NAMED PRIME MINISTER — James Callaghan leaves No. 10, Downing Street, in London Monday after a 90-minute cabinet meeting. Callaghan, British foreign secretary, was named today to succeed Harold Wilson as prime minister and leader of Britain's ruling Labor Party, according to Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency. An official announcement of the vote count was expected today.

Callaghan named new British prime minister

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary James Callaghan was named to succeed Harold Wilson today as prime minister and leader of Britain's ruling Labor party. He is a strong advocate of improved relations between Western Europe and the United States.

"There will be no insiders and no outsiders and no cliques in my administration," he told fellow Laborites after he was chosen. "So far as the past is concerned I shall wipe the slate clean and I ask everyone else to do the same."

Callaghan, 64, who represented his party's center-right majority, defeated Employment Secretary Michael Foot, 62, a left-winger, in a vote by Labor members of Parliament.

The new Labor party leader was assured of an early evening summons to Buckingham Palace from Queen Elizabeth II. Her royal assent, a formality, is needed to make him prime minister.

Wilson, 60, announced his resignation March 16, saying he wanted to retire at that age.

Action/reaction: Physical ed quiz

Q. I was told that the juniors in Big Spring High School who were participating in physical education were told a few weeks ago that they could no longer be in P.E. The reason given, I am told, was that there is no room. Is this true?

A. John Smith, principal at Big Spring High School, said that before the high school went to the quarter system, students used to take P.E. all four years. Since the quarter system, they get required physical education in two years. However, Smith maintains that a student should be able to take P.E. as an elective if he desires. He said that he could not find anyone who would admit having told junior students that none of them could take physical education, but that some students might have been told this if a class was full.

Overstating Soviet strength?

Ford, Reagan help USSR?

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford and GOP presidential challenger Ronald Reagan may be playing into the hands of the Soviet Union by overstating the current Soviet military buildup, a Democratic congressman says.

Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin said Sunday that "exaggerating the Soviet military buildup for domestic political reasons is a risky business."

The main danger, Aspin said, is that "other countries respond to us based on their perceptions of our strengths and weaknesses."

"Why are presidential candidates doing Moscow's propaganda work for them? They are only weakening our position in the Third World when they exaggerate the might of the Soviet military," he said.

Also over the weekend, former Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt said Congress should allocate additional shipbuilding money for smaller, conventionally powered warships rather than for a few much more expensive nuclear-propelled ships.

Citing rapid expansion of the Soviet navy, Zumwalt said that "in an era when we have increasingly fantastic accuracy and increasingly more powerful explosive capability, even in the conventional field, it's just crazy to be going in the direction we're going."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., charged today, "Congress is being stampeded into the biggest peacetime increase in the defense budget in years because of scare stories leaked out of the Defense Department."

Proxmire, in a statement, said it would be "an incredible blunder" for President Ford to veto a congressional reduction in the defense budget because a veto would, in itself, impose a $9-billion reduction in defense spending for fiscal 1977 under a continuing resolution.

"The defense budget should be reordered internally to reverse the declining force levels by purchasing cheaper, more reliable ships, aircraft and tanks," he said. "We can do this and save the taxpayer billions of his dollars."

Aspin contended that while the Soviets have been increasing their military forces over recent years, most of the growth is aimed against the Chinese and for other purposes that are "nonthreatening" toward the United States.

"The presidential race has become a one-sided affair," he said. "Both Republican candidates are shouting: 'The Russians are coming.' ... None of the Democratic candidates are willing to jump into the fray."

Aspin was also seeking to counter recent statements by Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, his predecessor James R. Schlesinger and Lt. Gen. Daniel O. Graham, former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency, arguing that the Soviets are achieving military superiority.

The congressman, a former Pentagon analyst, released a study by him and his staff concluding that the Soviets' manpower of 4.8 million and U.S9 manpower of 2.1 million translate into virtually comparable forces of troops on both sides.

During 1975, he said, combined defense expenditures by the NATO countries came to $140 billion, compared to $122 billion for the Warsaw Pact powers, including the Soviet Union.

Conservatives gain majority in Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Conservative forces made strong gains in Thailand's second post-dictatorship election of a new National Assembly. Observers attributed the results to dissatisfaction with former Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj's failure to quell leftist violence and his decision to force the withdrawal of most U.S. troops from the country.

Kukrit, 65, lost his own seat in the assembly in the voting Sunday. It appeared that his older brother, Seni Pramoj, would be the next prime minister.

With 80 per cent of the votes counted, Seni's rightist Democrat party had won 101 of the 179 assembly seats. The rightist, military-backed THAI Nation party was second with 47. There were strong indications that the two parties would form a coalition government.

Seni, 70, said he would assume the prime minister's post and seek a coalition with one or two other parties. He did not rule out new negotiations with the United States to increase the 270-man force of American military advisers that is to remain in the country after July, but he said it was a delicate issue.

Military leaders have been lobbying for a 4,000-man American force because of the Communist governments in neighboring Cambodia and Laos.

Seni told reporters his priorities would be to reduce unemployment, help the farmers and restore law and order. He said his foreign policy would be based on neutrality but with empasis on "close relations with the United States."

Seni, a pre-World War II ambassador to the United States, was prime minister for four and a half months shortly after the war. In the first election after the overthrow of the military dictatorship, in January 1975, his party won the largest number of seats, but he could not maintain a majority and had to resign after eight days.

Reagan's plans for Abilene visit revealed

Gov. Ronald Reagan, who is contesting Gerald Ford for the right to represent the Republican party in this year's presidential election, will arrive at the Abilene airport at about 6:30 p.m., Thursday and make an appearance at the Kiwanis Pancake Supper in the Taylor County Coliseum between 7 and 8 p.m.

Those desiring to see Reagan have been advised to eat early at the pancake supper and take a seat in the huge coliseum until such time as Reagan makes his appearance.

Reagan reportedly will take a turn cooking pancakes. Tickets to the supper are $1.50 each. They may be purchased at the door.

Rain recorded in Big Spring

Rain the past week again proved insignificant for most areas of Big Spring. Total precipitation for the town was .18 of an inch, with .03 of an inch for Saturday and .13 of an inch for Sunday. This brings the year's total to .44 of an inch.

Despite the low precipitation readings at the Big Spring Experiment Station, some areas on the south side of town reported heavier localized showers ranging from .5 to .8 of an inch.

In sharp contrast to Big Spring's sprinkles, precipitation south of Sterling City, Sunday, was reported to be between 5.5 and 6 inches. Rain in the Silver Community near Bronte came to .5 of an inch.

Big Spring's 1976 total is 1.24 inches less than the total for last year at this time.

Apparently unfounded

Election rumors continue to fly

Claims by a polls watcher at the Northside election box of irregularities in Saturday's city election appear to be unfounded here today.

One of two watchers at the box claimed discrepancies several times during the day and also held up release of the box at the end of the day.

The city secretary and the police chief finally went to the election location after 10 p.m. and carried the box back to the City Hall to be locked up with the other city boxes.

Mrs. Rufus Davidson, election judge, said there were no campaign signs of any kind inside the poll markers. Tom Ferguson, city secretary, stated there were no mutilated or defaced ballots in the voting box.

Two voter ballots were not included in the total because "to my knowledge, their home was not inside the city limits," Mrs. Davidson stated.

During the day, Mrs. Davidson, who has been election judge at the box for over 16 years, was reprimanded by the watchers several times.

Mrs. Davidson said the sealed envelopes have been turned over to the city council for the official canvass.

Mrs. Davidson said that at one point during the day she contacted an attorney and was told that "watchers are to watch and not run an election."

City council run-off date to be set at special session

The run-off election for the city council post should be held in "about 15 days," Jim Gregg, city attorney stated here today after conferring with the Texas Municipal League in connection with regulations on the run-off.

It will be the first run-off in city election history. The charter which changed to voting by positions included the run-off requirement.

Mayor Wade Choate has called a special meeting of the City Council at 1 p.m. Thursday for an emergency consideration of setting a run-off election date. He said the date will be left to the discretion of the council, but the earliest that it can be held is April 21. The city election votes will also be canvassed at that time.

The run-off will be between Ralph McLaughlin and Jack Watkins. McLaughlin led the four-man ticket for Position 2 Saturday, but did not obtain a majority of the votes.

Ezzell will serve on panel to study gas rate regulations

AUSTIN — State Rep. Michael Ezzell, of Snyder, has been named to a subcommittee of the House State Affairs Committee to undertake a 60-day study of the advisability of placing natural gas utility rate regulations under the jurisdiction of the new State Utilities Commission.

Rep. Ezzell and nine other members of the subcommittee will be seeking to determine if consumers would be better served if legislation was introduced to transfer regulation authority from the Texas Railroad Commission.

Clayton asked Rep. Tom Uher of Bay City, who will chair the subcommittee, to begin hearings immediately and make recommendations by June 1.

"The date June 1 has become significant to all our committees," Clayton said. "That is also when we expect determinations from our House Ways and Means Committee and the House Energy Resources Committee. The idea is to have examined all aspects of the natural gas situation by that date. We can then coordinate the findings and studies of all three groups and have a solid foundation for any determinations we will then make."

Ezzell has written to Gov. Dolph Briscoe to express his feelings that he would be favorable to the calling of a Special Session of the Legislature to deal with the rising utility costs in Texas. Ezzell specified that he would only be interested in a Special Session after plans are formulated which show concrete evidence that legislative changes could be made which would alleviate the problem.

Ezzell said he supports Speaker Bill Clayton's efforts to begin immediate work with the House Ways and Means Committee and the Energy Resources Committee to draw up plans which would not erode the tax base but which would pass benefits to the consumers.

Ezzell said "Many citizens from West Texas have mentioned this problem to me and I feel that it is a matter of such importance that if there is a possible solution then we should not wait until January of 1977 to deal with it."

Webb AFB clean-up under way

The Webb AFB clean-up and fix-up drive will begin today and continue through Friday, April 16. Base appearance and fire prevention are the main targets of the drive. Grass within one foot of all building foundations will be removed and the ground sterilized to prevent any growth. This along with the elimination of trash will help in both the appearance and safety factors.

Col. Robert A. Owens, wing commander, said that everyone at the base will be involved in the clean up.

"Commanders, staff officers, pilots, students, technicians, first sergeants, clerks, drivers, and everyone who makes up the Webb family will be called upon to do his or her share," he said.

In addition to base personnel, various Big Spring civic groups will take part. Councils, wives clubs and Boy and Girl Scouts will spruce up such areas as the perimeter fence lines, entrances, pavillion and recreation areas.

Teamsters return to work, freight services restored

Teamsters union truck drivers returned to the roads today, but trucking industry leaders say the settlement that ended their three-day nationwide strike is going to cost the public money.

The agreement, reached Saturday night, now goes to the rank-and-file for ratification.

Four companies that are not being picketed because they have signed interim agreements to abide by whatever contract is negotiated at Arlington Heights, include one in Big Spring, the Missouri-Pacific Transport.

The other three companies have no local offices and include Brown Express, Airborne Freight Corp. and Southern-Pacific Transport.

Officials at union locals throughout the country reported their members returning to work.

Merchants' Fast Motor Lines here had not been able to accept any shipments for across state lines. Last week, they were shipping intrastate shipments to points connecting with approved lines such as Merchants, Alamo, Central and Apex.

They will be able to restore out-of-state service if the local drivers go back to work today.

Independents throughout the nation gave very little backing to the strike. Some of the independents at a local truck stop said that the Teamsters Union failed to support their strike in February 1974 so they didn't back this one.

At that time, independents blocked the gasoline tanks at Rip Griffin's Big Spring Truck Terminal.

A local answering service for the East Texas Motor Freight System was not accepting any deliveries any place last week. It was completely closed down, along with the ICX Freight Co. throughout the state.

This morning, a spokesman at ETMF Freight Lines said that as far as he knew, shipments were now restored.

Some trucking employers were unhappy with what they viewed as an inflationary settlement. John Murphy, chairman of Gateway Transportation Co., one of the nation's largest carriers, said the industry would seek rate increases from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The tentative settlement contained nearly all the economic terms union negotiators sought and reportedly included new stipulations for three days' sick leave, air conditioned trucks by 1978 and separate rooms for long-haul drivers.

Prior to Saturday's announcement, two-thirds of the 400,000 Teamsters' drivers and warehousemen covered by the National Master Freight Agreement were on the job under interim agreements with individual trucking concerns and a tentative settlement with two employers' groups reached a day earlier.

That settlement with the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and the Irregular Route Carriers provided an additional $1.65 in wages and $17 more a week in fringe benefits over 36 months, sources said. Teamsters earned from $7.18 to $7.33 and received $44 in weekly benefits under the old contract which expired April 1.

Other provisions reportedly included unlimited cost-of-living hikes, probably the toughest issue in the talks, and for longhaul drivers who are paid by milage, 3½ cents a mile in the next three years added to the existing 18-cent rate.

Trucking Employers Inc., the largest industry group representing 2,000 trucking concerns, settled for terms "almost identical" to those agreed upon by the two smaller groups, sources said.

Meanwhile, a six-city strike against the National Broadcasting Co. continued as the union awaited First Lady Betty Ford's answer to a plea not to cross picket lines for the network's Thursday night "Women of the Year" award program.

