around the globe.

Gorbachev, interviewed by The Associated Press at the offices of the think tank he founded, also said Boris Yeltsin has pushed Russia too quickly toward reform and risks a social explosion.

The 61-year old Gorbachev was relaxed, rested and energetic four months after he resigned as president of the Soviet Union, following the failed coup last August and the collapse of the central government in December.

He said he has no plans to return to politics but sees his "duty in supporting reforms as an individual. Sometimes I may criticize."

Although he generally endorsed Presidents Bush and Yeltsin, he chided both, Bush for acting too slowly to support reforms in the former Soviet republics, and Yeltsin for pushing domestic reforms too quickly.

Without mentioning Bush by name, Gorbachev said the U.S. government "has to be reproached." Billions of dollars were spent waging the Gulf War, he said, but money has been harder to find "to support democratic changes which will create a new world for 100, 200 years ahead. . . . It is narrow-minded thinking, and I cannot understand it."

He spoke in a sparsely furnished office at the think tank he started upon leaving office. The walls were bare of any memorabilia from his tenure in the Kremlin.

Gorbachev rejected "the proposal that America should become the policeman, teacher, or prosecutor or instructor" to the world. "America will stand to lose by that."

Some U.S. politicians propose that "America should again try to lead the world in this murky time. I think this claim has an aroma of unrealism about it, of utopia."

At one time, he said, U.S. leadership "meant the nuclear umbrella. . . . It gave the United States officially the right to defend those poor people who might be attacked by the Soviet Union. It is not so anymore."

"I am in favor of a new role for America, a constructive and democratic role and a continued contribution to building new international relations. . . . Nothing can happen . . . without America. Its role could even be greater," he said.

Gorbachev said he would discuss the United States' role further in a speech May 6 at Fulton, Mo., where Winston Churchill delivered his "Iron Curtain" speech in 1946. He begins his two-week visit on Saturday.

Although the Russian economy seems to have collapsed, "we have not yet reached the bottom, the lowest point. We are coming to it now," he said.

Tiananmen demonstration

One of seven Western European labor activists, right, demonstrating in Beijing's Tiananmen Square has his banner torn away from him by Chinese police Thursday. The group was calling for free labor unions in China and timed its protest a day before May Day, which is celebrated in China and many socialist countries as a day to honor workers. Police detained the protesters and appeared to be holding them incommunicado before expelling them.

Gunmen slay foreigners in Angola

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Gunmen using military-style weapons shot and killed a French oil industry employee, bringing to 10 the number of foreigners slain in Angola in less than two weeks, police said Thursday.

Police did not identify the victim, whose body was found in a Luanda suburb. The victim had been shot with an AK-47 assault rifle.

"All these killings have a strong political connotation," said Luanda police superintendent Gaspar da Silva. "The killers of these foreigners have the main objective of destabilizing the country in the weeks before the visit of the pope to Angola." Pope John Paul II is scheduled to visit on June 4.

On Monday, a Lebanese man was killed, and seven Portuguese were slain over the weekend on a highway 80 miles south of the capital. The dead included three children and well-known rally driver Brito da Silva Rodrigues.

A 72-year-old Portuguese priest was killed a week earlier.

Angola is emerging from a 16-year civil war that followed its independence from Portugal.

EXPERIENCED Leadership For Midland

"As Mayor, I pledge..."

- No increase in taxes
- Hold the line on spending
- No backroom deals
- Greater accessibility
- More citizen input
- More public meetings
- Reorganize City government

For the past three years J.D. Faircloth has consistently worked to hold the line on taxes, voted against two budgets, and voted against more spending items than anyone else on the Council. He voted against the half-million dollar parking lot purchase.

We can't afford inexperienced leadership during these critical times.

Elect J.D. Faircloth your next Mayor.

House approves bill allowing abortion counseling in federally funded clinics

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The old battle lines in the abortion debate were renewed on Thursday as the House of Representatives approved legislation repealing the federal rule against abortion counseling in federally financed family planning clinics.

Abortion-rights supporters prevailed in the 268-150 vote, but they fell short of the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a promised presidential veto.

Last year Congress also passed legislation overturning the "gag" rule, which was adopted during the Reagan administration, but it was vetoed by President Bush, and an attempted override failed by 12 votes.

The vote on the gag rule came on an amendment on a measure authorizing $195 million in family planning money, as well as financing for counseling and training, to about 4,000 clinics that serve about four million low-income women around the country.

The gag rule, which was upheld by a 5-4 vote of the Supreme Court in 1991, prohibits the staff of family planning clinics from telling clients about the availability of abortion services or referring them to doctors, hospitals or clinics that provide abortions.

The National Right to Life Committee issued a statement immediately after the vote saying a veto would be sustained. "President Bush's veto will insure that tax funds don't go to agencies that promote abortion as a method of birth control," Douglas Johnson, the group's legislative director, said in a statement sent to news organizations.

In another statement, Kate Michelman, president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, underlined the political implications of the abortion debate in an election year, saying, "American voters are watching to see whether George Bush will continue to allow government to interfere in the free speech of medical personnel by vetoing this measure."

Planned Parenthood affiliates, which include 900 clinics nationwide, have been warned by their national leaders they could lose their affiliation if they fail to inform pregnant women of the full range of options open to them, including abortion.

The House debate followed familiar choreography, with two Republicans, Henry J. Hyde of Illinois and Christopher H. Smith of New Jersey, leading the anti-abortion arguments against the legislation, which was offered by Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif. But perhaps the most interesting part of the legislative minuet was an amendment that was not offered.

Navy says pilots assaulted women

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A Navy investigation into sexual abuse at a convention of naval aviators last September has found that dozens of women, rather than the five or so who initially filed complaints, were assaulted there.

Further, the investigators have been able to identify only two suspects despite evidence that scores of officers took part in the assaults. The investigators attribute that outcome of their inquiry to the refusal of many pilots, some with senior rank, to cooperate with them.

In two reports made public Thursday — one by the Navy's inspector general, the other by the Naval Investigative Service Command — the investigators described a rowdy, drunken scene in which 14 female officers and 12 civilian women, including one minor, were accosted by dozens of mostly junior Navy officers at the convention, held in Las Vegas, Nev., by the Tailhook Association, a private naval organization.

In addition, many other women were assaulted but left the convention without being identified, the Navy said.

During the three-day event, investigators said, Navy and Marine Corps pilots formed gantlets in the narrow hallways of the hotel, the Las Vegas Hilton, and shoved terrified women down the line, grabbing at their breasts and buttocks and ripping at their clothes.

Investigators said the men used hand and verbal signals to identify which women to assault. The hotel suffered $23,000 in dam

More than 1,500 offic and civilians who attended the convention were interviewed, but they were able to identify only two suspects, largely because investigators said they were stonewalled by the insular brethren of naval fighter pilots.

"A common thread running through the overwhelming majority of interviews was 'What's the big deal?' " the inspector general's report said. "There is still little understanding of the nature, severity and number of assaults which occurred involving female civilians and officers."

Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett 3rd this week angrily denounced the attitudes revealed in the investigations and in a memorandum ordered the ordered the Marine Corps commandant, Gen. Carl Mundy Jr., and the chief of naval operations, Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, to notify their field commanders to put their charges on notice that "we will not condone sexual harassment in any form, or tolerate those who permit it to exist."

Rear Adm. Brent Baker, the chief Navy spokesman, said in an interview that field commanders would soon begin military equivalent of grand-jury proceedings for the two suspects, as well as nine other officers under suspicion, including a captain, to assess evidence for possible courts-martial or administrative punishment.

Senior Navy officials said they were deeply troubled by the lack of cooperation by Navy and Marine pilots. The incident reveals an impotency on the part of the Navy's leadership to displace the entrenched stereotypes of the aviation world with a "zero tolerance" policy that since Feb. 5 has ordered the dismissal of a Navy officer or sailor found guilty of sexual harassment.

As a result of the Las Vegas episode, the Navy last October severed all ties to the Tailhook Association.

Missing Exxon executive remains mystery to police

Reso

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. — The disappearance of the president of Exxon International, Sidney J. Reso, remained a mystery Thursday, and authorities refused to discuss the status of their investigation.

Throughout the day, there was a flurry of activity outside Reso's house. Reso left for work at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday but never arrived at his office in Florham Park, a 15-to-20-minute drive from here. His car was found facing the road at the foot of the 250-foot driveway, the engine idling and the driver's door open.

Telephone company trucks arrived in late morning, and laborers, overseen by supervisors in white helmets and shirts and ties, spent several hours working on telephone lines outside the Reso home and on a pole a few hundred yards away.

The head of the investigation, W. Michael Murphy, Morris County prosecutor, declined to talk about the work on the telephone lines or on any other aspect of the investigation, which his office is conducting with the FBI, local and state police, and the Corporate Security Division of Exxon International.

"At the present time, the investigation is being classified as a missing-persons matter," Murphy said in a brief statement issued by his office at about 5 p.m.

John F. Dempsey, deputy chief of investigation for the prosecutor, refused to elaborate on the statement or to say whether any ransom demands or any communications about Reso's whereabouts had been received during the day. "We're not going to take any questions," Dempsey said. "We have nothing new to add to the investigation."

Reso, a vice president of Exxon Corp., is president and a member of the management committee of Exxon Company International. He has worked for Exxon since 1957 in various assignments in the United States, Australia and London. He has been president of Exxon Company International since 1988. The division is responsible for Exxon's oil and gas operations outside North America.

About two dozen cars, including several unmarked police cars with radio antennas on their trunks, were parked throughout the day outside the Reso home, which is at the end of a cul-de-sac with only three other homes nearby, all set amid woods. In midafternoon, about a dozen men walked down the side yard of the home, apparently as part of a search, and then returned to their parked cars about a half-hour later.

"Usually, the only cars you see are real-estate agents'," said Dannette Merchant, who has lived in the neighborhood for two years.

She said she and her husband, a physician, had never met the Resos, adding that this wasn't surprising. "A lot of people are corporate executives," she said. "They travel a lot or they work long hours. When they get home, they want to relax. They don't want to socialize. It's all very private."

Mrs. Merchant learned of the disappearance the way many of her neighbors had: through the FBI agents who swarmed into the neighborhood on Wednesday and interviewed as many people as they could.

On Thursday residents expressed some concern for their own safety in an area that combines the comforts and trappings of an upper-class suburb with the isolation of rural areas.

Referring to the possibility that Reso was kidnapped, a woman who refused to give her name said: "If they can do it to him, they can do it to us."

A neighbor across the street, Janet V. Boni, said the police had asked her not to say anything about the case. Interviewed by phone, she said she didn't know very much about the Resos or the case. "They're busy people," she said of Reso and his wife, Patricia. "And our children are not at the ages that we meet people that way any more."

She said that neither her family nor her home had become a headquarters for the investigation but that her life had changed in small ways since the police blocked off normal access to her end of the street.

Last Cosby Show dances off

NEW YORK (AP) — After eight years on NBC in the nation's most-watched sitcom, Bill Cosby didn't walk off the set of the last "Cosby Show" Thursday. He danced off.

More about that later, though. Here's what happened if you missed the series' final episode, titled, "And So, We Commence:"

The Huxtable family prepares to celebrate the college graduation of their only son, Theo (Malcolm Jamal-Warner). His father, Cliff (Cosby), promises not to get carried away and invite too many guests to the ceremony.

Still, Theo has to scramble to get enough tickets for unexpected guests. At the same time, Olivia (Raven-Symone), is preparing to join Martin and Denise in their new home in Singapore.

While Cliff watches the graduation ceremony from a grandstand, he reminisces about the young Theo, when the boy was struggling in school.

It was a nifty flashback, for when Theo asks that his parents be less demanding "and love me anyway because I'm you're son," father Huxtable replies, "Theo, that's the dumbest thing I've ever heard in my life!

"I'm telling you you're going to try as hard as you can. Because I said so! I brought you into this world and I'm going to take you out! ... I just want you to do the best you can. That's all."

After the graduation, Cliff and his wife, Clair (Phylicia Rashad), are finally left alone in their home. He takes her in his arms and they dance off camera.

The final camera shot "breaks the fourth wall," shooting from the set, past Cosby and Rashad, to include the applauding studio audience while Cosby and Rashad walk past them, and out the stage door.

Vote for politicos interested in all

In elections Saturday Midland voters will be choosing top elected officials who'll guide the city, Midland Independent School District, Midland County Hospital District and Midland College during coming years. The elections are vitally important and should get the serious attention of all voters who have not already cast their ballots.

Various factors including the mood against incumbents and concern over escalating taxes have been addressed recently, but the ONLY significant issue in these elections is choosing the candidates who have the potential to do the best job for ALL the residents of Midland: all races, all income levels, all backgrounds, even all special interests. Single-member districts serve a valuable, select purpose in some regards, but the voters have shown over and over again that they want elected representatives who will work for the good of the city as a whole and all its residents as a group. With that as the guiding factor, all the city's residents are the beneficiaries of good government.

Voters have had ample opportunity to make themselves aware of the various candidates and how they propose to provide leadership for their respective governing body. Saturday will be the last chance in this particular election for voters to cast their ballots. They should do so to fulfill their civic duty to the community.

Below is a recapitulation of the Reporter-Telegram's recommendations in each of the contested races:

CITY ELECTION

Mayor: J.D. Faircloth. He has the experience to guide the city through hard times.

City Council, District 3: L.D. "Buddy" Sipes Jr. He welcomes new ideas and believes community service is a civic duty.

City Council, District 4: Tom Johnston. A strong fiscal conservative, Johnston's voice is needed on the council.

MIDLAND COLLEGE

College Trustee, Place 1: Steve Kiser. His experience on the board will be important during time of financial cutbacks.

College Trustee, Place 2: Joann Foster. Her civic background and knowledge of how boards operate will allow her to be effective in a brief time.

SCHOOL DISTRICT

Trustee, District 7: Michael Dobey. His interest in the school district — and particularly the students — will make him an effective board member.

HOSPITAL DISTRICT

Board Member, District 7: Charles Coffman. Coffman sees the role of a board member as a liaison between the taxpayer and the hospital administration. He would seek quality health care for all at a fair price.

Blast cites inaction danger

It will probably be a while before the cause of the sewer blasts that killed more than 200 people in Guadalajara Wednesday is determined. But it appears highly likely that, whatever the disaster's source, government inaction will prove to be a significant contributing factor.

In all cases, better monitoring by governmental agencies could have prevented the disasters. It is important to point this out because in Washington Vice President Dan Quayle and his Council on Competitiveness — with the blessing of President Bush — are seeking to reduce government regulation. What the White House seems to have forgotten is that most regulations were enacted not for the sake of regulation but to protect citizens from harm — physical, economic or otherwise.

History has shown that industrial accidents such as refinery explosions — with which we are intimately familiar in this area — are all too often the result of lax enforcement of regulations, not overregulation.

— The Houston Post

Don't cry for departing lawmakers

This is the last year veteran members of the House of Representatives can retire and keep for personal use the money left in their campaign war chests.

There are 161 representatives who qualify, and none could feather his nest more by quitting than the almighty House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., whose campaign coffers are bulging with $1.1 million.

However, Rostenkowski is staying, and so are others, such as local Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez. His re-election fund is nowhere near $1 million, but he could take his money and run.

Representatives are offended by the presumption that they would retire to take advantage of the loophole to keep campaign funds. But many are doing so.

Don't weep with those who shed tears at the end of a long career. Between the campaign booty and the fat pension, they will survive.

Today is Friday, May 1, the 122nd day of 1992. There are 244 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 1, 1898, Commodore George Dewey gave the famous command, "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley," as an American naval force destroyed a Spanish fleet in Manila Bay.

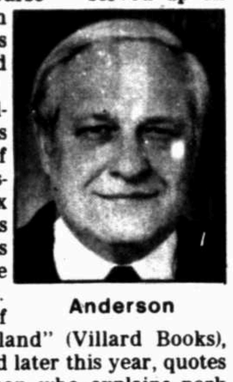

On this date:

In 1786, the opera "The Marriage of Figaro," by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, premiered in Vienna.

Bush, Byrd to tangle over pork barrel

WASHINGTON — Pork has become the main delicacy of political connoisseurs in Washington. It is not a side dish, but the main course — served up on sterling platters with parsley by politicians trolling for votes and contributions.

Anderson

The 1992 federal budget is layered with as much as $97 billion of pork. In each congressional district, the tax money of the many has been spent on the needs of a few to satisfy the re-election lust of one.

Brian Kelly, author of "Adventures in Porkland" (Villard Books), which will be published later this year, quotes one former congressman who explains pork this way: "Pork is money that a congressman or senator tries to get for his own district, but wouldn't dream of trying to get for anyone else's."

Or, as one Maryland professor defines it: "Pork is spending with a zip code attached to it."

Last month President Bush sent Congress a list of 68 wasteful pork-barrel projects that are costing taxpayers $3.6 billion. In the coming weeks, Washington is expected to erupt in a huge food fight over pork-barrel programs — pitting project against project, politician against politician.

Estimates by private economists show that for every $2 billion in waste and pork that is trimmed from the budget, $2,000 in tax relief would result for every family in Albuquerque, Buffalo, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Omaha, Peoria, Portland and San Antonio.

Congress is now embroiled over such weighty questions as funding celery and asparagus research, low-bush blueberries, the $200,000 Vidalia onion project, the $100,000 mechanical tomato harvester and the $100,000 blackbird preservation project. And, in the supreme irony, $100,000 for swine disease research.

Then there is the $50,000 for a grape entomologist, $100,000 for seafood promotion, $200,000 for the world soccer games and even $500,000 for the Syracuse Symphony.

At a time when the national debt is $4 trillion and interest payments on it are the fastest-growing expenditure of the federal budget — faster than education, faster than health care, faster than construction for new roads and bridges — frivolous spending adding up to billions remains one of Washington's perennial scandals.

