Electoral gold mines

Campaign centers on seven states

With eight days until harvest time, the presidential candidates are taking their scythes where the hay grows thickest.

The political hay is in seven of the nation's largest states, which both camps consider vital for victory and still winnable by either man.

Voters in those states — California,

New York, Illinois, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Texas — will be seeing a lot of Republicans Gerald R. Ford and Bob Dole and Democrats Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale in the week ahead. Among them, those voters control 207 of the 270 electoral votes needed to win.

Ford opened a $4-million media campaign Sunday. It will be the centerpiece of his stretch campaign, and it will be directed at six of those seven states.

He also spoke today about inflation during time bought on the Mutual Radio Network.

His campaign committee bought 30 minutes of prime television time in California and put the President on to be "interviewed" Sunday by a campaign volunteer, sportscaster Joe Garagiola.

Ford chose to talk about three issues in comparing himself with Carter: national defense, taxation and foreign affairs.

He said Carter's call for a cut of $5 billion to $7 billion in the defense budget would weaken the country. Ford noted that he supports production of the B1 bomber, which Carter would delay.

Ford said Carter's proposal to eliminate tax loopholes and deductions would raise taxes for middle-income Americans, a charge Carter has denied. Ford said his proposal for a tax cut would help those in middle-income brackets. The President has said he would reduce taxes with any budget surplus that accrues in the next four years.

He said Carter has no experience in foreign affairs, while he has met with 124 world leaders in two years as president.

Ford will film and show similar programs this week as he campaigns across the country in Illinois on Tuesday, Pennsylvania on Wednesday, Ohio on Thursday and New York on Sunday. New Jersey television markets will be covered by the New York and Pennsylvania programs.

Carter will cross the country in the other direction. Today was his last day of rest at home in Plains, Ga., prior to the voting. He was scheduled to head north and then west, finishing the campaign in Texas on Sunday and California next Monday.

The visit home gave Carter a chance to attend a session of the men's Bible class at Plains Baptist Church.

Carter is still front-runner in the campaign, according to a batch of polls taken for newspapers and magazines and published over the weekend. But his lead is narrow.

A national survey for Time magazine by the firm of Yankelovich, Skelly and White showed Carter with 48 per cent, Ford with 44 and 8 per cent undecided.

Newsweek and U.S. News and World Report magazines surveyed the states to see how the electoral vote total might divide. Newsweek found Carter solidly leading for 83 votes and in the lead for another 225, which would give him 38 more than he needs to win.

U.S. News and World Report's survey showed Carter leading for 244 votes and Ford for 90, with the rest too close to call.

A poll taken for The Associated Press immediately after Friday's final presidential debate by Chilton Research Service found that 49.0 per cent of those surveyed were leaning to Ford and 44.9 per cent to Carter. But the AP sample found a disproportionate number of older people and Republicans in the debate audience.

About Webb's drawdown

Sect. Reed is questioned

Big Spring Mayor Wade Choate has questioned Secretary of the Air Force Thomas C. Reed about the apparent reduction in the mission at Webb Air Force Base, saying that any draw down is both in violation of the law and also a breach of promise.

Choate asked for an explanation from Reed in a letter prompted by an article which appeared in Sunday's Herald which included figures which indicate an inordinate reduction in student pilots, civilian and military force, and flying time at Webb.

The number of students dropped 36 per cent since March, the total civilian and military strength dropped 15 per cent since March, and the number of programmed flight hours dropped from the 1976 average of 6,500 to 4,800 in September, according to the article.

Choate pointed to a personal promise from Sec. Reed to a Big Spring group which traveled to Washington following the March announcement that Webb was a candidate for closure. Reed said that there would be no draw-down at Webb until the final decision concerning the base had been reached.

He also pointed out that the draw-down is a violation of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 because placing Webb at the bottom of the statistics could influence the final decision as to which ATC bases are to be closed.

"During the announcement of a mission change at Webb AFB in January of this year, we were told the shift from UPT students to all SATP students would affect only 50 to 75 military positions at Webb. We were told at the mission change announcement that the purpose of the change was to level the training load at all ATC bases. However, we now find ourselves at the bottom of the list and do not believe the redistribution has been impartial," Choate wrote.

"We are aware of the fact that the RIF (Reduction in Force) program reduced the civilian force by elimination of 101 slots, of which 13 were unfilled. However, our figures indicate that the total military and civilian strength at Webb AFB was 2,942 in March. In September, this figure dropped to 2,493. This is a reduction of 450 persons, or 15 per cent of the March total," he continued. Choate also pointed out that the understanding is that even more military personnel was being reassigned to other bases.

Choate concluded, "We ask you to review the attached figures and the reduction at Webb AFB, and we would also like to ask why Webb AFB has been singled out for these drastic reductions in military, pilots, and civilian personnel since the March announcement."

The figures released Sunday by the Herald show that the number of programmed flight hours at Webb dropped from the fiscal 1976 monthly average of 6,500 to 4,800 for September, while Laughlin's figures rose from the fiscal 1976 average of 5,700 to 6,600 in September. The command average in fiscal 1976 was 5,300 while in September, the average was 5,100.

Figures also indicated that Webb dropped from first in the ATC to last in the ATC in the number of student pilots from March to September and that the total strength at Webb dropped from 2,943 in March to 2,493 in September.

Copies of Choate's letter went to Senators John Tower and Lloyd Bentsen and Cong. Omar Burleson.

Absentee votes now total 544

County Clerk Margaret Ray counted 544 absentee ballots cast in the presidential election by late this morning.

Yet to be returned by mail were another 449 ballots.

Mailed ballots will be counted if they arrive Nov. 2, election day, but absentee voting in the office ends at 5 p.m. Friday.

Blacks ready to unite in Rhodesia

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — All four Rhodesian black nationalist factions say they are ready to bury old jealousies in a united negotiating effort aimed at putting a quick end to white minority rule in Rhodesia.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole said today they will present a united front with rival nationalists Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe against white Prime Minister Ian Smith at the Rhodesia conference set to open Thursday.

They spoke after Nkomo and Mugabe announced they hoped to bring Muzorewa and Sithole into a "Patriotic Front" they have formed to push for black majority rule as quickly as possible.

In Salisbury, meanwhile, security force headquarters said six Africans were killed since Friday in incidents related to the guerrilla war. A communiqué said two were guerrillas, one was an African youth running with guerrillas and three were curfew breakers.

Muzorewa founded the short-lived African National Council in 1975 and now leads a splinter group outside Rhodesia. He said the world will be "shocked" to learn how united the previously squabbling four leaders are at the conference.

Sithole claims that he rather than Mugabe is the rightful leader of the Zimbabwe African National Union. He demanded immediate "decolonization" of Rhodesia by Britain, which still has legal responsibility for the country.

"We have had an 86-year apprenticeship," Sithole said in urging immediate black majority rule.

Mugabe says he speaks for most of the guerrillas battling Smith's government. He and Nkomo vowed in arrival statements Sunday to step up the guerrilla war in Rhodesia unless there is a swift and complete transfer of power from the country's 278,000 whites to its 6.4 million blacks.

Both rejected Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's plan for a biracial interim government for two years headed by a white and with the whites retaining control of the military forces and the police. Nkomo said the plan was "inoperative."

Smith insists that Kissinger told him the terms of the plan had been accepted by the blacks. The white Rhodesian leader says he will accept no changes. But both British and American officials say the plan was a basis for negotiations, not a binding agreement.

Smith's foreign minister, Pieter K. Van der Byl, suggested at a news conference that "it might be useful" for Kissinger to come to Geneva to clarify the "confused" situation.

Mugabe brought with him Josiah Tongogareh, the commander of the Zimbabwe People's Army, or ZIPA. It is the largest guerrilla group, estimated to number between 6,000 and 12,000 men, and fights from bases in Mozambique.

Nkomo heads the Zimbabwe African People's Union, or ZANU, which has a smaller guerrilla force.

Zimbabwe is the black nationalist name for Rhodesia. It means House of Stones, a reference to ancient ruins near Fort Victoria.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Fence rules

Q. I live on the 1600 block of Stadium. We recently requested that the city let us put up a fence along our property. The city turned us down. We have a friend who lives near the corner of Birdwood and Tucson who was permitted to put up a fence. Why can't we?

A. The restrictions on building a fence in the city are simply that it be on one's own property; that it is not more than six feet high; and that it will not create a hazard for drivers. If city traffic controllers feel that the fence will obstruct a driver's vision or in any way create a hazardous situation for the driver, the fence permit can be denied.

Offbeat: Wrong badge

A man in a green Chevrolet, displaying police stickers on the vehicle's doors, was exercising control over traffic for a time Sunday afternoon near Fairview north of Big Spring.

Summoned to the scene, city police made inquiries and later took the man into custody in Big Spring.

Investigation proved the man had an animal control officer's badge in his pocket. The badge had been issued in Luling.

Police said they doubted this gave the man authority for stopping traffic. A charge of disturbing the peace was filed against him.

Great Puzzle Contest

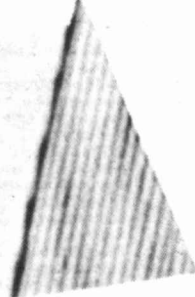

Identify this photograph and:

WIN $100

Below is a puzzle piece from a picture of a Big Spring area object or place. To the first person or persons who can specifically identify the object, the Herald will pay $50 — plus another $50 bonus if the winner is a home delivery or mail subscriber of the Herald, or a grand total prize of $100.