Prince Sihanouk resigns

BANGKOK, THAILAND (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk has resigned "forever" as Cambodia's chief of state, saying he was fulfilling an old vow. In a recording broadcast today by the Communist government in Phnom Penh, the 53-year-old prince and former king said that following the 1970 coup which ousted him, he swore "that after I accompanied my countrymen to complete victory over U.S. imperialism and the traitorous clique, and after the opening of the new revolutionary era, I would retire completely and forever from the political scene."

Conservatives gain

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's conservative opposition made more gains in the last major election test-before the national election next Oct. 3. The conservative Christian Democratic Union capped two years of almost unbroken regional election victories by increasing its ruling majority Sunday in the state parliament of Baden-Wuerttemberg, whose 6.2 million voters are a sixth of the national electorate.

Mrs. Harwell is elected to county school board

Mrs. Noel Harwell Jr., incumbent trustee-at-large in the county school board race, was named winner this morning after all of the boxes came in to the county clerk's office.

Mrs. Harwell polled 934 votes while Jerry Roach received 787. Nan Buske, running unopposed for trustee in precinct 3, polled 224 votes. R. L. Heith in precinct 4 polled 249. Most years, a total of 20 votes has decided these posts.

The record turnout of voters in the city election slopped over into the other elections. County-at-large ballots were exhausted by early afternoon.

Judge Bill Tune, who doubles as county school superintendent and as such is officially in charge of this election, was out of town Saturday. Mrs. Margaret Ray, county clerk, obtained additional ballots so the election could continue.

Nine accused of violating state liquor laws here

A liquor control raid in the early morning hours Sunday accounted for nine arrests on 14 counts of violating state liquor laws in Big Spring.

Recent arrests here are in keeping with a crackdown throughout the state of Texas on liquor violators in both wet and dry areas.

Four taxi drivers and the cab dispatcher were among those charged with sale of whisky in a wet area without a license. Since this would have completely closed down the local taxi service during the night, they were permitted to delay their arrival at the police station this morning, according to Dan Hutchinson of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission here. All bonds have been set at $2,500 by Justice of the Peace Bob West.

Any of the group who failed to show up today were to be picked up with a warrant. The list of those charged includes Alfred Emmanuel Taylor, A. Charley Bebee, Charles Holland Lewis, Faustino T. Aguilar and the dispatcher, Juanita Bishop.

Lewis and Ms. Bishop were charged on two counts.

This followed an investigation by Hutchinson and City Detective Richard Cantrell covering a period of several weeks. Two bellhops, Hollice Leroy Fife and Charles Edward Bradley, were also arrested on the same charge.

About 2:30 a.m., other arrests included Pascal Moore, 40, 205 NW 12th St., at 504 Lancaster. He was charged with possession of whisky for sale without a license. The officers picked up 44 half pints of gin, whisky, vodka and rum along, with 17 beer containers at that location.

Steve Jones, 55, 310 N. Scurry, was also arrested and charged with two charges at two different houses of possession for the purpose of sale. Jones was also arrested on identical charges in February. Confiscated at this location were 50 cans of beer, and 14 half pints of whisky.

Bill Flynn, district alcoholic beverage officer from Odessa, took part in the raids. Assisting Hutchinson were the local police and sheriff's department.

Officers taking part included Deputy Sheriff Sam Smelser, Larry Nettles, Sgt. Mike Pearson, Frank Constabile, Howard Klaus, Jan Hyden, Sgt. Melvin Darratt, and Larry Milley reserve police officer.

Police Chief Stanley Bogard expressed pleasure at the success of the liquor violation raid, the second conducted since the first of the year. Chief Bogard commended the liquor control officer and the detective working with him on the investigations.

Used to finance lobby trips?

Solons question revenue sharing use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should the nation's mayors, county officials and governors be allowed to use revenue-sharing money to visit Washington, meet with congressmen and lobby for more revenue-sharing money?

Rep. Jack Brooks, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee and a vociferous opponent of revenue-sharing, insists that they should not, and he is pushing an amendment to revenue-sharing legislation to insure that they do not.

Whether money allocated to the nation's states, counties and municipalities under the five-year-old program is actually used to fund trips by public officials to Washington is difficult to determine. The money is distributed with few federal instructions on how it should be spent, and in most cases it goes directly into a general fund.

But Brooks suspects that cities and states have, in some way, used the money to pressure Congress into giving them more money.

The revenue-sharing program has become extremely popular with the local and state officials, returning to their jurisdictions approximately $30 billion from the federal treasury since it was started in 1972.

The officials have been pressuring their congressmen and members of the House Government Operations Committee, particularly Brooks, for passage of a renewed program.

Since November, three organizations representing mayors, governors and county officials have had large meetings in Washington. Their primary goal has been to let Congress know they want the revenue-sharing program continued beyond its Dec. 31 expiration. Most officials at these meetings had their expenses paid by their governments.

The legislation to renew the program is pending in Congress.

In March, the U.S. Conference of Mayors-National League of Cities held a series of rallies that brought about 2,000 mayors and 1,500 other persons to Washington, by Brooks' count, to talk about revenuesharing. He estimated $500 was spent by each visitor.

This, said Brooks, a Texas Democrat, amounted to a $1.75 million investment in securing passage of revenue-sharing, worth at least $6.5 billion a year in federal allocations.

"The states and cities spent millions of dollars lobbying for this, and they're in dire financial straits," he said. A spokesman for the group said he did not know how much was spent.

"There's been some implication they used revenue-sharing money to come up here," Brooks said of the mayors. But, he asked, "How can you tell how much is revenue-sharing money, how much is salary and how much is money their granddaddies left them?"

Spokesmen for the mayors' group, the National Governors Conference and the Ntional Association of Counties each defended the public officials' recent visits and criticized Brooks' proposed amendment.

"It's an absurd proposal," said Tim Honey, a staff member for the mayors' group who has followed the legislation. "Obviously, state and local officials have a right to come to Washington to lobby for the program. And many of the people who come to town come to town for other business. How can you monitor it?"

Revenues up for Siboney

Siboney Corporation reported revenues of $15,241,000 for the year 1975 representing a 9 per cent increase or $1,225,000 over revenues of $14,016,000 in 1974.

With one exception, each of the Corporation's five operating companies contributed to this revenue increase.

Net income for the year was $277,000 compared to $1,173,000 in 1974, representing a decline of $896,000. Excluding income from the sale of oil and gas permit interests and the benefits of the utilization of the uncontested remainder of a tax loss carryforward, both of which were available to the Corporation in 1974 but not in 1975, the net income decline amounted to approximately $300,000.

Depressed conditions in the construction industry continue to adversely effect the Corporation's subsidiary engaged in the manufacture and sale of lighting fixtures, lenses, and sheet plastic. As a result, that subsidiary's revenues declined and its losses increased.

The Company's financial position is sound. With encouraging results to date in 1976 from its operating companies, and with expectations of additional income from two new business ventures, 1976 looks like a successful and a better year for Siboney.

Supreme Court refuses to hear Calley case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to review the conviction of former Army Lt. William L. Calley Jr. for the murder of civilians in the Vietnamese hamlet of My Lai in March, 1968.

An attorney for Calley said he has been told by the secretary of the Army that Calley will be placed on immediate parole.

"The secretary of the Army has stated and I have been assured by the counsel for the secretary of the Army, the general counsel, that Calley will be placed upon parole and will continue to live the life that he is presently living," said the attorney, J. Houston Gordon, contacted in Covington, Tenn. "He (Calley) will not be returned to prison, for which we are quite grateful. He will be placed on immediate parole."

The justices let stand an 8-5 decision of the U.S. Circuit Court in New Orleans reinstating Calley's 1971 court martial conviction.

Calley, 32, who is free on bail, appealed his conviction on two principal grounds:

—That he was denied a fair trial because of "worldwide and all-pervasive" publicity in which he was "labeled ... as a ghoul who had wantonly massacred hundreds of innocent civilians."

—That Congress should have been compelled to release confidential information for use in his trial just as former President Nixon was required to do in the Watergate scandal.

Calley has been living as a civilian in Columbus, Ga., since his conviction was overturned on Sept. 25, 1974, by U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott of Columbus.

Although the circuit court reversed this decision the Army released Calley on bail in 1974 and has said it does not plan to return him to prison.

Calley was accused of killing 102 Vietnamese civilians in a sweep through My Lai. He was convicted of murdering at least 22 and was sentenced to a life term. Subsequent appeals reduced the term to 10 years before he was freed on bail.

J. Houston Gordon of Covington, Tenn., Calley's attorney, told the justices that Congress denied Calley his constitutional rights by withholding potential evidence.

The House Armed Services Committee refused to let the defense look at the results of its My Lai hearings, comprising 3,045 pages of testimony by 151 witnesses.

The government asked the high court to let the conviction stand, saying Calley "was not tried in an atmosphere of persecution" and release of the Congressional data would not have affected the outcome of his trial.

Gordon argued that the privilege claimed by Congress was similar to Nixon's claim of executive privilege to withhold tapes and documents wanted by the prosecution in the Watergate cover-up trial. The Supreme Court, by an 8-0 vote, ordered Nixon to yield the material.

On the issue of publicity, Gordon argued that "legal trials are to determine guilt or innocence, not popularity."

"Never before in American history has an accused encountered such intense and continuous prejudicial publicity" as Calley did, Gordon told the court.

He also argued that Calley should have been granted the right to call high Defense Department officials, including then Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird as a witness. He said their testimony was needed to rebut denials by Army officers that they had been influenced by their superiors to press charges against Calley.

TALKS ABOUT SWINE FLU — Dr. Fratis Duff, director of the Texas Department of Health Resources, at a news conference in Austin Monday said state health authorities hope 10 million Texans can be given a vaccine to protect them against a feared epedemic of swine influenza next fall.

Vaccination of 10 million Texans eyed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — State health authorities hope 10 million Texans can be given a vaccine to protect them against a feared epedemic of swine influenza next fall.

"To vaccinate maybe 10 million Texans in three months is really a tremendous task but we are hopeful it can be done," Dr. Fratis Duff, director of the Texas Department of Health Resources, told a news conference today.

Duff said phamaceutical manufacturers are making the vaccine now and they hope to have enough for nationwide distribution next September. Congress is considering a bill that would appropriate $135 million for the manufacture and distribution.

"Then it is our goal to have it distributed and administered by the end of November. It will require all the resources of state and local public and private health officials to do the job," Duff said.

Duff said the cost of the vaccine will be paid by the federal government but if it is administered by a private doctor there might be a charge for an office call. In the public health facilities there will be no cost at all for getting the vaccine.

He said the vaccine would be available only through government sources and not available for purchase on the open market until after the mass inoculation.

Duff said a new strain of influenza appears about once every 10 years. In 1957 there was an epedemic of Asian flu and in 1968 the Hong Kong flu.

"The 1918 flu virus that killed more than 500,000 in the U.S. was never isolated but this new strain that appeared in February shows indications it is the same or very similar to the 1918 flu," he said.

Duff said the vaccine cannot be given to anyone who is allergic to eggs, but there are special immunzations that could be given in such cases.

"We will give a very simple test to everyone," he said. "We will ask them if they eat eggs and if they do, then they probably are not allergic to eggs."

The state director said the state health department would receive the vaccine from federal authorities and distribute it throughout the state. It also will conduct mass immunizations in the 10 public health regions.

The 69 local health departments in the larger cities throughout the state also will conduct mass immunizations.

Private physicians would be expected to administer the vaccine to their patients on request.

"But a large part of our effort will depend on volunteers, both in educating the public and in giving the shots," Duff said.

Health problem due discussion

All of us have some arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries. The long-term buildup of the problem, which is responsible for so many heart attacks, is the major health hazard for middle-aged males.

"Arteriosclerosis — Can We Help?" will be the topic of discussion for a Thursday, April 15, therapeutics seminar for health professionals at Big Spring State Hospital in Big Spring.

The seminar will originate from the auditorium of The University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio at 12:30 p.m.

Recession causes energy reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's two-year economic slump is responsible, in large part, for a steady reduction in energy consumption in the United States in 1975 dropped by 2.5 per cent, for a total decline of 4.8 per cent since the historic peak two years ago.

William Fisher, assistant secretary of the interior, said the drop resulted from "higher fuel prices, energy conservation efforts, reduced economic activity and a relatively mild winter."

But the bureau's figures indicated that the economic recession was the main restraint on energy use.

The statistics show that gross national product (GNP), the nation's total output of goods and services, declined 4 per cent from 1973 to 1975. At the same time, about 1 per cent less energy was consumed per dollar of GNP.

This apparently reflects increased effectiveness of energy use for the production of goods and services and a thinner spread of energy use over a slowly growing population.

This combination, aided by conservation efforts and mild weather, resulted in a two-year reduction of 6.6 per cent in direct energy use by factories, homes and businesses. However, only 4.8 per cent of the cutback showed up as fuel savings because some energy is always lost between the burning of fuel and the final use of energy.

The report showed most of the reduction last year occurred in the industrial sector, which cut back 6 per cent. Household and commercial users decreased their consumption by 2 per cent, while transportation and electric power generation increased their total energy consumption about one-half of 1 per cent from 1974 to 1975. The loss of energy is especially high when converting fuel to electricity.

The bureau's report showed the biggest reductions in consumption in 1975 were in oil and natural gas, which dropped respectively by 155 million barrels and 1.5 trillion cubic feet. Nuclear power and coal took up some of the slack.

In 1973, the United States used the equivalent of 61.2 barrels of oil for every man, woman and child in the nation. Last year, this figure dropped to 58.2 barrels.