A pork-barrel project that has turned into a metaphor for the whole mess is the "Lawrence Welk Museum," which was recently shelved after touching off a firestorm.

"And ah-one, and ah-two and ah-five hundred thousand dollars!" shouted Sylvio Conte, the late congressman from Massachusetts who delighted in deriding his colleagues for slipping strange spending items into many bills that became the law of the land. He was tweaking those responsible for a $500,000 grant to make a memorial out of Lawrence Welk's boyhood farm in Strasburg, N.D.

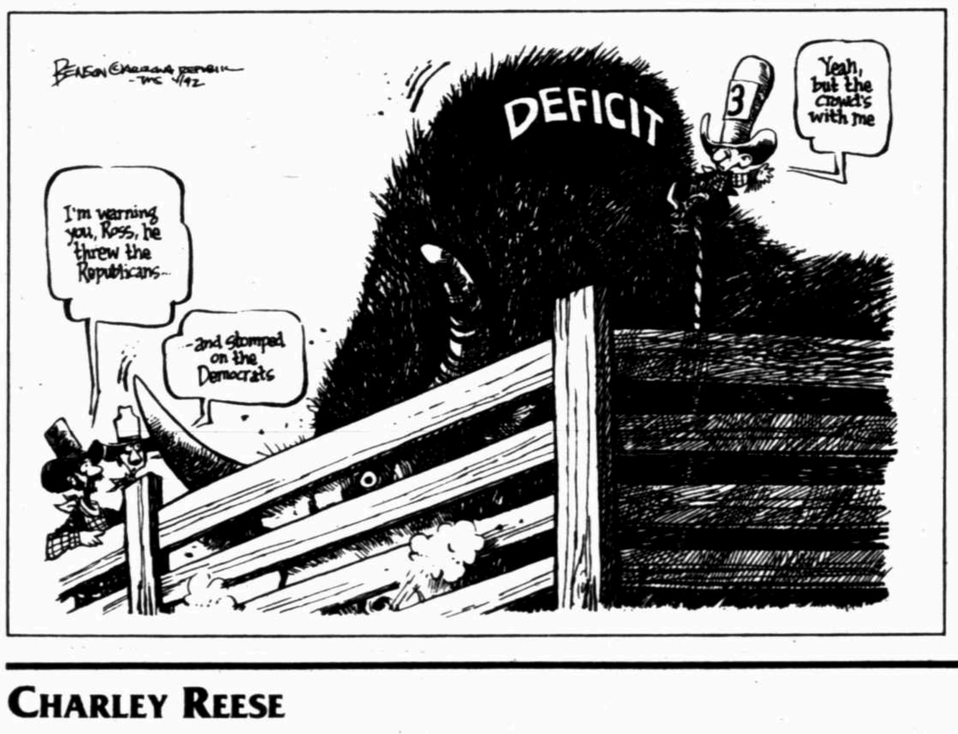

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the prince of pork, promised his constituents several years ago he would steer more than $1 billion in projects as appropriations chairman, and has more than delivered. Byrd nearly pulled off the ultimate pork coup by forcing the CIA to relocate chunks of its operations to West Virginia.

To be sure, the pork buffet in Washington contains endless entrees that are difficult to keep track of. As Congress and the White House wrangle over how to carve up the roast, Byrd has a plan to spread the pain if the White House tries to make a campaign issue out of pork-barrel spending.

In the coming months, Bush is expected to unload on more than 1,000 pork-barrel projects. He intends to use these to hammer Congress until it yields to his demand for the line-item veto.

The big question is, who will squeal first, Democrats or Republicans?

CHARLEY REESE

One-issue voters are easy prey for politicians

One-issue people are a bore and a bane to good government. It doesn't matter what their particular one issue is. A pox on 'em all.

Those who say they will choose a president based on his position on abortion, Israel or gun control, to name just three — whether for or against — have lost their perspective and set themselves up to be played for a sucker by cynical politicians.

Reese

The worst kind of politicians love single-issue voters. Such people are like food in a cafeteria. The politician can walk down the line and pick and choose for each election which combination is most likely to get him the most money and the most votes. He can buy any of them with two cliches and one platitude.

Once elected, such cynics make for bad government. They may or they may not keep their promises to their single-issue constituents. That will depend on whether or not it's expedient. President Bush used to be pro-choice and now he's against abortion. It wasn't the visit of a priest that changed his position. It was a visit from Ronald Reagan at the 1980 Republican National Convention.

The trouble with buying politicians is that you really can't buy them. You can only rent them and they will always break their lease with you if someone makes a better offer.

The political opportunist is as faithful as Tonto in that old joke. You remember it. The Lone Ranger and Tonto crest a hill to discover they are surrounded by 3,000 hostile Indians. The Lone Ranger says, "What can we do, my faithful companion?" Tonto replies, "What's this my-faithful-companion nonsense, white man?"

Many a single-issue voter, having plighted his affection, money and vote to a politician, has known betrayal but the experience never seems to teach him anything. He just goes on looking for another streetwalker.

The single-issue voter and the label-lover are the two best arguments against universal suffrage. At least those who sell their votes for a drink or a buckget something tangible. Single-issue and label-lover voters sell theirs for a line of bull.

To paraphrase Groucho Marx, "Just say the magic word and you get my vote." Well, even in these inflationary times, the cheapest commodity in a political campaign is the magic word.

Intelligent voters will prefer a person with convictions, even if they disagree with that person on some issues. A person driven by honest convictions is at least open to argument and persuasion. How can you persuade someone who has no convictions? Someone who doesn't really believe what he says anyway?

More important, a person with convictions is much more likely to be actually interested in governance, instead of in the salary and perks of office. The opportunists are really empty suits. They live during the campaigns and then hibernate in between.

One doesn't have to buy my humble arguments to see the bad results. You can just look around. When you consider what great strengths this country had in 1945 and look at the mess we're in today, you can easily see that we are probably one of the worst-governed countries in the world.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Perot's candidacy is enough to shiver a spine

Ross Perot, the greatest salesman I have ever met, sure does have people wrought up — alight with zeal to reform their country by electing him president.

But, pssst, I've got to tell you something. Most of the people who support Brother Perot seem not to know or even care greatly what he would do as president. They know they'd like it better than what they've got now: namely, confusion, drift and a general sense of purposelessness. Looking around at the Republican and Democratic alternatives to Brother Perot, one can see exactly what Perot supporters mean. On the other hand ...

Murchison

Who said the Age of Faith was the medieval era, the epoch of toilsome, dusty journeys to adore the fingernail paring of a saint? The Age of Faith is right now. Perot supporters don't really know what their Hercules would do to cleanse the Augean stables, for the sufficient reason that he hasn't told them with any specificity. Neither has he told them how he would do the things he hasn't told them he would do. Nor made plain how, if he did do the things he has in mind, whatever they are, it would conduce to the nation's good. Yet they believe.

I am not talking of the feeble-minded. The Perot ranks, sold on his candidacy or just-browsing-thanks, include smart, successful men and women, acute and adroit critics of the times in which they live. I rush to say so before they start throwing things at me for carping. I have been collecting conversations with these folk, some of whom are my friends. Some hold advanced college degrees. Many have met payrolls. All are keenly interested in politics. These aren't election day stay-at-homes, content to bitch and whine while baiting a hook at the fishing pond on election day. No, they vote — a point I haven't seen addressed in the national media. They take seriously the rights of citizenship.

So don't people of this sort care what their patron saint would do? Yes, they do. They just care in a different way. They care that the president Do Something: fish or cut bait, park it or drive it. The point, they say, is to tackle the country's problems, which they feel have been too long deferred. They get the feeling that Perot — a master, as I say, of the dark arts of salesmanship — would get in there and persuade and rouse and knock heads. He might do the right thing or the wrong thing. It would be something more than has happened for four years.

All this Peroticism reminds me of the talk one heard nearly 20 years ago, during Watergate, about oh-how-I-wish-we-had-Harry-Truman back. Not the real, scandal-tainted, Republican-baiting Truman, but the mythological one: tart, derriere-kicking, always putting the country above the easy and the expedient. (There was indeed some truth to the myth:) As for us prissy, fine-boned, tilt-nosed, canape-munching, Herman Hesse-reading media personalities, if we don't like it, we can just take a flying leap.

I insert at this fitting juncture the news — I haven't seen this in the media either — that the media best beware of subjecting Perot to Chinese water torture. Needless to say, he deserves extensive scrutiny. But blindside him, pile on him and guess whom the voters will rally around. Not the detested media.

That said, I must say to my brothers and sisters who venerate H. Ross Perot: Scrutiny of the candidate's capabilities and policies must come. It's not enough that a popular candidate wants to Do Something. Right things must be done. Realistic things. Some of what Ross has in mind may be fine. I am alarmed at other things. He thinks we can address economic problems by taxing the rich. Horsefeathers! Ross Perot's whole fortune wouldn't run the federal government a day. It sounds munificent to say, we-rich-folks-should-pay-more, but congressional Democrats define "rich" as people with $50,000 a year, which is these days plain-vanilla middle class. Perot exhibits no interest in unborn children. I've never heard this billionaire, who got rich on federal contracts, praise the operations of the free market. Ross Perot doesn't have a philosophy, he's a problem-solver. Which makes people say: Great, because we've got problems.

I am back to where I began. Fine, patriotic Americans are so mad they're ready to marry, politically, someone they barely know. Shiver along with me while we contemplate that one.

Car plows into crowd of children at O'Hare

CHICAGO (AP) — A car jumped the curb and plowed into a crowd of third-graders on a field trip at O'Hare International Airport on Thursday, killing a 9-year-old girl and injuring dozens of other people, authorities said.

Three child victims were injured critically.

The 87-year-old man driving the car told police he thought he hit the brakes but the car accelerated and he was unable to stop, said Sgt. Thomas Swayne.

The children had just gotten off two school buses between airport terminals at midday when the car ran onto the sidewalk where they were gathered, witnesses said.

"We had children hurt all over the sidewalk," said Fire Department Supervisor David Lozeau. "It was pure chaos."

Police said the driver, who had just dropped off his wife at the airport, was taken into custody for questioning.

More than a dozen ambulances were dispatched. While some children were loaded onto stretchers, others sat on the sidewalk waiting their turn for help.

Seventy-nine people were injured, officials said.

The children are students at Southeast Elementary School in Sycamore, 60 miles west of Chicago, and were visiting the airport for the day. The city set up a special phone line for parents trying to find their children.

Parent Becky Steczo said she received word that her 8-year-old daughter, Natalie, and husband, Larry, received only minor injuries.

"They were going to be able to go on the runway and see behind the scenes — what you usually don't get to see when you go to O'Hare," she said.

Nine-year-old Mike Moline, who suffered facial cuts and a bruised leg said he was thrown onto the hood of the car.

"I didn't really know I was hit 'til I was off the car, then I was just spinning around," he said. "I saw a real damaged car and a lot of people on the ground crying. I couldn't even get scared, it was so fast."

Peace talks end; Israelis, Arabs disagree on progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fifth round of Mideast peace talks ended Thursday with Israel proclaiming it the most productive yet but with the Arabs saying progress was slim.

Israel left with the Palestinians a proposal for municipal elections on the West Bank and in Gaza and an offer to take over the management of 14 hospitals in the territories.

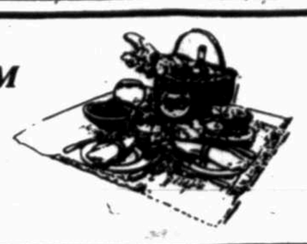

Syria, Lebanon and Jordan this week all were given Israeli proposals, as well, to consider before the next round is held in Rome at a date still to be set.

While the Israeli and Arab public assessments of what was accomplished over four days here differed, there was virtually no invective nor any threatened walkouts.

"We were very clear in our various presentations and in our discussions of our serious desire to establish peace with Israel," chief Syrian negotiator Muwaffak Allaf said.

Weeks ago Israel notified the State Department the delegation had to return home for two national holidays next week.

Health officials announce plan to fight TB

N.Y. Times News Service

Federal health officials Thursday announced a plan to combat the spread of a deadly form of tuberculosis, including stepping up programs to make sure patients take their medication.

The plan, by the United States Public Health Service, also calls for strengthening anti-tuberculosis programs in countries from which people frequently emigrate to the United States, and for tightening notification of state and local health departments about newly arrived infected aliens.

The plan calls on federal officials to develop new recommendations to advise states about possible laws and regulations to detain, quarantine and care for people who refuse to comply with standard measures of treatment.

The Public Health Service said it was seeking to develop ways for private and government organizations to pay for the hospital and out-patient care of people infected with tuberculosis, including measures to ensure they take all their medicine.

In reporting the plan, federal officials said they still believed they could meet the goal of eliminating tuberculosis from the United States by the year 2010. But that goal has been jeopardized by the emergence of strains of the tubercle bacterium that have become resistant to standard anti-tuberculosis drugs.

Drug-resistant strains have caused at least 17 outbreaks in the United States since 1976; of these, 13 were reported in 1990 and 1991. In the United States the problem is a particular concern because many people whose immune systems are weakened by infection with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, also have tuberculosis.

The incidence of drug-resistant tuberculosis is much higher in many other countries, and some cases in the United States have been diagnosed among immigrants.

Tuberculosis experts say drug-resistant tuberculosis strains have often developed when patients stop taking medication midway through their therapy.

Arctic ozone hole did not form, scientists say

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Despite earlier fears, an ozone hole did not form over the Arctic this winter, scientists said Thursday. But they said the threat would reappear each year because of man-made pollutants in the upper atmosphere.

Scientists said the record levels of chlorine and other ozone-depleting chemicals found over parts of Europe, Russia, Canada and the United States apparently were prevented from doing their worst by unusually warm winter air.

Using measurements taken by space satellites and aircraft, scientists with a NASA atmospheric study program said levels of protective ozone in the northern latitudes dipped approximately 20 percent below normal this winter.

"It is not an ozone hole," Dr. James G. Anderson of Harvard University, the study's chief scientist, said at a briefing. "Is it a significant loss of ozone? Yes it is."

Dr. Joe Waters of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said a rise in stratospheric temperatures in late January apparently eliminated polar stratospheric clouds filled with tiny ice crystals. These crystals promote high levels of the most potent ozone-destroying chemical, chlorine monoxide.

"This tells me that conditions in the upper atmosphere are in a very delicate balance," Waters said. "With so much chlorine in the stratosphere, a slight temperature difference can make an enormous difference in the potential for ozone depletion."

Ozone is a form of oxygen that protects the Earth from harmful ultraviolet radiation from the sun. Some scientists and environmentalists fear that depletion of atmospheric ozone as a result of human pollution will result in an increase of skin cancer, cataracts and impaired immune systems, as well as disruption of plant growth.

The layer of ozone between the altitudes of 9 and 31 miles is believed to be under attack by natural and man-made chemicals that drift up into the stratosphere.

In February, researchers taking part in NASA's Airborne Arctic Stratospheric Expedition said their satellite and aircraft readings showed alarmingly high levels of chlorine monoxide and bromine monoxide, the most potent ozone destroyers, over Europe, Asia and North America north of 50 degrees latitude.

Bush order aims to encourage states to sell public assets

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — President Bush on Thursday gave states and cities greater freedom to sell to private investors many public facilities built with federal help — including airports, bridges, roads and sewage treatment plants.

Bush said that in many cases, private companies can provide public services "more fairly and more efficiently" than governments.

■ More national news / 12C

The move was promoted as a revenue raiser for cash-starved states and communities. However, it was viewed warily by the National Governors' Association, the U.S. Conference of Mayors and others.

"We're somewhat skeptical of this thing," said Tom Cochran, executive director of the mayors' organization. Similarly, Rae Bond, public affairs director of the governors' association, said "This has not been on the governors' main agenda."

Airlines expressed concern that private ownership of airports would bring higher operating costs for the carriers. And Walter Shea, president of the AFL-CIO's Transportation Trades Department, complained, "For America's transportation workers, this call for privatization carries with it the frightening prospect that their jobs may soon be parceled out to the highest bidder."

Bush announced his action on an abbreviated trip to Ohio.

It was Bush's second trip to Columbus in just 11 days, underscoring the importance of the Midwestern industrial state in the presidential campaign.

The privatization announcement was the latest step in Bush's recent conversion to a campaign for deregulation, following a growth in federal red tape in the first three years of his administration.

In an executive order, Bush directed that states and local governements may be allowed to keep a larger share of the profits from the sale of facilities built with the help of federal funds. Traditionally, Washington has demanded a hefty share of the proceeds.

The order said assets that could be sold include — but are not limited to — roads, tunnels, bridges, electric plants, mass transit and rail facilities, airports, ports, waterways, water supply facilities, recycling and wastewater treatment facilities, solid waste disposal facilities, public housing, schools, prisons and hospitals.

"We hear complaints that America's infrastructure is crumbling and that states aren't putting enough money into expanding or repairing it," Bush said. "At the same time, many private companies want to invest in these projects. So our executive order will remove impediments to competitive enterprises buying infrastructure assets."

He said his initiative "could generate billions of dollars of new investment and millions of new jobs."

Frank Hodsoll, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, said the move would encourage states to sell public assets but would not require them to do so. He said the sales would result in more toll roads — but not on interstates — and more toll bridges and other facilities where consumers pay private companies.

Some state and local governments have expressed interest.

Massachusetts Gov. William Weld, a strong advocate of privatizing state services, is awarding private contracts to maintain state highways in Essex County as a pilot project. He also is closing several state hospitals for the mentally ill and mentally retarded, with much of the community-based care to be provided by private vendors.

Faircloth leads spending in race for mayor

■ Robynne Fuller is the low spender in the mayoral race, reporting $233 in expenditures.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

In the race for mayor of Midland, the candidates may be talking about similar issues, but they aren't spending similar amounts of money.