HERE ARE THE RULES: Each day, a different puzzle piece will be run in the Herald. Solve them, and try to piece together the identification of the place. Your answer must be specific to win. Opinions of the judges are final. At 5 p.m. each day, the judges will review guesses which arrive at the Herald on that day. Entries arriving after that time will go in the following day's judging. Winners will be announced only at this spot in the newspaper on the next day. If there is more than one winner on any day, the $100 prize will be divided evenly among them.

DAMAGED VAN — More than 50 shots hit this van, used in a robbery-kidnaping in Haslett, Tex., a small town north of Fort Worth. The victims were rescued and five persons were arrested as suspects in the incident.

'Like Vietnam fire fight'

Gun battle ends kidnap

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Three men and two women took four members of a Haslett family hostage, then shot at police and sheriff's deputies with automatic weapons from inside a stolen motor home after a 30-mile chase down an interstate highway late Sunday night.

They later surrendered and were jailed. Charges are expected to be filed later today.

At least one policeman and two of the hostages were wounded in a gun battle when the motor home was stopped at a roadblock south of Fort Worth and surrounded by scores of police. All were treated and released from a Fort Worth hospital.

"It looked like a firefight in Vietnam," said Officer D.P. Miller.

Police returned fire mostly with shotguns. Minutes later, the hostages appeared and dropped to the ground. They were followed out the door of the motor home by the suspects, their hands in the air.

Three of the suspects are believed to be from Fort Worth, a police spokesman said.

Tarrant County Sheriff Lon Evans referred to the hostages, members of the Orville Hall family of Haslett, about 17 miles north of Fort Worth, as "pretty substantial people in our county." Hall is an excavating contractor and also owns a pawn shop.

Hall's wife, Jean, was hit in the hip by a bullet during the firefight. Hall and his son, Dennis, and stepdaughter, Debbie, were reported hit by flying glass. However, they were treated at a local hospital and released later after police questioning.

Officer Tim Stewart, shot in the shoulder while following the motor home, also was treated and released.

Hall said he managed to call the sheriff's department just before the gunmen burst into his rural home. He said they demanded money and jewels and began ransacking the house after tying everyone up. Hall said the gunmen apparently planned to take no hostages until sheriff's units began arriving at the house.

It was then, he said, that he and his family were untied, herded inside the motor home and the 30-mile chase began.

One of the two women suspects followed behind in a car.

Police reports said the convoy grew in size as the motor home approached Fort Worth. Units from several law enforcement agencies fell in behind the vehicle while others began setting up a roadblock between Fort Worth and suburban Burleson on Interstate 35W.

Mrs. Hall said the gunmen told her family "they had killed many people and didn't mind killing a few more."

"They said they were going to kill one at a time if the police didn't quit following us and then throw us out one at a time," she said.

As the motor home approached the roadblock, witnesses streamed from roadside businesses. A police bull horn cracked, "All civilian personnel get back inside the buildings."

The gunmen opened up with automatic weapons, sending police and newsmen scurrying for the protection of ditches and squad cars.

Officers in front of the stopped vehicle returned fire, shattering the front window. The brief fusillade was followed by a terse order for the gunmen to come out.

The hostages emerged, followed by the gunmen who had their hands raised. The gunmen were whisked away in police units. Ambulances took the wounded to a local hospital.

A search of the motor home yielded $381 in small bills, five diamond rings and a receipt from a gun company in Springfield, Mo. for weapons and ammunition.

After the ordeal, Miss Daugherty telephoned a family friend, "When I got home, they (the suspects) said they had grandpapa, and if we didn't do what they said, they would kill us."

"They took us hostage."

They had M16s and all sorts of that kind of stuff," she said. "They drove us to Burleson and suddenly there was a roadblock. Then, there was a big shootout. Mama got hit on the side of the back and Dennis got hit (with glass) in the back of the shoulder and the side of the neck. They shot at me. They said they were supposed to kill us."

"But now listen to me, everybody is okay."

Is sun setting on British pound?

LONDON (AP) — The battered British pound plunged 7½ cents to a record low of $1.5730 in a wild wave of selling on London's foreign exchange today. By midday, however, it appeared to level out.

It was the worst slump by the weakening currency, apart from formal devaluations, since it began losing ground four years ago.

The pound's real troubles began in March when it fell below the psychologically significant $2 barrier in the midst of Britain's worst economic crisis since the Great Depression. Some analysts believe investors lack confidence in the Labor government's ability to deal with the high inflation and unemployment, low productivity and balance of payments deficit.

Monday's nosedive followed a report in the Sunday Times newspaper that the International Monetary Fund — IMF — and its biggest contributor — the United States — want the currency to fall to $1.50 as a condition for permitting Britain to draw $3.9 billion from the IMF.

The pound was quoted at $1.6150 when the market opened, down from $1.6481 when business closed Friday. In just over an hour it fell 7½ cents.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon and the IMF denied the Sunday Times report, but there were widespread fears that the psychological damage had already been done.

One top dealer commented: "I doubt if many people really believe the story, but they're also not very ready to believe denials either. No one's in a mood to trust politicians right now."

British government leaders were furious at the Sunday Times report, reliable sources said. Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey was expected to issue a statement on the monetary crisis late today in a bid to repair the damage.

However, a dealer reported: "The market is very nervous."

The pound's plunge was worldwide. It fell on Far East markets before London opened. In Paris, sterling fell below eight francs for the first time. Bankers quoted it at 7.95 francs, down from Friday's 8.2197 francs.

It hit record lows across Europe.

The Sunday Times story said the IMF believes a drop of the pound to the $1.50 level would make Britain's exports sufficiently attractive abroad to boost the country's economy.

The Sunday Times also said the IMF plans to insist that Britain impose severe restraints on borrowing, credit and money supply.

Simon termed the Sunday Times story "irresponsible and patently untrue."

Arabs disagree on peace force

CAIRO (AP) — Arab leaders ended the first session of their summit on Lebanon today divided over composition of a 30,000-man peacekeeping force to be sent to the war-torn country.

A spokesman for the Arab League said after the 13-hour meeting behind closed doors that Iraq opposed including in the force the 20,000 Syrian troops currently occupying two-thirds of Lebanon.

At a smaller summit on Lebanon in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, a week ago six Arab leaders agreed Syrian troops would remain and comprise the major contingent in the peacekeeping unit.

Long at odds with Syria, Iraq has an estimated 2,000 men in Lebanon fighting on the leftist-Moslem side. It expressed its displeasure with the Riyadh agreement by sending Foreign Minister Saadoun Hamadi to head its summit delegation.

Arab League spokesman Bahieddin Nasser of Egypt told reporters the Arab leaders in their closed meeting approved the agenda worked out by foreign ministers Sunday night, despite Iraq's objection.

He said the leaders instructed the foreign ministers to prepare a draft resolution to be submitted to the summit when it resumes Tuesday. The summit is scheduled to end Tuesday.

Asked what the resolution was about, the spokesman, who gets his information by telephone from Arab League headquarters a block away, replied "I don't know."

He reported that Libya has decided to send a delegation to the conference after boycotting the opening session.

At the formal opening, which was televised and broadcast in Egypt, President Anwar Sadat called on Lebanese of all factions to settle their differences through peaceful dialogue. He also urged that the Palestine Liberation Organization be bolstered in its struggle against Israel.

As Sadat spoke, right-wing Christians claimed new gains in their drive to seize control of southern Lebanon and establish a security belt to prevent Palestinian guerrilla raids into Israel.

The offensive prompted the leftist-Moslem alliance in Lebanon to threaten to resume fighting unless the guerrillas are allowed to return to the area.

Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat arrived at the last minute to head his organization's delegation after an unsuccessful trip to Libya to try to persuade the Libyans to take part in the summit.

The Lebanese Christian insistence on barring Palestinians from southern Lebanon violates a key provision of the Riyadh pact calling for observance of the 1969 Cairo agreement restricting the Palestinians to their refugee camps and the Arkoub district in the south.

A Christian militia commander on the Lebanese-Israeli frontier, Louis Hasrouni, told a reporter that the Arab leaders were putting up a front when they talked about enforcing the 1969 Cairo agreement.

"It's all just talk," he said. "The Riyadh meeting was attended by Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the presidents of Syria, Lebanon and Egypt, and the rulers of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait."

The agreement in effect approved Syria's military intervention in the Lebanese war to prevent the Christians being overrun by the Palestinians and their leftist Lebanese Moslem allies. Because of this, Libya is boycotting the Cairo summit, and Iraq sent its foreign minister instead of its president.

Money-saving idea proposed by study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police departments could save money without losing public support by letting citizens know they're going to have to wait longer for a response to some completed crimes, a study suggests.

"It has traditionally been assumed that rapid police response to calls for service is of sufficient importance to justify the expenditure of considerable amounts of money and effort," a report by the Police Foundation said Sunday.

A call about a burglary in progress obviously demands an immediate response, the study said. But a call to report a burglary that took place hours ago does not, the study said.

And people who make the second type of call probably would not object to being told they'll have to wait half an hour, instead of expecting a squad car to arrive almost immediately, the report

Two decisions are reached

Howard County Commissioner's Court accepted two requests made by County Engineer Neal Barnaby this morning.