Mexico willing to study building trade center

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — Jose Lopez Portillo apparent next president of Mexico, says he is willing to study establishing a permanent trade center in San Antonio, Tex.

Lopez Portillo talked about U.S.-Mexican trade during the weekend at a meeting of community leaders here.

For the past three years San Antonio has been site of the annual Mexican Trade Fair, Mexico's first such effort outside its own borders to encourage exports.

"I am familiar with the operation of the fair and the continuation of the trade fair in San Antonio forms an integral part of our projections," Lopez Portillo said.

"As to the possibility of a permanent trade center in San Antonio, I am willing to give it study," he said.

Lopez Portillo is the presidential candidate of the majority Party of Revolutionary Institutions (PRI) in Mexico. The next president will begin a six-year term in December.

Solons ask for San Antonio annexation ruling reversal

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., and Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., say they will ask the Justice Department this week to reverse a ruling that outlawed several land annexations by San Antonio in 1972-1973.

The ruling contended that at least 13 of 23 annexations illegally upset an ethnic balance in the city's population under the 1974 Voting Rights Act.

Krueger and Bentsen met with city officials Sunday and called the Justice Department ruling a misunderstanding.

"I was as surprised as anyone that the Justice Department ruled as it did," Krueger said. "I don't see how they can say a 1.8 per cent shift in population is an attempt to discriminate."

"Blacks and Mexican-Americans still constitute more than 60 per cent of San Antonio's population," he said. "I don't think they can state they're under represented."

Bentsen said, "I don't believe the law calls for this at all. I believe it is a misinterpretation of the law. The ruling doesn't make sense."

Both Bentsen and Krueger voted for the disputed Voting Rights Act.

Mayor Lila Cockrell said the ruling gives the Justice Department control over local elections.

If the voting rights issues ultimately get tied up in court, it could mean a freeze on local municipal elections, including bond elections, for more than three years, she said.

The Justice Department said the annexations appear to dilute Mexican-American voting strengths in San Antonio.

Before 1972 Mexican-Americans made up about 54 per cent of the city's population.

The annexations, which drew large areas of Anglo-populated suburbs into the north side of the city, reduced the Mexican-American population to about 51 per cent and apparently raised the Anglo population to about 40 per cent from a previous 38 per cent.

Learning to appreciate the CAP

I heard an unusual story last week about how one Big Spring resident got involved with the Civil Air Patrol.

The Civil Air Patrol is an Air Force auxiliary group that uses light planes to search for either downed aircraft or lost people. Such a group can be important, especially in an area like West Texas where we have miles and miles of nothing but miles and miles.

PAULINE PIPER

I THOUGHT I might pass this story on to the readers. It comes from Mrs. Pauline Piper, wife of Big Spring Christian Church minister Bernie Piper.

Mrs. Piper was living in another sparsely populated area: Clifton, Colorado. One Sunday morning after church, two of her girl friends wanted to go for a car ride out to National Monument Park. She told her husband where they were going, and one of her girlfriends joked:

"If we're not back by midnight, send out a search party."

But she only thought that she was joking.

One of Mrs. Piper's friends drove the big Pontiac into the park, and they kept going farther and farther in. It was cool, and the wind was blowing. They were afraid the car might tumble off the mountains.

They went far away from the main roads, and they ended up on the Utah side at the Colorado River.

Just before their car came to the edge of a steep cliff, it stuck fender deep in the sand. The three women could not free it.

By this time darkness was rapidly approaching. They were lost and stranded, so they decided to spend the night in the car, using the one blanket and the car heater to keep warm as long as the tank of gasoline would hold out.

In the night, they heard planes flying. They hoped that these came from search parties looking for them. Back in Clifton, the townspeople worried that the wind had blown the automobile off a mountain, and they feared the women could be badly injured.

WHEN DAWN came, the three women climbed out of the car and began to walk back in the direction they had driven. The terrain was hilly and isolated.

Still, Mrs. Piper said she knew that they would be found. "I knew they would find us. I had faith that God would get us out of there."

The women walked a hard, slow 6½ miles before a Civil Air Patrol plane spotted them about mid-morning. The plane tossed down some jackets to warm them and some candy bars to give them energy until help could arrive.

The CAP plane radioed the women's location to ground parties, and the women stayed put until a three-vehicle caravan arrived.

Mrs. Piper said that she was so grateful to the Civil Air Patrol for helping them.

When she moved to Big Spring a short time later, she took the opportunity to pay back some of her thanks to the Civil Air Patrol by joining the Dragonfly Composite Squadron, Big Spring's 24-member squadron. She currently serves as the squadron's financial officer.

What better reason can there be for serving in an organization than to help one that possibly saved your life?

It came to pass

Around the rim

James Werrell

"What a great day," I said, as I drove along. "The sun is shining, the birds are singing, God's in his heaven and . . ."

"OH YEAH, we'll probably have a dust storm before the day is out," said a voice behind me.

"What was that," I said, not daring to turn around.

"I'm merely a manifestation of the voice of cynicism," said the voice, using a pretty good W. C. Fields imitation.

"Sure, and I'm the Queen of Sheba. I bet you're a mugger, or a pervert, or something," I said, disbelievingly.

"That's music to my ears," the voice said. "The sound of cynicism. Just a sample of my work."

"Look pal," I said. "Let's sit down over a good cup of coffee and discuss this before things get out of hand."

"A good cup of coffee! With the water in this town? You've got to be kidding," said the cynic (I was starting to believe). "You see, kid, when all that youthful optimism starts to carry you into left field, I'm the one who brings you back down to earth."

I kept driving, thinking that the car was responding pretty well.

"So you think the car is responding pretty well," said the cynic (he could read minds!). "What about all that oil dripping on your spark plugs. If you ever find an honest mechanic who'll fix this little foreign heap for less than a pound of flesh, let me know."

HE WAS starting to get to me. I risked a look in the rear-view mirror and noticed a stumpy little guy with a flat top haircut. The funny thing was that he looked familiar.

"I have the flat top because long hair will never come into fashion, and, yes, you do know me," he said, reading my mind again. "I was there when you first tried to ride a bicycle, when you voted for McGovern, and when you asked for your first job."

"But you don't win out all the time. Nixon's gone, more or less, and I was oiptimistic about that," I said.

"I was working for the Republicans that year," he replied.

"Listen, tell me, do you hang out at the Herald office all the time?" I queried.

"There's a wealth of cynicism there. It's a gold mine," he said. "I also pick up a lot of overtime for Tommy Hart."

I was getting pretty sick of this little so-and-so. I pulled over to the curb, grabbed him by the lapels of his zoot suit and pulled him out of the car.

"Have a heart kid. Just give me a ride down to that church on the corner. I have some unfinished business there," he said, brushing himself off.

"No way," I said. "I've got a tennis game I have to get to, and I'm late already."

"Your serves will probably all be long, and your backhand will probably deteriorate in the second set," he said, chuckling.

Just as he spoke, a huge cloud of reddish-brown dust appeared on the horizon, and had soon obliterated the sun.

"Damn, I knew it," I said, disgustedly.

"That's my boy," said the cynic.

As last show

William F. Buckley, Jr.

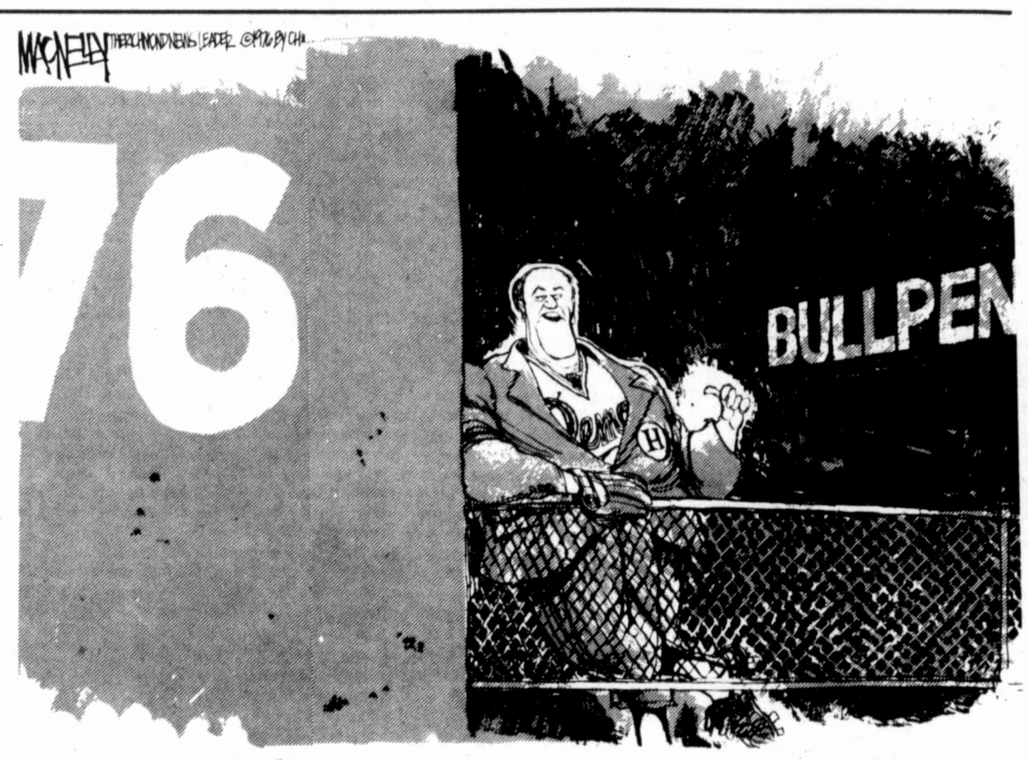

I don't know when perspective is going to set in, but until it does, read me, pray, out of that fraternity of self-adulators who surround Woodward and Bernstein as the exemplars of a new journalism fired by ethical concern. I haven't seen the movie, but it is an ironic masterstroke that it should star Robert Redford. The last time out on the boards, Redford was a CIA agent who was finally revolted by his profession. Now he is born again, unburdened of doubts: I Was A Spy For Woodward & Bernstein, And Found Out All About Pat Nixon's Sex Life.

ATTEMPT, FOR a moment, to recapture perspective. A gang of over-zealous Republican pols decide they should find out what is going on in Democratic headquarters, and to that end organize a team to burglarize those offices and bring out information that might be politically useful. The end result of that attempted invasion of the professional privacy of Lawrence O'Brien was a dozen people in jail, and the resignation of a President of the United States, the first time in history.

The reputation, meanwhile, of the only prominent surviving Cabinet member of that Administration has been under constant attack because he had a hand — how direct, we do not know — in expediting a dozen telephone taps that sought to isolate the sources of leaks of national security information. It is ceaselessly pointed out by the critics that one or two of the people whose telephones were tapped were in no visible way connected with national security matters, giving rise to the possibility that a Republican Administration had a prurient interest in the private affairs of these men. Notwithstanding these events, about which the contention continues, one fact does stand out. It is that not a single personal detail about the lives of the tapees has ever seen public print. Mr. Morton Halperin is engaged in an extensive civil lawsuit against Henry Kissinger, the abstract merits of which are here extraneous. It remains a fact that the public knows not a single thing about Morton Halperin's sex life, his religious habits, his alcoholic intake, or even whether, at night, he is given to fantasizing conversations with Thomas Jefferson.

It is with this background that one judges the activities of the identical bunch of people identified with the investigation that brought down a President — featuring their invasions of privacy. The difference between Richard Nixon and Mrs. Graham is that he was an unsuccessful snoop with a finite curiosity about human weaknesses; while she, as employer and now as purveyor, is sponsor of successful snoops, whose curiosity is entirely unlimited. Perhaps their imagination is as unlimited as their prurience.

WE CANNOT know how much of the current garbage about Richard Nixon has been fabricated. It hardly matters. It matters very much that Nixon has to skulk out the rest of his life in San Clemente, while those who receive the Pulitzer Prizes and the Woman of the Century Awards take out advertising space telling you how, by merely buying their product, you can learn everything about the private lives of Richard and Patricia Nixon.

"ME? OH, HEAVENS TO BETSY ... I'M JUST A SCOUT FOR THE SENATORS."

Deserves part of reputation

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please tell me why sugar has suddenly become such a villain? I've had sugar in my diet for almost 87 years, so I cannot understand why it is so harmful. I am overweight. Has sugar contributed to this? — Curious.

Considering the fact that you are overweight, I'd say you were lucky in your choice of ancestors to have achieved age 87. Others would very likely have succumbed to high blood pressure, stroke or heart disease before this. And unwise sugar intake could contribute to any of them.

Sugar is a carbohydrate, a simple carbohydrate, which is a source of quick energy because it is so readily utilized by the system. I agree that in some instances sugar has been unfairly maligned. It yields only 16 calories per teaspoon, but you must realize that the sugar bowl is not the only source of sugar. A bit more than half the protein we eat is eventually converted to a form of sugar. Fruits and vegetables contain from 10 to 20 per cent sugar as carbohydrates. Orange juice is 10 per cent sugar, potatoes more.

The chief problem with sugar is when it's overdone. Having a sweet tooth gets you in the habit of eating candy, cakes with frosting, sugar-loaded beverages. Tooth decay is only one consequence of this. Diabetics are not allowed sugar, since their problem is an already elevated blood sugar level. Excess sugar intake can be a factor in arteriosclerosis. We are learning how it raises the level of triglycerides in the bloodstream.