In fact, the top spender has campaigned with 32 times as much money as the low spender of the four candidates — although the amounts spent so far in the local election do not come near those reported in the recent Republican primary.

All city candidates have filed pre-election affadavits about spending with the city secretary's office at City Hall.

Low spender Robynne Fuller, a senior administrative clerk at Texas Instruments and founder of the Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, has put $233 into her campaign for the job. She collected $1,123 in contributions — the bulk of which were in-kind services and use of space, not money.

"I believe you make the most of what you have," Mrs. Fuller said. "You have to get out and meet people. If they know who you are, what you stand for, the money you spend doesn't matter that much."

By contrast, J.D. Faircloth, current at-large council member and mayor protem, has spent $7,646 aiming at the seat. That money has gone largely for advertising on yard signs, larger signs and in the newspaper. He listed $6,370 in contributions.

All city candidates have filed pre-election affadavits about spending with the city secretary's office at City Hall.

"I know mayoral candidates have spent a lot of money in the past," Faircloth said. "I'm trying to spend only what I can raise. But running a citywide campaign, you have to spend a little money to do it effectively."

Don Kyser, an independent investor, listed $2,200 in contributions and expenses of $1,647 mainly for signs and advertisements.

"It's just my nature," Kyser said, adding that he will not spend more than he raises. "I'm a pay-as-you-go man."

Restauranteur Michael Trost, with contributions of $1,408, listed $756 in expenses. His main advertising until this week had been yard signs.

"I'm trying to show some economic responsibility, getting maximum coverage for as little money as possible," Trost said. After this week, launching newspaper and television advertisements, he said his expenditures will climb, but probably won't go above $3,000.

District races also drew wide contrasts in spending.

For District 3, challenger Hugh White has spent $103 trying to defeat current seatholder Buddy Sipes. White listed contributions of $255, including a $100 gift from an anonymous donor.

Sipes, meanwhile, has spent $2,497 with contributions totalling $5,815.

In the District 4 race, Claudia Egan topped the spending with $2,269. She listed $2,359 in contributions to her campaign.

Tom Johston, the incumbent, listed the fewest expenses in the race — $128. His contributions totalled $390.

Challenger James Radtke listed no contributions, but claimed expenses of $214, according to affadavits.

Appraisal office mails out notices of property value

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Something special is in the mail today: notice of property values for taxation purposes.

They are not tax notices.

The computerized notices, 109,000 in all, are compliments of Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall of the Midland Central Appraisal District. They list appraised values of real estate, personal property and minerals throughout Midland County.

The idea, aside from forewarning taxpayers of probable 1992 taxes, is to give notice of property values to review.

Property owners who feel the values computed by Stegall's field appraisers are too high can contest the valuation.

"They (property owners) can't protest taxes," Stegall said. "All they protest are (property) values. If your values are right, the taxes are what they are."

Those property owners who suspect that the values are incorrect may visit with Stegall's staff at 4631 Andrews Highway "to see if we can get the values worked out," Stegall said. "If we can't, then they need to sign a written protest by June 1."

The written protest will get them an audience before the Appraisal Review Board in June where they can state their case, Stegall said.

If the protester and the board cannot reach an amicable agreement, then the protester may file

Jury acquits Lillian Smith in fraud trial

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A 49-year-old Midland woman was acquitted on three counts of bankruptcy fraud by an 11-person jury in Judge Lucius Bunton's U.S. District Court on Thursday.

Lillian Wallis Smith was found not guilty of concealing assets, making false oaths in connection to filing bankruptcy, nor making false statements to a government agency.

Jurors deliberated about two hours following testimony that began Wednesday afternoon and concluded about noon Thursday.

The prosecution had argued that Ms. Smith, who filed bankruptcy in March 1989 and was subsequently discharged from $311,000 in debts in June, had concealed personal assets beyond the $6,200 she declared.

Her attorney, David Greenhaw, maintained Ms. Smith did nothing wrong and that she had estimated assets as instructed by her bankruptcy attorney.

An instruction sheet used by Odessa bankruptcy attorney Glen Halsell directed clients to list possession values based on garage-sale prices, Greenhaw showed.

"They (jurors) just understood that she relied on her attorney's advice in filing her bankruptcy . . . I'm very confident that's why jurors found her not guilty," Greenhaw said.

Ms. Smith declined comment on the verdict on the advice of her attorney.

Ms. Smith was indicted and arrested on the charges in December following an investigation by the FBI.

Testimony for the prosecution indicated that a few months after the Chapter 7 bankruptcy was granted, Ms. Smith took out a homeowner's insurance policy listing thousands of dollars of possessions.

A few months after that, Ms. Smith reported to the sheriff's office that about $72,000 in jewelry — much of which she owned for several years — was stolen from her home, testimony showed.

That report subsequently led to the FBI investigation and a search of Ms. Smith's home that uncovered several paintings, pieces of jewelry, vases and two fur coats, testimony showed. Values of those

Teacher of the month stresses creativity, cooperation

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Cheryl Worley, the April Teacher of the Month, is surrounded by her fourth graders at Anson Jones Elementary School.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Paper cranes — folded into shape using the Japanese art origami — gently sway from mobiles in Cheryl Worley's classroom at Anson Jones Elementary School.

Her fourth graders made the cranes after they were inspired by a story Ms. Worley read concerning a little girl with leukemia who made as many cranes as she could from her hospital bed.

"There is an ancient proverb about making 1,000 cranes if you want your wish granted," Ms. Worley said.

The little girl died before she finished making 1,000 cranes, but fellow citizens finished the project and founded a memorial in her honor.

Ms. Worley said that the story was something that touched her fourth graders. Her style of teaching, "to focus on individual potential," also touched one her students, who wrote a letter nominating Ms. Worley for the honor of Teacher of the Month.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce selected the teacher as the April honoree on the basis of a letter written by Nikesha Bradford. Nikesha wrote "Miss Worley . . . is one of the best teachers I've ever had. If we ever get stuck on a problem she lets someone help us. She is just a special teacher."

Ms. Worley said she allows pupils to instruct each other using the method of "cooperative grouping."

"Each student has his or her own job in the group," she said. "One student may be the collector and get supplies. Another may be the supervisor."

She said the collaborative method works so well at times she has to "stop them from collaborating."

"It gets noisy," she said, laughing. "But, students can really help teach each other, especially with math. And they learn how to get along in a group."

The educator — who has been teaching fourth graders for three years, and has been with Midland Independent School District for five years — said she "always wanted to teach the fourth grade."

"It was my best school year. I had a teacher I just loved in the fourth grade," she said, "and lots of friends."

"The main reason I teach is to give children a safe place to learn," Ms. Worley said. "I want children to find out what they are good at, to find a niche in the class. That is more important to me than getting straight 'A's."

Some students have taken advantage of the opportunity to find a niche by using creative writing to write rap songs or scripts for plays.

"My perception of writing and creativity has really changed since I participated in the New Jersey Writing Project," she said. "Now teaching writing is more enjoyable. I even share some of my poems with the class."

She said she likes the company of fourth graders because they are sociable and independent. "And best of all, they still like their teacher."

But the teacher admits that she is also fond of her young charges. "They amaze me sometimes," she said. "One of them came up with a crane which flaps his wings when you pull its tail," she said, demonstrating the technique on a crane and beaming.

DEATHS

Kire Scott

Memorial services for Kire C. Scott are set for 2 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Ray Riddle officiating.

Mrs. Scott died Wednesday at a local hospital.

She was a former president of the Midland Garden Club and was a member of the Midland County Club and the First Presbyterian Church.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Fred A. "Scotty" Scott in 1985.

Survivors include: one son, Mike Scott of Houston; one daughter, Nancy (Mrs. Kirk) Weinert of Houston; two brothers, Tom Cruse of San Angelo and Marshal Cruse of San Antonio; two grandchildren, four nephews and one niece.

Memorials should be directed to a charity of choice.

Merrisa Covarrubias

LUBBOCK — Graveside services for Merrisa Laura Covarrubias, infant daughter of former Midlanders John and Martha Covarrubias of Lubbock, are set for 11 a.m. Saturday in Resthaven Memorial Park in Lubbock. The Rev. Curtis Halfmann of St. John Neumann Catholic Church will officiate the service, which is under the direction of Restahven Funeral Home.

She was stillborn at a Lubbock hospital Thursday.

Survivors include: her parents; her grandparents, Jesus and Amalia Garza of Midland and Andy and Mary Covarrubias of Lubbock; and her great-grandfather Jose Martinez.

items were disputed in court.

Greenhaw argued that estimates of possessions — which included for insurance purposes — were based on replacement value and asset values for bankruptcy reasons were based on garage-sale or liquidation worth.

During testimony, several discrepancies of Ms. Smith's finances were revealed leading assistant U.S. Attorney Jan Hartung to describe Ms. Smith as "a defendant who has a problem with truthfulness" during closing arguments.

In the Midland area, Ms. Smith has been known for starting the Midland-Odessa Earthquake Relief Effort for the Mexico City disaster in 1985, and her involvement in a Cancun Relief Fund for victims of Hurricane Gilbert in Cancun, Mexico in 1988.

Environmental contest names Midland student, class winners

Staff report

Winners in the "Power to Make A Difference" environmental contest proved that they have the ability to make the world a better place.

Three classes from Alamo, Goddard and San Jacinto Junior High Schools — and eight individual students — won awards in the competition.

Local junior high school students competed against each other in the contest sponsored by Green Power Eveready Batteries and Keep Midland Beautiful.

Two classes of San Jacinto students earned the grand prize for a project developing a comprehensive program to preserve and plant trees.

Students — with the aid of teachers Ann Murphey and Janice Connally — planned and conducted an "Adopt-A-Tree" campaign. All students in the school were invited to plant and care for a tree. The students also undertook a recycling project to help pay for 130 trees provided by the Soil and Water Conservation District. About 120 students pledged to care for and maintain his or her tree.

"We picked this project because trees are hard to come by in West Texas," Ms. Murphey said.

The grand prize winners received $2,500 in cash, electronics and batteries.

Two classrooms from Alamo and Goddard tied for runner-up in the classroom category.

An eighth-grade science class at Alamo led by Kathleen Duffy received recognition for its "Adopt-An-Acre" program. Students used a flyer and poster campaign to raise donations to help save a rain forest. They adopted an acre of Cost Rica's rain forest.

Sharing the runner-up position in the competition with Alamo is Sheila Vermillion's eighth-grade science class. The classroom created ecological games — including board games and puzzles — which were distributed to Emerson Elementary School.

Two teams tied for the grand prize in the individual/team category of the competition.

The Goddard team of Alicia High, Kira King, Kathryn Lang and Julie Tisdale won a prize for their creation of an environmental radio program. The team submitted a program featuring public service announcements, interviews and music. The radio program was designed to be used on the school broadcasting system, Channel One.

Another Goddard team — Dana Jackson, Nona Davis, Crystal Torres and Stephanie Burden — tied for first place for developing a comprehensive composting project for the school.

The two teams shared the grand team prize of $500, electronic items, including compact disc players and batteries.

Apartment fined $2,000 by EPA

Staff report

A Midland apartment complex has agreed to pay a $2,000 administrative penalty sought by the Texas Department of Agriculture for violating provisions of the state's pesticide laws, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said.

On March 16, TDA cited Lora Havrda, manager of Sandstone Apartments, for two violations of the Texas Agriculture Code concerning the safe storage of a pesticide.

TDA alleged that chlordane had been stored in a faulty, careless and negligent manner and that the pesticide was in a leaking container, stored in an open, unsecured area accessible to the public. Each violation carries a maximum fine of $1,000.

On April 4, 1990, small children, who were residents of the apartment complex, found the chlordane containers and "oiled" their bicycle chains with the pesticide. Parents of one of the children called TDA after noticing a strange smell on the child's clothing. A TDA inspector found a leaking container in an open, unlocked storage area of the apartment complex.

TAX: Appraisal district sends out value notices civil suit and take his or her case to court.

Stegall said the Appraisal Review Board "cannot talk about tax amounts."

"They are not going to say that the $1,600 in taxes that you owe are too high," he said. "They are going to look strictly at values."

If the property owner, for example, figures that his house is not worth the $70,000 appraised value, he will be asked to explain why and to state what he thinks the proper value should be.

"They (the board members) have got to look at the values," Stegall said.

Appraised values are set at 100 percent of the fair-market value.

Taxes are determined by a set tax rate per $100 worth of property.

Tax notices from the Midland Central Appraisal District and from the Midland County Tax Assessor Collector's Office are to be mailed out in October after the seven taxing entities involving all or parts of Midland County have set the 1992 tax rates.

In all seven instances, the 1992 effective tax rates are slightly higher than the 1991 actual tax rates due to a drop in property values. The effective tax rates do not reflect 1992 construction.

"We've got flat values," Stegall said.

Property values were slightly changed from 1991. "Things really haven't changed."

The 1992 effective tax rate is that rate needed to generate the same amount of money which was generated by the 1991 actual tax rate on the same pieces of property.

Later this year, the boards of the seven taxing entities with jurisdiction over Midland County property will take the 1992 property values, apply their tax rates to them and compute tax revenues available to fund 1992-93 budgets.

Those seven taxing entities, their 1992 effective tax rates, the 1991 actual tax rates, the tax bases and the amounts of the 1991 tax levies follow:

Midland Independent School District: 1992 effective tax rate of 44.58 cents per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of 44.50 cents; $3.3 billion tax base; $14.6 million tax levy.

City of Midland: 1992 effective tax rate of 66.56 cents per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of 65.87 cents; $2.5 billion tax base; $16.6 million tax levy.

Midland College: 1992 effective tax rate of 12.11 cents per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of 11.98 cents; $3.5 billion tax base; $4.25 million tax levy.

Midland County Hospital District: 1992 effective tax rate of 17.961 cents per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of 17.74 cents; $3.7 billion tax base; $6.58 million tax levy.

Greenwood Independent School District: 1992 effective tax rate of $1.0817 per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of $1.0517; $167 million tax base; $1.8 million tax levy.

Midland County: 1992 effective tax rate of 23.07 cents per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of 22.75; $3.67 billion tax base; $8.4 million tax levy.

Midland-Andrews County Education District: 1992 effective tax rate of 79.89 cents per $100 valuation; 1991 tax rate of 77.5 cents; $5.6 billion tax base; $44.8 million tax levy.

For a person living in the city of Midland, the combined estimated 1992 tax rates are $2.4417. The 1991 rates were $2.4034. Thus, taxes on a $100,000 house would be about $2,440 in 1992 and half that on a $50,000 house.

For a person living in rural Midland County and within the Midland ISD, the combined estimated 1992 tax rates are $1.7761. The 1991 rates were $1.7447. Thus, taxes on a $100,000 house would be about $1,776 in 1992 and half that on a $50,000 house.

For a person living within the Greenwood ISD, the combined estimated 1992 tax rates are $2.2909. The 1991 rates were $2.2316. Thus, taxes on a $100,000 house would be about $2,290 in 1992 and half that on a $50,000 house.

Book sales highest in college towns

Rights advocates seek system reform

AUSTIN (AP) — As Rickey Dale Thomas looked forward to shaking Texas' dust from his shoes, civil rights advocates who fought for his freedom from jail called Thursday for reforming the criminal justice system.

"How many other people are there like Rickey Dale Thomas who are innocent and are in jail because of either poverty or race or both?" asked Jim Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Rights Project.

Thomas, 29, of California, was convicted and served nine months of a life sentence for a purse-snatching before a state judge signed an order Wednesday dropping all charges against him.

His release from the Hopkins County Jail in Sulphur Springs came after officials said another man confessed to the October 1989 robbery. It followed newspaper reports and national television broadcasts, and efforts by those who believed in his innocence.

Gary Bledsoe, president of the Texas NAACP, called it ironic that Thomas' case coincides with the acquittal of four white police officers in the videotaped beating of a black motorist in Los Angeles.

"Our attention must be focused at the problem of racial injustice in society," Bledsoe said. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Texas is starting a project to identify those in situations similar to Thomas', Bledsoe said.

Thomas — at a Capitol news conference with supporters, his fiancee and 2-year-old daughter — said there should be an investigation of the way criminal cases are handled in Sulphur Springs.

Hopkins County District Attorney Frank Long didn't immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press. Long previously has denied race played a part in the case.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, said Morales had not heard of action warranting an investigation by his office.

"As far as we know ... it was just a failure of the system," Dusek said.

Thomas said he planned to head back Friday to California, where a restaurant he previously worked at has offered him his old job back.

"I'm not saying that ... Texas is a bad state, but what happened to me, it could have been avoided," Thomas said. "I had all the evidence in the world to prove that I was innocent."

Thomas maintained he was working at a Chula Vista, Calif., restaurant the day of the robbery and has records and witnesses to verify his claim.

But a jury convicted him, and he got a life sentence based on his prior criminal record and a Texas statute that allows for enhanced sentences in crimes committed against the elderly.

Harrington, who said publicity given Thomas' case was a major tool in winning his freedom, called for changes in the system.

He said a state ombudsman-lawyer is needed to independently review cases like Thomas'. He also advocated a public defender system providing lawyers trained to represent defendants in criminal cases, rather than the current system of court-appointed lawyers for poor people.

Bledsoe agreed with the need to look at establishing a public defender system.

Second case of cholera shows up in Brownsville

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A 40-year-old Brownsville man was recovering at a local hospital Thursday after being diagnosed as the state's second cholera victim, officials said.

Emilio Garcia was being treated in the Brownsville Medical Center's intensive care unit, but was alert and coherent, according to his wife, Sylvia.

"He's doing much better now," Mrs. Garcia said. "I thought I almost lost him. He looked terrible yesterday. I still have a headache from yesterday."

Mrs. Garcia said her husband became ill Tuesday evening after returning from a trip with her brother to Tampico. The couple didn't think much about it at the time because he often gets sick after such trips, Mrs. Garcia said.