Barnaby asked that the State Highway Department be allowed to use caliche from the county to repair state roads. Barnaby cited as the reason for the request both the state's lack of adequate repair material and the nature of the County Maintenance Department's relationship with the state.

Barnaby said the use of the caliche to repair state roads would result in better roads throughout Howard County. He said that donating the caliche would not affect any Howard County businesses.

Barnaby also received approval for a joint project with the city to clear a runoff channel for water between Baylor Street and Lover's Lane. They city will take on pulling trees to clear the channel and the county intends to use its heavy equipment to deepen and straighten the watercourse.

Election year activity

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the government soon begins accepting applications for federal insurance on a new type of mortgage from homebuyers earning $14,000 to $25,000, the occasion will cap a flurry of pre-election administration activity on housing. Government programs that were dormant for two years have blossomed since President Ford used a campaign address on Sept. 15 to announce the new mortgage plan. And some old administration policies have reemerged with a burst of fanfare as part of a campaign that Ford promised would be composed of "specifics, not smiles."

He blamed excessive government spending, which he said amounts to 40 cents of every dollar, as the root cause of inflation and the unemployment he believes results.

JAPANESE PRAY AT MEMORIAL TO BRIDGE DEAD — Japanese veterans of World War II bow their heads in prayer before the memorial to Allied prisoners of war who died building the bridge on the river Kwai, at Kanchanaburi. Forty two former Japanese soldiers and 10 Allied POWs attended this first Japanese-Allied reunion at the site Monday. The Allied group included seven Australians, two Americans and a former British army captain.

China's new leader cheered by masses

HONG KONG (AP) — Hua Kuo-feng, appearing relaxed and confident, made his first public appearance as China's new leader before a million Chinese in Peking, who cheered him and applauded condemnations of his radical rivals.

The rally Sunday was staged in the great square before the Tien An Men — the Gate of Heavenly Peace. China-watchers in Hong Kong studying a telecast were struck by the predominance of military uniforms.

Hua, elected to succeed Mao Tse-tung as chairman of the Chinese Communist party — China's highest office — wore a military uniform himself. This was considered a possible indication of the present importance of the military, who outnumber civilians on the party Politburo seven to five.

Observers in Hong Kong also noted that Hua and the other leaders smilingly chatted among themselves while speakers denounced Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and other radical members of the Politburo. This was in marked contrast to the rigid formality of similar rallies at which Mao presided.

Hua was flanked on the rostrum by Defense Minister Yeh Chien-ying, 77, and Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien, 71, considered the man most likely to succeed Hua as premier. However, a Peking broadcast of the rally continued to identify Hua by the title of premier as well as the two new ones he inherited from Mao, party chairman and head of the party's military commission.

The announcer on the telecast frequently coupled Hua and Yeh together, leading to speculation that the two might head a collective leadership. This speculation was reinforced by the absence of any expression from the throng of wishes for a long life for Hua, who is 57.

Observers said this could be due to a desire on Hua's part to discourage attempts to build a personality cult around him.

Hua did not speak at the rally. The chief speaker was the mayor of Peking, Wu Teh, who told the crowd that Mao before his death on Sept. 9 personally selected Hua to succeed him as chairman of the party. Wu said shortly after Mao named Hua premier and first deputy party chairman last April. "Chairman Mao wrote to comrade Hua Kuo-feng in his own handwriting. 'With you in charge, I'm at ease,' which expressed his boundless trust in comrade Hua Kuo-feng."

Wu said the "gang of four"

— Chiang Ching and her three radical allies on the Politburo — tried to thwart Mao's wishes by making Miss Chiang the party chairman.

Texas stripper wells prove top producers

Crude oil produced from stripper wells in the state of Texas totaled 126,018,341 barrels for calendar year 1975 to lead the nation in this class of production. Texas also led in the number of active stripper wells on January 1, 1976 with a total of 89,027.

This information was presented by National Stripper Well Association and Interstate Oil Compact Commission at the Association's annual meeting in New Orleans October 25. The annual survey, made as a joint project of the organizations, showed the state with 1.87 billion barrels of oil still to be recovered from known reserves under stripper properties. This estimate is based on present economics and today's technology.

Despite the fact that operators plugged 5,716 wells last year for economic reasons, the number of active producing wells in this category increased by 1,615.

Stripper wells are defined as those producing an average of 10 barrels or less daily. In Texas, the actual average was 3.88 barrels. This represents a minor decrease compared with 1974, indicating producers, with an improvement in the economic climate for this division of the industry, could keep wells operating at a lesser rate of daily production than in prior years, the Association stated.

Effective as of September 1, price restraints on production from stripper wells were released and such oil can now seek its true value in the competitive market. Although any hike in the price is expected to be limited, operators will be encouraged to increase workover and remedial work on present wells approaching abandonment level, and to further develop present producing areas.

Combined, these field activities will provide a greater life span for the smaller capacity wells with the result that ultimate recovery will be increased. Additionally, the number of premature abandonments for economic reasons should be reduced.

Stripper wells, 52 per cent of all oil wells in the state, account for 10.5 per cent of Texas production. From gross income, ranchers and other landowners on whose properties the production is located, receive 12.5 per cent of gross income in direct royalty payments. Costs of services and equipment from oil-related industry, wages, state and federal taxes and operating expenses are paid from the balance and generally support state industrial activity.

With the national energy deficit continuing, the contribution made by stripper oil production to the total domestic supply is of increasing importance, the Association noted.

Baptists form group defending Carter

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. W.A. Criswell of Dallas, pastor of the Southern Baptist Convention's largest congregation, has been criticized by a pro-Jimmy Carter Baptist group for supporting President Ford.

The group, calling itself the Baptist Laymen for Carter, issued a statement Sunday which also condemned Criswell for recent criticism of Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, a Southern Baptist.

Criswell, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Dallas, criticized Carter during a sermon Oct. 10 that was attended by President Gerald Ford.

In pre-sermon remarks, Criswell took a verbal slap at Carter for the candidate's widely publicized interview with Playboy Magazine. Later the pastor endorsed Ford while standing on the steps of the 19,000-member church.

Dr. James Ralph Scales, president of Wake Forest University, and George McCotter, a Sanford businessman, released the statement Sunday on behalf of the 16-man group that was organized last week. The group is made up of deacons in Baptist churches in North Carolina.

The statement said Criswell attacked Carter "for witnessing to his faith in a magazine interview."

Scales said the group wants to be sure that Carter is not "misrepresented" in the final week of the presidential campaign.

Sales, income show gains

Sales and earnings of Furr's Cafeterias, Inc. for the first nine months of 1976 remained ahead of 1975 record levels although earnings during the third quarter 1976 were slightly below the third quarter of 1975, reported Don G. Furr, chairman of the board.

Sales during the nine months ended Oct. 2, 1976, were $46.6 million or 18.8 per cent over sales of $39.2 million in the same period of 1975. Earnings for the first nine months of 1976 were $2.20 million or $9.99 per share compared to $2.18 million or $9.98 per share in the first nine months of 1975. Earnings per share attributable to investment tax credit were ten cents in the first nine months of 1976 and 1975. For the quarter ended Oct. 2, 1976, sales were $16.1 million, up $1.98 million or 14.1 per cent over sales of $14.1 million in the third quarter of 1975. Earnings were $725 thousand or $3.37 per share compared to $821 thousand or $3.37 per share in the third quarter of 1975, down by 11.7 per cent. Earnings per share attributable to investment tax credit were three cents in the third quarter of 1976, compared to four cents in the third quarter of 1975.

One new cafeteria in Paris, Texas, is scheduled for October opening, which will bring to six the number of openings for 1976. Two cafeterias were closed during third quarter, one in Temple, Ariz. and one in Wichita Falls, Texas, bringing the total unprofitable units closed during 1976 to four. A total of 66 cafeterias and two pie shops should be open at year end.

Police beat

Guns, other items are taken in burglary here

Burglars who entered the residence of Noel David Bethea at 403 Dallas between 4:30 and 11:40 p.m. Sunday went away with over $2200 worth of guns and other items.

Among the missing items were a .22 pistol, a .357 Magnum pistol, a .22 gauge shotgun, a .20 gauge shotgun, two rifles, and a .300 Ruger.

Other things taken were a turntable, a stereo receiver, and two gun scopes. There was damage to both the gun cabinet and a window on the south side of the house.

The soft drink machine at the Main Street Church of Christ was broken into with $200 reported in missing coins and in damage.

L. V. Carouth reported a plate glass window broken at Carouth Laundry at 3108 W. 80. Olga Marquez reported a windshield broken in her vehicle. The Boys Club reported a break-in to the storage area and vandalism at the club. Chris Spell reported a window broken at his repair shop at 606 E. 2nd.

Della Dixon at 306 NW 5th, reported a burglary at that residence with one chicken and two record albums missing. Apparently, somebody is planning a chicken dinner with music.

Gene Kerby, West Inn Lounge, reported a CB radio taken from a vehicle parked at that address. It was reported at 12:10 a.m. today.

Three different individuals called the police at 2:30 a.m. today to report their 14-year-old daughter, 15-year-old daughter and 16-year-old son as runaways.