Apparently your system has been able to handle sugar well. It's done so for 87 years. Others, as I indicated above, aren't so lucky. However, I might add that if you are a heavy sugar user, that could be a factor in your present overweight problem.

If this is the case, I suggest you cut down. You should try to drop some of your excess poundage, despite those apparently "sturdy" ancestral genes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that a two-year-old's hair is "baby hair" and that it should be cut short or it will be too thin in later life? — Mrs. S.W.

Not true. Hair found on the fetus or on very young infants is called "lanugo." It is shed, usually before birth or shortly afterward, and is replaced by fine "secondary" hair. This is the start of the hair your tot will live with all his life. Cutting will have no effect on the process going on within the follicles at the roots.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you write about thickened toenails, the cause and treatment? — H.U.

Any structure that is subject to prolonged pressure will thicken or harden. This includes the nails, skin (calluses), the muscles, the heart, etc. Pressure exerted by shoes and socks cause the nails to thicken over the years. Toenail problems of this type are more common than are those of fingernails.

Treatment consists of soaking the feet for 15 to 30 minutes in warm water. This softens the nails and makes trimming easier. In some cases, a podiatrist may buff the nails to reduce the thickness.

If folks (particularly women because of their peculiar footwear) were to pay a tenth of the attention to their toenails they pay to their fingernails, there wouldn't be half the toenail problems seen in later years. But, as the saying goes, out of sight, out of mind.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have these ugly old-age spots on my hands and arms, and some few on my face. I know I can get cosmetic creams to help fade them, but then I get out in the sun again and they come back.

Why do older people have to put up with this? I am 65. — Mrs. R.E.M.

Might as well put up with them, because in some people they are unavoidable. Exposure to wind and sun is the usual cause. In others these nests of pigment cells simply crop out with time, some in the form of moles, others as flat, brown spots. Also, with aging, the skin becomes somewhat drier, thinner and less elastic.

Use gloves outdoors. A sunbonnet will protect your face somewhat from the ravages of the sun. Skin bleaches are not effective, but cosmetic creams will disguise them.

Detroiters satisfied

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit gets high marks from the people who should know.

A six-month survey of a cross section of residents of Detroit and its suburbs reveals some surprising findings, including:

By 10 to one they are satisfied with themselves.

By 84 per cent to 16 per cent they are "very happy" or "pretty happy."

By more than six to one, they give a positive rating to their police protection.

The study, undertaken by the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research, is the first attempt to survey the quality of life in an urban region.

It showed by margins that often reach 10 to 1 that Detroiters, both black and white, as well as suburban residents expressed satisfaction with their community, their neighborhood, their job, their marriage and family life, their health, their amount of leisure time and how they spend it and their income and standard of living.

Hard water costs

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Hard water costs consumers $6.3 billion annually, according to economists at the Water Quality Research Council. It wastes $1.8 billion in soaps, detergents, shampoos and other cleaning materials. It deteriorates plumbing at an estimated $2.7 billion rate. It does $1 billion in damage to sheets, linens, towels and washable clothing. In addition, by depositing insulating scale in water heaters, it adds $800 million to the nation's fuel bills.

About 80 per cent of the United States and Canada has hard water. On a per family basis, hard water damage costs each affected household $37 more each year for soaps, detergents, etc., $55 extra in plumbing repairs and replacements and $29 in shortened life for sheets, linens and other washables. Added annual fuel costs amount to approximately $18, the council reports.

Many fly friendly skies

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Officially, the unit is called the 89th Military Airlift Wing. But under this prosaic banner operates the world's most exclusive airline, a fleet of 23 plush aircraft, serving Washington's official elite.

The passengers consist solely of government bigwigs and military muck-a-mucks, ranging from Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick C. Weyand.

The passenger list also cuts across ideological lines, with free rides available to conservatives and liberals alike from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Arix., to Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

THE PLANES, valued at $66 million apiece, are no ordinary airliners. They are specially outfitted to pamper busy government executives. They contain such creature comforts as wall-to-wall carpeting, desks for working officials, bars for drinking officials, sofas suitable for taking short naps and extra powder rooms.

The fancy planes are available 24 hours a day to fly the high and mighty anywhere in the world from a sightseeing junket in Timbuktu to a football game at West Point. This VIP service costs the taxpayers roughly $6 million a year.

The planes even provide military stewards to cater to the wants of the distinguished passengers. The stewards are carried on the military rosters as "Air Passenger Specialists" supposedly on duty to ensure "passenger safety." But in practice, they spend their time serving food and drink to the pampered poohbahs.

WE HAVE OBTAINED the private Air Force logs listing the VIP flights for 1975. The documents reveal that the planes were at the disposal of powerful members of Congress. We contacted most of the passengers from the Capitol Hill travel club. They insisted that they traveled strictly on government business, albeit in deluxe style.

But some clearly did not. Senate Armed Services Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., flew from Washington to Meridian, Miss., at least a dozen times last year. It is unlikely that he went to visit the Meridian Naval Air Base. His home happens to be less than 30 miles from the landing field.

Indeed, our sources say the crusty old Stennis owes his fine attendance record, in part, to the Pentagon. The obliging brass have whisked him to his appointments with military precision. In turn, Stennis has presided kindly over military matters.

Arizona's Barry Goldwater, the conscience of the Senate, has lectured his colleagues sternly against congressional junketing. But the flight logs, which were intended for official eyes only, show he hitched rides from the Air Force last year at least 18 times, including three flights to his home state.

ANOTHER THREE FLIGHTS were booked to Easton, Md., the scenic spot where Washington's most prominent hunters shoot geese. A Goldwater aide said the senator's Pentagon-paid junkets, with few exceptions, were taken to deliver speeches to improve military morale. The flights to Maryland's Eastern Shore, explained the aide, were arranged to stay with an old friend, Lt. Gen. William Quinn.

Two House Armed Services chairmen, Edward Hebert, D-La., and his successor, Mel Price, D-Ill., flew the friendly skies of the 89th Military Aircraft Wing to visit their home bases. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield made two trips to Mexico last year on VIP planes.

jthe costliest trips were the congressional junkets to faraway places with strange-sounding names. Some trips, with split-second schedules and heavy work loads, were anything but glamorous. But others clearly were all-expenses-paid vacations in official guise to sun-blessed, palm-studded places. From the official logs, here are just a few random examples:

— Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Haw., led a delegation on a Middle East tour of Amman, Cairo, Damascus and Tel Aviv. The VIP transportation cost the taxpayers $38,801.

— HOUSE SPEAKER Carl Albert took some colleagues to Europe and Russia. The VIP flight cost $69,930.20.

— Another European junket, headed by Sens. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., and Richard Schweicker, R-Pa., cost the taxpayers $62,000.

— Rep. Fernand St. Germain, D-R.I., as chairman of a House Banking subcommittee, led a delegation on a round of the European banking capitals. The Air Force flew them around at a cost of $24,426.

— Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, led his North Atlantic Assembly delegation on three overseas trips costing a grand total of $76,171.30. A spokeswoman explained that military aircraft were used "for security reasons."

For shorter hops, Rep. Fred Rooney, D-Pa., used a military plane to fly to a West Point football game. Rep. Floyd Spence, R-S.C., put in a couple weeks of active duty last summer as a Navy captain. He flew to San Diego in style aboard a military plane.

IF THE CONGRESSIONAL bigwigs couldn't think of any place to go, the Pentagon often found some place. Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., was flown to Gulfport to dedicate a Navy dining facility. House Appropriations Chairman George Mahon, D-Texas, traveled by military jet to attend the launching of the USS Texas.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., flew to his home state to dedicate the Mendel Rivers submarine, and Sen. Ed Muskie, D-Me., flew to Brunswick Naval Air Station in his native Maine to attend a keel-laying ceremony.

Footnote: A Pentagon spokesman said the special flights are under review.

Hopefuls grow short of money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential hopefuls are facing a growing shortage of money because of the inactivity of the Federal Election Commission.

Ronald Reagan said over the weekend that a lack of money has forced him to dispense with a charter plane for campaign trips.

And other candidates indicated that the lack of federal money will soon be having an effect on them too, unless the commission gets back in business by being restructured to meet the requirements of the Supreme Court.

"I think it's disgraceful that the Congress has not moved to restore the FEC," former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter said Sunday.

Matching funds for presidential candidates were cut off last month under a Supreme Court order which said the commission was improperly constituted to distribute money.

Carter officials said their organization's actual cash flow won't be affected until April 21 because of their bookkeeping organization.

After that time, a spokesman said, the main effect will be on television advertising, which was where most of the Carter matching funds were spent.

"We will have to forego many of them (TV ads) if Congress does not re-enact the law," he said.

A Reagan spokeswoman said the elimination of the charter plane has caused considerable extra work in rearranging transportation and the schedule for appearances in Texas.

The decision to eliminate the plane, "while it may inconvenience the campaign and the news media and force some schedule revision, in no way means Gov. Reagan's campaign effort is being reduced," said a statement from Reagan aide Michael Deaver.

A spokesman for the President Ford Committee said the fund cutoff has not seriously affected the campaign because there had been considerable cash on hand. But he added that if the commission doesn't resume distribution of funds soon there "probably would" be an effect. He said there is money on hand for current primary needs.

The House and Senate have approved bills to get the commission back into business, but these still face changes in conference and there is some question as to whether President Ford will sign the result. Ford asked Congress to simply make the changes requested by the Supreme Court, but Congress added other provisions.

Red Chinese riot for wreath removal

TOKYO (AP) — Tens of thousands of angry Chinese milled through Peking's Tien An Men Square today, setting fire to three motor vehicles in protest against the removal of wreaths honoring the late Premier Chou En-lai, a resident of the Chinese capital reported by telephone. Clashes between demonstrators and police also were reported.

A report published in Vienna and Budapest from the Hungarian news agency's reporter in Peking said Chou apparently has become a rallying point for the "moderates" in the Chinese Communist party and that the wreaths were removed apparently because the demonstrators, in speeches and posters, attacked Chairman Mao Tsetung' wife, Chiang Ching.

The Peking resident reached by telephone from Tokyo said there were clashes between some of the crowd and militiamen earlier in the day. Other sources reached by telephone from Hong Kong said there were a few fist fights, and no serious injuries were reported.

The Peking resident contacted from Tokyo estimated the size of the crowd at 30,000, but the Peking correspondent of the Japan Broadcasting Corp. said the crowds reached 100,000 during the day, the most turbulent since the violence of the Cultural Revolution a decade ago.

The informant reached from Tokyo said the crowd was still in the square at 5 p.m. and seemed restless. But he said it was orderly.

The source added that the spontaneous outpouring of so many people, which he called "a very unusual thing," could be a reaction against the radical campaign against First Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, the moderate picked by Chou as his successor.

The premier died Jan. 8 of cancer at the age of 78. Security chief Hua Kuo-feng was named acting premier. Teng, purged during the Great Cultural Revolution in the late 1960s and brought back to power in 1973 by Chou, has not been heard from since Jan. 15, when he delivered the eulogy at Chou's funeral.

The mass demonstration of grief for Chou was part of Ching Ming, a festival honoring the dead. An estimated 60,000 to 70,000 persons went Sunday to Tien An Men, Peking's main square, to pile paper wreaths, banners and flowers dedicated to the dead premier before the Martyrs' Monument in the center of the square.

When crowds returned to the square today, they found the tributes gone. The Peking correspondent of the Japanese newspaper Nihon Kezai said the people were angered because they had been promised the wreaths would remain until Tuesday.

Officers search for man who killed state trooper

SEALY, Tex. (AP) — Dozens of law enforcement officers, aided by dogs and a helicopter, combed an area southwest of here today for a bearded man suspected of killing a highway patrolman Sunday night.

State Trooper Mark Frederick, 25, was shot and killed by a gunman with a pistol after his Department of Public Safety patrol car stopped an automobile with Alabama license plates, officers said.

DPS Sgt. Gilbert Kiel said 75 to 100 officers from various law enforcement agencies were concentrating their search in a 5-mile radius about 3 miles southwest of here. Sealey is 51 miles west of Houston in South Texas.

"We have the suspect's car and he was on foot some three miles west of Highway 36 (Texas) on Farm Road 3013," said Sealy Police Chief G. R. Kaufman.

Kaufman said Frederick and fellow Trooper John Richert stopped the car on an exit ramp in Sealy.

"The suspect fired one shot from a pistol and Richert returned fire, hitting the automobile six times as it sped away," said Kaufman.

Kaufman described the man sought as white and of medium build with a beard.

OPEN HAND FOR JACKSON — Democratic primary presidential hopeful Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, left, is greeted with an open hand as he campaigns along the streets of New York's Lower East Side Sunday afternoon. He hopes to get the lion's share of his party's 274 delegates in New York's April 6 primary election.

At special showing

Newsmen laud Watergate movie

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I would have liked it better if I hadn't known the ending," joked a lawyer for one of the Watergate cover-up defendants after seeing the movie about how two reporters broke the story of the scandal.

He was part of a critical audience that gathered Sunday night for the world premiere of the film "All the President's Men." Almost everybody was an expert on the subject.

If the mysterious "Deep Throat" who guided Washington Post reporters Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward along the tortuous Watergate trail was in the audience, nobody knew it.

None of the other Nixon administration principals were there, leaving the judgment about the film to the people who know Watergate next-best: the reporters who covered the story, the editors who supervised them, and the lawyers who prosecuted and defended those caught up in the scandal.

The comment about the film's ending was by William Hundley, who represented former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell in the cover-up trial. Mitchell was convicted along with other Nixon aides.