But after his condition worsened, both became concerned and that's when they decided to seek medical attention.

Dr. Lorenzo Pelly, a physician at Brownsville Medical Center, said Garcia seemed to be out of danger. Garcia, apparently contracted the disease from drinking contaminated water somewhere along his journey.

The Texas Department of Health began conducting tests and interviews Wednesday after a woman was diagnosed with cholera. She is believed to have become infected during a trip to Mexico.

Only five cases of cholera were reported in Texas from 1973 to 1988. A case last year originated in China, said Beverly Ray, a nurse-epidemiologist with TDH in Austin.

The disease has struck nearly 400,000 people, killing at least 4,000, since the outbreak began in Peru in January 1991. More than 2,800 cases have been reported in Mexico, but the disease had previously come no closer to the Texas border than Monterrey.

Several cases of suspected cholera have been reported in Nuevo Laredo, across the border from Laredo. They were never confirmed.

The Texas case was confirmed this week by doctors at Valley Regional Medical Center.

Morales: End of prisoners' lawsuit near

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposed settlement in the two-decade-long lawsuit over Texas prisons has been negotiated and will be detailed for state leaders today, Attorney General Dan Morales said Thursday.

An attorney for the inmate plaintiffs said the deal is the same as one that was rejected by Morales earlier this year.

"The agreements legally have essentially the same affect. All that has happened between February and now is politics," said Donna Brorby, an attorney for the inmates.

Morales could not be reached immediately by The Associated Press to respond to Ms. Brorby's comments.

In a letter to Gov. Ann Richards, Morales said the proposed deal should end federal control of Texas prisons and eliminate federal court injunctions that restrict management of the prisons.

"The settlement needs the endorsement and support of elected officials and criminal justice leaders in our state," Morales wrote to Richards.

"It is my belief that resolution of these issues will allow us to move forward in our fight against crime and the early release of prisoners now endangering Texas communities," he said.

The governor said the settlement "appears to be good news" and voiced hope that it finally could end the long-running lawsuit and lift judicial control.

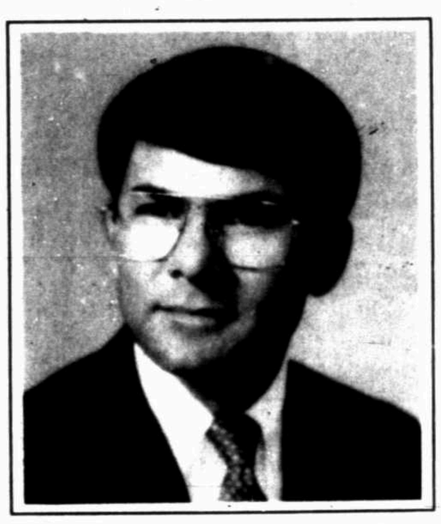

"It is my hope that this agreement will return our state prisons to state control," Richards said. "We now must get on with our (prison) building program and making Texas a safe place to live and raise our families."

Morales was sharply criticized for rejecting a proposed deal reached by lawyers for inmates and the State Board of Criminal Justice, which oversees the prison system.

Since then, Morales said, lawyers from his office and the inmate plaintiffs have been negotiating over a possible settlement.

In his letter to Richards, Morales said the pact would eliminate inmate population limits on all prisons now under construction or to be built in the future and could save up to $100 million annually by eliminating court orders on prison staffing levels.

EXPERIENCED
Leadership For Midland

"As Mayor, I pledge..."

- No increase in taxes
- Hold the line on spending
- No backroom deals
- Greater accessibility
- More citizen input
- More public meetings
- Reorganize City government

For the past three years J.D. Faircloth has consistently worked to hold the line on taxes, voted against two budgets, and voted against more spending items than anyone else on the Council. He voted against the half-million dollar parking lot purchase.

We can't afford inexperienced leadership during these critical times.

Elect J.D. Faircloth your next Mayor.

Single women's favorite benefit planned for May 16

■ The sixth annual Benefit Bachelor Auction, a fund-raiser for Big Brothers/Big Sisters, will be presented at the Petroleum Club.

By Linda Anderson
Staff writer

"Thirty-five guys, count 'em — 35" are getting ready to be the center of attention at the Big Brothers/Big Sisters' sixth annual Benefit Bachelor Auction, which will be presented May 16 at the Petroleum Club. Preview party will be 6-7:15 p.m., with the auction scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Single women from Midland and the surrounding area are invited to come meet the bachelors at the preview party, and then bid on them and their date packages during the auction. Tickets are $15 general admission, $25 reserved seating.

Funds raised will benefit Big Brothers/Big Sisters, a nonprofit agency that matches children from single-parent homes with responsible and carefully screened adult volunteers. These adult volunteers act as friends, role models and mentors for the children, according to Nancy Anderson Hill, executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

"It is estimated that one out of three children will spend a significant amount of their childhood in a single-parent home. Studies have shown that single-parent children, in general, make poorer grades in school, have a lower self esteem and are more inclined to become involved with the law than their friends who have two parents," according to information from Big Brothers/Big Sisters. "The volunteers help the children with these problems."

Volunteers are men, women or married couples, or junior or seniors in high school who are matched with Little Brothers or Little Sisters and spend two or three hours a week with these children.

Currently, the agency — which serves children of all socio-economic levels with no cost to parent or child — has 130 children on its waiting list. About 70 percent of these children are boys.

This year, the benefit auction will have some new features. A silent auction of celebrity memorabilia will begin at 6 p.m. Bidding will continue throughout the evening until 30 minutes after the bachelor auction has ended. Successful bidders will be contacted by Big Brothers/Big Sisters the following week. Some of the items included are a script from M*A*S*H autographed by Alan Alda; an autographed picture of Robert Redford; an autographed "Hook" poster from Robin Williams; an autographed New York Knicks T-shirt from Pat Riley; an autographed baseball from Nolan Ryan; and an autographed Pennzoil bottle from Arnold Palmer.

Special guest at this year's benefit will be Drew Pearson, formerly with the Dallas Cowboys.

Exposure to AIDS should be disclosed

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was deeply involved with a woman who is four years older than I am — I am in my late 20s. At the end of May 1990, our relationship fell apart.

Van Buren

Last month, I discovered that I am HIV-positive. I have not dated since the breakup, and I have no other risk factors.

This woman has two pre-teen daughters and deserves to know, but I am not sure if I should tell her. She wants nothing to do with me, and I have no desire to shatter her life. What should I do? I have not told anyone else about it.

If you need my name and address, I am sorry. I only wish to go in peace. Thank you for your time. — E.S. IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR E.S.: It is vital that you contact the woman immediately so that she, too, can be tested for the HIV virus. If she tests positive, it is almost certain that she will want and need to be under the care of a physician — and it is definite that she should have counseling to deal with the trauma of such a diagnosis, as well as information on how AIDS is and is not spread to others.

DEAR ABBY: I avidly read and applaud your airing of the various problems facing society. If you can solve my problem, which is also my pet peeve, I'm sure the effects could be heard around the world.

Example: I ask a 10-year-old girl how she is, and her mother answers, "She's fine."

I ask a woman where she was last Sunday, and her husband answers, "She was out of town."

I ask a patient when she is going home, and the nurse answers, "Maybe tomorrow."

Conclusion: There must be two kinds of people, those who answer, and those who get answered for. — FOOD FOR THOUGHT

DEAR FOOD: A general profile of the person who answers for another person: protective, presumptuous and insensitive.

If you are the kind of person who answers for others, please hold your tongue.

If you are the kind of person who permits others to answer for you, put a little starch in your spine and speak for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the letter from "Frustrated Wife" whose husband quit smoking, but gained quite a bit of weight. She was upset about the weight gain and very unhappy about the way he looked in his clothes.

In my opinion, your advice was quite good, telling her to tell him that she loved him and wanted to grow old with him — but you went too far when you said, " ... insist that he sees his doctor — and if he keeps putting it off, ask him if his life insurance is up-to-date."

The wife should have told her husband how proud she was of him for making the tremendous effort to quit smoking, told him that his weight had nothing to do with how much she loved him, and that she thought he was quite a man for doing what he did — then shut up! — NAMELESS, OF COURSE

DEAR NAMELESS: Thank you. Your answer was better than mine.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from the woman complaining about how her baby sitter cleaned out her fridge and cupboard of all the "goodies," I had to write.

Here's another side of the story. My daughter baby-sat beginning in her [redacted] high school years. She was scheduled to sit with two children one Saturday, beginning at 6:30 p.m. She was running a little late that day, attending to other chores, so before going to the home to sit, she telephoned and asked for permission to bring a TV dinner and use their oven to cook it later that evening. The mother replied that her children would not have eaten by 6:30 either, and that she would stop and pick up some hamburgers for all three of them. My daughter thanked her because her favorite meal is burgers and fries.

My daughter went to sit, and when the children's mother drove her home, she paid her for sitting for five hours — and she deducted the price of a hamburger, fries and Coke from her baby-sitting fee!

I agree with you, Abby. The lady of the house should always make it clear what — if any — food is available for the sitter. If the instructions are not followed — get another sitter. But to expect a baby sitter to pay for her meal is unheard of.

Our daughter never sat for that family again. This was a case of an adult taking advantage of a 14-year-old girl.

So you see, Abby, there are rude and inconsiderate people on both sides of the fence. — DISGUSTED IN DALLAS

DEAR ABBY: Recently, I found myself in the middle of some very trying times. I began to repeat (mentally) positive phrases at particular moments of distress to help in coping.

I believe in the power of repetition, so I came up with a way to remember exact phrases. Putting them in alphabetical order made it easy to recite the whole list, or recall a particularly appropriate one. I gave a copy to my daughter for her 21st birthday, and a copy to my son for his departure for a long-term adventure in Hawaii. Several people requested copies, and my mother suggested that I send you one. It has been very helpful to me. Perhaps it can help others.

I've enjoyed your column for years, Abby, and want to thank you for all you've done for so many. You have my permission to use my name.

FAMILY MATTERS

Woman's family learns husband not always 'right'

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Some months ago you wrote about men who hate women but marry them and the terrible life the women lead. One of those women was my sister who lives in (another state). We were not aware of her situation until she decided to leave him and then planned how to get enough money for a down-payment on a house with help of her two grown sons. She managed it, her two sons still help her some, but she is a very independent person. She is a survivor in spite of the life she had with her husband.

May

I cut out your article to sent it to her but debated a number of weeks because I knew it would open old feelings and hurts. I didn't want to grieve her but knew that your list of actions these men take sounded like so many she had mentioned to me about him.

I finally sent it and she called to tell me how much she appreciated seeing something in writing about her very situation. She too was troubled because of the often used statement by her husband, "The man is the head of the house" and women are under subjection to their husbands. She went over the article with her two boys and they just nodded and agreed — yes, that is what Daddy did and what he said. She said it was a release for them to just see all these items in print.

One evening her pastor was driving by where she lived and saw her lights on and stopped by to visit. She showed him the article. He had helped counsel her. The previous pastor had told my sister she should listen to her husband because he was right! Her current pastor read the article with great interest and said that there is more of this type problem than most people guess because the women usually think something must be wrong with them and they keep trying to please and "do right" for their husband. He took the article to copy it for his file to help those he counsels.

My sister said afterward she cried, but it was with "relief type" tears. She said the boys were glad to see in print that their dad is not just one of a kind — a freak — but was one who followed a known pattern. At one time, she was afraid to even put her telephone number in the telephone book because he might come by and do her bodily harm like he had threatened to do so many times while they were together. It's almost seven years ago that they separated but the husband is decent to her and the boys now.

Thank you for your articles. I read them each week and appreciate the work that you do. I'm sure you help many you may never hear about, but I wanted you to know about this family and their recovery. — BETTER NOW

DEAR BETTER: Thank you for your kind words and thoughtful letter. As recent events in Midland have so tragically taught us, no one is immune from the violent acts of spouses. I am thankful that your sister was able to successfully extricate herself from such a destructive situation.

DEAR FAMILY: I am becoming very frustrated with my husband because he is so hard on himself. I think that he has done great in his business in this economy but he keeps putting himself down for not making more money. We do have some money problems but they aren't any big deal. We can work our way out of them.

I keep trying to tell him that there's a lot more to life than just being successful. We have two wonderful children and a nice home and our health. I think that's a lot to have going for you. But not matter what I say it seems like every week something comes up that he wants or wants to go do, but can't because we can't afford it. Then he gets real negative on himself.

I want him to stop all this because I think it's bad for him and the kids. They are beginning to notice when "daddy is mad." He is too good of a man to be like this. I love him and I want to help. What can I do? SAD AND FRUSTRATED

DEAR SAD: How lucky he is to have a wife like you. The belief that success is somehow "who we are" often comes from our families of origin where "worth" was confused with "doing." It also is a clear secular societal message in our culture.

Abraham Lincoln once said: "I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have."

You have been trying to help your husband see his light. He may find reading Robert McGee's book, "The Search for Significance," to be of help. I found Robert Fulghum's, "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten," to help me. He wrote, "...it is still true, no matter how old you are — when you go out into the world, it is best to hold hands and stick together."

All that really matters and all that last is what we cannot see — spirit. Stuff is only stuff. If we can only learn to believe and trust in the spirit that is within us, life will be different and the miracle it was meant to be.

Never too old

David Eugene Ray of Franklin, Tenn., is proof that you are never too old to learn, and he had a very special day Thursday. Not only did he turn 100, but for the first time in his life he was able to read his birthday cards. Ray never learned to read until a tutor began teaching him early this year. He is shown with his text book.

Volunteers give happiness

Dr. Henry F. Page

Lives there a man with soul so dead that never to himself hath said, "I shall volunteer."

Page

Alas yes, there are such in this ego-centric world. But like yin and yang, a host of opposite minded souls shed thousands of lights to brighten the corners where they are. The multidunous inter-related wheels of our present day society would creek and groan even more loudly if it wasn't for the great army of volunteers that perform tirelessly without monetary compensation in hospitals, nursing homes, retirement centers, community arts, boy scouts and so ad infinitum. They truly serve as the yeast in the dough that raises the bread.

In health oriented facilities — with which the writer is most familiar — they soften the sharp institutional edges by directing visitors, helping to serve meals, delivering mail, manning library and juice carts, operating social and health activities, Bible studies, and assisting transportation. As an example, for many, many years the probable second wealthiest woman in the world (next to the Queen of The Netherlands) functioned as the chief receptionist in a hospital lobby for a few hours many days a week.

Certainly the most vital role played by volunteers is the creation of a friendly bridge between the general public, made anxious by its basic fear of the unknown, and with the necessary mechanics of the organization. There is nothing like a familiar, understanding face in a strange and sometimes threatening environment.

When one comtemplates the diverse activities performed as noted, the need for organization and integration becomes apparent. Thus, the formation of auxiliaries with a chairman and committees with each committee carrying out specific functions. Otherwise, the picture would exemplify the old adage, "The road to Hell is paved with good intentions."

There is no room in the present day image of aging for the idea that the old somehow "owe" unrenumerated good-will skills to society. However, both young persons and old retirees on volunteering actually receive more than they give in terms of inward happiness and a sense of accomplishment. Purposeful activity provides the key to true happiness.

Remember, the old question, "When you put a nickel in the Deacon's hat, do your always get a dime?" The answer — Yes! Amen.

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Many elderly people are considered 'Hidden Hungry'

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Who are the Hidden Hungry?

ANSWER: Ninety-two year old Laura McAfee, who subsists on white beans and potatoes in her home is thin and anemic. But her health status is little different from that of Luis Alvarez, 17 years her junior, who collects cans in his home, so his wife can eat and his little granddaughter can have milk to drink. And neither of these elderly Americans differ greatly from the thousands who remain in their homes, alone, hungry and often malnourished.

Edwards

The above client description of the Hidden Hungry closely approximates the typical Meals-on-Wheels client and serves as a reminder of the importance of the Meals-on-Wheels program.

Elderly persons, many of whom must live on fixed incomes, are particularly vulnerable to the imposing problem of hunger. According to the 1980 census, elderly Texans numbered close to 2 million, 480,707 of whom lived at or near poverty. Population estimates indicate that the elderly population is growing rapidly in Texas and at least one-third of this growth is among low-income elderly persons.

Studies reveal that 34 percent of the eligible program participants would go hungry if not for the congregate or home-delivered meals. Among those receiving only home-delivered meals, the date indicate an even graver need with 62 percent saying they would go hungry without the service. Fifty-eight percent of all respondents said the program provided their only complete meal of the day, while 68 percent said they depend on the meal service five days per week. Of home-delivered meal recipients, 69 percent indicated this was their only complete meal of the day and 78 percent reported they depend on the meals five days per week.

Numerous elderly stated that after paying for such items as rent, utilities and medical care, they often do not have enough money to buy food. They reported having barely enough food at home, and stated that they depend on relatives to bring them food and lend them money to live. Many split the meal they receive from the program, saving half for later in the day. Still others rely on cereal and milk for their evening meal.

QUESTION: When and where did Meals-on-Wheels begin?

ANSWER: The concept of Meals-on-Wheels began in Britain in 1945 during the World War II Battle of Britain. During and after the London Blitz, food supplies or Meals-on-Wheels were taken by volunteers to war victims. Following the war, the Meals-on-Wheels concept was adopted in the United States.

QUESTION: What about the malnutrition among the elderly?

ANSWER: The elderly population is especially vulnerable to malnutrition as well as hunger. Many suffer from chronic conditions requiring special diets but routinely go without necessary and proper foods because of dwindling resources, lack of knowledge, and inaccessibility to programs.

Finding food to meet special dietary requirements is no easy task for seniors living on fixed incomes and having limited knowledge of proper diet. Among health conditions related to inadequate nutrition are deficiency diseases, impaired digestion and overall susceptibility to infection.