A hit run which occurred at 1309 Robin was cleared with Victor D. Garcia, 401

Minor accidents include one at 3rd and Runnels at 10:38 p.m. Saturday involving vehicles driven by Larry H. Torres, 1301 Utah and John Elmer Wright III, Box 147A.

At 2:20 p.m. Sunday at 5th and Gregg, there was a mishap between vehicles driven by Phuoc Doan, 1102 Sycamore and Hubert Miller, 703 Ohio. At 2:45 p.m., a wreck occurred on the parking lot at 3104 Parkway between vehicles driven by Michael Shults, 4201 Birch and Billy Devine, 217A Langley.

Was 'escape' engineered?

"Nobody gone but us chickens."

E. Sanchez at 630 W. 3rd reported over the weekend that five chickens had escaped the coop in back of his home.

The door had been pried open, so there was a distinct possibility that somebody is enjoying a chicken dinner.

Belly dancing class slated

The Howard College Department of Continuing Education is announcing registration for its Belly Dancing Class at 7:00 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 28. Mrs. Dottie Dockter, who has been instructing the course at the Howard College Lamesa Campus, is the instructor of the class which is from 7:00 until 9:00 a.m. each Thursday for six weeks, breaking for the Thanksgiving Holidays. The sessions will be held in the student lounge of the Horace Garrett Building of Applied Science on the Howard College Campus.

Belly Dancing is a very complete physical fitness program, and has proved to be very useful in weight reduction programs. The size of the class will necessarily be limited and applicants will be admitted on a "first come" basis.

Tuition is $12, and interested persons can contact Rosemary Flores or Herb Johnson at the Howard College Office of Continuing Education, phone 267-6311 Ext. 66.

Cramer winner of CB radio

In brief ceremonies at the Republican Headquarters here, Del Poss, active in the Young Republicans movement, drew out the winner's name in a contest Saturday afternoon.

R. D. Cramer was presented the CB radio, awarded after a week of registering voters. The headquarters will remain open through the election, despite the fact that somebody hurled a rock through headquarters' front window. Ben Bancroft, county chairman, reported the incident.

Weather

Light freeze hits panhandle section

A light freeze nipped parts of the Texas Panhandle and far West Texas today as the latest cold front eased southward along a line bisecting the state from northeast to southwest.

Scattered rain, showers or drizzle dotted extreme East Texas and the coastal plains. Skies cleared in western areas behind the frontal zone and it was at least partly cloudy everywhere else.

Early morning fog cloaked the Midland-Odessa vicinity in West Texas, robbing visibility below one-quarter mile in places. While the norther still approached Sunday, heavy rains soaked much of South Texas, prompting flash flood watches in some areas. Moisture measurements ranged up to four inches at San Antonio.

Early morning temperatures slipped to 29 degrees at Amarillo and 31 at El Paso while the reading was still 69 at Brownsville at the mouth of the Rio Grande. Light north winds fanned most of the state.

Fair and cooler weather was promised all sections by Tuesday.

FORECAST
WEST TEXAS: Fair through Tuesday. Warmer north tonight and most sections Tuesday. Low tonight 41 north to 48 south except 302 high valleys and mountains. High Tuesday 60 north to 80 south.

EXTENDED FORECAST
WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy Wednesday through Friday. Scattered showers Wednesday. Turning colder Thursday. Lows Tuesday night 30s north to upper 40s south. Highs Wednesday near 60 north to mid 70s south. Lows Wednesday and Thursday night near 20 north to lower 40s south. Highs Thursday and Friday upper 40s north to mid 60s south.

AF not living up to promise

When Webb Air Force Base was first announced as a candidate for closure, Secretary of the Air Force Thomas Reed personally promised the delegation from Big Spring that Webb would not be drawn down prior to a final decision on its future.

For the first few months, it appeared the Air Force would keep this promise.

HOWEVER, discouraging signs have been coming up lately which indicate that Webb had indeed been drawn down over the past six months. So much so, that if the reduction should continue for another six months, the base would be operating at a greatly reduced level if at all.

Big Spring Herald reporter Bob Burton has worked to account for the changes at Webb for the past two weeks. The cold figures are these:

	MARCH	SEPT.
Webb military strength	1937	1711
Student pilots	306	200
Civilians	700	582
Total	2942	2493

Thus, Burton found that Webb had lost 450 persons, or 15 per cent, since the announcement of its being a candidate for closure. (Although the pilot level here is listed as 200, the Air Training Command puts this level at an average of 180 for September).

Some of these missing persons can be accounted for easily. This year's reduction in civilian force took out 88 (101 less 13 unfilled slots). The base is currently trying to hire a number of positions, and this can account for roughly 42. There are 37 fewer foreign pilots at the base under the Security Assistance Training Program.

THE AIR FORCE announced Jan. 1, 1976, that Webb would be giving up its Undergraduate Training Program (American) students pilots and concentrating on the SATP (foreign) pilot program. Then wing commander Robert Owens guessed that this would cause Webb to lose 50 to 75 support positions.

All added together, this means that about 300 missing persons are easily explainable. However, there is another 150 that have been moved from the base.

The announced reason for changing Webb's mission was to "level the load" between Air Training Command bases. Webb was training more than its share of students, we were told, and the command was only trying to even things up.

If that was so, the command has failed miserably in its goal. The spread between the most pilots at the busiest base and the least at the busiest is just about as wide as it was then. And so are the flying hours.

In March, the bases looked like this:

Webb	281 student pilots
Laughlin	237
Reese	209
Vance	193
Columbus	191
Craig	164

Now take a look at the same figures for September:

Laughlin	274 student pilots
Reese	253
Columbus	239
Vance	232
Craig	191
Webb	180

Can it be only coincidence that Webb, a candidate for closure, has dropped to the bottom along with Craig, another candidate, or was it planned that way?

The Air Force said that flying hours were the only really valid basis for comparison between bases since programs varied for pilots with SATP flying more hours and UPT flying less.

But again, this didn't hold up when the numbers come out. The programmed flying hours for September show Webb to be near the bottom of the heap by design of the Air Training Command:

	March	Base	September
Laughlin	5,700	Laughlin	6,600
Vance	5,300	Columbus	5,700
Reese	4,800	Vance	5,200
Webb	5,200	Reese	4,900
Craig	4,300	Webb	4,800
		Craig	4,500

Again, can it be only coincidence that Webb and Craig, the two candidates for closure, are at the bottom of the planned list? Craig, of course, has so little capacity that it is always on or near the bottom, but this is not true of Webb.

All other bases have gained at Webb's expense. The reduction of Webb was a deliberate move on the part of the Air Force in violation of Secretary of the Air Force Reed's personal promise to Big Spring.

Citizen Brown?

William F. Buckley, Jr.

A number of Americans seeking election or re-election have contrived, however inadvertently, to politicize our military, and that is a pity. Harry Truman fired Douglas MacArthur on the charge that he was attempting to be a policy-maker rather than a general, and the liberal community cheered this decision. Now they want the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff to make policy decisions.

WHAT GENERAL George S. Brown was asked, in the disputed interview, was for his opinion "from a purely military point of view" — those words are the Israeli questioner's words — about the net bearing as of last spring of our commitment to Israel. General Brown said, "Well, I think it's just got to be considered a burden."

Rabbi Alexander Schindler, the chairman of the Conference of presidents of the Major Jewish Organizations, issued a statement that his organization was "deeply disturbed" by the remarks of General Brown. Carter, as usual, proposed firing Brown — he would fire Amy if somebody took exception to her lemonade. Mondale raised the ante and said Brown should never have been hired in the first place — because people like the general "shouldn't be sewage commissioners." Even the sainted junior senator from New York climbed aboard the bandwagon and suggested that General Brown be fired.

Why? Are these gentlemen saying that a general should not be permitted to answer a question posed "from a purely military point of view"? No inference other than this plausible. Or are they saying that General Brown should be fired because by making that particular statement, he proved himself to be an incompetent soldier? Are we to suppose that Rabbi Schindler's knowledge of military matters entitles him to draw such conclusions about General Brown's military incompetence? I doubt it.

I am certain that the rabbi, like the others, were eliding a military judgment into a political judgment. And that is exactly what ought not to be done in a republic that prides itself on the division of authority between the military and the civil orders.

Obviously Israel is a burden — from a purely military point of view. What has this got to do with whether we should defend it? Or even with the question of whether it might not become a military blessing in the days ahead? To say that something is a burden is not even to begin to suggest that it is not a burden for which we are grateful. The greatest burden in the Constitution of the United States is the Bill of Rights. We would hardly elect to be without it for that simple reason. Children — God knows — are a burden on their parents "from a strict economic point of view."

From a strict military point of view, our commitment to Berlin is a tremendous burden. It would be burdensome to defend, and possibly could only be defended by the threat of massive nuclear retaliation. South Korea is a considerable military burden, requiring 50,000 American troops. Israel is hugely expensive to defend, and indeed the rapid rearming of Israel after the Yom Kippur war hugely drained our military inventory.

Soap opera gets medical A

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: While watching a soap opera, "All My Children," a young boy (4 or 5) was supposed to have suffered from emotional asthma because of the loss of his father. Is there such a thing in real life? We had such a child, and no reason was ever found for the asthma spells, but they did pass with time. — R.D.

The script writers did their medical homework. They get an A. Bronchial asthma is heavy, labored breathing caused by narrowing or spasm of the bronchial (lung) passages.