"I never knew reporters were so pretty," said Pulitzer-prize winner Seymour Hersh of the New York Times. Woodward is portrayed in the film by Robert Redford; Bernstein by Dustin Hoffman.

"This movie proves all reporters are leading men and all editors are character actors," said Martin Nolan of the Boston Globe.

The $25-a-ticket, invitation-only audience of 1,190 included the real-life editors of the Washington Post who dealt with the Watergate story and the actors who portrayed them.

The film got a healthy round of applause, and a party thrown afterward by Redford was jammed. But not everyone was pleased with the movie.

A Post reporter grumbled that "the real hero of Watergate, Barry Sussman, isn't even in it." Sussman, a Post editor, worked closely with Woodward and Bernstein and fought to have their stories placed in the newspaper when senior heads resisted. His role was combined with that of another editor.

Among notables in the audience were Ethel Kennedy and three of her children; Sen. Edmund S. Muskie; Eunice Kennedy Shriver; and Margaret Truman Daniel.

The film spanned the earliest days of Watergate, from the break-in at Democratic party headquarters on June 17, 1972, through the inauguration of Richard M. Nixon to his second term on the following Jan. 20. The dramatic events that followed, up to Nixon's resignation some 18 months later, are covered by a teletype machine clacking out one-sentence bulletins.

The real Woodward and Bernstein were among the film's admirers. "Very accurate," said Woodward. "I think it's superb in showing how investigative reporters work," said Bernstein.

Ralph Nader said he would have liked to have seen the film include James W. McCord's letter to U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica — a turning point in the real-life chronology. "I think the public should have seen the law take over from journalism," Nader said.

Cancer crusade booked Tuesday

The 1976 educational and fund-raising Crusade of the American Cancer Society got under way this week on a hopeful note: "We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe and President Ford have proclaimed April "Cancer Control Month" and the U.S. Congress has passed a similar resolution.

"Great strides have been taken in the march against cancer," says Jerry Yarbrough, Big Spring Crusade chairman, "but much remains to be done. When ACS volunteers go do-to-door Tuesday night, we hope everyone will respond with generous donations. It's the only way we can conquer cancer," he said.

ACS funds are channeled in three directions: cancer education, patient services and medical research.

As the United States celebrates its 200th birthday this year, the American Cancer Society is nearing its goal set four years ago for every women in the country susceptible to uterine cancer to have a Pap test by 1976.

Yarbrough notes that the chief form of the disease where treatment progress is not being made is lung cancer. Death rates for men have more than doubled in two decades, and for women doubled in just one decade. Ironically, this is one cancer for which the major cause is known: cigarette smoking. Lung cancer incidence and mortality could be drastically cut if more people quit the habit.

NUTCRACKER TREAT — The story began five years ago when Miami Herald photographer Bill Kuenzel's family took in an injured squirrel who eventually became a half-domesticated neighborhood pet. She died recently leaving the Kuenzels with three babies and the necessity of the bootle-feeding routine. The kids are named Meenie, Miney and Fred. Mrs. Kuenzel says she doesn't want any Moe. Democrats predict victory in Wisconsin Primary

By The Associated Press

Democrats Jimmy Carter and Morris Udall, each predicting victory in Wisconsin's presidential primary, scrambled for support there today while Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson concentrated on New York, where he is considered the favorite.

Voters in both states decide Tuesday on distribution of 274 delegates to this summer's Democratic National Convention — 206 in New York and 68 in Wisconsin.

President Ford is expected to get a large share of the Republican delegates at stake Tuesday in both states. Ronald Reagan, the former California governor challenging Ford for the GOP nomination, spent little time in Wisconsin and listed delegate slates in only four of New York's 39 congressional districts.

Reagan was due in Texas today for a 72-hour visit aimed at rounding up backing for the state's May 1 primary. He scheduled appearances in Dallas today and Tuesday, followed by stops in Wichita Falls, Abilene, Lubbock and Longview.

The White House said Ford would visit Texas at week's end.

Strong showings in Wisconsin and New York are considered crucial to Udall, yet to win a primary election, and the Arizona congressman didn't hedge Sunday when asked for a forecast.

"Mo Udall's going to win in Wisconsin and we're going to give Scoop Jackson a real run for his money in New York," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Carter, speaking Sunday at the University of Wisconsin's LaCrosse campus, said flatly he would win the state — and that his only rival for the Democratic nomination after Tuesday would be Jackson.

The last-minute campaigning was only a part of the political activity Sunday:

—Jackson won all 11 delegates up for grabs in Puerto Rico, while Carter picked up four more, for a total of 12, in Oklahoma.

Carter was the early favorite of Democrats in Virginia and Kansas, who met over the weekend to begin selecting their convention delegations.

—Participants in a private meeting of Republicans quoted Ford's campaign manager, Rogers C.B. Morton, as saying he does not expect Secretary of State Henry M. Kissinger to stay in office beyond this year.

Morton wasn't available to comment on the report from San Jose, Calif., but an aide said the statement about Kissinger's future was no more than an "educated guess."

—Carter said in Washington — before heading for Wisconsin — that "it's disgraceful" that Congress has not restored the Federal Election Commission, which distributes matching funds to presidential candidates.

The Supreme Court ruled the commission was improperly constituted, and matching funds were cut off last month. The cutoff, said Carter, "causes great concern for us. But we've just had to be much more careful in our plans for spending money."

Bills passed by the House and Senate to put the commission back to work are before a conference committee to work out differences — but even then there is question whether the President will sign the resulting legislation.

—Campaign aides said Ford's weekend trip to Texas would include a visit to San Antonio and Dallas on Friday and Abilene and Amarillo the following day.

They said he would return to Texas — site of the next head-to-head confrontation with Reagan — once more before the primary.

Ford spent Friday and Saturday in Wisconsin but was in Washington on Sunday. Reagan was at home in California through the weekend.

—Jackson, on CBS' "Face the Nation," said Lebanon is the most dangerous area in the Middle East and efforts should be made to prevent Syria from moving troops into that country.

"If the Syrians move into Lebanon unilaterally ... it will result in the Israelis moving," creating a dangerous situation, he said.

He said efforts are being made to set up a peacekeeping force in Lebanon, but he did not elaborate.

Snowdon denies Kennedy offer

LONDON (AP) — The Earl of Snowdon, separated from Princess Margaret, refuses to talk about a report that Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis offered $2 million for his memoirs on behalf of a New York publisher.

Snowdon, 46, returned to England on Sunday for the first time since the announcement of the separation on March 19.

Rocky says nations worried

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller says nations that he visited on a round-the-world trip are concerned whether "they can count on the United States."

"The United States has got a lot of friends who believe in freedom around the world," he said after arriving home Sunday, but some wonder if they can still depend on America.

Big Spring girl chosen regional finalist in Miss Ford contest

Darla Buchanan, Big Spring, was chosen as a regional finalist in the Lubbock region of the Miss Ford Country contest.

There were hundreds of qualified girls who entered the contest. "Selecting the regional finalists was a most tedious task," a contest official said.

The regional finalists will be interviewed at the Southpark Inn in Lubbock Thursday. Interviews will begin promptly at 6 p.m. The regional winners will travel to Dallas for the finals April 16-17 at the LeBaron Hotel.

Miss Ford Country will receive a new Ford and be the Texas Ford Dealers spokesperson.

Bicentennial town crier

There's no letting down of Bicentennial at Webb Air Force Base! Capt. Dick Risk says the Webb Color Guard will be featured when Paul Harvey, noted news commentator, speaks at the "God and Country Rally" in Midland. This tremendous Bicentennial event is being sponsored by the Midland Baptist Association on May 11 at 7 p.m. There will be no charge and Midland Memorial Stadium should be packed to the top, for no one espouses the American Way more than Mr. Harvey. We're proud of you, Webb!

A call from Richard Atkins revealed that he and Al Stephens, coordinators of the July 4th Free Enterprise Celebration, were hard at work brainstorming in the office of Terry Hansen, Chamber of Commerce manager. You'll be hearing more of their plans as weeks go by.

Meanwhile, back at the church, Collyns Moore (College Baptist pastor, and coordinator for Liberty Day) has sent letters to area churches urging their participation in our big weekend. Rumors of an old-fashioned brush arbor revival to be held just east of First Baptist Church sound like the ball is rolling already.

Take time to drive by Kentucky Way and Birdwell Lane, and you'll be amazed at the progress already made on the new coliseum. It looks massive — that hole in the ground. This is the type of Horizons project that will always remind us of our 200th birthday year!

Margaret Lloyd's Festival Committee got good response in a recent meeting. Carol Armstrong outlined plans for "Up With People," and discussions were held concerning parade plans for July 4. Looks like we are getting in gear for a meaningful holiday.

Tid-bits: Former County Judge, A. G. Mitchell, will be in a July 4th parade in Houston. You may go, Mitch, but only because your parade involves animals, and ours will be a "People Parade"! . . . That teen-age haven, Sonic Drive-In, is sporting a Happy Birthday America sign . . . Mrs. Brandon Curry, Bicentennial enthusiast, stopped to chat downtown, and has put in a good word to keep Webb open. She sent a personal plea to Congressman George Mahon via his nephew, who recently repaired her car . . . Ramona Bunker finally made contact to get the Marcy School flag. If at first we don't succeed . . .

The program for the Bicentennial Band and Chorus is now in the capable hands of Bob Crowell. We're in for a real treat! . . . Johnnie Lou Avery made Bicentennial Certificate presentations to the third grade class of LaVonne Smith for the "Strong for America" program, and to the second grade class of Barbara Ervin for "Happy Birthday, America, I Love You." Both programs were given for the Marcy PTA at an earlier time. The whole school seems to be in a Bicentennial mood!

Sees light

KANSAS CITY (AP) — After 42 years in a dark storeroom, a gigantic 1,200-year-old Buddha has seen the light.

The nine-foot Japanese statue is now permanently installed in the new Frank Grant Crowell Wing of Kansas City's Nelson Gallery-Atkins Museum. The 300-pound Amida Buddha, purchased in Kyoto in 1932, had been relegated to virtual solitude since 1934 because of space limitations.

The new Crowell wing completes the Nelson nearly 42 years after it was first opened to the public.

Library exhibit

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition called "The American Idea, Discovery and Settlement, Revolution and Independence" is being shown at the New York Public Library on Fifth Ave. through July 19.

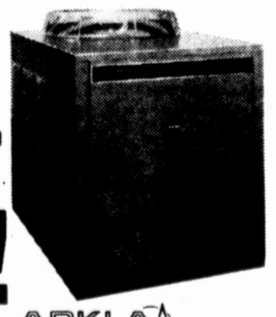

The library says the exhibit allows visitors "to walk with the founding fathers from 1492 through the early days of America's existence, look face to face at the original documents which changed the destinies of millions and established the greatest experiment in democratic government ever known."

Adult enthusiasts popularize doll house building, decorating

DALLAS (AP) — Many women probably can remember the doll houses their granddad made from an apple crate and the hours spent rearranging the small furniture he whittled out of the wood scraps.

Their value was mostly sentimental and there was no great monetary loss when a little brother kicked it to shambles because somebody snitched to Mother that he was the one who ate the cake meant for the church social.

Well, no longer. The craft of making doll houses and miniature furniture has hit the big time, threatening to derail the model train buff and ground the model airplane enthusiast.

A furnished doll house could cost several thousand dollars and it's for the older kids, say, ages 30-75.

Manufacturers of such houses and matching furniture were well represented at the Southwestern Craft & Hobby Show this past week.

Some builders will sell the house, most two or three stories, assembled or in kit form. But it has to be roofed with tiny shingles, bricked or covered with clapboard siding on the outside, wallpapered, and then furnished with real electric lights, flooring, rugs, pictures, furniture, a fireplace, or whatever the owner desires.

For the really creative craftsman who wants to start from scratch, a set of blueprints for $3.50 can be bought, saving himself a lot of misakes.

Joe Hermes of El Monte, Calif., specializes in wallpaper, but not the run-of-the-mill variety. Hermes carefully researched wallpaper of the colonial period and has come up with exact patterns scaled down to fit the dollhouse. He also has rugs.

Hermes says the average person may build three dollhouses. The first is for his child or grandchild—rather simple in construction and not too expensive. The second one is a little better, refining the skills used to make the first one.

Then there's the third one, built with a lot of tender, loving care and meticulously detailed.

Any kid who touches No. 3 takes his life in his own hands.

Most who take up the hobby build and furnish the houses for themsleves. They are the collectors, the ones who could spend $8,000 to $10,000 furnishing a three-foot-square, 30-inch high house.

The architecture is mostly from the past—Victorian, Colonial, Williamsburg traditional, or three-story Savannah townhouse, as nostalgia plays a large part in the current craze.

"Most of those build the house they grew up in—or wished they'd grown up in—as a child," said Hermes, who has a background in interior decoration and textile design.

Hermes also makes covering for cigar boxes, match boxes and milk cartons. When wrapped, the milk carton may look like a country store, or a restaurant. Stacked side by side, each with a different covering, they make up an old Western town.

Many enthusiasts are women, Hermes said, recounting that once a matronly woman walked into a crafts class with a small power jig saw under her arm to the amazement of the other women who normally steer clear of anything mechanical.

John Thomas, president of X-ACTO, says miniature furniture is the third most popular collection item, behind stamps and coins. Thomas' firm has a line of period furniture from 1750 to 1850, carefully researched as to each minute detail, including the brass hinges and drawer handles.