The Texas Department of Health documented 513 deaths in the state due to malnutrition between 1979 and 1982. Of these, 88 percent or 452 deaths were among persons over the age of 60.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Officials net 214 people in operation

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities said Thursday they arrested 214 people in the Houston area, including 26 accused of murder, as part of a national operation targeting violent criminals and those involved in drug trafficking.

The 10-week investigation, dubbed "Operation Gunsmoke," began Feb. 18 and involved officers from several local and federal agencies. In addition to the arrests in Harris and Galveston counties, authorities seized drugs, weapons and other items worth an estimated $48,485.

"The people we took off the streets are really the most violent people we have in the area," said Rey F. Cestero, a supervisory deputy with the U.S. Marshal's office in Houston.

The national operation, which involved 40 cities and cost $3.5 million, was launched by Attorney General William Barr. Officials in Washington said Thursday the project resulted in the arrests of 3,313 fugitives and the seizure of nearly $2 million in cash and property.

Locally, 22 federal fugitives and 192 people wanted on state charges were arrested, authorities said. Ninety percent were wanted for crimes in Texas.

Of those arrested in the Houston area, only two have been released on bond.

The operation focused on violent criminals with a history of offenses involving weapons and drug traffickers who had evaded arrest or jumped bond, said B.S. Baker, U.S. Marshal for the Southern District of Texas.

The arrests were announced during a press conference where authorities displayed dozens of seized weapons.

Cestero said the operation involved 28 officers from various agencies who each worked about 65 hours a week. They worked from a list of about 400 suspected felons believed to be in the area, he said.

The Houston Police Department, the Harris County Sheriff's office, the Texas Department of Public Safety, the Galveston County Sheriff's office, the Texas National Guard and U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms also participated in the operation.

Judge grants Mooney stay of execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A federal judge granted a stay for a California man who was scheduled to die early Friday for killing a Houston man in 1984.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker in Tyler granted the stay Thursday night for Nelson Wayne Mooney, 36, said Bill Zapalac, an assistant Texas Attorney General.

Zapalac said the state would not oppose the judge's action. Parker granted the stay several hours after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused to halt Mooney's execution.

Mooney was sentenced to death by injection for the capital murder of Raymond Garner, 63.

Garner, who worked at Bilbo Freight Lines in Houston, was found floating in the water at Dayton Lake Estates, a subdivision along the Trinity River in Liberty County, about 45 miles east of Houston. Garner's body was attached to a tire and covered with a blanket.

Mooney and another man, Ross Wayne Nix, were arrested in Grand Junction, Colo., after trying to rob a convenience store. The pair was driving Garner's van, which had been repainted.

Nix, 28, was convicted of murder in the case and sentenced to life.

He told police that he and Mooney abducted Garner at knifepoint, drove him to an isolated spot and robbed him of more than $100. Nix said he was not present when Garner was killed.

A third man also was implicated in the slaying. Marvin Gates, 41, is serving a 60-year prison term for murder.

Mooney, a construction worker from King County, Calif., previously served 30 months in the Colorado State Penitentiary for aggravated robbery.

Texas this year already has executed five convicted killers, bringing the state's execution total to 47 since capital punishment resumed in 1982. The total is the highest in the nation among states with the death penalty.

Riots force postponements

■ The Clippers and Dodgers deem the state of emergency in Los Angeles no time for the playing of games.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Civil unrest in Los Angeles, the most damaging in the city since the Watts Riots in 1965, put the sports world on hold Thursday.

The NBA playoff game scheduled for the Sports Arena between the Clippers and Utah Jazz was postponed as was the Dodgers-Philadelphia Phillies game at Dodger Stadium.

Both were to have been played Thursday night.

In addition, the thoroughbred racing program for Thursday afternoon at Hollywood Park in nearby Inglewood was canceled, as was tonight's program at the race track.

Meanwhile, Los Angeles Lakers public relations director John Black said a decision would be announced today on whether the NBA playoff game against the Portland Trail Blazers would be played at the Forum tonight.

The Forum is adjacent to Hollywood Park.

The City of Inglewood declared a state of emergency at noon Thursday, requesting the California National Guard to help restore and maintain order.

Rioting mobs ignited fires, beat motorists and looted stores throughout the area late Wednesday after the acquittal earlier in the day of four white policemen in the beating of black motorist Rodney King.

The violence was centered in a 7-by-15 mile area including heavily black South Central Los Angeles, within a few miles of both the Forum and the Sports Arena. Dodger Stadium is several miles away, but there were disturbances within a few miles of the ballpark.

Also, the California National Guard and the Los Angeles Fire Department were using the Dodger Stadium parking lot as an emergency staging area.

The National Guard was on the streets of Los Angeles by Thursday afternoon, but looting and arson continued and was spreading to outlying areas.

As of Thursday afternoon, at least 10 deaths had been reported along with hundreds of injuries and arrests.

While the Lakers beat the Blazers 121-119 in overtime on Wednesday night, rioting went on within a few miles of the Forum. But the game was uninterrupted, as was the game at Dodger Stadium won by the Phillies 7-3.

No immediate makeup date for the Dodgers-Phillies game was announced. Jay Lucas, the Dodgers' director of publicity, said that as of Thursday afternoon, tonight's game between the Dodgers and Montreal Expos at Dodger Stadium was still on.

The Expos changed travel plans and stayed in San Diego on Thursday night rather than go to their usual downtown hotel in Los Angeles.

Mike Williams, the Clippers' vice president-public relations, said the fourth

Derby favorite gets outside post

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Arazi is an outsider in the Kentucky Derby, but in post position only.

The smallish chestnut colt is the center of attention, watched by hundreds of people as he goes through the paces.

He also was the 6-5 early favorite Thursday to beat 18 other 3-year-olds from the No. 18 post Saturday at Churchill Downs — this despite surgery on both knees in November and only one Derby prep.

A.P. Indy was the 7-2 second choice, while Technology was next at 8-1.

Arazi would be the first favorite and first 2-year-old champion of the previous year to win since Spectacular Bid in 1979.

"Everbody else is just running for second place," said jockey Pat Valenzuela, who got on Arazi on Thursday for the first time since riding him to victory in Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Nov. 2 at Churchill Downs.

The same thing happened that happened when Valenzuela worked Arazi before that race. The jockey was unseated.

He never lost hold of the reins, landed on his feet and immediately remounted.

"This is not serious because he throws all his jockeys," trainer Francois Boutin said.

"We didn't want to change anything," Valenzuela joked.

Arazi was caught in 1:03 1-5 for five-eighths of mile. His last quarter was 24 1-5.

MHS gridders open spring, Rebels wait

■ New football coach Ronnie Reeger begins his tenure at Midland High while Midland Lee decides on an extra week in August.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Ronnie Reeger's regime as Midland High's head football coach makes its first public showing beginning today, as the Bulldogs begin spring training at about 4 p.m. on the Memorial Stadium practice field.

Meanwhile, the Midland Lee practice field will be silent after school hours for the second straight year, as Rebel head coach Earl Miller has opted for the extra week of two-a-days in August and will forego spring workouts.

"We lost some key players (to grades), but the big thing is school starts so early in August (the 24th). We'd only get one day in pads before school starts," Miller said.

"Also, we've got to play our first game in El Paso and the past three or four years we had spring training we looked bad our first game out. Last year we had the other week in August and played well in our first game. I don't know if that was the extra week or if we were just a good team."

Reeger, on the other hand, will use the three weeks in the spring to try to install his system after Davis Corley coached at MHS for three years.

Reeger, who came to MHS from Greenville, was named the Bulldogs coach on March 16 after Corley resigned.

"We're going to try to evaluate our people and get them in the right spots. We will put in our base offense and defense (the Wing-T and a 4-3 defensive front). It will really be basic stuff, seeing who our blockers are and who out tack-

Dye resigns from AD post

Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn football coach Pat Dye quit as athletic director Thursday, saying he decided to resign before Eric Ramsey alleged possible NCAA violations.

"That doesn't bother me a bit," Dye said of suggestions his timing might appear to stem from the former player's charges of improper payments by Auburn boosters and assistant coaches. "People can speculate and say what they want to say."

Dye, who has held the dual roles since he arrived at Auburn in 1981, said he told then-President James Martin last April he wanted to give up the AD's role. Ramsey went public with his claims in late summer.

"Ramsey has got nothing to do with this," Dye said.

The Auburn basketball and tennis teams already are on NCAA probation for rules violations.

William V. Muse, who became president of the university on March 1, said he would head a committee to conduct a national search for Dye's successor as AD. Muse said he expected the search to take about a month.

"Pat Dye has done a good job" in the dual role, Muse said. He said Dye's $146,500 annual salary would not change.

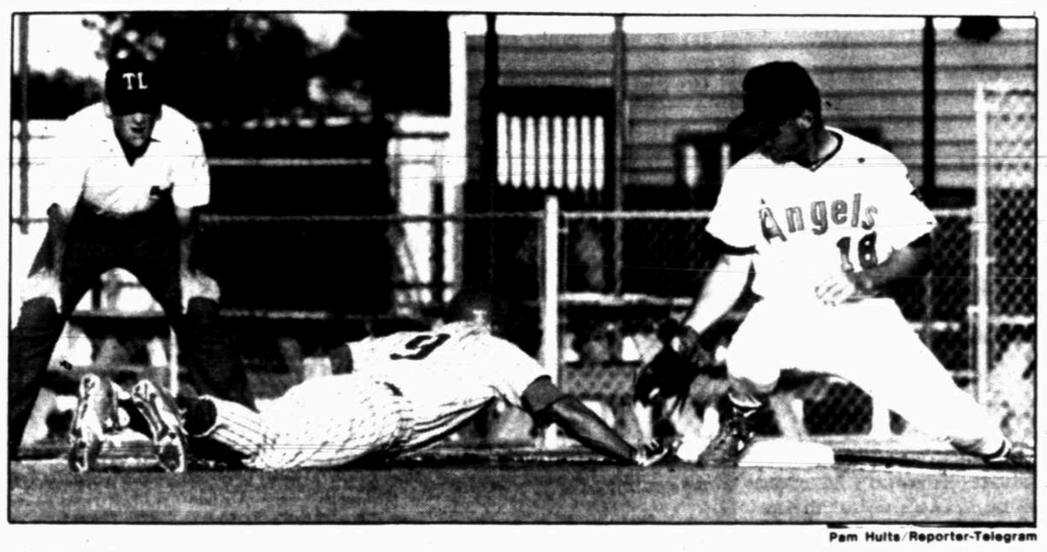

Dye said he did not want to be involved in hiring his new boss, but will not give up the administrative job until a replacement is found.

Dye's decision will leave Nelson Stokley of Southwestern Louisiana as the only Division I-A football coach who also serves as athletic director, said Michael Cleary of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics in Cleveland, Ohio.

Dye, 52, has come under fire during the past year amid allegations that Auburn boosters and coaches paid Ramsey, who secretly tape recorded conversations with benefactors.

Dye denied personal knowledge of such payoffs, but said he did a poor job if the claims were true.

He also said he did not know how his resignation as athletic director might affect the NCAA review of Ramsey's claims.

Diablos burn Angels, 4-2

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

The Midland Angels exited the first month of the 1992 Texas League season Thursday having won but seven of their first 21 games. El Paso became the latest April shower to rain on Midland, as the Diablos took a 4-2 decision in the opener of a 10-game homestand at Angels Stadium.

Amid the storm, though, there was a glimmer of light for Midland as reliever Mark Zappelli, subbing for the injured Paul Swingle, worked a polished five innings and escaped the loss.

For Zappelli, it was his first career start after 162 relief appearances. Angel manager Don Long was so impressed with the way the closer-turned-middle reliever filled in, he recited Zappelli's stats after the game.

"Five innings, 61 pitches, no walks, two strikeouts ... I thought he pitched really well," Long said.

A closer last season for Midland, Zappelli is making a smooth transition into the role of set-up man. According to Long, the switch was made for Zappelli's benefit.

"Looking down the road," Long said, "(middle relief) is his best chance at pitching in the big leagues."

Zappelli retired nine of the first 10 batters he faced as the game moved quickly through the first three innings. The two teams were hung up

Cavs give Nets season off

Associated Press

NBA

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Cleveland Cavaliers ended a 16-year playoff drought Thursday night with a time-tested postseason formula — tough defense.

Reserve forward John Williams scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, and the Cavaliers held New Jersey to 29 percent shooting in the final three periods, defeating the Nets 98-89 for a 3-1 victory in the best-of-5 series.

It was the second playoff series win in Cavs history and the first since 1976.

Cleveland advanced to the second round of the NBA playoffs against the Boston Celtics, the most successful franchise in league history with 16 championships and currently the hottest team with 11 consecutive victories. The first game is Saturday at Richfield Coliseum.

Chris Morris and Derrick Coleman scored 22 points each for the Nets, who were 13 of 21 in the first quarter and 20 of 69 thereafter, including 3-for-20 shooting in the fourth period when Cleveland came back from a 73-67 deficit.

Brad Daugherty scored 19 points, and Mark Price and Larry Nance 16 each for the Cavaliers, who matched Portland for the NBA's second-best regular-season record at 57-25.

The Cavaliers never led until the 8:16 mark of the fourth quarter when Williams, who scored six points in the 11-2 spurt that opened the period, converted a layup for a 76-75 edge.

After the Nets regained the lead at 79-78, Cleveland took the lead for good with six consecutive points, including two jumpers by Nance. The closest the Nets came after that was 84-82, and the Cavs ended the game by scoring eight of the last 12 points.

New Jersey led by 10 in the first minute of the second half before Daugherty scored nine points during a 22-13 spurt that pulled the Cavaliers to 63-62, the closest they got in the first three periods after the Nets started the game with an 8-0 run.

But Coleman, who scored nine of his 11 third-quarter points in a span of 2:42, helped New Jersey rebuild the margin to eight before Nance's rebound dunk made it 73-67 with 34 seconds left.

The Nets built a 30-16 lead after one quarter by outshooting Cleveland 62 percent to 30 percent from the field. Morris, who made 12 of 14 shots in Game 3, stayed hot with 5-for-6 shooting in the period, including three dunks.

The Cavaliers pulled within nine midway through the second quarter before a 10-4 spurt gave the Nets their largest lead, 48-33, with 2:58 left in the half. But New Jersey didn't score again before halftime as Cleveland finished the quarter with a 7-0 run to close to 48-40.

SWC outdoor track meet opens

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — This weekend's Southwest Conference outdoor track and field championships offer a variety of innovations to the 77-year-old meet.

New teams could mean new winners, aided by a new scoring system and an earlier meet date.

"I think this meet is going to be odd and different. There's going to be some real cheap points in some events," Rice men's coach Steve Straub said Thursday, as the four-day meet began.

For the first time, Arkansas will not be competing.

When the Razorbacks left the SWC for the Southeastern Conference this season, they took with them eight of the last 10 league men's titles including the past four.

That void leaves Texas, which interrupted Arkansas' streak in 1986-87, as the favorite entering the meet at Texas A&M's Anderson Track Complex.

Longhorns coach Stan Huntsman said he isn't very comfortable with that role.

"I don't like our position. It's never been that way in the past, it's always been us looking up at Arkansas," said Huntsman, whose Longhorns won this year's indoor crown.

Should the Longhorns look over their shoulders, they might find themselves being chased by Baylor, Rice and Texas Christian.

"The battle for second, third and fourth should be very interesting," Baylor men's and women's coach Clyde Hart said.

Arkansas' departure also led to the change in the meet's scoring. Instead of the top eight finishers earning points, only six will.

"I think it brings the conference together. It makes us more competitive," said Texas A&M men's and women's coach Ted Nelson.

The early timing of the meet is part of a trickle-down effect caused by the Summer Olympics. Because the U.S. Olympic team trials are being held June 18-29 in New Orleans, the NCAA moved its championships to June 3-6 in Austin. In order to give SWC athletes sufficient time to prepare for those meets, league officials picked this weekend to hold its championships.

"The competition is going to bring out the fastest times possible at this time of the year," said Lady Longhorns coach Terry Crawford, whose team boasts three defending individual champions.

The change also could benefit the conference's weaker teams, said Texas Tech women's coach Louise Ritter, whose Red Raiders only scored three points at this season's indoor championships.

"We planned on being our best meet. Hopefully, we're going to sneak in and surprise people in some things," she said.

But Ritter admits it will be hard to keep up with the front-runners, especially defending champion Texas, which also won the season's indoor title.

The Lady Longhorns are seeking their seventh title in eight years at the 10th annual meet.

The toughest women's races probably will be the sprints, which Rice coach Victor Lopez said could showcase five or six runners capable of being NCAA finalists.

The first events were held Thursday night, with Texas A&M's Kalleen Madden setting the first meet records.

Madden, a junior, set a first-day SWC meet record, by earning 3,414 points with victories in the first four heptathlon events. She holds a 555-point lead over Houston's Stacy Asfahl.

Madden also set SWC records in the heptathlon's 100-meter hurdles and high jump.

She beat her own 1991 hurdle mark by .04 with a 14.00. Madden high jumped 5-10, breaking the 1987 record of 6-1¼ by Houston's Jolanda Jones.

Longhorns Keith Keller and Nabil Mark led the decathlon after five events.

DERBY: Only one winner has started from No. 18

since last November, it was very reassuring to have him come back with a good report," Boutin said.

As for drawing the No. 18 post, Boutin said, "I prefer 18 to the first two numbers. I can't do anything about it anyway."

"Pat isn't concerned about it," co-owner Allen Paulson said. "It's a long race, and there's plenty of time to get position."

The Derby is 1¼ miles. Arazo's winning prep was at about one mile on the grass April 7 in France.

Gato Del Sol, a longshot in 1982, is only Derby winner to start from the No. 18 post.