Most bronchial asthma is related to physical factors such as allergy, but there is, indeed, a form for which no apparent cause can be found and where no bronchial damage can be identified. Often, this type is emotion-based.

A child going through the trauma of losing someone as close as a father might well develop all the symptoms of physical asthma. However, this is very difficult to diagnose, or at least to distinguish from other types.

We do know that persons with physical asthma (that is, asthma caused by an identifiable cause such as allergy) can have attacks that are obviously emotion-caused. Just how much is a result of physical cause and how much by psychological factors is a matter of debate.

Nor is it unusual for a person, like the child in the soap opera, to exhibit symptoms of asthma, then have them disappear when the emotional problems are settled.

The strong psychological factors involved in asthma make it important to treat the young asthmatic very carefully to avoid frightening him. Parents should learn how to handle such children, both physically and emotionally.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: The job I have involves a lot of walking and sometimes prolonged standing. As a result I have what my doctor calls plantar warts.

He prescribed foam rubber over the area. This helped at first, but now the pain is becoming worse. What exactly causes this? Is there some type of treatment to alleviate the pain? — Mrs. D.Y.H.

These are warts that occur on the sole area (plantar) of the foot. They usually develop on a calloused spot that bears weight. But, as with any wart, it is caused by a virus infection. Measures to relieve pressure are important, of course, but if that is not the answer, then surgical removal or the use of caustic applications may be needed. You should discuss it with your doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Ever since the controversy concerning diethylstilbestrol (DES) came out into the open I have been quite worried. The findings are that female offspring of women who had taken the drug during pregnancy run a high risk of vaginal cancer.

In 1960 I was pregnant with my first daughter. During the second month of my pregnancy I had what the doctor called a "threatening miscarriage." I had to stay in bed for several days and was given some medication. I do not know what it was and have no way of finding out. It was a military hospital.

My daughter is now 15 and menstruated about one year ago. Although during pregnancy run a high risk of she seems normal I still worry that something could go wrong. She is not the type to confide in me, and I do not want to tell her something and worry her needlessly. I would like your opinion on how to handle this. — M.A.

You should inform your (her) doctor about the situation. DES may or may not have been the medication you had while carrying her. To ease your mind and, more importantly, as a prudent precaution the possibility should be investigated. A Pap test should be sufficient for what you need to know.

There's an old saying — if your feet hurt, you hurt all over. Dr. Thosteson's new booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," shows you how to avoid and take care of foot problems. To get your copy, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I'm a Christian, and I had a wonderful time at a camp with other Christians. But now that I'm home everything seems to be going wrong. I get depressed. I am selfish and discontented. I am very emotional.

The Bible says we will be happier if we give our lives to God, but I don't know how to do that. Can you help me? — J.C.

DEAR J.C.: One reason for your unhappiness at camp was that you were with other Christians. We all need this kind of fellowship if we are to grow strong as Christians. There is no more joyful experience than joining with others in worship and praise.

The Bible says that we are all like parts of one body, joined together and working together. Cut yourself off from other Christians and you become like an arm without a body. "The eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you" (I Corinthians 12:21). Christians cannot do without each other. Therefore, become actively involved in the life of a church where there are people your own age.

You have used some interesting words in your question — "depressed," "discontented," "emotional," "selfish." Satan is your enemy and will attack your emotions to bring on feelings of depression and discontentment.

Fight back in Christ's strength. "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7). Every morning, submit your life to God for that day. As you start each new task, ask for God's help. In this way you will become conscious of God's presence all the time, and Satan finds it much harder to break through your defenses once you are really trusting in the Lord.

Bella in Spokane?

Evans, Novak

ATLANTA — Rep. Bella Abzug of New York, terrible-tempered gladiator of the Democratic party's far-left wing, was surreptitiously unleashed by Jimmy Carter's political high command in a way that could only hurt his candidacy — a strange decision raising doubts about the Carter campaign and the administration that may follow it.

WITH JUST a month left before what promises to be an extremely close election, top Carter aides authorized an Abzug barnstorming tour across the country in Carter's behalf. Included were some areas where her ideology and personality could cost Carter badly needed votes. Not one word of notification went out to Democratic leaders or even the Carter coordinators in the states affected.

When word did get out, screams of outrage cancelled so much of the Abzug tour that it became a pale shadow of its former self. Nevertheless, questions persist: Do Carter's closest advisers really consider Battling Bella a mainstream Democrat? Is this a dark preview of the true ideological inclinations of a Carter administration?

As much for her corrosive rhetoric as her extreme left views on national security and foreign policy, Mrs. Abzug is viewed by moderate Democrats as the type of polarizer who menaces the party's future. Consequently, there was considerable rejoicing by old-line Democrats last month when she narrowly lost the Democratic Senate primary in New York to Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a centrist and hard anti-Communist.

Shortly after the New York primary, Mrs. Abzug chatted with Carter aboard the Democratic whistlestop train and expressed her desire to get deeply involved in his campaign. Carter immediately agreed and referred her to his campaign manager, Hamilton Jordan. After a five-minute conversation, Jordan turned her over to his assistant, Landon Butler.

WHETHER CARTER and Jordan were happy about the Abzug offer or just being polite is impossible to know. But there is no mistaking the attitude of Butler, one of the young Southern liberals who abound at Carter's 24th floor campaign headquarters here. "We think Bella can help a lot," Butler told us, "and she's very, very strong for Jimmy."

Consequently, Butler approved an Abzug barnstorming tour opening with a press conference on the Capitol steps in Washington Oct. 12 and continuing to Detroit, Milwaukee, Madison, San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Buffalo. No clearance was sought from local party leaders.

Alarm bells were set off when Mrs. Abzug sent an Oct. 5 letter to all Democratic members of Congress, beginning: "Carter campaign manager Hamilton Jordan has asked me to coordinate a national barnstorming effort by members of the Senate and House in behalf of the Carter-Mondale ticket."

Her proposed itinerary particularly outraged party leaders in Washington state, where Democrats prefer the style and ideology of Sen. Henry M. Jackson.

Dear Editor: There is little to choose between the two presidential candidates with the following exceptions:

1. Carter says he will sign a bill doing away with section 14B of the Taft-Hartley law. 14B gives all states the privilege of passing a right-to-work law which says a worker may or may not join a union as a condition of holding a job. The worker has a choice. Texas and 10 other states have overwhelmingly passed such a law. In these states unemployment is much lower than in those states in which the worker has no choice.

If Carter does away with 14B then Texans will have no right-to-work without coercion from someone who tells the worker he will have to join a union or lose his job. If we do away with freedom of jobs, then why not do away with freedom of press; freedom of speech or freedom of religion. Is one of these freedoms more important than freedom of a right to make a living without paying an autocratic union for the privilege. Newspaper people should think that over in connection with the freedom they enjoy.

2. Carter apparently wants to join the idiots in Washington in spending us further into bankruptcy by promising more to the lazy and the bureaucracy.

3. Carter nor any other politician will do away with unemployment as long as politicians promise to give away more and more of the earnings of those who work and have to those who don't work and don't have. Carter being a born-again-Christian should read that part of the Bible which says in effect: Those that don't work don't eat. Newspapers across the country have columns and columns of want ads for workers.

Read the November 'Readers' Digest' on the following subjects: Page 50 - "Worker's Rights and Union Wrongs" in a state where there is no Right-to-Work law.

Readers Digest is available and can be read in the County Library of most counties.

Dear Editor: I was so proud of the letter in publisher's corner by J. Tom Graham, referring to the Bicentennial planter.

I have so often wondered if anyone else noticed how unattractive they had become.

Seems like a lot more planning before they were put there would have been a lot wiser, like — "they could be used for garbage, or plants destroyed by non-caring citizens, or plants would be a problem to get water too. — But it was more like the old quote "How easy it is the night before to get up early the next morning..." — but is more like — once our city makes up its mind we are still undecided."

As we already have the planters, why not add some good old West Texas cactus? They have very pretty blooms, come summer. And I'm sure no one will be tempted to pull them up, as a rule they protect themselves. They are a desert plant and can survive an awfully long time without water.

These plants can be obtained almost anywhere on ranchland nearby, free of charge, and would look a lot nicer than the discarded garbage, that the planters contain.

I am for a better Big Spring, if everybody cared just a little, we would have one of the prettiest towns in West Texas.

Portrayal not accurate

Texas Tower hero suing MGM, NBC

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — The law enforcement officer who gunned down the Texas Tower sniper in 1966 doesn't like the way producers portrayed him in their movie version of the event and has filed a $1 million damage suit.

Texas Ranger Ramiro Martinez, who was a member of the Austin police force when he killed Charles Whitman atop the University of Texas tower, claimed he was misrepresented in his suit against Metro-Goldwin-Mayer and the NBC television network.

Martinez filed suit in federal court here last week and claimed breach of contract in arguing that the movie tended to portray him as a radical Mexican-American.

Producer Antonio Calderon was also named in the suit.

The movie, shown on Oct. 18, 1975, depicted the events of Aug. 1, 1966, when Whitman climbed to the University of Texas tower in Austin and from it shot and killed 16 persons and wounded 31.

Martinez and a civilian made their way to the top of the tower and shot Whitman to death.