Again, the pieces are precisely machined to scale from furniture of that period, Thomas said. Even the glue used to assemble the pieces has been tinted to match the wood.

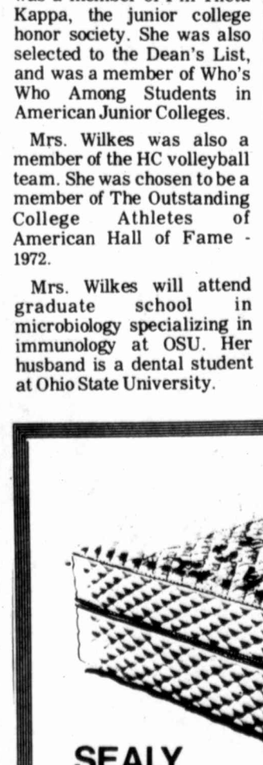

Each piece may run from $5 to $10, which can get expensive when furnishing a six-or eight-room house.

Thomas said the miniature field is growing because it's family oriented, with the husband building the house and the woman interested in the interior decorating.

"Model railroads and airplanes are male oriented," Thomas pointed out.

Once the house is built, decorated, and furnished, the final touches are added. Such items as a bird cage, vacuum cleaner, carpet sweeper, telephone, coal bucket, bed linen, towels, and bars of soap are available.

Oh, and for the girl's room, there's a miniature doll house.

Thirty-five finalists will be chosen by a distinguished jury of experts in the fine arts: Mina Kocherthaler, vice president of the National Society of Painters in Casein and Acrylic; Howard Mandel, who is on the national board of Allied Artists of America; and Raul Mina-Mora, president of Knickerbocker Artists.

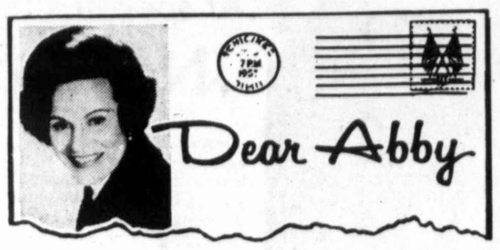

These 35 national finalists will compete for cash awards of $1,000, $750, and $500. Their original paintings also will be exhibited in a special group show at the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Gallery in New York City from May 10-28, 1976.

Preliminary judging will be from 35mm color slides submitted by each entrant. Acceptable media include oil, watercolor, casein, and acrylic. Paintings may be in any style, from abstract to realistic, and of any type, from still life to portraiture. Each must contain a recognizable representation of a Benedictine bottle.

The Benedictine Art Awards, sponsored annually by Benedictine Liqueur, was established 14 years ago to encourage American artists by providing cash awards for outstanding achievement.

Dear Abby

Bridesmaid intercepts bouquet intended for sister

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend I was a bridesmaid at the wedding of a close friend.

When it came time for the bride to throw her bouquet, the photographer lined up all the bridesmaids for a picture of the memorable moment. Well, the bride threw her bouquet directly to her younger sister (the maid of honor), and dumb me reached in front of her and intercepted it! Everyone was horrified—especially the bride and her sister.

I suppose I should have known better, but I honestly did it without thinking.

Abby, if the bride wants a certain person to have the bouquet, why bother tossing it? Why not just hand it to her?

I've been severely criticized for what I did, but I honestly did it without thinking. Was I wrong?

SORRY IN ALABAMA

DEAR SORRY: Forget it. You acted on impulse.

DEAR READERS: As I have stated in a previous column, I have signed The Living Will. It is simply a document that a person signs stating that he does not want to have his life prolonged artificially after his physician decides that there is no reasonable hope for recovery. I have given copies of this document to my physician, lawyer, clergyman and to members of my family.

On February 23rd I published the official Jewish view on the right to die with dignity submitted by Rabbi Bernard S. Raskas. On March 15th I published a statement from the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale concerning the Protestant view.

The following letter was received from the Most Rev. Fulton J. Sheen:

My dear Abby:

What a joy it was to hear from you, having not had the pleasure of seeing you for such a long while!

In answer to your question, "What is the official Catholic view on the right to die with dignity?" it is not necessary to use extraordinary, artificial means to keep a person alive.

Wishing you every blessing, and with the warmest of personal greetings, I am,

Sincerely yours in our Lord,
FULTON J. SHEEN

DEAR ABBY: About a month ago a friend who is a kindergarten teacher asked me if I would assist her with her class. I was glad to help her without pay.

At the end of the day, I saw that my purse was open and all the money from my wallet was gone. (It amounted to about $10.)

I told my friend about it, and she kept trying to give me $10 to make up for it, but I wouldn't accept it.

Then she mailed me a check for $10, urging me to please cash it. I really want to, but I don't feel right about it. What should I do?

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Consider HER feelings and cash the check. Otherwise she will continue to feel guilty about your loss.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (26¢) envelope.

Tech choir to appear in concert

The Texas Tech Choir, long recognized as one of the outstanding collegiate choirs in the Southwest, will appear in the auditorium of Big Spring High School at 7:30 p.m. today.

The choir's appearance is being sponsored by the Big Spring High School choral department.

The Tech choir has received national recognition for its appearances on national television, New York's Town Hall and Washington Concerts. The choir annually tours the state of Texas.

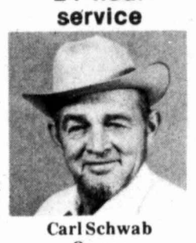

This year's program will consist of numbers by Schutz, Schoenberg, Martin, Walton, Kodaly, Krenek, and Copland.

Mrs. Eddy (Mary) Quillin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Dirks Jr. is a member of this year's choir.

Derby, moot point?

By The Associated Press

Zen and Elocutionist may have earned trips to the Kentucky Derby over the weekend, but Honest Pleasure may have made that a moot point.

While Zen was winning the Gotham mile in New York and Elocutionist was taking the Arkansas Derby, Honest Pleasure made the Florida Derby into a romp, galloping to an effortless victory.

All three likely will start in the May 1 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

In other races Saturday, Honey Mark took the Jack R. Johnston Memorial Handicap at Sportsman's Park in Chicago by 2½ lengths for his second straight stakes victory this year. Honey Mark, carrying 122 pounds, paid $3.40, $2.60 and $2.20.

In England, Rag Trade pulled ahead of Red Rum in the final strides and won the Grand National at Aintree, dashing the 11-year-old Red Rum's hopes of winning the classic for the third time.

Pay Tribute, with Lafitt Pincay aboard, paid $5.20 to win in taking the one-mile San Simeon Handicap at Santa Anita. Gallant Bob scored by five lengths in tying the track record of 1:08 2-5 in taking the Phoenix Handicap at Keeneland. Proud Kenn, a 6-1 shot, won the $26,400 Princeton handicap at Garden State, paying $14.20 to win, amd Dearly Precious, last year's 2-year-old filly champion, romped to a 12-length vic'ory in the $28,500 Flirtation Stakes at Pimlico.

Honest Pleasure, who had won his first two races this season by a total of 23 lengths, made it a frolic in the Florida Derby.

IT HELPED — Judy Rankin encourages her 20-foot putt to drop in — and it did — on the 15th hole en route to her victory Sunday in the Dinah Shore Winners Circle Golf Championship at Palm Springs, Calif. She won $32,000, shooting the final round in 68 to move into first place.

Dinah Shore Circle

Rankin wins in a song

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The Rockies may tumble, Gibraltar may crumble, but Judy Rankin probably will always play a steady game of golf.

Even wind and rain couldn't stop Mrs. Rankin Sunday as she shot a final-round 68, four-under-par, to win the rich Dinah Shore Winners Circle Golf Championship with a 72-hole score of 285, three strokes better than runner-up Betty Burfeindt.

Mrs. Rankin, who collected $32,000 and a new car for her victory in the $200,000 event at Mission Hills Country Club, has long been one of the most consistent players on the Ladies Professional Golf Association circuit. In the past 11 years, she has not finished out of the money in any LPGA event she's entered.

And consistency was what won her the biggest paycheck in her 14-year professional career.

Winds plagued most of the 60 golfers in the Winners Circle tournament the final two days, and Sunday a chilling rain fell as play neared completion.

But Mrs. Rankin, who had rounds of 74-72-71 the first three days of the tournament, actually played better in the poor conditions Sunday as she overtook fading third-round co-leaders Kathy Whitworth and Sandra Haynie on the front nine with a 33.

Then, as the wind picked up even more on the back nine, she holed a 25-foot putt from off the green at No. 15 to open up a comfortable three-stroke lead.

While Mrs. Rankin found the wind at the 6,370-yard, par 36-36—72 Mission Hills layout to her liking, others had their problems.

Miss Whitworth had to settle for a 77 Sunday, as she finished at 291, and Miss Haynie struggled to an 80 to finish at 294.

Four strokes back of Mrs. Rankin and pocketing $10,500 apiece were Australian Jan Stephenson, Jane Blalock and Chako Higuchio of Japan, all with 289s.

Miss Stephenson, the second-round co-leader, had a final round 70, while Miss Blalock shot 72 and Mrs. Higuchi 73 Sunday.

Pam Higgins, who shared the lead after two rounds with Miss Stephenson, stayed close to Mrs. Rankin's pace most of the final round, but bogeyed the 17th and 18th holes to go two over for the day and the tournament.

Mrs. Rankin, who also won the year's initial LPGA tournament in Florida, ran her career earnings to more than $365,000.

American 'shark' harpooned in AAU

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — America's swimmers may find that paming for gold in Montreal's Olympic pool won't be as easy as it was four years ago.

That conclusion could be drawn today in the wake of the National AAU Swimming Championships which ended Sunday at he Belmont Plaza pool. While eight of the 24 individua events were being won by foreign stars, some of Anerica's top hopes for Olympic honors faded badly.

Marking the foreign flavor of the four-day meet, David Wilkie o Scotland was the only triple winner, taking the two short breaststroke events and then capturing the 00 individual medley Sunday evening with a time of 2:;6.25. That mark was just .17 off the world record o Bruce Furniss, who faded to fourth.

Fading even worse, however, was America's young tiger shark Tim Shaw. The Sullivan Award winner of 1975, Shaw starred in the recent NCAA championships, but he sank here, failing to qualify in his two individual races Thursday and Friday.

In Sunday's final of the 1,500-meter freestyle, he finished ded last, a 50-meter pool-length back of the winner, Caey Converse of nearby Mission Viejo.

Gullett, Palmer bombed

Opening roles switched

By The Associated Press

When Houston and Cincinnati open the National League season Thursday, J.R. Richard, who was to have been on the Astros' bench, will be on the mound and Don Gullett, who was to have been on the mound, will be in the Reds' bullpen.

Those two unexpected developments came about Sunday when Richard hurled six innings of one-hit ball in the Astros' 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins while Gullett was bombed for nine runs and as many hits in just four innings of the Reds' 10-4 shellacking by the New York Mets.

Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson promptly ruled that Gullett, ace of the Reds' staff, would be relegated to the bullpen for at least the first week of the season, with Gary Nolan inheriting the opening day assignment.

"I have never given up that many runs, not even in a spring training game," Gullett said. "I had no rhythm. Everything was wrong. I tried to throw low and the pitch was high."

Anderson, obviously upset, said Gullett was "10 days to two weeks behind schedule" and blamed the hard-throwing left-hander for being out of shape.

"If you know it takes you longer to get ready than most guys — and Don knows it takes him longer — then you've got to start early," Anderson said.

Meanwhile, Richard, another fireballer but often a wild one, was impressing Houston Manager Bill Virdon and pitching himself to the top of the Astros' staff.

"I hadn't made up my mind until today," Virdon said after making Richard his opening day choice. "I think the main thing he's learned is to control himself. I don't know if he's throwing as hard now as he used to, but he's certainly throwing more strikes."

Buddy Bradford and Bob Coluccio homered in a seven-run sixth inning and Brian Downing connected in the eighth as the Chicago White Sox ripped the St. Louis Cardinals 16-1 behind an 18-hit assault.

The Philadelphia Phillies also rapped out 18 hits in winning a 15-9 slugfest from the Detroit Tigers. Garry Maddox belted a grand slam homer, Bobby Tolan drove in four runs with a homer and double and Mike Schmidt slammed a two-run homer.

The San Diego Padres erupted for seven runs in the fourth inning and crushed the Chicago Cubs 13-3. Fred Lynn broke out of his spring slump by driving in four runs with a homer and double as the Red Sox pounded the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-5.

Baltimore ace Jim Palmer was rocked for seven runs and 14 hits in six innings as the New York Yankees whipped the Orioles 9-3. The Kansas City Royals, who pounded out 14 runs and 19 hits Saturday, added 15 more hits and trounced the Atlanta Braves 8-3.

Cleveland's Jim Kern limited Milwaukee to one hit in six innings and the Indians beat the Brewers 4-2. Von Joshua's two-run homer off Rollie Fingers enabled San Francisco to beat the Oakland A's 5-3.

Nate Colbert's two-run homer and Pepe Mangual's three-run shot powered the Montreal Expos past the Texas Rangers 6-2. Los Angeles' sore-elbowed Tommy John permitted one run and five hits in six innings as the Dodgers and California Angels battled to a 3-3 tie before rain intervened in the 11th inning.

Geiberger evades Travino stampede

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "I knew I was in trouble on the eighth hole," a weary Al Geiberger said. "When I missed the green, the gallery cheered."