"He (Arazi) is not going to be among the leaders anyway and he'll spend less time in the gate," LeRoy Jolley, trainer of 30-1 shot Conte Di Savoya, said of Arazi's post.

"I have never felt that post position was that important going that far," said Ron McAnally, trainer of 15-1 Dr Devious, making his first start outside England. Another colt making his U.S. debut in the Derby will be Thyre, a member of the seven-horse mutuel field.

"He (Arazi) doesn't have to hurry, but then again he does have to come around everyone," said Sonny Hine, trainer of Technology.

Arazi was eighth in the 13-horse field in the B.C. Juvenile after a half-mile, circled horses and won by five lengths.

"If he's enough horse to sit back there and circle the field again, he is truly a super horse," said Lynn Whiting, trainer of Lil E. Tee.

"To me he has an uphill battle because of last year's complications, and if he does win, he's a wonder horse," said Bruce Headley, trainer of Disposal, a member of the mutuel field.

Before returning to France after the B.C. Juvenile, Arazi was taken to Paulsen's farm at Versailles, Ky., where he underwent arthroscopic surgery for the removal of bone chips from both knees.

The surgery is the reason Arazi has raced only once this year.

"I guess everyone's banking that he won't be able to do it off one race," said Tom Bohannon, trainer of Pine Bluff.

Arazi had seven races in France, winning six of them, before running in the B.C. Juvenile, his first start on dirt and around two turns.

His main challengers should be A.P. Indy, Pine Bluff, Technology, Devil His Due and Dr Devious.

A.P. Indy, ridden by Eddie Delahoussaye from the No. 16 post, has won five straight races, including the San Rafael and the 1⅛-mile Santa Anita Derby this year.

WTGA men's golf tourney set for June

The 64th annual Men's West Texas Golf Association Championship will be held June 18-21 at Bentwood Country Club in San Angelo.

Jaxon Brigman of Abilene is the defending champion, winning the even on his home Fairway Oaks course. Ted Watts of Lubbock is the current seniors champion and T.A. Avarello of Ft. Worth is the defending super seniors champion. All three are expected to defend their titles.

Play is open to any male golfer living withing the boundaries of the association, who is a member of a club or association in good standing with the WTGA.

The tournament dates back to 1925 and is one of the oldest amateur events in the nation. Some past winners include Billy Maxwell, Charles Coody, Jeff Mitchell, Don Cherry, Ernie Vossler and John Farquhar. Bill Holstead of Wichita Falls is the only three-time champion.

The seniors flight is limited to those who have reached their 50th birthday on or before June 18. Super seniors is for 60 and over before June 18. The field is limited to the first 200 entries and entry forms are available at all member clubs, or by calling Bentwood Country Club at 1-944-8575.

The tournament is open to players of all skill levels. Low gross and low net prizes will be awarded in the first flight, senior and super seniors flights.

Hotshots unbeaten

The Parker and Parsley Hotshots won first place in the Under-10 girls competition of the Midland Aoccer Association's city tournament last weekend, finishing the season with an undefeated record.

The Hotshots beat the Purple Panthers Saturday and downed the Wildcats Sunday while not allowing a goal.

This week's bowling tip: Here's a tip to help you get a little more "action" on your ball. Try holding your ball at different levels. Start at the middle of your waist, then bend your elbow and bring the ball up toward your shoulder. That will generate more speed. Then try lowering the ball down to the side of your hip. This will decrease ball speed. Sometimes little changes such as these are exactly what you need to boost those scores.

RIOTS: Jazz-Clipper game to be made up Saturday

game of the Western Conference opening round best-of-5 series between the Clippers and Jazz will be played Saturday afternoon. The starting time will be determined today, Williams said.

"The NBA made the formal announcement," Williams said. "We worked together with the NBA and with governmental offices in Los Angeles, including Mayor Bradley's office.

"I think it's a good decision. I took a lot of calls from fans today who were concerned about coming to a game tonight. Their concerns were put to rest when they learned that the game would be played Saturday afternoon.

"I understand there's a curfew on in the entire City of Los Angeles from dusk to dawn."

The Jazz lead the Clippers 2-1. If the Clippers win Saturday, a fifth and deciding game of the series will be played at the Delta Center in Salt Lake City on Sunday night at a time to be announced.

"At the time we made our decision, the information we had from people we were taking advice from was that it should be OK to play Saturday," said Andy Roeser, executive vice president of the Clippers. "That's what we plan to do.

Jazz president Frank Layden approved of the decision.

"This is a tragedy," Layden said. "This is a step backwards in American history. I would think that maybe, an NBA game, would certainly be, if you're going to demonstrate or want to make some kind of statement, might very well be done on national TV at an NBA basketball game."

In August 1965, a 50-square-mile area of southern Los Angeles became a combat zone after an incident involving police and a black female motorist.

MHS: Bulldog staff in place

(From 1C)

lers are," Reeger said.

Reeger also has his staff filled out, with each coach taking duties on both sides of the ball. James Johnson, a former assistant under Jimmie Keeling at San Angelo, will coach running back and defensive ends.

Other new coaches are Charles Lipsey (quarterbacks, defensive secondary and defensive coordinator), Buster Barnes (offensive tackles, linebackers and offensive coordinator), and Robert Sexton (wide receivers, defensive secondary). Reeger will coach centers, offensive guards and defensive tackles.

Reeger said he expected about 110-120 players, counting incoming sophomores, to report for spring drills and that he wanted to "try to get a good look at all the kids."

At the moment, he said the biggest need for the Bulldogs was to grasp the new system.

"We don't want to run at them too hard and get them confused. We do have a lot of kids relating back to the other system, and that's fine because they had the same basic package. The biggest problem will be converting the terminology," Reeger said.

NOTE: The MHS Football Booster Club invites the public to "Meet the Players and Coaches Night" Saturday on the east side of the stadium following the team's workout, at about 6:30 p.m. Hot dogs and drinks will be served for $1 each, while ice cream will cost ¢50 a cup.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your creative, dynamic personality will take you far. You decide to chart a new career course, beginning in midsummer. Once you make up your mind to do something, nothing can hold you back. September is the best time to travel. Romance will dominate your plans for the winter holidays. Be willing to change your lifestyle to accommodate a loved one's health or emotional needs. A young person is not as indifferent to your opinion as you think. Continue to reach out.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Judy Collins, novelist Joseph Heller, actor Glenn Ford, jockey Steve Cauthen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Production delays or a health problem may be part of the picture today. Meet a challenge head-on and you will emerge victorious. Patch up your differences with a relative.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your mate may be asked to pinch-hit for you if you are unavailable. Pay no attention to gossip, and give rise to none. A past indiscretion could come to light. Maintain a dignified silence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take care of essential financial transactions today while other people are cooperative. The emphasis is on safeguarding your business and personal assets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money could be made and lost overnight now. It would be an error to abandon conservative business practices in favor of speculative ventures. Take things one step at a time in romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You feel more confident today and are able to assure others that you are on the right track. Reduce your heavy-duty workload by learning to delegate routine responsibilities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A reckless or careless approach could bring about a monetary loss or damage to valuable holdings. Avoid discussing controversial subjects with potential financial backers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An enterprising spirit will serve you in good stead when you tackle creative pursuits. Gently guide your loved ones in the direction you hope they will take. Reminisce about the past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day to wheel and deal with big business types. Make certain you know with whom you are dealing. Sign legal papers, run important errands and make key business calls.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Go off by yourself when you have strictly private matters to attend to. Follow your nobler impulses and assist a worthy cause or charity drive. Success is linked to staying flexible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A communication from a friend raises your hopes. Answer your mail promptly and get in touch with people who can boost your personal fortunes. Support the efforts of a good friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A business overhead or inventory may be inflated. Ask probing questions before authorizing new expenditures. Strike a healthy balance between work and play.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make the most of someone's friendly attitude while it lasts. An unexpected visit or surprising news is featured this afternoon. A good friend's advice will serve you well tonight.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are affectionate, pleasure-loving and bright. They show an early aptitude for mathematics and should be encouraged to develop their strong interest in science. A passion for rich food could lead to weight problems if these Taureans fail to get enough exercise. They prefer intellectual pursuits to athletic activities and can usually be found curled up with a book. Loyal and generous, they have a real gift for family life.

Opening lead: King of ♠

When you're in a bad contract, don't abandon hope. Look for a line that might offer a chance for success and play as if that distribution exists. This hand, played aboard the Royal Viking Sun, is an example.

When North showed a balanced 13-15 points by jumping to two no trump, South was interested in slam. Four diamonds probed for the possibility of a 5-3 fit in that suit and we would have bid four no trump with the North hand rather than five diamonds. Since a trump suit had not yet been agreed upon, that would be natural, not ace-asking.

West led a club, and declarer was not enamored with the prospects. Barring the lucky shot of finding either defender with a singleton or doubleton queen of hearts, the best chance to land the slam was an even trump break. So declarer took the ace of clubs in dummy, cashed the king and queen of trumps and then came to hand with a club ruff to play the ace of diamonds. East's club discard was a sore disappointment.

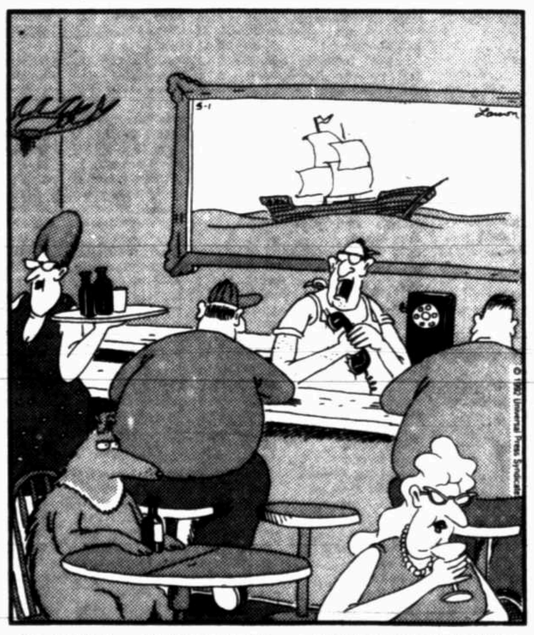

All was not yet lost. If West held two hearts and four spades, or three cards in each black suit and the queen of hearts, the contract could still succeed. Declarer crossed to the king of spades, ruffed another club and then proceeded to play spades.

When West had to follow to all four spades, the slam was home. Declarer simply cashed the ace and king of hearts and the 13th trick was won by West's trump and East's queen of hearts simultaneously.

Sheena Easton goes home after collapsing during play

NEW YORK — Pop star Sheena Easton, who fainted on stage during a Broadway matinee performance, was released from a hospital Thursday after spending the night.

Easton, who is playing Dulcinea in the revival of "Man of La Mancha," was hospitalized for observation after collapsing Wednesday, said publicist Dennis Crowley.

"Ms. Easton had vomiting and fainting due to an intestinal disorder," Crowley said. "She is out of the hospital and resting comfortably at home."

Easton, 33, the voice of the hit singles "Sugar Walls" and "The Lover in Me," fainted about three-quarters of the way through the performance at the Marquis Theater. Co-star Raul Julia helped her off-stage.

"She is eager to get back to 'Man of La Mancha' and will return to the show as soon as possible," said Crowley, adding there was no timetable for her return.

Understudy Joan Susswein-Barber, who received a standing ovation after filling in Wednesday, was to continue in the role, Crowley said.

MINNEAPOLIS — Author and humorist Garrison Keillor, who left the Twin Cities in 1987 for the anonymity of New York, said he's glad to be back.

He told 1,600 fellow University of Minnesota alumni on Wednesday that they're lucky to be in Minnesota.

Keillor

"We are good with leaving and we have been doing that by the thousands ever since we arrived," he said of Minnesotans who seek their fortunes elsewhere. "But in the end, this is home."

Keillor is moving his weekly public radio program back to St. Paul in October.

"I became a writer here. This is where my world began," said Keillor, who received a bachelor's degree in English from the university in 1966.

Keillor made a speech to an annual meeting of alumni and later received the university's Outstanding Achievement Award.

NEW YORK — When it comes to jokes about his now-famous indecisiveness over whether to seek the Democratic presidential nomination, Gov. Mario Cuomo remains unamused.

At a ceremony dedicating expanded port facilities in Brooklyn Thursday, Port Authority Vice Chairman Vincent Tese joked that "When Governor Cuomo told me we were going to the waterfront, I told him, 'You coulda been a contender.'"

Most of the 200 officials and longshoremen present applauded, recognizing the line borrowed from Marlon Brando's character, a failed boxer, in "On the Waterfront," a film about life on the New York docks.

Cuomo, seated on the platform, only grimaced. He later suggested Tese hire a new speechwriter.

OLYMPIA, Wash. — The state allowed part of its Capitol to be disguised as an Oregon county courthouse Thursday so Hollywood crews could film scenes for Madonna's movie "Body of Evidence."

Her scenes included walking up the Capitol steps into the ornate rotunda, then to the doors of the Senate chamber, executive producer Stephen Deutsch said.

Madonna

In the film, Madonna stands trial for the murder of her elderly lover and falls in love with her attorney, played by Willem Dafoe. The movie is set in Portland, but the Washington Capitol was chosen for some shots because of its beauty, Deutsch said.

FORT SMITH, Ark. — The rock group Van Halen has offered to pay a fine faced by a fan charged with public display of obscenity for wearing an explicit T-shirt sold at a concert.

Police confiscated the shirt from 19-year-old Shawnn Pierce, who was wearing it outside a restaurant a day after Van Halen's April 8 concert in Little Rock. Pierce is scheduled to appear in municipal court June 18.

Under state law, public display of obscene material on a motor vehicle or clothing is punishable by 30 days in jail and up to a $100 fine.

"What is happening to this country?" drummer Alex Van Halen was quoted as asking in a news release issued this week by the group's publicist, Solters, Roskin, Friedman Inc.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Rising country music star Doug Stone, who watched the Academy of Country Music awards from a hospital bed after undergoing quadruple bypass surgery, was in stable condition and recovering well Thursday.

Stone, 35, had the three-hour surgery Wednesday morning, then watched the program in the evening. Garth Brooks, Travis Tritt and T. Graham Brown sent him best wishes from the stage in Universal City, Calif.

Red Wings eliminate North Stars

Associated Press

NHL Playoffs

■ More Sports/ 10C

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings, behind the dramatic goaltending of Tim Cheveldae, became only the ninth team in NHL history to overcome a 3-1 deficit when they eliminated the Minnesota North Stars with a 5-2 victory in the seventh game of the Norris Division semifinals Thursday night.

Detroit will open a best-of-7 series against the Chicago Blackhawks on Saturday night at Joe Louis Arena for the division title.

It was the second time the Red Wings had overcome a 3-1 deficit to win a playoff series. They rallied to oust Toronto in the 1987 division finals.

Sergei Fedorov, Alan Kerr and Gerard Gallant each scored in the second period to take the Red Wings to a 3-0 lead. Bob Probert and Shawn Burr scored in the third period.

Brian Bellows stopped Cheveldae's string of scoreless playoff minutes, which included shutouts in Games 5 and 6, at 188:36 with a third-period power-play goal. Minnesota's Mike Craig closed out the scoring with 51 seconds left in the game.

Minnesota goalie Jon Casey, whose hot hand took the surprising North Stars all the way to the Stanley Cup finals a year ago, also played well. But he was no match for the determined Red Wings, who finished first in the division, 28 points ahead of the fourth-place North Stars.

Casey handled 31 shots, Cheveldae 31.

This was the 14th time in their history the Red Wings were playing a seventh game in a playoff series. They were 8-5 in the previous 13 attempts, but 7-2 at home. It was the seventh time the North Stars were playing a seventh game in a playoff series. They were 3-3 in the previous six attempts, 1-2 on the road.

Fedorov's fifth goal, on a power play, came from directly in front of the net on a pass from Kevin Miller. The shot was high on Casey's glove side, just inside the post at 11:04.

Italy sends Kiwis packing, Conner down 6-4

Associated Press

America's Cup

SAN DIEGO — Italy's Il Moro di Venezia sent New Zealand back Down Under emptyhanded and became the first European challenger to reach the America's Cup match since 1964.

American-born Paul Cayard steered Il Moro to its fourth straight victory on Thursday, a wire-to-wire effort over New Zealand that apparently ended the acrimonious best-of-9 challenger finals with Italy ahead 5-3. The margin was 1 minute, 33 seconds.

But the Kiwis, in an apparent desperation move, asked the race committee to hold a hearing on the grounds that Il Moro committed a "gross breach of good manners and sportsmanship" during the controversy over New Zealand's bowsprit.

They later dropped that request, however.

Il Moro's will face either Bill Koch's America3 or Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes in the 28th America's Cup match beginning May 9.

Cayard, who was born in San Francisco and owns a home here, is a member of the San Diego Yacht Club, which is trustee of the America's Cup.

Earlier, America3 got the weather window it needs and moved within one victory of slamming the door on Stars & Stripes in the defender finals.

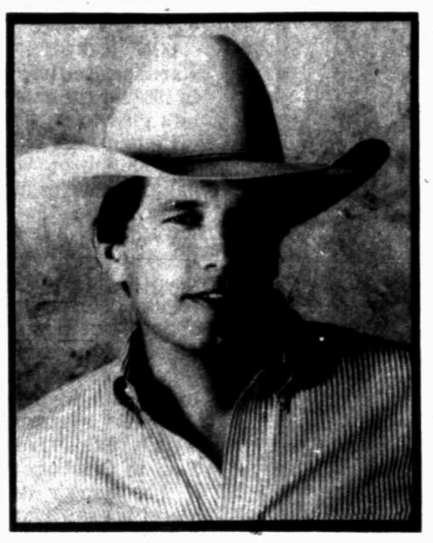

America3 (America Cubed) led wire to wire in moderate westerly wind of 11-14 knots to beat Stars & Stripes by 1 minute, 43 seconds and take a 6-4 lead in the best-of-13 series. America3 has scored consecutive victories after three straight victories by Conner had knotted the series.