Martinez' attorney, Donato Ramos, said "NBC had agreed that the movie would be a true and realistic description of what actually transpired. They did not fulfill their part of the agreement."

Ramos, who said Martinez did not receive any money for his consent, said parts of the movie constituted an invasion of privacy.

He said Martinez objected to the movie showing his wife, depicted as a Mexican-American while in real life she is of German descent, arguing with him over his failure to get promoted.

The movie also showed Martinez as having obtained the highest grades for a possible promotion and being passed over because he was a Mexican-American.

Ramos said that, contrary to what the movie showed, Martinez had a good relationship with his superior officers and the reason he was not promoted was simply that there were no openings at the time.

"He was just not portrayed as he really is," Ramos said. "He is not the radical they showed."

Martinez, eventually left the Austin police and joined the Texas Rangers working mostly the South Texas area.

He was one of the investigators in the task force that conducted a probe of Duval County politics that resulted in the indictment of a large number of county officials last year.

Over half of American kitchens are 'high-risk' danger zones

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government survey indicates that 63 per cent of American home kitchens are "high risk" zones for the 2 million to 10 million estimated cases of food poisoning each year.

The risks are higher if the cook is under 50 years old, better educated and part of a family with $15,000 or more income a year, according to the report by Judith L. Jones and Jon P. Weimer of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service.

The nationwide survey, using a scientifically selected sample of 2,503 representative households, was conducted in 1974. The analysis of the findings is being published this month.

The focus of the study is the "high risk" homemaker — those with an unnecessarily high potential of sickness due to possible contamination of food through such things as undercooking and poor refrigeration.

Too much faith on the part of the cook is a major part of the problem, the report says.

"Homemakers may place undue reliance upon government inspection functions for prevention of bacterial contamination of raw meat and poultry products," it concluded.

For example, Agriculture Department meat inspectors do not check or try to regulate the amount of salmonellae, the most common source of food poisoning, in slaughtered meat or processed products. The bacteria are present in the environment generally and it would be impractical to market sterile meat, the department said.

A homemaker earned a "high risk" designation for one or more of these "undesirable practices":

Eating hamburger rare, leaving meats at room temperature for more than two hours after cooking, leaving tuna, chicken or other salad-type sandwiches — including brown-bagged lunches — at room temperature for more than two hours, stuffing a turkey a day or more in advance, storing stuffing in the leftover turkey or cooking the turkey partially in one place and finishing it later.

Of the 63 per cent getting the label, about half committed only one of the errors, the researchers said, while 47 per cent hit on two to four.

The Jones-Weimer analysis commented that one reason for the apparently "safer" kitchens among the older, less educated and lower-income families is they are less apt to be buying vulnerable whole turkeys or beef or pork roasts.

Even some of those who prepared the food safely were undone by their refrigerators, the survey found. About a third of the appliances checked were operating at temperatures higher than 45 degrees, the minimum needed to check bacterial growth.

taxpayers money because "the alternative costs for medical assistance during prenatal care, at birth and after are very much greater."

In his ruling in the class action suit, Dooling said the federal government had no right to intervene in the bitter disagreement between right-to-life groups and pro-abortionists.

He said that, under the law, abortion is a constitutional right.

In Washington, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said it would comply with the ruling. No decision has been made on a possible appeal, a spokesman said.

Dooling's decision came a day after U.S. District Judge John Sirica dismissed a similar suit filed in Washington by low income women from Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Sirica said in his decision that the women had failed to show the law would prevent the District of Columbia or Virginia from paying for abortions.

The suit decided by Dooling was filed by Mrs. Cora McRae, identified only as a 24-year-old New York City resident.

HEW estimates that Medicaid has spent between $45 million and $55 million annually for 250,000 to 300,000 abortions.

Aid to Families with Dependent Children pays about $600 per year for each child, an HEW spokesman said. If 300,000 children were added to the rolls each year, the cost of that program would increase $180 million a year.

Judge says women have right to abortion reimbursement

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge has lifted a ban on Medicaid reimbursements for abortions, saying that a woman may not be barred from exercising a constitutional right because of a lack of money.

The ruling in Brooklyn by U.S. District Judge John Dooling Jr. action blocks the Hyde Amendment, which was tacked on to a $56 million social services bill that Congress enacted Sept.

30 by overriding President Ford's veto.

Dooling said his ruling would have the effect of nullifying the Hyde Amendment in all 50 states, unless overturned by appeal.

The amendment banned Medicaid payments for all abortions except those carried out to save the life of the mother, or in cases of rape and incest.

Dooling said payments for abortions would not save Checked his guns on wedding night

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the girl who spent most of her honeymoon writing thank-you notes for her wedding gifts. Well, I've got that one beat.

On my wedding night the dude I married sat up all night loading and unloading shotguns. When I finally got him to come to bed, all he did was fall asleep.

I should have known he was a dingbat right then and there, but he'd been awfully good to me before we were married; he was a perfect gentleman, and he never laid a hand on me.

He's a millionaire and hardly ever works. He bought me a car, a real fur coat and a diamond watch. I think he's a dope eater because he's high for a spell then fades fast. He's 40 and I'm 24, and have my whole life ahead of me. The big problem is that he doesn't care one thing about sex and I do. He swore if he ever caught me with another dude, he'd kill me. I'm his fifth wife. Should I stick around or not?

EVERYTHING BUT LOVE

DEAR EVERYTHING: So far, your marriage reads like a Hitchcock thriller, but you'll have to write the ending yourself. Stick around if you like, but a man who threatens to kill is more than a dingbat. He's dangerous.

DEAR ABBY: While watching a baseball game with two of my girlfriends, some boys from another town asked us how old we were.

One girl said she was 13, and the other said she was 14. They're both 12.

The girl who said she was 14 was trying to get a boyfriend. I think if a girl wants a boyfriend she should give her right age, don't you?

TWELVE AND HONEST

DEAR TWELVE: Honesty is always the best policy. Lying about one's age can become habit-forming. Teen-agers add a year or two, but after 40, they start subtracting.

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the letter from the woman who said she liked her neighbors but was satisfied with her own religion and resented their trying to sell her on theirs (Mormon).

That sweet woman had only to say to the young missionaries, "Thank you, but no thank you," and that would have been the end of it.

We as members are asked to extend friendship to neighbors, to tell them about the Gospel and to be missionaries wherever we are, in the way we live and act — by example.

Our missionaries apply no pressure, knowing that man was given his free agency to choose his own religion.

We are converts to the Church of Jesus Christ Latterday Saints, and can attest to the fact that our conversion has brought harmony, happiness and fulfillment to our entire family.

The Cowboys win another, Staubach cracks knuckle

DALLAS (AP) — The little pinky on Roger Staubach's passing hand was a giant question mark today in the path of the Dallas Cowboy's bid to return to the Super Bowl.

Staubach, enjoying his finest year, suffered a fracture in the small finger of his right hand in Sunday's costly 31-21 victory over Chicago.

"We'll have to wait and take a closer look," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. "The doctor said he had a chip in the knuckle of his passing hand and I don't know how long it takes a chip to mend."

"Maybe he'll be ready for Washington and then again it might be two weeks."

Staubach, who had passed for one touchdown and run for another, said "I'll be playing against the Redskins. This won't stop me."

Landry couldn't even enjoy Dallas' 6-1 record which gave the Cowboys a half-game lead in the National Conference Eastern Division. St. Louis played Washington tonight.

Danny White, the cool-headed referee from the World Football League, completed two touchdowns passes to Preston Pearson, but also suffered two interceptions.

"Witty only Danny at quarterback, we could face the possibility of checking into the market," said Landry. "(Safety) Charlie Waters (a former quarterback at Clemson) can take the snap but that's about all. White's cadence also hurt us as much as it did the Bears. He has a different rhythm and it was confusing to both sides."

Chicago lost ace running back Walter Payton with a sprained ankle and defensive end Roger Stillwell with a knee injury. Payton was held to only 42 yards rushing before he departed.

Bear Coach Jack Pardee said "Payton, I think will be all right. He just got a bad sprain, but should be OK for next week."

Dallas was leading 17-7 when Staubach departed after being tackled by linebacker Mike Hartenstein. Staubach had rolled out four yards for one touchdown and passed four yards to Drew Pearson for another score.

White connected on touchdown passes for 15 and 6 yards to Preston Pearson, starting his first game at running back since off-season knee surgery. One of White's interceptions was returned 37 yards for a touchdown, the last 12 steps coming on Ross Brubacher's lateral to Hartenstein.

"I got a lot of confidence from Coach Landry because he kept calling passing plays after I threw the interception."

Pearson made a diving catch for one of his touchdowns and said "It's nice to be back ... you can believe that."

Pardee said Staubach came out and knocked out eyes out. Preston Pearson made a super catch on the TD in the end zone.

Chicago, which fell to a 3-4 record, was down 24-7 before Brubacher's interception and lateral cut the count to 24-14.

Virgil Livers returned a punt 51 yards to setup Johnny Musso's two-yard touchdown run and the score narrowed to 24-21 with the pressure on White.

White responded with a 54-yard bomb to Golden Richards which put Dallas in position for the clinching touchdown.

Bear middle linebacker Don Rives said "We had 'em going in the third quarter and we got down on the top to Richards. It was the key play. This is probably the best team we have played thus far. They are a great team and play great defense."