"It was a stampede," his pretty wife, Lynn, said. "I couldn't see anything. After a while I just came in and watched on TV."

"The way the gallery was acting, I felt like I was one shot behind instead of one ahead," Geiberger said. "I had to stop and have a little talk with myself, say, 'Hey, you're one in front with four to play; just go on and take it home'"

He did.

It was a disappointment to the jostling, unruly, beer-drinking, loudly pro-Lee Trevino gallery, but Geiberge brought home a two-stroke victory Sunday in the Greater Greensboro Open. He turned back the bid of Trevino with a two-iron shot that missed by a couple of inches of being a hole in one.

"Wouldn't that have been something?" Lynn asked. "If he'd made it, they wouldn't have been able to talk for a month. I know the gallery is always for the underdog and that Lee is a real personality, but this was a little much."

The noisy ones were all but silenced by the magnificent shot on the 217-yard, par-three 16th hole. Geiberger had a one-stroke lead at that point, the on-rushing Trevino having chopped four shots off his once-commanding lead, and was making a determined charge.

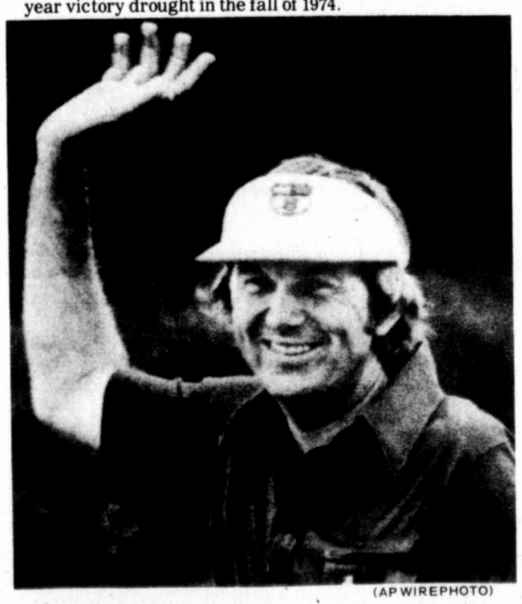

The ball trickled past the cup, a couple of inches to the right, and stopped a few feet away. Trevino had to work hard to save par and Geiberger rolled in the birdie putt. It put him two in front with two holes to play and it was all but over.

"Lee really put a round to me," said the skinny, 38-year-old veteran who turned his career around 18 months ago with a victory in the Sahara Open. "I'm real proud of the way I made the clutch putts."

Trevino started the final round five shots back, moved to within one, but couldn't get closer over the last few holes. He had a six-under-par 65 and a 270 total, his best performance of the year.

Veteran Miller Barber took third place with a 67 and a 271 total. Rookie George Burns, a new father, and U.S. Open champion Lou Graham were at 273. Graham had a 67, Burns a 66. Tom Weiskopf, the 1975 Greensboro champion, Eddie Pearce and Bob Menne finished at 274. Pearce had a 65, Menne and Weiskopf 69s.

The victory was worth $46,000 from the total purse of $230,000 to Geiberger and pushed his earnings for the year to $68,084. It was his fourth since breaking a nine-year victory drought in the fall of 1974.

HAPPY GOLF WINNER — Al Geiberger, of Silver Lakes, Calif., has a ready smile and wave for a cheering gallery Sunday after making a birdie on the 16th hole in the final round of the Greensboro Open. Geiberger won with 16 strokes under par beating out hard-charging Lee Trevino by two strokes.

Dallas clips Steelers in basketball battle

PITTSBURGH (AP)—With his 280-pound body squeezed into a gold, doubleknit basketball uniform, Ernie Holmes started to dribble.

Pittsburgh Steeler partisans roared approval as Holmes pounded into Dallas Cowboy territory.

Preston Pearson of the Cowboys, who played college basketball, reacted as a basketball player. He took a stance in Holmes' path.

Holmes, unattuned to the niceties of basketball, ran over Pearson, knocking him under a press table and drawing a charging foul.

"Sorry, Pres," Holmes said with a smile as he patted Pearson's shoulders.

Pearson, who'd sustained a lip cut from an earlier elbow, smiled too as he said, "Ernie, are you trying to kill somebody?"

Dallas won the Sunday night game 81-73, snapping a string of two losses to the Steelers — in the Super Bowl and in the Super Teams.

"I don't remember the last time I played basketball, but it was fun tonight," Holmes said.

"We're all just here to have fun," said 6-foot-9 Ed "Too Tall" Jones of the Cowboys.

"Of course, it's a little more fun if you win," added Jones, who scored four of his six points on a pair of mighty slam dunks.

The game drew a Civic Arena crowd of 8,479 persons, who paid $3 each. Proceeds went to muscular dystrophy research after the players got "expenses and some pocket money," according to an organizer.

The Cowboys, outfitted in blue uniforms labeled "Dallas Hoopsters," came here with nine players; the Steelers dressed 21 before running out of uniforms.

With the Steelers substituting often, the Cowboys took a 40-30 halftime lead. "We were behind at halftime of the Super Bowl, too," Andy Russell told the crowd.

But Dallas surged to a 50-34 lead in the second half. Sixfoot-4 Percy Howard, also a college basketball player, gave Dallas 50 points when he leaped above the basket, took a pass and dunked the ball with two hands.

Howard led all scorers with 21 points, followed by teammates Billy Joe Dupree and Mitch Hoops with 15 each. John Stallworth had 15 for Pittsburgh, and J.T. Thomas had 12.

The crowd chanted "dee-fense dee-fense" after Franco Harris, who stiff-armed a defender to make one inbounds pass, scored four straight points for Pittsburgh with eight minutes left.

But that pulled the Steelers to within only 66-50 and the tiring Dallas big men were able to play only half court in the waning minutes.

"We had to play too many guys tonight," said Bernard "Baldy" Regan, a magistrate who books basketball games for the Steelers.

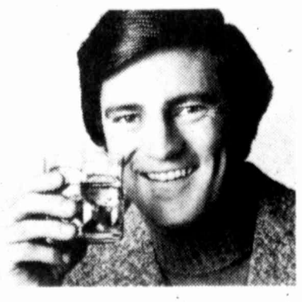

"But we're going to Dallas May 17 for a rematch, and when we go down there, we'll be taking just the best."

Meanwhile, Andy Russell had a personal observation. "I know," he said puffing, "that I'm in lousy shape."

Hurler back on block

Have arm, will travel

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Messersmith, the fastball-for-hire right-hander, resumed his search for gainful employment today, just three days before the opening of the 1976 baseball season.

Messersmith, who won his free agent status from an arbitrator and retained it through two court decisions, remained at large over the weekend in the wake of an aborted nonagreement with the New York Yankees.

The Yankees claimed they had come to terms with Messersmith's agent, Herb Osmond. Messersmith refused to abide by the agreement, saying the Yanks had made some unauthorized changes in the contract they offered him, had acted in bad faith and, besides, Osmond did not have the authority to make any binding agreement.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn wa supposed to make a decision in the case but he never got the chance. The matter was resolved Saturday when the indignant Yankees withdrew their claim to Messersmith, saying, in effect, if he doesn't want to play with the Yankees, then the Yankees don't want him.

So Messersmith, who won 19 games for the Los Angeles Dodgers last season, is back to square one, still trying to sell his services to the highest bidder.

"We're just going to make some phone calls," he said. "We'll contact some clubs and see what happens."

Major league teams have not exactly been rushing to Messersmith's door with bushels of money, but enough clubs have entered the bidding to make it interesting. Atlanta, Pittsburgh, the Chicago White Sox, the New York Mets, California and Los Angeles all have made firm offers, and both San Diego and Kansas City reportedly are lurking in the background with prepared bids of their own.

The Dodgers made what they termed a "final offer" a couple of weeks ago but General Manager Al Campanis, contacted Sunday in Los Angeles, said he planned to review the situation with club President Peter O'Malley.

Meanwhile, Osmond was reported to be continuing talks with San Diego President Buzzie Bavasi though the agent failed to extract an offer Sunday.

Bicentennial salute to foreign shores

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The 49th Texas Relays featured a bicentennial salute with an Uncle Sam appropriately dressed in red, white and blue. But a lot of first-place watches wound up on the wrists of competitors from foreign shores.

Texas-El Paso, which counts some 25 foreign athletes on its NCAA indoor and outdoor champions, won two relay events with its Kenyan runners led by Wilson Waigwa. The Kenyan foursome chopped some eight seconds off the old record in the four-mile relay.

A Canadian enrolled at UTEP, Greg Joy, leaped 7 feet, 3 inches to break the old Texas Relays high jump record of 7-2.

"It makes me mad every time one of those foreigners wins a medal...and he's taking up a scholarship that should be going to an American," grumbled one coach who has no foreigners on his team and asked not to be named.

Florida has a Kenyan anchoring its sprint medley relay and mile relay teams.

Disregarding the coaching spats over the foreign competitors, the two-day meet drew good crowds despite the fact that expenses vere not paid for "open" competitors. Some 4,500 fans attended the Friday night session. The Saturday crowd was not announced but veteran Memorial Stadium pressboxes said the attendance was at least double the previou night.

JACKSON HITS THE ROAD — Baseball superstar Reggie Jackson is shown as he left the Oakland A's spring training camp in Mesa, Ariz., Saturday after being traded to the Baltimore Orioles. Jackson's business manager says Jackson has indicated he won't play for an East Coast team. At this time, he has not reported to the Orioles' camp and his whereabouts is unknown.

BS Cards jolt Hobbs with 9th inning homer

The Big Spring Cardinals jolted the Hobbs (N.M.) Conquistidors with a taste of ninth-inning lightning Sunday when Julio Mendoza smacked a three-run homer to win the game for the Cards and pitcher Fernandez Urista 3-2.

With two on and no outs in the bottom of the ninth Mendoza was sent to the plate as a pinch hitter. It was a smart decision. His one big swing made up for the frustration the rest of the team had been having trying to solve the slants of Paredez, who was the tough-luck loser.

Hobbs had the lead from the third inning on — to Mendoza's blow. Robert Garcia put the Conquistidors in front with a homer. An error by the Cards shortstop let Hobbs double the margin in the fifth.

Urista was real strong for an opening game striking out 16 and allowing just four hits and one earned run.

Major League warmup for SWC leading Texas

By The Associated Press

The Texas Longhorns get a big league warmup for their crucial Southwest Conference baseball series with Texas A&M this weekend when the Texas Rangers and old teammate Jim Gideon of the American League come calling.

Gideon led the Longhorns to the NCAA title last year as a junior then decided to forego his senior season to sign with the Rangers. The righthander will pitch against Texas before a near-sellout crowd in Austin Wednesday night.

The Longhorns, 11-1, took over first place in the SWC race last week as Baylor and Rice gave Texas A&M a hard time while Texas Christian defeated Houston once.

Houston is 13-2 and Texas A&M is 9-3.

The second place finisher is the conference race is likely to be given a berth in the NCAA playoffs. The Texas Aggies were invited into the playoffs last year because of their excellent overall record.

The Aggies, who will play Friday and Saturday at Texas, lost hard-hitting first baseman Kirk Campbell with a dislocated shoulder in a game against Rice. Campbell was hitting .340.

Other weekend series games find Arkansas at Baylor, Houston at Rice, and Texas Tech is at TCU.

SMU, now 0-18 in league play, gets a week to practice.

A tempting offer on a gas grill.

Right now, we're making you a tempting offer on gas grills with twin burners! Independently controlled twin burners never use more gas than you need. For big meals, use both burners. For smaller meals, save gas and money by using one burner and half the grill. A gas grill adds a new dimension to family meals and entertaining. It eliminates the fuss and bother of cooking outside while it keeps the flavor and the fun. And, because you take cooking heat out of the house and the burden off your air conditioning, you save energy, too.

Independents ignored

Duval voters remove Carrillos, elect Parrs

BENAVIDES, Tex. (AP) — In what might be described as the first "new era" election, voters in a portion of Duval County have elected candidates linked to the party founded by the late George B. Parr and rejected independent candidates.

Earlier this year, observers of the politically volatile South Texas county said Duval politics had entered a new era as independent candidates filed in large numbers for the upcoming Democratic primary election. In all, 87 candidates filed for 30 posts when in the past usually only the candidates backed by Parr's "Old Party" filed.

Voters in the Benavides Independent School District Saturday gave candidates backed by the Parr faction an overwhelming victory over those supported by the Carrillo faction and the independents. In the election, there were five Parr-backed candidates, five Carrillo-backed candidates—including former State Rep. Oscar Carrillo—and seven independents.

Since Mrs. Hilda Parr, a sister-in-law of the late South Texas political boss, and Ruben Chapa, an "Old Party" member, already held seats on the school board, this gave Parr-backed candidates complete control of the school board and all of the patronage privileges that go with its.

It was a special election held to clear up the muddled school board situation that resulted last year when former District Court Judge O. P. Carrillo began removing and replacing school board members as part of the power struggle with the Parr faction for political control of Duval County.

As a result of the former judge's board shuffling, two complete school boards emerged, both claiming to be legal. District Court Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville forced the two boards to agree to appoint a committee of four persons to operate the district until the election could be held. It was agreed that Mrs. Parr and Ruben Chapa were the only persons legally entitled to remain on the board as incumbents.

Elected to full three-year terms Saturday were Mrs. Lydia O. Canales and Enrique Garcia. Elected to fill three unexpired terms of one year each were Jimmy L. Guinn, Mrs. Celia Rangel and Patrick Downing.