"Nice job, fantastic," Koch told his crew.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Buyers swept into the petroleum market for the second straight day and pushed prices to the highest level of the year Thursday in a curious rally that professional traders attributed largely to speculation.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the June-delivery price of benchmark West Texas Intermediate finished 8 cents a barrel higher at $20.85, eclipsing the high for the year set a day earlier.

Much of the buying evidently has been done by large pension funds and other big institutional investors that have no inherent interest in buying or selling petroleum but are using it as a hedge against other investments.

The one exception to the energy rally was natural gas, which fell 2.8 cents to $1.422 per 1,000 cubic feet on the Mercantile Exchange after surging 4.1 cents the day before.

Dillard in Mexico

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Shoppers at three malls in Mexico City could become very familiar with Dillard Department Stores.

The Little Rock-based retailing chain tentatively agreed to work with shopping mall developer Melvin Simon and Associates Inc. and Sid Uberman, a Fort Worth-based developer, in developing three malls in Mexico City, according to an announcement.

Stocks soar

NEW YORK — Stock prices staged a broad rally Thursday amid encouraging economic news, lifting the Dow Jones industrial average to its second-highest close.

The Dow jumped 25.94 points to 3,359.12 in heavy volume, just shy of the record of 3,366.50 set April 16.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK — The dollar fell marginally in quiet dealings Thursday, with traders ignoring economic news that otherwise might have benefitted the currency.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 133.38 Japanese yen from 133.07 Tuesday. The Japanese market was closed Wednesday for a national holiday.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7755 from $1.7700 late Wednesday.

Other late-dollar rates in New York vs. rates late Wednesday included: 1.6480 marks, down from 1.6575; 1.5105 Swiss francs, down from 1.5210; 1.1924 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1946; 5.5600 French francs, down from 5.5875; and 1,239 lire, down from 1,246.00.

Report: Layoffs imminent at Exxon

Oil giant's domestic subsidiary plans 1,500 job cuts, newspaper says

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Exxon Corp.'s domestic subsidiary is planning 1,500 job cuts, a newspaper reported, but the president of Exxon USA told employees that no decision has been made about job reductions.

Harry J. Longwell, Exxon USA president, said the report Thursday in the Houston Chronicle "deeply disturbed" him. In a memo to employees, he said the company has been studying costs for some time.

The Chronicle, citing unidentified sources it said were close to the company, reported the cuts would be achieved through voluntary severances and layoffs. Exxon plans to announce the reductions in the next two or three weeks, the newspaper reported.

Exxon employs about 20,000, a little less than one-fifth of its payroll, in the domestic subsidiary.

In the memo to employees, Longwell said: "As we have discussed, given the domestic industry economic environment, we are studying our cost structure and personnel needs but no final decisions have been made."

At Exxon's annual meeting in Dallas Wednesday, Exxon chairman Lawrence Rawl acknowledged the review of costs at Exxon USA but said he did not know whether that would lead to layoffs.

Dallas takes center stage this weekend

■ Forum organizers send message that city is ready for global business.

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — There's a simple, economic-driven message behind the glitzy Dallas Ambassadors Forum: Friendships pay off big dividends.

Organizers of this weekend's forum want the world to know Dallas is ready and willing to do global business.

Ambassadors from about 55 countries are expected for a taste of Texas barbecue, a tour of contemporary art and a torrent of corporate mingling.

"We won't sit and offer each other purchase orders," Mayor Steve Bartlett said, laughing. "Dallasites have other friendships as well as business — cultural and ethnic ties in virtually every country in the world."

But Bartlett acknowledged business will take center stage at the three-day event, billed as a one-of-a-kind global promotion among American cities.

The Dallas Ambassadors Forum, previously the Mayor's International Ball, is in its 12th and largest year. A list of guests covers Austria to Zimbabwe.

Their schedule includes an "Old West" night of thoroughbred horse racing and steer displays at the Cloyce Box Ranch near Frisco; a black-tie

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trio of encouraging economic reports on Thursday flashed a green light for slow but sustained recovery from the recession this year.

The government's chief forecasting gauge climbed for the third straight month in March. New applications for unemployment insurance in late April held at the lowest level since last October. And orders to factories in March rose strongly.

"The statistics all point in the same direction," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities dealer. "We have indeed started a moderate recovery. It will be slower and more uneven than a normal recovery.... But all in all I think we're looking at the foundation for a sustainable recovery."

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators increased 0.2 percent in March after strong gains of 0.8 percent in February and 1 percent in January.

Although the latest advance was small, the first quarter marked the first time since May through July of last year that the index moved higher during three consecutive months.

The 1.6 percent rise in orders to U.S. factories was stronger than anticipated by most analysts. It was pulled up by a 2.1 percent gain in orders for durable

American's fare system may trap Continental

NEW YORK (AP) — A new air fare structure put in place by American Airlines, viewed as potentially devastating for the nation's sickest carriers, may already be taking a toll.

Continental Airlines, which has been in bankruptcy court for more than a year, acknowledged Thursday that the new fares might complicate its Chapter 11 reorganization.

"The fare wars could cause a delay in our emergence from bankruptcy, but we don't plan on it," Continental spokesman Dave Messing said from the airline's headquarters in Houston.

"We're going to do some things that allow Continental to take advantage of the new existing fare structure," Messing said. "I'm not going to tip the hand at this point."

American, the industry's most powerful player, recently introduced a radically different pricing system that lowered first-class and full-coach fares while sharply limiting the number of discounts available.

American acknowledged the move would be economically painful for the airline in the short run as higher-priced tickets are reduced.

Some analysts contended the chages would be particularly hard on troubled airlines. American Chairman Robert L. Crandall, who has repeatedly said the government should rescind the operating license of carriers flying in bankruptcy, vehemently denied this was his goal.

"Our motive here is not to drive anybody out of business," American spokesman John Hotard said Thursday. "It's to keep American in business."

Hotard declined to discuss any impact on Continental.

The potential troubles for Continental were reported Thursday in Aviation Daily, a trade publication, which quoted Continental assistant treasurer Michael Cox as saying the deal could delay the airline's plans to emerge from Chapter 11.

"I think the operative word there is 'could,' and it depends on what the net effects of the fare structure are," said Messing, the Continental spokesman. Continental had planned on getting out of Chapter 11 as soon as July 1, but Messing said that date was not a firm deadline.

Messing noted that while the new fares are expected to cost the industry millions of dollars in the near term, it's uncertain whether they will remain in place.

Past attempts to simplify fares have failed.

Ford cost-cuts pay off in profit

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. reported a $338 million first-quarter profit Wednesday, perhaps the strongest evidence yet that auto industry cost-cutting is paying off.

The nation's No. 2 automaker lost $884 million in the first three months of 1991, when the recession and the Persian Gulf War kept customers out of showrooms. The $1.2 billion turnaround was the biggest in company history.

It was Ford's first quarterly profit since earning $102 million in the third quarter of 1990.

However, "the profit level is still low because economic recoveries are slow in many key markets," said David McCammon, vice president of finance at Ford.

Seventy-five percent of Ford's profits came from its Financial Services Group, which helped blunt the losses during the previous five quarters.

The company's earnings had a one-time boost of $61 million from the sale of Ford's Dealer Computer Services business.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Purchase date doesn't affect fund dividend

By Bill Doyle

Q: Many mutual funds pay annual dividends at the end of the year. What would be the difference in dividend if I invest in a fund in April, June or October?

Doyle

A: There will be no difference in the amount of the dividend, no matter what time of the year you buy mutual fund shares, providing you make the purchase before the ex-dividend date.

Dividends are paid to shareholders whose names appear on a fund's books on the dividend record date. At most mutual funds, the record date and the ex-dividend date are the same business day.

In this context, "ex" means "without." Fund shares you buy after the ex-dividend date are not entitled to a dividend. Also, on the ex-dividend date, the dividend is automatically deducted from the share value.

Let's say you buy 1,000 shares of XYZ Mutual Fund and XYZ declares a $1 per share dividend, payable to shareholders of record Dec. 20. You'll get a $1,000 dividend if your purchase was made on Dec. 20, just the same as you would if you bought the shares much earlier in the year.

Here, a warning flag must be waved: It's not smart to buy mutual fund shares shortly before a dividend is to be paid, for the reasons spelled out in the following answer.

Q: A mutual fund salesman says he can inform me when his company's fund will pay a dividend. He suggests I buy fund shares in time to get the dividend. Is that wise?

A: No! It's just the other way about. That suggestion is called "buying dividends" and is most unwise because of the tax consequences.

The amount of the dividend is included in the mutual fund's share value until the ex-dividend date, when it is deducted from the share value.

You have to pay income tax on the dividend. Depending on your federal income tax bracket, the current tax bite is either 15, 28 or 31 percent. Meanwhile the value of your shares drops by 100 percent of the dividend.

If you follow that fund peddler's advice, you're a loser.

Q: How can I learn which mutual funds pay dividends annually and which pay quarterly?

A: You'll find that information in a number of financial manuals at brokerage offices and many public libraries. The fat Wiesenberger Investment Companies Service book probably is the most frequently used.

Besides those paying annually and quarterly, an increasing number of mutual funds pay dividends monthly. Those are generally "income funds," which hold as investments bonds, other interest-paying debt securities and high-dividend-producing stocks.

The Internal Revenue Code forces mutual funds to pay out virtually all of their income. Under the "conduit theory" of taxation, a fund does not pay income tax on its income. Instead, it passes that income and the tax obligation on to its shareholders.

Q: I began investing in a mutual fund last year and have reinvested my dividends and capital gains distributions. I was shocked when the accountant who prepared my 1991 income tax return told me I had to pay income tax on the dividends and capital gains. Why? I never received the dividends and capital gains.

A: But you had the choice of either receiving checks or reinvesting the dividends and capital gains distributions to buy additional shares.

As far as the tax laws are concerned, your reinvestment action was no different than if you had the checks sent to you and then turned around and wrote new checks to buy more fund shares.

This comes as a shock to many first-time mutual fund investors, who obviously do not read the part of their fund's prospectus where the tax situation is explained.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update, which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Ryan rocked in return, Rangers lose 12-1

Associated Press

AL

CHICAGO — Nolan Ryan was wild and got hit hard in his return from the disabled list as the Chicago White Sox beat the Texas Rangers 12-1 Thursday night behind Craig Grebeck's six RBIs.

Jack McDowell (5-0), the first five-game winner in the majors, threw a three-hitter to beat the 45-year-old Ryan, who had not pitched since opening day because of a strained left calf and an inflammed right Achilles tendon.

George Bell helped Chicago with the third five-hit game of his career, his first since 1990.

Ryan (0-1) gave up seven runs and five hits in 2 1-3 innings, walked five, struck out three and threw a wild pitch. He left with the bases loaded and reliever Floyd Bannister allowed all the runners to score on Grebeck's double.

The runs were the most Ryan had given up since July 25, 1990, againat the New York Yankees, and they equaled the most he's given up with the Rangers. He made 64 pitches, just 28 for strikes.

Athletics 10, Tigers 6

DETROIT — Rickey Henderson and Mark McGwire each had two-run doubles in an eight-run seventh inning as the Oakland Athletics rallied to defeat the Detroit Tigers.

The A's trailed 6-2 entering the seventh. But, with the bases loaded and one out, Willie Wilson grounded to shortstop, but Alan Trammell booted the chance at an inning-ending double play.

Mark Leiter walked in a run, another scored on a passed ball, and right fielder Rob Deer stumbled twice on fly balls that dropped for two-run doubles.

In all, the A's sent 13 batters to the plate, got five hits, five walks and an error.

Detroit loaded the bases in the bottom of the seventh, but Goose Gossage came on to strike out Deer to end the inning.

Vince Horsman (1-0) who retired the only batter he faced, picked up his first major league win, while Leiter (2-1) took the loss. Dennis Eckersley, the sixth Oakland pitcher, got one out for his eighth save in as many chances.

Angels 8, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Junior Felix drove in a career-high six runs and had four hits, including a three-run homer, as the California Angels beat the Cleveland Indians.

Joe Grahe (2-2) became the first California pitcher with more than one win, allowing five runs and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings. The Angels' first 10 wins were spread among 10 different pitchers.

Hubie Brooks also homered for the Angels, while Bryan Harvey pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

Brewers 3, Blue Jays 2

MILWAUKEE — Kevin Seitzer snapped an 0-for-21 slump with an eighth-inning single to drive in the winning run.

The Brewers had managed only four hits off Toronto starter Juan Guzman, but got three runs in the eighth off reliever Duane Ward. Ward had saved four games in four attempts before Thursday.

Darryl Hamilton singled and stole second — the Brewers had a club-record seven steals in the game — Greg Vaughn then singled and, when right fielder Joe Carter bobbled the ball, Hamilton scored the tying run.

ANGELS: Zappelli shines, Merriman gets loss in relief in a scoreless tie until the Diablos struck for one run in the fourth, when Vince Castaldo singled in Troy O'Leary.

El Paso bumped its advantage up to 2-0 in the sixth before Midland quickly tied the score in the bottom half of the inning.

The Angels' only two runs came on four straight singles and a sacrifice fly in the sixth. Walt McConnell drove in Jeff Kipila, and J.R. Phillips' sac-fly brought home catcher Matt Stark.

El Paso went ahead with two runs in the seventh when Al Lewis tripled and scored on a single by Ed Caceres, and Mike Guerrero hit into a fielder's choice and came home on a wild pitch by Angel loser Brett Merriman (0-2).

Dave Fitzgerald improved to 2-0 with the win. Rob Wisnevski earned his sixth save of the season.

The game's top oddity came in the form of what possibly could have been the longest single ever hit at Angels Stadium. The lumbering Stark, all 245-pounds of him, legged out a single, ala Boog Powell, as his shot hit 15 feet up the wall in dead center field.

But for the Angel faithful in attendance looking for a bright spot, it had to be the work of Zappelli.

"At 6:15, pitching coach Kernan Ronan tells me I'm going in," Zappelli said. "I think I threw some quality strikes. I've been in a groove.

"I don't know about starting. Pitching every five days. I'm used to going out there as much as possible. As a starter, you can't really get yourself up fast like you can as a reliever."

Swingle (0-3), the scheduled starter, was lifted due to pre-game tightness in his forearm.

"I think we need to be more consistent and aggressive," Long said of his team's offensive effort. "We have to be prepared to hit every pitch.

"Our pitchers have done a really good job. They kind of feed off of each other."

Former Angel Glenn Carter (1-0), traded to the Brewers' organization in the off-season, will start for El Paso tonight. Joe Kraemer (0-3) is the expected starter for Midland. Game time is 7 p.m.

Astros drop fifth in a row, fall to Mets 4-3

Associated Press

NL

NEW YORK — Eddie Murray singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and the New York Mets, stung by a rare home run from Rafael Ramirez, bounced back to beat the Houston Astros 4-3 Thursday night.

The Mets won their eighth straight game at Shea Stadium. Houston lost its fifth in a row, all on the road.

Ramirez, who had not homered since June 28, connected for a two-run shot with two outs in the eighth off Sid Fernandez, giving the Astros a tie at 3. Until that point, Fernandez had pitched one of the best games of his career, striking out 12 and walking none.

Fernandez allowed only one runner — Pete Incaviglia, who doubled to start the fifth — through seven innings and helped extend the Mets' staff streak of consecutive scoreless innings at home to 36. But Casey Candaele singled with one out in the eighth and Ramirez then matched his home run total of last season with a drive to left.

Jeff Innis (3-1) relieved after Ramirez homered and got the final out of the eighth, and the victory. John Franco worked the ninth for his fourth save.

Giants 9, Cardinals 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Kevin Bass hit a two-run homer and John Burkett allowed six hits in eight innings, leading the San Francisco Giants over the St. Louis Cardinals.

San Francisco, which has won three of four, gained a split in the two-game series by scoring two runs in the first, fourth, fifth and eighth innings.

Burkett (2-1) allowed all three runs — one unearned — struck out five and walked two. He also contributed an RBI double.

Jose DeLeon (1-2) gave up five runs and four hits in four innings, struck out three and walked four. The loss stopped the Cardinals' three-game winning streak.

Bass put the Giants ahead 2-0 in the first with his first home run this season, and Burkett hit his double in the second. Darren Lewis is singled in two runs in the fourth, but Felix Jose hit an RBI single in the fifth.

Expos 9, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO — Larry Walker and Darrin Fletcher hit two-run homers in the sixth inning to support the eight-hit pitching of Ken Hill and Jeff Fassero as the Montreal Expos beat the San Diego Padres.

Hill, who struck out six and walked two, worked seven innings and allowed six hits and three runs. His earned-run average rose to 1.42, still best in the National League.

The Expos provided Hill (2-2) with more support than in his first four starts combined.

Hulbert, Black share Shell Houston lead

Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — Mike Hulbert and Ronnie Black, acting on advice and inspiration they got from fellow pro Davis Love III, shot 7-under-par 65s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the Shell Houston Open.

Hulbert went from the practice range Wednesday afternoon to the first tee on Thursday feeling comfortable with the adjustment in his swing suggested by Love.

His eight-birdie, one-bogey round over the Tournament Players Course matched Black's best round of the year, giving them a one-shot lead over Keith Clearwater.

Eight golfers were at 67, headed by defending champion Fulton Allem and Tom Kite.

Hulbert and Black had few witnesses to their tournament-leading rounds because most of the gallery lined up to follow either Love or hometown favorite Fred Couples, the world's top-ranked golfer.

Love, trying to become the first golfer since Gary Player in 1978 to win three straight tournaments, shot a 69 in the opening round that ended with a dramatic 30-yard chip-in for a birdie.