Landry said "This was an incredible game. How we ever got in jeopardy of losing I'll never know. Danny started slow but he got stronger and that's a good sign. Now, we'll just have to wait and see what the verdict is on Roger."

SITS DOWN ON TACKLE — Cincinnati Bengal running back Willie Shelby (30) sits down on Houston Oilers Greg Bingham (54) after returning a punt 27 yards. Oilers Jim Beirne (88) was also in on the tackle. Cincinnati took the game 27-7.

SACKED — Chicago Bears quarterback Bob Avellini is separated from his helmet by Dallas Cowboys end Harvey Martin in third period of game Sunday. Teammate Ed Jones puts on the stop low. Cowboys won, 31-21.

Mafia turning to business frauds?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The death of Sicilian-born, Carlo Gambino, reputedly the most powerful Mafia boss in the country, marks another turning point in the move toward a native American brand of syndicated crime, law enforcement officials say.

And investigators say the new generation of the Mafia is finding that there is more money in executive suites than on the streets.

Gambino reportedly was the pattern for the Don Corleone character in the Mario Puzo book and movie, "The Godfather." He died of a stroke Oct. 15 at 74.

"In terms of broader significance, I would look at Gambino's passing as more confirmation of the trend," says Jay C. Waldman, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's criminal division. "We're talking about a younger group of people now, many of them born in this country and educated here."

The influence of Mafia godfathers is waning, and younger men are taking their place, suggested Waldman, whose duties include supervising the overall thrust of department investigations and prosecutions in the field of organized crime.

The nation's crime syndicates are moving off the streets and into corporate boardrooms because they're finding that business frauds are more rewarding than conventional racketeering, said Waldman. "These people go where the money is," he said. "There's more money to be made more quickly and with less risk in the so-called paper crimes."

In the 1970s, he said, there has been some shift in organized crime that reflects changing times and "personalities among the leadership of organized crime, and changing conditions in the country at large."

He said the old Mafia families based on ethnic and blood kinship still operate in perhaps two dozen cities. But new "groups and combinations of individuals who really transcend ethnic lines" are on the rise.

Crime syndicates are devoting less attention to traditional gambling, loan-

Danny Green wins promotion

GREAT FALLS, Mont. — An official at Malmstrom AFB, Mont., has announced the promotion of Danny Green to technical sergeant in the U.S. Air Force.

Sergeant Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bracy of 345 W. Fourth St., Colorado City, is a law enforcement and corrections supervisor with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

The sergeant is a 1967 graduate of Colorado City High School.

Cowgirl events prove muddy at prison rodeo

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The crowd of 13,000 at the 45th annual Texas Prison Rodeo got a big kick out of the convict cowgirl events in drizzling rain and a muddy arena here Sunday.

But the contestants who were dragged through the mud by calves and greased pigs could have probably done without the sport, thank you.

The team of Diane Williams of Albuquerque, N.M., and Mickey Hernandez of Midland took the Gorge girls calf tussle, while the greased pig sacking contest was won by the team of Lucille Thomas of Villa Platte, La., and Erma Hickman of Bryan.

Rusty Huff of Pampa, serving 30 years, took the barebacked saddle bronc riding contest and veteran convict rider Willie Craig of Greenville, also doing 30 years, was first in saddle bronc riding.

sharking and fencing operations and turning to more lucrative frauds involving corporations and labor unions, Waldman said.

Mobsters have infiltrated and taken over dozens of perhaps hundreds of businesses and "we have definitely seen an infiltration of legitimate labor unions," he continued. He refused to name companies and unions that have fallen to the mob.

"The common type of scheme we see is that they look for a business that is heavy with assets but also heavy with liabilities, so it can be bought for a nominal amount plus assuming the debts," he related.

"Then they don't pay the debts, quickly convert the assets to cash, and file for bankruptcy."

Through such bankruptcy frauds, stock manipulation and stock frauds, the syndicate can invest and launder the vast sums of money already made in the conventional rackets.

In some cases, he said, crime syndicates may take over a business and operate it in what appears to be a legitimate fashion. But behind the scenes, they're relying on old-fashioned strong-arm tactics and political corruption to win contracts or gain monopolies, he said.

Taking part in Cold Fire

HAHN, Germany — Second Lieutenant Stephen R. Sellers, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Sellers of Star Route 2, Lamesa, recently took part in Cold Fire '76 — a North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) training exercise held in central Europe.

Lieutenant Sellers, a weapons systems officer, serves at Hahn AB, Germany, with the 50th Tactical Fighter Wing.

The exercise tested the capabilities of NATO-commissioned Army and Air force units under simulated combat conditions.

The lieutenant, a 1971 graduate of Lamesa High School, received his B.S. degree in 1974 from Abilene Christian College, and was commissioned later that year through Officer Training School, Lackland AFB.

His wife, Norma, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Fowler of 3617 Springdale, Odessa.

Postal Service future eyed by board

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of why the Postal Service is losing more money each year — when its goal was to eliminate deficits — should touch off a major congressional debate over its future.

The federal Postal Service Commission, expected to hold its first meeting soon, is due to make recommendations by March 15. The commission includes seven voting members representing business, postal workers and consumers.

The Postal Service can neither raise mail rates nor trim services while the commission deliberates. The service was created in 1971, replacing the old Post Office Department, with the goal of paying for itself. To do this, the agency was given powers to operate more like a private business.

However, the Postal Service has lost $3 billion in its first five years, and the deficits have been getting larger. The corporation has avoided insolvency only by borrowing from the federal Treasury.

The 1971 reorganization was based on an earlier government commission, which said postal costs could be reduced by at least 20 percent if the investment and operating practices used in private industry were made available to postal management.

Several years after the corporation is under way, therefore, it should be able to eliminate entirely the postal deficit, releasing over a billion dollars a year of tax money to other purposes, the commission said. "The long-run potential for improvement, furthermore, is so high that we are reluctant to estimate its size."

That commission's recommendation for a corporate-style mail agency received bipartisan support and heavy majorities in Congress.

The new commission is likely to be given various explanations about why these predictions have failed to come true.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar, a nonvoting member of the new commission, is expected to say that economic factors beyond the control of the Postal Service are responsible for mounting deficits.

"I believe that if the old Post Office Department had had to contend with the recent period of the energy crisis, double-digit inflation and recession, the nation's mail problems would today be multiplied many times over," Bailar said in a recent speech.

President Ford, a supporter of postal reorganization as a congressman, blames postal management for the agency's problems. "I just don't accept that they're doing as well as they should be doing," Ford has said.

Holding rate at present levels would require massive increases in the subsidies from the present $1.5 billion per year, the General Accounting Office said. But if all subsidies were to end by 1984, the nation would face the prospect of a 34-cent rate for first-class letters, the GAO has estimated.

OLDEST VOTER — Alex Short, 122, has lived through 30 elections but has voted only twice. Believed to be Maricopa County's oldest voter, Short says he'll vote for Jimmy Carter Nov. 2. See AP story.

Henry C. Grover, where are you?

HOUSTON (AP) — Whatever happened to Henry C. Grover?

In 1974, the Republican was a two-time loser as a Texas gubernatorial candidate, owed about $400,000 for his last unsuccessful race and said he was "flat broke."

A scant two years later, Federal Election Commission figures show that Grover, now a Houston coal broker, is the nation's most generous political contributor.

Grover, who drives a five-year-old intermediate car and has offices in his brother's inner city warehouse, spent $63,000 to buy newspaper ads in Texas and Michigan supporting the Ronald Reagan Republican cause.

He took advantage of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that allows individuals to contribute as much as they want in behalf of a cause as long as the money does not go directly to a candidate or campaign organization.

The ceiling on contributions to an individual is $5,000.

"I believed in the Reagan cause and I thought we could win," Grover said. He didn't believe in the Reagan staff, calling them "for the most part, incompetent."

The 49-year-old Grover had to pay off $400,000 in debts after he lost to Gov. Dolph Briscoe in the 1974 gubernatorial race. He took out loans to erase the debts.

Entering the coal brokerage field, Grover recouped by arranging multimillion dollar transactions between coal producers and coal sellers, being paid in commissions.

"I didn't know anything about coal," Grover said. "But neither did Shell or Exxon when they got involved in it."

He said he has "tremendously reduced" his political debts, and his house purchased in the 1960s for $55,000 is now valued at $400,000.

Grover entered politics in 1958. Short of cash, he took out a classified ad in a Houston newspaper that read: "Conservative Democrat, veteran, native Houstonian, wants to run for the state legislature. Needs financial support. If interested, write Box 4440."

There were no takers. Fourteen years later, after switching parties and serving six terms in the Democrat Dolph Briscoe in the 1972 gubernatorial race and lost, repeating the performance in 1974.

Woman destitute, mansion decaying

DALLAS (AP) — An apparently destitute elderly woman who is pictured on a United Way poster lives in what used to be one of the most elegant mansions in one of the most affluent sections of Dallas but now is decayed and dilapidated.

Marie McCraw Robinson, 84, who receives daily care from the Visiting Nurse Association in Dallas, gives a weary smile when reminded of days long past.

She says she has come a long way from the days of living in the big white house on Ross Avenue with an array of servants and a gardener.

The United Way poster has her picture and the heading, "Give her a reason to live."

Mrs. Robinson says she posed for the poster because its message was exactly how she felt.