"We had hoped to get two people on the board, but we got them all," a jubilant Chapa shouted when the returns were complete.

Former State Rep. Oscar Carrillo, who finished seventh among the nine candidates for the unexpired terms, blamed the defeat upon the formation of an alliance between two other rival factions.

"The 'Freedom Party' and the 'Old Party' have joined to destroy the Carrillo family," he said. If Carrillo is correct, it proves the old adage, "Politics makes strange bedfellows."

The "Freedom Party" was formed in the 1950s in an attempt to wrest control of Duval County away from the Parr faction. It resulted in some of the stormiest times in Duval County political history. The "Freedom Party" had apparently vanished until it surfaced against last year with the death of George B. Parr and the imprisonment of former Duval County Judge Archer Parr, his nephew.

LIBRARY — Librarian Susan Madden selects a tune to liven up the tomb silence of the King County Youth Service Center — a euphemistic title for the juvenile jail. "Say all the corny things you will about music soothing the savage beast, but these kids wilt without it," she says. Officials told her, "Heck,. those little brats will flush books down the toilet. They'll destroy them." But she hasn't found that to be. "The library is the kids' area, and they like it."

Budget and food stamp overhaul

Congress debates two controversial bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of the most controversial subjects before the Congress this year are up for formal debate this week in the Senate.

Debate was scheduled to begin today on a 43-provision compromise measure drafted by the Senate Agriculture Committee to overhaul the foodstamp program.

And, on Thursday, the Senate Budget Committee will call up its initial resolution on federal spending for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

That resolution would limit actual spending to $412.6 billion. Revenues are calculated at $362.4 billion. That would mean a budget deficit of $50.2 billion.

President Ford's updated budget proposal calls for $16.8 billion less spending and anticipates a deficit of $44.6 billion and revenues of $351.3 billion.

Short course is scheduled

LUBBOCK — Technological advances in petroleum production will be examined during the 23rd Southwestern Petroleum Short Course, April 22-23 at Texas Tech University.

More than 350 members of the southwestern petroleum industry are expected for the technical conference on problems of lifting petroleum from the ground.

Topics will range from undersea development of offshore oil and gas fields to international and domestic petroleum financing, according to Jim Culp, TUCO, Inc., general chairman. Some 49 papers will be presented in the general categories of drilling and well completions, well stimulation and workovers, reservoir operations and artificial lift.

Registration for the conference will begin at 8 a.m. in the University Center. A meeting of authors at 9:15 a.m. and a general briefing session at 9:30 will launch the short course.

The House, meanwhile, was expected to approve Ford's request for an emergency $135-million program to immunize Americans against a possible outbreak of a virulent form of influenza. The funds would provide vaccine for 200 million persons.

Conferees from the two chambers also are expected to go to work during the week on a compromise version of legislation to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission, made powerless by a Supreme Court decision. That is necessary to resume the flow of public funds to presidential candidates.

Under the new budget-making process, both the House and Senate must pass identical budget resolutions by May 15. Those would constitute spending targets over-all and for the 17 categories of programs. Four months later, similar resolutions will set binding lids on spending.

Money is one of three fundamental areas involved in the food-stamp debate. The other two concern the philosophical questions of who the government should help with grocery bills and how, and the more politically tinged arguments about the nature and operation of the program day by day.

No major votes were expected on the bill today, because both Dole and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., another member of the committee, were out of town.

South African official will visit Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — South African Prime Minister John Vorster will visit Israel as guest of Premier Yitzhak Rabin.

Details of the visit are being kept secret for security reasons, officials said, and no date was given when it was announced on Sunday.

The announcement did not say who initiated the state visit, but government officials said its wording could be taken to mean the invitation came from Israel.

Informed sources said Israel wants to keep the visit low-key because of possible damage to its prestige abroad for hosting the leader of a white supremacist country.

Vorster's visit here will be the first by a South African prime minister since soon after the creation of Israel in 1948.

Miss Norton, 18, and Taylor, 27, plan a skiing honeymoon, the spokesman said.

Candidates critical of administration

Military strength: Is U.S. behind?

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1960 it was the "missile gap." in 1976 it's "detente." But the presidential campaign issue is the same—Is the United States falling behind the Soviet Union in military strength?

Republican challenger Ronald Reagan has been the most strident critic among ths candidates, declaring that U.S.-Soviet arms agreements "guarantee the Soviets a clear missile superiority sufficient to make a first strike on the United States with little fear of reprisal."

Democratic candidate Sen. Henry Jackson, another consistent critic of detente, says that by next year the Soviet missile submarine force will be more powerful than the American underwater fleet.

He has urged a crash program to rebuild the Navy from its present 477-ship size to a fleet of at least 650 warships.

The leading Democratic challenger, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Cater, believes the United States would have trouble controlling sea lanes through the Atlantic if challenged by the Soviets. He also questions concessions made by the United States in strategic arms limitation talks, although Cater says the United States is in no imminent peril from Russian military domination.

In a rare response by secretary of state to such charges, Henry Kissinger said he rejects any contention that "other nations have gained military ascendancy over us, that the administration has neglected our defenses, or that negotiations to reduce the threat of nuclear war are unwise.

"These charges sound remarkably like the missile gap claims which aroused anxieties in 1960 only to dissolve suddenly a few weeks after the election," Kissinger said.

The secretary is correct that once in the White House, former Democratic President John Kennedy stopped talking about missile gap with the Soviets. It didn't exist.

But today, even the sharpest Pentagon critics acknowledge that the Soviet Union has dramatically increased both the size and quality of its fighting forces over the past decade.

There is wide disagreement, however, among defense specialists on whether the United States should feel threatened, now or later.

Opening the annual congressional debate on military spending, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said the United States has slipped from a clear advantage over the Soviets to a position of "rough equivalence."

While he believes the United States is at least as strong as the Russians now, Rumsfeld cautioned: "Where their capabilities have been growing, ours have not been."

"Steadily, and in some areas swiftly, the Soviet Union has pulled abreast of the United States in military capability both strategic and conventional," he said.

"Their military effort has a weight and momentum that indicates a sense of purpose."

But since then, most specialists, including Brookings' Robert G. Weinland, have taken a longer look and concluded that the Israelis violated a major rule of conventional warfare: always use infantry troops in concert with tanks.

That has vindicated one Soviet policy in Europe where Russian military planners have dispatched 11,500 tanks compared to 2,100 from the United States. In all, Warsaw Pact nations have 19,000 tanks in Europe; NATO nations 7,000.

U.S. officials say Russian armor troops are poorly trained and American tanks better made than their counterparts in the Soviet arsenal. There are also new TV-guided "smart bombs" and various other kinds of weaponry designed to destroy tanks from afar, but the numerical comparison of potential firepower is nonetheless starling.

If only numbers are considered, it can also be argued that the Soviets have taken a clear lead in sea power. Since 1965, Rumsfeld says, the Russians have built 800 new warships while the U.S. Navy has increased by only 300 ships.

Brookings researcher Weinland says U.S. aircraft carriers steaming through the eastern Mediterranean would be particularly vulnerable to attack by Russian planes firing cruise missiles, which can be launched from 200 miles away. Only recently has the United States begun testing its own version of the cruise missile.

A Library of Congress study done at the request of Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, said, "The USSR can concentrate power where and when it wants before hostilities break out, while the U.S. Navy must cover extended sea lanes.

The United States is, however, now committed to building up to a Navy of about 600 ships by the mid-1980s. Many are to be expensive nuclear-powered vessels, a policy decision disputed as unnecessary by many defense critics.

The decline of the U.S. shipbuilding industry is cited as a key reason for the current size of the U.S. fleet, rather than a conscious decision to allow the Russians to get ahead.

The United States has long held an advantage over the Soviets in long-range bombers, and the Air Force is pressing for approval to go ahead with the B1, successor to the B52 used heavily in Vietnam.

Meanwhile the Soviets have turned out tactical fighters which many specialists say are faster and more agile than any U.S. fighter in use and a match for the F15, the newest American plane now coming into use. Whatever the comparison in quality, the Soviets are also building far more fighter planes than the United States.

To resupply the Syrian and Egyptian armies in 1973 and more recently to deliver weapons to Angola, the Russians used long-range AN22 transport planes, proving a newly established ability to extend supply lines around the world.

The United States has giant C5 transport planes of comparable range, but their life is limited by wing problems.

Many defense critics say it doesn't matter how many long-range transport or sophisticated fighter planes the Russians build, if they are not in a position to be used against U.S. interests at home or abroad. They ask, for example, if the large number of Soviet tactical fighters don't reflect the need to protect the long border with China.

In the end, the debate over U.S. versus Soviet military strength comes back to doomsday. What if the missiles begin to fly and a nuclear war begins?

It is at once the simplest and most complex of questions. One Democratic presidential candidate, former Sen. Fred Harris, joins those who say it doesn't matter—that the United States and the Soviet Union have amassed such destructive arsenals that one notch of increased sophistication or a few more warheads don't matter.

But others, like Pentagon research chief Malcolm Currie, note the traditional firepower of Russian missiles combined with an intensive effort to match the U.S. lead in accuracy and numbers of warheads. To Currie, it all adds up to a future ability of the Russians to knock out U.S. land-based Minuteman missiles before they can be launched, leaving only U.S. submarine-based missiles as a deterrent.

Currie also cites the dispersal of many new Soviet industrial centers to isolated parts of the country. "They're postured to survive any war as an industrial power," he says.

Currie believes those kinds of developments could make nuclear war "thinkable" to a future generation of Soviet leaders.

To counter the Russian threat, U.S. military researchers must be permitted to develop missiles so accurate that the Russians know any first strike would be futile, Currie says.

Those who see no point to continuing the nuclear arms race, like Rep. Aspin, say enough is enough.

Aspin says, for example, that even if the Soviets knocked out most land-based missiles, the United States would still have enough missiles to drop 13 warheads on every Soviet city of more than 100,000 population.

One thing is clear: there are no simple answers and no quick election-year solutions.

He cited a 2 to 1 manpower advantage, 4.4 million Russians under arms to 2.1 million American soldiers, a shrunken U.S. Navy, increasing numbers of new Soviet fighter planes and rapid improvements in the size, firepower and accuracy of land-based missiles.

There has also been a marked increase in Russian production of such basic items as tanks, artillery and chemical warfare weapons.

In attempting to cut President Ford's $101 billion defense spending proposal, congressional critics argue that only where Russian military developments threaten U.S. interests should they be considered in American defense planning.

"We no longer take a global view of foreign policy," said one congressional source familiar with the campaign to cut the budget. "We've got to stop saying the Russians are spending 'X,' the trends are 'Y,' therefore we must spend 'Z.'"

For example, about 500,000 of the Russian soldiers are along the Chinese border, causing a steady drain on Moscow's military budget. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says about 16 per cent of the increase in Russian military spending from 1964 to 1974 is directly attributable to the troops on that border.

Aspin and defense specialists at the Brookings Institution, a private research organization, also note that among the Pentagon's count of Soviet military manpower there are about 900,000 reservists, who would not be involved in the initial fighting should war break out in central or northern Europe.

There are also 50,000 Communist political cadre and another several thousand paramilitary border troops who reduce the total effective fighting force.

Nonetheless, there is little dispute that an awesome military machine, including the armies of the Warsaw Pact nations, is arrayed against U.S. and other North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations in Europe.

A Brookings study not yet published will suggest, for example, that most of the 40,000 U.S. troops now in South Korea be transferred to Western Europe.

And besides troop strength, the Soviets have in recent years developed and produced highly sophisticated mobile anti-aircraft weapons and ground-to-air missiles that would knock down many U.S. fighter planes attempting to stop ground attacks against West Germany or other NATO allies.

FAA officials probe cause of fatal crash

BRYAN, Tex. (AP) — Federal Aviation Agency officials sought the reason today for no radio contact prior to a private plane crash that killed four Purcell, Okla., residents Sunday.

The dead were identified as pilot Odus Daniel West, 43, and Carlene Nan West, 42, both of Route 1, Box 367, and W. A. West, 55, and Minnie Ermine D. West, 50, both of Route 2, Box 286. All were from Purcell.

The Cessna 172 crashed in a low overcast without burning some 300 yards from where Marri Lentschke was painting a fence at her home.

"I heard a noise and saw it come out of the clouds," said Mrs. Lentschke, 18. "The plane was coming almost nose down and hit and made a big cloud of dust. I thought I saw something come off the plane before it hit."

A flight plan found in the plane showed it was en route to Bay City, Tex, the sheriff's department said.

The crash occurred at 10:45 a.m. and Mrs. Lentschke said there was no rain.

Easterwood Airport said it received no radio communication from the plane. Debris was scattered all over the six-acre field.

The flight plan did not say what time the Cessna, with the identification number N5532C, had left Purcell.

Authorities refused to speculate why the plane went down.

Lamesa C-C tops 600 mark

The Lamesa Chamber of Commerce signed up 106 new members to top the magic 600 number that had been its ultimate goal.

The organization now has 615 members and are the top chamber in the United States in membership among communities of comparable size.

Alan Bligh, chamber manager, said that this probably means that Lamesa has the highest per capita membership in the country.

Special congratulations were being extended to the Round Up Club and their leader, Mrs. Dorothy Haney for a successful campaign.

Jackie Kelley was cited as the top salesman during the campaign, having signed up 15 new members. The Rounders team headed by Stansell Clement was the top sales team.