Couples finished with a 70. He bolted past the waiting media and went to the practice tee saying "I'm going to stay until I get it right."

Hulbert, however, was ready to play after the lesson he got from Love and his brother Mark Love, Wednesday night.

"It was pretty simple, I just wasn't getting the club head squared up and the timing was a little off," Hulbert said. "I felt good leaving the range yesterday and I felt good starting out today."

Hulbert birdied the first two holes of the day but his round didn't really erupt until he took a one-stroke penalty on No. 5 when his ball moved as he addressed a putt.

"The ball just rolled about three-fourths of an inch, there was nothing to do but take the penalty," Hulbert said. "I couldn't get too perturbed about it. I was able to put it out of my head. You'd think it would be the other way around."

Hulbert, recovering from a shoulder ailment that's troubled him the past two months, parred the next hole and then ran in birdie putts of 6 and 15 feet and made the turn at three under.

He sank a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 11 and then birdied three of the last four holes for his 65, two shots off the course record set by Mike Sullivan in 1986.

Black said he was saved by his chipping game.

"I didn't strike the ball as well today as that sounds funny because it was my best round of the year," he said. "But I hit a couple of chip-ins and a couple of lucky shots after lousy shots. That tends to turn your round around."

Playing in the same group with Love last week was a benefit, Black said.

"He helped me and didn't know it," Black said. "Just watching the way his plays so aggressively. It's easy to draw from that."

Black birdied four of his last five holes, including a 30-foot chip-in on his 16th hole, the par-4 seventh.

Clearwater had an erratic round that included eight birdies and three bogeys. He had four straight birdies to tie Hulbert for the lead with three holes to play but he finished with two bogeys and a birdie.

Clearwater did not have a par in his final nine holes with six birdies and three bogeys.

"Weird round," Clearwater said. "It was a little disappointing. I was seven under going into my 16th hole and really thinking I could get it to nine."

Walker jumps in front at LPGA Centel Classic

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Former Florida State star Colleen Walker shot a career-best, 8-under-par 64 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the $1.2 million Centel Classic.

Walker, one of four former Seminole players back in their college hometown for the tournament, finished on the front nine with a 5-under-par 31.

"Right now I'm a little bit numb," Walker said. "I don't think it's sunk in that I've had this low round."

Walker needed only 27 putts during a bogey-free round.

"It was kind of strange," she said. "I was trying to get it close to the hole and they just fell in today. It just happened."

Walker, who has won one tour event this season and five in 10 years as a pro, said she enjoyed being on a familiar course.

"It's always good to come to Tallahassee," said Walker, who visits often in the autumn to watch her alma mater's football team.

Michelle Estill was two shots back at 66 and Alice Ritzman, winless in 14 seasons on the LPGA tour, was at 67.

Estill had one bogey, but needed only 26 putts and matched her career low.

"I'm not known as the greatest putter in the world," said Estill, a second-year pro from Phoenix. "The greens rolled well."

Ritzman took four shots off par on the front side and claimed the early lead with a birdie at No. 17.

"At least I'm off to a good start," said Ritzman, who has earned almost $900,000 in her career.

Beth Daniel, the 1990 tournament champion, was among those at 68. The pack included Judy Dickinson, Caroline Keggi, Meg Mallon, Liselotte Neumann, Missie Berteotti, Dana Lofland and Maggie Will, who won last week's Sara Lee Classic.

Midland Reporter-Telegram

Dear Mr. Campbell,

Thanks for finding a sponsor, Midland Truck and Equipment Co., for us to receive the Midland Reporter-Telegram this year. Our teacher has neat ideas every week on "Newspaper Day." She lets us circle nouns, adjectives and verbs with crayons or markers.

Sometimes we cut out pictures. Once we cut out a picture of two horses and they were having a converstion. One of my favorite things is looking at the TV schedule and finding the channel and time for a certain program like Full House. Another favorite thing is the one where the Newspaper people printed the Christmas tree grinding machine and we wrote some other ways you could see it. We use the left-over paper for art projects or reading skills.

REPORTS: Gauge climbs again

goods, such as automobiles and furniture.

However, the backlog of unfilled orders at factories fell 0.6 percent, the seventh drop in a row. That shows the current manufacturing workforce is keeping up with rising demand and factory managers likely aren't yet feeling pressured to expand their payrolls.

Judging by the number of applications for unemployment benefits, manufacturing companies and other employers are laying off fewer workers. But the economic upturn isn't strong enough yet to encourage a hiring boom.

The Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment insurance was unchanged during the week ending April 18 at a six-month low of 404,000. Claims had dropped significantly during the three previous weeks.

"The economy's not hitting on all cylinders, but at least the engine's running," said economist Paul Lally of R.H. Wrightson and Associates in New York.

The most important of four indicators supporting the gain in the leading index was a substantial improvement in consumer optimism. It more than offset the most substantial of six negative indicators, a drop in the inflation-adjusted money supply.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady praised the Federal Reserve for trying to stimulate money supply growth, and thus economic growth, by cutting a key short-term interest rate three weeks ago. But, Brady cautioned the central bank to remain vigilant.

"If the growth of the money supply were to stagnate in the spring or summer of '92 as it did in the spring and summer of '91, the recovery would be threatened and an opportunity lost," he told the Republican Task Force on Tax Policy and Job Creation, a congressional group.

The Bush administration is counting on faster growth through November to bolster the president's reelection chances. Bush's advisers have complained that Federal Reserve timidness in cutting rates last year ruined the prospects for a fast recovery from the recession that began in July 1990.

During the first three months of this year, the economy expanded at a modest 2 percent annual rate. Most analysts believe growth will accelerate to the 3 percent range during the second half of the year.

Still, that would not be enough to bring substantial improvement in the nation's unemployment rate, which remained stuck at the 6½-year high of 7.3 percent in March.

The other positive indicators in the leading index were a rise in prices for sensitive industrial materials, considered a sign of stronger demand; an increase in orders for new business equipment and buildings, and slower deliveries by goods-producing industries, another sign of strengthened demand.

The other negatives were building permits, orders to factories for consumer goods, manufacturers' backlog of unfilled orders, stock prices and new claims for unemployment insurance, which were up on average in March before starting their most recent decline.

The average workweek held steady during the month.

The various changes left the index at 147.9 percent of its 1982 base. The index has risen 1.9 percent during the first quarter compared with a 0.3 percent decline during the fourth quarter.

Speakers throughout the weekend include U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, Superconducting Super Collider director Roy Schwitters and Gov. Ann Richards.

Ambassadors from Russia, Africa, Europe, Latin American, Asia and the Middle East are slated to give presentations.

Dallas will promote itself and be promoted, organizers say.

They point to the city's technology-based corporations and Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the world's second-busiest. Dallas is home to world-class culture and medical centers. And the city has been selected for at least four 1994 World Cup soccer games.

Forum chairman Ron Haddock, president and chief executive officer of Fina Co., said global contacts — made casually or through formal sessions — can pay off with investment opportunities. Haddock planned to spend time mixing with the delegation from Saudi Arabia, where Fina is working on a possible venture.

"In Washington they're talking about this event," Haddock said. "This city is being talked about in an international context."

Haddock projects the forum will gross about $1 million for the Dallas International Educational Trust, a group that foots the bill throughout the year for visiting dignitaries' gifts and other expenses tax money can't fund.

KING TRIAL AFTERMATH

Experts seek to understand verdict

N.Y. Times News Service

Lawyers throughout the country debated on Thursday why a jury in Simi Valley, Calif., acquitted four Los Angeles police officers of charges that they had brutalized Rodney G. King. But in Los Angeles, where the episode took place, the second-guessing was particularly intense and fine-tuned.

Much of the analysis focused on the performance of the prosecution. A few asserted that from the outset prosecutors were lukewarm about the case. Others accused prosecutors of tactical errors: declining to call King to the stand, failing to stress the racial animus of the defendants, losing their cool during closing arguments.

Some thought the prosecutors outmatched. While the defense lawyers in the case had built their careers defending police officers from such charges, even senior prosecutors have scant familiarity with brutality cases.

Conversely, others thought the prosecutors were overconfident — convinced that even the defense's insistence that the case be moved to lily-white Ventura County could not overcome the devastating impact of the home video that all of America has seen.

In fact, however, the outcome of the case may well have been decided when Judge Stanley Weisberg of California Superior Court transferred the case from the city to Simi Valley, an overwhelmingly white, conservative enclave that is the home of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library.

"The responsibility for this verdict falls on the jury," said Prof. Laurie L. Levenson of Loyola Law School in Los Angeles, one of two law schools shut down on Thursday by the turmoil on the streets around it. "Frankly, the people in Simi Valley worship the police."

Courts have wide discretion to grant changes of venue in notorious cases, even where the demographics of the substituted locale are dramatically different. Still, some lawyers questioned the purpose of transferring the case, particularly since Simi Valley jurors would have been every bit as familiar with the videotape.

"Sirhan Sirhan didn't get a change in venue; Charles Manson didn't get change of venue," said Tom Barham, a lawyer in Los Alamitos who has represented many victims of police brutality. "But the facts were so overwhelmingly in favor of conviction that the court did backflips to give this trial every appearance of fairness."

California legislators said Thursday that they were considering proposals requiring that when cases are moved they be transferred to areas of comparable ethnicity and density.

Even hardened veterans of police brutality cases said they were stunned by the outcome. Thomas E. Beck, who has been counseling complainants in police brutality cases for 14 years, said he was "staggered" by the verdict.

One of the few lawyers who said they were not surprised by the King verdict was John C. Burton of Pasadena, co-chairman of the Police Misconduct Lawyers Referral Service in Los Angeles.

He asserted that Ira Reiner, the district attorney of Los Angeles County, was ambivalent about the case from the outset, and that the chief prosecutor, Terry White, who is black, took his cues from his boss.

"There was simply no zeal in their prosecution, and the reason is that they're part of the same state apparatus as the police," he said. "They're used to prosecuting Rodney Kings, not defending them. To them, he's just another minority young man who's been chucked onto the junk pile."

Barham disagreed. "Terry White demonstrated he had a total commitment to the case," he said. "If a jury makes up its mind it's not going to listen to the facts or apply the law to those facts, there's not much a prosecutor can do. Simi is really the word, only it should be spelled 's-e-a-m-y.'"

Interviews by several television news organizations with jurors afterward demonstrated that defense lawyers won them over on three crucial points: that it was King, not the police, who set the agenda that night; that since King could have avoided the beating in the first place by failing to resist, he got his just deserts; and third, that if force were justified at the outset, circumstances justified whatever force followed.

Like others, Barham said the decision not to call King to testify, for fear it would shift the jury's gaze toward him and away from the four policemen, was both understandable and defensible. But, he continued, "the jurors were putting Rodney King on trial anyway, so you had nothing to lose putting him on."

Prof. Peter Arenella of the UCLA Law School agreed. "With all the attendant risks, if the prosecution had Rodney King on the stand it would have been harder for the jury to dismiss the significance of the damage that had been done to a human being," he said.

But Arenella said the videotape might have been overplayed, thereby losing its impact.

Bush condemns street violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush condemned "murder and destruction" by Los Angeles rioters on Thursday but at the same time said the Justice Department would intensify its investigation of police conduct in the taped-beating case that ignited the violence.

Bush met at the White House with Attorney General William Barr, who raised the possibility that four officers acquitted of brutality charges in state court could face federal charges if his investigation shows they violated the civil rights of the motorist they beat.

The president also appealed for an end to the street violence that followed the acquittals on Wednesday and continued Thursday.

"The murder and destruction on the streets of Los Angeles must be stopped," Bush said. "Lootings, beatings and random violence ... must be condemned."

Barr said the federal government will move "as expeditiously as possible" to determine whether there are grounds to charge the four white policemen with violating the civil rights of Rodney King, who is black.

Barr sent Associate Attorney General Wayne Budd, a black former U.S. attorney in Boston, to Los Angeles to meet with officials there. The attorney general said investigators will try to determine "whether there was intentional infliction of excessive force" against King by the officers who had stopped him for speeding.

"In the American conscience there is no room for bigotry and racism," Bush said in a brief statement at the White House.

Arson and looting erupted again Thursday in Los Angeles after nine people were killed overnight.

Neither Barr nor Bush would characterize the acquittal verdict by the California jury in the case. However, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush felt "the same frustration everyone else does. He saw the videotape and it's hard to compare that to the verdict and not wonder what happened."

Container plants popular because versatile, portable

Container plants continue to gain popularity because of their versatility, portability and limited space needs.

Kiker

Colorful flowering plants, as well as vegetable and fruit producing plants, can be grown in containers.

Container plants have been used for landscape enrichment throughout history. They can be highlighted in a prominent spot when at their peak and hidden from view when not needed or when in less than attractive condition.

In addition, a wide variety of plant species that have different cultural requirements may be grown on the same premises, since individual soil, watering, pH, fertility, light and other environmental requirements can be provided for each container.

Almost any plant can be used as a container specimen as long as its cultural requirements are met.

Placing a plant in a container tends to dramatize it and make it more important visually. Deciduous or evergreen trees, shrubs and vines, annual and perennial flowers may be used.

The key is to determine where the plant will usually be located and the availability of sunlight, moisture and protection. Annual flowers usually prefer at least a half day's full sun, but most tropicals and evergreens do well with less.

Design of the overall area should be considered. When selecting from the wide variety of containers on the market today, choose those of simple design that do not compete with the plant but tend to enhance it. For instance, plans in plain terra cotta clay pots often are featured on beautifully designed terraces, patios and entrances. Fortunately, some of the most appropriate containers such as clay products are often moderately priced.

Care of the plant is quite important. Container plants usually require more care than those grown in the ground. Frequent watering, often on a daily basis, is necessary for the most species, especially during hot weather. Arrangements should be made for their care during vacations, or they can be partially suck into the ground in a shady, moist area.

Once the plant is well established, periodically add small amounts of a complete fertilizer.

Neem tree living chemical factory

By Jeff Nesmith
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A spreading shade tree that is common along roadsides in India has been found to contain a collection of amazing chemicals that offer hope of new pharmaceuticals and "new era" of powerful, non-polluting pesticides, scientists believe.

Villagers in India have for centuries believed in nearly miraculous healing and insect repelling properties in the tree, known as the "neem" tree.

Now, says a committee of the National Academy of Sciences, it appears the villagers were right. The traditionally cautious academy titled the new report "Neem: A Tree for Solving Global Problems."

The neem tree is a living chemical factory. Its leaves and olive-shaped fruit contain powerful, biodegradable substances that repel insects and disrupt their development, other materials that have antifungal, antibacterial and even antiviral properties and still others that offer promise as birth control agents.

Soap and a decay-preventing toothpaste are produced from oil extracted from the seeds.

So far, the tree's most dramatic promise seems to be in the chemicals it has evolved to protect itself from insects. Though these non-polluting substances have nothing in common chemically with synthetic pesticides, their effect has been found comparable to malathion, DDT, Dieldrin and others, the committee said.

To obtain neem pesticides, farmers in the underdeveloped world do not need sophisticated chemical plants, the committee said. They only need to soak seeds and leaves in water and alcohol, then scoop off the oil that rises to the top of the mixture.

"This is one of the most fascinating things I've ever run into in my career as a scientist," said Eugene B. Shultz, an engineering professor at Washington University in St. Louis and chairman of the National Academy committee. "What this has taught me is we don't pay enough attention to traditional techniques and tend to dismiss them."

Neem's "chemical weapons are extraordinary," the committee said. For example:

■ In an experiment by U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists, neem extracts were sprayed on halves of soybean leaves and the other halves left untreated. The leaves were placed in containers with Japanese beetles. Within 48 hours, the beetles chewed the untreated sides of the leaves down to their woody veins — but starved to death without touching the treated sides.

■ In Ohio, soybean plants sprayed with neem extract were protected for up to 14 days, even though untreated plants in the same field were chewed to pieces by a variety of insects overnight.

■ When larvae from gypsy moths are sprayed with neem extracts, their development was disrupted and they were unable to reproduce.

■ Neem does not seem to affect human beings, other mammals or beneficial insects. In fact, laboratory rats that had neem-seed extract brushed on their skin ate more and gained more weight than untreated rats.

■ When neem extract was sprayed on peanuts, a common fungus that produces aflatoxin, the most potent carcinogen known, could no longer contaminate the peanuts.

In all, neem has been shown effective against 200 species of insects, including Mexican bean beetles, Colorado potato beetles, locusts, grasshoppers, tobacco budworms, six different kinds of cockroaches, cabbage bugs, rice bugs and coffee bugs.

"For all its apparent promise, however, research on neem and the development of its products are not receiving the massive support that might seem justified," the committee. "Indeed, the promise mentioned above is known to only a handful of entomologists, foresters and pharmacologists — and, of course, to the traditional farmers of South Asia."

Copies of the 130-page report are available from the National Academy Press, 2101 Constitution Ave. NW, Washington, D.C. 20418; telephone (202) 334-2000.

PUBLIC NOTICE
COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FUND
TEXAS COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Midland County has completed its 1989 Texas Community Development Program (TCDP) project under a contract with the Texas Department of Housing & Community Affairs. This water line improvements project was carried out in a "windowpane" target area in the southeast quadrant of the City of Midland.

A public hearing on this TCDP project will be held at 5:15 o'clock P.M. on Tuesday, May 12, 1992, in the Midland County Courthouse located at 200 West Wall, Midland, Texas. The purpose of this public hearing will be to discuss and evaluate the County's implementation of this water line improvements project.

Citizens are encouraged to attend this public hearing and present their views to the County. Written comments will be accepted by the County until this public hearing is concluded.

For further information about the County's 1989 TCDP project, contact Charles W. Seltzer, County Judge, Midland County, at (915) 688-1147. Handicapped individuals who might have difficulty in attending this public hearing should contact the county judge's office to arrange for special assistance.