"Ross Avenue was swanky back then," she recalled of her childhood. "There were bankers and lawyers on our street. It was the place to live in Dallas. My Poppa owned a big printing company and he was a member of the school board."

Mrs. Robinson also remembers convincing her parents "that I was just too literary to become a debutante. I told them I had my Latin and French and German to think about. All the debutantes could do was talk English."

She said she isn't sure when things started going bad. She and her husband, Archibald Robinson, had a baby, but the child died. Then her husband, parents and brothers died.

All she had left was the family home on Ross Avenue. The rest of her money had gone for sickness.

She still lives in the 15-room mansion, but it is dilapidated and decaying and much of the furniture has disintegrated. It stands among used furniture stores and used car lots.

Mrs. Robinson is too sick to climb the stairs in the house and has no real bed to sleep on — instead using a mattress on the floor.

Her only companions are two small dogs and her only income is from social security.

Someone from the Visiting Nurse Association picks her up every morning and takes her to the organization's offices, where she is washed and fed.

She is brought home every night because she refuses to live in a foster home.

A lawyer says the property is worth at least $30,000 and if sold would allow Mrs. Robinson to live in comfort, but she still says "no."

"That's my home. I have never left it in 84 years and I am not going to leave it now," she says.

Many birds here with Marj Carpenter

Today is Veteran's Day on Lyndon Johnson's calendar, so I really should have come forth with something about the vets. But it doesn't really seem like Veteran's Day to me.

So, I decided to come out with a comment on the birds of Howard County. Veteran's Day still seems like it ought to be Nov. 11, which is the old Armistice Day date.

But what made me want to comment on the birds is not the varied selection of Veteran's Days, but instead the new brochure that the Tourism Development Council has put out on Birds of Howard County.

The folder, which will be made available for bird-watching tourists, say that "Man has changed much in the last three thousand years, but birds, almost unchanged in appearance, have added color and life to these prairies since the time when man as a species was more to be pitied than feared."

The front page features an eagle above Signal Mountain Peak and mentions the Sanhill Crane. Incidentally, last Thursday, I saw the first cranes flying into Howard County. Evidently, they know that the cotton is soon to be stripped and that there will be empty cotton hulls in abundance.

The brochure points out that over 540 species of birds have been recorded in Texas and that in Howard County, 250 have been observed in recent years.

I think it's startling to know that there are 250 different birds in Howard County. Now I know some of the local bird watchers and people like Sue Corson and Mary Joy Cowper and Polly Mays and Mary Stipp will be quick to tell you about all of those different birds.

Just out in Comanche Trail Park alone, over 200 different kind have been spotted. The brochure says that Big Spring is an interesting area for birds because of its location on the edge of two distinct land forms — the Edwards Plateau and the Llano Estacado.

AND THERE'S EAGLES
...in Howard County

Whatever is the reason, we've got birds. We have purple martins and green herons and black-chinned hummingbirds and orchard orioles.

Some of the rare ones that are only seen here occasionally are the Poor-will and Louisiana heron, the Anhinga, the western grebe, the red-breasted merganser, the European widgeon, the whooping crane, and several others. Now I'm not that smart. I got all of that information out of the brochure. It says one of the rarest migrants seen in the county was a family of Sabine gulls. Now if those gulls live around Sabine, they really were lost out here. I drove to Sabine last summer and it's a ways down there.

I notice that one of the rare winter birds around these parts is one called Oldsquaw and I sincerely hope that somebody didn't see me coming off my front porch and pick up that one.

But seriously, there's a bunch of birds around. I never had thought of us as a bird center. But we might be. And if we can get bird watchers coming in here a watching, the motels won't care.

That brochure was so darned interesting that I'm going to have to be looking at the birds a little bit as I go hustling around ridin' fence.

Walls reveals move sales

Walls Industries Inc., Cleburne-based manufacturer of sports and utility apparel, announced sales of $19,096,683 for the nine months ending last Sept. 30. The sales for nine months reflect an increase of 25 per cent over sales for the same period in 1975. Walls' earnings through the third quarter of 1976 are $1,956,212 or 15 per cent ahead of the previous year.

In making the announcement, Sam Walls, president of the firm, noted that sales for 1976 are in line with the company's goals for the year.

Walls also announced that the board of directors has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 9 cents per share payable November 19 to stockholders of record on November 5, 1976.

Walls maintains a sewing plant in Big Spring.

Belinda Lawler is promoted

FUSSA, Japan — Belinda F. Lawler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lawler of Rt. 1, Snyder, has been promoted to senior airman in the U.S. Air Force.

Airman Lawler, an aircraft maintenance specialist, is assigned at Yokota AB, Japan.

Arson fire kills 25

NEW YORK (AP) — Investigators believe an arson fire that killed 25 persons at an overcrowded second-story club may have been started by a man who was thrown out after arguing with his wife, sources say.

Authorities said a flammable liquid or other accelerating material was used to start the fire early Sunday morning in the only staircase in the South Bronx building. The death toll was said to be the worst from any arson fire in the city's history.

Most of the victims died of smoke inhalation in the 25-by-40-foot room. Twenty-four persons suffered injuries. Most of them broke bones when they leaped from a window, unable to use a blocked fire escape.

"The poor people never had a chance," one fireman said. Police Commissioner Michael Codd said at the scene that his detectives were looking for "a specific person." He said later that police knew where the man was. He reportedly was in a hospital, among those injured during the blaze.

Sources said the man in question had an argument with his wife and was told to leave by the proprietor of the Club Puerto Rico, where more than 50 persons of Dominican descent had gathered for a party. The club's occupancy permit is for 20 persons, city records show.

Jacob Melendez, 27, the leader of the band playing for the party, said he heard an argument between a man and woman, apparently over the woman's dancing with another man. "Don't worry, I'll get you," Melendez said the man yelled before he was thrown out.

"The man then left," Melendez said. "We continued to play and everyone was having a good time. About an hour and a half later, I heard a noise and immediately saw flames and black smoke by the door."

Codd said "there are many aspects under investigation" and refused to confirm or deny reports that the man had returned to the club with gasoline and been burned while setting the fire.

Bronx Dist. Atty. Mario Merola said the fire escape was blocked by a window gate locked from the inside to ward off burglars.

Industry at the crossroads

Looks are important

by Tom E. Roy

Industrial Manager, BS Ch. of Commerce

You're sitting in your living room watching TV and taking it easy when you hear a knock on the door. As you go to answer, you notice that your wife has gone into a mild state of panic. Shoes disappear under the sofa, newspapers are flying, and suddenly the serene atmosphere you had been enjoying has dissipated into full fledged turmoil. As you answer the door you discover some "friends" have dropped in for a short visit. Later that night you look back on the events just preceding the visit and you ask yourself "why the panic?"

Everyone of us has gone through that agony at one time or another and each time the panic has been justified because you care about what people think of you. You realize that often what people see is what they think. You constantly try to make a good impression.

Communities are no different. Often people judge a town by how it looks rather than the people who live there. Newcomers seldom take the time to look for the good; they do remember the ugly. That happened this week with some people from out of state. Their first impression of Big Spring was apparent and disappointing. Fortunately, we had the time to convince them that Big Spring had a lot to offer. Before they left, they were impressed. But it left me with a nagging question. How often could it happen? How often could a company come to town unbeknownst to us (and that happens occasionally), and leave before we had a chance to show them all that we are proud of? All of this could happen with a bad first impression.

The next time you come into Big Spring, try visualizing in your mind what impression you would have of the town and its people if this were the first time you had been here. Appearance reflects attitude. Attitude attracts or discourages new ventures.

Now there's health insurance for pets

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Do the sometimes beastly costs of medical care for cats and dogs have you climbing a tree? A program called Medi-Pet is offering health insurance for animals.

Medi-Pet is available now only to pet owners in six counties in the San Francisco Bay area. But Paul E. Murray, the man who created it, predicts it eventually will be offered nationwide.

"My dream is to be able to expand it around the world," Murray declared in an interview. He said the program has been in existence about a year and has more than a hundred subscribers.

Insurance is available only to cats and dogs between the ages of 16 months and 7 years. Murray said the older and younger pets aren't accepted because they are more vulnerable to disease.

For one pet, the owner pays a $68 annual premium, but the cost per pet is lower if more than one animal is covered. If the insured pet is injured or gets sick, its owner can take it to one of 25 to 30 affiliated veterinary hospitals in the area.

"For example, one of our members owns a St. Bernard who had all four legs broken when it was hit by a bus," said Murray, a former Bank of America vice president. "The cost of the dog's treatment was $880, and it was fully covered by the plan."

There can be additional costs. For example, if an animal requires surgery, the owner is billed $4. Routine checkups are included in the program.

Murray said everyone gains from the Medi-Pet project. He said it means better health for pets, savings for pet owners, and more business for veterinarians, who he estimates currently operate at 65 to 70 per cent of capacity. Murray said he's not making any profits yet, but hopes to.

Murray, himself the owner of a 13-year-old Siamese cat, said many of the 60,000 dogs and cats that are destroyed each day would be kept by their owners except for the cost of medical care.

Another feature of the Medi-Pet plan is Animalert. A 10-digit number is painlessly imprinted on the animal's ear. The number is recorded in Animalert's computer, and if the pet is lost, the SPCA or local pound can call Animalert with the number to trace the pet owner.
